Paul chose a different Greek word here for raise. The word applied to our Lord is  $\epsilon\gamma\epsilon\iota\rho\omega$  (in the Aorist active indicative); and the second verb is  $\epsilon\epsilon\gamma\epsilon\iota\rho\omega$ . Paul chose a different word which means to raise and both refer to resurrection.  $\epsilon\epsilon\gamma\epsilon\iota\rho\omega$  is a compound of the first verb using the prefix  $\epsilon\epsilon$ . There is the small prefix difference and there is a small difference in the meaning, which applies. Paul focuses here on our future body.  $\epsilon\epsilon\gamma\epsilon\iota\rho\omega$  = to raise up;  $\epsilon\gamma\epsilon\iota\rho\omega$  = to raise. Our Lord's resurrection is an aorist tense; it occurred in the past. However, our verb is in the future tense. There is no less certainty in us. We can be absolutely certain that we will be raised up. Gnostic aorist, which refers back to an accepted fact which is absolutely fixed in its certainty. There is no less certainty with our resurrection. There is no question about our being raised up. The Corinthians need to rid of their confusion. Our confidence of our eternal life is based upon Jesus being resurrected from the dead.

1Cor. 15:12–14: Now if Christ is proclaimed as raised from the dead, how can some of you say that there is no resurrection of the dead? But if there is no resurrection of the dead, then not even Christ has been raised. And if Christ has not been raised, then our preaching is in vain and your faith is in vain. Paul assumes the opposite of what he is trying to prove in an indirect proof. Reverse logic is what Bobby calls it. If He is not raised, then we cannot expect to be raised. However, since He was, we will be resurrected. If Christ has not been raised, then our faith is worthless. Without the resurrection, we are still in our sins. Christ being raised from the dead is our hope and our confidence. The salvation message is secure because He lives.

A few Easters ago, Bobby gave all the reasons of rejections of the resurrection. If we put hundreds of people on a witness stand and they all said the same thing, would we believe them? Of course we would. Jesus appeared 11 times to man. 5 times He appeared the first day after His resurrection. He appeared 5 more times in the next 40 days; and then he appeared one more time to Paul.

500 people saw Jesus after His death. His body had a completely different constitution. His body on earth was a body of flesh without an old sin nature; however, His physical body aged. There were infirmities; He had pains. He was fully aware of the sufferings of mankind. He shared them all. After the resurrection, Jesus operated in an entirely different dimension.

Our Lord's Resurrection Body

1. He was able to vanish suddenly. Luke
2. He was able to bodily move through objects which would stop us.
  - a. Jesus stepped out of His grave clothes.
  - b. He also bodily moved through the stone of the tomb which held Him. The angles moved the stone back so that all could see that He was gone.
3. No walls or doors would stop Him. He could move through them.
4. He bodily moved to make proclamation to the spirits in prison. These were demons who did not know what had happened; the ones who infected the human race. In any case, Christ went there in His resurrection body. 1Peter 3:18–20 Gen. 6
5. Christ bodily and slowly ascended into heaven from the Mount of Olives. Mark 16:9–20
6. Our Lord could freely move in His body between the earth and the 3rd heaven.
7. His body is clearly beyond anything that we can comprehend in our finiteness. We do not understand the composition; we have no clue as to how He goes through walls. At best, we can figure out that he is made of a different composition.
8. However, his body is not ethereal. Our Lord calls it a spiritual body elsewhere.
9. How do we know that this is a spiritual body?
  - a. The disciples touched His body and it had form. Luke 24:39–40.
  - b. Our Lord was observed eating. Our Lord was able to eat, but He did not need to eat. This was not a sustenance thing. What was the point? This was proof to humans that His body was real.
  - c. He also retained the wounds on His hands and feet; this was a true body of flesh and bones.
10. Our Lord was recognizable in His body. We will all know each other in heaven.

1Cor. 6:14 God raised the Lord, and by his power he will also raise us.

I would think that, without an old sin nature, the Jesus did not age as we do. He could feel pain but his body would not self-destruct.

1Cor. 6:14

Lesson #280 Thursday

January 5, 2006

Apparently the Texas Longhorns won a football game and championship last night?

The idea is, if God raised Christ from the dead, that He will also raise us from the dead; and our future is in our body. Paul confirms this is the most powerful way possible. The background is, these Corinthians are thinking with dualism. Paul uses a subject which is intriguing—eschatology. Can't wait to see Armageddon. This is one of the most intriguing subjects—what is a resurrection body. We are being insured that we have the power over death; death cannot hold us. God has the power over sin and spiritual death, which He proved at the cross. His power is even greater than physical death. Paul is making a direct link between what happened at Easter and what will happen at our own personal Easter. His resurrection body is our resurrection body. We will have the same resurrection body as He has, because we were placed in union with Christ at salvation. Many Christians only half believe this great thing.

The question has always been, we have problems with that which we cannot physically prove. We haven't seen it; we have not observed it; how can it be empirically true. There were 11 appearances, which were empirical truth that He lives even now. The problem for many of us is, we understand that the Lord Jesus Christ was resurrection. However, we find it difficult to understand how we ordinary believers will be resurrected. This was exactly what the Corinthian hangup was. Paul will give them a rationale for and the divine perspective of their resurrection bodies.

Paul saw our Lord resurrected and he was able to describe Him to others who saw Him. At this time, it was only about 30 years since the resurrection. There were those still alive who had seen it. However, the Corinthians would have difficulty believing that they would be resurrected as well, particularly given their opinion of the human body.

No doubt, Paul stunned the Corinthians here; they knew of Christ's resurrection; and Paul tells them, "You will experience exactly the same thing." What will be our future experience? What will happen to us?

The Doctrine of Christ's Resurrection Body

1. Jesus' body was able to vanish from their sight. He appeared and disappeared.
2. He bodily moved through objects which would stop us. We see this on special effects; however, this is for real. This is what the constitution of His body.
  - a. He moved bodily out of the grave clothes which bound him without unraveling them. He went right through them.
  - b. He also moved through the stone of the tomb in which He was buried. The stone was rolled back in order for the world to see that He had been resurrected.
  - c. Therefore, no wall or door could stop or contain Him.
  - d. He could move freely in and out of buildings without opening doors. However, Christ does not possess an ethereal body.
3. Christ moved in a different dimension in His body. He moved to make proclamation to the spirits in prison. He spoke to the demons involved in the great Nephilim conspiracy of Gen. 6. This was a conspiracy to pollute the human race. Those demons involved had been cast into Tartarus. These were the only demons in existence who did not know of our Lord's strategic victory on the cross. Where is Tartarus? No idea; however, it is in a place that we are unable to travel to. This is completely beyond any place that we can travel to.
4. He bodily ascended into heaven from the Mount of Olives Mark 16:9-20 Luke 24 Acts 1:9-12. The third heaven is the end of the universe. We will be able to see several planets in our resurrection bodies; but there will be a new heaven and earth.

5. Clearly His body is beyond anything that we can comprehend in our finiteness. His body cannot experience pain or suffering; a body that we cannot even comprehend at this point in time.
6. He was not a ghost nor will we be ghosts; it is a spiritual body.
7. The disciples touched our Lord and could feel His flesh and bone. A real body, albeit a different type of body.
8. Jesus was also observed eating in Luke. He was not hungry; however, He ate and showed that His body was real and not a shadow or a figment.
9. He retained the wounds on His hands and feet from the crucifixion.
10. The Lord Jesus Christ was recognizable by His disciples on earth in His resurrection body. There was also a time that they did not recognize Him; point being that this is a different kind of a body.

The Reasons Why Christ Appeared in His Resurrection Body

1. This confirms that He is the living God.
2. Our Lord appeared to model, as it were, His new body. He showed all the properties of His body and all of the implications of His resurrection body for us.
3. His resurrection was encouragement to all those who witnessed His death. The disciples had to be pretty bummed out. They watch Jesus Christ die. They did not understand this. They must have had terrific depression; upon seeing Him, they realized that death could not hold Him.
4. His appearances validated His claims as the Messiah and Savior. He had fulfilled every aspect of the Old Testament prophecies about the Messiah/Savior.
5. The resurrection constituted the greatest proof of His deity. Rom. 1:4 By the way, we will not be resurrection into some sort of deity.
6. His resurrection gave demonstration to the power of God to all who witnessed Him. This also is witness to the power of the spiritual life.
7. There are all kinds of hope that medical science will allow us to live forever, but it will never happen.
8. God had empowered the spiritual life that Christ pioneered during His 1st advent. His was the pioneered spiritual life.
9. This is the same power made available to us. We have the exact same power. The filling of the Holy Spirit is a part of His repetition, as it is for us.
10. It is the power which gives us our unique spiritual life and it is the same power which will resurrect us from the dead.

The Greek word is δυναμις = power, authority. Δια + δυναμις = by the agency of His power. His power is the instrument of our resurrection. With God, nothing is impossible. God's omnipotence is involved in our resurrection.

The Resurrection our Justification

1. The cross provide us the means of justification. Justification is the imputation of His righteousness to us.
2. Christ satisfied the righteousness and just of God on the cross. Propitiation is a critical aspect. We are redeemed from the slave market of sin.
3. It is the resurrection which confirms that the Father accepts our Lord's sacrifice for our justification. We would not be saved apart from the Father's acceptance of the Son's work.
4. Justification means that we are made righteous. We are made righteous in our temporal bodies.
5. If we are made righteous, which is a positional righteousness; we then have a rationale for experiencing righteousness in our temporal bodies. We are made righteous in our bodies. Because we are justified, we can now experience righteousness as we advance to spiritual maturity.
6. Then, experiential sanctification and finally ultimate righteousness and sanctification. This is the whole gambit of righteousness.

God will raise us from the dead just as He raised Christ from the dead. The believer will possess the same type of body as our Lord. We have a destiny in Christ; we have a destiny in this life and we can gain rewards through the production of divine good. This also includes eternity.

The body cannot be ignored in the temporal spiritual life; it cannot be separated from the rest of our spiritual life. The Corinthians justified πορνεία with an evil body. Our body has an eternal future.

Paul Has Mentioned 3 Areas of Corinthian Confusion

1. Eating and the stomach (1Cor. 8 10:23ff
2. The resurrection which he will continue in 1Cor. 15.
3. 1Cor. 6:15–7:40 now deals with sex and πορνεία. This will be the correct sex education.

The Corinthians are quite confused over πορνεία;

1Cor. 6:14 God raised the Lord, and by his power he will also raise us.

The body is not separate from the spirit. Our bodies will be members completely and totally without a sin nature in eternity. However, they are a part of God's plan right here and now.

1Cor. 6:15 You know that your bodies are parts of Christ, don't you? Should I take the parts of Christ and make them parts of a prostitute? Certainly not!

The cross and the resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ are the two central, supreme events of history. All that came before and comes after are centered in those two events. The Corinthian believers did accept this as gospel—the cross and the resurrection. They did believe that Jesus Christ was the substitutionary sacrifice for us and freed us to the grace of God and Who reconciled the enmity between us and God. They had believed these salvation facts and placed faith alone in Christ alone. Therefore, they possessed eternal life. Jesus Christ was bodily resurrected on the 3rd day after the crucifixion and they knew that the omnipotence of God raised Christ from the dead. They knew that the resurrection means that God the Father understood that Jesus Christ's sacrifice was efficacious. We share everything that Christ is and all that He has. They understood that Christ received a new body at resurrection. They knew that Jesus Christ modeled that body after His resurrection and that over 500 people saw Him in His resurrection body. The Corinthians had come into contact with some of these people (which include Paul, who saw Jesus Christ on the Damascus road). None had a greater experience than Paul seeing our Lord on the Damascus road. So they understood that Jesus Christ was resurrected and that He was the real God and that He had a real body of flesh and bones (albeit, different from our bodies).

The Corinthians were still confused concerning their philosophical beliefs about the body and soul and how this relates to Jesus Christ and His resurrection body. Paul tells them, “God raised Jesus Christ; and by His power, He will also raise us.” Paul's logic is that all believers will be raised by God's power. What the Corinthians did not fully grasp is, their bodies in resurrection would be like the Lord's. This body will not age; it will not feel pain; it operates in a different dimension so to speak. This was a huge surprise to the dualism which the Corinthians believed in. Our bodies are not just throwaways; the body is not something which can be ignored or denigrated. The Corinthians compartmentalized their bodies and felt what they did with their bodies had no bearing on their spiritual life.

1Cor. 6:14 God raised the Lord, and by His power He will also raise us.

Paul begins an illustration in v. 15 and he chooses the illustration of sex, as the Corinthians are preoccupied with this subject. The Corinthians had been involved in every type of sex available to them. Paul chooses this illustration, as he knows that the Corinthians will relate to it. It is a subject that they are very familiar with. Paul wants to change their thinking from dualism and πορνεία to doctrine and .

The body is a part of our eternal future just as it is an inherent part of our life on this earth. Paul asks, “Should we take the members of the body of Christ and make them members of a prostitute?”

Paul will repeat do you not know; meaning that he is speaking to their ignorance. They should know this, but apparently, they do not. Paul is relating a familiar point of doctrine which will answer a very specific point of doctrine. I think that this is μη γινωιντο.

We realize that we are in Christ and we are a part of Christ; however, some do not realize that our bodies are actually members of Christ's body. Our bodies are not our exclusive property.

Μελος σωμα = member [is] your body. A predicate construction. The member and the body are the same. Our bodies are members of Jesus Christ. Μελος = a part [of the human body]. Figuratively

How is μελος used in Classical Greek?

1. It is used in the Greek concept of πολις, which is a Greek city-state. Each city-state was a city and a separate entity. They were not subservient to the Greek nation. The individual Greek, who is a person. But, there is also the state; and there is the figurative use of it as well. There was a concept of the Greek city-state. There is a physical aspect to these terms and a figurative use as well. V. 7 made a mention of the unity of the church in the face of all these divisions and lawsuits that they were involved in. The idea of union is also present in v. 15.
2. Marcus Aurelius uses μελος for the wise man, who would logically be integrated into an harmonious and logical whole. One man's wisdom was a part of a greater, cosmic wisdom.
3. In the classic, physical sense, the μελος is a part of a greater organization; an integral member in a greater organization. We are all members of the body of Christ, with a special focus on the physical body.

Christ has an organization made up of bodies; this illustration does not refer to a literal body of Jesus Christ, although His body is composed of physical bodies. The physical body and our spiritual life are integrally related to Christ's conceptual body. We cannot be separated from our physical bodies.

A military unit. Each soldier places his body in service to the greater body of that unit. All of them cooperate to accomplish the overall mission of the unit. The same deal with a football team (or any sports team). They operate as a single organism with specific objectives. A very diverse set of individuals with a variety of nationalities, races, countries, thinking, culture; but they all come together for a common goal—they are all part of a team, of one body, with the same objective or objectives. We as individual members of the body of Christ are soldiers in this unit.

Believers have two things in common—a physical body with similar characteristics as other believers; and they are in Jesus Christ; in union with Jesus Christ. We are a part of His battalion. We are called the body of Christ. Each of our physical bodies are members of a greater body, the body of Christ; which is a spiritual organism, not a physical body. Paul is linking the physical with the spiritual. He links these together, which is something that the Corinthians do not do.

The problem with the Corinthians is that they are not functioning like a team; they are not functioning as one body. They are on the field, but all moving in a variety of directions, all listening to their own directions. They were their own authority; and they did not put themselves under the authority of the greater unit.

In some cases, there are those members who are completely out of step with their unit; and this is similar to the Corinthians. When we are self-serving; when we are autonomous, Jesus can put us back into step with discipline. The Corinthians are a part of the whole, but they are not functioning as such. They are like a broken arm; hooked up to the body, but of no use to the body. The Corinthians were involved with the prostitution of the heathen temples.

1Cor. 6:15 Don't you know that your bodies are members of Christ? Should I take the members of Christ and make them members of a prostitute? Certainly not!

1Cor. 6:15

Lesson #282 Sunday 2

January 8, 2006

Because of the involvement of the Corinthians with sexual immorality, Paul will speak to their uniting their bodies with the bodies of temple prostitutes. Physical members of a believer in Jesus Christ placed in union with the body of a heathen prostitute.

Μη γινωιντο = may it never be; may it never happen. Optitive mood; it might be happening. The Corinthians cannot lose this union; they cannot divorce themselves from this union. They are a part of this unit permanently. We are members individually and corporately as the body of Christ.

We cannot just focus on the figurative sense. There is a definite physical organism which Paul is dealing with. Paul has discussed the physical body as a whole. As Paul moves through these next verses. There is a continuing illustration. There is the greater picture of a spiritual body. With His introduction of a physical body united with a spiritual body; Paul now switches to two literal bodies which are united. Sexual intercourse fuses two bodies. This is a fusion of two literal bodies. Our union with Christ is a very close union; it is not sexual, but it is as close as a sexual union. The two bodies in the physical act of sex become one whole. Now he asks the Corinthians, "What is your body a member of?" They have become one unit with a πορνῆ = a prostitute, a temple priestess. This is one who is designated as an object of worship. She represents worship of Aphrodite. When you unite with such a priestess, you have also united with Aphrodite. Uniting with Baccus means that we drink a lot. This is a very clever entendre proposed by Paul. The Corinthians have united their bodies with the bodies of prostitutes. They had frequent visits to the temple. But, they made no connection between their spiritual life in Christ and their going to the temple for sex with a prostitute. As members of the body of Christ, they cannot be members in union with a temple prostitute. Their physical bodies are united with the body of Christ; and they will, in the future, share the same characteristics of the resurrection body of Jesus Christ. Our physical bodies are united with Christ. The contrast is sharp and obvious.

The Corinthians know that they will have a resurrection body; and they realize that they are not in this body at this point in time, as no one has been resurrected at this time, apart from Jesus Christ. The great resurrection is future. The tribulational martyrs will also be resurrected at this time.

The Corinthians are beginning to realize that they will have a future in a body; and that what they do in their bodies today, even though it is a body of corruption; that it is in union with the body of Jesus Christ.

It is Paul's point not to disgrace them, but to simply let them know that they are wrong and that they are involved in illicit sex. They have become united with a prostitute. "Since your bodies are part and parcel of a spiritual life, then you must live with your bodies in the light of eternity. Every aspect of your life is related to our spiritual life. There is this great gift of sex; God designed it, because our bodies are members of Christ. We have been given a wonderful gift. Use it correctly. We often think that there is something wrong with sexuality. Some legalistic Christians believe that sex is for procreation only. However, sex was designed for our enjoyment; but this enjoyment has parameters. There are parameters to every aspect of our life. If God designed the body for a certain purpose, then it glorifies God. It is all about union; who are you united with?"

When you link a believer's body with a prostitute to that body supposed to be united with Jesus Christ; you have an air tight case against the Corinthians. This leads us to say, Your body is a Temple of the Holy Spirit. When they take this sanctified body into the temple, they de-sanctify it with a prostitute. They could reside in a human temple with impunity. Their choices to affix themselves to prostitutes did not bother the Corinthians, because they understood that their bodies were evil. Of course, they would do evil things. However, they are beginning to see that their bodies are a part of the Christian life. Metaphysical dualism is in opposition to Bible doctrine.

The Doctrine of Positional Truth

1. Two sides to positional truth. Retroactive positional truth:
  - a. Identification with Christ in His two deaths, physical and spiritual; and His burial. This is done with the baptism of water. Going into the water represents the cleansing from all sins. When we rise up, we are cleansed. It is an identification.
  - b. The baptism of the Holy Spirit is how we are placed in union with Christ. It is how we become members of the body of Christ. This is a position. It is just as much positional as the baptism of the Holy Spirit. It is as much positional as sanctification.
  - c. The retroactive identification means that the rulership of Satan (who rules over all unbelievers; along with the old sin nature) is broken. It is severed. It is not longer the status quo of the believer. We now have a new status quo—positional sanctification.
  - d. Identification with Christ in His physical death and burial places the believer for the first time in His entire life in a position to break free from the power of the sin nature and from Satan's influence of corruption and depravity.
Rom. 6:12–14

- e. This position is the basis for our experience in our spiritual life. We are positionally sanctified; we are empowered; we are new creatures in Christ; we are new creatures in the body of Christ.
  - f. We are freed from the power of the sin nature so that we can function under the power of the Holy Spirit. That is part of positional sanctification. No unbeliever ever before had the power of the Holy Spirit.
  - g. Therefore, we can metabolize doctrine and advance and apply doctrine. That is the link between the positional and the experiential. This is where Paul is going with this (in part).
2. Current positional truth:
- a. Identification with Christ as He is seated on the right hand of God the Father in His resurrection, session. This is where He is currently. We are identified with His resurrection body.
  - b. This means that the believer has a permanent relationship with the king of kings and Lord of Lords. This is what makes us royal family of God. We are freed from the power of the sin nature so that the Holy Spirit can function in us.
  - c. When God takes away the old (the power of the sin nature over our life); then He substitutes the new—which is current positional truth. We are identified with the resurrected body of Christ.
  - d. Current positional truth or what He gives us as a substitute; is the equivalent as justification, imputation and sanctification. The 39 things that we receive at spiritual birth are positions which we receive.
  - e. We are now qualified in this current position to live with God forever. Our bodies are members of Christ.
  - f. We are separated under current positional truth from the judgment that this world is under. We are members of the royal family of God and we have a spiritual status in this new organism.
  - g. This puts us in a position to move from a spiritual status which we always have to a spiritual experience that we call the spiritual life (or Christian life). We are in a position from current positional truth to go from status to experience. We have an unassailable position in Christ.

The next thing that we need is the Doctrine of the Body of Christ.

1Cor. 6:15 Don't you know that your bodies are members of Christ? Should I take the members of Christ and make them members of a prostitute? Certainly not!

1Cor. 6:15

Lesson #283 Wednesday

January 11, 2006

The previous verses primarily were centered on the body—the physical body and the ramifications of that. Bodies are members of Christ; they should not be united with a prostitute. These 3 verses are designed to link the physical body with a spiritual body. The resurrection body is all related to this. Paul is linking our temporal bodies to our spiritual life. The spiritual life is lived in our temporal bodies. They are inseparable for that reason. Either the Holy Spirit or the old sin nature controls our souls; our spiritual life is linked to our physical bodies. The Corinthians have compartmentalized the soul and the body—the soul is good and the body is evil.

Physical bodies are members of another type of body—the figurative body of Jesus Christ, which represents a spiritual entity.

Μελλος = members; used figuratively of a person who is an inseparable, integral part of an organization. In this case, it is a believer as an integral part of the whole body of Jesus Christ. Each believer is fused into a spiritual unit which operates as a single spiritual organism. By using our spiritual life and our spiritual gift.

So that we can follow this passage, we need to understand....

The Body of Christ

1. The phrase body of Christ is used to designate all church age believers. It refers to everyone at Berachah and everyone else who has expressed faith alone in Christ alone.
2. Church is a synonym for the body of Christ. The word Catholic means universal; which means it refers to all believers in Jesus Christ. The Catholic Church is us—the body of Christ.
3. The Holy Spirit is related to the body of Christ in 1Cor. 12:13. By one Spirit, we were all baptized into one body.
4. The Holy Spirit regenerates and baptizes every believer into union with Christ, which has a very physical aspect to it. This is a completely spiritual thing. However, there is a physical aspect: our bodies are members of Christ (v. 15a).
5. In our physical bodies, we are members of a spiritual body—the body of Christ.
6. We are a group of believers; a large group of believers. We all have spiritual gifts which are given to us by the Holy Spirit and we all operate with a spiritual life (or we have that option, anyway). We operate in the spiritual life to accomplish the mission of the church. Our corporate witness as a church; our mandate to glorify God. We are all in a battle—the angelic conflict.
7. Being in union with Christ, we are interrelated with Him. Our head is attached to our bodies and it is the member which makes our bodies function.
8. The head and the body is a great analogy to Christ and His spiritual body.
  - a. The Lord Jesus Christ in Col. 1:18 is called the head of the body—the church. His head is linked with His body. All believers function as a part of the whole, with our spiritual life.
  - b. The head and body analogy indicates the closest of relationships. The relationship between Christ and the church could not be closer. The body will not function apart from impulses from the brain.

- c. Jesus Christ is the head of the body refers to the integral relationship between our Lord and each member of the royal family. Every part of the spiritual body responds to the head of the body, which is Christ.
  - d. The analogy of Christ as the head and the royal family as the body emphasizes the life and the activity of the Church Age believer. The new spiritual species responds to divine viewpoint, which is the mind of Christ. The mind of Christ is our brain.
  - e. Just as the function of the body is based upon the mentality of the soul; so the modus operandi of the Church Age believer so the modus operandi is based upon the thinking of Jesus Christ.
  - f. Christ is the head of the body; therefore, He is the head or ruler of the Church.
9. The dispensation of the Church is the time of the formation of the body of Christ.
- a. As the ruler of the church, Jesus Christ carries the royal title "King of Kings;
  - b. At the ascension and session, Jesus Christ received His 3rd royal patents.
  - c. The first royal patent (title?) was as Son of God, His royal family is the Godhead.
  - d. A royal family for the king of kings is being formed during the Church
  - e. Every time a person believes in Jesus Christ, the baptism of the spirit enters him into the royal family. This is a position; it is not an emotion or an experience. Unlike those in the charismatic movement, who think that this is an experience or as a second work of grace; the Bible does not present that.
  - f. When the construction of the body of Christ is completed. Every time a person believes in Christ, another block falls into place.
  - g. No one knows how many people it will take to complete this body.
10. The one body of Eph. 4:4 is part of the analogy of Christ and the church.
- a. One body indicates that the members of the body of Christ are formed into one organic whole with a common plan...that plan is the plan of God for each of our lives.
  - b. As members, we form an organic whole; but God has a plan for each one of us for our life. The individual plan which God has for us fits into God's plan for the whole body. God has a plan for the corporate body, which is made up of a bunch of sammy plans of God.
  - c. We have a common life.
  - d. A common purpose of the members of the body is to exalt. Each believer in the church age can become an invisible hero in the Church Age.
  - e. We have a common purpose. Our common goal as members of the body is spiritual maturity—equal privilege and equal opportunity for each member of the body. Each member of the body is to work in synch with the rest of the body. A broken arm just does not seem to be in synch with the rest of the body.

- f. The common objective is for each member of the body to exercise his or her spiritual gif.
- g. At our spiritual birth, the Holy Spirit lays on us a spiritual gift.
- h. The exercise of spiritual gifts is like the interlaced function; it is likened to the various vunctions of the human body. Some might be ears; other hands; but with one purpose.
- i. Whereas, we have different spiritual gifts and different personalities, jwe still have the same goals and purpose.
- j. We are a very diverse group. Still, when we put it altogether, we are a functioning body of Christ.
- k. We are parts of a whole operating as one. We are all parts of a whole operating together. Individual believers who make up a spiritual community.
- l. The one body of Christ emphasizes the status of unity among the members of the body which amde this We are a band of brothers, whether we are functioning as brothers or not.
- m. Spiritual gifts emphasize the diversity of the members that make up the different but integral parts of the body function.
- n. Our body is related to our spiritual life which is related to the body of Christ
- o. The overall purpose of the royal family or the body of Christ is to glorify Christ in our physical bodies.

Here is what Paul is saying. They will understand the analogy of the body. As a member of the body of Chrst; as a member of the body of Christ, operating as a part of whole. In our physical bodies, which make up the body of Christ—are we to unite these bodies with a harlot? The body of Christ should not be linked with a prostitute. We are made holy, righteous and justified as believers by our staus. We are to move from a status of holiness to an experience of holiness. We are looking to find the experience as functioning as part of the body of Christ. What goes on in our soul links the actions of our body to the body of Christ. Their obligation was to move forward from positional to experiential sanctification. Joining with a harlot is the opposite direction that we should be in.

Interrogative particle ouv = therefore. Something must hearken into consideration. This does not mean just πορνεία; this can refer to any action outside the body of Christ. Think of ouv meaning do you want that I should do this, then? The preceding statement of doctrine is linked with a practical question.

They might disgrace the body of Christ. This is like the coward in a military operation. He ruins it for everyone. They do not lose their status as a member of the royal family. Their spiritual life is part of a greater group of spiritual lives. Each member. We become disgraces to the until that we

In v. 16, it will become clear what you are linked to a prostitute..

January 12, 2006

We're members of the body of Christ. We will apply this to what Paul is telling us in this verse. All church age believers are a part of the royal family of God. This means that we are in union with the King of Kings and Lord of Lords. Our objective is to execute the plan of God. We only have control over our own life; and volition over our own lives. What should be amazing is, all the Corinthians at the Corinth church are a part of the body of Christ. We are formed into this one organic union with a common objective and plan. Day after day, we advance to spiritual maturity and God's plan will unfold to us.

Think about glorification of God as holding up Jesus Christ for inspection as the Savior of all mankind.

Even if we do not accomplish God's plan for our life, that does not nullify His plan. All believers have spiritual gifts and we operate under the auspices of a unique spiritual life and if we advance to spiritual maturity at the same time that this occurs individually, we accomplish the mission of the church. We are a part of the picture of the plan of God. Our failure will not be a disadvantage to the plan as a whole. The body of Christ on this earth represents Christ. The body of Christ glorifies God. This is a part of the corporate mission of the church. We have individual missions; but the church glorifies God as a whole. The church also acts as a pivot. We as a unit are a part of that pivot. We are the salt and light of our nation. The more who are involved in that, the more blessing which is given to that nation. The more there are, the more we can expect our nation to be preserved. That is a corporate function of the church. Each one of us fights as a soldier; and each soldier is a part of a unit which functions as a whole. The mission is to take the gospel to the ends of the earth.

Each one of us is sanctified; we are all saints because we have a position of sanctification. We have been set apart positionally so that we can advance spiritually. The rulership of the old sin nature and Satan are broken in our life. Unbelievers can only be ruled by their sin nature or by Satan. We are fallen; and unbelievers have no choice in this matter. Only by believing in Jesus Christ can we break that control. With that jail break, which we now have as believers in Jesus Christ, we can now function in our spiritual lives. When the power of the sin nature is broken, we can function without it. Since the power of Satan and the sin nature have been broken, the filling of the Holy Spirit can function, and control us. That is experiential. The power is broken positionally which can become an experiential change in our lives as well. We have a position in Christ, so we can therefore enjoy a temporal life in Christ.

1Cor. 6:15a Don't you know that your bodies are members of Christ?

For the heathen, worship involved sex with a temple prostitute. Paul is giving the Corinthians an example of the opposite of where they should be. They are experiencing a harlot, but they should be experiencing Jesus Christ. As individual members of the larger spiritual organization of the church (the church universal), in a sanctified status, is it commensurate with that status to link your body with a prostitute? This is all that Paul is asking. Is it commensurate with the status of being in Christ to become joined with a temple prostitute. Uniting with Christ and His body should preclude them from uniting with the body of a prostitute. We must not dishonor our status of being in Christ or our position in Christ. Otherwise, there is no experiential sanctification in our life; and we are disgraced if we do not advance. If we are disgraced individually, we are corporately disgraced as well. This is just another angle on Paul's dealing with the incorrect dualistic philosophies of the Greeks.

The body is the mechanism for violating the honor code. In this violation, the spiritual life is neutralized. The body is used to neutralize the spiritual life. That is the opposite of the concept of dualism. Body and soul are both involved. Πορνεία is not proper for us to engage in.

Paul asks, "Should I take you away from your status as being members of Christ in order to make them members of a prostitute?" There is no way to remove us from the royal family of God. We cannot be removed from His family because God is immutable.

Our spiritual bodies can be sullied by our physical activity. What we should be doing is glorifying God. Aorist active participle of αἶρω = to take away, to carry away. This presents a scenario which should not happen, but it frequently does. Do we take away from that union by uniting with a prostitute? This disgraces the union. This is not Paul yanking our membership because of πορνεία. What is being taken away is God's glorification. We have turned aside from glorifying God by defiling our bodies becoming involved with πορνεία. The body has a part in the execution of the spiritual life; it is not just a spiritual aspect. Our body is part of our glorification of God.

Our body is linked to Jesus Christ; it is linked to the body of Christ. We are being called upon to advance and to serve Jesus Christ.

Aorist active subjunction of ποιῶ = to make, to produce. The subjunctive mood is one of contingency. There is a conditional element of the entire question here. This verb fits with the whole scene of this question. If your body is a part of the body of Christ, does it makes sense to combine it to that of a prostitute. They can be linked experientially to a prostitute, which is an improper use of the physical body, which is in union with Jesus Christ. Sexual relations involve more than a physical act. This is an introduction to v. 16.

What is the Underlying Premise

1. Sex joins together two persons physically.
2. When sex reflects God's design, there should also be a metaphysical union of minds and souls. Sex is more than simply a physical aspect to sex.

3. The physical, sexual union implies an unbreakable bond of trust. It implies like-mindedness and soul rapport. Sex is a physical act, but it represents a soul connection.
4. In the proper context of marriage, sexual union represents the total intimacy of the relationship. Sex is physical and metaphysical; our spiritual life is physical and spiritual. There is no disconnect between the physical and the metaphysical. Paul is right on point here. The Corinthians use sex in order to illustrate a disconnect between mind and body; and Paul uses it to show the opposite.
5. There is no other relationship like it; and there is no other relationship like our union with Jesus Christ.
6. This is what makes the physical union such a great illustration of our spiritual union with Christ. It is a great illustration. When πορνεία intrudes, the bond between the husband and wife is broken; the trust is destroyed; especially the soul connection. When πορνεία is a part of our lives, the spiritual connect between man and God is destroyed as well. Being united with a prostitute is the opposite of being united with the body of Christ.

V. 16 will continue this general approach. Body and soul are totally linked in sexual union and in spiritual union.

If you unite with a prostitute (or if you unite with πορνεία in general), it is antithetical to your spiritual life and it dishonors your body as well as the corporate body of Christ. This is another way of expressing the idea of these verses. Then Paul says μη γινοιντω = may it never be; do not let this happen.

1Cor. 6:15b Should I take the members of Christ and make them members of a prostitute? Certainly not!

V. 16 elaborates what Paul means by being in union with a prostitute. Paul in one stroke pulls one phrase out of the Old Testament, to a phrase which generally is applied to the union between husband and wife; and he will apply it to union with a prostitute; and how it messes up union with Christ.

1Cor. 6:16

January 15, 2006

Many of the Greeks in Corinth would be dualistic in their thinking. This first part of v. 15 makes it clear that the bodies of believers are not left out in our relationship to Jesus Christ. Our bodies are individual members of the body of Christ. As individual believers, we reside in a body of corruption and we are infused with a sin nature (which is why it is called a body of corruption). We are born spiritually dead and our body remains corrupted. Each believer has a personalized plan of God for our lives. All of us have a spiritual gift without exception so that we might serve the Lord in whatever way He has for us. He has given us a spiritual life and spiritual resources. Our bodies and souls are intimately connected with our spiritual life. Our bodies become the outward expression of glorification of God, both in thought and in action. Our thinking is transformed into an outward expression. What we do in our physical bodies glorifies God. As members of that body, we have function in the body of Christ. In order to have a function, we must progress in our spiritual lives. We have a potential spiritual life. Our spiritual life is inextricably united with our bodies and with what we do in our bodies. There is an intimate connection between our physical bodies, our spiritual lives, and the greater body of Christ. Our individual execution of the plan of God is a part of the overall function of the churches purpose. We are a corporate entity, as well as individuals. What we do in our bodies has an impact on the corporation of the body of Christ.

Αἶρω = to take away. Should I take away from the body of Christ? Once we are united with the body of Christ, we cannot be removed. God's immutability keeps us in union with Jesus Christ. What about His love and justice? If it was relative, then we would have no absolute standard. Without his perfection, He would be a god of relativism. This is not the God of the Bible. When we are given membership in the body of Christ, that membership cannot be taken away. So, what does it mean that members of the body of Christ are taken away here from this body? This means that he is taken away from his proper function in the body of Christ. We are always a part of the body of Christ, even though we may never function as such—some of us may be vestigial organs. Πορνεία linked with the understand that our body becomes unionized with the body of a prostitute. This dishonors our bodies and dishonors the function of the team called the body of Christ. The team, made up of all the members, still continues, with or without us, as one of the team members. We put ourselves on the bench when we are involved in carnality (the example here is being in union with πορνεία). This is why Paul says, May it never be! The dualists see their bodies as evil, and therefore, see no problem with united with πορνεία in their bodies.

1Cor. 6:15 Do you not know that your physical bodies are members of the body of Christ? Should I then take away from the members of this body of Christ and place them in union with a prostitute? May it never be!

Paul again unites the body and the soul in v. 16. To understand this statement of v. 16, is the idea the sexual relations involves more than a simple physical act. When sex reflects God's design, there should also be a physical and a metaphysical union as well—that is God's design as well. A metaphysical union implies an unbreakable bond of trust between two people, soul rapport, and a total intimacy of souls. Uniting with a prostitute involves only the physical. There is no other human relationship like the union between a husband and wife and those unions will be compared in the upcoming verse.

1Cor. 6:16 You know that the person who unites himself with a prostitute becomes one body with her, don't you? For it is said, "The two will become one flesh."

ουκ οιδατε = don't you know? This what should be knowledge in the right lobe of the soul. Isn't this resident in your soul? Paul will play on the theme of sex and marriage so that we can understand what it means to be united—in union with Christ. It is not just about sex. In order to understand this verse, we must first understand what sex represents. For some, it is the only thing; for others, it is to be avoided, etc. This will be the Biblical view. ὀλλομηνος which is the present middle participle of ὀλαω = to join to. The reflexive emphasizes volition; whether or not he joins to something, is his decision. It is a choice. It is not a predisposition to some act of πορνεία. Since it is a choice, we can say no as well as yes. The Corinthians cannot argue that the evil body will control them and that they cannot overcome it. However, the power of the sin nature has been broken as part of being in Christ. The body does not have to produce evil. What is going to be joined here intimately by choice is two bodies in sexual intercourse. εἰς σαρχ μιον = into one flesh. Two bodies in sexual intercourse turn into one flesh. That is the superficial meaning of this phrase. The man and a woman in sexual union are one flesh—or, so that is the design of God. Two people under this idea become a union of one. What this should mean to us is there is no closer association. This is truly the basis of why sex in marriage is wonderful and why sex outside of marriage can be so devastating. Paul is writing this about πορνεία. It is not just happening in marriage, as it should; but this is happening when one places himself in union with a prostitute.

Let's think about this union in marriage; the one flesh in marriage and one flesh with a prostitute.

One Flesh in Marriage

1. Marriage was designed by God to be the closest human association. This is the closest of human association. It is mental, physical, and spiritual. It is the closest of intimate relationships in life.
2. All aspects of this association, including sex, are at the closest when two believers with doctrine are married and advancing toward maturity together. That is the closest that this comes to perfection in a relationship in life. They have the capacity for love, which is the primary reason this is the closest, most perfect relationship in life.
3. The association and the sex becomes distant and divided when there are distractions and intrusions on the spiritual advance.
4. Doctrine in the mentality of the soul brings a like-mindedness that can be achieved in no other way. Doctrine in the mentality of the soul can bring a like-mindedness which does affect the physical. This is not a robotic function or slavery.
5. Thought patterns interlock and motivations which coincide. We don't think exactly the same thing, but our thought patterns interlock and we have common ground which is very difficult to find in life. We have the common motivation of glorifying God in our bodies.
6. It is like-mindedness which establishes a close friendship, problem-solving, understanding, and devotion. It is the basis for these things.
7. Sex on its own cannot accomplish any of these qualities. Sex is the great leveler something; people think that more sex or better sex makes their marriage better and takes up the slack. If there is no soul rapport, it means nothing. 2Cor. 6:14: Do not be bound together with unbelievers. For what partnership has righteousness and lawlessness? What fellowship has light with darkness? What fellowship is righteousness with unrighteousness? These things have no connection. When a believer marries an unbeliever, the results will be horrible. There will be some areas of similar thinking; but there will never be the like-mindedness of doctrine in the soul. There is no relationship in life like two believers advancing who are married. An unbeliever and a believer have no common spiritual ground; it is human viewpoint vs. divine viewpoint. You disengage with them in the right lobe of your soul. The very center of your life cannot be shared with your spouse—is that what a marriage should be about? Is that the idea of one flesh? The unbeliever can never have doctrine in the soul; they can never have the filling of the Spirit; they can never build an edification complex. However, with a believer and an unbeliever, the believer still has problem solving devices in his soul. There is no one circumstance in life which cannot be turned to blessing in your life. However, this requires a great deal from the one believer. There is no way to build the optimum in like mindedness without the spiritual. In Bobby's opinion, if the advancing believer is married to a negative believer, like-mindedness will be minimal and actually a source of regret in the relationship between two growing believers. This is a logical conclusion of 2Cor. 6:14. Marriage can be the ultimate human association.

If you are a growing believer, then you cannot truly experience a great relationship apart from both of you growing. The best working relationships are where doctrine is the foundation. Any initial common ground will erode. In this case, there will be a very important piece of your marriage missing. The mentality of the right lobe of your soul will never coalesce. Doctrine brings the greatest capacity for love and the greatest grace orientation and capacity for life; and the greatest understand of the foibles of your spouse; and problem solving devices; and a functioning spiritual life brings these things into a marriage. A marriage counselor can be a band-aid solution; they can solve this or that problem; however, the solution is in the spiritual life. There are times when a little counseling does not hurt; but this should not be where your faith should be. Doctrine should be the essential basis for problem solving.

A child, one who has suffered abuse, might require counseling, as they will not have fully formed problem solving devices. Jesus Christ had great humiliation and this is needed in marriage. Esteem and respect for one's spouse comes from grace orientation, even when they do not deserve it. How do you respect someone who does not deserve it? Doctrine promotes true sensitivity and deference to your spouse. If you have become united with a man or a woman, then you must give first place to your spouse and not to some cheap substitute (here, it is a prostitute). Hypersensitivity does not solve problems. It is the sexual union which actualizes and reflects the closest of association of a husband and a wife. It does not make the closeness of the relationship, but it reflects the closeness of the relationship. The real pleasure of a sexual union is greatest when there is a coalescence of souls; when a mental and spiritual association exists. With a number of partners, there may be real excitement, but there will never be true intimacy, which some do not think they want. Sex without true intimacy becomes dispassionate and mechanical. Sexual union is the ultimate physical act between physical act between a husband and wife which must be wrapped up in a cocoon of true intimacy. Sex is not love. Making love is a misnomer; love exists, before there is any physical contact. Sex is not the same as love. Sex is an enduring response; not fleeting or fading. Whenever there is no love or intimacy, then the sexual union will become stale. With a true coalescence of souls, the union continues with great strength. Sex can be a false echo of intimacy, which can lead to all manner of emotional revolt and hypersensitivity. Scar tissue in the soul can increase, which makes the relationship more difficult to deal with, and spiritual advance to be difficult to regain. If a person is being used for sex without true intimacy, it builds up scar tissue. With true rapport, the guy may not always want to hang with the boys drinking beers.

Paul borrows a phrase from the Hebrew Bible. Paul wants to elicit a comparison. He compares the προσνέα of the Corinthians with the way God has designed sex to be. When it came to illustrate spiritual things, Paul was expert at applying Old Testament doctrine. Paul draws from this knowledge when he quotes from Gen. 2:24: Therefore a man shall leave his father and his mother and he will cling to his wife, and they shall become one flesh. This is the union which God declared and set as a pattern for all future marriages. The verse here refers to both sex and the intimate association of the husband and wife. Prior to marriage, the association with mother and father is the closest relationship on this earth. However, a marriage simply means that you go into a greater and closer relationship. The deference however goes to the spouse; they are always first. This translates in many ways, one of them is privacy. The great things, the problems, etc. are all a matter of privacy. Intimate association is defined and reflected in sex. It is all about soul rapport. Soul rapport is the key. Paul wants the Corinthians to compare the right and wrong way to enter into union with a woman. Paul will take this and bring it into the greatest relationship of all, which is union with Jesus Christ.

1Cor. 6:16 Don't you know that the person who unites himself with a prostitute becomes one body with her? For it is said, "The two will become one flesh."

1Cor. 6:16

January 18, 2006

V. 15 is uniting with the wrong body; the right body is spiritual. We are one spirit with the body of Christ; and we are united to a spiritual body at salvation. This is union with Christ, also known as positional sanctification. We advance individually and we advance as a body. If we are not advancing, then we are out of step with the rest of the body. The verb in the first phrase is critical. It tells us what it means to be united. It is κολαω = to join oneself with, to join intimately with. The participle is used here and refers to any believer in the church age. Believers in Corinth (or in Houston, where we are now). In our context, it is a sexual union with a prostitute. It has a reflexive meaning; it turns on into the person himself. The volition of the believer is emphasized. In the middle voice, it means he joins himself with. They cannot believe in dualism; the body is evil and it makes me do this. But, the middle voice means that is our choice. The volition of the soul is involved in the encounter with the prostitute. The two bodies become σαρκα μιον = one flesh. That is the object of the preposition εις. Two bodies in sexual intercourse turn into one flesh. Two people become a union of one. This is true of the marital union as well as of the illicit union.

The Meaning of Joining Intimately with a Woman in Marriage

This is the legitimate union. This will help us to understand how devastating the πορνεία union can be.

1. Marriage is designed to be the most intimate and closest of human associations. Unfortunately, it rarely is.
2. All aspects of this association (mental, emotional and spiritual) are at their most intimate when there are two believers advancing toward spiritual maturity together in marriage.
3. The real intimacy of joining together sexually begins in the soul, not in the body. Into one flesh is the whole spectrum of intimacy; not just the physical. The mental attitude is the key to intimacy.
4. Doctrine in the mentality of the soul brings the intimacy of like-mindedness. Doctrine brings an intimacy which can be achieved in no other way.
5. Like-mindedness means thought patterns which interlock and motivations which coincide. You may have great sex if you are an unbeliever or a believer without doctrine. You might enjoy similar things with relationship to the details of life. Maybe you both have similar hobbies. Every unbeliever pair has some set of areas where there are some similar like-mindedness. What you have with the unbeliever is, at best, 30% intimacy. They cannot be filled with the Holy Spirit; there is no right lobe to understand and metabolize doctrine. When there are two believers advancing together, you have the whole package. If you think you need to jump on this or that unbeliever because the future outlook is not good; that means you have no patience and you have no interest in waiting on the Lord.
6. Like-mindedness is the basis for the closest friendship, the best understanding, tenderness, devotion, and problem solving. Marriage will always come with a marriage. Problems increase exponentially in marriage. If you have maximum personal love toward God, then you have a relaxed mental attitude, you have humility (so you don't get involved in many conflicts); you have faith-rest;
7. Sex without like-mindedness cannot accomplish true intimacy. Sex is not equivalent to intimacy.
8. Without the mental, spiritual, and emotional connections, sex becomes superficial and meaningless. This is not what God designed for sex in marriage.
9. It is sex which represents and actualizes that closest of relationship between husband and wife.
10. Sex is designed to be a physical response to the intimate, mental and spiritual life association. This is how you have the best sex. You need mental and spiritual life association.
11. The basis for ultimate sex is found only in the mental and spiritual association in marriage. This is the framework for the ideal relationship.

12. Sex is the response and reflection of the mental attitude of intimacy. It is an enduring response. When sex is no longer possible, the relationship does not suffer.
13. In the whole spectrum of intimacy in marriage, that is when sex takes on its true recreational and emotional aspects. That is when you find your own personal garden of Eden.

Paul borrows a phrase from the Old Testament: Gen. 2:24: For this cause, a man will leave his father and mother, and cleave to his wife and become one flesh. This is marriage. This association is not to be intruded upon by any other human being, including family from either side. Paul used this quote. There are two subjects here. One is marriage and the other is a prostitute. An illicit relationship and a correct relationship. Why does Paul pull this genuine union into this topic. Paul is comparing that which should not be with that which should be. Paul draws this comparison and then draws a fantastic conclusion.

The image in marriage goes beyond the physical. The marital is immediately separated from v. 16. Love, respect and every other positive mental attitude between a husband and wife. Paul is once again bringing up the intimate connection. How do we know that this is more than simply physical unions? The Scripture further describes union between a man and a woman as being much more than physical in Ephesians. The union between husband and wife is compared to the union between Christ and the church. Paul uses the very same image in Eph. 5:31 in 1Cor. 6. The same image is found in Gen. 2:24. Eph. 5:31: For this cause, a man will leave his father and mother and leave his wife and the two will become one flesh. We are to execute the plan of God; we are not to mock it. If that union is reflected by marriage and is reflective of Christ and the church, then what does union with a prostitute reflect? It is a mockery of what God designed.

One flesh is the image of a life-long relationship. The union is designed to be unbreakable. Once we are in union with Christ, it cannot be broken; it is guaranteed by the integrity of God. The marriage union should be similarly unbreakable. Paul's point to this people is that they are denigrating their union with Christ. It is all physical; and flesh is all there is. A physical union is brief and temporary. Marriage has many dimensions, as God designed. Union with a prostitute mocks God's design for a husband and wife.

Here's the Deal

1. By executing God's plan, we glorify God in our body. Our body is the outward expression of our service to Him.
2. When two believers unite in marriage, God is glorified in our bodies. The Eph. 5 analogy tells us that; that marriage is like Christ and the church.
3. Marriage is God's plan for most believers. Marriage is a divine institution.
4. Marriage should be taken seriously. It is a glorification of God. Marriage represents Christ and the church.

5. This is also why Christian marriage is a corporate witness of the plan of God. Two people show the plan of God and glorify Him in the way.
6. Marriage is the illustration on earth of the metaphysical union of Christ and the church. So where does prostitution enter into all of this? It does not. It is diametrically opposed to Christ and the church. It dishonors the body of Christ and ruins the corporate witness of Christ and the church and of the man and wife.

This illustration should hammer the Corinthians and cause them to recognize the degeneracy of their choices and the mistake of dualism, which destroys their corporate witness before God as well as their spiritual lives. They think their bodies have nothing to do with their spiritual life.

Since our body is the temple of the Holy Spirit, we cannot be demon possessed; but we can be demon-influenced. When one united with a prostitute, their bodies are separated from the spiritual life, more or less. The one who joins himself with the Lord is one spirit with Him.

1Cor. 6:15–17

January 19, 2006

The coalescence of souls is just as much in focus as the connection of the bodies. There has been a comparison between uniting in sexual intercourse with the wrong body; where one becomes one flesh with the harlot. This is similar to a husband and wife becoming one flesh, which is one unit in all respects.

1Cor. 6:15 You know that your bodies are parts of Christ, don't you? Should I take the parts of Christ and make them parts of a prostitute? Certainly not!

Paul quotes Genesis in v. 16. Paul is telling them, "Do not become caught up in the one-flesh concept with the wrong person. The husband and the wife is the correct uniting of the bodies and souls; a metaphysical union as much as a physical union.

The like-mindedness of soul rapport is when two believers are advancing together. You can't help but have a soul rapport and true intimacy. This body and soul intimacy is based upon doctrine in the soul. This includes being the closest of companions in life. Respect for those who have virtue and integrity. The key to any marriage is to be able to solve problems in adversity. Even better when both of you are believers with problem solving devices. No problem is too much to handle. Body and soul intimacy is based upon doctrine. The divine design of sex is the response to and the reflection of the intimate mental and spiritual life association. Under these conditions with these qualities, sex takes on its true recreational character. That is the optimal pleasure in sex. However, sex is only the reflection of intimacy; it is not the basis of intimacy. You can have sex without soul rapport; however, it is the soul rapport which gives your sexual relation depth. The marital union is for life. Becoming one flesh with a prostitute mocks God's design for husband and wife; it perverts intimacy. Where there is soul intimacy, this is a part of fulfilling God's plan for your life. Marriage is part of the fulfillment of God's plan. Christian marriage is the corporeal union representative of Christ's union with the church. Marriage is the corporate witness. Two mature believers in the plan of God. Our union with our spouse is a picture of our union with Christ as part of the church. In v. 20 we are commanded by God to glorify God. The marital union cultivated by two advancing believers glorifies God in their bodies and souls. Conversely, union with a prostitute is diametrically opposed to the plan of God. Πορνεία is a perversion between Christ and the church.

There is much more here than πορνεία vs. marriage. In πορνεία, the plan of God is perverted and mocked.

1Cor. 6:16 You know that the person who unites himself with a prostitute becomes one body with her, don't you? For it is said, "The two will become one flesh."

v. 17 deals with the depth of the union between yourself and Christ. Present middle participle of κολαω = to join oneself closely or intimately with. This is union with Christ. We have a position of total intimacy in union with Christ. The reflexive means that this is specifically a choice to join what we join. It is our choice to join with Jesus Christ. It is our choice whether we have this intimacy. We gain intimacy with Christ as we develop this relationship with Him. To experience intimacy is to choose to live the spiritual life and to have intimacy with Jesus Christ. Even at this moment, we are learning doctrine; as we learn about Christ, we come to love Him. You cannot love anyone without knowing them. Love gains in strength as you begin to know them. You may be attracted to someone; but there is no love until you actually get to know them.

The unbeliever cannot have a spiritual life; and they cannot have spiritual like-mindedness with their spouse. This is the parallel.

Christian Marriage Paralleled with Union with Christ

1. You are married in a ceremony. You may not even hear what a pastor says because you are completely out of it. At that time, you are officially and positionally united with your wife. You have received a position of marital union.
2. Now you have legal papers on one another which attests to your union.
3. However, that is only the beginning.
4. You must live together as husband and wife. Standing before the altar together is one thing; however, here you will live together for the rest of your lives, just as you live a spiritual life until you die.
5. Just as you succeed or fail in marriage based on your volition, so it is in the spiritual life. This is why it is a corporate witness.
6. The objective in Christian marriage is for the husband and the wife to experience the intimacy for which God designed marriage. Body and soul coalescence.
7. However, you must develop the intimacy in marriage. It just does not happen. You have to work at marriage.
8. In the same way, you must develop the intimacy between yourself and Jesus Christ. Christ has papers on us. But the intimacy between Him and us must be developed.
9. Just as the intimacy between husband and wife comes from like-mindedness, so intimacy with Christ comes from possessing the mind of Christ.

10. Like-mindedness with the Lord is possessing the mind of Christ.
11. Possessing the mind of Christ is to experience intimacy with Christ. It is the experience of soul rapport. Constantly increasing your love for Christ is God's plan.
12. We have a position in marriage, which is union with Christ as salvation. We also have a spiritual life which is available at the moment of union with Christ. This is the unique spiritual life of the church age.
13. Just as in marriage, you leave the church and consummate the union, so that that position of union is consummated.
14. It is finally consummated in ultimate sanctification.
15. The previous 14 points is what it means to be one spirit with Him.

Bobby gives us the points first, and now he will exegete. Spirit is πνευμα, which is very appropriate. It is the best word to know what it means to join oneself intimately with the Lord. Πνευμα often means breath or that which gives life to the body.

דִּי מְחַיֵּה הַיֵּשׁׁבִית the seat of life united with the body. The breath of life is soul life. That is the physical and spiritual link. The context is one spirit with the Lord. In union with Christ, we have the same principle with Christ; in union with Christ, we share His eternal life. That is the seat of our spiritual life. His prototype spiritual life; God's life becomes our life. We also receive a spiritual life. This is the same spiritual life that Christ had during His 1st advent. It is our operational spiritual life.

The Holy Spirit puts us into union with Christ. The Holy Spirit is πνευμα as well. The believer is united with Jesus Christ through the baptism of the Spirit. This is an immediate work; we don't feel it; we don't know it happens; but it is real, as it gives us the breath of life. It is the key to our experiential spiritual life. Without His power, we have no spiritual life.

The Full Analogy

1. Union with Christ is our position in Christ. Positional sanctification. We are set apart. This is why we are called a saint by Scripture.
2. We have new life and we share all that He is and all that He has.
3. We must also experience that new life. The final experience is the resurrection body in eternity.
4. It is hearing, metabolizing and applying doctrine; this is living the spiritual life.
  - a. We think with vocabulary. With vocabulary comes concepts. Without vocabulary, we cannot be a smart person. We cannot conceptualize. This is why we need a technical, theological vocabulary. This transfers into concepts of theology, into understanding God, into understanding our spiritual life. At that point, we begin to have
5. The spiritual life is the same life that Christ lived during the 1st advent. Jesus faced the greatest challenges and difficulty. We have the same Holy Spirit that He had. We have all that He had.

6. That pioneered spiritual life that Christ lived is the operational life for us today. We can be in union with Christ and never have a functional Christian life.
7. Who empowers the spiritual life? The Holy Spirit Who has placed us in union with Christ. Position and experience.
8. Because of the Holy Spirit's indwelling ministry, we have a position in Christ. Christ is in us as well. Christ in us, the Hope of Glory.
9. We can live the spiritual life which first belonged to Christ and glorify Christ in our bodies. This gives us an idea as to what it means to be one spirit with Him.
10. This is the link between the physical life in our bodies and our spiritual life in Christ.
11. Just as in marriage, we become one flesh with our spouse, both body and soul, so we become one flesh with Jesus Christ through the baptism of the Holy Spirit. '

1Cor. 6:17 But the person who unites himself with the Lord becomes one spirit with him.

1Cor. 6:18

Flee immorality, which is the Corinthians' favorite deviation from Christianity. It is also part of their polytheistic worship. They were involved in heathen worship and the phallic cults. It was the antithesis of the spiritual life that they had been given. Their union with a false God or with a prostitute was a distortion of union with Jesus Christ. The Corinthians were blinded to what they had in union with Christ. V. 18 becomes a doctrinal application of the previous verses, and it begins another illustration of the physical and metaphysical.

V. 18 approaches this from a slightly different standpoint. Flee immorality; which, of course, indicates, don't do it! If by uniting with the body in sexual intercourse with a harlot, the person becomes one flesh with the harlot. And if the faithful union is union with Christ, which is illustrated by the marital union. Then, Paul will draw an obvious conclusion from vv. 15–17:  $\phi\upsilon\chi\alpha\tau\eta\ \tau\eta\nu\ \omicron\mu\iota\omicron\nu$  the basic use here of the imperative mood; it is a mandate; a command. Present imperative, which indicates an action in progress. The present command may be stated, Make it a continuous practice now and for the rest of your lives... is the force of the present imperative. What they must do is  $\phi\upsilon\gamma\omega$  = to flee, to run from. It is stronger here, being in the imperative. Seek safety in flight, get away from. This is not cowardice, but prudence and wisdom. It is a mandate to save yourself. What we are to escape is  $\pi\omicron\rho\nu\acute{\epsilon}\alpha$ . . Ex. 20:14: You will not commit adultery. Moses wrote this long before the time of the Corinthians. Matt. 5:27–28: "You have heard that it was said, 'You shall not commit adultery.' But I say to you that everyone who looks at a woman with lustful intent has already committed adultery with her in his heart. Jesus is saying, "You all know this; this is a basic tenet. But, Jesus adds to the mix, when you look at a woman other than your wife with sexual lust, this is equivalent to committing adultery. Jesus Christ sets unbelievably high standards.  $\pi\omicron\rho\nu\acute{\epsilon}\alpha$  is not just a physical act; it is mental as well.

This verse has been misrepresented time and time again. This does not mean that we cannot look at women who are attractive. Many believers do not go to movies, as there is sex and attractive women in them. This might be used even as an argument for women to wear Muslim veils and clothing. This is going overboard. The legalist can use this verse to deal with almost anything that they do not like. What should you run from and what should you not run from? Maybe we should just put on track shoes and run off.

A Few Points on Matt. 5:5:27–28

1. This is more than a look of admiration for the women that you see. Finding a woman attractive is not a violation of this.
2. It is not even the thought that a particular woman is attractive or appealing. This is how husbands are attracted to wives, which things are sensual and sexual. So, how do you look on a woman without violating this? This must be reconciled. There must be some chemistry between two people. Maybe there should just be arranged marriages, which is not necessarily a bad idea. They may know you better than we know ourselves; particularly in our teens and 20's. However, since that is not done, we must find one who appeals to us.
3. Vv. 27–28 is a fierce sexual desire that overwhelms your thinking; a man who undresses a woman every time he sees her. That is living in a fantasy land. When you do this, you lose your focus on everything else in life. The guy goes to the Men's Club because he is addicted to it. He will spend 1000's of dollars there.
4. Looking at a woman and committing mental adultery—this is putting yourself in a position to be sharply tempted by sexual desire; you desire it to distraction; you lose your focus on your priorities; you lose your focus on your spiritual life; it intrudes on your spiritual life; you might as well have done it. You have done it in your mind and you have lost focus on everything else.
5. These verses are a warning from our Lord against a departure from maintaining a divine view of sexuality.
6. Once the consuming thought settles into your mind, your body is not far behind. Once you have gone to a certain point in your thinking, it will happen. This is a point of consumption; a point where it eats you up. This is why Jesus says, "You have basically done it."
7. Even the thought at this point is the perverting of true love and intimacy into an inordinate lust. Lust is distinguished from the appeal and attraction of a woman which is normal.
8. The lust replaces the love and the Biblical boundaries of love are breached. This is what Jesus Christ means. When we are consumed by this, then we need to flee it; we need to take ourselves from the situation, which is very difficult if we are addicted to this. There is more than the power of positive thinking where we abstain for a week or two and then go back. Advancing to maturity means that the sin nature has less and less control over us. It is possible to glorify God in our bodies using the spiritual life.

Πορνεία is singled out here as it so closely parallels a legitimate function in life. Theft and murder do not parallel legitimate actions. However, it is normal and allowed to have sexual urges between husbands and wives. This is why it is difficult to maintain these boundaries. 1Cor. 6:18 does not teach that πορνεία is a greater sin than any other sin. Some pastors may rail against sexual sins, and throw a fit, and misrepresent the mandate of flee immorality. Sexual immorality is not one of the 7 worst sins from Proverbs.

Every other sin which a man sins is done outside the body; but sexual immorality is a sin against one's own body. Every sin apart from πορνεία is a sin committed outside the body; but aren't all sins against the body? Gluttony, drunkenness? What does this mean? There are a number of sins which are destructive to the body. Why is this distinction made here?

The Sins Outside the Body and Against the Body

1. We must remember the context. Πορνεία has to do here with uniting and becoming one flesh with the object of πορνεία. Two people unite to one person.
2. Even though these other sins are done by the body (glutton and drunkenness), they are external to the body.
3. Πορνεία is not just external to the body. It is external, but it is not just external.
4. Πορνεία and only πορνεία involves the principle of union of the body with someone else. Two bodies are involved, which unite to one flesh. Sinning with someone else to where you are united with them in this one flesh principle, this is a sin against your own body in this one way.
5. This is the sin of the union of two bodies and the perversion of the metaphysical union of two souls.
6. What makes πορνεία unique among sins of the body? Πορνεία places the positionally sanctified body of the believer into one flesh with someone else in πορνεία. We have a body which has been declared holy at the moment of salvation. A union concept that we are dealing with here in this sin against the body. It violates the principle of union with Christ.
7. In πορνεία that sanctified body is placed into an unsanctified position experientially. Any πορνεία fits this point.
8. Physical union with a prostitute or any type of πορνεία is opposed to any experientially sanctification, which is the uniting of body and soul in the spiritual life.
9. This one sin of union with the wrong body is a mockery of the very purpose for which we are placed in union with Christ. We are placed in union with Him to serve Him; not to serve our bodies or to serve ourselves.
10. This is a sin affecting the representation of the body of Christ on earth. That is the church. We are a unified body with one objective and one goal. This affects that representation.
11. The spiritual union of our body with the body of Christ is subverted in the eyes of the world. The intimate relationship between ourselves and Christ is subverted; and as we grow, this intimacy grows.
12. The body of the believer has a temporal and eternal destiny. This union must never be denigrated or misrepresented by a false πορνεία union. This denigrates the very union of Christ; we are not glorifying God in our bodies. Sexual union with the RW is a very union glorification of Jesus Christ.

13. This union must be elevated, which cannot be done in πορνεία activity. This purpose is negated in uniting with Πορνεία.
14. Uniting with a temple priestess violates everything that we have in union with Jesus Christ. It is a direct, antithetical perversion of what we have with Jesus Christ. We don't link or go into union with a prostitute.
15. You are wrongly linking your body in πορνεία and we are members of the body of Christ.
16. This is an evil contrast to glorifying God in our bodies. Satan perverts sex; that which should be glorious within the marital union. We are a loser in the angelic conflict, even though no one else may not observe this. We are seen by at least angelic eyes.

V. 19 will make a devastating case against their dualistic thinking and πορνεία functions.

1Cor. 6:18 Keep on running away from sexual immorality. Any other sin that a person commits is outside his body, but the person who sins sexually sins against his own body.

1Cor. 6:19

January 22, 2006

Do you not know is the 3rd time that Paul uses this phrase. It is supposed to be doctrine which is in their brain. This passage has been quoted by legalists in order to straighten us out and to make us act in accordance with their standards. Don't eat unhealthy food, exercise regularly, don't eat too much, etc. However, this is not what this passage is all about. This is not for a set of taboos for some legalist. That is a misapplication of this passage. Seminary had a laundry list of things that we should not do with our body. This is the body as related to the spiritual life. This is not a list of do's and don't's. This body is a sacred building, which is a far cry from the idea that the body is totally evil and irredeemable, which is an axiom of dualism. They believed that the body could not be a part of any spiritual activity. That is their thinking and Paul explains that their body is a temple of the Holy Spirit. This is positive; this is not a negative. This is who we are in our body. God has broken the power of the sin nature in your life, which is positional sanctification. Our body is a sacred building because of the Holy Spirit. Our body is a temple, which has many different connotations. Our bodies are sanctified by the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit actually indwells our body; He indwells our bodily temple, which has tremendous meaning for us. This is not some ethereal thing where God is somehow connected to us, but we do not know how; but He is in us.

Ev ὑμῶν = in you. This has also been misrepresented. Ev = in, with, by means of. These are legitimate translations and here it depends upon the context of the preposition. It depends upon whatever the ending of the preposition is. What case is this. It dictates what the preposition means. If the translation is the Holy Spirit is with us; that means, the Holy Spirit is along side you; He is there with you in some mysterious way, but vague. The present of the Holy Spirit would be abstract and someone elusive; even ethereal and mystic. Almost a ring of mysticism in it. This becomes a way to distort His presence in relation to the believer. The believer can name your own ticket here as to how the Holy Spirit deals with you, which is what many believers do. So many believers have a variety of ways that they are related to the Holy Spirit. The presence of the Holy Spirit ends up being one of extreme emotionalism. The very word Holy Spirit is mentioned and they go off on some emotional tangent. The Holy Spirit is with us; and His presence is an excuse for very bizarre activities in the way of the spiritual life. This idea that the Holy Spirit is only with us lends itself to a great many problems. If it is translated with, then this would parallel what we find in the Old Testament. This is the Old Testament concept of the Shekinah Glory. God dwelling with His people and God dwelling with us, which means we are spiritual Israel. This little preposition can even affect the relationship between Israel and the church. God was with Israel in the Old Testament and He is in us today. There is a great amount of continuity between the Old and New Testaments.

In our passage, the preposition is followed by the locative case, which also makes a difference. This indicates location—where is he? We know His exact location. Ev should be rendered here in, within. The Holy Spirit is omnipresent, but He also has a local presence; He is within us; He is in our bodies. He is not pushing us from behind or over our head, but He is in us. Even this seems a little nebulous. This is why our bodies are sanctified; the Holy Spirit dwells in us. This is a much more intimate or tangible relationship than with you. The Corinthians were headed for their temple to be put into union with a prostitute, but God the Holy Spirit is actually in them. In Israel, God with us meant that God dwelled in the Temple or in the Tabernacle; in a sacred building; which was not us. However, as believers in the Church Age, we are the sacred building in which the Holy Spirit dwells. The Jews could wander around the Tabernacle or Temple and they could be comforted that in their Temple dwelt God, the God of the Universe. It was a great comfort that this is God with us. It is even more of a comfort that God is in us. There are no exceptions to this. The Holy Spirit indwells all of us, involved with πορνεία or not. Those who say that we are not, understands nothing about the grace of God and uses this simply as a way to enforce his own legalism. The Holy Spirit was inside those who are even in union with a prostitute. This applies to the Corinthians, who are loser believers; so, therefore, it applies to the winner believer as well. This is in direct contradiction to dualism here. This is an all-inclusive statement. All believers are positionally sanctified by the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. All believers are positionally sanctified by the indwelling presence of the Holy Spirit. It is not excluded from any portion of believers.

An applicational question, which the Corinthians needed to ask themselves. “How can you believers defile your own bodies which have been sanctified by the Holy Spirit?” We all have areas of weakness; and certainly some at Berachah have the same weaknesses as those in Corinth. What is the divine viewpoint here? Who am I? What do I do with a body which is positionally sanctified. It is this positional sanctification which means we either accept who we are in Christ, and we move ahead in the spiritual life or we don't. If we do the exactly opposite of our position, then we function like the Corinthians. Our bodies are not to be unified with a prostitute, as they are already in union with Jesus Christ. Paul again says μη γινωιτω = may it never be, may it not happen. Πορνεία is a compromise of positional sanctification. If our spiritual life is negated, then our life in general will not be a good one. We are outside of God's plan and, as a believer in Jesus Christ, there is a price to pay for this. Divine discipline will bring us back to where we should be. God will spank us. It is a good idea to pay attention to who we are, what we have and what we do. Πορνεία is a perversion of one of the greatest gifts which God has given to man in marriage. The one-flesh principle. The perversion of what God has designed, and it is something which glorifies God. Sex in marriage glorifies God; there is no reason to be legalistic about sex in marriage; it is part of His plan and glorification. However, sex can be easily perverted into a sin against our own bodies.

Ναοφ = a sacred building. This word had a special meaning for the Jews. They come through Corinth, a great seaport of the ancient world; and there are many Jews in this church. The Temple still existed at this time; the Romans would not level it for another 10+ years, leaving only the west wall, the wailing wall. This has a tremendous meaning to the Jewish faction of Corinth. When Paul writes in your temple, he knew this would invoke some deep emotions from the Jewish faction. The comparison will be striking.

ἵκησθε to dwell in something. Many judges had the Holy Spirit come upon them in order to accomplish something for a specific reason. Many of the judges had missions that they were to perform. The artisans also had the Holy Spirit which came upon them. King Saul is said to have the Holy Spirit come upon him. Moses, David, the prophets, etc. all had the Holy Spirit with them. They had induments of power. The Holy Spirit was never said to permanently live in any one believer or two. We have the indwelling of the Holy Spirit; God lived in specific buildings, but what Paul says here knocks them flat. God dwells in you.

1Cor. 6:19 You know that your body is a sanctuary of the Holy Spirit who is in you, whom you have received from God, don't you? You do not belong to yourselves,

1Cor. 6:19

Lesson #291 Wednesday

Bobby broke his hand and will stay at Berachah and won't be gone for vacation.

This is a misinterpreted verse and confuses the believer's relationship with the Holy Spirit; not the verse but the misinterpretation of it. We need to understand this verse in order to know who we are and what we have. We will have to sort out the indwelling and the filling of the Holy Spirit. Why do we have 2 ministries of the Holy Spirit? Why don't we have this under one heading and just run with it? This verse and the pertinent doctrine are at the very heart of spirituality. This tells us where the Holy Spirit lives and what his presence means and what positional truth is. The indwelling and the filling of the Holy Spirit are major factors in the uniqueness of the church age.

Our text tells us that our body is where He resides; our body is a sacred building, if you will, and He indwells this sacred building. We have the preposition εν and it could mean with; which would make the presence of the Holy Spirit somewhat abstract and ethereal, if not mystical. ὑμῶν, which is the locative case. This means the Holy Spirit is in you. This is a much more intimate and tangible arrangement. Not on is the Holy Spirit in our body, but so is Jesus Christ. The indwelling of the Holy Spirit is directly linked to the indwelling of Jesus Christ. The Holy Spirit has a localized presence within our bodies; the Holy Spirit is not simply around us or hovering over us or drifting about in the clouds above. God has localized Himself without giving up His omnipresence. Somehow God, being omnipresent, has given Himself a localized presence. He is the executor of His absolute positional sanctification.

This passage is directed specifically to those who frequent the temple of Aphrodite. These are believers who have defiled their bodies in the temple of Aphrodite with temple priestesses. V. 19 actually becomes a rationale; the body temple is not to be defiled with temple prostitutes. There is a vast difference between the residence of God with His people as opposed to God being in His people. In the Old Testament, God was with His people; most notably in the tabernacle and the temple of Israel. שׁוֹכֵן; The Holy Spirit came upon certain individual heroes in the Old Testament; he empowered them for a specific purpose. He guided and endowed the spiritual heroes of that time frame with power. There is a roll call of these people.

Old Testament Heroes Endowed with the Holy Spirit

1. There is Moses and the 70 heroes of Israel (Num. 11:16, 17, 25, 29.
2. Deut. 34:9 Joshua
3. Judges 3:10 6:34 11:29 14:6, 19 15:14 the Judges
4. 1Sam. 6:3–10 Samuel
5. Saul, who was definitely a believer, as the Holy Spirit only came upon believers.
6. David, the greatest king of Israel's history. 1Sam. 16:13
7. Elijah 1Kings 18:12
8. Elisha 2Kings 2:16
9. Azariah 2Chron. 15:1
10. Masai 1Chron. 12:18
11. Ezek. 2:2 3:24 8:23
12. Micah 3:8
13. All prophets in Zech. 7:12
14. Samson is one that many know about. His specific purpose was to protect Israel from the attack of the Philistines. He has this endowment of the Holy Spirit from the very beginning. This included a selection of victories; all heralded with the phrase and the Spirit of the Lord came upon him; at least mentioned 3 times. It was not his long hair; it was having God the Holy Spirit. His hair was a sign of his obedience to the Nazirite vow that he took; when disobedient, the Holy Spirit was no longer on him anyway.
  - a. The Nazirite vow meant that a Jew would be specifically related to God; and the believer could not drink anything from the vine, fermented or unfermented; you could not shave or cut your hair. Tremendous heathenism during this time, and some used alcohol during the orgies. Taking a vow like this indicated that someone was completely set apart to God, rather than to some heathen deity. His entire body was a part of this vow. Cutting his hair meant that he rejected the vow. But the Holy Spirit giving him power was the key to his strength.

15. Three conclusions:
- a. Only a few had this endowment.
  - b. The Holy Spirit came upon certain believers to enable them for some special service.
  - c. The endowment was temporary. David said, “Take not Your Holy Spirit from me.” meaning the Holy Spirit could be lost.

Therefore, if we translated this as the Holy Spirit is with you, then there would be no difference between the Church Age and the Age of Israel.

The Tabernacle and the Temple were sacred buildings; residences of Y<sup>e</sup>howah and His people. When the Jews saw this word written by the Apostle Paul, it had a special meaning for them. It grabbed their attention. If God the Holy Spirit was localized in them, it made them think of the Shekinah glory dwelling with Israel. The critical parallel is the word Temple. No one could enter into the Holy of Holies in the presence of God, it was instant death. He must be cleansed to enter the presence of God. All the sacrifices had great meaning. The represented rebound and salvation; ritual cleansings represented actual cleansings. When we believe in God, we enter into the Holy of Holies. Once a year, the High Priest entered into the Holy of Holies. He cleansed himself with a number of sacrifices. He saw the High Priest making intercession for them; and then he made himself pure so that he could sprinkle the blood over the mercy seat. All the rituals had a meaning. Ritual cleansing and then he entered the Temple, and Israel understood. This is how they understood the gospel. It happened once a year, and at any other time, the High Priest would have been rejected. The result would have been death. The Corinthians had to understand that their bodies were the absolute dwelling place of deity. If the Greeks did not get it, the Jews did, and they probably told them what was going on. They explained this doctrine to the others, those that they might even be in an opposing faction with.

The body becomes a temple for the same reason the building in Israel was a temple; the body contains the Holy Spirit. In Israel, God lived in the Temple; in the church age, He lives in us, His Temples. Our bodies are Temples. Paul used the word ναος = Temple, which word made a deep impression on the Jews of Corinth. We are walking shrines, even though some of us are in walking reversionism. Our status of carnality or reversionism never negates the fact that we are temples; how can the Holy Spirit remain where carnality is continual and persistent.

The Corinthians were practicing all sorts of carnality, and yet Paul calls them sanctified; it is because they are positionally sanctified. This is strictly the inwelling of the Holy Spirit; which Bobby will differentiate from the filling of the Holy Spirit. The Shekinah glory of Israel departed; and there was a time when the Shekinah glory was no longer in residence in Israel. There was a time when there was no longer the induement of the Holy Spirit.

How do we know that the Holy Spirit will never leave the temple of our bodies, when He did leave the physical Temple. How do we know that His residence is permanent. It is the grammar of v. 19. The only way that Bobby knows this is permanent is the grammar.

So far, we have only seen the grammar, but we have not really exegeted this verse. We'll compare the verbs and we will see the moods; the indicative and imperative moods are the key to understanding these two ministries.

1Co 6:19 Or do you not know that your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit within you, whom you have from God? You are not your own,...

1Cor. 6:19

January 26, 2006

We are set apart because we are indwelt by the Holy Spirit. In no other age have believers said to be where the Holy Spirit resides. Nothing is more important in our lives than the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. Prior to the Church Age, the members of the Godhead dwelt with the people of God. The most celebrated way is God dwelling with Israel in the Tabernacle; and in the cloud by day and what by night?

God went into great detail on the specifications of the Tabernacle, as to how it was to be built. No one entered into the Holy of Holies except once a year by the High Priest on the Day of Atonement. This is the wonderful presence of God with His people Israel. Later, His presence was localized by the Temple built by Solomon.

The Tabernacle would represent the 1st advent of Jesus Christ and the Temple would represent His 2nd advent.

His presence was the light and glory of the dwelling presence of His people—the Shekinah glory.

There are differences which set us apart in the Church Age. There are 3 factors concerning the Holy Spirit's work in the Old Testament, which high light the differences between their dispensation and ours.

1. The indument of power was not universal in the Old Testament.
2. The Holy Spirit came upon certain men in the Old Testament and allowed them to do great deeds or special service to God. This included Moses, all the prophets, specific kings, all the judges, and Samson was a main illustration.
3. The indument of power was temporary. The divine presence of the Shekinah glory finally left the Temple when they turned apostate and has not returned even to this day—but it will return. The building which is now sacred is our bodies. In our bodies dwells the Holy Spirit.

This Temple of God the Holy Spirit, our body, is also the Temple of Jesus Christ. It is the Holy Spirit which cleanses our temple so that Jesus Christ can reside there. In this one noun ναός Paul draws great parallels between the Old and New Testaments.

One of the great continuities in Scripture is salvation; everyone is saved in every dispensation by believing in Jesus Christ. It is grace and faith alone in Christ alone (or, by whatever name by which He is known). It is not something that we do which sets us apart which makes us holy; but it is the divine presence in us which makes us set apart and unique. No other dispensation has believers set apart in this way. Jesus Christ will never depart, as He did from the Temple in Israel; regardless of our level of carnality.

We are going to focus on 3 verbs in particular. The three verbs are εστιν = is. This verb is repeated. The third verb is εχω = to have, to hold. 2nd person singular, present active indicative of εμι. If this verb were not in the indicative, then we would not be certain that the Holy Spirit indwells us.

The Indicative Mood

1. The indicative mood is declarative; it declares something; it states something.
2. The indicative mood states a simple fact. A president once answering questions in court said, "It all depends upon what is means." This verb is very definitive.
3. Since the indicative mood represents a true fact, it is a certainty there are no qualifications and no conditions. This president was trying to insert qualifications and conditions which did not exist.
4. There is none of this if this happened, then there is a consequence; that is the subjunctive mood.
5. The indicative mood means the Holy Spirit in us is an accomplished fact;; it is a true fact that has happened and continues.
6. Therefore, your body is a temple and the Holy Spirit whom we have from God are statements of certainty and circumstances which do exist.

Why is the indicative important? It makes a distinction between the fact of the indwelling of the Holy Spirit as versus the changing of the filling of the Spirit.

The Filling of the Spirit versus the Indwelling of the Spirit from a Morphological Stand

1. Eph. 5:18: And do not get drunk with wine for that is dissipation but be filled with the Holy Spirit.
2. There is a difference in the way these two acts are distinguished.
3. To be filled is a mandate; to be indwelt is a statement of fact. Indicative vs. the imperative.
4. The indicative tells us that we are in a specific status. We are regenerated; we have been justified; and we are indwelt.
5. The imperative is a categorical command to do something. Rom. 6:13: Do not present your members as instruments of unrighteousness to sin, but present yourselves to God as one living from the dead, and your members instruments of righteousness to God. Here, we have an imperative. Present your members as instruments is a mandate; the imperative mood.
6. Remember the indicative mood of 1Cor. 6:15; it is an accomplished fact and our bodies are members of Christ.

7. The imperative mood of Rom. 6:13 demands that we act accordingly. There is no volition involved in the indicative; with the imperative mood, volition is involved. The imperative.

The Imperative Rests Upon the Indicative

1. We are new creatures in Christ. Regeneration makes us this way; that is the indicative. That is our position. Therefore, a result action—the mandate: live as a new creature by advancing to spiritual maturity.
2. A Biblical fact is that we are made righteous at the point of salvation; we are justified. That Abram was made righteous is in the indicative mood. Therefore Rom. 6:13: be instruments of righteousness. Here is our spiritual advance again.
3. The indicative involves a once and for all fact that is accomplished; the imperative involves something which occurs time and time again, based upon our volition.
4. The imperative is a building of a new person through epistemological rehabilitation. This is linked to be filled with the Holy Spirit.
5. If we are commanded by an imperative mood to do something, then this means that we have a choice not to comply. We can choose one way or the other.
6. The mandate to be filled with the Holy Spirit is optional; it must occur time and time again. This brings in rebound. We must rebound again and again because of the imperative mood.
7. Indicative: you are the temple of the Holy Spirit; a simple fact. The indwelling of the Holy Spirit is a simple fact of our life as believers.
8. The indwelling of the Holy Spirit is an irrevocable fact because we have no choice and God is immutable.
9. Imperative: believe on the Lord Jesus Christ; the result is, we are the temple of the Holy Spirit; then, be filled.
10. The filling of the Holy Spirit is revocable; if we choose to sin, this is the way it works in Scripture.
11. The indicative-imperative mandate; it holds for every mandate and every status.
12. This simply confirms that these two ministries of God the Holy Spirit are separate and distinct with different purposes and different characteristics.

There will be a payoff for all this grammar. That your body is the temple of the Holy Spirit is a statement of immutability; it is a permanent and certain fact. Απο = from the ultimate source of. You have is in the indicative mood. When God gives us something, then He cannot take it back. God's indwelling is a fact which cannot be changed by us, someone else, by circumstances or by God Himself. The rationale: be careful what you do with your body; why would you go up the hill and link your body with a prostitute. Paul gives them a rationale for why they should not do this.

1Co 6:19 Or do you not know that your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit within you, whom you have from God? You are not your own,...

Only in the Church Age are believers said to be the residents of God Himself. Wherever we live, the Holy Spirit, lives within us. God was present with His people in previous dispensations. God led His people as a cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night, and by this, they knew that God was with them. God also seemed to have a particular ministry with specific believers for a temporary period of time. However, in the Church Age, we are indwelt permanently by the Holy Spirit. This is based on the indicative mood of several verbs as opposed to other verbs being used in the imperative. This makes our spiritual life unique throughout all of the ages.

1Co 6:19a Or do you not know that your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit within you,...

The Holy Spirit belongs to us; this is a true fact which cannot be changed by us or by anyone else.

We complete these verse with you are not your own. The context is our bodies; our bodies do not belong to us, but to God. God has claim on our bodies. The Holy Spirit has squatter's rights, because He indwells us. He holds the deed. We think of our bodies as being exclusively our own, even if we own nothing else in this world. However, our passage indicates that God owns even our bodies. Our bodies are sanctified, set apart, by the indwelling and the ownership of God the Holy Spirit. Our bodies are integral to our spiritual life, which is not completely understood by the Corinthians.

1Co 6:19b ...whom you have from God? You are not your own,...

End exegesis; however, we have much to cover beyond this; to apply this verse.

Application of 1Co. 6:19

1. The indwelling of the Holy Spirit is one of the 39 irrevocable absolutes of salvation in which the Holy Spirit takes up residence in our body. By this, we are positionally sanctified.
2. The universal indwelling of all believers is unique to the church age.
3. Jesus Christ revealed this to His Apostles in the 1st advent.
4. John 7:39: But He said this concerning the Spirit, whom the ones believing into Him were about to receive; for the Holy Spirit was not yet given, because Jesus was not yet glorified. Christ had to die, be resurrected and then seated at the right hand of God.
5. John 14:16–17: And I will petition the Father, and He will give you another Comforter, that He may remain with you to the age, the Spirit of Truth, whom the world cannot receive because it does not see Him nor know Him. But you know Him, for He abides with you and shall be in you. The Holy Spirit was abiding with the Apostles as He had with believers in the Old Testament.
6. The word anointing is a synonym for the 1John 2:20–27

The Anointing of God the Holy Spirit

1. The Greek word for anointing is χρισμος, which is very similar to χριστος; one is derived from the other. Christ is the Anointed One.
2. The Holy Spirit came upon Jesus Christ and anointed Him right after He was baptized by John the Baptizer. The Holy Spirit came upon Him in the form of a dove, identifying Him as the Messiah. Anointing is synonymous with the receiving of God the Holy Spirit.
3. Anointing related the indwelling of the Holy Spirit to the Church Age believer as a sign of the royal family of God. As believers, when we are anointed, we share in the anointing of the Lord Jesus Christ.
4. We are anointed as royal family living in the Holy of Holies forever, just as He dwelt in the Holy of Holies in the Tabernacle of God. He indwells us because we are a temple. The sign of the indwelling indicates that we are royal family of God.
5. Anointing appoints us ambassadors for Christ. We therefore become representatives of the Lord Jesus Christ. This is why He said, "Go to all the world and evangelize."

Return to: Application of 1Cor. 6:19

7. God the Holy Spirit did not indwell Old Testament believers. He gave a few of them the endowment of the Holy Spirit, which is an indowment of power.
  - a. Those who wrote Scripture were endowed with God the Holy Spirit.
  - b. Those who were judges were endowed with the Holy Spirit.
  - c. Certain kings had the Holy Spirit, given to them to accomplish what God had for them.
  - d. Zech. 7:12: all of the prophets of the Old Testament were endowed with God the Holy Spirit.
  - e. Those who built the Tabernacle were also endowed with the Holy Spirit so that they could complete it just as God required. The Tabernacle was the doctrine of salvation, redemption, propitiation, of their coming Messiah—so every aspect of the Tabernacle had to be exactly right.
8. We must distinguish between the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, which is permeant; and the filling of the Holy Spirit, which is temporary. This one aspect is one of the most confused doctrines in Christianity today. Some churches do not distinguish between the two. This tells you who you are and the mechanics of the spiritual life and what God requires you to do.
  - a. It should be obvious that when we sin, we lose the filling of the Holy Spirit. However, we still retain the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. The filling is a renewable asset.
  - b. The permanency of the indwelling Holy Spirit is confirmed by the indicative imperative model. This model is a comparison between the use of the indicative mood and the imperative mood. V. 19 has 3 verbs used with the indicative mood; and one verb with the imperative mood in Eph. 5:18 (Be filled with the Holy Spirit). Our body is the Temple of the Holy Spirit Who is in us; the Holy Spirit whom we have from God. This is a certainty. There are no qualifications; there are no conditions placed on the indwelling of God the Holy Spirit.

- c. Our body is a Temple and we are indwelt by God the Holy Spirit and this is an absolute certainty, which reality does not change.
- d. The filling of the Holy Spirit is spoken of with the imperative mood. We are commanded to be filled with the Holy Spirit. We are being commanded to do something.
- e. There must be some action which we take in order to be filled; and we know that as rebound. If we are mandated to be filled, then it is conditional on our actions.

The Difference between the Indwelling and the Filing of the Holy Spirit

1. You are a new creature in Christ. This is a statement of fact.
2. The counterpart statement is Therefore live as a new creature in Christ. You are a new creature; now act as a new creature.
3. You are justified [positionally at the moment of salvation; we are given righteousness positionally; it is imputed to us. Therefore, you build experiential righteousness by means of your spiritual assets.
4. The imperative is the building of a new person. We are mandated to Grow in grace and knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. This is our choice. This is the building of a new person through epistemological rehabilitation. Two simple commands: be filled and grow.
5. The indicative involves a once and for all fact. The imperative recurs time and time again based upon volition.
6. If you are commanded by an imperative to do something, then we have a choice not to comply.
7. The mandate to be filled with the Holy Spirit is optional. It must occur time and time again and is a matter of our volition.
8. The indwelling is an irrevocable fact for us as believers. It is done; it is completed; we have it. There is no recurrence. It has been accomplished for us.
9. The filling of the Holy Spirit is revocable if we choose to sin. The indwelling of the Holy Spirit can never be revoked. There is no freewill decision that we can make to cancel that out.
10. The indicative-imperative model confirms that these two ministries of the Holy Spirit are separate and distinct. This is why grammar is important. Believers today do not distinguish between the filling and the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. The Word of God nails this down for us; there is no room for doubt or confusion.

There are areas of continuity between the Old and New Testaments; but there are differences as well. We are a separate entity from Israel. Israel still has a future. Bobby is asked, "Don't you think the Tribulation is close?" because of the upheaval in the Middle East. Satan has always wanted to destroy the Jews; this is one of his objectives. What is going on in Israel has nothing to do with prophecy in Scripture. Things that occur that are interesting; and we might be able to compare what is going on with the Trib; but all we need to do is to advance to spiritual maturity. We are very pro-Semitic in Berachah, as God is pro-Semitic.

We are in the midst of defining the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. What is the purpose for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit? Why do we have it? Why did God give it to us? Why does it show a discontinuity between the Old Testament saint and believers today.

What is the Purpose of the Indwelling?

1. The Holy Spirit indwells the body of the believer because the sin nature lives in the body. The sin nature is found in every cell of our body. We cannot do anything about the existence of the sin nature. However, we can counteract the power of the sin nature.
2. The residence of the sin nature after the first birth and the residence of the Holy Spirit from the new birth result in a great inner conflict.
3. This is why the indwelling of the Holy Spirit emphasizes our body—1Cor. 6:19. The indwelling of the Holy Spirit is not about our soul; it is about our body.
4. The Holy Spirit, whether the filling or the indwelling, carries with Him an inherent power which resides in the body of the believer.
5. That power must also operate for the believer; it is inherent in the believer, but it must operate. Human ability must be superceded by divine ability. A supernatural empowerment is required, and this power must be operative.
6. The indwelling means inherent power. That power is not operational apart from the filling of the Holy Spirit. It is like a lamp. Unless that lamp is plugged into a wall and receiving electricity, it will not light up no matter what we do with it.
7. The actual use of divine power inherent to the residence of the indwelling depends upon the maintenance of the filling of the Holy Spirit. This means, rebound. That is the key to the operational aspect.
8. The indwelling of the Holy Spirit is the principle of victory over the sin nature. The filling of the Holy Spirit is the function of the Holy Spirit over the sin nature. One is a principle, the second is the function. A very different function.
9. The indwelling of the Holy Spirit Positionally breaks the power of the sin nature over our lives as unbelievers. We have nothing to counter the power of the sin nature in and of ourselves.
10. The indwelling of the Holy Spirit is the basis for the spiritual life. The filling of the Holy Spirit is the function of the spiritual life. This is not ever taught even in Bobby's seminary for the most part, which was a good seminary.

The indwelling of God the Holy Spirit make the indwelling of a demon to be impossible. Many people believe that believers can be indwelt by demons.

Why Can't We be Indwelt by Demons

1. Indwelling of demons is found in the Bible.
2. Demon possession never occurs apart from human consent. No one will be surprised.
3. Human consent is related to cosmic involvement. The person may not say, "Please indwell me, demons." It may involve idolatry, the occult, drug addiction, etc. All of these situations open us up to doctrines of demons and for demons to take control. Deut. 32:17 Psalm 106:17–39 Luke 17:7
4. The phallic cult, which is idolatrous, uses human sacrifice and unrestrained licentiousness (sexual lust) as entry points for demons. People in Corinth were involved with exactly this. Exorcism is not a Biblical term.
5. Believers, including the Corinthians, cannot be invaded by demons where the Holy Spirit resides. No demon can enter the body if the Holy Spirit is already there.
6. A demon cannot live in the Temple of the body sanctified by the presence of the Holy Spirit. Otherwise, we could lose our positional sanctification. The Holy Spirit indwelling cannot sanctify us.
7. However, the believer certainly can be influenced by demons when they reside in the cosmic system and reversionism. It is called the doctrines of demons in 1Tim. 4:1. These begin with straight human viewpoint. If we adhere to human viewpoint instead of divine viewpoint, we are sucked into the doctrine of demons. When the Corinthians went to heathen temples, they placed themselves where doctrines of demons were rampant.
8. Satanic thought. 2Cor. 11:3 Eph. 4:17

Third Purpose of the Indwelling of the Holy Spirit

1. The primary purpose for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit is to make our bodies a Temple worthy of the indwelling of the Lord Jesus Christ as the Shekinah Glory. 1Cor. 3:16 2Cor. 6:16 Col. 1:27
2. This is a continuity between the Old and New Testaments. It is because of the terminology because of where the Holy Spirit indwells. There is the Temple crossover. It is a great illustration.
3. In the New Testament, the Holy Spirit and Jesus Christ both indwell our bodies. Our bodies are the localized presence of the Lord Jesus Christ. John 14:20 Col. 1:27
4. But there are distinguishing characteristics between the indwelling of the two members of the Trinity. This was Bobby's master thesis in seminary. Their main question was, what's the difference?
  - a. The Holy Spirit indwells so that Christ can indwell. The Holy Spirit paves the way for the indwelling of Christ.

- b. Christ does not indwell our body where the sin nature exists and presides. That refers to the unbeliever; not to the believer out of fellowship.
- c. How does this happen? Titus 3:5: the renewing of the Holy Spirit, which makes the temple of our bodies fit for indwelling.
- d. The Holy Spirit cleanses our temple so that Christ can indwell.
- e. Why does Christ indwell? Can't the Holy Spirit handle it? Christ indwells us to manifest His glory in our lives.
- f. The Old Testament background to the indwelling of Christ.

The Old Testament background to the indwelling of Christ.

1. There is a unique relationship between the indwelling of Christ in the Tabernacle and the indwelling of Christ in the Temple of every believer.
2. His dwelling presence is called the glory of Israel. Jewish writers called Him the Shekinah glory in the first century A.D. in the targums.
3. They used Shekinah because that is a transliteration of שְׁכִינָה.
4. In the heart of the temple of Israel in the room called the Holy of Holies resided the physical, localized presence of the Lord Himself.
5. His divine presence conferred upon this building is the status of utter holiness. His presence always brought with it complete holiness.
7. His presence was a sign, that He was the God of Israel.
8. His presence with Israel meant that they were ruled by and blessed from God, unlike any other people of history.
9. His presence set a precedence for the body of the Church Age believer. He resides in a Temple in the Old Testament; He resides in a Temple in the New Testament. He must be with His people.

How Do We Know Which Person of the Trinity is the Shekinah Glory?

1. The Shekinah glory was the visible presence of God in the Old Testament. The glorious light of the bush fire before Moses; the cloud and pillar of fire; He was the Light of the Holy of Holies. The sons of Eli decided to take some other fire into the Holy of Holies and they dragged him out dead. No other light was to be in the Holy of Holies.
2. Which member of the Trinity is the visible presence to mankind in another age? Jesus Christ was bodily visible to man in the 1st advent. There is a parallel.
3. Christ as the Shekinah Glory. Luke 2:32 (He was called by Simeon "The glory of Your people, Israel"). This was an announcement of the returning presence of the Shekinah Glory for Israel. The Lord Jesus Christ walks into His Temple. John 1:14: The Word became flesh and tabernacled among us, and we beheld His glory. His presence in the Temple of Old Testament Israel brought into the 1st advent. Matt. 15 Luke 9:28–56 all tell of the Transfiguration, where James, John and Peter saw Him as the Shekinah Glory. John 1:18 He is seen as the visible member of the Trinity.

What does He do in this age? He is the Hope of Glory (Col. 1:27). The indwelling of the Holy Spirit.

1Cor. 6:19

February 1, 2006

This doctrine is a guarantee of our positional sanctification. It is why we can have the indwelling of Jesus Christ. It is the reason we can have fellowship with God.

The Indwelling of the Holy Spirit

1. The residence of the sin nature and the indwelling of the Holy Spirit results in a great conflict, according to Gal. 5:18? These are very similar things.
2. The indwelling of the Holy Spirit emphasizes our body.
3. The indwelling Holy Spirit is the reason the power of the sin nature has been positionally broken in our bodies. We are born with the old sin nature; there is nothing that we can do about that. However, we now have the Holy Spirit, to combat the indwelling of the sin nature.
4. The indwelling of the Holy Spirit means the residence of divine power within our bodies. This indwelling means that resident in us is the power of God. We cannot escape that power. It is the power of the Holy Spirit which is the basis for our operational power.
5. The indwelling of the Holy Spirit is the basis for the function of Holy Spirit's power in the life of the believer. Don't confuse the operation with the basis.
6. The indwelling means power, but that power is not operational apart from the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. We can never lose that inherent power. We can lose the operation of this power when the sin nature is in control.
7. The actual use of divine power inherent to the resident indwelling Holy Spirit depends upon the maintenance of the Holy Spirit, which is rebound.
8. The indwelling of the Holy Spirit is the principle of victory over the old sin nature. It is the breaking of the power of the sin nature in the life; but the filling of the Spirit is the function of the victory of the Holy Spirit.
9. The indwelling of the Spirit is the basis for the power of the Holy Spirit.
10. We see a lot of television where demons are exorcised, but that is a hoax. With the disappearance of the Apostles, the healing of human beings and the casting out of demons is no longer a part of Christianity. A demon cannot dwell in the body indwelt by God the Holy Spirit. We are washed and regenerated by the Holy Spirit; and therefore, the Temple cannot be invading and taken over. The believer can be influenced by demons, but the demon influence is the invasion of the mentality of the soul. It is not a physical presence.

11. The primary purpose of the indwelling of the Holy Spirit is to make our bodies a temple worthy of the indwelling of the Lord Jesus Christ, Who is the shekinah glory. 2Cor. 6:16 Col. 1:27

Bobby wanted to show the continuity between the shekinah glory in each age. The way He indwells is the discontinuity. God the Holy Spirit always dwells with his people in every dispensation; but there are differences as to how He dwells.

The shekinah glory became visible to the people of Israel. It was visible in the Old Testament, e.g., the burning bush, the cloud by day, etc. The shekinah glory became flesh and dwelt among us is how God the Holy Spirit was with us during the incarnation. Luke 2:32b. The glory of your people returned to the Temple when Jesus walked into the Temple Himself. In John 1:14, He was the visible presence of God who tabernacled among us. His glory was openly revealed to James, John and Peter (Mark 9). They saw His glory so that we would know who He was. John 1:18: Jesus was the manifest member of the Trinity.

How we be certain that the shekinah glory is what dwells in our bodies?

1. It is true that the presence of God was the shekinah glory in the Tabernacle and Temple.
2. He was the Lord Jesus Christ as the manifest person of the trinity.
3. He appeared as the glory presence of the first advent.
4. As a logical conclusion, and for continuity's sake, God must have a presence in the Church Age. He had a presence in the Age of Israel, during the incarnation; and now, we expect Him here as well.
5. The idea of the Temple carries over to the shekinah glory in the New Testament.
6. Col. 1:27: to whom God willed to make known what are the riches of the glory of this mystery among the nations, who is Christ in you, the hope of glory; His presence is inside of us, along with God the Holy Spirit. We are indwelt by the very person Who died for us.
7. In other words, we can become a reflection of the shekinah glory in our lives.
8. We have the same spiritual life that He utilized through the power of the Holy Spirit. He had the prototype and we have the operational model.
9. It is the Lord Jesus Christ, the shekinah glory. Always the presence with God's people. However, he now has a different place of dwelling.

What is the Connection between the Two Indwellings?

1. First the Holy Spirit creates the Temple in us.
2. We are made a divine residence.
3. This is the function of God the Holy Spirit at regeneration.

4. Because the body is the headquarters of the sin nature, the Holy Spirit sets up His headquarters in the body to break the grip of the sin nature over the body. We must be able to breathe in the Word of God.
5. The washing and renewing it the Holy Spirit cleansing our bodies to be holy. He washes it out, cleans it up, and then He moves in.
6. Total depravity means that we are under the control of the sin.
7. The Holy Spirit is there to make the place inhabitable.
8. Previously, the Holy Spirit indwelt God the Son.
9. We have the opportunity for experiential sanctification, which means we can reflect the Shekinah glory in our lives.
10. Reflecting the Shekinah glory is our hope of God.
- 11.

2Cor. 6:16: And what agreement does a temple of God have with idols? For you are a temple of the living God, even as God said, "I will" dwell in them and "walk among them, and I will be their God, and they shall be My people." However, dwell in Him is not found in the Leviticus text. The God Who lives among His people in Israel. Only the Spirit can renovate the corrupt body of a believer.

The indwelling of the Holy Spirit is not enough.

The conclusion of chapter 6: glorify God in your bodies. That is the reason for the two indwellings. The indicative imperative model is here before us. In our lives, we can fulfill this mandate to glorify God in our bodies, even though this may seem like a lot to ask.

We are the visible aspect of the Shekinah glory in this dispensation. God does not live in His  $\sigma$ . If His visible presence is seen in us, we are fulfilling this mandate. We are a reflection of God to the rest of the world.

2Cor. 3:18: we can be formed into the same image. Imago dei, the image of God. Because of the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, we have the ability to be the glory of God.

This closes the loop on His dwelling presence: But we all with our face having been unveiled, having beheld the glory of the Lord in a mirror, are being changed into the same image from glory to glory, as from the Lord Spirit (2Cor. 3:18). All that we do reflects the glory of God which is in us. All of chapter 6 that deals with the body.

Wait until we get to chapter 7. .

1Cor. 6:20

February 2, 2006

The Holy Spirit renews our body, making it the personal residence for the shekinah glory in the church age. We are the temple of the God of Israel. We are the Temple of Jesus Christ. Our bodies have become a flesh and blood sacred building. God owns our body

Temple; He owns us; our bodies do not belong to us; we have been bought and paid for, and it was a steep price. Our bodies are designated as the place for us to glorify and worship Him; as a tenant of the property owned by Jesus Christ, we have a plan to glorify and worship God in our bodies. It is our Temple, and yet He owns it. His body is the place of worship and glorification. Our bodies are not shrines, as body builders may think. Our bodies are not monuments to our own human accomplishments. Our bodies are not for vainglory, but our bodies are for His glory. The Holy Spirit resides in us. Jesus Christ does not reside in any place which is not holy. The power of the sin nature is broken, which is why Paul uses the illustration of God the Holy Spirit indwelling us. It is because of this that we can glorify God in our bodies. The believer can glorify God in our bodies.

We can be made into the image of Christ. 2Cor. 3:18: But we all with our face having been unveiled, having beheld the glory of the Lord in a mirror, are being changed into the same image from glory to glory, as from the Lord Spirit. We have an unveiled face; the veil of human viewpoint has been removed by epistemological rehabilitation. The doctrine which is brought into our souls which sheds light. We are being transformed by the renewing of the mind, and then proving what the will of God is (Rom. 12:2). Heb. 1:3a identifies the image: Christ is the image and glory of God. The essential image of God is mirrored in the Son. They are both God; they are members of the Trinity. Jesus Christ is the perfect image and counterpart of God the Father. “If you have seen Me, you have seen the Father,” Jesus told one of His Apostles. A believer in Jesus Christ has the capability of reflecting the glory of Jesus Christ. It is the glory of thinking with the mind of Christ in our lives, which also translates into actions which glorify Him. From glory to glory. This should have been organized into points.

In Ex. 34:29, it reads: the skin of his face shone because he was speaking with Him. The glory which radiated from Moses’s face. Paul uses the same imagery when it comes to us reflecting the glory of God. Church Age believers can reflect the same glory as was seen on the face of Moses. That is the continuity. With Moses, it was a visible glow; and they understood that he had been face to face with God. However, with us, there is no actual glow—not even a golden tan—

Here is What it Means to Reflect the Shekinah Glory

1. This depends upon the filling of the Holy Spirit and the doctrine in our souls. This is not what happened to Moses, by the way.
2. Our reflection is our spiritual life. Moses reflection was his face to face meeting. Ours is our mature spiritual life.
3. Our reflection comes from epistemological rehabilitation. We have the mind of Christ. We can think with the mind of the Shekinah glory.
4. Therefore, His glory is reflected in the physical body during the believer’s temporal existence. We take in doctrine and our spiritual life reflects what is inside of us.
5. When that happens, the real presence of the Shekinah within us is visible to the world. The Shekinah is visible through us, rather than in the Temple. It is through our actions in the body Temple.

6. This is sometimes called being Christ-like, which often does not mean much, unless you realize that you are reflecting Christ's likeness from our soul through our bodies.
7. The indwelling of Christ as the Shekinah is invisible inside of us.
8. His reflected glory is seen in the face of the Church Age believer who thinks and operates from divine viewpoint.
9. The reflected glory of the Shekinah glory glorifies God in our body.

Paul shows the continuity between the dispensations, while also revealing the discontinuity as well.

What Does this Price Entail

1. We are born in bondage to sin; this is why the unbeliever has no chance.
2. It was Christ on the cross Who paid the price for our freedom. Christ bought us and set us free. Gal. 3:13
3. Redemption results in the believer being adopted as a Son. He becomes a family member of the royal family. Gal. 4:4–6.
4. Redemption is also the basis for our eternal inheritance. How many slaves have an inheritance? They have none; they are given none. Heb. 9:15
5. His substitutionary spiritual death is the purchase price. 1Peter 1:18–19
6. Redemption is also the basis for justification. Christ paid the penalty on the cross, therefore, we can be justified. Rom. 3:34
7. Justification is also part of the Temple cleansing. We are made righteous. Our Temple is cleansed.

His presence become visible as His presence becomes visible in our bodies as we grow spiritually. Jesus Christ, the visible member of the Trinity.

Summary Points

1. The baptism of the Holy Spirit and His indwelling divorces the believer from the power of the sin nature and marries the believer to the power of the Holy Spirit. That is union with Christ.
2. We have seen that the indwelling of the Holy Spirit is never lost; it is given to us by God and guaranteed by His immutability. Jesus never leaves the Temple, so the indwelling Shekinah Glory is always with us as well.
3. The Holy Spirit indwells the body of every believer, but only controls the soul of the believer under the title filling of the Holy Spirit. There is the means to reflect the Shekinah glory.
4. The indwelling Holy Spirit is the principle of victory of the old sin nature. The filling is the function of victory over the old sin nature.
5. The actual use of divine power inherent in the Holy Spirit; when He indwells us, His power indwells us. His power is only operational as we are filled with the Holy Spirit.

It is there, but it must be utilized. We have the indwelling; we must operate under the filling. One is a fact and the other is an option.

6. Hence, glorifying God in our bodies is a function of the indwelling and the filling of the Holy Spirit. Glorify God in your bodies—and this is how. The Corinthians could not glorify God by being united with a prostitute. They linked their bodies with that which is base.

1Co 6:20 You were bought with a price; then glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are of God.

End chapter 6.

Chapter 7 is all about marriage, and other social relationships, and divorce. This is a real world subject for all of us; πορνεία may or may not be; but marriage is. However, πορνεία is the distortion and marriage is the true.

Marriage will strike a cord of interest. The chapter can be R rated and there are things here which will go contrary to what you have come to believe. The unbeliever can be happy in marriage; in fact, in Eccles. 9 tells us that the unbeliever can be happy with marriage to the right woman and with his particular vocation. After that, they die. At least, they have this option for a few years. These principles are for everyone.

The amalgamation of two people under one roof is an invention of God and it was one of the first things that He did in human history. However, marriage has its troubles; it can cause great confusion, agony; it is all wrapped up in marriage, because it is relational, and because it involves someone else. If you want a wonderful marriage, you must know what Scripture says about it.

Marriage is another way to glorify God in our bodies. We will be able to see if we are actually glorifying God in our bodies.

1Cor. 7 introduction

February 5, 2006

1Corinthians 7 is a hard-hitting, toe stomping chapter which deals with marriage. This inevitably attracts a crowd. If you are single, then do not think about getting married until you have heard the entire subject taught.

For those of you who have gotten married, this chapter also provides a great deal of help as well. If there is marital discord in your life (which probably includes everyone); there are no new problems. Superbowl is not a new thing.

This is particularly important for teachable teens, and this chapter can save them from some very serious mistakes in life. This will help to redirect their thinking. These principles of marriage need to be taught, for those who might get married.

There is a lot of human viewpoint on this topic; everyone has ideas, explanations and solutions to problems; very few have any answers whatsoever. This chapter will give the divine viewpoint, answers and solutions. Some of the oldest dilemmas in life are covered in this chapter.

Marriage can be the greatest relationship that life has to offer. It is not just a status for legal, guilt-free sex. Marriage is God's design; it is not some human invention which is entirely relative. Marriage is a divine institution, so there must be some guidelines which make marriage wonderful (when the guidelines are followed).

What is Good About Marriage

1. The condition of unobtainable friendship and love.
2. It can relieve loneliness (a bad marriage can be very lonely).
3. This is a relationship of soul rapport and soul coalescence, which are prerequisites for great sex in marriage. It is designed for intimacy in every respect. It is the epitome of soul rapport.
4. There are gospel implications of the marriage itself. Marriage is a union and it is an illustration of the unbeliever who exhibits faith alone in Christ alone.
5. This is the picture of the union between Christ and the church. There is the gospel and doctrinal implication. These facts alone give marriage a special standing in the Word of God.

Marriage is a natural state, and it is designed for specific things.

Marriage is Designed for:

1. Marriage is designed for happiness. It can also be a source of testing. Testing can move you to a higher category of spiritual maturity. It is also a problem-manufacturing device.
2. Marriage is a singular expression of love like no other institution. This is both soulfully and physically. Eph. 5:5 comes in here.
3. Marriage is an expression of spiritual maturity. The greater the maturity, the better the marriage.
4. Marriage is a corporate witness to the unbelieving world. Marriage in our country and world today is a horribly misunderstood and disorganized relationship today. Most people see this when it functions correctly and are amazed. The world knows of the relationship problems. Marriage must take marriage seriously; not frivolously. You don't say, "I've tried everything else; I might as well try marriage."

As usual, the Corinthians are very confused about the subject of marriage. In this chapter, it is apparent that the Corinthians wrote a letter to Paul about marriage. Now, concerning the things about which you wrote....

Guidelines for Application

1. Application without truth is bogus and misleading.
2. Application without facts is fantasy.
3. Application from inordinate emotion is self-delusion; you will delude yourself, if your thinking is unstable.
4. Application without principle is distortion.

The Corinthians need some facts; they need objectivity. The Corinthians have come to the right place to get their marriage counseling. Paul will be their marriage counselor. It is the doctrine which he gives them is the counseling. Who you speak to for counseling had better have doctrine in their soul. Problem-solving must come from your own thinking from your own soul. Some person can give you just the right doctrine at just the right moment; beyond that, you have a hit and miss situation.

We all need objectivity in the subject of marriage. Marriage can be the most subjective of all circumstances in life. Human subjective experience is never the Christian criterion; especially in marriage. You cannot understand your situation or our problems using the subjective thinking of someone else. So much counseling falls into this personal experience solution category. Most of this is simply psycho-babble opinion; from a person who supposedly has studied married longer than you have. As believers, we must have this foundation. With doctrine resident in your soul, the fog of ambiguous nations is lifted.

Paul has ripped the Corinthians up one side and down the other in the area of πορνεία. They definitely have some problems in this area. Now it is time for Paul to deal with the true doctrinal view of sex and marriage. Paul will bring some positive reinforcement after the tongue-lashing from the previous chapter. He distinguished between πορνεία and the glorification of God. Before, Paul was mandating certain solutions; but now he is not mandating anything.

Paul takes on a very fatherly attitude in this chapter. It is Paul taking aside his children and instructing them in the realm of sex and marriage as a father might speak to his own children.

Paul does not give us an overall view of marriage. Paul answers questions with no logical arrangement. It appears as though Paul takes these questions one by one and answers them as they occur in the letter to him. Paul is addressing specific questions in this chapter; not marriage in general. Paul probably is just taking them up in the order that he received them. Be careful about the questions you ask, as they may reveal something about you. Since these believers were caught up in πορνεία, their marriages are obviously in shambles. If πορνεία is not allowed and not any good, what remains to them is marriage for a sexual outlet.

One questions which they ask is, should a Christian man have sex with his wife? It may seem crazy or like a silly question, but this is a city when licentiousness rules. It is understandable that involvement in πορνεία has confused them. They are confused with regards to sex, love and marriage. They did not connect sex with love and marriage; they connected sex to pleasure and religion. They completely misunderstood marriage.

In v. 1, it appears as though sexual contact, even in marriage, might be evil. Maybe Paul is asserting that sex is evil altogether. "If sex is evil, then maybe we should not even be doing it?" The Corinthians may have gone even further with v. 1; and they could take this to, "Maybe we should not even be married, if sex is wrong?" There were legalists in the church who said there should be no contact with women at all. 1Tim. 4:3: Men who forbid marriage and advocate abstaining from foods, which God has devised to be..." Some asked if unions with heathen partners should be dissolved. Matt. 19:9–12: And I say to you, Whoever shall put away his wife, if not for fornication, and shall marry another, that one commits adultery. And the one who marries her who was put away commits adultery. His disciples said to Him, If the case of the man be so with his wife, it is not good to marry. But He said to them, Not all make room for this Word, but those to whom it is given. For there are eunuchs who were born thus from their mother's womb, and there are eunuchs who were made eunuchs by men, and there are eunuchs who made eunuchs of themselves for the sake of the kingdom of Heaven. He who is able to receive, let him receive it. His disciples heard this and said, "Maybe it is best that a man not even marry?" The disciples reflected the culture of their times.

The Hillel pharisees allowed divorce for a number of trivial reasons; for publically violating vows, for childlessness, for spoiling a meal; for finding a more beautiful and attractive woman. The Corinthians were just as confused about these things. So many of the Corinthians were into πορνεία. Maybe celibacy is the only way to go to correct their terrible sins (creeping legalism). People go overboard to prevent everyone else from sinning; and there are people who could not wait to get outside their doors and sin. Also, what about divorce; when can you divorce a woman (important to those who did not to be tied sexually to this woman for their entire lives). Also, are these binding principles or are these just guidelines?

1Cor. 7 introduction

Lesson #298 Sunday 2

February 5, 2006

We don't need to be looking around at our partner to determine if there is something that we need to reinforce from Bobby's teaching.

Many have wondered, is there a key to a successful marriage; some particular thing or solution which will put us into marital bliss. Even a passing thought about marriage will bring something like this to mind.

The expectations of wedlock are not being met for most people today; it is not what they expected and they don't like it. This is why people live together, so when they break up, there are fewer legal ramifications. They begin with a failure attitude.

There are 50% or more failure rate, and wedlock is like a prison for many people. But marriage was not designed to be this way. Couples marry for the wrong reasons. There are a bunch of reasons that are wrong.

Any key to marriage begins with the spiritual and not the physical. Today, it is physical instead of spiritual.

The Wrong Reasons to Marry; a List of Don't's with Regard to Getting Married

These principles will be Biblical and practical both.

1. Do not marry an unbeliever. A believer in Jesus Christ marrying an unbeliever is a recipe for disaster. 2Cor. 7:16? Do not be unequally yoked with an unbeliever. Bobby never marries a believer to an unbeliever. It is anti-Biblical.
2. If you are a believer and positive to doctrine, and you will have problems if you marry someone who is negative or does not hold to the same standards that you cling to. If you cannot agree on the same pastor or the same church, what can you agree on? You might have the spiritual life to deal with this, but your partner won't have this. This split between churches has occurred even in Berachah; particularly with the recent change in pastors at Berachah. Some families have made this difficult choice. Our spiritual life must come first. Without this, there is no basis for solving other problems. And what is the point to go to a church where you refuse to listen to whatever is said? At times, this might be an issue of compromise—where two believers might need to go to 2 different churches.
3. Do not think that marriage can solve your problems. Marriage is not a problem solving device; marriage compounds problems; it does not solve them. If we cannot solve our own problems while alone and single, then getting married will not solve them. The spiritual must take precedence. Marriage will thrive where problem solving devices are applied, even if we make a bad choice in the first place. Our only hope and prayer is, our spouse will get with doctrine and both can use the problem solving devices.
4. Don't marry a neurotic or troubled person. Mental compatibility is impossible. Marriage is not the environment to help disturbed people. Don't get married to help such a person. Neurotics are confused, self-centered, inhibited, and do not adapt to marriage. One of the first qualities to look for in a mate is grace orientation. Humility is not possible for such a person. You have to look for grace orientation. That is one of the greatest problem solving devices for any problem in life. The neurotic will expect you to be their solution. They will not look to doctrine; they will look to you. There is a built-in co-dependency. You never pull them up; they always pull them down. You cannot bring them up to your standards.
5. Do not marry a person involved in substance abuse—alcohol or drugs. You think you can help them? You will get co-dependency at best.
6. Do not get married in your teens or early 20's; in most cases, in this age bracket, you do not know your own mind. There are some exceptions to this. You might say, "But you got married at age 16—or grandma did." The person you are attracted to at age 21 will not be the person you are attracted to at age 40. You need to be settled in your own life before taking the plunge. You also know things are different nowadays; so granny was much more grown up at age 16 than you are at age 25.
7. Do not marry for security. That is a house of cards.

8. Do not marry for purely physical, sexual reasons. Of course there will be physical attraction and chemistry. The physical attraction may last through the honeymoon plus a few days, but not much more. You might be a very nice Christian boy or girl and you only want sex within the confines of marriage; but marrying on a wave of libido is a tragic mistake. This is getting married in the attraction stage with no insight into the person. Unrestrained libido will always override common sense. In this situation, you are marrying a sex object, but not a person. Sexual chemistry has nothing to do with soul rapport. Soul rapport is the pre-requisite for true intimacy, including a great sex life. You must understand the other person; there must be compatibility. That is the basis of the greatest soul rapport in human life. Some of the great friendships that you will ever have is people who think similarly to you. That kind of a gap in marriage can be disastrous.
9. A corollary to the sexual mistake: do not marry for beauty or attractiveness only. Beauty can be a trap and it hides great soul defects. If all you see is the beautiful hair, or wonderful smile, or great figure; but all of these things fade. You can be attracted to the beauty of a flower, 2 days later, the flower fades or falls off and there is just a lousy looking plant left behind. Like an azalea that is not in bloom. Beauty has often been spoiled by too much approbation and attention. Beauty can be corrupted by arrogance and self-centeredness. Some insecure people need to be told daily how beautiful they are, and each day, they lose a little more beauty. The approbation of one person is rarely enough. You can never pump up their ego enough. This is tailor-made for adultery or something else. Beauty blinds the ignorant, the shallow, the low intelligence. There are plenty of beautiful and handsome people on this earth. If you marry for just beauty, it can be a 1000 to one shot (or worse odds). Being attracted to someone is okay.
10. Never marry to escape an unhappy homelife; to escape domineering parents or parents who are neurotic or abusive. If you are old enough to get married, then you do not need to stick around when you are being abused. This is no way to choose a lifetime mate. Build a relationship upon something stable.
11. Do not marry simply because you want children; or because you think you will end up with good-looking children. This blinds you. This does not mean that you should not want children; however, children increase problems exponentially. Also, children will not save a marriage. Christian parents raising Christian children is the salt of our nation. You need to be mature before raising up a child. Too many children in our country raising children.
12. Do not marry for a status symbol. Don't look for a person with money, power or approbation. Like the successful guy looking for a trophy spouse. Status-symbols makes a person very difficult. They can be extremely self-centered. What looks good on the outside may not be what you bargained for. A status symbol will not have love or virtue. When you consider someone like this, you should look for some semblance of humility. If they are a status symbol in your eyes, then you had better examine their character. You may have no areas of compatibility.
13. Don't marry under peer-pressure. "All my friends are married and I am not." Difficult to have a social life when your friends get married, so that you can still hang out.

14. Ladies, do not marry any man unless you can submit to his leadership and authority. If you don't possess the humility to do this, then you are going to have problems no matter what. If you can't follow, you should not be in this unit. This is a volunteer army.
15. Men, do not marry unless the woman responds to your authority and leadership. If it does not occur before you get married, then it will not happen after you get married.
16. Do not marry a divorced person, except under the circumstances dictated by the Word of God.
  - a. Former spouse has died.
  - b. The person was divorced prior to salvation.
  - c. The other person remarried (the other spouse).
  - d. The person is the innocent party of a πορνεία-caused divorce.
  - e. The divorce involved desertion by the other former spouse. That is a wide range right there and this will be covered in greater detail in 1Cor. 7.
  - f. If you marry a divorced person who dumps a spouse for you, then realize that they will probably do that to you as well. Once they grow tired of you, they will dump their spouse and marry someone else. This is a character flaw, not a set of circumstances.
17. Do not marry without certain areas of compatibility. This encompasses about everything we have already covered. Marry for the reasons listed above, and you might not even know if there are any areas of compatibility.

1Cor. 7 introduction

Lesson #299 Wednesday

February 8, 2006

The Corinthians had a number of questions about marriage which came to Paul via a letter. The Corinthians did not ask for the entire doctrine of marriage, but they asked some specific questions, and Paul answered these questions. Paul answers these specific questions only. He does not launch into a complete dissertation of marriage. Paul's answers to the Corinthians are just as applicable to us as they were 2000 years ago. We cannot afford as believers to overlook Biblical instruction on any subject. We cannot afford to miss instruction for success, happiness and contentment which God has designed for members of the human race. This is a crucial practical guide for all of us.

Biblical and Practical Applications of Marriage: We began with negatives with regards to marriage. If we can inculcate these principles, it will preclude problems in courtship and prior to marriage.

Shortened Review of the Don't's:

1. Do not marry an unbeliever. 2Cor. 6:14
2. Do not marry a negative believer; spiritual compatibility is necessary for marriage and resolving the problems of marriage. There are always frictions in marriage. Like-mindedness covers a multitude of problems.

3. Do not regard marriage as a problem solving device. Problems do not go away just because you get married. When you marry, you have all your old problems plus a new set of marriage-related problems. Impersonal love may be the only solution for an unbalanced marriage (married to an unbeliever or married to someone who is negative). The responsibility is yours, as a spiritually mature believer, to make it work.
4. Do not marry a neurotic or troubled person. Like-mindedness is impossible with someone who is self-centered and irrational. They will expect you to be the solution to their problems; and they will blame you for all that is wrong with their lives. This would include those who are addicted to drugs, alcohol, etc.
5. Do not marry in your teens or early 20's. Bobby got some flak for that after Sunday. Bobby cannot point to a passage. However, lack of maturity is a marital curse; children marrying children is a mistake. If the objective of a believer in Jesus Christ is to mature, use the problem solving devices and glorify God. Successful marriage as part of the plan of God is a means of glorifying God in your body, then spiritual maturity exponentially increases the success of marriage in believers. Spiritually immature believers will not have like-mindedness. Of course, there are exceptions to this. Some teens or early 20's might be mature enough to start a marriage under those conditions. However, few young adults are spiritually mature, because there is little doctrine being taught. The more mature you are, the better your chances.
6. Do not marry for security. This appears to be a problem primarily for women. Human security will not carry a marriage. The only real security that we have as believers in Jesus Christ is knowing that we are secure in the hands of the Lord. We can endure a bad marriage or a mediocre marriage. Your security should never depend upon another person.
7. Do not marry for purely sexual reasons; do not marry on a wave of libido. There is or there should be chemistry between two people; that should not be the primary criterion. God designed sex, so it should be great in marriage. Attraction is normal.
8. Do not marry for beauty or attractiveness only. Integrity and spiritual maturity can be undermined by beauty and handsomeness. Attractive people are not all head-cases, however. Beauty does not mean that they lack character.
9. Do not marry to escape an unhappy homelife. Leaving an unhappy homelife or abuse, often means you will make a poor choice. As a young adult, leave the home, grow spiritually, remove scar tissue through doctrine, and then build a relationship based on spiritual stability.
10. Do not marry because you desire children and you have found a desirable gene pool or your clock is ticking. This can become a point of great friction in marriage. One person wants a child and the other is lukewarm or negative to the idea. There is a duty involved with children, something which is forgotten. Children must be properly raised. You just don't have them to experience parenthood.
11. Do not marry to acquire a status symbol—trophies, wealth, power. You want someone that everyone else wants for this or that reason. You get the trappings but not the relationship.
12. Do not marry under peer pressure.

13. Do not marry a man unless you can submit to his leadership and authority. That is a Biblical mandate.
14. Men, do not marry unless a woman is able to respond to your leadership, which can involve love, tenderness, leadership and even tough-love. There is a Biblical principle of leadership in marriage; marriage is a unit, and someone is in charge. If there is not well-defined leadership, it is chaos. We lack authority-orientation today in many areas of life.
15. Do not married a divorced person, apart from Biblical allowances: person divorced prior to salvation, other spouse has remarried, the person is the innocent party of a  $\pi\rho\omicron\nu\nu\acute{\epsilon}\alpha$  divorce; there was desertion involved, or the spouse of the other person has died. This will later be amplified.
16. Do not marry without certain areas of compatibility. Spiritual compatibility is the most important. Economic compatibility helps. You have to agree on some basic money matters. Everyone has an idea about money and how it should be handled. It can be a huge area of friction. It should be figured out in the beginning. Mental compatibility. You should have some intellectual congruity in at least some areas. One a ditz and one brilliant, it will become old. These things are discovered through conversation; not through sex, not through events, not through good times. A great relationship is a conversation which never ends. The dumb and the smart are not that compatible. The practical and intelligent can be complimentary. Do not marry simply because you admire someone's intellect. There should be some recreational compatibility. Don't marry an irresponsible slob if you are a neatnick. Every pair of people will have areas of incompatibility. You have to be intelligent about these things. Some of these things are disqualifies and others are not. You must be able to set aside emotions. Emotions are appreciators. You have to weigh the compatibilities against the incompatibilities. Our personal love is often so blind because we see the object of our love so dimly. We see it through the screen of lust, sexuality, status symbols, etc., that we disregard the weaknesses, failures, flaws, etc. In the courting portion of the relationship, we often project positive characteristics which may or may not be there. You cannot help but become frustrated, disillusioned, etc. Marriage or the thought of marriage is often a set of expectations. If the other person does not meet these expectations, realistic, or not. Obviously, Bobby is narrowing the field for us all. There is one person for us; we just need to continue to take in doctrine and develop our spiritual life, and we will come across that person. You cannot find that person making any of the mistakes given above.

There is a key to finding the right person. If you find virtue and integrity, then you have found a good thing. You now have the criterion for a great relationship. How can there be trust or respect or any of the areas of mental and soul rapport? Marriage is divinely designed for virtue. The highest status is a marriage between those who are saturated with doctrine. The only way to recognize virtue and integrity is to have some in the first place. You cannot truly appreciate virtue and integrity unless you have a little yourself. With virtue love, a person can make good decisions; and they become the right person for their spouses. With virtue, marriage with difficulties can be dealt with. Virtue derived from doctrine means that flexibility is built-in. As maturity develops, contentment, humility, and capacity for the relationship is gained in every way. Virtue love means there is flexibility and integrity, as well as mutual gratification. Great sex because there is great trust between the spouses. Our assignment: get virtue love. Then we will have the capacity for life, love, relationship, etc.

1Cor. 7 intro                      Prov. 18:22 19:14 12:4 Lesson #300 Thurs. Feb. 9, 2006
Gen. 2:18, 20

In California

Someone who died, and the husband was instrumental in bringing Bob to Berachah was Harley and apparently, his wife dies (he may have died earlier?).

Proverbs 18:22 will shock some of us men. Whoever finds a wife finds good and receives grace from Jehovah.

Searching for a mate is not a hunt; the other person is not a quarry. Now, this can be turned around, for a woman finding a man. This sounds like a hunt. So, Bobby continues with the analogy. It is like sitting in a deer blind and letting your prey come to you. You do not need to look for love in all of the right places or in all of the wrong places. At some point, a deer will walk out right in front of you. All you have to do is be ready. Your finger needs to be on the trigger. The opportunity will present itself.

This finding in Prov. 18:22 is a passive search. This is waiting with patience. It is fine to date; and it is reasonable to evaluate those you are interested in. That is why we have all of the criteria. If you are waiting with patience at the right time, when the Lord knows we are ready, that person will appear. That is a guarantee. Some point in time, when we are ready, God brings exactly what we need in front of us and we pass it up for something else. Or we are not ready to appreciate it. When you least expect it. Relax and wait on the Lord. In the hunter analogy, the prey will walk out right in front of you. If God designs the right mate for you, it stands to reason, at some point, we will come into contact with that person. You may run right into one another and recognize your counterpart. In the beginning, God brought Eve to Adam. This is for the man and the woman and it is a guarantee. So if God brings the right person into your life, that is how you find them. This is a special gift from God.

Prov. 19:14 [Houses and riches are the inheritance of fathers, and a prudent wife \[a woman of wisdom and discretion\] is from Jehovah.](#)

We have a parallel. We are given something. We may receive an inheritance from our father, but we receive a wife from Jesus Christ. This is a man of virtue and a woman of virtue. Virtue is the basis for marriage, and it is the greatest gift God has given man, apart from Jesus Christ.

Prov. 12:4 [A woman \[wife\] of virtue is a crown to her husband, but she who causes shame is like rotteness in his bones.](#)

The key here is virtue and integrity. That is the key to the relationship. Here, virtue belongs to the wife, but we are both a part of it. We must become a person of virtue. We cannot expect to find the right person with a big sign saying virtue; and particularly, if you are not virtuous yourself.

Proverbs 18:22 will shock some of us men. Whoever finds a wife finds good and receives grace from Jehovah.

Finding a good wife is pleasing to the Lord. That is the greatest relational gift apart from Jesus Christ. Finding a virtuous spouse is beneficial for our life. We find that spouse and we are a virtuous person, and we have a good thing. This brings contentment and enjoyment to life.

Do not go for the unbeliever or the negative believer. Marriage is designed for virtue. It is designed to expose virtue to the world. It is a corporate witness. With virtue love, the believer can become the right person for the other person. Without virtue love, the person expects his or her spouse to become right for him. You no longer take responsibility for yourself. Those kind of people abdicate their responsibility. Contentment, a relaxed mental attitude and capacity for life and love are gain. When there is virtue in their souls, death cannot separate the two of them. They reside in each other's souls. Whether here or gone, the other person is still in your soul.

It is now time for Bobby to tell us what virtue love is.

Virtue Love

1. Virtue love is a non-emotional, integrity of soul which epitomizes the spiritually mature believer.
2. Virtue love is made up of 3 things: personal love toward God from doctrine in the soul. The more we know Him, the more we love Him. We understand more of His grace and Who He is. Then we cannot help but fall in love with God. In the same way, you develop personal love for a spouse based on your capacity for love with God. You have a capacity to love when you know Who He is. When you get to know the virtue in the soul of the other person and you begin to know your spouse with virtue, you appreciate it. Part of the equation of virtue love is impersonal love. You must be able to show impersonal love; that is for the bad times. Our virtue is imperfect; we all sin, we all fail, we all have personal weaknesses. That is even more true when you live with husband and wife. That is a strong part of virtue love in marriage.
3. The integrity of God establishes the pattern for virtue love. God's love was not enough to save us. His justice and righteousness had to be involved. He had to impute our sins to His Son. In dealing with mankind, God's integrity must be involved. God always loves the believer with impersonal love. We have the pattern of virtue love in God Himself.

4. How does a believer exhibit virtue love toward a spouse?
  - a. The believer must transform his thinking from human viewpoint to divine viewpoint. His thinking must be transformed. Love is thinking. There are expressions of love; love is an attitude.
  - b. He must orient to life based on respect of God based upon His Word. This is grace orientation and doctrinal orientation. Relationship with a spouse requires grace orientation. Doctrinal orientation is the basis for all of it. Philip 2:5: Have this attitude in yourself that was also in Christ Jesus. This is the kind of love it took for Him to die for us. That is the epitome of virtue love.
  - c. This means the virtue love attitude comes from possessing the mind of Christ.
  - d. The attitude of Christ is developed through doctrine in the soul, which establishes the virtue of divine viewpoint. There is no virtue like the virtue of divine viewpoint. 2 people, who are believers with a spiritual life can show the greatest virtue that mankind can have. This is why a Christian marriage can be the best marriage; it is because we have the potential for the greatest virtue.
  - e. Virtue begins with thinking. Thought is the part which is so often missing from the equation of love. Our thoughts from the beginning are stuffed with emotion. Love is a mental attitude. Your soul must be filled with virtue love.
    - i. One virtue in human love is respect (there are others).
    - ii. So often, we think of respect for another person to come as a response to something which we do.
    - iii. Respect toward a person comes from a foundation of virtue in your own thinking.
    - iv. You must have a criterion for virtue. The great athlete might be respected one day and not the next. The fallacy of respecting someone for what they do. Respect begins with your own thinking. You must have a criterion of virtue in order to respect another.
    - v. Then respect derives from the corresponding virtue that you find in that person; not in an activity that they perform. How many times have you heard someone demanding respect; half the time, it is for no reason. They may not have any virtue whatsoever.
    - vi. Hence you do not build respect upon a few deeds or a hundred deeds, but upon the category of virtue thinking in you and in them. The key is virtue, not activity. Respect is part of that virtue love. You build virtue love from doctrine. It is all about virtue love and respect is one of the most important aspects of married life.
    - vii. You must have virtue in order to recognize virtue. Personal virtue is required to recognize virtue.

This is the importance of divine viewpoint in both spouses; virtue love.
A great marriage is based upon mutual virtue love.

If we are going to discuss the principles of marriage, we will need to begin with the first marriage of Adam and the woman. Adam and the woman are indispensable. They are the precedence. They are the organizational structure and the boundaries of all future marriages. It is soul and body and 2 people.

After man was formed, later God formed the woman; He fashioned the woman from man. It would be interesting to determine how long Adam waited for his mate. She was built from Adam, from his rib. Even in the perfection of the garden, Adam had it all; but he did not have the woman. He learned doctrine from the Lord. Even with his singular relationship with the Lord, he had a human need.

We can be unrealistic about our human needs. The spiritual life does not mean that you negate your humanity. Even in perfection, Adam had a need. Adam eventually craved a helper; a mate, before he fell. That was his only need in the garden. That is how basic marriage is to the human race. Marriage did not come from needs in the sin nature; but in a man in innocence. Man is completed by the woman; and the woman fulfills the man. In fulfilling the man, the woman is herself completed and fulfilled. Virtue love is required; otherwise, you are just looking for things that you like. No unbeliever can have the same capacity for love that we have. What God did was attempt to create the perfect human relationship.

There is someone who is suitable for us.

Gen 2:18 And Jehovah God said, It is not good that the man [Adam] should be alone. I will make a helper [ezer] suitable for him.

Adam was naming animals day after day, and Adam recognizes that there is no creature suitable for him.

When God created woman, it was clear to man that she was his counterpart.

Gen 2:20–23 And Adam gave names to all the cattle, and to the birds of the air, and to every animal of the field. But there was not found a suitable helper for Adam. And Jehovah God caused a deep sleep to fall on Adam, and he slept. And He took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh underneath. And Jehovah God made the rib (which He had taken from the man) into a woman. And He brought her to the man. And Adam said, This is now bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh. She shall be called Woman [ishshah] because she was taken out of man [ish].

Eucharist Service:

This ceremony requires thinking with the mind of Christ. This requires concentration and application. We need some soteriological doctrine in our souls.

The fact that He was God as well as man and shown in His life. The religious types then refused to recognize Him as God and as man. They rejected His entire uniqueness. No member of the trinity be judged for sins; nor could eternal life die. God could not change as God is immutable. Nothing can be subtracted from Deity, so something had to be added. Deity must become humanity. In becoming humanity, the Lord Jesus Christ had to deprive Himself of the normal function of Deity without losing any of the pure attributes of His Deity. He could not surrender any of these attributes. He took upon Himself humanity in order to die for our sins. This was the greatest love that God could give to man. This made Him step down to the humility of man and the virgin birth marked the right time in history. His salvation was signified by the death clothes in which He was wrapped as a child. He was true humility. He was looking up at His mother and His father; and this humility would take Him all the way to the cross. His human vulnerability became entirely obvious. He was just as much Deity as God in heaven.

As a man, He could live and die for all humanity. In no other way could this happen but for God to become man. No longer would there be such a separation between man and God. Mankind would no longer be lost in their trespasses and sin. This was the ultimate grace gift embodied in the child born 2000 years ago.

His humanity was critical in making atonement for us. His death had to be substitutionary. The punishment which was due to all of us had to become His punishment, which could occur only if He was a human being. He atoned for the billions of sins. He charged these to the impeccable humanity of Jesus Christ. God the Father from absolute justice judged all the sins in the body of Jesus Christ. The Author and Perfecter of our faith, Who, for the joy set before Him.... All these things are from Christ...reconciling all things. 1John 2:2: And He Himself is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but for the whole world. He died for believers and unbelievers alike. He redeemed every person from the slave market of sin. He endured the cross as a ransom for our salvation. There is one God and one Mediator between man and God. Because He was the God-man, He was equal to both parties. He was able to intercede between us and God. His death reconciled the two parties together. If He was not above that; if He was not perfection in His humanity, He could not sin. He never sinned; He never made a mistake. In this way, He became the Author and the Perfecter of our faith.

Those who are not in fellowship need to rebound. Otherwise, we are like the Corinthians, some of whom were sick and some of whom died because of being out of fellowship.

Helen Walker departed to be face to face with the Lord. She was a founding member of Berachah Church in the 30's. Voting on a new deacon next session.

Perfection is not required in order to make a marriage work. Marriage is not about circumstances. It is about who we are in the spiritual life. It is about our virtue and our integrity and not the circumstances. In this environment is Adam. What He had is a unique relationship with God.

Adam learned doctrine face to face with God. However, even with this, there was something missing from Adam. Adam is a human being with human needs. This was a paramount need and it could be supplied only by a human companion. Right away, right from the beginning, there is the importance of a counterpart for a man. Even before he disobeyed God and required salvation. These need was evident even before sin. So, marriage was an integral part of plan of God before sin. It was not born after the fall of man.

God created the perfect human relationship, and that is where Gen. 2:18 comes in. 'ādām (אָדָם) [pronounced aw-DAWM], which means a man, a human being, mankind, Adam. It can be the proper name for Adam, another name for man or a name for the human race, e.g., human being, mankind. In both instances, 'ādām can be in the singular and preceded by a definite article. Mankind with a definite article: Gen. 6:1, 5, 6 Num. 5:6. Strong's #120 BDB #9.

For Adam, there was no helper found for him. He had everything in the garden and he could not find in the garden an ezer suitable for him. 'ezer (עֵזֶר) [pronounced ĠAY-zer], which means help, aid. It is consistently translated help in the KJV. the word found in Gen. 2:18, describing the role of the woman in Adam's life and throughout the Psalms (Psalm 22:19 27:9 35:2). Strong's #5828 BDB #740,

Gen. 2:18 And Jehovah God said, It is not good that the man should be alone. I will make a helper suitable for him.

Adam was here in the garden. He had all of the meals that he wanted; all of the food that he wanted; a lot of friendly animals.

Gen. 2:19 And out of the ground Jehovah God formed every animal of the field and every fowl of the air, and brought them to Adam to see what he would call them. And whatever Adam called each living creature, that was its name.

God gave Adam a task, to name all of the cattle. So Adam began naming all of these animals, and Adam examined these animals and he named them based upon these characteristics (a logical guess). As he did this, he became very clear that all of these animals had a counterpart; and there was no counterpart for him.

Gen. 2:20 And Adam gave names to all the cattle, and to the birds of the air, and to every animal of the field. But there was not found a suitable helper for Adam.

After doing this, Adam had a day of rest or an evening of rest. When you rest, your mind begins to work. He felt the pangs of His solitary existence. He could see all of the animals with counterparts, and he had no one to share his life with. Without a human counterpart with which to share. He had no way to express all of his energy, his thoughts, his passion. Adam was, in short, incomplete. Adam did not have it all in perfection; not even when face to face with God.

Obviously, some of us have thought, "Wish that I wasn't married." That is in an imperfect environment; and Adam enjoyed a perfect environment.

God was everything that Adam needed; the center of Adam's world. God understood Adam's thinking and his soul. In short, he understood everything that Adam thought and why. God knew that Adam had a plan.

All plans related to mankind is related to the Angelic Conflict. This is not, "I married an angel and now we are in conflict." This was not Adam involved in the longing of his sin. He focused on a human need and this did not remove his focus on Jesus Christ. There is a place for our human needs, but it is a matter of priorities.

Adam, instead of obeying God, obeyed the woman; so the problem was one of priorities. It is a matter of who we put first. The woman was created second so that the man could understand priorities.

Gen. 2:21 And Jehovah God caused a deep sleep to fall on Adam, and he slept. And He took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh underneath.

In the creation of woman, God made it clear that He would take care of the needs of His creatures. This was a part of His plan for victory in the Angelic Conflict.

God did not take away the woman in punishment.

We are all designed to have a counterpart (with one exception). That is a great blessing from God.

Ezer means much more than just an assistant who eases the difficulties of life. Relationship, fulfillment, correlate, to associate. This is a counterpart or complementary component.

Women were not created inferior.

Men and woman are not complete without each other. The woman cannot be seen as inferior; she has the same soul and the same opportunities. She has a different function. She was equal to mankind, but with a different role.

What does this mean that she is his associate, his opposite number. She fits him specifically, and he her.

Gen. 2:22 And Jehovah God made the rib (which He had taken from the man) into a woman. And He brought her to the man.

Gen. 2:23 And Adam said, This is now bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh. She shall be called Woman because she was taken out of man.

February 15, 2006

We can learn a great deal from the first marriage in history. We are God's creatures and we can tell a lot about the purpose of marriage from studying the marriage of Adam and Eve. When we emerge from the womb, God breathes into us the breath of lives. Marriage fulfilled a human need for all mankind. There was a need for a mate, for a counterpart; there here is an association unlike any other.

So, there is Adam, and he became very aware of a counterpart for himself; and he noticed that all animals had a counterpart. He could see something of a counterpart in the animals and he knew that he lacked that aspect in his existence. Adam was very much alone; he had a human need. Even if he could not express the substance of that need; there was an ache; there was something missing; but Adam did not exactly know what a counterpart would be for him. This is not to lessen the importance of Adam's relationship with God in the garden. There are human needs and a spiritual life. We have even greater needs with a sin nature than Adam had without. Adam, like us, had a soul, spirit and body; he was created trichotomos. Adam could, just as we do, utilize the grace apparatus for perception. We regained this spirit through the process of regeneration. We are all Adam's progeny; we have gap and he had it. Adam had to learn just as we learned. He had to learn God's plan for him, but as we do. He had to learn about the angelic conflict. Adam had to be told about his purpose; why he was created. It was God Himself in the garden who instructed Adam about his situation. Adam never heard any false doctrine from his pastor. Adam heard it all. God was central to Adam's life; yet, Adam still had this need. God took priority in Adam's thinking. His human need took second place. Adam stayed within the divine design. God supplies our human needs; we trust God for taking care of these needs. A change of priorities in our mind can sew the seeds of disaster.

God has a plan for victory in the angelic conflict. God's omniscience knows everything in advance; He made a decision in eternity past. He knew exactly in every detail what would happen. Even before there was a man or a woman, God saw marriage as part of the solution for the angelic conflict. We are a single warrior and a corporate warrior. Marriage becomes a corporate witness.

Satan's appeal after the fall was, "How can a loving God condemn His own creatures to hell? How can a loving God cast His own creatures into the Lake of Fire?" Satan went after love, but he left out justice and righteousness. God retains His love, even though He applies justice and righteousness. God's attribute of love is always part of His essence. God had to show that His justice, righteousness and love could all act together to defeat Satan.

Satan watched as God created another creature—a creature who was far inferior to Satan, but possessed many similar attributes, including volition. God provided perfect environment, which would have been similar to Satan's original environment. Satan watched as God fulfilled Adam's need with a counterpart. God fulfilled Adam's human need. Satan watched and then he plotted. He wanted to show that God's provisions were hollow. Satan would attempt to use righteousness and justice against God; Satan sought to put love at odds with God's righteous and justice.

Adam and the woman are corporate witnesses. God gave them a mandate. God provided them with everything and exactly one mandate—do not eat from this particular tree. They had everything, but were told not to take one thing—and yet they did. This one area of volition became a corporate test, a corporate test. Satan went after man through the corporation of marriage. Adam did not sin because he wanted a counterpart. Adam fell because he placed his relationship with the woman above his relationship with the woman. Adam reverse his priorities. Satan would use God's righteousness and justice against Him; God would have to condemn Adam and the woman, just as He condemned Satan. In spite of the fall, marriage is still a corporate witness. Justice and righteousness condemned and love saved.

God's love supplied a need, and He still supplies our needs today. In spite of the failure of the very first marriage, God's love; Christian marriage today is still a part of the corporate witness in the angelic conflict.

Gen. 2:18: [Yahweh God said, "It is not good that the man \[lit., Adam\] should be alone; I will make him a helper suitable for him."](#)

Gen 2:19 Out of the ground Yahweh God formed every animal of the field, and every bird of the sky, and brought them to the man to see what he would call them. Whatever the man called every living creature, that was its name.

Gen 2:20 The man gave names to all livestock, and to the birds of the sky, and to every animal of the field; but for man there was not found a helper suitable for him.

Gen 2:21 Yahweh God caused a deep sleep to fall on the man, and he slept; and he took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh in its place. God was the anesthesiologist.

Gen 2:22 He made the rib, which Yahweh God had taken from the man, into a woman, and brought her to the man. The rib is something which supports the chest cavity and protects the heart. God took the rib and He built something from it. God formed man from the dust of the ground and He formed woman from the rib of Adam. He breathed life into both of them and they both became living beings, with a soul, spirit and body.

Adam woke up from this operation and there, standing in front of him, is the woman—and Adam is stunned. He is knocked over. Adam and the woman are both naked and they make an immediate recognition that they are counterparts. The woman is dumbfounded seeing everything for the first time; Adam made an instant identification of the woman as his counterpart. He had not yet touched her; he had not physical experience of her at that point in time.

Gen 2:23 The man said, "This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh. She will be called Woman, because she was taken out of Man." Adam understood what God had done.

Adam understood that this was his counterpart; he made a soul identification. Adam id'ed his soul-mate right there on the spot. He made this identification. He made this identification on the spot.

Before Adam touched her, he had been naming animals all day long and he decides to give her a name as well. "She will be called Ishshah, for she was taken out of Ish."

What Adam Said

1. The first word out of his mouth.
2. It is a beautiful word; with a nice flow to it.
3. Adam recognized what he saw—he could see the qualities of woman-hood. He did not pull her name out of the air. Her name had a meaning.
4. Not only did Adam identify the qualities which he saw, but he looked at her and made a soul id first.
5. God had taken Adam's rib, leaving a gap—He took away a support which was filled with what God fashioned out of this rib.
6. Adam immediately reognized someting which had been missing in his life, and would be a part of his life. This was a mentality of the soul identification.
7. Instantly, Adam who had lots of practice naming animals, conceived a name to express his appreciation of God's grace. That is instant application.
8. Adam coined the name Ishshah, as bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh. This was a total connection, body and soul. All that in a name. Instantly.
9. Adam justifies the name by sahing, "Because she was taken out of man."

Laqach

1. Remove something with an emphasis on the source.
2. This means that the woman was taken from the source of Adam.
3. Bobby thinks possibly, the pulling apart of the rib from the man, and then the coming together of the man and the woman is a picture of the natural attraction between a man and a woman. It is the magnetism between the sexes.
4. What was removed from Adam, a part of himself, had graciously come back with interest. He lost a rib and gained a wife. What he lost fulfilled his need. What he lost was replaced with something much greater.

5. Ishshah is the most wonderful gift that God has ever given apart from salvation.

Bobby drew something up. Adam had several relationships after the woman was created. Adam began with a relationship with God. Adam began to understand Who and What God was; and initially, Adam chose to obey God in the garden. Then God created the woman and now Adam has another relationship. He identified the woman immediately. At that moment, his volition chose to love that woman. There was some kind of soul response in Adam. Over time, Adam began to express love toward this woman. He began to enjoy his relationship with this woman, soulishly and physically.

The woman responded to this relationship with Adam. In the mentality of her soul, she saw Adam and identified him as well; something happened in her soul as well. Her volition looked at him, and she came to respect and appreciate him. She was also in the garden with God as well and she began to understand her place in the garden; and she expressed love toward Adam. There was first the soul and then there was a physical response. In the garden, the man and the woman were completely equal. The woman had the same relationship with God as did Adam. This is what made both of their relationships great.

Gen 2:24 Therefore a man will leave his father and his mother, and will join with his wife, and they will be one flesh. The first couple was the prototype; they are our prototype. Man was not designed to be alone. God provided the perfect solution to Adam's needs, just as He does even today.

God's plan for each man is a perfect counterpart. The man and the woman have different roles in life; however, they were created equal. They both had souls and bodies, and with a spiritual life.

Gen 2:25 They were both naked, the man and his wife, and were not ashamed.

It is the same today—priority is relationship with God, and then relationship with one another.

Marriage

1. Marriage is the divine institution between man and a woman.
2. Two people become one in soul and body while remaining 2 separate individuals. That is the joy of marriage.
3. The difficulty of two souls melding into like-mindedness, contentment and mutual pleasure. This is the difficulty of the one-soul concept.
4. To become one flesh takes humility, sensitivity and spiritual maturity.
5. The corporate witness of marriage is expressed in humility and spiritual maturity. This takes not putting yourself ahead of your spouse. Leadership but not tyranny; for the woman, this is responsiveness. Gen. 3:16 a woman's desire is to rule over her husband.

6. Marriage has a spiritual and also a secular purpose. It is a divine institution. It is for believers and unbelievers both. Eccles. 9:9–11. The joy of the unbeliever's life is his partner in marriage and secondly in his work. Enjoy it, because that is all they get. This life ends in destruction. There is no greater area where application of doctrine is needed than in marriage.
7. Marriage was conceived by God. Man did not think this up as he evolved; God invented this as the epitome of human relationship.
8. God created marriage for companionship, for intimacy, for pleasure, to provide an exclusive counterpart for humanity, 1 for 1. The same but different. The soul essence is the same; but the roles are different.
9. For the believer, God created marriage for the spiritual purpose of a corporate witness in the angelic conflict.
10. So marriage, the marital relationship is part of the divine plan right from the beginning. Before He created, God had a plan for marriage. Marriage is the actualization of a human need. Man is not a reclusive creature by nature, which was clear by Adam's reaction to seeing the woman.
11. God was literally the center of Adam's world; God was all Adam needed to thrive. Marriage would become a part of this environment; however, the spiritual life must come first.

All the great accomplishments of man in history is dust to dust. Still, in Adam's soul was an inherent need, but this need was not sinful. It is great to have these needs because God provides for them. These needs are not sinful when God provides for them. The greatest human companionship is the one of marriage. In the creation of woman, God showed that He would take care of the needs of the man; and in creating the woman, God created needs in her as well that He fulfilled. Through this craving of Adam, God would express His grace and love in fulfilling this need of mankind—the relational need. God still does the same thing today. In supplying this need, God's love and grace is illustrated to the angels who are observing. Adam knew that his need was fulfilled and so did the woman.

Even with a bad marriage, if your spouse and you get together under doctrine, the marriage will repair itself. In the one-flesh concept, God set up the boundaries of the marriage relationship for all time. The first marriage is the key to understand the divine design for all subsequent marriages. Inside even a failing marriage, applying doctrine can make your witness a corporate witness. Any application of doctrine shines like a beam of light in a rainstorm. People recognize a bad marriage and when doctrine solves this problem, this is a great testimony.

Before the fall, there is a relationship between man and God; and Adam recognized his primary relationship in life. Adam identified God and this was his only relationship in life. This relationship began with the grace apparatus for perception.

Adam did not need to be eistomologically rehabilitated, as he was a blank slate; he had not fallen. He was waiting to be filled with divine viewpoint. As Adam progressed in his spiritual life, Adam's volition made a choice, which was to obey God and to follow the divine mandates...at least initially. The corporate witness broke down when the woman came first before God. When our priorities are mixed up, then our life becomes screwed up.

The result of divine viewpoint in relation to God—that divine viewpoint was inculcated into Adam's soul. Adam had positive volition toward the plan of God. Adam was able to express his love in reciprocation. As he knew and obeyed God's will, Adam had capacity for love. Every believer should have the same relationship—whether face to face as with Adam or in Bible class. Secondly, Adam progressed in his spiritual life. Positive volition toward the plan of God—the more Adam learned, the more he began to love God. You cannot learn about God and not develop capacity to love Him. Love of God and dependence upon God is a by-product of learning doctrine. How can you not love the One who sustains us in every respect? We develop capacity for love; His grace is beyond magnificent. Then God created woman. Adam's relationship with God is sewn up.

God then threw another relationship Adam's way. If you have a relationship with God, and that is your priority; then you can have the other great relationships in life. Capacity for impersonal love is all there. From the very first moment that Adam saw the woman, he made an identification in his soul. He made that same identification in his soul as he had when he first saw God. Adam made the decision to accept her or recognize her as his counterpart; as his intimate associate. Once Adam id'ed the woman, he was able to love her, body and soul. He was able to because he had developed a capacity for love in his priority relationship. The result was, Adam could express maximum love from his soul; and maximum physical love. Soul first, body second. The physical is the result; Adam was content in this relationship and he enjoyed this relationship because he had the capacity to love, by divine design. Because of the soul-identification, because of his capacity to love based on doctrine; loving the woman was based on the love Adam had for God.

The woman began from ground zero, but developing a relationship with God and with Adam. The woman made the same identification in her soul; she blinked a few times, focused, and there Adam was—and there was instant identification. Hers was a response; a response to Adam's identification. It was Adam who was lonely; he had the human need. When the woman looked into Adam's eyes, she responded to what she saw. Her soul response was that her volition accepted his love; she saw it in his eyes. She saw that she was identified as a counterpart. She accepted Adam's love. She chose Adam as her mate. Then, as she grew with Adam, she came to respect him because of his capacity to love her. Husbands, love your wives; that means the man is a leader and he has capacity to love. Eve also came under Adam's authority. She responded to Adam's authority, as he was spiritually developed. Leadership, response. Simple concept, but difficult in practice. The woman responded to Adam in soul first and then it became very physical. Finally, she had a relationship with God. She also gained divine viewpoint. From the moment she was included, she was included in this Bible class with God. They both heard doctrine daily and they also had their own relationship with one another. She also chose to obey God's will. No better place to obey God's will than in marriage. Her capacity to love Adam and to love God increased daily. The husband loves from his leadership position and she responds with her own capacity, in response. And this is the pattern for all future relationships. We have no excuse to allow our priorities to get mixed up. Priority is the key. We gain capacity. It is the capacity that we gain which makes us the right person. You don't find the right person, but you become the right person from having a great spiritual life. Everything in life comes from spiritual growth, including capacity for marriage.

God brought the woman to the man, just as He does today. Logistical grace; always God provides it. Regardless, God has our interest at heart. God provides a spiritual life for us, for believers, as He did in the garden for Ish and Ishshah. Any human need that we have, God provides. If He does not provide for it, then we don't need it. We might have our own pantheon of needs; however, it is God's choice, and He provides what we need. His grace is sufficient for us.

February 19, 2006

People are doing too much shuffling at the end again. Bobby tells them not to.

Two main verbs, taken from and taken out of; this is one verb in the Hebrew: lâqach (לָקַח) [pronounced law-KAHKH], which means to take, to take from, to take in marriage, to seize. The Pual is the passive intensive, and it means was stolen, was taken. The Niphal is the passive and it means to be seized, to be captured. In the Niphal infinitive construct, it would be rendered the seizure of, the capture of. Strong's #3947 BDB #542.

Now, why did God make the man out of the dirt but take the rib of man to make the woman? We are dirt and we will return to dirt. We are not the origin of our existence; the grace of God is the origin of our existence. There is humility in the dust of the ground, formed by God Himself. God forms woman, but not directly from the dirt as man was. The woman was formed intermediately from the man, and the man was formed from dust. She is the same and yet different. The same material, the same body, the same soul and the same spirit, and yet she was formed differently.

Since the woman is formed from man, then she is subordinate to man. "I am not subordinate to anyone; particularly, not a man; particularly, not my husband, who is an idiot." "Whose fault is that?"

Being subordinate does not mean being inferior. Once created, the woman is brought to the man, which has great meaning for marriage. Introducing the subject of priority and authority. You can choose to accept or reject the Biblical pattern. This is a verboten concept in our present society.

Gen 2:22 He made the rib, which Yahweh God had taken from the man, into a woman, and brought her to the man.

Adam was put to sleep, and God took a rib from him; and he woke up to something he could not imagine. He had to be completely stunned. As Adam named the animals, and noticed the pairs of animals, and he had a human need for his own counterpart. Adam had a great relationship with God, and yet he still had this human need. Even today, we have a spiritual life, a unique spiritual life; and yet, we still have human needs. Human needs are not sinful; how we handle these needs may or may not be sinful. Adam's human need was fulfilled right before his face. Adam's dream had no real form; he had no idea what his counterpart would look like or act like; and he had no idea. However, there appeared in the flesh, his dream. As he awoke and he saw this woman, he makes two immediate observations: Adam notices that she is different, and he gives her a different name. His name is lysh, so he calls her lyshshah. A beautiful, poetic name. It is a soft word, with a gentle flow to it. lysh is short and staccato and fits the male. Hebrew names often identify the qualities of the object named. Adam identified the most obvious qualities about the woman, which is softer and more poetic: lyshshah.

Adam also knows that the woman was taken out of man. Adam was the intermediate source that God turned to in order to make the woman. What was removed from Adam was returned to him with interest, and Adam recognized the woman for exactly what she was—his counterpart. God brought the woman to man. This is still true today; God still brings the woman to the man. God does not intend for us to be miserable; He has our best interests in mind. He provides for our human needs. Being brought to the man is a precedent. The idea is, if we wait on the Lord, God will bring to us the proper mate. This, by way of application, also can be applied to the woman. If God brings the woman to the man, then God also presents the man to the woman. God brings someone specifically designed for us. Adam and Eve are specific partners. He designs them as a concept; but also designs two for one another specifically. One who completes and fulfills. There is no random selection going on here. There is a pattern to it and a criterion for it.

The exception to this is what Paul will bring up later. Marriage reveals God's love toward us.

There is a warning from Bobby here.

God's Bringing a Mate to Us

1. God will bring the right mate to us; unquestionably, just as He did for Adam and Ishah.
2. Therefore, we can expect the right person to come our way at the right time. Not necessarily tomorrow, or not because we now understand the principle. It is the right time, and it is a time of God's choosing. God brings the RW when we are ready. This is why it is not a good idea to marry in your 20's. Nothing worse than two immature people trying to put a marriage together.
3. Because of this, we do not have to frantically search for the right person. This does not mean that you can't date. Of course you can, as this is one way of meeting the right person. However, you must have principles; you must have integrity. You must have the ability to discern. The woman you date at age 16 is not your soul mate.

4. So, what should you focus on? You don't find the right person; you become the right person. That is your responsibility.
5. You do not expect the respective spouse to conform to your mold. This person looks kind of good, but we need to make a few changes here and there.
6. Since you cannot force someone into a mold, you conform to divine standards; not to someone else's standards.
7. Once those divine standards are in your soul, then you can determine whether this other person fits your standards. That is identification. You must have doctrine in your soul first, otherwise identification is difficult.
8. A believer gets his standards from spiritual advance. You develop capacity for love, which is a prerequisite for identification.
9. That is the point at which God brings the right person to us.

Gen 2:23 The man said, "This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh. She will be called Woman, because she was taken out of Man."

Now we come to the concept of protection in marriage. The one flesh concept, which is the development of the relationship. That relationship must be intimate in every way. Immediately, following the announcement of the first marriage, and this union must be safe-guarded. How do you protect marriage. The state of marriage is not impervious to the disruptive influence. A husband and wife must be familiar with the hazards in order to make marriage work. This intimacy must be protected or the marriage will fall apart.

God said, "Leave and cleave" and Adam no doubt scratched his head. "Leave who?" There were no pitfalls of in-laws at this point in time; however, what God says is clearly indicated for a future audience. This means that what we observe here is a general pattern for marriage. God knew that the primary cause for the breakup in marriage is the old family relationship and the interference from the previous family unit. A new family unit must be formed and it must be separate from the previous former unit.

God here specifically addresses the man to leave and cleave. God does not speak to the man and the woman; God speaks to the one who is leading this family unit. The man is told to separate from your mother and father. It is the man who sets this precedent. It is the man's responsibility to establish a new home distinct from the old one. The woman also has a responsibility here as well. The woman must give the husband priority over the family from which she comes. When you form a new family, your old family comes second.

Now there is no reason to go overboard; you do not separate entirely from your family, even though there are some who would like to separate from the in-laws forever. It is your thinking and your priorities which must change. There is a happy medium, which we must find. Do not allow the old family alliance to supersede the new husband-wife alliance. The new husband and the new wife have priority over the old family ties. This is a protective precedent.

Possibly, the application of this could be taken to, if you are not willing to set this precedent, then you are marrying the wrong person or you are not mature enough to get married.

The previous parents do not get to come in and run their lives. They can ask your advice, but parents should never interfere in their children's marriages. Parents are not to interfere in the marriages of their children. Priority goes to the spouse and the new family. This is a universal principle.

Gen 2:24 Therefore a man will leave his father and his mother, and will join with his wife, and they will be one flesh.

February 19, 2006

V. 24 brings the protection for marriage. This verse was spoken before there were parents. God designed this mandate for all future generations, so that Adam and Ishshah would apply this to their marriage and to all future marriages. This does not mean that all relationships with relatives are severed; it is simply a reordering of priorities. This priority happens the moment you say "I do." It may require us to change our thinking and it requires the man to lead, which may require you to separate yourself more than you are used to. You do this to protect your wife. The in-laws interfering is the greatest attack against marriages. The husband is the one in charge of these priorities. Your first priority is God and the second one is your spouse. You might really like the in-laws, but that is not a requirement. Your sons-in-law and daughters-in-law do not have to call you mom and dad. This is a temptation to force yourself into the marriage. In-laws have an obligation to help make the marriage the priority. This is the meaning behind Gen. 2:24. At some point in time, you will have children. Azab and dabach are the two Hebrew verbs. The mother and father no longer are the primary family unit. Leaving and cleaving does not mean that you shun your parents; unless they become too involved. The marriage must be the priority. In all cases, protecting your mate is a priority. You may need to have a talk with the parents to tell them what is going on or you make the break completely yourself. It take judgment and thinking and divine viewpoint in order to establish these boundaries. You don't want to hurt their feelings. This is the man's responsibility to clearly define the boundaries. These verbs unequivocally recognize the founding of a new relationship. Marriage is the new relationship described by leave and cleave. There is first the association of the souls; he identifies the right person and she becomes the man's new world and he leaves the world of his family behind. In many ways, the husband needs this independence.

Bobby had all of his worldly goods in a VW bus, and was leaving at age 18 for school, and Bob came out and said, "It's been a great 18 years" meaning that it was time to separate.

The association of marriage is first of the soul, and then of the body. That is what cleave means. The male and female bodies are made for coalescence. Adam and Eve were both naked, and this was obvious to them.

Daba means cleave, cling, stick, keep close to. A sexual relationship is included in this. Soul id first and body second. The verb is dâbaq (דָּבַק) [pronounced daw<sup>b</sup>-VAHK], which means to cling, to cleave, to hold close, to keep close, to adhere. Strong's #1692 BDB #179.

This is the pattern and precedent in marriage and there is nothing evil or dirty or wrong about sex in marriage. As long as virtue-love comes first, then sexual love expresses that which is wonderful in the soul.

Bobby has an article by Chuck Baldwin about Whatever happened to masculinity. It does not speak to marriage, but has many implications. Do you respond or react to his premise? This is an editorial, and it is used by way of illustration. It is not a scholarly article, as there is no real proof inserted. The recent Hollywood fascination with homosexuality is an attack on masculinity. No president who is truly masculine since Reagan. Bobby takes issue for this. What would today's generation think of Teddy roosevelt or Harry Truman. Toughness is in the soul; a man who says what he means and he means what he says. A man who recognizes the importance of honesty. A man of noble principle, a man without covetousness, a man who cannot be bribed. So far, there are really no differences. He knows how to run his household and can discipline his children; a man who fears God and reveres the sacred. He understands the difference between the rule of love and the rule of power. What is the real difference between masculinity and femininity? Even in our churches, masculinity is dying. Too often our homes and churches are dominated by women...nothing wrong with Christian women giving their time and wisdom to various organizations. However, except for rare examples, women cannot ingrain manliness into a young boy. A woman's role is not to be masculine and she cannot inculcate masculinity into a young boy. A woman trying to do this confuses the boy, as she is not a man. This makes her less than feminine. It obscures the quality of manhood in the boy. This reflects the importance of one father and one mother in the raising of children. A mom and dad brings their own perspective to a child and brings a balance to the child. Masculinity and femininity is important for a child to see. It is not uncommon for a young boy not to know a male teacher or a male principle until he reaches high school. Sometimes, there is a 10 to 1 ratio. The problem is exacerbated in the home if there is no father there? Where does a child see masculinity inacted? Only in his friends, and none know what it is, but they will develop something. Take a stroll down the hallways of any school, and you see soft, effeminate boys. Independence and assertiveness are seen as evil, even though any man worth his salt must be a person of independence and assertiveness. Christian entertainers are markedly soft in their mannerisms, etc. Boys in the past were taught emotional and physical toughness; they were taught how to defend themselves and others. The military is a training ground for mental toughness. At tthe same time, they are tagh the rules of edicuitte, and they knew the meaning of the word gentlemen. A gentleman was known by the way he behaved and not by the way he cusses. American's politicians, business leaders, political leaders and Hollywood permeate our culture with political correctness and this attack upon masculinity. Seeing how men are portrayed today in movies and sitcoms are seen as fools and bafoons, in constant need of female supervision. Men are not seen as masculine or as leaders; too often, the women are the leaders. True masculinity is disappearing for the US landscape, which takes away from what built this country. A question should have come up in our minds, which is not answered by this article: what is the difference between masculinity and femininity? If it is challenged in our country, shouldn't we know the difference? What is the true role of the Christian man and woman? The distinction today is blurred, and this was blurred in Corinth as well, although in different ways. This man addressed the problem, but offered no solutions. Bobby will give us the Biblical solution. God brings the woman to the man, each one is assigned specific roles or function in the marriage. The woman is not inferior to the man; but in God's design, there are roles assigned, and that is the difference between masculinity and femininity. This is true in marriage and true in the church as well. What God assigned is authority and it was given to the husband; there is not superiority, but authority. Eph. 5:22–23 Col. 3:1 In these verses we find masculine leadership. The man is mandated to love his wife. Eph. 5:25; it is not all about wielding the big stick; it is also about tenderness; virtue love. The woman is to respond with respect and deference. In any unit, there is a leader and a follower. The leader should listen to the follower; but he still leads.

In marriage, no one has the authority—not in today's society. That is a perversion of God's design. Those roles as leader and responder do not leave even outside of marriage and the church. This is a design for men and women in general. This is not just applicable to believers.

You cannot object to this on the basis of inferiority and superiority, because that is not what is involved here. We are paying for the confusion here in every way.

1Cor. 7 introduction

Bobby posed a question on Sunday: what is the difference between men and women. This came from an article that pointed out that certain progressive elements have clouded the distinctions between masculinity and femininity. Bobby is not saying that women are not as capable as men; neither gender is superior. Individuals are superior to others, but not because they are males or females. There is a general demasculization of men and defeminism of women. The article did not give the particular differences. The article did list certain good characteristics, such as honesty, reverence for the sacred, etc. However, these are not real distinctions between men and women. Homosexuality is an attack on masculinity. The Bible makes a very clear distinction between the roles of men and women, and they go to the very heart of what is masculine and feminine.

What is the Biblical difference between masculinity and femininity. These are questions which the Bible answers. Also, what part do masculine and feminine characteristics play in marriage. Does the man and the woman have interchangeable roles in marriage?

Biblical Difference between Men and Women

1. God assigned authority to the husband in a marriage situation. The man can be wimpy, weak, tough or whatever; however, in any case, the authority is his. Eph. 5:22–23 1Peter 3:1 Leadership requires authority.
2. As the head of the house, the man is mandated to love the wife. Eph. 5:25 He is not masculine because he is barking orders to his wife. Loving his wife is masculinity. That requires the capacity for love.
3. The man is to assume the responsibility to guard and maintain the woman's freedom, to which she responds with respect and deference.
4. A masculine man must fulfill his obligation of leadership, so the husband must express and possess the qualities of virtue, honor and integrity; and he must initiate love toward his wife.
5. In short, masculinity is leadership. He must initiate virtues toward his wife. Honor, honesty, noble principles, being without covetousness, knowing how to control and discipline his children. The woman can have these qualities, but the man must lead in these areas.

Characteristics of Femininity

1. The woman must also possess virtue.
2. The difference is how virtue is manifested.
3. The woman is mandated to respond to the love, virtue and the authority initiated by her husband. Her response is great respect, and this means that she responds with virtue. Eph. 5:23, 33?
4. She gives respect and deference to the point to where she is willing to surrender her freedom with complete trust that she will not lose that freedom. The man protects her freedom in virtue love. She must have freedom with responsibility.
5. A woman must be free to respond. No one loves when they are forced to love; that is not love. If God forced us to respond, then it would not be a genuine response. The woman must be free to respond to her man. The man must protect her freedom to respond.
6. Respect and deference is the highest form of a woman's love in marriage; because it is responsive, and that is femininity.
7. When response is given, it engenders trust and devotion from a man, who has the capacity to love.
8. With these qualities will come a great relationship, the way that God designed it to be. That is the epitome of masculinity and femininity.

In this chapter, we will cover all of these subjects in detail. Eph. 5:23: Love your wife as you love yourself. Loving a man's wife is masculinity. A man should not need to relate to his wife in a macho or a militaristic way. It is impossible for a man to neglect himself and he does nothing to harm himself. He should treat his wife with even greater care. He must love even more than himself. The man must initiate and enduring love and consideration for her, just as he does for himself. Personal love for the wife should supercede his own personal considerations. This is commonly called sacrificial love in many Christian circles.

This term has been abused in Christendom. When there is adversity in marriage, the husband must take the lead when it comes to finding solutions. You try to solve your own problems by initiating solutions to those problems. This is an incredible love and it requires great spiritual maturity. The wife must never doubt that she is loved, even under marital stress. If there is doubt about the husband's motivation or love for her, then that brings about the greatest problems. The wife with virtue will respond to the virtue love of her husband. Virtue love will elicit a response from the woman. The man must initiate virtue at all times; and the woman is an excellent reactor—often a nuclear reactor.

It is difficult to express just what virtue love is. When the wife responds to the attitude of virtue love, then solutions will be found in the relationship. The husband has authority in his leadership position. This does not mean that a woman knuckles under to everything that the man wants. The woman does not have to be a doormat to be a responder. Part of love in the husband is taking the opinions and viewpoints of his wife into account. A good leader always knows what the thoughts are of those below him. Part of protecting a woman's freedom is to pay attention to her opinions and viewpoints. She is not a doormat, an automaton or a robot. Treat as such and she will respond. Neither party is locked into their own positions. When there is a battle for power, then you have lost. That is the husband's leadership and the wife's response. Leadership and following.

Women have a problem with being a subordinate, but if the man she marries has virtue love, then she will happily respond to her husband's love. She cannot afford to react. The woman will respond in femininity. The wife must respect the authority of her husband; she must respect her husband; the husband must love her. Leader, subordinate; initiator, responder. If this is missing in one of the spouses, that does not abrogate the responsibility of the other. Even if the husband cannot initiate virtue love, the wife must still be subordinate to him. Or, vice versa. Therefore, it is incumbent upon you to make a good decision when you marry. We are responsible for our own integrity; but we are not responsible for the integrity of the other spouse. The wife tries to control the marriage; or the husband becomes the reactor, reacting to what his wife says or does.

A man cannot afford to lose his capacity for love, even if he has an unresponsive wife. Colossians tells the husband to love, even if there is no good response for the woman. The woman's tendency is to want to dominate; and the husband will want to respond and react to what the woman does. When either does this, their spiritual life is non-existent.

Φοβειω = fear, phobia. Believers in Jesus Christ are commanded to fear the Lord; and this applies to males and females. Eph. 5 is an analogy; and the wife is to fear the authority of her husband. This does not mean to have anxiety or to dread. This means to reverence or to respect. We do not dread the Lord Jesus Christ; we respect Him as believers in Jesus Christ. There is the parallel. The parallel is that we are to fear the Lord.

How does φοβειω work in a wife?

1. The wife's emotions may mingle ardor with animosity for her husband; and this can occur many times throughout the day.

2. In the true love relationship, in spite of periodic reactions, which may be justified or unjustified, the woman will continue to admire and respect the husband. This is in spite of the fact that he might cause a temporary reaction. The woman in the plan of God will continue to admire and respect her husband.
3. When a woman loves a man, but snubs him for some aggravating activity, she still has that respect in her soul...she is mandated to and she does.
4. In doing so, the woman is following the Biblical pattern of using impersonal love. Her impersonal love is her responding to her divinely appointed role. The woman will, at some time, react to her husband. A mature woman will recognize what she is doing, she will rebound, and then apply impersonal love; knowing that the man is the authority. The woman cannot afford to react.
5. If the woman follows this mandate, that is what grounds and stabilizes her relationship to the man, in spite of her responsive nature sometimes reacting. It allows a woman to not let her emotions not run amuck. She continues to remember that she is a responder. This is what Scripture states, and therefore, this must be the correct way to go. As a woman grows, she develops a capacity to respect her man. The woman builds a capacity to respect.
6. It is fairly obvious that when a woman passionately adores her husband that she respects him.
7. The woman's feelings toward her husband are always strong and polar. .
8. Her respect is immovable. That is her capacity to love. She may get angry, but she still has the capacity to love.
9. With doctrine, when the woman's soul reacts—and the woman will react—she has the means of recovery. She can recover before bitterness and scar tissue set in. When that happens, reaction becomes a way of life; no capacity to love or respect.
10. This is authority orientation and humility. That is the bedrock of respect. These are problem solving devices.
11. Φοβέω is the Biblical attitude mandated for the wife toward her husband. The woman does not have to dread his leadership; she does not have to wonder why God gave him leadership. Understand what the divine standards are; and when you gain them, then you can recognize your RW. It begins with the inculcation for what it means for a woman to be a responder and for the man to be the leader.

The man's love must be characterized by impersonal and personal love. What did Christ do? He died for the Church. A real man puts his woman's interest over his own. Bitterness should never enter the soul of the man when the woman tries to dominate him (and that will happen). An immature woman will immediately try to dominate the husband; and mature woman will learn to resist that compulsion. When this happens, a man has no right to be bitter; the man must continue to lead in virtue love. It will happen. A mature wife turns aside her natural desire to challenge his leadership; disputing his role as leader with authority. When the woman challenges his masculinity, she is not following his role; she is ignoring God's design for the man and the woman. This role set up has not changed even though we now have sin natures.

Men, you must initiate virtue love, whether there is anything to respond to or not.

1Cor. 7 introduction

Bobby saw a little doubt, discouragement and puzzlement last night. Husbands expressing virtue love to a wife they do not like; wives responding to a husband they do not respect. Bobby can tell that we thought up tons of scenarios. Maybe the person you are dating does not meet the criterion, so you think, “Who does? Who can fit that bill?” What about all that promiscuity early in life? Burned out soul? Bobby knows we want the idyllic marriage which God has for us. So, Bobby is going to back up and deal with the real-world doubts that we might have about the right person.

If we are single, we may be wondering, “Where is that person hiding?” Wrong question; the correct question is, “Where is the person they can learn to love and respect.” Only we can impact ourselves; we can only change ourselves. We need to focus on His plan for us; not our plan for us. Too often we think that His plan and our plan coincide; God is fulfilling His plan for us. This includes the right person, the person designed for us; and God will bring that person to us at exactly the right time when we are prepared. Why should God bring the right person to us too early? We will just foul it up. We will not appreciate them and the relationship will not work. The secret is advancing to spiritual maturity. What are our expectations for Mr. or Mrs. Right. Many of us probably have a composite in our souls as to what that person would be like; how they would look and how they would act and how they would treat us. Our right person may not be someone that we would even suspect. We might have an unrealistic expectation for ourself. We have the expectation and God knows what we need. God knows exactly what fits for us; He knows exactly what we need. And God has provided the guidelines for us; however, He has not provided the fantasies or the metaphor that we carry around. God has the real person out there who He has designed for us. We probably will not marry a movie star. What we need to do is focus on the Scriptural description of our right spouse; focus on what the Scripture says. The description for the husband is the capability and the capacity for leadership from doctrine in the soul. The description in the wife is the ability to respond with doctrine in the soul. If you aren't married, let God bring the right person to us. A real person, not just a fantasy. God's right person for us is best for us; our perfect companion and spouse, enhances our life and fulfills us—but they may not match what we think. This goes against the grain of many of our presuppositions. The unhappy married is a whole other ball of wax, which Bobby will get to later.

That right person is out there positive to doctrine, and they are a compliment to the plan of God for our life. We are both in the plan of God and we compliment one another in our advance. It is about our spiritual life and theirs. The right person fits the Lord's profile for us. For all of us, we are all imperfect human beings. Finding the right person when we do, does not guarantee perfection, nor does it guarantee that the marriage will work. We must become the right person. We both must have an advancing spiritual life. Christian marriage has a higher expectation.

Let's say you got married and you find yourself in that unhappy marital circumstance ("I've made a huge mistake"). How can the husband be expected to express virtue love when your wife does not respond at all. Or, maybe she has no spiritual life; she has no way to respond. You got stuck. This is the answer, simply stated: you express virtue love anyway, because you have virtue from the spiritual life. It is not about her; it is about the virtue which we have in our own soul. As execution of the spiritual life, we exercise virtue in our lives. We express virtue throughout our lives; so we must exercise virtue in our married life as well—and we are so obligated to do so. Virtue love includes impersonal love, which is the key. Impersonal love functions even when personal love is not present. Impersonal love depends upon the integrity of the subject; it does not depend upon the integrity or the responsiveness of the subject, which is the wife. Some singles may be happy that we are not there yet.

In showing impersonal love, we execute spiritual advance. We are utilizing a problem solving device. We must be able to use a problem solving device. Impersonal love is required under all circumstances. Impersonal love in marriage, even when the woman does not respond, is still the best hope that we have. It is the best chance to get any response from her. Bitterness or reaction or ignoring her will not solve anything. Husbands love your wives is not just for when everything is rosy; it is designed for all time. So you might object, "Well, what about my counterpart in all of this?"

There are two Answers:

1. God always takes up the slack for what you miss. Maybe you are missing something, but God takes up the slack here.
2. There will be temporal compensations for either husband or wife who perseveres in the spiritual life.
3. A thorn in the side is what this can be; but a thorn in the side of the mature believer means blessing in the long run. We are not evaluating on a daily basis; we look at the long term.
4. Do not dwell on what we think is missing. This is when you will begin to wallow in self-pity.
5. Dwell on the grace of God; be grace oriented; don't look at the problem; look at the solution. God will provide what is missing one way or the other. We will be compensated if we continue with our spiritual advance.
6. Second approach: enjoy the moment. What? Enjoy the moment of a miserable marriage? Of course. Live our life in the light of eternity. We can be occupied with the person of Christ; we can enjoy the best or worst of circumstances. Even if we think we got a raw deal, we should continue to advance.
7. What we might miss now while executing the spiritual life on earth will be compensated for in eternity as well. It will not be just a few years of bliss, but it will last forever. Rewards come from executing the spiritual life.

For the Wives: How can you be expected to Respond to a man with no virtue or leadership?

If there is no spiritual life in this man's soul, where is the solution? What do you respond to?

1. You respond to the doctrine in your soul. If you have doctrine in your soul, then you respond to it.
2. Women are responders from divine design.
3. This response in us does not require an outside source.
4. The greatest response that we have is to doctrine resident in our souls. It is an inner response. Even if there is nothing in the man to respond to, we still respond. We don't ruin our femininity (addressed to the women).
5. Because we have virtue from doctrine, you respond in whatever circumstance you find yourself in. In any circumstance in life, the woman is to respond. When there is doctrine in your soul, you respond to that. You have it in your soul, and you maintain your femininity because of what is in your soul, not because of what is external.
6. You are not justified in becoming a bitch because you are married to a son of a bitch. If you don't get virtue love from your husband, you can still respond with virtue love, because you have doctrine in your soul. Impersonal love is invaluable. The man is mandated to initiate that impersonal love. This means the woman must execute the spiritual life in order to do this.
7. So, where is my promised counterpart and right person? God always takes up the slack. You enjoy the moment. You live your life in the light of eternity.

One more thing to cover: what about the singles. Maybe alcoholism, promiscuity or drug addiction ruined your potential right person.

Can a Single Screw up His Potential Right Person?

1. There is recovery in doctrine.
2. However, there are always repercussions to making bad decisions. Laws of volitional responsibility and divine discipline is also there for our benefit.
3. Maybe you will never find your right person. There is compensation. There is peace and there is contentment even as a single person.
4. The principle is the same: you get prepared by capacity for love. Capacity for love is ruined by heavy promiscuity. Bobby is not promising any rose garden to anyone. Marriage can be the greatest relationship in life; but it is also work. God always provides solutions for human failings. With our sin natures we manage to foul things up on a regular basis.

Regardless of our actions, the grace of God continues. It is not over until it is over. With a spiritual life, we are missing nothing. God will supply exactly what we need.

Marriage is one of the greatest training grounds for the spiritual life. If you are not married to a nice person, this provides you a way to quickly spiritually accelerate. Even those who are single can use their single life in order to advance. The grace of God is available in all respects. The man's love must be characterized by virtue.

Bitterness is one of the greatest enemies of marriage. It should never enter the soul. Col. 3:19; you cannot express virtue and harbor bitterness at the same time. Bitterness should not enter the soul, even though the wife will try to dominate her husband. That is a natural thing which will occur.

Some husbands meekly submit to a bossy, domineering wife. What happens is, you begin to resent the way things are. You will have contempt for yourself and bitterness toward the wife. This is not leadership; this is not keeping the peace; this is weakness in the man. No woman will respect a man that she can use as a doormat. When a man allows this to happen, he has abdicated his leadership role. The man must know that it is going to happen and he must have the ammunition in his soul to stop it. The woman will respect him even when she is mad at him. The man's leadership solves this problem, and the woman's respect will kick in.

You need a good spiritual life in order to have a successful marriage. Leadership and authority in the man and followed by the women, and virtue love in the man is central to a successful relationship.

Make one statement, which causes another question. So, what does the initiation of love and leadership actually consist of?

1Cor. 7 introduction

February 26, 2006

As a believer in Jesus Christ, we are mandated to live our lives, moment by moment; and we are to live our lives with an eye on eternity. We bring divine perspective into the routine things of our lives. There is a balance here between the moment by moment walk with an eye to the divine horizon, then there are things we must know. Rebound and GAP. We need to have divine viewpoint resident in our soul. We should be able to solve the dilemmas of our lives with divine solutions. Divine solutions are the solutions which last; human viewpoint solutions are temporary band-Aids at best. When we apply doctrine to our living conditions, we will develop a closer relationship with the Lord. The more human viewpoint that we acquire and apply to our circumstance, the less we rely upon the mind of Christ.

We can never lose our relationship with God, no matter how distance we become from God; that is eternal security. Therefore, the most intimate human relationship designed by God is the center of so many aspects of our Christian life. Any marriage can be a source of great prosperity and great contentment; and it can also magnify any difficulties in life. The relationship that you have with the Lord is reflected with how you live with your spouse; there is a parallel between these two relationships; they cannot be separated. Therefore, it should not surprise us that God has provided certain mandates and guidelines for Christian marriage. Most importantly, Adam and the woman were assigned specific roles and specific functions in their relationship. First, God assigned authority to the husband, which is found all over: Eph. 5:22–23 Col. 1Peter . The husband must possess certain qualities of leadership. As a leader, there is another mandate . A great leader truly loves his troops. A great husband applies love to his wife. A husband must love his own wife even as himself. We can think of how we love ourselves. Too damn much. We are certainly not indifferent to ourselves. The woman is bone of your bones, and flesh of your flesh; so you should treat her as you treat yourself. Love your wives, even as you love yourselves. Awareness of and compassion for the subordinate (who is not an inferior). No woman is inferior to her husband, and he is not inferior to her. But there is a leader and a subordinate. The wife's role is to respond to the love and authority of her husband. She is to respect her husband; she respects the office. A subordinate may not like his commander one bit, but they show respect to that commander. Respect is the highest form of a woman's love in marriage. Respect means that the leadership of the man has engendered trust of the husband. Marriage is the great relationship that God has designed it to be.

What happens when one of the spouses does not fulfill their mandates? What does the husband do if he finds himself in an unhappy relationship? The husband is to express virtue love because he has virtue from the spiritual life. Virtue is what the mature believer expresses no matter what circumstances he finds himself in. It is even more important in marriage. This does not mean that there will never be disagreements; the leader does not get to just throw his hands up and walk out the door. You are not released from your responsibility to express virtue love to your wife, even if she has not virtue love.

Virtue love includes personal love and impersonal love. Impersonal love functions even when response to personal love is nil. Impersonal love depends upon your own integrity, and not upon the responsiveness of the object of your love. Using impersonal love means that you are following divine guidelines; and that is the best hope of responsiveness from the wife. You will never get it by haranguing her or screaming at her or demanding her to do this or that or forcing her to do this or that.

Now to the wives. Let's say you are in an unhappy marital relationship. How can you respond to your husband if he has no spiritual life; what can you respond to, if it is not his leadership or his love? Then you must respond to the doctrine in your soul. It would be nice if the wife had that perfect husband who always does the right thing; but the husband is capable of a lot of aggravation. Do you yell and tell him where to get off? Do you nag him hourly? Your best approach is responding to doctrine.

When you depart from the plan of God, then you are not fulfilled in this relationship. The woman can respond to a lousy husband with impersonal love, rather than react. It may seem like you will never have what God has promised in the garden, then realize that God will always take up the slack for what is missing in your life.

Paul complained about a thorn in his side (which is not ever specified). He prayed for it to be removed, and it was not removed; and he said, "Your grace is sufficient." Do not dwell on what is missing but dwell upon God's grace, which is never lacking.

As you advance to spiritual maturity, God will provide. What you miss now while executing the spiritual life of God on earth will be compensated for in eternity. What is the big deal of missing out in a few things? What happens in time does not compare to eternity.

A Balance between Leadership and Consideration

1. Capacity for love from doctrine is what it takes to function and to use virtue love. You learn to love the Lord through doctrine, which allows you to love others.
2. Husbands can only exercise sensitivity to the woman, consideration and grace orientation. These are characteristics of leadership; they are critical.
3. This does not mean that sensitivity in the man takes over; get in touch with your feminine side. You do not abdicate your leadership for sensitivity.
4. You are awake and conscious to your wife's needs and feelings. They are part of your consideration.
5. Her viewpoint should always enter into masculine consideration as a leader. This precludes pure obstinacy on the part of the woman. Give her consideration; give her sensitivity. In the military, there is the authority to lead someone into battle and they die. He is responsible for his men; a leader gives his subordinates consideration; they eat first; they get the best. A good leader will have the men take off their shoes and he checks their feet.
6. There are other issues at stake other than just feelings. In the military, it is mission first, and then the troops. In marriage there are other things at stake rather than just
7. If feelings override principle and judgement and decision-making, it is emotions overriding thinking.
8. Tough love is involved in leadership. However, never a reason for brutality in marriage.
9. Tough love means sticking to doctrinal principles, despite opposition or even defiance.
10. the loneliness of leadership; you must lead; there might be confrontation (which must be done with consideration and impersonal love and sensitivity; never with brutality). Do not invoke the brutality charge simply because your husband says no and you do like it. It is virtue love, not dirty tricks love.
11. the man cannot be unreasonable and expect his wife to be responsive. Unreasonableness in either spouse is a problem.
12. As a leader, the husband initiates in virtue love, and the wife follows willingly and without rancor. .
13. The wife cannot consistently resist her husband's authority without expecting him to become unreasonable and obstinate.
14. People always want their spouse to work on their behavior. But you are a leader or a responder, and you stay in those categories.
15. As a husband or a wife, you must apply appropriate doctrine

Biblical Secret for a Great Marriage

1. Women, find a man you can respect; a man with virtue.
2. Men find a woman who is teachable and with humility, someone that our are able to lead.
3. Both need to look beyond the external.
4. Both are responsible for their own respective roles. That is your responsibility. You are only responsible for yourself. You want a great miarrage, look at yourself.

February 26, 2006

The 3 verses are the heart of the Christian life, which verses are read at the beginning of the service.

Marriage is an interesting subjects as everyone has an opinion about it; often several, good and bad. Opinions of marriage too often focus on what you are looking for or what your spouse should be like. You need to focus on yourself and not on the other person. You can change yourself. The guidelines of doctrine, the mandates of doctrine are so important.

You do not respond to the external but to the soul. Impersonal love and grace orientation. Even with a great marriage, you still need those problem solveing devices; and a great marriage does not preclude disagreements.

When you think about marriage and you think about that other person. Why doesn't that other person love me the way they are supposed to? Why don't they respect me like they should? That is the wrong focus.

Pitfalls of Marriage

1. You expect the other person to conform to the Biblical mandates and standards of virtue. "He doesn't love me sacrificially" or "She doesn't respect me." This is the wrong approach.
2. You must focus on yourself, because you are the only person who can change you.
3. Apply doctrine to yourself, and not to the other person. Doctrine is always designed for personal application. One hazard is, you apply doctrine to your spouse: "This is what you should be doing; this is the doctrine you need to be applying." and that is wrong. You should only apply doctrine to yourself and do not ever use doctrine against someone else.
4. Evaluate yourself and grow spiritually to make changes in yourself. You must fit the Biblical criteria, not your opposite number. You can do nothing about them. Women often marry a person, and she figures she can make him fit into her idea of what he should be like. You cannot expect to change the other person. If there is something which you find vile before marriage, it will get even worse after.
5. Don't demand that the other person fulfill their Biblical responsibilities toward you.

6. What happens when you demand your spouse do something or change; it builds resentment or obstinance and anger and bitterness. Husbands, do not be bitter against your wives (Col. 3:18).
7. When ...scar tissue is hard to repair. But you do not demand that the other person repair it; you can only remove your own scar tissue.
8. You cannot make your spouse into the right person for you or your bf or gf.
9. Do not attempt to change your bf or gf. After 3 dates, you try to force them into a mold. Find out who they are; that is where you get the true picture. If you have no objectivity in this area, you have some serious deficiencies. You need to build standards in your own soul. Then see if these standards are in the other person. Evaluate them, do not change them. If they do not meet your standards, then move on. "But they look so good and I like their friends and they have the right kind of dog!"
10. Each of us must build through spiritual growth the capacity for love which makes us the right person.
11. Only then are we ready to meet the right person and experience the marital relation the way it is suppose to be. When you find that person, everything else will fall into place. Leadership and response. This comes only from understanding and following the divine mandates for marriage.
12. When a man and woman are thus united in body and soul, love and respect, nothing and no one can replace this relationship. The great historical example. John Duke of Marlborough married a woman and he had a wonderful relationship with her. When he died, many men wanted to marry this widow, included the wealthy Duke of Somerset. Somerset proposed to her, and she answered which indicated the bond between them. "You will never share the heart and hand which had belong to the Duke of Marlborough." She was completely united with her husband, and even death could not separate what virtue unites. These were the ancestors of Winston Churchill. Churchill had a great relationship with his wife as well. Churchill's own parents were not good models. A great marital relationship cannot be separated by death.

Onto Gen. 2:25: There was no figleaf line of clothes yet. They had sex without guilt or humiliation. That is what this verse is all about. The physical response is to the soul identification. Sex was part of God's gift of their fulfillment. Hangups are not to be a part of sex in marriage. This is why soul rapport is important; where there is trust, protection, there is no shame or confusion in the physical relationship. This is not the varying levels of sex drive; or how good someone is with the mechanics of sex. This deals with the inhibitions and hangups which have been known previously. The mechanics of sex can be learned. The key is the mental attitude. Their bodies were made to compliment one another in sex. They were not ashamed; they were overjoyed. This is what sex was designed for in this verse: recreation. Outside of this, there is guilt, unhappiness, humiliation, frustration.

The physical aspect actually provides protection in marriage. It is an invisible line of defense for husband and wife. It is a shield which protects them from straying. It is a protective mechanism.

Withholding sex in marriage can be a weapon, and it can have grave consequences. There is not an excuse to look for satisfaction elsewhere.

A strong spiritual life, virtule love, and an active sex life combine to provide stability, fulfillment and protection for marriage.

There is a point of confusion among legalistic Christians. Sex is not only for procreation. That is the legalistic approach; and this is a part of the doctrine of some church doctrine. Some parents and pastors misrepresent sex in marriage and it comes from rampant legalism. The legalistic persective is prevalent and it destroys the gift aspect of marriage. It ignores the pleasure and purpose that God designed. Parents, do not misrepresent sex to your children. Sex outside of marriage should be warned against, but not legalistically. The act itself is overemphasized. It is God's overall design for sex to be a part of marriage. It is the doctrine which should be emphasized as well as the biological. Asceticism can lead to a mental attitude reaction to sex in marriage. That is a shame; that guilt can carry over into marriage.

Augustine, one of the great ancient theologians; and he is an extreme reaction of guilt reaction. He was quite a libertine; but after becoming a Christian, he reacted to his previous lifestyle. He did not even allow his sister into his house. Women could only see him in the presence of other men. And he would pass along these distortions in his teachings. He was one of the great theologians of the Catholic church; but you can see where the Catholic asceticism came from. He made many great points; but he completely mixed this up.

It is right to resist sex outside of marriage and prior to marriage; but not in the marriage state. It is a natural and normal activity in a normal marriage. Sex is a response to love. Sex will be distorted in marriage when virtue is abandoned.

Gen. 2:25 They were both naked, the man and his wife, and were not ashamed.

Gen. 2:24–25

March 1, 2006

Bridgette Gabriel Feb. 18 in Washington DC speech in an intelligence conference. Article about intelligence. Infidels all over the world are paying the price. Appeasing the Muslim enemies will not buy anything. America and the world apparently need to wake up to Islam. A canvas of hate, bigotry and intolerance of intolerant Islam. They have declared a holy war against the west. We are fighting a powerful ideology which is capable of changing people. They offer far more in death than life could ever offer. Even the Nazis did not turn their children into walking bombs and praise Allah for that chance. Their grievance is our freedom of religion; our freedom of speech; the mercy we grant our enemy. Their grievances cannot be answered by an apology. America has had an almost flat learning curve since the Iran hostages. This is a worldwide conflict; we cannot simply remove ourselves from it. This is a religious war. We can be slaughtered simply for being infidels. Religion vs. Christianity. This was presented by an Arabic Christian woman who suffered for 7 years under their attack.

When God created, he set up great patterns which would last throughout time.

Ish and Ishshah had sex in the garden from the permanent man-woman union.

Gen 2:24 Therefore a man will leave his father and his mother, and will join with his wife, and they will be one flesh.

They were very comfortable seeing one another; they were not disappointed, they were not embarrassed. They identified themselves soulishly first and then physically. They were in a state of innocence. They did not have a sin nature; they did not have any knowledge of sin, good or evil. They were unfamiliar with flaws. There was no sin in the world. Wrongdoing was unknown to them. Sinless innocence, which included coalescence of souls and bodies. There was nothing wrong with sex in the garden.

When man was first created, everything was perfect; but he still had a human need. Sex is not something to be feared or repressed. Those are distortions which are not Biblical. This is the principle of sex without sin between the husband and wife. Still valid today after the fall. What God designed for us might be marred by our sin nature; but the principle and concept is still from God. Matt. 19:5 repeats the principles of the garden.

Gen 2:25 They were both naked, the man and his wife, and were not ashamed.

Mental attitude sins have no place with what God has designed for husband and wife. Why should there be guilt when God has designed this for our pleasure? Everything is right about the passion that spouses have for one another; and it should be expressed. Sex is an expression of love in its proper context. It furthers intimacy and it protects the marriage. The bodies of the husband and wife were made to compliment and fulfill one another.

There is a misuse and a use of this gift from God. The prerequisite is soul rapport; response from wife.

The Prerequisites for Great Sex

1. The husband must bring to the marriage enduring devotion for his wife.
2. Enduring devotion is made up of an intense personal love and a virtue love; which includes loyalty, consecration and dedication to her. Sacrificial life. Husbands love your wives as Christ loved the church.
3. These qualities derive from the cognition, pursuit and metaolization of Bible doctrine. You cannot be dedicated apart from the doctrine in your soul.

4. The genesis of enduring devotion is devotion to God based upon doctrine circulating in the soul.
5. When you develop capacity to love God, then you have capacity for love.
6. Hence the quality of enduring devotion to the wife begins with maximum devotion to God. Maximum personal love for God and occupation with Christ.
7. This occupation with Christ brings capacity for enduring devotion. If you are devoted to Jesus Christ and His plan for you life, then you have capacity for love. Love for the Lord means capacity for dedication to the wife. This is how capacity is built.
8. Now to the wives: the response of respect in the wives includes several things: admiration, deference (he takes first place), honor (you honor him for what he is; you give him consideration and partiality).
9. Here's the kicker: notice that these qualities describe the worship of and deference to the Lord Jesus Christ. If you can respond to the Lord, you can respond and show deference to your husband.
10. The wife's response to her husband begins with her response to the Lord.
11. Response to the Lord through doctrine is the wife's capacity for respect and love in marriage.

Sex is an expression of love and intimacy; not the means of acquiring love and intimacy. When you get the cart before the horse, then the relationship goes nowhere.

Sex in marriage was not designed to become stale, boring or avoided at all costs. Where the capacity for enduring devotion in the husband and there is capacity for respect and deference in the wife, when that grows by advancing in the spiritual life, so does capacity for intimacy and sexual expression.

We can have an even greater marriage than unbelievers, as we can develop a greater capacity for life and love through doctrine. There are benefits both in time and in eternity.

There is a corollary principle to all of this. Anything to which the husband and wife mutually agree to in sex which is not prohibited by Scripture, is not wrong and just fine. The prohibitions of πορνεία are the exceptions. The primary purpose for sex in marriage is recreation and an expression of enduring devotion and the response of respect.

It is okay to be repressed outside of marriage; but there is no reason to be repressed in of marriage. Bobby even heard in seminary that you only have sex in marriage to have children. That is another legalistic myth. Gen. 4:1 is the first time we have a link between sex and children. Sex as recreation in marriage comes before that. It is recreation, not just procreation.

A strong spiritual life, virtue love, leadership from the husband, and respectful response from the wife, and an active sex life between spouses combine to provide stability, fulfillment and protection for the marriage bonds.

The fall was not a sexual sin; the fall was disobedience to God's directive in the garden. Ish and Ishshah were not ashamed.

Authority in marriage is another difficult area for us to deal with. For many women, authority translates to subservience, inferiority and even slavery to the man. The woman's movement have pressed this idea until it has become an axiom of life. In radical feminism, they look to eradicate male authority in the home and the church. It is why we are now ordaining women as pastors. This rejects the divine design of God. Even Christian women reject husband authority.

There are many manifestations of this; it is as simple as a woman or a wife rejecting their husband's name in marriage. "It's no big deal? What's in a name?" This is a problem. Taking the husband's name represents the one-flesh principle. Two become one. "So why don't we take the woman's name?" This is a sign of the man's authority. It is an acknowledgment of the husband's place in marriage.

Muslims see women as inferiors, and they enslave them, for all intents and purposes. This is not the same as the authority in the Christian context of marriage. Authority in the husband is not an outmoded concept even today in our culture. The problem with Christian women today who reject this problem, is the same problem that it has been since Gen. 3:13: "Her desire will be for her husband; but he will rule over her."

Define and describe the husband's authority.

1Tim. 2:12–13 1Cor. 11

March 2, 2006

A set of points on authority and leadership

1. Wherever two or more people must work together as a unit, someone must hold authority and leadership. This is the way it is in the human race. Without this, chaos and confusion (point 8).
2. People work together under leadership. Important on every level.
3. Authority and leadership are necessary in every aspect of life. Even under innocence and perfection, there was divinely appointed authority. The husband was not given authority because he is a superior human being; ditto for Adam.
4. The principle of authority as of late has been attacked. "Mistrust authority" and "question authority" were watch-phrases of the 60's. authority can be corrupted, which is true in a world where the sin nature exists. Without authority, life would be chaotic here, which is why it has been this way since the beginning. Even in a democratic society, there is still authority and some direct decisions. Freedom requires authority. Without authority, anarchy reigns. Leadership is inherent to authority and vice versa.

Marriage is a divine institution. These institutions are governed by divine principles. A marriage is a unit of 2, which means there will be authority. With children, the unit becomes larger. The Biblical doctrine is at odds with and repudiated by our culture today.

This includes believers who have been indoctrinated with anti-Christian doctrine. Some women are so heavily indoctrinated, that they do not realize that the husband should carry the authority in marriage. The feminist movement makes it as if the woman should have as much or more authority in marriage. The feminist movement has made it sound as though women could have it all; a family and a career, but they can't. Some Christian women operate in a way to give tacit approval to the feminist movement, which reveals their innate weakness. Women have the desire to rule over their husbands. This revolt becomes so ingrained that you don't realize that you are in rebellion. Wives find an excuse to depart from their divinely appointed roles.

Every time Bobby hears the word chauvinist, it is a stereotype which is often applied to almost all men. Even though chauvinist may describe an individual man, it should not be used to describe all men. This reveals a contempt of men. Chauvinism, in the dictionary, is despising the opposite gender. This, in a woman's vocabulary, is an excuse to rebel against men. This reveals a loss of femininity and responsiveness. This is a soul in revolt. It is a rationale for the superiority of women. It is a word which is used to scare men, and some abdicate their authority in fear. Inordinate competition in the soul of a woman who is angry at the male; it is a cultural excuse for role reversal.

Religion, like the Muslims, assert male authority to the point of oppression and slavery. This approach is anti-God and anti-Biblical. It is a terrible distortion. A female's freedom must be respected and protected. A woman without freedom cannot respond. Authority is given to the Christian husband, but this is not tyranny. The husband is responsible to live his wife with virtue love. The husband carries 51% of the responsibility in the marriage. In the military, when a unit fails, the failure is laid on the doorstep of the leader. The most beautiful aspect of a marriage is the response of the woman. The husband can never abdicate this role and never turn away from it. Wherever God ordains a principle like this, Satan will oppose it. Satan does this because marriage is a focal point in the angelic conflict. The angelic conflict is not just involved with individual believers.

Women have an innate anti-authority gene; it began in the garden and is a focal point of the angelic conflict. Gen. 3:13 is a part of the curse in the fall. Even if some women accept this authority doctrine in theory, they often disregard it in practice.

The Biblical View of Leadership and Authority: Adam was given authority and priority over the woman at the very beginning, which did not change, even after the fall. The order of creation. 1Tim. 2:12-13: But I don't permit a woman to teach, nor to exercise authority over a man, but to be in quietness. For Adam was first formed, then Eve. The woman is not to teach in church, but to respond to teaching. She cannot teach with authority over men in the pulpit. Leadership has inherent authority, and the pastor-teacher is the leader of the church, who carries this authority. Bobby has two authorities: conferred upon him by his gift and by the choice of the congregation. No woman is to have authority in teaching over a man. She can teach children, as this fits with her own authority in the family unit. We get the word priority from Adam being created first. This indicates Adam's position; priority and authority, but not superiority. This is not, "I was here first, therefore,

I run the show.” This is a concept of headship or leadership, which Paul addresses on several occasions.

1Cor. 11:3: But I would have you know that the head of every man is Christ, and the head of the woman is the man, and the head of Christ is God. Κεφαλη = head, headship, leadership. We find this word used 3 times in this verse. Christ is the leader of every man. This is a generic reference here to males and females. Christ is the head of every male and every female. Then there is a parallel. And the man is the head of the woman. And the 3rd parallel: And God is the head of Christ. Even the last statement is controversial. Along with leadership goes vested authority; authority is conferred.

The Profession

1. Each person in this verse, God, Christ, man, woman is the κεφαλη of the one who follows. Each is a leader over the one who follows in the progression.
2. As Jesus Christ in Hypostatic union was subordinate to the plan of the Father; He became flesh and lived among us; He emptied Himself of the use of His divine attributes. He never surrendered His deity, which kept Him equal to God in every respect. It took a church council in the 2nd century to come up with this and to come up with the Trinity.
3. So Adam and Ishshah were subordinate to Christ; and Christ to the Father.
4. Hence, the wife is subordinate to the husband. There always is a subordinate in a leader-follower setup.
5. This is a chain of leadership, from the divine to the human. Each headship carries its own particular authority. It begins with the divine; and progresses to human. But this is not a chain of tyranny. God sacrificed His Son for us; Christ took on this sacrifice as He loved us; Christ responded in total obedience. There is no tyranny here, but choice. The Lord Jesus Christ said, “I will submit that I may save those whom the Father gives to me.” Christ was always co-equal and coeternal with God. He always was and is up until this moment. The word is equal, even though Christ became man. However, He did submit to the Father’s will in His humanity. Phil. 2:8 John 10:40. Christ has a role to play, which is that of our Savior. He had to subordinate Himself to the Father, even though He was equal to God in essence. Similarly, the woman submits to the man, even though she and the man are essentially equal. Jesus Christ never gave up His deity. That is the true doctrine of Kenosis. Equal but subordinate to the plan.

1Cor. 7 is a chapter dealing with questions about marriage which the Corinthians had. So far, we have seen the one-flesh concept; soul rapport between husband and wife, which leads to sexual union. The union in marriage is analogous to our union with Jesus Christ. Marriage is also a witness for the prosecution against Satan. Marriage is a corporate witness in the angelic conflict, as well as a witness to the world. Virtue love, respect, and other qualities. We’ve explored masculinity and femininity; leadership and response.

A question of authority and priority among male and female. The inspired Word of God is definitive. The true perspective on authority and leadership is found in the Word of God. For the believer in Jesus Christ, God's Word is the absolute, authoritative guide. We cannot ignore God's guidance; human viewpoint, no matter how well ingrained; or experiences. The principle of authority in marriage is a basic for a successful marriage. Because it is so controversial, sometimes Bobby doesn't like to speak of it; however, watching some get upset amuses him.

Leadership and authority synthesize. Authority and leadership go together. Where leadership is present, authority is integral. Leadership cannot exist without authority. Where authority exists, leadership is a natural result. Authority creates a leader. A leader becomes a leader when he receives some authority. A leader actually exercises his leadership by training, information, practice. Authority can be conferred upon someone, but that does not make a person a leader.

In a group, some become a leader via their personality. They can gain authority simply by the position that they hold. We confer authority on the president of the US by an election. This gives him a position of authority. A man's personality and disposition can make him a natural leader in the marital state; but the woman can possess these same characteristics. Personality is not necessary to leadership, but it sometimes plays a great factor.

Leadership is conferred upon the husband by God after the fall. That does not make him a natural leader. A woman's desire is toward her husband; and he will rule over her (Gen. 3:16b). The wife's desire is to usurp that authority.

The husband has a position of leadership given him by virtue of gender and marriage; it is conferred by God Himself. When given authority, a leader must act as a leader. When two or more people must act as a unit, someone must have the authority. People do not work together without hierarchy or direction or leadership.

We must examine leadership and response in Scripture. Thursday night, we began with the order of creation. 1Tim. 2:12–13: But I don't permit a woman to teach, nor to exercise authority over a man, but to be in quietness. For Adam was first formed, then Eve. This first line is a cultural problem for us; and it is so disputed. They spent more time on this verse than any other in seminary. This refers to an assembled church where a woman is not to preach or teach but to respond. This is not society-wide. No woman is not going to stand in front of Berea and teach authoritatively, because of this verse. This first half of this verse means that this woman is a responder. Then, we have the rationale for this approach: because Adam was first created. The priority of leadership; of headship. Adam's position of authority and priority goes back to the beginning of human history. This translates to leadership. This is not a reference to superiority; a man is not necessarily superior to those under his authority. When someone acts superior, that fosters resentment. That is not good leadership for a person to act superior.

If there is any confusion about leadership, Bobby is going to give passages to make this clear. 1Cor. 11:3: But I want you to know that Christ is the head of every man, and the man is the head of a woman, and God is the head of Christ. Κεφαλη = headship, leadership; head. Christ is the leader; He has priority. Κεφαλη occurs 3 times in this passage. All of these headship phrases are analogous. There is a progression in this verse; each person is a subordinate to the one next to them. As God the Son is subordinate to God the Father, so the man and woman are subordinate to Christ; so the woman is subordinate to the man in marriage.

The Subordination Chain of 1Cor. 11:3

1. God sacrificed His Son for us. The Son of God was sacrificed for us and God the Father sent Him. And He loves God the Son with love that we cannot understand.
2. And Christ, by His own free will, undertook the sacrifice for us. We must receive the righteousness of God.
3. Christ responded to the mission of the cross in total obedience and submission to the authority and priority.
4. The analogy continues throughout these next statements. Jesus Christ was coequal and coeternal with God the Father. That never changes. Phil. 2:8 John 10:30: Jesus Christ willingly subordinated Himself to God's plan. He was equal, but subordinate to God in God's plan.
5. Christ gave priority to the Father, even though they were equal members of the Trinity.
6. The Lord Jesus Christ, voluntarily, using His volition as true humanity, took a subordinate role to God the Father in the divine design, to become the Savior of all mankind. We could not be saved unless Jesus Christ willingly subordinated Himself to God's plan. That is how important the role of subordination is.
7. As a member of the Trinity, He never gave up His equality with God. He voluntarily gave up the independent use of His divine attributes. He subordinated the use of His divine attributes to the Father.
8. The point is, there is a parallel status here with equality and subordination. The man and the wife are equal, but one is subordinate to the other.

The next parallel analogy between the Lord Jesus Christ, His deity, and His role as Redeemer. John 17:2: even as You gave to Him authority over all flesh, so that to all which You gave to Him, He may give to them everlasting life. There is a lot more than I'm in charge and you are the follower. There is a great deal expected of the husband. This does not mean that you have a ready made slave and God set it up.

1Cor. 7 introduction

March 5, 2006

In this analogy, we see exactly how God has set this up to work. Κεφαλη is not just about authority alone, but about the love which is required to wield authority. Christ is the head of every man. Christ is the ruler, the leader, the headship over all mankind. The man is the κεφαλη of the woman. Kenosis means Jesus Christ voluntarily relinquished the use of his divine assets. There is equality when He went to the cross. At no time was Jesus Christ any less than God the Father. Jesus Christ voluntarily subordinated Himself to the will and plan of God the Father. This is one of the greatest acts of love and sacrifice. God the Son had the love to go to the cross. Jesus Christ has authority over all mankind. His authority is seen in that He gives us eternal life. No man has that kind of authority. Equality and subordination between Christ and all mankind.

Equality and Subordination between Christ and all Mankind

1. In Hypostatic union, the Lord Jesus Christ was true humanity, making Him truly equal to all mankind. He has still a position of authority, as He provides eternal life.
2. John 17:2: His bestowal of eternal life to those who believe in Him, to those whom God gave him, that confers upon Him authority.
3. He is the mediator between God and man. He was also an equal member of the human race. In order to be a mediator, He must be equal to the human race.
4. Jesus Christ was perfect humanity at the same time that He was undiminished deity, making Him unique.
5. In His true humanity, Jesus was a full-fledged member of the human race; no more and no less.
6. Conclusion is that Jesus Christ always had authority over man as God and Savior; appointed by God and conferred upon Him by God.
7. But, for His redemptive mission in the plan of God, He also had equality with mankind as mediator. Equality with God the Father, but subordinate to God the Father. Equal to man, but He has the authority over man.

We do not have absolute equality with Jesus Christ; He was never lower or subject to us in authority. He gave Himself over to death; no man had the authority to take His own life. In one respect, He is equal to us, but this equality is not absolute or complete.

Initiation and leadership go together. A leader initiates policy; he makes it, he enacts it, he enforces it. To that grace, what do you do? We must respond to His grace. Initiation leadership followed by response of the subordinate. Christ only has the authority to give us eternal life. Initiation of grace, response to grace; initiation of His love. As we learn about Him, we learn to love Him. This pattern of authority and leadership and response in marriage is wonderful; it is not tyranny; it is not burdensome, it is not slavery.

There is another parallel. God the Father and Jesus Christ; then Jesus Christ and man; and finally, the man and his wife. In the same pattern, perfect Adam in the garden, created without a sin nature, was created with authority and priority. We saw that in 1Tim. 2:13. Even before there was a sin nature, there was still leadership. If leadership is needed in perfect, how much more in fallen man?

The Man and the Woman

1. In the same pattern, perfect Adam in the garden, created without a sin nature, was created with authority and priority.

2. Woman was created equal to man; body soul and spirit corresponded in the same way.
3. This is the same as Christ is equal to the Father. Same analogy. Same essence, but different roles.
4. Leadership is not a matter of human superiority. The biggest idiots have conferred leadership. Our litany of presidents reveals that. They all had positions of leadership and authority. Without respect for authority, there is chaos, which is what we have in the US right now.
5. Both genders are equal members of the human race, which is true in the husband wife analogy. The wife does not become an inferior in the husband/wife relationship. A woman can be superior in intellect, talent, etc. However, therein lies a pitfall. You might be smarter; you might have more ability. A wife who is smarter and more capable than her husband is more likely to usurp his authority. You have a justification: he's incompetent and you are competent. This is not the way that Scripture designed it.
6. When a man fears his wife, he has abdicated his leadership. You have no right to fear your subordinate. You have an obligation to love her and she has an obligation to respond. You don't get to change roles because of your individual differences. An aggressive woman can then have no respect for her husband. A smart woman who respects her husband's authority will thrive. A good leader recognizes who he is dealing with; and he recognizes and utilizes her assets. Without this, marriage becomes on long battle for control. And if the woman achieves control, there is no happiness or intimacy. Marriage is in the soul; not on papers stamped by the county clerk.
7. Leadership does not imply superiority or inferiority in either party. In every sense, the woman has equal status as a person, while still being the designated subordinate as well. This is parallel to God the Son and God the Father. She is in a subordinate role, even though she is equal to her husband. Even though Christ was subordinate to the plan of God, God the Father loved Him with an infinite love.
8. The parallel: the Father over Christ; Christ over mankind; the husband over the wife. Keep the parallel in mind, and you understand the husband's authority. She is subordinate to his leadership, even though they are equal as people. The equality subordination theme runs right through this passage. This κεφαλη relationship must operate on impersonal love. As a commander in the armed forces, those are not your slaves to make do what you want. Those are men whose lives have been given to you. The woman possesses a God-given nature to respond; this is in her soul. She will respond as a wife and as a female.

A woman can easily outstrip her husband in spiritual advance; however, this still allows her to respond to doctrine; or, if the husband advances, he applies impersonal love to the situation. In the light of eternity, what could be more important than fulfilling our responsibilities and all that goes with that.

After the fall, the woman has also the built-in desire to usurp the husband's authority. We should be able to recognize and skirt the pitfalls.

If authority in the man implies leadership, and it does, that means that the woman by logic and definition, is designed to be a responder. Unequivocally in Scripture, the husband is given this authority. There is no leadership; only confusion.

As a husband or wife, I know what my role is; and pastor-congregation authority is clear to me. But what about out in the secular world where things are really mixed up. What about when your boss is a woman? Bobby has had a boss as a woman; what was he supposed to do? What about in the secular world? Is God's design for authority negated outside the realm of the church? Does the woman lose her responder nature in a secular role of authority. As a woman as a boss over men, she is out of her divinely designed role? If you as a Christian woman find yourself in a position of authority, do you find yourself outside the parameters of the Christian life? Should a woman hold authority over any man under any condition? These are very tough questions. When WWI, women began to take positions of authority; in WWII, women were thrust into positions of authority. Some women have companies that you run. Some have authority in the military over men. Some are in leadership positions of all sorts. What is your spiritual position in all of this? Armor, infantry and artillery do not allow women in authority; however, women are allowed to be authority in every other position. Many women are placed in authority, and many are put there because they have certain skills and abilities, and they are better than men vying for the same position. The feminist movement has furthered this, and often stridently and with great pushiness. The question is, should a woman be in a position of authority outside in the secular world? Never forget, God designed a woman to be a responder; He designed it that way. A woman can hold authority in the secular world with some caveats and with some cautions.

1Cor. 11:3 Secular Authority

Lesson #314

Wednesday March 8, 2006

κεφαλη = headship, leadership, authority. In many passages, Jesus Christ is presented as fully deity; but here, He is subject to God the Father. He never surrenders His deity; He cannot.

Then we have the headship over all mankind. Because He is undiminished deity, He has authority over us; but He also has authority over us as our Savior.

Then we have man's headship over the woman—somewhat disputed in present American society. This is the 3rd chain of command.

In each progression there is equality as well. . Jesus Christ is equal to the Father, but subordinate to Him. As true humanity, Jesus Christ is equal to us—He is the mediator; one God and one Mediator between God and man. A mediator must be equal to both parties. Otherwise, He could not be our Savior; He could not represent us before God; unless He is true humanity.

The man is equal to the woman as a human being as well; we have body, soul and spirit; we are created in the image of God, which includes soul and spirit.

Headship is a matter of vested authority. There is a specific role; we all have roles to play in this life. Jesus Christ Himself had a role to play in His incarnation. The woman is equal in essence to the man; we both have the same characteristics. She responds to the authority of man; she is equal, but she has a role to play. You cannot have two leaders in a unit of 2; God has designed a leader and a subordinate. The word subordinate is not a demeaning word. All people are subordinate to someone else. There cannot be a leader in a group of 2 without a leader and a subordinate. The woman still has equal opportunity and equal privilege. When a woman departs from her proper role, she opens herself up to spiritual disaster. If we depart from the divinely designed role, there is unhappiness for us. By divine design, the woman is designed to be a responder to her husband. There are two realms where the man is unquestionably the authority: in the church and in marriage. Authority in marriage has application outside of the human realm. God's divine design precludes destruction and chaos in the human race.

Tremendous chaos in the country today. When marriages are unstable, then children are unstable; and then the country is unstable.

What about authority in the secular realm? Outside of the church and outside of marriage? What about there? What about out in Satan's world? Is a woman a boss over men out of her divinely designed role? "Is he digging himself into a hole." Is a Christian woman in this situation outside the parameters of the plan of God, if you hold authority in the secular realm? If a Christian woman, who does not have authority in the home or in the church, should she hold authority in any position?

In the secular realm, it is entirely normal for women to hold authority over men in the secular realm—in this and other countries. Should a woman seek this authority? If a woman has this authority, how should she deal with male subordinates? This is an issue of the plan of God, of happiness, of authority orientation. Since women are in these positions, is there a price to pay? Is there a de-feminizing of women? Is there a demasculinizing of men in all of this?

God designed women to be responders; and He so designed all women, by nature, to be responders. Can this change? Can a woman change and not be a responder? Eve did; she chose to lead, rather than to respond.

In the woman's divinely designed role, she is a responder. A woman chooses to respond or not to respond. Does a woman's position in secular authority make her unfeminine or unresponsive? When a woman gives orders to men, does this take away from her femininity? Not necessarily.

Bobby's introduced it now, and he is hip deep in it.

Secular authority for women is not strictly prohibited for women in Scripture. In general, this is not strictly prohibited. Therefore logically, if it is not strictly prohibited, then it does not ruin a woman's responsiveness. This is an argument from silence, which is not always a great argument. If you are in this position, you are not out of the plan of God; but now you are walking a tightrope. You can operate in a leadership role and you can still be a responder; leadership is initiation, and not a response. You can become anti-authority even as you wield authority. When a woman stops responding to doctrine, she can become anti-authority, even if she holds secular authority. When this occurs, we all have a problem. A woman can lose her perspective as a responder without doctrine in the soul. Even if a woman's femininity is not what it should be, it can be recovered. The key is the woman's response to doctrine.

There is a Biblical precedent for a woman being in a role of authority. There is Deborah in Judges 4. Basically, what happened to Deborah, is she was appointed as a judge in Israel. This was a national leadership function. She is called a prophetess, which is a spiritual term. Israel, in the era of the Judges, was the union of church and state; Israel was a theocracy. Deborah was a national leader, but she could also possess spiritual leadership. However, her judgeship only falls into a secular category. She was essentially commander and chief of the army. Male leadership in Israel was bankrupt; the men of Israel were not worth anything. This was like when David showed up and faced off Goliath, when no one else would face them.

Bobby has always admired Margaret Thatcher. She stepped into the gap during a time when male leadership of England was lacking. Maggie Thatcher retained her femininity, even while wielding this great authority. Deborah, when appointed, her appointment in itself, was an indictment; it marked the failure of leadership in Israel at this time. Deborah could hold authority and still retain great femininity. It was out of the norm of national leadership, but it still happened by divine fiat. A secular leadership role was not denied to women, even in Israel. However, this was not the norm either. Her judgeship was in conjunction with Barak as well. She settled disputes between parties, as a supreme court head justice; and she commanded the military. She did it all. But she was not a spiritual leader of Israel, even though she is called a prophetess. This is a title which indicated to Israel that the source of her strength was God and that she was there by divine appointment. She became one of the great heroes of this era. Deborah stands out over Barak and over Samson. Leadership in secular areas is not strictly and Biblically prohibited. However, those areas of leadership never include authority over the husband or over male leadership in the church. Eccles. 9:9: One of the great things the unbeliever can have is a good job and a great marriage.

The roles the husband and wife play provide the stability of marriage. Practically speaking, there is still a danger here. Femininity (responsiveness) can be lost when a woman has authority out in the secular world. When a woman is in authority, it is very easy for the woman to bring this home or into the church. You tell people what to do all day long, and you find it is difficult to turn it off at home or at church. For a woman, doctrine in her soul is what guards and protects her when she has authority out in the secular world. When leadership is usurped in these places, then you are out of the plan of God. When authority carries over, then there are spiritual problems.

Authority dislike is rampant throughout; and many churches are ordaining women as pastors. It is confusion; it is role reversal.

Advice to women from Bobby: "If your responsive nature begins to escape you as a Christian woman, then secular leadership should be abandoned." However, losing one's femininity is usually a result of being anti-doctrine.

The prestige of secular leadership can be flattering; and the income is often high. However, is the income and the leadership prestige worth departing from the plan of God? That is a personal decision. In or out of a secular leadership position. You have to fight the confusion every day, or you have to let go of the authority. If you cannot separate the authority position, then you might have to step down from your position of authority.

Your personal accomplishments in the business world should not be at the loss of your home life or your spiritual life. It is too important to be in the plan of God. What real blessing can come to you if you ignore God's will and His plan.

Maybe you just don't quite feel fulfilled without that authority. Never leave doctrine behind. When you are threatened on a daily basis to drop out of the plan of God, you must cling to doctrine. So what if you don't get exactly what you think you exactly deserve? You are to maintain the plan of God for your life above all. The rewards will be so much greater. We are not here to glorify ourselves. We are not here to glorify ourselves but to glorify God in our bodies.

Equal pay for equal work; there should be no disparity. A man does not deserve more money if the woman does the same job as well or better than you. If you are a man under the authority of a woman at work, you must remain authority oriented. You cannot foment revolution in the workplace against the boss because you don't like her or don't like being under the authority of a woman.

You cannot abdicate your authority in the home, if you are under female authority at work. Bobby did not like serving under a particular woman as a colonel, because she had a chip on her shoulder all the time; and she had a point to make, even if it jeopardized the mission. Men do this as well. However, this is more obvious in a woman. Bobby followed orders and had to work to maintain his attitude every day.

1Cor. 11:3 But I want you to know that Christ is the head of every man, and the man is the head of a woman, and God is the head of Christ.

Gen. 2:20 1Cor. 11:8–10

Lesson #315

Thursday March 9, 2006

Observations of Muslimism. Anything is justified, as Allah's will supercedes all will. They distort, pervert and sanctify of heaven. Their function in the working world as Muslims is lax.

Fastest growing religion in the world today is Islam; 1 billion in the world today. Islam will defeat the west simply by demographics. Average birthrate for a European is 1.5 and about triple that in the Muslim populations. Europeans have a work week and work habit different than the US. They can only pay for their benefits by importing workers. The European nations that we see on the map will not be the actual nations in 2030. Individual Moslems may show splendid qualities, but Islam paralyzes those who follow it. These were written by Winston Churchill in 1899.

The answer to women having authority in the secular world is more complex than a simple yes or no. Their authority is widespread today. The woman was designed from eternity to be a responder. 1Cor. 11:3 1Tim. as well.

There is tension in the practice of secular authority in the world by women today. The woman has, to some degree, succumbed to the curse of Gen. 3:16 and she desires to overthrow the authority of her husband. A woman with authority does not have to have her responsiveness (femininity) ruined. A woman can operate in a position of leadership over men and women and still be a responder. She is a responder to doctrinal principles. As long as she can respond to doctrinal principles, she can remain feminine. She can do this despite whatever she does.

When a woman ignores doctrinal principles and gets wrapped up in her position of secular authority; and she wields her authority which is not responsive to any other authority. Her responsive nature turns to anti-authority. When a woman takes these attitudes into the church or into her home, she becomes trouble. She causes herself unhappiness. She is unfulfilled and completely outside of the plan of God. A woman's leadership never includes authority over her husband or over the male leadership in a church. She must distinguish between the two. She must remain responsive and feminine. She must continue to respond to doctrine.

Holding authority in the secular realm is not Biblically prohibited. Judges 4. This is a woman in authority who handles her authority magnificently. Her position of authority is a testimony to the weakness of men at that time. She was the only person with the courage to lead the Jewish army in battle. It was necessary for her to lead, but this was out of the norm. it still happened by divine directive.

Man's authority in marriage does not preclude equality between men and women in the spiritual life or in any other way. The woman is never considered inferior even in a subordinate position. Women and equal to men in essence; however, the man has vested authority.

Many men work with women and you realize that some are intellectually superior and superior in capability, and this threatened some men. A man should never be intimidated by a woman who is more capable than you are; no more than you should be intimidated by men with greater capabilities than you. The roles of men and women throughout history has not changed and it continues to this very day.

The Role of Men and Women

1. Immutable God has not revoked the roles that He created for men and women. It was perfect when He did it and it continues to be perfect.

2. Remember, God delegated to Adam the authority to name the animals. That was Adam's vocation for awhile. He was the first biologist, entomologist, herpetologist, etc. He also named the woman when he first saw her.
3. When you name an object, that means that you have authority and priority over that object.
4. Examples: parents name their children; people name their dogs and cats (although you may not be able to exercise authority over your cat).
5. Adam named the woman Ishshah after himself.
6. The fact that he named the woman indicates that he had priority and authority over the woman, whom he named.
7. Then Adam named the woman after himself, which indicates that there is equality in their association.

The original design: Gen 2:20 And the man called names to all the cattle, and to the birds of the heavens, and to every animal of the field. But no helper suited to him was found for a man. Ezer is not the one who has the authority, but that is the one who responds to authority. Helpmate = ezer here.

The woman initiated sin; Adam should have been there. He responded to the woman. It was his responsibility to take care of the woman, and he did not, as he allowed her to talk to Satan. Adam knew that he was following the woman into sin. He chose to go with her into sin. He chose the woman outside the garden over God inside the garden. The roles were reversed and there was disaster for mankind.

After this role-reversal. The man blamed the woman; the man blamed God; the woman blamed the serpent. There was no blame to spread around. Eve responded to the wrong person; Adam responded to the wrong person. 1Co 11:8 For the man is not of the woman, but the woman of the man. Man here is ανερ and not ανθρωπος. This is a statement of the Genesis principle. The woman was created for the man's sake. The woman ought to have a symbol of her authority-orientation. This passage is about subordination to authority. 1Co 11:9–10 Nor was the man created for the woman, but the woman for the man. For this reason the woman ought to have authority on her head because of the angels.

Bobby was a commissioned officer, but the men under him were no less valuable. No mission can be accomplished without the grunts, without the men on the ground. God has commissioned the man as having authority over the woman. The husband is divinely commissioned. The wife is subordinate, but not inferior. She simply has a role to play.

Eph. 5:21–24: ...submitting yourselves to one another in the fear of God. Wives, submit yourselves to your own husbands, as to the Lord. For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church; and He is the Savior of the body. Therefore as the church is subject to Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in everything. We are all subject to the Lord; and just as a woman is subject to the Lord, so she is subject to the husband. Κεφαλη is found here in this passage; the husband is the head of the wife.

This restates 1Cor. 11:3. When you ignore your husband's authority, then you are ignoring the authority of Jesus Christ over you.

Jesus Christ is the Savior of His own body the Church. The wife must be subject to their husband in everything. This should give any woman pause when it comes to getting married. If you are trying to change this man, then you need to reconsider. He won't change. Can you be subordinate to this man's authority for the rest of your life in everything? Do not marry because it is time; do not take marriage lightly. Don't marry for superficial reasons.

And to the husbands: Eph 5:25–27: Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church and gave Himself for it, that He might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the Word, that He might present it to Himself as the glorious church, without spot or wrinkle or any such things, but that it should be holy and without blemish. Here, the husband needs to pay attention. We are mandated to love our wives as Christ loved the church. This is sometimes called sacrificial love. When the woman exercises her curse, as per Gen. 3:13, we still exercise αγαπαω. It is easy to say this and easy to say husband over wife.

Ephesians 5:21–25

Lesson #316

Sunday 1 March 12, 2006

Marriage is a parallel to our relationship with Jesus Christ; the human relationship between husband and wife.

υποτασσω = be subject to, be in submission to, subordinate yourself to. We also have φοβος = fear, respect, reverence. The humility that we express to Jesus Christ will carry over to other believers. This verse is talking about humility. .

Eph. 5:21: ...submitting yourselves to one another in the fear of God.

In vv. 22–25, we have an analogy. We have a simile here; we have the word like or as. The husband is called the head, which is κεφαλη = headship, leadership, authority. This is followed by ...even as Christ is the head of the church;... This verse tells us that the husband absolutely, unequivocally has authority over the wife.

There is no greater authority; only God can grant eternal life. The greatest grace imaginable is that we have eternal security. He is the Savior of the body, and therefore, He is the head of the church.

Eph. 5:22–23: Wives, submit yourselves to your own husbands, as to the Lord. For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church; and He is the Savior of the body.

There is no confusion with the next verse. Just as the church is subject to Christ, so the wives are subject to their husbands. The vested authority in the κεφαλη makes the husband in charge. Response and respect in everything. This is true, even in disagreements. Having a disagreement does not mean that all bets are off. Does the woman maintain her authority orientation in conflict? During a fight? That is where she is particularly tested.

Eph. 5:24: Therefore as the church is subject to Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in everything.

There is more than simply loving the wife; the love is to be like Christ and the church; He gave Himself for the church. That is the meaning of αγαπαω here. It is called sacrificial love because it is equated with the sacrifice of the Lord Jesus Christ. You cannot understand your love for your wife unless you understand αγαπαω. Loving the wife does not mean you are dealing with an emotional euphoria; she might not meet all of your standards as you move along in life. The husband's love is the epitome of love. This is an intense devotion and dedication and consideration. It takes grace orientation. Αγαπαω is the exact opposite of focusing on yourself. There is no equivocation in this verb, even when the wife is in rebellion; it is all the time, whether she is in a full-scale rebellion and no matter what she weighs. You can never understand αγαπαω apart from our Lord's love for us. This is learned; it is not automatic.

Husband and wife must both bring virtue to the table. The husband brings leadership and love; the wife brings response to the equivalent. Mutual reciprocal relationship. It is a mutual and reciprocal relationship between the Lord Jesus Christ and us. God brings grace and personal love to the believer, beyond our wildest imagination. We reciprocate personal love toward God, when we realize what He has done. We become grace oriented. The believer responds and is subordinated in humility and grace orientation to Jesus Christ.

The marital relationship is a reflection of our spiritual life. Our responsibility is our responsibility. The marriage success is on the husband, as he must do the love. And to the wife, the marital responsibility belongs to you, to be subordinate to him. Don't blame one another. In this sense, it is 50-50, and not our responsibility to make the other obey their vows.

Eph. 5:25: Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church and gave Himself for it,...

Ephesians 5:18–21, 25

Sunday 2 March 12, 2006

Bobby has given a brief overview of this passage. υποτασσω = to be in subjection to, to be subordinate to. This is found only in Eph. 5:21. It is in a Greek imperative command. "We are not subordinate to anyone, some think." That is their arrogance. Everyone is subject to someone else.

What does the Scripture mean when it says υποτασσω? Be subject to one another is confused. The chain of command is not destroyed with this word. This does not mean that there is no authority vested in one or more people. This would contradict many other Scriptures, including the passage we are in. Being subject to one another is a call for humility and authority orientation. There is still leadership and hierarchy. Christ is still over the church; He is still over men and women; and the husband is still over the wife.

Authority is not denied or subverted in v. 21. The main verb goes back to v. 18: Do not be drunk with wine, but be filled with the Holy Spirit. Be filled is a critical imperative in the New Testament. We have a string of participles which follow v. 18. In v. 19, we have speaking to one another; in v. 20, we have giving thanks [in the filling of the Holy Spirit]; and in v. 21, we have being subject to one another [while being filled with the Holy Spirit]. The main verb is be filled. These participles are 3 results to being filled with the Spirit.

Some people want to reject authority if they don't agree with it; when they are told to do things they don't want to do.

Eph 5:18–21: And do not be drunk with wine, in which is excess, but be filled with the Spirit, speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord; always giving thanks for all things to God the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, submitting yourselves to one another in the fear of God.

The verb upotassô does not occur in v. 22 below. However, by implication it belongs there. Do I go along with whatever they want me to do, no matter how crappy it is?

Bobby will give an analogy. ὑποτάσσω will be explained by analogy here.

This is a military term. If there is a mission in the military, there must be a person over all who puts all the parts together and has each group execute the part that they need to execute. All of the men are not given the objective and then someone says, "Okay, go and do it." The men must await the command and his specific orders. Nothing happens until he gives the specific commands. The commander calls in his subordinates and disseminates these orders to those officers who are under him. He considers his tactical plan, the logistics of what he is doing, where his men are located; all of these things are taken into account. This requires work and intelligence on the part of the commander. His thought process gives the mission direction. The platoon leaders respond to his direction, and they pass out orders of their own to their non-commissioned officers, and they also lead their men. The analogy is Jesus Christ is over all, and He passes along the plan of God. The pastor teaches this plan of God in church. The husband is in charge of his family and his wife; the husband is like a platoon leader. The husband must understand his own tactical position. Without children, there is an organization of one, which is the wife. Within the confines of that order, there is room to follow the orders which have been given. When a commander has authority, then the subordinate follows, but not as a slave. There is some given and take in planning out any mission and executing this mission. It is good to have several viewpoints on a situation, and subordinate leaders can provide some information which the commander may not be aware of.

These officers under the commander are not slaves to him. Similarly, women are not slaves to the men over them, even though they are under the authority of the husband.

The husband always should want to know the thinking of his wife; he wants to be sensitive to her thoughts and opinions. There are a variety of leadership styles: there is autocratic, where the man barks out orders, no matter what is really occurring. There is a democratic rule, where there is no real authority, and they vote. And there is the balance in between, which is what we should have in a marriage.

The commanding officer does not say, "Dig a fox hole here, here and here; to this depth and do it by 06:00 hours. This would be up to the enlisted men, the grunts; and little would be said in this regard until maybe the final set of orders directly to these grunts.

The wife is to respect her husband's authority, even when he is not very respectable. The subordinate always has an option. We can follow directions or not. We can follow the mandates or refuse to. If we refuse, that is mutiny; mutiny is not authorized, but there is that choice. The soldier may think that the order he receives is dumb and that it does not reflect the reality of the situation. However, he is not freed from the obligation of following that order.

As the wife grows spiritually, she is motivated to respond. It is easier to respond to a husband who is a leader; however, even when the husband does not love you and even when he cannot lead anyone out of a paperbag, the woman is still to respond to him and to be subordinate to him. It is not about "Am I happy in my marriage?" it is about your spiritual life, stupid. Now, if you don't have much in this area, then you are blessed in other areas. That is, you may end up with a husband who is a lousy leader, but God will bless you in other areas. You can have a rotten marriage, but if you execute the spiritual life, it will reflect on you for eternity. Now you make the comparison. Do you choose to screw up your life further by ignoring God's mandates, or do you obey His mandates and enjoy rewards forever. You need to live your life in the light of eternity.

1. In our passage, ὑποτάσσω indicates a subordinate. There is a follower here; a wife placed in a hierarchy of authority. Christ, husband, then wife.
2. What must she do? According to this mandate, she submits to authority. She submits because of the simile as to the Lord. This is the motivation in the spiritual life.
3. That is the first link in the hierarchy. Humility and respect.
4. The husband is the second link to authority.
5. The wife voluntarily submits to this man. She submits because she is motivated by her spiritual life. This is not submitting to a husband's brutality. However, even when the husband gives nothing to respond to, the woman is still to respond to him, even if it is because of doctrine.
6. You are not to ὑποτάσσω the husband, because of inferiority; men and women are equal. The woman has every resource the man has. We are equal in this regard. Some husbands are so stupid that they think they are superior to their wives. That is arrogance, which is never included in ὑποτάσσω. ὑποτάσσω is humility. Our soul is as free as it will ever be, even in the confines of a bad marriage.

7. The husband carries vested authority from the Lord.
8. Therefore, ὑποτάσσω is not used for a forced submission; this is a voluntary submission. Slavery and servitude are not the meaning of ὑποτάσσω.
9. 1Peter 2:13 is a use of ὑποτάσσω; here, it is voluntary. 1Peter 5:5: younger people are submitting to the authority and wisdom of their elders.
10. The motivation for ὑποτάσσω is a choice from an attitude or humility. We don't have the connotation of the private in the military saying, "Yes, sir; no, sir; no excuse, sir." The woman needs to remember this as she walks down the aisle. Voluntary submission to the husband is authority orientation of the spiritual life. The Christian wife responding to the love of her husband is representative of the believer responding to the love of Jesus Christ. Women are designed as responders, which is both her nature and responsibility. This is the way that God designed it to be. The woman responds, the husband loves her more, she responds more and he loves more. It is a good circle. Respect your husbands; husband, love your wives. If one person follows this mandate, then the marriage will survive.

Eph 5:22: Wives, [submit] yourselves to your own husbands, as to the Lord.

Eph. 5:25: Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church and gave Himself for it,...

Eph. 5:21–25

Lesson #318

Wednesday March 15, 2006

Paul knew that ὑποτάσσω would be a word which would cause a lot of problems throughout the centuries.

Eph 5:21–25: submitting yourselves to one another in the fear of God. Wives, submit yourselves to your own husbands, as to the Lord. For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church; and He is the Savior of the body. Therefore as the church is subject to Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in everything. Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church and gave Himself for it.

Submitting Yourselves to One Another

1. This does not advocate an egalitarian church. Every liberal would like to have an egalitarian country.
2. Being subject to one another does not speak against church leadership.
3. Also, it does not mean that we all submit to each other with no authority vested in any other person. If we take it as we are all subordinate to each other, then there will be a problem with a hierarchy of authority in any situation.
4. If it means that, this would contradict other Scriptures about authority in the church. It would contradict the next few verses which follow.
5. In this context, being subject to one another refers to the attitude of humility and grace orientation.

6. Without humility, authority orientation does not exist. There is no durable response to authority without humility.
7. Without humility, there can be no proper exercising of authority by a leader. Leaders must have humility as well. Arrogance in a leader, means that the leader cannot operate effectively.
8. Corollary: without humility, leadership abuses authority, resulting in tyranny. Bobby's received anonymous letters calling him a tyrant for not wanting anyone else to listen to anyone else but him.
9. How is such humility acquired? In the context of Eph. 5, it begins back with v. 18, which says "Be filled with the Holy Spirit." We should deal with one another graciously and with humility. "Be nice to everyone that you meet because they are going through their own problems, most of which we are unaware of."
10. The idea is, we look after the needs of others and we deal with the concerns of others.

Eph 5:21: submitting yourselves to one another in the reverence [or, respect] of God.

1. Respecting Christ is the ground for respecting all human authority. This is the foundation for submitting to designated human authority.
2. As we subordinate ourselves to Christ, we subordinate ourselves to others with grace and humility. We are not trying to be competitive or to lord it over others.

Eph. 5:22: Wives, [submit] yourselves to your own husbands, as to the Lord. There is no verb here, but it is supplied by the context.

Being Subject to the Husband as unto the Lord

1. As to the Lord is our example of submitting to authority. We are all subject to the authority of Jesus Christ.
2. The word as we have a simile. This is a comparison of two unlike objects. Here are dealing with the Lord and a husband.
3. Remember this is a comparison. This is a comparison of subordination of these two persons. It is required by this phrase.
4. The comparison means wives be subordinate to your husbands in a similar manner as you would subordinate yourselves to the Lord.
5. That is how seriously the Scripture takes the chain of command of husband over wife. No wife can afford to miss this. This is important, not just for your marriage, but for your spiritual life.
6. The husbands authority is compared to the Lord's authority over the wife. There is no question that the Lord has authority over the husband and the wife; however, to the wife, the husband's authority should be just like the Lord's.

Eph. 5:23–25: For the husband is the head κεφαλη of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church (it is impossible to miss the strength of Paul's intent here); and He is the Savior of the body. Therefore as the church is subject to Christ, for this cause the wives be to their own husbands in everything (this is the 3rd time that Paul writes about the husband's authority in this passage). Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church and gave Himself for it.

Notice, the wife is told 3 times, subordinate yourselves to your husbands; the husband is told only once, love your wife.

The husband's love is to be like Christ's love for the church. This requires a mature humility, engendering grace orientation in the husband's soul. This is the greatest capacity for love that a person can have in the human race. This is to remain in all controversy, in all fights, in all difficult situations. Even when she tries to take over your authority, the husband is to love her, albeit with impersonal love. This is like the many men who fought in World War II for their families and wives and they risked their lives. They would not consider having women there; they risked and gave their lives for the women of America.

Once a man is married, it is the husband's unequivocal responsibility to love your wife. There is no escape clause for either one. This means you need to find the right one and to be the right one. Marriage is not slavery or tyranny. In many parts of the world, women are seen as slaves or cattle (this is a lot like Islamic practices). Some Christian men think of and treat their wives in the same way.

Some men marry women that they can push around; women over whom they can rule in arrogance. It is important for a woman to notice the temperament of the man that she is going to marry.

A woman is not something to be displayed, and then taken home to be locked up and oppressed. The Word of God never condones a husband oppressing his wife. This is not a military unit. The husband is not a drill sergeant and the wife is not a recruit. The wife voluntarily places herself under the authority of her husband.

The Woman's Response to Her Husband

1. The voluntary response of the wife arises out of submission to Christ and His authority. Is there any greater thing in life than to respond to the Lord Jesus Christ? This should give one the idea as to how important the husband's authority is.
2. Voluntary submission to the husband is the authority orientation from the spiritual life.
3. Just as believers respond to the grace of our Lord and to the love initiated by Him;...
4. So the wife responds to her husband.
5. The Christian wife responding to the love of her husband represents the believer responding to the Lord. That is a representative analogy.
6. That fall is all about disobedience to authority. We got here by anti-authority and we are redeemed by the grace of God. This is respect for authority and requires loving leadership from the husband.

We have a relationship in human life, and there is a comparative value to the spiritual life in marriage.

The man is the initiator through soul love; in the spiritual realm, Christ is the initiator through grace and love in salvation. Vv. 22–24 is the proper response in marriage: Wives obey your husbands: in the spiritual realm, believers are to obey Jesus Christ by learning God's Word. When the wife fulfills the mandate of the Lord, she has virtue. When the husband shows love to his wife, he has virtue. Doctrine fulfills the soul of the believer. A responding woman is the glory of her man; a responding believer is the glory of God. We will also see this in 1Cor. 11:7. The fragrance of memory is from the union of body and soul. That inner happiness is never forgotten; that is the concept of capacity for life and love, the fragrance of memory. Ditto with doctrine in our souls. When the husband and wife are in each other's souls, it is analogous to doctrine in the soul.

If a woman cannot subordinate herself to this guy without reacting, even after a really good fight, then you need to find another man. For a woman, her rebellion is going to happen. The key is, how do you recover? Are you still able to respond to him or is there a creeping bitterness in your soul. If responsiveness resumes, that means it was never lost. The wife needs to be able to still respect her husband, even after a battle with words. If a woman cannot consistently respond in courtship and if you don't trust that he can properly exercise his authority in love, then do not marry this man. In rejection of authority, the law of volitional responsibility and divine discipline will eventually catch up. Even a little bit of rejection of Bible doctrine still puts divine discipline right on your tail to bring you out of it. There are repercussions.

To the husband, who is the designated authority, there should be a loving give and take between you and the wife, rather than despotism. If any man does not listen to his wife or does not every take her advice, then this man is a fool.

As the authority, the husband is always right. However, the wife is not always wrong. Principle and application. All good leaders take their subordinates into account. Their subordinates eat first; they are given the best of everything. The wife does not trail 3 paces behind you.

Wives, do not say, "He never loves me" because that is not your responsibility; and husbands, you are not to say, "She never obeys me" because that is not your responsibility. ὑποτάσσω is the husband's role in marriage. When it comes together, it is beautiful and both end up with respect and love.

The attitude of authority orientation does not make the wife a doormat. The husband must not attempt to stifle the wife. If she isn't what you want, don't go there. If you are in marriage, then you must go with the roles God has assigned.

Bad marriage or good, build the edification complex of the soul.

3 words that we have been dealing with from Eph. 3:21–25, which defines the relationship between husband and wife. There is κεφαλή (head) and then the verb ὑποτάσσω (which means to be subject to, to be subordinate to); then the verb αγαπάω which is an endruing devotion. The woman is the responder and the husband is the leader. She is to respond to the leadership of her husband. Authority and the like opens us up to great misunderstandings and misapprehensions.

It is not as obvious how to find this person to whom you will respond, which is a dicier question. RM/RW there is one person designed for us. Finding this person for the lady is not sitting on the park bench while a parade of men wander by until one with the glass slipper comes by and puts it on. Women often have this perfect, ideal male specimen to appear on the horizon, and this is a mistake. Men all have warts and flaws and failures and the scars of battle; and so do the women. This changes the ideal that women may have conjured up at age 16. We are in a different season in our lives, but the mandate is still there. It is possible that there was the person who rolled through your life and you were not ready to respond to them at that time. It is possible that the course of your life has changed dramatically and you have changed as you have moved through it. This does not mean that God's grace would disallow you a second relationship in your life. RM/RW does not mean that God will bring just the right person along at just the right time, early in life...but it does not always happen that way. And sometimes, God's grace provides you a second person when your right person passes on. It is our responsibility to be ready to respond. We can get locked into the RM/RW to where we think there is just that one person, and there is no one else ever...but they may have gone through our lives and fell out of it. Part of being ready means you must know who to respond to and what to respond to and how to respond.

Back to the husband: at a minimum, the husband is 51% or more responsible for the environment of love in the household. He is responsible for initiating the spiritual tenor of the home, but too often, the wife does that. It is the wife who must do this. He must lead by example. He must lead with doctrine, stability and self discipline. These are much more important attributes than what a man looks like or a guy with great self-confidence, charm and self-assuredness. Authority-oriented wives have no problem at all responding to Christian husbands who lead with love. The husband must fulfill his part of the mandate back in Eph. 5. The woman may defer to a man's authority, but a woman will never truly respond to us unless our authority is given in virtue love. Virtue love is the capital which the man must use in order to get a return on his investment. When a man does not make any investment in his marriage, he will get nothing in return. Many men have yet to understand what they are sowing in their home; they may be sowing marital discord or they might be sowing seeds of love. You must understand your leadership position. Your authority might be tyranny and it might be tempered with virtue love. Initiation and response; leadership and subordination. That is the design. There is not slavery in that and there is no tyranny in that.

There is the exception to the authority of the husband over the wife; one exception to the initiator response roles is sex. Here there is equality of response and counter response.

Either the husband or the wife can initiate. The husband has authority over the wife's body and the wife has authority over the wife's body. This is 1Cor. 7:4. When we get to 1Cor. 7, we will not be covering marriage in its complete form, but the questions which the Corinthians have asked.

Now we will cover the spiritual aspect of marriage. Adam and Ishshah were created to resolve the ancient conflict; both of them in their marital status. This was the reason they were designed and created. Companionship and relationship. There is the human need which each of us have. Adam had a need for intimacy with another human being. Marriage is designed to take care of our need in that way. Marriage is also a witness against Satan's appeal in eternity past, after he was sentenced to the Lake of Fire.

Most have never seen marriage as a solution to this angelic conflict, this pre-historic war. When we get to the marriage aspect, we'll see the relationship.

Angelic Conflict

1. Before God created the heavens and the earth, and before He created you and I, He created a class of spirit beings, which are called Angels (αγγελος); Col. 1:16
2. The angels were created with volition. They could make decisions. Bobby has no idea why these angels had volition. There are holes in the angelic conflict which we are not aware of.
3. These angels can maintain their sinless state; and they have the ability not to maintain this state. God does not treat human beings or angels capriciously. He did not create angels for something to do because He was bored.
4. One angel, Lucifer, the highest of angelic creation, began to covet the position, power, and glory of God. He could never equal the glory of God, but he wanted it.
5. This lust for power became sedition.
6. Satan's arrogance then disrupted the harmony existing in the pristine universe. That harmony was disrupted.
7. Satan means adversary. His name was changed from Lucifer (son of the morning); and as the adversary, he recruited 1/3 of angelic beings. He had himself and these other angels which initiated a cosmic rebellion against God.
8. God moved to quell this revolt.
9. The rebellious, arrogant angels were arrested by God and brought to trial, and they were found guilty, and then they were sentenced, all of them. Matt. 25:41: "Depart from me, cursed ones, and go into the fire designed for Satan and his angels." Unbelievers and all fallen angels will end up in eternal fire.
10. Even though Satan was pronounced guilty along with all of his angels, the execution of his sentence was postponed. We know this because Satan is active during human history. He is not now in eternal fire, but he is active on the earth. He continues to be active right to this very moment.
11. Why did God defer this sentence? Why was Satan allowed to continue in his adversarial role? Why did God bring man along? Satan knows he is doomed, but he will not give up without a fight. He is the total and consummate adversary. His doom makes him even more dangerous. He could not accept God's verdict as the adversary, and this was his answer to the capital punishment series. No one knows why God allowed him to appeal this sentence.

12. What is the basis for Satan's appeal? Satan is not a fool; he is the most intelligent being next to God. He strikes the heart at God's essence. Satan wanted to be like God, like the most high, but he could never reach God's glory—no one can. Therefore, instead, he impugns God's character; he brings God down to his level. He had to do something to discredit the sovereignty of God and level the playing field. Satan used the love strategy; how can a loving God throw His creatures into the Lake of Fire. People continue to emulate this same strategy. People often say, "How can a loving God let this happen to me? God is love; it says so in 1John; but He is letting this horrible thing happen to me. If God was truly sovereign, He would not let this happen to me." That is manipulation of God. "Wives, if you want to embarrass your husbands, then tell him he is not a good lover." It is the same principle. "Love me the way I want to be loved; and if you don't, then you don't really love me." Can you imagine saying this to God, Who sent His Son to die for our sins. It is a pathetic statement. We mirror Satan's original appeal all the time. He uses this strategy with the attempt to manipulate God into rescinding this sentence.
13. In essence, Satan's appeal impugned the integrity of God; His justice and righteousness. This was an appeal against cruel and unusual punishment. This sentence could not be just or righteous from a loving God. The same excuse is given by those who dispute the reality of hell.
14. Satan attempted to separate God's love from His integrity. This was the first skewed definition of love. Who really understands love, particularly if you depart from Scripture. Satan tried to isolate love and make it dominate integrity. If love is stronger than integrity, then God cannot send him to the Lake of Fire. People try to manipulate in marriage in the same way. If there is no virtue in love, then it is meaningless. Love and integrity always work together. Both attributes are equal. What are the attributes related to us in salvation? Love, justice and righteousness. The same things which Satan impugns. God will show this to Satan as human history unfolds.
15. God could have instantly cast the offending angels into the Lake of Fire. He granted the process of Satan's appeal. God granted this appeal process to show His character to all angels for all eternity. All angels were interested in God's response. He could not let a challenge to His character go unchallenged.
16. God's counter to the appeal was the creation of man. He created beings much inferior to the angels. What we have is the free will of angels; that is the intersection of man and angel.
17. The resolution of the angelic rests with the exercise of man's volition. Man can choose for or against God's love and grace, accepting God's justice and righteousness. All angels will see Satan's culpability. Job 1:6 2:1–3 1Cor. 4:9 11:10 Eph. 3:10? 1Tim. 3:16 5:21 1Peter 1:12 or 5:12.
18. Resolving the angelic conflict is coterminous with human history.

19. God duplicated the objection of Satan in human history. “Am I really culpable for my free will, because You gave it to me.” Today, this is called passing the buck. It is not my fault; I am just the victim.
20. Human volition would be tested. Satan said, “God, You gave me this, and I don’t deserve the sentence You’ve given me.”
21. God will demonstrate throughout eternity that His righteousness and justice will work with His love. Love provided the opportunity for salvation; justice and righteousness provided the means. Justice and righteousness imputed all of our sins to Jesus Christ, and He paid for these sins.
22. The cross is the basis for the strategic victory of the angelic conflict. The arrogance and the negative volition of Satan resulted in the fall of man. So, here comes marriage: Adam and his wife are introduced to a tree. A simple choice which the pair faced together as husband and wife. They had to make a choice. Gen. 2:16–17: And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, “From any tree in the garden, you may eat freely; but, Adam, from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, you will not eat.” There was plenty of doctrine given up until this time, but this was the first test of volition.

The mandate was given to Adam. Why didn’t God call both of them in and give them instructions? This is because Adam is the one in authority. God set him up as such and He does not violate His own character. God gave this mandate to Adam and it was his responsibility to pass this along to his subordinate, which is Eve. God expected Adam to explain this to Eve. So, who does Satan go after? He goes after the responder, because she is the weak point. She responds to God and to Adam, and she has protection. If she responds to the wrong thing, she is out of divine design. Adam, when he took the fruit from Eve, abdicated his leadership position.

Gen. 2:16–17 (1Cor. 7 intro.)

Sunday 1 March 19, 2006

Marriage is about people and a relationship between people—two people, male and female, a.k.a., husband and wife. It began with Adam and Ishshah. We’ve studied all these relational principles. The purpose is to prepare us for an understanding of marriage in general, so that when we get to 1Cor. 7, we will have the background to understand the answers to the questions posed, but the complete background to each question.

There is one doctrine not completely covered yet, but touched in previously on Thursday. This is the angelic conflict and Adam and Ishshah’s relationship to one another in relation to the angelic conflict. There is more to this than “War of the Roses” when things go wrong. That ancient war is the war between God and Satan which began in eternity past and will continue until the end of human history; and marriage is a part of this conclusion.

This war began before God created mankind and before man allowed man to procreate, God instituted marriage. Before human history, there were spirit beings created by God, and they were able to make choices based upon God’s great grace. They could choose for God or they could rebel against Him in arrogance. One angel in this group of angels was Lucifer, the highest creation of God, the most beautiful creature created by God, began to covet the position of power and glory of God. His volition rejected God, and elevated himself to the highest status, in his own mind. Satan was the precursor to all mankind insofar as rebellion is concerned. He wanted to be like God, and this became overt conspiracy in heaven. His name was changed to Satan, which means adversary, and he became just that—the ultimate and consummate adversary of God. He recruited a third of the angels in heaven. After this recruitment, the war was on. Satan could never reach the power, position and glory of God. His only hope was to bring God down to his level. We think of Satan as wanting to elevate himself to this position, but his only recourse is to bring God down. When we cannot reach a certain status, we want to bring that person down. When we see integrity which we do not have, we want to bring this person down to our level.

God must always oppose sin, and this rebellion was opposition to God and sin. He went to remove these angelic adversaries. These angels were put before the supreme court of heaven, Matt. 25:41b: “Depart from me, accursed ones into the eternal fire which was prepared for the devil and his angels.” There is a literal Lake of Fire; God created it in eternity past for Satan and angels, and not only will they be there, but so will all the unbelievers in human history. Satan was not going to go down, after this verdict was pronounced, without a fight. He is always in rebellion and he would rebel then as he does now. He would not, could not, or accept God’s final verdict. He appeals to God. Satan is a genius, and he uses his genius to come up with a great defense, and he presented this defense to God before all of the angels. God allowed this appeal. God answers this appeal in a rebuttal. Satan is not immediately cast into the Lake of Fire. He is very active in human history, as per Job 1:7. Satan roams the earth and he seeks whom he may desire. It is during the course of our lives and the course of every life that Satan’s appeal runs, coterminous with human history.

We have soldiers in Iraq in a difficult, confusing, bloody conflict. The enemy is never where he is expected to be; there are no front lines. We have a very small number of soldiers representing us in this conflict. If we are believers in Jesus Christ, no matter where we are on this earth, we are in the middle of a war—every single one of us. We never know where there will be an outbreak, but there will be an outbreak.

Satan’s objection: “How can a God of love cast His creatures into a Lake of Fire?” Satan impugns the love and integrity of God. Satan attempted to embarrass and to manipulate God. “God, You say that You are perfect love, but You do not love us, if You execute this harsh sentence upon us; You are not just and righteous, because we do not deserve eternal doom. We are Your creation; You made us. You made us this way. Didn’t You make us this way? Isn’t this Your fault as much as it is ours?” Satan objects to who and what God is. Satan objects to God’s character; Satan is attempting to separate God’s love and integrity. He wants God’s love to overrule everything else, to make it dominant even over the justice and righteousness of God. Love cannot override or supercede His integrity. These aspects of His essence must work together; no attribute takes precedence over another attribute.

The love of God is the absolute virtue and benevolence of His thinking, along with His justice and righteousness. If there was only God's love, then we could rebel in all ways, and God's love would overrule. However, His justice and righteousness guard the integrity of His love. God granted this appeal of Satan to reveal the dynamic workings of His love and integrity as an internally cohesive package. There is no contradiction or confusion in the function of His attributes. God would demonstrate the workings of His integrity and love. This would be the cross. First, God created man, which is God's rebuttal argument. And we would think, that is a loser strategy; but it is not. God created man way lower than the angels; we have less intelligence, we are more confined than them, much less powerful; but we possess the same free will and volition that angels have. It was within the confines of marriage where volition must be exercised. God has duplicated with Adam and Ishshah, the pristine situation of Satan and the angels. So, Satan and the angels begin to watch, and they begin to interfere when it is most strategic to do so. They watch them in this pristine garden of Eden. Will Adam and Ishshah take the side of elect angels or the fallen angels in revolt. It was Adam and Ishshah's turn to choose.

God would show for all eternity that His justice and righteousness do never override His love; and that His love does not supercede His integrity. God's justice, righteousness and love would provide salvation for all mankind.

Because His justice judges sins in Jesus Christ, we do not have to pay this fine. God's love and His justice will not be compromised to provide us with salvation. All of these attributes work together in providing our salvation. The cross was the strategic victory of the Angelic Conflict. The arrogance and negative volition of Satan result in the fall of man. Adam and Ishshah were introduced to a tree in a watershed test of their free will.

Gen 2:16–17: And Jehovah God commanded the man, saying, You may freely eat of every tree in the garden, but you shall not eat of the tree of knowledge of good and evil. For in the day that you eat of it you shall surely die.

"You have everything that you need for your life and happiness right here in the garden; however, there is one simple prohibition: the tree of the knowledge of good and evil; you can eat from any tree in the garden, except for that tree." This was God's command to Adam.

What was the interaction between husband and wife in the garden? The mandate was given to Adam. God did not call a Bible conference and teach them both this; God had a designated authority, which was Adam. Adam's authority is God's design, which indicates authority.

Another objection: "Who is to say Your authority determines right and wrong? Who is to say your integrity is the true judge of righteousness?" Also, "What about the other angels, who fell? Are they to be as culpable as me?" And, "My relationship to the other angels is a true demonstration of love and brotherhood."

There was a simple test set up by God. Marriage was a laboratory to exhibit God's grace, authority love and integrity. Marriage has a correspondence to union with Jesus Christ, to our relationship with Christ. All of the areas where Satan had rebelled. The garden was the lab where Satan's appeal would be played out (or initiated).

Together, the man and the woman must use their volition to maintain fellowship with God. Satan had everything and even he was not satisfied. In arrogance, Satan challenged God's authority; and now it was man's turn to revolt or to respond to God's love and authority. The marital union was the center of this test; it was not just about the man or the woman, but it was about both of them.

Satan understood this relationship immediately. He loved it. The man and the woman were Satan's opening. He saw a weak point. He came up with a plan to disrupt the perfect harmony of the first marriage and to bring about a parallel fall. Satan closely observed this union and watched it and he believed that this union was the weak point, and he was right. Satan was committed to challenging divinely appointed authority in the human race. He knew that Adam and Ishshah had been given everything in the plan of God, but he knew that he could recruit them, and to foment disobedience and rebellion. Satan knew that Adam was the designated leader and the authority in marriage and he understood that the woman was to respond to his leadership. Satan decided to subvert God's design. Whatever, God's plan is, he attempts to subvert that plan. There was response and authority in the relationship between the man and the woman, and he attempted to disrupt that relationship. Satan was a deceiver and a liar, and what better way to go after the human race than to reverse their roles. Furthermore, Satan understood that if the woman was designed to respond to the man, perhaps she could respond to Satan, as he was much more intelligent than Adam. Conversation to incite a response to the wrong man; it is designed to incite unfaithfulness to the right man and to respond to the wrong man.

We are always in combat; we are never in a rest area. We too often think of ourselves as being alone in this world, and advancing to spiritual maturity on our own. However, we function as a part of a whole. In marriage, we function as a unit; as a family, we function as a unit; as a church, we function as a unit. The one we are married to functions as our partner, the person who has our back, in war.

The leader-subordinate relationship was to be followed in marriage, and that whoever this relationship is reversed, then things get screwed up. Marriage is critical in the angelic conflict. You may think you have the worst marriage in history and that moving forward as a team makes little or not sense; but Adam and Eve had a dysfunctional marriage as well. We make mistakes in the relationship and we make mistakes when we move on from those relationships. Whether single or married, and alive, we can always move forward and always find victory.

Satan looks at this marriage, and decides, "I need to bring these two lovebirds to my level, to my failure. I am looking for someone I can deceive; I am looking for someone who will respond to me." Satan understood that the woman was more susceptible. Now, he knew that, in confusing and deceiving her, that there might be a problem; however, he knew that the husband would go along with her. If she accepted Satan's company and authority, then she was rejecting Adam's authority. The wrong response to the wrong person at the wrong time is what Satan wanted to set up.

Satan's objection: My love, brotherhood, justice and integrity are just as valid as those characteristics of God. My function in this life is just as valid as any other act.

The decision to sin takes place in the soul before it becomes an overt activity. It is demonstrated right here as the woman speaks to Satan and she examines this tree that Adam told her not to eat from. God knew what Satan would do; God understood Satan's choices. God had given Adam and Eve several Bible classes; He had told them about His love and justice and righteousness. What excuse is there for them to distort this doctrine? They had volition, and therefore, they could distort. Adam and Eve were under no delusion about their choices. How many times have you understood a doctrine completely, and you walk out of the auditorium and violate it? We all have. Adam and Eve all knew what was expected of them. There needed to be a proper balance of leadership and response, authority and free will; if they stayed within their divinely-assigned roles, disobedience would not become a part of their lives.

Adam needed to provide love and leadership for his wife; he had a great responsibility in his relationship. The woman had the obligation to respond to Adam's love and to his authority, and to reject Satan's seduction. That was her responsibility. God's design was a wall of protection and Adam was to protect his wife from responding to the wrong man, and to keep her from failing to respond to the doctrine in her soul. He responds to the doctrine in the soul and leads that way; she responds to the doctrine in her soul and to her husband. Their relationship was the key to their perfect environment. Would they respect or abuse Adam's authority? Would they obey or disobey God? Would they choose to eat and die, or to not eat and live? Very cut and dry choices. Their was a choice defined by God Himself. We might think, "Of course, we would choose for God" but Bobby says we wouldn't. Adam and Ishshah had the same choice, and they failed. The first marriage failed miserably. Ishshah failed miserably. The leader in an organization is always responsible for the success or failure of his unit; he always has primary responsibility. Adam will turn in to a bowl of jello; no backbone, no spine. As long as Adam afforded leadership to his wife and as long as she respected his authority (and there must have been some of this which occurred). We do not know how long Adam and Eve functioned sinlessly in the garden; and we do not know how long Satan talked to the woman. As long as Adam led and as long as the woman responded, things would be fine in the garden. She simply needed to stay within the divine parameters of her role. Eve, at some point, reacted. She lost sight of who she was to respond to. She was responding to Satan the serpent; when she reacts to one man, then she will respond to another. This is unfaithfulness. Whether mental or physical or social, it will occur; if you react to one, then you will respond to another.

Adam was not the only legitimate authority over Ishshah. The other authority over her was the Lord Jesus Christ and the Bible doctrine which He had communicated to her in the cool of the day. Adam was her leader, but Jesus Christ was the leader of both of them. The Lord was not indifferent to Adam and to Eve. God reinforced that responsiveness, then, as He does now. God reinforces this, even when men fail.

Gen 2:16–17: And Jehovah God commanded the man, saying, You may freely eat of every tree in the garden, but you shall not eat of the tree of knowledge of good and evil. For in the day that you eat of it you shall surely die.

“Adam, Eve, you cannot eat from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil; for in that day, you will die.” was the message of Jesus Christ to the unit of Adam and Eve. Eve, at some point, chose to disregard God’s Word. She failed to accept the authority of God’s Word, and then would naturally choose not to follow Adam. A disconnect in the first naturally causes a disconnect in the second; she became vulnerable. That vacuum in her soul would be filled.

Who knows what was happening? Maybe Adam was out exploring, and she did not have fellowship with him all of the time. Ishshah is seduced in her thinking.

Gen. 3:1: Now the serpent was more cunning than any beast of the field which Jehovah God had made. And he said to the woman, Is it so that God has said, You shall not eat of every tree of the garden? Satan immediately asks a provocative question. He knows how to go for the throat. “You mean, you can’t eat from that tree? Why? It looks good to me. Here is the deal, God knows that is great tree and if you eat from it, you will get knowledge which Adam may not have; and knowledge which belongs to God.”

How did Satan get to her? She should have recognized that Satan’s innuendo was in direct opposition to God’s directives. She should have gone to Adam and presented this to him. This would have been leadership followed by the proper exercise of authority (Adam would have dealt with this serpent). She thinks, “I do want to listen to what Satan has to say; maybe what God says is not the truth; maybe God is keeping something from me; maybe this would change the balance of power.”

Gen 3:2–3: And the woman said to the serpent, “We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden. But of the fruit of the tree which is in the middle of the garden, God has said, ‘You shall not eat of it, neither shall you touch it, lest you die.’ ” The woman makes a small addition to God’s prohibition. God said, “Don’t even touch it.” the woman had a doctrinal breakthrough. “I can’t even touch this tree.” She was being denied something that she felt was rightfully hers. She was reacting to this situation. Satan immediately knows that he has her at this point. Perhaps even he, in the serpent’s body, crawls around the tree. The woman is possibly thinking, “My freedom is being restrained.” Here, freedom without responsibility is death. This is part of the test for the woman.

The woman, in her soul, is becoming anti-authority in her soul, even though she might seem exactly the same on the exterior. She is resisting any restraint of her volition. She wanted to overthrow this repressive rule in the garden. Bobby asks, "Is there anything new under the sun?" She is doing nothing different than what we have observed for years. This woman has volition.

These two had but one test; we have a lot of tests. The more we advance spiritually, the more we are in control. Pretty soon, Adam and Eve will have their eyes open; and they will understand what evil is. They would know evil because they would be evil.

The woman made herself vulnerable; she wanted to be a free spirit; she wanted to get out of all this authority over her. She was low man on the totem pole. "If I could break free of all this authority, I will be free." But, breaking free of this authority puts her into slavery. All she was thinking about was herself. She swallowed Satan's lie, when she rejected God's authority and Adam's authority, she thought she would get everything she ever wanted. The woman had reversed the divinely appointed roles and she becomes the initiator. When Adam comes home, she reverses roles, and she holds out the fruit to Adam; and Adam responds. Adam chooses Eve's authority over God's. The failure of the first marriage; they failed as a unit, as a team. It is defeat in one's spiritual life to go against God's divinely appointed authorities.

The woman was deceived and Adam knew exactly what he was doing, and he was more culpable. God goes to Adam; God does not go to the woman. God goes to the one in authority. Authority, leadership, subordination and response.

This study of husband and wife has everything to do with a successful Christian marriage. Without doctrine, we believers do not have a chance at a good marriage; we have particular roles: the husband as the leader/initiator and the wife as the subordinate/responder/follower. It should be clear that is the design which God has for the man and woman in Christian marriage. The husband and wife have a function within that relationship. Even with the leader-subordinate relationship, the two are equal in their souls and spiritually. They have equal opportunity and equal privilege. There is equality, even though there is this leader-subordinate situation.

Marriage is part of the rebuttal of Satan's appeal of the sentence of the Lake of Fire. The love and integrity of God are shown in action. In Satan's appeal, he impugned God's love and integrity; he hoped to put these attributes at odds. He hoped to use God's own attributes against him.

God created man and woman and performed on the spot the first wedding ceremony and supplied them everything that they needed in grace and love. There was no sin, no fall, etc. with Adam and Eve to begin with. God provided them with everything; but they were created for a reason; and they had volition. There was a test of their volition in the garden. They could accept God's plan or reject His plan. This would be similar to Satan and the angels of eternity past. Husband and wife would meet the challenge of the angelic conflict, and they would stand or fall together; they would live or fall together; they would have to live according to the divine design to pass this test. However, they did not pass the test. In the failure of the first marriage, there is a lot to learn.

The statement of the test:

Gen 2:17 but you shall not eat of the tree of knowledge of good and evil. For in the day that you eat of it you shall surely die.

Gen 3:1 Now the serpent was more cunning than any beast of the field which Jehovah God had made. And he said to the woman, Is it so that God has said, You shall not eat of every tree of the garden? The implication is, what a tyrant God is; He is keeping something from you; you eat of that tree and you will get what you are entitled to.

Ishshah should have recognized that this violated God's mandate and she should have known that there was something wrong here. In ignorance, she chose to continued to chat with the serpent.

Gen 3:2 And the woman said to the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden. She was deceived insofar as thinking that maybe Satan did not know what was going on, so she helps him out to explain things to him.

Gen 3:3 But of the fruit of the tree which is in the middle of the garden, God has said, You shall not eat of it, neither shall you touch it, lest you die. The tree in question is in the middle of the garden; her volition was tested daily. It was always there. Then she tells the serpent, "I can't eat it and I can touch it." She revealed her attitude here. She had great resentment at all of this. Bob said this was her great doctrinal breakthrough. It was as if this prohibition severely limited her freedom. The old adage how much is enough? The greedy person cannot have enough; she had all she needed but one thing; she was denied this one tree. It was all hers; but not this tree.

She stated the consequences, "You would die" to touch or eat of the fruit. She either lost respect for her husband or Adam failed in his leadership and in his responsibility towards her. Her freedom was being restrained; she had almost everything, but the tree was something she could not eat from. When given a mandate, that means that someone has the authority to do this.

Instead of responding to Adam, she responds to Satan. She in essence assumes the man's role. Ishshah was deceived by Satan's words; however, deceived or not, she made a clear choice; and she even stated the consequences of her sin. Consequences be damned, she decided to do it. She made herself vulnerable to this lie in being anti-authority. The vacuum of the soul sweeps in evil. Into her soul swept Satan's lie.

Satan went after the woman because she was the responder; with deceit and lies, Satan could get her to respond to her. This is the prototype for responding to the wrong man.

She decided to usurp the authority of her husband and of God. She initiated. She initiated an enticement for her husband to sin.

When the woman saw that the tree was good for food, she becomes interested.

Gen 3:4–6 And the serpent said to the woman, You shall not surely die, for God knows that in the day you eat of it, then your eyes shall be opened, and you shall be as God, knowing good and evil. And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasing to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make wise, she took of its fruit, and ate. She also gave to her husband with her, and he ate. She decided that it looked good for food and it was pleasing to her eyes. And she thought that the tree was desirable to make one wise. She had all the information that she would ever need, but here there was something she did not have. She had only a knowledge of good, but the tree would give her the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. Satan tells her, “You will become wise like God.” Satan wants to be like God, so he attempts to tempt this woman with the same thing. We often accept the authority of people who have no concept about what they are talking about. She is buying into all of it. She takes from the tree’s fruit and she eats it. That is the moment of disobedience.

Then, the woman gives the fruit to her husband and he eats. She already understood from eating the fruit. She understood her sin; her evil. She knew where she was instantly, and she was going to take Adam with her. Adam responded to his wife. He flagrantly disobeyed God’s prohibitions.

Satan no doubt threw a party at this time, thinking that they had won. Satan had defeated the first marriage; he had destroyed man through the first marriage. This problem would continue to plague marriages from this point on. Adam chose Ishshah outside the garden rather than God in the garden. Man becomes so muddled; there are so many ways man rejects Jesus Christ. The excuses that they give are the lies of Satan. The man caved in to her rebellion. She rebelled against God and her husband, through deceit; Adam rebelled against God knowing what he was doing. Adam gave Eve the pants and let her wear them. It was a disobedience to the divine mandate. He abdicated his authority given him by God and responded to the woman. Eating the fruit was a manifestation of his sin and failure.

1Tim. 2:14 And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression. It was not Adam who was deceived, but the woman was deceived. There are actually two slightly different verbs here. Απαταω εξαπαταω. It is the same verb found in Gen. 3:13 in the LXX. Paul purposely used this verb from the Septuagint.

Adam was not fooled by any dialogue with Satan. “The serpent deceived me” Adam later blames Eve for this. “The woman whom you gave me gave me the fruit.” Adam was not confused by Satan’s deception. He took the fruit; he knew what he was doing. He knew this was Eve out of the garden or God in the garden.

The woman liked the thrill of getting the attention of this serpent; she was flattered by him. Perhaps she felt a little neglected; she was susceptible and vulnerable.

How Eve was Deceived

1. Eve revolted against an authority which was missing.
2. She entertained the serpent's advances. She did not mind the dialogue. She should have realized the he attacked the mandates given by God. She opened herself up to it and that meant she should respond to Satan. Maybe it is a temptation which you know is wrong, but you just want a little fun. You respond to deception and lies because you want to.
3. She rejected Adam's protection and then rejected the absolute authority of God. One followed the other. Rejecting one authority, means she would respond to someone else.
4. She relinquished her responsiveness and became anti-authority in reaction.
5. Ishshah made herself susceptible, to confusion, ignorance and arrogance.
6. Everything that happens to a woman who reacts to authority in marriage happened to Ishshah. She was the prototype; she showed the way.
7. The inevitable result was, her virtue was lost; and then Adam's virtue was lost.

Ignorance is no excuse. Ishshah is guilty even though she has been deceived. They were both guilty in the fall. They each died spiritually at the first bite. The failure of marriage was a problem of response/leadership. They needed to stay within the divine design of marriage. They leave that design and they become vulnerable.

To Adam goes the great culpability. God places the blame on Adam in Gen. 3:9. The burden of leadership was on Adam. He failed in his obligation to his wife and therefore to the Lord as well. Adam failed in his leadership. The woman should have had the man to respond to, but she did not.

Bobby, "Ladies, don't use this as an excuse to blame your husbands for everything." In the defeat of Adam and the woman is the greatest victory of the angelic conflict; out of cursing brings blessing.

We all have the solution; but it is our volition; we must operate under divine mandates and the plan of God. When a woman goes anti-authority or when a man abdicates his leadership, they are headed for disaster—a lifetime's worth. It is not a good thing to depart from the plan of God.

Gen. 3:9–15 1Cor. 7:1

Thursday March 23, 2006

Some people have actually walked out of Berachah during Bobby's teaching. You cannot soft-peddle the teaching of marriage. Marriage and the fall of mankind are inseparably connected. Man was created in order to resolve the angelic conflict. Adam and Ishshah would stand or fall as a unit; they had to operate together. Their choices were decisive; but, it was a decisive defeat. Their responsibility was to stay within the divine design of marriage. The husband was supposed to provide a cocoon of love and she was to respond to this love. They would live and die as a unit and face Satan with solidarity or Satan would divide and conquer. Gen. 3:2–3, 6: Satan divided them and the man and the woman failed.

Satan singled out the woman; he chose to go after her as the most vulnerable as the responder. He understood the roles which God had provided, and that her role lent itself to deception. He is the adversary, the great deceiver. He was about to ply his trade on the very first human beings.

How Was Satan Able to Divide and Conquer?

1. Satan plied the woman with lies and innuendoes about the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. Satan's lies contradicted God's mandate; he shrouded God's mandate in a mantle of deceit.
2. The serpent appealed to the woman's arrogance and dissatisfaction. He made God out to be a tyrant. He knew how to twist the facts to make God the tyrant. The one with authority is a tyrant is the lie.
3. Satan passed on his rebellion against God to Ishshah. He was in rebellion, so he got her in rebellion. He had recruited a third of the angels and now he was recruiting the woman.
4. He made his evil viewpoint her evil viewpoint. He caused her to think in the viewpoint of the cosmic system.
5. He infiltrated her thinking without her even being aware that he had infiltrated her thinking, without her realizing the impending danger to her marriage or to her life. That is how great the father of lies is in his trade.
6. The woman succumbed without even knowing it was happening to her. The human viewpoint that we face everyday, and without knowing it, we get sucked into the thinking of human viewpoint. Human viewpoint infiltrates our soul and we are not even aware of it. We begin to think just like those in the cosmic system think.
7. Even though Ishshah was deceived, she made her own choice from her own volition. She made the choice to fall, not Satan. Ignorance and delusion are not excuses; they never are.
8. Somewhere along the line, the woman made herself susceptible to the deceit which she swallowed.
9. Human viewpoint is just as insidious and covert as it was in the garden. It may not come from Satan himself, but if it comes from the cosmic system, it is just as deceptive.
  - a. Women as responders are just as vulnerable today as they were the first time that Eve fell.
  - b. The cunning man with human viewpoint to whom she responds—a woman will respond to someone, she can't help it—whatever he peddles, she will respond to that.

- c. The woman's only hope of resistance lies in her response to doctrine. If a woman has no husband to respond to, then the only thing she has to respond to is doctrine.
- d. Even entertaining or dabbling in human viewpoint is just as dangerous and as enticing today as it was for Ishshah. She began by dabbling in Satanic viewpoint. She dialogued, she talked. Very likely, in the beginning, she knew there was something different here than what God has provided. It is time to stop being enticed by interesting, enticing arguments. You begin responding to a small amount of human viewpoint and eventually to a lot.
10. Ishshah responded to Satan's cunning and flattery. She was no doubt the picture of beauty. Satan no doubt complimented her over and over again. She responded to his flattery. There is no question about it. She was duped.
11. The woman placed herself in a position to be beguiled...something had gone wrong or haywire here.
12. She allowed herself to become vulnerable; we may be deceived, but we have allowed ourselves to get there. Satan told her exactly what she wanted to hear; and she responded to that.
13. She responded to Satan's viewpoint rather than to divine truth. She was an easy mark for Satan. She separated from Adam's leadership and God's mandates and fell right into it. 1Tim. 2:14–15: And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression. But she will be kept safe through childbearing, if they continue in faith and love and holiness with sensibleness.

Eve was deceived, but Adam knew exactly what he was doing. He has a great responsibility here; he was not fooled by some dialogue with the serpent; he may not have even known about this serpent. He was not confused by subterfuge. Adam was vulnerable to role reversal. His vulnerability was to his wife usurping his authority. He handed his authority right over to Eve and she handed it back with a death sentence. Even though the man blamed even, God said this:

Gen 3:9 And Jehovah God called to Adam and said to him, Where are you? God wanted to know Adam's state of mind; He was not interested in his physical location.

Gen 3:10 And he said, I heard Your voice in the garden, and I was afraid, because I am naked, and I hid myself. The first incident of fear and guilt, because he knew that he was naked. He just discovered his own nakedness and he felt guilty. So God said to Adam...

Gen 3:11 And He said, Who told you that you were naked? Have you eaten of the tree which I commanded you that you should not eat? Adam was now totally depraved; he had fallen; he was separated from God; he no longer had the status of innocence. They were both spiritually dead. Only he man was called on the carpet. Adam had failed at every point in the marriage. He failed to follow through on the one mandate which God gave him.

Gen 3:12 And the man said, The woman whom You gave to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I ate. Adam immediately blames the woman here. Adam deliberately chose the woman and ended up outside of the garden. We all have the choice to accept the work on the cross; Adam and the woman could accept or reject the cross.

Why Scripture Makes a Point of the Difference of their Sins

1. The utter devastation to depart from Scripture is shown here. Devastating in the relationship between husband and wife.
2. Ish must keep his and Ishshah her estate. Each was to remain within the confines of the way God meant it to be.
3. To reverse the order to usurp the authority means a miserably marriage and a destructive livefyle.

Adam responded to persuasion. They both disobeyed, but they got their in different ways. She regained eternal life.

Gen 3:13 And Jehovah God said to the woman, What is this you have done? And the woman said, The serpent deceived me, and I ate.

Gen 3:14 And Jehovah God said to the serpent, Because you have done this you are cursed more than all cattle, and more than every animal of the field. You shall go upon your belly, and you shall eat dust all the days of your life.

Gen 3:15 And I will put enmity between you and the woman, and between your seed and her Seed; He will bruise your head, and you shall bruise His heel. This is the first statement of the gospel.

Adam was then in a depraved condition. Marriage is all wrapped up in everything that we are. In marriage, we are corporately in battle. Whether single or married, we are in it. Respondg to doctrine was the other war.

Short Summary of Marriage

1. The doctrine of marriage: the authority and priority of man coincides with the creation account of Gen. 1:26–27 2:21–22
2. Man came more immediately from God; he was created first. He was designated by God as the ruler over nature; man was given the task of naming the animals; he had the authority over them. Naming something is a sign that you have authority over them.
3. The woman was created next; she was formed from man's rib and she was brought to the man.
4. She was taken from the source of Adam; she was taken out of Adam.
5. Then Adam named her Ishshah; another indicator of his authority and priority. He named her after himself. That was an indicator of their human equality. They both have souls with equal opportunity and equal privilege in the spiritual life.
6. Role reversal.

7. They both disobeyed God authority, His mandates, as evidenced by a disaster in the garden.
8. Marriage continues to be the battle ground of the angelic conflict. We live or die with our partner.

Satan likes this; he feels like he won. Satan saw God's love in the garden, but it was most obvious in the cross.

Now we are experts in marriage, so we know exactly what we are supposed to do based upon our gender. When these questions come up, we should have no problem understanding it. Bobby is not going to cover this stuff any more. He will stick with the text now.

After all this, we have this statement, "It is not good to touch a woman." However, that is not what it says here. The point is, this verse has been the subject of many horrible interpretations without incorporating v. 2 into the explanation.

St. Augustine would not even allow a woman into his house unless there were a bunch of other guys around; not even his sister. Now Paul makes a switch from all that licentiousness to legalism. Those who wrote this question were legalists. Many were involved in cultic πορνεία; however, some were; others were legalists. There are legalists in all churches, even in this, the most promiscuous church. These legalists are so upset that they are in major self righteousness. What they saw with all these hedonists galvanized them into action. They became activists.

The pharisees felt they followed the law perfectly. Recall, there were at least 4 factions in the Corinthian church. The factions of Paul, Apollos, Peter and of Christ. The idea was to phrase the questions just right to get the answers that they want. "He will boost our faction and we will take power in this church."

Paul will give very important instructions about marriage and sexuality. They will be very specific.

1Cor. 7:1 But concerning what you wrote to me, it is good for a man not to touch a woman;

1Cor. 7:1–2

Sunday 1 March 26, 2006

This is Bobby's 2 year anniversary as pastor of Berachah.

Not all of the Corinthians were hedonists. There was a legalistic faction in Corinth, and they were probably made up of Jews. They were appalled by what they saw in the other members of the church. Instead of letting doctrine affect the modus operandi of the others in the church, they decided to take matters into their own hands and they became self-righteous activists. They wrote a letter to Paul about marriage and they expected to get certain answers from Paul. They had an ulterior motive; they knew how much authority

Paul carried in this church, mostly because he founded most of these churches. Therefore, they expected that a letter to him might elicit the response that they wanted, and they expected his response to get them what they wanted.

Since several letters are mentioned, is it possible that various letters came from the various factions at around the same time?

They could get Paul to give them the answers they wanted, they could proclaim preeminence and take control over the church and they could exhibit a little power over these libertines in the church. Every church in history finds some similarities to what is going on in Corinth. Paul will turn to marriage, which is one of the most difficult topics.

Paul has been dealing with a number of other topics and, suddenly, he goes from licentiousness in 1Cor. 6, to marriage in 1Cor. 7. Essentially, the topic is, how is marriage to be regarded in the realm of Christianity? Bobby suspects that these people wanted to see Paul abandon marriage, and to say, "Don't marry at all." In 1Timothy, we have evidence of this, and several commentators agree with this view. These legalists already have the answers in mind that they want to hear. They wanted confirmation for their legalism. They wanted to boost their self-righteousness. Is marriage just about sex? The answer is, of course not. End marriage and you end a lot of hedonism, which is their idea, apparently. These Corinthians want Paul to tell them what they want to hear. They see Paul's answers to these questions as their ticket to power.

Perhaps they also asked, what about all this πορνεία which is occurring in the church? What advice can you give us about all that? Another question, what about husbands and wives where one is positive and the other is negative? As legalistic as these Jews were, they were also willing to divorce at the drop of a hat. What if my wife is negative and I am positive? Or, what about my unbelieving wife? She is going to impede my spiritual advance; can I dump her? They want to hear Paul support their asceticism and their self-righteousness. The legalists and the antinomian suppositions are all wrong. The hedonists believed that they could worship through sex; the legalists believed that if they followed certain laws of morality, this was the Christian life. Even though the motivation behind these questions is wrong, the questions are good, nonetheless. These people want Paul to walk into a trap, and Paul gives them doctrine.

Their first question might be, should you touch a woman? Celibacy is the answer to all of our problems in this church. That is the idea here. The first phrase is what they wanted to hear; but then Paul expands it into the next verse. V. 7:1b has brought 2 millenniums of celibacy to the Roman church; that celibacy is somehow holier or better than marriage.

What Will v. 2 Say in Relation to v. 1?

1. Marriage is a protection against immorality. Their idea is that celibacy is a protection against immorality.

2. Celibacy is not a prerequisite for holiness. You cannot serve better because you have a mistaken idea of holiness.
3. No status of temporal life brings a greater holiness to anyone.
4. Holiness is positional sanctification; the worst and the best of us are saints. It simply means that we have believed in Jesus Christ, and we are declared righteous. We still sin; we mess up from time to time; we make mistakes; we are nevertheless holy. We must follow this up with experiential growth, which is spiritual growth. This does not proceed from our marital state or lack thereof.
5. All of us are given equal opportunity and equal privilege for growing in grace and knowledge our Jesus Christ. We are given the ability to become mature believers.
6. We build a capacity righteousness which is not characterized by celibacy. As we grow spiritually, we become more righteous; never perfect righteousness, but there is a progressive righteousness. How sad for those who wear priestly robes and do not understand what this verse means.

It is tragic the homosexuality and the pederasty in the Roman church. Paul will say, because of immorality, marriage is given.

Paul is not arguing in v. 1 against marriage or against sex in general. He will declare just exactly the opposite. He speaks in favor of marriage throughout. In Heb. 13:4, Eph. 5, etc., marriage is extolled as good. 1Tim. 4:1–3 tells us the forbidding marriage is a sign of the end times. What we have in v. 1 has nothing to do with marriage.

There are special circumstances; there is a very sexual, heathen, hedonistic culture that the Corinthians live in; very much like the US today. Severe persecution of the church at this time. These were times of very concentrated suffering. Corinth was a Roman city; it had been refounded by the Romans after it had been destroyed. This was a time when Christianity had been outlawed in Rome and in the surrounding countries. It was not a good time to be a Christian; and it was the best of times to be a Christian as well. The suffering was great in the Christian churches at this time.

A widow was a very difficult position to be in during these times. Paul is saying, it is advisable not to marry at this particular time (but certainly not for all time). Marriage is a divine institution, so Paul cannot be against it. Marriage fulfills a built-in need. It is not good for man to be alone. The breakdown of marriage is destructive to the client nation. Still, v. 1 says don't touch.

Paul uses an adjective here: καλος = good, right, correct. It is good for a man to avoid touching a man in acts of πορνεία. This is in the context of πορνεία. Απτω = to light, to kindle a fire, to arouse. The idea is, to arouse a woman into sexual passion. This does not mean don't ever touch a woman; and this does not refer to marriage. In marriage, sex is a good thing. The singles may ask, what can I do before I get into πορνεία? What is forbidden? Can we kiss, can we hold hands? Some Christians believe that we should not even hold hands. "I know you are waiting for an answer...and I am not going to get into those technicalities. You have to know what takes you over the edge." Obviously, the act itself is off limits; and the all-consuming desire is also involved. Touching here is sexual activity; arousal, lighting a fire. It is perfectly clear that Paul is writing against the phallic cult practices. Paul is simply saying, flee fornication as he has already written.

There is an aspect to celibacy which is related to our spirituality. However, it is not a matter of celibacy as being a superior function or a better gift. There are some gifts and concentrated services which require a greater dedication, which is the gift of celibacy. This celibacy might only be temporary, until conditions change; this can be for a lifetime, and it can be temporary. There is a great blessing associated with this. Paul might even have himself in mind here. Paul had a ministry which was extremely concentrated. Paul does not say that other believers should be celibate like himself; he wishes that all believers could enjoy the great blessing that he receives through this gift.

1Cor. 7:1 But concerning what you wrote to me, it is good for a man not to touch a woman;

Because of πορνεία, let each man have his own wife and his own husband. Sex is a good thing in marriage, because outside of marriage, sex is πορνεία.

1Cor. 7:2 but because of fornication, let each have his own wife, and let each have her own husband.

1Cor. 7:1–3

Lesson #325

Sunday 2 March 26, 2006

This would have been a difficult passage for many of the Corinthians to look at; it went against everything that they thought. That was a way of life; that was their way of thinking; it was their way of operating. Our society is very similar in its hedonism.

Μη απτω = do not inflame, do not arouse, do not heat up. . then we have δία = because of. It is good not to sexually arouse a woman (v. 1), but it is also good to have a husband or wife (v. 2). It is the phallic cult which is going on. Unbridled licentiousness. We have some of the most stringent laws in the history of the US against sexual harassment in the workplace, and yet we live in one of the most licentious times the US has ever been in.

Paul addresses the men, and says, “Do not heat up a woman” because it is the man who is the aggressor and the woman is the responder. This applies to women as well. Men and women are to keep the sexual activity within specific boundaries. A man should have a wife, and a wife should have a husband.

1Cor. 7:1 But concerning what you wrote to me, it is good for a man not to touch a woman;

Paul will later say, it is better to marry than to burn [with sexual lust]. Marriage is the proper context for sex, which is not the Corinthian context. The Christian who is driven by human viewpoint will also be driven by the cultural norms and standards. The Corinthians needed to connect sex with marriage; they did not do that. They had a false dichotomy between the two.

Ἐχω = to have, to hold. This is the imperative of permission. This goes beyond command to consent; it is command and consent. It focuses on volition responding to a hard and fast command. It is correctly rendered let have.

The legalists are being blown out of the water here. They are not being told to avoid sex and marriage. Avoiding πορνεία through the legitimate expression of love and marriage and sex. Vv. 1–2 contrast sex outside of and inside marriage. There is a natural order of things. There are special conditions, and circumstances, and situations where celibacy is a part of the Christian life; but that has to be better defined. During times of severe suffering or concentrated service, but this is the exception, not the rule. It is a good thing for men and women to be married.

Let each man have his own wife and each woman have her own husband. There are certain responsibilities in a marriage; there is time and attention given; financial support; time to rear children; the responsibilities are much greater. The timing needs to be right in marriage; timing is important in marriage. There is a time to take on responsibility and a time not to. Varies with the conditions and the times; and this is a decision to be made by each individual. We will deal with v. 7 and the exception to this rule of marriage, which turns out to be a spiritual gift.

Notice what Paul does not say. Paul does not use the verb to keep; he uses have, to hold. This verse is not about forbidding divorce; this verse is not about divorce at all. Divorce will be covered, but not with this verse. Here, it is having a husband or wife to preclude πορνεία. Marriage is protection from πορνεία.

1Cor. 7:2 but because of fornication, let each have his own wife, and let each have her own husband.

Paul then moves on to the duties of husband and wife. We may see duty as meaning a chore, like taking out the garage; something which is simply obligatory, possibly from a grudging motivation.

Here we have οφειλή, which is due benevolence. Thayer definitions: 1) that which is owed; 2) a debt; 3) metaphorically dues: specifically of conjugal duty. The emphasis in this passage is on a responsibility. Sex serves a purpose as true intimacy. It must be done willingly and freely as the expression of the bond between the husband and the wife. It is an expression of the bond and the love that is there. This is an attitude which is not truly physical. Compulsion and command performance ruins the beauty of sex.

Compulsory physical activity does not constitute due benevolence. Dissatisfaction and boredom at home can engender a search for satisfaction somewhere else. Satisfaction and true intimacy will not be found anywhere else. Temporary excitement will be, but there will be a great deal of pain associated with it. Pain, soul turmoil and repercussions which can last for a lifetime. Satisfaction and lasting excitement without repercussions cannot be found in illicit sex.

No lasting satisfaction for sex outside of God's boundaries. There is an exhilaration with being on the hunt and catching; but then the problems, instability and pain begin. The husband is not eliciting true love when sex is obligatory; sex can become mechanical and unfeeling. A lack of capacity for integrity and virtue love in the single person. It is both spouses who owe a due benevolence. His benevolence is not to demand sex from his wife. A husband must remain gracious, patient and considerate; he cannot force it and demand it; sex is her response. It cannot be forced or compelled. When it is forced, then it becomes grudging compliance or she may simply refuse; but there is no love response. Sex is the expression of everything great in marriage becomes hollow. A woman's response is dependent upon man's initiation of virtue love. His mental attitude of virtue love precedes sexual activity. Within the boundaries of marriage, as initiation and response, it becomes one of the great wonders of life. Outside of those boundaries, it is unsatisfying.

1Cor. 7:3 1Peter 3:7

Lesson #326

Wednesday March 29, 2006

Daylight savings begins Saturday night/Sunday morning.

One of the legalists no doubt asked, what about all of these guys fornicating at the temple of Aphrodite? The key word is ἄπτω,

The impact of marriage is covered in v. 2; marriage is the framework for sexual passion and the intimacy which goes with it. A man should have a wife and vice versa; this is protection against the perversion of God's wonderful invention of sex for husband and wife.

Paul will state the divine plan for this physical aspect of marriage in v. 3:

duty or that which is due someone, responsibility. We know there is a responsibility, because the passage tells us, but you may ask, which do I have? In this context, it is about marriage and it carries more of a significance than simply a responsibility. It carries the context of due benevolence; every spouse owes the duty of due benevolence to the other one. This is not that one does the wash, and another one takes out the garbage. This is unequivocally a sexually duty. This is a sexual benevolence bestowed upon one another. Those who have been married for a long time or who are mad at each other. There is a responsibility here.

This verse is in the context of marriage and sexuality as protection. It protects against the temptation to being aroused and participating in πορνεία outside of marriage. Sex in marriage is a deterrent to sex outside of marriage. The due benevolence is protection for one another—a conjugal protection for one another.

The physical is always preceded by a mental attitude; without the right mental attitude, then there is no fulfillment involved; there is simply mating between animals.

What is This?

1. We have seen that the husband's due benevolence in marriage is αγαπαω = love, virtue love and all that goes with it.
2. His attitude that affords protection as the marriage progresses. We are not talking about the first year, but the years as they roll by. This is enduring devotion; this is not devotion from time to time; it includes dedication to her. . The man must dedicate some time for her, just as he dedicates time to himself. Eph. 5:33
3. He must exhibit the humility of grace orientation. His attitude is grace orientation; he is gracious. He has graciousness towards his wife.
4. He must have impersonal love. He must have impersonal love in the face of all that comes up in marriage, from the outside and from with in. Impersonal love must be a precedent in the mind of the husband.
5. He must exhibit leadership and authority, but always qualified in αγαπαω. Authority without love is tyranny.
6. These attitudes are due benevolence to his wife. That is his responsibility. Unequivocally, this is the attitude of the husband.
7. The wife has a due benevolence to her husband in these same areas, and hers comes from response and respect. She then has the same qualities and the same mental attitude which is present in her husband.
8. From this comes the physical response; great sex. The attitude comes first.

1Cor. 7:3 Let the husband give due kindness to the wife, and likewise the wife also to the husband.

You husbands, live with your wives in an understanding as with a weaker vessel. That Paul is just a misogynist. It sounds condescending, but it is not. Usually the woman is physically weaker than the man, all things being equal. Of the same age, with the same amount of exercise, being approximately the same size, the man will usually be stronger.

In some areas, women are stronger. This often makes people who are skeptical anyway, makes them doubt Scripture. Some people think that this Bible is not true, and that this is just some sexist viewpoint from the 1st century. So, how can this be explained? This statement has inflamed many a feminist—even Christian femininists. Now consider, who is your authority? Yourself or the Bible? If you are reacting right now, then you are not responding to Bible doctrine. Vessel is a metaphorical statement. A woman is like a vessel. When this verse was written, a vessel is a piece of pottery with an exterior, which is what you normally see. This is like the body of a woman. This is what you see on the outside. A vessel is designed to carry something. A vessel is all about what it is carrying. A vessel is designed to carry something. What is inside the body of a woman is her soul; her nature. The soul is the essence of a person; the very nature of a person. The soul contains that which is in the image of God. With a sin nature, it is totally depraved. The sin nature has depraved the essence of mankind. Whatever it is that is a part of the woman's nature is weaker than the man. What makes the woman a weaker vessel? It is, that she is, by nature, a responder.

In the past, the responsive position has been covered as different, but not as weaker. If the woman is more mature, the woman will have spiritual strength beyond him. However, there is no gender when it comes to advancing to spiritual maturity. This is not what the context is all about.

What is Weaker?

1. The wife is the subordinate in marriage.
2. The woman is maleable to both good and bad stimuli.
3. She is weaker than, in that she is dependent upon the man for her responsiveness.
4. Understand, this is not a negative quality; it is part of the woman's role. Paul is not saying, you're weaker, I'm stronger.
5. Ironically, in the midst of a woman's weakness, the woman is strong in fulfilling the divine design. Weaker vessel is the divine design; when she fulfills that, she is stronger as a person. She fulfills her responsive role.
6. Women have to operate with their weaker nature; they have to. They must attribute it to God, Who designed male and female souls. Therefore, to fight it is to fight the divine design. In any case, this is not a negative characteristic.
7. The negative: when the woman tries to overcome her weakness—her subordinate role as defined by Scripture—by assuming the man's role; then she becomes weak in a negative way; she abdicates responsiveness. She has truly become weak.
8. In reaction, the woman is weak emotionally; when the woman departs from her responsive, weaker nature, she becomes weak emotionally.
9. As a weaker vessel, she is under authority, because of her responsive nature. She has less authority in the marriage relationship.
10. Authority-orientation toward a woman's husband is strength for the woman. In this weakness, she is strong. As Paul said, "When I am weak, then I am strong."
11. Without authority-orientation, the woman is weak, in the negative understanding of that word. She is weak because she loses direction and becomes more vulnerable to deceit and seduction. This is mostly the seduction of human viewpoint. This can lead to physical seduction. This is how Satan attacked the woman; subtle seduction, the snake played to her weakness.

It is much easier to interpret Scripture when we compare it to other Scriptures.

Husbands must understand this and always take this weakness into account.

What Does it Mean: Taking Weakness into Account?

1. This is a part of the husband's protection, which implies that there is an inherent weakness. The husband is the stronger in his protection.
2. The man must cultivate the woman's response, soulishly—her nature, and then physically.
3. This is the way the woman is designed; as a weaker vessel. This is what makes the woman wonderful in marriage. This is like a building with some flexibility built into

it. It may be seen as weak, as it might bow in heavy wind; but this is the inherent strength of the building. It is strong in its weakness (flexibility).

4. When a woman has nothing to respond to (from her husband), the woman becomes vulnerable. That is the weakness—the real weakness. She is vulnerable to seduction, unless she responds to the Word of God. There is no vulnerability for the vessel which responds to the Word of God.
5. When the husband abdicates his due benevolence, then he magnifies the woman's weakness, because he is no longer fulfilling his duty or responsibility to virtue love. The husband must treat his wife in consideration as she is a weaker vessel; and when she responds, she is strong. Hence comes responsiveness; within these confines is great physical pleasure. They are physically fulfilled by each other. They are intimate and protected. That is their due benevolence to each other.

As the κεφαλη, the husband must love her so intensely, that she knows he is taking care of her needs, and she is fulfilled, body and soul by his initiation. She reciprocates and is truly beautiful in her response to him.

1Peter 3:7: Likewise, husbands, live together according to knowledge, giving honor to the wife as to the weaker vessel, the female, as truly being co-heirs together [spiritual equals] of the grace of life, not cutting off your prayers.

She responds with respect, deference, and her own love. Without this formula of love and counter love, sex will never provide the true pleasure and the true satisfaction for which it was created.

1Peter 3:7 1Cor. 7:3

Thursday March 30, 2006

The man who considers himself first and his wife second cannot deliver on personal love. There is inevitable friction between those who spend so much time together and there are all the problems which weigh on any family from the outside. When due benevolence is the husband's attitude, the environment for the intimacy of lovemaking is created. The wife responds with her own attitude of due benevolence and the sensual environment created. Bobby is not talking about wine and roses—that is the result—he is talking about what happens in the soul.

1Peter 3:7 says more about the husband than the wife. The husband needs to understand the essence of a woman; a man needs this knowledge. Without this, you cannot give the woman due benevolence. Due benevolence is based upon that quality of the woman being a weaker vessel. Although this sounds condescending, it is not. The husband must understand his leadership role that the wife is a weaker vessel.

Weaker Vessel/Due Benevolence

1. Weaker vessel is not weaker morally, mentally or spiritually; nor does it mean that the woman is inferior.
2. Weaker vessel is the status of the wife as subordinate in marriage; the responder. That is her status.
3. The woman is weaker only in one sense: the woman is dependent upon the man for her responsiveness to him. Feminism hates the idea of responsiveness and dependence of the woman.
4. Dependence for responsiveness is not a negative quality nor is it an inferior quality.
5. It is a divinely designed quality that is the nature of the woman in relation to the husband.
6. If the husband cannot lead, won't lead, or the woman has no husband, then the woman needs to respond to Bible doctrine.
7. If the woman has no leadership to respond to, even though she is classified as a weaker vessel, she still has no excuse to abdicate her responsiveness (even when there is no person to respond to). It is the woman's nature to be a responder.
8. The Christian woman always has the option to respond to truth; not to lies or to human viewpoint. If she responds to lies or human viewpoint, then she will demonstrate the weaker vessel situation.
9. The woman is divinely designed to be under the authority of her husband; so, the husband has a certain responsibility; in fact, they both have a responsibility of due benevolence.
10. Without authority orientation to her husband, she is vulnerable to deceit and seduction.
11. By way of illustration, this was the situation with Ishshah in the garden; she rejected truth in the form of the teaching of Jesus Christ in the garden; and she rejected the mandate, "Do not eat of the tree."
12. Her vulnerability to Satan's deception was her weakness. This is why Satan went after her. Satan went after the responder, and she responded to carefully crafted lies from the father of lies.

Application from 1Peter 3:7

1. When the husband is weak in leadership, the woman then becomes weaker.
2. The man's failure in leadership plays to her weakness.
3. Good leadership in the husband provides protection for the woman in her role. She needs protection in her role as the weaker vessel; and she depends upon the husband's leadership and Bible doctrine and protect her as the weaker vessel.

4. The husband's leadership protects her. This does not make her a lesser being; she is a fellow heir in the grace of life with men. Men must understand her and we must have spiritual strength so that she can respond to us.
5. The husband must cultivate her response with an attitude of virtue love. Good leadership in the Christian husband is always based on spiritual advance. You cannot have capacity for virtue love unless you advance spiritually. Advancing spiritually is the key to everything.
6. The more mature the husband is, the wiser and more protective is his leadership. He is not a pushover and he is not a tyrant.
7. When the husband abdicates his due benevolence responsibility, then he magnifies the weakness of the woman. You are exacerbating her weakness.
8. Without due benevolence, you are no longer fulfilling your duty, your responsibility to give her virtue love. If it is not based on real capacity, it is the blind leading the blind.
9. The conjugal relationship between husband and wife will not be an expression of love without due benevolence. Furthermore, it will never provide the true pleasure and satisfaction that God designed it to be. Without initiating virtue love, without having grace orientation, without impersonal love, there is a good chance that you will be looking for greener pastures. You may not consummate unfaithfulness, but it will still fester in your soul. If you do not have due benevolence, then you cannot comply with 1Cor. 7:3—their due benevolence is reciprocal.

Then we have the verb to fulfill. Present active imperative of ἀποδίδμι = to give from the ultimate source of yourself [your soul; not your body]. Giving reflects the relationship between the attitude of love and sex. The husband must give virtue love from the ultimate source of his soul. The wife must respond from the ultimate source of her soul. She responds to the ultimate source of his soul. Consumation, contentment and protection; this is the whole package from beginning until end, until death do you part. Sex is not just a favor between husband and wife; it is what a husband and wife owe one another; it originates in their souls, from the origin of their souls.

The woman is dependent upon the husband fulfilling his role. The marriage is maintained by them both functioning within their roles. No man can be a great lover who carries jealousy, envy, hatred, arrogance, childishness or self-centeredness in his soul. There are a lot of wives out there saddled with a husband who is a child. If the man abuses her verbally or physically, then that kills a woman's responsiveness; it exacerbates her weakness. That pattern will kill the soul love of a woman. Those mental attitude sins destroy the marriage. The sex will be grudging and completely unfulfilling. The only thing a woman can respond to then is Bible doctrine; because her husband is has ruined her soul response. Too often the partners point at the other and blame them; but you can only change yourself. Doctrine in your soul will allow you to fulfill your divinely assigned role. If you miss something in that relationship, then there will be something else to take the place of that relationship.

You can enumerate all of their problems, that takes you nowhere. It must take place in your soul. Bobby blasted husbands for the mental attitude sins, but the woman can incite the man's mental attitude sins for her manipulative purpose.

Some women think that if they make their husbands jealous and envious, then he will see how desirable that she is to another man or men, and that he will give her more attention or consideration. This is an example of the weaker vessel manipulating the man. In envy and jealousy, the man is not going to be a better leader or lover. Mental attitude sins and manipulation do not engender a due benevolence response. Do not try to manipulate a man in the way that you want him to act. That tactic of manipulation often drives him further away. The inciting of jealousy will never achieve in the long run what it was intended to achieve (and, of course, inciting jealousy can be simple vindictiveness).

Summation

1. In case we did not know, sex is an occasional event in the time line of life; it is occasional. When stacked up next to the other minutes of life, it occupies a short period of time.
2. The success of sex depends upon a moment-by-moment mental attitude of due benevolence; that is critical and that must go on consistently. Success does not depend upon a recurring, persistent, biological urge.
3. The expression of love in sex is only periodic.
4. The attitude which inspires the intimate, physical relationship is a constant. The act is periodic but the attitude is continual.
5. The attitude must be nurtured, loved and cherished on a moment-by-moment basis. These are the attitudes that we must display.
6. If we do not display these attitudes, then your marriage will be a failure once the immediate rush is over.
7. The moment-by-moment attitude is due benevolence fulfillment from the source of our own souls.
8. This relationship can only be directed toward one person; this cannot be directed toward more than one person. If you try to split it, you will have none of it. You cannot flaunt God's design for marriage and have it be anything other than destructive. If we are incapable of due benevolence, then we are incapable of maintaining protection of a wonderful marriage. If we want a great marriage, then we need to concentrate on due benevolence.

1Cor. 7:3 Let the husband give due kindness to the wife, and likewise the wife also to the husband.

Bobby hopes that we will look back on this verse and understand what we owe our spouses.

1Cor. 7:3–4 Gen. 3:15

Lesson #328

Sunday 1 April 2, 2006

Bob was 88 yesterday; for some reason, I did not know that April 1 was his birthday.

V. 4 gives the reason for the directive found in v. 3. We are dealing with conjugal responsibility:

1Cor. 7:3 Let the husband fulfill his due benevolence to the wife, and likewise the wife also to the husband.

In the husband, v. 3 first involves a virtue love attitude, which includes enduring devotion and dedication and primary consideration for her above yourself. Another part of this attitude is humility and grace orientation, which is the cause for humility in the soul of the believer. This provides protection and security in the soul of the woman. An arrogant, self-centered husband cannot render due benevolence to anyone other than himself. Impersonal love handles all the internal and external frictions of marriage. The internal frictions are the individual problems which come up between man and woman in marriage; and the external frictions are those which come up outside of their relationship, but impacts their relationship.

The man is to give due benevolence from the ultimate source of himself. The woman must also exhibit virtue love. Her love is manifested by respect, admiration and response toward her husband. It is a mutual situation. There is mutual responsibility. That is the obligation. It is a mental attitude of due benevolence. Unlike Ishshah in the garden and her reaction to her husband in the garden. She gave respect and deference and response to another person—the serpent. She became vulnerable to lies and deceit. She had no protection under that circumstance. She foisted these lies and her disobedience upon Adam, as he had abdicated his role as the leader, as the authority in their relationship. They had no due benevolence between them. The result was, they were thrown out of the garden; they died spiritually. They now possessed a sin nature; they went into a state of total depravity. This state continues with all of us. We are all a part of the fall.

Adam and the woman were given an immediate solution to their fall. Adam did not want to face God, as he was aware that he was naked. God met with Adam and the woman, and to the serpent. After chewing out the man and the woman,

Gen 3:15 And I will put enmity between you [the serpent] and the woman, and between your seed [Satan's seed] and her Seed; He [the woman's seed, Jesus Christ] will bruise your head, and you shall bruise His heel. This was spoken right after God cursed the serpent.

Throughout Scripture, we find the term seed applied to the coming Messiah. Bruising the serpent on the head is a killing blow. This is the total defeat of Satan at the cross. Satan would bruise our Lord on the heel, which is an injury delivered at the cross; but it was not a bruise which would destroy mankind or the Seed of the woman.

Adam and the woman were embarrassed and naked in the garden; and God still gives them hope. The object of their faith would save them; they believed in this promise, and this was counted to them as righteousness. When they believed in the promise of Gen. 3:15, they are saved. There are no requirements for works in Gen. 3:15.

Adam and the woman expressed faith in their coming Savior and they were saved, receiving spiritual life through regeneration. We have the same promise, although we look back on the Messiah Who has arrived and has done His work on the cross. The object of faith is exactly the same.

Back to the wife's due benevolence.

When the woman leaves the role of subordinate, she will attempt to accomplish Gen. 3:16; she must exhibit impersonal love, just as the man must exhibit impersonal love. This is a part of her due benevolence. She expresses her due benevolence differently; hers is a response and his is an initiation.

The immediate subject of v. 3 is sex; conjugal relations. The husband creates the environment for their mutual response. This sensual environment is not soft lights and roses; this sensual environment is created in the soul.

1Cor. 7:3 Let the husband fulfill his due benevolence to the wife, and likewise the wife also to the husband.

The husband and wife are not physical islands. They do not have the right to be sexually separate. Husbands, do not become monks; wives, do not enter into convents. Forced abstinence for a conjugal relationship is deprivation. This is talking to men and women both. Withholding sex is deprivation for both genders; the root cause is in the soul.

V. 4 leaves behind, for a moment, the chain of command. There is a certain equality and flexibility of response and counter-response in sexuality. The husband or wife can initiate sex. Either can respond to the sexuality of the other. It does not matter who initiates it; and if they mutually agree upon it, then there is no guilt.

Εξουσιαδζω = to have authority over; to have power over. Bobby does not want us to misunderstand what is here in this verse. This is in the context of a conjugal relationship. These phrases are an elegant paradox. How can our bodies be our own—it might be the only thing that we actually possess on our own—and yet, we cannot do whatever we want with it. We do not own our own bodies in conjugal relationships. In sexuality, separate ownership of your body ceases. He does not have the power over his own body; and she does not have the power over her own body. This is not slavery or the loss of your property; this is a beautiful way to describe the marriage relationship. Physical intimacy is, you do not even own your own body. However, this is not slavery. This does not give license to sexual slavery. Sex is a gift in the garden and it is still a wonderful gift.

Sex in Marriage/Who Owns Your Body

1. Sex is about pleasure in marriage, but not about self-gratification. It is not about our own pleasure.
2. Sex is the fulfillment of one's due benevolence to one's spouse. It is not the attitude but the fulfillment of the attitude.

3. This means that the direction of pleasure and fulfillment is toward the other person. Sex is not a selfish thing.
4. The spouse owns your body in marriage. It is there for their pleasure, not yours.
5. In fulfilling the other person, then you yourself are fulfilled. The pleasure is mutual, even though it is designed to go toward the other person.
6. This is a mutual pleasure based upon consideration for one another. One of the qualities of virtue love is consideration for each other.
7. It is a pleasure always directed toward the other person.
8. That is the mental attitude of physical pleasure for husband and wife: graciousness, consideration, due benevolence. There is no self-centeredness in sexuality. Neither body is complete without the other. Sex portrays the beauty of interdependence.

Due benevolence is only directed toward your spouse. Searching for others is a matter of self-gratification.

1Cor. 7:4 The wife does not have authority of her own body, but the husband. And likewise also the husband does not have authority over his own body, but the wife.

1Cor. 7:4–5

Sunday 2 April 2, 2006

Bob at times could be very emotional; and what would keep him on track would be to say, "Open your Bibles to..." or the recitation of those 3 verses.

The elegant paradox, which is 1Cor. 7:4: the wife and the husband own each other. "How can that be elegant? That husband of mine owns me?" He owns the wife in sex. Sex is about pleasure in marriage, but not about your own self-gratification. The elegant part is, if you give pleasure to your spouse, you will receive pleasure as well. The duty is not just an obligation, but it is an attitude of benevolence. It is their cocoon of intimacy and love. You cannot leave out the conjugal aspect of a relationship. This due benevolence carries over to a physical relationship. If married, this is a passage we ought to look at every day. What Paul has done with this passage is sheer genius, presenting something which is a delicate subject. Conjugal relations were not just misunderstood, but had been completely perverted.

The Genius of Paul in v. 4

1. Paul has elevated the physical act of sex to an honor code. It is an intimacy between husband and wife.
2. How do we know this is an honor code? It reads stop depriving each other in v. 5.
3. Depriving one another is an infraction of your responsibility in marriage. When you neglect or forget it, it is an infraction of the due benevolence honor code.
4. Who would have thought that deprivation of the marriage partner is a violation of your honor code? This puts sex in a whole different light, putting sex in a whole new category far above self-gratification. The object of pleasure is always toward your spouse, not toward yourself. You give them pleasure, and in so doing, you are fulfilled. This is the way sex was designed to be. If you have never thought beyond your own personal pleasure in sex, then you have missed the best part.

The battle of the sexes is nothing more than carnality and reversionism. The true honor code is the merging of the spouses into one. The one flesh of the spouse belongs to you. It is the old sin nature which tempts and initiates discord between husband and wife. It is the lack of due benevolence. It is all of this which is wrapped up into one package which makes marriage great. If you do not understand this, you are missing out in one of the great relationships in life.

Sex as an expression of love is one thing; but marriage built upon a foundation of sex is a trap; often a death trap for the marriage. If it is all based on just the physical, it is going nowhere. Due benevolence is your honor code. Sexuality must be a response. Physical attractiveness declines with age. Think about your potential partner 30 years from now and see if they are still attractive to you. If it is based on physical attraction, then no one will seem to be attractive 30 years down the road. Sexuality becomes so much less important as you get down the road. As marriage gets older, it should get better. Outer beauty, which is a part of the initial attraction. Obviously, there should be some attraction between the two people; however, the overriding principle is what is in your soul. Doctrine in the soul and the advance to spiritual maturity gives inner beauty.

It is the spiritual life which makes marriage great; not great sex. That spiritual life becomes stronger and stronger as you metabolize doctrine. When the physical fades, there must be something else there.

1Cor. 7:4 The wife does not have authority of her own body, but the husband. And likewise also the husband does not have authority over his own body, but the wife.

With v. 5, we will see a slightly different aspect. Μη αποστερω = do not steal, do not defraud, do not rob. It is not just deprivation, but it is theft; you are robbing your spouse. You must not fail to give your due benevolence. Your spouse owns your body in conjugal rights.

Some legalists wanted to stop sex even in marriage. Sex was a part of the phallic cults, and if sex was stopped altogether, then it would not carry over into the temple. Just abstain from all of it, and there will be no problems anymore, which was the position of the legalists in Corinth. Their solution was a perversion which Paul said must cease. Abstinence in marriage is counterproductive and dangerous; it makes the problems of sexual activity outside the marriage increase.

Depriving the partner of sex is actually fraud; a violation of the physical honor code; a withholding of what is owed; a failure to show due benevolence. There is no protection from straying with that attitude.

Sex in marriage is a good thing; it must be accompanied with the mental attitude of due benevolence. Do not deprive yourselves of the mental attitude of love; moment-by-moment expression of respect; the loving qualities which develop between two people in the course of a due benevolence relationship. You must have the first in order to have the second.

The wife is not an automaton who provides a meal, cleans up after you, and provides sex on demand. A moment-by-moment response/initiation is built between the two of you. It is freely given; never out of obligation, grudgingly or of necessity. Impersonal love is part of marriage. Disagreements and problems should never affect the due benevolence and the soul rapport.

Departing from this means that soul and physical rapport will go by the wayside. To make the physical work beyond the honeymoon requires time and effort, and it is based upon soul rapport. It is not the physical which requires work; it is the soul rapport which is required.

There is a time-out for the physical, based upon the second half of v. 5. There are 3 conditions required for a sexual time out. (1) Mutual consent of the spouses. Except by agreement. Εκ συμφωνος = a harmonious sound; an agreement. Nothing is more harmonious than an agreement between spouses. Agreement is always a harmonious consent. Both agree, both gladly agree; they agree that it is a good thing. Εκ = by, from. Μαιτι ει ον = perhaps. A combination of 3 particles. Stop defrauding one another; perhaps, from an agreement for a time,... This phrase mirrors v. 4. Stop robbing each other of what belongs to you; however, you may perhaps do so for a time...

There is mutual consent and there is also a spiritual reason. The physical does not compare with the spiritual factor. Paul is presenting a little different idea.

This is prayer between two people, husband and wife. Stop having sex so that you two can pray. This is a mutual time of prayer. This is the time when there is a situation which affects both of you. This is talking about a prayer meeting of two. You might even separate and pray separately and silently; but it would be about the same subject.

The husband is supposed to be a leader; there is an intimacy which is found nowhere else. That is a spiritual aspect of your life which is found nowhere else.

1Cor. 7:5 Do not deprive one another, unless by agreement for a time, that you may be free for prayer. And come together again on the same place, that Satan may not tempt you through your incontinence.

1Cor. 7:5

Lesson #330

Wednesday April 5, 2006

10–15 min late

Since the wife has ownership rights, she can do with her property what she wants. Only in the area of sex is the subordination rules set apart. The roles of husband and wife are not valid in this one area of their relationship. Either one can become the initiator or the aggressor in the conjugal arena. The other pays deference to the initiation by not denying. Bobby is not saying that paying deference means that, every time there is a desire, that there is consummation. There might be tenderness, might involve holding one another, or any form of physical intimacy. Sometimes, paying deference to one's spouse is giving them spouse. The resumption of conjugal relations should not be abandoned. The failure to not give due benevolence to the spouse. You cannot have power over, or ownership, without responsibility. Otherwise, it becomes tyranny. When due benevolence is not rendered, then there is tyranny. Christian marriage has a super-abundance of ability when it comes to due benevolence.

Unbelievers can have a semblance of what believers have, and if there is any establishment in their modus operandi, and if there is any graciousness in them, then they can have a marriage similar to what believers can have.

The responsibility of physical ownership of another person's body is huge responsibility, requires due benevolence on each side. Ownership is trusting, confident, and fulfills perfectly what God designed—two bodies coalescing. There is an honor code involved in sex. An honor code is necessary in relation to everyone else. There is a binding principle of responsibility and obligation toward the one over whom you have power. You never mistreat that one who is under your control. That is a prerequisite for the honor code.

Two become one flesh in soul and body. If there is arrogance and self-centeredness, then they cannot become one flesh. No spouse has the right of deprivation, if the other spouse has the power over his or her body. You have no right to deprive the other. To deny is an act of authority disorientation. If your body is owned, there is an inherent authority in that ownership. To deny is also an act of self-centeredness. We always seem to consider ourselves first and foremost. Husbands, you are to love your husbands as Christ loved the church. There is a great honor code with both husband and wife. Deprivation is the present active imperative of αποστερω = to steal, to defraud, to rob. Do not steal or defraud or rob from the one who owns your body by refusing. Refusal amounts to theft. To deprive reflects a rift between husband and wife; a gulf which continues to widen.

Bobby wants to caveat something here. Separation is demanded where brutality exists. You do not owe due benevolence to one who is brutal. Neither spouse is expected to submit to sexual slavery. However, neither should you withhold for punishment, friction or arguments. Furthermore, you should not use sex as a bargaining chip. Abstinence in marriage is dangerous. Abstinence in marriage is dangerous where due benevolence exists. Trivial conflicts often melt away under due benevolence and physical contact. The due benevolence must exist throughout the marriage; it cannot suddenly be inserted.

Sex is not for manipulation, punishment or whatever. That will exacerbate frustration. One might look to find a false fulfillment somewhere else. When you go outside of marriage to find pleasure, it will not be found.

There is a designated time-out. Therefore, this time out is not deprivation. It does not fall under the auspices of deprivation. There are 3 conditions required for a sexual time out. (1) Mutual consent (συμφωνος = harmonious sound, harmony, agreement, symphony); there is a preposition of means: εκ; sometimes there is a string of words which are idiomatic: α μητι ον = perhaps (Perhaps by an agreement).

Paul uses these 3 particles to indicate that this should not be overdone. The point is, this is a temporary situation. The time out must be carefully considered by both parties and agreed upon, and it must be for a very good reason. (2) This time-out must be for a good reason, e.g., spiritual growth. However, this cannot be overdone. You cannot use this against your spouse. Time must be always set aside for God; spiritual growth cannot be neglected and spiritual growth is the key to a good marriage. The focus of this passage is on physical due benevolence. There is no permanent abstention for spiritual purposes; only a temporary time out.

Next, we have a purpose clause, which gives us a purpose for calling a halt. ἵνα = that, so that. Σκολαζω = to have time for; to devote oneself. Several manuscripts have fasting, which does not belong there. We do find προσευχη = prayer. This is not just normal, individual prayer throughout the course of a day. This is a period of very concentrated prayer. This is prayer which might affect husband and wife together.

This prayer can be done together or separately; however, this is about a matter concerning both of you. Bobby's opinion is that there is a time for out loud prayer with one another. This can be a very great part of marriage—a prayer done together. That is a fantastic intimacy, which is greater than the physical intimacy. This is an opportunity for the husband to lead, even if they pray separately. This is not an option for spouses who are not spiritually like-minded. That would be a missing piece in the relationship.

The 3rd condition is that it be temporary.

1Cor. 7

Lesson #none

Thursday April 6, 2006

Bobby was sick; no class.

1Cor. 7:3–5

Lesson #331

Sunday 1 April 9, 2006

Due benevolence include impersonal love.

1Cor. 7:3 Let the husband give due kindness to the wife, and likewise the wife also to the husband.

Εξουσιαζω = power, authority, ownership. Each has power over their spouse's body. This is great authority.

1Cor. 7:4 The wife does not have authority of her own body, but the husband. And likewise also the husband does not have authority over his own body, but the wife.

Since the husband has power and authority over the wife's body; and vice versa, then they should not deprive one another.

There should only be separation from sex by mutual agreement. Αποστέρω = deprivation. This carries a more intense meaning than deprivation. It has to do with defrauding, stealing, robbing. Fraud means that you have taken back the power over your own body by your spouse. You are bound to nurture your conjugal relation as a soul intimacy with your spouse.

The legalists of Corinth made a call to stop all sexual activity, whether in marriage or not. This is their solution to all the church libertines. However, this is an overreaction and not a viable reaction. Legalism is never a workable solution. Legalism always favors self-righteousness. Legalism frequently inflicts solutions with consequences which are exactly the opposite of their intentions. Deprivation often causes spouses to seek sexual fulfillment outside of marriage. This will damage marriage and make adultery more likely rather than less likely.

There is, however, a legitimate cessation; a legitimate time-out. This cannot be classified as deprivation. This is the exception to the mandate given above. There are 3 conditions set forth in v. 5: (1) Mutual consent; in deference to one another, mutually agree to take time apart from one another sexually; two people must agree to stop conjugal relations for an important reason. Paul will give them a reason and a license to do so. There is no agreement here to permanently forgo conjugal relations. (2) Here, the reason given is a spiritual factor. This emphasizes the importance of the conjugal relations and not giving them up, except under these circumstances. Time must always be set aside for the Lord. Time must also be found for one another. Only for a very good reason is it permissible for both spouses to say, let's take a time out.

Προσευχη = prayer. This is devoting yourself to prayer for your time out. This is prayer for a matter that is pending and affects both the husband and wife. This is prayer for a particular friction in the home, or for financial situations, or for the children, or for an opportunity to witness to family or friends. This is taking time to pray together in isolation from others and possibly together. The greatest aspect of life is knowing to depend upon God for everything (as opposed to depending upon one another). This teamwork of service can be found in no other way. Not only a request to God, but there exists a soul intimacy between one another.

The third and final condition is, this time out is going to be temporary. Και παλιν = and again. Plus the present active subjunctive of ειμι = to be. And once again you may be together... Purpose clause begins with ἵνα = that; αἰραζω = to tempt. This is more than the sin nature tempting us; Satan's temptation is in connection with your marriage.

We all understand temptation; however, here, the great deceiver is involved.

1Cor. 7:5 Do not deprive [defraud, rob] one another, unless by agreement for a time, that you may be free for prayer. And come together again on the same place, that Satan may not tempt you through your incontinence.

1Cor. 7:5–7

Sunday 2 April 9, 2006

There are 3 conditions for taking a time out from conjugal relations: (1) mutual agreement; (2) there must be a good reason for this cessation (e.g., prayer); and (3) this is temporary.

The problem is Satan if this is not temporary. Satan is not interested in us, except under conditions like this. "Be careful, lest Satan tempt you" Paul herein warns.

There are temptations for all of us every day; this is a subjunctive. An interesting mood for this verb. Maybe we will be tempted and maybe not. There is a great danger as the 3rd condition, as Satan, the great tempter, might tempt you. the roaring lion who goes about this earth seeking ways that he might devour us. Satan can break up marriages and this is in the context of sexuality. In this area, Satan can be a factor in our lives. It is not just our sin nature which tempts us, but Satan himself. Why does Paul mentioned the great deceiver and the great tempter himself. It was Satan who subverted and disrupted the very first marriage. It is always Satan's strategy to attack marriage. It is very important for a husband and wife to be a team and Satan seeks to tempt and to destroy marriage. Marriage represents a corporate defeat or a corporate victory in the angelic conflict. There are no more difficult conditions than marriage and no more wonderful conditions than marriage. It is not just who you marry but the way that you handle marriage in your life. Marriage is the closest relationship of our lives. Breaking up marriage is subverting God's design for leadership and authority and response; so this is key with Satan. Satan subverted authority and leadership and the response of the woman between Adam and Eve. Sex is physical protection against breaking the marital bond. Resuming conjugal relations is a very important aspect for maintaining this bond. This maintains your corporate victory in the angelic conflict. Do not neglect your conjugal benevolence in your marriage. Satan will be glad to destroy our marriage. This mandate is an attempt to keep the marriage together in its correct bounds. There is no other way for a corporate victory. What happens when you rob or defraud one another? Paul understands the physical drive of individuals, loss of self-control can be a result, which means going outside of the marriage bonds for sex. For various reasons, anger, etc., one or both partners stray; and you lose more than your lifetime partner; you also lose a great victory in the angelic conflict, which can result in lifetime loss.

1Cor. 7:5 Do not deprive [defraud, rob] one another, unless by agreement for a time, that you may be free for prayer. And come together again on the same place, that Satan may not tempt you through your incontinence.

Paul is not wishy-washy; so this next verse might seem perplexing and out of character for our beloved, dogmatic Paul. Paul lays it on the line. This is God's plan; live with it is his approach.

The key is a relative pronoun. He or she refer back to an antecedent. Relative pronouns are more difficult. This can refer to almost anything which has been said previously. It can be a concept, a command, a statement. So we have to determine what does this refer to?

Επιταγή is what it is not. In any case, it is not an order or a command. This directly refers to συγγομή = something which is permissible; something which is a concession. What has Paul conceded? What it sounds like, at first, all of the previous sex instruction is simply being qualified. It is like he is saying, "This sex talk is one way to approach things; my suggestion."

The Options of What τοῦτο Refers to

It has to be Paul conceding to a separation for a time. Bobby lists the options and throws them out from time to time.

1. Once again you may be together; it is not an order that you may come together again; it is a suggestion, an option. But this does not fit the context of Satan tempting us. Back in v. 2, the problem is immoralities, and sex in marriage defeats these immoralities. Part of the divine design between husband and wife is that they do come together. Due benevolence is definitely to be accomplished in marriage; that is not conceded; it is mandated.
2. All of v. 5 is just a concession to conjugal relations, which are permissible in marriage. You are married, but sex is not a requirement. You can separate sexually for tons of different reasons, and you can be therefore be separated for unlimited periods of times for any of these good reasons. However, this does not fit with the imperative nature of vv. 3–4. There is a mandate of due benevolence, so there is no maybe about v. 5.
3. This refers back to v. 2; marriage is desirable; and God concedes that you can get marriage, but it is not mandatory. It is okay to be marriage; you don't have to be married, but I will concede to you that you can be. They are a distance apart, but these do fit together also when considering what comes up with v. 7. First concession: it is okay to be married; second concession: it is okay to be separate as well (single and celibate). This is not a mandate; not everyone can be like Paul. Paul concedes that one can be celibate. Being celibate is necessary for Paul's concentrated ministry. Paul is not saying that one or the other state is a necessity. For some, the concession to be married; for others, the concession to remain single. Paul is not saying that celibacy is somehow better or holier than the marital state. "It's okay to have a husband or wife, but I would much rather that you were spiritual giants like me, without a partner; devoting more of your time to God." This is not Paul's point. Paul is writing this letter in the context of what Corinthians have written to him. The only real protection is responding to Bible doctrine rather than to πορνεία. The legalists were touting celibacy as the great approach to being a believer. They observed all of the sexual sins in Corinth, and decided, "Hey, let's just ban all sexual activity." Spirituality and spiritual growth do not come out of celibacy. Paul gives permission for sex in marriage in order to deal with the sexual deviance in Corinth. Incredible hedonists on one side and strong legalists on the other. This was a divided church. There were real problems in Corinth, and that is what Paul was addressing. Abstain from sex for a moment, and then go back to it.

The marriage class was dealt with, and now Paul will deal with the singles. Paul is not leaving the singles out of this. Paul cannot command celibacy for all Christians. Married status should not be more regarded the single status. "Being single is not for everyone; but for those who are, here is what I will permit." Paul said, "It is good for a man to have a wife and vice versa;" which leaves out all the singles. That is, it sounds like Paul is saying, "To you singles, you best get married." Paul here makes it clear that this is not his position.

Paul was a bachelor all of his life; but he had a very concentrated and sacrificial ministry for all of his life. For the sake of his writing more books and epistles than anyone else; for the sake of founding more churches than any other Apostle. For the sake of his missionary travels, Paul says it is best for him to be single. What could be more important than what Paul did; therefore, Paul says, "There are great things I am able to experience as a single believer; and I wish that you could be like I am." Paul was a single, traveling man. And he wishes all believers could have that sort of a purpose. Paul understands that the single believer has more time for concentrated service to God. Paul also knows the great rewards of such concentrated service to God. He knows the great impact and joy of spreading the gospel and the mystery doctrine; the great message and greatest doctrine that this world has ever heard. Paul is saying, "I wish you had the opportunity to know and do what I do. I am single, and it is necessary for me to do this." If only other believers could grow to maturity as Paul has and experience life as he has experienced it; with great peace and prosperity in his soul.

Some of you will be married and some of you will not be; however, God has a great plan for all of you. Paul concedes that we can be married or single. Paul is not being weak-kneed at all.

1Cor. 7:7 But I desire all men also to be as myself. But each has his own gift from God, one this way, and one that way.

1Cor. 7:6

Lesson #333

Wednesday April 12, 2006

We have an indefinite pronoun here. There were a number of verbs in this chapter in the imperative mood. “Let each man have his own wife and each woman have her own husband.” This would preclude their involvement in πορνεία.

Due benevolence is mental and physical. Stop depriving one another (a mandate for husband and wife to continue having sex). There are 3 mandates in the first 5 verses. However, by v. 6 Paul stops giving all of these mandates. Now, when Paul gives this concession, is he softening his dogmatism? Is he qualifying his mandates? Is there a nod to relativism? We are used to Paul telling us exactly what to do; we are used to getting exact guidelines so that we are not confused. But, v. 6 seems to be a curve ball coming out of left field. However, Paul is not being wishy washy; he is not conceding anything. Nevertheless, Paul is giving some sort of permission here apart from what we have had so far.

The key is the demonstrative pronoun τούτω = this, that. We use pronouns all the time, and yet do not understand them. All pronouns are used so that we do not have to continually repeat proper nouns. A pronoun stands in place of a noun; and the noun to which the pronoun refers to is called the antecedent. What we have in v. 6 is not a personal pronoun, but a demonstrative pronoun (shouldn't have called it a relative pronoun). A demonstrative pronoun is a pointer. It points toward something. The demonstrative pronoun singles out a particular noun for a reason. This should refer back to some portion of the text. This means that the writer does not have to refer back to a particular phrase and use it again and again; and a demonstrative pronoun points to that phrase.

Often the demonstrative pronoun refers to that which is nearest. We began the previous verse with this, which makes that verse and the topic of verse possibly the object of the pronoun. Stop depriving one another....no, I am not saying that by concession. That is not what is going on here. He is not conceding that this is not always necessary. Paul's purpose is to stop πορνεία by no deprivation. Therefore, τούτω does not refer to the immediate context. This makes τούτω more obscure. The husband and wife do own one another's bodies in marriage; they do owe one another due benevolence. That takes care of vv. 3–4. So, τούτω refers all the way back to v. 2. Let each man have his own wife and each woman her own husband. Marriage is not mandatory; it is not a mandatory status for all people. You don't have to be married, even though it is desirable or normal state of affairs. It is not mandatory to get married. Therefore, don't marry the first person that you see who looks acceptable. Now we have a reasonable connection, which ties together vv. 2, 6 and 7. Let each man have his own wife, and every woman have her own husband; yet, I wish that everyone was as I am [single].

1Cor. 7:6 But I say this by way of concession, not by command.

Paul needs to give principles to the unmarried, which is what he will do in v. 7. Paul was a lifelong bachelor. Paul had a great purpose in his life; unquestionably a person with a greater purpose than anyone who has ever lived. One of the things which Paul gave up was marriage (and sex). Paul was single and celibate.

Now, why would Paul wish this on anyone?

1. The single believer has more time for concentrated service to God. Nothing is more important than service to God.
2. Paul knows the rewards of such concentrated service to the Lord.
3. Paul knows in his soul the great joy and impact of spreading the gospel and joy to a lost world. We had the privilege of spreading the gospel. Paul knows what it is like to teach mystery doctrine to believers. He has the opportunity to watch those who knew nothing about the mystery doctrine and fill them in.
4. Paul wishes every believer could experience what he experiences on a daily basis. Paul is in contact with people constantly. Bobby is envious of Rick Hughes, who gets to speak with kids every day and he sees a response to the gospel day after day. He also gets to teach basic doctrine during certain periods of the week. He gets to teach what God is like; what rebound is; Who Jesus Christ is and what He has done. He evangelizes and teaches a little doctrine.
5. If only believer could grow to maturity as he has. The inspiration of the Holy Spirit; who would not want to be inspired by God the Holy Spirit? Paul is wishing that we all could have this experience. This was his gift; his life's work. He is wishing that we all could participate in this gift.
6. So, how could he not wish such a spiritual life and a fantastic service for everyone. This is the ultimate; nothing in life can equal what he does. Paul is wishing his life upon us.

Paul knows that celibacy is a pre-requisite for his situation; he wishes that other believers could be as he is; but he recognizes that is not the case. He concedes that this is not for all believers. Marriage is more the norm for all believers. Paul is not making his status a mandate for all believers. He cannot do so. This is his concession; it is only his personal desire for all believers.

It is possible that the legalists suggested that they all be celibate; to stop sex altogether, even among married people. Abstain from everything to solve all problems.

Αλλα, which is the conversative conjunction = but, except. I wish that all men were like my, but each man has his own gift from God...so you can't be like me. Paul had the most unique spiritual gift in history; he was an Apostle. Because of our own spiritual gift, we each find ourselves in different circumstances; our circumstances are related to our circumstances. Each person has his own gift from God. If you are married, then your gift functions in your married status. Our gift can function whether single or married.

Bobby knows when we've been sleeping; he knows when we're awake. The moments when we are concentrating and focusing on God's Word are the greatest moments for him. Bobby would like us to experience that; just as Paul would like others in Corinth to experience his life and spiritual blessing.

We all have our own spiritual gift and we will enjoy great spiritual moments when functioning within the realm of our own spiritual gift. Paul recognizes each to his own gift.

The gifts are by divine design. These gifts carry into the marital arena. Paul has a spiritual gift, which is the gift of Apostleship. Some call it a gift of celibacy, which it may or may not be. At least, his gift functions well in a celibate circumstance. Mark 1:30 tells us that Peter was married, so he was a married Apostle. Peter was married and Paul wasn't. The gift of celibacy is not the norm. Nor is it inherited. Marriage provides protection from πορνεία. Most pastors have a concentrated service; yet most are married. There is protection in marriage from temptation. Marriage provides protection from concentrated service. Celibacy does not make anyone any more spiritual. For them, it was a point of legalism; for Paul, it is a matter of his spiritual gift.

The Corinthians wanted to eliminate marriage; possibly sex altogether (the legalistic ones). The logical outcome is, if you are married, then separate. Or, if you are married, then stop having sex. However, the logical outcomes leave the wife exposed to temptations of πορνεία and leave the children hung out to dry.

Being single or celibate is circumstantial; it is not spiritual or spiritual maturity. It is not a state of superior holiness. We are just as much a priest in our status, married or single; as any priest wearing robes. All believers are priests (1Peter 2:5, 9). The real issue is, in single celibacy is the utilization of time. Paul's time is limited to accomplish what the Lord wants him to accomplish. Yet Paul is not complaining; he is not bitter that he does not get to experience great things that others can experience. As a married couple, it is a corporate thing. Paul lets us know that the issue is time; the single believer has more time to function in his gift. Paul could never fulfill God's plan for his life if he was married. Without a family, he had time to plan more churches. He used his genius in connection with the inspiration of the Holy Spirit. He was able to do things that no one else in the Church Age has done. Time was of the essence for him. Paul's life, under these conditions, was a supreme sacrifice; but it was not a real sacrifice for Paul, as he wishes everyone else could be like him.

1Cor. 7:7 But I desire all men also to be as myself. But each has his own gift from God, one this way, and one that way.

1Cor. 7:6–8

Lesson #334

Thursday April 13, 2006

What Paul is conceding is, being single and celibate is not a command from God; nor is being married and sexually active with your spouse.

1Cor. 7:6 But I say this by way of concession, not by command.

For believers, the marriage status is a corporate witness in the angelic conflict, which gives it an even greater purpose. Marriage is a family ministry with a built-in prep school from time to time. The Scripture does not deny marriage and neither does Paul; without marriage, there is the temptation to become involved with πορνεία. The people at Corinth need to get things under control. Paul's conclusion: sex in marriage is a good thing; sex outside of marriage is carnal, a bad thing, destructive. It is good that husbands have wives; and it is good that wives have husbands. Sex is legitimate within the parameters set by God, if it is done under the principle of due benevolence. Sex expresses the soul's due benevolence. In spite of this, Paul is a bachelor at this time and will remain a bachelor throughout his entire life. Paul goes on to write, "I wish you were single even as I am." Of course, some Corinthians, with a bad marriage, might see light at the end of the tunnel, and say, "Yes, I need to be divorced so I can be holy like Paul."

What Paul is saying sounds like a contradiction: "I want you to be single; and yet, I want you to be married." Should all the instructions concerning marriage and sex be ignored? Of course not! That is not Paul's intent. Marriage is a protection from πορνεία. The front line is the doctrine in the soul; that is the FLOT line of the soul. That is the edification complex structure of the soul. That is our greatest protection in life from everything; we can be protected from πορνεία through marriage; however, singles can be protected by doctrine in the soul.

FLOT line of the soul is doctrine in the soul; second line of defense against πορνεία is marriage. If all of this is true, then why should Paul wish for everyone to be single, like himself, even though he has affirmed that marriage is divine design. The answer is, his ministry, his concentrated spiritual life. Paul would like everyone to experience what he has experienced. Paul knows that his service is extremely concentrated.

This does not mean that the married person is not as holy or less of a Christian, because they have certain responsibilities within the marriage institution. All believers, whether married or single, have equal opportunity or equal privilege to utilize God's assets. God has given all us a spiritual gift fitted to our capabilities, abilities and circumstances. He is simply wishing that every believer could experience what he has experienced in his ministry.

Paul has had tremendous pleasure and experience in observing people go positive toward doctrine, and for them to be saved and then go on positive signals. He would like for others to know the power of his spiritual gift and to be able to enjoy his concentrated service to God. The great experiences in life have to do with our services to the Lord.

How many of us have been able to share the truth with someone and then see them respond to it. Some who teach in prep school are on the ground floor of being able to share the gospel and doctrine with little minds, the future pivot of America. Paul is being very unselfish and would want his happiness to be experienced by everyone; his intimacy with the Lord; his incredible spiritual maturity. Is this intimacy not a greater goal than intimacy with a husband or wife? Intimacy between a husband and wife is a great thing.

Paul is not showing some great distinction between himself and married people; he is not setting up two classes of Christians here. He is not saying, us celibate single people have a greater ministry. In Bobby's job, this sort of attitude is an occupational hazard. Married or single, we all have a spiritual mission in life. Married people are just as much members of the body of Christ as those who are single. Paul must make concession to marriage, as it is God's design.

Paul is not only single, but he is single-minded in his service to God. The real issue in single celibacy is the utilization of time. The single believer has more time to function with his gift, logically speaking. Paul could not fulfil God's plan for his life if he was married and had a child or more. He could not have carried out his gift of Apostleship. Under the power of the Holy Spirit, Paul made the full use of his time. Paul's life was a supreme sacrifice. He did not have the comfort of a house, where he could go home and sit on the couch with a beer. Paul never could see his children grow up. He never had the pleasure of children or seeing them grow to maturity. Those are sacrifices. He was happy in his gift. He was not frustrated by not having a spouse or a permanent home. He was not bitter, depressed or jealous of married people and families. God's grace supplied Paul with everything that he needed. He had great friends and great companions. He had a great social life when he had time. Paul was not an attractive person in looks, but he had a magnetic personality. The married believer has other obligations, different from those that Paul had. Marriage takes time; time which Paul does not have. The responsibilities of marriage take time. A woman can enhance or be a drag on a man's spiritual gift; for Paul, marriage would have been a drag on his life. For many others, it would be a blessing having a wife.

In whatever circumstance we live, we are in full-time Christian service. However, in marriage, we may not have as much time to utilize our gift. This is why different spiritual gifts are given. God has given us all spiritual gifts, which should function whether we are single or married. Gifts are given based upon the aptitudes and capabilities and circumstances of a person; gifts are matched to a person. Don't look for your gift outside your range of capabilities. You may want to communicate the truth, but if you are tongue-tied, then being an evangelist or a pastor may not be God's choice for you. All believers are in full-time Christian service; just with different gifts.

Summary of 1Cor. 7:7

1. It is wonderful to be like Paul; single with time to concentrate on his service to God.
2. For the sake of concentrated service along with the incredible experience of his life causes Paul to wish that everyone could be as he is.
3. Paul acknowledges the reality of the situation and the Biblical injunctions concerning marriage (his first concession, beginning in v. 2).
4. There are different spiritual gifts and different areas of service.
5. Some have celibacy connected with their gift, but that is not the norm; that is unusual.
6. Some have service opportunities which lie within the framework of service and family.
7. Marriage is fine; single status is fine; God has provided a spiritual gift for each one of us. The gift that we have fits our circumstances. Our only responsibility is to grow in grace and knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.

For Single Status, there are Categories of gifts:

1. There is the principle of the eunuch; some don't get married because they have no sex drive. They forgo marriage because they aren't interested; some are incapable of procreation and sex. They still have a spiritual gift which functions under these circumstances. There is speculation that Daniel was a eunuch from early on in his life, and that he had a life of concentrated service to God.
2. The spiritual gift of celibacy, which is the gift which Paul possesses, which is for very intense service. God will not give us the gift of celibacy unless He has a very good reason for doing so.
3. The principle of the law of supreme sacrifice. 1Cor. 9:5
  - a. Supreme sacrifice involves the abandonment of a completely legitimate function in life, including marriage.
  - b. The purpose of such a surrender is to more diligently serve the Lord in a specialized capacity. A missionary is a good example of this. Those who live in the primitive conditions of the mission field. Bobby always thinks of Mary Slezsher when he thinks about this. In 1895, she packed her bags and went to the west coast of Africa, primarily to the area which is now Nigeria. Her singular purpose was to bring that part of Africa out of darkness and into the light of the gospel. For years, she worked by herself in that part of Africa. There was no husband to provide for her, to provide even protection. She knew, if it was her time to go, God would take her. 1000's upon 1000's of Africans came to Jesus Christ because of her. Nigeria since then has protected some great believers. She was from Ireland or Scotland? She was a rare case and a rare woman.
  - c. Supreme sacrifice applies to highly civilized conditions.
  - d. A pastor or an evangelist may forgo bonafide pleasures in life, dedicating himself to study and preparation.
  - e. The issue motivating supreme sacrifice is always concentrated service for evangelism and the spiritual growth of the individual believer. It is not for everyone. Not everyone is gift for it.
  - f. How does one know if celibacy is required? Some may be sweating this out. Just relax and see what God brings. Simply do what you are called to do and God will sort out the rest.

Service in the Marital Status

1. Make the marriage successful. This is the corporate witness; this is the victory in the angelic conflict; make the marriage work.
2. Part of our service is providing for the needs of your family. Time spent in your vocation as service. If you do not provide for your family, you are worse than an unbeliever.
3. You are to train your children as the new pivot to the next generation. There is nothing like a village raising a child; but there is a great thing with spiritual teaching. This is a great service of married couples.

4. Operating in our individual spiritual gift separate in the marital obligations. Helps, witnessing, prayer, etc. These things can be done married or not, but usually for a married person.

1Cor. 7:7 But I desire all men also to be as myself. But each has his own gift from God, one this way, and one that way.

In the next verse, Paul is going to broaden his scope of celibacy. If you are unmarried right now, or a widow, then you ought to be like me. We might find out whether we are celibate or not.

1Cor. 7:8 But I say to the unmarried men, and to the widows, it is good for them if they also remain as I am.

Rom. 8:34 1Tim. 4:10

Lesson #none Easter Sunday 1 April 16, 2006

The day that Jesus was crucified was one of the greatest days of doom and gloom for His followers. Their master was the Messiah, Who was jealously hated. The chief priest, Caiphas, and the Sanhedrin hated Him and wanted Him dead. When he entered into Jerusalem on Palm Sunday, they saw this as their opportunity to capture and kill Him.

There were 6 kangaroo courts and they dragged Jesus to Pilate, and Pilate found Him innocent, but allowed Him to be crucified, because he feared the people and a riot. Jesus was raised up to face His last few agonizing hours. The true torment was not the physical death of our Lord, but the imputation of all the sins of all mankind when darkness came over the land. He did this, as we all have Adam's sin imputed to us; we are incapable of having a relationship. We can never meet His perfect standards. The righteousness and justice of God must condemn us. God did not abandon mankind to the lost condition that he was born into. The Lord Jesus Christ suffered Roman capital punishment so that the sins of the world might be poured out upon Him. God the Father laid on God the Son the iniquity of us all. Innocent Christ paid the penalty for all mankind.

God the Father could have no connection with sin, and He had to separate Himself during those 3 hours of sin bearing. He had no choice. Jesus was forsaken, because He Who knew no sin was made sin on our behalf. Jesus, in the darkness, screamed out, "My God, My God, why have You forsaken Me?" Jesus Christ was the only One qualified to make such a sacrifice; the only One qualified to mediate between us and God the Father.

It is the cross where man can have an eternal relationship with Jesus Christ. The way of salvation is stated simply in Acts 16:31: Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and you will be saved. The eternal result was our ability to believe in Him; through faith, each believer becomes a member of the family of God.

After our Lord died physically on the cross, after saying, "It is finished." He dismissed His spirit, and died just like anyone else dies. The disciples took His body from the house and prepared it for burial, and sealed it in a tomb, burying it just like any other person. What a terrible day of defeat. The Man upon Whom they had placed all of their hope, was gone. However, everything that God has set up centers on the death of our Lord; however, the disciples did not seem to get it. In their emotional distress, they did not put it together. How could they have life if the object of their faith did not have life; how could they have an eternal future, if their Lord died? All hope departed from them. None of these mourners expected what would come to pass. The resurrection was absolutely necessary for these men and all the others who believed in Christ and once again had hope.

Rom. 8:24: We were saved with reference to this hope in mind. If we hope for something we already see, it's not really hope. Who hopes for what can be seen? These disciples faltered in their faith when our Lord died; but they were nonetheless saved, whether they understood the full impact of their faith or not. We may have a mustard seed of faith, but it is this small amount of faith which saves us. The disciples had done that. Whenever a person expresses faith in the person of Jesus Christ, they are saved, regardless of how much they know. This verse tells us what lies ahead for us, just as it told them what was in their future. We hope for a better life; financial success; we desire love, good health; etc. There are a number of things we can desire. Christianity has more than just a desire for something, σωζω is in the aorist passive indicative; it is the constative aorist, referring to a point in time. Hope is the word ελπις. In this context, ελπις is in the dative case. You cannot interpret the New Testament without understanding the language in which it was written. A dative of reference, and it means with reference to hope, we have been saved. The ελπις here is not a one-time thing. Without an expectation of fulfillment, hope is just a wish. A person may want to be a professional athlete; the desire is there. However, they just don't have the athletic ability to reach this highest level of sports. When they realize that they lack this ability, they have no real expectation that it will happen; they have the desire still, but they have no real hope of playing professional sports.

The kid who skips school to go fishing. A friend asks him, "Have you caught anything" and he says, "No, I haven't been home yet." No desire to embrace his future; that is not hope. He expected to catch hell when he got home.

Hope is a desire and an expectation to have that desire fulfilled. But if the Spirit of Him Who raised Jesus from the dead, dwells in you [and He does, if you have believed in Jesus Christ], then He will raise you from the dead and give eternal life to your mortal bodies. The Lord Jesus Christ was resurrected to an eternal future—an eternal future in his resurrection body, which is human.

Our faith is the trigger mechanism; but it is what the Holy Spirit does which saves us. Efficacious grace is the Holy Spirit putting us into union with Jesus Christ. It is His efficacious grace which gives eternal life, which we receive at salvation, and it is consummated at our resurrection. Our future hope is not just a desire, but an expectation.

1Tim. 4:10 Certainly, we work hard and struggle to live a godly life, because we place our confidence in the living God. He is the Savior of all people, especially of those who believe. We have fixed our hope on the Living God; He has been resurrected. He is the Savior of all men. Does this mean that, when Christ died, all will be saved? Especially of those who believe. Our Lord provided redemption, reconciliation; but not of this is activated until we believe in Him. We have the desire when we express faith alone, because we believe in the living Jesus Christ.

John 11:25: Jesus said to her, "I am the resurrection and the life. The one who believes in Me, even if he dies, will live.

John 20: The Resurrection      Lesson #none    Easter Sunday 2    April 16, 2006

What does the resurrection mean to us as a believer in our everyday life. The impact is seen in His appearances. 4 of His 10 appearances occurred between resurrection and the Day of Pentecost (didn't all 10 occur then?). In these historical appearances are all the seeds of the hope previously described.

It never occurs to Mary that Jesus Christ was raised from the dead; she assumed that someone came and stole His body. She needed a monument of stone; a place to mourn, a place of sorrow. We do not need a monument to death. We do not need a place of sorrow. We have a monument to life. We have a confident expectation of life. We have a place of great happiness and content. We have no reason to mourn over a dead body.

John 20:11–13 But Mary stood outside facing the tomb, crying. As she was crying, she stooped to look into the tomb. She saw two angels in white sitting there, one at the head and one at the feet, where Jesus' body had been lying. They said to her, "Woman, why are you crying?" "Because they've taken away my Lord," she told them, "and I don't know where they've put Him."

Mary, at this point, was practically hysterical. She had no place to be sad. As believers in Jesus Christ, we have no right to continue being sorrowful over a loss.

When she heard Him say, "Mary" her tears were gone. She did not recognize Him at first. He died, but there was no loss, because He was resurrected. The loss was victory over death. Mourning our dead is not a monument to the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ. 1Thess. 4:13–18: Since we believe that Jesus died and rose again, in the same way God will bring with Him those who have fallen asleep through Jesus. For we say this to you by a revelation from the Lord: We who are still alive at the Lord's coming will certainly have no advantage over those who have fallen asleep. For the Lord Himself will descend from heaven with a shout, with the archangel's voice, and with the trumpet of God, and the dead in Christ will rise first. Then we who are still alive will be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air; and so we will always be with the Lord. Therefore encourage one another with these words.

Joh 20:14–16 Having said this, she turned around and saw Jesus standing there, though she did not know it was Jesus. "Woman," Jesus said to her, "why are you crying? Who is it you are looking for?" Supposing He was the gardener, she replied, "Sir, if you've removed Him, tell me where you've put Him, and I will take Him away." Jesus said, "Mary." Turning around, she said to Him in Hebrew, "Rabbouni!"--which means "Teacher."

John 20:17–18 "Don't cling to Me," Jesus told her, "for I have not yet ascended to the Father. But go to My brothers and tell them that I am ascending to My Father and your Father--to My God and your God." Mary Magdalene went and announced to the disciples, "I have seen the Lord!" And she told them what He had said to her.

The believers were in a house, and had the door closed, and they were locked there for fear of the Jews. They were scared to death of the Jews who had just killed their Lord. They were paralyzed by fear. They had no confident expectation of a future. They had buried their Master. They had a desire, but no confidence.

Do we fear death? Death for a believer is going to sleep; so who is afraid of going to sleep? Death for a believer is going home, and who can be afraid of that. Death is being face to face with Jesus Christ, and who can be afraid of that?

Jesus appeared, even though there was a door there to keep out the Jews (probably a locked door). Jesus knew what was wrong with them; they were scared to death; therefore, He says "Peace to you." When the disciples saw Him, they were overjoyed; they saw Him and He was not dead.

The tradition is, Peter was captured and crucified, but he said, "I am not worthy to die like my Lord" and was crucified upside down (so goes the story).

John 20:19–21 In the evening of that first day of the week, the disciples were gathered together with the doors locked because of their fear of the Jews. Then Jesus came, stood among them, and said to them, "Peace to you!" Having said this, He showed them His hands and His side. So the disciples rejoiced when they saw the Lord. Jesus said to them again, "Peace to you! As the Father has sent Me, I also send you."

Next, we have doubting Thomas. Do you have doubts? Do you wake up in a sweat wondering, "Am I really going to heaven?"

Let's say, you are a juror and you hear 10 eyewitnesses, who all say basically the same thing. Most are convicted on fewer eyewitnesses and on shakier evidence. We have eleven eyewitnesses to the resurrection. In the 40 days between His resurrection and ascension, there were 500 witnesses.

People see a few bones, a million years old, and they believe strongly in evolution. However, here we have eyewitnesses. Thomas was an empiricist. Empiricism does not exclude faith.

John 20:26–29 After eight days His disciples were indoors again, and Thomas was with them. Even though the doors were locked, Jesus came and stood among them. He said, "Peace to you!" Then He said to Thomas, "Put your finger here and observe My hands. Reach out your hand and put it into My side. Don't be an unbeliever, but a believer." Thomas responded to Him, "My Lord and my God!" Jesus said, "Because you have seen Me, you have believed. Those who believe without seeing are blessed."

Doubts began to creep back in. The disciples have seen Jesus, but it has been awhile since He has been with them. Again the disciples were depressed.

Peter decided to go fishing; and they cast out the nets all night and caught nothing. There is no such thing as defeat when you utilize the resources given you by Jesus Christ.

John 21:3–4 "I'm going fishing," Simon Peter said to them. "We're coming with you," they told him. They went out and got into the boat, but that night they caught nothing. When daybreak came, Jesus stood on the shore. However, the disciples did not know it was Jesus.

While in the boat, they saw Jesus at the shore.

John 21:5–9 "Men," Jesus called to them, "you don't have any fish, do you?" "No," they answered. "Cast the net on the right side of the boat," He told them, "and you'll find some." So they did, and they were unable to haul it in because of the large number of fish. Therefore the disciple, the one Jesus loved, said to Peter, "It is the Lord!" When Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he tied his outer garment around him (for he was stripped) and plunged into the sea. But since they were not far from land (about 100 yards away), the other disciples came in the boat, dragging the net full of fish. When they got out on land, they saw a charcoal fire there, with fish lying on it, and bread.

They will have a meal with the Lord Jesus Christ, which will indicate fellowship with their Lord.

It finally dawns on them and hope becomes a part of their thinking; they become able and willing to follow the great commission of our Lord Jesus Christ. They were willing to die because of their deep conviction. They serve a living Savior, Who still sustains them as He did at the beginning. The great vigor in their teaching reflected their great confidence in their Lord.

John 21:10–12 "Bring some of the fish you've just caught," Jesus told them. So Simon Peter got up and hauled the net ashore, full of large fish--153 of them. Even though there were so many, the net was not torn. "Come and have breakfast," Jesus told them. None of the disciples dared ask Him, "Who are You?" because they knew it was the Lord.

The cross and payment for our sins would be meaningless without His being raised from the dead. 1Cor. 15:14–16 Rom. 1:4 Without the resurrection, Easter is just scampering rabbits and a bunch of little eggs.

The resurrection is victory over death; it is our victory over death. We will also be victorious at the moment of our death.

The resurrection guarantees our justification, which is the imputation of divine righteousness to us.

Rom. 4:25–5:1 Who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification. Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ:

Acts 17:31: Because he hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead.

The resurrection of Jesus Christ is the foundation for Christian hope. Religious leaders might be revered after they die, but they do not come back from the dead. We have a living hope; we worship a living God.

The individual who rejects Jesus Christ might have eternal life, if he has believed previously; but he does not have the assurance in his own soul of his eternal future. Our hope is confidence in who He is and what He has done. The res of Christ assures us that we will be resurrected.

1Cor. 15: 20–22: But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.

This is the practical confidence that we can have.

1Cor. 7:8

Wednesday April 19, 2006

Successful marriage is a corporate witness in the angelic conflict. He understands that marriage carries the critical duty of raising children with doctrine in their souls. Paul gives this high importance, even though he himself will never experience this ministry. Prov. 22:6: Train us a child in a way that he should go, and when he is old [at a later time in life], he will not depart from it. This is not a guarantee, by the way, as they have volition and their volition can override what you have taught them. Training does implant doctrine in your soul that does not leave. This verse is a general promise, that if we do our jobs as parents and insure that the kids are trained in doctrine, brought up in the way that they should go. We teach them how to be saved and then we keep asking them, “How are you saved?” Bringing the kids to prep school does not fulfill our obligation in training the children up in the way that they should go. Teaching doctrine to them makes an impact. They may depart, but they will return (as a general promise). There is also as married, time spent in one’s vocation providing for our family (1Tim. 5:8). The obligation to take care of one’s family is extremely important. The importance of operating under the individual spiritual gift provided for us, married or single (1Cor. 7:7). We are all given certain spiritual gifts, no matter what.

What are some of these gifts?

1. The pastor teacher and the evangelist, and men only in both cases. Most who have these communication gifts are married. They may be single for a period of this time.
2. There is a gift of administration, like being a deacon.
3. Administration in mission boards or Christian organizations. That organization must be administered. These are leadership gifts; but there are gifts which are not so involved.
4. There is a general gift of service within the church. There is one woman who essentially runs T&P (under Bobby's administration).
5. The gift of helps. This is probably one of the most frequently given gifts. Without this gift, the royal family just cannot function. Helping and ministering to the sick, the handicapped, the widows, the orphans. This gift is given to men and women. An example are those helping Bob in the house. There is a difference between the gift of helps and the gift of service. The latter is associated with a Christian organization or in a church; helps can occur in or out of a church.
6. The gift of showing ministry (Rom. 12:8). This is primarily to the afflicted and persecuted. Those caught up in marital tyranny may be serviced by these people. In Rom. 12:8, it was very difficult for believers, and one risked their life to deliver others. Sometimes it is a courageous act to help a married person who is abused.
7. The gift of giving. We all have a responsibility in this area; but this is different. This is one who gives with generosity, and given to rich and poor, men and women. Mark 12:42 gives the story of the poor widow. Jesus explains that her gift was greater than all the others. This particular gift does not require starvation. This can be given to the church, Christian organizations, to those who are destitute, etc. Those who are single have greater ability in this area.

These are only a few of the gifts which are extant today. Some have celibacy connected with them, and that is not the norm; but a rare circumstance. Is celibacy a gift in itself. Bobby doubts that. It would certainly be related to the function of other gifts. Celibacy can be for one's life or for a period of time. A married person would not have this gift.

Paul concedes that it is okay to be married, as the marriage itself has spiritual impact.

Paul becomes the doctrinal Dear Abbey for all these singles. This verse begins with δε = and, but, moreover. Paul here addresses those who are like himself. Ἀγαμος = unmarried. This generally refers to all genders; however, in this context, this refers to unmarried men. Paul uses αγαμος in contrast to κηρα = widows. The latter is women who were married, but are no longer married. Unmarried men refers to all men who are bachelors or widowers. Κηρα does not include women who have not been married. Virgins or unmarried women are left out of this passage (but they will be covered in vv. 25–38). Paul will have some very specific instructions for them coming up.

This verse is not about divorce; it includes those women who have been divorced. There are some types of women who have been divorced who can remarry. Paul is not addressing the right of remarriage at this point. It is better for you to remain single; don't necessarily seek to be married. Focus on the single status for specific reasons.

Καλος = good; noble, praiseworthy, desirable, advantageous. Some are more specific renderings. It is not just good but advantageous for us. Better to do this, rather than that; but they still have a choice in the matter. It is advantageous for them. This advantage is for the unmarried men and the widows. His desire is that they remain unmarried, and that will be to their advantage; however, this is not an absolute mandate. Paul only wishes them to be in these circumstances. He wishes for them to serve in a more concentrated way.

Stress is severe suffering that we may be under; uncertainty; uncertainty of personal circumstances. Is it smart to bring someone else into your aimless life? There is the strong possibility of leaving a widow in a new marriage due to dangerous circumstances. Could be parents who are ill that require care. Deprivation, uncertainty or danger are three areas of stress.

Paul is telling some in a situation of stress even with the right to get married, to not get married. Don't get married going off to a desperate battlefield. Many have been married one weekend, and shipped off the next. The man going off to war is not concentrating on his job. The woman left at home is left in great uncertainty. It is not a good time to get married. This is not an excuse to leave a marriage. If you are not married, then stay single.

Some of the distress in Corinth is persecution of the church. Christians were persecuted in the Roman empire. They were rounded up and used as carnivore bait; or used in Roman games. Great distress in this first century.

If the timing is wrong, then don't get married. In v. 33, Paul states another reason not to get married. If you are married, then you are concerned for your wife. The one who is single has a lot less responsibility. These responsibilities take away from concentrated service. If you have a concentrated service for God, and you get married, you may not be able to give enough time to your wife.

Conditional clause which begins with εαν and a subjunctive mood; it more probable condition. It is more probable that they will do something, but it is not certain. Aorist active subjunctive of μενω = to abide, to remain, to stay. Will they remain unmarried like Paul, or will they get married. He wants them to remain unmarried, but he has not ruled out marriage. Stay as you are until the stress is over and until the circumstances are right. You must examine your circumstances to see what is right. What does God want me to do, and how will marriage impact this?

1Cor. 7:8 But I say to the unmarried men, and to the widows, it is good [advantageous] for them if they also remain as I am.

Ann Coulter article; about teen behavior. If there is a crime with a gun, people go off crazy about the dangers of a gun. But, a girl gets drunk in public and goes off in a car with men she just met, no one says anything about how that is a bad thing. They don't want to be judgmental. There are no moral standards, including sexual behavior. Girls should not be bar hopping alone, or others taking off their clothes for strangers, or hiring women to take off their clothes for strangers. The message of integrity does not come through, even though the bodies pile up. A standard, if you've done it, you can't criticize it. Every woman who has had an abortion, feels they have to defend this for all women. In no area, except morality, would someone think that you cannot criticize someone. If you forgot to fill up your car and run out of gas, does this mean you should tell everyone to ignore their gas gauge? She says some things indicating that she is a believer. When you refuse to recognize that there is a right or wrong, then you are on the slippery slopes of relativism. We are at absolute relativism.

Why does Paul wish a single status on everyone? He would prefer that everyone could see and understand what his gift is like. His gift carries with it many incredible aspects. He sees many people growing to spiritual maturity. Paul obviously wishes that everyone could have what he has.

Paul used the verb θελω = to wish, to will. This is only a wish; he knows that this is a choice that many reading this epistle cannot make. Many of the readers are already married. Paul is not saying, "If you are married, get divorced so that you can be like me." They cannot choose to be as he is. He knows that. He can still voice this desire. V. 7a related his desire; Paul wants them to all have what he has. Paul wants those who are single and can still make a choice to take particular heed and to pay attention to what he is saying. Paul wants the readers to examine their own single status; to seriously consider this in themselves. Does God have a concentrated ministry for me at this time? All of this is connected to the great service that we can do in life. The single person has more time to devote to Christian service.

1Cor. 7:7 But I desire all men also to be as myself. But each has his own gift from God, one this way, and one that way.

Αγαμος = unmarried. Here, because of the next noun, refers to unmarried men. Then we have και χήρα = widows. Paul wants to be very specific here; which is why he tacks on χήρα. Christians were mandated and exhorted to take care of widows and orphans. A great departure from the callous neglect found in the ancient world. Χήρα includes all women who do not have husbands—widows and divorced women. Therefore, αγαμος would be in contrast, and therefore, this would refer to all male singles. Bachelors, divorced and widowers. Women who have not married yet are not addressed here. Καλος = good, beneficial, advantageous. It is advantageous to remain as Paul. These singles may be looking over the married couples and thinking, they have it made and Paul is saying, that is not exactly true. Paul, as a single, has a great advantage over the married person in terms of time; he can put more time into service for God. God always uses our circumstance in order to accomplish his plan. We have an advantage, which is what Paul is trying to relate here. There is no responsibility to children or a wife; and a man is obligated to take care of his family or he is worse than an infidel. A single person does not have this obligation. Marriage requires time and attention. Being single is an advantage because that is where you are; and where you are is where God wants you to be. Concentrated service and certain spiritual gifts do not preclude marriage.

Certain circumstances may require only a temporary period of time to remain single. Marriage may not be right at this particular time. Apostles were married, like Peter. Many pastors and evangelists are married; in fact, most are. Timing is everything in the spiritual life and everything connected with it. Suffering or distress must be evaluated. There is persecution and hard times; and there were times when a believer would not want to get married. For instance, if you are about to be hauled off to be used as lion bait, then you don't want to get married. There are times that you have a very unsettled life and you are very unsure about which fork in the road you will take. That is the last time to get married. God has a plan for us, but we need to figure out where we are going first. If you get married, then you need to support your family. It is better not to bring a spouse into an unsettled life. Paul has an unsettled life, he cannot give a spouse the attention she deserves, and he realizes that his responsibilities are too great to take on a wife as well.

1Cor. 7:8a But I say to the unmarried men, and to the widows, it is good [advantageous] for them...

Paul closes the verse with a conditional clause. Here, it is  $\epsilon\alpha\nu$  = if. The verb is in the subjunctive mood, making this a 3rd class condition. Aorist active subjunctive of  $\mu\epsilon\nu\omega$  = to abide, to remain, to stay. It is to their advantage to remain single, as Paul is; but they may not choose to stay that way. Paul wants them to stay just as he is. He has not ruled out marriage, however. Dative of advantage here, which means it is to their advantage to remain single. Do not jump into something that you have not completely and thoroughly thought about.

1Cor. 7:8b ...if they also remain as I am.

Principles from V. 8

1. If you are single, then stand fast in that situation until a definite change is the will of God. Do not worry about it, but do not make a radical change into marriage until God gives you the go ahead. All the cloudy and fuzzy thinking will clear up at some point.
2. Do not panic because of social or family pressure. Don't cave to family pressure. You still have options; God may still have a plan for us in our single status.
3. Do not buy the propaganda that being married is the only way to live. Usually unhappily married couples receive pleasure from seeing others as miserable as they. You may not know just how happy you are in single bliss.
4. Do not define marriage as the only state in life after you have passed the age of 18.

5. Do not marry the first person who comes along because you are afraid that you are missing something or because you feel lonely. You have no right to be lonely. There are too many things to do in life to sit around being lonely. People are no better in marriage than they are as singles; often they are worse, because they get set in the ways while they are single. What a person is when single will be what they are when married; maybe even worse. You don't have the ability to change these people. People are not going to change because they get married. They drag their souls into marriage. They are the same old people wearing a wedding ring. Mature believers also bring these qualities into a marriage.
6. It is better to be single than to be married to a mistake. This is a terrible, miserable trap to be married to a mistake. It can only be solved with maximum problem solving devices and not divorce. Women, you should be careful not to surrender your freedom to a tyrant. If you think the man will change and you can change him, that just is not going to happen. If he is a tyrant now, he will be a tyrant in marriage. Singles need to think through marriage very carefully.
7. As a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ, you must not think of yourself as single because no one wants you. There are good reasons to be single and celibate. Before marriage, you need to go over a compatibility checklist.

Compatibility Checklist

1. Spiritual compatibility; you both must understand that salvation is by faith alone in Christ alone. If there is even a shread of doubt, then do not marry them. You must be 100% sure the other person is a believer.
2. There must be agreement as to what makes up the Christian life.
3. You must agree on basic Bible doctrine. You cannot compromise that.
4. It is a good idea that you agree to the same local church. You don't have to go to the same church, but it sure is nice.
5. Soul compatibility. What are your priorities in life; what are their priorities? What is there general attitude? Are they bossy? Do they whine and complain? Are they tyrants? If you get married and you do not know these things, you are an idiot.
6. Do you both agree in norms and standards. This is huge.
7. Is their intellectual and emotional compatibility. You might both be attractive, but if you can't talk or think, then what good are you?
8. Physical compatibility. This is probably what you were waiting for. Are you attracted to their appearance? Do you like their grooming or how they dress? Are they slobs? Where do they squeeze the toothpaste tube? You can be physically attracted, but not have physical compatibility. Sexual attraction is not the same as physical compatibility.
9. Economic compatibility. Is there an agreement upon how money will be administered. Will the wife work? This could be a problem. When one partner has a lot of money, is their an inordinate focus on that person's money by the other person (or by the person who has the money).

10. Family compatibility. There should be an agreement on the desirability of children. Children often become the source of great friction in marriage, particularly if one person wants them and the other does not. There should be agreement on the rearing and training of children. What are you going to do with these kids after they are born?
11. Stability compatibility. Avoid marriage where there is substance dependence or compulsive gambling, a parapheliac, or a neurotic. People get married to people like this all the time.

Sunday 1 April 23, 2006

Apparently everyone has been waiting for this verse. It is blatantly sexual. Better to marry than to burn. Most arrive at 2 conclusions: the legalistic conclusion (one who does not understand God's grace, a set up their own taboos and rules for everyone but themselves): "if a person lacks self-control and they engage in sex outside of marriage, then they will lose their salvation and burn in hell." No one who has expressed faith alone in Christ alone will spend even one second in hell. Do not ever insult the work of Jesus Christ by saying something like that. The doctrine of Eternal Security is backed by God's grace and justice. Not even the misused of sexuality can overturn salvation.

The second interpretation: "If you have an overabundance of libido, then marriage is your only way out." This is also false.

We have the preposition they, so we need to figure out the antecedents: the first is ἀγαρῶς (unmarried males) and the second is χήρα (widows). This is a much more specific term; it refers to women exclusively, and two categories: a woman whose husband has died and also a woman who has been divorced (which is derived from the old classical meaning of this word, which is based up the word forsaken. Virgins are not included in this group.

When you are outside of marriage, then you need to consider what the Lord has for you, and if there is a ministry for you which would not fit into the responsibility of marriage. Under these conditions, marriage might now be the right time for us. Celibacy under these conditions is to the advantage of these two categories. This is focused service and the celibacy can be permanent or temporary. There is another reason for remaining single—severe testing or suffering in the life of a believer. It might just be better not to marry under these circumstances.

Now, Paul is not disparaging marriage back in v. 8; he is celebrating it. If it is a good thing to be married; or if it is okay to be singled; then the question is, when do you get married? When do you leave your single status? Under what conditions do these groups of people get married? Without a spiritual life, self-control is very difficult, under these conditions. If you are in constant carnality, then there is no way to exercise self-control. "It is good for a single man not to arouse or inflame a woman." It takes self-control to not do this when you are sexually attracted to a woman.

The conjunction of contrast begins this verse: δε = but. Bobby is not espousing the shotgun approach. You do not get married simply because you are on a wave of libido. No believer should get married until they understand the doctrine of marriage. This passage is not saying, "You get married when you are hot." This might be part of it, but that is not all of it. V. 9 does not negate v. 1.

Εἰ + a verb in the indicative mood, making it a 1st class condition, which means that Paul assumes the reality of this premise. Εγκρατευσομαι = under control. This is found with the strong negative οὐκ, meaning they are not under control (the middle voice is used here). Present middle indicative. Progressive present tense; an action in a state of continuance; there is a consistency with this verb and the progressive present. This is not an occasional lapse; it is persistent and habitual. This passage does not force marriage upon someone with an occasional indiscretion. Always remember, this is not the only reason for marriage. A persistent and a habitual condition. This is persistent and habitual loss of control; however, all sins can be punished. An indiscretion is not grounds for an immediate marriage. How many mistakes are made because of an impulsive act. A shotgun marriage is not the way to go. You might have an indiscretion, and it is a sin, but it does not mean that you should marry that person. Aorist active imperative of γέμω. Marrying involves consent as well as command. It appears as though, I cannot control myself, so I need to get married. This is the final determining factor; but it is not the sole factor. Never right to focus only upon the physical. This is a recipe for disaster. A little common sense always helps. This verse says, I've got to marry so I guess that I will.

What are all of the factors which are included besides controlling sexual urges?

1. Knowledge of pertinent doctrine on the subject. Parents with kids in this age, need to focus on the doctrine. Step back, if you are considering marriage, to think about God's mandates.
2. You need to be a mature believer based upon application of doctrine. It is easy to disregard doctrine in your soul when you are out of fellowship. You must metabolize doctrine.
3. Another common sense factor: allow some time in courtship to be certain of your decision. Calm down after the first great rush of passion. Even after an indiscretion, calm down and back off. Don't cloud your thinking with the subjectivity of sex. You just don't think when sex is involved. You will apply v. 9 alone. You need to back off and consider the passages all given.
4. Finally being beyond the point of loss of control.
5. If the other factors are in place, then the persistent burning passion indicates that you need to get married. However, this is not the only criteria. If you can't control yourself, then move away from the situation.

Paul finishes this verse with a comparison. He uses the comparative adjective κρείττων = better, preferable. Sexual activity prior to marriage can consume you to the point of distraction from doctrine and from all other things in life. Called sexual addiction by some psychologists. Likened to a dog in heat, which, by itself, is not a great criteria for marriage. Either marry, if the other conditions are in place; or separate from the situation.

Burning is more than sexual desire; it is a burning desire to be with that person; it is not an on again off again thing. Doctrine, courting, virtue love, etc. are always in the mix.

When you marry, that passion is legitimized. Paul is not just talking about smouldering. This is a wild fire raging out of control. Outside of marriage, it is raging out of control. Inside of marriage, πυρω is legitimate; outside, it is not.

1Cor. 7:9 But if they do not have self control, let them marry; for it is better to marry than to be inflamed.

1Cor. 7:9–11

Sunday 2 April 23, 2006

They refers back to the two categories of v. 8; women who have been married at one time and unmarried men. The desire is what consumes you and is out of control. This is lacking in self-control persistently. However, they still have a choice whether or not to marry. It is better to marry than to be inflamed. Πυρω = a fire that cannot be quenched, a consuming flame, being constantly inflamed. We have the obligation not to inflame a woman (v. 1); however, in a relationship, there will be attraction and that means that there will be desire or sexual passion, which does not mean that you have to indulge in it. You can be involved and have sexual desire, but this does not mean that you give into that desire. Stay away from the engulfing πυρω. It may be enraging, but you do not have to indulge it. This verse did not just refer to being inflamed with passion after a good date. This is after a long and strong desire. This is more than the desire, but the succumbing to the desire. Being tempted is not a sin; it is succumbing to it. This can mean that your spiritual life is thrown out of whack. Lack of control, lack of doctrine, results in bad decisions. There are other factors here rather than just sexual passion. You cannot take this verse out of context. If all it is, is passion, then it will go away. Remove yourself from the situation, and it will just go away. However, if you remove yourself, and the passion is still there (more than just sexual), that might be the conclusive end prior to marriage.

Conclusions

1. Do not marry based upon a consuming sexual desire. If that is the primary factor, then you are going to have problems. There are other ways to escape this problem apart from marriage.
2. Do not rely on the subjectivity of passion to make a choice of a lifetime partner. Passion fades. You need to have something more in your soul. The physical burning is the last criteria, not the only criteria.
3. If all factors are in place, and the burning desire remains irresistible and constant, then marry; then follow the imperative of permission found in v. 9.
4. The burning here is an indicator that it is time to marry; it is not the full criterion. It points toward this, but it is not the final determinant.
5. If sex cannot be resisted, and the other factors are missing; then you need to separate. You must remove yourself from the object of πυρω. Getting married would be a misapplication of v. 9.

6. Removing yourself from the object of  $\pi\rho\rho\omega$ , you will gain control.
7. Time and distance can soothe the burning passion. This will throw water on the passion. This gives you the opportunity to regain your self-control.
8. Time and distance can also provide a more objective viewpoint in which we examine in objectivity all the factors including  $\pi\rho\rho\omega$ ; but not solely  $\pi\rho\rho\omega$ .
9. If the burning does not stop with time and distance; if this is still part of your soul (not just physical), then marriage would be appropriate (assuming the other factors are in place). Then, go ahead and marry the object of your desire. You only have the choice of removing yourself completely. Do not stay there and indulge yourself sexually; that is not an option.
10. Recall, that it is not always about you and your passion; there needs to be something on the other side as well. Some people are inflamed can become obsessed, not having a clue as to what the other person is thinking. Such people become stalkers.
11. If you do not recall anything else, don't say, "Honey, I am hot for you; let's get married."
12. Remember all of the factors: doctrine, extended courtship (more than 2 days or a month), and attitude of due benevolence. The soul must be involved. You cannot ignore all of the other passages and make v. 9 your sole criteria for marriage. The physical is not the end of it all, but the final determining factor.

Sometimes this verse is used as a guilt-trip ("We did it; let's get married"); the shotgun approach (the parents get involved); etc.

1Cor. 7:9 But if they do not have self control, let them marry; for it is better to marry than to be inflamed.

Paul now changes his focus. He passes from those for whom marriage is still an open question, and now he moves to those who are married, whether they got married before or after believing in Jesus Christ. Now we are looking at the maintenance of Christian marriage; what is permitted and what is not.

Bobby will later cover the full doctrine of divorce. "I've got marriage down; now how can I get out of it?"

Basic Principles to Keep in Mind

1. Marriage is designed by God to be a permanent, lifetime contract.
2. When we stand in front of a minister, justice of the peace, captain of the ship; once you say, "I do" that is a permanent contract before God. We take this too lightly so far. You have just given your word to God to function as a unit. Do not take these vows lightly.
3. Divorce is not Biblically authorized solution to marital problems. It is a solution in our society; when someone does or says something you don't like, it is time to move on. If you don't like me, someone else will. You cannot simply go to counseling and then divorce. If you have problems, divorce is not the solution. This is the principle, which will be backed up.

4. Divorce is a sin like many other sins. Do not single it out. It is not the most heinous of sins. There can be repercussions, even after naming this sin. Do not wallow in guilt after this. Rebound and keep moving; and don't forget what your failures have taught you.
5. There is a Biblical right of divorce and remarriage, authorized under certain conditions, which will be studied.
6. Those conditions are the only reasons for a broken covenant before God.

We begin with the present active indicative παραγγελλω = to give orders, to command, to mandate. There is no confusion here. Paul has spoken by way of permission before. Paul is asserting his Apostolic authority apart from any uncertainty.

Paul will go on to invoke the authority of Jesus Christ. "Not only I command you, but so does the Lord." This is not a distinction between his commands and the commands of the Lord. This is not a disconnect between his commands and the Lord's commands. Paul is inspired by the Holy Spirit. He does not need to invoke the authority of Jesus Christ in order to back up what he commands. Nor, does this distinguish between his own private views and the Lord's. Paul does not set aside God's instructions and say, "Well, this is how I feel about this matter." Paul is distinguishing his own inspired commands with those expressed commands of Jesus Christ. He does this to point out that his commands and the commands of Jesus Christ are the same.

Paul is probably doing this for 2 reasons: these are the actual words of Jesus Christ, Who mandated no divorce, except under certain circumstances. Paul is saying, "This is what Jesus Christ has said; I am quoting from Him." Remember all of the factions? The Pauline faction and the Jesus faction? It is going to be clear to both factions that they are both under these commands. Paul is either reminding them of this teaching, or telling them of it. Matt. 5:32 Mark 10:11 found in the synoptic gospels. Deut. 24:1 is the Old Testament teaching. Jesus Christ taught these things 25–30 years before. If the Corinthians knew this, it would have been taught orally. The gospels were written down later.

Paul addresses the wife first. Why is he doing this? Are they the problem? Is Paul dealing with them because they are the worst offenders? Do they need it the most. The situation that Paul is facing is wife dumping their husbands, which must have recently surfaced in the Corinthian church. They are learning a little doctrine and their husbands are running off to the heathen temples to have sex; and they figure, I can walk away from this, for sure. Paul is making a principle which applies to everyone; this applies to husbands and wives, but he speaks to the wives.

Aorist active infinitive of μη χωριδζω = do not separate. This is an imperatival infinitive. This compliments the imperatives already used. This is very strong. The principle based on our Lord's mandate—it is not ever good to separate.

Never Authorized to Separate

1. The marriage bond cannot be severed. It is an iron-clad contract before God.
2. Paul makes no concession here for divorce. In v. 6, he made concessions for single status or married status.
3. This is not a question of which is better; married or unmarried. This is no longer a part of his concession.
4. The point is, if you are married, stay married.
5. Neither the wife nor the husband has the option or the right to terminate a contract signed before the Lord.
6. Neither can the marriage bond before God be dissolved by any human authority. This includes a decree of divorce from the magistrate of the state. As far as the state is concerned, you can get a legal divorce and be legally allowed to remarry. But you cannot do this before God. Where Christians are involved, the marriage cannot be dissolved since it is a permanent contract. Marriage is a covenant for life. God does not recognize incompatibility as a reason for divorce. This could have been determined before marriage; not after.

So that you do not leave the auditorium severely depressed, there are ways out. But there is only by God's instructions and guidelines. No one else but God Himself can say how and why this covenant can be broken. Don't get divorced in the next week.

1Cor. 7:10 But I command the ones being married (not I, but the Lord), that a woman is not to be separated from her husband;

1Cor. 7:11 but if indeed she is separated, remain unmarried, or be reconciled to the husband; and a husband not to leave his wife.

1Cor. 7: Lesson #none Sunday 2 April 30, 2006

1Cor. 7:10 Lesson #340 Wednesday May 3, 2006

Bobby's back. Saw "United 93" with Nancy tonite. Armondo Garcia will be here tomorrow after Bible class (he is our missionary to Costa Rica). Bobby visited some places where he used to surf.

Prior to this, Paul has described what makes a marriage work. Paul made it clear that marriage is a good thing. He has dealt with sex in marriage and with the single status and celibacy of the believer.

In the next few verses, Paul then tackles the divorce question. Divorce was going on there, and it is similar to what is going on today. Divorce was a common practice then as it is today. Their human viewpoint background was very similar to ours. Very antinomian. It was causing problems for even Christian marriages. Paul wants to make it clear what is right and good; and what is not. He will be setting up the boundaries.

There are a few basic principles about Marriage and Divorce

This is so we can know where we are going; we need to know the overarching principles. Otherwise, it is too easy to get stressed or to overreact. This is a subject that people do not want to hear about.

1. Marriage is designed by God to be a permanent, lifetime contract between a man and a woman. All Scripture indicate this fact. When you say, for better or for worse; you are not just making a vow with another person, if you are a believer in Jesus Christ. You are making this vow before God and directly to God. It is difficult to take this word lightly. Furthermore, it is His mandate that it be like this. If you are going to keep a vow, this is the one that you should keep. Divorce should never be seen in a light and frivolous way.
2. Today's thinking is, well, I'll give this a shot, and if I don't like it, then I'll leave. Do not every enter into a marriage with this sort of an attitude.
3. Divorce is not a Biblically authorized solution to marital problems, nor is it a solution to marrying the wrong person in the first place. Leaving a marriage to find your right person is wrong.
4. Getting a divorce in most cases, is a sin, it should be treated in this light. We can recover fellowship with God with rebound. Like any other sin or error, you just move on. You put it behind you and continue to grow to spiritual maturity. Spiritual growth always stabilizes you and can comfort you under many circumstances.
5. There are times when divorce is not a sin. There is a Biblically authorized right of divorce and remarriage under certain conditions. These conditions are the only reason for a broken vow before God. Only God can break the vow; not us. Even when divorce is Biblically authorized, there are still repercussions from divorce that can have lingering effects, even for legitimate divorce. Anger, guilt, feelings of failure, regret, bitterness, etc. Divorce is tailor-made for mental attitude sins. Stay with doctrine, if you have divorced. Otherwise, you will pile one disaster on another disaster. Divorce is one sin, but there are repercussions. You must continue the keep moving principle. Don't get bogged down in past failures.

Marriage can be one of the great things in our life; and the most difficult part of our life. How many problems do we solve by running away from it. In marriage, it is doubly important that we do not do this. Divorce can be devastating and it can be a huge problem in life.

Our volition is involved in a divorce; it is our volition making bad decisions during the marriage; and then the actual divorce is a bad decision.

Paul says, these are mandates, not just from me, but from Jesus Christ. This was a point taught by Jesus Christ during His incarnation. However, Paul is writing this 30 years later. The Lord taught that there is to be no divorce except for adultery (Matt. 5:22 19:6 Luke 16:18). The Lord Jesus Christ is Paul's documentation for this passage. The gospels were written sometime after Christ ascended, and the Corinthians may or may not know what Jesus taught, unless someone passed this along orally.

Aorist passive infinitive of  $\chi\omicron\rho\iota\zeta\omega$   $\mu\eta$ ; this is an infinitive with a negative: there is an emphatic which says, "Do not separate."

What Jesus Taught

1. The marriage bond cannot be severed except because of adultery.
2. Marriage is an iron-clad contract before God. No loopholes.
3. Paul cites the Lord here; he did not have to, but he did. There is no concession in the Lord's words; they are emphatic and without loopholes. There is no discussion here as to which is better, being single or married.
4. There is no concession here because Christ made no concession, apart from adultery.
5. The principle—if you are married, then stay married.
6. Neither the wife nor the husband has the option or the right to break a contract signed before the Lord.
7. The marriage vow before God cannot be dissolved by any human authority.
8. This includes a decree of divorce from a magistrate from the state.
9. If you obtain a divorce decree, then legally, you are divorced, insofar as the state is concerned.
10. Then, before the state, you have the legal right of remarriage. You won't go to jail for polygamy.
11. However, you are not off the hook before God. God's contract is not revoked because of state clear it. Where Christians are involved, the marriage cannot be dissolved before God. God does not recognize incompatibility as a reason for divorce. This should have been detected before the vows our taken. This is what makes courtship and engagement so important. There is such a thing as incompatibility, but you had better figure that out before you get married. A mistake of marrying the wrong person is not corrected before God. Before getting married, you need to think about more than your feelings.

There are Exceptions, which our Lord did not mention

Bobby is doing this so that we do not get lost in the detail.

1. If the covenant is to be annulled, then there must be specific sinful acts by one of the parties to the marriage.

2. Adultery annuls marriage. The fact of adultery means that you can divorce; but it does not mean that you have to.
3. The Lord Jesus Christ in Matt. 5:32 19:19 confirms this adultery as a contract breaker.
4. Also, willful desertion is a contract breaker for the same reason. However, you must be careful here, and today, it has been grossly applied to almost everything.
5. Also, when one of the divorced spouses remarries or dies, you can get married again. Don't line up your ex- with blind dates.

Today, marriages are broken on mere whims. Believers often take on the society views in the same way. Pretty soon, you will be immersed in human viewpoint. This doctrine is going to crush a lot of toes. You may have to admit to failing in this area. We don't like to be failures and we certainly do not want to dwell on it. You may have to examine this move for a moment. For most everyone, there are about 3 main reasons for divorce. Don't skip Bible class until Bobby is done with this subject.

During this study, we need to take a step back and get a doctrinal perspective of this issue for application in the future. Our past failures are no longer the issue. Nothing in this life should stop our contentment. Through this study, we must recognize the inviolable nature of the contract that we are about to undertake. We should make this decision with caution, with doctrine, and with objectivity. Don't make this decision with panic, high libido, etc. In our relative society, we figure we can just leave anything that we don't like. However, this is not true of the believer in marriage. You won't become happy by divorcing; or even by getting married. Be content in whatever situation that you find yourself in.

1Cor. 7:10 But I command the ones being married (not I, but the Lord), that a woman is not to be separated from her husband;

1Cor. 7:11 but if indeed she is separated, remain unmarried, or be reconciled to the husband; and a husband not to leave his wife.

1Cor. 7:10

Thursday May 4, 2006

A simple reading should leave no doubt as to what this passage means. Aorist active infinitive of χωρίζω+μη = do not separate, do not divorce. Paul refers back to the words of Jesus Christ in Mark 10:11 Luke 16:18. These passages say essentially the same thing, that there should be no divorce. If Paul cites Jesus Christ, then we ought to know exactly what He said.

Matt. 19:3: And some pharisees came to Him [which they often did; they came to Jesus for a number a reasons; most of which had nothing to do with finding the truth] testing Him, saying, "Is it lawful for a man to divorce his wife for any reason at all?"

Hillel school believed that a man could divorce his wife for any reason whatsoever. You want the divorce, you got it. The Shaman school narrowed the scope to divorce for only a sexual offense (which could encompass a great many reasons). The various groups asked Jesus questions, in order to trap Him. Deut. 24:1 assumed the legitimacy of divorce, but no reason is given in this passage. The passage assumes that divorce is legitimate. The idea is, the pharisees could get Jesus no matter which way He went.

Matt 19:4–5 But answering, He said to them, Have you not read that He who created them from the beginning "created them male and female"? [Gen. 1:27] And He said, "For this reason a man shall leave father and mother, and shall be joined to his wife, and the two shall become one flesh." [Gen. 2:24]

By quoting these verses, our Lord avoids this controversy. Jesus is not arguing with them; He goes back to the beginning and, "What did God tell us about marriage?" This confused the pharisees. "What did God say?" Jesus did not argue, but He replied with principles; He gave no legal brief on divorce.

Matt 19:6 So that they are no longer two, but one flesh. Therefore, what God has joined together, let not man separate.

Points on the principle of Marriage

1. Jesus reminded them that God designed one man for one woman and vice versa. If God had wanted Adam to have several wives, then he could have had Big Love. There was just two of them, so it was designed to be permanent.
2. Marriage is the strongest bond and greatest relationship between two human beings. There is a separation between the husband and wife and their parents. There is a contract, not just between spouses, but between the couple and God. Jesus is not going to argue all their legalism, He is going to simply state the principles. Marriage is an iron-clad contract. Whenever Bobby signs a marriage certificate, they are married; before or after the ceremony. However, the ceremony is where both parties make a vow before God.

Mal 2:14 Yet you say, On what cause? Because Jehovah has been witness between you and the wife of your youth, against whom you have dealt treacherously; and she is your companion and your covenant wife.

A friend used to introduce his wife as "my first wife." He thought it was funny; she possibly did not. By divorce, you deal with your permanent partner treacherously. Marriage is a binding contract.

Mal 2:16 Jehovah, the God of Israel, says, He hates sending away, and to cover with violence on his garment, says Jehovah of Hosts. Then guard your spirit and do not act treacherously.

"I hate divorce" means that divorce is not a part of God's plan. This reveals the policy of God, not His character; His policy is anti-divorce. Dealing treacherously is divorcing the wife of your youth. This breaks the contract signed before the Lord, which is a sign of betrayal to Him. He is the witness and breaking this covenant is dealing treacherously with the lord.

3. Marriage was also the one-flesh principle.
4. When people are argumentative, they do not listen to what the other person says, but they listen for something they can argue against. All they heard was that divorce was verboten.

Mat 19:7 They said to Him, Why then did Moses command to "give a bill of divorce," "and to put her away"? Deut. 24:1

Moses was not commanding divorce; he was making allowances for man's sinfulness. In Deut. 24:1, Moses is simply assuming that divorce occurs. This is the context; the pharisees ignored the context.

Deu 24:1 When a man has taken a wife and married her, and it happens that she finds no favor in his eyes because he has found a thing of uncleanness in her, and he writes her a bill of divorce and puts it in her hand, and sends her out of his house;...

Mat 19:8 He said to them, In view of your hardheartedness, Moses allowed you to put away your wives. But from the beginning it was not so. The pharisees had corrupted the teaching of Moses. You need law when there is corruption. Law is required when there is no perfection. Moses is not saying that divorce is a mandate; however, he does assume in Deut. 24:1 that there is a legitimate reason for divorce. Moses was legislating laws to deal with the corruption. Moses was making law in this passage. Moses did not have the authority to allow divorce where God did not. However, he could define a procedure for those who divorce legitimately. God's design was a permanent, legitimate relationship.

Matt 19:9 And I say to you, Whoever shall put away his wife, if not for fornication, and shall marry another, that one commits adultery. And the one who marries her who was put away commits adultery. This nailed the pharisees, as they allowed for divorce, but there were different camps.

The application for us who are not married is, there is an inviolable nature of marriage. Your choice of a lifetime partner must be made with doctrine in your soul and with objectivity. God does not give Scriptural mandates as a form of deprivation. God is trying to deprive me of a great life. Who decided to get married? Divine mandates, you may think are unfair and hurt you, but they are always for our benefit. There is no other standard for us other than remaining in our marriage, if we want to be a part of God's plan.

Bobby is going to deal with a very touchy subject, where there would seem to be contract breakers, but things which are not covered directly in Scripture. Scripture is silent for reasons of divorce which we may see as being very obvious. Divorce for brutality. Divorce for a spouse who is drunk, for a drug addict; for one who rapes his wife; sexual molestation; particularly of children; insanity; divorce because spouse is a criminal; because spouse has suicidal tendencies. There is nothing written in Scripture about these things. This does not mean that separation is incorrect. However, in most of these situations, separation would even be recommended. When a person's life is in danger or in a threatening situation, separation is both legitimate and necessary. The correctness and logic of legal separation in these areas is not an annulment of the Biblical marriage covenant. The reasons for divorce are all stated. If you are being brutalized, you need to separate. This does not mean that you can divorce and remarry; but you should get away. The principle is this: you get out, but you do not have the right to remarry unless the marriage covenant is broken according to divine fiat. You can get out and you should under most of these circumstances; but remarriage is not in the picture, unless there is a valid Biblical reason. If these are the only reasons, then you cannot remarry. However, if the guilty party remarries after divorce or if the spouse dies, then you can remarry. The innocent victim in the desertion case, the adultery case, etc. can remarry.

1Cor. 7:10 But I command the ones being married (not I, but the Lord), that a woman is not to be separated from her husband;

1Cor. 7:11 but if indeed she is separated, remain unmarried, or be reconciled to the husband; and a husband not to leave his wife.

Hermondo Garcia and his wife, missionaries to Costa Rica. 37 years preparation. Still, in the podium in Berachah, he trembles. The name of the game is information. The purpose is for us to share in His happiness. Unfortunately, because we have the old sin nature, which we really like, and comes diabolicus has a lot of attractive stuff. Once we have the wooden pajamas on, then we are out of the competition. The only purpose which counts is God's purpose. This is what we are supposed to convey, in the job, on the bus, and in our function. We are to convey happiness and God's purpose. The entire issue is, we are dealing with supernatural processes.

Nicaragua and Costa Rica are two nations, and nations are here so that we remain in a perpetual mode. If there is someone positive, then there will be a missionary (or an evangelist). God has a purpose for every person. Once we are in the plan of God, there is no sacrifice. We must get information from someone, and that is going to be from the local church, even though this divine design has been ignored from the beginning. The communicators go where there is positive volition, generally speaking (Jeremiah is an exception). Thousands of believers in Nicaragua. There are churches all over, and they love the Word, but they love other things even more. Hermondo has met 200 pastors there; he has gone to their homes. Unfortunately, many of them belong to denominations, so they are locked into their doctrine. The only reason why we are alive and breathing is so that we can know His purpose; when we know His purpose, then we love Him. If we are happy, then we will tell others. This can only occur in a supernatural basis.

Hundreds of thousands of believers in Nicaragua. Costa Rica is a country with establishment, which Nicaragua. All he wanted to do was to teach all this doctrine that he knew. He began to teach a few at a time. He teaches 3 books a week; and he has small cores of people. It is not for us to measure. We just enjoy the commemoration of being alive so that we can get a little more information. We are the recipients of the most accurate information given out in the Church Age. Moses would have loved to have been here.

We are here to give the ministry of reconciliation, which is a privilege. God does not need us. If we were not born, we would not be missed. God wants us to be happy; that is His message. The plan works. The Word of God is alive and powerful.

He is in Jeremiah in Nicaragua. They want to sing and clap and do gymnastics—and these are believers. God loves them with the same love as He loves the most doctrinal ones. The only difference is, the inheritance that we will appropriate. Our purpose is God's purpose; and our happiness is God's happiness. We must have eyes placed on the invisible. This is what made Moses leave His position as the next pharaoh of Egypt. His eyes were on what he could not see; his eyes were on the promised land.

Trujillo = relax; God has the whole thing under control; His plan is perfect. Our soul is His design. After the cross, we can begin our rehabilitation. We must grow, even if we are in medicare.

1Cor. 7:10 Matt. 19:4–7

Sunday 1 May 7, 2006

Mother's Day message today is all about marriage and divorce.

V. 10 tells us that marriage is an inviolable contract; no lawyer can get you out of it. This is the person you are stuck with until death parts you. This is an oath to God as well as between one another. This is an iron-clad contract; a pact which is inviolable. This is not a contract that you can simply void if you simply decide things aren't going well. The wife is the first person addressed, but these principles apply both to the husband and to the wife. Divorce for a Christian couple is not an option. Matt. 19:3–9

Paul uses the verb to leave with the negative. The context of Matt. 19 is the pharisees trying to trap the Lord Jesus Christ. Moses did not give the Law; Jesus Christ gave them the Law. The pharisees are trying to trip up the Lawgiver here. Jesus Christ knew exactly what was going on here. Jesus Christ responds with doctrinal principle. Jesus does not confront them with, "I know what Moses wrote and you do not understand it; let me set you straight."

Mat 19:7 They said to Him, Why then did Moses command to "give a bill of divorce," "and to put her away"? Deut. 24:1

Mat 19:8 He said to them, In view of your hardheartedness, Moses allowed you to put away your wives. But from the beginning it was not so. Jesus Christ takes the principle back to the beginning, even before the Law. There were a lot of people listening, and Jesus needed to make it clear what the doctrine was. There was the Hillel school of thought, which allowed for divorce in any circumstance. The principle is, God created one man and one women. God did not provide Big Love for Adam. This relationship between Adam and the woman was essentially an eternal one. Their lives were to be perpetuated apart from sin. David had multiple wives, and there were repercussions for this mistake. Divorce today carries some of the same repercussions as found in multiple marriages. These repercussions are present even when there are Biblically sanctioned reasons for divorce: adultery, desertion, remarriage by the other spouse, and death of a spouse.

Only God provides these contract breaking situations. The issue is not really divorce here; the issue is remarriage. You can divorce for pretty much any reason. These 4 circumstances carry with them the right of remarriage.

This is a foreign concept in our society. You say, "What's the big deal?" There are only specific circumstances under which you may remarry.

Deu 24:1 When a man has taken a wife and married her, and it happens that she finds no favor in his eyes because he has found a thing of uncleanness in her, and he writes her a bill of divorce and puts it in her hand, and sends her out of his house;...

Mat 19:9 And I say to you, Whoever shall put away his wife, if not for fornication, and shall marry another, that one commits adultery. And the one who marries her who was put away commits adultery.

There is the one flesh principle from the beginning, and divorce violates that principle.

Mat 19:4 But answering, He said to them, Have you not read that He who created them from the beginning "created them male and female"? Gen. 1:27

Mat 19:5 And He said, "For this reason a man shall leave father and mother, and shall be joined to his wife, and the two shall become one flesh." Gen. 2:24

Mat 19:6 So that they are no longer two, but one flesh. Therefore, what God has joined together, let not man separate.

God Himself affixes His signature to your marriage as a witness. The state might give you the ability to divorce for any reason; but God does not (not with the right of remarriage). You must be very cautious when marrying and you must be objective prior to marriage. The most frequently cited reason for divorce is incompatibility. It could mean anything. However, this is not one of the contract breakers before God. Discovering compatibility is to be done in courtship; if you are married and have this problem, then it is a more difficult situation to bring about. An unmarried couple needs to move from attraction to compatibility.

You must be able to think doctrine. Without doctrine in the souls of two believers who get married, there can be no true compatibility. This is the only way to have like-mindedness. Without doctrine, you have very little chance as a believer to transition to compatibility.

Compatibility

1. Compatibility is a total adjustment to the other person, so that they are the most important person in the world to you.
2. Compatibility is motivated by impersonal love, personal love for God the Father. The impersonal love is toward all mankind, which is something that you need to apply. No couple is without conflict. Compatibility does not mean no conflict. Finally, there is occupation with the person of Christ.
3. We begin with attraction; if we were not attracted to someone, we would not be with them. Attraction is where we all begin. Attraction is the blind, subjective stage of romance. You might have discovered a few minor areas of compatibility. The strength and weaknesses of the object of your love is required; this is objectivity. Moving to this objectivity and compatibility means that you will have a lot fewer surprises. Without these things, then you need to break it off before there is an emotional thing.
4. Compatibility is the problem-solving stage of a relationship. We should be able to solve our own problems apart from the other person. In courtship and in marriage, we try to change a person into what we want. That does not work either because it is not real. The problem solving stage is spiritual autonomy, which is a criterion for marital unification. It seems like an oxymoron. The person who is spiritually autonomous is comfortable on his own and ready for a marriage union. You are only as good in marriage as you are in person. You bring compatibility to the marriage; you do not depend upon the other person for compatibility. There is knowledge and there is application. Spiritual autonomy gives strength to consistently utilize impersonal love. This is the key to compatibility. Once marriage occurs, it must be maintained. Compatibility must be discovered before marriage and maintained during marriage.
5. In compatibility, both husband and wife take responsibility for their own decisions. Tolerance and understanding prevail between the two of them. Compatibility is not manifested by tyranny.
6. The greatest manifestation of compatibility is conversation; it is a long conversation which appears to be too short. Moment by moment compatibility is found in the depth of your conversation; not sex.
7. If you can talk and have the common ground of doctrine, you will develop the rapport to stick it out, for better or for worse. If you can talk and have the common ground of Bible doctrine.
8. Rapport is the harmonious stage of romance and marriage, based upon the like-mindedness of doctrine. It is the next stage of compatibility; it is not a synonym.
9. Sympathy and empathy and spiritual identification with the one you love is rapport.
10. Compatibility is the fusion of opposites. You learn to tolerate when you do not necessarily like them. Compatibility does not mean absolute agreement. These things are best established before marriage. It can occur after marriage, but that is not the easiest way to go. #1 on any checklist of prospective spouses is their spiritual life.

1Cor. 7:10 But I command the ones being married (not I, but the Lord), that a woman is not to be separated from her husband; The instructions are, the wife should not leave her husband. Originally, God did not include divorce with marriage.

Obviously, there is rampant divorce in the church of Corinth. "I am stuck with a person that I married before I became a Christian?"

V. 11 is parenthetical, but it is not exactly within the flow of text. It is something added to clarify something. The next verse should bring all kinds of questions to mind with v. 11. "What happens if I am a punching bag?"

1Cor. 7:11 but if indeed she is separated, remain unmarried, or be reconciled to the husband; and a husband not to leave his wife.

1Cor. 7:11

Sunday 2 May 7, 2006

Apparently it is not Mother's Day. Not only is Paul giving instructions, but the Lord Himself is giving instructions. The husband should not send his wife away, and the wife should not divorce her husband.

4 areas where one can divorce and remarry. Marriage is an iron-clad contract between husbands and wives. After telling them all this, there is no divorce, but then he says (in v. 11), but if you do... The parenthesis of v. 11 is giving the wife the options if she does separate from her husband.

We have the particle of contrast:  $\delta\epsilon$  = but. Then the conditional particle:  $\alpha\epsilon\nu$  = if. This is probably a diphthong, and not pronounced as two vowels. Here, there is no negative with the verb  $\chi\omicron\rho\iota\zeta\omega$  = to separate. A woman might separate and she may have a good reason to separate. V. 10 does not mean that you cannot separate. If a man verbally and physically abuses his wife so that she goes into depression or even becomes suicidal. Or a man who endangers her life or the life of their children. These are excellent reasons to separate. Or, a woman who cannot respond to her husband because he forces her into slavery or into sexual slavery. Or, there might be a mate who could end up in prison for the rest of their life. The spouse who does not pay taxes, runs up criminal debt; or is addicted to something. These are just reasons for separation. Of course, it is right to avoid jail by separation; of course it is right to separate from abuse; however, remarriage is a completely separate issue. Even though these are just causes for separation, these are not just causes for remarriage. Interestingly enough, the Bible is silent on these issues. Jesus Christ did not stand in front of the pharisees and say, "A wife should leave if a man brutalizes her." Why does this not occur? It makes sense that there would be reasonable for Him to teach this. Don't ever think that the Bible teaches that you cannot separate; however, before God, these are not contract breakers. It is not an issue of separation; it is an issue of remarriage. If a wife leaves her husband under conditions not specified under one of the contract breakers, then if a wife separates, she has 2 options: (1) let her stay separated but single. (2) Reconcile with the husband.

To many of us, this may seem unfair. The guy beats her up, and she leaves; and she cannot remarry? How can I protect myself from that out-of-control libido if I cannot remarry? Does the Bible contradict itself? How can I ever have the intimacy for one man and one woman if the Word of God says I cannot remarry? These are valid human questions for those who are under these circumstances. However, in these questions, we must not ignore or reject the Word of God.

Think about this in a doctrinal viewpoint. Are you ready for remarriage if you separate under these kinds of situations? This is in part a protection for you. You are not ready for remarriage under these circumstances; now, in the future, you may be ready for remarriage. And, if God's plan is for you to remarry, then He will provide for you in that way. God has a plan for your life; He protects you. These mandates are for the betterment of our lives; these mandates are in our best interest. Be patient; all in good time. If you do not have the right of remarriage, then the parenthesis belongs to us.

If you ask yourself, is God unfair? What happened to me was not my fault? You might be trying to convince yourself that one passage of Scripture does not outweigh the other. You cannot say, "I like v. 9 better than v. 11; I have an active libido, and my desires are what counts; so I am going to obey v. 9 and remarry." You must take all Scripture into account and not take one passage over another. One passage does not contradict nor does it supercede another. This is a part of the science of hermeneutics (which also includes the illumination of a passage to a pastor). You cannot pick and choose which passage you are going to choose to follow. You cannot isolate a passage from its context, and follow it; and you take the words literally, apart from any context; and decide, for instance, "I have the right of remarriage if I still have feelings for someone." Don't play one against the other. The Scripture has many solutions to problems. The solution to our problem may not be what we want. It may not be our first choice. However, every time the Bible tells us something, whether we agree or not, the Bible is always right. God says this for a reason. It is very hard to hear some of these things. It makes us look at ourselves and say, "I haven't done too well in this area." God wants us to start from this point, follow His mandates, and realize that they are for our benefit and happiness.

Volition is the key here; the woman can remain or not remain; but the mandate is that the woman remain unmarried. Αγαμος = to remain unmarried. This is a woman who does not have the right of remarriage at this moment. If the previous spouse dies or remarries, then she can remarry. She might contemplate remarriage, so this instruction is to her. This is the progressive present; one of persistent action. She must remain in this status of non-marriage. Even brutality is not a contract-breaking reason. She has a second option if she does not like the first. Καταλασσω = to be reconciled. Aorist passive imperative. This means to get back together in a marital state and to leave behind the enmity of separation. This is an interesting choice of verbs here. It is a very descriptive word for getting back together. Remember, reconciliation.

We were divorced from God, so to speak; Jesus Christ took the enmity which was between us and God and supplied us with peace. We can now be permanently reconciled to God through faith alone in Christ alone. We can now have a relationship with Jesus Christ; and this is the word which is used here. There are similarities between the husband and wife who are separated and the enmity between ourselves and God. Real reconciliation does away with the enmity between spouses and changes it to peace. By analogy, there should be no remaining bitterness between husband and wife. For the woman to be reconciled is not simply to just go back to whatever was there before. This reconciliation leaves anger, bitterness, etc. all behind. This is to be left behind in reconciliation. This is an imperative of permission. It mandates a correct choice of action. We have the permission to make a choice. This may or may not happen; but it is still our option. This second option is a mandate to reconcile. Once separated does not mean always separated. Even if a legal divorce takes place, this is always open (unless one of the two remarry in between). An ingressive aorist indicates that the action of reconciliation occurs in a point of time. She enters into a state of reconciliation. The best way, is one makes an approach to the other, and there is mutual understanding as to what is in the best interest of both parties (and for whatever children might be involved). Maybe the greener pastures beckon, and now you have found out that the pastures are pretty brown. You might have the right person who goes a little crazy in middle age. The desire of a believer to operate under the banner of due benevolence.

When out of fellowship, there are a number of things which can occur; a number of bad decisions which we can make which causes problems with the partner; and we need to fulfill the principle of due benevolence. This is an imperative of permission; reconciliation may not be the right thing to do. The danger might not be lessened; the brutality may still be there. If possible, here is the option: reconcile (or stay unmarried).

A neutral party can sometimes effect a reconciliation. They can bring the couple together and tell them, come out to the middle of the ring, but do not fight. Not just anyone can fit this bill. This can even be a trained marriage counselor. There is a problem with human viewpoint subjective counseling, which is superficial, based upon emotions and superficiality. Counseling can at times can be helpful if it brings you to some objectivity. Do not depend upon it. The secret of any counseling is to provide you with some objectivity. Ultimately, however this occurs, both parties must agree to reconcile. By the way, Bobby does not does marriage counseling. He gives us the doctrinal principles which allow us to be objective. One reason to take the first option of separation, is to step back and to think about what is going on in your life. Objectivity is the key, then the wife needs to go to her husband with humility and to make her desire clear. This should not be in a way to be pugnacious. This should not be accusing or vitriolic. There is no reconciliation apart from humility. Jesus did not think higher of Himself; He made this sacrifice. This should be the same attitude of reconciliation between spouses. Once this reconciliation overture is made by the wife, then the husband cannot use leverage against her. If he does this, enmity will remain. Reconciliation depends upon doctrine in the soul and regained grace orientation. This is the advantage of doctrine in the soul. Grace orientation and humility are great problem solving devices. Once you have this attitude, then wait on the Lord to take this further. When you tell your spouse clearly that you want reconciliation, then let him think about it. Let him think about what he wants to do. Then and only then can the reconciliation be effected.

Rebound brings doctrine back into the picture. God can bring you to your knees faster than anyone else thinks possible. He can bring us to reconciliation much faster than we realize. We have to step back and let the Lord do His work. The bottom line is a lot of doctrine and a lot of patience must be applied by the wife in order to bring reconciliation about.

1Cor. 7:11 but if indeed she is separated, remain unmarried, or be reconciled to the husband; and a husband not to leave his wife.

1Cor. 7:10–11

Wednesday May 10, 2006

Lt. Colonel Stan Haines returned from Bagdad after a year, and he listens to MP3 files there. He said that Iraq is a wonderful place to listen to doctrine. Fewer distractions. You can work out, work, and listen to doctrine. He was in the Green Zone in Bagdad. American soldiers are compassionate and caring. A medic was shot, but not hurt; the person who shot him was then shot and he, the doctor, then worked on him. We can win in Iraq and lose in America because of the way the war is reported and perceived.

1Cor. 7:10 But I command the ones being married (not I, but the Lord), that a woman is not to be separated from her husband; This verse has pretty much been studied.

V. 11 is parenthetical. There are 4 legitimate contract situations before God.

V. 11 begins with a 3rd class condition. The woman always have the option to walk out when she decides, "I have had enough." The 3rd class condition means she may or may not leave. There may be physical or mental abuse; or she may be protecting her children from various attacks of the husband; prison terms for life, always in debt due to gambling; etc. And, of course, there are fickle reasons as well, e.g., having an affair. Or, a woman whose children just take too much time out of her life; or she prefers a career over marriage; or, she is generally dissatisfied with her life. So, there are a number of reasons why a woman might depart from marriage. However, all of these reasons fall under the same category with respect to God: there is no right to remarriage. Getting out of a marriage even for a very valid reason does not always include with it the right of remarriage. It seems so unfair to us, that a woman might separate from a criminal or one who abuses her; however, God is fair.

There are practical reasons why a woman should not remarry after leaving a bad marriage.

Practical Reasons

1. The woman may not be emotionally ready for marriage for a period of time, even for a very just cause; especially for certain just causes.
2. She has injuries and scars and general subjectivity which are not conducive to choosing another spouse.
3. Under these conditions, she is in danger of another mistake in that frame of mind.

4. Emotional trauma, no matter how amicable your separation/divorce is, and scar tissue always occur in divorce, without exception. That scar tissue and emotional upheaval leaves the woman open for being easily manipulated and used.
5. She needs time to recover, using doctrine and the problem solving devices. She must get her soul in order.
6. This does not mean, if divorce is not for a contract breaking reason, that does not mean that celibacy will be for a lifetime.
7. Contract breaking justifications which give the right of remarriage can occur after a non-contract breaking reason for a divorce or separation. If you separate for a non-contract breaking reason, you do not have the right to remarry. However, this could change.
  - a. Death or remarriage of a former spouse. This allows the right of remarriage.
8. The Lord's timing is perfect always; therefore, we need to wait upon Him.
9. If we are to remarry with divine endorsement, it will be at the right time for the right reasons, and the right person will come along. Our part is to continue our spiritual advance while waiting.
10. Otherwise, remain unmarried. Patiently wait on the Lord and His plan for our life.

There is a 2nd option. "I'm out of one marriage, so I am going to remarry with someone else because I want to." If you do that, you have problems and you will have problems. You are out of God's will.

The other option is, be reconciled to your former husband or wife. Leave behind the enmity of your separation. That is a critical aspect; there will be no good marriage if the wife holds onto bitterness and other mental attitude sins.

When you are in this situation, you must be objective and look at yourself for a moment and decide, where did I go wrong; how did I go astray. The only person you can change and fix is yourself.

Where there is brutality or criminality, then there should not be a reconciliation. Stay unmarried under those circumstances. Do not go back to brutality; do not put yourself into a co-dependent relationship.

Reconciliation requires first and foremost humiliation. You must approach this with true humility. You cannot go to the other and say, "I know where the problem is, and here is how you can fix it." That reveals bitterness, lack of objectivity, and a vitriolic attitude.

Grace oriented is not only directed to God's grace for us; but we also look at others and are gracious to them, whether they deserve it or not. Grace orientation means that you have a great shot at a good relationship (and you may want to find this in the mind of another person as well).

Utilize the time to gain some objectivity. You cannot be objective, if you divorce, and then, a few weeks later, hook up with someone else for companionship. Always wait on the Lord when dealing with the other spouse. You can't simply say, "I want to reconcile" and expect it to happen the next day. The husband must eventually agree to the reconciliation. Get it together and remain single or reconcile.

1Cor. 7:11a but if indeed she is separated, remain unmarried, or be reconciled to the husband;....

In this second half of the verse, we have the missing verb  $\xi\omicron\rho\iota\zeta\omega$ . Instead, we have the present active infinitive of  $\alpha\phi\iota\acute{\epsilon}\mu\iota + \mu\eta$

There is an indicative here, not an imperative, and we may think that we, as guys, are okay. However, we are not getting over on anything here.  $\alpha\phi\iota\eta\mu\iota$  is an infinitive, which makes it even more interesting; this carries a lot of force, and using an infinitive.

Does this mean that the husband has no reason to walk out? With a just cause, the man has the right to walk and and remarry. Why is Paul so emphatic here?

What Husbands Get Nailed Here

1. By divine design, husbands in the home are leader and the wife is the responder.
2. The husband has the strong obligation to protect the woman's responsiveness. Her responsiveness can be ruined.
3. The husband's desertion unquestionably damages the wife by
4. Desertion corrupts the woman's femininity. When a woman is a responder, she is a beautiful, feminine woman. Leaver her corrupts her sensitive demeanor. This hardens the woman, which is not pretty. No good unless doctrine is a salve for her soul. Because a woman is deserted,, etc., A woman should not become hardened.
5. A hardened soul attitude is always a risk for a woman who leaves her role; this is a soul hazard for the jilted woman, which is more likely to occur in her because of her hard nation. She loses her femininity when this occurs.
6. Paul's intense injunction to the husband recognizes the roles of the husband and wife and how they are very different. Paul uses an infinitive when addressing the husband.

"Do not send her way; don't do it." Leadership always has this responsibility. The man has 51% of the stock of the marriage. Give the woman nothing—no love, no care—and the woman will become decidedly unfeminine.

God is no different in the Old and New Testaments. The context in which His character is found. Paul never forgets the divine design by God for Adam and the woman and this is reflected in his writings. There is no contradiction between the testaments. The man and the woman's relationship continues in ever dispensation. This is universal, for all time.

The man cannot welsh on his obligation, whether he gets any attention or not. The man is required to maintain due benevolence, whether or not you get anything back from it. This is the problem with leadership. A military leader does not simply quite when his troops do not respond to him as you think they should. The leader must deal with that. The husband with a troop of 1 must then use problem solving devices,

What Do We Have when We have a Wife?

1. We are the guardian and custodian of a woman's responsive soul.
2. Part of the man's due benevolence is not to facilitate the destruction of our wife's responsiveness. Provide her no leadership and allow her soul to become hard.
3. How should we think of this concept? Guard the little girl in her. They never lose that, and the husband can lose this for her.
4. The husband must continue to love his wife, whether she is in revolt or not. It is much easier to say, "I'm out of here; why do I need this?"
5. A man who can be the protector and guardian of a woman's soul is a true man; he is a great lover. It has nothing to do with the physical. The physical is a response. The great lover has to do with the leadership in his soul and it is a demonstration of integrity.
6. To the ladies: if you are fortunate enough to have such a man, appreciate and respect him; that is your due benevolence and response to him. This is how marriage works and this is how we keep marriages working.

The man, if he ruins this woman, will never know the true responsiveness of a woman if he ruins her responsiveness. When the husband is no leader, then it is very hard on the wife. Only the wife can survive by responding to doctrine. That is her only option then. The woman's only problem is to respond; the husband is to lead and cultivate her responsiveness. "Wives, don't leave your husbands, and if you do, you can remain separated or you can be reconciled; HUSBAND'S, DON'T LEAVE!" is what Paul is saying.

1Cor. 7:11b ... and a husband not to send away his wife.

1Cor. 7:11-13

Lesson #345

Thursday May 11, 2006

Marriage and divorce is an area where we need instructions; some of these are found in v. 11.

The woman walks out the door, with a good reason or not; Paul sets up conditions for this woman: she is to remain unmarried or she can be reconciled to her husband.

1Cor. 7:11a but if indeed she is separated, remain unmarried, or be reconciled to the husband;...

The counterpart is then given. This is a Christian marriage that we are speaking of here. Present active infinitive of ἀφίημι+μη = do not send away. This is a mandate for the husband to stay put in his marriage. We would expect this to be in the imperative mood; however, it is in the infinitive. The context implies the demanding nature of the verb. It is close to μένω which is in the imperative mood; it is close to the imperative καταλασσω. Those are applied to the woman; and this verb is similarly applied to the husband. Also has the impact of an imperative. This makes it a very strong command. Paul is coming down twice as hard on the husband as he does on the wife. He does not restate these options for the husband. The two options are just as pertinent to the husband; but Paul does not say that. It is more of an emphatic statement, with the infinitive. The emphasis is upon the husband to stay.

We might think that the husbands and wives are to be treated equally, but this is not the case. Paul is more assertive in the mandate for the husband to remain in the marriage. The husband is the designated leader by divine design. If the husband does not follow the mandate of v. 11, then he has abdicated his position as leader in the home. The wife has no leadership to respond to in marriage. These are roles in marriage designed by God and inferiority is not implied. The wife now has no husband to respond to: the woman might respond to another man, which is very destructive to her own soul and to the marriage. The woman can also react to the situation, which causes the woman to harden her soul, which corrupts her feminine soul. A man does not have to respond; that is not his role. The woman has no choice but to be a responder, and she will become, in essence, hardened. Since she cannot respond to her husband, she then reacts and hardens her soul. This woman has a very difficult time under these circumstances. Her soul can be easily turned to anger, vindictiveness and bitterness toward her husband, who has walked out. This hardens her; the scar tissue develops on her soul and the arteries to her grace apparatus for perception are blocked. The harder she gets, the more difficult it is to remove that scar tissue. The heart of the woman turned against her husband can also turn against the Lord. Her reaction is like a wildfire that burns down everything in its path. Doctrine is all the Christian woman has if she no longer has her husband to respond to. Negative volition brings on the hardening. Doctrine is all the believing wife has to respond to when her husband departs. Doctrine is her hope and her help when her husband is gone. This doctrine retains the femininity and responsiveness of a woman's soul. However, the woman can easily react to her husband, then to God, and she becomes what might be called damaged goods. She has forsaken the only thing which can chip away at her fossilized soul. She needs a stint; something to open up her arteries, and that would be rebound and then doctrine. When a woman reacts to her husband and then to God, then she opens her soul up to radical feminist thinking. She will develop contempt for her husband and then for men in general. She becomes a man in her thinking; hardness makes her masculine. If she abdicates her role as a responder, then she can become very masculine. This is a great hazard when divorce/separation occur. Men are 51% responsible for the marriage and if, as leaders, they walk away, they have abdicated their leadership. However, the wife is also responsible to some extent. She needs to function without bitterness and vindictiveness ruling her soul.

1Cor. 7:11b ... and a husband not to send away his wife.

Summary of 1Cor. 7:11

1. There is a powerful weight given here to maintain the bond of marriage.
2. The fact that the man and woman are mandated not to remarry and to reconcile highlights the powerful weight given to maintaining the marriage bond.
3. Always remember that reconciliation between husband and wife does not extend to the point of endangering her life, health or the lives of her children. From then on, the only option is no remarriage. If the former spouse dies or remarries, then the woman can remarry.

4. The husband has the additional responsibility of leadership, which is why Paul is so emphatic here. He is responsible for the responsiveness of his wife.
5. Also remember that v. 11 does not really address remarriage; this is covered elsewhere. This verse only addresses the necessity of maintaining Christian marriage.

The rest does not include the categories of unmarried or married Christians. What Paul will address next is a mixed marriage, where one spouse is a believer and another is an unbeliever. One reason for maintaining a believer/unbeliever marriage is evangelism. This does not mean you get married and use that to evangelize your opposite number (which is insanity and violates the divine mandate).

We might add an additional note that lengthy dating to an unbeliever by a believer can be problematic as well. The way a mixed marriage occurs is, after two unbelievers get married, one of the two spouses believes in Jesus Christ. The believing spouse has not violated any mandates here. Now, some will jump out of a marriage based on this, and say, "We're unequally yoked; I'm out of here." That is a misapplication. The other mixed marriage is where a believer ignores the mandate and marries an unbeliever, even though they should not do so. If you are dating an unbeliever or madly in love with an unbeliever; never marry when there is any doubt that your prospective mate is an unbeliever. When you are in love with someone, you desperately want them to be a believer. And of course, some justify it by thinking, "Maybe I can evangelize them in marriage." It is not a good idea to begin from a position of disobedience. Be careful not to rationalize because you are so emotionally involved.

It is not wrong to marry a negative believer; however, if you do not have the like-mindedness of doctrine, then you have placed yourself in a similar situation as the believer and unbeliever. You will be going in different directions. The best marriage is two believers heading in the right direction. Without this like-mindedness, you have married someone that you will never enjoy true like-mindedness with.

The example is the husband who has been converted, but the wife has not. Let's first look at the mixed marriage background in the Corinth church. When Paul evangelized in Corinth, he spend another 18 months evangelizing and teaching doctrine. This resulted in some marriages which were mixed marriages. Paul no doubt gave help and instructions and advice to those in these mixed marriages. Apparently, once Paul left, this problem became much worse.

The unbelieving spouse may have figured, "This is just some cult; this is a phase. It will be no big deal and it will wear off. Just another aberration to wait out." However, the believing spouse gained a little momentum and there grew between them separation. This problem reached a boiling point in Corinth, which is why the Scripture is so adamant about no mixed marriages. The gulf widens as time goes on. So, under these conditions, one of the other began to threaten separation or divorce, or they had separated or divorced.

Here, Paul will address the responsibility of the believer spouse. In previous instructions, Paul was quoting instructions by Jesus Christ; however, he is going to speak and say that these were not instructions given by Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ did not speak on the issue of mixed marriages. There is no repeating here, as these instructions did not exist. However, what Jesus said are the instructions of God. However, some who have not even a clue about doctrine, might say, "What did Jesus say? What would Jesus do?" And then they go off on a tangent which is their own interpretation or adaptation and is 180° removed from what Jesus would teach.

Paul writing here is just as binding as anything which Jesus has said.  $\epsilon\iota$  + present active indicative of  $\epsilon\chi\omega$  = if it is... This  $\epsilon\iota$  is a 1st class condition, which means that such a marriage exists. This is not a hypothetical situation; it is a real-life situation. It applies to us. The second clause is and if she consents to live with him; which assumes the reality of the condition. Either the unbelieving spouse stays or she goes; and in this case, we are speaking of a spouse who chooses to stay. The verb is present active indicative of  $\sigma\upsilon\nu\epsilon\upsilon\delta\omicron\kappa\epsilon\omega$  = to be willing, to be content. This is really directed toward both; if both are not willing. However, the real direction is toward the believing husband, as Paul has no authority over the unbelieving wife. She cannot respond to doctrine; she is unable to do so. She can't understand the necessity of absolute standards. The believer has absolute standards from doctrine and she does not. And she cannot apply it; it is not part of her soul. The unbeliever must rely on their own standards, which are always human standards and human viewpoint. They can't be anything else. One more reason not to be unequally yoked is, it is so easy to compromise doctrine. His thinking is divine viewpoint and hers is human viewpoint, and they are often miles apart. The believer does understand human viewpoint, and human viewpoint is therefore their common ground. The only compromise is the believer to go to human viewpoint and compromise the doctrine in his soul. That is their common ground. He must descend to her level of human viewpoint for the marriage to remain compatible. So, how can Paul say, "Stay married when this could hinder the spiritual advance of the believer husband." The woman can learn to live under divine establishment (and that might even be her thinking), but she cannot join him in the realm of divine viewpoint in spiritual matters.

The woman must be willing to stay with him, but there can be no compromise of divine viewpoint. The man must continue to advance spiritually. Being married to an unbeliever makes spiritual advance very difficult. There is a built-in gulf between your thinking. However, as a growing believer, you must maintain that gulf. The believer in a mixed marriage must understand what they are undertaking. The husband must have willingness to remain in this marriage without forsaking divine viewpoint. Paul wrote in Philippians, "I have learned to be content in whatever circumstances I find myself in." So, not only must you negotiate the difference in thinking, and you must grow; but you must also be content. It involves great spiritual advance in order to remain in such a marriage. Otherwise, you will fall into reversionism and be in the same condition as your unbelieving spouse; meaning that you will never be content in your marriage. The believer has a responsibility under these conditions. If you succeed here, you can succeed as a believer in any situation.

1Cor. 7:12 But to the rest I say, not the Lord, if any brother has an unbelieving wife, and she consents to live with him, let him not leave her.

1Cor. 7:13 And a woman who has an unbelieving husband, and he consents to live with her, let her not leave him.

1Cor. 7:12

Sunday 1 May 14, 2006

The question before Paul now is, what about mixed marriages? What about those marriages where one person had become a believer and the other one had not. Some wanted out, and this was a good excuse.

There are two basic reasons for mixed marriages: (1) evangelism; two unbelievers get married; as a result of witnessing, one of the two believes in Jesus Christ; so one is saved and the other is unsaved. This is a no-fault situation for the believer. He has not violated any mandate. (2) Disobedience, where a believer becomes emotionally involved with an unbeliever and he marries the woman anyway. Complete disregard for the Scripture. Problems which are natural will ensure; and discipline also will kick in. If and when they return to doctrine, they are still married to an unbeliever. The soul of the believer may have changed, but he is still married to this unbeliever.

Εἰ + present active indicative of εἶπω = if one has. The normal idea of a 1st class condition is, we assume the reality of the condition or of the protasis (or the premise). “If such a mixed marriage exists (and we are assuming that it does),...” This is a compound protasis, so there is a second part to it. “...and if she consents to live with him,...” We have a mixed marriage and the unbeliever wife is willing to remain with the believer husband. Συνευδοκῶ = to consent, to be willing. The woman is willing to remain with this man; she has no desire to separate from her believing husband. Paul is making the assumption that there is a woman in a marriage who is an unbeliever but still willing to living with her believer husband. The doctrine here is directed toward the believing husband. Paul cannot give doctrinal instructions to the unbelieving wife; she has not apparatus to understand doctrine; she has no real interest in doctrine and does not recognize its authority. What Paul says means nothing to her. The truth of Scripture has no meaning for her. No unbeliever has the grace apparatus for perception. Now, some unbelievers do agree with this or that point of Scripture, but it is because this is in agreement with their upbringing or their own personal beliefs, not because it is the accurate Word of God. The question is, what should be the attitude of this believer husband? “If you remain with this woman, do not forsake the doctrine in your soul.” His wife cannot accept divine viewpoint, simply because it is divine viewpoint. If she accepts a principle now and again, it is because it is in agreement with her thinking, and not because it is absolute truth. A believer can have divine standards; but an unbeliever cannot understand the underling premise of divine standards. The believer can easily fall into human viewpoint; she cannot leave human viewpoint. Human viewpoint is their only common ground. Ultimately, he may come to her human viewpoint thinking, because this makes their marriage more compatible. Between a believer and unbeliever, there is a gulf which cannot be bridged by the unbelieving one: the unbeliever cannot come over to divine viewpoint.

Paul, knowing the danger full-well, still tells the believer husband, “Stay in the marriage.” The believer must stay, focus on doctrine, and find contentment in this situation. This situation is tailor-made for discontent on the part of the believer.

The Apostle Paul was not married, but he writes as an expert, through the inspiration of God the Holy Spirit. This is absolute divine viewpoint.

Instructions to the Believer in a Mixed Marriage

1. Stay married to the unbelieving woman, if she is willing.
2. Do not forsake doctrine in order to get some compatibility.
3. Do not get restless in this situation; have peace and contentment in your soul.

1Cor. 7:12 But to the rest I say, not the Lord, if any brother has an unbelieving wife, and she consents to live with him, let him not leave her.

1Cor. 7:12–13

Sunday 2 May 14, 2006

Paul has dealt with single believers and married believers; and now he is going to deal with the rest, which will be mixed marriages. Paul is not distinguishing between the ways that a person falls into this marriage.

The believer has the obligation to stay, if she is willing to remain married; the unbeliever gets to make the call. Even being divinely establishment oriented, a believer and unbeliever still will not share divine viewpoint. They will have a few areas of agreement. The only way a believer can find more areas of compatibility, is to compromise the doctrine that he has. There will always be this fundamental disconnect; they will always lack the most fundamental area of compatibility.

The believer is not to pull some kind of a scheme to cause the woman to leave him; that is not being content. At this point, the woman has not responded to the gospel, but she wants to remain with her man; then he should remain with her. If the husband is growing, then the woman will recognize that there is something missing in her life. We can have quite an impact on the unbelieving spouse if we continue to grow and act in accordance with our growth. Our growth becomes a passion and the spouse is unable to share in this, and they will notice the gap. This ends up being testing but ultimately great blessing which will accelerate our advance. What greater motivation than to have such an impact on the life of the person closest to you in this life.

The final phrase is a present active imperative of ἀφῆμι+μη = do not leave. In this context, it means do not divorce, do not depart, do not send away. The husband is mandated not to send this wife away. This has the same strength that we find in v. 11, where two believers in a marriage were told not to leave either. This answers the mail of this question: what do we do with an unbelieving spouse?

Why Should You Remain with an Unbelieving Spouse?

1. There is always the possibility of the salvation of the unbelieving.
2. Do not get self-righteous and claim that your marriage is not longer valid, as that is a violation of your integrity. You made the promise, for better or for worse. It does not matter if she is an unbeliever; you made that promise, not just to her, but to God.
3. You don't drop out when you tell God that you are going to do what He tells you to do. We are not to use Christianity as an excuse to get divorced. We must take responsibility for our choice.
4. Use the time in your mixed marriage to live the Christian life and to advance to maturity. This will demonstrate to your wife the advantage of the spiritual life. When your life is stable, when you don't lose control under difficult circumstances, when you demonstrate self-control and integrity, this will make an impact on the spouse.
5. The salvation of the spouse comes first; their spiritual condition is the primary concern; not your happiness or unhappiness, or emotional concerns. Their spiritual condition is what takes priority; not how we feel. If we dump an unbelieving wife for no good reason, then we have demonstrated the fallacy of our beliefs.
6. Marriage, mixed or otherwise, provides stability in society. There is also a gospel witness to the rest of society, even from a mixed marriage. You still have an impact as a believer with an unbeliever in a marriage. How much greater is your impact when you live in a mixed marriage and you handle it perfect. This is a witness for your believing friends as well; you are a witness for maturity. There is the security of a home for children and the parental responsibility to raise them. Stability in the home is extremely important. You have the opportunity to evangelize these children; their spiritual condition is important as well.
7. We must always accept responsibility for our decisions, good or bad. For better or for worse. Even if you got married as an unbeliever, you still made the choice to marry that person. You don't get to blame God and say, "Why did He let me do this before I was saved?" Or "...before I got some doctrine."
8. This is the demonstration of integrity from the doctrine in your soul. You don't solve the carnality of a bad decision with more carnality. There is no blessing in this approach. Two wrongs don't make a right. You may have a bad marriage, but you can still have contentment. Getting out of a bad marriage will not make your life all better and without any difficulties. Most people have the mindset, "I'm in a bad situation; I will just jump out and into a better marriage."

1Cor. 7:12 But to the rest I say, not the Lord, if any brother has an unbelieving wife, and she consents to live with him, let him not leave her.

The next verse is simply the reverse of v. 12. All that applied previously applies to the Christian wife who has a non-Christian husband. The two verbs in v. 13 are exactly the same verbs that we found in v. 12. The only change in these verses are the subjects.

The woman here is the believing one. If the unbelieving husband is willing to remain married, then she needs to stay married to her. He married her for a good reason perhaps in the first place—attraction, compatibility, children, etc. If the husband is willing to stay married, then the woman must stay, she must be content, and she must continue to advance spiritually.

Αφιημι+μη = do not send away, divorce, separate. There were obviously some wives in Corinth with the same circumstances. The wife might say, “We’re responders, not those in authority; and if he does not believe in Jesus Christ, then as a responder, we need to get out of this.” However, there are no mitigating factors. What applies to the husband above applies to the wife below.

Do not make the life of your husband so miserable that he cannot wait to get out of this marriage. This is not desertion. You have no grounds to remarry. If the husband agrees to remain in marriage, then the marriage must not be dissolved. It is the believer in both cases whose course is definitive. The believer can only get out of the marriage if the unbelieving spouse leaves—and again, this cannot be done by making the unbeliever miserable because of your actions. Believers must always consider divine instructions first. The unbeliever is not under a Biblical injunction; the believer is.

The actions and thoughts of the believer may have an affect on the decision of the unbelieving spouse. The attitude should be due benevolence toward the unbelieving spouse. There should be no arguing; it ultimate boils down to the choice of the unbeliever. The believer is not to worry about their own feelings or desires, but their thinking should be toward the salvation of their unbelieving spouse; and, if there are kids, toward their salvation and spiritual growth as well. Due benevolence reflects the Bible doctrine and integrity in the soul of the believer spouse. The believer has tremendous responsibility in a mixed marriage.

If the reason for the marriage is disobedience, the injunctions of v. 12–13 remain. Two wrongs never make a right; especially here. Divorce often creates a whole host of additional problems. There are new and greater problems which may come out of divorce. You get out of a situation that you don’t like, but there will be repercussions for us. Divorce is not a panacea. It might be necessary under brutality and criminality; but remarriage can only be allowed under the reasons already covered.

An unbeliever pairing with a believer will mean that there will never be like-mindedness; there will never be true intimacy. Sanctification of an unbelieving spouse. You don’t marry an unbeliever in order to witness to them. You don’t marry an unbeliever to bring them to Christ. You cannot expect them to be saved simply because you have married. That is a weird branch of covenant theology; you are married and therefore, the unbelieving wife and the children are saved by covenant. They are not sanctified by being in the marriage.

1Cor. 7:13 And a woman who has an unbelieving husband, and he consents to live with her, let her not leave him.

Bobby quotes Scripture about an ox and an ass being hooked together from Deuteronomy. It is an agricultural analogy. There can be no like-mindedness and no soul rapport between the believer and unbeliever; not full compatibility; there might be some.

So, what do we do about this situation where we are supposed to remain married to an unbeliever if we are saved partway through the marriage. Not to be unequally yoked means to stay out of intimate relationships with unbelievers; these can be close friends, marriage partners, business partners, false teachers, etc. If you are not already married to an unbeliever, then don't do it. 1Cor. 6:14 does not tell us what to do if we are already married. If we are in a mixed marriage, we don't get to walk out of our marriage for this reason. The believer husband or wife should not become self righteous and say, "Too bad, honey, I'm a believer and you aren't; bye bye." If the unbeliever agrees to stay, the marriage is not to be dissolved. There is this lack of likemindedness, and there is this person that you wish to have total compatibility with, but you cannot. However, God mandates us to remain in this situation. The solution is for the partner to believe in Jesus Christ and then to begin advancing. There is hope.

Points on Being in a Mixed Marriage

1. In the mixed marriage, careful and concentrated effort must be made so as not to compromise or forsake doctrine. The unbelieving spouse will influence you, and possibly move you away from doctrine. This is why you must be consistent in your taking in of doctrine. You must resist human viewpoint in this situation. This is a built-in incompatibility. You must resist finding common ground in human viewpoint. It is difficult to resist human viewpoint in your own home. When doctrine is in your soul and a part of your life, you are blessed beyond anything the temporal life has to offer.
2. The divine viewpoint of the believer and the human viewpoint of the unbeliever is a marriage liability. It is a built-in incompatibility. This is the importance of keeping your eyes on the Lord and your mind on doctrine. You, the believer, must learn to deal with the incompatibility. The unbeliever doesn't have to work as hard.
3. Human viewpoint will always be a separator and can be a source of friction for the unbeliever. The unbeliever has no such thing; they have no problem solving devices.
4. It will always be a temptation to compromise doctrine. There will never be a time when you won't be so tempted. This is to gain compatibility and common ground with this person that you love. The temptation will always be there. Your only possibly common ground is divine establishment at best and human viewpoint at worst.
5. Believers can exist in such a marriage without compromising doctrine. You can even have a good marriage under these circumstances.

There must be a good reason to remain in this sort of a marriage. There is always the possibility of bringing the unsaved mate to Jesus Christ. This will bring you both to great compatibility. You might reach that likemindedness in your lives. You have the obligation to your spouse to bring him or her to Jesus Christ. Having this impact takes spiritual maturity and Bible doctrine in your soul. It is not an easy task. This is the upside for the believer in a mixed marriage. The believer has the opportunity for accelerated advance if he or she keeps their focus on doctrine. That is also an incredible upside to this. This fulfills the mandate of 1Cor. 7:12–13. This is our obligation and opportunity. Remaining together provides stability for the nation in which you live. Security of a home for children is also provided. Parents have the responsibility to raise children without rancor and without separation. The principle of accepting responsibility for your decisions, good or bad.

1Cor. 7:12 But to the rest I say, not the Lord, if any brother has an unbelieving wife, and she consents to live with him, let him not leave her.

In a criminal case, there are a number of options for penalty: fines, community service, incarceration, and capital punishment. We are about the only western nation which still utilizes capital punishment. Capital punishment is sanctioned by Scripture. Murder in the course of a robbery is a capital offense. Divorce is like capital punishment and it is only used in extreme cases of adultery and desertion. We do not use capital punishment for every murder; and you do not divorce for every adultery or desertion offense. The punishment for a mixed marriage is not divorce. The course of action for a mixed marriage is not capital punishment. Even when a capital offense has occurred, it is not mandatory to execute; and for a capital offense in marriage, divorce is not required either.

V. 15 will be authorization for remarriage under the situation of desertion.

As a believer should not marry an unbeliever; a believer interested in doctrine should not marry someone not interested in doctrine. With a believer who is negative, you can run into problems constantly about doctrinal growth.

We are all missing something in life; we all have some desire that we want fulfilled, and it remains unfulfilled. Marriage is one of those things. We have no right to have a ruined life because we don't have what we want.

1Cor. 7:13 And a woman who has an unbelieving husband, and he consents to live with her, let her not leave him.

The Bible blesses a marriage where at least one person is a believer. If there is a believer, then God sanctifies the marriage. Children born to an unrecognized marriage are bastards. Therefore, God recognizes mixed marriages. One of the greatest problems in the US is broken families; being born out of wedlock means a child is born with one or two strikes against them. Divorce or being born out of wedlock puts a child behind the 8-ball.

The Christian wife or husband has great influence. If we maintain our advance to spiritual maturity, we have a magnetism for the spouse; this is the magnetism of the spiritual life. It always attracts attention and it always gives testimony of God's person or plan through us.

Doctrine in our soul and due benevolence toward the spouse is the magnetism of the believing spouse. This mental attitude glows in the dark, so to speak. The advance in the spiritual life is the witness of something which unbelievers do not have. When you live like royalty, you are noticeable. The believer stands out because of doctrine in the soul.

1Cor. 7:

Thursday May 18, 2006

If you thumb your nose at Scripture, the law of volitional responsibility will catch up to you. Perhaps you married an unbeliever, as a believer. Perhaps you married a person as an unbeliever and later responded to the gospel.

“Maybe I don’t want to grow up spiritually, as my mate and I have some compatibility right now; and we might lose it if I continue to grow.” There you go again. This is about sanctification of that unbelieving spouse. Thinking that growth will ruin your marriage is a wrong thought.

You may have married as an immature believer. You might not have even known that you violated a Biblical mandate. You still decided to do it and the consequences of your actions are still the same, regardless of the reason that you married an unbeliever, you still did, and you grow up and you recognize that there is this missing piece. There is no like-mindedness in the souls of spouses, where one is spiritually grown and the other is an unbeliever. Hence, the prohibition against marrying an unbeliever. There is hope in a mixed marriage. We can take comfort in a mixed marriage. First, as a believer growing, you can pray for the salvation of your spouse. Prayer is the greatest weapon that you can use. Pray that you have the opportunity to present the gospel to your spouse. There is hope because there is always the possibility of your unbelieving spouse becoming a believer; and that can lead to great compatibility.

You will exhibit magnetism as a believer advancing in the spiritual life.

1. The magnetism always draws an interest and a consideration. When anyone views the mature spiritual life, they take notice. Such a life cannot be ignored; it is too unique and too novel in the devil’s world. It stands out like a flare popped on a dark night. When you live the spiritual life, you are a beacon of light.
2. Secondly, magnetism is influence. There is great magnetism in the secular world; fame, fortune, influence, etc.
3. This is spiritual magnetism that we are speaking of here.
4. This mature spiritual life and the Word of God must have impact on the ones who observe it.

What Does it Do?

1. You are a rock; you don't fall apart when others do.
2. Magnetism exhibits a stabilized, confident and grace oriented mental attitude in the soul. Grace orientation is so rare anywhere. Bobby recalls that there was a connection between Dan Quayle and Berachah Church tapes. There were lights all over the auditorium and press corps. Newsweek, US, Time, etc. They interviewed Bob several times, and he gave the gospel. They asked the question, how do you get money? There are many subtle and sometimes very obvious ways; and they were shocked that no one in the church ever asks for money. They were handed one of the books to show the financial policy. That attitude is stunning.
3. Magnetism is manifested by due benevolence; that is obligation which a spouse has to his or her mate. It is manifested, even when such benevolence is not reciprocated. It is part of grace orientation.
4. Magnetism declares to everyone who sees it the riches of the resources that we have in Jesus Christ. We demonstrate the edification complex; we reveal problem solving devices. It reveals the magnificence of His grace.
5. Summation: magnetism is the charisma of the mature believer. It is not appearance or fame or fortune. Even the dullest person on earth can still have charisma.

If you have married a negative believer, then you have married someone who still lacks like-mindedness. It is exactly the same as if they are an unbeliever. There will be a lack of compatibility. There will be an occasional foray into divine viewpoint; and even some divine establishment will not bridge the gap; it will not supply the full like-mindedness that doctrine in the soul gives. The magnetism of the spiritual life also has an impact on the negative believer, just as it does on the positive believer. Sometimes you might even pray for someone to get a kick in the rear end to get with doctrine. Sort of an imprecatory prayer. Just realize that you cannot do this with a sinful attitude.

Even if one spouse is an unbeliever, you can teach the gospel to your children; and then you can teach them some growth. You have influence on your children and on your spouse who is negative. Bobby knew a situation where there was a married couple where one handled a difficult set of circumstances and the other one could not; and that person went positive based upon the other.

There is a name for this: sanctification. Influence or magnetism and aspects of sanctification. ἁγιαζω = to sanctify, to set apart, to consecrate. We probably have a preconceived idea as to what it means. We know of several sanctifications: positional sanctification, experiential sanctification and ultimate sanctification. This is not what we have in this particular verse. What we are speaking of in this verse has nothing to do with salvation. No one is saved by being married to a believer. Positional sanctification is not in view here. Nor are the children saved just because they have a believing mother or father (any more than being born into a Christian home). This often is a matter of amalgamating the church and Israel, which is confusion. Every human being; everyone who has been born; everyone past the age of accountability must make their own individual decision for salvation. Family association does not bring salvation any more than association with a specific church. These concepts of association for salvation are simply off-shoots of covenant theology.

This taken into account, there is some sort of sanctification involved when one spouse is a believer.

What Does this mean?

1. Recall that the context is divorce.
2. The overall principle of sanctification in this verse, give divine authority for divine authority for mixed marriages to remain in status quo. If the unbeliever husband is sanctified by his believing wife, then that marriage is allowed.
3. A believer sanctifies the unbeliever spouse.
4. If divorce was the solution to a mixed marriage, then this verse would not be here. It would be meaningless, if Paul said, "Divorce is how you deal with a mixed marriage."
5. Sanctification of an unbelieving spouse is a doctrinal rationale for a believer to remain in a mixed marriage. Sanctification is a doctrinal rationale.
6. So, how do we define this sanctification if it is not experiential, positional or ultimate sanctification?
7. Bobby is going to take up an analogous situation from the Old Testament.

Abraham is a central figure in the Old Testament; Abraham and his people were consecrated to God for service as a nation, based upon Abram's faith in the God of Israel, Who is the God of Israel. This faith was reckoned to him for salvation. From the line of believing Abraham, a great nation came about. "I will make you a great nation and I will bless you." Ex. 19:6a: "You will be to Me a kingdom of priests and a holy nation [i.e., a client nation]." The Jewish client nation was to represent the Lord on earth. They were to evangelize and to preserve Scripture and to send out missionaries. This was the service that God selected for them to do. But, here is the problem: not all Israel is Israel (Rom. 9:6). It is not as though the Word of God has failed; for they are not all Israel who are descended from Israel; neither are they all children because they are merely Abraham's [physical] descendants. But, your descendants will be named Israel. (Rom. 9:6–8). They were formed and then led out of Egypt as a client nation. Many Jews of the client nation simply rejected their God. The nation continued as a client nation, despite the many unbelieving citizens.

Some Closing Points:

1. The client nation as a whole made up of believers and unbelievers would be a blessing to the earth; that is what a client nation does.
2. Yet, it was the believers in the client nation who make it a client nation.
3. The unbelievers were set apart and they were blessed by their association with the client nation. They were a part of the client nation and they were blessed greatly because of that.

4. They were not a part of the descendants of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob—spiritual descendants; even though they were racial descendants.
5. They were blessed by association with the client nation.
6. In other words, they were sanctified by association.
7. They were sanctified by association, but they were not saved by association. Everyone has their own choice; then, it was faith in Yahweh.
8. There is no such thing as salvation by association with another human being or church. That is Biblically false, inaccurate and apostate. Only union with Christ is one saved.
9. They got to see the ritual teaching of doctrine; they got the laws which guided the nation. All of these things contributed to their blessing. This was applicable to the entire nation; believers and unbelievers. In spite of the administration of the 5th cycle of discipline to several generations, the nation of Israel was still set apart to service. They were blessed by association as part of the nation Israel.
10. Jer. 31:31–34 is a new covenant, a kingdom of new believers, promised. In the Millennial kingdom, all Israel will be believers. This covenant does not include individual unbeliever futures. Israel's future is directed toward believers only.
11. There is some protection for them under the anti-Semitism clause of the Abrahamic Covenant. This is a consecration and a setting apart by association. Any nation can be called sanctified if it is set apart for service to God, and the same principle applies to us today. In the US, we are a client nation of believers and unbelievers; and they are blessed by living here. It is better to live here than anywhere else in the world.

1Cor. 7:14

Sunday 1 May 21, 2006

We are covering something which will make a mixed marriage tolerable; even something of blessing. Mixed marriages are always difficult and sometimes they can be devastating. A believer and an unbeliever intimately united as husband and wife, the closest relationship that two human beings can have, and those in a mixed marriage are unequally bound; and we are forbidden from entering into such a marriage.

We are to share happiness and contentment of God; and we are to share the growth of God; and we will not only have the great resources that He has given us, but have the most wonderful life due to these circumstances. However, in this pursuit, the unbelieving spouse is left out. The maturing believer in this greatest of relationship cannot share the greatest part of his or her life. That is truly a tragedy, and why mixed marriages can be so difficult. That which gives us meaning and purpose in life and that which defines our person sense of destiny in the plan of God is something that the unbeliever cannot share in. V. 14 brings a measure of hope to this mixed marriage problem.

We must focus on the verb ἁγιάζω = to sanctify, to set apart, to make holy, to separate, to consecrate. Positional sanctification, ultimate sanctification and experiential sanctification are doctrines that we have studied many times, and this refers to none of these 3. We are not holy, but when we believe in Jesus Christ, we are made holy; God sets us apart for service to Him. The word saint comes from the verb sanctify. The focus here is on the believer; it is about the believer when we speak of positional, experiential and ultimate sanctification. However, that is not the focus of this passage. The focus of this passage is divorce, separation, and mixed marriages. Here, we are dealing specifically unbelievers; the unbelieving one in a mixed marriage. In some way, this person is sanctified in this intimate association with a believing spouse. Many people have asked and answered this question; could a person be saved by being married to a believer? Are the children in a mixed marriage automatically saved? This is not the meaning here; all those who are born and reach the age of accountability, are personally responsible for believing in Jesus Christ. Everyone must make a decision with respect to Jesus Christ and salvation.

The context of this chapter is divorce; the unbeliever is sanctified by the presence of the believer, which means that the mixed marriage should be continued, as God has set that marriage apart to Himself. Only should the marriage be dissolved with remarriage as an option of the unbelieving spouse deserts the believing spouse.

However, we must understand what it means for the believer to be sanctified.

Review of Sanctification in a Mixed Marriage/An Illustration and Analogy to Israel

Israel began with Abraham and all of his descendants. They were selected and consecrated for service to God. This was all based upon Abraham's faith in Yahweh. Abram had faith and it was imputed to him as righteousness. Abraham was a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ. God gave Abraham a covenant, which forever confirmed His selection of Abraham's progeny, where God said, "I will make from you a great nation and I will bless you." God's promise to Abram included a client nation. Restated in Exodus 13? "You will be to Me a kingdom of priests, a sanctified nation." However, not all Israel is Israel. The covenant was given to Israel, but not to all descended from Abraham, but to the believers only. Rom. 9:6–7 defines this problem: Not, however, that God's Word has failed. For not all those of Israel are Israel, nor because they are Abraham's seed are all children, but "In Isaac a Seed shall be called to you." Gen. 21:12 The Abrahamic covenant does not because God's covenant to the church. It is not as though God's Word has failed. They are not all Israel who are descended from Israel. The Word of God has not failed, but the Jews did. Abraham's physical descendants were not all saved. Through Isaac, your descendants will be named. The promise was given to Abraham and this promise remains with Abraham. God's promise to Abraham is immutable. Many Jews of the Old Testament rejected the God of Israel. They were not children of the promise. However, the nation was sanctified, nevertheless. It is the client nation as a whole, believers and unbelievers, who are sanctified, and who would be a blessing to the earth. It was the believer in Israel who is the future of Israel and who are the recipients of God's promise to Abraham. The future of Israel has nothing to do with the unbelievers of Israel. The unbelievers in the client nation were set apart and blessed by their association with the client nation Israel. They were blessed by association with this client nation.

1. Even though unbelievers were not true Israel, they were blessed by association with that nation.
2. The nation was sanctified, the unbelievers were sanctified by association. However, they were not saved by association.
3. Unbelievers are never a part of the eternal future of Israel. Jer. 31:31–34 is the new covenant to Israel, which does not supercede nor replace the Abrahamic covenant; it complements the Abrahamic covenant. The new covenant reconfirms Israel's future in relationship to God. The true progeny of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are recipients of this covenant.

The promises which God made to Abraham and to the nation Israel are still in effect; they did not shift to us as believers in the Church Age.

The Covenants and Israel

1. Israel's future is and always has been directed toward believers. The Abrahamic covenant and the new covenant are directed toward believers.
2. Therefore, Israel's consecration does not include an eternal future for those who are unbelievers. Rom. 9:6: Not all Israel is Israel.
3. Unbelievers received only temporal blessing and protection under the Abrahamic covenant.
4. The sanctification for unbelievers was their association with believing Jews in the client nation. This was their temporal blessing. They were certainly blessed by their temporal association. In the US, we are a client nation. Not all Americans are a part of the believing population; however, they share the blessings which God gives to Israel.
5. This defines unbeliever sanctification.
6. The analogy is between the sanctification of unbelieving Jews in nation Israel and the sanctification of the unbeliever in a mixed marriage.

This analogy provides the meaning of unbeliever sanctification.

The Meaning of Sanctification in a Mixed Marriage

1. A sanctified spouse does not refer to an unbeliever acquiring salvation by being married to a believer, although some teach this. Covenant theology teaches that we are spiritual Israel and that we are the recipients of the promises which God made to Israel.
2. Just as unbelieving Jews were blessed by association with client nation Israel, and just as unbelievers are blessed by association with client nation United States, both nations in their respective dispensation being set apart as client nations; so is an unbeliever sanctified by being married to an believer.

3. This means that God blesses a person even an unbeliever because they are related to a believer in marriage. This is a temporal thing; it is blessing by association in this life. This is why it is important for a believer to remain in a mixed marriage. The believer is a sanctifying force in the life of the unbelieving husband or wife.

How are unbelievers sanctified in a mixed marriage? In what way are they blessed? In what way does God set them apart? They are set apart in blessing by association. Acts 16:31: And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and you will be saved, you and your household. Paul and Barnabas are in prison, and God did not want them there. God wanted them out; the jailer is upset, and he is upset, and he might be executed or locked up, and he is about to commit suicide. As Paul walked by him, Paul says, “Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and you will be saved, you and your household.” There would be two changes; he would be saved eternally, and that God would deliver him in time. Paul adds here, “...and your household.” This is the only means of salvation—faith alone in Christ alone. However, his household would be sanctified through him; some would be saved and others would be blessed. Salvation is always an individual choice. Believe in Jesus Christ and you will be saved, you and your household.

More Points

1. The jailer expresses a faith response to what Paul says to him as Paul walks by.
2. Then the household is not saved by the jailer’s decision; but they are influenced and impacted for salvation and blessing by the now-Christian spouse. This man will go home and he will present to them exactly what happened.
3. The jailer will believe first; now, he is a part of a mixed marriage. Now, he will bring the gospel to his family. He will tell them what happened today at work, “You remember that earthquake today? Here is what happened at my jail.” The unbelieving spouse has intimate contact with the gospel through the believing husband. They will also observe his spiritual growth. The unbelieving spouse and the children are impacted by this jailer believing in Jesus Christ. There is blessing by association. Either spouse and/or children will be impacted for the gospel by the believing spouse.

1Cor. 7:14 For the unbelieving husband has been sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife has been sanctified by the husband; otherwise, your children are unclean, but now they are holy.

1Cor. 7:14–15

Sunday 2 May 21, 2006

When we find the word ἁγιαζω we tend to think of the sanctification of the believer and how we are sanctified in a point of time, in time, and in eternity; however, this is not what we are studying here.

Right away, we see that the unbelieving husband is sanctified through his believing wife. If this is not sanctification of salvation, then what is the meaning here? Now, what is clearly involved is an unbeliever being closely associated with a believer; just as unbelieving Jews in the client nation Israel are closely associated with the believers who form the client nations; just as unbelievers in the US are associated with the client nation USA. When enough believers do not grow, when they go into reversionism, then the client nation goes down. The unbelievers in the US who hate us are blessed by association by us in client nation Israel; this demonstrates the grace of God in client nation Israel. There is a personal sanctification. At halftime, a believing wife married an unbeliever; and the husband ridiculed her constantly; and she taught Sunday School. A friend asked her, why don't you divorce him? And before this man died, he became a believer in Jesus Christ. We as believers have an impact on the unbelieving spouse. This impact is for the gospel; and this impact is for blessing by association. "Here's what happened to me today at work, honey" is probably how he presented the gospel to his wife; and very likely she believed.

Scripture tells us not to get into a mixed marriage. However, some of us do it anyway; and some become believers after getting married. Our impact as growing believers is how we sanctify the unbelieving one in the marriage. When our lives fall apart under daily problems, we show that we are stable and can endure the difficulties of this life. The unbelieving spouse sees what he does not have. We demonstrate to the unbeliever something that can be seen nowhere else. That is sanctification of the unbeliever. There is also another impact, which is called heritage impact. We have an impact in this life, and we also have an impact on our spouse and family; but we have a heritage impact.

Heritage Impact

1. Loved ones and close friends of the believer receive blessings still even after the believers dies.
2. The invisible hero, the mature believer, the one with an impact in his lifetime, faces death with complete assurance that God will take care of those left behind, including unbelievers. Dying grace is one of the greatest witnesses of life. Sometimes, this is the only way that they recognize God's grace.
3. God takes care of those left behind at your death. Psalm 37:25: I have been young, but now I am old [David is dying between several virgins in a bed], yet I have not seen the righteous forsaken or his descendants begging bread. This is blessings after the grave; that is heritage impact. They are not forsaken by God because of their association with us. Those who survive the mature believers death are blessed not because they are spiritual winners; and some might even be unbelievers. However, they are still blessed by God's high regard for the departed believer. This is a wonderful illustration of blessing by heritage. Spiritual losers and unbelievers all receive God's grace and blessing.

In no other way can an unbeliever recognize and understand the gospel, but through you, the believer. This is the closest contact this unbeliever has; and this remains even after you die.

This tells us, do not jump out of such a marriage. This is our mandate, if married to an unbeliever.

Summary

1. If the unbeliever is sanctified in marriage by association with a believer; and this does occur, then divorce is not an option for the believing spouse.
2. You cannot walk out on the marriage to the unbeliever. You should not say, "I'm trapped, I want out; I am first, and I need to take care of myself first, and leaving his how I do that."
3. Divorce is not an option unless the unbelieving one walks out. Divorce would destroy the magnetism—the draw, the influence—that the believer has with his unbelieving husband or wife.
4. Will I please myself and stick it out because I have a sanctifying influence on this unbelieving husband (or wife), or will I walk out against God's mandate? You are not supposed to marry an unbeliever; and, if married, you are not to divorce such a one either.
5. In our context, this unbelieving sanctification is the most compelling argument against divorce. At one time, you loved this person; at one time, you wanted the world for this person. There is also the consideration of the children.
6. So here, divorce is connected with the downfall of a sanctified unbelieving child or adult.

Let's say you are so much in love that you simply marry someone even though they are an unbeliever. Now you have made a huge mistake. God's grace can use this mistake for the benefit of this unbelieving spouse. The grace of God never fails; we are the failures. When we make this mistake, we will get God's grace in discipline; and when we get back into fellowship, we get God's grace again.

7. Sanctification is the great hope and confidence for a mixed marriage because of this passage. There may be a deathbed conversion, and it is still part of your service to God. This may be your only service to God. This is the culmination and possibly the most important part of your Christian life.

Ακαθαρτος = not cleansed, not cleaned. Clean and unclean food is going to be a big part of the concerns of the Corinthians. There was meat offered to idols in a heathen temple, and there was an adjacent restaurant; and this served the best meat in town; and the Corinthians were concerned whether or not they could go there for dinner. This food was seen by some as unclean food.

The word here is associated with children of a mixed marriage. It could be used for food or in a moral sense; but, these children are progeny of πορνεία from parents in a mixed marriage. Some might consider them bastards, as the wife or husband is an unbeliever. If there is no such thing as sanctifying the unbeliever spouse, then a mixed marriage is not legitimate before God. The idea would be, if you are married to an unbeliever, then you can and should walk away, as that person is not a believer. The children would be considered unclean—bastards before God—if the mixed marriage is considered not a marriage by God.

Heb. 12:8: children born as bastards were under a curse of sorts, and were not heirs to either parent; and began positionally below their contemporaries. Where children come into existence in a mixed marriage, the Christian partner should not seek divorce. If you are divorced, then the unbelieving wife or husband and children are no longer sanctified; they are unclean; they are no longer holy. Nothing is solved by a divorce in a mixed marriage.

Bobby heard the gospel over and over again from Bob; and, at some point in time, it sunk in and he understood and became a believer. Eventually, he believed, which was positional sanctification; and then Bobby grew spiritually, which is experiential sanctification.

We brought these children into this world, then we need to make sure that they leave this world as believers.

1Cor. 7:14b ...otherwise, your children are unclean, but now they are holy.

Now we look at the exception, which is v. 15. In v. 14, we are told to stick it out. So what is the difference? The one variable is, it is the volition of the unbelieving spouse. If the unbelieving spouse wants out, then we are not to prevent them. This is the Biblical basis for desertion. This is one of the contract breakers. Adultery is one of the contract breakers; and desertion of a believer by the unbelieving spouse is another contract breaker. You have done everything that you can; but they want out.

Why would someone want out of this marriage? Some will have great personal problems with the gospel and with Jesus Christ; others, during this period of time, would face great persecution. The unbeliever breaks the principle of a sanctified marriage. We have no choice; the unbelieving spouse was the choice. The unbelieving spouse may have some establishment truth, but they do not have the virtue which comes from the spiritual life; nor do they have any mandate in the spiritual life. Our option is, we let them go.

Paul assumes a scenario that the unbeliever leaves. What are our options? The unbelieving one leaves, and we let them leave.

1Cor. 7:14–15

Wednesday May 24, 2006

Being sanctified in v. 14 has nothing to do with salvation; no unbeliever can be saved through association with a believer. Only by faith alone in Christ alone is a person saved. The verse taken as a whole is a rationale; it is a justification for the Christian spouse to remain in a mixed marriage. If the unbeliever is sanctified in marriage, then divorce or separation destroys the sanctification. If the association is severed, then the unbeliever spouse is no longer sanctified. The unbeliever does not get that many blessings, so if you are in a marriage with an unbeliever, then you do not want to take any blessings from them. In spite of the fact that a believer is in a mixed marriage, for whatever reason. God's grace always turns cursing into blessing. It is not always easy to grow spiritually in a mixed marriage. As a believer, you are growing away from your spouse. God always turns the cursing of a mixed marriage into blessing if you continue to grow spiritually. This is not a brief for you to marry an unbeliever that you have stupidly gotten involved with. Stay out of it if you are not in it; but if you find yourself in that situation, then you need to stay with it. The believer in a mixed marriage has no right to remove him or herself. A believer has no right to break up a sanctified family; if you are the sanctifier of your family, then you cannot simply walk away from them and remove the sanctification.

Unbeliever sanctification in v. 14 is simply blessing by association. If you are an unbeliever with a believing spouse, then you are going to be blessed in ways that you normally would not be blessed. In that intimacy, the Christian spouse is provided the greatest opportunity to bring the gospel to the unbelieving spouse. The believer has great influence over the unbelieving spouse and has that person's ear more than anyone else.

If you are maturing in the spiritual life, it is a reflection of what salvation brings; and this is a great advantage for the unbelieving spouse and for the children. The ones who do not believe have a much greater chance to hear the gospel. This passage is concerned about the salvation of the unbelieving spouse. If the unbelieving spouse never accepts Christ in the marriage, there is still sanctification in that marriage for the unbelieving spouse. They are blessed by the maturing believer and God's blessings which He showers down on the believer.

There is another blessing by association; this is blessing by association with a Christian spouse who has died; this is heritage blessing. This impact continues even after the believer is in the grave. The unbeliever has heritage impact from the believer who has departed. God cares for those who are left behind, even if they are unbelievers or reversionists. The mature believer experiences dying grace to the maximum; and part of this grace is the confidence that God will take care of those who are left behind in a sanctified marriage.

3 Sanctifications

1. Through the witness of the believing spouse to the unbeliever.
2. Association with the maturing believer, whose edification complex and use of problem solving devices make their life together tranquil and serendipitous.
3. The blessing by association which extends out from the grave.

1Cor. 7:14 For the unbelieving husband has been sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife has been sanctified by the husband; else, then, your children are unclean, but now they are holy.

There is a caveat to this, which is v. 15. How can God call for no divorce, on the one hand, and on the other hand say, “If the unbeliever wants to leave, then let them go.” What happened to the sanctification principle? There is no contradiction; however, we must fit these two concepts together. If the unbeliever spouse decides to leave the house and never come back, that is something which does happen and is outside the spouse’s control. The unbeliever cannot apply doctrine, because it is, at best, knowledge in their souls. The mandate of Scripture in the end means nothing to the unbeliever. They may have some integrity and they may have some divine establishment principles; but, after that, there is no reason for them to go along with Scripture.

If the unbelieving spouse says goodbye, what options does the believer have? We begin with a 1st class condition, meaning that Paul is assuming something to be true. The desertion might be a long time coming and it may come as a shock to you. This is classic desertion and it is a contract breaker. Πισις = faith. Here, we have απιστας = without faith; no faith; unbeliever. The verb is the present middle indicative of χωριζω = to divorce, to desert. The present tense indicates the state of mind of the unbeliever as they leave. It is a resolute attitude about the breakup. Reflexive middle; the unbeliever is the source of the decision; he makes the decision. His decision rests solely on the unbeliever’s free will (this is assuming that the believer did not orchestrate this outcome; a believing spouse should never run their unbelieving spouse out. Desertion is a deal breaker before God and gives the right of remarriage. Indicative mood, which indicates the reality of this scenario. It assumes that there is a mixed marriage and that the unbelieving spouse walks.

Then we have χωριζω again, in the present middle imperative. “He wants to desert, let him desert.” Sam Ammons story: a guy is deserting, going AWOL, and he is caught at the fence, and he says, “I have a father in hell, a mother in heaven and a gf in Birmingham; I am going to see one of them tonight.”

In this situation, if the unbelieving spouse walks; you will very likely feel the pain; but the message here is, it is okay to let them go. This is not believer and believer; this is believer and unbeliever. The believer is not under bondage in this situation.

Ου + perfect passive indicative of δουλω = to be under bondage, to be a slave. Paul gave us the doctrine of slavery in Philemon, and this is the verb form. This means, not to be enslaved. We are not bound to an unbeliever spouse, when they desert you.

In vv. 12–13, if the unbelieving spouse decides to stay, the marriage is binding to the believer. If the unbeliever does not agree to stay, the believer is no longer bound. In v. 15, the contract is severed; in v. 14, it is not.

Principles so far from V. 15

1. When the unsaved mate decides to divorce a believer, the marriage is dissolved before God.
2. The believer is under no further obligation to the unbeliever; so move on. Put your guilt behind you and move on. This verse gives us the permission to forget. That unbeliever has rejected you and the gospel. They have rejected the spiritual life that you presented to them. They reject any possibility of heritage impact. This, for the unbeliever, can hurt. At some point, you loved this person, and you do not want to see them in hell. This is a no-fault, no-guilt passage.

3. V. 15 provides for the right of remarriage for the believer spouse for the cause of desertion.
4. Desertion on the part of the unbeliever in a mixed marriage frees the believer to enter into another marriage. Bobby recommends that you wait awhile; don't jump into a relationship in a big hurry. The longer you wait, the better opportunity that you have. By the way, you are not free to marry an unbeliever. Don't put yourself back into the same kind of marriage. Do not marry someone who is barely a believer; do not marry someone who could care less about doctrine. You are not going to have the marriage which God has designed for you; remarry a believer and remarry someone who has doctrinal compatibility with you. This is to be heeded anytime you are in a situation where you can remarry. Bobby's noticed that some people don't like this series.

We only have so many years in this life; we cannot spend our lives wasting it away. None of this is worth the loss of one reward in eternity, even if it involves being lonely for the rest of your life.

Recall v. 11: If she leaves, then she can be reconciled or remain single.

Vv. 11 & 15

1. V. 11 deals with two believers in marriage, and the obligation is not to separate. but if indeed she is separated, remain unmarried, or be reconciled to the husband; and a husband not to leave his wife.
2. If one Christian spouse leaves of their own free will in a believer marriage; that spouse can remain unmarried or be reconciled. If you are a believer spouse, then you only have two options.
3. V. 11 does not address the right of remarriage for the innocent party. This is the believer who got dumped; who got left; who got deserted.
4. V. 11 stresses the importance of maintaining the marriage bond between two believers.
5. Vv 12–13 stress the importance of the marriage bond for the sanctification of the unbelieving spouse in a mixed marriage.
6. But, if one believing spouse does decide to leave, the contract is broken, and the innocent party in the divorce has the right of remarriage. V. 11 does not deal with the right of remarriage for the innocent spouse; but v. 15 does. The believing spouse falls under the same clause if they are the innocent party in the divorce.
7. The only difference is, the believer who deserts is in violation of the divine mandate not to. The believer spouse should not desert under any circumstance. The believing spouse never has a right to desert. The unbeliever recognizes no such constraints. The unbeliever can walk anytime that he or she feels like it.

8. Whether the departing spouse is a believer or an unbeliever; the one who makes the decision to leave. Whether a Christian marriage or a mixed marriage; both cases constitute desertion which constitutes the allowance of remarriage to the innocent party. Paul is writing divinely inspired Scripture. Jesus Christ gave us the principle of the unit of marriage and family; Paul is giving us the legitimate out's.

But God has called us to peace will take a little time. We must look at it in this context. It should all come together in the next class period. We are all called to peace, and it is something that we should know; and it has something to do with marriage. All marriages are not the war of the roses.

1Cor. 7:14

Lesson #357

Thursday May 25, 2006

Sanctification in Marriage

1. Personal impact of the believer within the intimacy of the marriage bond. There is no other relationship in life like marriage.
2. The Christian spouse has the greatest access to witness to the unbelieving spouse. And this is critical.
3. This blessing by association includes verbal communication in witnessing; let's hope that there is talk between the two of you and let's hope you can figure out a way to work in the gospel.
4. This blessing includes the believer demonstrating the results of salvation by living the spiritual life. No greater personal impact will ever be seen beyond your own advance to maturity. There is no impact apart from spiritual growth.
5. The personal impact and blessing by association in a mixed marriage is a decided advantage for the unbeliever. A smart unbeliever would want to marry a believer, because they will find these advantages nowhere else.

What Advantage is there that the believer brings?

1. There are unbeliever singles, and unbeliever marriages; and the personal impact of a believer is greatly lessened when there are no believers closely associated like a marriage.
2. Outside of a mixed marriage, the unbeliever has the much less intimate and more distance witness of friends and acquaintances.
3. So the unbeliever gets in intimate observation of the execution of the spiritual life by a spiritually mature believer. This is the heart of sanctification in a marriage.
4. The unbeliever in a mixed marriage gets the benefit of our ability to solve problems in life.

5. The unbeliever in a mixed marriage gets to see grace orientation first hand; you can see it nowhere else that close up. Only the believer in maturity has grace orientation. This is one of the rare commodities in a human being.
6. The unbeliever gets the profit from the humility exhibited by the maturing believer.
7. The unbeliever sees that subordination as a believer in Jesus Christ to Bible doctrine and to God's plan for our life, they see a person who is not subordinated, but elevated. When we subordinate ourselves to the plan of God, we elevate ourselves because we are executing the spiritual life. The unbeliever gets to see the believer in a mixed marriage do this (assuming that they are growing). Subordination never denigrates.
8. When the believer exhibits such humility, it is a fantastic deterrent to unchecked arrogance. Nothing destroys relationships like arrogance in relationships.
9. In a mixed marriage, the unbeliever is the beneficiary of impersonal love. This means tolerance in an intimate relationship; and unconditional tolerance.
10. The unbeliever gets to experience the relaxed mental attitude of the maturing spouse when they are under pressure. Marriage always has pressure; from the outside and the inside; no greater witness than an relaxed mental attitude when dealing with the pressures of marriage. This, by the way, can be applied in any relationship.
11. Unbelievers outside of a mixed marriage are not so sanctified, and do not have a close-up relationship like that. The unbeliever should desire to marry the believer; but the believer has a mandate not to marry them.
12. Blessing by association continues even if the spouse never becomes a believer; this is because the unbeliever is still blessed by the believer's stability, contentment, happiness and capacity for life (that is, if you are growing spiritually).
13. This is a great advantage for the children as well. They have a greater opportunity for salvation by the witness of the believer parent.

Heritage Blessing

1. There is also a sanctification which extends beyond the life, from the believer to the unbelieving spouse; there is an impact from the grave for the unbeliever spouse.
2. Those who survive are blessed; blessing by association from the grave.
3. God continues to care for those who are left behind.
4. Part of the mature believer's package is confidence that God will take care of those family members who are sanctified by this grace. You know that God will continue to take care of your spouse and your children.

1Cor. 7:14 For the unbelieving wife or husband has been sanctified by their husband or wife, and your children were unclean, but now they are sanctified.

If the unbelieving one leaves, the believer is not under bondage to them, because God has called them to peace. Hard to believe that an unbeliever would choose this, but some do. Now, this should not be by manipulating.

The marriage breakers include adultery and desertion (but only when the unbeliever leaves). You are not enslaved in these cases. If they walk, you are no longer bound to the unbelieving spouse. However, the key is, they leave of their own volition. This frees us as a believer to enter into another marriage contract. Does this principle hold for a Christian marriage. Both spouses are believers and one wants out. The principle is the same. A believer makes the choice to leave; but the innocent party chooses to remain in the marriage. The innocent party can remarry. The one who did not walk has a right of remarriage, because desertion has taken place.

If the believer leaves a marriage, they can only choose 2 things: to remain unmarried or to be reconciled.

We must let the unbeliever go because we are called to peace. Perfect active indicative of καλεω = to call; being called to salvation by God the Holy Spirit and responding to the call of common grace. The perfect tense means that we have been called in the past with results that continue. The call is common grace and the call is efficacious grace. The call means, we've received it and accepted it, and we are saved forever. What are we called to as believers? We are called to ειρηνη = peace. This is a persistent state in which the believer is to live. We are called to peace in marriage or divorce. There can be peace between a married couple when they split, assuming that the unbelieving decides to stay or go. If the unbeliever is content to stay, then our course as a believer is clear—we continue to provide sanctification for our unbelieving spouse. We must be at peace with that. We may not like being in a mixed marriage, but we are called to peace. If the unbeliever consents to stay, we are called to peace. We can still have personal impact on this unbelieving spouse. You can have peace in your soul, even if you are called to stay. If the unbelieving spouse decides to go, then you have doctrine in your soul, and it has not deserted you, so you apply it, and you get a relaxed mental attitude. You may experience pain; that is expected. However, it is a blessing that you are called to peace.

In reviewing the previous verses covered by Bobby, I don't know that I buy into the deserted believer have the right to remarry if a believing spouse deserts them.

Peace or *ειρηνη

1. Ειρηνη refers to domestic peace and to peace in one's soul from doctrine.
2. Where the unbeliever stays without a desire to stay, or is manipulated or forced to stay (out of fear; out of a desire for companionship or security; or a fear of losing money), there can be no tranquility in his or her soul. When forced to stay and they want to leave, there is no tranquility. Turmoil of soul to feel trapped in such a marriage.
3. Therefore, if there is turmoil in the soul of the spouse forced to stay, then you have consistent turmoil in the marriage and in your life. We are not at peace but God has called us to peace. Do you see how this is a rationale in marriage?
4. Where there is no peace in the home, there is little peace in life. You go home, there is a battle; you stay away and you avoid the battle for awhile. God's plan for the believer is a life of peace. It is a life of peace, not of confrontation in the home. We are not called to fight in the home.

Ought to cover the historical context of Paul's teaching here as well, where women would be more dependent upon men.

What Does it Mean for There to be Peace

1. It is contrary to God's plan to hold onto an unbeliever who wants to leave. Do not feel guilty under these circumstances.
2. To remain yoked to an unbeliever who wants to go gives you a life of strife, antagonism and conflict. When you are in the middle of this all the time, you do not have peace.
3. The believer unbeliever differences greatly increase living difficulties for the heathen partner who is pressing for a divorce. There is no peace in this situation. Very difficult to live with a heathen partner who wants out.
4. If the unbeliever demands divorce, grant it; sign the papers; do not put up a fight. When you are in this situation, it is easy to become bitter and angry and to want your pound of flesh. One of the great tests is to let the spouse go and do not worry about what they take with them. That is graciousness in action. That unbelieving spouse is no longer sanctified by you, so they are going to need that money. You can actually go into court and not get into a donnybrook. The Bible does not require you to refuse such a divorce, and you are called to peace; so let them go.
5. This principle also applies to a believer who deserts another believer. Let them go; you are called to peace.

The other thing to be considered is children; when a marriage is dissolved, there can be problems. However, there is something to be said for removing a child from constant strife and fighting. Marital conflict is extremely upsetting to their little souls. They are in the middle of the battle and sometimes they are the battleground. We are called to peace and this damages their little souls. In general, it is better to have a mother and a father; but such turmoil damages their souls.

One reason to remain in a mixed marriage is the sake of the children, provided that there is order and tranquility and order for the children in that home.

How many times have you been to a marriage and then the reception, and the bride and groom are as happy as can be, and everything is just great; sometimes, it is the happiest time of the marriage. And then you have to deliver a toast, and you must say something to the couple. Try, "May you live in peace" and it comes straight out of the Bible.

1Cor. 7:15 But if the unbelieving one separates, let them be separated; the brother or the sister is not in bondage in such matters; but God has called us in peace.

Bobby does not know how we are going to spend out Memorial Day; wherever we are, the hell of war will not be on our mind. It is war and the men and women who have died in combat so that we are free to go and come, worship God or not. Sometime, stop tomorrow and thank God that there were those who were willing to give their lives on our behalf. Those beautiful and tranquil cemeteries belie the horror and destruction of war. We are a nation at war, which does not intrude on many lives; and in relative numbers, our casualties and deaths are small. In spite of these circumstances, our current battle is no less important than any other in history. We are at war with the enemies of freedom and with those who are implacable enemies of Jesus Christ. Never have we been so clearly a part of the Angelic Conflict; yet there are still those who cry for retreat. This is one of the most justified wars of our history. Those who have lost their lives in Iraq should be part of our country's most honored dead. This is not just a war of nations or cultures, but a war of faith. Do we as believers have the strength to support the continuance of this war. Are we strong enough to not be deceived by false issues of politics; by defeatists; by our own fears. We should apply the thinking of Memorial Day to every day. The soldiers in Iraq, regardless of their faith or lack of it, are fighting on the side of Client Nation USA.

The context of our study is marriage and divorce. The peace spoken of in v. 15 is not freedom from war, but peace in a marriage and peace in one's soul. When one believer decides to divorce a Christian spouse, then, if you have not caused it or manipulated it; then you may divorce with the right of remarriage. You may let them go. You are not under bondage or enslavement in these cases. The believer is not under any responsibility to the unbeliever who leaves. The believer can remarry, but that should occur after a period of recovery. You need time to recover before you get into another union. There should be some compatibility of positive volition and doctrine; if you have doctrine resident in your soul, there will be no better like-mindedness than what you would have with an unbeliever. Just because someone is a believer, this does not mean that they are compatible with us. You need to have the like-mindedness of doctrine. Does this hold true for a Christian marriage.

The only difference between the mixed marriage and a Christian marriage is that the believer made the decision to leave. The innocent party of the breakup of the Christian marriage is not at fault and has the right of remarriage. I disagree with Bobby at this point; however, remarriage would be allowed when the spouse who leaves remarries. It is likely that the Christian spouse who departs will do so and remarry. The one who leaves, Bobby says, has two options: remain single or be reconciled. Here is another problem with this view: who is really at fault? Who does not have some contribution in the dissolution of a marriage? Just because a person walks out on a marriage, that does not mean that person is at fault. A woman may leave because her husband hurts her. A man may leave because his wife is a drug addict. It is not necessarily the guilty party who leaves a marriage; and Paul, furthermore, specifies that this is an unbeliever leaving a believer. He has already covered the dissolution of a Christian marriage.

If the unbeliever decides to remain in a mix marriage, then we remain in that marriage. If the unbeliever is forced to remain in a marriage, there is no peace. For the unbeliever who remains in a marriage, then there should be peace. In all cases, the believer should be the peacemaker, whether it is by marriage dissolution or marriage retention.

The unbeliever would be smart to remain in a mixed marriage because of the sanctification clause; he (or she) and the children are sanctified by being married to a believer. If the unbeliever is in turmoil and wants to go, let them go. We are mandated to marry another believer, as we then have the groundwork laid for peace in marriage.

This allowance for a marriage dissolution is not taught very often from the pulpit, but here it is. If remaining yoked brings constant strife and disagreements, then the unbeliever may leave the marriage. A home at war means two souls in turmoil.

1Cor. 7:15 But if the unbelieving one separates, let them be separated; the brother or the sister is not in bondage in such matters; but God has called us in peace.

Τι γὰρ a rationale is introduced in the form of a rhetorical question. It is a question that we ask ourself and we answer this ourselves. Then we have the particle εἰ + the future active indicative of σωζω = how do you know if you will save... This verb is found used for the wife who is the believer; and for the husband who is a believer. 1st class condition means, the protasis is assumed to be true, in order to put this together. We are assuming that this is true for the sake of argument. We have a premise, and it is assumed to be true, for the sake of argument. The assumption is, you can win your spouse to Christ; this possibility truly exists. It is conditioned, of course, on the positive or negative volition of the spouse who is the unbeliever. You, as the believer, have the greatest opportunity to witness to your unbelieving spouse. There is no greater draw than impersonal love, than a personal sense of destiny, than a relaxed mental attitude. The unbeliever spouse has the closest and most intimate look at the believer in this circumstance. At some point in time, the unbeliever will understand that your faith is why you are what you are, and why you do what you do. Obviously, you do not take this as a verse to marry an unbeliever; so that you can save them.

You may be married and see all these greener pastures, and you think, I am stuck in this mixed marriage; and your tendency might be, "Let me help them along." It only counts if they decide to go, apart from any push from you.

There is a final caution. The believer may overtly or subtly try to get the unbelieving spouse to leave. You have discovered greener pastures, and you attempt to get your spouse to leave. This is an open invitation to divine discipline. Here, your motivation needs to be corrected. No matter what mistakes you make, the grace of God is still in effect. There is no mistake to great to recover from; rebound is always available; and the repercussions will take care of themselves (the other spouse may ask for another chance). Evangelism should always be your first consideration; not a desperate attempt to find happiness in someone else's arms. We are not to manipulate this situation.

1Cor. 7:16 For what do you know, wife, whether you will save the husband? Or what do you know, husband, whether you will save the wife?

This begins a new topic; it is linked to the previous topic of marriage and divorce; but it is a new paragraph.

1Cor. 7:17 Only as God has divided to each, each as the Lord has called, so let him walk. So I command in the assemblies.

1Cor. 7:17

Sunday 2 May 28, 2006

To Hell and Back is the unofficial song of the infantry; which song was played at Berachah today.

Even though this verse begins a new paragraph; we are still in the same topic. Paul moves from the general instruction; don't seek to be divorced; don't seek to change the status quo. There are the conditions of adultery, desertion; and being in personal danger.

Slavery in v. 21 is an example that Paul uses; don't seek freedom if you are a slave; do not change this circumstance. This is different from how we think; we would think that seeking freedom is what a slave ought to do. We have a greater responsibility to the Lord as Christians, even more so than we do to ourselves. Slavery to us seems to be one of the most heinous circumstances for us to be in.

Part of the spiritual life is to grow spiritually; and we also have some service to the Lord. Our service is part of executing the spiritual life. Seek the opportunity to witness to both master and to fellow slaves. There is service in any circumstance in which we find ourselves. This is the message of the book of Philemon. We don't run from it; Onesimos took off and Paul sent him back to Philemon. Wherever we find ourselves, that is where we are to serve God. The principle is not so much about slavery, but these principles may be applied to our workplace. We might think that our job is drudgery and that we are enslaved to this job. Use the problem solving devices to correct these circumstances. We are to focus on our attitude; it is the attitude which is all-important. Our attitude reflects our spiritual life. We are called to serve the Lord. In our drudgery; in our day to day existence, we function without bitterness and without restlessness. Wherever we find ourself, that is where God wants us. Where we are is where God has placed us. If God placed us there, there is a reason for it; in His plan; not ours. We are told to glorify God in our bodies; self-promotion is the antithesis of glorifying God. We are looking out for ourselves rather than allowing the Lord to look out for us. This does not mean that we cannot move ahead; God does open doors for us, as His plan dictates. Where we are is what God's plan is all about. His plan may dictate some future action. God takes care of us and He opens the doors. Our thought process is today, tomorrow and the next day in the circumstances in which we reside. God always opens doors at the right time in the right way, setting us apart as notably different. When we are ready to move up in life, God does it in a way that He sets us apart; our attitude is ready and our capability is ready. We need to be ready for whatever promotion that God gives us; and He sees to it that we are prepared. The pinnacle of our life is to glorify God, even if we are a slave or in the lowliest job we can think of. This gives us the opportunity to grow and fulfill His plan without thinking about ourself. There is no honor in approbation or promoting oneself. The basic foundation for foundation and success is humility. We can handle praise and promotion with humility and love; this is the greatest blessing in life. God does not promote us without humility; we are incapable of glorifying Him apart from humility. If we cannot glorify God when no one notices us, how can we glorify Him when everyone notices us? If we cannot glorify God in a lowly position, how will we glorify Him from an exalted position.

Humility is the foundation for everything; we can only enjoy this if we have the capacity to do so. This is the secret; develop the capacity for life, for love and for things. This is the only fulfillment that we can get in life. The Lord comes first and He gives us the blessings in life. If we think we have a good plan for ourselves in life, and we whip it out and show it to God, we have made a huge mistake in mental attitude.

So many of us give lip service to God's plan; but instead of fulfilling God's plan, we are desperately looking to fulfill our own plans. We might have financial security; we may have this or that or whatever it is that we want; but without glorifying God, it is empty. None of it means anything before the Judgment Seat of Christ. It is our spiritual advance and our service to God are the only things which are meaningful. When God acts in grace, He is glorified; not us. When we exhibit grace orientation, we begin to recognize grace everywhere. We find it in every aspect of our life. When God moves us here or there, we can enjoy that, and God gives us more than we could ever ask for in blessing. What matters: a few years of what you want as versus the grace of God and what He has provided for us.

Bobby sometimes wishes that we could wake up in the boots of our soldiers in Iraq; and there, we could learn to depend upon God's grace and our rifle. The only attitude that we should take is, this is for my benefit. When promotion, success, or our desires do not reach us, do not panic. Leave it in God's hands.

We have always had a destiny, ever since we became a believer in Jesus Christ. The problem is, some of us never recognize what this destiny is, without spiritual growth. A personal sense of destiny is the attitude of walking in the assignments of this life. Remember the old axiom, you are not promoted until God promotes us. God's purpose is what is important; His and His alone. This is such a hard change of attitude in life. All our lives, we have looked around and decided, "This is what I want." We might even work hard to get these things. The great part of God's grace is, we can let God handle these things. We seek to serve the Lord wherever we find ourselves. We do not have to push or promote ourselves. We have a divine plan; we should live it and walk in it. When we understand and follow that principle, then we can enjoy a relaxed mental attitude. Nothing like an uptight attitude which keeps getting thwarted. We cannot seem to reach the top or ring the bell of our total success. This goal may be yours, but not God's. We must have a relaxed mental attitude for whatever comes along; in whatever level we are placed, in whatever circumstance we find ourselves.

Don't seek self-serving relationships; looking for relationships with those you feel will move you up; and disassociate from those who do not further you along. We should associate with those with whom God places us in contact. We are not of this world; we are in this world. There is no such thing as snobbery in the Christian life. There are discriminatory attitudes of who you want to hang with; that is good discrimination. We do not discriminate with anyone when it comes to grace. The principle is, abide in the status quo of our current life; the life we have when we have believed in Jesus Christ. We should be happy with the life that emerges afterward as well; and you might even face the results of personal failures. We are to stay in these circumstances and grow. After salvation, remain in the same status quo until God moves us to another status quo. There is no guarantee that salvation provides a change or an improvement in our circumstances. God does not promise us health, wealth, human fame, etc. God does promise us eternal life; which is more than enough. These other things may or may not be in God's plan for us. Fulfilling human goals will never satisfy us or make us content.

Capacity and humility is needed to enjoy what God gives us. Marriage is one of the greatest aspects to life; but, without capacity for life and for love, it will not fulfill our expectations. You live where you live; you function where you live; you grown in grace where you live. Wealth, health and fame may be what you think it is all about; but you will find out, if you pursue these things, you'll find out, they mean very little.

3 Closing Principles

1. A faithful response to your calling always takes priority.
2. This is what glorifies God as our priority. Many other things can be sub-prioritized; but God's grace and growing in this grace is our over-arching priority. One way is self-serving, the other serves the Lord.
3. The grace of God handles our circumstances; our promotions; and our relationships. That is grace orientation.

v. 17 may seem as though it is out of place; however, we should understand it within the context. God has assigned us certain things to do; and He has called us in salvation; therefore, since He has done this, we should walk in His plan; live in His plan. No matter in what circumstances you are called, live it. Jesus Christ is the paradigm of the spiritual life; God has given us everything that we need in order to function in the spiritual life; to walk in it. Each one of us has a niche in the plan of God; a little corner in the plan of God. We all have a little chunk of God's overall plan. In all of these little niches, God has a personalized plan for us. This plan has our name on it. God has provided this, and this plan has always been here waiting of us. Each one of us should take up this plan and walk in it.

Now, we have our own little plans for ourselves; and this often puts us outside of His plan. For the believer in Jesus Christ, there is no other priority for us other than His. Sometimes we take our own plan and superimpose it on His, and say, "This is God's plan for us." We are obligated as believers in Jesus Christ to live in His plan. As this verse says, walk in it. There is no other obligation or priority in this life other than His plan. God's plan begins wherever salvation finds us; wherever we are, whatever we do, etc.; that plan is locked and loaded. This plan never, never goes away. God does not alter His plan for us; He does not adjust it for us. God has a plan for us and He will do what He can to bring us back into the plan. We either learn His plan or we don't. God will do everything that He can do to direct our volition back into His plan. People have a tendency to push their own plan onto God; especially without doctrine. When a person is immature, then he will have difficulty figuring out what God has for him. As you learn more doctrine, you get a better idea as to what God's plan is for us. The Corinthians are some of the most immature of the believers of the churches. He suddenly stops and says, this is what you were called to; walk in it.

An enthusiastic unbeliever is often unsure about how all of this works. They think that, now they are saved, there must be an immediate change in their old circumstances. They expect some sort of change; they expect to be removed from what is old; to be removed from part of their life, and they attempt to do this without any clue as to what they are doing. There is no guarantee that salvation will change portions of your exterior life. Your spiritual status changes immediately at salvation; but circumstances, if they change, will change gradually. You live where you live under the circumstances under which you were saved. As God's plan unfolds, then you may see some exterior changes in your life. However, the simplest thing to do is to sit tight and to take in doctrine.

So many times, Bobby has heard, those at Berachah sit on their hands and they do nothing. But, what they mean is, you've got to hustle around a church; you've got to get busy. As we mature, it will all fall into place. So many people think, if I do something good, then that will be the plan of God; once a week, I'll go to a prayer meeting; once a week, I'll go and help out in a breadline. People want change now; they want to see results in the faith that they expressed. They want instant gratification as to what Christianity is. If God's plan is in effect at the moment that we are saved; doesn't it make sense that God's plan, in some sense, takes in your present circumstances. This is where God's plan begins and stays. Your circumstances are a part of your plan until God changes it.

Obviously, you do not stay in your carnality circumstances. You know rebound; you rebound. You take in doctrine. This is all bound up in our spiritual life. Bobby is talking about the circumstances that we are in: our marriage, our job, our financial status, etc. Some expect God to give them money; others expect to be healed. They want immediate change, immediate happiness. They don't know anything; they do not know the basis for happiness, contentment or tranquility.

What about my friends and associates? Do I continue with these associations? Do I dump them? Do I drop them like a hot rock? To answer this, let's think about the Corinthians. Here they are, sitting in the city of Corinth, in one of the wildest cities of that time. Consider the initial effect upon these heathen of the gospel. They had never heard grace before; they had never had a personal relationship with the gods; much less, the God. The gods were far above them torturing them. They are being told that; a completely radical idea.

No one in history had heard the mystery doctrine which Paul was teaching; this was the first time that they heard of the spiritual gifts; no Jew of the old dispensation had anything like that. They were hearing of the universal priesthood of the believer. Very different from the Levitical priesthood and radically different from the heathen priesthood organizations as well.

Suddenly, they hear about the rapture of the church, and this was something they had never heard; and that they might be face to face with the Lord suddenly. They had never heard anything like this before in history. Today, many know about the trinity; and many know about the various aspects of Christian doctrine. However, to the Corinthians, this was the first this stuff had been taught. This was so different and so amazing to these believers that it is almost beyond our imagination. Is it any wonder that their minds are overwhelmed by this stuff. They needed time to digest all that they were hearing. As they heard some of these things, they had to get emotionally pumped up. However, they had very little solid doctrine which could keep pace with their emotional enthusiasm. Happens in the Pentecostal movement quite often; they get pumped up and off they go.

It is really surprising that some of these believers decided to break all their ties with their old life? It sure seemed to indicate that they needed to break fellowship with everyone around them, including their heathen wives and husbands. God had a plan for each of them as believers and they live in a new age; and this plan took into consideration the circumstances in which they found themselves. We live in the devil's world; we are associated with those in the devil's world.

What happened among some Corinthians is, they became legalistic separatists; whatever they were in, they separated from it. Paul needed to correct their concept of life after salvation; what about their life after salvation? How far should they go to change circumstances in life? All of these are very pertinent questions for today. What is our relationship. Our passage; spiritual gifts are a key part of Paul's answer to this question. The bestowal of spiritual gifts means that every believer will serve in some area of temporal life. Believers serve in the highest and lowest stations of life; it does not matter; that plan begins right where you live. As a believer in Jesus Christ, the playing field is leveled; no matter what your status is. Wherever God finds you, that is where your spiritual life starts. This helps to answer the question, how far do you go in separation? The area in which you serve with your spiritual gift coincides with your life. The Holy Spirit gives us a gift commensurate with your life. We all have the same spiritual IQ and everyone has the same opportunities in this plan. God gives us a gift, and that coincides where we live; our vocation, married life; etc.

This is an overriding principle which Paul is going to give. He has been explaining about the idea of marriage and separation and divorce; and he is going to give an overriding principle here, which can be applied in other circumstances and associations as well.

The more your gift functions, the greater the changes which might take place. Bobby's life changed radically when his gift came out. It took a lot of years and a lot of circumstances which changed. We need to be concerned with the plan of God and our advance in the spiritual life. We have an assignment and we are called to that assignment in the circumstances in which we find ourselves. What we are supposed to advance to spiritual maturity, and our circumstances will change little by little as we grow spiritually. The circumstances of our temporal existence become very important. We cannot abandon our life in the world because we have been saved, although that is a typical legalistic tendency. As long as we are alive in this world, that truism is in effect. We no longer leave ourselves open to or to be influenced by human viewpoint. When we were saved, we had nothing but human viewpoint; however, as we develop and advance, then we begin to learn divine viewpoint; and our separation from the world is in our thinking. Therefore, we don't have to dump all relationships; we don't have to dump our friends or family. Start where we live; do not leave yourself open to human viewpoint. Do not seek intimacy with the unbelieving world. When you become influenced by the human viewpoint of someone else, that is when you need to separate. Human viewpoint is very subtle; and you cannot help but be affected by it when you are intimate with it. If you put yourself open to human viewpoint, it will creep in. Does this mean that we separate completely from those in human viewpoint. However, you don't seek their friendships in a close, intimate relationship when it is going to compromise doctrine. The separation from the world is in your thinking. You don't physically separate yourself; you don't become a recluse in your office because you are surrounded by unbelievers. Now, on the other hand, going out to get drunk and hit strip clubs with these unbelievers is another thing.

Some of the most fascinating and enjoyable people that Bobby has ever met are unbelievers; sometimes, it is just necessary. When you find yourself being affected, then you know that some separation is in order. You have just discovered that you let human viewpoint creep into your soul. A lot of time, Christians don't know this; this blunts their spiritual advance.

You had better know your doctrine, so that when you hear this in another circumstance, you don't allow it to drag you down. At the moment of salvation, you have equal privilege and equal opportunity to make use of the sources of the spiritual life. And we will see certain conditions that we will find ourselves in: racial differences, social differences; vocational differences; etc. Being married or unmarried, we still have equal opportunity and equal privilege to advance from where we are. Paul wants the Corinthians and wants us to understand where we are called and where we exist. That is status quo; we are to stay in it.

1Cor. 7:17 Only as God has divided to each, each as the Lord has called, so let him walk. So I command in the assemblies.

1Cor. 7:17

Thursday June 1, 2006

We have been assigned something; we have been called; therefore, we are to walk. All of this is a little vague; so a study of these verbs will tell us exactly what these things mean. This verse is a counter to what the legalists of Corinth propose—that they separate completely and totally from the rest of the world. We go from being spiritually dead to spiritually alive with the greatest resources known to man. It is the greatest moment in our lives. Unfortunately, these immature Corinthians had emotional turmoil and their souls were overwrought. There were many implications to that emotion, and that is understandable. When we believed in Jesus Christ, it was a wonderful thing. The Corinthians were glad to be saved, but they were overwhelmed as well. They were getting large gulps of Church Age doctrine, which was coming at them fast and furiously. Never before had so many resources been give to those in the life of the believer. This was the first generation of the Church Age; and never before had there been a greater spiritual life available. People then and now hage a propensity to like the emotional high as opposed to the learning of doctrine. Many people are that way. Many pulpits pander to this. Nothing like a good emotional high to keep people pandering to the pulpit, giving, coming back, etc. Emotionalism must be tempered. There needs to be some objectivity in who we are. It is divine viewpoint which would give these Corinthians perspective on their new life. These Corinthians did not have the right perspective and they were allowing their emotions to override them. Doctrine is a natural separator of life. We are saved, and experientially the same person as we were before; however, as we take in doctrine, it becomes a separator. We must understand this doctrine in order to properly separate ourselves. In practice, how far were these Corinthians supposed to go in separating from their former lives; from their external circumstances. These are people who are in factions and do not have doctrine, and they know that something has got to change; so they want to know, what needs to change. And they lived in quite a city; everything that they could ever want in this city. They thought, maybe we should completely removed ourselves from the heathen society and from the excesses of this heathen society. That is true. However, for them, this is something which is fairly superficial. It brought up in their minds a more disturbing question. They figured out, they needed to leave the temple of Aphrodite, as they worshiped the true God. The other problem was more difficult—a grey area. This was a bigger problem—their relationships, their occupational associates, their spouses, their intimate friends. They have obviously begun to separate; how far are they to take it? What about my spouse who has not believed in Jesus Christ? What does it mean to walk as you have been assigned by God? These are legitimate questions for the Corinthians. How far do I go to rid myself of some of these things?

Walking is a synonym for the Christian way of life. We are believers in Jesus Christ; and now, that plan is in effect. That plan must include the temporal life in which we live. We live in a certain life, and God's plan applies to that life. God's plan applies to the temporal life where we live. Our temporal life is essentially the same after salvation. God could call us home after salvation, but He does not do that. We are still here because God has a plan and a purpose for us. This plan always coincides with our temporal circumstances. We are never to abandon our lives in this world to become Christians. Our relationships in this world will begin to change.

How is this Change to be Effectuated?

1. The change comes in our mental attitude.
2. Our mission is the grow in grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior. That is our mission in life. As we grow, so our mental attitude changes.
3. However, the change in attitude from human viewpoint to divine viewpoint is not an overnight occurrence. So many times, believers want it all now; they want immediate change. Positionally, we change immediately; temporally, we change gradually.
4. This is a gradual process of learning, which is what we are doing in Church. This is the gaining of divine viewpoint from Bible teaching.
5. Change will come with concentration and metabolizing doctrine.
6. Anything that imposes itself over this concentration—breaks your spiritual advance momentum—should be cut back or abandoned. Separation is mental. Doctrine is a separator. Anything which superimposes itself over spiritual advance must be cut back or broken off.
7. You do not maintain old relationships or cultivate new intimate relationships with people who represent human viewpoint. This carries inherent danger to your advance. This is separation from those people who influence your thinking with human viewpoint. As you mature, you are better to handle your associations with human viewpoint. As you grow up, you don't need that kind of influence. Anything which blocks the change of mental attitude must be severed to some degree or another.
8. We must leave ourselves open or allow ourselves to be influenced by human viewpoint. Our spiritual advance will be slowed down or negated.
9. The separation can even include family relationships. Brothers, sisters, parents, in-laws, etc. This kind of separation may have to occur.
10. Even though there may be separations in the family, you do not abandon them. You do not cut off all associations with them. We are never called to abandon these people. We have the obligation to witness to them; to model the Christian life for them. There is a fine line which we have to walk sometimes. We must constantly assess our mental attitude. We must think about the influence of those around you. Bobby found in his own life that those closest to him had the greatest affect. You may find yourself thinking in patterns which are incorrect.
11. We will notice differences in thinking between our old intimates and ourselves. Doctrine itself is the great separator. You don't jump ship and refuse to talk to family members ever again.
12. When their human viewpoint intrudes upon your divine viewpoint, some amount of withdrawal must occur. You cannot just let it go; it will continue to affect us to a greater and greater extent. We will have to work that out, and it might mean to chop off the relationship...for our own good, at times. Perhaps, this could be illustrated with an alcoholic who cuts off relationships with former drinking buddies.

Illustration of marriage. Marriage, at the beginning, is a brand new relationship between a man and a woman, and is analogous to the relationship that believers have with Jesus Christ. At the beginning, you have not yet really experienced the marriage relationship. Mother and father are analogous to the old human viewpoint of those you have previously associated with. You leave your parents and you cleave to your spouse. This does not mean that you cut off your parents; it does not mean that you never speak to them again. Your primary relationship is your spouse; your parents are secondary at that point.

A mother told her daughter, “Now you are married, and maybe too young, but don’t come crying to me about your problems with this person.” This is, to some degree, a proper cut off.

There are still relationships, but they have been altered. The same is true of the spiritual life, just like married life. You still have parents, but the relationship have changed. Your relationship with your old intimates can remain relationships; they can—but they are altered, so as not to cause undue influence. Do not let your former relationships affect you and cause undue influence on your life. That is the criterion. Divine viewpoint thinking is the line of demarcation. This is the separator. Negative believers can have just as negative influence as unbelievers. The Corinthians were clueless about all this.

The most intimate relationship in life is marriage. If we carry through with this, then the believer should abandon the spouse in a mixed marriage. However, we cannot chose to separate under these circumstances. Ironically, in a mixed marriage, the opposite is true; and this is why Paul just gave detailed instructions on a mixed marriage. Obviously, do not marry an unbeliever in the first place. However, you do not separate unless the unbeliever separates. In these circumstances, doctrine in the soul becomes more important in maintaining these relationships. We, as believers growing in grace and advancing in the spiritual life, must be doubly careful in these relationships. There is also the sanctification of the unbeliever spouse. We are also in a position where we can falter if we are not careful. We must always be on guard when it comes to human viewpoint influence. We must separate from the thinking; not from the person. You lose our on some like-mindedness here. The Lord takes up the slack in His grace in other areas. After salvation, life must go on. Every believer must live in the sphere of their temporal lives. Our vocation is the same, our marriage status is the same; we have the same job. What is changing is, you develop a new perspective due to Bible doctrine. This is a good perspective. However, you cannot withdraw from life; we are not called to be monks; we are not called to separate physically from this world. Nor, are we called to be unequally bound with unbelievers. The best relationship that we will have with the unbeliever is to never lose sight of the fact that we do not think like this person. Deep down, in our core, we do not think like the unbeliever. Doctrine is the natural separator. When taking in doctrine, there will be some degree of separation. We must be aware of that.

The problem of the Corinthians—how do I deal with my spouse? My fellow workers? My close friends?

The new person is an internal change and a positional change. When we are saved, we are assigned to live where we are. We are assigned a plan. There are some exceptions, of course. Like, Paul was out to kill more Christians; so, when he became a believer, this vocation changed. Paul was blinded and went to the home of a man who began to teach him doctrine. As the internal change occurs, there may be a change externally; we may be sent in a different direction. Bobby is a living example of that; he had not intention of being a pastor. We have external changes because we are actually ready for that change. Do not try to change things under our own power. This is us deciding what the plan of God is and making inappropriate changes. When you realize that your mission in life is to grow; the spiritual gift is focused on in v. 17. Once we grow, we begin to function in the area of our spiritual gift. God brings the circumstance into our life where we best serve. We have the opportunity to grow in grace everyday. Do not make to mistake of failing to separate from human viewpoint. We may fulfill this in bits and pieces; fits and starts. The great relationships in our life are other believers. Why maintain these other relationships? God can provide for our needs here. It will all fall into place.

Drop Kick me Jesus through the Goal Post of life describes this. One day, our circumstances change, and we move into it. However, we must be able to separate from and deflect the human viewpoint which is all around us. We can later be around any unbeliever and listen to the stuff they spout, and it will not interrupt anything in life.

1Cor. 7:17 Only as God has divided to each, each as the Lord has called, so let him walk. So I command in the assemblies.

1Cor. 7:17

Sunday 1 June 4, 2006

The first verb is merizô (μεριζω) [pronounced mehr-ihd-ZOH], which means 1) to divide; 1a) to separate into parts, cut into pieces; 1a1) to divide into parties, i.e. be split into factions; 1b) to distribute; 1b1) a thing among people; 1b2) bestow, impart. Strong's #3307.

Berachah is dedicated to the study of the Word of God. Faithful students of the Word of God requires positive volition toward the Word of God and the supernatural filling of God the Holy Spirit.

Our Lord grew spiritually (Luke 2:40, Jesus Christ is said to be increasing in wisdom). Rom. 12:2: Do not be conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your mind. Col. 2:7; the passage where we are to grow in grace and knowledge. One of the greatest descriptions is found in Eph. 3:16–19: that He may give you, according to the riches of His glory, by His power to become mighty in the inward man through His Spirit, that through faith Christ may dwell in your hearts, having been rooted and founded in love, that you may be given strength to grasp, with all the saints, what is the breadth and length and depth and height, and to know the surpassing knowledge and love of Christ, that you may be filled to all the fullness of God. This is a great description of doctrine being inculcated in your souls; that Christ may live in our hearts through faith, being rooted and ground, in love,... We can comprehend with all of the saints the entire scope of theology. The love of Christ surpasses mere knowledge of... In these 3 verses, this is the mechanics of our spiritual life. Then we have the well-used Biblical metaphore of walking in newness of life, and by faith and by the Spirit.

Then there is our passage in 1Cor. 7:17: Only as the Lord has assigned to each one, as God has called each in this manner, in this manner, let him walk [which is a synonym for living the Christian life].

It does not make any difference where we are when we are called. We are not to simply give up our lives wherever we happen to be. Wherever we live, that plan has gone into effect. There is no question that our world of human viewpoint does change. We live in the same place, but our relationships in this world and our perspective change. From the renovation of your thinking; being filled up with all the fullness of God. Our thinking changes; not our circumstances.

Bobby's warning: we have a spiritual life; we live it wherever we are; and our thinking must change, no matter where we are. Many relationships that we have had are wonderful ones which we do not want to give up. Why should we give up our friends? Bobby is not telling us to drop all of our friends because they are not believers. What has to change is our thinking. Anything which interferes with that change of mind. We cannot allow human viewpoint to affect the spiritual rehabilitation of our soul. There must be a degree of separation from human viewpoint, which is generally a mental separation; but sometimes it can be physical. Do not cultivate new intimate relationships which may endanger spiritual advance.

Marriage is an illustration of how there is a change in your relationships with those around you. You can no longer form new intimate relationships. You leave mother and father and cleave to your spouse. This does not mean that you write your parents off. In the illustration, the parents represent human viewpoint; this is an illustration, not an indictment. The new husband or wife relationship represents the new relationship with Christ through doctrine after marriage. There is the change. A great many changes the moment you say I do in marriage. The gaining of divine viewpoint in your advance strengthens the union with Christ. In the marriage relationship, we still have a relationship with our parents; but the relationship is altered. The most intimate bond transfers to the spouse. By analogy, our intimate bond with others must alter and change. If you maintain former bonds in the same way, there is a problem which these relationships can cause. The parents represent human viewpoint; the new spouse represents divine viewpoint. The relationship with the parents remains; but it changes. You might even see them as often. The intimacy of marriage becomes more important than the old intimacy of family relationships. We have a new priority in your relationships. Divine viewpoint thinking is the line of demarcation in relationships. If we want to know just how far our old relationships may go, the line of demarcation is thinking with human viewpoint.

Every believer must operate in the sphere of his earthly life. One is not discarded because of the other. You cannot withdraw from your temporal life as a new believer. You are not to become a monk in a monastery. You do not withdraw from your job, your marriage, or your life.

Maybe you wonder why you don't think with divine viewpoint all the time. This change is a gradual change with our spiritual advance. Some think that 3 or 4 sessions in Bible class should be enough. You should not have excessive expectations. It is much easier to feel good temporarily than it does to change your thinking. This is why some pastors deal with one's emotion as opposed to one's thinking. The more you learn, the more excited that we become.

After being saved, we enter into the potential of full-time Christian service. You don't know what your spiritual gift is when you are saved; with some spiritual growth, you determine what this gift is. Our gift is not arbitrary; we are given a gift which works where we live; it takes into consideration our strengths and our life; but it begins to operate through a mental change.

Every believer lives in the world. We are no longer of the world, but we are in the world. The difference is our thinking. Our thinking is divine viewpoint. We serve God in our environment until we are called home.

V. 17 begins with two rarely associated particles:  $\epsilon\iota\ \mu\eta$  = if not. This makes no sense in this context. In the indicative mood, which we have here, this is usually a 1st class condition. This is a condition, which is not in the form of a classic protasis. Paul uses the way that the 1st class condition is formed, but not as a 1st class condition. God gave Paul the perfect set of spiritual gifts which fit well with his genius, his background, his Greek/Hebrew education, etc. Paul went from being a great killer of Christians to the great Apostle.

The true facts of this conditional condition is that God has assigned and God has called; and God does so for a reason. How do we therefore translate  $\epsilon\iota\ \mu\eta$ ? The best rendering is nevertheless.

The verb here is the aorist active indicative of  $\mu\epsilon\rho\iota\zeta\omega$  = to assign, to deal with, to distribute; to divide into portions. There is a different gift distributed to different people. We have  $\acute{o}\ \kappa\acute{\upsilon}\rho\iota\omicron\varsigma$  = the Lord. This is God the Holy Spirit in this context, Who is the One distributing spiritual gifts. This is one of the great dividers between the old life and the new. We are given a spiritual gift at salvation and we live in a certain place; that gift is commensurate with the place in which we live. We use this gift to the maximum as we grow in grace and knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ. There is just as much opportunity to advance spiritually and to utilize the gift to the maximum. This is what is distributed to each one of us. Wherever we find ourselves in life, we now have an appropriate gift to serve the Lord. We are saved; we live somewhere. God distributes to each one of us; and that is our assignment. To whom much is given, much is expected. It all takes place within the confines of our own existence.

10 years in the military for Bobby; then in seminary; which was a completely lifestyle change. For Bobby, there was no way that he could miss his assignment. If we continue to grow, then the doors will open as necessary.

1Cor. 7:17 Only as God has assigned to each one, as the Lord has called each one; in this manner, let him walk. So I command in the assemblies.

This is a great transitional verse, going from the marriage series into several other areas, illustrations of the Christian life; illustrations of serving God right where we live. We do not have to change our exterior circumstances. God uses us right where we are.

With the next phrase, we have a new subject. ὁ θεος = the God. This is a reference to God the Father, the author of the divine plan. He is the one who calls us into this plan. I think this is backwards; the God is first in this verse; the Lord comes next.

The verb which is found throughout this section is καλεω = to call. This was the perfect tense in v. 15, where God has called us to peace. The perfect tense means, we have been called once with results which last forever. He calls us by common grace; the gospel is made clear to the spiritually dead person. We have no spiritual apparatus for perception prior to salvation. We must believe in Christ; and the Holy Spirit takes this faith and places us into Jesus Christ.

Many people have said in the past—believing is a work; I have believed in Jesus Christ, therefore, I am working for my salvation. Part of the call, which is simply salvation. However, in the perfect tense, we have results which begins in a point in time with results that continue forever.

Some people think that the call of God is “Hello; how would you like to be saved?” However, in the perfect tense, there is a complete calling to a life, which begins at salvation, but this life continues after salvation.

In this context, the spiritual gifts are in view; the spiritual gifts are key to service to God. Our calling is to grow in grace in His calling. Our responsibility is to grow; to advance; to reach spiritual maturity. We are assigned or distributed gifts; we are called or assigned to a spiritual life or service.

The 1st class condition simply establishes something which is true. Αυτως = in this manner, without further adue. This is emphatic. We have our marching orders. Without any further adui, get moving. Then we have the verb περιπτεω = to walk about, to walk around. We are told to get to walking; do not waste any more time; get right to it. In life, we have choices, and we will have many choices when we leave the auditorium. This verse narrows down our choices in the spiritual life. The imperative mood makes it clear that there is no aimless ambling around the block. There is no shuffling around the block. Walking is a reference to the execution of the spiritual life, with an emphasis upon the use of our spiritual gifts. We walk in the spiritual life, but we walk through the temporal life.

What Does this mean?

1. In the believer's existence, walking in is intimately related to walking through.
2. Some like to compartmentalized; we have a spiritual life which takes place at church and a temporal life outside of church.

3. The spiritual life is the means by which we can deal with our temporal life, within God's plan.
4. Whatever gift God has distributed to us—whatever His plan is for us—the mandate is to walk in it; live it. Live your spiritual life; live your temporal life; live them in tandem; live them in parallel. You cannot separate the two.
5. God has given us a spiritual life to fulfill His plan for us; and that plan is in this life, in this world, right now.
6. Anything that we accomplish in the plan of God takes place right where we live. We live the spiritual life not over the hill somewhere; we are not to go AWOL; do not get out of the will of God. Some people live their lives as if Sunday is a spiritual life; and the spiritual high is over by the time your day is over. We must use problem solving devices every single hour, throughout every day. We cannot separate our spiritual life from life in general.
7. We accomplish God's operations order, which includes His plan and the gifts He gives us, by walking in His life.
8. If change happens, God will present the opportunity.

What Bobby is going to cover is, how far do we push change? God does handle every aspect of our lives. Do not desire divorce, because we are called to serve in whatever circumstance we find ourselves in. Such a jump is a distortion. The believer may help the unbelieving spouse to believe. Every unbelieving spouse is blessed by association with the believing spouse. Marriage is a perfect example of living the spiritual life exactly where we live. Sometimes it is the only way to survive.

Everything else is incidental to the mission of living the spiritual life; how much we make, what others think of us, etc. are mere details. We are to walk in the life God has given us. This does not mean we cannot further our careers; or that we cannot make more money. However, we must remember our priorities. It should never be far from our thinking. Live the spiritual life as we move through the rest of our life. The emphasis is upon the use of our spiritual gift. The spiritual gift is about our service. There are so many other resources; resources for problem solving; resources for contentment and happiness. We move through life and with the spiritual problem solving devices, we solve problems. We learn how to glorify God in our life. We walk in and we walk through.

1Cor. 7:17a Nevertheless, God has assigned to each one, as the Lord has called each one; without further adue,, let him walk.

This final phrase highlights Paul's Apostolic authority. This is what I say and this is what you are to do. Present middle indicative of διατασσω = I order, I command, I mandate. This is a military term which Paul uses. Paul has lived with the Praetorium guard; he knows military language, and this is what he uses here. Get out and get started, right now, without further adui. Paul is commanding all of the churches at that time and all churches which will later come into existence. The present tense means that the action is a state of persistence or progress. It is not a one-time, attention, move out. "I am calling you at attention, and you stay at attention. When I say move out, you keep on walking; you walk until you drop.” I.e., walk until you die. Middle voice directs our attention to the Apostle himself and the divine authority with which he writes. Indicative mood is the statement of fact of Paul’s authority.

Jesus Christ knocked Paul off his horse, blinded him, and Paul wandered until he found the house of someone who taught him doctrine; and from there, he moved out.

Do it; get it done; walk in your spiritual life, using your spiritual gifts. There was a terrible restlessness in the Corinthian church. The desire that they had was for an immediate change; get me out of this and get me into better circumstances. These people is immature; and their emotions are riding high. Live the life which God has designed for you. Paul has told them, don’t leave your unbeliever spouse unless they want to leave.

This final command indicates that this is a command, not just for Corinth, but for all churches. “You are not being singled out here; this is the command for all believers in all churches.”

1Cor. 7:17b So I command in the assemblies.

In vv. 18–23, Paul will illustrate this, living the spiritual life within our temporal life. Paul will use 3 different examples that we cannot miss. Paul will begin with circumcision from the spiritual life.

1Cor. 7:18–19

Wednesday June 7, 2006

It is a waste of time trying to figure out when the Lord is returning. In the end, we will be there at the rapture.

Paul will jump from the spiritual life to circumcision. If you were called in circumcision, do not become uncircumcised; if you were called in uncircumcision, don’t get circumcised. The idea is, do not try to change the situation in which you live. Paul uses an anatomical illustration. Our walk, our spiritual life, should be done in the condition in which we live. We are not called to change the circumstances in which we are called. One example is, you are married to an unbeliever; you don’t get to walk away from this marriage. Paul will further this, don’t change your circumstances when you become a believer. Circumcision is nothing and uncircumcision is nothing. What does matter is, keeping the commandments of God. This is not keeping the 10 commandments. Israel had the 10 commandments as the Magna Carta of their freedom. It is a freedom code.

V. 18 has nothing to do with anatomy; this is an illustration of v. 17. You live the life in which you have been called. Now, as you grow, God will move us around a bit; but, we do not change just for change.

Our illustration is a religious and racial illustration. The circumcised Jew and the uncircumcised gentile. This distinction identified Jews. To the Jews, this is also a ritual, not found in the gentile world; we may find this hard to believe, as this was a general way to differentiate.

The verb to call is καλεω; this is the same verb as we found in vv. 15, 17. Aorist passive indicative in v. 18. Culminative aorist, which means the writer views an event in its entirety. The entire event of being called is viewed in its entirety and in terms of its existing results. Paul first wishes to view the events of being called as a whole. These events have been studied under common and efficacious grace. The result is, after common and efficacious grace, being called to live the Christian way of life, as a result of being placed into union with Christ, which includes the spiritual gifts which are given at salvation. Aorist passive indicative. The subject, the circumcised Jew, receives the action of the call. The grace of God is highlighted by the passive voice.

The verb circumcised is the perfect passive participle of περιτεμνω. The Jews here were circumcised prior to salvation. If circumcision was a done deal, prior to salvation, what does it have to do with the spiritual life or with being called? It has nothing to do with the Christian way of life; this is a preexisting anatomical condition, which has no effect on one's spiritual life. Apparently, it was given some meaning by the Jews there.

Abraham was called and he was circumcised and he was told to circumcise Isaac. However, by the time that Paul wrote, circumcision had no meaning except as a tradition and something which separated them from the gentiles. Circumcision had lost its meaning in relation to the promise of God, which is Paul's point here. It makes no difference, which is Paul's point here; and they are completely misguided.

Some were trying to make uncircumcision as a sign of being believers. This would show their conversion from Jewish religion to Christianity. The Jews were trying to work their old religious rituals into the Christian way of life. The Jews were all looking for signs, so uncircumcision would be a sign of their new faith; which was completely logical from religious thinking; and it was dead wrong (Matt. 16:4).

1Cor. 7:18 Was anyone called having been circumcised?

Extension of the foreskin is what the verb means, to attempt to cover up their circumcision. Do not conceal your circumcision by the extension of your foreskin. Bobby says this definitely happened, according to Macc. 4:15; Jews tried to cover this up in gymnastics and it was obvious who was circumcised and who was not. They tried to hide this, as they did not want to be so identified. So, some Jews had tried to obliterate the circumcision, which involved some sort of mutilation. The point is, they tried to do this to change their Judaism to Christianity. A Jew is saved circumcised or uncircumcised, and this state has nothing to do with living the spiritual life. Gal. 3:28: There is no Jew or Greek; there is neither slave nor freeman. There is neither male or female, for we are all one in Christ Jesus. Ritual never adds anything to salvation or the spiritual life. Jews did not have to look like Gentiles in order to be Christians. They were severing their relationship with the past to move into the present. However, no such separation is required.

If you cannot change an anatomical structure, then what do you change? You change your thinking. That is the inward renovation of the mind. One spiritually advances, and then uses his spiritual gift. Don't worry about circumcision; start your gift from where you are. A circumcised Jew might have a better change witnessing to another Jew; but that would be the only advantage. You simply serve the Lord right where you are. You don't worry about the external change; you deal with the internal changes.

1Cor. 7:18b Do not be uncircumcised..

Gentiles are saved, and they wonder if they should be circumcised. There seems to be a controversy at this time about circumcision, and this was prevalent among Christians; and perhaps even today. This is just not a spiritual decision. People get so wrapped around issues like this, and it means very little. Circumcision is not necessary for gentile salvation. Paul dealt with the Jews first, and then the Gentiles. The Judaizers were in the church of Corinth and trying to make their mark. They were very critical of Paul and his message of grace. They were the enemies of all believers; they were the other side of the angelic conflict. They were anti-grace. They followed Paul wherever he went, and they taught entirely different legalistic doctrines for one to become saved. These Judaizers had duped those who listened to them that circumcision was necessary for a good spiritual life; it marked obedience.

The Bottom Line

1. It does not matter in what physical condition you are in when saved.
2. It does not matter what has transpired in the past. Paul is a great example of that.
3. The signs of religion are meaningless.
4. That is the freedom of grace; freedom from religious falderal. They think they can outsmart God by some religious ritual.

1Cor. 7:18c Was anyone called in uncircumcision? Do not be circumcised.

How many people see their rituals as being their relationship to Jesus Christ. Romanism has a "mystical union" with Jesus Christ by the Eucharist. "I'm a better Christian because I have had my foreskin removed." It is meaningless, along with every other Jewish (or other) ritual.

Circumcision was to these Christians as water baptism is to believers today. There is nothing wrong with being baptized or circumcised. There is some spiritual significance to these rituals. They mean something as a witness; it is what they represent. Water baptism is a testimony to the world that a person has placed their faith in Jesus Christ.

The baptism of the Holy Spirit is efficacious for salvation; this is a work of God which is meaningful; it places us into Jesus Christ. But water baptism does not give us anything spiritually. How many churches say that water baptism is a necessity. The ritual is meaningless without the understanding behind it. Water baptism as the spiritual life or for salvation is a misapplication. It must be associated with doctrine itself. It is the doctrine behind the ritual, not the ritual itself.

Water baptism is no longer a mandated ritual; but it can be used today as a testimony to others. This tells your unbelieving family that you believe in Jesus Christ. It must be done with the real significance in view.

Those who are working for salvation: “Does God like you today? You had better hope that God likes you on the day that you die...” or “How many good works does it require to be saved? How far must you take it?”

Paul is telling that these Corinthians are all mixed up. The Christian life is simple; they don't have to get wrapped around ritual. God will give us the opportunity to serve Him, and it does not matter the circumstances in which we live.

1Cor. 7:19 Circumcision is nothing [or, meaningless], and uncircumcision is nothing, but the keeping of God's commands.

1Cor. 7:17–19

Lesson #361

Thursday June 8, 2006

No class July 13–14

Our purpose after salvation is to grow in grace and knowledge; everything else in our Christian life and temporal life. Don't let anyone tell you that people just come to Berachah Church to sit and listen. In this, we will glorify God in our bodies. It is very difficult for those without doctrine to have any idea as to what life should be like after salvation.

We all live somewhere; we all have functions in our lives; we have circumstances, jobs, friends, family, etc. We do not seek to change these external circumstances. Wherever you find yourself, to whatever you are called to do, that is your assignment. That is what God has given you. God will adjust this assignment. We adjust to his plan as we grow to maturity. As we adjust to His plan, God moves us ahead; and this could mean changes; but God is the one Who opens the door for external change in our life. If all you do is change your circumstances, then you have opted for your own plan.

1Cor. 7:17 Nevertheless, as God has distributed [spiritual gifts; environment; friends, possessions] to each, each as the Lord has called, so let him walk. So I command in the assemblies.

Illustrations: circumcision and uncircumcision; slave or free. The circumcised Jew and uncircumcised Gentile are two groups who were often in opposition; and made up two groups of those who went to the Corinth church. Some circumcised possibly wanted to become uncircumcised; which act involved some personal mutilation (did this really happen?). The Jewish believer wants to substitute one sign for a non-sign. The Jews always want a sign; they look for the signs of the Messiah. They are waiting for that sign.

Some of the Gentiles who became believers wanted to become circumcised and they had been affected by the Judaizers, who had infiltrated the church at Corinth. These are adherents to Judaism and steeped in legalism. These are avowed enemies of Christianity; they touted an entirely different doctrine; not anything to do with grace.

Of course, they could not fulfill the Law; they participated in rituals without any sort of reality; e.g., circumcision. These judaizers were looking for superficial change without the internal change of regeneration and experiential sanctification. They pushed works, not grace. Some gentiles listened to the judaizers, who were very critical of Paul; they refuted him and shouted him down. Some have speculated that these were the thorn in Paul's flesh. They were making inroads in some churches. At that time, there was a spiritual meaning to circumcision, and not all over like today. It was being superimposed as a necessity for Church Age believers. The Judaizers were saying, "You need to follow our lead; we are true Jews. You have become part of Judaism, so you need to be circumcised." After all, wasn't Jesus Christ a Jew? Did He not adhere to Jewish ritual? If he adhered to Jewish ritual, shouldn't you? Don't you follow Jesus Christ?"

Now, we are to follow Christ in the prototype Christian life. So some of these believers were being duped into thinking that they were not complete until they were circumcised. It is a classical situation of faith + ritual for salvation. Baptism today is an example of this. Baptism becomes a ritual for salvation. Paul is a Hebrew of hebrews; he must correct this misconception. His race does not matter. He is no longer of Israel. Predicate adjective οὐδης = meaningless.

1Cor. 7:18 Was anyone called having been circumcised? Do not be uncircumcised. Was anyone called in uncircumcision? Do not be circumcised.

Vv. 18–19 So far:

1. It does not matter what our circumstances happen to be; it does not make any difference what condition our anatomy is in. It makes no difference what religious ritual you are performing or have performed.
2. The signs and rituals are meaningless to salvation and to the Christian way of life. It is the classical ritual without reality. Circumcision cannot be a sign of salvation.
3. The covenant promise to Abraham in the Old Testament was visually confirmed and commemorated by circumcision. It did not give salvation in the Old Testament or at any other time.
4. Circumcision has no efficacy to Jew or Greek in the Church Age.
5. The spiritual life does not hinge on what has transpired in past dispensations.
6. Christians live in a brand-new dispensation which began at the day of Pentecost. Christians lived under this dispensation.
7. A ritual like communion or even water baptism in the Church Age is only meaningful when it reflects doctrine resident in our souls. We commemorate salvation with the communion; which looks backward. However, we need to know what is going on.

8. Circumcision is meaningless to this new dispensation. It is not necessary. It is meaningless to a relationship with God.
9. No man is better or worse as a Christian because of ritual. It does not make a person a better or worse Christian. You are not a better or worse Christian if you take communion. Communion is meaningless apart from knowing what communion is all about. What is better or worse is what is in our souls.
10. Anything which de-emphasizes the grace of God and places the emphasis on some ritual or some work is heresy.

1Cor. 7:19a Circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing,....

For the next part of the verse, people think Paul is speaking about the 10 Commandments. So many believers focus on the Ten Commandments and focus their lives as believers with keeping the Ten Commandments.

What are the Ten Commandments, which are not a part of your Christian life? There is this uproar about posting them in various courts.

What are they and what importance are they to us today?

1. The Ten Commandments are the Magna Carta of freedom for the nation Israel. The magna carta provided freedom for England; the Ten Commandments do that same for Israel.
2. The Ten Commandments defined authority, freedom, and law for believers and unbelievers. What about "You will have no other God before Me?" In Israel, God was the state; they were a theocracy. The first commandment established authority in national entity Israel.
3. The first 5 commandments established the sovereign authority of the God of Israel over the nation Israel; and they served as a divine witness as an evangelistic tool. They defined Who God was and His standards.
4. To the believer in Israel, these 5 commandments defined individual spiritual freedom and provided the environment for the spiritual life. John 8:32 and Ex. 20. Freedom is the environment for the Christian life.
5. But these commandments never constituted the spiritual life of Israel. The spiritual life of Israel was the cultic worship of the Tabernacle and later the Temple. There was no filling of the Spirit. The Ten Commandments did not constitute the spiritual life.
6. The last five commandments form a Biblical paradigm of morality. Ex. 20:13–17.
7. These final five commandments codify the mandates of civil summarize the precepts of civil independence which protect the privacy and property of believers and unbelievers alike in the client nation Israel. The focus here is on the client nation. There are always both categories of believers in Israel.
8. As divinely ordained law, the Ten Commandments are the epitome of law and divine establishment. They are the foundation for law even today.

9. The Ten Commandments are the reflection of law which is divinely ordained for the preservation of all the human race. You will not murder; you will not steal; these are protections for the human race.
10. These commandments do not promote religion as such; they define freedom and divine establishment in a client nation to God.
11. The Ten Commandments are legal history. They are the foundation for all Law.

Lucky that Moses did not have to run these commandments by the congress of the US. Bobby believes it is okay to have the Ten Commandments posted in a courtroom. They reflect a legal history and are the underpinnings of all law; and are therefore, highly appropriate. They are a foundation, to some degree, upon which our law is based. They are a part of our historical and spiritual heritage.

Keeping the Ten Commandments is a part of the Christian way of life is a misapplication. But, what we have is infinitely greater. Keeping these commandments can make us just as good as an unbeliever who keeps them.

Keeping means to hold on to that which belongs to you. It is not the Law of Moses to be held onto in the Church Age. What should be held onto are the directives and mandates of the Church Age.

The Commandments that we should keep:

1. The commandments of God are the doctrines pertinent to living the spiritual life in the Church Age. These doctrines written to all the various churches; the mandates; all these are God's commandments.
2. We possess this doctrine of the New Testament as a part of God's grace to us. We have been given many resources. We follow these and we execute the spiritual way of life; and there is no work associated with it.
3. We metabolize doctrine; we keep it; we hold onto it; and we apply it to our lives. Grace orientation; doctrinal orientation. We have renovated our minds; we haven't done anything. It is all about the grace of God; it is not what we do. Many of our works simply glorify ourselves.
4. Keeping the commandments of God means that we make divine viewpoint the center of our thinking and our life, and everything else falls into place.
5. Thus, we keep the commandments of God by executing the Christian way of life. Neither circumcision or Uncircumcision count as anything. Being any combination of Jew, Gentile, circumcised or not; none of these things mean anything.

We are to remain in status quo in society; married or unmarried; slave or free; in whatever circumstance we are in. We renovate our thinking; outward circumstances change as God unfolds change for our lives and we step through the doors which He opens.

1Cor. 7:19b ...but the keeping of God's commands.

Paul has given illustrations of remaining in the condition in which you are called; married or single; circumcised or uncircumcised. This does not mean that we retreat from life and go into some shell of meditation and prayer. We still live in the devil's world and we must continue to make a living. We interact with believers and unbelievers both. These people that we run into, see us in every different condition. We have magnetism if we live in the same environment as they do, and handle the environment based upon the doctrine in our souls. We have a radically different priority in life. We are part of their world in every sense of the word; but we do not compromise or accommodate their human viewpoint. Our priority is divine viewpoint. V. 20 is repetition of v. 17; and this will be repeated in v. 24. This is an extremely important principle for us. He is reinforcing inculcation by repetition. The priority of doctrine over circumstances. Divine viewpoint over human viewpoint. This priority can often be a very confusing and a thorny issue. The difficult question is, how much association can we have? How much association can we have with human viewpoint? How much is too much? We come into contact with human viewpoint every day; it is all around us.

We are not necessarily like-minded with other believers. If it influences our thinking, then we have too much contact. Our thinking must conform. Our souls must be renovated. When someone's human viewpoint begins to wear on our divine viewpoint, then we are spending too much time with them. We must make comparisons with their thinking and our own. It's not a matter of likeing the cowboys as verses the Texans. When there is a disconnect between doctrine and their viewpoint, we must be aware of it. We must regroup in our thought process. We must not go over to their thinking. We cannot thoughtlessly become an intimate with human viewpoint. Human viewpoint so easily rubs off on us; subtly or overtly. Maybe you think, there are no believers in my periphery. Remember...

Association

1. Association with human viewpoint types is not prohibited; whether believers or unbelievers.
2. You do not find your intimate friendships or romantic interests or your spouse in the human viewpoint environment. You are looking for love in the wrong place.
3. This includes believers and unbelievers who think human viewpoint. You cannot think that, "I know that they are going to be positive." Do not waste your life on association with the believer or the unbeliever.
4. The chronically immature or Reversionistic believer is just as big a hazard to your advance as any unbeliever.
5. These intimate associations are practically a guarantee of being influenced by human viewpoint. You may not even recognize it.

Also...

Loneliness

1. What do you say, "I'm a taper in Timbuktu and have never even met another believer." Better to be lonely. You can have friends. But intimacy needs to be with believers who are positive. You don't think that God knows you are lonely? You don't think that He knows you need some likeminded association?
2. God knows our needs like no one else. If we think we can handle it and push God out of the way, God will let us do it. It will eventually effect our thinking, and we are giving up on our mission.
3. Loneliness is a state of mind which can force out divine viewpoint. It is a motivator to go in the wrong direction.
4. When we are lonely is when we most clearly experience the grace of God in our lives.

You can be in isolation in Iraq with no likeminded believers; you can be stuck on an oil rig; if your condition is alone, then you remain that way, because there is a reason for it. Maybe God needs to teach us something. Too many friends can be as distracting as none at all. Our spiritual life will override our loneliness. Our mission is to glorify and serve the Lord; it is never to serve ourselves.

1Cor. 7:20 Each one in the calling in which he was called, in this remain.

1Cor. 7:20–23

Sunday 2 June 11, 2006

We can do in essentially any circumstance that we find ourselves in at salvation and after we are saved. In and of itself, circumcision is not really the topic of these previous verses.

1Cor. 7:19 Circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing, but the keeping of God's commands.

We can relax; all the problems of our present circumstances are in the hands of God. Putting all of our problems in the hands of the Lord is the easiest thing in the world to do. When we begin to apply doctrine to our circumstances, then we begin to understand what God has done for us. Applying doctrine is when we really see how God works.

Static present of μένω = to remain. If God's plan is for our circumstances to change, then He will open the door and we will walk through it. It is okay to better ourselves; but that is never our priority. Our priority is to glorify God.

The next verb is in the subordinate clause: καλέω = to call, common and efficacious grace. This is the Holy Spirit making the gospel of Jesus Christ clear to the spiritually dead person, who cannot understand the things of God. It is the Holy Spirit which reveals the gospel to them. We are the vehicles of witnessing, but the Holy Spirit makes it real in their souls. It is not our faith which saves us, but God the Holy Spirit putting us into union with Jesus Christ through the baptism of the Holy Spirit. Aorist passive indicative; culminative aorist; we view the action of the verb from its existing results. As a result, we live the spiritual life. The spiritual life is part of our call. Called encompasses the entire call, both salvation and after salvation. A vocation in which we exist when we are called to salvation and a vocation in which we participate during our spiritual life. We operate inside the parameters of the Christian way of life—our Christian existence, from salvation throughout our temporal existence. It is that which we do in our temporal life; in many cases, the largest chunk of this is our job, which can take up 40–80 hours a week. This is where we need doctrine the most. If we spend most of our time in our vocation, then our call is to the spiritual life inside where we live. It is how we exist, how we make money; we are called to salvation in the spiritual life in a certain environment. Paul is talking about remaining in the condition in which we are called. Just because you start out in one vocation, that does not mean that you cannot change; it is okay to improve your financial condition, your education, or to prepare for something else. God may change your circumstances and allow you to move up, or closer to what you want to do.

Spiritual preparation is the most important thing that you can do in life. It is okay to step through the doors which God opens for us; just keep in mind what our priorities are in life. Our spiritual life is our priority. God has a purpose for us, regardless of where we are in life. You can be rich or poor, married or single or divorced; but your spiritual advance is your priority and you can always advance spiritually. God will open doors for us. Our priority is never improving our temporal life; it is not prohibited, but it is incidental. This can make a big difference in our thought process, in how we relax, etc. It is the renovation of our thinking which is important. Just keep in mind, in your daily life, what your priority is. We can advance in the spiritual life. We can represent the Lord wherever we are in whatever circumstances. Doctrine works in whatever vocation that we find ourselves. The blessing of the spiritual life can be enjoyed to the maximum in any condition of life. It does not matter if it remains the same or whether God changes it.

We are not called to show off the spiritual life by making temporal improvements in our life. We do not glorify God with our human achievements. This is nothing more than pleasing God with who and what we are. God is not impressed with who we are; God is impressed with who He is. When we glorify Him, He is impressed; and not because we do it., but because He works through us.

We don't have to be impatient; we don't have to hate our world; we don't have to push push push to get ahead. Just relax and enjoy.

1Cor. 7:20 Each one in the calling in which he was called, in this remain.

Paul now goes to a very extreme illustration. What could be worse than being a slave, without any personal freedom and possibly without any time off or money of your own.

Called is the plan of God from salvation, temporal life, and through to eternity. Passive, indicative. The passive voice points to the grace of God in being called.

God's grace is closely connected with being a slave. Slavery is a great evil; δουλος = servant, slave. Air force academy calls their freshmen group doolies. As great an evil as this is, this is widely practiced, and it is as much a part of the social condition as any other.

Their were riots in Rome and the slaves, in this way, blackmailed everyone else. This is an institution that everyone understood and it was a part of the fabric of their social life. The Bible never makes an issue of slavery as such. The Bible never calls for slavery to be eradicated; it never says, "Slavery should end." The Bible recognizes the condition, and says, "Were you called as a slave?"

Why Does the Bible not Condemn Slavery?

1. Like all temporal conditions, slavery is not to be a focus of the believer. Slavery still takes place all over the world. Bobby keeps saying that it is evil. What could be a worse condition than not being free? Were you called as a slave? Then stay a slave.
2. God's plan is still in effect when you are a slave. God's plan is there for us whether we are slave or free. Slavery exists in a number of ways. Many of us are enslaved to our vocation; to a husband or wife; to a mortgage; to a car payment; to human viewpoint? The latter is truly heinous.
3. If slavery is part of God's plan, then God has a reason for not removing the believer from this situation, which applies across the board. Slavery is the extreme; if God does not remove us from our circumstances, then He has a reason for leaving us there.
4. In other words, some part of God's plan can only be fulfilled in this condition. The priority is not about how we want things to be; it is, what does God want us to do and to be. Do not focus on yourself and circumstances, but on who and what God is.
5. Suppose, there is a slave who can only be reached by you as a fellow slave? We have the greatest opportunity. God will keep us there to present the gospel. Missionaries live under horrible conditions on a mission field; and they have willingly given up their comfort, fortune and lives to reach others for Jesus Christ.
6. Remember Onesimus, who was called as a slave? Paul sent him back to Philemon, his master. Paul sent him back as a slave and Paul sent a letter as well. The issue was not slavery, but the spiritual life and God's plan.
7. There was a greater issue here; Paul was demonstrating in an unforgettable way, the sufficiency of the Christian way of life under all conditions. You might say, "Well, that's nice for Paul; he's not the slave." But Paul was a slave to Jesus Christ; and he was in chains when he sent Onesimos back. Paul many times calls himself a slave to the Lord Jesus Christ. Paul lived through some of the most terrifying conditions that a man can live through.

The prison epistles contain some of Paul's greatest doctrine. The time he spend in prison was an incredible blessing to all believers everywhere throughout many generations. Paul will hear (or has heard), "Well done, my good and faithful servant." To live in luxury and then to not hear those words at death is a waste.

1Cor. 7:21 Were you called [by the grace of God] as a slave? It does not matter to you. But if you are able to be free, rather use it.

1Cor. 7:22 For the one called while a slave in the Lord is a freed man of the Lord. And likewise, the one called while a free man is a slave of Christ.

1Cor. 7:23 You were redeemed with a price; do not become slaves of men.

1Cor. 7:24 Each in whatever state called, brothers, in this remain with God.

1Cor. 7:20–21

Wednesday June 14, 2006

Missionary report tonite.

God has a plan for every single one of us as individual believers. God in eternity past thought enough of us to plan for us. Wherever we are in life, exalted or lowest, no matter who we are, God has still provided a plan for us. If that is the case, then we have a service to Him. We are told to remain in whatever condition that we were called in.

This passage does not tell us that our environment is going to remain the same throughout our entire life. The environment that we live in also changes. We function in this world as human beings. We all make a living in this world. We move ahead or we retrogress in our temporal lives in whatever environment that we exist in. Our environment is in constant flux. We live our temporal lives and we represent the Lord Jesus Christ in whatever condition in which we live. Whatever our condition is, it really has no influence in our environment or our spiritual life. It is the spiritual life which drives the environment in which we live. We can remain and we can flourish in any circumstance, with the priority of doctrine in place. We do not have to improve our temporal life to advance in the plan of God. We do not have to demonstrate some progression in our own plan, we do not have to improve our own lives, in order to serve Jesus Christ. We are where we are for a reason. Why do you think we are told to remain in this condition? God leaves us in this condition for a reason. We demonstrate the sufficiency of the spiritual life right where we live. God is never glorified by our human achievements. We are only trying to please God by who and what we are. Just because we have a new life, this does not guarantee that we have a new external condition. If these conditions are to change, then God will change them. In the mean time, we operate right where we are.

This verse does not tell us that we will remain in the exact same environment for the rest of our lives; but, we do not do things to take ourselves out of it. We do not make life changing decisions, which superficially superimpose our own plan over God's plan. "I am going to push to change my circumstances, because I know that is God's plan for me." Instead, we should wait, look for whatever God has for us. We don't get outside of the jet to push it; we let the Lord handle the changes. We remain where He puts us and where He takes us. There is a fine line between His plan and our plan; it must always be on our minds, what does the Lord have for us. This is a relaxing way to think. We do have to make a living; we should work as unto God; but we do not move ahead unless He moves us ahead; we do not go through a door unless God opens the door for us.

We represent Jesus Christ and the blessings of the spiritual life, wherever we are, in whatever conditions we find ourselves in. We don't say, "I wish the Lord would move me quickly to get out of this lousy set of circumstances."

1Cor. 7:20 Each one in the calling in which he was called, in this remain.

There were hundreds of thousands of slaves in the Roman empire; possibly millions. Paul uses this example of slavery, as an extreme example. We are not slaves, but we still have circumstances in our lives which are mundane and under which we should remain. Paul is dealing with believers in slavery, and if a believer is in slavery, grow in grace and serve the Lord, then anyone in any circumstance can serve the Lord. If they can do the greater, then surely we can do the lesser. Paul demonstrates in an unforgettable way, the sufficiency of the Christian way of life in all conditions.

It is easy to look at our own circumstances and recognize that they are nothing compared to the environment of slaves. Slaves there were the lowest of the low in society. Believers can use the exact same resources in the spiritual life; no one has an advantage in the spiritual life, no matter how they are called.

Paul says Don't worry about it. In divinely inspired Scripture, that is exactly what Paul says. He says, if you are a slave right now, called by God; so what? We are to drive on as a believer no matter what the circumstances are. You may like this or that circumstance better than another; but our spiritual life functions regardless of the circumstance. This passage speaks about slavery, but it is not about slavery, per se. Don't worry is a universal attitude of the Christian way of life. Don't panic; don't despair; do not resort to desperate measures. We are not called to panic, to despair, or to use desperate measures to advance ourselves.

We have a palace in our souls, even if we are in chains. We can leave all the worry, dissatisfaction, etc. outside, outside of the palace. Paul is revealing the mental attitude of the believer for every circumstance of life. Were you called as a slave [or, in whatever profession you find yourself in]? If you do fine with where God called you, then you will do fine under any circumstance. Change your soul and the external circumstances will change by themselves.

Slavery is one of the greatest injustices of life; it violates the divine institution of volition. However, so much of our life has inequality, injustice and prejudice; everyone faces it. Someone is promoted over you; you are accused of something you did not do; there is someone who is prejudice against us, maybe because they don't like how we breathe.

Even if it is unjust, we remain. We get this attitude: I am going to quit; I am pissed off about this. Whatever tiff you have, you are not remaining in the position in which you are called. We all make changes and we all move into different areas of life.

I was dissatisfied about such and such, and moved into a different area, and now I am happy. Wherever we are, that is where we remain and work from there; even if we got them by our own effort. God may have sent a great opportunity that you could not pass up; but when God moves us, then we move. That can be God moving us.

When we face unjust circumstances, we often fight against that. It is a normal reaction; however, we don't have to change our circumstances. There is no greater place to face unjust circumstances as in the military. You can have a CO who has it out for you, and he can make your life miserable. However, your testimony is to those around you; even to the one making you miserable. Don't let your conditions in life change your focus in life. Becoming a believer does not mean that you change your conditions; you change your thinking. God has a plan for us, in any circumstance. Our mission is to advance, to glorify Him, and to serve Him wherever we are.

Another example of this is person in prison; someone sitting behind bars for a number of years; no freedom except in that little world of the prison. Bobby knows a man sent to prison unjustly for 18 months, and it turns out that he is having a great ministry there.

1Cor. 7:21a Were you called as a slave? Don't worry about it.

Christ freed us from the slave market of sin; if He can do that, if He sacrificed everything; if He can do that, can't he free us from a particular set of circumstances. God freed the Jews in Egypt, but for His own purpose. They lived in awful conditions for many generations; if God can remove the Jews from the 5th cycle after 70 years; if He can remove the Jews from Egypt; then He can certainly do that for us. If God can move nations, if He can destroy nations, then He can certainly remove us from some little circumstance that we do not like.

Slavery is horrible; why doesn't God simply free slaves? It is one of the worst conditions possible. Bobby can't answer for individual cases, but overall, God has a purpose for us, and in whatever circumstances we find ourselves in. There is a reason for everything that happens. When someone dies, that means it was time. It is not for us to question the plan of God for anyone. Our condition has changed; we have lost someone that we love in life. People want out of that; we may grieve and it may hurt—but we remain in the condition in which we are called.

Don't forget that we live in the devil's world; slavery is a part of the devil's world. There are several prison ministries in Berachah; what a great message to the believer behind bars; remain in the state that you are called. Remain there; advance; serve the Lord there.

1Cor. 7:21b But if you are able to be free, rather use it.

Jim Meyers report. He was ordained in 1971. Had churches in New Mexico; but, when the Soviet Union broke up, he got a foothold there. His ministry extends to Brazil, Africa, Australia as well.

He received his theological training at Berachah. He knows that he is dependent upon the grace of God. And he is grateful that we allow him to take the Word of God to former Soviet Union. Health problems with his brother; hoping the health problems will get his attention.

He is in the Ukraine, and there have been a great many changes. An orange revolution, and there were some good changes. However, the man defeated is still inside a high political office.

They aren't in Russia, but nearby. The government is becoming more oppressive; a reversion there. Freedom of press is being removed; religious freedom is being removed; threatened to cut off their gas in Russia. Russian and Ukraine are posturing against one another. They have nothing to say about this.

Great social problems there. The worst of the west came into the soviet union with pornography and immorality and the missionaries who flood in there are a reflection of the churches of where they came. They are teaching feel good stuff; praise and feel good worship; and Lordship salvation. The people were so hungry is that many of them embraced this stuff which has been kept from them for 70 years. So many heard all the garbage which came in, and they thought it was right.

Divorce rate has increased rapidly; increased drug problems, homosexual problem with a gay rights demonstration in Moscow. Originally, homosexuality was not ever tolerated; and now it is legal. Not enough to be legal; now they want rights. There was a bit of a riot with the reaction. Decadence there as here.

There is an emerging middle class. Before there were the very wealthy soviet leaders and everyone else. Increasing privatization in the Ukraine. But there are tax laws which are ridiculous; there they have a great many regulations; red tape here called a long box there. The government has all these weird regulations; prove you're not a camel. Stand in long lines, and go from one line to another. And sometimes, you have to have one person approve the person who approved you for something else.

It was nice to come back to the US where gas is only $3/gallon; it is $4/gallon and it is up to $8/gallon in some countries. There is very little news from America, but a lot of news from the European union. Tremendous propaganda trying to convince people that this is a wonderful idea. No longer any borders and you can travel into any other European nation; there is no check point there. All have the same currency. No one checks your passport once you get in there.

There is a European parliament, and they are not elected by anyone in any of the nations; and they impose laws over all the European nations there. And other nations are clamoring to get into this EU. High tariffs, no rights to trade; people are giving up many rights.

10–15 years ago, the former Soviet Union was the hot spot. Americans are very fickle and the novelty has worn off. Now, they want to go to central Asia. An exodus from the Ukraine to central Asia. They want to go to Georgia, Mongolia, Kazakstan. The Ukraine is the most positive nation in this area. Many European nations are cold to the gospel. More Moslems who attend Mosques in England than Christians attend church. 4% go to church there on Sunday. So much of Europe is apostate, decadent and anti-God.

The people in the Ukraine are hungry for the gospel. Literature can be printed and distributed; and the gospel can be taught. Missionaries need to evangelize, but then to train believers so that they can be spiritually self-sustaining. But missionaries are leaving in droves.

Primary focus is to train the nationals to do the job. 2 year intensive program to teach systematic theology, hermeneutics, Greek and Hebrew. He only accepts students who want to lead churches. Classes from 8:30 am to 2:30 pm, and there are Bible classes which must be gone to.

Teaching there in the prisons as well and they go into hospitals, where they can evangelize. They go into children's cancer hospitals; and the parents are there and grandparents are there as well. They go to orphanages. Vacation Bible school; a sports ministry. Turns out that baseball is pretty complicated to explain. Many come and watch. Teams are going from America who are going to evangelize through sports ministries. The kids don't have malls to go to, and they are looking for something to do; and they see this and they come and watch.

People want to learn English; it is the language of the Internet and business; so free English lessons are taught and they give the gospel in this way. To spend a few weeks in the summer to organize and teach children Bible classes, or sports ministry, or experience teaching English as a second language. Contact them and see about doing that. 2–3 weeks or longer.

He teaches at the church and at the Bible college. Some come and teach a few weeks at the Bible college. God has opened doors for him in Kazakstan, Moldova (west of the Ukraine, where there is a good dispensational, grace-oriented seminary there). Great response to Bible conferences in Brazil as well. Zambia as well (used to be Rhodesia). Zambia is the only country where the constitution says they are a Christian nation. Islam has been unable to penetrate this nation as it has many other nations in Africa.

One place they heard doctrinal teaching (pastors) at a conference and were very taken by it. Great response in Ukraine; graduates have gone out and planted churches; and they are sending missionaries to Russia. One young man began a church of theology and he brings pastors in. God has greatly blessed them.

Letter from a gal about a mixed marriage. Bob's voice would grate on the guy's nerves; but she was able to listen and he made it possible for her to listen to doctrine. The woman writing is the daughter; "I would have been horrified if my mother left my father when she became a believer." Even as an unbeliever, this daughter knew the sanctity of marriage. After awhile, the dad brought mom to the conferences and to Berachah. The dad, on the last night, he first borrowed a Bible, and then her pen on the 2nd night. He finally believed. Sometimes it takes a long time to witness to a spouse; in this case, it was 20 years; if you love that person enough, isn't it worth it? That is the doctrine of sanctification in marriage.

1Cor. 7:20 Each one in the calling in which he was called, in this remain.

We are currently studying a drastic condition of slavery; the extreme example, in v. 21. Paul counsels for one to remain in circumstances of prejudice, low social standing, etc. This is a shocking example (although less shocking than it is to us). Paul uses the oppressive conditions of slavery as a paradigm. Don't seek to change the status quo in your life. The harder we try to rid ourselves of injustice and inequality, the worse it becomes. It never seems to go away and it never will go away. Many of those hearing this letter read were called as slaves.

Why remain in such a state? Our tendency would be to fight with any means in anyway possible, to overthrow such an oppressive state; and to take ourselves out of such a state.

Believers and the Condition They are In

1. There is no condition, circumstance in life which takes precedence over the plan of God.
2. There is no condition in life from which we as believers need seek escape. This includes mixed marriage.
3. Our circumstances do not matter to God's plan; God's plan marches on regardless of our circumstance. God's plan can and will be fulfilled if we cooperate in the worst or the best of conditions.
4. Even in the worst condition imaginable, we are to stay put and live the Christian way of life. We might be in it or we may have thought about it; but we stay there. God has a plan for us from the moment we are saved until we take our last breath.
5. God has a perfect plan, even for slaves.
6. God's plan always revolves around changing one's internal condition; not changing the external conditions; in order to glorify Him.
7. Our external conditions are never our priority. It is easy to get caught up in our lives. It is easy to get caught up in the pursuits of our own plans. We must always advance spiritually first. Our priority must remain the same. You must remain in the condition in which you are called.
8. The function of our spiritual life supercedes and handles any condition in which we might find ourselves.

9. Do not take matters into your own hands simply because you don't like your circumstances, your condition; stay put until God opens the next door.

Does this mean that you don't better yourself through more education, financial conditions, etc. This does not mean that you can never leave where you are. This does not mean that you don't get any more education because you should stay right there. We are to keep our priorities most in mind. Our circumstances are not the issue; the renovation of our thinking is the issue. When God chooses to, He will promote us. His plans for us will include changes in our circumstances, and He will take care of that. God did not call us to be a failure in the spiritual way of life. When you grow up and mature, God can use us in any circumstances in which we find ourselves. Our temporal life may change, but this is by way of fulfillment of God's plan for our lives. God's plan is greater than our own plan for our lives. When we are fulfilling His plan for our lives, it is much better than fulfilling our own plans for our lives. Paul uses slavery as an extreme example. Wherever we end up, we are to stay put and to serve Him.

In the US, slavery has been abolished, and thank God that is true. It did exist as a terrible evil in our early history and in the Roman empire. Being trapped in a terrible marriage; functioning in a job which is oppressive; having an unfair tyrant for a boss; the rigors and discipline of military service. Many freedoms are curtailed for the greater freedom and greater good to be accomplished. What Bobby does is a form of slavery. What many of us do is a form of slavery. We are called to be slaves in Christ to Christ. Prison is a great slavery today. In those conditions, the believer in Jesus Christ can fulfill the plan of God, even though they are forced to remain in this or that condition. Do not panic, do not despair, no worries, don't be miserable; don't sweat it; don't worry about it. This is a statement of faith rest. This one statement is sharing the happiness of God.

If you don't get ahead, don't worry about it; if you do get ahead, don't be fatheaded about it. The principle is to remain where you are called.

1Cor. 7:21a Were you called as a slave?

Αλλα ει = but if. This is a first class condition; we are assuming that the premise here is true in order to further his argument. The verb is the present active indicative of δυναμαι = to be able to, to have the power to, to have the chance to. But if you are able to... Ελυθερος γενεσθαι = to be, to become [something you were not before]. Aorist active infinitive. Givonai is a deponent verb; passive in form, but active in meaning. ...to be freed from slavery... It is okay to move ahead in life; it is okay for circumstances to change. Don't lose sight of your great purpose in life.

Μαλλον χραισι = better to make use of. Aorist active imperative. This is a command to make use of the freedom which God gives us. Move into our new environment and continue to march in the Christian way of life.

This does not say that we should make freedom happen. This is not a call the radicalism or to revolution; this is a door opening as an opportunity to God. Slavery is not intolerable to the believer. Whatever condition is slavery to us is not intolerable. The Christian slave is not to rebel against his master; and the example is Onesimus who rebelled against his master, Philemon. We are not to react. We remain in the condition in which we are called and we serve the Lord in that condition.

Did the woman who was mentioned earlier, do you think she complained everyday to the neighbor about her husband? That is not what God has called us to do, and that is not how she is to function. If the heathen husband wants freedom, then the believer wife can separate with the right of remarriage.

Illustration of a man from another church who was unjustly sentenced to 18 months in prison; this is a circumstance in which the grace of God is evident. Slavery is tolerable to the believer. If freedom is offered, accept it from the Lord; this freedom represents a change; and a change always means new opportunity for us. These changes can be a step up or a step down. It does not matter the direction our condition takes.

Any change of status—from single to married, slave to free, free to slave, married to unmarried, or any other change, is to be done in service to our Lord.

The Concept of this Verse

1. A person can be physically freed from the condition of slavery. Whatever slavery which pertains to us would go in this blank.
2. As believers, we are never freed from being slaves to Christ. Paul calls himself a bond-servant to Christ. We are never free from this obligation. This is the priority—service to Him, because we are slaves to Him.
3. We are always slaves to the Lord and this is by His design, which means it must be a good thing to be a slave.
4. But also, we serve the Lord because He has freed us from the slave market of sin and put us in the light of His grace. We are slaves because we have been freed; a beautiful oxymoron.
5. As slaves, we serve the Lord based on His plan; freed from our condemnation and spiritual death.
6. That is exactly what our life should be—slaves to God and free to serve. The great concept of the Christian way of life. Being a slave to God is the greatest privilege that we could have.
7. So whether our human condition is freedom or slavery, we have been made free in Christ to serve Him in exactly the way that He designates. He has purchased us. That is the blood of Christ. He died for us and He owns us. We are out of the slave market of sin, but He now owns us.

1Cor. 7:21b But if you are able to be free, rather use it.

We are called in the US as the greatest country in the world when it comes to freedom; but we are also slaves to Jesus Christ, which is the greatest thing which could ever happen to us.

1Cor. 7:22 For the one called while a slave in the Lord is a freed man of the Lord. And likewise, the one called while a free man is a slave of Christ.

1Cor. 7:21–22

Sunday 1 June 18, 2006

Father's Day. Paul was a father, of sorts, fathering and leading the churches under his authority. It is under Paul's authority to unconfused the churches who now find themselves confused. Does Paul mean that we remain even under intolerable conditions? The Jews in Corinth know they can be married or single and have an impact for God. However, Paul must continue with extreme conditions to fully explain what it means to remain. He turns to the oppressive conditions of slavery. That is his subject in v. 21:

Were you called as a slave? Don't worry about it; it is no big deal. Christianity is a new life; does this mean that slavery is a part of this new life? And here, the Apostle Paul says, remain in this condition of slavery. It does not get any worse than that. Paul is giving them information which they must hear. There is nothing in life which takes priority over the plan of God. There is no part of our life which is difficult that we need to seek escape from. That is why we have the faith-rest rationale. That deals with the horrible circumstances in which we live. God's plan can be fulfilled in the best of conditions or the worst of our conditions.

There are many forms of slavery today in which we seek escape. Having to function in an oppressive, drudgery-laden job; or under a teacher who is an unfair tyrant. Or the rigors and discipline. Being stuck in a very bad marriage; being sent to prison, justly or unjustly. If God calls us in any of these circumstances, and He leads us in this way, He always has His reasons. This precludes bitterness, victimhood, it is all everybody else's fault. Our circumstances we often blame on others, but they are a part of God's plan. We have the environment to serve the Lord. God's plan revolves around not around changing our external existence, but changing our internal thinking. We must renovate our own thinking, so we can glorify Him no matter where we are and no matter how we live.

When you stop thinking about yourself, that is when bitterness leaves your soul and you become the most content. This is why we, as believers, do not need to take matters into our own hands. Stay put in the circumstances in which we find ourselves. When the time is right, the Lord opens the next door for us, and we continue to progress in His plan. The door could open to better or to worse conditions. We must always remember that our circumstances are not the issue. The focus in the spiritual life is our mental attitude and our doctrinal application. This does not make any difference whether we are enslaved or free.

So, does this mean, we cannot apply for a new job? Does it mean that we do not get any more education? Do we not attempt to get ahead where we work? There is a difference between bettering ourself and the priority of ourselves. What is first and foremost is God's plan and Bible doctrine. What is secondary is our own personal needs. His plan is greater than our plan. We always should work hard; we should take advantage of opportunities as they come to us; it is our focus, our priorities which should be foremost. Is it really important to have more money, fame, prestige, etc. than anyone else? Whether better or worse, we are to serve God in our own environment. When God facilitates a change of environment, then He has kicked us into another phase of His plan, even when the circumstances are not a promotion in our minds.

1Cor. 7:21 Were you called as a slave? It does not matter to you.

Paul does allow for us to advance or to take advantage of other opportunities. That is the second half of this verse. This is not a call for insurgency, murder or mayhem for us to advance in life; this is an opportunity which beckons us. David would be a good illustration at this point in time. David was anointed king of Israel when about the age of 13 or 14. However, he did not become king until age 30. There were several times when he could have become king, but it was not via God's promotion, so he did not cut corners.

When God moves us to new circumstances, we move along, and we take advantage of the new opportunity, which is freedom. Any change of status or circumstances, from single to married, from slave to free, free to slave; it is all to be used in service to the Lord by becoming a mature believer.

1Cor. 7:21b But if you are able to be free, rather use it.

We, in general, are called as freedmen; but, we are still slaves to Jesus Christ. We are slaves—complete and total slaves to Jesus Christ. A person can be physically freed from the condition of slavery. In essence, we are always slaves to the Lord. That is not an accident; that is by His design. It is part of God's plan. This is God's plan for each and every believer in Jesus Christ, from the beginning of time to the end of time (well, at least in the Church Age).

We are slaves, but we serve Him on the basis of being freed from the slave market of sin. We are slaves to Christ and free to serve Him. We are made free in Christ to serve Him in exactly the way that He has designated us to serve Him.

Paul can be very literary in the way that he presents doctrine. We have a mixture of the literal and the spiritual. In v. 21, we are speaking of a literal slave. Onesimus is an example which we recently studied of a physical slave who was set free in Christ, which is spiritual. Paul juxtaposes the physical and the spiritual. Philemon was the master of Onesimus; and he was called as a freed man; but he is called as Christ's slave. We are called as free; so we are slaves; we are called as slaves, making us free.

Only the first clause of v. 21 is connected to v. 22. Were you called while a slave? The one who is called while in slavery is the Lord's freedman. Gaining physical freedom is not the focus of vv. 21–22. If it changes, great; if it doesn't, that is also good. Freedom of course is always nice, and it is a wonderful bonus in life; but it is not necessary in life to live the spiritual life.

Red China is a nation of slaves, despite the news we hear. They are still a people in bondage in many ways; but there is a flourishing underground Christian community there.

---

This gal in New Zealand got these tapes of R.B. Thieme Jr. She felt a call to do something, but she had no idea where or why. As she became older, she wanted to go somewhere. She felt that this was her mission in life. You do not get to get into Red China as an evangelist. Many Chinese want to learn English, and she could enter in as a teacher of English. Bobby was able to ask her about Christianity there. She is prohibited by the law there to speak of Jesus Christ. If someone asks her a question, then it is lawful to answer that question; but she cannot initiate it. The Chinese government, over an atheistic nation, think that there is no reason for anyone to do that, except to learn the fallacy of it. They look at all westerners as believers, and she never has to initiate the conversation; they will seek her out. There are 100,000,000 believers in China; 1/10th of China's population. In slavery, Christianity can flourish.

1Cor. 7:22 For the one called while a slave in the Lord is a freed man of the Lord. And likewise, the one called while a free man is a slave of Christ.

1Cor. 7:22–23

Sunday 2 June 18, 2006

Bobby repeats these verses because they are the most pertinent to us. In seminary, they often ask, what is your lifetime verse? Bobby chooses these verses, because these refer to epistemological rehabilitation. Bobby's professor knew its meaning; not the other students.

Physical slavery; spiritual freedom; physical freedom, spiritual slavery. In Red China, many millions have been called while slaves. The missions in China were strong before 1949, and Mao became dictator at that point and he wiped out millions of Christians in order to enforce his slavery.

When we were called, we feel under the auspices of v. 20. Now, our circumstances have probably saved since then, unless we were just saved yesterday. Our circumstances change for all sorts of reasons. Our priority is growing in grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior. Wherever we are, whatever we do, there we serve the Lord; there we remember the priority. God changes our circumstances. This does not mean we cannot try to improve our lot in life; as long as it is not for our own personal glorification. It is a matter of priorities.

Also, one should take into account that spiritual growth is going to be a part of some external changes.

There are many African nations where dictators perpetuated tyranny and there is a flourishing Christianity, e.g., in Nigeria, where the leadership is Muslim. Since Christianity is flourishing in places where it should not, that should indicate that God is God. Jesus Christ is more powerful than any circumstance on this earth. There is more power in the doctrines of Christianity than any tyrant has on this earth. As long as we metabolize doctrine, we have freedom in our souls. Yet, we are still slaves of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Why in slavery does Christianity flourish so much? Of course, Christianity is truth, and people seek the truth. However, those in slavery have a more conspicuous need for doctrine and a need for some way to endure the horrible conditions of slavery. It is easy in our world to take our spiritual life for granted. Life here is so great and so relatively easy to take the spiritual life for granted. As slaves, we are rather focused in what we do. The slave's problem is greater and more immediate than our own problems. Sometimes persecution is a better environment for spiritual advance. It is the same juxtaposition of slavery and freedom.

We live in a client nation to God, and our opportunities are far greater. It is easy to get our priorities wrong. You just cannot miss the point; if you are called as a slave, remain in that condition. Aorist passive participle of καλέω = to call. We are called in salvation, and the Holy Spirit places every believer into Christ; we are baptized into Christ. It is not something we feel or experience, it just happens. This is a position which is given and can never be lost. Position means we have 39 irrevocable assets. Our salvation is not accomplished by us; and some try to claim that believing is a work. It is God the Holy Spirit who places us in union with Jesus Christ. Our faith is worthless apart from the baptism of the Holy Spirit. That is the content of our calling. Aorist participle precedes or is coterminous the action of the main verb, which is to be. Being called precedes becoming a freeman in Christ. In salvation, we are Positionally free in Christ, even though, physically, experientially, a slave. We are free to serve the Lord. Christ in His death, burial and resurrection, freed us from the bondage of sin. Freedom in Christ because of the resources that He gives us. Our physical, experiential slavery does not hinder our spiritual growth or our spiritual service. Furthermore, we can be content, even in the most horrible of circumstances. God has not left us simply to suffer in whatever circumstances that we are in. He has provided the resources so that we can enjoy what He has given us. We can enjoy all that He has given us, despite living under terrible conditions.

1Cor. 7:22a For the one called while a slave in the Lord is a freed man of the Lord.

ὁμοίως = likewise, in the same way. I.e., the reverse of the previous clause is also true. This is the oxymoron of v. 22 is also true.

Points on v. 22

1. In Christ, the distinction between freedom and slavery is obliterated; it no longer exists. There is no such distinction. This should hit home to the Corinthians, some who are slaves and some who own slaves.
2. They need to understand that being the Lord's freeman and being His slave is one and the same. There is no difference.
3. Who is the Lord's freeman? The believer who is redeemed from the slave market of sin. We are no longer a slave to sin.
4. At the same time, the Lord's slave is one whom He has purchased for Himself. He freed us from the slave market of sin by purchasing out from the slave market of sin. This explains our status in the Christian way of life.

5. We are freed from a slave market of sin, but do not forget that we are bought and paid for with a price.
6. We are purchased by the Lord as His servant. We were slaves before. When someone buys us; when He owns us, that makes us a slave. This is Jesus Christ, Who has bought us; Who has paid for us. Paul continually calls himself a bond-slave of Jesus Christ.
7. So master and slave stand on the same ground; they are equal in Christ Jesus.

Have you ever heard someone say, “I am free and no one can tell me to do otherwise; no one tells me what to do.” That is never the substance of freedom; that is utterly self serving; and that is not freedom. That is often said in order to justify complete self-absorbed behavior. As a believer in Jesus Christ, this verse tells us whether we are in a circumstance or not, we are not free. Never do we serve ourselves. Our purpose in life is never to serve man either, even as a real slave. Even with a boss, there is authority over us. What does it mean, we don’t serve men, whereas, we really do that every day? This means that we have authority-orientation, and we do the best job possible. Paul is hammering them with a number of ways to get this doctrine.

The general principle is, regardless of circumstances, we belong to Jesus Christ. He owns us, for the purpose of serving Him. That is the greatest service imaginable; and it is the greatest service. Not only are we free, but we also have the responsibility to help others to be free. We have the responsibility to serve the Lord.

Paul, through the inspiration of God the Holy Spirit, is a total genius, in describing who we are and what we are in Christ. He is also describing just how insignificant we are; especially our circumstances. We are insignificant and this is grace orientation; and, at the same time, we are special. At no time, does anyone else in history have this kind of freedom mixed with slavery. Does the rest of the world understand what it means to be a freed slave? That is our status.

We have fought the bloodiest war on our continent to free men from slavery; there were millions of millions of slaves, not just in the Roman empire, but in the US as well. What is important is the thinking and actions of the believer in Jesus Christ. We are not physical slaves in this world; but we are free and we are slaves to Jesus Christ. Paul is not telling his readers to seek to be enslaved. He is saying the slavery and freedom are not the issues. Given the choice, obviously, we opt for freedom—and such freedom is always worth fighting for.

When we find ourselves in our own brand of slavery, we sometimes think, I’ve got to get out of this situation; and I will be much better when I get out of this prison (bad marriage, bad boss, bad teacher, etc.). And yet, in this environment, the plan of God never forsakes the believer in Jesus Christ.

Joseph, in Gen. 39–40, found himself in prison, sentenced to a long time in prison. He lost his freedom. He was forced to stay in this condition. He had to learn a powerful lesson of grace. God wants us to learn something. Joseph was going to lead all Egypt as a Jew; and God kept him in jail until then. He learned how to serve God in any condition.

In our life today, there are people who are in prison and they find that there is a reason for it. Bobby heard of one many who violated some business laws and he had heard the gospel from his son; and he was sick of it. And, in prison, he realized that he needed something; that there was something greater than him. A similar situation, someone from a church that we might all know; and he was convicted of doing something which was unintentional; and he is serving 18 months in jail. He has begun to witness to others and he has found out that he could teach as well. What matters is what God has planned for us. It is God's plan which is important. We can be a slave and we can be free; we can be enslaved to a condition in life; we have been bought with a price; do not become slaves of men.

1Cor. 7:22b And likewise, the one called while a free man is a slave of Christ.

When we think like an unbeliever, then we enslave ourselves to men. It is the plan of God; not our circumstances; it is not our fame, power or money (or the lack thereof), so that we might hear well done, My good and faithful slave; you have been faithful in a few things, and I will put you in charge of man.

1Cor. 7:23 You were redeemed with a price; do not become slaves of men.

1Cor. 7:22–24

Lesson #368

Wednesday June 21, 2006

Bible class at my house tonite. Bobby was thinking, "I could be in 1Corinthians until the day I die."

Freedom is a subject near and dear to our hearts. We celebrate it as our way of life; it is our birthright. We are apparently on a downswing in the US; every nation goes from bondage to bondage; it can be wonderful in between. We began as a nation in bondage. In the 17th century, the Puritans (also known as Pilgrims) were called this because they believed in the pure Scripture. They fled England to Holland; returned to England; then they boarded ships and came to the new world. From spiritual freedom comes courage; they pledged their lives and sacred honor in the cause of freedom. This began and culminated in the 4th of July, wherein we resisted the oppressive crown of England. From their courage, freedom was gained. Then there were 5 years of war to put teeth in the Declaration of Independence. Then came abundance. Where there is freedom, we could grow financially, spiritually, and every nation became a debtor nation to the US. Our abundance reached a great height in WW2. But, in great abundance, people begin to forget the source of freedom. You will know the truth and the truth will set you free. When we forget the source of our freedom, we fall into selfishness. It is no longer great courage and sacrifice for something greater than ourselves; it is now everything for ourselves; and from this selfishness, comes complacency. We begin to take our freedom for granted; and we become apathetic. We no longer care about what we have; we expect it; it has always been there. We are apathetic about the source of freedom and the freedom itself. It is not as important as our own little lives and living in our own little cocoon. From apathy we go to dependency; we become dependent upon the very government which represents freedom at one time. Now we vote for those candidates who offer us the most. From that point, we go into bondage. Freedom is our birthright; but dependency leads to bondage. We are somewhere between complacency and apathy, and some have fallen into dependence.

As believers in Jesus Christ, we are truly free. Yet, we are not free; we are also in bondage to Jesus Christ. That is the oxymoron of Christianity. A figure of speech where contradictory terms are combined. We find this in v. 22.

The one called when a slave is the Lord's freedman; he who is called when free, is the Lord's bondslave. For us in the US, we are all called while free; yet we are Christ's slaves. Therefore, He owns us. If we are a believer as a slave, we are free; if we are called as a freedman, we are also a slave. We are spiritually free by the work of redemption. We are freed from the slave market of sin; but we are bought with a price. Jesus Christ owns us for the purpose of serving Him; for the purpose of glorifying Him in this life. To whom much is given, much is expected; and we are given everything. The greatest freedom is freedom with responsibility to the Lord Jesus Christ; there is no greater freedom and no greater slavery. Slavery is not the issue; and freedom is not the issue. These two categories are being used as an analogy. They testify as to the insignificance of our status in life. The believer must focus on Jesus Christ. Whatever it is, we can become enslaved to things; and whatever comes before our spiritual life is slavery. We are never called to be slaves to men. The believer must not focus on his personal condition. That condition can be bettered. Our condition in life is not the issue. We must focus always on our niche in God's plan. The rest is gravy. If God has blessed us, that is wonderful; however, that is never our focus in life. If we live for these things, we have lost our focus. We are to glorify God in our bodies regardless of what circumstance we are in. Yet, we have the freedom to serve the Lord in this condition. Freedom and slavery at the same time. It does not matter what condition we find ourselves in.

1Cor. 7:22 For the one called while a slave in the Lord is a freed man of the Lord. And likewise, the one called while a free man is a slave of Christ.

Now Paul has set up a comparison in v. 23; slavery to Jesus Christ; and slavery to men. We are not called to oppose human authority; we are not called to fight our condition in life. We are not to resist our status as physical slaves. This would take us out of the spiritual realm. The context is the spiritual life; not the temporal life. The focus is our service. We have a different perspective. The unbelievers around us are slaves to men and they can do nothing about it. Our perspective is what that price buys us. We are a bought person; we have been paid for by the blood of Christ.

We begin v. 23 with the plural you; which refers to everyone at Corinth; and everyone at Berachah. All of us have been bought with a price; no matter who we are. All men have been bought with a price. This is the concept of unlimited atonement; and particularly true of believers, who have appropriated that atonement by faith in Jesus Christ. The only way to have complete freedom is faith alone in Christ alone.

What does this price entail; what is coin of the realm in which we are purchased. As believers, we are all in bondage to sin. It is Christ Who paid the penalty to release us from that slave market of sin. That purchase price is associated with Christ's work, and particularly His redemptive work. Eph. 1:7: In Him we have redemption through His blood. 1Peter: Knowing that we have not been redeemed with silver and gold and things which are perishable from our futile way of life inherited from our forefathers; we are spiritually dead because we have inherited the old sin nature from Adam, as well as imputed sin.

Blood is used in the figurative sense, referring to our Lord's death on the cross on our behalf. This is not literal blood, which has little to do with our redemption. The penalty for our sins was paid by Jesus Christ during the 3 hours of darkness on the cross, when He was judged for our sins. We walk out of the slave market of sin as a free person.

What Does it Mean to be Bought with a Price?

1. Christ's death was an act of emancipation; that is the true emancipation proclamation.
2. When someone purchase us, we are owned by them . We are that person's property. That makes us a slave to the person who bought us.
3. Emancipation by Christ was also a change of ownership. We were loosed from the slavery of sin and death; but we were also bought.
4. The believer's master is no longer sin; that was always our master before. That is what spiritual death is. Our master is no longer sin. We are free because Christ bought us out of that.
5. But Jesus Christ bought us; don't forget this. The master is no longer sin and death; the master is the Lord Jesus Christ.
6. The redemption of Christ is the greatest purchase ever made; the most costly purchase. We are freed from sin to be slaves to Christ. That purchase that He made is the everlasting tie which binds us to our master. It can never be severed. It can never be taken back; it can never be superceded; it is the tie which binds us to our master forever.
7. When we think of being a slave to a master, we don't generally think of it as being a benevolent. If the master makes that great of a sacrifice for his slave, then what do we owe Him as His slave.

The conclusion of this verse; do not become slaves of men. Slaves of men is a condition, which violates God's ownership in slavery. This has nothing to do with the institution of slavery, as we had in our own country. Slaves of men is whatever violates God's ownership of us; there is no dual ownership allowed. We only have one master. Those in the slave market of sin cannot purchase their own freedom. We are stuck in the slave market of sin, because we cannot pay our way out. Jesus Christ purchased us; He is the only One who can purchase us.

Present active imperative of γίνομαι = to become, to be. A deponent verb (active in meaning but passive in form). The imperative is a command, not to lose something. We are not to lose the doctrinal perspective of life. The loss of doctrinal perspective results in the infusion of human viewpoint into our souls; our soul becomes a vacuum and sucks it right in. Human viewpoint is slavery to men, rather than being a slave to Jesus Christ. It is a slave to thinking; it is a secular thought process. We are free to serve; but if we serve men, then we no longer act in service to Him. We are slaves to men in His thinking.

The slavery in the civilization process can be simply mental. We are free in our thinking and in our souls. We have great courage in our souls. It is a mental attitude. It is divine viewpoint which makes us free. We lose this and we become infused with human viewpoint. We are never made free by Christ to serve men or to serve our own designs. We are not to serve men or to serve ourselves.

Slavery in our Souls

1. Slavery to money or to the gaining of money, instead of developing grace orientation. There is never enough and you are always afraid that you might lose it.
2. Slavery to approbation rather than serving to glorify God. Self-centered rather than Christ-centered. Who or what are you to put yourself above the plan of God or to put yourself.
3. Slavery to pleasure, rather than the divine viewpoint of sharing the happiness of God. A completely different mental attitude. Here, we are enslaved to the things of man.
4. These sorts of slavery reject service to the Lord. That mental attitude of serving Him is forced out by service to these other things. Our thinking turns us away from service to Him.
5. There is nothing wrong with money, pleasure or fame; as long as we are not slaves to it; as long as these things do not become all consuming.
6. In the end, it is our mental attitude, not our circumstances, which make us slaves to men. We can be a slave in the condition of slavery, and not have the mental attitude of slavery.

Applicational Principles

1. If you are single, then don't allow the opposite sex to deter your divine viewpoint perspective. No one influences you more than your girl friend or boyfriend. This can deter divine viewpoint perspective in a heartbeat.
2. If you are married, do not allow your mate to deter your divine viewpoint perspective. Particularly difficult in a mixed marriage. It is very difficult to maintain proper perspective when the other person has human viewpoint only. That can be your only point of commonality.
3. We can become similarly enslaved to friends and their thinking as well.
4. The believer's intimate relationships of life must be of benefit to his or her spiritual life and service. When it is a hindrance to the spiritual life, then it is slavery.
5. Any relationship in life which removes divine viewpoint is slavery to men. Slavery to men is always an attitude.

6. You become selfish; you become enslaved to pleasure, to money; you become apathetic toward your spiritual life. You lose dependency on the Lord; you depend upon men; their thinking, their provision of sex, their provision of money.
7. Whether you are in a physical condition of freedom or slavery in life, you must never be in bondage to human viewpoint alliances or temporal glories.

In Whom do you Trust is a good booklet on this same information.

1Cor. 7:23 You were redeemed with a price; do not become slaves of men.

Paul draws a conclusion in v. 24: Those who are free do not even remotely have what we have as a slave. Here we sit as slaves learning about freedom.

1Cor. 7:24 Each in whatever state called, brothers, in this remain with God.

1Cor. 7:24–26

Lesson #369

Thursday June 22, 2006

Bobby is correcting himself. The booklet he recommended is in the library tonite; wasn't there last night.

Let each man remain in that condition in which he was called. We have covered several examples, e.g., circumcision (which was a reference of race as well, as Jews were circumcised and gentiles were not). We can be called under conditions of slavery or freedom. These illustrations are conditions. These conditions are not conducive to being called to the spiritual life. We're called to salvation and then to the spiritual life.

V. 24 is almost a repeat of v. 20, and Paul repeats it because it is extremely important. There is one addition here—a prepositional phrase which is not found in verse 20. Παρά θεοί = on the side of God. We remain on the side of God by maintaining divine viewpoint.

When we are not on the side of God, then we become traders and we are thinking with human viewpoint; under the old masters of sin and the devil. Human viewpoint then rules our lives.

The difference is, we remain in our previous condition; but we remain on God's side; we think with divine viewpoint. The conditions which we thought were extremely important are where God wants us to stay. Our circumstances, in comparison to the plan of God, are fairly inconsequential. The bottom line is, we stay in whatever condition in which we are called. We are to walk in the Lord. We are to advance to spiritual maturity. That walk now includes remaining in the condition in which we are called. But, we are also supposed to walk.

In the condition in which we are called, we are to stand still; however, we move forward spiritually (that is our walk). One is our spiritual condition and the other is our temporal condition. Another oxymoron.

We remain in our circumstances until God changes them. The better is what we want. We conclude that God must want us to be in different circumstances when He chooses to change them. We may not live in the circumstances that we think we should be in. Divine viewpoint says, regardless of how we feel about our circumstances, this is where we remain; this is where we live. No human viewpoint superceding divine viewpoint.

We cannot really change circumcision; so Paul was speaking of an irreversible condition (there is some history where they attempted to? Is that what Bobby has implied?). We no longer fall under the Abrahamic covenant; we are not Israel; we are the church. There is no racial distinction; there is no male or female. Slavery cannot be ended by the slave; but it can be ended by an outside source; a liberator. If freedom happens, that is great; if we are made free, that's great; if we are not, then we function in these circumstances.

We spend too much time hating our circumstances; hating where we are; wanting to move out and solve these difficulties or unpleasantness. This is the Christian way of life. Things could always be worse and we'd have to serve in those circumstances.

We are called married or unmarried; we are called in certain social conditions: slave or free. We are called in certain circumstances in life: circumcised or not. In whatever condition we are called, we must remain there and function and grow and live.

1Cor. 7:24 Each in whatever state called, brothers, in this remain with [or, on the side of] God.

We are off into a new paragraph now. Maybe Paul has started a subject that he does not want to get into? Paul says, "I am not going to tell you what the Lord says; I am going to give you an opinion; however, my judgment is from one who has received mercy from the Lord.

For, whatever reason, Paul wants to go back to the topic of marriage. There is one more major question which the Corinthians had. This is another big question. What about virgins and marriage? Today, many would never even consider this question. Who cares? What does this have to do with anything?

Contextually, Paul has just said, "Stay in the circumstances in which you are called." What if you are called as an unmarried virgin? You don't get to marry then? There is a necessity for celibacy under certain circumstances. Bobby is not talking about abstinence from sexual activity; but Bobby is referring to it in the more general way of being unmarried (which includes celibacy). Paul begins with the celibate or unmarried women.

Παρθενος = virgin. It is clear that this refers in this context to the unmarried, celibate woman. Celibacy is covered in the context of the general desirability of marriage. We have a subject here within a subject. Marriage is a good thing; it is a normal state of affairs for human beings. Paul's purpose is to present celibacy as a justifiable exception to the married state. Paul links the two in order to let us know that celibacy is a justifiable condition; and he explains this in terms of service to the Lord. Paul is harkening back to v. 17.

Everyone of us is called to service; especially in the condition of celibacy. This is not a brief for being a priest or nun in the Roman Catholic sense. Concentrated service can be done in the situation of celibacy. This does not mean that you must become a nun or a priest in order to fulfill this passage. We can serve God in whatever condition that we are in...married or unmarried.

Paul has started in this verse to address unmarried women; but he will leave the virgins behind in this verse. He will not complete his thought on these virgins until he gets to v. 36. When he picks this subject up again; it will be with respect to the father's responsibility to his virgin daughter.

In effect, he says, "I don't know how the Lord would rule on this question; I really don't know how the Lord would have to say about this." Some commentators say, this is Paul recognizing that he is not divinely inspired at this time. However, all Scripture is God breathed... A commentator who says this does not view all Scripture as inspired; then who and how do you decide what is and is not divinely inspired. If you think that Paul is simply giving an opinion which you can take or leave; then you are dead wrong. This simply means that Jesus Christ gave no command concerning virgins getting married or if they should get married in the first place. However, there is precedence for this kind of indefinite statement. Paul is usually one of the most dogmatic writers of Scripture; yet twice, in this chapter, Paul is being indefinite. 1Cor. 7:6, 12, 25 are times when Jesus Christ was silent. There are numerous subjects that Jesus Christ did not teach when he was on earth. It was not His purpose to teach a lot of day-to-day information. It was His purpose to reveal His mission and to reveal His Person; and to go to the cross. The Lord did not cover this topic; but I am going to cover this for your edification and clarification. Jesus gave no commands; but I will. That is fairly authoritative.

If Paul wrote authoritative Scripture, why does he say, "Well, this is my opinion." Did he just want to begin a debate that would last 2000 years?

Why Did Paul write "This is my opinion."

1. Paul is distinguishing between two Greek words. Επιταγή = command. Paul knows how to make people hear and understand a command. Γνωμη = opinion, judgment. Paul distinguishes one way that he gives a command; and another when he gives an opinion.
2. Paul is distinguishing between principles of doctrine; and practical counsel (γνωμη).
3. But both are just as God-breathed as any other passage. Both as just as normative for application to life.
4. This is Paul's personal judgment in the matter of virgins and celibacy. This is from divine inspiration. Therefore, we must take heed. Whenever is something is divinely inspired, his opinion is trustworthy. This is the most practical of applications; a divinely inspired opinion. It may not be a command, but it is nonetheless, important.
5. Paul is semper fidelis (always faithful).
6. Paul does not deviate from that guidance to express a purely personal opinion. He does not deviate from the Holy Spirit's guidance in this.

7. If this is true, that makes Paul's opinion the correct judgment and choice in whatever circumstance he is going to talk about.

Why doesn't Paul say, "Straight up, dude; this is it; this is the Holy Spirit speaking through me; take it, like it or not." Paul says this because there are two right answers; and Paul will give an opinion about these two right answers. There is a choice involved. Either I can do this, or I can do that. Marriage and celibacy are both ok. This is a delicate subject; and Paul does not handle everything like a bull in a china shop. Paul is giving the birds and bees talk to the Corinthian singles. He is giving sage advice as a father speaking to his children. This verse is key in understanding the rest of this paragraph.

1Cor. 7:25 But about virgins, I have no command of the Lord. But I give judgment, as having received mercy by the Lord to be faithful.

Paul goes off on a tangent here, sounding just a little wishy washy. This is what I think is how he begins. Paul's opinion is based upon divine inspiration. He begins with the particle ouv = therefore. This is a conclusion from v. 25, which is still up in the air. Paul is convicted upon what he is going to say. This is based upon Paul's own doctrinal application.

This is an opinion only because there are two right answers. Paul might be reasoning his way through this based upon what doctrine he has and putting things together. Paul's judgment or opinion is suitable for certain circumstances. Which is best? Marriage or celibacy? I am the Apostle Paul and I carry authority directly from God. There is no absolute right or wrong at this point.

Here is what I think Means

1. This means, some things will not remain in absolute status quo.
2. However, Paul knows what follows is an appropriate principle that a believer can follow and act upon under certain circumstances. This is good principle; this is a good application; however, this will be the freewill choice of the Corinthians. Bob used to say, "Here is the principle; now you make the choice." In this case, there is no right or wrong answer.
3. Paul is not saying that celibacy is better than marriage, even though he says, "Remain as you are."
4. Neither choice, celibacy or marriage, is anti-doctrine.
5. One choice may be better than the other under present circumstances.
6. Paul presents the best choice to be made under the current Corinthian circumstances (which might even parallel our circumstances). Let me give you an opinion concerning timing; when is best and when is not?

1Cor. 7:26 Then I think this to be good, because of the present necessity: that it is good for a man to be thus.

We cannot worship the Lord in truth unless we are filled with the Spirit; and we cannot be filled with the Spirit apart from the rebound technique.

We are currently studying the doctrine of remaining in status quo, which principle is written 4 times in this chapter. We should remain in whatever circumstance or condition that we find ourselves in when called by God. This includes a mission to advance to advance to spiritual maturity and glorifying God in our bodies. All of these factors are our call in Christ. All of our circumstances and conditions in our life are those environment in which we are called and in which we exist. We might be at peace, we might be in turmoil; God expects us to remain there.

Paul cites several conditions in which we are called; these are paradigm analogies. The first is marriage. Whether married or single, there is an obligation to the Lord. Whether we are married, or single; whether we have been married or are contemplating marriage. This example of marriage in connection with service will be further elaborated in vv. 25–35.

The second example is circumcision vs. uncircumcision: vv. 17–19. Paul uses this in a very effective way. This is a racial circumstance and a physical condition. We are in a particular race and we live under particular conditions. The gentile is uncircumcised; the Jew is circumcised. However, it makes no difference what race we are in; it has no bearing on God's calling.

Circumcision is the removal of the foreskin, which represents a physical condition; and a condition in which a man is called. We are all called in some sort of physical condition; and it does not matter if we are healthy, sick or whatever.

Circumcision is no longer a valid ritual in this Church Age; the participation in circumcision means nothing. It seemed to be something to some of those in the Corinthian church. None of this matters. In whatever physical condition we are in; whether married or single; we remain where we are. We are to concentrate and grow where we are.

The 3rd example is slavery vs. freedom. This is the most graphic and the most extreme of the cases. There was a large group of people who were possessions. By and large, we are emancipated during the time that we hear this taught. We are all slaves to something; or we work for someone. However, no one is excluded from God's plan because we are free or because we are slave. We are not favored in His plan. Paul tells his readers, remain here; remain in slavery. God leaves us in our circumstances, and we are saved in those circumstances; and we are supposed to remain there.

At the beginning of each one of these examples, married or single, circumcised or uncircumcised, slave or free, there is a statement of the doctrine to remain where we are when God called us.

Paul will recognize the gift of celibacy. Celibacy is applying the doctrine of remaining in status quo. "I am going to serve you directly from where I am at this time." We are then trusting God to take care of things. When it is time for the circumstances to change, God will open the door and we will walk through it.

If we get promoted or demoted; God placed us there for a reason.

Paul says he has no command from the Lord; Jesus Christ did not cover this topic when teaching the Word of God. That was not His purpose. Jesus Christ taught the doctrine necessary so that those around Him could understand His mission; Who He was; He left the dissemination of the mystery doctrine primarily to Paul.

When someone says, "I only want to know what Jesus said" means they often want to take this and manipulate it. Paul was divinely inspired as much as Jesus. Jesus gave no commandments about virgins and marrying; or when they should marry—if at all.

Does this mean that Paul has departed from divine inspiration and is he going to write down what he thinks to be true. This is a misperception. All Scripture is God-breathed and profitable for do. How can He say this, and yet maintain that this is the Word of God? Paul is making a simple distinction.

When Bobby studies, applications come to mind; and he makes a distinction between the doctrine itself and informed counsel. We must take heed of Paul's opinions; and his opinions carry infinitely more weight.

Why didn't Paul simply say, "Here is the way it goes." However, Paul dealt with antithetical there is a choice which a believer must do.

1Cor. 7:25 But about virgins, I have no command of the Lord. But I give judgment, as having received mercy by the Lord to be faithful.

Paul makes the same comment for the 5th time now. Paul will speak to the men first, and then he will go back to the women. Paul will define the problem. If you focus on that adversity or problem, then your life is colored by that which you find yourself in.

This was a great time of desperation for Paul. Satan had been strategically defeated. Satan had been defeated at the cross; he could no longer hope for that big victory; our salvation was an accomplished fact. All that remains for him are the tactical battles, as all the strategic battle had been one. Satan throws himself into these battles wholeheartedly; he has nothing to lose. He will use every method possible to effect a tactical battle. He will do whatever he can to keep us from progressing.

Jesus Christ died for our sins, which became an accomplished fact. This could not be taken back. Then, Satan began to attack believers in anyway possible. Some believers could not be stopped entirely; but Satan could often halt spiritual growth.

Sometimes Christians could find themselves hauled off, for the Roman games at times. At best, a Christian husband and his family might go on the run, leaving behind all that they own. This means they will suffer uncertainly wherever they go. Satan through the Romans was making life miserable for believers. These kinds of attacks are easier to bear in an unmarried state. Paul, "Better to face these difficult times in an unmarried condition.

Paul's counsel will be given specifically to unmarried men. His advice is, "Stay unmarried, as you enter into this terrible adversity." Unencumbered service to the Lord is what Paul is asking for, which is more difficult to deliver when encumbered with a family. A single man has more time for growth and service. The present adversity is handled not by getting married, but by personal spiritual advance.

What is Paul's conclusion from the divine viewpoint conclusion. Vv. 8, 17, 24 and 26 all present the same view. Stay in the circumstances in which you are called. Stay where you are until this adversity abates or goes away. We must remain in the circumstances in which we are called; those are the circumstances in which we are called. Are these difficulties too great in which to get married? Those are our conditions; stay where you are.

1Cor. 7:26 Then I think this to be good, because of the present necessity: that it is good for a man to be thus.

1Cor. 7:26–27

Sunday 2 June 25, 2006

The call is to glorify God in our bodies; it is service and divine good. The call is to service, e.g., in prep school. Bobby is recruiting for prep school.

Paul, in v. 26, is focusing directly on the men. Vv. 8, 17, 20 & 24; we may have thought this chapter was about marriage, but the theme is really stay in the present circumstances in which you are called. They are dealing with severe persecution there; it is a crime to be a Christian. The Romans are hauling them to the coliseum to be killed for sport. They are living at a time when there is no recourse; they could flee, move on to the next city or next country; but the Romans controlled many of the cities, and were conquering some of the surrounding countries; and, in fleeing, you leave a lot behind.

A person who became a Christian could be taken as a slave. These believers need to hear this over and over again. Obviously, some believers were being taken to the coliseum; and obviously, many were not, as there is a church in Corinth and in every other major city. Divine viewpoint is why Paul can say these things. Paul has been a prisoner, stoned to death; necessitated; he lives under the worst conditions. He is not afraid to do exactly what these Corinthians are asking him to do. Paul understands that his mission in life is more important than his life. Our life is much less important than our service; our valuables, our possessions, our worries, our lusts are nothing compared to service to the Lord. It does not matter what our circumstances are; remain as you are. Paul is trying to save them some trouble. Paul is trying to keep them from making a bad decision. We are less likely to be subjective with doctrine in our souls. Do not make a stupid decision under adversity and stress, which is what some believers might do. We are not to make decisions in adversity and stress as new believers; we do not need to change our circumstances when we first believe. The perfect example is remain unmarried if you are not yet married. It is a rare person who says, I don't want to be married ever. Paul is saying, there is a time for marriage; but maybe not right now. Don't attempt to change your temporal circumstances. Human relationships will not solve temporal adversity. Our help is in our relationship with the Lord; not in our relationship with other people.

Paul: get your relationship with Jesus Christ into perspective; get your spiritual life under control; learn how to deal with these spiritually; then worry about marriage and human relationships. It is easy to skip Bible class; it is easy to say, just get me through this situation, then I can resume spiritual growth. Relax and let God handle things. We can concentrate on those lessons necessary for the rest of your life. Concentrate on those lessons and the doctrine that we need for the rest of our lives. God knows where we are going; He knows what our life is like and will be like. We need to function with doctrine in our souls, and at the beginning, we do not need to concentrate on marriage. Do not make a decision in an attempt to change your circumstances when under stress. This is designed for us to grow spiritually. Do not get married; learn what you are supposed to learn for combat; and, later on, then move into that. If you have a serious relationship, what are you going to lose if you don't married right away? If they are going to run off and get married to someone else, then it was not right to begin with; they are definitely the wrong person.

Once the Corinthians metabolize some doctrine, and when their circumstances change, then; then you can make some life-changing decisions. In this case, when under attack, the doctrine to apply is to remain in status quo. If you are already married, stay married; if you are single, stay single. After a time, the persecution reduced and stopped altogether.

The Greek word is anakê (ἀνάγκη) [pronounced ahn-ahg-KAY], which means 1) necessity, imposed either by the circumstances, or by law of duty regarding to one's advantage, custom, argument; 2) calamity, distress, straits. Strong's #318.

1Cor. 7:26 Then I think this to be good, because of the present necessity [or, distress]: that it is good for a man to be thus.

Paul is simply asking them to apply some doctrine. Paul's life was nothing but trouble; and yet, he had one of the greatest lives in the Christian era. We all have a mission; we all have an area of service. Paul is speaking to us and this is right for our thinking. This is applied divine viewpoint.

It makes little sense to travel down the rapids in a kayak and change kayaks in the middle of the rapids. That makes little sense and that is Paul's point. Relax; wait until the time is right.

The first two sentences of v. 27 emphasize that a believer should not divorce. Why bring a family into this world under these circumstances? Serve the Lord in such a way that you could not do if married; and let the chips fall where they may. But I don't want to remain unmarried! God may not have even brought the proper person into view. Always think the Lord has put us here for the best reason.

Perfect passive indicative of deô (δέω) [pronounced DEH-oh], which means 1) to bind tie, fasten; 1a) to bind, fasten with chains, to throw into chains; 1b) metaphorically; 1b1) Satan is said to bind a woman bent together by means of a demon, as his messenger, taking possession of the woman and preventing her from standing upright; 1b2) to bind, put under obligation, of the law, duty etc.; 1b2a) to be bound to one, a wife, a husband; 1b3) to forbid, prohibit, declare to be illicit. Strong's #1210.

We are to remain where we are called, even when in a lousy marriage. There is a service which the Lord has for us even in bad circumstances; and He will always take up the slack even under bad circumstances.

There are no loopholes. You don't get to divorce in order to get a better tax rate. You can only divorce for adultery or desertion (the unbeliever leaving the believer).

There is an upside to an existing marriage where stress is present. Once we are married, the believing husband and wife, they build a relationship and a life together. Our lives have already been intertwined for better or for worse. There is a support system in adversity from a mature spouse. There will always be stress and difficulties; and a great wife with doctrine in her soul supports her husband in adversity and in prosperity. The doctrinal husband supports and protects his wife under stress and adversity; so there is this mutual support system (or, half of a support system).

Two believers with doctrine can never replace the personal application of problem solving devices. Human support systems are often touted as the way to handle things: lean on someone else, tell someone else your problems; go to marriage counseling. None of this takes the place of using divine problem solving devices. You do not depend upon another person. We have the obligation to use God's problem solving devices, and that is the production of divine good, which is our mission; and it is more important than our life. The doctrinal strength of one spouse can support the other when in stress. This can be great strength in adversity. There are no guarantees in marriage or in single status. Marriage is still stress and it still can affect our service for God. As a believer, we have a responsibility toward our spouse, which involves time. It involves time on the part of both spouses to make it work. The time that we spend making our marriage a great one is time away from service to God in another area. The single status has more opportunities for spiritual service.

Marriage is a corporate witness in the angelic conflict; so, it is no sin. God has a specific service for some of us, so it is not necessarily the time to get married.

1Cor. 7:27 Have you been bound to a wife? Do not seek to be released. Have you been released from a wife? Do not seek a wife.

1Cor. 7:27

Wednesday June 28, 2006

Bobby reads a letter from a woman. What was taught on Sunday was perfect. Friends say to me, they can't believe that I have dealt with my situation alone. She is amazed that the examples given in church were applicable to her situation. Her mother reminded her of doctrine, which is the doctrine of refreshment. God is always here, even though we cannot see Him; though His presence is not tangible.

Doctrine works; doctrine always works.

Paul gives advice from doctrinal application, which favors staying in status quo. If you marry, that's fine; if you are married, that's fine; or if you are single; that's fine. However, Paul says, "I am trying to spare you from having problem." Seems like whatever the circumstance, a person is going to have trouble. You cannot climb out of life so that there will never be any trouble. Paul is looking to spare those around him extra trouble. Changing the marriage status through divorce is out, except under the few specific conditions. Divorce is diametrically the opposite of remaining in status quo. There are two doctrinal applications. Remain in status quo; one is a corollary of the other. Instead of attempting to change the status quo, focus instead on the problem solving devices. It is not a change of the situation which fixes everything. God will always honor our divine viewpoint. God honors divine viewpoint in ways that we might not even understand. We have no idea how God may use that and bless us in this endeavor. However, we will see it. God may not immediately change our situation; and it is possible that it may never change. Always be confident that God will handle whatever circumstances we are in for our best interests. It is easy to think, if God doesn't fix it the way I like, then I'll take care of it. However, it will always come out to our best interests, when we think the plan of God. Applying the doctrine of remaining in status quo. When we are able to do this, we will advance spiritually. We can't help but advance spiritually.

Beware of a rush to change to fix things. You know that attitude to jump to change our lives in this or that way. Wouldn't it be nice if this or that circumstance were changed. Wouldn't it be nice to be married to this person, or that; or wouldn't it be nice if we have the financial status to fix this or that. Only we know deep in our soul whether or not we have that desire to change. Only we know deep in our soul how to think about this. Are we really so relaxed that we don't think about change even in the most difficult circumstances. When we think about changing our circumstances, that is our plan. God's plan is what matters.

This does not mean that you just sit on your hands and do nothing. This is a mental attitude that we live with constantly. This mental attitude of desperation; the mad rush—I have to change all of this myself. We know our own mind and we know if there is a desperation in there; and a desire to change things the way we want to.

It is easy to want change in specific areas, e.g., marriage. Our deliverance is always remaining in status quo and putting it in God's hands. Can you work hard to change your circumstances? Can you get more education to change your life? Of course. Marriage is such a good example of remaining in status quo, when your entire being screams to get out from under these circumstances.

The verb is δεω = to be bound. This indicates the settled condition of marriage as divine institution #2. If we are bound, we are bound to a wife. There is a mental attitude which can develop in a bad marriage; the feeling of being bound or trapped. Marriage is a binding contract; yet, when you are bound, you want to escape; that is slavery or loss of freedom. That can elicit a very strong desire for change. Do not seek release; do not seek freedom. Do not seek freedom even when under outward duress. The most difficult thing to do is to remain in status quo; this requires patience, and allow God to work it out; to open doors when necessary. Paul wants here a doctrinal application. Being unmarried has its advantages under external adversity.

Even though in adversity, being single is an advantage, the mandate not to divorce supercedes being single. The doctrine of status quo takes precedence here.

1Cor. 7:27a Have you been bound to a wife? Do not seek to be released.

$\Lambda\omega$  = to be loosed, to be released. This is a reference to men who are bachelors, widowers, etc. This does not include those who are legitimately single; not to someone who divorced just to get single. Commands take precedence over advice. The divorced person who has no right of remarriage has no freedom from matrimonial ties. They might be separated, but they are not released from one another.

1Cor. 7:27b Have you been released from a wife? Do not seek a wife.

V. 28 approaches a different perspective of marriage and adversity. The idea is, let's say you have come across the person who is perfect; they meet all your criterion; then you have not sinned. No one should marry without that certainty. If you are getting married, and you do not have the certainty; than anytime before do, it is okay to back out. If there is that inkling of doubt; then it is okay to back out. Listen to the doctrinal advice that Paul is giving; listen to the advice in your soul. Don't put the ring on, unless you are certain (Bobby's advice). Make sure that you have found the right person.

A caution to the men: before getting married; before making this decision; part of our leadership means that your bride must be willing to endure the stressful conditions under which you might live. Bobby's advice—do a background check. You can find out all about their criminal history, etc. Be circumspect. A woman is a responder by nature and will have a more difficult time with leadership and adversity conditions; and you as the male should be sure that she can handle it and that she wants to handle it.

V. 28 reinforces the fact, that getting married or staying single are not a sins. Obviously, marrying an unbeliever is sin. You should not be in any doubt about a person's spiritual status. Don't stop with do you believe in Christ. Quiz them a little bit. See if they have added works to salvation.

If you don't marry someone who is like-minded in doctrine, then you have opened up a whole can of worms. Just because someone is a believer, they don't necessarily think like you. How many external compatibilities can make up for thinking fundamentally differently.

Paul considered estimation is, marriage is okay; it is not wrong. However, we are to be patient; the right time and the right moment. There is a time to do it and a time not to do it. Under certain conditions, it is reasonable to wait; but it is okay to marry.

The Bible must be interpreted during the time in which it was written. Don't think that this is only written to the Corinthians and that we are home free.

1. If you don't remain in status quo and you marry; then you are not wrong (although your timing may be terrible).
2. If you do marry under conditions of adversity; it may make our lives even more difficult.
3. Getting married when our life is in turmoil, is not a good circumstance in which to begin or to sustain a marriage. If we are distracted; or there are conditions of adversity; it is not a good time to get started. There can be help and encouragement in adversity. It does not mean that you lean on them; we still use problem solving devices; but there is a help built in. Marriage is about much more than legal sex; it is not a cure all for loneliness or isolation. It is not a safehouse in times of difficulty. It may be just the opposite. When adversity builds up, you do not look to someone else for a solution. That is a wrong application. This is why Paul says, don't do that. The intimacy of marriage can certainly be an encouragement. Under pressure, marriage can also be a problem manufacturing device, instead of a problem solving device. Marriage is more responsibility than you have ever undertaken before. Some of you have shirked that responsibility. It piles responsibility upon responsibility on both spouses. The only comparable situation is commanding a platoon in war.
4. When you marry, you take on a partner, a companion, an intimate; however, you also take on the added burden while under adversity. Heed good advice; only arrogance disregards good, sound doctrinal advice.

1Cor. 7:28 But if you also marry, you do not sin. And if the virgin marries, she does not sin. But such will have trouble in the flesh. But I am sparing you.

1Cor. 7:26–28

Thursday June 29, 2006

Bobby has an article which he received from a cousin of his father. His relatives are an interesting and unique bunch. The article is What happened to heaven and hell? It is an article, maybe an interview. Belief in hell is going to hell. New book Paradise Mislaid. The problem is that the way US Christians perceive of heaven and hell is so vague as to be almost superstitious. 80% of Americans believe in heaven and 70% believe in hell. Few saw themselves as hell bound. The percentage who say they believe in heaven has remained pretty constant for about 50 years. Some believe in heaven but not God. Russell cannot remember the last time he heard of hell dealt with in Christian Church or in Christian articles. Gordon Conwell, at a very liberal seminary. He bemoans a very liberal set of literature. Individuals should choose whatever they want; and some think that what is giving is Christianity. Some project from their own experiences; and heaven is set up on their terms and not God's. on the subject of getting into heaven, people are quite expansive. Can a good person in a different religion get to heaven? 79% said yes; and lower percentages among evangelicals. The church decided that expected a clear Christian faith was too pessimistic (I did not catch which church). Christians are permitted to hope that very many will be saved, despite what the New Testament says. Everlasting happiness or everlasting torment in the absence of God.

As a client nation to God, we are falling into an abyss of no knowledge about God or about the Bible; and most Americans believe that the Bible is not God's Word. They see psychology, philosophy and relativism as what is important.

God's plan is always more important than our plan. It is easy to determine why God's plan is not valid in our individual case. Our plan is God's plan. Our alibi might be, this is only advice which Paul is giving here.

God has given us a mandate to remain in status quo. It is not an option. We do have some options when it comes to the subject of marriage. Over all, Paul is giving us advice about marriage. Whether to marry or not to marry is the subject of Paul's advice. Both statuses, whether married or unmarried, are acceptable before God. However, under certain conditions, there is a more right answer. A better solution. When we have a mandate, that is the solution. When it comes to Paul's advice, there is a better solution.

Vv. 27–28 give us a time when it is better marry and better not to marry. Marriage may not be the best choice; but it is not wrong to get married. Our present distress can be any circumstance which preoccupies our thinking.

1Cor. 7:26 Then I think this to be good, because of the present necessity: that it is good for a man to be thus.

Once you are married, you don't get to divorce (apart from the exceptions previously discussed). If you're married, you don't seek to be released; if you have been released from a wife, do not seek to get married. The assumption here is, the person he is speaking to has the right of remarriage.

1Cor. 7:27 Have you been bound to a wife? Do not seek to be released. Have you been released from a wife? Do not seek a wife.

If you have married, then you have not sinned; and it is not a sin for the virgin to marry. However, if you do get married, you will have trouble. The protasis of a 3rd class condition looks at marriage as a future possibility. The apodosis: you have not sinned. Whichever way we decide, none of these decisions are wrong. They are never sin. It is only sin when the prospective mate is an unbeliever. Not everyone who says they are a Christian is a Christian; not everyone who says I believe in Jesus Christ actually does. Or they add works to faith. There are many ways to corrupt or pollute the gospel.

Marriage has many hazards; but the institution of marriage is never offensive to God; God invented marriage. It is a wonderful institution; but Paul is saying here maybe you should not marry under certain conditions. When you marry, you take on a partner, an intimate; but you take on an added burden, especially under adversity. It is total arrogance to disregard good advice; particularly, good doctrinal advice.

Anyone can give advice concerning marriage. Had we listened to parental advice prior to getting married, is it possible that you might not have married and might not have made that big mistake? This is Bobby's way of illustrating Paul's advice here. Parents just might give some actual good advice. You parents know more about you than anyone else; particularly in your younger years before marriage. This makes sense, doesn't it? They know your strengths and weaknesses. If parents know doctrine and give some advice; maybe we should listen. Some parents know what you can handle and what you cannot handle. It never hurts to draw out their opinion and evaluate it. Doctrinal advice is critical; we still make the choice, but advice is very important; particularly from someone with doctrine. Paul is trying to spare people this trouble. There is a caution. You must make your own decision and live with it.

When you complain; realize that you made the decision and live with it. Don't play the victim. Paul is giving doctrinal advice; not human viewpoint. Too much dependency on parents and family can make it difficult to leave your parents when you are supposed to. Paul is giving advice about marriage before marriage.

A key word here is θλίψεις = trouble, pressure, oppression, tribulation, affliction; pressure and difficulty brought about by outside conditions—by conditions outside your control. Strong's #2347.

He that has wife and children...make misfortunes more bitter. Francis Bacon (there was more to this). You handle trouble and pressure just as unmarried people do—with the problem solving devices. You must give solemn and very careful thought to you decisions concerning marriage.

Paul: I'd like to give you some advice where you might be able to avoid some serious trouble (just as a father might give good counsel before marriage). No good parent wants to see his child suffer; so he offers advice with the intention that it will reduce suffering. It is good to have doctrinal wisdom; and good sense indicates to you the some others have a better vantage point or a smarter point of view than you.

Some Principles:

1. When the Lord opens the door, a change from single to marital status is a wonderful blessing. There are always attendant pressures in marriage. They know what pressures we are able to deal with. They can look at the prospective spouse and have a good idea as to what the spouse is like.
2. Under other external pressures and adversity, marriage is not the best option...at least at that time. Not just the normal pressures; Paul is not trying to discourage marriage because there is pressure involved. Marriage may not be the best option at that time.

3. One of the dangers in getting married when under extreme pressure is the attitude of desperation and panic in which we approach the marriage. Being under extreme adversity, we may be desperate and panicked. Part of Paul's advice is dependent upon our own level of growth. If we cannot handle it on our own, how can we handle it on our own? Maybe we need more time in the Word before getting married.
4. Under those circumstances, a yearning can be fostered to introduce a dear person to you into your circumstances. If you are considering marrying someone, you obviously think they are a dear person. You may think that this will alleviate your own stress or loneliness or general dissatisfaction with your life—this is a big pitfall. The idea is, you can divide up the misery.
5. That is not considerate or loving. That is self-centered. It is the worst condition under which you can marry. You want to bring someone into your life. You don't bring a person that you love into a life that may be very difficult for them. That is true virtue love; that is really exhibiting love toward that person.
6. Self-centeredness is not the way to begin a marital relationship, ever.
7. A conclusion to the doctrine that we have been studying: remain in status quo, which is single, until the outward pressure eases or goes away. Don't get started under those conditions. Wait until you are more comfortable; wait until you are spiritually able to handle those problems.
8. When the pressure goes away, then wait for the Lord's timing to manifest itself. It is not about our timing; it is not about what we want. Remember what the mission of God is; it is His plan, not ours.

1Cor. 7:28 But if you also marry, you do not sin. And if the virgin marries, she does not sin. But such will have trouble in the flesh. But I am sparing you.

This leads us to v. 29; those who have wives will be as those who have none.

1Cor. 7:29

Sunday 1 July 2, 2006

On July 4, 1776, 56 men represented 13 colonies, which would become the United States, wrote and signed the Declaration of Independence. All of the documents of that era refer to God. They are endowed by their Creator certain unalienable rights; and governments are instituted among men to secure these rights. When a government becomes destructive to these ends, then the people must change or eliminate it. The government should be not changed for transient and minor reasons. Bobby reads the Declaration of Independence. Signing this document would be a call to war; and they knew that Great Britain would use military force to enslave them. They knew that a fight for freedom would be inevitable. They placed a higher value on liberty than on life itself. If a generation is not able to defend such values, then the liberty of that nation will languish. No one sat on the side lines, hoping that others would take up the fight. All of these men 9 died of wounds, 6 captured; none of them defected; many had their homes burned to the ground. The freedom that the United States has today is based upon their deaths and struggle. We have freedom because of past military victory. We are able to gather at Berachah based upon victory by military force.

If you asked a group of people today to explain the meaning of freedom, some would address their personal rights of self-determination; others would revel in their material goods; but how many would know and articulate the true source of freedom: John 8:32: And you will know the truth and the truth will set you free.

As a believer, we will have inviolable volition in our souls, no matter what our status—even in jail. When doctrine is in our souls, freedom will never be lost. Believers in Jesus Christ are free slaves, the oxymoron of Christianity. Freedom is ours, our destiny and our obligation. To maintain our own freedom, we continue to study the Word of God, which is the Truth, which makes us free.

Paul brings into his discussion, another thing. Our temporal lives, no matter how long they last, in the light of eternity; there is only so much time that we have to prepare for eternity. None of us know how long we will exist in our human bodies. However, long that we have, whether tomorrow or 60 years from now, it is a short time. Our mission is to prepare during that short time for eternity. Our minds and thoughts are finite; it is difficult to understand eternity. Time does not exist; there are no seconds, minutes, days or years; and we have a very short amount of time to prepare for eternity. Our service is preparation for eternity. What we do by way of spiritual maturity requires time spent in the Word. It is not our job to go after more things, or more approbation, or to a higher position; there is nothing wrong with these things, but we should be careful about spending our time on these things.

Paul has advised the believers in Corinthian not to change either status: slavery, or marriage. Paul will include in this service to the Lord marriage. We will learn how we will serve the Lord and how important time is. Marriage takes a lot of time and effort. Pursuit of these other things can keep us from our pursuit of the Lord.

From now on, those who have wives should be as those who had none. Some men may have felt this same idea, the 3rd day after the honeymoon. It sounds like, it is okay to act like your wife doesn't exist, although you cannot divorce her. That is not its meaning.

The idea is, beware that marriage does not take from your time to serve the Lord. 1 second less spent on non-essential things, is 1 second less spent on eternal things. Our production of divine good has everything to do with our status and divine good in eternity. Our few years have eternal impact. Are spending a few years going after what you lust over really worth what you lose in eternity? Do not use your time in a way that is counterproductive. In marriage, you marriage can certainly do that; it takes time to make a marriage work. That is a careful balance; a balance between marriage, which time is required; and your spiritual life.

The first phrase means, Paul is addressing all believers, even though this is specifically addressed to the Corinthians. Paul is going to give more advice and he is giving them more and more by way of options. The more options that we have, the more likely that we can make mistakes. Paul gives options; but he also gives solutions. He give the pitfalls; but he also gives solutions. Paul gives advice here. Why is he giving advice this time?

He's given this concept of time before; why is he giving it again?

1. One reason is time; time is vitally connected to the believer's service and production on this earth.
2. Proper utilization of time is important in every believer's life; and it should be a part of our constant consideration. Every second we live is another less second that we have before eternity. We are looking at our watches, and wondering, how long until eternity? This is the divine viewpoint of looking at time. It is not just about us, but it is about eternity.
3. Our primary responsibility is to use those ticks on the clock in the way that God's plan requires. We not only ask how have so many ticks left, but how can we best utilize these ticks?
4. Marriage may be part of God's plan for us; marriage can also hinder a required use of our time. That is the illustration here. Many things can hinder our required use of time. Therefore, we should give time a close consideration of our lives.
5. Let's say, we have a communication gift which requires concentrated service to God; or even prayer or the gift of helps. In any case, time is a factor. This service may require extensive travel or extensive prep time. Let's assume that we marry in the middle of this service; is it wrong to do so? Nope. Marriage is not wrong; it is a divine institution.

The timing may be wrong; the person may be a bad choice; but the institution of marriage is right. However, without question, marriage will consume some of our allotted time, by its very nature. When we add all this time up, it may cut our service short by even a few years. Marriage is a legitimate obligation. Where do you spend your time? This time cannot be returned or compensated for. We have only so many ticks. If we are in a situation of concentrated service, there is an unfairness to the wife. She marries you, and you have this service; but she expects service from you, to solidify and strengthen the marriage; and that is our due. Both need to spend time making the marriage work. If concentrated service is God's plan for us, then the man will soon be neglecting his wife. Having a concentrated service does not give us the right to shirk our marital responsibilities. Sometimes, the burden of raising children is put on the woman, and the husband has to make that choice. If you are not married and in this position, but to remain unmarried; but if you marry, then apply v. 29.

Along with conditions of adversity, marriage is an added problem. The time needed to render service to the Lord means that all of these things must be balanced and juggled. We have an obligation in marriage and we must fulfill it. We must decide how our time is allocated. It should not be given away in our marriage; and it must not be taken from our spiritual life. We have a great deal of choice here. We get the information; we get the plan of God for ourselves; and then we act on it.

1Cor. 7:29

Sunday 2 July 2, 2006

You can't take it back; if you say I do, then you cannot take it back. This verse deals with time and priorities; it deals with how we spend our time in life. It is difficult to know how to spend time and how much time should be spent, to fulfill one's obligations and responsibilities in life. We as believers have an obligation that the rest of the world does not have. For us, we have the added obligation to spend every moment required in fulfilling the plan of God. How do we fulfill the plan of God? How much time do we spend? Even as married, we have spiritual obligations, as though we were not married. This does not mean that we can simply take off and do what we think we should spiritually, and neglect the spouse. If we have a wife who does not quite understand; who is not like-minded with us; she will not understand why she should sacrifice one bit of time, including your service to God. With the mixed marriage, this is even a greater issue, as she sees no reason to do what you do. If you are married to a believer of a like mind, they understand your priorities and they never resent it. Never, never resent the time spent by your spouse in serving God. There is nothing more important; our lives are short, even if we live for 90 or 100 years (which is pretty much the top end of the years that we will spend on this earth). We are here to glorify God; not to seek our own happiness or our own glorification. Didn't I just read in the constitution that I can pursue my own happiness? The constitution is written for believers and unbelievers alike. This should not exclude your service to God. There are Christians who think this and live this way. That is no witness; that is stupidity. Their time is completely out of whack. Real happiness and great contentment comes for service to the Lord; there will be no happiness apart from that. We gain capacity for life and enjoyment through our spiritual growth and service. Doctrine in the soul means we can enjoy the simplest of pleasures with doctrine in the soul. The constitution has even a greater meaning for us. The documents of our early history are filled with divine viewpoint. The greatest happiness for time and in eternity is doctrinal application. There is a corporate witness in the angelic conflict, which means that marriage itself can be service to God; and time must be spent in it. There is time spent in the Lord; no greater conflict. Many of us fight the battle all the time. Some of us are torn, but we are in Bible class. God honors that for our service but also for our blessing in life. Sitting in Bible class is the most important aspect of our service to God; and this is a witness to those who are intimately related to you. No greater hours in the day than the time spent in Bible class. That is our priority in life. A greater price is paid in the temporal realm. In recreation; and all the enjoyable things in life that we all like to do. A person involved in concentrated service may not get the same amount of time to spend doing recreational things; but they are no less happy because of it.

1Cor. 7:7: I wish that all men were as I am. Paul wished that all men could spend the time which he gets to spend; he knows the great pleasure of being a witness and being the spear point for the mystery doctrine. Yet, he sacrificed many things in life. This includes the ladies too, even though they cannot have a communication gift with authority over adults. Even those with a normal spiritual gift can also have a time problem in functioning in that gift. None of us are excluded. We need the divine perspective of time. Service to the Lord and the time for it always takes precedence. Marriage is never wrong; marriage is always right before the Lord. If it is obvious that, in thinking about a marriage, you realize that you are going to spend a lot of your life fighting the time battle and every other kind of battle with your future spouse; it is better to lose all the money you spent and walk away from it. In any case, time is always of the essence. This is Paul's doctrinal advice for each one of us. We are to make the time in service to the Lord.

Think about the spiritual gift which requires an inordinate amount of time to fulfill. That might be an evangelist, pastor-teacher, a missionary; and there are many others as well. We can have concentrated service in our own living rooms; many spend many hours on their knees in prayer; and some who help others. There are many concentrated gifts that we, as believers, have in this life. Paul fell into the category; and we might as well (however, probably few fall into this category to the extent that Paul did). The one with such a concentrated, time-consuming gift, may marry. There may not be enough time for the nurture required for marriage and for the Lord's concentrated calling. God can always provide. If we have a gift of concentrated service, God knows what we need and the service required to utilize this gift. He can provide a mate who will not only allow for this service, but can even enhance this gift. She will be a facilitator of this spiritual gift. That is a sacrifice for her, as well as for the one with the spiritual gift which requires an inordinate amount of time. Such a situation is not for everyone. Some might think it is prestigious to be the wife of someone in concentrated service; that is not necessarily true. There are compensations. Such a woman is also redeeming the time and sharing in that concentrated service. It takes an unusual and special woman to go to the mission field; Bobby has never had the call and doesn't want to go. It is not his gift. It takes a person with that gift and a very special person to accompany them. Many is the wife of a missionary who has her own ministry under these conditions. Her life is never normal; not as we think of as normal. There is a reward that we don't receive either. It requires maturity for these conditions. It can be a very rewarding relationship under atypical conditions. Most of us have nice little houses and nice little routines; and much of our life is spent in normal living. However, on the mission field, they sacrifice much to do what they do; and the companion sacrifices much as well.

Bobby's mother was not a missionary; and she falls into the category. She had a very different life in order to fulfill God's plan for her and her father. She took tremendous care of her father. The marriage is still going for over 60 years. Bob could not have done what he did without her support. This was an advantage to him; and an advantage to us as well. We owe gratitude toward her behind-the-scenes service. She was uniquely equipped to do it and did it throughout her life. She will hear, "Well done, my good and faithful slave." It depends upon the time spent on the function of our spiritual gift. Bobby's mother was never slighted in life, even though she missed out on a lot of things we take for granted in life or even demand. She was not the point of the spear; but there was great fulfillment in this type of service. The rewards for logistical service are the same. We share in the same ministry.

Bobby thinks of Billy Graham's wife, Ruth; who furthered him and supported him and allowed him to function, because she backed him up logistically. She raised their children. In the military, it takes 3 people in logistics to support one man in combat. Ruth Graham was very well-suited for the task, just as Bobby's mother was. They both knew what to expect. Ruth's parents were missionaries in China; Bobby's mom's father was a pastor in Tuscon for 50 years.

1Sam. 30:24: "For as his share is who goes down into the battle, so shall his share be who stays by the baggage. They shall share alike." The logistical support is the one who stays by the baggage; no one fights apart from logistics. This is not really this passage, as these men were too tired to move on. The rewards for both are the same; both spouses are a team, and each carried out their part. The wife could receive a greater reward than her husband, even if her husband has led millions to Christ and she has led a handful to Christ. Whatever service God has for us, we share in that reward. One might be the spear of the service and the other may be logistics. First of all, we have a precedent; and this obligation comes before everything else in life. This is a priority; it does not wipe out every other obligation. There is a hierarchy. There is no second class position in the Christian way of life; whether you are the most famous pastor or evangelist, and someone else is an unknown who prays alone in their living room; support staff or the spearhead; they share in the rewards.

1Cor. 7:29

Wednesday July 5, 2006

If we do not know what our spiritual gift is, then we continue to advance spiritually and something will present itself. It takes time to execute the spiritual life; it takes time to grow in the spiritual life; it takes time to grow in the spiritual life. The result of the believer who is continuing to grow in grace, is that he executes the spiritual life and begins to glorify God in his body; and he executes the spiritual life using the gift or gifts which God gives you. This is the priority in the spiritual life; we are to grow in grace, glorify God in our bodies, and then serve the Lord with the spiritual gift which He has given us. It takes time to do it right. In order to do it right, it takes time away from certain temporal pursuits, including marriage. Paul turns now to advice concerning the issue of time. The issue is all about time and how we use that time. That is what Paul is discussing here. This should always be the constant consideration of a believer. We cannot afford to squander the time which God has given us; we cannot afford to sleep our way through the rest of our lives; ignoring the requirements of God.

The progression of our life moves on; and this is even more important every second that we live, from the moment that we live. We have only so many ticks. There is only so much time for us to be filled with the Spirit. There is only so much time to metabolize doctrine; only so much time to produce divine good. We have to budget our time as believers in Jesus Christ. Something will have to give at some point.

Someone's cell phone went off.

Every second that we live counts. There are so many things in the Christian life that we have to do; so many things that we are mandated to do; not to mention all the other things. Yet, we make the time for Bible class, because we must have priorities. Tempest fuget = time flies. Divine good is one of our primary responsibilities; we redeem the time in the way that God's plan dictates. We are to take in doctrine and metabolize it; we glorify God in our bodies and we use our spiritual gift in the way that God has designated for it to be used during this time period.

The time has been shortened; the time of our earthly existence is constantly winding down. That is the perfect passive indicative of συστελλω = to draw together, to limit, to compress. We always have a time problem. Human viewpoint says, we have all the time in the world for ourselves. But we don't have all the time in the world for ourselves.

The Corinthians have outside adversities; some are on the run. We only have so much time to use. We are to execute the divine plan and serve the Lord. We have to realize what the priority is. The divine viewpoint is presented in this verse; it tells us, we have a limited time during which to execute God's plan. God has allotted just so much time for each of us. When married, we have responsibilities to our family and to our spouse, which is a part of God's plan as well. There are times when marriage is not in His plan for us; at least for periods of time. Time is so critical. When we are looking at our priority in life as a believer in Jesus Christ; we are here on this earth for a short time. Therefore, we must take full advantage of the time which God has allotted to us.

Paul's point here is, there is nothing wrong with marriage; however, there may not be enough time on your plate, especially during times of great persecution, to make a marriage work. The divine viewpoint way; those who have wives should be as those who have none. The time has been shortened.

What Does Paul Mean with τοι λοιπον ινα = henceforth, from this time forward; purpose clause here=the time has been shortened for the purpose that, from this time forward and into the future. The purpose from this time forward and into the future; the time is shortened, so that now, the married man must begin to think in a certain way. He should operate as though he has no wife at all. To have a wife, but to think and act as if he doesn't. He's married, but he must act like he doesn't? If my wife makes me upset, I'll just pretend that she's not there. "Honey, you're not here anymore; I don't need to divorce you." This is not license for the husband to act as if he does not have a wife.

Paul uses the words as though which negates acting out

1. This is Paul's shock treatment, which he does to make a point. His subject is time; now he will shock these people concerning the priorities of time.
2. Paul invents this statement; it is very contrived. He writes it with the idea of focusing on priorities.

3. This statement reflects the absolute importance of accomplishing the plan of God whether single or married.
4. Paul wants to make sure that they understand that not even marriage supercedes the plan of God.
5. Therefore, no circumstance of life can be an excuse to disregard executing the plan of God. Not even marriage can be used as an excuse to not execute the plan of God. You use God's time where God wants you to use it.
6. This calculated statement which Paul is making here is a call not to get too attached to the things of this world, so that we are distracted from our great purpose in life. This does not mean that we should ignore our wives; we just don't let marriage distract us from our great purpose in life.
7. This does not authorize ignoring your wife or initiating activities as if you are not married. This doesn't mean you go out and date other women or whatever.
8. For the man who is married; he also has a spiritual obligation to serve the Lord; marriage is not his only obligation; service to God is an obligation.
9. Outside circumstances are no excuse to fail to function in our area of spiritual gift and service. Time is a great way to understand this. We must concentrate and focus on what God has for us. There is only so much time available. We must redeem that time.
10. The no-distraction guideline include marriage without denigrating marriage in any way. This is a balancing act. This is why Paul says "You guys are under tremendous pressure; if you are not married, maybe it is not time for you to get married. You have enough things on your plate right at this moment; an obligation which takes a lot of your time." The priority of the Christian life comes through loud and clear. Paul uses this great institution and says, "As great as marriage is; what is the priority? It is your spiritual life." No other illustration could be better. Those who are married know that marriage takes a lot of time.

Paul is trying to spare his congregation the pain and adversity; it is foolish for you at this time to marry. But, if you are married, act as if you are not married—you have a time priority as well; you must redeem the time. Marriage does not supercede our service to the Lord. It is a juggling act. We all must do this. It is so applicable to our lives every day. It is all part of the juggling act. Do not ever forget the priority of the Christian life. We must use our spiritual gift and serve Him as He has designated. The rationale should be clear to us by now. If we must act as if we don't have a wife to fulfill our spiritual service, then why should we take on a wife at this time? Paul is speaking to those in present distress. If you must act as if you don't have a wife, then why take one on?

Recall the background for the Corinthians—times of great distress and persecution. Because of this, there are great drawbacks to marriage. Something has got to give. If you are married, then the marriage or your function under your spiritual gift will suffer. You don't want your marriage to suffer and you do not want your spiritual life to suffer.

Service takes priority, whether you are married or unmarried; your service just takes a different form when you are unmarried. The meaning is very clear.

The Final meaning of this Verse:

1. There is nothing wrong with marriage for anyone, except for same sex marriage, which is sin and degeneracy. It is a great institution, a great relationship when done right. All believers have the right to get married.
2. None of these verses take away the right of marriage from anyone; even for those who have concentrated gifts of service. Concentrated service does not mean, you cannot get married. However, it can affect when to marry and sometimes if you should get married.
3. Paul knows that married life reduces the time required to fulfill the intensity of a concentrated ministry...particularly in times of severe adversity. There was not one moment of Paul's Christian life which was not adversity. There would be a natural disaster, or an angry Jewish mob, or getting opposition from some legalistic judaizer in church, or some Roman soldier who thinks he should arrest Paul and whip him. Paul has no time to face all of this and to be married as well. Nor can he allow his wife to face all of these things with him. Paul gets a lot of his application by applying it to himself, and then explains it from that point of view.
4. A man may choose to refrain from marriage on the basis of time, adversity and spiritual gift, and the conditions of his life. He may choose to marry under those conditions.
5. If a person chooses not to marry, this may not be a life choice; he should stay unmarried until conditions improve. Time priority requires that one area must be sacrificed for another.
6. Marriage can never be classified as a waste of time; only as a user of time.
7. Paul's conclusion: the time necessary to function adequately in service to the Lord + adverse external circumstances command the single life, which is Paul's life. Remember he said, "I wish that everyone could be as I am." We are still benefited by Paul's concentrated service even today. Paul bypassed one of the greatest things in life, and the trade-off was good for him. This should always be a part of our consideration.

Look at your watch and determine, how can I best utilize my time for the Lord? Is it time for prayer? Is it time for Bible class? Is it time for witnessing? Is it time to deal with my marriage? Every day there will be a time distraction; there are not enough hours in the day to do everything that we need to do. We all have busy lives and time is of the essence.

Marriage, with its time constraints, places the husband in a position, to do something in service to God or to one's wife. Marriage is extremely important; and yet, marriage does not take priority over God's plan for us. We fit into that plan. God has given us a spiritual gift and so we are to execute it.

How far can you go with this? Can you fudge a little bit? Can you completely ignore your spouse? Next time.

1Cor. 7:29 But I say this, brothers, that the time has been cut short. For the rest is, that even those who have wives should be as those who do not have,

Thursday July 6, 2006

The topic for tonite is time. Many travel to Berachah great distances to be there; and many are as tired as can be entering the auditorium.

The first phrase reads But this I say, brothers, that the time has been shortened. We are that much closer to the time when we check out of this life and are face to face with the Lord. People will seek any sort of medical treatment to eek out an additional 5 minutes of life. God has given us a certain amount of time; when we depart from this life, that time is over. Time is now of the essence to us until the end comes. What is our priority. These priorities must be set; time can be squandered, and it very often is. Our primary responsibility is to utilize the time which the Lord gives us. There are so many demands on our lives. We may lose track in Bible class, if we start thinking of all the things that we need to do. There is a trade-off for us that we make the right choice. For the spouse who is not here, who is negative or an unbeliever, watches you. Your life before that spouse will never return fallow; they always observe you. Marriage is a legitimate obligation for every believer who is married. The husband and the wife must live their lives together in accordance with virtue love and the doctrine in their souls. The husband is a leader and the wife is a responder. It takes time to develop the spiritual skills necessary for marital success. That all takes execution of the spiritual life. Marriage is never a waste of time, but it certainly uses up the time which we have left. We must give marriage time. The married man has many more domestic responsibilities than the unmarried man. There is always the tension between concentrated service and the time spent on temporal things. There is a spiritual aspect of marriage, and we must spend time on it. It is a corporate witness. Serving the Lord in the way that He wants us to serve Him may jeopardize that marriage. If your spouse is not of a like mind and does not understand our priorities, then there can be some friction; but that does not change the priorities. Hang in with respect to the marriage, but do not change your priorities. It takes balance and a fixed priority. We must all budget our time anyway; so much time for this or that; nothing is more important than budgeting your time for your spiritual life, for serving the Lord in the way that you do. This passage addressed the husband directly. Our circumstances and service must always be taken into account. Also, we must bear in mind, what would the Lord have me to do? That is always a consideration of the unmarried believer. If you are already married, then it is a matter of budgeting your time. Bobby doesn't counsel; he teaches the Word of God so that we are able to direct our own lives; don't put your decisions off on anyone else. We have the capabilities and resources to handle anything. It is all about time and priorities.

Due to the adversity in Corinth and the time constraints of them, it is best for them to remain as they are. If you do get married, you haven't sinned; but there is a change of thinking. You must shift gears in your thinking. You are no longer dealing with life as an unmarried person, but as a married person.

For the rest is, that even those who have wives should be as those who do not have, is not a statement which means you should act as though your wife does not exist. I always wanted out of this marriage, and this gives me the way out. This statement is about a sense of spiritual responsibility, while not abandoning your temporal responsibility. This is redeeming the time for spiritual life and service. Since the time is shortened, a believer must set priorities. For the believer, there is not enough for all the things which the unbeliever has time for. Some believers feel cheated because they cannot spend time that the unbeliever has. "I have to go to Bible class; I'd rather do something like go on a date or watch a movie, or join a bowling team."

There is a myth of feminism that a woman can do everything; traditional and nontraditional roles in all; marriage, raising a family, having a career, time for herself, etc. That is false; there is not enough time to give attention to all of these categories for anyone. That is the problem with single parents. There is not enough time to be a single parent. Something will get neglected. It is the Lord first always; and marriage second; and then career third. If something has to be sacrificed, career is what needs to go. The spiritual aspect changes your focus. As the primary provider, you must work. You are worse than an infidel if you do not support your family. Sometimes, a couple both work mostly to maintain a certain lifestyle; and someone will suffer when that occurs.

The believer is under great time constraints, and the spiritual life can suffer; there is a balance; but the spiritual life comes first. What takes precedence is what is important; however, that does not mean you abandon the other things.

The married must set priorities, once they are in it. The Christian spouse must never resent the other believer's time spent with the Lord and seemingly neglecting you, you are using human viewpoint. However, you cannot use your spiritual life as an excuse to ignore your spouse.

1Cor. 7:29 But this I say, brothers, that the time has been shortened. For the rest is, that even those who have wives should be as those who do not have,

The message in vv. 30–31 is the same. Paul is taking major aspects of life as illustrations of some person's priorities in life. The things in these verses are not to be seen as priorities; neither are they to be ignored. The implied meaning is, the unmarried believer should not get married.

Legitimate living does not encroach on redeeming the time for the Lord's service. The man as the leader of the home must set certain responsibilities. Everyone has some spiritual gift, and must spend time in the function of that spiritual gift. We all have the obligation to use some amount of time. The time factor can never be ignored by the married man. However, he has an obligation to his family; and there must be a balance. If any man does not provide for his own is worse than an infidel and denies the faith. Paul's point in 1Corinthians is priorities and time management. You cannot neglect one; but you must prioritize. Dual responsibility with spiritual service taking priority; and the Christian wife must realize that takes priority. She must not resent it; she must facilitate it. With the correct priorities, marriage will prosper.

The first illustration is the emotion of sorrow; the expression of happiness; the pursuit of commodities and pleasure. Taken to excess, these 3 legitimate functions could throw a believer's life out of whack. They could hinder the believer from properly utilizing time.

First illustration: those who weep. This is under conditions when crying is warranted; and there is nothing wrong with men or women crying. We sorrow for those we lose; it is legitimate to sorrow when a loved one is lost. There is always a time for grief. There is a time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn and a time to dance. 1Thess. 4:13: we do not want you to be uninformed, brothers; about those who are asleep; so that you may not grieve as those who have no hope. The dead in Christ will rise first...and so shall we always be with the Lord. We grieve unlike the unbeliever. We are not to be consumed or monopolized by sorrow. We cannot allow our grief to overtake us; life goes on, no matter what. We can share the happiness of God under any condition or under any circumstance; we grieve and at the same time, we can share the happiness of God. Grief does not control; but it is legitimate. Our personal circumstances do not take priority in comparison to the plan of God. Our personal circumstances, even good reasons for sorrow, do not take priority. When sorrow goes over the edge, it is self-pity, self-centeredness, bitterness; and that consumes your life. It would also consume your time to glorify and serve the Lord. There is time set aside to grieve and mourn; but there is only so much allotted time for that. Excessive sorrow takes away from the shortened time that we have.

In the next corresponding phrase. Paul introduces a quality which is not possible, but he uses it for shock value, to get their attention. If Bobby does something to shock us, on occasion; is memorable and is a great teaching device. Excessive, exaggerated contrived statements. Here is a statement which is impossible. How can you weep and not weep? You must weep as though you did not weep. The key is the Greek word hos which means as though. It is like they are not weeping. We can sorrow; but we don't overdo it. We don't wallow in it; we don't let it consume us. We aren't to be overtaken with pity. There is nothing in the spiritual life which means we deserve self-pity. We weep as if we do not weep; it is a type of grief. The purpose is to say sorrow cannot supercede the plan of God. There is no sorrow so great, that we must put aside the plan of God and use more time to sorrow. Inordinate time must not be spent in mourning; sorrow cannot be prolonged so that it does not cut into the Lord's time. We will all lose loved ones; we have every right to sorrow; but, you must not overdo it. There is a time to mourn and a time to dance. Get it out of your system and move on. From time to time, you may dwell on them, and you may get a tinge of sorrow because you miss them. Paul is hammering us with the use of time. It is telling us how to set up our priorities via these illustrations.

We've all seen a war movie; when a man is killed, his buddies mourn his loss; but they cannot just stop; the war is still going. The angelic conflict is still going; we will have an empty spot in our soul, but our mission is more important. In the military, it is the mission first, and the men second.

In Corinth, there will be those who will die soon; there will be great persecutions; sorrow is a great reality for these people; but that must now deter their spiritual growth. Even in the midst of the greatest sorrow, glorification and service to the Lord Jesus Christ must never be overshadowed. One of the greatest ministries and witnesses in life is to grieve over a loved one, and yet to not grieve. There is no hopeless grieving.

Bobby was at a military funeral; and the mother of the soldier tried to climb into the coffin screaming. Very sad to see. How you conduct yourself in your grief affects the unbeliever. They can see hope in your soul. You weep as though you do not weep; you miss them, but you will see them again. Nothing should hinder your service to God. This is the literary device which Paul uses. It is a major part of life, and it is something which consumes us. The time is shortened. The believer must always make optimum use of the time for the Lord. Nothing should hinder that. Not marriage; marriage takes time, but it should not hinder the progress of our spiritual lives; not mourning or sorrow; and not great joy and happiness. This is another great part of our lives.

1Cor. 7:31 and those using this world as not abusing it; for the mode of this world is passing away.

1Cor. 7:29–31

Sunday 1 July 9, 2006

The rapture of the church is imminent; and there are no signs or clues to indicate when it will happen. We should serve Jesus Christ as if tomorrow is our last time to do so. This is what he means, when Paul writes, the time has been shortened.

We have an obligation to the Lord Jesus Christ; and that is to serve Him and to glorify Him in our bodies; and there is only so much time to do this. Paul will illustrate the divine viewpoint with respect to setting priorities in life. Our general topic has been marriage; but now Paul moves into time management as related to marriage. Some men believe that they can serve the Lord less unencumbered with a wife. For the married man to accomplish service to God, he must set definitive priorities. This is our sense of spiritual responsibility, even when dealing with the most legitimate aspects of our life.

1Cor. 7:29 But this I say, brothers, that the time has been shortened, for the purpose that those who have wives should be as those who do not have,

vv. 30–31 continue with this same general idea. However, the end is near refers to a time management problem. The average person on the street is not aware of this, but we know this. The form of this world is passing away. These legitimate functions in life are not to be understood as the priorities of this life.

The married man must beware that legitimate living—life and activities which are legitimate should not encroach upon redeeming the time for the Lord's service. The service to God comes first. You do not get to forget that you are married; but you must recognize that your primary relationship in life is not your husband or wife, but Jesus Christ. We have great relationships with our spouses; that is the way it is designed. And if that relationship is extremely close, then what should be your relationship to Jesus Christ?

Paul will present 4 normal and legitimate activities in life; we sorrow, for instance, for loved ones whom we have lost. There is a time in our lives for grief. Eccles. 2:4 makes this extremely clear. We cannot be consumed or monopolized in our life with sorrow, even if our lives are filled with tragedy and sorrow. Our lives as believers are not sorrow. Our mission goes on, in spite of our tears. A soldier in war who has just lost a buddy must move on in his mission as if he did not grieve. He must function and continue as though he did not grieve. Grieving and sorrow are legitimate, but these things cannot intrude on our spiritual life; we must move ahead spiritually. Serving the Lord Jesus Christ is our priority, and there is only so much time to do it.

We should enjoy life; we should take time for recreation and activity, e.g., a golf game. However, we must keep our priorities straight: Jesus Christ is our first priority. The time is shortened and we are not prepared for eternity neither are we living our lives in the light of eternity, if our priorities are messed up.

1Cor. 7:31 and those using this world as not abusing it; for the form of this world is passing away.

1Cor. 7:30–31

Sunday 2 July 9, 2006

The time has been shortened. The coming of the Lord will surprise us; if we not in the grave, then the Lord will meet us in the air. The only time that we have to accomplish the mission in this life that the Lord Jesus Christ has for us, is while we are alive. As a believer in Jesus Christ, we must grow in grace and knowledge of Jesus Christ; and we must glorify God in our bodies; and we must utilize our spiritual gift or gifts.

There are four examples here of areas where we need to budget our time; legitimate areas that each one of us have a part in. These are areas which are legitimate, but must be figured into time management.

And those who weep as those who do not weep. Paul has introduced an impossible undertaking for all of us. We cannot weep and not weep at the same time. There are legitimate reasons for weeping—the loss of a loved one. We will all lose a loved one; sometimes, even the very thought of the loss of a loved one will bring sorrow. Even the loss of a pet is an area of sorrow. The key is the connecting particle ὡς = as though. In other words, we can sorrow—we should and we will—but we are not to overdo it. Sorrow is not our priority, even under legitimate conditions. Life goes on. There are tragedies; there are sorrows. We should always be cognizant that the time has been shortened; because with each second, our life moves closer and closer to its close.

At this time, believers in Corinth had lost relatives and loved ones to Roman persecution; they were in the midst of persecution up to the necks. Sorrow would become a reality for many of them. It is not to deter their spiritual growth in life; the time is short—shorter than you think. We could walk out of Bible class and end up being face to face with the Lord. By the time we are gone, we might find that we have done very little. We may never hear, “Well done, my good and faithful servant” from Jesus Christ. We will have real sorrow and real tragedies in our lives; however, as long as we are alive, we are functioning in God’s plan.

Glorification and service to the Lord still takes priority. The as though phrase is very effective; there is actually some shock value here. It allows Paul to make his point crystal clear to us. The believer must make optimal use of his time.

1Cor. 7:30a ...and those weeping as not weeping,...

Paul continues this phraseology in v. 30b. There is a participle here of χαίρω = to rejoice, to be happy. Personal happiness over people or circumstances is very legitimate. The Christian and the Christian life is not one of cranky personality and a hatred of life; nor are we to jump up and down like clowns. There is balance in our life; happiness and pleasure are a part of our lot in this life, as is sorrow. A believer can get caught up in the pursuit of happiness and pleasure. Searching our pleasurable things in this life is not the same as having a happy or even pleasurable life.

Temporal happiness and pleasure is a part of our life. Whether our circumstances are those of sorrow or of great happiness, we still have a responsibility to God. We cannot spend too much time seeking pleasure and happiness; nor can we spend our lives in desperate sorrow because of circumstances here on this earth.

Bobby likes to golf on a Saturday morning; however, he studies for his presentations at that time. Service to the Lord is not drudgery; it is not mopping up your kitchen; it is great happiness and fulfillment in life.

One must happen, then they other. Our spiritual service is enjoyable.

...and those who rejoice as though they did not rejoice,... Time spent in pleasurable activities must never conflict with our service to God.

Why is Happiness Important as an Illustration Here?

1. Happiness is a universal pursuit; everyone seeks some kind of happiness in this life. Even if you say, “I only seek God’s will.”
2. There is a sharp distinction which hits so close to home for all of us.
3. It is an easy sidetrack for all of us; it is a battle that we must fight all the time. Bobby has about 10 things that he likes to do unconnected with his vocation. Bobby has to turn down some things simply because he does not have the time. We cannot spend our entire lives seeking out happiness, as that is not going to result in happiness.

4. The inordinate pursuit of human happiness and pleasure becomes self-indulgence and self-gratification.
5. It is the difference between being self-centered and being centered on doctrine and the mind of Christ. It is the difference between being self-centered and Christ-centered.
6. This is simply another time priority and management issue, as are all of these phrases.

1Cor. 7:30b ...and those rejoicing as not rejoicing,...

The verb is ἀγοράζω = to purchase, to buy. This refers to anything that you buy; purchasing is a legitimate activity in life. Don't think that handing your money across the counter to buy something is wrong. You should give not grudgingly or out of necessity; do not withhold from your family to give to the church; but, it does not take priority. You cannot get through life without acquiring some possessions and some material things. Furthermore, it is perfectly proper and right to enjoy these things. Trust in the living God who gives us richly all things to enjoy.

We all purchase, we all buy things. Again, this is a universal example; it is a priority issue. Present active participle of κατέχω = to hold in a firm grasp, to have in full and secure possession; to have clear title to. This is combined with the negative μή. This does not mean that you can only rent; you cannot buy. "I will deny myself for the Lord." This is absolutely wrong; that is not what this verse says. Our activities are not to be consumed with acquiring and holding possessions. Do not let life revolve around the acquisition of things.

"Ladies, you were not born to shop. It is okay to shop for necessities; and even for pleasure; but there are priorities." Do not shop to the exclusion of who you are or what you are in the plan of God. We can live with or without; it does not matter. What the priority is, is what counts.

Vv. 29–30 Summarized

1. Live for the Lord first, even in marriage. Marriage has spiritual overtones. We are mandated to live within the confines of marriage, and there are mandates which is a part of our spiritual responsibility. A man is to be the leader and the authority; and the woman is to be the responder; and we have a responsibility, which first and foremost is our spiritual life. This will have spiritual spill-over. How many hours do you spend in front of television? Our mission is to redeem the time. If we have not had any doctrine on that day, do the doctrine before we turn on the television. Take that opportunity to consider the time that we spend in our lives and how we spend it.

happiness, but that is not what life is all about. Isn't that why we slave in the office? Isn't this why we put aside money for retirement? Isn't this the meaning of TGIF? Isn't this what it is all about? Well, yes and no. That is normal in life. Bobby enjoys golf, and there is nothing wrong with that; but life is a balance, and these things are legitimate. What is a problem is when you put the pursuit of happiness over and above our spiritual lives. If we don't have capacity for all the other things, then we do not have capacity for any other kind of joy. Every moment in our life should bring happiness; we should have the opportunity to serve the Lord, even if we are involved in some legitimate temporal activity. Without the priority of the spiritual life, pleasure and happiness become the all consuming chase.

All the earthly happiness and pleasure is fleeting; capacity from doctrine first and then enjoy. Priorities; the time is shortened. For those who rejoice as though they did not rejoice.

1Cor. 7:30b ...and those rejoicing as not rejoicing,...

So many believers are running around looking for some way to serve God; beating the bushes. Some of the things done in the name of God insofar as production is tragic. What we produce in our souls is divine good. What remains in our souls remained; our possessions fall by the wayside. All of these things: marriage, pleasure, business—they all require time. Time must be set aside for the Lord. Part of the victory of the Angelic Conflict is the husband and wife fighting together side by side.

Do not be enslaved by your sorrow; pleasure and happiness will come to us—don't let it overwhelm you.

1Cor. 7:30c ...and those buying as not possessing,...

The next verse gives the rationale: ...and those using this world as not abusing it; for the form of this world is passing away. This is a summary of what Paul has said. He deals with priorities. You set the priorities; you live in the balance. Legalistic Christianity tells us to exclude the temporal things of our lives; it tells us to hide ourselves away in some monastery; avoid unbelievers. No concept of the fact that we are in the world.

Present active participle of κραιομαι = to make utilize, to employ, to make use of. We do get married, we do feel sorrow, we do feel joy; all of these things are legitimate. What is their status in our lives? There are times when our priorities get mixed up; when one temporal event supercedes our spiritual life. We must employ it from divine viewpoint.

We use and utilize the world; but we do not make full use of it. A derivative is used as the second verb: the present active participle of κατακραιομαι = to make full use of, to make unrestrained use of; to make use of this and this only. Now Paul adds the negative μη, which is the negative. We should not plunge headlong into the world, exclusive of everything else. This includes marriage, which is our primary temporal relationship in life. Everything in life has a priority. Marriage in this life is the top priority. It is not the priority in this life. We are not trying to get all that we can get out of the externals of this life. Our full participation is in our spiritual life. Paul has gone a long way, and did this in a very interesting way, to say one thing: what is your priority in life? Our spiritual life, but not to the exclusion of all other things.

1Cor. 7:31 ...and those using this world as not abusing it; for the form of this world is passing away.

1Cor. 7:31

Sunday 2 July 16, 2006

These statements seems to be contradictory; how can you be one way, and yet, be the other as well. Paul is simply telling us that in the Christian life, we have priorities. This is why Paul uses the word as though (ὡς). You can be married, and still make time in your spiritual life. Paul gives a rationale for all of this. The form of this world is passing away; the rest of the world trembles. For us, the passing away of the world is a great statement; this is a statement which should make us smile. We can still live the life that we live; we can be content in the midst of sorrow and happiness. It begins with the Greek noun σχῆμα = outward appearance, form, shape. This is the shape of things in their present form; the present design; the present construction. At a future moment, the earth and all of the surroundings will be changed; everything that we know in its current design will end. All of these things which we fight every day. Everything as we know it will be gone. It passes away. The present form of this world will pass away. 2Peter 3:7 reads: it will pass away in a malestream of intense heat; it will become nothing. In the end, it is meaningless to preserve this world, because it will be gone. Time, material things, finite thinking will all be gone. All these aspects which we now utilize. Passing away is the present active indicative of παρᾶγω = to pass by, to lead away. Present tense means that it does pass away now and continuing in that direction. This is an action in progress; progressive present. It is not an end event; it is a process. It will wind down to its inevitable end. Paul is not talking about the end; but that is not his focus. Eternity means no time; there will be no minutes, hours, days or years. Bobby thinks that we will be aware of time; but it will not be a limitation. We are all bound by time; we wear a watch; we must go to bed by a certain time; get to work by a certain time. Time is the greatest constraint that we have in life. Not your parents, boss or teacher. If you want to get mad at someone, get mad at seconds, hours and days. This is a limiting factor to our existence. Not only are we limited, but that limitation is shortened. We even have less time. Time, at some point, will cease to exist. There will be no limiting factor of time as we live under today. The universe will be recreated in an entirely different form. Different from the σχῆμα of today. There will be a new σχῆμα. Paul does not use the future tense, where he looks at what will happen; but he looks at our moments in time right now and how we progress to the end.

Paul wants to connect our life now to our eternal future. Time constraints as versus no more time constraints. But what we do under time constraints is related to our eternal future. This phrase reinforces that nothing in this world is permanent. Every moment is the passing of time; and it will pass away eventually. The present tense here rather than the future reveals the scheme in which we live and the scheme in which we will live. The form of this world will not last long as compared to eternity. Our grabbing for pleasure is pointless; all the wealth that we accumulate does not go with us. It stays here. It will be destroyed. This is the way that we must think; it is the way we must live. It is thinking and living in the light of eternity. This puts our life in perspective.

Summary

1. Every believer has just so much time in this life. For us, this has even a greater impact. We have only so much impact in this life.
2. We must utilize the time which God has given us properly in the way that God has given to us to use. God's grace is fantastic; to whom much is given, much is expected. God has set up a purpose in this life for us; greater than anything that we could ever know. We must utilize the time which God has given us. We think of the time constraints of this life is being confining; but these constraints give us impetus and momentum.
3. We should never be married to the things of this world. They are temporary and fleeting. They will end.
4. We do not use them or employ the things of this world as if they are the only thing; in fact, they are nothing. They are part of our lives; but they are nothing in the light of eternity. Give it some perspective.
5. The things of this world are incidental to our focus on our spiritual life and on our eternal future. Don't go overboard with this. The things of this life are important for many reasons. No doubt we have heard, get all you can in life, because there is nothing afterwards. That is the epitome of human viewpoint. Everything comes after this life for the believer. We can have it all and we can have it all; in time and in eternity. We don't retreat from life and wait for the end; nor do we grab everything that we can in life. Legalism versus hedonism. Jesus Christ enjoyed friends, a glass of wine; and He had the greatest capacity for life ever. He needed to demonstrate this. David enjoyed life; sometimes he mixed up his priorities. Moses probably enjoyed life as well. Paul was a man of tremendous capacity. Paul even died once and was necessitated. He was stoned to death. He was also shipwrecked, jailed, etc. He saw the failure of many men who he trained; he dealt with a butt-load of goofy Christians. If these great believers can do so, can't we as well? We have a mission: to advance spiritually and to serve the Lord for our life.

The world is passing away is about balance and priorities. Enjoy life; be content in life; you get the capacity to do so in our priorities. So often, the conflict that we have in life is between legitimate things in life. Marriage is such a great example of this conflict of vision—the vision of divine viewpoint vs. human viewpoint. Part of God's plan and part of time. Some people ask, will I be married in eternity? Bobby would assume that what the Lord does is the greatest status that we can imagine. Don't worry about this; just deal with what you have on earth. Paul is not trying to put believers under some restriction not to marry, although it may seem that way. Do not distort the great activities of our lives by forgetting to live in the light of eternity. One of the greatest distortion of the idea that we live our lives in the light of eternity came a century and a half after Paul was beheaded: monasticism. Men lived in caves in the desert and they attempted ot entirely separate themselves from the rest of the world; and they took vows not to marry. Didn't Paul say, "Don't get married"? This is a complete distortion. These men are not holier than anyone else; they are often filled with mental attitude sins. This is a false application of the world passing away. It is unbalanced and discounts our temporal life in this world.

The message of the world passing away is a message of priorities. There is only the production of the spirit-filled believer. It is the production of divine good. This is the only thing which lasts. That is what will be rewarded at the Judgment Seat of Christ. Everything else will be burned up, including human good.

The priority has to be the spiritual life. We have nothing to show for it forever. Some of us see ourselves as accomplishing so much; as having lots of money and as have accomplished some good deeds in this world. But where is it in eternity? What good is it, if these things are gone forever. What are you accomplishing as divine good by the filling of the Holy Spirit. That is what lasts; that is what rewards are for in heaven. 60 years here; no time in heaven. The only permanent aspect of our lives is the production of the spirit-filled believer.

It may be wiser in the present distress that we do not marry, even though marriage is divinely ordained. However, this means extra-responsibility and time is put at even a greater premium, as marriage requires time. Always bear in mind what the Lord has for us to do in this life. How much time do you spend in legitimate pursuits in this life as compared to the time spent for God. It is simple. What is your priority.

1Cor. 7:31 ...and those using this world as not abusing it; for the form of this world is passing away.

1Cor. 7:32

Lesson #381

Wednesday July 19, 2006

In California at this time (Mom's 80th birthday).

The next 4 verses deal with the advantages of being single, even if you don't think that there are any. This is going to be a time and priority issue. Bobby reads the verses, with sparse commentary. This is not an anti-marriage message by Paul, because there is no such thing in all of Scripture.

This is a message of caution; caution to the unmarried due to reasons of distress. This is also a message of priorities; temporal life and human viewpoint vs divine viewpoint and divine good and service to the Lord and our eternal future. These two points are critical. These few verses tells us why Paul says that a few believers should be unmarried. Paul would prefer that all of those who are unmarried stay that way.

There are 3 reasons for this:

1. The increased suffering that marriage can bring; there is a time to get married and a time not to. When you are under great stress, either personally or nationally, it is better to avoid marriage.
2. That which has eternal value has priority over that which is passing away.
3. Comparative time frames which are needed when you are married, as versus not being married.

Being single is being free from a great many responsibilities. Everyone has responsibilities in life; being single does not mean you are free and clear of all responsibilities. Αμεριμνος is being free of some responsibilities. Here we are focused on one primary responsibility. They include service to the Lord, but they also include the marital state. In this context, this is freedom from marital concerns, which is one of the greatest responsibilities of life. Marriage includes children and there is no greater temporal responsibility in life. The single believer is free of domestic encumbrance. If you're married, you have marital responsibilities. You have to spend all of that time with your spouse making your marriage work; that is a part of your corporate witness before God. This leaves you less time for the other aspects of your spiritual growth. Spiritual things take priority in all cases. Concern is the present active indicative of the verb μεριμνω, which is the verbal cognate of the noun just given; except without the alpha prefix. The alpha prefix is the negation of the word. The noun doesn't just mean what the verb means, but the negative of the verb. These two terms are juxtaposed, it indicates the freedom from concern is not freedom from all concern and responsibility.

Even if you work long hours, you still have a responsibility toward your wife and children; and the first priority is toward spiritual things. The single person obviously has fewer worries in this area. The one not providing for his family is worse than an infidel. When a single person has limited employment, or works too many hours, this has no affect on a wife or child.

The obvious conclusion is that the single person has more time to spend on spiritual things. The married person has less time to serve the Lord, but that is still a part of their obligation. The married person has more responsibility, which is why you should remain unmarried.

Now we need to understand what it means to please; which is the aorist active subjunctive of αρεσκω, which means to please, to accommodate; to serve, which is how we should understand it here. If you begin to glorify God by learning doctrine, you will automatically begin to serve the Lord utilizing your spiritual gift. The further you advance, the more you serve. The unmarried person has more time to serve. Everyone has time to grow. As you serve, while filled with the Holy Spirit, you are producing divine good and you are accumulating eternal rewards. All of this is summarized by the word αρεσκω. The subjunctive mood means there is some contingency. Maybe you will and maybe you won't follow Paul's advice and counsel here. The subjunctive mood fits the advice exactly.

If one of these 3 circumstances fit our lives as single, then we need to heed Paul's advice. Right now, this is a subjunctive mood for singles. If he is under duress, if he has the time, he may choose to serve God in a more concentrated way. Neither option is wrong; both options are okay. Paul is not saying, marriage is a bad thing; he is simply saying that the circumstances might not be right.

All believers are mandated to advance; no one has any excuse not to. Believers must advance spiritually; that is our mandated responsibility; and because we advance, we can then glorify God by applying doctrine. We think divine viewpoint first and then it comes out in our actions. Glorify God in our bodies.

A snapshot of service: there are the married and unmarried; the time available to the unmarried is perhaps half that of the married believer. So it is better not to get married at this time. Problems in Corinth; under duress as a believers in Jesus Christ. Better not to get married. The married person still has the responsibility to serve and does so. There is always this added responsibility factor with the married. It takes time.

A lot of young people lived in Berachah barracks all of a sudden. Incredible place to be. They had the option at that point as to how to serve the Lord. They had decisions of what to do. Some became pastors and evangelists; some just went on. Some got married and still served the Lord, but with fewer options. It is not a matter of right or wrong; it is a matter of narrowing the decisions.

One who is married understands that he must please his wife. Leadership of the man. Bobby will cover these qualities at some point in time. A wife pleases her husband by being a responder.

1Cor. 7:32 But I desire you to be without care. The unmarried one cares for the things of the Lord, how to please the Lord;

Summary of v. 33

1. The things of this world are the added areas of responsibility of domestic life.
2. But the things of this world are not his only area of responsibility.
3. Divided does not mean to be inordinately or excessively involved in the things of this world.
4. Divided simply means split time; it is a priority thing.
5. Split time still requires priorities and the use of that time. In fact, divided time means that setting priorities are even more important. Spiritual life always comes first.
6. For example, you don't become concerned with chasing the almighty dollar using the excuse of supporting your wife and family. This is one responsibility, but a distortion of it.
7. Another example: it is easy to become concerned with hobbies and leisure and all those things that you like to do apart from work. You cannot simply cite family togetherness. It is great to spend time together, but never instead of spiritual growth. You can't fake God out here.

8. The things of this world are legitimate and necessary; we're in the world, but not of the world.
9. Even if we are married, we cannot forget the ultimate priority, which is spiritual growth. Recognize that getting married means that you are taking on great responsibilities. We become responsible for their little souls and their growing up.
10. The married person cannot avoid or shirk familial responsibilities. Spiritual life first, but no neglect of the family or the spouse.
11. So, for the married person, time for the service to the Lord is abbreviated, in comparison to the time available to the unmarried. However, marriage is not wrong.

Not being married means that you can have a more concentrated service in something else.

1Cor. 7:33 but the one marrying cares for the things of the world, how to please the wife.

Lesson #382

Thursday July 20, 2006

In California (Mom's birthday); Bobby is already studying chapter 8, and the end is near.

Bobby's been asked on several occasions about the Middle East; Bobby thinks the Muslims are trying to kill the Jews and the Jews are defending themselves.

Alan Aruba "Warming Signs" is his publication, July 19th: It's always Israel's fault. His thinking is, Satan is always anti-Semitic. We live in a world when hijackers can commandeer planes, and within hours, hear rumors that this was Jewish terrorists. Israel is thought to be an occupier because there are always terrorists in their jails. No UN division of Israel rights; but one for Palestine. A 1947 agreement still being protested, and it is a meeting for speeches denouncing the existence of Israel, all paid for by the UN. For a long time, the UN was on record calling Zionism racism. No other nation has been the object of so much UN condemnation. Gaza was a small strip that Israel even removed its people from. Hoped to cede Gaza to the Palestinians, which ended up with the election of Hamas to power, which is solely dedicated to destroying Israel. Only Israel in that area have anything close to a democratic state. The UN has been no use to Israel with regards to the threats which it has faced over the years, and only real friend to Israel is the US. Israelis have tried everything that they could do to mollify Arab demands. Lessons of holocaust; you cannot negotiate with people who want to kill you.

Are we near the rapture and the beginning of the Tribulation? There must be a conflagration around the nation Israel in the end times. This is something that we ought to be able to answer. There are no events which come before the Tribulation, apart from the Rapture. Israel has been in war after war in never-ending wars in the Middle East, and this will never be resolved until the Lord returns. All we can do is support Israel and their right to exist.

Looks like I screwed up and put this in the wrong place?

The end of chapter 7 is near; Bobby has already begun to study chapter 8. Bobby's been asked several times about the Middle East. The Muslims are trying to kill the Jews and the Jews are trying to defend themselves.

Warning signs by Arnold Karuba. It is always Israel's fault. Satan is still an anti-Semite. Within hours of 9/11, Jews are blamed for destroying the twin towers. UN division for Palestinian rights; but none for Israel to even exist. Tons of resolutions about Palestinians from the UN. They traded Gaza for peace; no gratefulness for Israel's withdraw, but the election of Hamas, who want to destroy Israel. Dugurt was sent from the UN and has done this for a long time and has never found a Palestinian guilty of anything. Israel is thought to be occupying land they took, even though 4 nations attacked them, and they defeated them and kept some of the land. You cannot negotiate with people who want to kill you.

In Bobby's opinion, Israel has no choice but to fight; enemies of Israel are implacable all around them. Christians get questions, when there are difficulties between Israel and her neighbors. However, there are no events which take place prior to the beginning of the Tirb. Israel has been at war in 1947, 1967, 1973, 1990 are years that Israel has had to fight for its own existence.

Currently examining the advantages of a single person serving the Lord. It is a matter of the time factor; time and priority. We glorify God by our thinking and actions; then by divine viewpoint; and then by fulfilling our service to Him. We serve Him when we glorify Him. This is an appeal to remain unmarried if you are unmarried at this time. The second appeal is, the time has been shortened; use the time available to devote to that which has eternal value; everything else will pass away to naught. Being married gives you even less time to serve. The unmarried is responsible for the things which belong to the Lord.

The greater opportunity for concentrated service belongs to the person who is single and unencumbered. This does not mean that the married person has no such responsibility. Being married does not free you from your spiritual gift.

1Cor. 7:31 and those using this world as not abusing it; for the mode of this world is passing away.

1Cor. 7:32 But I desire you to be without care. The unmarried one cares for the things of the Lord, how to please the Lord;

v. 33 addresses the married ones; a married person is concerned for pleasing his wife. This is the reverse of the previous phrase about the unmarried man. The things of this world simply refer to the additional responsibilities which are a part of the married man's life. However, they are not his only responsibility. He must divide or split his time. The married man must set time aside for his wife and for spiritual things. He must prioritize his time. He cannot neglect one for the other. The woman thinks that she has priority, and she does.

As a married couple gets older and the children get older, they begin to retire from professions and jobs, and they begin to have more time for concentrated service outside the home. You should be wiser when you are older and you should have more time. Therefore, it is something to look forward to; to serve the Lord in a more concentrated way. Married men do choose concentrated service, and they choose this all the time; most pastors are married. However, it can cause some problems for his domestic responsibilities. The woman needs to recognize this pattern as much as he does. The spiritual aspect of married life must not be neglected. You must teach your children doctrine. It is important for the man to marry a woman of like mind, so she knows what to do as a part of the team. The woman can either be a great help or a distraction. The domestic responsibility of the husband is to please the wife. Please is the aorist active subjunctive of ἀρῖσκω which can mean to serve. Subjunctive means he makes a choice to or not to.

Unmarried have some responsibilities, but it is not the same; nor as concentrated for the most part. This word refers to all aspects of life; safety, security, time, leadership; it takes time, thought and effort to be a leader. Leadership is a learned skill. This is why the military has class after class on leadership. You cannot exist without it.

Qualities of Leadership for Men

1. Maturity. The ability to make wise decisions based upon doctrine that elicit confidence in the husband and in his judgment.
2. Flexibility. This is making timely and appropriate changes when necessary. Leadership does not mean that you are closed minded. Masculinity and leadership are not threatened if the wife sees a better way of doing things. Listen to the troops. No iron, inflexible discipline. If you don't listen to your wife, you will become detached from her; you will lose touch.
3. Endurance. The ability to weather the repeated storms described in Gen. 3:16; men will be challenged as leaders. Her desire is to usurp the authority of the husband.
4. Decisiveness. This is the sound doctrinal judgment to make good decisions at the proper time. This is application when necessary. As a leader, we will get bombarded, but sometimes you have to stick to a right decision. Forget being wishy washy. Know if your decision is good, and then stick by it.
5. Poise. Confident control of emotions under adverse conditions. Leaders don't lose it; leaders don't explode; leaders don't go berserk. As soon as they do, they have lost leadership. It is our relaxed mental attitude which keep us under control.
6. Justice. Fair treatment of those in the family. Don't be arbitrary or tyrannical with your wife. When you put these characteristics together, you get the leader.
7. Assertiveness; you must take charge when necessary; justly and appropriately. Taking charge when necessary; justly and appropriately at the right time. Persevering under pressure. The doctrinally oriented wife responds to assertiveness; she admires it; she responds to it, as it is combined with the other characteristics. ‘

8. Compassion; a leader must be compassionate; the opposite of being a tyrant. Nothing wrong with a little sensitivity unless it ruins your life. You must understand the weaknesses and strengths of the wife and allow for them, as no one is perfect. The leader takes this into consideration.
9. A sense of humor. Lighten up. Be able to laugh; be able to critique your own shortcomings; laugh about it now and again. If the wife laughs at some minor things, not to worry. Handle some problems with humor; it defused tension.
10. Humility; grace orientation.
11. All of these qualities combine in a husband leader; they are all necessary. We are mandated as husbands to be a leader. This is what we have been mandated to be.

You cannot fulfill this obligation unless you have these qualities. You get these from doctrine in the soul. Ladies, you take in doctrine, and you will respond to these characteristics. In the military, these qualities do not automatically happen; they have to be drummed into you. You are under pressure at all times. You must be able to fulfill your responsibilities when under pressure. It is satisfying to lead appropriately. The wife will look at you and appreciate you and respond and think you are wonderful. This is half of our responsibilities. We must be able to be a leader, which requires time; and function in the spiritual life.

1Cor. 7:33 but the one marrying cares for the things of the world, how to please the wife.

1Cor. 7:

Lesson #383

Sunday 1 July 23, 2006

In California (mom's 80th birthday)

1Cor. 7:32: I want you to be free from concern... . Day after day we get up and we begin to think that there is something that we can worry about. And there are the greater problems which are with us every single day. "Don't just tell me to be free from concern; tell me how I can be free from concern." Worry is common to the entire human race; everyone faces some form of worry. Sometimes worry is psychological; sometimes general fears which are founded or unfounded; and it does ruin your peace of mind. We are mandated not to worry; worry destroys our fellowship with the Holy Spirit. This destroys our ability to function in the spiritual life. Worry is destructive to our spiritual life. Our anxieties and worries are problems, not the things that we worry about.

Human wisdom is, change your associations, circumstances, situations; and that makes good sense; it is conventional wisdom, and sometimes, that solves the problem temporarily. As a believer in Jesus Christ, we have a different way to get rid of worry rather than changing our circumstances; we have other options rather than to be. We are as 1Peter 5:7: Casting all your anxieties on the Lord for His cares for you. That is the antidote to any anxiety in life. This depends upon us and our volition. This depends upon our spiritual advance. We must mature in the spiritual life. What is not meaningless is, He cares for us. God cures worry through His word. That is the cure for anxiety. Anxiety is never fully removed by a change of circumstances; sharing the happiness of God is a problem solving device. Maturity is involved here. Freedom from worry is grow and we will begin to fulfill this verse. We have problem solving devices, so we need to use them.

This first phrase does not mean freedom from worry. That is not where this verse goes. The first phrase has a different meaning than being free from all worry. It is not a general reference to being free from all the cares of life. It has a more specific meaning, and it means that we are free from marital concerns. For some, this is important; that really gets me where I want to be. However, the principle is the same.

However, here we are talking about being free from the responsibilities of marriage; this is talking about being single. This is advice from the Apostle Paul; if unmarried, stay unmarried. Here, this means you are free from concern from marital obligations; then just don't get married. That is even a simpler solution; this means you just don't get married. Any time advice is given, it requires a choice. Paul is giving advice here. You must decide whether to marry or not. Paul doesn't just give advice without providing a reason to take it. Scripture never gives us advice without also giving us a rationale. Paul now will state reasons why we should take his advice.

We all have a divine plan for our lives. Regardless of our status, we have a plan that is fulfilled in us. The things which belong to the Lord are his plan. The single believer has more time to serve the Lord, which is what these next two verses say.

A married person has divided interests; how can he please the wife; how can he please God. He serves inside and outside marriage. He cannot serve God with a single-minded purpose. He must please his wife by fulfilling certain responsibilities. Every married man has certain responsibilities. His time is divided.

What responsibilities does the married man have? All aspects of the life: material provisions, safety, security, protection, physical love, etc. He has a God-given role as an initiator in marriage. Leadership is not innate. We are designated as leaders, but we are not born as leaders. No 2nd Lieutenant is automatically a leader; he has to be trained. Training is required to be a leader. He is designated as a leader in marriage. Leadership is a learned skill which involves the development of certain leadership qualities in the soul. That is what makes a person a leader. This is our training. Of course, we get, OJT (on the job training).

Qualities of the husband-leader include the following ten:

These are not individual qualities; they come in a package; do not isolate on one; without all of them, you are not a leader.

1. Maturity, a critical aspect for any leader; the ability of the husband to make wise decisions from doctrine in the soul, which elicit confidence in the wife in his judgement and integrity.

2. Flexibility. You must be able to make timely and appropriate changes when necessary. You cannot be closed minded or single-minded about your wife. Your leadership is not threatened when your wife sees a better way of doing things. Otherwise, you become detached and out of touch with your subordinate. A leader in the military must be in touch with the troops. He must know what they feel. You cannot simply ignore the troops. It is a deadly mistake in marriage when a person does not listen to the other. You don't always cave into the woman; that is not leadership also. One style of leadership is democratic (to a point). People today respond better to democratic leadership than to autocratic.
3. Assertiveness. Taking charge when necessary. This rules out timidity. You take charge when necessary, justly and appropriately, properly utilizing your God-given authority, and persevering under pressure. A doctrinally oriented wife recognizes this and accepts this. She knows you are just.
4. Endurance. The leader's ability to weather repeated storms described in Gen. 3:16; the wife's desire is for her husband, which is the desire to usurp his authority. This is not sex. Every wife will attempt to usurp the husband's authority. That is a woman's weakness. A man needs patience and dependability; endurance as a leader. You cannot abdicate your role as a leader. Your leadership must be tempered with graciousness. The assertive side and the gracious side. You have the authority; you just need to know how to wield this authority.
5. Justice; you must be just as a leader; you must not be arbitrary or tyrannical toward your wife. You do not overcome opposition by being brutal, tyrannical or arbitrary. You must be trained to be a leader.
6. Compassion, which is sometimes tough, when you face a load of Gen. 3:16; sensitivity to the feelings, the interests and well-being of our wife. Otherwise, she will get the picture that you don't care. In the military field, if the troops don't think the leader cares about them, then they will no longer follow him.
7. Poise; you must exhibit poise. Confident control of emotions under adverse conditions. You cannot give into emotionalism. You need to think divine viewpoint. A relaxed mental attitude is moving toward the penthouse of the edification complex. This is your maturity building. This comes from poise; it is poise.
8. Decisive. Bobby is going back and forth between autocracy and democracy. You must have doctrine in your soul to make good doctrinal decisions. Make good decisions and stick to them. Indecision does not elicit confidence from your wife; eventually, she will feel contempt.
9. A sense of humor. Sometimes you need to lighten up; you need to be able to laugh at yourself and your shortcomings; and handle some problems in your marriage with humor. Humor diffuses conflict.
10. Humility. You must always be willing to learn doctrine. You must always have a gracious attitude. You continue to take in doctrine on a daily basis; no more important characteristic than being grace-oriented.

Now we know what we should be. All these qualities combine to make a great husband leader. These are learned and applied from the doctrine resident in your soul. These characteristics do please the wife. As a leader, this allows the wife to find her place, which is the responder. Nothing is more beautiful than the husband-leader and the responder. Some ladies have never seen this, and it is hard for them to imagine. Their souls are stuck on Gen. 3:16 rebellion. The qualities of a responder must also be learned. We have God-given roles in marriage.

Married versus unmarried; one must please the Lord only; the other must please the Lord and his wife. These are not mutually exclusive. What holds true for the married or unmarried man also is true for the married or unmarried woman.

1Cor. 7:32 But I desire you to be without care. The unmarried one cares for the things of the Lord, how to please the Lord;

1Cor. 7:33 but the one marrying cares for the things of the world, how to please the wife.

1Cor. 7:34

Lesson #384

Sunday 2 July 23, 2006

In California

We are dealing with the unmarried man and his focus in life. He can have a concentrated effort in the area of service. In v. 34, we go to the unmarried woman. There is an extra phrase in v. 34 which is not found back in v. 33: That she may be holy in body and spirit. This does not mean that she is holier than the unmarried man or better than the married woman. This is simply a more direct and clear-cut way of indicating dedication and concentration on spiritual life. There are no domestic responsibilities, but no domestic responsibilities. We have a division of body and spirit. Body refers back to 1Cor. 6:20. This is true of every person, as we are all to glorify God in our bodies.

Πνευμα has many meanings and applications. It can refer to the Holy Spirit, it can refer to the immaterial part of the human being. In context here, it is in contrast to the in body phrase. Body and spirit refer to two different aspects of a person. Body we can feel, touch and see; but the spirit is that which is incorporeal. It cannot be seen or touched, but nonetheless real. Once and awhile spirit and soul are interchangeable.

Operation Z is one of the best summaries of the spiritual life. It begins with the pastor-teacher and with the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit makes the information real to our human spirit. We have a soul and a body, the corporeal and the incorporeal. Every person has this; soul life imputed to the body when we emerge. When we are reborn, we have a spirit as well. We regain the spirit when we are regenerated. What is the importance of this human spirit? It is the way that we are able to understand spiritual things. ἐπίγνωσις in the right lobe of the soul means that we have doctrine which can be applied. This whole thing, spirit and soul, left and right lobe, are encompassed by this one word spirit. Spirit refers to the soul and spirit as a package. The unmarried woman has more time for her time with the Lord. We are not superior to the married person, but we have more time. The married person has a dual purpose and their time is divided. The married woman has a different area of service. She is half of a corporate witness.

The single woman and single man both have more time in order to serve God; and there is a matter of volition as well. The single person can have a more concentrated service, but it requires volition for them. You cannot be a husband leader or a wife-response without spiritual advance.

In single status, a woman is free of domestic encumbrance to focus more fully on the Lord rather than on a husband. She has greater time for prayer, witnessing, worship, help (which could include other family members like aging parents) and other gifted areas. Rom. 12:12–13: Rejoice in hope, be patient in tribulation, be constant in prayer. Contribute to the needs of the saints and seek to show hospitality. Bobby recalls Mae Walker who had concentrated time to pray for the pastor and for missions and for individuals. She had been widowed for awhile, and her impact was great. She was able to give concentrated service. She did not have a domestic life. Her devotion to prayer was a gift. We are mandated to pray without ceasing. This means to pray consistently.

The responder can pray consistently, they can contribute to the needs of the saints. Gifts are given based upon who we are. Our spiritual gifts fit us. Some fit women better than they fit men. There is a woman who is devoted to the care of Bob at this time. 24/7 she takes care of Bob. She has unencumbered time with no domestic life. She is uniquely suited to do what she does. This is God's provision for Bob and for Bobby. Practicing hospitality: social responsibility toward like-minded believers.

I think Bobby strayed away from these points. Having a gift of being single does not mean that you will be single all of your life. This is simply a period of time. Those in concentrated service do not have to worry about pleasing the husband or wife.

Leadership is learned; responsiveness is learned. A woman will resist her husband's authority. The woman must respond to the husband's authority; she must become authority orientated. Nothing is more beautiful than a woman who responds to her husband's authority. A man may have to show tough love, but this is not the same as brutal. A husband has to maintain his authority in the midst of confrontation. No wife is benefitted by a man who just rolls over and lets his wife have her way.

One last point about v. 34: this does not mean the unmarried are superior to the married. The married can also serve in ways that the unmarried cannot.

Married believers should not look upon the unmarried believer as a loser. We are all a part of the body of Christ. The married has no right to look down their nose at the unmarried. Same for women like Mae Walker; there is no reason to think of her as less than a person. Do not ever feel sorry for someone because they do not have this or that aspect of their life that you have. We all have a purpose in the plan of God. Anyone who takes in doctrine and advances to maturity cannot be classified as a loser.

1Cor. 7:34 The wife and the virgin are different. The unmarried one cares for the things of the Lord, that she be holy in both body and spirit. But the married one cares for the things of the world, how to please the husband.

1Cor. 7:35 And I say this for your advantage, not that I put a snare before you, but for the fitting thing, and waiting on the Lord without distraction.

1Cor. 7:32–35 Lesson #385 Thursday July 27, 2006

We are never freed from all concern; we must always be concerned with pleasing the Lord, with our obligations, etc. The one who frees himself from all obligations in life...

Paul is going to break down the beneficiaries: the married man, the single man, the married woman and the single woman.

even unmarried men have obligations in life. No matter what, they still have obligations. They must make a living; they must survive. They have the least, so Paul addresses him first. With the time that you have, spend that time pleasing the Lord. Pleasing the Lord is not the exclusive responsibility of the single man. The single person can spend more time than most when it comes to serving God. There are many demands of life that he does not face.

To the unmarried man, Paul says, "Please God without the encumbrance of married life."

1Cor. 7:32 But I desire you to be without care. The unmarried one cares for the things of the Lord, how to please the Lord;

The man learns leadership as a single man and he learns to apply it as a married man. Leadership is part of his service to God in marriage. Even if his wife does not respond to his leadership, he must lead anyway. He will lose his way in his domestic obligation apart from his own leadership. The wife may not please him. He has an obligation to his wife as married, which leaves him less time to serve than a single man has. He must divide his time between his wife and the Lord. He now has his marching orders in life.

1Cor. 7:33 but the one marrying cares for the things of the world, how to please the wife.

Paul gives advice next to the unmarried woman—there is really no difference between this advice and Paul's advice to the unmarried man. GB Adams apparently died, and she had been married, but her husband died 30 years ago. She chose to remain unmarried. She was a very attractive woman and a former model. One of her greatest joys was to sit in Berachah and take in doctrine. There is a plan for our life; and it may or may not include marriage.

The unmarried woman must remember her concentrated service. The married woman must shoulder the responsibility of pleasing her husband (as he must please her). Her time obligation in every area of domestic life—she must be a responder to her husband’s love and leadership.

The man is not superior to the woman; but he has a God-given role of leadership. He was built to lead and she was built to respond. She is a responder. She is to exercise respect; authority-orientation. Day after day, she rubs elbows with the person whose authority she would like to usurp; that is her inclination. Her desire is for her husband, yet he will rule over her.

The husband is not to mis-use and abuse his wife, but to lead her, and she is to respond. If the man provides no love and no leadership—and this is sometimes the case—the married woman still has a response toward him, even if it is a matter of responding to doctrine in the soul. There is no relief for the married man or woman in the exercise of their spiritual gift; they still have the added responsibilities of their marriage. This is the spiritual life; this is spiritual advance.

1Cor. 7:34 The wife and the virgin are different. The unmarried one cares for the things of the Lord, that she be holy in both body and spirit. But the married one cares for the things of the world, how to please the husband.

Συμφορος = advantage, profit, benefit. There is this advantage to being single; there are fewer obligations and more time to devote to other obligations. The object of Paul’s advice is to disclose the advantage of those who are single without disparaging those who are married.

Ουχ ινα = not that. This introduces a negative purpose clause. Paul does not want to restrain or throw over (the aorist active subjunctive of επιβαλλω = to throw over, to overthrow). What is it that he is to throw over them? Βρωκον = noose. This is a metaphorical use of βρωκον. This is like a halter for a horse; you guide the horse with the restraining rope. My purpose is not to capture you; not to restrain your freedom; this is advice that he is giving. Paul is not trying to contrast virginity as seemly with marriage as unseemly. This must be taken into account in its entire context. Paul is not disparaging marriage by giving this advice. We are just as valuable to the Lord, albeit in a different direction; and there is just as much opportunity to please the Lord in what we do. The marriage institution is a corporate witness. Marriage is part of our service; just in a different direction. It is the believer’s choice to marry or to not marry; that is a responsibility before the Lord. We must be certain of our circumstance. We must be certain of whom we marry. Paul is not trying to play God or interfere with the domestic lives of the Corinthians. They must know that they are free to serve the Lord in the life that they lead. There is no moral obligation involved in remaining single. There is no additional holiness in being single. Paul is going to give the single people in the Corinthian church a good reason for being single.

Being single is an option, and it is an option to consider. Paul is generally saying, “If you are single, then evaluate your situation. Can you support a wife? Do you know anyone worth marrying?” Don’t panic. Don’t think if you are over 21 you must rush into something.

It is God's will for many believers to be married. Certain believers cannot function in their particular service to the Lord. Staying single is a viable option; at least for a time. This verse promotes what is seemly. We don't use the term seemly anymore, so it doesn't have a lot of meaning for us. The Greek work is ευσχάεμον = that which is noble. Paul is exalting that which is noble. There is a nobility in that. This is not to compare degrees of nobility between the married and the unmarried.

There can be a nobility when a believer chooses to remain single; Paul is promoting that which is noble for the single believer. Paul calls this nobility undistracted devotion to the Lord. This undistracted devotion is easier for the single believer; this is in the time of one's service.

The Greek word is απερισπαστος = without distraction. The alpha prefix means without. There is no distraction of other temporal demands. Then the adjective ευπαραδρων = devotion, one who sits by; someone who constantly attends to. There is a contrast which is suggested, and there is the illustration of Mary and Martha in Luke 10:39–42: this is not the Mary and Martha who went to the tomb; but two women probably in Samaria. One learned at the feet of Jesus Christ. Mary was right there at the Lord's feet; Martha is distracted with all of her preparations. She extended hospitality to our Lord, getting things perfect for our Lord. Luke 10:38–42: While they were traveling, He entered a village, and a woman named Martha welcomed Him into her home. She had a sister named Mary, who also sat at the Lord's feet and was listening to what He said. But Martha was distracted by her many tasks, and she came up and asked, "Lord, don't You care that my sister has left me to serve alone? So tell her to give me a hand." The Lord answered her, "Martha, Martha, you are worried and upset about many things, but one thing is necessary. Mary has made the right choice, and it will not be taken away from her." Martha is upset that her sister did not choose her way of service. What she is doing is service, and normally, it would be very nice for Mary to help out Martha; but this is a priorities issue. Martha does not have the time to sit as Mary can. She has a legitimate obligation here; but no legitimate reason to get angry. She has some responsibilities which takes from her time. That is the lot of the married woman. Mary had the opportunity for a concentrated time with the Lord. There might be children, a husband or wife which take from our time; and for that reason, we must fulfill both obligations. Mary and Martha could represent all of us. Mary is learning doctrine; Martha's situation should never cause resentment. The distinction is between a life divided between many cares and another life with a single purpose—to take in doctrine and serve; no domestic responsibility.

Paul knows that imposed celibacy or vowed celibacy are nooses; and those who take these vows are trapped. Let the Lord lead in married versus unmarried. The single person has the opportunity for a more singular relationship with the Lord. Paul's advice to the single person is already known. The time is not right; there are compensations. There is more concentrated time to please the Lord.

1Cor. 7:35 And I say this for your advantage, not that I put a snare before you, but for the fitting thing, and waiting on the Lord without distraction.

We are beginning a new paragraph, which means a new subject, or the same subject with a different emphasis or direction. This paragraph is about fathers and their daughters and marriage. If we think this is culturally irrelevant, then we would be wrong.

In vv. 36–38 we have the same common thread: marriage is good; remaining single is better. This is a direct challenge to freedom of choice; this is the father determining if a woman can or cannot get married. Most women would read this and say, “I don’t care what daddy thinks; I’ll get married when I want to get married and to whom I choose to marry.” These verses sound like some form of servitude of a daughter to her father, as though she had no free will with regards to her adult-life.

The present distress in Corinth is Roman persecution. Paul is not dealing with doctrinal directives, but with Paul’s opinion. People react in unfortunate ways, often because they only hear what they want to hear. This has been a problem in Berachah, as well as elsewhere.

Some then apply doctrine based upon a truncated position, which is pure subjectivity. It is superimposition of that person’s plan over the plan of God. Selective listening, which affects one’s application of doctrine.

Celibacy is not an absolute; Paul has commended the single life, but that is not a requirement for as many as possible to remain celibate. There are Corinthian fathers with daughters who are of a marriageable age; and they might prohibit marriage altogether because of what is occurring in Corinth. Paul does not want a father to take his daughter aside and say, “See what Paul writes? Therefore, you will not be allowed to marry.” Citing doctrine to win an argument is wrong; citing partial doctrines in order to support your opinions is wrong. Doctrine is not designed for the purpose of controlling or manipulating others. In theology, it is called proof-texting. We take one text out of its context and isolate it and increase its importance over all other Scriptures, and our theology falls right on our interpretation of this passage we have isolated and elevated.

No matter what the circumstances, marriage is okay. It is one of the great blessings in life. Marriage should always be very carefully considered before taking the plunge. Marriage should be very carefully considered. In this passage, the father with doctrinal objectivity, should make the consideration. No matter, if you want to make your own decisions, notice what this Scripture says. A woman may want to think about who would I be married to if dad made this choice. The father with doctrinal objectivity should make the consideration here. Even though fathers no longer make this decision in our society, the point is, there should be some objectivity in choosing to get married.

A second point of application: we must understand these verses in the context of the time in which they are written. There is a cultural aspect in these verses. A single young woman married only with the permission of the father.

Why would Bobby make such a dangerous anti-freedom statement here? A parent knows their children and they could probably do as good of a job as we can in choosing a mate. You might have turned off mom and dad when they say, "Maybe you should reconsider." If you heard this, 99% probably ignored it. You can always say I don't up to the moment that you said I do. Now, of course, there are busy body parents who want to control every aspect of their child's life. However, we are speaking of doctrinal parents. During this time period, it was a normal practice in Jewish and Greek culture. If the father said no, the woman has no recourse. If he refuses to allow her to marry, then she did not get married.

This is a matter of pure objectivity taking place during one of the most emotional decisions that a person can make. This is about making the right decision based upon the facts at hand.

The first clause of this verse begins with a conditional particle  $\epsilon\iota$  = if. Νομιζω = to think, to consider. Present active indicative of νομιζω. This is a 1st class condition; an assumption of truth for the purpose of making a case. Any lawyer makes an assumption of truth upon which he bases his case. Their case is based upon this assumption of truth. Every attorney who goes to trial begins with this premise. One premise leads to the next premise, which leads to the next. Anyone is the indefinite pronoun τις masculine case, singular in number. The subject of this clause is dependent upon this relative pronoun. You must know the gender, number and case of a pronoun in order to understand what is going on. This is in the nominative case, which makes it a subject; it refers to one male; it is an indefinite pronoun, which means that it refers to a man; or to a category of men. It does not refer to a particular person from this context. This, in fact, is not talking just about a father; but it can refer to a male legal guardian. An adopted father, a biological father, a legal guardian could be referenced here.

Considers means to have an opinion or to have a specific conviction about something. The father has made a consideration and it will guide their actions.

Daughter is not the term found here but virgin; since this can refer to any male adult figure who has authority over a young woman. This could even refer to a mother, despite the masculine case; if there is not father figure. Paul is addressing this to the authority figure in a family.

Acting unbecomingly sounds a little contemptible or criminal. This would send up red flags today. Is this man a predator? Present active infinitive of ασχημονεω = to behave dishonorably, to behave disgracefully. This is what he thinks; this is what he has decided; that he is behaving dishonorably toward his daughter. The man is not doing the fair and just thing by his daughter, at least in his own consideration.

It is important to understand this in the time that it was written; the man believes himself to be unfair toward his daughter. He is depriving her of the privilege of marriage which she desires; and, in his own mind, he may be thinking that he is unfair or dishonorably by prohibiting a marriage.

Now Paul speaks of a woman in her full age. We now look at the condition of the virgin daughter. The word for full age is υπερακμοχ = passed the flower of her age; past her prime. She was no longer a teenager; probably in her 20's. And people probably lived into their 40's at this time, so time was of the essence. It was normally to get married at age 19 or 20; and beyond this means a woman is even past her prime. This is a woman old enough to know what she is doing. She is not caught up in the panic of loneliness or in the whims of youth.

The father has come to the conclusion that he must do something; but it is going to be in her best interest, as per the doctrine in his soul, as based upon what Paul has taught him. We are dealing with a more mature child here—a woman old enough to make this decision.

In many cases, the man may think I can't hold her back; she is old enough to make this decision. Behaving unseemly means that he thinks that he has been too hard on her and too careful with the marriage situation.

1Cor. 7:36 But if any man [adopted father, biological father, legal guardian; the decision maker of a household] considers it behaving indecently toward his virgin (if she is beyond her prime, and so it ought to be), let him do what he desires; he does not sin; let them marry.

1Cor. 7:36–37

Sunday 2 July 30, 2006

Even though this is a new topic, this is still related to marriage. This is not just a cultural aberration which we can ignore. This paragraph is about a father and his conviction about his daughter and what to do about it.

In our culture, once you are out of the house, no one is responsible for you except yourself. A woman who is unmarried can never go wrong by listening to her father's advice. In that culture of the time, the father did have veto power over a marriage. Today, that is not the case.

If any man thinks that he is acting unjustly toward his virgin daughter... Mother's should also take heed with regards to this passage, as a mother often has the position of authority today, as so many are unmarried or divorced. ...if she is be of full age [i.e, she is past her prime; she is beyond marriageable age]... Literally, she is past the flower of her age; she is mature; she is old enough to know what she is doing.

A woman in those days still had her family; they still live at home (even though some of us today shudder at the possibility). There is an upside; even though you cannot do what you want to do, date whomever you want to date. Unmarried daughters don't leave and get their own residences in that culture. Only a prostitute or a married woman would leave the parent's home at that time. The next conditional particle is εον = if + the present active subjunctive of ειω = to be. This represents a 3rd class condition. Is she of full age or not? This is only relevant if the woman we are speaking of is past her prime; past her marriageable age. Prior to this, the father might say no to several suitors as they are no good; and he is protecting her. However, now we are speaking of a daughter who is old enough to simply do this herself, even though the father can still call the shots. It ought to happen,... Maybe it will happen and maybe it won't; but it ought to happen. The father is convinced that he has acted unjustly; and if he is convinced, he will act in a certain way. Her marriage may or may not happen, depending upon her situation—her age—and the father's determination. What other situation could make a father feel unjust? How about if she wants to get married? She has fallen in love? She knows the difference between love and pure libido. She is not in a state of panic or pure libido. The application today. The dad looks at this situation and is thinking, should I talk to her or not; should I share with her my own misgivings? This passage means that there is nothing wrong with talking; there is nothing wrong with politely and delicately dealing with this issue.

A father feels that he needs to protect a daughter from herself and from the predator male. If she is flighty, he may feel as though he should protect her. Young people rarely consider today their parent's opinions when it comes to getting married. Maybe young people should consider what their parents think about getting married before getting married. That would be a good application of this passage. Your parents know you better than anyone else; your parents have great wisdom; your parents have doctrine; in any of these situations, we ought to discuss this with our family. The father does not want to be arbitrary toward his daughter; and she is beloved. He is looking out for her interests. If he sees a problem, he could deny the marriage in the 1st century A.D. Today, a father can give good doctrinal advice if he sees disaster looming, a little doctrinal advice is reasonable. If a father is in this position, there is a good chance the daughter is making mistake (or son, even). Children are wise to listen to parents in such matters.

We should not marry a reversionist; we should not marry an unbeliever; a father at that time had the right and duty to stop such a marriage. Today, the father has the duty to state his position. This is not just an emotional decision; this is not all libido. All the facts must be considered. Subjectivity puts blinders on us; someone needs to take these blinders off and show us a wider perspective. Who better than the father with wisdom? Ditto for the mother for her son.

There is real wisdom in parents counseling their children, even when the child is an adult. This is not intrusion; this is not making a decision for them; but this is offering a perspective and principle. Tell them what you think about so and so and why you think that way. The parent must weigh the facts; they must consider the facts. The parent must be ready to speak with facts and with principles and with objectivity. A child who is smart will willingly listen to such advice.

Ποιῶ = to do. Imperative mood; this is a mandate. It is the imperative of permission; it softens things a little. I give you permission to do this; so a choice is allowed. If you are a parent and if you are looking at the match that your child is about to make, what is the criterion for you giving wise and sage advice? Is this man a man of stability and doctrine? That is good advice. How does this man feel about doctrine? Does he believe the same things that you do? When you have children, what is going to happen? Will they be raised as you think they should be raised? Why would you want your child to get hooked up with someone who is unstable? Courtship is the best time and people have their best foot forward; and you should still be able to figure out if they are stable and people who have principles.

Paul wants to make certain of something here. He does not want the father to be bound by his advice. Strange to say, as Paul is a genius and teaching God's Word. However, Paul is giving advice here about the unmarried remaining unmarried; it is okay to marry, even under the present distress. Do not misapply this. It is always okay to marry; and always okay to say no. The father does not sin to allow his daughter to marry.

All doctrine should be applied; not just a few verses which fit your own preconceptions. Doctrine is not designed for you to misapply by leaving some of it out. This is also applicable to the daughter's thought processes today. We have a tendency to focus upon the person who is getting married; but we should focus on the surrounding situation as well. All of it should be taken into account. If you are about to get married, do not seek to neglect your parent's advice; even if they are not particularly wise. They still know you better than anyone else. The other person's looks and money and romanticism are meaningless; are they stable and do they have doctrine. The other stuff is meaningless. A good example of meaninglessness: a man's confidence.

1Cor. 7:36 But if any man [adopted father, biological father, legal guardian; the decision maker of a household] considers it behaving indecently toward his virgin (if she is beyond her prime, and so it ought to be), let him do what he desires; he does not sin; let them marry.

This verse is one of the few times when we can make a decision and either decision is okay. Let them marry; or refuse to allow them to marry—both decisions are okay. Time, stability, circumstances, doctrine, etc. should all be taken into consideration; things a daughter may not really think about. Then a father could refuse to allow them to marry; now a father can say, what about these things? Have you considered these things?

1Cor. 7:36–37

Lesson #388

Wednesday August 2, 2006

Rebound is the epitome of grace; the paradigm of grace; both are completely nonmeritorious; and, therefore, rebound is under attack. God is faith and just to forgive us our sins. We don't have to feel bad about these sins; we might even know that we are going to commit those sins again. However, no matter what, rebound cannot be negated.

We begin with but if. There are two conditions in v. 36: a man feels that he is behaving wrong toward his daughter (virgin); and if she is beyond her prime, or of a full age; or past her prime time for marriage.

But if any man [adopted father, biological father, legal guardian; the decision maker of a household] considers it he is acting unfairly toward his virgin [daughter] (if she is beyond her prime, and so it ought to come to pass), then let him do what he wishes [he wishes to allow her to marry]; he does not sin; let them marry. What Paul is doing is, he wants to be sure that the daughters in Corinth with unmarried daughters do not feel bound to keep their daughters unmarried; this is not an absolute mandate. Their decision must be preceded by consideration of the daughter, the circumstances and the man in question.

Now, even though it is not the case any more that fathers control this aspect of the daughter's life; however, this applies today to the daughter or the son making their own consideration. By way of further application, sons and daughters making their own decision about marriage should give a lot of consideration to parental advice in the matter of their marriage, even though this might be a very unpopular statement. This is the second greatest decision that a person will make in their entire life. A child should take into account the opinion of a doctrinally oriented parent (or even a parent with some reasonable sense). Parents know their children often better than the children know themselves. The parent has dealt with these children in all ages, under all circumstances, and they have seen them grow up and their reactions to everything around them.

A parent needs to be careful about giving advice to the adult child; don't meddle and don't try to control them. Advice is often simply making the issues clear; not making decisions for the child, but making all of the issues clear. Then let the son or daughter make their decision. A parent is only responsible for raising their child; not for making all of their decisions for them. Don't meddle, don't alienate them. Give them principles which may save them from excessive heartache. The child can be any age. Offer advice; especially if they ask for it.

If your son or daughter is marrying an unbeliever, then you must say something. There is disaster there; that is definite. You should always be concerned if the person is an unbeliever, negative toward doctrine, or reversionistic. When the marriage falls apart, then no gloating; no I told you so, no matter how bad their decision is. Encourage and support; the best way being by prayer.

When children make mistakes, remember Rom. 8:28: All things work together for good... In those cases, you have to put your children in the Lord's hands.

1Cor. 7:36 But if any man [adopted father, biological father, legal guardian; the decision maker of a household] considers it he is acting unfairly toward his virgin [daughter] (if she is beyond her prime, and so it ought to come to pass), then let him do what he wishes; he does not sin; let them marry.

We get the other advice in v. 37; and when advice is given, there is a choice to be made. The father in v. 37 believes that he is acting in the best interest of his daughter, to disallow her marriage. If you are not a father; or because this took place 2000 years ago; this does not mean that there is no application to us. You have to be careful; you do not meddle in others' lives; but you can give others doctrine or principle. The father believes that he is acting in the best interest of the daughter.

Paul's overall premise is an attempt to spare the daughter trouble. The father knows his daughter cannot be married in v. 37 cannot get married, even if she is past her marriageable years. The father here needs to be objective about these things. The father is not acting unjustly if he saves his daughter from a multitude of problems.

Stand firm is the perfect active indicative of ἵσταναι = to take a stand. The perfect tense means that the father is convinced not only in a moment of time, but continues to stand convinced of that.

Sometimes, a father is constrained by a contract, which obligates the daughter to be married to a man of a particular family. At the time that this was written, this was case law; it had been through the supreme court and it was very legal.

So, we have the possibility that there is a contract for the daughter to marry; or the daughter has made her own decision to remain unmarried.

Why Should a Father Refuse Consent?

1. Redeeming the time; there are obligations.
2. One has a spiritual gift where concentrated time must be spent exercising one's spiritual gift.
3. A present distress, which was persecution of believers during the time of Paul.

Note what these two verses are doing; why is Bobby saying what things were done in 62 A.D.?

1. These have to do with the options of a father dealing with his daughter.
2. This is an evenhanded and balanced approach.
3. This is an all things considered approach to a very emotional topic in life. All things are considered; not just how many tears the daughter sheds in her bedroom all night long.
4. This is the Bible which inspires objectivity in an area of great subjectivity. People are no different now than they were then. People are subjective, capricious, tyrannical, etc. then as now.
5. How about introducing some doctrinally induced thinking. Today's society is if you want to do it, then do it. Nothing really matters except what you want and what you feel like. This is pure subjectivity.
6. How about a little spiritual common sense? Everyone who ever gets married has a little doubt in the back of their mind. Should I or shouldn't I? Most just sweep this doubt away. They often just focus on what it will do for them. But, in the middle of a lousy relationship, there is a lot of doubt which forms in the back of one's mind. Mostly, consider principle. Just being terribly attracted to someone who is an unbeliever or only claims to be a believer. Don't marry someone that you are not certain whether they are a believer or not. It doesn't hurt to even ask a person what does one do in order to be saved.

7. Do not overlook your doubts; that is objectivity. This does not preclude romance; you can be very romantic and still be objective.

This is not just confined to marriage. Christians as a whole are often blind and subjective in many areas. How often does a believer just focus on one doctrine which simply suits their personal desires. Many Christians focus on God's love to the exclusion of His justice and righteousness. Why does God allow this to happen to me? Using the doctrine of RM/RW as an excuse to divorce the person they don't want. Bob often regretted teaching RM/RW as so many people misapplied it. There is no option to jump out of a marriage simply because you think that you married the wrong person.

The doctrine of the authority of the husband and this is focused on apart from the doctrines of virtue love and leadership. There are times to wield authority with an iron fist; but more often, one wields authority with a velvet glove.

Paul said it is better not to marry; and some think that marriage should not take place. Bobby knows one person who just got married and does not believe in RM/RW. Apply the principles that you don't like just as strongly as you apply the principles that you do like. Do not isolate and fixate on a particular doctrine. Stay balanced with objectivity. Consider all the pertinent doctrines. The moment you are out of fellowship and off balance, you are in trouble.

Heart here is καρδιά; the heart is metabolized doctrine. He is objective; he is applying doctrine from his soul. He has the spiritual tools in his soul. In those days, it was precluding marriage; in these days, it is objective advice based upon principle. Some of us will face these things tomorrow or the next day.

This father is making the application for his daughter as his substitute objectivity. Every time someone jumps into subjectivity, they need a substitute to jump in and make rational choices for them. Common sense and objectivity based on Bible doctrine will rule the day. Our success and failure is based upon the proper application of doctrine.

The only place where true objectivity emanates is the heart; from our souls. Paul is dealing with the most emotional issue we can face and he is saying, be objective; make a good decision for your daughter.

What does it mean to do well for the father?

1. The father is guarding the future for his child.
2. He is fulfilling his duty to his daughter; and by way of application, to his son as well. No doctrine means that you have no judgement. Human viewpoint has taken us in many directions in the realm of marriage and relationships.
3. He is doing for his daughter what is in her best interest using divine viewpoint. You will get great opposition from your children when you do what is right by them.

4. Your children may cry; and it is difficult to see this; but you have to keep your focus on the overall result.
5. Rationale: how can that be wrong? How can it be wrong for a father to say no, you won't get married or no, you are not going to do this thing! How can it be wrong when that is based upon virtue love or based upon doctrine. That is exactly right. You have to look ahead; you must look to the future. Where does your advice take them? Where does the application of doctrine take them? We have one major obligation to our children—to educate them in Bible doctrine, so that they can make good decisions in life.
6. Caveat: a balanced approach. Bobby never had to go to Bible class as a kid; he had to go to church; but he never was forced to go to Bible class. Train up a child in the way that he should go, and when he is old, he will not turn from it.

1Cor. 7:37 But he [the father] who stands firm in heart, not having necessity [or, under no constraint], but has authority as to his own will, and has judged this in his heart, to keep his virginity; he does well.

1Cor. 7:36–38

Thursday August 3, 2006

The topic is fathers and daughters and marriage in the 1st century A.D. No way that Bobby can provide the application for every person in the congregation from this passage; however, some of us should be able to make the application for ourselves.

The Corinthian father has two choices with regards to his daughter and marriage: he can say yes or no. This fits the culture of these times; the father controlled whether the daughter got married or not; that was the law and culture of the time, among Greeks and Jews.

The first option is approval for marriage.

There are a number of factors involved when it comes to marriage: the present environment, which includes persecution. The father may have observed that his daughter has developed a spiritual gift, which requires more time to exercise.

1Cor. 7:36 But if any man [adopted father, biological father, legal guardian; the decision maker of a household] considers it he is acting unfairly toward his virgin [daughter] (if she is beyond her prime, and so it [her marriage] ought to come to pass), then let him do what he wishes; he does not sin; let them marry.

The other choice is, the father stands firm and determines that there will be no marriage. He can conclude that he is acting unfairly; or he can conclude that he is not. He resolves in his own mind to stand firm and to keep his daughter unmarried with results which go on into the future (that is the perfect tense). Being of sound mind, or having already made contractual obligations, the father makes an objective decision concerning his unmarried daughter; objectivity in the most emotional situations in life. He has settled the matter in his own heart. This is a technical term for the right lobe of the soul, where doctrine is metabolized and then applied. He has applied spiritual common sense. If you are flighty or goofy, the Bible is filled with common sense and it can take a flighty, goofy person, and give them some common sense. In this passage, the man stands firm on a specific issue. There is a difference between meddling in your children's lives and advice that you are going to give them.

In the daughter's subjectivity, she is not protecting herself; but the father is. He is applying the objectivity for his daughter and himself (and realize that the father is also caught up in marriage as well; a father's soul can also be in turmoil over a marriage). This is virtue love here, not tyranny. The father is fulfilling his duty to his daughter using his best doctrinal judgment, based upon divine viewpoint. This is the duty of a father toward his daughter.

Here is an application for all of us; this gives us an idea as to what the Lord does for us.

The Parallel

1. The Lord is our Father and He has a perfect love for us.
2. He almost always provides protection for us, under all conditions. He knows a predator when he sees one; he knows when she is getting into trouble; God also protects us in every situation as well. Often, when we get out of fellowship, we wander; and we continue to advance spiritually. God disciplines those that He loves.
3. God makes the decisions for the best course for us, just as this father makes the best decision for his daughter.
4. God always has our best interests at heart. God's decisions are always to our best interests.
5. We may not like God's decisions; we may not like the doctrines that we hear because they cut into our desires and thoughts (human viewpoint thoughts). She may not like the father's decisions, but they are the best for us.
6. Only the foolish and recalcitrant reject His plan. We are going against the divine decree and yet, how could we possibly have a better plan? Even worse, we decide our plan is God's plan—that is the epitome of arrogance.

A woman may think that not getting married is the worst thing that could possibly happen to her; but let's look at it from a different perspective. "I was born to be married and a mother." Our right circumstances may not appear; they may not be there yet; and there may be a right time for marriage to occur. God's plan is always perfect; we don't get to determine when our plan is goes into effect, as it is far inferior to God's plan for us.

1Cor. 7:37 But he [the father] who stands firm in heart, not having necessity [or, under no constraint] , but has authority as to his own will, and has judged this in his heart, to keep his virginity; he does well.

Then v. 38: Recall that the principle is redeeming the time; remaining as you are during the present distress. If you are uncertain about God's plan for your life, remember that status quo is where you belong. Hang in there and do not make a move. If you are not clear in your thinking, then chances are, you will make a mistake. God may have something for us to learn, and He may wait to see how we can handle it. Sometimes, we have not learned what we need to learn in order to move on. Some of our frustration is waiting on God, and waiting for that door to open. Is it good to marry or not to marry?

What is Paul's answer?

1. It is okay for this man to let his daughter get married; there is not a thing wrong with a father letting his daughter get married. Decisions must be determined on their own merits. Marital opportunities must be evaluated on their own merits. It is an occupational hazard for the woman when it comes to marriage. This is why Paul is dealing with a father and a daughter here.
2. Paul's choice is this: in view of the present pressures of life, it is better to remain single. This is an interesting situation where, no matter which choice you make, it is the right choice. Marriage is never wrong; so when a father gives his daughter away, it is a good thing. The marriage may be right; but the circumstances may be wrong.
3. The priority of Christian service; and the present times.

Summation

1. Marriage is a divine institution which is the correct status for one man and one woman.
2. This is the Biblical doctrine for cohabitation; not live-in,, but marriage.
3. Redeeming the time to serve the Lord can be the better choice at any given moment.
4. Stressful or uncertain circumstances are not a good moment for marriage. If you gain no other point of objectivity tonight, do not jump into marriage when in the middle of adversity, because you may be looking for an escape. You think that you can get rescued from this or that financial situation. That breeds subjectivity. That breeds bad decisions. Paul is saying, apply wisdom to the circumstances.

How Does the Father's Right to Block a Marriage Relate to us Today

1. A wise daughter should consult her father, if he has an objective viewpoint. And, if you are subjective, are you going to go to him in the first place?
2. A wise doctrinal father can help his daughter in her decision making process. However, today, he does not make the decision. What he does is make the principles and the issues clear. Today, if he tries to meddle, he will just get reaction. Help in the decision making process; make doctrine and issues clear.
3. Doctrinal advice is always beneficial; it is never a liability.
4. To the father: in giving advice, the father should always remember that his daughter is a responder.

5. The father's purpose in giving her advice is to get her to respond to doctrine. That is the issue. Get her to think objectively; not to your opinion. Help her bring to mind in her subjectivity the things which she needs to consider. The father can give great doctrinal advice today, if he can bring his daughter out of subjectivity and into objectivity. Don't just shake your finger at them and say, "What is mistake you will make."
6. Whether to marry or not is still the individual choice of the daughter; it is her decision. However, the criterion are the same, whether he or she makes the choice. Bad decisions can be corrected; but they can't if you build bad decision upon bad decision.

What is important to get, with regards to application to today. We need to make our own applications today. There is timing to consider; right man; a believer; a believer who is positive; servide to God. All of things must be contended with in our own soul. Doctrinal wisdom from fathers or parents can still make a difference.

If you give advice, father, it should be done in love and sensitivity; and not judgmentally, which is guaranteed to get a reaction. It is a fine line that a father walks. Especially a father of an adult daughter of marriageable age. The best a father can do is to keep the principles of doctrine in the forefront. Great parents can do that.

If dad sees a disaster coming, should he say something or not? When is the right time to say something? Should he intrude with advice? He does not want to act dishonorably with his daughter. When are you advising and when are you meddling? Principle versus reaction; if she reacts, you have gone too far.

Your daughter comes in with a rock on her finger and says, "I'm getting married." At the right time, you will need to have a talk with her. Then it is time to be frank and honest, but do that in such a way as to not get a reaction. Keep doctrine in the forefront. All of this can be applied to sons as well. In giving your doctrinal perspective, you have done your duty as a father, even though the decision is hers. A bad decision on her part may hurt the loving father as much as it hurts the daughter; don't ever shirk your responsibility; give her every opportunity to consider objective doctrinal principles.

We make decisions for our sons and daughters as they grow up and the same principles hold true then as well.

Additional Application

1. All factors must be considered when making decisions for your child. The parent must always keep the child's best interest at heart.
2. The decisions that we make, they may not like; some of them, it is guaranteed that they won't like. "I want what I want when I want it." That is how a child's old sin nature works. Stand fast and hold the line for the principles of doctrine.

3. There are incredible pressures on your kids and you are the only source of truth that this child has, apart from prep school.
4. The primary determining factor for the Christian parent is to further the spiritual life of a child. Most of the world thinks that when you give you child monetary advantages, that is the best you can do for them; that is untrue.
5. You must make decisions for them to redeem the time.
6. You must makes certain that the child has spiritual, doctrinal education.
7. Protect them under stressful conditions. They are under such pressure.
8. You must help a child to apply doctrine and to make good decisions. This means, sometimes we make the decisions and sometimes they make the decisions. At some point, they must make their own decisions. You have to, at some point, let them pass or fail on their own. If you do that, you have done your parental duty. As a parent, we cannot look back and say, "I wish I had done this differently." You must function in such a way to have no regrets.

1Cor. 7:38 So that he that gives in marriage does well, and he that does not give in marriage does better.

1Cor. 7:39

Lesson #390

Sunday 1 August 6, 2006

This is perhaps the greatest chapter in the Bible about marriage. We are going to complete this chapter today. We would all like to be content in life. We have a great opportunity to utilize doctrine in marriage. Two people in marriage have a great opportunity to grow in marriage spiritually, with one of the greatest and most intimate relationships in life.

In the final two verses, we have two laws and a summary statement of marriage. We sum up the married woman's obligations and rights. The wife is mentioned; but not the husband. Is this summary statement only about the wife? Bobby applies this to the husband and wife. Paul has been writing for sometime; but he will not repeat the husband (as he did in vv. 10–14).

We begin this verse with the perfect of  $\delta\epsilon\omega$  = to be bound. The perfect indicates the very settled condition of marriage. The idea is, this goes on for as long as the husband lives; it is a lifetime contract between one man and one woman. This institution is insoluble before the Lord; but before the state, it can be easily dissolved. Our vow is till death do us part; and this verse is the source of that thought. This is a binding contract before the Lord. Insofar as God is concerned, we remained married until death. This is how seriously God takes the institution of marriage; there is the corporate witness of a marriage unit; because of the template of Adam and Eve. Breaking the contract of marriage is a sin. A wife is bound by law for as long a time as her husband lives;...

There were two exceptions to marriage for life: adultery and desertion (possibly only desertion of a believer by an unbeliever). The third reason is given here, which is the law of widowhood and remarriage. It begins with the conditional particle  $\epsilon\omicron\nu$  = if; plus the aorist active subjunctive (indicating a 3rd class condition) of κλημαω = to fall asleep. This is a very comforting way to think of death. Going to sleep and waking up in heaven is a wonderful, relaxing thought. Dying is no different than sleeping. The idea is, on your deathbed, you will fall asleep and move into eternity; the old things will pass away and everything is new. It will be for eternity and it will be wonderful. Actually, there are very few descriptions of heaven given in Scripture. ...but if her husband sleeps,...

The 3rd class condition is the more probable future condition. Death will happen; everyone will face death. The only question is how and when. Then there are the results? The woman is then free to marry whomever she chooses. The right of remarriage is confirmed for a widow or a widower. Remarriage is her discretion.

The principle of widowhood includes the survivor of a divorce; if the other former spouse dies, then you have the right of remarriage, even if you are the culprit in the divorce. In a non-Biblical divorce, there is no right of remarriage; however, death breaks the contract, and death parts the husband and wife before God. God does not grant this separation. This does not give us the right to do away with the problem spouse who is still alive.

...she is free to be married to whomever she desires, only in the Lord. When a woman remarries, she can only marry a believer. Only in the Lord.

Do not use witnessing as a way to become involved with an unbeliever. Once you become emotionally attached to an unbeliever, it is so much more difficult to detach yourself. This can overwhelm doctrinal judgement. When you are in that situation, marriage with an unbeliever becomes a viable option in your mind. Your emotions are gushing all over town. Never been out with someone who looks this good; everything is lining up.

We're not supposed to be unequally yoked; even if you think, "No no, this relationship is too good to be true." If God mandates that we don't do it, then we need to heed His mandate. Deeply, these people are not of a like mind with us. They do not have divine viewpoint. It is not possible for them to have divine viewpoint. You are hooking yourself up with someone who has no capability of divine viewpoint; if you are not of a like mind, you cannot know everything that there is to know about marriage.

A Puritan proverb: if you are a child of God and you marry a child of the devil, you will be sure to have trouble with your father-in-law. Linking yourself intimately with the unbeliever begins you on the road to suffering. It is the difference between a husband and wife with divine viewpoint and human viewpoint. Human viewpoint is cosmic system thinking; the thinking of Satan. There is not enough human reward or assuaging loneliness or physical happiness to overrule this maxim: you cannot marry an unbeliever. You must have the motivation to advance and grow to maintain your spiritual life; but an unbeliever spouse can often hinder that greatly. Those in a mixed marriage do not have an easy road to hoe.

The widow must be sensitive to the Lord's will in this matter. Marriage to a believer must always be in the confines of God's plan. This means no precipitous decisions to get married. Do not even jump into a marriage with a believer to forget your sorrow, to replace the missing spouse, or to fill a void.

Nothing happens in the plan of God by accident. If your spouse dies, there is a reason for it, even if, in your grief, it does not seem right to you. Grief is authorized when losing a loved one; tears are normal. However, you cannot allow grief and tears to rule you for the rest of your life. Queen Victoria was in mourning for 60 years after her husband died; she wore black for the rest of her life. Tread softly and slowly under the circumstances of espousal death.

We have no right to be bitter and angry at God for whatever happens; including the loss of a spouse. You have lost your momentum and the purpose of your existence.

The plan of God goes on with the loss of a spouse; God has another direction reserved for us when a spouse dies; we must look ahead and figure out what God has for us in the future. Even without a spouse and even without getting remarried, there will be great fulfillment in that service. God's plan may include remarriage. However, give yourself time to recover from your loss and grief before that happens.

Priorities are involved in every aspect of our life; spiritual life first and everything else takes care of itself. When we get outside of His plan and we begin to search or to push, we are almost guaranteed to make a mistake.

Let's say, you are now free, and you realize that you must marry a believer if you remarry. However, there are further requirements. There is also God's will for us to marry under the right circumstances. His will should be our first priority. Do not immediately make up an A list of all eligible believers in our periphery. Don't allow loneliness or desire to intrude upon the rule of Bible doctrine. Do not allow it to impose itself. The mother of all marital mistakes is subjectivity. This always begins with emotionalism. Emotionalism is a certainty.

Remarriage, like marriage, is no panacea. Remarriage after death of a spouse still has difficulties, even if you have done everything right. It may be that you are smarter and more mature than you are when you married the first time. Two problems; two people. Your spiritual life must come first; there is no substitute. You will make a wise decision, if your priorities are straight. And when marital discord occurs (and it will); you can say to God, "You have given me this husband or wife; and you will give me the strength to see it through."

1Cor. 7:40/Intro to 1Cor. 8

Lesson #391

Sunday 2 August 6, 2006

It took us awhile to get through this chapter as there are 40 verses and intense subject matter. We've covered marriage; what to do before the marriage and what to do before marriage. However, what is the word on life in marriage? It is the problem solving devices which are utilized in marriage. Doctrine handles all of it, including your marriage. You already know what to do: rebound, doctrine, the faith rest drill; and the other problem solving devices.

After all the previous advice, which is the principle of status quo—remain in status quo. We will reiterate the status quo. It is used in connection with the widow. The woman or the man who has lost their spouse; status quo.

But is a contrast between single and marriage. You might think, of course, Paul thinks being single is better. What Paul is doing by giving this advice is hoping that his readers will stop and think. He wants them to utilize objectivity before doing anything. We are to stop and think and Paul focuses on the status quo. The condition in context is widowhood. We must understand the circumstances of the time it was written: vv. 26, 35: present distress (families ripped apart; dragged into Rome and ripped apart in the Flavian Amphitheater); and the second is devotion to the Lord. We all have a present distress; it matters in our relationships in life. It matters especially in this circumstance of widowhood.

When you lose a spouse, you have a different set of circumstances and a different opportunity set. You cannot think that your life is over. As a believer in Jesus Christ, your life is just taking a new direction. Paul's advice is to remain in status quo. It is clear that the widow can remarry; and every widow has the right of remarriage. Sometimes, a second marriage is a mistake; and sometimes it can be a great blessing. Opportunities, circumstances and God's will are all involved in determining whether a 2nd marriage is a mistake or a blessing. Has Paul given us a ministry as a single person now detached from our spouse? Is there time to sustain and develop another marriage? You must know what it takes, having been married before, what it takes to develop another marriage. God's ministry for us may allow for a marriage and time-wise, it may not. Do you want to go through all of that again? Do you want to build another marriage? Do you realize that there is no one to replace your spouse. Some might recognize early on that you won't get married again. If you are not to get married again, then what are you going to do with your time? If that time is no longer a part of your life, then what does God want you to do? Some will not marry because they prefer to concentrate on God's new plan for their life. Old plan; new direction.

Through the years, there have been a number of women at Berachah, there have been a number of women who have divorced or widowed; and many of them are very happy with their situation. Some of these can have great relationships; and they are not single so that they can play the field and have fun; or cut loose in life after being in a stifling marriage. They apply the principle of this verse. She is happier if she remains as she is.

Bobby knows some people personally who are widows or widowers; and they have chosen not to remarry; and they have found a greater time to engage in Christian service. Sometimes it is prayer; sometimes it is taking care of the sick and elderly; spending time in situations where you have more opportunity to witness for the Lord Jesus Christ.

Nominative singular comparative adjective μακαριος = happier. Predicate adjective. There is a subject and the verb to be; and the predicate is what the subject is equal to. Instead of being a predicate nominative, there is a predicate adjective, which is a description of the subject. It is a comparative adjective; it is equated with the subject, which is the woman who has been widowed. Remaining as a widower means being happier, as compared to getting remarried.

Third class condition, which is appropriate when someone is giving advice. The listener may or may not follow your advice. Maybe she will remain single and maybe she will not. It will be based upon the principles of Scripture. Paul's opinion should always be considered. She is spared the trouble the marriage entails. These conditions may not always be present in her life. She is free from fulfilling her marital responsibilities. Present distress and service to the Lord are reasons for not getting married again. These principles are just as true for the man as they are for the woman. She now has more time free to serve the Lord. Legitimate activities in life, like marriage, can certainly bring moments of happiness; but marriage also requires time. We often think of marriage as being equated with fulfillment. Some think that you cannot be fulfilled without love. Paul here says the widow is happier to remain as she is. There is something greater than our life as a married person. In single bliss, he or she is on a happier course at that time. First consideration should be circumstances and spiritual advance in life and time.

Bobby is going to give examples of marital situations and solutions; human viewpoint solutions will be involved here as well.

Dear Abby letters. I never did love my husband; I just married him for security and I have been miserable ever since. I suppose that I should tell you that I am in love with my doctor, which is why I have been so sickly much of the time. He is very unhappy at home; my husband is in love with my best friend, who is in a bad marriage as well. I would be happier with my doctor and my husband with my best friend; you only live once. Abby tells them that the Doctor's wife and the best friend's husband need to be introduced so that they are not left out. I recommend that you remain with the misery that you know. There always appears to be someone who fits you better. There is much greater blessing in this life besides hopping between different partners. If one will leave their husband or wife, then they will do it again.

Dear Abby, I've been married nearly a year and no longer in love with my husband; I am 19. I am mixed up and don't know what to do. I am very much in love with a boy I used to go steady with. The other guy doesn't know this. Greener pasture syndrom again. I am married now; I had a big church wedding. I feel guilty because I kiss my husband and think of this other guy. I don't want to ask my husband for a divorce. Abby tells her that when you vow to forsake all others, that is forever. It is not a date to the senior prom. Talk to your clergyman and let him straighten you out.

These situations seem funny; but they aren't if you live in them yourself. A widow can be content or happier, even without a husband. It doesn't take much to be happier than in the two previous conditions described.

You might be in the circumstance where you are in love with your doctor; you are no longer in love with your husband. Those who are married or unmarried should consider the mandates and the advice of this chapter. Paul closes the entire chapter with the following words: I think I also have the Spirit of God.

What we have here is a miosis; a Latin word describing a figure of speech. This is an understatement presenting something less significant than it really is. I think discloses something more important than simply Paul's opinion. Paul has no doubt as to the accuracy of his opinion or of the source of his opinion. Paul is an Apostle and he knows that he is an Apostle; he knows that he has great authority here. Therefore, he closes with this statement. There are those in Corinth who questioned Paul's judgment and opinions and authority. Paul has perfect discernment from the Holy Spirit, Who is in Paul's corner. This divinely inspired advice directly from God Himself. It is for our benefit; our contentment, our guidance.

This completes our doctrine of marriage.

1Cor. 7:40 But she is happier if she remains so, according to my judgment. And I think I also have the Spirit of God.

Introduction to 1Corinthians 8

Suddenly we will launch into pagan idols; and we wonder how does this relate to us? I don't come into contact with idol worship nowadays, unless it is a statue on someone's dashboard. Then, we deal with eating meat—do we have to really give up meat?

Paul will now launch into a relationship between believers; between mature and immature believers; between legalists and us. We are going to find out what our relationships should be like with other believers; what our actions should be. The overall question is, what do I have to do with that person sitting next to me? You might not give any thought to the person next to you. You may have believer friends. You might be a stumbling block to other believers; you might think tough, lump it; take in more doctrine and get over it. Is that our approach? Yes and no. We do live together; and we have a responsibility toward immature believers. How far do we have to go; and how far do we take the legalist part. Berachah Church has been charged with being an antinomian church; but that is a trend of the old sin nature; and there are legalists at Berachah as well. We have certain liberties as a believer; as long as it is not a sin, we can do it. However, some may look at you and think, that is too much fun. Do you have a responsibility toward that person.

1Cor. 8 introduction

Wednesday August 9, 2006

Is this some chapter which is culturally driven? We don't come into contract with idol worship at all—not like this. However, this is a very practical chapter.

The overall topic is the laws of Christian behavior, especially as related to relationships between believers. Some of the questions which are to be answered here, are there legitimate activities in life that you can take part in cause harm to other believers? Are we free in this life to do anything that we want, as long as it is not sin? Grace orientation tells us that we have many liberties that most legalistic believers cannot do. These are legalistic taboos and they will condemn us for these practices. What responsibility to we have to jerks like that. In this chapter, we will find that we have some responsibility toward legalistic believers. This chapter makes a distinction between legalism and liberty. When does your behavior cross the line. At what point do you cross the line to vulgar behavior. In our society, vulgarity is almost the norm. In public, on tv, it is quite vulgar. So why do we even worry?

Questions:

1. What about activities which are not sin, but may give our conscience a moment's pause when in public? Bobby will get into this in more detail.
2. How far can you go in front of unbelievers?
3. Is there a point which is morally defensible behavior can destroy your witness for Christ? Is there a point where that could happen?
4. Your non-sinful but controversial conduct becomes a problem for another believer. Is it our problem? Isn't it theirs?
5. Should it matter if it is not sin? These should be questions which we have thought about. What if a legalist tells us that they see us doing something which they think is wrong? Do I tell them to get over it?
6. Do you have an obligation to some legalistic before the Lord to protect them from themselves or do you tell them, "Too bad, live with it."

These are questions which we should ask ourselves as believers. As we become more mature, we become more and more attuned to others. Berachah Church has been accused of being an antinomian church; we sometimes do things that they do not agree with. We are not following the Christian laws to the t as they see them. Do we live within the bounds of acceptable believers?

Are we free in grace? God's grace frees us in ways that we have never been before. There are other great subjects in this chapter, and one of them is the love for God. Love edifies; we will have a great time with that phrase. Bobby is having a great time working on the doctrine of love. We will understand God's love; our love for God, and how that love works toward other believers. Love is one of the most misunderstood concepts among people in general.

At your next dinner, say, "What is love?" That will begin a whole set of conversations.

Gnosis versus epignôsis doctrine will be a part of this chapter. We are told here that knowledge makes people arrogant. However, we are to grow in knowledge and grace. What's the deal? We are going to deal with the doctrine of Christian liberty. We need to understand love and how we extend it toward other believers.

The laws of expediency. For some of us, that seems like a dirty word. We adapt ourselves at times to things that we do not agree with. In the Bible, this has a completely different meaning. You don't ever compromise doctrine; but you do compromise your behavior in relation to other believers.

Is this chapter relevant to today? This may bring questions which we have never thought of before; doctrinal applications which we have never made before. This is a chapter for maturing and mature believers. This is for believers who have moved beyond the baby stage. Meat will be a part of this chapter—can we eat meat offered to idols? This is a very anti-legalist chapter. It is also anti-antinomian chapter. The problems here are in a different form; but the concepts behind them are the same.

Idolatry and polytheism are major problems in Greek and Roman society. Everyone is involved in this idolatry. The Christians in Corinth could not escape contact. These people at the Corinth church are not far removed from these practices; a lot of their old friends are still steeped in this culture.

Cultural Background for 1Cor. 8

1. Heathen temples were where animal sacrifices were made to false gods. These sacrifices ended up being the best food in town; great steaks came from them.
2. The excellent meat taken from the animals offered to pagan idols was available to the public. No one brought a sacrifice to an idol unless it was the very best quality. If they wanted favor from the gods, they brought the best.
3. Once the meat was offered at these altars, it was divided in 3 ways. The priest (or whatever) killed the animal and took a portion to be burned on the altar as a sacrifice to the gods. That meat was no longer edible. The 2nd portion went to the priests, so they took a portion; however much they needed. There were many animals slaughtered, so there was a lot of meat to deal with. The person who brought the sacrifice also got some of the meat.
4. If the priest did not take all of their portion, or even any of it; it was then sold in the temple restaurant or in the public market; and, no doubt, the priests made a little money on this. The offerer could also sell his portion as well.
5. This meat often appeared at the tables of pagan friends; unbelieving friends of believers. It also appeared at town festivals; and even on the tables of believers. It was for sale and it was good. If you had guests, you'd want a really good steak or cabrito or bbq; and you'd buy meat which had been offered to animals.
6. The principles found in this chapter could be applied to any culture. In the seminaries of liberalism, many of these things were simply written off as the culture of the time, and therefore, ignored. But all of the doctrines in Scripture are pertinent to us. There is no Scripture which is not pertinent, no matter what the culture was when it was written. We need only understand the culture within which the Scripture is found, and apply it to ours.

The questions found here are very pertinent to the believers at that time; particularly the Jewish believers at the church at Corinth. The Mosaic law forbade certain types of meat; even meats offered to idols, and it was not to be eaten by the Jews. Many of these Jews still believed the law to be valid for them; they had not made the transition from Judaism to Christianity. Many of them had not made this transition yet.

The Mosaic Law is still pertinent today; but it had become a divisive issue (as it is today); and Paul will take the dietary laws from the Mosaic Law and answer the questions which the Jews had. Are the dietary laws of the Mosaic Law still applicable? The meat available was offered to heathen gods.

More Background

1. Corinthian believers—especially gentile believers—had not yet severed their ties with unbelievers in their previous life. The Jews had no problem here, as they severed their ties. Even weeks before, these heathen were a part of their life.
2. Their social life included having dinners together.
3. These are not just business lunches or business dinners, but these are strictly social occasions. Very cozy; very closer relationships.
4. We can already see a very common thread with our life and our relationship with unbelievers and human viewpoint. Divine viewpoint versus human viewpoint.
5. Mostly this chapter deals with believer relationships.
6. It is not sinful to have dinner or social life with unbelievers. That is not a sinful activity. However, it was becoming a problem for the legalists. There were Jews who had one set of problems and Gentiles with another.
7. These meals and location were held either in a heathen temple or otherwise associated with idol worship with some heathen deity. What they ate was associated with a heathen temple. It was either held affixed to a heathen temple or in a home, but the meat came from a heathen temple. Certain Corinthian believers were still going to the temple for various things, like fornication. However, some went there to eat and socialize with old friends. Is a friendly meal wrong?

The Jewish believers think that this is wrong, and this is driving a wedge between them. What about these activities?

The Corinthians had several questions.

1. Was it lawful for believers to be associated with unbelievers in this environment? They used to go there for a different reason.
2. And what about the meat specifically? This meat was offered as a sacrifice to false, heathen gods. Should they even buy it, much less eat it? Isn't the meat contaminated and off limits to believers?

Two schools of thought. There is no problem at all socializing with old heathen friends or the eating of this meat. This will be called strong believers in this chapter. They are strong because they are more mature. They knew what was up. They recognized that these are just old friends, even though these old friends worship idols. Isn't some relationship necessary? How far can they go? And they knew that this pagan god in the temple did not even exist; there was no such god behind the idol, and therefore, there was no harm done to the meat which was sacrificed. Where they went to eat, a part of the temple, was just a building. It is a nice building, so what is wrong with going into this place? Because of these factors, the meat was not contaminated. It made a great meal with their friends who just happened to be idolaters. They knew that these gods were not real; and they knew there was an association there. The food was unclean and it was defiled. To the Jews, even entering that temple was a sin, as heathen worship took place there. The food and the heathen entrance were both wrong. They knew there was something wrong with idolaters and their food. Now, today, we all socialize with unbelievers; there are times when it is necessary. How far can we go? When have we compromised certain aspects of our life? An unbeliever or a weak believer will look at us and say, "What is that all about?" And they will question you even when you are doing something which is not wrong; which is not sin. We will get into a bunch of examples. Tim Lipsey and the legalism in Brazil. It sets them off to see a believer who has the liberty of the grace of God. This chapter will cover how we relate to them. Even if you have no problem with eating idol-meat; there was still this divisiveness. What effect did the strong have on the weak? There was a source of confusion and preoccupation. Do believers or unbelievers look at you and what you do and become preoccupied with you and your behavior? Do you really want to do this? Do you really want to cause this kind of confusion in the soul of the believers who does not know any better.

Two questions which Paul would answer: how is the first party to conduct themselves? What obligation does the strong have toward the weak? When an immature believer sees a mature believer and their acts, they can get out of fellowship or into legalism. There may be a time when we go too far; it is like waving a red flag in front of a bull. You do not help an unbeliever or a legalistic believer by doing this.

Paul generally sides with the mature believer (the strong); and he understands their viewpoint, as it is the same as theirs. However, he also knows the viewpoint of the weak.

1Cor. 8 intro; Legalism

Lesson #393

Thursday August 10, 2006

What is Legalism?

1. Literally, it means keeping the law; which is not a bad thing
2. There is a negative sense as well. We all have trends of the old sin nature. This is a trend of the old sin nature which conforms to a code of morality. This code is followed instead of spirituality. It is a substitute. The Mosaic Law is but one code.
3. There is nothing wrong with ethics and morality; but unbelievers have that as well. Instead of the filling of the Holy Spirit, some code is followed instead. The legalistic believer uses this as his spirituality.
4. This conforming to certain ethics is a futile attempt to gain the approbation of God. It is also used to compete against other believers for a high status of holiness. They are holier than someone else. A legalist takes great delight in competing for this holiness state.

5. The legalistic unbeliever seeks to earn salvation through human works, which will never get anyone to salvation. No one in human history has come to the point of salvation based upon how good they are. Pharisees were going to keep the Law for salvation and they were filled with hypocrisy. They are sinners who did not recognize it.
6. Then there is the legalistic believer. This person practices a pseudo works spirituality apart from the filling of the Holy Spirit. He is rarely filled with the Holy Spirit; unless he uses rebound from time to time. He practices a pseudo works spirituality.
7. This leads to reversionism in the form of moral degeneracy. It seems like an oxymoron; it is self righteousness which is degeneracy.
8. The attitude of legalism is self righteousness. The pharisees were a perfect example of this.
9. Self righteousness practices man-made taboos. You take a drink, the legalist says that is wrong; but the Scripture says that drunkenness is wrong. Then they impose this on you and castigate you for breaking this rule. The practice of watching women dressed in immoral clothing; and they are judges of women's clothing. A legalist might blast you for this.
10. The legalist is often perceived as very holy by other legalists and even some antinomians who don't like it at all. Some antinomians can't stand them.
11. Legalism manifests itself in gossip, maligning, intolerance and zealous activism.

Antinomianism

1. Antinomianism means against law.
2. Each person has a different pole which he tends to lean toward. Leans toward unrestrained lawlessness. Christians can be very immoral.
3. When indulged, the trend of antinomianism leads toward a number of problems. Some engage in crime; some in great immorality. In Corinth, some went to the temple of Aphrodite for sex.
4. The antinomianism, self gratification takes top priority in the soul. We can make our own evaluation of our own trend.
5. The antinomian reacts to authority and to restraint. He rejects morality; he rejects morality as being irrelevant to him. He rejects the absolutes of Scripture; he uses Scripture to justify his own self gratification.
6. The grace of God; the greatest concept that we have. The antinomian takes the grace of God and distorts this into a license to sin. This sometimes takes the form of "I can sin with impunity, because I can always rebound." This is not how rebound should be used. That is using rebound as a license to sin. Our attitude does not negate God's faithfulness in forgiving those sins which are behind you. Rebound never fails; never question rebound. There is nothing we can say or do to invalidate rebound.
7. Antinomian believers often are explained away as never having been saved in the first place. In the city and church of Corinth, both groups were present.

For the Jews in that church, the Law was still in effect in their own thinking. They were legalists. Part of the statutes read that you could not eat meat sacrificed to idols. As you take in doctrine and metabolize it; you walk the line between legalism and antinomianism there. Some of the believers were not antinomians and they were not sinning. They simply wanted to enjoy a great meal and the best meat in town. The best meat was that sacrificed to the temple gods and goddesses. Part of the meat was given to the priest, part was burned up, and part was given to the one who offered it. The priest and offerer sometimes sold their meat in the marketplace. Some of that meat was offered for public sale and consumption and some believers bought it and ate it. And they did not sin in doing so. These were believers who were more mature. They had the understanding of the difference between legalism and antinomianism.. They did not represent real gods.

In the Old Testament, Israel was required by the Law to give certain sacrifices and they were very similar to the heathen sacrifices. However, they were teaching aides to Israel. The heathen simply copied Israel (and past offerings of believers before Israel). Now, in the church age, things have changed. There are no more animal sacrifices; those are done away with. These believers who did not have problems with this meat are called strong believers and they were not deterred by legalism or antinomianism. Eating and associating with idolaters was, to say the least, controversial. However, it was not sin. It became a point of contention. This became a hugely divisive issue in the church. Some legalists just could not get over the association of the paganism and the meat which came from those sacrifices. There was always a danger in this socializing of taking in human viewpoint. These legalists were focused not on doctrine, but on legalism.

The idols in and of themselves were nothing. I guess this means that, when you see a statue of Mary in a car, that you need not smash it to make a point. Sacrificial idols have no spiritual significance whatsoever. What these Corinthian believers did, when they ate this meat, did not make them better or worse. While the weak were learning doctrine and advancing toward spiritual maturity, the strong believer needed to make sure that he was not impeding the advance of the weak believers. Paul will make the point that, this eating of meat offered to idols is wrong if it restricts the growth of the weaker believers. The weaker believers with their eyes on the strong believers and their freedom confused them. Our obligation as believers is never to distract another believer from spiritual growth. If you do that, you have sinned.

Certain mission fields are a good illustration of this. Missionaries go to animistic societies which worship inanimate objects as gods. Often these are primitive tribes in primitive areas. When one of these heathen believes in Christ and they begin to mature, and they will, that person comes to understand that idol-worship has no power (except as a vehicle to demonism, which is a different subject). However, this convert to Christianity chooses to remove himself from all contact. He wants others to realize he has a new and meaningful life in Christ, and that he has made a clean break with his previous lifestyle. He represents the gospel of grace and the Christian way of life. The issue always has to be Christ. The separation from heathen practices is not a matter of legalism. It is a matter of appearances. It is a matter of ambassadorship for Jesus Christ and personal respect for God. It is a matter of witnessing to those who have no other visual illustration, not giving any credence to their antithetical belief. If there is continued contact with some of these things, it confuses others, who do not realize that a clean break has been made. Witnessing never includes confusing the gospel through giving the gospel some recognition; you do not give credence at all. You do not compromise with false religion or with apostasy. This is dealing with the unbeliever, of course. The unbeliever can be confused by your actions; and weak believers can be confused by your actions. They see people more or less involved in heathenism, and they cannot separate things out in their own minds. They see legitimate practices and associations and are confused by them. You don't cater to legalism, but you don't discourage those who are advancing in the spiritual life.

Another example which is closer to home. We might be a visitor at some point in time in a Catholic church. As a believer in Jesus Christ, you do not participate in the Communion service in the Catholic Church. Their communion represents a false doctrine; you do not participate in or compromise in a false doctrine. Catholic communion is called transubstantiation; when the priest says the words of the mass, the host, the bread and wine, actually become the body and blood of Christ, in some mystic way. That is their doctrine. When you ingest the body and the blood of Christ, that is literal union with Christ, and to them, it is necessary for salvation. Unless you take part in this, you are not saved. There is an interesting sideline here; and in order for this to be true, you must be a believer. If you do not believe, then this is the road to perdition. That is rather dicey, because did they believe first and then take the sacrament for salvation or not? There is a very great difficulty. Communion represents human works requirement for salvation. We cannot compromise with a works system of salvation. We represent a system of grace; we represent the gospel of grace. In their eyes, when you participate, are giving credence to the sacraments. We know the true meaning of communion; just like the believers in the time of Corinth knew that idols meant nothing. We could take communion knowing what it actually means. Those in the church see you as having compromised and mixing with their theology. Again, it matters what an unbeliever or an immature believer sees. "My view is just as valid as mine. Maybe they are just covering their bases here." Now you may be asked, why did you not take communion? And you have at that point the chance to explain the difference between grace and works. Now, some in Corinth ate the meat, but did not engage in idol worship. Whatever it takes, that is what we must keep in mind. We should not be snooty or legalistic; we cannot act as though we are above it all. We do not want to antagonize, we want to worship.

Timothy Lipsing (?) someone is a 2nd generation missionary in Brazil and his children are there as well. 48% of the taxes are collected for Brazil from the city where he operates. He was born and raised in San Paulo, and now is dealing with a very rural area? 1 million people and 14 million head of cattle. Biggest city is about 250,000. It recent became a state and was previously a territory. Many believers have moved out there. Many of these believers don't think that a pastor is needed to lead a church. In many of these brethren churches, there are people capable of guiding the church; in others, there are not. There are 107 buildings and not really 107 brethren churches. A pastor must guide their flock; and many of them don't have that. Being there and insisting on this, some have become more interested. It is not the size that makes some of these local churches, but the pastor and the structure. The rest are a gathering of Christians; but they should be looking for leadership. It would be very noble to support a pastor as well. Many brethren churches don't believe that.

1Cor. 8 introduction

Lesson #394

Sunday 1 August 13, 2006

We will complete the introduction. The primary and overarching subject is Christian behavior toward other believers and toward unbelievers. We often don't think that we should alter our behavior, because we are free. The Corinthian believers had the problem of antinomianism vs. legalism. The antinomians had decided they would not alter anything in their lives, no matter who said or thought what. Legalism and antinomianism are trends; and legalists adhere to a strict code of ethics and morality, and if often is take to a point where it is a substitute for spirituality. Legalism hopes to gain God's approbation from observing laws, taboos. They aim for a high standard of correctness. The legalist wants to be correct in everything and he wants everyone else to conform to his vision of what is correct as well. Legalism confuses morality and spirituality. For instance, Christian service: this is mistaken as a spirituality by works. True Christian service is the result of the filling of the Holy Spirit and the result of our spiritual growth. God gives us the power to do so and the opportunity to do so. For the legalist, serving God is a work by which spirituality is attained. The legalist has reversed the process, and they are glorifying themselves instead of God.

Legalists often fall into several forms: zealous activism and hypocrisy; gossip, maligning.

There is also the antinomian camp in Corinth, as there is in ever local church. These believers live for self-gratification as opposed to self-restriction and self-righteousness. The antinomians react to any restrictions; they reject morality and the mandates of the spiritual life. The antinomian distorts the grace of God, which is the foundation of all that we are and all that we have. It is distorted into a license for lawlessness; a license for sin. Waiting in the wings is always the procedure for rebound.

The antinomian's lack of contrition or their cavalier attitude toward sin never negates the function of God in rebound. Rebound cannot be negated by our attitude. We can use rebound for a license to sin; but our attitude has no effect on the grace of God or on the promises of God. Furthermore, our great acts of contrition have no effect on God's grace either.

Just because you are an antinomian does not mean that you cannot enter into legalism now and again. Drunkenness, promiscuity, drug abuse, etc. are all activities of the antinomian. Many legalists look at them and say, "They can't have been saved in the first place."

There is always another group; a set of believers who are maturing and they recognized that they had liberties in the Christian way of life; and they did not step over the line into legalism or into antinomianism.

The specifics of this situation is, there were believers eating meat which had been offered to Aphrodite. In that church, all kinds of pleasures could be had. Legalists denounced the mature believers who partook of this meat. Those eating meat offered to idols simply wanted to enjoy a great meal. There was nothing wrong with someone ordering, buying and eating this meat. This was the best steak in town, because the animals brought to be sacrifices were the best which could be had.

Almost any Idols were nothing besides stone and wood. The meat was not defiled and eating it had no negative impact on the believers who ate this meat. They continued to advance, which disturbed the legalists. They saw the meat as defiled and were appalled that believers would eat this defiled meat. Antinomians, I suppose, could also see this, and think that temple activity was okay to become involved in. The Law said that one could not eat meat offered to idols, as it was defiled. However, this was no longer an issue. The legalists were focused on the Law; the antinomians were focused of the licentiousness of the pagan temples.

The key to answering all of these questions is love, both personal and impersonal love, which should motivate the mature believer. We associate love only with emotion and with fakery; and there are many speeches dealing with love when it has to do with romantic love or Christian love. Like the believer who writes Bobby a letter and says, "I love you but..." When it comes to other believers, we have the obligation to love them. So we will find out what that is.

1Cor. 8:1 introduction

Sunday 2 August 13, 2006

Almost any church is going to have some message on love; and some churches actually have people stand up and tell the person behind you that you love them. Bobby had it happen to him at some church in San Antonio at some Baptist church when he was stationed there. Bobby was sent there by his captain to wear his uniform. 5–6 rows of men in uniform and the pastor had nice things to say about those in the military (it was memorial day); an air force colonel turned around and was uncomfortable, and saw his name tag, and said, "You aren't related to a Thieme in Houston" and some actual love took place there. No one else in the entire auditorium probably had any understanding of love, which is one of the most misunderstood doctrines in the church.

The key to the solution of the antinomians, the legalists and the growing believers was love; impersonal and personal. It takes a mature believer to truly love properly. It is true for impersonal love and for personal love toward people in particular. It is a matter of thinking before you can act in love. Love, when understood, is truly a person who can go beyond themselves to consider and serve others. Love is not selfish; we will study this in 1Cor. 13, which is a passage Bobby uses in weddings often.

Love can mean that we will curtail certain things that we do in the Christian life in order to serve others. It is a higher love. When you have to sacrifice something for the welfare of someone else, that is love. This is the love that parents exercise all of the time. They sacrifice for their children. In v. 1, we have love edifies; which has so much meaning.

The laws of Christian behavior in relation to love; to other believers and unbelievers. We will need to get some terminology down.

Definitions for 1Corinthians 8

1. Law of liberty. Directed toward self. We have the right, as a believer in Jesus Christ, to do certain things, based upon the Word of God and the lack of mandates to the contrary. If there is some activity which is not sinful, but moves you toward human viewpoint, then we can also abstain from it. Eating meat offered to idols is something which was okay for Corinthians to do; but this does not mean that they need to do them. 1Cor. 8:4, 9
2. The law of love. This law takes other believers into consideration. There are certain activities that we have the liberty to do, but the law of law says that, from time to time, we refrain from doing them. You might refrain from certain activities for the sake of another believer, who might be legalistic or antinomian (both called weak believers in this context). You want to keep them from being judgmental of your activities; and you don't want them to get their eyes on you and lose their focus. Or become involved in sin because of what they see you do. You might say, "Well, this legalist has distracted himself from doctrine. Or, this antinomian just did what they wanted to do and they blame it on me." If you can make that distinction, then you should be able to apply doctrine to the situation. You cannot let the legalists run your life, but you must also have some consideration to their spiritual growth. You wish to encourage them, rather than discourage them by indulging your own legitimate liberty. You don't want to further their legalism. This would mean that, sometimes, catering to legalism is the wrong thing; and there are times when catering to your own freedom is the wrong thing to do. The illustration used in this chapter is eating meat offered to idols. This commandment no longer carries any weight in the Church Age. Their legalism is from ignorance, which is the reason why we must be careful to apply the law of love. If their legalism is pure sin nature and nastiness, that may be another story. You do not want to distract any believer from advancing in the spiritual way of life. In our society, we often flaunt our right to do and say anything, no matter how vulgar, ridiculous or gross. It should be restrained from time to time. This is true in the Christian life as well. There are times when your liberty must be restrained by your own free will. 1Cor. 8:13 10:33
3. The law of expediency. This sounds too much like you are compromised. This law applies to unbelievers specifically. Our life is a testimony of the Lord Jesus Christ, which is a good reason to curtail certain liberties, as the unbeliever often carefully watches you, and what you do is part of your witness. We must refrain from certain things which may detract from your witness. Any liberty which diverts the unbeliever from the true issue of the fact that Christ died for their sins, should be curtailed. Unbelievers may associate the Christians in Corinth with idol worship when they see these believers eating meat offered to idols. Here, the believer must be careful. What they are doing is not sin, but this can confuse the unbeliever who observes you. It can focus away from the gospel. You must allow unencumbered positive and negative volition. You have to be careful not to show works as spirituality as well; "Don't you see how I avoid doing these sins?" Legalistic Christians turn people off every day. Legalism is exactly the opposite of the grace of God. Never be legalistic in presenting the gospel. 1Cor. 9:19

4. The law of supreme sacrifice, which we have covered to some degree, which is toward God.
5. Each law is directed toward a different category:
  - a. Law of liberty is toward yourself.
  - b. Law of love is directed toward the weak believer.
  - c. Law of expediency is toward the unbeliever.
  - d. Law of supreme sacrifice is toward God.

The activities of this chapter are not declared by the Bible to be sins. The activities discussed in this chapter are peripheral; they might be questionable or doubtful to someone else.

Obviously, idolatry is expressly prohibited in Scripture, and without exception. Liberties do not apply to direct mandates, e.g., worshiping idols. Eating meat offered to idols is not wrong; but worship of same is. When there is a mandate, we obey, as it is God saying do this. We don't get to sidestep these mandates.

What is actually involved here? Grey areas and peripheral issues. This chapter is one of those areas: the worship of idols is not a grey area; but eating meat offered to an idol could be seen as a grey area. It is okay to do so, but one might want to consider what they do.

We are responsible for our own decisions in relationship to doctrine; Christian decisions are based upon doctrinal information. If you have divine viewpoint, then you can make good decisions. In the law of liberty, love and expediency, we need to be able to make good decisions. "Can I do this without a problem to myself or to someone else?" Are you going to take the focus of someone away from Bible doctrine or from the gospel? That is your question to yourself. You are not responsible for their spiritual life, they are. You do not ever want to be a stumbling block in that area. You do not want to drag other believers into the trend of your sin nature. Having a compatible sin nature with you does not mean that you hook up and sin in that way. A doubtful thing; a controversial thing is something which isn't sin, but it might cause problems with another believer or with an unbeliever. Love and liberty; this is going to be something which we have the liberty to do.

How are we going to resolve Grow in grace and knowledge and knowledge inflates a person with pride, whereas, love edifies.

1Cor. 8:1 About food offered to idols: We know that "we all have knowledge." Knowledge inflates with pride, but love builds up.

Paul will set up this entire study of idolatry with the spiritual life; and everything in the spiritual life will be discussed in here—in fact, summarized. All of this will be tied together so that we can make good decisions in grey areas.

1Cor. 8:2 If anyone thinks he knows anything, he does not yet know it as he ought to know it.

1Cor. 8: Lesson #396 Wednesday August 16, 2006

A great deal of idolatry throughout Corinth. There is one God in 3 persons, Who are co-equal and co-eternal. Each one is exactly equal, although they have different functions. Idolatry was a way of life in that part of the world.

For Israel, it was a continuous battle whether the Jews would worship Jehovah God or Baal or Molech or the Egyptian gods, etc. Israel was not immune to idolatry.

Idolatry

1. Clearly, idolatry in the Scripture in all of its forms is prohibited, in the Old and New Testaments. Ex. 20:3–4 Lev. 19:4 and many others. It is restated in the New Testament in 1Cor. 10:14 Gal. 5:20. It is profited in our age, and idolatry continues even to this day.
2. What is idolatry today? Lately, we have not seen any golden calves. There are many forms of idolatry today; they surround us. Worshiping at the shrine of humanism and relativism; and this is rampant; particularly in schools and colleges.
3. There are more tangible idols; television and the internet; and people center their lives on these two things. What comes out of these boxes are ideas; and they can be idols under certain circumstances.
4. Environmentalism is a worship of nature in the same way that an animist worships nature. Nature as god is an idol.
5. In any part of the world, where there is a Buddhist temple, people will bow down to this statue every day.
6. Ancestor worship, where ashes of ancestors are celebrated by Shintoism.
7. People worship and adore movie stars; and political figures. Hitler, as a person, was a living, breathing idol. Cæsar in the ancient world was worshiped. This is not just about stone and wood in the ancient world.
8. In the Bible, idolatry is the epitome of spiritual failure.
9. Idol-worship is a sign of cultural and spiritual degeneracy. Lev. 26:30–33.
10. Idolatry begins in the mind; it begins in our thinking and results in all sorts of overt practices. Judges 2:10–13 Ezek. 10:7?
11. Idolatry in any age in the Old and New Testaments; statue of the beast during the Trib that everyone will be forced to bow down and worship. Idolatry in any age is caused by the rejection of Jesus Christ as Savior. In the Old Testament, He was known as Jehovah or as the Messiah. They looked forward, and we look backward.

Rejection of Jesus Christ is always the cause of idolatry. Rejection of Jesus Christ creates a vacuum in the soul; and emptiness in the soul. If Jesus Christ is rejected, there is no absolute truth; and only humanism remains.

12. Idolatry is also related to rejection of divine authority and establishment. It rejects divine establishment. Lev. 20:6
13. Idolatry is also related to the sexual sins of immoral degeneracy. Ezek. 22:3–18 23 1Cor. 6:9 temple of Aphrodite in Corinth. Fertility gods were worshiped.
14. Idolatry is related to human sacrifice in heathen. This is found today in suicide bombers. Psalm 106 Lev. Israel sacrificed her children to idols. We don't think that this actually happens, but it does happen. Don't be shocked.
15. Idolatry is analogous to spiritual fornication or adultery in Col. 3:5. Spiritual adultery is a synonym for theological apostasy. Jer. 3:8–10 Ezek. 16 Rev. 17:1–5
16. Idolatry results in the national judgment of the 5th cycle of discipline. Isa. 2:8, 18, 20 Isa. 36:18–20 Ezek. 6
17. Idolatry is connected to demonism unquestionably. And they will no longer sacrifice (idolatry) their sacrifices to the goat demons with whom they play the harlot. Israel is in apostasy. Deut. 32:16–17: They made Him jealous (an anthropopathism) with strange gods and with abominations they provoked Him to anger, and to gods they have not known. For many believers, idolatry is a quick way to become involved with demonism and demon worship. All sorts of pagan cults going on in our country; idolatry gives the believer or unbeliever the chance to come in contact with demons; it is a conduit in many cases. Idolatry causes demon influence. A demon cannot indwell a believer, as our bodies are temples for God the Holy Spirit. There is unquestionably influence. A person under demon influence. Some will fall away from the faith is simply reversionism. The immutability of God guarantees that our salvation cannot be taken from us. God never changes. He promises us salvation. We may not grow spiritually. We may make a decision to be saved and then drop out of the spiritual life. When that happens, the believer can come under demon influence, but not possession. Some will fall away from the faith and pay attention to deceitful spirits and the doctrines of demons. The vacuum of the soul sucks in doctrine of demons when there is no truth there. Idolatry is the conduit. Your ideas all come from television or from what you read or from comparative religion.
18. Some of us must wonder, what do I need to stay away from in order to keep from being an idolator. There is great art in this world; great paintings and great sculpture, and it is okay to see great artwork. Michaelangelo's David is not circumcised. Bobby heard that someone would not go to see a statue of the Marines putting a flag in Mount something; and they thought this is worship of man. That is lunacy. Bobby is trying to preclude this lunacy. Finding people attractive and finding artwork enjoyable is not idolatry.

Most of the Jews at least realize that idolatry is prohibited. Paul may have even given these Corinthians a dissertation about idolatry. They should know that idolatry is wrong. However, this is a peripheral issue here. Some believers were simply eating meat offered to idols. There is no worship involved here; but there are physical aspects of idolatry that some are involved in.

Greek adjective: εἰδολοθυτός = sacrificed to an idol; flesh left over from an idol sacrifice. This is in the neuter genitive plural adjective. With the preposition περί = concerning. Paul is writing them concerning the meat which was left over after a sacrifice.

Molech involved the sacrifice of children; they got so worked up in sexual sins and the influence of demonism, that they offered up their own children. Capital punishment in Lev. 20:2–5 for doing this.

4 Questions Paul Needs to Answer

1. Is the leftover meat included in the prohibition of idolatry? Is that meat offered to idols included in the prohibition in the Old Testament.
2. Must they restrain themselves from eating this meat as part of idolatry?
3. Is eating participation in idolatrous practices.
4. Are these believers at liberty to eat such meat if they are not participating in the sacrifices themselves. That is, they aren't bringing these animals to the temples themselves. They are eating meat they bought the meat elsewhere or in some restaurant.

Paul brings up an underlying problem of the failure in the Christian life. This is a huge problem in the Corinthian Church, which is a huge problem in every church. Paul begins in the 2nd phrase in verse 1.

Then Paul suddenly says, we know that we all have knowledge. No spiritual shortcomings can be corrected without resolving the knowledge question. Knowledge can be so misunderstood, even though it is one of the great aspects of the Christian life. Paul is taking an oblique approach. Paul addresses a problem which is first connected to knowledge. Berachah is a church based upon knowledge, more than almost any other church in the US. Here it is, knowledge is a problem. So this may be confusing, where Paul says knowledge is a problem. Knowledge is integral in growing in grace and spiritual advance. Suddenly knowledge is a problem. Paul is going to connect knowledge with arrogance. Arrogance is the enemy of grace and doctrinal orientation.

Some people are arrogant with a little knowledge, which is especially a problem in Berachah; we can walk out of Berachah with a little knowledge; “I know more than most people in most churches throughout the US.” There are countless believers throughout the US, there are believers in every stage of growth. How do people hear the same doctrine and it never seems to get applied in the same way. Some apply it perfectly and others apply it in ways that make little or no sense.

Some can regurgitate many doctrines; they have the language down. They sound great; but when the chips are down, it seems to escape their application. Doctrine, in some situations, doesn't work. Knowledge needs to be transferred into problem solving devices. You may know the faith-rest drill; but you cannot use it if you don't transfer it by faith. Because you have knowledge, that does not mean it can be applied to anything.

There are professors who have a great deal of knowledge, but outside the classroom, they cannot apply anything. Knowledge is a dangerous thing sometimes, especially when it cannot be applied in the spiritual life. The faith-rest drill should be easy to apply; you know a little doctrine; you know a promise; there is a rationale that goes with it. You get into a certain circumstance, you think of that doctrine; you apply it and you relax. It is easy. The problem is, you have a little knowledge, but no rationale. These people have a heightened sensitivity to their surroundings. Knowledge makes them arrogant and they have a heightened sensitivity to their surroundings. They had so much knowledge of the Mosaic law; they could recite it by heart. They were good at it and it made them arrogant; even though the Mosaic Law just shows how much we fail. These same people dragged our Lord before the Sanhedrin and then before the Romans, in the back of their minds recognizing that they were doing wrong. With this little knowledge, they observe other believers, from a position of arrogance, and they are concerned about those believers exercising their spiritual liberty. They know a little bit which they apply in a legalistic way. They deplore the person who is involved. Arrogance looks at other believers eating meat offered to others, and they applied it to what others were doing. Paul had to correct this legalism. The legalist gets their eyes on other people and they stumble over their activities. "What these people are doing is not right by my standards; I must straighten these people out." Paul's point is, knowledge is a problem. With that knowledge, we can execute the spiritual life. We can serve God in the way He has designed for us to serve; that is what knowledge can do. It can also be a great problem for us. If we can only apply it to someone else, we are mixed up. We can only apply doctrine to ourselves. Legalism is rampant in the church today; and a little knowledge which is misapplied. When doctrine is done right, it is great. When it is legalism, it is one of the worst.

1Cor. 8:1 About food offered to idols: We know that "we all have knowledge." Knowledge inflates with pride, but love builds up.

1Cor. 8:1

Lesson #397

Thursday August 17, 2006

First idol which popped into Bobby's mind was secular humanism; humanity will save itself. Since there is no other savior other than mankind, then man becomes a god. A secular humanist is not going to say, "I am god." But the secular humanist will ascribe to man the qualities of God. They believe that man is evolving to a completely rational being and that sometime in the future, we will have these qualities. This is why there are some who want to talk to the Muslim terrorists, so that eventually, these terrorists will lay down their arms. And, with enough talk, man will realize that war is unhealthy, and there will be no more war. What we need to do is wipe out Muslim terrorists rather than talk to them.

Humanists worship at the shrine of the coming manmade utopia (everyone as a different idea). Bobby went to seminary in Oregon and Rasnish was in the Oregonian saying something or another. Part of his name means god; and he is a human worshiped as an idol.

There is environmentalism, the worship of money, beauty, fame, youth. Where idolatry exists, questions arise. The Corinthians wanted to know if peripheral contact with idolatry actually idolatry. If there is some sort of association, is that detrimental to the spiritual life. Can they touch or eat flesh sacrificed to idols. If they don't participate in the sacrifice itself, can they eat meat associated with it? Some did not care; some wanted to; some resented those who did it. Since there is idolatry in our culture, how close can we get to idolatry in our own time and not get burned. Is entering a Buddhist temple idolatry? Bobby doesn't know why you would want to; but is that wrong, when visiting Thailand, going into a temple here and there.

Let's say you want to preserve some animal about to become extinct, is that pantheism? Can we eat meat offered to idols? Are we tainted? This is a study with relevance to us as well as to them. The Corinthians understand some basic facts about idolatry, as should we. Idolatry is definitely prohibited in the Bible. 1Cor. 10:14: Flee idolatry. That is a pretty simple mandate. Idolatry is the epitome of spiritual failure and spiritual degeneracy; in people and organizations. Spiritual fornication or adultery. On a larger scale, idolatry has an impact. Many times in the Old Testament, the 5th cycle of discipline was brought on by idolatry. The Israelites worshiped Baal or Molech (who required child sacrifice); the golden calf; gods of the Amorites and Canaanites.

Idolatry is also a conduit to demonism; possession of the unbeliever and influence for the believer (1Tim. 4:1). Because of the peripheral activities of some believers at the church in Corinth. Some were involved with the peripheral issues of idol worship; issues which could be debated. The law of liberty, the law of love and the love of expediency.

Before Paul launches into an answer of these questions, Paul begins with a little detour, which involves a more basic problem in the church, which is the underlying problem here, and explains why they cannot answer the doctrinal questions in this chapter. This should have been easy for them, but it wasn't. There was no hiding of idolatry. There were temples to Gods all over Corinth. The Corinthian believers do have some knowledge of doctrine; they do have the tools which God has graciously given them. In this case, it is not happening.

Paul gave them 18 months of teaching, which is as good of a start as any congregation will ever get; and great pastors were over this church. Their underlying problem was not idolatry; so what was it? Knowledge is the problem; it is the hazard of limited knowledge; it is the wrong kind of knowledge; it is the hazard of knowledge which has not been transferred to over and above knowledge. This is the real problem everywhere. We cannot live and understand apart from knowledge. Non-metabolized doctrine is a dangerous liability if it is not transferred to ἐπιγνωσις. It is a strange thing to call doctrine a liability.

When knowledge makes you arrogant, this means this is knowledge which cannot be applied. We cannot know or live the life that God has designed for us without this knowledge. We need ἐπιγνωσις doctrine in order to function in this life. With just Gnosis, we have just enough information to make us dangerous. Knowledge coupled with arrogance.

It is too bad that the KJV was translated from inferior texts. Beautiful language. Bobby likes the NKJV because it preserves the language, and is an excellent translation.

The 2nd half of this verse distinguishes between two types of knowledge. The other knowledge is fully understood. It is the Christian way of life implanted in our soul. When it is transferred, it becomes the building material for the edification complex structure of the soul. This verse wraps up the edification complex and the divine dynasphere all rolled up into one. If Bobby launched into that, the rapture would come before he finished.

Knowledge in the right lobe is that used to serve the Lord. The grace apparatus for perception is what this passage refers to. In grace, God has provided for us a spiritual IQ; every believer regardless of our education, where it is a PhD or a GED or less; we have this knowledge provision. It is what we are given at salvation. We can understand, learn and apply. Any one of us can advance through this system. We don't have a little Z in our soul; this illustrates what happens in our soul when gnosis is present and is transferred to epignôsis.

At the very moment that we believe in Jesus Christ, God's grace does something for us; one of the 40 things that He does is, He creates a human spirit for each one of us. Adam, when he sinned, became dichotomos; and, when we believe in Jesus Christ, we become trichotomos. It is the filling of the Holy Spirit which empowers this entire process. If we are not filled with the Holy Spirit, then we do not have this. It energizes us for reception, retention and recall. The human spirit is the initial place where doctrine is received; and this doctrine is called pneumatikos. This is what happens in the human spirit. This noun is found in 1Cor. 2:13 and it means spiritual phenomena, doctrinal knowledge. This knowledge is communicated to us. It is inculcated into our human spirit. This knowledge is taught by a pastor-teacher and by God the Holy Spirit; and that makes it unique. Human instruction from a man with the gift of pastor-teacher; but it is also taught via the supernatural means of God the Holy Spirit. It goes from understanding to usable understanding; that is all that happens with the grace apparatus for perception. We are able to use it when we put it altogether.

The human spirit has received this understanding and it is put into the left lobe of the soul. This happens almost simultaneously. You hear it, you get it, and it is transferred. This was not made up; this comes from the Greek word vouç, which is the mentality of the soul. The left and right lobes are both aspects of the soul. The right lobe is the staging area for doctrine; academic knowledge. That is the very word for knowledge which Paul uses.

Gnosis makes arrogant; gnosis is the problem. This makes you a hearer of the word, but not a doer. You move it down into your mind where it is being mulled over. This academic knowledge may be filling up the left lobe of the soul. You know promises and all the rationales; and you can rattle all of these things off. You might have all this information about the end times as well. It is all residing in the left lobe, and many other doctrines as well. As long as it is Gnosis roaming around, it is worthless.

We have a part in this as well. What we have by way of academic knowledge is in the left lobe. Where does it go? Does it stay as γνῶσις; does it become a means of arrogance. Knowledge can make arrogant; and it can completely stifle our spiritual advance. We can have γνῶσις and it just sits there. In the worst cases scenario, it can make us very arrogant.

Unless it is transferred, it is not a part of our Christian growth; and it cannot be converted. How does it get transferred? This process requires just one thing: positive volition. We could listen until doomsday and soak it in; and there is no application. It always requires volition.

So, how do we metabolize doctrine?

1. Bible doctrine is not simply human information. There are many people for whom this is just an academic exercise. You must recognize that doctrine is so much more than simple human info.
2. Doctrine is believed; it is accepted as the word of truth by many people. We don't deal in absolutes; we deal in relatives. We have many who think the Bible is filled with great information, but written by very smart men, and nothing more.
3. Belief of doctrine means that we exercise a faith perception. We understand academic subjects through rationalism and empiricism.
4. Faith perception and the filling of the Holy Spirit is the grace method. Academic study is the human method. There is academic study in both methods, but the utilization of doctrine requires more than just academic knowledge.
5. Even though the Holy Spirit makes it understandable, it is still just γνῶσις. A millisecond later, it may be recognized as truth from the Word of God, and it is transferred. The more immature you are, the less likely you are to believe it. We hear it, we store it, we metabolize it.
6. Nonmeritorious positive volition coupled with the Holy Spirit transfer converts γνῶσις to ἐπιγῶσις.
7. This process takes knowledge to another level. That knowledge is what it takes to gain spiritual momentum in the spiritual life. The meaning of ἐπιγῶσις is full-knowledge; over and beyond knowledge; divine viewpoint thinking. Ἐπιγῶσις is spiritually metabolized γνῶσις. It is a grace operation. Now ἐπιγῶσις resides in the right lobe of the soul; God makes it real to us. This is where the spiritual IQ lives. It is this spiritual IQ which gives us a relationship with God. Spiritual phenomena into spiritual application. That is the metabolizing. The spiritual knowledge advances the spiritual life. It becomes applied knowledge for the believer.
8. Several passages: Eph. 3:19 the love of Christ surpasses knowledge that you may be filled up with all the fullness of God. Col. 1:9 that you may be filled with the over and above knowledge. Doctrine reveals the plan and the person of God. All spiritual wisdom and understanding. Metabolized doctrine and applied doctrine.
9. When Epignôsis enters the right lobe of the soul, it enters into the stream of consciousness.

1Cor. 8:1 About food offered to idols: We know that "we all have knowledge." Knowledge inflates with pride, but love builds up.

1Cor. 8:1–2 Γνωσις/Epignôsis Lesson #398 Sunday 1 August 20, 2006

It seems like their questions should be easy to answer—idolatry is wrong and everything associated with it is wrong. Paul will spend an entire chapter dealing with the problem, which is very relevant to us.

If the Corinthian believers can understand the knowledge problem/question, then the entire spiritual life will fall into place. All questions of the spiritual life are solved by doctrinal knowledge. The Christian life can only be lived by knowledge of Bible doctrine. This is the foundation which God has given us. Therefore, what could be the problem with knowledge, as seems to be the situation in these first two verses.

Limited knowledge, the wrong kind of knowledge, and knowledge mixed with arrogance; these are knowledge problems. As believers, we need to be fed; knowledge is like food; and we all need to be fed. The food set before us must be eaten in order to have any value to us. It must be chewed and swallowed to have any meaningful effect.

When we eat food, there is an involuntary process which takes place; and a change begins, which is the metabolism process. It is the involuntary process of metabolizing food. This is a grace procedure, whether we are swallowing food and metabolizing it or doctrine, which we believe and thereby metabolize. The sugars which are developed from the metabolization of the food is what causes our bodies to function. Without it, we cannot exist. We need the nourishment of metabolized food. Involuntary grace process happens every time that we swallow food; every time without fail.

The same is true of a good sermon from a pastor. The message from a pastor-teacher is raw knowledge. When Bobby gives points and speaks about Who and What Christ is and Who and What God is, that is γνωσις, which is un-metabolized doctrine. In the analogy, it is like food on the table; it cannot be used for spiritual growth in the γνωσις form; it cannot be used. In and of itself, it is good; but we cannot use it unless we metabolize it. We must take this raw spiritual food and make it usable. We hear γνωσις, but we must also apply it. γνώσις and ἐπίγνωσις are the keys here.

We are born spiritually dead. When Adam sinned, he lost his spiritual nature. No one is born into this life with a human spirit. This is because we are born under sin. This is the home or target for γνώσις. By faith, gnosis is transferred into the left lobe, which is called νοῦς; this is a part of our spiritual intelligence system. Think of this as our spiritual stomach. Here is where the process begins. Gnosis is the staging area of the soul. It is considered and pondered in the left lobe. Let's say you are looking at this operation Z, and you are thinking it over in your mind. This is the staging area. Doctrine is understood and pondered. This is simply what doctrine does to us and for us. As long as gnosis remains in this staging area, it is not usable information. It is something that we might know, but we do not apply it.

The process of converting from gnosis to epignôsis is recognizing the absolute truth of Bible doctrine; we believe this gnosis as the absolute truth. The Holy Spirit then transfers this information to the right lobe of the soul, called καρδιά. This is where epignôsis is transferred to.

The heart is where we find epignôsis. This is a grace operation, not performed by us but by God the Holy Spirit. The knowledge by which we grow to spiritual maturity; it becomes applied wisdom for the believer. It is divine viewpoint. It is the function of the mind of Christ. ἐπίγνωσις is the mind of Christ in our souls.

And to know the love of Christ which surpasses all knowledge. We will look at love from every direction; we will understand God and what His love means. Only epignôsis doctrine can be applied in every circumstance. Col. 1:9: that you may be filled with the knowledge (epignôsis) of His will. All spiritual wisdom and understanding. That is epignôsis doctrine in the soul.

When Epignôsis doctrine enters the right lobe, How is it usable? There are compartments in our heart: frame of reference, memory center, Metabolized doctrine is stored for use here. When the Holy Spirit brings it to mind, then it is there to use. This is the compartment designed for us to think. We cannot think without a vocabulary. Without a way to express that thinking, in effect, you are not thinking. . it is ready to be used conceptually and it flows into the doctrinal concepts area, in categories, where it is organized and stored. We are building doctrine upon doctrine; we are putting doctrines together.

We develop momentum in our spiritual life; this is what epignôsis does for us. Once we develop momentum in our spiritual life, then we manifest wisdom. This is the application of divine viewpoint to our experience. This is where doctrine meets our life as wisdom. This is where problems get solved; it is here where we feel confidence and we develop spiritual self esteem. You cannot be occupied with Christ without this process. It is the spiritual life which He pioneered for us in the 1st advent. This is the whole picture of our spiritual life. These are the mechanics. This is what happens in order for us to become a mature believer; in order for us to glorify God in our bodies. This epignôsis doctrine which becomes wisdom in our souls.

1Cor. 8:1 About food offered to idols: We know that "we all have knowledge." Knowledge inflates with pride, but love builds up.

1Cor. 8:2 If anyone thinks he knows anything, he does not yet know it as he ought to know it.

1Cor. 8:1–2

Lesson #399

Sunday 2 August 20, 2006

Epignôsis enters the stream of consciousness and comes out the other end as doctrinal wisdom, ready to be applied to every aspect of our lives. More than just academic information, but something which can be used in our spiritual lives.

For some believers at Berachah are looking at this as boring; it is all with mechanics. Shouldn't we learn how to feel good? Bobby gives permission to feel good about mechanics. Don't think of this as being just a dry subject; but as the truth. Our purpose is the mature spiritually. It is from born again to the time when we depart from this life.

Γνώσις can be sidetracked by this Greek verb πυσιόσω = to be puffed up, to be inflated; to be vain and conceited. Doctrine can be a source of arrogance.

How Does Sitting in Bible Class Make us Arrogant?

1. Sitting in Bible class can make us arrogant; γνώσις makes a person arrogant.
2. How can something so indispensable be a source of arrogance? How can we become arrogant from the greatest aspect of the spiritual life?
3. Academic knowledge – metabolizing γνώσις + the arrogance of the sin nature = arrogance. We sit in class, we take in γνώσις, and we say, "I cannot imagine that could be true." That much grace is a little too much grace. This is one of the most difficult areas for anyone to understand. People reject grace in varying degrees.
4. The great problem of our sin nature is arrogance.
5. When we are out of fellowship for any length of time and doctrine is not metabolized, arrogance creeps in.
6. Arrogance is the sin nature's most basic by-product; arrogance is the antithesis of grace.
7. Academic knowledge is frequently the companion of arrogance. "I've been here for years; I have so much knowledge; I have such a great store of knowledge." You have turned doctrine into arrogance. The lack of Epignôsis knowledge makes us arrogant. In any academic field, we can become arrogant. We can speak with other Christians, and we get so arrogant about what we know compared to what they do not know. There is an attitude of arrogance there. This is a danger faced by the adolescent believer. This is a believer who has a lot of knowledge, but little epignôsis. Such a person has just enough liberty to flaunt it. The legalist is arrogant, and there are all these believers in Corinth who suppose all these other believers are involved in idolatry. And those who were eating idol-meat, looked down on those who were legalistic. The Judaizers may have known a lot of Old Testament doctrine about idols and sacrifices offered to them; and the libertarians of the church may know that the Old Testament law is, in part, irrelevant to believers today. Both are functioning for a position of arrogance.

When you find someone in this condition, recognize your advantage in life, and do not lord it over them that you have this advantage. You don't try to stuff doctrine down their throats. Arrogance is out of place for the believer who has a lot of epignôsis. Γνώσις makes arrogant; conceit, or arrogance, is an occupational hazard to the believers without epignôsis. If Bible doctrine is not believed, then it does not become building material for the soul. Arrogance overtakes us in knowledge of Bible doctrine. Doctrine can be perverted by conceit and arrogance.

If we think from the right lobe of the soul, our attitude is. Love is the summation of epignosis in the soul. Oikodomeō = οικοδομῶ = to build up [a spiritual structure in the soul]. Love is a part of the building of the structure in the soul.

When you take the subject of love, shouldn't it be a feel-good subject? Love is one of the most misunderstood subjects in all human languages. Everyone has an idea about what love is. Love is part of building a structure in the soul.

The structure in the soul, as Bob named the edification complex structure. This is built upon the foundation of the filling of the Holy Spirit. There is no other foundation. It is the filling of the Holy Spirit which empowers the believer. The filling of the Holy Spirit is what drives the first floor of the edification complex. These illustrations are all designed to fit together.

Γνώσις makes arrogant, if we never get to doctrinal orientation. Gal. 5:22 gives us the fruit of the Spirit: But the fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness, self-control; against such things there is no law. If you think of love as emotional, then your behavior from emotion or from mental attitude sins are simply reactions to life. We are reacting to life with arrogance and mental attitude sins. We react to people and to circumstances. Epignosis or doctrinal orientation produces the baseline mental attitude of love. This is where it starts. Doctrinal orientation and spiritual growth which produce the fruits of the spirit. It is always mental attitude before actions. So many believers want to put their actions first. This is a believer with γνώσις knowledge and thinks that his service is preeminent.

Love in the soul edifies; it builds up the soul in the spiritual life. Notice that humility is in between γνώσις and impersonal love. The more we transfer, the more that love edifies us. That love edifies is one of the most incredible concepts in Scripture. We are going to deal with love edifies for awhile. This is a microcosm of the spiritual life. Bobby would use this one Scripture to teach the Christian way of life. It begins with the love of God and reciprocation of that love. It is the very opposite of arrogance and the very definition of our attitude and actions in life.

1Cor. 8:1 About food offered to idols: We know that "we all have knowledge [γνώσις]." Knowledge [γνώσις] makes arrogant, but love edifies [or, builds up].

1Cor. 8:2 If anyone thinks he knows anything, he does not yet know it as he ought to know it.

1Cor. 8:1b Ἀγάπη Love

Lesson #400

Wednesday August 23, 2006

A column by Thomas Soule: How many cease fires have there been in the middle east? This will give Hezbollah a time to rest and rearm. Why do we keep falling for this? The windbags of the press think there is something great about the UN. No one in their right mind thinks that the Lebanon army or the UN forces can cause Hezbola to disarm. Most people have no idea how small Israel is. New Hampshire is considered to be a small state and it is larger, like 45 other states. Lake Michigan is twice the size of Israel. There was no Palestinian state; Christians, Jews and Muslims have lived in Israel for centuries. After WW2, the British carved out a small portion for Israel. Jews have lived in Palestine for a long time. It was the Ottoman Empire that ran this area until WW2. The Jews declared independence not from Arab groups, but from Great Britain. Arab countries urged Jews to leave their country for this new state. The Arabs created the Palestine problem there. In 1967, Israel took over various lands because of their strategic value. These areas were never Palestinian homelands.

Gen. 12:1–3: God blesses those who bless Israel and curses those who curse Israel. We receive great blessings, despite the many problems in the US because of our support of Israel.

The γνῶσις problem and the epignôsis solution. The pastor-teacher teaches γνῶσις to the human spirit, where it becomes academic knowledge. We can have no spiritual life without metabolizing doctrine. The danger is revealed by the verb in v. 1.

The verb phusiozô = puffed up, filled with wind. “Should a wise man answer with windy knowledge, and fill himself with the east wind?” from the book of Job. The wise man has more than γνῶσις. The wind here is drought, which comes from the east. Conceit and arrogance are occupational hazards of the believer when doctrine does not reside in the soul of the believer. If the knowledge just sits there, it does not lie dormant. Γνῶσις produces something when it sits in the left lobe; it produces the scorching, east desert wind of the soul, which brings destructive arrogance to the soul. This can be used as building material for the arrogance of the soul. Γνῶσις is doctrine in its raw form. It is doctrine that we take in. We must think about it and ponder it. As Γνῶσις, we must believe it and transform it into epignôsis.

We hear academic knowledge in church; but without metabolizing it. Academic knowledge minus metabolization + old sin nature = arrogance. When you do not metabolize, you are not teachable; and when you are not teachable, then you have no humility. You might accept some things and resist others. As Bobby studies, using the proper hermeneutics, utilizing the gift and training tha the has; he gets it right most of the time. He is not infallible. Bobby, at some point, must be wrong, because he is human. If we metabolize the doctrine that bobby gives us, we will grow; which is a guarantee from Scripture. When you reject γνῶσις, you cancel the teaching of the Holy Spirit, and you cannot transfer this γνῶσις doctrine into the right lobe of the soul.

A lot of people think that they are doctrinally orientated because they’ve heard a lot of teaching, on television and elsewhere. We, when we listen to a number of different teachers, must then decide which person to believe and which person not to.

Teachability means that we have accepted the authority of doctrine. Arrogance is the refusal to metabolize doctrine. When you reject doctrine, humility does not exist; arrogance does. You have refused to accept the authority of the pastor-teacher and what he teaches; and, more importantly, the Scripture. And, as this passage states, γνώσις makes you arrogant.

The final phrase is ...love edifies. ἐπίγνωσις in the soul produces the environment of love. Love is the summation of Epignōsis in the soul. But you have to understand what love means in order to follow this. Therefore, we need to understand absolute love; we cannot understand love until we understand absolute love.

Epignōsis is what helps to build that superstructure the edification complex. We have the filling of the Holy Spirit; we take in Γνώσις doctrine, which we metabolize by faith in what is being taught. When the Holy Spirit turns γνώσις to epignōsis, you gain humility and more and more teachability. Love edifies while Γνώσις puffs up. This word relates to the edification complex structure. As the edification complex is build, the upper floors are constructed. Love becomes the top floors of the edification complex.

Δε sets up a comparison. We can render it on the other hand.

The Doctrine of Love

We need an in depth look at ἀγαπή; Bobby is going to put it all together with Γνώσις and Epignōsis.

1. It is not warmy fuzzies; it is not sloppy ἀγαπή. People hear the word love, and they think of the person they are in love with, or who hurt them. It is an emotionally charged word.
2. Ἀγαπή love is thinking; it is the by-product of ἐπίγνωσις. Ἀγαπή is the right attitude of love.
3. Ἀγαπή love distinguishes the believer from the believer who is arrogant; the person with love is humble in their soul.
4. Remember that humility is the second floor of the edification complex right after doctrinal orientation; which is necessary in order to have humility. When we begin to understand the grace of God, we begin to see just how unworthy we are; when we recognize how great God is, we grasp how puny we are.
5. Humility is the basis for developing ἀγαπή love.
6. Arrogance and the attitude of love are always mutually exclusive. We cannot be arrogant and have an attitude of love. The more we stay out of fellowship, the more arrogant we become.
7. The attitude of love as a fruit of the spirit is blocked in the self-centered believer. There is no fruit spouting from the soul of the self-centered believer.
8. If you are not teachable—if you have no humility—you can never learn to love as divine viewpoint. Love as divine viewpoint is the mind of Christ; we must understand love as the thinking of God Himself. In order to understand love, we must be tied up in the source of love. If we learn the source of love; if we learn what love is; we can apply that love to every other aspect of life.

Love is the epitome of divine thinking; it is the premier application of doctrine. Notice as the edification complex is raised, think about how Epignôsis is raised in the construction. ἐπίγνωσις drives out arrogance and instills humility. As we continue being teachable and increase Epignôsis in our souls, that we increase our capacity for love, toward friends, a gf, and toward God. When our souls are inculcated with Epignôsis love.

God is the One from Whom all love originates. We would not have any understanding of what love is unless we understand who and what God is. His love is His essential being. God is love. That is an incredible statement in and of itself. God's person is love.

God's Love; the Attribute of Love in God

1. No other attribute of God is described as it is described in 1John 4:8 (God is love). You can write God = love. That is His essence. No other attribute is expressed in this way; only love.
2. Love is the expression of the personality of God the Father, God the Son and God the Holy Spirit. Each one of Them is Love. This expresses their personality.
3. Love is the way that God thinks. We know that thinking is the essence of personality. You are what you think; He thinks love. That is where love starts in you; in your attitude and in your mind.
4. A definition of love: God's love is the absolute virtue and benevolence of His thinking. His benevolence is directed toward us at every moment.
5. God always thinks with absolute virtue and benevolence; He always gives of Himself. Constantly and consistently. This is even true when God is said to be angry and wrathful. We know that these are anthropopathisms. Human emotions, thoughts and attitudes which are ascribed to God; things which He does not actually possess. We simply cannot understand the infinite with our finite minds. God disapproves of something; and this is expressed as anger. But God is not up there kicking things and swearing and yelling. Even when He is angry, God is still love; even when His plan is being violated by the Γνώσις believer. Since God is immutable, His love is immutable. God's love never departs from Him. There is not even a moment when His love departs; and there is not one moment when He does not love us; no matter how bad we get. People cannot hold onto love; some people fall in and out of love.
6. God cannot be anything less than perfect love; even when He disapproves of our actions. It can never diminish even an inch. He has this love toward man.
  - a. When God's perfect virtue and benevolence are directed toward man, it assumes the character of love. He is love and He direct that character of love toward others. God is love and He projects love.
  - b. God has both personal love and He has impersonal love for the unbeliever. God loves every member of the human race who has ever lived. God always projects love, either personal or impersonal. Jesus Christ died for Adolf Hitler; He died for all of us. That is the greatest love which has ever existed.
  - c. The supreme evidence of God's love is the sending of His Son; it cost God everything. Imputing sins to His Son, a Son without sin, is the greatest demonstration of love that could ever exist. How many of us would die for the worst person that we have ever known.

- d. There is never a time when that virtue and benevolence are not directed toward us. Heb. 12:6. God wants us to wake up. He wants us to get with the plan. God disciplines us in love; and never in anger (which is used as an Anthropopathism).
7. Understand that God is love is just one of His attributes.
8. God's love can never be isolated from the rest of His nature. When it is, that is the beginning of doctrinal aberrations. It has been true in all of church history. When someone elevates love above every other attribute, that completely denigrates every other attribute, including justice and righteousness. They think that God will accept all human beings. Love comes in, because God has a plan to deal with it.

1Cor. 8:1 About food offered to idols: We know that "we all have knowledge [γνῶσις]." Knowledge [γνῶσις] makes arrogant, on the other hand, love edifies [or, builds up].

1Cor. 8:2 If anyone thinks he knows anything, he does not yet know it as he ought to know it.

1Cor. 8:1b Ἀγάπη Love

Lesson #401

Thursday August 24, 2006

ἀγάπη οικοδομῶ = love edifies. Love is both a means and an end in the Christian life. This is a most extensive concept in the Scripture. It is thinking; thinking with divine viewpoint. ἐπίγνωσις is what advances the believer in the spiritual life. Arrogance retard spiritual growth. Arrogance and the attitude of agapê love are mutually exclusive. Arrogance is the basic problem that the sin nature presents to all of us. Doctrinal orientation and humility are the virtues which bring momentum to the spiritual life. It is the building up of agapê in the Christian life. Γνῶσις makes arrogant; but agapê edifies (or builds up).

Love is being constructed in our soul—that is a part of the building of our spiritual life; and it is also what is created by our spiritual life. The Apostle John did a lot of writing about ἀγάπη love. Advance and result.

Love is the maximum concentration on an object. This is true, except, of course, for God's love. God does not have to concentrate on anyone for love; He is love; He is the definition of love. His very being is love, without any object to love. If God has no object to love, He is still love, because it is His very being. This makes His love the perfect paradigm of love. We must have an objective standard for love. If we try to understand human love, we cannot understand agapê love. Love is bewildering enough, unless we begin at the beginning, which is God. This must include the study of God and the study of love. We cannot understand our own love unless we understand God's love. Agapê love is the summation of epignôsis in the soul. When we study God's essence, we must study His love. As we learn the source of love and the standard, through the application of doctrine.

Αγάπη love is a mental attitude; it is not emotional. God's love is straight-line; it never changes, it never varies; it is constant. Emotion goes up and down; it changes. Our actions become compatible with the model of virtue love; that is the attribute of God's love. In order to build God's love; we must begin with love as an attribute of God.

Love as an Attribute of God

1. Love is a quality of God. It is what God is as well as what He does. This is a unique quality in God.
2. A definition of love as an attribute is this. His love is the absolute virtue and benevolence of His nature.
3. Benevolence is a great word for the love of God. Benevolence is that perfect virtue benefits all creatures and assures all creatures their best interest.
4. God's love is His benevolence is the essence of His personality, because it is the way He thinks. His thought pattern is benevolent. We bestow certain gifts on people; God's love is never-ending; it is the quality of His love. God does think; He has mentality because He is a person (as He is presented in Scripture). God is not some impersonal force, which is the idea that God is nature, which is pantheism.
5. Love is the prime cause along with justice and righteousness, for all of God's actions toward mankind. These 3 are the cause of all God's actions toward mankind. These 3 attributes are where God meets sinners.
6. God's love never departs from Him; it is not fleeting; it is not here today, gone tomorrow. It is never less than perfect love. The more we understand about God's love, the more awesome that statement becomes. Grace is the expression of God's love toward us.
7. When His perfect virtue and benevolence is directed toward man, it assumes the character of love and the actions of love. We can begin to recognize this. It is difficult for us to understand a being which is love. We can understand the activity of love.
8. God has both personal love (for the believer, because we possess His righteousness); He also has impersonal love for the unbeliever, who does not possess His righteousness.
9. The supreme evidence of His love or the outworking of His love is the sending of His Son on our behalf. That is the supreme evidence of His love. People often complain that bad things happen to them, and therefore, God does not love them. Whatever happens to us in life, we always have that. As believers in Jesus Christ, you recognize that when you are under discipline or suffering; and when you use the problem solving devices, all are for our benefit. God has provided all the resources that we need to weather any storm.
10. There is never a time when virtue and benevolence are not directed toward us. This includes when He disciplines (Whom the Lord loves, He disciplines [for our benefit]).
11. God's love is just one of His attributes; and His love cannot be isolated from the rest of His attributes. He will be a mystery, if we do not put all of these attributes together. It is very interesting as to how love interacts with His other attributes.

12. God's love is entirely compatible with His other attributes.
13. No one attribute takes precedence over another. We cannot say that any attribute of God takes precedence over another. All of His attributes function in complete harmony.
14. All these combined attributes go to make up His entire essence. Love is our focus; but we should not forget His other attributes. Bobby is going to give us definitions for His other attributes and how they related to His love.
  - a. Sovereignty:
    - i. God is the supreme ruler of the universe; He is the absolute King; King of Kings.
    - ii. He has absolute authority and will (Eph. 1:11 1Cor. 12:11)
    - iii. His will is that by which God accomplishes His plan.
    - iv. His will is self-determining, autonomous, with absolute freedom to function outside of everything but Himself. If God wills to do something, then He can do it. However, God may not choose to do all that He can do. God cannot love and put aside justice and righteousness. He cannot look the other way; otherwise, He would be less than God.
    - v. His will is the final cause of all things. It is His love and righteousness and justice which are motives for all that He does for us.
    - vi. His eternal, infinite unchangeable will and authority are expressed in what theology calls the divine decrees. God's will always relates to His purpose and the future of all events. This seems to be very close to determinism. God wills it, it is going to happen; so not to worry. This is the thinking of some Muslims. However, they leave out free will. God takes our free will into account when He made the divine decrees. God does not simply determine the course of our life; but allows us our free will.
    - vii. God is restricted in His will only by His own natures. He can do all that He wills, but He may not choose to do all that He can. God restricts His own will.
    - viii. God never exercises His will apart from His love.
    - ix. God's will is never arbitrary. It is the virtue and benevolence of His thinking. God's will is benevolent; always.
    - x. God's love is totally compatible with all of His decisions. His love, justice and righteousness always guide His decisions. If we focus on love, we will never understand all of this. Bobby is trying to unconfuse us; God is so far beyond us, that it is difficult to understand. You cannot love someone that you don't know. Picking someone up in a bar is not love; you don't know them and you cannot love them. If you find great qualities in someone that you date, then you might love them. You must find out how infinitely worthy God is so that we can love Him. God already loves us; it takes two to have intimacy. There is no intimacy if God loves us and we do not reciprocate.

xi. It was the sovereign decision of God in the divine decrees to deal with fallen man on the basis of love, and grace, and justice and righteousness.

b. Eternal life:

- i. God is without beginning and without end; He is Alpha and Omega (spoke of God and of Jesus Christ).
- ii. God transcends all temporal limits. He is free from all temporal limitations. We are governed by time; our life is time. Every aspect of our life is governed by time.
- iii. God is free from the progression of time. A minute to God is like a Millennium. We are dealing with the infinite.
- iv. God is not in time, though time is in God. Time affects no limit on Him. He fulfills the sequence of time in human history. Time puts no limit on God. Time does not govern time, but He governs with it.
- v. Because He is eternal, nothing caused God to come into existence; that is very difficult for us to understand. There is always a beginning; always an end. Eternity past is really a misnomer. Past indicates a beginning and no such beginning exists.
- vi. Therefore, since nothing caused God to come into existence, His love has always existed, unsustained by Himself or by any other source. Love has to be sustained; it can go stale; it can go south. Love is eternal, and it always exists. It always existed when it didn't begin.
- vii. There never was or will be a time when God is not perfect love. Not in the past or the present or forever.
- viii. As long as God exists, His love exists; so His love is eternal and infinite.
- ix. The practical result is, God does not begin to love. Our love has a beginning; at some point, we develop a mental attitude of love. God never stops loving, like we can. God does not fall in love like human beings do; it does not exist on different levels. God loves us as our worst rotten self and as us at our best. It does not develop.
- x. No one can earn God's love; it is just expressed toward us eternally. When God is blessing us, this is love; when God is disciplining us, this is His love.

c. Veracity:

- i. God is absolute truth. There is a misused word. In the relative world that we live in, what is truth? Truth can be anything; whatever we make it.
- ii. We can be assured that whatever God has revealed is absolute reality. We may reveal something which may or may not be absolute reality.
- iii. The truth has never been diminished or compromised ever. For most of us, the truth has been compromised.

- iv. Therefore, God is absolutely truthful; that is the function of His veracity. God is always reliable. His truth can never be questioned; His word to us is absolute truth. God's Word is the only source of absolute truth in this world. The person who speaks it is not absolute truth. When someone teaches the truth, it is truth, regardless of how wrong the pastor is in teaching it.
  - v. God is also absolutely faithful. Always faithful. God fulfills all of His promises; He cannot lie. If God lies, He would be violating His own righteousness, and He cannot do this.
  - vi. God's revelations in the Scripture including mandates, promises, and warnings, and absolutely dependable.
  - vii. God's veracity is seen in His words, His works and in all of His ways (Rev. 15:3).
  - viii. God is the source of all truth. Truth emanates from Him to us.
  - ix. The truth of God is the fountain of all objective knowledge, including the knowledge of love.
  - x. God's love is rooted in every bit of truth and faithfulness which resides in His being.
  - xi. When God says He loves us, that is reality; that is absolute truth. We will never hear that reality from any other human being, because they do not have this veracity. Their love will always be imperfect; and sometimes, it won't even exist.
- d. Omniscience:
- i. Omniscience means that God knows all the knowable and then some (Psalm 33 139:1–4 Heb. 4:3)
  - ii. God is a consciously knowing person. He has limitless intellect. He is the ultimate intellectual.
  - iii. Omniscience is related to the divine decrees. Omniscience includes both the actual reality, past present and future events; and it includes all possible alternatives and permutations which have never happened. God takes a set of facts and takes that out; and it would be perfectly accurate. That is the extent of His omniscience.
  - iv. We understand from His omniscience directed toward us, which it is in the divine decree, that He has a distinct interest in us in His creation. What He decreed in eternity past. God created us and He took an interest in us.
  - v. From eternity past, God has known all about our sins and failures; every single one of them...including those you hid from everyone else. God knew them even before we were born.
  - vi. Yet, with all this knowledge, God's love is never disappointed; it is never frustrated; it is never diminished by such knowledge. Knowing someone's total failure and still exercising benevolence toward that person. Neither does God's love increase by the knowledge of our good deeds. God's love is a straight line; it is not up and down.

- vii. God's infinite mentality focuses on everything at once. God has an infinitely tracked mind; it includes all of everything all at once, so that His love is not subject to any variables. There are no variables in His love. We as creatures have variables in our love; how is that love returned; has that person upset me today? This is the conjunction of truth, love and omniscience.
- viii. Since God has always known our imperfections, he also knows our needs at every point in our life. When we know God, we know Who is in our corner.
- ix. God's love and His grace has responded to our sins and failures.

1Cor. 8:1b Knowledge [γνῶσις] makes arrogant, on the other hand, love [ἀγάπη] edifies [or, builds up]. [οικοδομῶ]

1Cor. 8:1b Love and Attributes    Lesson #402    Sunday 1 August 27, 2006

We are presented with choices between arrogance or love; between γνῶσις and epignōsis. This is what the Christian life is all about. We can go in one direction or the other. Knowledge makes arrogant. Γνῶσις is not effective for growth or application. It is knowledge which is no more than human knowledge; it is whatever any other unbeliever can hear and reject.

This γνῶσις does not simply just sit there in the left lobe; it does not lie dormant. It becomes a source of pride. You have more theological knowledge than someone else sitting in a different church. The very thing which should bring you humility causes you to be arrogant. Rebound and metabolizing of doctrine checks this arrogance. Arrogance underlies all reversionism.

Conversely, in v. 1, we are told that agape edifies (οικοδομῶ). This is a technical term for the edification complex of the soul. The building of love in the edification complex is the project of epignosis which engenders in our a basis of humility. Love is essentially a block in the construction of this entire complex. A building is constructed one floor at a time; however, we raise up a structure first, and then fill in the floors. It begins with the filling of the Holy Spirit and our gap is activated. We begin to think; doctrinal orientation is thinking; doctrine drives out the arrogance. Γνῶσις brings in arrogance, but Epignōsis drives it out. Love is also a part of the superstructure of the building itself. We construct them by advance and they are objectives of that construction. Love is also an objective of spiritual advance, making love a two-sided coin. The means of spiritual advance and the objective of spiritual advance.

Love is ἀγάπη, which is a very common word in the New Testament; and a word grossly misunderstood by most believers and unbelievers. Most see love as emotional slop; ἀγάπη has one of the most phenomenal meanings in scripture. It is a mental attitude of thinking, patterned after divine love. God is love (1John 4:8). God defines the very content of love; our only real contact with love is with the love of God. We must understand what it means for ἀγάπη love to edify us. We must know God to know real love. We must know His love in order to return His love; to glorify, serve and worship Him. Αγάπη love is the center of His life. Knowing Him means we know just how awesome God is. God has a very personal benevolence to you individually. Our love for Him cannot help but grow.

We must begin by understanding what the attribute of love is in God, in order to understand what our love should be.

Αγάπη Love

1. God's love is the absolute virtue and benevolence of His very nature. It assures their best interests. Benevolence is the perfect, absolute goodness of God. God's benevolence and His virtue are the essence of His personality. It is the way He thinks. He will be perfectly benevolent and perfectly virtuous to us.
2. Love is the primary cause, along with justice and righteousness, of all God's actions toward us. This premise is challenged all the time. "If God loves us so much, why did He create this mess we live in and why doesn't he does something about it? How can a God of love allow so much suffering in this world. Since God can do something about it, and yet does not, makes it His fault. This is said by those who are personally mad or in great pain themselves." For God to remove all suffering, He would have to remove the cause of all suffering. The cause is Satan, his demons, and mankind; most men are the cause of their own suffering. To get ride of suffering, God must get rid of us. Our old sin nature and Adam's original sin came from Adam's choice to disobey God. God could simply remove our volition, which would also remove the cause of suffering. However, volition is an essential in the angelic conflict. Okay, why not just remove our old sin nature? This will violate His justice and righteousness; plus, God has already put a man on this earth without an old sin nature. God's love is going to fix us. God's love is not negated because we suffer, and He does not always stop it. God's love can be demonstrated in suffering. Rom. 5:8. God has given us all the resources to handle our suffering and to glorify Him at the same time. The love of God deals with us in the best way that He can; and there is never a time when His virtue and benevolence are directed toward us—even in discipline, which is in our best interest. God's love always looks out for us. We cannot begin to understand how His love works, as it is infinite, and our minds are finite. We must understand something in relation to His total person. God has revealed His person to us in the Scripture. Otherwise, whatever we conjure about God is superimposing our human ideas over God. God's total essence is made up of more than just love. No one attribute of God precedes or supercedes another. We must see the rest of His attributes in relationship to His love.

Sovereignty

1. Sovereignty means that God is the supreme ruler of the universe. 1Cor. 12:11. His sovereign will is the final cause of all things.

2. However, there is a restriction on God's sovereignty. God never exercises His will apart from his virtue, benevolence, love, justice and righteousness.
3. God is not arbitrary; He is not mean; He does not play with us for His own pleasure.
4. The divine decrees are His commanding will compelled by His love. The divine decrees is a vast subject found in the Integrity of God booklet.
5. The sovereign will of God coexists with the free will of man. If His will causes all things to happen; He determines all things. It is an easy jump to say, "God has determined all in my life. My volition is phoney; God has already done everything." This is Muslim thought; it is not me that blows something up; it is God acting through me. However, we do have responsibility for our own decisions.
6. Isn't there a problem, God's sovereignty and my free will? That is the basis for many theological discussions.
7. Our will is truly free, because Adam made a freewill decision against God. If this was God's decision for Adam to do this, then God is the author of sin. Without free will, man cannot reciprocate love. Love must be freely given for it to mean anything.
8. In order for us to have a love relationship, we must have a free choice not to love someone. If God says, "You will love Me and I have predetermined that" then there is no free will here and our love is nonexistanty. God's sovereign will has allowed our will to coexist, which allows us to love Him. God's will will be accomplished despie our free will choices, good or bad. The plan of God will be accomplished. All the good decisions which we make are a part of His plan; as well as our bad decisions. God's plan will be accomplished, no matter what we choose to do.

God's Eternal Life

1. God is without beginning and without end. How can something exist without a beginning or end? God is free from all temporal limitations. Time is how we live; our lives are governed by time. Time is our constraint; but it does not constrain God. God always was and always will be; He lives outside of time; time is His invention.
2. God's love has always existed, because He is eternal. There never was a time when God was not perfect love.
3. God does not begin to love us; He does not stop loving us. He does not fall in love with us. We are not a very lovable bunch, having the old sin nature and having committed personal sins. God knew us before we ever existed. God's love is absolute stability.

God is Truth

1. God is absolute truth.
2. God is the source of all truth; the Bible is the Word of Truth; it is absolute truth.

3. The truth of God is the fountain and foundation of love. God's love is rooted in every bit of truth and faithfulness which is a part of His very being. He is always truthful and He is always faithful.

God's Omniscience

1. God knows everything; He knows all the knowable; God is a consciously knowing person. He is described in many ways in the Bible as a person. He has a limitless intellect. Some of us are very smart; some are able to think on 2 or 3 tracks at the same time. God has an infinitely tracked mind. He knows everything all at once. He knows every person and every event of history all the time, at every moment.
2. We cannot outsmart God; we cannot play God.
3. God knows about each one of us at every moment; and not one of us falls through the cracks. God is incapable of forgetting about any one of us.
4. God's love is not increased or diminished based upon His knowledge; he does not look at us doing a lot of good things, and then God loves us. God's love has always existed. His omniscience has always known all of our needs. God's love and grace has responded to our sins and failures in the person of Jesus Christ. God has provided us with the means to deal with every aspect of our lives.

1Cor. 8:1b Knowledge [γνῶσις] makes arrogant, on the other hand, love [ἀγάπη] edifies [or, builds up]. [οικοδομῶ]

1Cor. 8:1b Love and Attributes Lesson #403

Sunday 2 August 27, 2006

We know that love is all you need, and all the rest of it. When someone says "I love you" it is only as good as the person who says it. It might be meaningful and it may not be. It may be for an altruistic purpose and it might be said in order to use us. There is a love which is absolutely stable, that when it is quoted and when it is said, we can depend upon it. When God says He loves us, that is meaningful. It never has a beginning or an end; it never increases or decreases; God's very existence is love and He is the source of love. We cannot simply focus on God's love only. We must focus on all of God's attributes and how they interact with love. Without understanding God's love, we will never understand human love. We will always be disappointed when someone says they love us, when they don't. We will never understand what we have in Jesus Christ; in short, love will not edify.

God's Immutability

1. God cannot change; either in His essence or His actions or His promises or His mandates. He cannot change. Everything which God tells us is absolutely stable. Because God does not change, when He pledges His Word to us, He is bound by His perfect nature to keep it. God never tells us something which He will take back. Before mankind, before angels, God loved us. God knows all the knowable and He knows all about us in eternity past. God loves us despite what we are. God cannot change; and it seems like He would want to now and again. God's love can be counted on forever. He is committed to us in love. One who makes a commitment; the commitment is no better than the person making that commitment. We are a part of this family. We cannot be removed. God loves us whether we are the prodigal son or daughter or not.

2. God loves us; His love always functions in an unchangeable, rational, stable and benevolent manner. None of this varied. God's love is not arbitrary; it makes sense.
3. God's love is never complicated by ignorance, silliness or absurdities. Nothing is more absurd than someone in love. That is not God. When someone is silly or absurd, their love can change. God's love is never complicated by this.
4. God's love is not emotional, which should be comforting; emotion means changing attitudes; you're up, you're down; it's good, it's bad. God's love is a straight line; it is steadfast; it never varies, it never changes. When you are dealing with absolute integrity, absolute trustworthiness, absolute honor.

God's Omnipresence

1. This term is a relationship between infinite God and the universe. We become a little philosophical. For Bobby, this is the most difficult attribute. How big is God; where does He reside? We view God in a cloud looking down on us, but He is omnipresent; He exists beyond spacial limitation. 1Kings 8:27 Jer. . Transcendence is the theological terms for being beyond spacial limitations. He is over, above and outside of space; physical space.
2. God is transcendent and imminent. Imminence mean that God fills every part of space. Every bit of atmosphere; all of what we see and know. He fills every part of space. He fills every part of space; God fills every part of it with His entire being, including the events of man's history and the succession of these events.
3. Deism is that God is transcendent, but not imminent. He is not here with us. He began it all, but He wandered off. However, imminence is a part of God's omniscience. God's incredible awesomeness. We don't think of God in this way.
4. God is imminent; and this is the basis of His moments of visibilities to us. More importantly, there are moments when God localizes Himself, even when we do not see Him. The burning bush, the Shekinah glory, the person of the Lord Jesus Christ, the cloud which lead Israel in the desert by day.
5. A localized presence in Jesus Christ; a localized presence in Palestine; but He is simultaneously present everywhere.
6. There is an application for us in this incredible concept. There is no place on earth where the love of God cannot reach us. Psalm 36:5 119:64 33:5: [the earth is full of the lovingkindness \[grace, unfailing love\] of the Lord](#). This includes the most terrible moments of our life, no matter where we might be.
7. Put this together with the truth of His love.

God's Omnipotence

1. All of these attributes are found in Scripture. God's power is unlimited in its ability 2Cor. 4:6 Eph. 1:19–20. The power of God is engaged in the accomplishment of His plan.
2. God's power holds the universe together. His power is engaged in accomplishing His plan of earth. God's will made a decision. God can do all that He purposes to do.
3. God is the absolute highest force in all the universe. It is a personal force, not impersonal like the force in Star Wars. He is a person with infinite power.
4. Evolution tells us that nature creates itself from nothing. Pantheism.
5. God has infinite energy and power from which to love. His love does not get worn out, overworked, or run out of energy. None of this, "I love this person, but I need a break from this person." God's love never takes a vacation from us. His love is straight lined. It is guarantee.
6. Knowledge is power. Think about God's omniscience here: His knowledge is infinite; His power is infinite. God always uses His power toward benevolent ends. He does not use His power to play with us or to make our lives miserable. He is 100% benevolence and love. Basis for Philip. 4:15: I can do all things through the power which He pours into me. The power poured into us is from the cause of God's love; He gives it to us; it is grace. Grace is the expression of God's love.
7. God has provided us with the filling of the Holy Spirit to live the greatest life imaginable; think about the edification complex. We can be happy in the worst circumstances of our life. This brings on the mentality of sharing the happiness of God. It all works together.
8. This is not just some detached God Who lives out there and does stuff; His love is focused on us individual; it is ours, it belongs to us; and we do not deserve it; not one bit of it; guaranteed by the truthfulness and omnipotence of God.
9. With all-powerful God, God can do all that He wills to do; but He may not will to do all that He can. God may not do everything with which he is capable. His power; His omnipotence cannot supercede the other attributes of His nature. His power is limited. "If God is all-powerful, God can destroy himself." This is a limitation. Can God love us so much as to overlook our sinful nature? No. His omnipotence has limitations; His love has limitations. There are certain things which His love cannot do, if it violates any other attribute of His nature. God cannot violate His own nature; therefore His love cannot violate.
10. Some might think, God will accept anyone into heaven, because He is a God of love, and any pathway to Him is valid. No. This violates His justice and righteousness. If we examine His attributes, we must realize that God has it all worked out. God has all of this worked out and He worked out all of this for us.
11. If there is a limitation, it is a self-imposed limitation, it is a restriction in order to be consistent with His other attributes. God cannot give up His perfect righteousness and justice for love. God has integrity, which is sometimes called holiness. It is composed of justice and righteousness. These work together. If God's love is compromised, then His entire essence is compromised. Righteousness and justice is expressed in every act of His will. Every act which God undertakes for us, His righteousness and His justice are involved. God deals with man in love, but He cannot compromise His righteousness and justice with his love.

God's Righteousness and Justice as Related to His Love

1. These 3 attributes related directly to us; all the other related to God first and incidentally to us.
2. Perfect righteousness means that God abhors sin. Perfect righteousness is the standard or principle of His integrity. His standards do not include sin.
3. All of God's attributes must conform to His perfect righteousness; this includes His love. Psalm 11:7 119:37
4. God's righteousness cannot accept anything less than His own perfect righteousness.
5. Any limitation on God's love is that He is not free to disregard or forgive sin apart from the satisfaction or propitiation of His righteous claims. God's love cannot forgive sins by itself. His righteous standards must be met. We all fall short of His righteous standards.
6. God's righteousness can only condemn sin. That is all it can do.
7. God's love can overlook sin; God does not wink at our sin. God does not say, "That's just a little sin, and I am not really that concerned with it." God cannot overlook even one sin without violating His righteousness.
8. When perfect righteousness is related to mankind, it is called justice.

God's Justice

1. God's justice is His absolute and incorruptible fairness. The things that we want God to do to make Him fair—that does not make Him fair. God is fair and just in dealing with us.
2. Justice is the function of His integrity; righteousness is the standard of His integrity.
3. What God's righteousness demands, His justice executes.
4. What God's righteousness accepts, justice blesses. We are blessed not because we are nice people but because of Christ's righteousness in us, which is perfect.
5. What righteousness condemns, justice judges; so it must.
6. God judges with perfect fairness because His omniscience knows all the facts. In a court of law, you want to present only the facts which are good for you. God knows all of the facts of every case.
7. God treats all of His creatures exactly the same without bias and without partiality. There is no prejudice in the character of God. God's justice never makes exceptions for anyone. His justice is still intact. People can buy justice; but you cannot buy God's justice.
8. God's love cannot make exceptions like human love does.
9. God's love cannot supercede His justice. He cannot overlook His justice; He cannot overlook His justice in the name of love. This is something very few people understand.

10. God's love must always conform to the standards of His perfect standards of righteousness and justice. If it did not, none of us could be saved.
11. The absolute perfect righteousness and justice of God cannot be unfair, prejudice and discriminatory. There is not discrimination in God. He is not unfair; His love is not unfair.
12. God's perfect integrity guarantees that His love is perfect. "If I do more good than you, I get blessed more." Wrong. God's justice and love are in tact.
13. Because God is holy, His love can only function with perfect virtue. Because of His justice, God's love can only function with perfect virtue.
14. God's love cannot exist without His integrity. His integrity makes us saveable. God's love is governed by His integrity. God cannot save us unless He condemns us. That condemnation must be applied and satisfied. God so loved the world that He gave His uniquely-born Son. We have an eternal future because of these 3 attributes, which function in perfect harmony.

1Cor. 8:1b Knowledge [γνῶσις] makes arrogant, on the other hand, love [ἀγάπη] edifies [or, builds up]. [οικοδομῶ]

1Cor. 8:1b

Lesson #404

Wednesday August 30, 2006

Bobby considers that last 3 messages as the most important that he has given in his ministry. God's essence is made up of attributes. God's attributes always act in harmony and in conjunction with one another. God is consistent. Bobby related this to love, as that is what God is really like. Only the Bible provides us with information as to Who and What God is. Human speculation is just speculation; God is not to be made in the image of a human. Bobby did not superimpose emotions and affections upon God. God's love is ubiquitous; God is justice and love and all the other attributes.

Bobby recalls standing in formation in ranger school; and "Always remember that the big Ranger in the sky is always looking after you." God is not a God of pure retribution and condemnation; nor does God overlook sin in the name of love.

Every time that Bobby studies God, something new comes to him. This time he became aware of just how awesome that God is. He is absolute truth and faithfulness; we can always depend upon Him. We have so little real knowledge; and we will not know God completely until we get to heaven. We only know what He has revealed to us in a limited way. All Bobby knows is what God reveals in His Word, which should leave us awestruck and grateful both.

God requires nothing; He needs nothing to sustain Him. With all that, He is actually interested in us, as insignificant as we are. God loves us by His own admission. He tells us that we are the objects of His love. And we are undeserving in this regard.

Love edifies, which is the building up of love in our souls. This knowledge is at the very heart of our spiritual life; this is the heart of our relationship with God. This agapê love is the process of the Christian life as well as the process of the Christian life.

There are many facets to agapê love; the ultimate source of love is God Himself. We must understand God's love in order to understand agapê love. We must understand His complete person. Apparently, we are only half way to understanding love edifies. We have a part in this. Bobby is going to bring us into the picture. God's love is not only His thinking. His love includes His actions toward us. His love is not just an attribute for God; but God's love is action; an activity toward us. His benevolent thinking and the virtue of His very nature directed toward us is an activity of love. God's love is a paradigm.

Some Things to Remember

1. God's love and justice and righteousness are the cause of all God's actions toward us. All of God's attributes are a factor, but these 3 things are where God meets us.
2. These are the attributes which directly relate to us in God's activities toward us.
3. Love and righteousness and justice are the attributes through which He directly associates through mankind.
4. The 3 attributes define how He deals with sinful man. We are dead by our actions and by birth and by imputation.
5. God's benevolence and goodness are the motive for His provision of our salvation. For God so loved the world that He gave His own uniquely born Son.
6. That goodness and benevolence which provides salvation are governed by justice and righteousness. Love does not run wild with God. Love does not supercede all.
7. God's love cannot be manifested toward us without the qualities of justice and righteousness. That love cannot be manifested toward us. God's character cannot be compromised. His love cannot be compromised. His love is immediately compromised. It must be governed by His righteousness and justice.
8. His love is always directed toward us in the activity which saves us and sustains us. Because we are sinful, God must condemn us. That isn't love. It is God's justice which must condemn us due to His perfect righteousness. Because we are condemned, we are savable; God's love found a way to do this, even though we are sinful.
9. How else is His love directed toward us? His love disciplines us. Heb. 12:6 It is God's love which scourges us alive. His justice and righteousness are also involved; God is impartial in His discipline. His righteousness has certain standards with regards to His plan. Whom He loves, He disciplines. God's correction of us is to bring us back to the point where we can execute His plan for our lives. When we have departed from His plan. His discipline is designed to whack us in the head and to get us back on track. That is love. We cannot execute God's plan; we cannot share His happiness; without His discipline when we need it; and we all need it from time to time. Do not ever hate the discipline that we receive from God; it is always for our best interest. We should take stock of that pain and determine where we have gone wrong. We confess a group of sins; we get back into fellowship; we get back with doctrine; and we move on.

Bobby has seen someone who claims that rebound is negated with a change of mind (or maybe not changing your mind). That puts a condition on rebound. There is no condition on rebound. We simply name our sins and every time we do this, we are cleansed. Our intent, desire, etc. never figures into rebound. This is apostate thinking. This ruins the spiritual life. If you think what we think, do or desire has anything to do with the forgiveness of God; we may know that we are going to do that sin again. Still does not negate it. This is Bobby's first dealing with someone who distorts his teaching (and Bob's teaching). Rebound is not to allow you to sin whenever you want. As you grow, you become less enamored of sin. However, naming your sins is all that matters.

More Points

1. God's love is directed to us in discipline.
2. The Old Testament tells us that God directs His love toward His people (2Chron. 2:11). God's love for Israel is the basis for all His covenants for Israel. The Mosaic Law is His covenant with Israel; but also His standard. Love, justice and righteousness meet us where we sin.
3. God loves perfect righteousness. Psalm we just aren't good enough to gain the grace of God.
4. God loves His justice. God never forsakes those who have His perfect righteousness. This is us, because we have His perfect righteousness. This is where grace comes in; grace is critical. We can never talk about God without talking about God's grace when He is dealing with us.

Grace

1. Grace is God's policy, but not an attribute, in bestowing His unmerited and undeserved favor and love on sinful mankind. . Rom. 5:15-17
2. Grace is all that God is Free to do for mankind on the basis of the cross. The cross is where God's perfect righteousness and justice are propitiated. God cannot deal with us without keeping His justice and righteousness.
3. Grace is the function of God's benevolence. Benevolence speaks of His attitude toward us, which we do not deserve. It is His love in action toward those who deserve the very opposite.
4. That is the greatest act of love Isa. 30:18 the outworking of His attribute of love in grace.
5. In short, God's grace is the expression of God's love; and it is something which we do not deserve; it is God's policy toward us.

We should have the full range of knowledge of God's grace and how it operates toward us. This is only half of the statement that love edifies; God's love exists and it functions toward us. The other half is our response to this love. How do we develop personal love for God?

Our Personal Love toward God

1. This last few times will give us a good overview of God's love. We develop personal love through metabolized doctrine and doctrinal orientation. We get to know God. That is exactly what Bobby has been giving us through the last few classes. We have usable knowledge as to Who God is.
2. We discover just how attractive God is. He is attractive because His grace and love toward us is infinite and unlimited. Our love is so fickle. God's love would not be fickle, unstable, or finite.
3. God loves us unconditionally; there are no strings attached. We don't have to jump like a puppet to gain God's love.
4. When that happens, we develop admiration and appreciation for God and His love. We will never see anything like this in our experience. When it becomes epignôsis, we admire and respect His love toward us.
5. We then give deference to God as the subject of our admiration and respect.
6. Our attention pivots on His perspective (divine viewpoint) and person. We become occupied with Christ. This is what happens when you develop a good attitude in love.
7. And through continued spiritual advance, our love grows and we build a lasting personal relationship with God. Relationships grow and become better and become more intimate when handled correctly. That is what spiritual growth is. It is building relationship with God.
8. This whole process is summed up in 1John 4:19: We personally love God because He first loved us. God's divine decree was that He would love us. We think of this as a beginning of a decision; but God has always determined to love us; always. He has no beginning and no end. It just is. We cannot help but to reciprocate His love. Our response is love for God. That is called reciprocal love. How does this work?

Reciprocal Love for God: This is based upon doctrine in our soul; metabolized doctrine in the soul is how we love God. When epignôsis doctrine circulates in our stream of consciousness, we realize the worthiness of God. He is worth of all our love. We might say that about one or two human beings; and that might change. However, God is always consistently and constantly worthy. Our deference for Him; our appreciation for Him. There is a good illustration in the human realm. We understand love through our own limited perspective. People respond to each other when love is expressed. Just as we respond toward people who express love toward us, so we respond to God when we begin to understand God's unfailing love which He continues to express toward us. Another person's love for us cannot happen continually; it may occur a lot; but God's love is a continuous expression to us. When we understand that we are eternally secure in our salvation that no one and nothing can take away our salvation, then we begin to understand God's love and His immutability. Therefore, as we build epignôsis doctrine in the soul, we also build an unconditional love and reverence; only God is worthy of this, because He is always faithful. There is never a time when He is not faithful. He is the one that we know never fails us. That is an expression of love.

How is personal love toward God manifested in us?

1. When the believer understands what God has done for us, he is grateful. You cannot be arrogant and be grateful. You cannot think you deserve it. You cannot make everything out to be about you. Personal love is manifested in us when we understand what God has done for us and are grateful for it.
2. True worship of Him is then possible; we are grateful to Him for what He has done. Some think that worship is singing a few tunes or communion. Worship, like everything else is an attitude. Bobby tells us something about what God does for us, so that we will be grateful to God for what He has done for us. That is the expression of reciprocal love.
3. Gratefulness and confidence in God's love for us generates capacity for love in all spheres of life. Personal love towards friends and spouse. We also develop impersonal love toward all those others who are obnoxious toward us.

Bobby wants to take a moment to give an idea of personal love in the human realm. This helps to explain God's love. Not enough time; so tomorrow night.

1Cor. 8:1b

Lesson #405

Thursday August 31, 2006

We are studying love edifies. There are no attributes of God which are better than the others; and they all work in harmony. Love is a good starting point for getting to know God. You can learn more about God in conjunction with the other attributes. Love is central in what God does for us (and to us). It is God's love and justice and righteousness which are the cause of all God's function toward us. It is these 3 which interact with sinful man. Bobby is not isolating these 3 attributes; he is concentrating on these 3 to explain how God operates toward us. What are the activities of God's love and righteousness which He initiates toward us?

Love, Righteousness and Justice of God

1. Love, justice and righteousness work together in our salvation. What the righteousness of God demands, the justice of God executes. In relationship to us, His righteousness condemns our sins and He cannot have anything to do with us as sinners. Even as babies, God's righteousness can have nothing to do with us. His justice and righteousness must condemn us, since we have Adam's imputed sin.
2. God's love found a way by providing Jesus Christ as our Savior. While we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. God's justice had to be satisfied; His condemnation upon us had to be dealt with. Our condemnation was turned to reconciliation by Christ's work on the cross. The spiritual death of Jesus Christ is the greatest act of love in the history of mankind. All we have to do is express faith alone in Christ alone. His love provides our salvation.

3. His love blesses us in many other ways, in conjunction with all of His attributes. His love provides a plan for each one of us; along with His sovereignty and omniscience. God knows all the knowable all at once.
4. Love provides all of the resources to execute this plan. He gave us everything that we need to accomplish this plan. The very power of God to execute the spiritual life. The greatest resource of our life is the filling of the Holy Spirit.
5. Love disciplines us when it is necessary; for our own benefit. Heb. 12;6. God's discipline is always fair; if we are being disciplined, we deserve it. There is never a time when God whacks us where we don't deserve it. This means He wants us back in His plan.
6. Another way that God blesses us is the provision of eternal security and an eternal future. God gave us salvation and He provided us with a plan and an eternal future. God's total character is always involved in everything that we do. Grace is the policy of His love. Grace is His love in action; grace reflects his love. This knowledge of divine love which is ensonched in the right lobe of our souls builds up. We as human beings cannot model agape love; we can only see it and mimic it; God has given us the Holy Spirit in order to function with agape love. As we grow spiritually, we will take on the characteristics of agape love—not perfectly, as we are never perfect in this life—but imperfectly. When we begin to understand who God is and what He has done for us, then we can understand the 2nd half of love edifies, which is reciprocal love toward God. When we realize God's grace and love, which are unlimited, and His love is unconditional, all the time, and without exception, even though we don't deserve it at all; then we will deive in our soul admiration and respect and appreciation for His love for us. Just like when people respond to one another when we love and they reciprocate. If they don't love us back, and we show them love; it may develop in their soul as they get to know us. Then that love begins to be reciprocated. That is exactly the way it is with us and God. God continually initiates and expresses His love. God is first and foremost in our thinking and in our affections and in our love. Through spiritual advance, our love grows, and we build from that love a lasting, personal, reciprocal relationship with God. Epignôsis knowledge is where it begins. It all works together; it progresses through the floors of the edification complex.

How Love Grows and Gratefulness

1. Here is how gratefulness works: when we realize the benefits of salvation and the spiritual life, it becomes very pleasing to our mind; we are pleased with what He has given us.
2. As we move through our life, unless we take in some doctrine, we lose our appreciation and gratefulness to God. It will become a distant memory. You can have great personal love relationships. No greater problems in life than people testing.
3. You wanted to find worship of God? It is humility and gratefulness. In some denominations, worship is just emotion. It is getting all pumped up about who knows what, because they don't know very much. Worship is in your soul; humility and gratitude, which comes from know Who He is.

4. In humility and gratitude, our attention focuses on God, not on ourselves.
5. The extent of that humility and gratitude in our souls is a measure of the progress of our spiritual life. If we are arrogant, our spiritual life has not progressed very far. If we are growing spiritually, you will have gratitude toward God. The whole process is summed up with We love because He first loved us. It is a way of thinking; a way of virtue; a way of looking at someone who has virtue; it is an attitude.

An example of human love to express God's love. It is legitimate to use anthropopathisms in order to explain God and His attributes and His policies. Personal love, if you did not know it, is expressed most often by the sentence I love you. If we love someone, at some point, we will probably say I love you. In the human realm, we find someone else to be attractive; and we feel love toward them. If virtue is present, then there is a recognition of virtue in that person. Love will not develop if there is physical attraction only. With respect to God, the physical aspect is irrelevant. We do not see God, so there is no physical attribute which we can focus on. Nor is God attracted to us physically. Bobby hopes that what he has been teaching the last few nights makes God attractive to us. When we get to know Him through doctrine, we discover that God is not just attractive, but overwhelmingly so. There is no attraction which can compare to the attraction of God. With man, I observe attractiveness in someone else and then we endeavor to know that person. There are aspects which we find in a person that we learn to love; it is about attitude; it is virtue in us and the other person which builds love. God is infinitely virtuous. It is much more difficult to love humans, as we do not have the same level of virtue. In attraction, we endeavor to know what is in someone's soul. We find some quality in another person, we respect them, we give them deference above others. How a person thinks is what preserves attraction. The way we look is not going to last. We can preserve it for awhile; what does last? The soul. The qualities which are inside. These are the qualities which we have when we want true real love. When we find these virtues, we develop agape love. This is how love works in the soul of someone who understands love. Some people trip through life and have no clue as to what they are looking for. Attraction might begin with the physical, but it must progress to the soul. Sometimes, you can develop a physical attraction to someone because what is in their soul. You get to know someone, and this person will become uglier or more beautiful, depending upon what is in their soul. All of these qualities are cognitive; they are in your mind; they are thoughts in our soul; a lasting physical relationship is the end result. To be in love, means you want to be with that person; you want to talk with them; you want to have them in your life as much as possible. If there is nothing in their soul, then you do not want that. Love means being occupied with that person. I focus on you in tender and intimate terms; personal love revolves around my thoughts for someone else. It revolves around the compatibility and rapport. It revolves around thinking and compatibility develops as time is spent together. If we go through this same process, then we are reciprocating love. Do you begin to see that the infinite love of God is worth reciprocating? If the process continues; and we both reach the point where agape love is in the soul, then we have a reciprocal love. In the divine realm, God's love is so much more valuable and perfect than human love.

Parallel

1. Our contact with God comes through the divinely inspired Word of God.
2. We get to know Him; He reveals His qualities to us; by conversation, God reveals Himself. If you cannot have a conversation of the first date without thinking about the physical then you will never learn about their soul.
3. With God, we learn about God through His Word. We learn about God's attributes and what He is made of. The doctrine of divine essence, and if we feel no different toward Him, then we are not reciprocating the love of God. We have been given all the information that we need in order to love God. We get to know God through His Word.
4. When we get to know God by building Epignôsis doctrine in the soul, we develop grace and doctrinal orientation; and we begin to know Him.
5. We begin to consistently think about God with an attitude of love; the thinking of agape love or virtue love. Agape love comes from reciprocating God's love. This is where the paradigm begins. Then it can be turned outward to personal love for a few and impersonal love for all. We begin to think consistently about Him.
6. God becomes the object of our focus, our concentration, and our occupation. The latter word means that He never leaves us. An occupying force in a foreign country means that they never leave that country. You think with divine viewpoint; you think with the mind of Christ.
7. Our love is maintained as we continue to advance in grace and doctrinal orientation. Our love with a human being continues to grow as we spend more time. We may know about their characteristics, but when we see them in action on a daily basis, they we become even more enamored with the virtue and integrity in their soul. Our love is maintained and gains momentum as we take in more doctrine. Grace orientation is the attitude of humility.

We cannot see God, but we can love Him. We are mandated to love God. Deut. 6:5: and you will love the Lord your God with all your heart, with all your soul and with all your might. Love cannot be coerced or forced. Love cannot be coerced or forced; if love is not freely given from the volition of our soul, then it is not love. How many times has a man fallen for a woman, and that love is not reciprocated? And nothing can be done about that. Love simply cannot be forced between human beings where it does not exist. The same is true of God. God cannot create man to love apart from man's volition. Taking away our volition violates the divine decree in eternity past for us to have volition. Our love for God is part of the angelic conflict. Developing love for God is spiritual advance. Love edifies; love is building the edification complex. As we build the edification complex, we win tactical victories in the angelic conflict. We cannot truly love God without free will; and if we do not love Him, we cannot glorify Him. God created us with volition in our souls. God designed our volition so that we would be able to love Him. This is building the edification complex. That is the love complex.

Bobby is going to develop the divine dynasphere on Sunday; the love dynasphere and the interlocking systems of love.

1Cor. 8:1b Knowledge [γνῶσις] makes arrogant, on the other hand, love [ἀγάπη] edifies [or, builds up]. [οικοδομῶ]

1Cor. 8:1b

Lesson #406

Sunday 1 September 3, 2006

Bob has a broken femur from a fall.

The edification of love of the believer begins with epignōsis doctrine in the right lobe of the believer. God's love directed toward us is the very reason for our existence in life, as well as our future. Everything else in this life pales by comparison. Our lives will end when God chooses; His plan is perfect and it has always been perfect. This metabolized doctrine always has a profound affect on our thinking; it is the very opposite of arrogance. Arrogance is self-centeredness. We have, in difficult times, the desire to pity ourselves and to be concern with our own affairs; this is arrogance. Love drives out arrogance and ushers in humility.

When we understand love, our focus is on God and on His love; and not on ourselves. That is divine viewpoint. The attitude that we have of humility that His love, along with His justice and righteousness, are the basis for our salvation.

Each one of us has an individual plan which God made for us in eternity past; and it was all done here in love. That plan is the most important aspect of our lives.

Love, along with justice, disciplines us when we need it; to bring us back into the plan.

His love + immutability provides for our eternal security. There is no separation from God. God's love is called agape love; that is the model for love in our won soul. God's love is His virtue and His benevolent way of thinking. Love is always a thought; always a mental attitude.

Ἀγάπη love is not only the way that God thinks, but it is the attitude which we should take on; it is still our objective to develop ἀγάπη love. Love is at the heart of the edification complex.

How does His attribute of love transfer to edification in our lives? His love engenders in us a personal, reciprocal love for God; a reciprocal love for God. 1John 4:19: We love because He first loved us. We reciprocate the love of God because it is there. There is no greater objective response, and personal reciprocal agape love because of His agapē love. When we realize the extent of the love plus grace. Reciprocating His love when we have the knowledge of it is one of the most wonderful things in this life. It is just like people who express love in responses when love is shown. Sometimes His love is unseen, but it is real; just as our attitudes are unseen, but very real. We give to God when we have reciprocal love, great deference. We don't come into to the auditorium and skyrocket when we hear about God's love. We may have an emotional response, but that is not necessary.

When you are grateful toward someone, it brings reciprocal love and the capacity for love for other people in all spheres of life. Personal love for a few and impersonal love for all mankind.

When you are under difficult circumstances, are you focused on your own pitiful conditions or do you focus on God's love? Everything which happens in this life is for a reason; we are constantly and always in God's care.

Gratitude is a good attitude to have toward God. It should be real on a moment-by-moment basis. The extent of that humility and gratitude in our soul is a measure of the progress of our spiritual life. Can we be insulted? Can someone interfere with our happiness because they don't like us, then we are focused on ourselves.

Our love for God is the motivation for our Christian life; the One we love is the One Whom we talk about. When we love the Lord, we want to glorify the object of our love. When we are motivated by personal love for God, we develop in our souls a system of virtue, which we call virtue love, which actually defines our Christian life. It is the edification of love and the building up of love of the edification complex.

The Divine Dynasphere = the Love Complex = the Interlocking System of Love = Virtue Love. There is an elaboration of the love complex in one of Bob's books. Gate 3 is teachability; enforced humility and genuine humility. Gate 6 is functional virtue: impersonal love for all mankind. Finally, the maturity gate. Note the similarities between the edification complex and the divine dynasphere. Ground floor of the edification complex is the same as the 1st gate. As we study this, we see that the divine dynasphere is an elaboration of the edification complex. Personal love for God; impersonal love for all mankind; sharing the happiness of God. The divine dynasphere was expanded because Bob thought about love; and therefore developed the divine dynasphere. It is all about the love of God; the love complex.

Each gate is a sequential entrance into the virtue love complex.

The Love Complex = the Divine Dynasphere

Christian Integrity is where this can all be found.

1. The power gate: the filling of God the Holy Spirit. This provides the spiritual IQ for doctrinal perception; the grace apparatus for perception. Through this, we can perceive and metabolize the doctrine. We cannot be edified by love until we function at this power gate. The filling of the Holy Spirit is the very infusion of the power of God for our Christian life, which separates us from every unbeliever on this earth.
2. Basic Christian modus operandi. What are basic Christian modus operandis?
  - a. These are the basics for God's game plan for us; the mechanics.
  - b. These are the routine procedures and techniques of the Christian way of life. These should be almost automatic; they should just kick in.
  - c. These procedures are mandatory pre-requisites.

- d. The basic techniques include rebound; we cannot exist in the spiritual life without rebound. After that, we learn to isolate sins after rebound. In rebound, we simply acknowledge our sins; then we isolate that sin, so that it does not generate negative effects. If we are constantly jumping in and out of the Spirit, we don't really utilize the filling of the Holy Spirit. We must leave these sins; we do not need to re-visit this problem; we do not need to feel guilty or remorseful about it. Our sin is in the past; we do not need some certain intent in rebound to make it count. Nothing in our mind is necessary apart from the naming of our sin. One of the legacies of the Berachah pulpit is rebound. No certain feeling is required; no remorse is needed; no promising to avoid the sin. We isolate the sin and then we keep on moving in the Spirit. God's discipline is for our benefit.
- e. We must be able to utilize the faith-rest drill in the Christian life in order to move forward. We must be able to find a promise in the Bible which we can claim. Once you claim the promise, you might go then to a doctrinal rationale. That promise may suggest a rationale.
  - i. The essence of God rationale
  - ii. The plan of God rationale. Everything in our life has meanings. We can then make application to our circumstances; we can take control of our lives and thinking in the midst of difficulty. There is not other way to live. Focus on the Lord, which allows us to take control of our lives.
- f. You begin to orient to doctrine and to grace. You have the rudiments of humility. You see Who God is and you begin to honor Him; you begin to honor Him and you do not honor yourself nearly as much.
- g. You get the rudiments of impersonal love. We are able to apply impersonal love, so that other people do not control our lives. We worry more about what God thinks of us rather than what people think of us.

1Cor. 8:1b Knowledge [γνῶσις] makes arrogant, on the other hand, love [ἀγάπη] edifies [or, builds up]. [οικοδομῶ]

1Cor. 8:1b

Lesson #407

Sunday 2 September 3, 2006

We are studying the final phrase of this verse: love edifies. We must understand the attribute of love in order to understand God. We cannot understand God without understand His other attributes and how they function as a part of the whole. All of the other attributes have something to do with us and our existence, but primarily, love, justice and righteousness. When we begin to understand God's love, we begin to give great deference toward Him. While we were yet sinners, Jesus Christ died for us. (Rom. 5:8). We have plans for our own lives; we have a direction in our life; but God has a perfect plan for our lives. We have free will and we should use it within the parameters of God's plan for us. "I can't get into God's mind in order to figure out what His plan is for us." Wrong! We have access to the mind of Christ; and we keep our focus and we continue to take in doctrine, and we continue to understand the spiritual life; and if we do that, we are in the plan of God. No matter what the twists, turns, triumphs, failures; we are in God's plan. Unbelievers have no assurances whatsoever in their lives; they have little that they can depend upon, and the things which they depend upon could fail them at any time. God never fails us.

As we begin to learn more about God, we learn to reciprocate His personal love. There are mechanics in order to continue our growth so that we might understand the direction of of lives.

The Love Complex = the Interlocking System of Love = Divine Dynasphere

We might enter through two gates at a time; we may go in and out of some gates. God's grace is His love toward us in function.

1. We have to go through the power gate first: the filling of the Holy Spirit, which opens up the entire spiritual life.
2. Once we are filled with the Spirit and we begin to metabolize doctrine, we begin to learn rebound (the first thing that we learn). As we grow in grace and understand the rebound technique and we begin to understand the faith-rest drill, the most basic modus operandi. We begin to understand a few promises; when we know that promise, then we can come up with a doctrinal rationale. One is the doctrine of divine essence, which is a problem solving device in and of itself. Doctrinal orientation, grace orientation, a little bit of impersonal love. Impersonal love is nothing more than a relaxed mental attitude under pressure, under people testing; when people or circumstances give us a hard time.
3. The third gate in the divine dynsphere is teachability, which is the 2nd floor of the edification complex. Teachability always includes humility.
  - a. Humility orients the believer to reality, to authority and to absolute truth. Everything is relative to the unbeliever and the weak believer; we cannot hang our hat on anything; change is the essence of life. Humility and teachability orient us to absolute truth, when γνῶσις doctrine is transformed into Epignôsis doctrine. We are oriented to God's reality. God is faithful; He is always truthful. All that God says is truth and we can hang onto that.
  - b. Strength of character, agape love, and happiness are constructed on a foundation of humility. Arrogance does not bring strength of character. We depend solely on ourselves; we cannot have agape love if it is all directed toward ourselves. We are not happy if all we think about it ourselves.
  - c. If growing in grace and knowledge is our objective in the Christian way of life, then humility is the only attitude for that.
  - d. First in this gate is enforced humility; humility is enforced upon us; we are held down and hand fed humility; sometimes it must be kicked into us. Our natural inclination is arrogance and some of the worst things of life are very destabilizing. We have so little control in our lives and control freaks have such a difficult time in this life. The believer uses his volition to obey legitimate authority. Arrogance says, I am the only authority and the highest authority; what I want to do, what my desire, that rules! The discipline of a classroom environment, as in church. We must, in the environment of church, concentrate and have respect for the Word of God and respect for the word of God; we are forced to hear more doctrine in church than at home, being propped up, listening to doctrine with our favorite beverage. Arrogance is when we yawn. Church, face to face, is the best environment for humility and discipline. Enforced humility is the authority of divine mandates; we must obey the mandates found in Scripture, e.g., Grow in grace and knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.

- e. Then comes genuine humility, where we begin to consistently have positive volition toward the Word of God. We want to be here. We recognize that there is something greater than we are.
  - f. When love edifies, it also drives out arrogance, which is the opposite of humility and teachability.
4. Spiritual momentum:
- a. This is the most important transitional gate for the love complex.
  - b. Momentum is a major issue in the Christian life. We never finish being teachable. We can always continue to learn; there is always continuing education. We can hear the same doctrine when immature and when mature, and get a whole new picture. Divine viewpoint forces out the human viewpoint that we are bombarded with all the time. For instance, the idea that everything is relative. Without the absolutes of Scripture, we will fall for the relative every time.
  - c. Momentum is gained when we are motivated to advance to maturity.
  - d. Momentum results from free will decisions to enter into the first 3 gates.
  - e. As momentum increases, so virtue love becomes an entrenched way of thinking and a mode of life. Virtue love is what this complex is. The filling of the Holy Spirit and other basic Christian modus operandi become the way that we think; and nothing in life can assail us.
  - f. As we gain momentum, our personal reciprocal love increases. As our love increases, so does our momentum. Momentum increases love, love increases momentum. That is one of the highest objectives in the spiritual life. Eph. 4:14–15: In order that we no longer be immature but the teaching of doctrine in the sphere of love [the Love complex], Bob's last great series of messages were about the doctrine of Love. ...you [the pastor-teacher] will cause them [members of the congregation] to grow up in Bible doctrine with respect to Him Who is the absolute, even Jesus Christ. That is the objective of the Christian way of life. Whatever happens, there is our thinking.
5. These first 4 gates act in concert and move toward the motivation virtue of personal love toward God.
- a. Personal love for God is the motivational virtue of the Christian way of life.
  - b. The more we grow spiritually, the more we grow and trust and have intimacy with God. This is where the intimacy of live is so apparent. The Lord becomes family in every situation; we can dial Him up any time that we want. God may not answer us in the way that we want Him to, but there is an answer, every time. When we understand the love of God and the grace of God, that whatever His answer is, is perfect. When we dial Him up, we are representing ourselves before God, and the understanding that He will answer us in all things.

- c. As our momentum accelerates, our motivation to execute the Christian way of life increased exponentially.
- d. We are inspired. We do not deserve anything. We deserve death; we deserve eternal condemnation. Grace orientation is the epitome of divine viewpoint. When we understand the grace of God, we understand His love. We lose track of this, and we lose track of our lives. We are silly to think that we can do a better job of running our lives than God.
- e. The grace of God understanding and being inspired by the grace of God, is the manifestation of personal love toward God. When we grow to spiritual maturity, we will increasingly glorify God. We will increasingly glorify Him. That is the manifestation of personal reciprocal love.
- f. Personal reciprocal love is epitomized by increased inculcation of doctrine and reverent worship of God. How do we think about God? Do we worship Him or do we just think of him as being some person off in the sky that we do not understand.
- g. We are compelled by His love to execute His plan. When we are in love with someone, we will probably tell others much more than they want to hear. We want to sing their praises; we want to tell them how wonderful our loved one is. We need to bring Jesus Christ to a lost and dying world that needs it.
- h. This agape love encourages us to serve the Lord. Not just to serve the Lord but to make the production of divine good our highest priority. Not producing income; not production at our profession; but divine good is the highest form of production in our life.
- i. Personal love toward God the Father gives us the confidence that all problems can be solved using the other problem solving devices of the spiritual life. When we enter into the person singular gate.

Bob used to say, if money can solve a problem, then it is not a problem. Similarly, if God can solve the problem, then it is not a problem. Get over yourself in arrogance; get yourself focused on the problem solver, because we have personal love toward Him.

1Cor. 8:1b

Lesson #408 Wednesday September 6, 2006

We are still studying love edifies. We love God because He first loved us; that is reciprocal love. God first loved us personally and impersonally; and we love Him in response. Our purpose in life is to respond to God with His love. This is a way of thinking. There is no greater test than to examine how we think. What is our viewpoint? Do we understand that there are no tragedies in life. We do not know why Bob's life has taken the course that it has; but the entire situation is in God's hands.

Our spiritual growth is a part of love edifices. This is the interlocking system of virtue. The building up of love in our souls is the divine dynasphere, or the love complex. Dynasphere is a coined term. It comes from δυνάμις + σφαιρα which is power sphere. That is in the sphere of power or the sphere of the love complex.

The divine dynasphere is made up of 8 gates, and each is an entrance to a stage or stages of spiritual growth. It is a sequential entrance; it all comes under the idea of love edifices; the gates actually overlap and intermingle and interact. This is why they are called the interlocking system of love.

Αγάπη love in the soul drives out arrogance. 2nd gate is basic Christian modus operandi, which is maintaining fellowship.

Rebound

Rebound is under attack by sources that would surprise you.

1. The utilization of rebound—the first attack we generally get is on rebound—and God's forgiveness of post salvation sin requires no guilt, no remorse, no good intentions of abstaining from this same sin in the future. If you make a promise to God not to do this sin again, that is the problem.
2. You must isolate these sins once they are forgiven; you forget the sins which are behind you and have been confessed.
3. Isolation is for future reference, so that we do not slip into the same pattern of sin again and again and again. We hate someone, we rebound it; we think about what they did to us, and then we hate them again 3 seconds later. The attack on rebound is, we must have the intent not to .
4. There are no prerequisites to rebound.
5. The isolation of sin is not a prerequisite for rebound.
6. The intent or desire not to repeat the same sin is not a prerequisite for rebound.
7. Rebound always occurs because of the faithfulness of God. Every time we identify a sin and name it. We must change our mind about this sin to make it work.
8. There are no conditions on God's forgiveness of sin in rebound. That is the major attack every time. That is the problem with those who confuse this doctrine; God does not require remorse, pity or saying I'm sorry.
9. Rebound is strictly a procedure which has nothing to do with our resolution not to sin or our intent not to sin or our intent to forswear any future sinning.

Even if we don't understand rebound, God still forgives us every time when we name our sins. When we are back in fellowship, we claim basic promises from the Bible. We must know a few in order to claim them. Cast our cares upon Him because He cares for us. When we are able to take the 3 steps of the faith-rest drill, we have taken control of our thinking in the midst of turmoil, adversity and even in prosperity. We can get just as arrogant and go just as far out of line in prosperity. There are problems both ways. The rationales of the Bible allow us to deal with problems in all directions. We begin to see God for Who He is and begin to honor Him for it.

3rd gate is teachability and humility. The building up of ἀγάπη love in our soul, drives out arrogance. Humility is force-fed into our souls in the discipline of the teaching environment of church. This is the best enforced discipline that we can have. This brings genuine humility, which develops from enforced humility. The more we force ourselves to come in here, the more doctrine filters into our souls; and the more we like being in Bible class. The Word of God is the solution to the problems of our life. The love complex is built on humility and teachability.

4th gate is the steady march, momentum, advancing to maturity. You must have momentum. When we are inconsistent with doctrine, we don't move forward; we have no momentum. We come in for doctrine when we are under pressure. Consistency is how we advance under spiritual maturity. Αγάπη love drives out arrogance and doctrine drives out human viewpoint. Momentum is the result of entering gates 1-3; when we consistently reside in those 3 gates, we have spiritual momentum. They solidify divine viewpoint way of thinking in our soul.

Eph. 4:14–15 describe momentum: In order that we no longer be immature, but by the teaching of doctrine in the sphere of love [the love complex], you [pastor-teachers] teach and you cause them to grow up in all aspects with respect to Him Who is the Absolute, even Christ. That is the penthouse of problem solving devices.

The first 4 gates operate in conjunction with one another.

The 5th gate is personal love for God

1. Personal love for God is the motivational virtue for the Christian life. Gate 4 is momentum; motivation goes hand in hand with momentum.
2. As momentum picks up, so we are motivated by reciprocal love. When we love someone, we are motivated by that love. We are motivated in everything that we do. Think about this in relationship to God—there is not failure with God.
3. That personal reciprocal love is respect; it is trust; it is increased intimacy in our souls. When we trust them a love them, we are motivated by that attitude. Respect and trust in the Lord motivates us.
4. We are animated by the fantastic benefits of the grace of God.
5. This is doctrinal motivation; not emotion. Doctrinal motivation is real; so many are emotionally motivated. A coach and his football team at halftime. Or another player says something derogatory about that team. That is emotion. If things go wrong, emotion goes down. Emotion cannot sustain. It is a short-term motivator. It is not up, not down; it is consistent.
6. This is personal, reciprocal love for God.
7. We are compelled by our love for God to execute His plan, because we want to glorify the object of our love. We are enamored of a person; so we want to talk about them; how much greater is God. We can't wait to talk about Him; we are occupied with Him in our soul.

8. Our ἀγάπη love encourages us to serve Him. The production of divine good is the highest priority.
9. Personal love toward God the Father gives us confidence. Personal love toward God gives confidence that all problems can be solved. We are motivated to use the other problem solving devices. All of these problem solving devices are backed by God's immutable love.

Personal love for man is frequently misplaced, as it is based on imperfect people. People never achieve perfect virtue, personal love toward man often creates problems like reaction; e.g., our personal love is not reciprocated like we think it should be reciprocated. We place that personal love in someone who is less than perfect. But, you cannot react toward God's perfect love. We can only react if we do not understand His love, and we blame Him instead of depend upon Him.

Personal love toward people is highly volatile. There are always variables, even when someone has great character. God has no problems; He is always dependable in every circumstance. The greatest person we know is not dependable in every circumstance. Personal love is no stronger than the quality and integrity of those whom we love. God's integrity is perfect; man's integrity is not. Where personal love of man fails; impersonal love does not. Enduring personal love depends upon exercising impersonal love toward them. The grace of God has shown us the greatest love; and this allows us to show graciousness toward other people. The greatest thing a person can show is graciousness. That is strength.

6th Gate: impersonal Love toward Man

1. If personal love toward God is the motivation virtue of the Christian life, then impersonal love for all mankind is the result.
2. Impersonal love toward all mankind is the fruit of personal love for God. There is a cause and effect.
3. Impersonal love is the functional virtue of the Christian life. Personal love for God is motivation; impersonal love for man is function.
4. If we love God, then our interaction with others will reflect our motivation virtue of love.
5. You cannot have operational virtue love toward others without honorable motivation.
6. Personal love for God as the highest motivation always precedes impersonal love for mankind, which is the highest function of virtue.

1Cor. 8:1b Knowledge [γνῶσις] makes arrogant, on the other hand, love [ἀγάπη] edifies [or, builds up]. [οικοδομῶ]

We have been studying the divine dynasphere; δυνάμιχ + σφίρα; alternatively called the love complex as well as the interlocking systems of virtue. We have a succession of gates as we progress through the Christian life; they do not always come in this order; they interlock.

The first gate is the power gate; the filling of the Holy Spirit; the empowerment for gap. The 2nd gate is basic Christian modus operandi. The faith-fest drill is how we can understand each promise as a basic Christian rationale; these to the basic skills. Gate 3 is teachability, both forced and acquired humility. In church, there is no talking or unnecessary movement; that is enforced humility. As you gain in positive volition, you develop genuine humility in your soul; knowledge makes arrogant, but love edifies. One of the most important doctrines is who and what is God? We must know God in order to serve Him and to love Him. We so become motivated. We cannot understand God's character and love without being motivated. God's love is the greatest motivator of life. After being motivated, we move into gate 6; personal love from God results in personal love for a few and impersonal love for all mankind. This takes us into the center of the love complex. We go from spiritual adolescence to spiritual maturity.

Personal love from God is motivation; and impersonal love is the result of personal love for God. If you begin to love God, Who is the paradigm of love. Impersonal love forms automatically. That is the fruit of the love of God; that is a functional virtue of love. Personal love for God always precedes impersonal love toward all mankind, which is the highest virtue of the Christian life.

Christian Integrity has the illustration. There are 3 pairs to the counterpart virtues. Worship is gratitude toward the Lord; when you worship God, you have gratitude for who He is. This generates the functional virtue of morality toward man, which means treating others with integrity and honesty, whether they deserve it or not. You do this in your personal life and your professional life. Ours is based on the virtue on our personal love for God. God Himself is perfect morality. 2nd is confidence toward God when we realize God's love for us. When you love someone, you have confidence in them. If you have confidence in God, that supports the functional virtue of courage toward man. Why is courage part of impersonal love? You have courage in the face of antagonism, resistance and the general lack of integrity. It is so easy for us to fear for the future of ourself based upon the lack of integrity in our leaders, in our neighbors, in the actions of others. Confidence in God results in courage toward all that surrounds us in our lives. The 3rd of the counterpart virtues: personal love for God sustains the function of impersonal love toward man. This is a summary of everything that we have been studying. This is the result of the paradigm of ἀγάπη love that we have been studying. We can treat others with respect, even when they do not deserve it. Respect is a matter of what you do. Respect seems to be directed toward anyone who is alive and breathing; but respect is who you are and what you do. We have respect for those who don't deserve it. It is based on God's grace toward us. What is love in action? The outworking of God's grace in our soul is graciousness and respect toward those who do not deserve it. Maybe some mature believer shows us respect because we are gracious. No graciousness in Congress; at each other's throats. No personal love for God; no motivation from the Christian life.

Our royal priesthood and our royal ambassadorship. Invisible and private; a motivational virtue. It is a part of our relationship with God. We represent ourselves before God, as the Levitical priest represented the people before God. Our ambassadorship is visible and public and is directed toward mankind, which is, therefore, a functional virtue. That is impersonal love toward man. As a priest, we represent ourselves before God; as an ambassador, we are to proclaim the virtues of Christ before man. You cannot proclaim His virtues unless you know His virtues. Expressing graciousness toward man. Priesthood and ambassadorship; even if we do not like someone, we still express graciousness toward them.

Bobby always thinks of Jonah, and God sent him to the Assyrians; and the last thing we wanted to do is to go there and present the gospel to them; he despised them. A fish God prepared, swallows Jonah, and spits him up on the Assyrian shore, so he can preach turn or burn; and the Assyrians turned. Motivation must precede function. Our relationship strengthens us in our relationship with God.

Impersonal love is almost to the penthouse; and it is the 8th problem solving device. It is found in all of the illustrations which Bob has given.

What Impersonal Love is:

1. Impersonal love does not require intimacy, friendliness, or even acquaintance with the object of love.
2. A close relationship between the subject and the object may exist; impersonal love can be applied to those you are close to, but that is not necessary for them to be close to us.
3. Impersonal love is consistent function of your own virtue, which is always motivated by reciprocal love for God. Once you understand this concept, then we have a real handle on the Christian way of life.
4. Impersonal love can be directed toward friends, enemies, loved ones, strangers, and pretty much anyone; toward the entire human race. Every category of person; our only association may be a television commentator, and you must often apply impersonal love to that person.
5. Rom. 13:9b–10: And if there is any other commandment, it is summed up, you will love your neighbor as yourself. Personal love toward God. Love does no wrong to a neighbor. All people in the human race; especially those you come into contact with; you cannot have impersonal love unless there is an object to that love.
John 15:17

Many Christians all over the world think that impersonal love is a mandate for enduring personal love toward all people. That is a very difficult mandate if taken in that way. It is difficult to love personally those that you cannot stand; however, we can demonstrate impersonal love toward those we do not like. Objects of love are not always very attractive. We all have certain standards for relationships; sometimes the standards are loose, sometimes they don't make sense; sometimes, they vary. We are all human and we know what we are attracted to and what we do not like. Even those whom you love the very most, there will be conflict and periods of time when you are mad, disappointed, or even hostile toward this other person. Impersonal love has a very important function in every relationship.

Christianity is full of hypocrisy. E.g., turning around and telling the person behind you that you love them; you cannot generate personal love toward those you don't know or don't want to know. There is no intrinsic good in unstable sentimentality or hypocrisy. The only means for a believer to satisfy the love mandate is a mental attitude of impersonal love. Don't ever be fooled by a Christian who tries to be gushy.

Have you ever walked down the street by a person that you instantly do not like? That is an attitude problem. It is a strain to develop of personal love for that person on the spot. Development of agape love is a change in that thought process. You cannot love someone personally that you dislike. A mature believer with impersonal love does not have to make those kind of judgments. Who cares what they look like or smell like? Impersonal love keeps you from reacting to those who press your buttons. Impersonal love is the only permanent way to change a bad attitude and it reflects it upon other people.

Impersonal Love Looks Like This

1. If you have impersonal love in your soul, you can impersonally objectively view the concepts of any strata of our society. As an attorney, it is very nice to be objective. A criminal attorney requires more impersonal love than anyone can imagine. That has built-in problems.
2. You do not react to antagonism, and thereby allow others to control your happiness and stability. When you react, someone else is in control of your life. Impersonal love has a personal benefit for us; we should be control of our own lives; and not some other person.
3. The lack of thoughtfulness and good manners should not distress us. We are surrounded by a lack of thoughtfulness and manners are unheard of. You will be occasionally upset, disgusted, etc. This is so we are not conflicted, every time someone crosses our path. This is an attitude which we develop, even when repulsed. We are mandated to do this. It cannot be impossible to do. A mature believer has in his soul personal love for God. The basic Christian concept of how to deal with this world. It is a complex doctrine with how to deal with a believer.
4. With impersonal love, your life will not be filled with bitterness toward those who cause us personal injury. We do not go through life unscathed. However, bitterness will scar us and ruin our lives. We have no right to be bitter; and we need to show impersonal love toward those who are disgusting. We will not be encumbered by mental attitude sins toward them. We love anger and hatred, and we think this is good to so express ourselves. But building and exchanging mental attitude sins is not the way to go; that is human viewpoint. Impersonal love is the way to get rid of our bitterness. If we can recognize that which is disgusting in someone else, certainly we can see it in ourselves. Don't make it difficult for others to love us impersonally.

5. You can learn how to tolerate all kinds of people, even though their opinions and convictions are anathema to them. You can even refute them if they are evil. When the smoke clears, you should have no bitterness or anger. You can develop the ability to interact well with those whose viewpoint is completely opposite yours. You can recognize human viewpoint as anathema to you; but you don't become bitter or angry because they have human viewpoint in their souls. View the evil of the cosmos first-hand and not be taken down by them. We learn to handle these situations with grace and poise. Grace under pressure and poise are a part of our ambassadorship.
6. We are not offended or frustrated when personally attacked. Personal attacks by another person are very difficult to deal with; they attack our character, there is injustice; they attach to our person something that we did not do. We can leave it in the hands of someone else.
7. You take yourself and your sensitivity out of the equation of relationships. You have to learn not to be so sensitive to others; you don't have to be treated the way we want to be treated. When we have the attitude of humility and grace orientation, that engenders impersonal love.
8. When we use impersonal love, we control our tempers. We all have a temper and there is always a boiling point. We can do it when strangers are rude, abusive, or just plain evil. That is the function of the virtue of impersonal love.

1Cor. 8:1c ...love [αγαπη] edifies [or, builds up]. [οικοδομew]

1Cor. 8:1

Lesson #410 Sunday 1 September 10, 2006

The nurses love Bob, and doctrine is obvious in his soul, even in his current condition. Even in the hospital, he is still a witness, and booklets have been given to the nurses there.

Every time Bobby looks at /love, he sees something else. 1John 4:8, 16: Anyone who does not love does not know God, because God is love...So we have come to know and to believe the love that God has for us. God is love, and whoever abides in love abides in God, and God abides in him. All that we have studied for the past few weeks is αγαπη love. Previously, we love because He first loved [us]. We are the recipients of αγαπη love. For the believer, the extension of αγαπη love is salvation and then the Christian life. Our paradigm is that we can possess our agapê love and reciprocate it. We can never express the perfect love which he does, but we can understand it and emulate it as our model of virtue. God's love = the benevolence and virtue of His being. We see it and it becomes a part of our life. This is personal, reciprocal love for God when it shows up in us. Because He loved us, we are motivated to return that αγαπη love to Him. We also learn to function with αγαπη love toward members of the human race. The function of impersonal love toward all mankind. Αγαπη love just covers about everything in our lives.

in the edification complex, ἀγαπή love manifests itself in personal love toward God and impersonal love toward mankind. It is motivational and functional virtue for our lives. It is the very heart of the Christian way of life. It is the 7th and 8th problem solving device for the mature believer. Therefore, love edifies; love builds us up. Love encompasses the whole system of the spiritual life, beginning with His love directed toward us. That love is reciprocated from our soul; that is the motivational virtue of the Christian way of life. This can be directed toward all others.

The result is, you will not become like the Corinthian believers, where they were legalistic tyrants. When love edifies, we are capable of great love toward all mankind. We remember that we are an ambassador for the Lord Jesus Christ. We remember that the love of God is extended toward all. The cross was sufficient for all mankind. How dare we have anything less than graciousness for whom Christ died. That is the application of agapê from our souls. The result should be legitimate and honorable service for the Lord.

1Cor. 8:1 Now, concerning food offered to idols: We know that "we all have knowledge [γνῶσις]." Knowledge inflates with pride, but love edifies [or, builds up].

Lesson #411 Sunday 2 September 10, 2006

We have agapê love in our souls; and there are the few selected ones who are recipients of our personal love. It depends upon the merit of the subject, not upon the merit of the object. We gain merit only as we grow spiritually, which is the result of the resources which God has given us. That is the entire spectrum of agapê love.

Paul continues in v. 2. Paul refers back to knowledge makes arrogant; those in Corinth depend upon their γνῶσις knowledge. People with a little γνῶσις think that they know a great deal. We can extend the concept of γνῶσις to the unbeliever as well. How easily γνῶσις can turn into arrogance in the unbeliever. In college, a professor who is filled with himself and his own knowledge. Those with great knowledge can become very arrogant. V. 2 is introduced by the 1st class condition. The verb is the present active indicative of δοκέω = to think. In this context, it is better rendered to presume, as it is found in a conditional clause. The presumption is any believer who thinks that he is full of γνῶσις. He thinks that he knows something. It is a 1st class condition; he assumes that he presumes that he has this great knowledge. "If anyone presumes that he knows anything..." This person has some γνῶσις doctrine, meaning that he has taken in a little doctrine in Bible class. In one way, knowledge builds up arrogance. Any believer who is present and desires to learn doctrine is always on the right track. Now, you might jump the track; it is God's purpose that we learn γνῶσις; which is doctrine declared from Scripture. Bobby does his best to teach the doctrine out of the Scripture. It comes out a γνῶσις to us, which is changed into epignôsis, via faith. This is all a necessary part of spiritual growth. You cannot overlook the fact that γνῶσις is part of the process, but spiritual growth does not occur in the left lobe of the soul; it must be transferred into the right lobe of the soul, being mixed with faith.

As you begin to understand γνώσις and your knowledge is building up in the left lobe, and then you believe it, and it is transferred into the right lobe of the soul; and that brings humility. ἐπίγνωσις generates humility, grace orientation. Are you gracious? Do you have any graciousness in your soul? Do you become retaliative? If you ever want to see the opposite of ἀγάπη love, then look at the Middle East. There is no love as we know in the Muslim religion; God is not a God of love, He is a god of vengeance; and free will is meaningless, as God determines whether He allows things to occur. God determines all. If you go into a retaliation mode, that tells you that you have no ἀγάπη love in your soul.

Don't let this passage keep you from taking in knowledge; however, it is not just an academic study; it is not just opening your Bible and listening; it is not just sitting in class and taking notes. However, the knowledge gained must be believed and applied. Γνώσις is necessary, and it is a step. However, you cannot approach this simply as Γνώσις; you cannot just make this an academic study. To gain Γνώσις without humility will elevate knowledge in the Christian life beyond what you should. Γνώσις will stimulate ego and pride in the soul.

Spiritual anorexia, you have a lot of Γνώσις, but very little ἐπίγνωσις. The believer who thinks of himself as knowing something cannot apply this knowledge to himself or to others. This is why we must apply the phrase love edifies. When knowledge is not applied, then a superior attitude is assumed, and other believers are seen as beneath them.

We all need ἐπίγνωσις in our souls; we all need to know what it means to say love edifies. Knowledge puffs up is a condescending attitude; no tolerance and no impersonal love from such a one. He sees himself as a model of spiritual maturity and he is blind to his own weakness. He cannot abide those who have ἐπίγνωσις in their souls. Ego means human self esteem. When true spiritual self esteem is found, those with human self esteem are threatened and they become competitive; they compare themselves favorably to those with spiritual self esteem. They are ready to solve all of your problems; they are ready to give you advice to straighten you out. Such a one cannot allow others to grow spiritually at their own pace. When someone applies doctrine apart from them, they are intimidated. Not only is their soul arrogant, but it affects their attitude and interaction with others. Add a little Γνώσις knowledge to things, and they become more and more arrogant. This can be a believer who will spend eternity in heaven; but the spiritual life is superficial; he breeds legalism and hypocrisy. These things are highly visible to everyone around. You cannot hide your arrogance because you cannot hide legalism and hypocrisy. When you have great humility, it gives you a stability. Impersonal love is the objectivity to look at someone who is repugnant to you, but you recognize what God has done for you. Stability vs. instability; volatility in the soul is the opposite of impersonal love. The #1 trait of the γνώσις believer is arrogance.

There are times when impersonal love demand that you simply stay away from a person, without retaliating; without running them down. Stay clear of the γνώσις believer who is arrogant. There is another manifestation of γνώσις arrogance in the believer. It is becoming a spiritual bully.

The bully applies γνώσις knowledge as . E.g., the husband who learns from doctrine that he is the authority in marriage and he camps on this authority; that is γνώσις in his soul. He uses this information to bully and dominate his wife. He uses this to run roughshod over his wife, instead of leading her. He becomes a brutal tyrant. Christian marriage can be just as brutal as a marriage between unbelievers. ἐπίγνωσις application means the husband loves his wife as Christ loved the church. The arrogant believer is incapable of applying agape love.

Arrogance seals the inability to execute the spiritual way of life. This is a person who is full of facts, but cannot pass the test; he cannot deal with people testing or system testing. No one crosses me; that is arrogance. You understand what God has done for you.

We glorify God; and when we stand before the Lord Jesus Christ, we receive rewards for eternity. As a believer in Jesus Christ, we have been given the greatest privileges that anyone could ask for.

1Cor. 8:2 If anyone thinks he knows anything, he does not yet know it as he ought to know it.

1Cor. 8:2

Lesson #412

Wed. September 13, 2006

Apparently Gary Horton is there tonite. Nope, it will be tomorrow.

Bobby has to repeat love edifies. Αγάπη from God, Who is love, as per 1John 4:8, 16. Love describes God's essence; His very person. He extends His love to us; by this time we should all know how His love is extended toward us. The greatest demonstration of God's love is the cross. God demonstrated His love toward us, in that when we were sinners, Christ died for us (Rom. 5:4). God loves His perfect righteousness, which is imputed to us. God can now love us with His personal love, as His righteousness is in us. Christ dying for us is impersonal love. This explains 1John 4:19: we love because He first loved us. Jesus lived the spiritual prototype, which is what we have now.

God is love; God extends that love toward us; and reciprocal love develops, as it comes from God. We gain that understanding through knowledge of Him. We cannot understand or apply agape love apart from doctrine. Agape love is an attitude. We may have no capacity for love or a little; but when someone gives us love, we sometimes return love to the best of our ability.

We all know we have a relationship with God; so we ought to think about that as an intimacy with Him. There is one aspect that we won't have a clue about one aspect of what God has done for us in love, which Bobby will pass along to us in the future. We are to think with the mind of Christ, which is objective thinking.

We are mandated to love our neighbor, and often they are people that we do not care for. How can we have love for all; but we need to think with an ἀγαπή love; these people may wish us ill; they may do us wrong. But we do not have to be bitter; we do not need to become consumed with mental attitude sins. We learn to be tolerant; we learn to have a good attitude toward these people, despite the fact that they dislike us or treat us in a shoddy manner.

We will have people testing every day. Whether in the workplace, in the home; or a casual situation. Can we still apply impersonal love? Can we not lose sleep over their behavior?

Ironically, we have this personal relationship with God and an impersonal love relationship with all mankind.

Now we are going back to the subject of knowledge, which was mentioned in the previous verse. Knowledge is essential for the application of agape love or for the manufacture of arrogance.

Knowledge which is in your right lobe is something which you can apply. This is different between gaining knowledge about the Bible, and thinking, that is interesting, but it has little to do with me. The more you believe and accept, the more it affects your life.

Δοκεω = to think, to suppose, to presume. 1st class condition. The verb which follows is γινωσκω = to know, to understand. This believer is arrogantly of the opinion that he knows a lot. This knowledge makes him arrogant.

The apodosis is next, and it picks up from the phrase, knowledge makes arrogant; unmetabolized γνῶσις is a source of arrogance. Some have a lot and some have a little γνῶσις, and such people think that they know a great deal. What is happening with this believer is a lack of spiritual sustenance. However, without transferring this knowledge by faith, without application of agape love, he assumes a position of superiority. There is no belief; there is no love. It becomes a source of competitiveness. What is doctrine for? It is for us personally. It is the means for living the spiritual life. We do not use doctrine in order to compare ourselves with others. There is no impersonal love in the arrogant, γνῶσις believer.

Those with γνῶσις only are intimidated by those who show up for Bible class; they are private persons; and it appears as though they can apply doctrine to their own lives. The thing which should feed them, and they should grow and it makes them arrogant. Love edifies and γνῶσις makes arrogant. Their hypocrisy is seen everywhere in their life. This chapter is all about legalistic, hypocritical believers.

Those who understand the meat offered to idols and that there is nothing to this; and they have no problem with eating this meat. However, others criticize them because they know a little about the law, which these others are unaware of. Those eating meat, apply the law of love and the law of expediency to the weaker believer. Paul has been talking about love and knowledge, and the weak and strong believers. How will the person with agape love handle the weaker believer? The believer who understands what is going on, could just chew a big bite of meat in front of them and say, "Tough." Or they could abstain for the reason of agape love. That is impersonal love. That is the application of impersonal love. You are learning to apply impersonal love to those you would prefer to kick.

It is not yet known as it should be known; it has not be transferred to the left lobe (or the right lobe?). When arrogance is involved, doctrine can end up being nothing more than a way of speaking; but nothing more than that. James 1:23: a hearer of the Word but not a doer [no application of Bible doctrine].

We are nothing; yet, God cares enough about us to have a personal plan for us. We are nothing, and yet God has a plan for us; and we are no different in this regard. This is the proper attitude of the ἐπίγνωσις believer. Humility means that we are grace oriented, and we apply this in an attitude of graciousness. Capacity to love is agape love thinking in our souls. That capacity is always enhanced by the fact that we can also have impersonal love; being able to love someone even when they are not lovable. They do not deserve it, but we are gracious toward them. We do not get offended by everything that they do. You have the toleration from your own impersonal love to deal with it. You recognize that God still has a plan for your life; you apply impersonal love and you move on.

He is known by Him. That is not very profound; we all know that God loves His righteousness in us and we need to grasp what it means that we are known by Him.

1Cor. 8:2 If anyone presumes [or, thinks] he knows anything, he does not yet know it as he ought to know it.

1Cor. 8:2

Lesson #413 Thursday September 14, 2006

Bobby and Gary went to Bracketville, TX, where Gary presented the gospel to some young people in that area. Bobby took Gary to a tough, inner city school. About 500 kids in the auditorium and there was not a friendly face in the crowd. No one in a camouflaged uniform was going to tell them anything. They heard what it meant to believe in Jesus Christ and what it means to be an American. Harlandale; which he went back to this past week or so.

This is a person who has academic knowledge. All of these verbs are γνώσις verbs. If he knows as he ought to know, love would be building up. Paul connects γνώσις knowledge of Bible doctrine with arrogance; knowledge of what we need to know, and Paul ends v. 1 by telling us that knowledge makes one arrogant. This is knowledge for knowledge's sake. As a legalistic believer, he only has γνώσις knowledge.

This believer thinks that his spiritual life is simple knowledge of God. The pharisees had great knowledge; they knew more about the Mosaic Law than anyone else; they interpreted the Law; they were arbiters of the Law. They demanded that the Law be followed to the letter, sometimes, as they defined it. Their knowledge turned to arrogance. Their knowledge of the Law was the basis of their arrogance. This gave them status; a position to be admired in the community.

A believer in the church there became contemptuous of those who did not have the knowledge that they have acquired so far. That someone else is advancing is meaningless to them; that they have more knowledge is what they see as important.

It is sad to take the greatest advantage that a believer has and make it a source of arrogance. Check out your attitude, to see if you are in the Spirit or not. You need to make certain that you are in grace; so you do not think of yourself more highly than you ought to think.

When Bible doctrine is simply γνώσις, then it stimulates arrogance and does not function in any way to cause one to grow. No ability to love your neighbor as yourself, means that you are not growing. This is an attitude that you develop, and if you do not have it, you are not growing.

1Cor. 8:2 If anyone presumes [or, supposes, thinks] he knows [γινωσκω] anything, he does not yet know it as he ought to know it.

The parenthesis began in v. 1, after we hear the overall topic. We may have expected this passage to say, If anyone loves God, then he knows God; but it does not say that. We would expect to see that in v. 3.

This is an amazing phrase that we have come across here, and Bobby does not every recall it being taught before. This verse describes the most amazing relationship that we could come across. This verse indicates a very special intimacy between God and the believer who has developed reciprocal love toward Him. This is speaking about an advancing, maturing believer, a believer who has begun to build his edification complex. He shares the happiness of God; he has great contentment.

This verse takes us to a reciprocal relationship. No greater love has been expressed in human history. He first loved us, and we reciprocate that agapê love; we take that perfect love as a paradigm and express it. God's love is a model for agapê love in our soul. This verse goes one step further; it goes beyond. This verse tells us that we are known by Him.

What Does We are Known by Him mean?

1. This is a recognition by God; it is reciprocal love for us. As we reciprocate love, we are known by Him. God's love is come right back at us a 2nd time, God is love, and we know that it is our spiritual duty to love Him back.
2. Known by Him is a special commendation by God of the mature believer. God gives a special commendation to the great warrior in the Church Age.
3. The mature believer is able to love God and able to love others because he knows the fantastic love of God.
4. Agapê love, including grace orientation.
5. In this passage, we find that God gives acknowledgement of that pure, agape love.

We first have the perfect passive indicative of ἔγνωσθω. The passive means the believer receives the action of being known by God. The perfect tense means is something which has reached its final result.. There is a termination point. As long as we are alive, there is no termination of our spiritual growth, until we check out of this life.

When we think that we have attained some spiritual peak, results in arrogance.

There is a finished result with this verb. We are known by Him, which is continued into the future. The progress continues into the future, and it is known by Him. The action in progress is the reality of the believer's reciprocal love for God. We have reciprocal love for God; we come to the end; and God gives special recognition and approval for certain believers.

We have the ability to show love for others, personal and impersonal. We are commended by Him. Progress, termination, result. Special commendation by God; and this is a continuing result into the future. We cannot see God's direct acknowledgement. This is not viewable to the typical believer; but His acknowledgment is in His mind. The recognition is this moment for us. We may think that when we get home, heaven, is when we are known by God and receive a commendation; we get a commendation in time.

Knowledge is not just for knowledge's sake; it is knowledge for impersonal love so that we can love the rest of humanity. We are executing the mission which God has given us. We are known by Him. This is the definition on our side; it is the ultimate in our love relationship with Him. He is the One we love; He is the One we think about. We still live in this world, and we must utilize what we have in this soul. We are occupied with Him as a mature believer, and we are known by Him.

Technical grammar is key.  $\Delta\epsilon$  = but. This contrasts between the  $\gamma\nu\omicron\sigma\iota\varsigma$  and the  $\epsilon\pi\iota\gamma\nu\omega\sigma\iota\varsigma$  believer. As humans, we need to fall in love with an object, not with love. However, it is okay to have love for the source of love. Love for God is our agapê love. We understand His love and we reciprocate His love as a mental attitude.

There is no emotion; there is no screaming and yelling in church about it; there is no singing with a louder and louder voice; it is in your soul; it is the way that you think. Then that love is reciprocated by God in a special way; we are known by Him.

There is another 1st class condition, but we are missing the word presume, as we had in v. 2. There was a presumption in the previous verse; no presumption in this verse. There is no presumption here; this is a true fact. If anyone here loves God [and they do],... The mind of God is love and that love is directed toward us; that love is benevolence and virtue. This is a mental attitude; this is a way of thinking. This is the key to love. We are known by God because of it. The believer knows God and is known by Him. Agapaô as divine viewpoint.  $\Gamma\upsilon\alpha\sigma\iota\varsigma$  makes arrogant, but  $\alpha\gamma\alpha\tau\tau\acute{\epsilon}$  builds up.

The final phrase of v. 3 is the wonderful apodosis of this verse. We simply has he is known by Him, which means we are known by God. We are known by Him, as there is something to do with approval here. Now, we all hve God's righteousness, so He approves all believers. If He approves us, we are obviously known by Him. God knows His family; why does God say, We are known by Him?

1Cor. 8:3 But if anyone loves God, he is known by Him.

Gary Horton is here tonite. After last year, Gary was contacted by a group in Illinois, and he will speak to those kids up there. Tim Shaw decided to represent Gary in this general area. Mike Stribbling was the first to book him. He was at Humble High School, and the bats showed up. One of Gary's objectives in this world is to make sure that someone hears the true gospel. When Satan can get us to add works or emotion to salvation, he has destroyed it. The good news is it is faith alone in Christ alone.

The theme up in Pennsylvania was to be an example. He used the Exodus generation as a lousy example. Throwing the tree into the water is a picture of the cross. There was also the striking of the rock, which was a picture of the cross; but 37 years later, there is the rock, and Moses only was to speak to the rock. Moses said, "Must we give you water, you rebels?" and then he struck the rock twice. God took him aside and said, "You have disqualified yourself, as you have destroyed the message of the gospel." Moses added human viewpoint and human energy. You speak to the resurrected Christ. Not by human energy or works, lest anyone brag. We are not saved by works, but we are regenerated for the purpose of production. Ποημα = poetry.

Gary speaks to young people and how some people who can entertain and we make millionaires out of them. And the real heroes of our life pass like ships in the night. Gary started thinking about who started this flower thing. Show appreciation now; no one has a guarantee of another day.

Gary sees the battle up close. He asks God to make him sensitive to the individuals that he will reach; occasionally he'll see a teacher who is amazed when he speaks of absolutes. Why do you live in a nation who tell you that there are no absolutes? He illustrates with his old homies playing their basketball team, but he gets to change the lines and change the height of the basket; etc.

Apparently Gary is a troublemaker, as he tells others about the greatest man who ever lived. Last Christmas, you could not say, "Merry Christmas." Now they are holiday trees, and that means holy day. In this darkness, our light does not have to be very bright.

Gary has been in California schools when he said, "Jesus Christ" and the kids would cheer and the faculty became uneasy. He was in grapevine high school, and there was a principal for his first year. Gary was on the free throw line. They did not respond to his corny humor (novocaine before brain surgery). The humor did not accomplish its purpose. So he backed off; he did not try to push it. He noticed that the silence was defening at that school.. Ev θεος = God inside. A lady whispered loud enough to be heard, "He did it." Gary looked over and made eye contact with her. The lady she spoke to had a surprised look; no idea what that meant. Finally, these 3 ladies came up to him, and the whisperer said, "Tell him." They prayed that morning. "When God will you lift up my Savior in my school?" An hour later, she whispers, "He did it" at Gary's message.

Gary walks out of a school, and he realizes that he has so little control; and it is amazing what God does.

He was in Seattle, a melting pot of everything that you could imagine. Very negative vibes from the faculty. "A teacher is looking for you." The teacher said, "I have a student who wants to speak to you." There was a young man in a wheel chair, with a terrific struggle of cerebral palsy. He could bang his head and out would come words, "Great speech, never quit." The whole issue is that we go by faith; we don't do it because of the response. Gary has learned that he needs this more than the kids he talks to.

He spoke to the Ole Miss rebel football team.

Our schools were founded by teaching the Word of God. They were founded by believers. Do we obey man or God, when it comes to revealing the gospel. What Gary does is a privilege.

1Cor. 8:1–3

Lesson #414 Sunday 1 September 17, 2006

The problem for the Corinthians is stated to begin with: food offered to idols. Bobby figured that he would be able to quickly blast through this short chapter; but it is becoming one of his favorites.

Every believer has some knowledge; and we have heard that a little knowledge can be a dangerous thing. There were those in Corinth with a little bit of knowledge. This knowledge in this chapter is about idolatry; some of the believers at Corinth knew the laws related to idolatry.

A person's overall attitude in the spiritual life can be stunted by a little knowledge. The very doctrine which brings us to spiritual maturity can also make us arrogant. This brings us to the opposite of the attitudes of humility and love.

The solution or the key to the spiritual life is love edifies. ἐπίγνωσις doctrine advances the soul of the believer.

1Cor. 8:1 About food offered to idols: (We know that "we all have knowledge [γνῶσις]." Knowledge [γνῶσις] makes arrogant, on the other hand, love edifies [or, builds up].

Then Paul goes to a little sarcasm; if any of you presume to know something; and the arrogance which results in legalism. I know more doctrine and have a greater spiritual life than anyone that I know. You apply a standard to yourself, but primarily to others, which is the antithesis to humility. There is no transfer of γνῶσις to Epignōsis, which is the crux of the problem.

1Cor. 8:2 If anyone presumes [or, supposes, thinks] he knows [γινωσκω] anything, he does not yet know it as he ought to know it.

The Love Complex, also known as the Divine Dynasphere; this is the agapê love complex. This believer who has this attitude of humility falls into the category of v. 3. The believer must first gain γνῶσις knowledge of God's love. In this knowledge, you learn Who and What God is; you learn about God's love and how it is extended. The believer transfers all of this knowledge from γνῶσις to epignôsis. What this really means is, we take the doctrine that we hear; and. This is not a survey course of 1 Corinthians; this is not simply an academic study. We are taking the very words. Our life is Bible doctrine, but it cannot be unless it inculcated into the soul.

We love the very source of God; God is love. The maturing believer is reciprocating the attitude of agapê love which he sees expressed toward him. This agapê love is a reflection of what we see in the mirror; it is a reflection of what we have in our soul. We will not perfectly reflect God's love. Nevertheless, it is patterned after the paradigm of God's love, and being returned, albeit, imperfectly. So many people, in their relations to others, have some derogatory feelings toward others around them. Yet, with grace orientation, we can reflect an attitude toward others which is tolerance.

As we learn about all of this as a believer in Jesus Christ, we begin to return God's love back to Him. This is what we express toward God; and it comes from epignôsis in the soul. The more we know, the more we can reciprocate. There is a flow out and a flow in.

He is known by Him. This is a special recognition by God of a mature believer. What does He know? God knows the believer who is mature and He sends something back. This is a special approval, and a privilege to be singled out by God as an invisible hero.

There is something in the believer; something special in the believer. It is about our mental attitude; our maturity; there is a special relationship. We have covered the perfect passive of αγαπαω. This is not just having some knowledge. Part of our reward, "I will put you in charge of many things." These words begin right now and right here. The salute is well-done my good and faithful servant.

We will not have a visible salute from God, but we will see the result of such a salute. There is a worship in our soul, with has also capacities with it. How We have great capacity for I've, both impersonal and personal. We will not let someone else destroy our happiness because they irritate us. Impersonal love with deal with our arrogance. God salutes the one who has absolute trust and absolute dependancy upon Him. We have not earned the favor of God through our own works, but we have utilized the sources which God has given to us.

We have no merit as a believer, and we have a sin nature and we continue to sin. However, God imputes His righteousness to us, and He has personal love for us, since we have progressed using divine operating assets.

If God loves all of us, then why does Paul make this statement? We are all known by Him. There is something else going on. Not everyone reciprocates God's love. This indicates a very close, intimate relationship with God.

Intimacy with anyone is always two-sided. We have intimacy with the Lord because we know Him. The believer who has reciprocal love; intimacy is a two-way street; and there must be a two-way involvement between us and God. God is impartial; this intimacy is something that only the mature believer possesses. Deut. 6:5: You will love the Lord your God with all your heart and all your soul and with all your might, which is the strength of doctrine in the soul. We will have a wonderful existence in this life, and then we have an incredible eternity to look forward to. Instead of being dragged into eternity, kicking and screaming, we do better to enjoy life as God has planned, as a mature believer.

1Cor. 8:3 But if anyone loves God, he is known by Him).

1Cor. 8:3–6

Lesson #415 Sunday 2 September 17, 2006

Study to show yourself approved; and here is our approval in 1Cor. 8:3.

We are given the downside—knowledge makes arrogant; and the upside, we are known by Him. We have those we love personally, and those we love impersonally, and there will be great people testing; and we do have a wonderful spiritual life. This is a special salute; a special acknowledgment by Him. All the gates of the divine dynasphere; and continues to build impersonal love toward man and personal love toward God. This is the scope of 18:1–3. Our glorification of God, our service for Him, are all part of the maturing process of the believer. Knowledge makes arrogant and it comes together here, He who loves God is known by Him.

What does the Scripture say about arrogance? God makes war on the arrogant, but He gives grace to the grace oriented. The attitude of agapê love is the opposite of arrogance. Whom the Lord loves, he scourges and disciplines every son whom He receives. The alternative is, Γνωσις makes arrogant, but love makes humble. The salute or the great recognition of God, which is a wonderful aspect of our relationship with God. We will be able to handle things with contentment of soul. Nothing greater than contentment in one's soul. Humble yourselves, therefore, under the mighty hand of God, that He might exalt you at the proper time (1Peter 5:6). Exalting us is a promotion in the plan of God; other believers might not know the source of our promotion or recognize that we have been promoted. We are promoted when we are mature enough to handle it. If we look at the course of our life, and the spiritual growth as part of our life, and we understand that there have been promotions throughout our lives by God. If we are mature, it will come, and if we get these promotions, it will be the greatest thing to ever happen to us. For Bobby, the privilege of teaching in Berachah, as Bobby has enjoyed.

God will exalt us at the proper time, which is a promotion; when we are capable of glorifying God in our actions, in our service to Him. Epignôsis forces out arrogance, which leads to humility. Humility and teachability are necessary in order to grow spiritually.

Epignôsis = full knowledge of God. This special salute, this commendation, is a motivation to gain humility and reciprocal love. Without it, we will not be exalted at the proper time. No opportunity to glorify God in the way that He has designed for us to glorify Him. Entering these 4 gates puts us into a situation of motivation, so that we can function with impersonal love. Our promotion may mean greater testing and greater difficulties in our life. Some of us might run the other way, thinking, I don't want that. For the mature believer, it is sometimes the greatest blessing to fall into testing and to pass that testing and glorify God in this testing.

There is nothing which can remove us from the love of God. We cannot be removed from that relationship. We reciprocate His love and He reciprocates by a special acknowledgment. What a minor question, thinking about all of this, is the food sacrificed to idols. This is a problem? What a minor thought; there are real, monumental problems; food sacrificed to idols is nothing. Can these people put aside the law of liberty in order to use the law of love in their relationships with other believers. Some realize that they have the liberty to eat meat offered to others. It distracts them from advancing. The law of love takes other believers into consideration; you think about other believers besides just yourself. There are certain activities that you know you have every right to do, but you limit yourself, because it confuses the immature believer. Under the law of love, you sometimes refrain from exercising your liberty. This passage is about freedom with responsibility. Freedom can be abused when you stomp all over someone else. Sometimes you must refrain from doing certain things. As a believer, we have developed impersonal love ἀγαπή love for the weaker believer. The legalist hates that person, is thrown out of whack by that person. As a mature believer, we want to keep the legalistic and immature believers away from mental attitude sins, and from being judgmental about our activities. They can become very upset and disturbed and even distracted from doctrine. We may not be able to influence them here; but, we do not want to be the cause of someone getting distracted from doctrine. That is the law of love in operation. That is the impersonal love.

We have no right to interrupt the life of another person; impersonal love is to handle people testing from someone else; we do not want to become a test for someone else, even though they are legalistic. We want to shove their nose in it; and we want to retaliate. The difficult part is not retaliating and not becoming a stumbling block for them. Knowledge makes arrogant, but love edifies. Don't get in the way of it. You always want to contribute to the uninterrupted growth of the weaker, less mature believer. You don't want to discourage them in the exercise of your own liberty. We don't want to give them an excuse to go negative. We don't want to get tangled up with such a believer, because when God disciplines them, we might get hit with some secondary fire.

Paul has taken this little detour of edification by love and the arrogance of knowledge. The mature believer will be concerned with the legitimate spiritual growth of the immature believer, and the great problem solving device of ἀγαπή love in our soul. We need to be gracious toward those who do not deserve it; God's love is extended toward us, which we do not deserve. The graciousness of our souls; the graciousness of impersonal love reflects God's love toward us, which is undeserved. You must never be a roadblock to that growth. They don't need to be sidetracked by us and by us being a false issue in their life. We are reflecting the grace of God in our souls.

1Cor. 8:3 But if anyone loves God, he is known by Him).

With this instruction, Paul can now move on to the food offered to idols. Paul will now apply all of this knowledge. Paul will say there are no idols; but there are idols all over; how do we deal with this. Bobby's seen idols in a Buddhist temple, so they are all over.

1Cor. 8:4 About eating food offered to idols, then, we know that "an idol is nothing in the world," and that "there is no God but one."

Paul said "There are no idols" and then says, "But even if there are so-called gods, whether in heaven or on earth—as there are many gods and many lords..."

1Cor. 8:5 For even if there are so-called gods, whether in heaven or on earth--as there are many "gods" and many "lords"--

Then Paul tells us, For us, there is only one God, the Father, from Whom are all things, and we exist for Him; and one Lord, Jesus Christ, through whom are all things, and we through Him. Not for Him but through Him. These 3 verses are the application of all that we have studied. Paul is going to take them with that theology in their soul and he will now apply it, and take them through the mind field of meat offered to idols.

1Cor. 8:6 yet for us there is one God, the Father, from whom are all things, and we for Him; and one Lord, Jesus Christ, through whom are all things, and we through Him.

All of Scripture is inspired; each and every word—verbal plenary inspiration of Scripture.

1Cor. 8:4

Lesson #416 Wednesday September 20, 2006

Bobby reads the next 3 verses. The particle ouv (therefore), which indicates that Paul goes back to the subject which Paul began in v. 1. He went off on a tangent about knowledge. The previous 3 verses have been profound in Bobby's life.

V. 1a is a general expression: Concerning food sacrificed to idols, which is the surface subject of 1Cor. 8. V. 4 is a more definite statement of the subject, and gives us more information on the subject. Now we know that we are talking about the eating of things sacrificed to idols. This may seem irrelevant to us today; but this will illustrate to us the law of love.

We are going to be given a solution; the fact that knowledge makes arrogant, but love edifies also gives us the solution to the problem which Paul will deal with. This is the solution to every problem in life. Paul was teaching the answers before the test.

The Corinthians are wondering, right now, what about eating this food which is offered to idols? First, Paul says use epignôsis knowledge in order to figure out if this is legitimate or not. The idea is, if you understand why knowledge makes arrogant and love edifies, you will be able to answer this question.

Doctrine is a separator; it is difficult to maintain close relationships with those who have no doctrine and are not moving in the same direction that you are. When you move forward with doctrine, you may lose some friends; God will take up the slack. All the Corinthians know that idolatry is wrong; and they know there is only One God. The word trinity is never used; but here, we have One God, Jesus Christ and God the Father. Secondly, the question about meat offered to idols. Paul says, develop reciprocal love for God and develop impersonal love for all mankind. Some have understood the principle already; others have no clue at this time. They are at war with polytheism and idolatry and anything which is peripheral to idolatry, they oppose. So they are having troubles with their fellow believers watching others eating meat which has been offered to idols.

Imagine the weaker believer being invited over for a meal, and the host tells them about all of the meat and how good it is and where it comes from (it was offered to idols). The third solution: ἀγαπή love must dictate the solution when dealing with other believers. Paul must determine what an idol really is. The Corinthians must be able to distinguish between the gods of idolatry and the God of the Universe. There was a true need for some of them to separate from idolatrous practices. They all need to understand the law of liberty, the law of love, and the love of expediency.

They all know that idolatry is wrong; they have all believed in Jesus Christ. They know that there is one true God. What needs to be straightened out are all the peripheral issues related to idolatry. This is one of many.

Paul begins with, therefore, we know; οἶδα = to know, to understand, . This is actually the perfect tense of γινωσκω, but it became a separate word, and it became to be used as a present tense. A very common verb in the New Testament. Perfect form, but should be rendered like a present tense. It is used for the inculcation of doctrine into the right lobe.

First thing you guys should know is, there is no such thing as an idol; and there is only One God. The first deals with polytheism and the second with monotheism. These figures of stone, wood, etc. are nothing; they are meaningless. They may have thought idolatry is wrong because these idols have some sort of meaning; but there are no such thing as gods as these idols are meant to represent. The idols do not exist because what they represent does not exist. 1Cor. 10:20: The things which the Gentiles sacrifice [idolatry], to demons and not to God; and I do not want you to become sharers of that.

No demon can reside where the Holy Spirit resides. A demon is afraid to do that; but there is demon influence. Understand that the idols themselves as inanimate objects, do not represent God. There is no idol. There is no heathen gods in the universe, as the heathen conceive their gods to be.

Κοσμος = the world, Satan's cosmic system. It can refer to the entire universe rather than just our little corner of the universe. Their idols are statues made to represent something. They are tangible; they can be handled; someone sculpted it; someone made it. The polytheists are worshiping idols which mean nothing. Idols are nothing. There is no Aphrodite; there is no Jupiter, there is no Juno. They are figments of someone's imagination. The objects do not represent that which the worshipers perceived them to be. Therefore, if these gods are nothing, then anything offered to these false gods is not contaminated. They should already grasp that principle. In contrast, there is no God but One. Then we will begin a tremendous description of God the Father and Jesus Christ. Whether the idols represent those which do not exist, none of that compares remotely with a real thing to be worshiped. There is only one real divine being, and we are known by Him. There is no God but One; so what does an idol mean? Nothing. In polytheism, there was no intimate relationship with any of the gods. The gods were capricious; and they liked giving a hard time to men; and they would send plagues to man because they were bored. Paul says, "You have one God who knows you."

We need to recall that we have an intimate relationship with God. When world and personal events seem to be utterly out of control. Bobby sees the newscasts, which give only bad news out of Iraq. All we hear, people are dying and terrorists hate us even more, and we need to get out. It is very disturbing to hear all of that. This is time for us to stand still and watch to see how the Lord will deliver us, personally and as a nation. It is easy to become discouraged; it is easy to lose faith. We have fantastic thinkers who understand the threat of the Muslim world; there has not been such a strong, obvious divide between evil and good ever before. On one side, Iraq is the front line for the Angelic Conflict.

The Pope pointed out that Islam spreads its religion by the sword. The pope is apologizing for saying something which is exactly true. They want to destroy Christianity; they want to destroy us. If we can't see how closely the Muslim religion is related to Satan, there may be no hope for us. We need to stand still and watch what the Lord will do. We have an intimate relationship with the Lord of the Universe. Jesus Christ has one the strategic victory and we are a part of the tactical victory. God is going to prevail. We will never be destroyed. God's Word and His people will be preserved; no matter what. We can sit back and enjoy the show and see how God does it. We may get caught up in what is going on in human events, but it is more interesting to watch how the Lord is going to work these things out.

We are so worried about sectarian violence in Iraq. Muslims blowing up Muslims; if they are not killing us, they will kill each other. God can use that as deliverance. There is death and destruction wherever we look. Satan kills his young and eats them. Don't be sad when evil destroys evil. If they were positive toward Bible doctrine, then God would give them the gospel and they will be saved.

People try to make representations of God using gold or precious stones; but no one can represent God in any way. How do you represent omnipresence? How do you represent spirit? What is an idol? This is the conjuring of some human's mind. The attributes of idols has been revealed. Therefore, food offered to these nothings is not contaminated.

If you did not worship the idols in order to eat the meat, you are fine. You can eat the meat put in front of you. You can eat in your own home. This is a bonafide function of the law of liberty. There is no God but One God. No idol can represent God on earth. Food offered to idols is not tainted. Idols is nothing; there is one God; therefore, idols are nothing and represent nothing. Therefore, when food is offered to an idol, that is meaningless. God gave us the meat from animals to eat. We need to recognize that it is okay to eat red meat; there is no Biblical problem with it. So, eating meat offered to idols does not offend God's character, nor does it violate the mandates against idolatry. The eating of meat offered to idols does confuse some believers, and this is the problem. This is the real issue. Should the smarter believers say, "I know I can eat this; you'll catch on eventually. Too bad if you get confused." In our society, the law of liberty reigns supreme. When liberty becomes self-centered and indulgent, it needs to be curbed. We must not become a stumbling block because we have a right to exercise our liberty.

1Cor. 8:4 About eating food offered to idols, then, we know that "an idol is nothing in the world," and that "there is no God but one."

1Cor. 8:4–5

Lesson #417 Thursday September 21, 2006

An article from Bobby's aunt from Tampa. Preaching the Gospel of Prosperity and Getting the Gospel Wrong. Does God want you to be rich? This was apparently a question on Time Magazine of the previous week. The health and wealth gospel. Jim Baker and Jimmy Swaggart stood behind this? 10 million strong in Pentecostal churches; why not gain the whole world plus my soul. That seems to be the gospel of Joel Osteen, as per a book he has written. They look at John 10:10: I have come that you might have life and have it more abundantly. The idea is, what Christ, before His suffering, really wanted us to have bigger condos. "I deserve to be happy in the moment" Americans. Working to triumph over adversity is different than this new spiritual creed: I have the right to have my needs met right now. No wonder we have so many young adults who have never heard the word no. There have always been those oily preachers; but it is not any accident that the boomer mentality that it is all about me has invaded Christianity. Many Christian evangelists find the gospel to be poison. The fuller life in Him often is accompanied by adversity and suffering.

This was a great problem when Bobby was in seminary, and here it is again.

Paul repeats the subject of v. 1a; things sacrificed to idols. Love edifies. They now need to make application to solve the problem which they have presented. The Corinthians were taking knowledge and breaking it down into factions; and the knowledge of one faction, was seen as greater than the knowledge of another.

They needed to develop spiritual maturity, which includes impersonal love. They must learn this in order to deal with each other. That is the practical problem. The other problem is that there are far too many immature believers in Corinth. They need to understand who God is and His love. Do you simply indulge yourself, or do your actions have an effect on other believers. We know that there is no such thing as an idol in the world. This had to startle the Corinthians; because they would say, of course there are idols; they are all over the place; in every square and in front of every temple. So this statement seems dumb to them.

Neptune enjoyed seeing people in danger, so he would put storms out on the ocean. But there is really no such thing as a god Neptune. This is a non-existent God; and that god existed only in the mind of the devotee. There is only One God. A Being with infinite and absolute attributes. Any god worshiped as an idol is simply the invention of man. The Scripture tells us that, no one has seen god; because God does not have any form which we could understand. God is omnipresent; how can we see that?

Jesus Christ is God and He did take the form of man as our substitute. Jesus Christ should never be worshiped in the form of an idol. Like a painting, or on a dashboard or on the cross; and this should not occur. This clouds the issue; we should see Christ in our soul; others should see Him in us. We do not worship some image of Him. No idol can ever represent invisible, almighty God. We can only understand Him in Spirit and Truth. If God is not in our souls, then God is not real to us.

Idols are nothing and they represent nothing; and, therefore, meat offered to them was not tainted by this contact. The meat is not polluted because it was sacrificed to an idol; but it is meaningless in the Christian life.

1Cor. 8:4 About eating food offered to idols, then, we know that "an idol is nothing in the world," and that "there is no God but one."

Paul says there are no idols but there are so-called gods. So vv. 4 and 5 seem to be contradictory. Most of these come out of polytheism. Paul is going to play off this background; Paul adds another dimension concerning these false gods. Paul goes to a hypothetical situation in v. 5. It is a 1st class condition, which is the premise of a 1st class condition. The protasis is introduced by a very unusual word. Εἴπερ = conditional clause. This means if, after all. It refers back to what was said in the previous verse. This also brings up a hypothetical question. What if there are real deities represented by idolatry.

There is a reason why Paul approaches these things in this way. The verb in the indicative means that we are in the 1st class condition. If, after all, there are... Λεγομενοι θεοι = so-called gods.

What Paul's Reasoning Is

1. Paul is definitely introducing the possibility that there are some sort of gods involved in idolatry.
2. Do they represent something which is real?
3. There may be some reality connected with the worship of idols, despite v. 4, which states no idol represents the One God.

4. In making this differentiation between idols being nothing and the possibility that they represent something, Paul issues a warning. This is an aside, but it is important.
5. These idols may, in fact, represent something which is sinister; something which the idolaters themselves may not be aware of.

So-called gods are both in the nominative case, meaning that they are the subject of the sentence. We view this from the condition of reality; there are so-called gods. What is Paul doing here?

What is Paul Doing Here?

1. On the one hand, Paul is affirming the non-existent gods of polytheism, something which Corinthians have believed in all of their lives. When people get out of fellowship, they return to where they were before.
2. "You did not leave one god for another; you left no gods for the real God."
3. Paul reaffirms the nonexistence of the idols, but then gives credence to so-called deities.
4. Paul is making a connection between the two of them.
5. In doing so, Paul is showing them that there is no comparison between the God and anyone or anything else.
6. Whether these gods are figments of the imagination or real so-called gods, they can never approach the One God. It does not matter what they are, whether they exist or do not exist.
7. Paul is putting idolatry in its proper perspective. In other words, why is the worship of an idol denied? Why should you spend time thinking about it, when it represents nothing? The food offered to them is fine. The Corinthians have spent their entire lives immersed in idolatry.

Maybe, it is the Jewish believers who are having problems, because they know there are laws about this in the Old Testament?

Even today, there are no gods; no Buddha, no ancestors, no Krishna. They are nothing; they are non-existent. Same deal with Allah and Mohammed. Muslims don't have idolatry; but their beliefs are a perversion; Allah and God the Father are not the same god.

Idols do not represent what they are supposed to represent. They are conjured in the minds of heathen. The recognition in polytheism is a recognition of something which is higher than they are. It is an argument for the existence of God. These idols are a creation of the human mind and are nothing. In spite of the fact that they do not exist, that does not mean that there are not supernatural beings involved with idolatry.

There are those who are in heaven and those who are on earth. Scripture confirms that heaven and earth are populated by these beings.

There is Satan and demons; but there are also human rulers who deified themselves by edict and decree, even though everyone in town knew that they were not gods. These are living breathing idols. Bobby was in seminary in Oregon, and there was a guy who declared himself to be god; all his neighbors hated him, and he kept buying up all the land there. A living, breathing idol.

Supernatural beings are present where idolatry is practiced. It is said that the demonism at this guy's ranch was palpable. The things which the idolators sacrifice, sacrifice to demons. This makes it even more interesting why God allows men to eat the meat offered to idols. Paul is making clear what the problem is. Idolatry is a part of Satan's system. Idolatry has been a problem since religion first began. In the study of Greek mythology and the rites which went with it. Some women would go into frothing ecstasies of demon-possession. Bobby always found reading these things to be interesting; they are wrongly interpreted, but the demonism is clear.

Paul concedes that these so-called gods do exist, and there are demons hooked up with idolatry.

Two conclusions: idols do not represent the pantheon of God. There is only One God and He cannot be represented by idols. That would denigrate the infinite, inscrutable God to the level of man's imagination. Man would therefore begin with himself to find God. We begin with God to understand ourselves. Secondly, gods and lords do actually exist; originally created by God as angels.

1Cor. 8:4-5

Lesson #418 Sunday 1 September 24, 2006

Bobby was tempted to quickly cover the remaining portion of this chapter quickly; how could the edification of love be topped (the subject of the beginning)? Especially since the topic seems to be antiquated and out-of-date. Apart from the idolatry of Buddhism, or the worship of ancestors in small shrines; or the deified human beings. Reincarnation is the progress of us becoming one with God, which deifies man. There is the more immediate idol or nature, which is pantheism, and environmentalism today. The remainder of this chapter is more than a simple problem of idolatry.

There are certainly idols in this world. After Paul introduces the concept of idols, he says, there is no such thing as idols in this world; even though people in Corinth were surrounded by idols. However, what Paul is saying is, there is no Mars, no Jupiter, no Aphrodite. These idols represent nothing; they have no power and there is no being behind them as the idol describes or alludes to. There is only one God. In Corinth, they worshiped many gods; and Paul tells us that there is only one God. The God of the Universe is greater than anything we could imagine. Humanism simply makes up a god in man's image; but such a god can not approach Who and What God is. When we make god in our own image, it is not God. How can any idol represent Him? Idols are the products of man's hands and imagination. God does not have a form that we can understand. We have thoughts and memories, and yet are unable to actually translate that into a replicate of those thoughts and memories. Only through the Scripture can we know and understand God; we see Him through His Word.

The Lord Jesus Christ is the image of God; but we do not worship Him through idolatry. This is why we have no idea what Jesus looks like. We do not worship His human form, and the Bible is careful to keep this information from us.

1Cor. 8:4 Concerning the eating food offered to idols, then, we know that "an idol is nothing in the world," and that "there is no God but one."

According to the next verse, there is actually something to the gods in idolatry. This begins with εἴπερ, which is an unusual particle for the Greek. It means if, after all; even if. The question is, if there is no such thing as an idol; and then he says, there are these so-called gods; so it appears to be a contraction. And then Paul confirms, there are many gods and man lords. All the gods invented by the mind of man who are worshiped, do not exist. Even though idols themselves are nothing; they may themselves represent something. In some way, a so-called god is involved in idolatry. Who are these so-called deities if they are not the gods of these idols?

There are these gods in heaven and on earth. These areas are populated by Satan, known as the God of this world. Satan took many minions with him. Therefore, there are many so-called gods in this world. Heathen sacrifices are offered; not to some pantheon of gods; but to so-called gods that actually do exist. The idolatry which continues do in fact have something to do with so-called gods (perhaps we are speaking of fallen angels and kings of this earth who expect to be worshiped). The angels are created by God; created can never equal the Creator. As a creature, Satan will never be like the Most High.

Rom. 1:20–28: For his invisible attributes, namely, his eternal power and divine nature, have been clearly perceived [how do you see something which is invisible? How do you see that which is invisible?], ever since the creation of the world, in the things that have been made [the intricacies of creation is a testimony to God; a biology class tells us how carefully everything is designed]; those who look at this creation which surrounds us, and do not see God, they are without excuse. Many sit around looking at the universe and wonderfuing how it all came to be]. So they are without excuse. For although they knew God, they did not honor him as God or give thanks to him, but they became futile in their thinking, and their foolish hearts were darkened. [Every day, there are new things discovered, and they try to fit it into evolutionary theory; the theory evolves, but we don't] Claiming to be wise, they became fools [those who reject God are fools], and exchanged the glory of the immortal God for images resembling mortal man [fools worship corruptible man; humanism, Islam, Buddhism] and birds and animals and reptiles [bowing down to those who are so low to the ground]. Therefore God gave them up in the lusts of their hearts to impurity, to the dishonoring of their bodies among themselves, because they exchanged the truth about God for a lie [when God is not trusted, they turn toward Satan, the father of lies] and worshiped and served the creature [either man, an angelic being, or whatever. Worshiping an image of any type is a rejection of Jesus Christ. 1. There are many, many idols which are worshiped—wealth, money, material things; ideas, like Marxism. 2. In idol worship, there is an association with a so-called god; a demon. 3. Where there is no belief in Jesus Christ, in rushes the opposition] rather than the Creator, who is blessed forever! Amen. For this reason God gave them up to dishonorable passions. For their women exchanged natural relations for those that are contrary to nature; and the men likewise gave up natural relations with women and were consumed with passion for one another, men committing shameless acts with men and receiving in themselves the due penalty for their error.

It is easy in this culture to be taken in by materialism; but not if you have Jesus Christ in your soul. As long as their personal contact with unbelievers does not involve idolatry, there is not a problem. These people are mature believers; the meat they are eating was offered to idols; idols are nothing and the offering means nothing. The weak believer thinks that three is a huge problem. As long as the idolatry has no effect on them; as long as they are not sucked into human viewpoint, there is no problem. If we depart from the mind of Christ, we are sucked into human viewpoint, and idolatry is not far away.

Stumbling block principle; enticing someone to do something that violates their norms; that is something this chapter will deal with, and we need to be aware of this in our relations with other believers. Unbelievers see us and say, there is no difference between their actions and mine; so I don't need Jesus Christ. Or, there are those who see your freedom and become confused, and take liberties where they should not.

1Cor. 8:5–6

Lesson #419 Sunday 2 September 24, 2006

Idols do not represent real gods; but what about the Nephaliim of Gen. 6? These are half-demon, half-man; gods in a way. Mythology was based upon these idols. The Nephilim could be the basis for mythology; however, mythology tied them to events of nature, and so forth and so on. So what came along was far removed from the actual thing. Furthermore, the Nephaliim are removed from this world and incarcerated at this time.

We act just like unbelievers when we fall into mistake of Rom. 1:20ff. We worship at the shrine of money. God ends up taking a back seat. The believer becomes just as big a fool in whatever he or she worships. We, as believers, can become fools in idolatry. 1Tim. 4:1: we can become influenced by the doctrines of demons; that can become the way that we think; we worship the creature rather than the creator. 2Tim. 4:3–4: For the time is coming when people will not endure sound teaching, but having itching ears they will accumulate for themselves teachers to suit their own passions, and will turn away from listening to the truth and wander off into myths. Those who have moved away from the truth; and they will no longer endure sound teaching. They want a god to tell them what they want to hear; they do not want to hear a God who reproves them; they don't want to be told no. They want their ears scratched; they have something they want to hear, and that is where they go. If you can endure sound doctrine, then there is nothing greater than good doctrine. There are those who want their ears scratched. 1Tim. 4:1; the doctrines of demons. Human viewpoint; cosmic system; that is where we go to one degree or another. Human viewpoint rules our soul, and some do not even know that this is happening. They will accumulate to themselves teachers who teach according to their own desires. There are plenty of churches which will do that; the health and wealth gospel. You can save your own soul and have everything you want. No absolute doctrine, but relativism. Teach me something I can agree with; I want to feel good; I don't want to be reproved; I am an American, I am free, and I can do whatever I want. Make me feel good and tell me what I want to hear; stimulate me. Sometimes we can't do everything that we want to do, even if it is not sin. They will accumulate to themselves teachers according to their own desires and they will turn away from truth. Turning away from the truth means that they will turn to human viewpoint and to myths. They will worship anything other than God. If you worship anything other than God, you worship a lie. You can't sit in church 24 hours a day; but you take your thinking with you. We live our lives in the light of eternity.

The meat offered to idols is just an accurtiment of idolatry. The meat offered to idols is simply a prop. The physical properties of the meat is not changed. There is no transubstantiation; the properties of the meat have not changed; it is not tainted by idolatry. Its association does not affect it. There is nothing wrong with eating meat offered to idols. There is no sin involved in eating this meat. Since there is no focus on idol worship, it is just good bbq; the best in that time period. The doctrines of demons and the believers metabolizing Bible doctrine are mutually exclusive. The believer must not get involved in the worship of idols. To worship the creature rather than the creator.

Today, it is worshiping at the shrine of environmentalism; or radical environmentalism. Bobby is not saying that we need to trash everything around us; but this earth is not god. Greenhouse gases and greenhouse affect may or may not be true; but they will never destroy the earth. That is doctrines of demons. Nothing will destroy this earth until Jesus Christ returns. Until then, there is no destruction of the earth. The point is, instead of going crazy about these things, we can relax and be content. Otherwise we face the doctrines of demons, which cause us to be upset and concerned. Jesus Christ upholds all things by the Word of His power (Heb. 1:3). Jesus Christ upholds all things by the word of His power; it remains until He destroys it. As long as God has a purpose for this world and for us, our environment cannot be destroyed. It can be less than it could be, but it cannot be destroyed. Man does not have the power to destroy the earth. We only have the power to be influenced by the doctrine of demons. We can become focused on the environment rather than upon Jesus Christ.

Idolatry of any kind puts believers out of touch with God and His plan, and hooks them up with the dos of demons. Idolatry is anything which is worshiped which is not God. Idolatry represents any so-called gods. Anything which departs from God is a part of the cosmic system and the doctrines of demons.

1Cor. 8:5 For even if there are so-called gods, whether in heaven or on earth--as there are many "gods" and many "lords"--

In v. 6, Paul tells us about God, about theology proper, and some every complex doctrines. We might want our ears tickled elsewhere. We cannot understand God and our relationship to Him without understanding the doctrines of this verse.

We do not exist for anything else except for Him. We exist or live through Him. All of v. 6 is an apodosis; which is the conclusion of the protasis of v. 5. This will conclude the fact that there are many created beings in this world.

Paul says, There is only One God, and then Paul names God the Father and Jesus Christ. Islam thinks that we are polytheist, because we believe in the Trinity. Deut. 4:39: Know therefore today and take it to your heart [the right lobe], that the Lord is the God in heaven and in earth below; there is not other. Heathen gods do not exist.

Demons, even though they are dangerous creatures, are creatures nonetheless and subject to God's plan. Many do not understand the doctrines here. Some eat meat offered to idols, and are not confused; however, others observe this and get caught up in idolatry. The key is, where is your focus. It is our nature to hear what we want to hear. Paul wants the Corinthians to refocus. Get your minds off the meat; there is no other.

There is Only One Object of Worship; One God in 3 Persons

1. The Trinity does not mean there are 3 Gods; there are not 3 Gods. But don't we have God the Father, God the Son and the Holy Spirit?
2. There is only One God in 3 persons. The Trinity is found in the Old Testament, but covered in more detail in the New.
3. All 3 persons of the Trinity are one in essence; and hence, they are One God. Co-equal and co-eternal. The word Trinity is not found in the Bible, but the concept is there.
4. All 3 members of the Trinity are co-equal and co-eternal and all are involved in every external activity of God as One God. The Trinity is never broken down to sun gods, moon gods, etc.
5. However, a trinitarian doctrine also means that some activities are more specifically identified with One Person rather than another. All are involved in every activity.
6. In other words, each person of the Godhead, Father, Son and Holy Spirit, has a specific purpose and role in the overall plan of God—not compartmentalized, not with cross-purposes. Polytheistic gods worked against one another. The Trinity has one plan and one God (in 3 persons), and they work as One.
7. All of these separate activities. They are all involved in the one purpose of One plan of the One God.
8. Nevertheless, the Scripture assigns distinct roles to each Person not jointly shared by other members of the Trinity.

We will learn just how insignificant we are in this verse. In the time of the Jews, they were always going off a-whoring after other gods.

Recall the chapter topic: should the Corinthians be associated in any way with idolatry? There is one God, and yet Paul mentions God the Father and Jesus Christ. Paul is presenting a little theology proper. Bobby spent a semester in seminary on theology proper, which he will give us in a couple nights.

You have to be careful about legalism; but you also should never stand between someone and their walk toward maturity.

The Trinity

Given 10 days ago when Bobby was last here.

1. One God in 3 persons. That in itself is a complex idea. It sounds like there are 3 gods, but there are not 3 gods in the Trinity. Islam accuses Christianity of being polytheistic; but they are wrong. There are not 3 separate gods.
2. There is only 1 God in 3 persons; an important distinction to make. Paul was addressing a bunch of former polytheist; so he needs them to understand the difference between polytheism and Christianity.
3. All 3 persons are 1 in essence; exactly the same attributes. All the attributes are found in all 3 members of the Trinity.
4. They are co-equal and co-eternal. Each One is involved in all the external activities of God as the One God. They do not have completely separate roles; one isn't the earth, wind and fire god, and another is not the sun, moon and stars god. They are involved in all things equally.
5. A trinitarian doctrine means that some of the activities of the Godhead are more specifically identified with one person rather than the other.
6. Each person of the Godhead has a specific purpose in the overall plan of God. They are all moving toward the same purpose according to the same plan; but each has a separate purpose. They never work at cross-purposes. In mythology, one god is always stirring up the pot in human history, trying to put one over on another god. But the members of the Trinity are never independent of each other.
7. All of these separate activities are part of the one purpose and one plan.
8. However, the Scripture assigns distinct roles to each person that are not jointly shared by the other members of the Trinity. V. 6 is one place where these distinct roles are identified. You cannot deal with this passage unless you understand that the members of the trinity have distinct roles. We will also see how their distinct roles and functions are directed toward us. This verse gives us the entire spectrum of Who God is and how He relates to us.

The purpose of this verse is to focus the believers away from the idea of idolatry and polytheism, and to focus upon the True God.

Notice that God the Holy Spirit is not mentioned in this verse. The Holy Spirit is the sovereign executive of God's plan to mankind. He is the power of God for us. He supplies the power to us to execute the spiritual life. The Holy Spirit is a person, which has been a great controversy in church history. How can an ethereal being be a person. He is not just some force; He is not some power.

Why the Holy Spirit is an Actual Person

1. The Holy Spirit is described using personal pronouns in the Greek.
2. The Holy Spirit has personal names assigned to Him. The Helper, our Mentor, our Advocate, our Teacher, our Comforter. John 14:16 1John 2:1
3. He has personal things, e.g., an intellect. He thinks. He thinks divine viewpoint and He powers that in our soul. He makes the mind of Christ real in our soul.
4. He carries out personal activities. He searches (1Cor. 2:10); He speaks (Acts 8:29); He testified (John 8:26?). He is a witness.
5. His close associated with both the Father and the Son implies personhood. Matt. 28:19 there is unity in this vese, and co-equality.

Two members are anmed and worshiped, because of Who they are; and they are objects of worship; however, the Holy Spirit is conspicuously absent. We worship God the Father and God the Son, but not specifically God the Holy Spirit.

Why we do not specifically worship the Holy Spirit

1. God the Holy Spirit is specifically said to be sent by the father. John 15:26
2. He is to bear witness of the Son; to declare Him and to recognize Him.
3. He reveals God's plan on earth thru the inspiration of the Word of God.
4. He performs a role, a certain role, even tho He is co-equal and co-eternal. He serves the Father and the Son by carrying out their will.
5. His power is the agent for executing the Christian life.
6. In His role within the Trinity, He is the One Who reveals.
7. The Father and Son are seen as objects of worship. However, His role is different.

A common theological error in Church History; and it took a 3rd century council to make a doctrine of the Holy Spirit, and they were led to do that by God the Holy Spirit. It sounds like He is subordinate. However, this role never diminishes His co-equality.

God the Son is our Savior, and in the Eucharist, we recognize Him for what He has done. But it is God the Holy Spirit Who provies us fellowship during this time. 2Cor. 3:17: The Lord is the Holy Spirit. God equals the Holy Spirit; this is a direct statement of the full deity of the Holy Spirit. He is the executor of God's plan on earth, which is a subordinate role, but it is simply a role which He plays.

The economy of the Trinity is the work of each member of the Trinity in relation to God's plan for us. God is the planner; the Lord Jesus Christ is the executor on the cross; and God the Father set up the plan.

We worship the Holy Spirit as God as a member of the Godhead; but He is never stated as an object for our worship. We worship the Son and the Father; we pray to God the Father in the power of the Holy Spirit in the name of Jesus Christ.

Because God the Holy Spirit is not worshiped as the Father and the Son, He is not mentioned here. The Father, from Whom are all things. Everything comes from Him, and so we worship Him.

This should also make it clear how insignificant their questions and idolatry worries are.

1Cor. 8:6 yet for us there is one God, the Father, from whom are all things, and we for Him; and one Lord, Jesus Christ, through whom are all things, and we through Him.

1Cor. 8:6

Lesson #421

Thursday October 5, 2006

All the heathen in Corinth worshiped many gods; which is why Paul writes, there is but One God and no other. The believers in Corinth know and serve the One God, the God infinitely and absolutely above all other creatures.

Bobby is constantly trying to understand God; in many ways, He is not understandable to us. He is the creator of all that we see and much larger; it is hard to imagine. And it is even harder to imagine that God even gives us a second thought. In fact, there is an elaborate system of decrees. These Corinthians serve and worship One God. That is, One God in 3 persons. We have to examine the Trinity, as that is part of what this verse is about. We think of God and the Trinity as being a Unity, but diversity is not a word usually associated with God. Diversity means that each member has a distinct role in the economy of the Trinity. The Trinity is One, yet they have different roles. They own the cattle on a thousand hills, which is representative of their wealth. However, economy used here, is the various works and functions of the members of the Trinity in relation to God's overall plan; and each member of the Trinity has a distinct place and role in this plan. These are listed in the divine Decrees. There is a long appendix in the Integrity of God booklet. These decrees are about us. He has decreed us and everything about us. That decree is executed by the 3 members of the Trinity, each in a different way.

We have Unity and Diversity.

The Father	The Son	The Holy Spirit
all co-equal and co-eternal; there is One plan, 3 roles; the divine decree is the delineation of that one plan.
Set the decrees	Died for our sins	Provides us our power
From Whom are all things	By Whom are all things

We live for the Father

We exist through the Son

In v. 6, there is a statement of the roles of the Father and the Son. V. 6 gives us a background of the roles of the Father and the Son, and basic prepositions give us their different functions.

The first named is God the Father. By Whom are all things and we exist for Him;... How did the writers of Scripture decide that the first member of the Trinity is the Father?

Why is He called the Father?

1. 1Cor. 11:3 God the Father is the head of a family.
2. The Father refers to headship; the leadership; the authority.
3. The Father is the ultimate authority in the universe. He is the ultimate authority in the economic Trinity, as He is in all the universe.
4. This ultimate authority is true in the economy of the Trinity, even though the Father does not surpass the other members of the Trinity in quality or degree.
5. Father is simply a term to describe His purpose and role. This is as per an economic Trinity.
6. Father then is an emphasis, which is on sovereignty and divine decrees. He is the planner of the plan; the authority.

Then we have the phrase from whom which is  $\epsilon\kappa\ \acute{\omicron}\varsigma$  = from, out from, from the source of whom. Every pronoun has an antecedent, and here the antecedent is God the Father. This pertains to God as the creator of the universe, the creator of man, and the creator of our relationship with Him. His absolute sovereignty is emphasized; and all of this is directed toward God's plan for us. The divine decrees among other seminaries were topics that others did not like. The first seminary that Bobby went to all taught the same thing: dispensational theology. The second (wher he got his masters or doctorate??) had teachers who dealt with everything and had all kinds of viewpoints.

Father emphasizes His divine sovereignty in the economy of the Trinity. He is the One in the office drawing up the divine decrees. We will elarn in this how He relates to us. We usually get it the other way around.

What is a Divine Decree?

1. The decree is defined as God's eternal, wise and sovereign purpose. God is the ultimate authority and the ultimate wisdom, comprehending simultaneously the all things (everything is in His mind at each instant; every thought, every subject, ever action, every person, every life, every event) that ever were or will be. He knows it all from eternity past to eternity future. This is all that prints out in the divine decrees. ...in all their causes, courses, conditions, successions and relations [God knows how it all fits together; He knows cause and effect and how they relate to one another; knowledge which is immense], and determining their certain futurity [He knows it all and He decrees it all].

- a. The omniscience of God knows all.
  - b. God makes certain that all activities in the universe occur according to His will. There is nothing which happens in the universe which He has not willed. He knows it all and He wills it all.
2. The decree is His eternal and immutable will of event which will occur in the future, and the precise order and manner of their occurrence. He determines that they will occur and He determines how they will occur. That is a phenomenal God.
  3. This is the operation of all things and He knew all of these things before anything existed. Is it merely determinism, or is there free will of another involved. Do we have truly free will? This is the question of the ages. Do our decisions really count?
  4. The result of a decree is stated in a number of ways in Scripture.
    - a. It says that the Father marks out the foundations of the earth in Proverbs; this would be all physical realities and all physical laws.
    - b. Job 28: He prepared the elements. God prepares these elements. They are not happenstance; He prepared them. God is the source of all science. The arrogance of science that they have some say in matters.
    - c. In Job 38:11, God sets the bounds for the seas. Bobby has great respect for the ocean. It is one of the greatest powers on earth. Nothing worse than being underneath a 10 foot wave; and this is nothing. Setting the boundaries for the seas is nothing for Him.
    - d. The Father purposed to make man. Gen. 1:26. No other mechanism is more complex than we are. Our soul is extremely complex. He also decreed to treat us in grace. Eph. 1:2–4
    - e. The most phenomenal of all: God decreed to save man who is dead in sins.
  5. Heb. 1:2: but in these last days he has spoken to us by his Son, whom he appointed the heir of all things, through whom also he created the world. He is the radiance of the glory of God and the exact imprint of his nature, and he upholds the universe by the word of his power. After making purification for sins, he sat down at the right hand of the Majesty on high, Heb. 1 Col. 1 John 1 Eph. 2 are the great chapters on the Person of Jesus Christ. God the Father and God the Son were present at the creation of the world and each had His Own role. This is the diversity. This is a statement of equality of two different roles in the act of creation.
  6. There is a subordination between the Father and the Son, even though in the Trinity there is no subordination; just with respect to their roles.

How is the Son Subordinate to the Father

1. The Son is only subordinate as the God-man, as our Savior.
2. He was obedient to God's plan to the point of death; the death on the cross. This encompasses the doctrine of Kenosis; He emptied Himself of His divine attributes and subordinated Himself to the cross.

3. He never left the nuclear family of the Trinity. As a full member of the Trinity, subordination is also His plan. God the Father did not make this plan in isolation and then order the Son to do it. It is just as much the Son's plan as the Father's.
4. This role was God the Son's purpose and function within the plan. In the economy of the Trinity, the Father planned it and Jesus Christ did not just obey.
5. God the Father did not order the Son to subordinate Himself; this was a complete mutual decision. We understand the roles as sort of an anthropathism.
6. In the working of the Trinity, it is the Father Who designed the plan.

Bobby has to introduce a very complex doctrine; lapsarianism. It is a great word. He will link lapsarianism to the decrees to us. When this term is broken down, it reveals the decrees to us. It relates us to God. Lapsarianism has to do with from Whom are all things. From creation, to man, to salvation; all of it is decreed by God.

Lapsarianism

1. Lapsarianism is a logical explanation of the relationship between God's sovereign decrees, creation, sin and our salvation.
2. By logical there is a cause and effect present in the decrees. This is not pure determinism; God allows for cause and effect. God created Adam perfect with free will, and Adam sinned, putting us into this mess.
3. In spite of the fact that we make bad and good decisions; everything that God decreed will happen. There is nothing that we can do to block the plan of God, no matter how stupid we are.

Is free will nonexistent without disobedience?

1Cor. 8:6 yet for us there is one God, the Father, from whom are all things, and we for Him; and one Lord, Jesus Christ, through whom are all things, and we through Him.

1Cor. 8:

Lesson #422

Sunday 1 October 8, 2006

In San Jose, CA; last time to see Alex; we went to the San Jose DVD group.

Ex. 15:11: Who is like You among the gods, O Lord? Who is like You, majestic and in holiness; awesome? Joel 2:31: The sun will be turned into darkness and the moon into blood before the great day of the Lord comes. We can know something about God in our finite minds. As we learn about Him, we begin to understand how much we cannot understand.

This passage bring His overwhelming character into the light. The change of prepositions here will explain to us the variety of responsibilities of the various members of the Trinity. There is a unity and a diversity between these members of the Trinity. There is One God, but 3 in person, 2 of Whom are in this passage. There is no hierarchy or rank in the Trinity. The Trinity is also differentiated, particularly in the New Testament. Each has a role in the God's single overall plan and purpose. Still all 3 members of the Trinity are One God. They cannot be less than co-equal and co-eternal.

...out from Whom are all things... The antecedent of hos here is God the Father. He is the source of all things, emphasizing His sovereignty. He is the focus of His divine phase. He is the architect of the plan and the initiator of the plan, and that is His role in the working Trinity. The delineation of this plan from the Father is the divine decree. The decree sets up the role of the Trinity. It includes God's creation of time and history, of the universe, of everything we see around us; and even more important, the means and the extent of our relationship with God. This decree was made before the foundation of the world; before the creation of angels and man. Before all of this, we were in the mind of God. The divine decree is not some abstract theological doctrine. It is not necessarily an easy doctrine to understand, but it is a wonderful way to understand how God has related to us. God not only has a plan for the entire universe, but He has a specific plan for us. We will understand from the divine decree how God will deal with us in this life. The decree is God's plan for the ages. It is God's plan for the ages. The Trinity and the divine decree are linked. God the Father is the source of the decree and in the decree is the economy of the working of the Trinity.

What is the decree? Because this is so necessary for us to understand and it will relate to us and the Trinity and how we link with them, and it will link with several other doctrines. We will begin this next time.

1Cor. 8:6 ...yet for us there is one God, the Father, from whom are all things, and we for Him; and one Lord, Jesus Christ, through whom are all things, and we through Him.

The Divine Decrees Lapsarianism #423

Sunday 2 October 8, 2006

In San Jose, CA last time to see Alex; we went to the San Jose DVD group.

Bobby does not want to put his congregation to sleep. This is a time when the doctrine is pure and complex and it is at the heart of theology proper, and yet this doctrine which seems so dry at times and difficult to understand at times, is as related to us as anything else. The doctrine itself has a practical application.

The doctrines of the Trinity, Election, divine decrees, lapsarianism are all extremely important doctrines and they tie into Who God is. The Trinity is the One God in v. 6; one God and 3 persons. Each person has an activity and a role. What they do was determined in the divine decrees. God has all of the facts. We make plans and do whatever based on some of the facts.

God never has to react to unforeseen circumstances; when He set up the divine decrees, they remain in that form forever.

The divine decree is God's eternal, wise and sovereign purpose (which is a plan; it was an eternal plan made from His eternal wisdom; perfect plan for creation and man which has always existed; and never was there a time when His plan did not exist; represents what is in God's mind from eternity) comprehending simultaneously all things whether actual or probable (in the mind of God everything is present at the same time; God has it all in His mind and He could think of it all in one time; divine decree is always in the singular, as it is one entire thought) that ever were or ever will be (everything was in His mind before any of it happened or before any of it existed) in all their causes, courses, conditions, sources and relations. Not only does God have the facts contained in the decree from His omniscience, but He also had the facts and the affect of that decree for those who would live under it. and determining their certain futuration, all the events named in the decree, including all of our free will choices.. The decrees contain all of the facts and all of the freewill choices that all creatures will make; and He will win the angel conflict despite of all the negative volition. The decree is God's eternal, immutable will. And their precise order and manner of occurrence. He knows all of this because He is the Father, the source of all things, which decree is in His mind forever.

The Bible is always our guide and the revelation concerning God Himself.

The Doctrine of Lapsarianism. This is a term used to describe something which is Biblical, but this term is not found in the Bible. It is a term designed to help us understand what is in Scripture. Lapsarianism breaks down logically what is in the decree. What is in the decree are the all things as He has decreed it. Every event outside the Trinity itself is a part of the decree. He did not decree Himself.

Lapsarianism

1. What is Lapsarianism? It is a logical explanation of the relationship between God's sovereign decree, creation, sin and our salvation. There is a relation between God's decree and everything else. Allah and God the Father are not the same thing.
2. By logical, there is a cause and effect present in the decree. There is not just pure determinism by the sovereignty of God. God's will is not the only determining factor in our lives. We have free will. His decree decreed another cause, our free will. God allows for cause and effect. He is truly the cause of all things. Another cause can arise outside the will of god, and it does; God permits certain activities outside of Himself and He determines by decree that these things will occur. He allows us to make freewill decisions without Him determining what our decisions will be. God has determined that we will have freedom, which is true and real.
3. Lapsarianism helps to explain the cause of sin; we are, and He allows this for a specific purpose. God has to make allowances for our free will and for the sin that Adam will commit. Sin is a cause, spiritual death is an effect, and it is outside the determining will of God. He has determined that it will take place outside of His determination, although it is a part of His decree.
4. Lapsarianism derives from the English word lapse. Some poor theologian in antiquity thought, what will I call this? Lapse refers to the fact that man is a fallen being; we have lapsed. We have fallen to a state of sin due to Adam's sin. Man has lapsed into sin due to his free will, and in Adam, all have died. God knew about this lapse before He ever created man. God the Father's plan must address man's sin and the solution for man's sin. God allowed man to sin from His free will; He allowed for sin, but did not cause sin. In Adam all die. How does God relate to that? That is what lapsarianism is all about. As a part of His decree, God takes into account the free will of man.

5. The sovereignty of God and the free will of man coexist in the same plan, the divine decree. God decreed that we would have free will.

How does God's decree handle man's freewill choice to sin? Now, to decide is an anthropathic term. We decide how to handle something. He always knew.

How Does God Handle the Free will of Man?

1. In eternity past, God's omniscience knew, given man's free will, that man would sin. He also knew who would accept Christ as Savior and who would reject Him. God knows who would spend eternity in hell and in heaven. This does not mean that God determined this decision, but that He allows this decision. He knew these facts and He planned for them.
2. Without violating man's free will, God made a provision for the fall of man.
3. God elected those who make the free choice to believe in Christ. Eph. 1:4ff. He chose us.
4. God's election of the believer makes certain that those who express faith in Christ will be saved in spite of sin.
5. This is why common and efficacious grace is a part of the decree.
6. This election, this selection applies to believers only, but it does not determine who will be saved. God's sovereignty does not determine who is will in hell, but man's free will decides this. We are saved all by the grace of God. It is not a work, but a recognition as to who Christ is.
7. In election, the sovereignty of God determines the very best for all believers.
8. Election is the recognition of those who will be saved and those who will be saved and those who are selected to privilege to be in union with Christ. Is this a package or what?
9. It is not our decision which saves us; God does not automatically determine who will believe in Jesus Christ; this is a real free choice that we make.

1Cor. 8:6 yet for us there is one God, the Father, from whom are all things, and we for Him; and one Lord, Jesus Christ, through whom are all things, and we through Him.

1Cor. 8:6

Lesson #424

Wednesday October 11, 2006

I walked in 9 minutes late, but am making this up on tape.

The crux of what we are studying; it is a phrase not unlike love edifies, a phrase we spend weeks on. This particular phrase defines who God is in relation to us and what He has done for us. For us, there is one God, God the Father, from Whom are all things. This passage opens up all sorts of doors.

What is the extent of the Father's activities in the economic view of the trinity? If He is the source of all things. He is the creator of our relationship with Him. He created everything which we have seen; He is also the source of the plan of God for mankind. He has planned the relationship between Himself and us. This plan is revealed in the divine decree. This is the complex subject which we have examined before.

The word divine decrees is not found in the Bible, but it is a true doctrine of Scripture. Doctrines are formed by looking at a number of passages. Doctrines require extensive study; and the divine decrees doctrine is formulated from a number of Scriptures.

Since the Father is the source of the divine decrees, (from Whom are all things); that makes Him the architect of the plan, which is the winning of the Angelic Conflict throughout human history. The decree covers everything which is related to God and mankind; how He relates to us as the Creator; how He relates to us in the fall. It is very easy to associate God with our fall in a way that would make Him the author of sin; but He cannot be associated with sin. Also how He relates to us as the source of our eternal life and our future. The divine decrees are also called the plan of God.

The decrees are God's immutable will and making certain all events of human history, and He made certain of their precise order and manner or their occurrence. What we can understand is, we can be certain that in the decrees that all events in the decrees will come to pass. Every event in human history is a part of the divine decrees. All of them were simultaneously in the mind of God. Most of us can keep 2 or 3 events in our minds at one time; God has all events of human history in His mind at one time. The divine decrees reveal God in an incredible way. God has also allowed for cause and effect outside of Himself. God makes certain every event; and yet He has allowed a cause outside of Himself. From Whom are all things. God does not pre-determine that certain events would take place; what He decrees will occur. There is a fine line between determining that an event will occur and allowing the free will choices of the free will of man to be a part of the cause of many events. We have the choice to sin; and God, in some respect, decreed sin; but He also decreed with free will of man; man chooses for Christ or against Christ. God made the free will of man certain. He made all other choices that we make—the millions that we make—certain in the decrees. God decreed that the sovereignty of God and the free will of man would co-exist. God's will is not the only determining factor in our lives. He permits activities outside of Himself; but He decreed that the results of these causes would certainly happen.

It was not God's will for man to sin; but He allowed man to sin as a matter of man's free will. The decrees simply confirm what man will do, given his free will. This is a statement that theologians have fought over for centuries. The decrees simply confirm man's choices. God's plan inexorably marches on in exactly the way that He decrees it. God's plan will come to pass in spite of the fact that we have free will; and even though many of our decisions do not conform to His will. Regardless of human and angelic free will, God's will will be the victor in the Angelic Conflict. This will be true whether or not we choose to be a part of the tactical victory. We may even turn our nose up at the doctrine of the divine decrees; and His plan still marches on.

Bobby began the doctrine of Lapsarianism and the doctrine of Election back on Sunday. These doctrines are both a part of the divine decrees. God's sovereign decree and our free will.

Lapsarianism

1. The word refers to man lapsing into sin by the free will choice of Adam in the garden; we are born spiritually dead because of Adam's sin. This lapse was taken into account in eternity past. God already knew that we would lapse. Even though Adam made this decision to sin for us, we are just as spiritually dead as Adam. Adam believed just as we believe. This is the part of the doctrine where God's plan in the decrees addresses man's sin. He does not stop there; He provides a sure solution; and His solution is as iron-clad as His will. God is the source of all things.
2. In eternity past, God's omniscience knew and understood that, given man's free will, His omniscience knew who would accept Christ as Savior and who would reject Him. Now, if God knew this, didn't He, in some respect, determine that?
3. Without violating man's free will, God made provision for the fall of man. God knew that man would sin and He planned for them. He decreed their certain futurition.
4. God decreed something: He chose (elected, set apart) those who make the free choice to believe in Jesus Christ. This sums up election. God's election is a part of His decrees; He elected us. Some theologians said that God elected those who would be saved, and condemned those whom He chose. Eph. 1:4ff.
5. God's election of the believer makes certain that those who express faith alone in Christ alone will be saved. The election of the believer makes certain that those who believe in Jesus Christ will be saved, despite their lapse into sin.
6. This is why the cross is central to the decrees; it is the central fact to the divine decrees. And also common and efficacious grace in salvation. The cross is the means of our salvation. We then determine our salvation by faith alone in Christ alone.
7. The doctrine of election applies to believers only. God's election does not mean that others are excluded by the divine decrees. It is easy to say that God excluded those who did not believe; He determined who would believe and who would not believe; but this is not true; humans are excluded by their own free will choice. Doctrine of unlimited atonement.
8. In election, God wills the highest and best for everyone who believes in Jesus Christ. This entails salvation, eternal life, and all the assets which He has provided for us.
9. Election is the recognition of those who will be saved and selected to privilege in union with Christ. This is all because of a decision made by man's free will.

Election makes certain that we will receive salvation because we exercise faith alone in Christ alone.

10. It is not our free will which saves us; God's grace provides our salvation in all respects. Faith is the basic requirement for salvation; it accepts the work of Christ on the cross; it is His work on the cross which provides us with salvation.
11. Election of believers only on the negative side is the recognition of those who will reject Him. Those who reject Him are not elected. Election does not determine our choice; God does not make the choice of the unbeliever.
12. Election is not the determination of God of who will be saved and who will not; God does not determine that; we do. God has provided for our salvation; but faith is our choice.
13. Lapsarianism is the logical progression within the decree as to God's election to privilege with regards to those who believe. The decrees determine the certain futuration of certain events. The divine decrees has a logical sequence which is called Lapsarianism, which deals with how God deals with our sin and how He saves us.
14. Specifically, lapsarianism is about man's choice to sin. This is how God solves the problem of sin in the decrees.

Definition of Lapsarianism

This is the logical order of God's mind of His decrees. His mind can be nothing else. Lapsarianism is the logical order in the mind of God in the order of all things, as to how He will deal with sinful mankind; and His election of the believer. Each of the 5 points will require some explanation.

1. God's decree determined the creation of mankind and creation in general. The creation of man includes a truly free will in a state of perfection. Why did He decree to create mankind? To solve the Angelic Conflict. God did not create us to watch like some big television program. God's plan is all about human history and the solving of the Angelic Conflict. All of these 5 points are in God's mind at the same time; He decreed everything at one time. This is why Bobby says the divine decree, as there is only one decree which occurs at one time. This one decree was in his mind simultaneously. There are parts to the decree; so this is why it is called the decree.
2. The decree to permit the fall of mankind. God decreed to create mankind and to allow mankind to fall through volition and self-determination. Man's fall duplicates Satan's fall. This is why God permitted man to fall, knowing that man would fall, knowing that man would lapse into sin. Our fall replicates the fall of Satan in every respect. Scripture does not reveal why God created angels; we only pick it up with our own human history. God created and permitted. God replicates that condition; he permits man to fall. The overall sovereignty will be accomplished. How can anyone give man free will to make any choice that they deserve, and still, God's plan will come to pass.

3. God decreed to provide eternal salvation for all mankind as the way to solve the Angelic Conflict. It sounds simple, but theologians throughout history have fouled this up so badly.

1Cor. 8: Divine Decree

Lesson #425

Thursday October 12, 2006

We are going to continue with the divine decree. Even though the divine decree occurred in the past, it had nothing to do with time. Time was part of the divine decree.

1Cor. 8:5a The Father, from Whom are all things...

As the 1st person of the Trinity, the Father has a specific working in pre-history. As the source, the Father is the fountainhead for the ages. God is the Author of the divine decree and all that it contains. The decree is His plan to deal with all creatures. We are all dead spiritually in Adam. The decree is how God will deal with His fallen creatures and how God will win the Angelic Conflict. Future events are rendered certain to happen by the decree, even if these events are not caused by God. There is a cause outside of God; He took every event outside of Himself and made them certain and a part of the divine decree.

The future events include God's sovereign decisions and actions; and it takes into consideration all of the free will decisions of man and angels. All of our decisions are truly free, and many are contrary to God. God decreed that His sovereignty and man's free will would co-exist. Bobby is going to present the other side of the coin tonite, so that we can better understand the true doctrine. Man is given the ability to choose for or against Him.

The omniscience of God knew we would lapse into sin, and God decreed that we would lapse, and how did he decree it? Therein is the controversy. It is not God's determination that man would lapse.

What God Actually Decreed

1. God allowed man to sin, because man chose to sin. God did not determine that man would sin; He allowed Adam to sin.
2. The decrees simply confirmed what man would do, given free will.
3. The decree allowed sin, but did not cause sin. God can never be the cause or Author of sin. God permitted it for a specific reason.
4. We are responsible for our own lapse; our own fallen condition. We cannot blame Adam for it, as we have all personally lapsed.
5. Even though we lapsed, God also decreed a solution. This is the cause and effect of God. God's cause is to decree a solution. He decreed the cross, the doctrine of election.
6. God's election of the believer makes certain that those who express faith alone in Christ alone. God selected us? What does that mean? Does it mean, you He selected to be saved, and someone else He chose to be lost? Is our free will truly free? The decree simply confirms man's choices. God's plan is going to progress to its chosen end, even though our decisions do not conform to His perfect will. We can choose for Him, and still choose against His plan. Nevertheless, His plan will prevail; and no matter what decisions we make, God's plan will prevail. We can ruin our own lives with one or two really bad decisions; yet God's plan will prevail, despite millions and billions of bad decisions.

The decree is in God's mind forever; we think of it in eternity past, which is a misnomer. There are five little decrees in God's decree, just as there are articles and amendments in our constitution. We have one constitution, but many parts to it. One decree, but many parts to it. Lapsarianism is the logical order of the decrees; it is how He will deal with sinful mankind and how He will deal with our salvation and condemnation. These points of Lapsarianism are in a logical order.

5 Logical Decisions of Lapsarianism

1. God decreed the creation of mankind. Why did He do it? God did it because we are the rebuttle phase of the Angelic Conflict. Why did He do that? We don't know. We are in fact created to be the resolution to the angelic conflict.
2. God decreed to permit the fall of mankind. This came through the function of man's own self-determination. God permitted the fall; He did not determine it. Certain angels chose to rebel against God by their own free will; man, to resolve the Angelic Conflict, must be allowed to exercise his free will against God. Man's fall, then, duplicates the fall of angels. There has to be a 1 for 1 parallel here.
3. God permitted man to lapse; but to reveal His love and grace, God gives us the 3rd part. He decreed to provide eternal salvation for all mankind. Everything centers on this part of the decrees. It figures that salvation would be controversial. Satan does everything that he can to obscure the gospel.
4. All the sins in human history are imputed to Jesus Christ and judged; Jesus Christ becomes the issue; not our sins. Atonement is for all; not just for the elect. Is it unlimited or is it limited? Did He die for all or for those who have been specifically selected by Him. Some would be brought to salvation; some would choose not to. The 3rd decree is what God has done for us; and the Lord Jesus Christ was a willing participant in this. This is His plan as well as God the Father's. It is this 3rd point where the controversy comes in.

Covenant theology is sometimes found in many seminaries and in reform churches; and this is where we part company with them. Covenant sees the 3rd decree that this is where God elects some out of the human race for salvation and Christ would die just for them. God also decreed to leave others in their condemnation. God determines those who would be saved and those who would not. He is the sole determiner of who is saved or not. Man's free will is simply a technicality. God determines who would be saved in this view. No man can save himself by simply making a decision to do so; man does not accomplish his own salvation through his own free will. We would agree with that; but what it means in covenant theology is different than how we see it. In both camps, both sets of people believe that believing in Christ is necessary to be saved. The source of that decision is where these two part. Is our believing in Christ come from our free will, or did God predetermine that we would do so. Our decision is a formality in covenant theology. God determination is also a part of dispensation theology. A question—why would God mandate a human decision for something which He has already determined? Another problem is, why does He allow us to sin afterward, if He has determined our salvation? A decision by its very nature must be free or it is not a decision. That is not a decision, but a compulsion. We are in life forced to make some decisions; in covenant theology, God forces us to make this decision. All the passages which implore us to believe in Jesus Christ infer a choice. To the covenant theologian, this is an irresistible call. Irresistible means that our choice is God's determinative will from eternity past. How does this resolve the Angelic Conflict? Covenant theology reduces the decision to believe as inevitable. Why would Satan promote this system? Because it makes us less likely to witness. If God has already chosen specific people from eternity past, then why bother to witness? Now, both camps are believers; if we have believed in Jesus Christ, then we are saved, even if we do not realize that our faith is a result of our free will.

For whom did Christ die? For all mankind? Or for those that He chose in eternity past. Limited atonement is always associated with Covenant Theology. 2Cor. 5:19: ...that is, in Christ God was reconciling the world to himself, not counting their trespasses against them, and entrusting to us the message of reconciliation. Jesus Christ removed the enmity between man and God on the cross. All are reconciled; not just the elect. Condemnation is on the heads of those who reject reconciliation. We appropriate reconciliation through faith in Christ. God was in Christ reconciling the world to Himself. 1John 2:2: He is the propitiation for our sins, and not for ours only but also for the sins of the whole world. Propitiation is the satisfaction of God's justice with the sacrifice of Jesus Christ on the cross. Our sins refer to the elect; John is addressing believers. And not for ours only, but also for the sins of the entire world. Christ propitiated the wrath of God not for us only, but for the entire world. Christ on the cross was the satisfaction for the whole world. Those who are Muslims, Buddhists, agnostics; and God the Son died for all of them. How much greater is the love and grace of God, Who died for all, whether they would reject Him or not. 2Peter 2:1: But false prophets also arose among the people, just as there will be false teachers among you, who will secretly bring in destructive heresies, even denying the Master who bought them, bringing upon themselves swift destruction. These are the pharisees who arose and led people astray in the Age of Israel, just as there would be false teachers in the church age. The pharisees are similar to the false teachers, even those who deny the Master who bought them! Jesus Christ died even for those who deny Him the most; even those who teach doctrines which are in complete opposition to the gospel. Yet, some choose to remain in the slave market. By grace through faith, you are saved; that salvation is not of yourselves, but it is a gift from God, so that no man boasts.

1Tim. 2:5–6: For there is one God, and there is one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus, who gave himself as a ransom for all, which is the testimony given at the proper time. Bobby just gave us redemption, reconciliation and propitiation, along with the passages that atonement is for all mankind. Bobby gives a few passages where the covenant theologians exegete in isolation. God decreed the free will of man to coincide with His own sovereignty.

This is the story of pre-destination. There is more. Bobby is explaining what God has done for us in Christ. God did not select some of us for salvation and some for condemnation. God gave us free will and He gave us His Son. It is up to us to appropriate it.

1Cor. 8:6a Lapsarianism

Lesson #426

Sunday 1 October 15, 2006

This is a highly technical verse for this chapter. It is a chapter on the law of love, idolatry, eating meat offered to idols; and we come across one of the most technical passages of Scripture.

The plan of God which had man in it, was not a response to what Satan did; God did not suddenly decide, "Holy Crap, better do something about Satan." His plan was already formed, even before the creation of Satan. God knew what we would do and He knew what He would do. God decreed that every event would happen just as His omniscience knew it would in eternity past. Some, when thinking about the history of humanity, lose sight of this. God's plan is not a response to us, nor is it a response to Satan.

The Father, from Whom all things emanate,... It is easy to think that God's sovereignty allows for no events outside of His will; but that is an incorrect view of the sovereign will of God. God has allowed for free will. God decreed that His creation would be endowed with truly free will. The decisions that we make are outside of the determinative will of God. If our decisions are truly free, then God did not cause us to make our decisions. Does man's free will really matter? Does man have free will? Is it just a formality? God's plan marches on and it will be fulfilled in exactly the way that He chooses. God's plan is the cause for all that has happened and all that will happen. Our free will is the key to the resolution of the Angelic Conflict.

If God's sovereign will was all there is, then He would have been the Author of Satan's fall and the Author of Adam's fall. That is, God would have sinned or determined that man would sin. This is in opposition to His very character. God has endowed everyone of us with free will.

We chose to fall, just as Satan did; our free will choice was truly free. Our free will is the key to the resolution of the Angelic Conflict. God would demonstrate through mankind His absolute fairness in the sentence of Satan to the Lake of Fire. God thereby demonstrates to Satan and the fallen angels His perfect righteousness, justice and love.

The Lake of Fire was created for Satan and his angels. Those who do not believe are condemned to the same fire. God determined that He would show His love and His grace to all of us who have believed in Him. When someone believes in Jesus Christ, that person is a witness to the love, justice and righteousness of God; when we make a decision which is consistent with God's will, we are witnesses to the love, justice and righteousness of God.

God's decree is so overwhelming and overreaching that it affects the lives of every person. The decree of God represents His infinite glory and it reveals a very personal and relational side of God.

God's love and grace are demonstrated to Satan on a global level, and demonstrated on a very personal level to us. As we begin to understand Who and What God is, it can only lead to our love and confidence in Him. God is not using us as cannon fodder in the angelic conflict; we are not pawns; He gives us free will and He made a plan for each one of us. We matter to Him. He cares for us, and this should engender great confidence in us toward Him. There is confidence and courage in understanding that God truly cares for us.

The divine decree underlies the plan of God's rationale. When we begin to understand Who God is and what His plan is, we begin to see where we are in His plan. If God be for us, who can be against us?

In order to have confidence in God, we need to know what He has done for us. Courage does not come out of thin air. The world is filled with death, war, misery, destruction, suffering; and is this God's fault because He created and caused all things? Some view God negatively because of the pain and suffering in this world.

God knew in eternity past that man would lapse into sin. What did He do about the predicament that we are in? If God had not chosen to do for us, we would be in quite the jam; a lousy life in time, and death in eternity.

How did God choose to deal with man lapsing into sin.

Lapsarianism is a 5 Act Play

1. God decreed the creation of all mankind. In order for there to be human history, there must be human beings. He created time, an eternal future, mankind.
2. God decreed to permit the fall of all mankind. Man falls by his own free will, which God allowed. God is not the Author of sin.
3. God decreed to provide eternal salvation for all mankind. This is the Biblical doctrine of Unlimited Atonement. 2Cor. 5:19 1John 2:2 1Tim. 2:6 If God reconciled, propitiated and redeemed all mankind on the cross, then it follows that it is possible for anyone to be saved. Free will again comes into play. This is an area where theologians have debated over the centuries. Is man's free will really free? Does God choose those whom He would save and them and give them faith to believe. Faith is not of ourselves, as some interpret Eph. 2:8–9. Did God decree free will or does He make the choice for us? Whatever faith is, whether supplied by God or from our free will, we are still saved when we believe in Jesus Christ. If God supplies our faith; He determines when we will be saved and that we would be saved, then, logically, He selected us for faith, and therefore selected others not to be saved. Our free will becomes a formality or a technicality. No matter which way we think, we are still saved by faith in Christ. Election has to do with our privilege after choosing Jesus Christ from our own free will. The act of believing is not a work. Those who see atonement as limited, they see faith as being a work of some sort. Or God supplied the faith for us, and our belief is merely a formality. They think that anything that man does (faith in Christ) simply taints the Word of God. The sovereignty of God is the source of salvation; but there is the free will of man, a response to the gospel. Is it God's grace who selected, elected and predestines those who will believe, limits grace, and grace is not extended to those who do not believe. However, we know that God so loves the world, that He has given His only-born Son, that whoever believes in Him will have eternal life. God allows us to make good decisions from a position of strength, or to make a set of bad decisions.

1Cor. 8:6 yet for us there is one God, the Father, from whom are all things, and we for Him; and one Lord, Jesus Christ, through whom are all things, and we through Him.

1Cor. 8:6a Predestination

Lesson #427

Sunday 2 October 15, 2006

Where does faith come from, what is the source of our belief in Jesus Christ? Is this a determination by God which selects us as a believer over someone else or is there true free will. Regardless of which view is taken, faith still is our part in becoming saved, and we are saved for all eternity.

There are 5 Lapsarian decrees which handle our lapse into sin. God cannot have anything to do with sin; God's righteousness cannot touch us; we are unclean. God cannot have anything to do with us. In the doctrine of lapsarianism, God made it possible for Him to have a relationship with Him. This is not entirely abstract theology. Bobby is going to take a different tact.

The Doctrine of Predestination

The question introduces the idea, does God do all, or do we have some sort of free will? Are we predestined to salvation and others predestined to condemnation? What is our destiny as set by God? Is it completely an act of God? Do we reside in heaven or hell because did or did not select us? There is no grace, obviously, extended toward those selected for hell. However, God's grace extends to all, despite their final choice.

1. This is a term for all those who, as truly free agents, will believe in Jesus Christ. This is the decree that those who believe will share the destiny of Christ—that is our predestination. Our predestination is determined in eternity past, logically before we are even created, as Jesus Christ has an eternal predestination. We share this destiny through union with Christ.
2. The bottom line is, is our free will truly free, or did God determine our final location in eternity past. It is known by God in eternity past; but He did not determine that we would believe or not. God did not predestine anyone to eternal life or eternal death. In order to resolve the Angelic Conflict, man's volition must be as truly free as Lucifer's at his fall. The angels which fell exercise free will; and our free will is the same. If it is God who decrees the fall, then He is the Author of sin. God permitted sin, through the allowance of free will. Pain and suffering comes from sin and our free will; God did not determine for us to have these things. God placed Adam in a perfect environment.

3. We cause sin; God does not cause sin. He does not cause future sinful acts. His decree guarantees that they will occur; but not because He caused it to occur, but God recognized and took into consideration our free will and angelic free will. Our free will decides what we will do; God makes that free will decision certain. He also has determined what He will do about our decisions.
4. God's plan will come to certain fulfillment, which is the definition of the divine decree.
5. God did not determine that sin would occur, but He permitted us to sin with our free will. There are a number of major doctrines all tied into the divine decree. The permissive will of God is a part of this concept. The permissive will of God takes into account our free will.

Maybe we were not doing points?

Permissive Will of God

1. Permissive does not mean that the outcomes of sinful acts are uncertain or unknown to God. God is never surprised by what we do; He is never taken off guard by some decision that we make. He knows about each and every decision that we will make.
2. God simply permits these sins to come to pass by the free agency of His rational creatures.
3. God never determines to bring sins to pass by His own unlimited power. God's power is never used in anything which is unrighteous. That is the importance of the free will of man, which is so overlooked by Calvinists.
4. Bobby is going to try to explain this.
  - a. Permissive does not mean passive, which means that it is beyond God's control. When we are out of control, that does not mean that we are out of God's control. God does not passively allow sin because he can do nothing else (which ignores His omnipotence).
  - b. The certainty of the outcome of the decree does not mean that God compels us to make certain decisions; neither do our decisions place us beyond the control of God. God does not compel us to do anything, but it takes into account our free will. We can make very careful plans, and all of a sudden, there is a monkey wrench thrown into these plans (often our own bad decisions). God is not like this. God never had to react to us. He already knew.
  - c. Free will would be negated if God compelled us to make decisions. This would place responsibility for the fall on God. If we did not make these free will decisions, then it is God's responsibility.

- d. God's decree does not place compulsion or obligation on the free will of man; nor does His decree allow God to lose control of all things.
  - e. God's decree simply makes all things certain, whether from our free will or from His sovereignty. God knew exactly what our decisions would be; He knows the actual from the possible. This is why He never has to alter anything. This is all in God's thinking before anything existed. Do we deserve anything? Do we deserve any mention or even a footnote in the plan of God? We are even highlighted on the list.
5. God died for all mankind. All men failed on Adam's choice; and all men can be saved based upon their own free will choice. We receive salvation because of the work of Christ. The Holy Spirit puts us into union with Christ. God understood this from eternity past and He predestined us to share the destiny of Jesus Christ. We are in fact a son of God, as we share His Sonship.

God decreed to provide salvation for all mankind, provided unlimited atonement. Do not take free will by the means by which we are saved. Jesus Christ's sacrifice on the cross is what saves us; we appropriate it by faith in Him, based on our free will decision to believe in Him. We can receive a present from someone; our acceptance of that presence puts it into our possession; however, we did not produce that present, pay for it, or transport it to our hot little hands.

Our decision to believe in Jesus Christ initiates efficacious grace by God the Holy Spirit. This is our nonmeritorious faith. We did not earn or deserve anything. We are placed in union with Christ by God the Holy Spirit. We cannot accomplish this on our own. The 39 irrevocable attributes or assets are given to us at the moment of salvation. Faith in Christ is a prerequisite for receiving all from Him. We are regenerated by God the Holy Spirit and we are baptized by God the Holy Spirit; and we are filled and indwelt by God the Holy Spirit. That salvation is not of ourselves, but it is a gift of God, not of works, lest any should boast. The decree acknowledges our free will decision and then makes that decision a part of His decrees.

Election is based upon the free will choice of the believer.

Lapsarianism Continued:

4. God decreed to leave the reprobate; those who remain in spiritual death because they have rejected Jesus Christ as Savior. He decrees to leave the reprobate to their just condemnation. If they were determined by God to be condemned, then this condemnation would not be just. Our condemnation is on our head, not on God's. He that believes in Him is not judged; he that does not believe has been judged already. All people have equal opportunity to believe in Jesus Christ. We are already judged if we chose to remain in spiritual darkness for all of our lives. We destine ourselves to the Lake of Fire. We keep ourselves out of the Lake of Fire by one free will decision. The unbeliever is not predestined to hell anymore than the unbeliever is predestined to hell.

How did God do this without compromising His righteousness? How did He deal with sin and yet maintained His righteousness. God wrote a 5 act play on the stage of human history; the 5 parts of the divine decree which relate directly to mankind.

Lapsarianism

1. God decreed to create man. This is a logical beginning. There cannot be a resolution to the problem of man until there is man.
2. God permitted the fall, but He did not generate the fall Himself. This came from Adam's free will. This is man lapsing into sin, hence the name.
3. The decree to provide eternal salvation for all mankind, allowing for the truly free will of man to accept Jesus Christ as Savior. God had to become man in the person of Jesus Christ; in no other way could this problem be solved. God had to become man in order to take away the of the world..the one for the many. In no other way could man hope to have any sort of relationship with God. Jesus Christ died for all mankind so that God did not have to come into contact with sin in any way. God the Son took on Himself our sins. Without the cross, we have no hope. To appropriate that atonement requires the prerequisite of faith alone in Christ alone. It is the Substitutionary death of Jesus Christ which provides our salvation. When we believe, the Holy Spirit gives us eternal life. And that salvation is not of yourselves; it is a gift from God.
4. God decreed to leave the reprobate; those who have rejected Christ as Savior, to their just condemnation. It is hardly just if God simply choose whom He will condemn. It is a just condemnation if we make this choice ourselves. God does not elect some for salvation and some for eternal damnation. He does not predetermine that some of us will be saved and some will be condemned. God's foreknowledge is the basis of the believer's election to privilege; and the unbeliever's eventual end is also known. The key is just condemnation; not foreordained condemnation. He who does not believe is judged already because he has not believed in the uniquely born son of God. Those who reach this stage of personal responsibility, after God consciousness. At God consciousness, they will express a desire to know God or not. They have equal opportunity to hear the gospel. Expressing some little inkling of salvation, God will bring the gospel to us. If we express no interest, then He is not obligated to bring the gospel to you.
5. The final decree is that God decreed simultaneously both election and predestination for all who would believe in Jesus Christ. When we believe in Jesus Christ; when we are regenerated by the Holy Spirit, when we are placed into Christ, we are then elected to privilege, which was determined in eternity past. We become a witness for the appeal phase of the angelic conflict. We become heirs with Christ; we share His kingship, we share His heirship, we share His election; we share His predestination. God knew, given free will, that we would believe in Jesus Christ.

There are 3 elections in history: Israel as a nation was elected in the divine decrees. The second election was Christ, as our Savior. He chose to go to the cross. He could have, at any time, chosen not to go to the cross. Election generally has to do with free will. The final election is that of the church, which includes the unique spiritual life; and we are elected to privilege.

Each election brought a new category of person who was elect in history. New racial species of each election. Jesus Christ is eternal God, and therefore, He is different from man; He is true humanity, making Him different from God. Finally, we have the election of the church, which brought forth a new spiritual species. We have all that we need in order to accomplish the plan of God for our lives, and all that we need to fulfill the individual plan for ourselves.

God is the source of the plan; the source of the divine decree.

1Cor. 8:6a yet for us there is one God, the Father, from whom are all things,...

Oh, Lord, what is man that you take knowledge of him; than any one of us should enter into your thinking? Or the son of man that you even think of him? We are but dust to God; David here gave us a perspective of humility. We are nothing. However, God thought of us and He planned for us in eternity past. We who deserve nothing, He thinks of us.

God creates each one of us by putting together a soul and a body. The moment we emerge from the womb, we have a plan of salvation initiated by Him. We can glorify and serve Him. He gave us the plan of salvation; and ultimately, we will be glorified by Him in eternity future. That is the grace of God; and we exist for Him. The source of all things—we live for Him.

God decreed that we would have an opportunity for salvation. He decreed that we would not spend eternity in hell if we believed in Him. God is the source of all things, but Jesus Christ is the by whom are all things. And we will need to sort the difference out here, sort out the diversity of the economic Trinity.

1Cor. 8:6b ...and we [exist (or, live] for Him; and one Lord, Jesus Christ, through whom are all things, and we through Him.

1Cor. 8:6b

Lesson #429

Thursday October 19, 2006

We have gone through many doctrines dealing with God the Father. In v. 7, we go back to the practical. You may rejoice over that, but you must understand theology as well as what you do. Doctrine comes first (v. 6) and then application (v. 7).

In our passage, there is one God and one Lord. Jesus Christ is co-equal and co-eternal with God the Father. They are all one God. This verse states the diversity of the Trinity; their varying roles.

There was no equivocation with the Lord; he made many direct statements, and called Himself first and foremost the Son of God, which is a title for deity; it also tells us His role in the economy of the Trinity.

Classic Passages on the Deity of Jesus Christ

The Hypostatic union has been taught many times in Berachah.

1. John 5:22–23: The Father judges no one, but has given all judgment to the Son, that all may honor the Son, just as they honor the Father. Whoever does not honor the Son does not honor the Father who sent him.
2. John 10:30–33: "I and the Father are one." The Jews picked up stones again to stone him. Jesus answered them, "I have shown you many good works from the Father; for which of them are you going to stone me?" The Jews answered him, "It is not for a good work that we are going to stone you but for blasphemy, because you, being a man, make yourself God." The pharisees did not think this could be the Messiah; they expected the Messiah to deliver them from the shackles of Rome.
3. The most definitive passage in Scripture: John 1:1–3, 12: In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. He was in the beginning with God. All things were made through him, and without him was not any thing made that was made. And the Word became flesh and dwelt among us, and we have seen his glory, glory as of the only Son from the Father, full of grace and truth. Jesus Christ was with God in the beginning and He was with God before the beginning (the beginning of human history).
4. 1Cor. 8:6b: Jesus Christ, through Whom are all things...

$\Delta\iota\alpha + \acute{o}\varsigma =$  through whom, by means of whom. The Lord Jesus Christ brought these things to pass; He is the agency of accomplishment. God planned it, and the Son executed the plan. Each had different roles, even though the Father and the Son are both One.

Col. 1, Heb. 1, Philip. ? are great passages on the person of Jesus Christ.

What is the Role of God the Son as a part of the Trinity?

1. Col. 1:15–17: He is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn of all creation. For by Him all things were created, in heaven and on earth, visible and invisible, whether thrones or dominions or rulers or authorities--all things were created through Him and for Him. And He is before all things, and in Him all things hold together. It is passages like this from which the Hypostatic union was formulated. The God-man holds the universe together.
2. Heb. 1:2–4: Long ago, at many times and in many ways, God spoke to our fathers by the prophets, but in these last days he has spoken to us by his Son, whom he appointed the heir of all things, through Whom also He created the world. He is the radiance of the glory of God and the exact imprint of His nature, and He upholds the universe by the word of his power. After making purification for sins, He sat down at the right hand of the Majesty on high, having become as much superior to angels as the name He has inherited is more excellent than theirs. God has spoken to us through His Son. In these last days refers to the Church Age (this was written in the early or mid 1st century. One word (command) from Jesus Christ holds the universe together; with one command, it would all fall apart. Man cannot destroy the universe, as Jesus Christ holds things together. Bobby isn't against environmentalism; just against radical environmentalists, for whom nature is a god. Jesus Christ created us; He sustains us; and He condescended to come to earth to save us. Not only did He dwell among us, but He died for us.

3. Jesus Christ is equal to God; and as perfect man, He could die for our sins. He had to be outside of the slave market of sin in order to purchase us. He assumes the form of a bond-slave. He never relinquished His deity as a man, but He voluntarily set aside the power of His deity. In Whom we have redemption and the forgiveness of sins. We will reside in eternity in a resurrection body; that is a new thing. He human spirit and the Holy Spirit are new things as well.

Paul is going to give these people some doctrinal perspective. They are all caught up in weird things, like eating meat offered to idols.

1Cor. 8:6b ...and we [exist (or, live)] for Him; and one Lord, Jesus Christ, through whom are all things, and we through Him.

From this verse to the end of the chapter, Paul is going to deal with the Law of Love. We can do anything which is not sinful; but sometimes we refrain from doing things out of love for others.

Paul is acutely aware of the conscience of other believers. He is concerned about their lack of conscience and those whose is just out of whack. The law of love recognizes the weakness of the immature believer. "We have seen the enemy and it is us!" The immature believer is his own worst enemy. We will never face the problem of food offered to idols, so you may think that we can skip this. However, this is about us. We need to have the same concern for our own set of standards.

Applying the law of love is an important application of the mature believer. It will round out our understanding of the spiritual life. All believers are primarily concerned with their own standards. However, the law of love means we need to be concerned with the standards and spiritual life of other believers.

There are a million Christians who want to be their brother's keeper; isn't that love? It is nauseating, but it is not love.

1Cor. 8:7 However, not everyone has this knowledge. In fact, some have been so used to idolatry up until now, that when they eat food offered to an idol, their conscience, being weak, is defiled.

1Cor. 8:6–7

Sunday 1 October 22, 2006

The Corinthians were hardheaded. We often have areas of Bible doctrine which conflict with how we are raised or with popular thinking; so we rebel against that which is truth.

The Corinthians had already gotten a lot of doctrine throughout the previous 7 chapters, and there was a concentrated burst of theology in the last verse. The Father is the source of all creation; He created man and God's relationship with man; and the Father decreed all things; He planned all things which have occurred.

God also decreed that our free will and His sovereignty would co-exist in this universe. He allowed for a cause and effect outside of Himself. He allowed our free will to exist, even in conflict with His directive will. He did not determine our eternal future; He made an individual plan for each one of us; for every believer in history; and it is tailored exactly to who we are. He elected those who would believe to the privilege of the unique spiritual life of the church age. He did not choose them for salvation, but elected them for the greatest privilege in human history—to function in the realm which Jesus Christ pioneered for us. He also predestined those who believed to union with Christ. We share the destiny of Jesus Christ; His eternal life, all that He is in eternity in His humanity. This is because God the Father decreed this for our destiny, as He knew that we would believe in eternity past.

People too often think about their own lives; about their place in the church, or about other believers that they don't like; their minds are on trivialities. They live under the honor code; the honor code found in Bible doctrine. All the petty bickering and backstabbing could be reconciled in the light of the greater plan of God for them and for us.

In v. 6, the Corinthians got a short doctrinal overview of the Lord Jesus Christ. They were to learn His place in the economic trinity. Each member of the Godhead has a particular activity (or activities) which is theirs. They needed to be reminded just who is was. He executed the plan of God; the agent of the creation of all things. Heb. 1:1–3 Col. 1:15–17. He also bore the sins of all mankind when they were imputed to Him on the cross, providing unlimited atonement. He proved the opportunity to appropriate His saving work and to appropriate eternal life.

1Cor. 8:6 yet for us there is one God, the Father, from whom are all things and we [exist (or, live)] for Him; and one Lord, Jesus Christ, through whom are all things, and we through Him.

The old things which pass away: spiritual death; we are no longer slaves to the old sin nature. We are completely renewed or regenerated. We can move toward spiritual maturity. New things have come: the filling of the Holy Spirit; GAP, the edification complex. All of this is in the decree of God. However, the Corinthians are worried about meat offered to idols; what's that all about? How can they be so concerned about the small stuff. How can they be worried about such things? The Corinthians, as usual, need to have the simplest of doctrines spelled out to them. We get over our head in our own personal problems, and we fail to see the big picture. We fail to see that God has a plan for our life. What Paul is hoping for is, some or all of these believers may learn this doctrine and implant it in their souls; and it will become a part of their faith rest drill rationale. They will have a basis for solving their problems; a means to resolve such questions, which are controversial to them. However, these problems have simple solutions, if you have doctrine in the soul. Paul spent 18 months with the Christians; 7 days a week of Bible classes and immersed them with Church Age doctrine; the stuff went in one ear and out the other. So Paul then says, However, not all men have this knowledge. He has taught them for nearly two years, and they don't know what is going on. They still have this human viewpoint in their souls. Their eyes are on other people; there are so many distractions in their lives. They eat food as if it is sacrificed to a true god of sorts (an idol). They are acting as if this is sacrificed to a real god of some sort. Their conscience has been defiled. If they eat this meat, then they feel as though they might fall spiritually.

V. 7 begins a new paragraph for this chapter. From now until the end of the chapter, Paul will deal with the Law of Love. The law of love always takes other believers into consideration. We only have primary responsibility for our own lives; but we must take other believers in our periphery into consideration. There are certain activities that every believer can enjoy, but things which are not sinful. We have certain liberties. These liberties are not sinned and we have every right to do them, and other believers may not think that we can do these things. These are activities which are perfectly legitimate before the Lord and other mature believers. This chapter reveals another little responsibility that we have. We love other believers impersonally; the weaker, the less mature believers. We wish to keep them from mental attitude sins. We refrain from doing some things, because they become upset, disturbed, distracted, judgmental. Every faction looks at the other factions and say they are following this or that teacher, Apostle or to Jesus Christ; and their eyes are on other people constantly.

We should always contribute to the spiritual advance of others; we should not flaunt our freedom before other believers if that is going to confuse or disturb them. We, as Americans, like our freedom; and if anyone infringes upon our freedom, we love to rub their noses in it. As a believer in Jesus Christ, we are not to take that attitude. We are not going to face the problem of meat offered to idols, unless we are a missionary in some place of idolatry where this is done. But specifically, this is not going to occur in our lives. We need to have the same concern of our impact on believers in our periphery.

Maybe we should cast a wider net here? Maybe the principle is, what we do may affect the spiritual advance of another believer; we should function in such a way as to encourage their advance.

Every believer needs to be primarily concerned with their own standards; we do not need to keep our eyes on others. We don't need to worry about those who are involved in suspect activity. We do not know all the facts; we are incapable of knowing all of the facts. We need to be careful how we perceive and judge the actions of others; appearances can be deceiving; what we conclude from the surface activities; and becoming judgmental can be a distraction to us. It is so much better to mind your own business and focus on your own spiritual growth.

It is easy to get involved in legalism, when you become a Christian people watcher. These standards are antithetical.

Legalist

It is about time we learn what a legalist is.

1. A legalist is a pompous believer who relies upon the energy of the flesh which are your own good works; your own good deeds. When you rely on your own good works.
2. The legalist has pretensions of fulfilling God's plan through human ability. The legalist just knows that he is superior to everyone else in morality, spirituality, in their life in general. Superior, smug, contemptuous, self righteous person and superimposes his own standards on others...their own superior standards, which could be classified as moral degeneracy.
3. Moral degeneracy fits the legalist to a t. The legalist sets aside God as the final judge and superimposes himself as the great judge. He is the appellant judge before a case goes to the supreme court of heaven.
4. Legalists are self righteous and arrogant. If this describes us, we need to get our eyes off other people and onto doctrine. Legalists become snoopy and judgmental. They discover things which they need to tell others about. That is gossip. Legalists are often prone to gossip; to call up someone else and tell about what you have just seen. A snoop who has to snitch, and it assuages his legalism; he knows things that others don't and his standards prevail. He is going to run down all those who do not adhere to his standards. The legalist cannot wait to jump on someone's sin. They are shocked by certain sins and they condemn other activities that they do not like. I saw so-and-so smoking or in a bar having a drink.

There are many activities that we can do legitimately. It can even be a real sin, but our sins are between God and us. It does no good to change your evil ways. Judgment is not up to us; it never is. The application of the law of love does not require us to give obeisance to legalism. The legalism should not be rewarded with deference or falling in line with their phoney spirituality. You do not kowtow to gossip, judging, etc. You do not lend credence to bogus Christian standards.

The law of love requires thoughtful application of doctrine in your soul to immature believers. Grace and doctrinal orientation are required.

1Cor. 8:7 However, not everyone has this knowledge. In fact, some have been so used to idolatry up until now, that when they eat food offered to an idol, their conscience, being weak, is defiled.

1Cor. 8:7 intro

Lesson #431

Sunday 2 October 22, 2006

We all have trends, but there are moments and there are times when we are a legalist. We need to know; doctrine needs to be inculcated in our souls, so that the law of love can come out as a proper application. We are not required to do obeisance to legalism; we do not give credence to the legalistic doctrines of self righteous; but, at the same time, we need to be thoughtful; we do need to apply impersonal love.

The Law of Love and How it Requires Thoughtful Application

1. This is the supreme use of impersonal love.
2. Law of love is about keeping positive believers from distraction. The legalist is rarely interested in spiritual advance; he is interested on advancing himself by stepping on us. We are not to distract others in their spiritual advance.
3. The Law of love is thoughtfulness toward others and grace orientation. This allows them their little foibles and little problems.
4. The law of love is the application of impersonal love; not reaction to moral degeneracy. This is one of the great oxymoron of the spiritual life. We can be morally degenerate as a self-righteous prig.
5. Do not flaunt liberty to counteract legalism. You don't need to rub their false standards in their faces. This causes them to react and strengthens their false standards. This is a violation of the law of love. It is a two-way street. An immature believer must be careful. We must be careful not to judge or malign or to impose our standards on others. These are actions of immature believers.
6. A mature believer has liberty, but that liberty must not become a stumbling block to any other believer's spiritual advance. So legalism is not indulged in the application of the law of love; nor should an immature believers be distracted by the doubtful activities of the mature believer. Doubtful activities are those which are not specifically prohibited by the Bible. These are activities done in an open and cavalier way. These are not wrong activities; we are at liberty to participate in these activities. When they become distractions, they are doubtful. They become the subject of gossiping, maligning, etc. This is why we must be sensitive to these things. This is how our actions confuse and waylay other believers.
7. Liberty running amuck; acting as if you have no responsibility to other believers. It is a very fine line to walk; it takes doctrinal maturity and impersonal love, which things are a part of the life of the mature believer. This is not something the weak or legalist or immature believer can apply. When unsure, err on the side of not becoming a stumbling block. Doctrinal standards and no reaction to legalism. It is hard not to react to someone who gets into your business and tells you how you should live. There are grey areas here; difficult areas to deal with.

If you have to deal with the legalist, do not force the issue of legalism. When you react to their legalism or you try to rebuff their standards and the great debator in the standard of legalism, you harden their approach. Self righteous people are always hardened when they are attacked. You need to allow doctrine to handle things. Instead, pray that this person will get enough doctrine to be grace oriented. Just take a wide-berth walk around them. Use impersonal love when you must be in their presence. Churches, even mega-churches, are really small-town environments. Everyone knows who has stumbled and fell. Who is with whom and for how long and for what reason. This is because people talk; they can't wait to reveal what they know. James 3:6 is a good warning: And the tongue is a fire, a world of unrighteousness. The tongue is set among our members, staining the whole body, setting on fire the entire course of life, and set on fire by hell. Sins of the tongue is what keeps us out of fellowship; the tongue defiles the entire body. The tongue should not control your body. In other words, the maligning tongue does the bidding of the cosmic system. This verse is no green light for legalism. It is a correction for those who are more concerned with keeping others in line rather than the growth of others. Psalm 125:1a: the Lord is your keeper... Trying to be someone else's keeper is a failure of the privacy of the priesthood.

Privacy of the Priesthood

1. Privacy is a principle that we must always keep in mind. As soon as we forget, we try to get into someone else's business and we have no reason to.
2. All believers must live their own lives before the Lord, which means us. We are not the exception of those who
3. The privacy of the priesthood is a part of the Royal Family Honor Code. It implies personal integrity in our relationship with other people. It is not bound up in how many standards we can impose on other people.
4. Violating another believer's privacy is a breach of the Royal Family Honor Code.
5. Our honor before the Lord is much more important than revealing or correcting someone else's dishonor. Our honor is much more important than correcting someone else's dishonor.
6. Allowing privacy for others the necessary freedom and breathing room for every believer in your periphery to lead their lives before God.
7. Do not forget allowing the privacy of the priesthood is a great act of grace orientation.
8. This is a test of our maturity. The law of love is a great test of maturity; whether or not we can apply it. The law of love is bound up in the privacy of the priesthood. All believers have a right to a private life without the intervention of others. Free will is not an issue if you run someone else's life.
9. "But I need to correct them; I need to get them on the right path." No one is going to be better off if you follow someone around and correct their path. Learn your standards from Bible doctrine rather than from someone who follows you around and tries to run your life Application: Bobby is a visible person in Berachah; but this does not mean that he does not have a right to privacy. As a public figure, he still has a right to a private life. He should not expect his life to be examined by some self styled. The public is always curious about public figures and so-called celebs. Morbid curiosity cannot wait to see the feet of clay of some public figure. There is an entire industry dedicated to scouring the private lives of celebrities. Do not become a Christian paparazzi; don't try to find believers with their feet of clay showing. Every believer needs to be concerned about their own spiritual life; about their own growing in grace; that is our responsibility before the Lord.

God knows about our feet of clay; He can discipline us Himself. We do not need to discipline others or to gossip about them or to look down at them or to treat them as a social pariah. Believers do not need to have your nose in their business to make them more like you.

Bobby also has a responsibility not to become a stumbling block to other believers as well; but he has a right to privacy as much as we do. In this church, at least, he is a public figure. But his responsibility before the Lord is to grow, just like we do. He can get out of fellowship just like we can, and he can distract himself, just as we can. He has a greater responsibility to us as our pastor. He has to be doubly careful not to be a stumbling block to others in his leadership position, even with his feet of clay. We all need to be responsible for the stumbling block principle in our own lives. Bobby has a responsibility to us and we have one toward him as well. As mature believers, curb your morbid personality. Don't chase his feet of clay; don't impose false standards on him. He is responsible for the standards which God has set for a pastor. Don't get your eyes on Bobby; it is the message, not the man. We are all capable of being stumbling blocks for anyone at any time. We must always keep in mind that we do not have the right to judge anyone, gossip about anyone, etc. Otherwise, we will just end up in discipline.

1Cor. 8:7 However, not everyone has this knowledge. In fact, some have been so used to idolatry up until now, that when they eat food offered to an idol, their conscience, being weak, is defiled.

1Cor. 8:7

Lesson #432

Wednesday October 25, 2006

In our relationship with other believers, we need to focus on ourselves. We will examine the stumbling block principle and the law of love. The Corinthians are in turmoil about eating meat offered to idols, even though it may seem pretty trivial to us. They have correctly renounced idolatry, but eating meat offered to idols has become quite divisive.

This is one issue that Paul decides to use as a way to explain these two doctrines. The law of love is presented as the doctrinal solution. The strong believer must take the weak believer into consideration when exercising their liberty.

Could be, the idea is, there is a controversy and it involves strong and weak believers; the strong believers need to cut some slack for the weak believers where necessary. It is not up to them to beat this or that into their heads. The mature believer must now and again give a little, when it comes to what they do in front of the weak believer.

Paul presents a discourse on the strong and weak believer. There is a believer who wants to advance, but can easily be sidetracked by as something as silly as meat offered to idols. Paul charges the strong believer not to be a stumbling block to the weak believer. There is an application of impersonal love and grace orientation by the strong believer. A thoughtful application of these two doctrines toward other believers.

What Paul does not counsel the strong believer to do obeisance to legalism by the law of love. The legalist uses his own supposed moral superiority—some religious taboo—by which all other believers should be judged and measured. The moral degenerate thinks that he has some special relationship with God. The legalist in the church or in any other Christian organization should never be rewarded with deference for their self righteousness or bullying, because they make the loudest noises or are the most intrusive. They get their self-esteem from running down others. The law of love does not mean that you cater to gossiping, maligning, judging or any other mental attitude sin from a legalist. They set artificial and arbitrary standards. We must be constantly on guard that our legalism does not overshadow our spiritual life. When someone goes awry on rebound, that is legalism. When you make that jump, to fulfill some human need to help God, then you go further and further into legalism.

Ignorance of doctrine is always a fertile ground for legalism. Wherever legalism is found, it infects others. They love to root out the sins of others and pry into your personal life. They intrude, they gossip, they stir up any legalistic tendencies in others. They violate the privacy of any other believer who does not meet their standards. It is sort of like the church gestapo; they are watching to make sure everyone else keeps their standards; but they never keep the standards of Bible doctrine. They enforce or superimpose their legalistic standards and they tyrannize the weak believer with their standards and system, attempting to keep that believer from growing.

Gossiping and maligning is justified in their minds so that they can help carnal Christians recover; however, the only way to get out of carnality is rebound. What they offer is somewhat of a 10 step program to gain some spiritual growth, but none is ever gotten this way.

Our sins are our problem; our spiritual advance is our problem. Only God knows all of the facts about us. The problem with regards to our free will is our problem, not anyone else's. When it comes to someone else, the key is their free will, not our enforcement of some set of rules superimposed upon their lives; or some sort of social retribution for them not meeting our standards. The principle of the law of love is to leave other believers to the Lord and we don't need to get our eyes on them. People fail and they sin.

Who gave you the right to stumble over another believer? No one has bestowed upon us the mantle of superiority. A mature believer does not allow himself to stumble over another believer; a maturing believer does not allow his eyes to get on other believers.

Don't be stumbling block; do not get into some other person's life; do not get noisy; give other believers privacy and allow them to grow. Don't get your eyes on them. Don't look for reasons to stumble; mind your own business; allow other believers privacy to grow in grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior. Grace orientation requires those who sin are to rebound and to use the problem solving devices which God has designed for us. You don't have time to judge other believers; so you don't have time to stumble over them.

Only Bible doctrine can permanently change the modus operandi of any believer. We are not the one to change other believers. We do not impose our standards on others. One of the greatest stumbling blocks is trying to change the activities of other believers. If you bow to legalism, you have already bowed to a stumbling block.

The exception is parents and children. A parent can and should make changes in your children. You need to work on their impressionable little souls. You need to mold their souls. You do not mold the minds of other believers; but you do mold the minds of your children. You give them a spiritual foundation, and if you don't, they will bend to every peer pressure that blows.

At some point, even with children, you have to let go. You do not continue to raise adult children. The bottom line is, don't interfere with the spiritual growth of human viewpoint solutions. With human viewpoint solutions comes legalism.

If you do not like the activities of this or that believer, then step around it; do not get involved and do not pin any metaphorical scarlet letters on anyone; move on; it is not worth it getting involved in other people's business.

The mature believer cannot flaunt his legitimate liberties. It really pains Bobby to consider some immature believer not to do what might cause them to stumble. Do not react to legalism. That is Bobby's tendency to react to legalism. You don't kowtow to legalism and neither do you react to it.

Rom. 14:13 presents the bottom line on the legalist, judging and the stumbling block principle: Therefore let us not pass judgment on one another any longer, but rather decide never to put a stumbling block or hindrance in the way of a brother. Do not pass judgment on another believer, but, instead, determine not to place a stumbling block before them. This is not a one-shot decision, but something which is a matter of spiritual growth. What comes first? Your liberty or the spiritual growth of another believer? No believer has a right to distract another believer from doctrine. This is always an important consideration. To become a stumbling block or not.

On the one hand, a legalistic believer must learn through doctrine to defer judgment on other believers so as not to be a stumbling block; this is the most difficult lesson for an immature believer to get; this is very difficult for them not to become legalist. Secondly, the mature believer must apply the law of love. This means curtailing some liberty at least temporarily for the benefit of the weaker believer.

Appearances can be very deceiving. Watch what you say about a believer based upon your observation of their lives.

1Cor. 8:7 However, not everyone has this knowledge. In fact, some have been so used to idolatry up until now, that when they eat food offered to an idol, their conscience, being weak, is defiled.

Confessions of an American Coward by Pat Conroy—someone who had played a little basketball some 30 years ago. I was a draft dodger, and his friend, Al, was in the war. Not sure what happened when his plane was hit. Viet Cong shoulder woke him with a gun at his head. Led to a prison in Hanoi, walking barefoot through VN; infections began to break out and leeches affixed to his body. The other guy in a Marine corp town gathered about 150 in an anti-war protest; and a speaker said to the few marines there, "Frag your officers" to end the war more quickly. Al was delivered to a Hanoi prison camp. He began to die. Comradery there. Bombing got Hanoi to release the prisoners. He wept greatly when seeing the plane with the flag on the plane. The writer began to assess his own role in the 1960's. He began to study totalitarianism, and interviewed people from a dozen wars. He did this research to better understand America. He came to some conclusions. He had been programmed to enter the Marines, being son of a Marine. He was raised to be like his friend, but turned into something totally different. He should have realized that America is good enough to die for, even when she is wrong. The writer did not realize how much he got wrong; an American coward staying at the house of an American hero.

As believers in Jesus Christ, it is important that we live our lives in the light of eternity. The Corinthians did not know enough to keep their eyes off other people. It is very human to look for a role model. You want to find someone to show you the way, and your eyes are on another person rather than on the Word of God. To the Corinthians, polytheism was far too real; it was in their recent past and they had serious regrets about it. They had wasted so much on idols. All the idolatry of their past. Many believers were saved out of this idolatry and polytheism. They realized it was wrong, and that this is antithetical to the one God and Savior.

Some of these Corinthians still had a hangover, and it was from religion; it was a guilt complex. There was this guilt that they had, even though they knew the idols were nothing. The idols represented that which was antithetical to God. Ignorance of the appropriate doctrine caused confusion in the minds of these legalistic believers.

The criterion for some lives is human viewpoint, and it must therefore come from a person's past. You look backward. There can be tradition, religion, antinomianism, prejudice, or whatever is in their past. In ignorance, this is what believers fall back on. And eating meat offered to idols just did not seem to be kosher to some of the Corinthian believers. They assume that any association with idolatry had to be wrong. They set up an entire set of standards apart from Bible doctrine because they had no Bible doctrine. You formulate certain taboos in your conscience, and then you impose these standards on others. This is why this whole thing is an issue.

Easy to fall into legalism because that is the pattern of your life; or you are obsessed with some earlier and incomprehensible event which has affected you and it has obsessed you or made you ashamed. Or maybe your antinomian past plays on your mind. It takes time and a soul-full of doctrine to purge your past. There is the Corinthian problem and there is our problem. For 25 years, Pat Conroy was affected by that set of events back then. Human viewpoint is the great enemy of recovery from past entrenched thinking and a former lifestyle. With doctrine in your soul and you begin to live your life in the light of eternity, and you realize that God has forgiven you for everything in your past; and that you share a future in Christ and that you share all that He is and Has; and you have an inheritance which is undefiled that you do not earn.

Self-pty or regret or blame others for what has occurred in your past—just become a victim. The format of psycho therapy can wrench your soul and get you mired in the past. As believers, we have no right to stay in our past. These Corinthians are shocked when they think another believer is living in their past, flirting with idolatry by eating this meat. They try to overcompensate with their own past, rather than to grow via doctrine. Epistemological rehabilitation is the only way to deal with your past.

Rom. 12:2; And do not be conformed to this world [staying in human viewpoint; remaining in the cosmic system; living in your past) but be transformed by the renewing of your mind, with the result that you may prove what the will of God is, that which is good, acceptable and perfect. Divine viewpoint alone can permanently replace your old thought processes.

The Corinthians fall into moral degeneracy, and they do not have the doctrine to figure out how to deal with it. With divine viewpoint in your soul, the regret of past failure is removed. Whatever road you think you should have taken, but did not; you can let it go. God's plan picks you up wherever you are and takes you from whatever road you are on.

Punishment honors the victim of the crime. Often in jury selection, you will be asked, which do you prefer: punishment or rehabilitation. Several ministries associated with Berachah and they are involved in true rehabilitation of prisoners.

Some believers, when they witness another believer eating meat in a temple sends them into a tailspin; it is an act which sends them into a tailspin. A true stumbling block is what you trip over when you are advancing. A legalist or a reversionism does not stumble.

Idolatry has been the thinking and practice of the Corinthians until now; the practice was ongoing until they were saved. Their thinking needs a big overhaul. But many had not progressed very far. They were not moving ahead; they were stumbling or retreating in reversionism.

There is a very logical conclusion based upon an erroneous thought or an erroneous postulate. In ignorance, you have no choice but to make a faulty conclusion. You don't know how to deal with them. These Corinthians in the old idolatrous practices involved a great feast in the temple, and this is where one would go to get a great meal. There would be food, drink, and sex with temple prostitutes. Those were the excesses that they were involved in. The problem is, they had not changed in their thinking.

They were sickened by what they had done in the past, but they were not really rehabilitated. They draw a conclusion based upon their old backgrounds, which is a conclusion which makes perfect sense. Eating the temple meat was associated with idolatry in their minds, and therefore, there should be no eating of meat which had been offered to idols. To them, how could a believer get involved with eating this meat; they must be way out of fellowship.

We will see what it means to function as a mature believer; and what is their responsibility.

1Cor. 8:7 However, not everyone has this knowledge. In fact, some have been so used to idolatry up until now, that when they eat food offered to an idol, their conscience, being weak, is defiled.

1Cor. 8:7

Lesson #434

Sunday 1 October 29, 2006

Daylight Savings Time today

This verse begins the stumbling block principle. The material here seems to be ridiculous; unimportant, irrelevant, too far removed from today's society. Depth of knowledge is difficult to find nowadays. You need some depth of knowledge of your own profession; but outside of that, we don't find an expertise outside your vocation. Most have just a broad, superficial knowledge of this or that subject. Few of us become so involved in a subject as to read everything that they can find on this or that subject; are you an authority on any subject outside of your own vocation? How many among us are Renaissance persons. And it is tragic, as we have more information at our fingertips nowadays than ever before.

The spiritual life today is denigrated by a plethora of legalism and emotion. Whatever is our old sin nature weakness, that sets up many of the standards of our spiritual life.

10–15 years ago, the Quayle family had been on tapes as well as the Northcote family. The press descended on Berachah at that time in order to discredit Regan and Quayle. Bob told the press that they never solicit money there, never ask for it; and this surprised them, as they were used to tele-evangelists. There is no knowledge in simple areas of Scripture, e.g., giving. Grace must be understood, as grace is the plan of God. When a believer does not grasp this, he depends upon his own good works, the acts of the flesh, in order to further him along spiritually. Our works are a result of spiritual growth, which is a result of learning God's Word. You do not put the works first. An ever deepening knowledge of doctrine learned via GAP which commends us to God.

Some Corinthians did not have enough Γνωσις of the basic doctrines that we have studied so far; and they don't get it nor do they understand the grace of God. Many did not have enough to solve simple controversies and conflicts in the church. Conventional wisdom is, you need to solve these conflicts; but with doctrine, the conflicts resolve themselves. In the Corinthian church, conflict is everywhere; factions rule the day. This means that they do not know doctrine or how to apply it.

These people did not know what to make of others entering into the heathen temples in order to eat the meat there. What if you see a believer in a place which seems to be off-limits for a believer?

These people did not have the necessary doctrine to distinguish between legitimate acts, e.g., eating meat offered to idols; and sins (worshiping the idols in a heathen temple).

Busy bodies who try to make other believers into what we think our role models should be. Some follow the actions of their role models; and then, one day, we see their feet of clay and we become concerned. Our problems begin when we take our eyes off of doctrine and begin scrutinizing believers around us.

1Cor. 8:7a However, not everyone has this knowledge..

We become iconoclasts. We find believers in the church that we look up to, we see their feet of clay, and we think that we need to bring them down, so that they do not destroy others. In Corinth, they had their eyes on other believers, and, in this case, it was those who ate meat offered to idols. We have believers here who are angry, stuck, disappointed, and they are not moving; they have broken into factions and they hate each other; and they claim certain apostles or pastors are their mentors for their faction. One group really thought that any connection to the heathen temple was wrong. They reacted badly.

In other words, the practice for most of these Corinthians for years has been idol worship and to think of the idols as referring to a multitude of gods, even though Paul has told them that these gods are nothing. Most of their conceptions of life had to do with idolatry. They, when becoming believers, figured out that there should be no involvement with idolatry. So, they took this to the point of legalism. Idolatry was, at one time, their thinking and practice, and they knew to step away from it.

ἕως ἄρτι = until now. They were supposed to take on a new perspective of life; but, this is not an overnight thing. You don't gain spiritual maturity in a hurry. We all need a depth of knowledge and it never stops. Rom. 12:2 is our mandate, which describes our life on this earth: Now do not be conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your mind [i.e., epistemological rehabilitation], and knowing what the will of God is. This does not mean that we gain tremendous emotion; it is all about what occurs in our thinking. Now we look through a glass darkly, but then we will see it all. So many churches—it is not about thinking, but about emoting. We are in a war, and we need to know the strategy and logistics; we must prove what the will of God is. Building our house on a solid foundation is how our house become livable. The old idolatrous practices were always accompanied by huge feasts with an excess of food and drink, as well as fornication with the temple prostitutes. First you sacrifice, and then you have a good time; and this pleased the gods. So, those who rejected this saw those in the church in this vicinity, eating the meat which had been sacrificed to idols, and it concerned them. They had a Christian concern and could pray intelligently for these people. They based this upon appearances alone, and it was based upon a reaction to their old way of life. They did not understand that there are certain liberties under the grace of God.

If someone saw you in a Buddhist temple, would they think that you are involved in idol worship? This would be an assumption about you and your idolatry. Meat offered to idols is idolatry. They were eating food as if it were sacrificed to an idol. The immature believers who observed this were confused, upset and tempted. This called to them; the sex and the great food called out to them. These legalists have an undeveloped conscience; no doctrinal norms and standards. At Berachah, we have fewer excuses. We should know the difference between sin and liberty. God handles those in sin. He can handle them in ways that we cannot.

1Cor. 8:7b In fact, some have been so used to idolatry up until now, that when they eat food offered to an idol, their conscience, being weak, is defiled.

1Cor. 8:7b

Lesson #435

Sunday 2 October 29, 2006

Perhaps, there is this elderly couple wandering about Corinth and they see fellow believers eating at the temple restaurant, and they incorrectly assume that the believers they see are steeped in idolatry. The problem is complete ignorance. In the past, the habit of these believers was to worship in the temple and to eat, drink and fornicate in the temple. They have enough perspective on the Christian life to realize that this is not where they need to be.

They react to what they see and they are also tempted by what they see. They looked and they wanted; they recalled the good times in the temple and the good food there; and they were tempted to return, seeing other believers in that temple. The problem was their conscience. A conscience can be a dangerous thing; it can guide us in the paths of righteousness or it can be a conscience with relative norms and standards which change with the wind.

What should they do? They should have minded their own business. They should have realized that idols do not exist; they are simply pieces of stone and wood crafted by men. The believers that they observed were not going to the temple to fornicate or to offer sacrifices; they were just enjoying a good steak or a gyros. We can build up all kinds of imaginary scenarios; and we can lose a lot of sleep over something someone says or does, and we can't deal with it. We need to not worry about it; put it into God's hands, and move on. Ignorant minds seem to come together when they just don't need to.

The mature believer walks by and figures, it's not my business; they know what they are doing. Their conclusion should have been, this is great meat that God has provided; and it has nothing to do with idolatry. This is why Paul gave us this great dissertation that God is the source of all things, which includes logistical grace. This tells us that God is the source of all things: He created this meat for our use; what does it matter that some heathen offered it to some idol?

Would this have any application to eating meat in general? Today, the concern might be meat that was not properly raised (or that is some sort of an issue? Could this be like wearing fur?

In legalism, they associate this meat with all of the sin which they used to do, and conclude that the meat is not edible. Idolatry does not mean anything. The believer involved can think, this is logistical grace, and I am going to simply enjoy the good meat. The immature believers made the wrong association.

1Cor. 8:7b In fact, some have been so used to idolatry up until now,...

The result is, those who observe this have a defiled conscience. Legalism rules; the immature believers who observe this, or who are invited to a meal, and there is meat offered to idols there, they are confused.

8 Points

1. Believers who are more mature than those observing them; by their actions of eating, they are telling immature believers that it is okay. They are saying, it is okay for us, so it is okay for you.
2. The weak believers are tempted to eat.
3. The immature believer cannot shake the idea that eating meat here is too closely associated with idolatry.
4. Without understanding the doctrinal principles involved, their conscience is giving them fits. You are observing someone who is doing wrong, and you think about it, and are tempted to do wrong as well. They might not be doing wrong, but you are tempted to do wrong in a way that is associated with you.
5. There is a conflict raging in their souls. Not real, but raging.
6. It is a simple question in the conscience: liberty or license. It is easily resolved by basic doctrine. Unfortunately, there is no basic doctrine here. Because the observers are weak, their consciences are a problem.

conscience = συνοιδα = nominative singular of the Greek noun.

Conscience

1. Συνοιδα means to know thoroughly and to make decisions based upon norms and standards formulated from that knowledge.
2. You have knowledge of doctrine which you accept as truth, and from that, you formulate the standards for your life. That is gap. Doctrine soaks up your brain and permeates your thinking, and forms your norms and standards.
3. The conscience is the part of the soul which contains the norms and standards.
4. Conscience is the mental faculty by which anyone distinguishes between right and wrong.
5. The conscience urged the individual to do what he recognizes to do what he believes to be right and restrains him from doing that which he recognizes as being wrong. If you don't have the right standards in your conscience, how can you recognize what is right and restrain yourself from doing wrong? You need a conscience filled with doctrinal norms and standards.
6. The spiritual or moral goodness of one's thoughts, motives, decisions and actions all comes from the conscience.
7. Therefore, conscience is a power or a principle that determines the quality of one's thoughts, intentions, decisions and actions.

Paul is telling these believers that they need doctrine in their souls and to have συνοιδα in their minds, and when they don't, that is the reason for their problems. Don't stumble over other believers; do not allow yourselves to stumble over other believers. Those believers whose conscience is not in full operation stumble. Those who are mature have no right to be a stumbling block; and those who are immature have no right to stumble over them. This takes some very serious thinking on our part even to recognize the problem to begin with. We have a tendency not to care what others think of us. I enjoy what I am doing, and I am doing that which is legitimate; so, to hell with those who have a problem with it. The immature believer is allowing himself to be a stumbling block and the mature believer is becoming a stumbling block. When and how do you apply doctrine? This is a very fine line, which Bobby is attempting to determine. It is all based on doctrine in your soul; but it is different from person to person, and you will have to decide how much doctrine they have and how far you can go. No easy answer or set of rules here. The conscience will contain norms and standards.

Close out with a Few Points

1. Without an anchored conscience, the norms of a soul are muddled and unclear.
2. In that state of muddled thinking, the believers has no ability to counteract human viewpoint. Sometime, they have no ability to even recognize the problem.
3. In that position, false standards from all over then become your standard operating procedure. You make your decisions with human viewpoint.
4. The sign of a seered conscience (a conscience not formed with Bible doctrine, the sign of a seared conscience is rationalizing one's old favorite sinful activities—whether they are a result of legalism or antinomianism.
5. Your conscience moves further and further away from divine viewpoint.
6. This means you have nullified or rejected operational norms and standards from Bible doctrine. You now have a conscience filled with relative standards, tailor made for rationalizing anything.
7. The norms and standards of the immature are built upon human viewpoint rather than upon Bible doctrine. The conscience is based upon legalism or upon antinomianism. This is the conscience which defines the Corinthians. Some will judge anyone near the temple, even those enjoying a temple steak; to those who are therein tempted and go into the temple to do sinful activity.

A mature believer is a leader; it is an occupational hazard. It is wrong, but they do it anyway. There must be some sensitivity. That is difficult for someone with no conscience. You have to be able to think about how your behavior affect others. Everyone likes to take no responsibility; not responsible for what you do, no matter what.

Freedom without responsibility is anarchy.

1Cor. 8:7c ...that when they eat food offered to an idol, their conscience, being weak, is defiled.

1Cor. 8:

No class; Bobby is sick

Lesson #none Wednesday November 1, 2006

The problem of the weak believer is in his conscience. When someone does something very shocking or heinous toward you, and you say, "He has no conscience." Most understand what that means; it is not literal; it means that their sense of right and wrong is skewed or corrupted. Everyone is born with a conscience; it is a part of the soul of every human being. Everyone has some system of norms and standards, and that is the conscience. The norms and standards of most people are very relative; they can change or bend and break at any moment. There is no more corrupted conscience than an enforcer of ideology, e.g., communism or Islam, where all semblance of societal norms and standards are removed; or the people with some semblance of a conscience are removed.

Some of the worst dictators in history have been very moral in some ways. They have no remorse for deeds that others would condemn. Hitler and Stalin are obvious. Pol Pot, Idi Amin, Saddam Hussein, are all examples of this. They all have a conscience, but it is corrupt. The Roman Empire rejected its own honor code, and their acceptance of Christianity near the end was quite corrupt; and many rejected Christ altogether.

Acts 23:1–3: And looking intently at the council, Paul said, "Brothers, I have lived my life before God in all good conscience up to this day." And the high priest Ananias commanded those who stood by him to strike him on the mouth. Then Paul said to him, "God is going to strike you, you whitewashed wall! Are you sitting to judge me according to the law, and yet contrary to the law you order me to be struck?" Paul had brought some Gentiles into the Temple, and Paul stares down the counsel. Here, he addresses these men as brothers, which means he is identifying himself with these Jews who are persecuting him.

As a young pharisee, Paul had held the coats of those who killed Stephen. Since then, he had developed a spiritual conscience. The Jews have a clear conscience, although they want to kill Paul. They don't feel guilty about that. Ananias gets so mad, he has someone go strike Paul in the mouth. Paul tells them that God will strike them, a whitewashed wall. Paul never taught against the Law; he simply taught Jesus Christ. Their standards were supposedly based upon the Law and their righteousness was based upon keeping the Law; and their conscience was clear from keeping the Law; yet, here they were, murderers, misapplying the Law to satisfy their old sin natures. Paul had not been convicted of anything. Punishment for being convicted might be in order, but this was a kangaroo court; the verdict had been decided in their own minds. They had a clear conscience, to their own way of thinking, and they had no remorse, for violating the very Law they claimed to base their lives on.

The believers in Corinth had a conscience problem; they had their own relative standards. The only thing that you can have are the relative standards of human viewpoint. These are false standards.

The knowledge which all men do not have, is Bible doctrine. Those without it are still haunted by the old standards of idolatry from whence they came. These are still immature believers and they had not replaced the old standards with the new standards. Without doctrine, they now gravitate toward legalism; they gravitate toward the standards of the legalistic Jews.

So, some of these believers have observed others from the church in the heathen temples eating meat, and this entire scene confused them. Since they have no other standard beside legalism by which they could evaluate the situation,

There were invitations sent out to join other believers in the temple for a great steak, in order to get better acquainted. So, some ate the food, as though it had been sacrificed to an idol; they believed that they were in idolatry once again. There was a conflict in their souls.

You need good norms and standards in the conscience in order to use them.

In the right lobe of the soul, there is a stream of consciousness, which is the pathway that doctrine takes in the right lobe of the soul. There is a frame of reference, a memory center; with some doctrine, you begin to develop a framework for doctrine and this this and that elsewhere. Vocabulary storage; you cannot think without vocabulary. Vocabulary helps you to be able to think in categorical knowledge

The next category is the conscience. When doctrine gets through the first 4 things, then doctrine take residence. Wisdom comes when you are further davancdd. However, the Corinthians.

Their conscience tells them that they are participated in idolatry, and they know it is a sin. They see others eating and drinking, and to their false system of thinking, they are doing wrong. Their policy is, this eating is sinful and eaing.

Those who at with a defiled conscience felt guilty about what they did. They did not know that they could eat this meat. Where could they go or what could they do? They had a taboo in their thinking, and any association with the heathen temple is wrong. The conscience sees something which is wrong, or they perceive is wrong.

Taboo

1. One segment of a society forbids it.
2. It is not forbidden by Scripture, even though some in the church might forbid it.
3. These are legalistic superimpositions on the Word of God.
4. Legalistic standards in the conscience are developed in order to enforce a taboo. A legalistic standard which is ensconced in the conscience and becomes a norm there.
5. Some taboos are detrimental to health, like smoking and drinking.
6. This can be an activity which is entirely innocuous, and yet some else with a false set of standards, condemns you.
7. When this happens, the weak believer sets up a prohibition ither conscience.

8. Today, a similar act might be drinking an alcoholic beverage, which is not a sin. To a legalist, if drunkenness is a sin, then
9. They establish a false standard, incorporate it into the conscience as a norm, and it

The legalist sees whatever taboo being broken, and he condemns the believers doing it, even though it is of a probe. Idolatry is a sin, but eating the meat is not a sin. We have a similar parallel. Since drunkenness is wrong, anything associated with it is wrong.

Those who have participated in some innocuous activity. They defiled their conscience because it is defiled. It is not sin, but the weak believer receives a defiled conscience; they take in bad norms and standards.

Doctrine gave them trues norms and standards; but they were driven away from doctrine by their own faulty conscience and by what they observed. Legalism and doctrine are mutually exclusive, and they had to be reflexed even when seeing others in the temple, even sinning. Their legalism takes hold and it turns to antinomianism.

Closing principles

1. Critical, prejudice, weak, unstable, easily offended when a conscience is defiled.
2. Conscience without doctrine has no discernment; bogus norms and standards. Only the standards of human viewpoint.
3. The believer must gain discernment from doctrine.
4. That is an undefiled conscience developed from Bible doctrine. It discerns between liberty, sin and taboos.
5. In this case, idolatry is a sin, but eating the meat is not
6. The weak or ignorant conscience does not know the difference. That person will react in legalism or be tempted to violate the conscience.
7. When the conscience does not know the difference, it is defiled or builds a false taboo.

1Cor. 8:7a However, not everyone has this knowledge..

1Cor. 8:7b In fact, some have been so used to idolatry up until now,...

1Cor. 8:7c ...that when they eat food offered to an idol, their conscience, being weak, is defiled.

1Cor. 8:7

Lesson #437

Sunday 1 November 5, 2006

v. 7 introduces us to the remainder of chapter 8 (through v. 13).

1Corinthians 8:7 (expanded translation) However, immature and legalistic believers are ignorant of the doctrines [theology proper, lapsarianism, the Trinity], but these immature believers who were in the habit of idolatry until the time that they were saved now they eat food sacrificed to an idol at the temple restaurant as if it were involvement in idolatry, and their conscience, which does not have the absolute standards of Bible doctrine, is confused, guilty and developing false standards and/or taboos.. [i.e., they have a defiled conscience]

As Christians, they have left behind their cultic behavior: eating and drinking in the temple and involved with temple prostitutes; however, anything connected with the temple they now see as evil, and they see any sort of such connection as forbidden. They may even want to participate in some aspect of it, and seeing others there may get them to return to the temple. There is this doubtful activity (in this case, eating meat which was sacrificed to idols), and they are confused and concerned about it. They cannot distinguish between the things that they should not do and things which they have the freedom to do.

The weak believer associates the eating of meat offered to idols with temple worship, and he cannot distinguish between them. The confusion becomes this idea of more mature believers who seem to have more knowledge, and they are eating the meat offered to idols at the temple restaurant, which happens to be the best restaurant in town. These weak believers cannot distinguish between an act of idolatry and a legitimate activity of eating food which had been offered to an idol. They cannot escape the notion that there is a problem here. Some have decided to eat the meat, even though their conscience is telling them no. Their conscience with no doctrine is giving them fits over doing what is legitimate. Their conscience has been defiled; should they eat or not? And when they eat, their conscience gives them fits, even though they are doing something which is legitimate.

Taboos

1. They developed a taboo in reaction to their own conscience. When the conscience is ignorant, they set up an arbitrary taboo as an operational standard.
2. A taboo is not a sin, which is why Bobby called it a taboo. It is not a sin because it is not forbidden by the legalists.
3. Thirdly, many of these taboos set up have to do with certain practices which are detrimental to health or shock other believers or upset those with ignorant consciences. One example of this is drinking; drinking is not a sin, but drunkenness is. Smoking might be another.
4. Taboos are legalistic superimpositions upon the Word of God. They superimpose their standards over the Word of God.
5. Legalistic standards are born in the mind of the weak believer with the formulation of a taboo (this is a defiled conscience).
6. The human conscience without doctrine is prejudice, weak, legalistic, easily offended.

An undefiled conscience can distinguish between legitimate activity and sin. This particular situation was rapidly becoming a taboo among the believers at Corinth. Taboos lead to self righteousness, and that is carnality.

The Mature Believer and Questionable Behavior

How does the mature believer view this and how do they think about the taboos and weak believers?

1. A mature believer understands the difference between liberty and sin. In operating within the parameters of their freedom, they must be sensitive about believers with whom they have contact.
2. Why is this the case? Why can't they just get their own doctrine and come along? We have a responsibility toward the weak, not to cause them to stumble.
3. Don't distract the immature believer from their spiritual growth. That is the only thing that will keep them growing away from these taboos and ideas of self righteousness.
4. You must recognize their ignorance and the distractions and we must be able to apply the law of love at this point.
5. A believer in this situation should at least, temporarily, cease the offending activity. That may be hard to do and hard to agree to. It is difficult to back off here from an immature believer. We have a responsibility.
6. You must give the immature believer time to develop divine viewpoint. You are buying them time instead of exacerbating legalistic standards from their shock and guilt. If eating is going to offend them, get take out or leave it alone. This is a self restraint on your liberty, but this does not cut you off from this liberty forever.
7. A mature believer should not tempt the immature believer to engage in activity which causes their conscience to react or be distracted from doctrine.

Paul will, in the next verse, get them to see the real criterion for their spiritual life. The taboo has become the spiritual life; good works becomes the spiritual life. "I'm not eating meat offered to idols." There is my spiritual life. However, that is just self righteousness. Those who saw others eat this meat saw those people as idolaters and were tempted at the same time to eat meat. See how insidious this all is? You're uptight over the taboo but you are tempted not to keep it, which will sear the conscience.

An example today might be recycling your trash; someone sees that you don't it is has them all concerned and upset.

Spirituality is determined with being filled with the Holy Spirit or not; an absolute. You are spiritual or not; there is no grey area here.

Spirituality by works; they set up false standards of works, and live by these standards. Self righteousness of keeping the taboo is in itself sinful. The seared conscience is not of faith, and that takes the immature believer out of fellowship. Bobby says they fall into a guilt complex, and that takes them out of fellowship. Whenever they become self righteous about keeping a taboo, they get out of fellowship. A weak conscience determines right and wrong based upon background. It must revert to whatever norms and standards came before.

The Principles of this Problem; the Problem of a Weak Conscience

1. The standard of a conscience is not what people think or do.
2. Correct thinking and actions are the result of standards already developed in the conscience.
3. The standards of the conscience come from what we have learned; not from how we think and what we do. When it comes to doctrine, your norms and standards are built by epistemological rehabilitation.
4. Build on doctrine; not on taboos.
5. The relative human conscience, built on human viewpoint, built on relative standards (which is the best that the unbelievers can do), is no substitute from the conscience developed from the declaration of the Word of God).
6. The standard of doctrine is God's standard. God's standard is in our conscience; and His standard is always grace. Not self righteousness; not putting yourself on a pedestal and looking down on everyone else; and when you have grace in your conscience, that is when you can apply these standards correctly.
7. Legalism is moral degeneracy, and it is a standard of human viewpoint. This is antithetical to the grace standard which should be in your conscience.
8. The law of love is Paul's solution and that should be in your conscience.
9. The law of love is based on a conscience full of doctrine.

Paul will now apply this doctrine in v. 8; this issue is between taboos and spirituality; between self righteousness and a grace oriented spiritual life.

1Cor. 8:

Lesson #438

Sunday 2 November 5, 2006

In their conscience, the weak believer is having personal conflict. This gives them a guilt complex. They want to do it and now they feel guilty about it. When you keep your own standards, you can become very arrogant and self righteous about keeping them. The problem in Corinth, some could not distinguish between Biblical standards and taboos.

Food will not commend us to God; we are not worse if we don't eat; and we are not better because we do eat. If food was essential to the spiritual life, then this would be a part of doctrine. Physical food will not gain us Godly approbation. God is not pleased when we keep our own artificial standards. Personal love for Him and impersonal love for all mankind is required for these situations, and that requires spiritual growth.

A taboo takes away something which is legitimate in life; this is asceticism. This never placates God's righteousness. No standard that we set up for ourselves commends us to God. Christ satisfied the wrath of God; He satisfied this on the cross. At the moment of faith in Christ, we are made righteous before God. We begin our Christian life by being made righteous by God. How many Christians think exactly this way; I am saved, now I need to live a life a certain way to gain God's commendation. I don't know what is right, since I have no doctrine, so I'll use the norms and standards which these other believers have or which I have been brought up having. In Christianity, this whole idea of asceticism was seen as something which God really liked. Ascetics were seen as holy men; the abstain from food, sex, etc., and that is to commend them to God and to impress men. This is the most anti-grace rationale in Christianity. Sacrificing something which others enjoy in life, it really develops an emotional high, at best; and this sets them apart from the crowd. They feel good about it. They feel impressed by their own sacrifices before God. They feel good about being able to accomplish self-denial. The more the abstain, and the more who compliment them, the better they feel and the better that they like it. It is not about commendation from God, it is more about commendation from God. How gratifying it is to tell others how you have given up this or given up that, and therefore, you are a great Christian. It is absolutely not true; it is the worst misunderstanding of grace in the world; and almost any church in America will praise you for it. Or, "how much money have you given?" is another approach.

There may be a reason to give up this or that; for health reasons—but none of this is spiritual. Do not make this mistake. Don't confuse self commendation with divine commendation. If it pleases me, then it must please God; if it is good for me, then it must be good for God.

The weak believer does not feel spiritual; but he sets up some taboos, and now he feels better about himself; there is some self-esteem improvement; but this has nothing to do with spirituality.

Yoga today may be fine to get involved with; but it has nothing to do with spirituality. It might make you healthier; but it will not gain God's favor any more than anything else would. A healthy lifestyle does not commend us to God. Nothing wrong with health food; but don't get on a self righteous pedestal because others don't eat like you.

Bobby has heard believers (one in particular) that you cannot please God because you are overweight. You cannot be commended to God because you don't look the part. The heavy person was in the public eye. That is pathetic. That is self righteous condemnation.

You can be healthier to drop some weight, but that has nothing to do with spirituality (except, perhaps, in the areas of self-discipline and moderation). Filling of the Holy Spirit first and metabolizing of Bible doctrine after. No good works, abstaining, self righteousness, etc. can add to what God has provided for us. What commends us to God? What God does; not what we do.

Aren't I mandated to serve God in this or that way? We are commended to God based upon what He has done for us. We utilize what God has given us; filling of the Spirit; the use of GAP, the spiritual assets and the situations which we find ourselves in; that is all God's work, none of it is ours. Do not forget what you have and where it comes from. Our conscience comes from what we have learned; spirituality is based solely on the grace of God. If anyone loves God, he is known by Him. How do you love God? Do you say “I love God” and then feel good about it? Love is a gradual process, just as it is with other people. It is a process. Telling someone that you love them the first day you meet means nothing.

God's grace; His accomplishments for us; that is what commends us to God. We are first approved by Him positionally because we are in Christ. We are never approved because of our own relative righteousness; we are approved because we are in Him. We cannot boast in the grace of God; it has all been done for us. We can strain and strain to gain the approbation of God. Our only thing is, we need to grow spiritually. The people in Corinth are so sidetracked by every wind that blows, that they have turned to legalism and they are trying to please God by not eating meat offered to idols. This is where works leads us. Faith alone in Christ alone is the only condition for salvation; then and only then, we are approved by God.

What about commendation from God after salvation? It does not depend upon our works and upon what we abstain from. Any commendation comes from what He has given us to serve and glorify Him.

Our glorification of God is a result of our spiritual advance. Witnessing glorifies God. There is a fine line distinction, and it is easy to fall on the other side of the line.

There is a time element in this verse. The future active indicative of παριστιμι = to make acceptable. Future tense means to look forward to when God gives us approval. When is the culmination of this? The Judgment Seat of Christ. The words that we want to hear are, well done my good and faithful servant. God's grace was in our soul and in our lives, and our utilization of this commends us; and glorifies Him.

This passage tells us what we will not commend us to God; eating or not eating something. There is no commendation here or there. God will never say, “Well done; you really ate that meat well” or “Well done, you followed your conscience and did not eat that meat.” We are neither the worse if we eat, nor the better if we don't. If it is not a sin, it has no affect on your life.

1Cor. 8:8–9

Lesson #439    Wednesday November 8, 2006

Certain Corinthians were eating meat in a temple restaurant; and some weak believers have joined them, but are violating the standards of their own standards, uncertain as to whether what they are doing is right or wrong. Some of them are shocked to find themselves in a building associated with idol worship, and this violates their own conscience. They have begun to develop a guilt complex; and they are reacting to what they have done. They may gravitate to the camp of the legalists. In reaction, they might cut themselves loose, and get involved in other areas of the temple—the more antinomian excesses.

These need to get their eyes off of people; their eyes are on mature believers and they are letting them be their guide. You need to be guided by the doctrine in your soul; not by the behavior of other believers, mature or otherwise. If you are unsure about something, then hold back until you know. What Paul has to do here is apply some doctrine for them. They need to understand the situation here and learn how to deal with it.

Eating meat is completely irrelevant to the spiritual life. Eating meat or not eating meat is not going to gain God's approbation or disappointment. The spiritual life does not depend upon what we eat or don't eat. Approval from God does not depend upon what we do on our own power.

What we do in the energy of the flesh, God disapproves. This is difficult for some to swallow; they do not grasp why good deeds don't please God. The only thing which gains the approval of God is what He supplies in grace; and He approves of what His grace has accomplished for us.

At the moment of faith alone in Christ alone, God imputes to us His own righteousness. We are not righteous and we do not deserve to have any righteousness; having His perfect righteousness is what He approves of in us. God is not impressed by our relative righteousness; He is not impressed by our good deeds; He is impressed by His imputed righteousness. God appreciates what He does for us; He does not appreciate our own good works. His righteousness in us pleases Him.

Furthermore, God has provided everything necessary for the Christian life. People think that after salvation, they must now start being good and doing good things. But if it is not of the power of the Holy Spirit, then it is not the Christian way of life. We are just doing what any moral unbeliever can do. Without His grace, we have no ability to gain God's favor. Not our Christian service, human good, or relative righteousness. You cannot ever glorify God with our own power. How can our own power ever reflect God's grace? We are not talking about appearances before other people. God knows our motivation; He can see into our souls. We can please as many as we want. Gaining the admiration of other people and other believers is not any sort of indication that God admires us. We are simply humanizing God; what is good for me must be good for me, is a terrible misconception. Do not start from yourself and try to determine what God is or what He does.

Eating or abstaining from eating does not make us better or worse before God, as per this verse. The application is, if it is not sin, then it has no affect on your spiritual life. If you have not sinned, then you are still filled with the Holy Spirit. The issue is never what we eat; it is what we metabolize by ways of Bible doctrine.

The Corinthian believers are at liberty to eat if they want to, or not to eat, if they don't want to. Keeping taboos are human relative standards.

1Cor. 8:8 Food will not make us acceptable to God. We are not inferior if we don't eat, and we are not better if we do eat.

This next verse begins with a conjunction of contrast δε. Then we have a warning or a caution; be cautious and be prepared to stop. Present active imperative of βλέπω = to look, beware, be circumspect, look around. This is also an imperative of entreaty, which means there is not the finality of a command; it has the urgency of a request. Aorist subjunctive; this is an urgent request for caution. You may become something, wince we have the verb γίνομαι.

What exactly are we to be aware of? Εξουσία = freedom of choice, a right to act, power of choice, liberty to do as one pleases; power of authority; authority, power. Good manners is thoughtfulness of others; but there is very little thoughtfulness of others in our society today. Freedom does require some self-restraint. We are thoughtful and considerate; we are actually sensitive to the rights of others. A leader puts the welfare of his troops ahead of his own. The leader never gets in the chow line before his troops; he sees to it that they eat first. That is part of taking care of your troops, as they take care of you. A gentleman recognizes that others have rights. Gentleman is a term which is misunderstood today. A person with bad manners interrupts the conversation of others. We can't wait to interrupt someone to tell them what you think, to give them your opinion. If you understand freedom, then you have the responsibility not to infringe on another's freedom.

Another example: those who talk in Bible class show bad manners and thoughtlessness. Everyone has the right to sit and listen. That is a misunderstanding of your own personal freedom; and this is the importance of teaching children manners. Some think that you should let children run amuck. When you teach manners, you teach a child that he is not the only one with rights. It teaches the child thoughtfulness. They become thoughtless except for themselves. The adult child heckles the one making a speech, and they do that in order to draw attention to themselves and to keep others from hearing what the speaker has to say.

Manners and thoughtfulness of others means that a person has been inculcated with the principles of freedom; you understand your own freedom and the freedom of those around you. No such teaching means there is anarchy in the soul and anarchy throughout.

The press defines its freedom as the public's right to know. This justifies to them of doing anything; revealing sensitive information under this banner. The misuse of freedom will require a price; an exorbitant price, which we will all pay. A lack of manners and a lack of thoughtfulness. Abused liberty turns one to a libertine; and they become consumed with self-pleasure, personal advance, etc. It happens in business, in politics, etc. No one listens to anyone else. We are so confused about our liberty; and this is the situation in Corinth. We have liberty and we should utilize it. God gave us liberty to use. Liberty is liberty; but liberty without responsibility destroys freedom—ours and the freedom of others. We have a responsibility to others. To apply is difficult; the application is liberty versus responsibility to someone else. Are you causing a distraction to a weaker believer? Are you responding to a taboo or to a legitimate weakness. Liberty versus those who do not understand that liberty.

Distractions abound; and the entire church is in an uproar. We, as a believer, have no right to stumble over anyone, even if they are sinning.

1Cor. 8:9 But be careful that this right of yours in no way becomes a stumbling block to the weak.

1Cor. 8:

Lesson #440

Thursday November 9, 2006

The stumbling block is the mature believer exercising his legitimate liberty. The weaker believer can suffer conscience pangs since they do not understand whether they are doing something which is legitimate or not.

Paul's Perspective

1. What is the perspective of the mature believer concerning legitimate activities which are doubtful to the immature believer. The mature believer knows that these activities are okay and the immature believer is unsure about it.
2. The spiritual needs of the immature believer must be taken into account. They have the same needs as any other believer; they need to grow up. They have less ability to discern the legitimacy of some activities.
3. Their spiritual advance must not be hindered.
4. Every mature believer has a responsibility; we know we have a responsibility to the Lord; but we also have a responsibility to the immature believer.
5. The mature believer's responsibility is not to become a stumbling block to that believer with a weak conscience; that is the believer who is ignorant of doctrine who does not have the norms and standards to decide between what is doubtful and what is sinful.
6. The mature must allow the immature believer the latitude and freedom to grow up. Freedom is a very fine balance. They should not use their freedom to drive a weaker believer away from doctrine.
7. The immature believer must be given time to form his own perspective; and that means that there should not be a stumbling block there.
8. Once that is in place, grace and doctrinal orientation, no believer will be affected by previously doubtful activities. The misunderstanding becomes understanding. The doubtful activities or even sinful activities or failures in another believer.
9. The liberties or the vagaries of others are no longer an issue to become stumbling blocks; but that is what the mature believer must allow. As Americans, we don't think we should have our liberties curtailed, especially when they are legitimate.

Now let's look at the immature believer's perspective.

The Immature Believer's Perspective

1. The immature believer should have a focus or an attitude as growing.
2. The perspective is to get your eyes off other people. You don't find someone in the congregation and follow them around. No person should you have your eyes on.

3. Eyes on people is a certain way to get distracted and it will violate an undeveloped conscience.
4. Other believers are not our guide in the spiritual life ever; much of the Christian world looks at others and thinks, "his is my mentor." Bobby mentions the reverend who got into trouble and there is a committee to get him restored to the faith. That is human viewpoint; he simply needs to confess his sin and it is over. However, he has to work his way back into the good graces of these people. That is a fallacy.
5. Other believers are not our guide or role model. Bobby will agonize for hours to make sure that it is correct; as correct as it can be.
6. We should not live our lives according to another believer's activities or directives. Many people in the Christian world are directed in their daily lives. Big brothers when Bobby was in seminary. All they wanted to do was butt into your life and makes sure that you were not doing something that they disapprove of.
7. Jesus Christ is our only role model.
8. Human role models are often related to peer pressure. We are pressure to conform to whatever activity the role model is involved in. Total human viewpoint.
9. If you don't have learned standards from doctrine, then you will not know whether you are doing the right thing or not. The Corinthians were confused; they did not know what was right and what was wrong. They went in all different directions and they were distracted. Every trend of their old sin natures went off in all directions.
10. This is tailor made for stumbling for the immature believer. The mature believer should not be stumbling.
11. Guilt and reaction; guilt brings on other sins; reaction brings out sins of the tongue and mental sins.

This passage is directed toward mature believers.

Present active imperative of βλέπω which is an imperative of entreaty. There is not the finality of a command conveyed here. Why does Paul offer a request rather than a command. If this is a cut and dry situation, why not say it like it is? How does Bobby know that this is an imperative of entreaty, which is an exegetical choice that he must make. It could be a command and it could be an entreaty. Why did he choose an imperative of entreaty? The key is the next word: ἐξουσία = power, ability, free will, freedom of choice, a right to act. So this says beware of a freedom of choice; beware of a right to act. A mandate is contradictory to a freedom of choice here. The course is already laid out. This mandates a course of action. Paul is urging a course of action; he is not commanding. Paul can't say "Do not become a stumbling block." He is telling us to be careful not to become a stumbling block. Paul's use is inspired by the Holy Spirit. This gives us insight into Paul's thinking as he writes this passage. The liberty versus the stumbling block decision. Liberty or stumbling block? Liberty is always legitimate. If it were not a liberty, then it would be a sin or a fatal flaw. They tyranny that some believers exercise over others is no reason for us to exercise a liberty.

The stumbling block problem shouldn't be, but it is. The immature believer; you can't pander to legalism, but you should not be a stumbling block. If you have doctrine in your soul, you can make a correct call here, under the filling of the Holy Spirit.

Liberty

1. If it is legitimate, you have a right to choose to do it or not. Don't think that you don't. Those who try to push taboos on you try to take away a legitimate activity away from you. They aren't advancing spiritually, but they lead a life of taboos and want to make certain that you are doing the same.
2. Whether you choose to partake of the liberty or not, has no bearing on our spiritual life. We can choose to or not. What does affect us is being distracted from doctrine.
3. Exercising our liberty may have a bearing on the spiritual life of others. That is the crux of the judgment call. It may have an affect on the spiritual life of others.
4. This verse tells us to beware, lest our liberty causes us to become a stumbling block.
5. Our liberty may have to be tempered in order to preserve someone else's freedom to grow. A soldier gives up much of his liberty in order for us to be free.
6. The use of our liberty may be a wrong choice. It is not wrong because the liberty is wrong, but the choice could be wrong. The abstention is for a short time.
7. The wrong choice is an irresponsible use of your freedom as a believer.
8. Irresponsible freedom in the Christian life is a great indicator of anarchy in your soul. Not only are you a stumbling block if you misuse your freedom, but you are a stumbling block to yourself. Once this begins, rebellion of soul becomes antinomianism. Not only is it a trend that we indulge in, but it is easily picked up by other believers with the same trend. In reaction to liberty, a believer might become legalistic. He could pick up on a liberty and take it way too far. In either case, the mature believer is a stumbling block. The wrong use of liberty and the wrong choice of using the law of liberty and leaving the law of love behind.
9. When an immature believer or a legalistic believer demands that you don't be a stumbling block, then they are out of line and you can ignore them. The judgment call is that of the mature believer; not that of the legalist or the immature believer.

If it is not sinful, then we have the option to do it, which is a wide range of activities. It may be necessary to curb some freedom which is allowed to us in the spiritual life. Along with our freedom goes obligation. We are given freedom by the country in which we live; we have an obligation to our country; we have no right to trample someone else's rights.

Bobby thinks that understanding legalism and not looking at other people should not be much of a problem. These issues are made clear in Berachah. Doubtful activities are done with no regard to anyone else. These things are not sin; they are legitimate activities. We can be a stumbling block to ourself by simply losing our focus. We have no right to every stumble over anyone.

Bobby does not mean that we bow to legalism. The legalist will always find something wrong with our actions and they will try to manipulate our lives with their extra-Biblical taboos; we are not required to live under the taboos of these legalists. We are not authorized to correct the legalist or to go to war against them. Don't flaunt your liberty in front of them. Don't give into their legalism either.

Do's and Don't's

1. Do not hinder their spiritual growth by indulging your legitimate liberties.
2. Do not promote doubtful activities in front of an immature believer. He can't distinguish between doubtful and sinful. When he does what you do, he violates his own conscience.
3. Doubtful activities become a distraction to their spiritual lives; first discern their attitude, legalism or positive volition; and are you a distraction.
4. As a grace oriented believer, do not antagonize the legalist. The legalist may come around to grace orientation if they are treated in grace. You don't have to hang out with them. But you be gracious toward a legalist when you must be in contact with them. Our circumspection in not alienating the legalist may be the future for his enlightenment. With the legalist, it is to simply show graciousness.

1Cor. 8:9

Sunday 1 November 12, 2006

The question is, whether or not these people should eat this meat offered to idols, and Paul, in v. 6–8, says that it doesn't make you better or worse. However, there are those who do not understand their liberty. Some believers have no knowledge; no understanding. Some hear of or see the activity of another believer, and sometimes it offends them, sometimes it tempts them or tantalized or stimulated, and they want to participate. The initial false perception is the genesis which leads to a false application in life. This is the problem of the immature believers in Corinth. They are eating meat offered to idols and they are eating meat offered in the temple. The source of their confusion is their weak conscience. They do not have the norms and standards from Bible doctrine. For them, eating this meat, has become a doubtful activity. They don't know if anyone should be in the temple complex at all, much less participating in the eating of meat there. For them, it is not a liberty and they cannot settle this question in their mind, so their conscience is sending them mixed signals. They don't know if they should join them or rebuke them; their conscience is simply unsure. They should know that these activities are not wrong; but, to the ignorant believer, they are doubtful, and their perception is their reality. There is a problem, as those enjoying their liberties are conscience breakers for the immature. Paul will warn the more mature believers in Corinth. This is a warning which we must heed. We must consider the spiritual needs of the immature believer; we cannot overlook their conscience. We cannot overlook their conscience in what we do that they observe or hear about. We have a responsibility to the believer who is ignorant and cannot discern, because he has no doctrine. The mature believer has this responsibility which overrides that person's liberty. The difficult question is, how far does your responsibility go? How much liberty must you give up? How much responsibility do you have toward that person sitting next to you? Some might have positive volition and others might be complete legalists. You should not ever hinder spiritual growth of another by indulging in any legitimate activity. You do not promote doubtful activities in front of the immature believer, who cannot distinguish between what is legitimate and what is not.

Secondly, we should not cater or capitulate to legalism; this is not a part of our responsibility. The legalist will always find something wrong with their actions, and they will try to manipulate your life. We do have legitimate freedom and we should not forget that. We are not authorized to attack the legalist in order to enforce our liberty. This is a delicate line to walk; we do not capitulate to legalism, but we do not go to war with them; and we must take responsibility toward immature believers who genuinely want to advance to maturity. We must decide whether to ignore the taboos of legalism or abstain from something in order not to confuse the immature believer. This is a judgment call between liberty and obligation. We will all have to make this decision at some point in time.

Taboos are not legitimate. This is not always a clear choice; Paul urges believers to consider these things, but he does not mandate in this situation. The choice is our judgment call. We must determine whether we are a stumbling block or not. We are not a stumbling block to the legalist, but we must determine if we are a stumbling block to the immature believer. It depends upon circumstances and those you are dealing with.

We must not be weak.

1Cor. 8:9 But be careful that this right of yours in no way becomes a stumbling block to the weak.

1Cor. 8:9

Lesson #442

Sunday 2 November 12, 2006

The Corinthians are an interesting bunch of people. The Corinthians are just like we are; mature believers, immature believers, legalists, factions, and everything in between. We will run into problems as a church. If we superimpose any standard on the Bible and on other people, we are legalistic. The antinomian crowd who will do almost anything they think they can get away with. They might see another more mature believer doing this or that, and take that liberty and run with it, including doing other things. There are a few who understand Bible doctrine who have a conscience filled with Bible doctrine, who can discern between Bible doctrine and a sin. Those who have a weak conscience cannot always make the distinction between what is allowed and what is sinful.

We are a stumbling block or we are not. If we become disgruntled and embittered at not being able to do something that we feel that we can do. This does not mean that you give up your liberty forever, nor that you sneak around and hide; you just need to be judicious in how you use your liberty. Great meals and great steaks in the Corinthian idol temple; chicken, pork, lamb; it was all there. And Paul tells us, there is nothing spiritual about eating or not eating. At the same time, others are peaking over the temple walls, seeing fellow believers eating idol-meat, and getting confused. Making a judgment call requires precise doctrinal application. What about those other believers? Do they want to grow or do they want to manipulate you? This is why giving specific application is more difficult.

We cannot mandate these actions, as this is an imperative of entreaty, as there is a freedom here, and it is our choice, as it is legitimate activity.

When in doubt about doubtful activities, just don't indulge in that liberty. If you have a doubt about a doubtful thing, and it appears to have an affect on another believer, then you back off.

You are out to dinner with another believer that you don't know well, and you don't know anything about this other believer. You might want to not have alcohol with your meal until you know more about that believer. That is a simple example to illustrate the principle. Don't participate in a liberty in an obvious, plain sight of a believer who might confuse things. Having a drink is not a sin, although 5 drinks is a different situation. Ultimately, a liberty designed by God and given to us is to be enjoyed, as it is divinely authorized. Some great liberties require some grace and doctrinal orientation. Some aren't always prepared for these liberties, and seeing this might lead someone down the road according to the trend of their old sin nature. You may not want to throw this in their path every time they take a step. You have a greater purpose in life than to enjoy a martini; you have a greater purpose in life than to simply indulge your liberties.

*Why should I curb any legitimate liberty in my life? If God gave this liberty to me, why do I need to worry about anything else? This is because v. 9 speaks of a stumbling block principle. Beware, do not become a stumbling block [or, impediment] to the weak.

In any church, there are weak believers and enlightened believers; the eating of meat, which is a liberty, will not to the enlightened believer any harm. However, the enlightened believer, acting under their liberty, can sometimes throw out a stumbling block, which will confuse the immature believer, whose background and newly found faith confuse them.

Realize, it is not up to us to correct other believers; God keeps the standards; we do not need to say, "Let me straighten you out; I have a standard and I need to make certain that you uphold this standard." As a mature believer, you don't get upset over the behavior of other believers. Whom He loves, He disciplines. You don't want to step into their lives and get the thunderbolts designed for them. We do not have the right to stumble over other believers. We have the obligation not to confuse other believers; but we do not have the right to become upset or confused over the actions of another believer.

The weak cannot seem to leave it alone, and they need some protection from themselves. They are ready to stumble; they just have to find a block to fall over. Their conscience might be defiled. Lack of doctrine + a conscience defiled by observing a doubtful activity might lead to stumbling, either into legalism or into lasciviousness. Some might indulge and then feel guilt, which puts them out of fellowship. Or they might malign another believer engaged in a legitimate liberty; or, they will use another believer's act in order to indulge in a sin.

The Bible declares that the enlightened believer has a responsibility toward the weak believer.

What is Your Responsibility?

Okay, maybe you don't want to do it, but you decide, well, what is this responsibility?

1. This is not catering to legalism or spiritual bullying.
2. The legalist is a self righteous prig; he develops his own standards and keeps them and expects you to keep them.
3. In that situation, do not abstain from your liberty. The deacons at Berachah are very grace oriented. Do not abstain from liberty because of legalism or persecution. Succumbing to legalism just promotes more legalism in the soul of someone who is already legalism.
4. Therefore, legalism should not be encouraged; you do not reward believers for this. Legalism should not be the reason that you forgo any liberty.
5. Promoting legalism is also a stumbling block to others; to the legalist. If you leave them alone and if you ignore them, they might, at some point in the future, latch onto grace. If you kowtow to them, then that will encourage them to become more legalistic.
6. Recall, Rom. 14:13: therefore, a conclusion from what came before, let us not judge one another any more [the legalist cannot wait to judge us and tell us what is wrong]; do not place an obstacle (or a stumbling block) in a brother's way [do not counter-judge; do not return tit for tat].
7. Legalism is a great deterrent to grace orientation.
8. The only solution to legalism; Bible teaching in the way of exhortation; let the truth correct them, not you. When a legalist is challenged, this challenges the bedrock of their very own thought process. They will defend their self righteousness to their death. No one is more stubborn than these self righteous types.

Personal example: I have a couple of neighbors who have harassed me through the neighborhood association. I could return the same harassment by following them and watching them, and reporting all their activities to the neighborhood association. That is my freedom, but I am returning tit for tat. Now, I should not necessarily bow to their activities and move out.

The Positive Side

1. If the innocuous actions of a mature believer are the cause of making a weak or legalistic believer to sin, the law of liberty must be suspended.
2. The law of liberty is superceded by the higher law, the law of love.
3. The one who loves his brother. There is no cause for stumbling in the strong believer. You should never be the cause for the stumbling of another believer.
4. The principle of noblesse oblige is the obligation of the noble and honorable believer to look after the weak believer until they are strong; this is not an active role, but a passive one. You just don't get in their way. This is truly a labor of love. We are called to do this.

1Cor. 8:9 But be careful [or, beware] that this right of yours in no way becomes a stumbling block to the weak.

V. 10 tells us how we become a stumbling block.

1Cor. 8:10

Lesson #443 Wednesday November 15, 2006

In California, but the wrong time for Thanksgiving.

An article out of Bobby's email. It was a speech by Winston Churchill, one of the greatest leaders in British history. He had quite a career before becoming prime minister. This was a speech from 1899 and he was in the military, he was a statesman, and a journalist.

The western world is forever in his debt as the prime minister of England. In 1899, the union jack had not yet set on the British empire. The British had been in the Sudan for several decades and had soldiers in Afghanistan and Pakistan. His assessment of the Muslim: "How dreadful of the curses of Mohammed...a fearful, fatalistic apathy [fatalism is a cornerstone of Islam]. Sluggish methods of commerce and insecurity of property wherever the prophets lives. The fact that in Mohammedan law that every women belongs to a man, either as a wife, concubine, or as a child. Individual Moslems may show splendid qualities; no stronger retrogate force exists in all the world. Islam has spread throughout central Africa. Muslims vainly struggle against science." This is a speech which could have been given yesterday.

The only thing that stands between this horrible religion and us is believers with doctrine. Our faith holds back the tide of that evil religion.

Knowing what it means to be a stumbling block is key to the rest of this chapter.

What is a Stumbling Block?

1. A stumbling block is an impediment. It comes from the legitimate actions and activities of a more advanced believer when the activity is observed by the immature believer.
2. The immature believer totally misunderstands the freedom of action of the mature believer.
3. The liberty of the mature believer causes confusion in the weak conscience. It can even be an occasion for sinning.
4. The mature believer tempts the immature believer. He causes some problems for the immature believers by participating in a doubtful futility.
5. The doubtful thing is only doubtful in the mind of the believer who is weak.
6. What is doubtful to their conscience is actually their liberty. There are a number of examples here.
7. The weak conscience does not have the doctrine to handle a doubtful activity. The mature believer tempts the weak believer by participating in a doubtful activity; it is only controversial in the mind of the weak believer. The mature believer understands what he is doing is not doubtful at all. They cannot discern the difference between liberty and sin and they cannot handle participation in a doubtful activity.

8. The activity and the mature believer become a stumbling block to the immature believer.
9. Lack of doctrine and a weak conscience that is defiled by involvement in doubtful activities (the conscience is only defiled when viewing doubtful activities). Either way the activity of the mature believer has become a spiritual distraction to the weak believer and a confusion to the immature believer.

Remember the stumbling block principle does not include catering to or allowing for legalism. We have an obligation to the weak believer who is positive, but not to the legalist.

The Legalist

1. The legalist will attempt to force taboos and standards on others. That is the way he operates.
2. The legalist is a consummate manipulator. They are busybodies; they have to be in everyone's business; otherwise, how could they control everyone.
3. They attempt to control the activities of others through bullying, criticism, maligning, whatever it takes; accusing.
4. Their worst legalism is to distort doctrine so that it confirms their own legalistic standards. This can come from the pulpit of a church. Fear, guilt and other things are used to manipulate and to control you. It is insidious. There are subtle changes in the grace procedure of rebound. Some little twist. You must conform to the mind of God before He forgives you. Rebound is the means by which you can become rehabilitated. How on earth can rebound be the means of forgiveness of God by something we can do, by something that we can think? It works the same way every time. I have this sin I really like and I am not sorry about it and I am going to do it again. The legalist says that you cannot be forgiven with that attitude. Rebound is not license to sin. God is faithful to forgive every time you name a sin. There is no pre-requisite or mental attitude thing that is a part of this. Rebound Revisited deals with this particular problem; the distortion of rebound. Overt sinning and sexual sinning are those which they emphasize, but they cannot wait to malign someone who has committed some other sin. This is not in some of the mainline churches but even in churches that teach sound doctrine.
5. The legalist is a purveyor of non-Biblical standards and a purveyor of mental attitude sins and of verbal sins, in order to manipulate and to control other believers.
6. You are never their stumbling block. They are not stumbling over you; they are their own stumbling block; they trip all over themselves.

7. They are anti-grace; they emphasize works; I am a good christian because I work for God; I am a good sinner because I am trying to lead them down the paths of righteousness, according to me. They have a works oriented Christianity.
8. You do not have to abstain from doubtful activities because of believers who are legalists because of their criticisms or ostracizing. So many believers today are in charge of so many other believers. Discipling, mentoring. But it is bullying and manipulating; babies leading babies.
9. To cater to the legalist promotes more legalism in the church. Capitulate to it leads to more; nothing turns a legalist on more than getting his way.
10. It infuses weak believers with their own self righteousness and judgmental attitudes; they branch out. The legalist has a taboo, a weak believer adheres to it, and he branches out on his own.
11. Legalism must never be encouraged; neither should it be an issue of or attacked directly by the mature believer. That simply hardens self righteousness. You don't play their game; you do not try to bully them; you leave them alone. Stay away from the legalist. Do not try to counter gossip, etc.

Paul presents an example of how to be a true stumbling block with the immature believer. The person with knowledge in v. 10 is you; it is not the person observing you. There is a word play in v. 10. The strong and the weak become synonymous. A strong weakling is the verbiage here.

Paul sets a stage here, and he sets up the stage and he places his actors in the city of Corinth and it takes place in a heathen temple where the mature believer enjoys a nice steak in the side section devoted to eating. There was an area of worship and the cultic practices took place, and there were animals slayed there for the gods. There were licentious pagan rites there for worship. Licentious feasting and the phallic cult and drinking as well. This area was definitely was prohibited by divine mandate.

The temple complex proper was no place for a believer. No reason for a believer to be in this situation. There is no reason to be in this temple area. When they see this, there is a conscience crisis.

Hooked up to this area was a restaurant where there was no religious activity. This other area was a market place to do business and the central gathering point where many business enterprises took place. Social life, business, the center of Corinth. This included the meat market for the meat sacrificed in the heathen temple. The extra meat was sold to various wholesalers or to other businesses. This was normally done to the owners of restaurants and to the one connected to the temple. It was a simple business practice. The immature believers saw this and were confused. The temple essentially made a little money on the side, and the owner of the restaurant owner sold it for a little higher price. If the meat is good, do you care where it came from? Of course not. The believers understood where the meat came from and it seemed natural to them to abstain from anything having to do with the heathen temple, including eating this meat.

The mature believer understood this and recognized that eating the meat at that restaurant or purchasing this meat was not a problem. Bad meat was not offered to the gods, so this meat was the best. Mature believers knew that this was the best place to go for a meal; immature believers felt that the meat was tainted by the cultic worship.

The enlightened believer; the weak believers (several of those). This is Paul setting the stage. A 2nd person plural and then we have a 2nd person singular in v. 10. The second reference is the believer with doctrine, with knowledge, eating some meat in the temple restaurant.

The weak believers without knowledge of doctrine might have a problem associating with the temple in any way. These are positive believers and they want to grow, but they are confused believers. They have separated from truly evil activities, but they cannot discern where the evil stops and the liberty begins. Their conscience, being weak, is defiled, because they cannot discern the difference.

We deal with other believers in certain circumstances; we must evaluate whether we are causing the conscience of a positive believer to be defiled; that is our difference; that is our judgment call. The person wants to be inculcated with doctrine. There is genuine doubt in the mind of the weak believer. They are not looking to impose legalistic views on you; they are confused and misled by what is going on. Many in the church have a knowledge of what is going on. This eating meat in a temple restaurant is just another place where division is occurring; it is typical when the immature believer is involved. Wherever an immature believer is involved, the strong believer must consider the weak believers under these circumstances.

This verse serves to illustrate how mature believers and weak believers interact and what sometimes must be done. Whatever the trend is, the weak conscience is strengthened. We can exacerbate the weakness.

We become the stumbling block of the immature believer in whatever situation of life that we happen to be in. Once again we must discern; they cannot. We must be able to see that our liberty is a stumbling block. They can only see the stumbling block.

The verse begins with the explanatory particle γαρ. Next is the 3rd class condition, which involves αοϋ+ the aorist active subjunctive (the subjunctive is the key). To see is the verb; the indefinite participle means anyone, someone. For if anyone sees you [2nd person singular] these are those who keep tabs on the patrons; monitoring the temple to make sure Christians are not found there. Maybe they just walk by and see. The connotation here is a violation of privacy; a believer who is shocked that anyone would go anywhere near the temple. Horaô means that they have their eyes on other believers concentrating on them, rather than on the message of the pastor. The subjunctive mood is the protasis of this 3rd class condition; it is a more probable future condition. In this case, the uncertainty is minimal. This is quite likely to happen. This whole scene is dependent upon the immature believer coming across the mature believer eating. This is like the Shakespearian fool being foolish and coming across someone and misunderstanding, and dominos fall, and his foolishness spreads throughout to the rest of the cast.

1Cor. 8:10

Lesson #444 Thursday November 16, 2006

In California visiting my family; before thanksgiving. Paul writes v. 10 as if it is out of a play and it is one believer on the road to tripping up another believer. A weak believer wanders by the temple restaurant, and he spies a believer in the restaurant eating meat. This is a believer who is well-known in the church of Corinth. Once one person has observed someone, then, they will inform everyone. The problem is simply being here at this restaurant hooked up to the temple, and it is a doubtful activity; they do not know if it is legitimate or not. So, with a weak conscience, they overreact. They get themselves worked up into an emotional state. They get themselves thinking and over thinking. They react to what is essentially a legitimate activity. This activity is a true liberty for anyone who desires to do it. This whole situation becomes a mess. A 3rd class condition is always indicated by a Greek condition. It is a conditional particle, which is also indicated by the verb. It is important as to what mood this verb is in. It is an aorist active subjunctive of horaô. This is almost a future certainty, but slightly doubtful. Horaô means to see, to catch sight of. The idea is a violation of privacy. It is somewhat of a gotcha. The person observing them has no idea of the privacy of the priesthood. The best thing to do in a situation like this is to just let it go.

The subject is the indefinite pronoun tis. This refers to the immature believer who is in the state of mental confusion. This is the believer with the weak conscience who cannot differentiate between sin and liberty. These are people who have not been believers for very long; they are babies, and they are easily confused. The observer associates such a person with a sin, and it is no ordinary sin, and it violates the necessity, in their minds, of separating from their old manner of life. If you take all of this into account, and they see this temple which they came out of, and they want nothing to do with that old life; and they are confused to find another believer inside the temple restaurant. This is a reasonable thing to be confused about.

Finally in this phrase, we have the direct object of the verb σὺ. You is the person; if someone catches sight of you. It is an activity that they are doubtful of. It is an activity that we have and it is not prohibited by the Scripture, but you may not realize that an immature believer observes you and cannot understand. If your eyes are focused where they should be focused, then you are not going to stumble over what another believer does.

The mature believer is irresponsible in this area; this is an irresponsible use of his liberty. The immature has made temple dining a doubtful activity. Two believers at odds; one with a liberty and he knows it is a liberty; and another who does not understand what is going on and does not know that it is a liberty. It is causing problems. They are not metabolizing doctrine. If you understand what is going on and if you can solve this minor problem in short order by just refraining from the activity, temporarily, that is the way to go.

The one who has knowledge in this verse is the person who is eating at the temple restaurant and you understand that it is really okay to eat there. A relaxed mental attitude is capacity for liberty. As a believer in Jesus Christ, no one should not be enjoying life.

Now, Bobby revises his opinion. The situation here is a believer eating at the temple cafeteria who does not realize what he ought to do. If he were more mature, the law of love would have already been applied. However, he did not apply the law of love, so this means he is not mature. We all need to realize that there are times when liberty is just not necessary. You simply need the maturity to handle your maturity right. The believer who is a stumbling block is a bit self-centered and does not realize that he is causing problems for the weaker believer.

Their weakness is strengthened instead of their strength is strengthened. There is always some area where we need to advance. This is a mature believer eating this meat, but he still has some areas of weakness and areas of darkness which have not been illuminated.

Bobby likes to see the same faces night after night; but it is important to realize that we have some sort of responsibility to those that we see in Bible class. We have a responsibility to others.

Bobby asked Bob if he would cover 1Corinthians again, and he said, "I may not have enough time left." Now Bobby knows why he said that.

In v. 10, we have the word gnôsis. This is information which has not been believed; it has not been mixed with faith. His liberty has blinded him to his responsibility. He needs other guidelines in his life. These immature believers will get a feel for what liberty is and the groundwork for the law of love.

What Needs to Happen Here?

1. The strong believer needs to apply the law of love.
2. The weaker believer needs to understand enough doctrine to gain some grace orientation and a relaxed mental attitude, and he needs to lose that taboos.
3. The strong must not block the weak from gaining a bit of doctrine.
4. The strong believer needs to apply some doctrine for the benefit of the immature believer. Normally, we think of doctrine being applied to ourselves, but here, doctrine is applied for someone else. Can you apply doctrine for the benefit of someone else?
5. The mature believer needs to be cognizant in applying the law of love. Love is a critical issue in the spiritual life. There is also some toleration involved; tolerate the immature believer.

6. This more mature believer is legitimate eating temple meat. However, he does so without discernment or concern for the weaker believer. Paul is coming down on this one with both feet.
7. Eating is a right thing and it is his genuine choice to do so; it is not sinful.
8. The mature believer is carrying on with no regard for anyone else's spiritual weakness. We as believers and believers who are growing to spiritual maturity, we have a tendency to think of ourselves primarily. There are those who are not where we are and we have no right to stand in their way. In some cases, all we need to do is to get away from them. Isn't it a pain that it deals with another believer?
9. So the weak believer is confused by a legitimate liberty that his conscience cannot fathom. His conscience cannot wrap his brain around it and he has become distracted. Should he eat or not? The immature believer sees the mature believer and wonders what he ought to do. It is like being tempted to do something like a younger brother seeing what an older brother does. This is a family relationship. We are brothers in that way.

His conscience is weak and his conscience is defiled, and his defiled conscience either reacts or it indulges in doubtful things. His first reaction may be criticizing, judging, maligning and then a whole host of mental attitude sins. These are things which Rom. 14:10 prohibit. This is a summary of the stumbling block. Why do you pass judgment on your brother? Or you, why do you despise your brother? For we will all stand before the judgment seat of God (Rom. 14:10). You see the brother involved in a doubtful activity and you react. Self righteousness always reacts with contempt, especially when it is something that you want to do.

What good is judging if we will have to stand in front of the ultimate judge? We may not be better than someone else. Now we are gossiping and judging and maligning. We will all stand before the Judgment Seat of Christ. We will not be rewarded for being self righteous.

So what happens to the weak believer who indulges? He cuts himself loose from his weak conscience. He decides, let's go with this. He may go to the temple and get involved in evil things. He participates in activities which are definitely sinful. This believer sees another believer involved in a legitimate activity. Now, all he sees is a believer involved in a temple activity. So, we also misinterprets the situation. He turns liberty into license and into sin. In the midst of violating his weak conscience. Then his defiled conscience can go in several ways. The legalist or the antinomian. They can take the same thing and go in opposite directions. The more mature believer participates in a legitimate activity, but it can set these others off in both directions.

1Cor. 8:10 For if somebody sees you, the one who has this knowledge, dining in an idol's temple, won't his weak conscience be encouraged [or, strengthened] to eat food offered to idols?

In California.

We will take a slightly different tact with this verse this morning. Think of yourself as having a great meal at this temple restaurant. It is the freshest meat in town; the priest burned part of the meat, kept some back for himself, and he sells some to the nearby temple restaurant. Maybe we are there with a date, or with our spouse or with friends. It is a great night to be out. We are the believer with some knowledge.

We could be sitting in any restaurant in Houston and doing something that other believers do not think that we ought to do. The believer with some doctrine has a clear understanding about what his legitimate liberty is. We have a more doctrinal standard in our souls as opposed to someone else who catches sight of us in the Temple. Someone is peaking into the restaurant. Not only are you mature, but there is something missing in you. You lack a certain ἐπίγνωσις knowledge that we should have. We are not just quite there in these areas. There is always more to learn or to metabolize. There is never enough doctrine in your soul and there is always room for more.

Every time we hear a doctrine, we learn a new aspect of it, and eventually, it will become inculcated in our souls, which is the purpose of the repetition which we go through, and it will be something that we can apply in our lives. Our weakness here is, we are oblivious to the believer with the weak conscience. This person is not even on our radar screen. Our liberty has taken precedence over all else, which is our weakness. That which we are free to do has blinded us to other responsibilities in life.

The scripture calls believers brothers because we are all a part of the royal family of God and, as in any nuclear family, we have responsibilities to those in our family. Some of us would like to be with our family and others would not. However, just think of what this is, is we are ignoring a duty or some attention that we ought to pay to another family member. We are unable to apply the law of love. You are unable to completely apply impersonal love. The immature believer can be nosey, irritating, obnoxious; but that does not relieve us of our responsibility.

Secondly, there is that someone, the immature believer who is in a state of mental confusion and they are in a position to stumble and they are going to stumble over us. This person has made your meal in the temple restaurant a doubtful activity; he does not know if it is right or wrong. He does know that the temple is not where he should be and he knows the meat you are eating comes from the temple. We all have freedom and we revel in that freedom; that freedom is part of our lives and we revel in that freedom. However, 1Cor. 8 is teaching us that our freedom is not absolute, even when it is legitimate.

We must continue to grow and continue to utilize the law of love. We do not have to strain to curb our liberty nor do we need to worry about our liberty. We simply need to develop impersonal love.

The weaker believer sees things which confuse them, they are unable to put it on hold to think about later after getting some doctrine into their souls. Now, we can put ourselves in between doctrine being taught and immature believers. There are many scenarios which are similar to this. There are all sorts of liberties which we can be involved in. Liberty is to be enjoyed; it is not sinful. However, you need to recognize that you can have an impact on someone who is an immature believer.

We are here to glorify God; that is our great purpose in life. We grow to spiritual maturity and the result is how we serve the Lord.

His weakness will be strengthened; not the doctrine in his soul, but his weakness will be strengthened. Without doctrine his conscience is weak and unstable. The weak believer is tempted to do the doubtful activity. He observes the more mature believer doing something which is doubtful, so he gets involved and he suffers from guilt for doing it. Doctrine is the only thing which strengthens the conscience.

There is a transition from weak to strong which occurs by epistemological rehabilitation. The more we are able to recognize a legitimate liberty and what will destroy us and what we need to stay away from.

You stumble over a stumbling block by watching them; by catching sight of them in a questionable place. Once you grow to maturity, then you have responsibility toward the weak believer. The weak believer is strengthened to eat things sacrificed to idols.

The verb here is οικοδομεω = to build up, to edify. This is an interesting use of a root word. It is a word that Paul used to describe the edification complex of the soul. In 1Cor. 3, it referred to the structure of the soul. The edification complex is what happens to the mature believer as he begins to advance spiritually. It means to build up; not the edification complex structure, but to build up weakness. It is the opposite of the standards of grace which are found in the edification complex. It is building weakness in the soul of the weak believer and it is also us who help in this regard.

The mature believer must always keep this in mind; do you really want those in your family to remain mired in immaturity. Liberty versus our license versus the gaining of maturity by the immature believer. The weak believer goes on a journey in these circumstances. He can go down a number of different roads. He can go from the choice of eating meat. However, he can then react in his own soul against what he has done, and this is a crisis of conscience. The other road he can take is to further indulge in activity which is wrong to indulge in. The antinomian trend comes into play in the second situation. For the weak believer, either moral or immoral degeneracy leads to a downward spiral.

There is a building up of defilement; and he reacts because he now believes that he has participated in sin. The amount of doctrine which needs to move through his stream of consciousness is not there. He cannot handle the situation in his own weak conscience.

4. You do not simply partake of a liberty when they distract others. The taboos are a good example. You must not partake of a liberty which defiles the immature believer's conscience.
5. Consideration of this believer demands an altering of one's legitimate liberty. You are not doing away with it; you are just setting it aside. Let's boil this situation down to its bare bones. The Bible does not say that it is wrong to eat meat sacrificed to idols. There is no prohibition of eating in the temple restaurant. There are no more dietary regulations from the Old Testament. There are no unclean meats any more. We can eat anything; eating it not an issue. For some, it is. For some, drinking an adult beverage is an issue. In the case here, eating in public view of those weak believers watching, it is better not to. Bobby hates to say any of this, as it violates his own concept of liberty. He does not like having his liberty taken away. The key is, we should not make ourselves the issue. We should not violate anyone's conscience.

If we are carnal, we cannot remove ourselves from the situation. Suddenly, this weak believer is going nowhere but down; this can be a contagious mental attitude which takes him down into legalism.

1Cor. 8:10 For if somebody sees you, the one who has this knowledge, dining in an idol's temple, won't his weak conscience be encouraged [or, strengthened] to eat food offered to idols?

You cannot take the stumbling block principles lightly. Their negative volition and their legalism is ruined by your knowledge. What is the knowledge which ruins another brother?

Through your knowledge is an irony. You know enough to recognize a liberty, but not enough to be able to keep from participating.

We must apply the law of love as well as the law of liberty. The problem here is an incomplete application by the mature believer. The problem is lack of enough doctrine. You are not to the point where you can utilize impersonal love. Bible doctrine is in fact the weak believer's only means. There is no other. You cannot hold the weak believer by the hand and lead them into the promised land, but you can lead them in the wrong direction. He must not get his eyes on you and you must not be a false issue to him.

We develop impersonal love, which is what it means when we speak of love edifying. Impersonal love is never invalidated no matter how lousy a person is.

We are not dealing with a real misuse of liberty, but something which is wrong in their eyes.

How to Deal with This Problem

1. Take into account the weakness of the other believer.
2. Have a relaxed mental attitude toward those who do not have the doctrine which you do; those who have a false application of the liberty which others have.

3. You must be motivated by the desire to see a weak believer become strong. That is desiring to see a family member become strong. You must desire to see a weak believer become strong.
4. You want to see someone grow under the freedom of grace rather than under slavery to legalism or to taboos. Always trying to please God by what we can do. Always in a mode of self righteousness. So we must have a desire under grace to see them grow.
5. That is when your liberty is in its proper perspective. Then you can really enjoy your liberty when it is appropriate. When you can apply personal live, you can enjoy anything.
6. The key is, do not make an issue of yourself. Grace orientation; humility. This is how we fulfill the principle of not becoming a stumbling block .

1Cor. 8:11 Then the weak person, the brother for whom Christ died, is ruined by your knowledge.

1Cor. 8:12 Now when you sin like this against the brothers and wound their weak conscience, you are sinning against Christ.

1Cor. 8:11

Lesson #447 Wednesday November 22, 2006

A mature believer needs to be circumspect in an activity which is completely legitimate. There seems to be a disconnect here, as it seems that, if it is legitimate, then who cares? However, we should be careful that this does not become a stumbling block to the weak.

1Cor. 8:9 But be careful that this right of yours in no way becomes a stumbling block to the weak.

V. 10 is how we become a stumbling block. The more mature believer has some knowledge, and someone else observes him in the idol's temple eating. This causes problems to his weak conscience. Won't he be build up in his weakness? Won't his weakness be exacerbated? He might opt for legalism, or he man follow an antinomian trend, and go in for more than simply eating in the idol's temple.

A liberty is a liberty and you don't necessarily remove your liberty altogether; but, sometimes you have to modify or temporarily suspend your liberty.

1Cor. 8:10 For if somebody sees you, the one who has this knowledge, dining in an idol's temple, won't his weak conscience be encouraged [or, strengthened] to eat food offered to idols?

The weak brother is ruined, which should give you an idea as to the gravity of the stumbling block. The warnings in vv. 11–12 indicate much more dire circumstances.

The liberty is what the mature believer does; the doubtfulness of it is from the point of view of the immature believer. One has to get them straightened out before proceeding and enjoying the liberty. It takes a lot of doctrine in the individual's soul to determine what to do and when to back off from a legitimate activity.

We are responsible for not getting in the way of the positive volition of a weak believer. The focus is on the application of doctrine it takes maturity and character on the part of the stronger believer. You have to be thoughtful and sensitive to another believer. You cannot afford to be oblivious to another believer. You must take into account their weakness. You cannot be impatient toward the weak believer or the immature believer. It is like the child who does not get it, and they ask the same question over and over again. The mature believer needs to be careful not to become impatient.

We are not obligated to ever capitulate to legalism. Impersonal love applies to legalism, but not suspending your liberty. Surrendering to legalism promotes legalism. The spiritual life is nothing apart from grace. This is why we never capitulate to legalism. You don't exacerbate legalism by rubbing someone's nose in it. It is so easy to indulge your liberty as a means to make a statement. Even with the legalist, the law of love must be applied. You might really get upset with someone who is self righteous and a jerk; but you still treat them with impersonal love. A legalist gets us out of fellowship if we react to them, and that is stupid to allow that. Nothing worse than being controlled, in some way, by a legalist, if we cannot control ourselves. Lowest common denominator principle. You can never force a change in legalistic thinking.

Our Influence over the Weak Believer

1. We have an influence for their benefit through prudence and careful evaluation of our personal activities.
2. You have an influence by not exposing the weak believer to a legitimate liberty which to them is a doubtful activity, that they cannot understand or deal with; it violates the conscience.
3. It is always our responsibility not to cause carnality; don't put people in a position which can get them out of fellowship. We are not to be a stumbling block.

Our Negative Influence over the Weak Believer

1. We can have a harmful influence, if we make an issue of ourselves instead of doctrine.
2. We become the stumbling block when we participate in 2 activities.

How far do we have to take this principle? How far do we have to go to protect these immature believers? When is it legitimate? When are we free to enjoy our liberties? There is the problem that there are always immature believers around and someone around you is going to view what you do as a doubtful activity. What is the point of having a liberty if you cannot indulge it. It becomes a liability.

Liberties are designed to be enjoyed, despite all the mixed up people around you. They are not designed to be completely put behind you. If they were forbidden by the Bible, they would offer protection for the believer. We are to beware not to become a stumbling block.

It might have been much easier if these liberties were described as sins, but Paul does not say that there is no spiritual benefit or loss in a liberty. A liberty when done in a right way, is valid.

At what point is a liberty acceptable in relation to the weak believer? Is it always verboten? How is it done right when the weak believers are in the vicinity? This is a difficult question.

When is a Liberty Legitimate?

1. When partaking of a liberty, are you confusing or distracting another believer who desires to advance.
2. The simple formula is this: if you are confusing or distracting, then you must abstain from a legitimate activity, at least in front of them.
3. You must consider their well-being; their spiritual advance.
4. According to this passage, that is our responsibility before the Lord.

Stumbling Block Principle

There is another side of this: is this other believer building his happiness upon your lack of liberty.

1. Are they enjoying the curtailing of your liberty? Is he imposing artificial standards, taboos and legalism to manipulate and control your activity?
2. Does this immature believer view this as an advancement of their self righteousness and keeping you in line with false standards.
3. If the spiritual life depended upon riding herd on you—if they make sure that you cannot enjoy some liberty that they don't want you to have.
4. We are never required to indulge legalistic thinking.
5. We are not authorized to make an issue of this. In some cases, you just try not to have contact with them. Don't give them an opening, and you don't have to confront them.
6. If the great legalists were not changed by our Lord, then what do you think you can do? You do not have to succumb to legalism. It takes a very mature believer to distinguish between legalism and the weak believer. The legalist is very good about hiding his legalism behind a vocabulary and a few lines.
7. Sometimes the believer takes morality as being the spiritual life. He tries to enforce certain thing on us, and tries to take away legitimate liberties.
8. The legalist and the immature believer sometimes get mixed in together and they are hard to distinguish sometimes. You treat both with impersonal love, but with the legalist, you do not cut off your activity. You owe the legalist no obligation to curb your activity, because he is at fault, not you. The immature believer is essentially sitting on a fence waiting to jump this or that way.

The immature believer is the believer who is interested in determining the truth and they are willing to follow the truth. They cannot always ascertain what is right and wrong. As a believer with knowledge, be willing to err on the side of caution. The trick is balance and you are determining when you are able to do this or that.

Let's say you make the distinction, and you realize that you are dealing with a legalist. The law of love still comes into play. The law of love for the legalist is not abrogated because they are a legalist. You can exercise your liberty, but not in a provocative way; you do not want to make them stumble. You are always wrong to flaunt it and further antagonize the legalist.

And now some are as confused now as they were before. This is why Bobby has gone over this many times in the past. You don't need to try to change the legalist with your great wisdom. Your only chance with them is to apply impersonal love.

The more mature you are, the better you can apply it. This test is often a test of your maturity, and it is sometimes a sacrifice to give up a liberty. It is not a sacrifice without compensation. No matter how many liberties are curbed, there is a compensation.

Stay away from legalism; don't exacerbate it; don't rub anyone's nose in it. We have to make these decisions and we must be able to discern.

Inevitably, this is a test that we will face on the road to maturity; at some point, this is going to be a test for us. We need to apply the principles that we know.

If you find yourself in the midst of legalism, then you need to remove yourself. If your liberty is a public situation, then you might have to curb it. Always be cognizant that you put it aside.

The law of supreme sacrifice means that we completely withdraw from a liberty. As a mature believer, we are going to have to make some sacrifices in our life.

Bobby has some examples, and wants to wind it up with an example. One of the great problems today for immature believers today is drinking an adult beverage. You go to dinner with someone who looks at drinking as sinful or, at least, doubtful. Bobby went to a seminary filled with these types. You have to be cautious and get to know them and get an idea if there is a problem. And, sometimes, you may have to enjoy a drink in private with those that you know it does not offend.

Even in a liberty, you must know to not overdo it. The scenarios get a lot more complex in real life than this example of drinking. If you must err, err on the side of caution.

1Cor. 8:11 Then the weak person, the brother for whom Christ died, is ruined by your knowledge.

1Cor. 8:12 Now when you sin like this against the brothers and wound their weak conscience, you are sinning against Christ.

1Cor. 8:

Lesson *none Thursday November 23, 2006

Thanksgiving; no Bible class

1Cor. 8:10–11

Lesson #448

Sunday 1 November 26, 2006

Once an immature believer trips over a stumbling block, he becomes distracted from spiritual growth. What happens when the immature believer stumbles over another believer? He can fall into whatever trend his old sin nature favors, e.g., legalism. The other way is to follow the trend of antinomianism. These are polar opposites, but they are trends which we each possess in our old sin natures.

When you stumble over another believer, you are going to be characterized by self righteousness (if your trend is toward legalism), and others will see that you are concerned about taboos and you are a manipulator and you want others to follow your false standards. This is called moral degeneracy. Anything which departs from the standards of God in your own life is degeneracy, even if very moral. Moral degeneracy is always removed from the plan of God. God is always in charge and in control of everything in your life. You can never depart from the grace of God. Legalism is a fast track to carnality and legalism. The legalist tries to please God with his own works and his own dynamics. God is pleased when we utilize the assets which He has given us. The grace believer pleases God by depending upon the assets which God has given him. This is how you please God and this is how you glorify God. The issue is your own power versus God's power. It is God's power which accomplishes His plan. The road to legalism begins when the immature believer catches sight of the mature believer participating in a legitimate activity, which confuses the immature believer. This is an activity not prohibited by the Word of God. It is viewed from the weak conscience of the believer who observes what is going on as doubtful; he doesn't know if it is a sin or not. No ability to discern whether this activity is legitimate or not.

The conscience thinks that maybe there is a sin here, but it is unsure; and it kicks into revolt mode. His conscience is defiled. With a defiled conscience, the immature believer begins to react. He reacts with shock, dismay and guilt. Then he develops a shell in his guilt and reaction. These are taboos and they are against legitimate liberty.

The other direction the immature believer can go in is after the trend of antinomianism, and it is characterized by the opposite of self righteousness. It is cutting oneself loose from the enforcement of the conscience, to the exclusion of the spiritual life. As long as you do not usurp your spiritual life, you are fine as a believer. If the activity does not take you out of fellowship, it is okay. However, this believer allows the liberty of another believer to become an excuse for him to take things a little further. He takes this liberty and converts it into license, for things that are not just doubtful, but to activities are outright wrong.

The immature believer observes the eating of the sacrificed meat is okay; he might join them in the temple for such a meal; but, then he falls into more temple activities. They know there is a problem with what they are doing and they react in guilt and then they decide to change their evil ways. Changing your evil ways as a modus operandi of self righteousness is no better than becoming a degenerate antinomian.

This passage calls for a believer to be sensitive to other believers, and to not confuse the issues. The mature believer, facing the idea that he might become a stumbling block, then realizes that he must pull back.

There is a key question, in partaking of a liberty, are you distracting a believer who desires growing in grace and knowledge of our Lord? You must be able to separate a legitimate activity from that which is a sin. In any case, you must consider the spiritual well-being of a fellow-believer.

However, bear in mind that you are never required to indulge legalistic doctrine or legalistic thinking. The legalist is his own worst enemy. You may have started the road to legalism, but these legalists make their own problems.

Questions to Ask Yourself

1. Does the immature believer impose illegitimate taboos or restraints on legitimate activities? This is a desire not to advance but to control.
2. Does this person look at advancement in the spiritual life in terms of advancing self righteousness and further keeping us in line? Will they malign and gossip about you? Will they ostracize you?
3. Is his spiritual life predicated on manipulating and controlling what he considers doubtful activities in your life.

You are not obligated to curb a legitimate liberty to indulge someone's self righteousness. However, impersonal love is required to be given toward all. Impersonal love is different from the law of love. Is the person positive but immature? Is the person immature, negative toward doctrine and legalistic, wanting to control your life? The legalist plots his own advance. If we are unsure which way or what type of believer we are dealing with; if we must err, always err on the side of caution and the law of love. Love always supercedes liberty in the stumbling block principle. It is easy to have personal love for those who follow your trend of the old sin nature. However, those on the opposite end are inherently obnoxious to you.

Profile of the Weak Believer:

He is ignorant, unstable, emotional, but also positive. The first 3 adjectives describe the immature believer; but the last means that we are talking about a person who wants to advance. This weak believer has little doctrine with which to resist the temptation of antinomianism or legalism. They are also affected by those who are around them. This person is confused as to the procedures, e.g., rebound; or confused about the means of the Christian life. These are things which they must not be deterred from. This weak believer is the one who is in danger of legalistic influence against the grace oriented life.

He is prone to excesses when participating in a liberty. You don't want to drive such a one away from the Christian way of life.

1Cor. 8:10 For if somebody sees you, the one who has this knowledge, dining in an idol's temple, won't his weak conscience be encouraged to eat food offered to idols?

Απολλυμι = to destroy, to ruin, to abolish; to render useless; to kill, to declare that one be put to death. Strong's #622.

Active voice—our knowledge is the problem. We want to think that people ruin themselves because of bad decisions and their negativity; and that is true; but our focus here is on our effect upon such a one.

We can be influenced by other believers; a child is definitely influenced by the parent, whether that parent rails against the behavior or not. They often do what you do, not what you say, if there is a discrepancy. Make the spiritual advance of another person their option. Don't you allow them to use you as their excuse to go bad.

The final phrase refers to the brother, for whose sake Christ died. There is a tremendous impact indicated by these words.

1Cor. 8:11 Then the weak person, the brother for whom Christ died, is ruined by your knowledge.

1Cor. 8:11–12

Lesson #449

Sunday 2 November 26, 2006

Paul does not want us to think that this is anything but serious; this is a person for whom Christ died. The gravity of this one phrase should not be ignored. Do not blow this one; things are too serious. This immature believer who can stumble over you who remains immature if he stumbles over you. For whom Christ died are mandated to glorify Christ in our bodies. They cannot build an edification complex structure; they cannot grow while distracted. They have an option to grow on their own; but we must keep them from going too far afield. This person, this immature believer will not properly represent the Lord on earth as an ambassador; his part is nullified.

We are now playing with one less member of the team; our purpose is not to knock out our own players. You take care of those on your team, and you protect them. You keep from allowing them to stumble over you. There is nothing honorable or good about opposing God's plan in this way.

We often think that if we fail to personally grow or to take in doctrine, that is the way that we screw up our spiritual life; but when we take out someone else on our team, then we lose them.

Sinnyng against the brothers and wounding their conscience sins against Christ. This is a direct statement, a serious warning to the mature believer. We all have a tendency to be self-centered and self-indulgent. The only way around this is to have it kicked out of us by the grace of God. Here is the warning: consider someone else besides yourself. We are the strong believer and we must bear in mind the consequences of our liberty, even when it is a legitimate act. Why should you give it up for some fool who doesn't understand? This is because you are a stumbling block for a person for whom Christ died. It is a sin against Christ.

Destroying the spiritual advance of the weak believer. In the eye of the immature believer, our legitimate activity is illegitimate. In their minds, not only is it doubtful, but it is also a sin. In this case, it is a Corinthian just coming out of the heathen temple, and they were once steeped in this heathenism. We say it is okay, and it can still derail another believer.

The participation in a temple meal causes some to confuse issues; one cannot discern from eating a meal in the demon temple and other activities in the same place. The other person might have his conscience seared if he participates, and remains out of fellowship because of this. As a strong believer, we must consider the weak believer and engaging in doubtful activity before him. We have responsibilities; we have obligations; we must shoulder our obligations.

1Cor. 8:11 Then the weak person, the brother for whom Christ died, is ruined by your knowledge.

Ουτος = in this way. When the strong believer maintains his freedom to participate, he sometimes wounds the conscience of the weak believer. We can do a much greater act of charity by applying the law of love; we allow the other believer to advance spiritually just like we do. The responsibility is on them; we are not in the way and we do not cause them to go astray. A legitimate liberty has become a sin, in some way.

The legitimate activity is no longer a legitimate activity, but it is a sin to the one creating the stumbling block, as it is seen as sin by the weak believer. When we are out of fellowship, we can no longer metabolize doctrine. This is a two-edged sword. We have chopped off our own spiritual life; we have actually sinned against this brother because of what we have done. This is also very sobering. This becomes a problem for us as it is them the weak believer. The weak believer's conscience is wounded.

The verb here is τύπτω = to beat, to strike, to brutalize. This is what is done to the conscience of the weaker believer. Present participle. You don't just hit them, but you continue the beating. This is a prolonged, relentless beating.

Several metaphors used here: the conscience is defiled; the stumbling block leads a person down the wrong path. The immature believer's conscience is defiled. His conscience is violated and he goes out of fellowship. Here, the conscience is beaten down. Notice the order of the metaphors and how they build in intensity.

The Results of Engaging in Doubtful Activity

1. Spiritual advance is severely interrupted; τύπτω tells us this.

2. Legalism becomes the state of mind.
3. Antinomianism becomes a standard of activity. We beat them back into the temple. We come full circle and right back into the temple in reversionism.
4. Either way they go, the result is reversionism.

Paul called the weak believer ναπιος = a child, a baby. A child needs careful care; they cannot just be beat. Understand that the beating here is the immature believer eating things sacrificed to idols. It is the violation of their own conscience. That is the beating. It is the cutting loose of the conscience. The weak conscience believes that the eating is wrong, but does it anyway. Whatever is not of faith is sin. The weaker believer can reside in constant carnality which can lead to reversionism, which is as abusive as things can be for a soul. This shows a callous disregard for a weak believer. If you wouldn't treat a dog this way, why would you treat someone of your own family this way?

Impersonal love is the foundation for the Christian life; we have the mandate to give love to all, which is the foundation for the law of love. We apply a little tender love, so that we do not kick them into reversionism. Do you see why the law of love is for the mature believer? Impersonal love is part of the repertoire of the mature believer. This is a sin in the strong believer and it is a very explicit type of sin. You sin against Christ when you beat another believer, as that believer is in union with Christ. First comes personal love for God in the edification complex; then comes impersonal love toward all mankind. That impersonal love is a result of personal love for God. If we don't have personal love for God and occupation with Christ, then we end up beating the weak believer. We do not want to sin against Christ in this way.

1Cor. 8:12 Now when you sin like this against the brothers and wound their weak conscience, you are sinning against Christ.

1Cor. 8:

Lesson #450 Wednesday November 29, 2006

Bobby's going to complete this chapter tonite. We don't like to think about this chapter much, unless it deals with a person who is close to us or a family member, but it is for all young Christians around us.

Paul, right from the beginning, gave the solution. We would expect the solution to occur at the end, after giving the ramifications of the problems. Then there is the stumbling block principle, and then Paul gives the application, which is the law of love, the final application of v. 13.

Paul wants you to recognize the effect which a legitimate activity can have on a weak, young believer. The growing believer does not have the norms and standards in his conscience to discern or understand what is allowed and what is not; and this might cause this person to go the antinomian route, cutting himself completely loose from his conscience; or he can go the legalistic route, developing false standards. He can go in for great legalism.

1Cor. 8:11 Then the weak person, the brother for whom Christ died, is ruined by your knowledge.

This is not something which merely wounds the weak, but it is continued assaults on his conscience. He has great difficulty recovering from this consistent beating. The idea is, he thinks back on what he has observed and it continually throws him off track. Bobby says it is like the battered wife which keeps going back for more...co-dependent.

What does it mean in this verse to sin against Christ? Think back to the law of love and love is one of the upper floors of the edification complex. First is personal love for God through knowledge gained through God's grace and love. This is personal love for God or reciprocal love. We love because He first loved us. With this personal love comes, eventually, impersonal love for all mankind. You can't have one without the personal love first. Then comes the law of love from this chapter, so that we are not a stumbling block. The law of love is the result of having impersonal love for all mankind.

Summary

1. In the stumbling block problem, there is no law of love being applied.
2. That means that there is no impersonal love in the soul; that must be in the soul to apply the law of love.
3. Impersonal love does not develop without personal love for God.
4. Therefore, personal love for God (occupation with Christ) has not been fully developed. This is the shortfall of knowledge which this chapter discussed. This means that you are not applying the law of love.
5. The lack of love for a fellow believer indicates lack of impersonal love, lack of love for God Himself, and lack of occupation with Christ. You know your liberty, but you don't know love; that is one-sided and self-centered.
6. The lack of the law of love is a sin in itself.

A Second Summation

1. When you do not apply the law of love to a fellow believer, a weaker believer and you cause him to stumble, it is a sin. It is not the liberty but the failure to apply the law of love which is a sin.
2. Why is it a sin? Because lack of applying the law of love indicates no love for Christ. Can't have one without the other. This is an indication as to how far you have advanced in the Christian life.
3. No love for Christ is a sin; no fellowship, no metabolizing doctrine; we are in carnality; we are in a state of carnality.
4. No love for the immature believer means no love for Christ. No impersonal love and no law of love, which indicates that there was no love for Christ.
5. That is a sin against Christ, as connected. Bobby is connecting the dots here. It is the sin of failing to apply the law of love.
6. It is failure to build the upper floors of the edification complex.
7. This means that the more mature believer is himself sputting in his advance.

1Cor. 8:12 Now when you sin like this against the brothers and wound their weak conscience, you are sinning against Christ.

V. 13 is the application of the law of love. If to keep another believer from stumbling, I would have to stop eating meat, then that is fine. However, this is not a brief for becoming a vegetarian. This is an hyperbolic statement. Paul is exaggerating for effect. What Paul is saying here is not a hard and fast rule for all time. The law of love does not mean that you must forever forgo something which you love to do. That is not what Paul is saying; he is saying that, if there is a problem, then we would not do it. Love always takes precedence over liberty when a fellow believer is in peril.

Paul is willing even to go to the law of supreme sacrifice, which allows us to go inside the soul to see the most mature believer who has ever lived. We will never be Apostles, which Bobby will explain in the Doctrine of Apostleship, and explain that there have been no Apostles since 96 A.D.

διοτιερ = therefore, for these very reasons, for this very reason.

These are the reasons:

1. To avoid sinning against Christ. Isn't every sin against Christ? In one sense, yes. But this sin encompasses the entire spiritual life. Bobby got so excited by love edifies at the beginning of this chapter, and now we see how it is all tied together. If you don't get this, you haven't grown much; you don't have the basic personal love for Jesus Christ.
2. To avoid halting the advance of the immature believer; that is love. We don't ever want to stand in the way of the advance of another believer.
3. An application of the law of love toward the immature believer.
4. To continue our own spiritual advance.

The practical view begins in the simple 1st class condition, which makes the assumption that something is true. The conditional assumes the reality of the premise. If food causes my brother to stumble... This is a particular case; it is a real case. The eating causes the immature believer to be continually to have a defiled conscience. This does not mean that we kowtow to the legalism of some believer or believers. We don't try to impose our false standards upon them. Now the Lord is the Spirit, and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom (2Cor. 3:17). This verse, in the 3rd century, convinced them that the Holy Spirit is a member of the Trinity.

When filled with the Holy Spirit, we always have liberty. What is not sin is liberty. Paul will never partake of a liberty if there is a real danger of distracting the immature believer from doctrine. Paul would rather never eat meat again, if it causes his brother to stumble. This is the law of love taking precedence over liberty. Paul will not defile the conscience of the positive but weak believer. Never eat the meat if the brother is going to stumble. If you don't have to apply the law of love to a legalist, this does not abrogate impersonal love for all mankind.

Bottom line principle, if Paul sees no danger to a positive believer in eating or if he is faced with merely legalistic criticism, Paul will use his liberty and eat without qualms. If there is any doubt, he will not eat meat.

This is a hyperbolic statement. Paul says that he will never eat meat here. 1Cor. 10:25–26: Eat anything which is in the meat market without asking questions for conscience sake. The weak believer cannot discern liberty from sin. For the earth is the Lord's and all that it contains; all meat and all sustenance is provided by God for our sustenance and for our enjoyment. When we fail to have reciprocal love, we cannot apply the law of love. If one of the unbelievers invites you to dinner and you are disposed to go, eat whatever is set before you without raising any question on the ground of conscience. You can't make them your closest pals. But eating with them is not a problem with what you eat. The problem with the Corinthian believers is that they ate with believers and had conscience problems. All of this liberty is superceded by this stumbling block principle. The law of love is an enduring principle of the Christian life. We might want to blow it off, but we can't, even if we don't like their personalities.

You don't want the weak believer to engage in doubtful activities or to stumble because of them. When you abuse a liberty, you have taken license and you have sinned against Christ. This is a principle which is left to everyone's conscience. This is not something that we can list in a straightline diagram; when A happens, then you do B.

The law of love is one of the great applications of doctrine to the Christian way of life. We should realize that this stumbling block principle is a very difficult principle. When we pass a test, there is great blessing at the end of that road. Liberties are made to be enjoyed and the opportunity will present itself where you are not a stumbling block. You don't have to forever give up this liberty.

If you do not apply the law of love, you might end up having a hand in the destructive path a weak believer might take. Any application of the spiritual life means that you understand the problem and now you have the solution.

1Cor. 8:13 Therefore, if food causes my brother to fall, I will never again eat meat, so that I won't cause my brother to fall.

Lesson #451

Thursday November 30, 2006

It is by comparing the manuscripts that we can be so certain that we are dealing with the Word of God; there are 5000 variants and not one of them affects the doctrine of Scripture. These manuscripts are line after line of Greek (or Hebrew in the Old Testament). They were not broken down into chapters or verses originally. The breakup of chapters and verses are superimposed upon the books of the Bible. The one who divided the book of 1Corinthians did a fairly good job. However the transition between 8 and 9, there is a closer connection. Chapter 9 is a continuation of the law of love; and Paul will get into the law of supreme sacrifice in 1Cor. 9.

Paul will expand the law of love even into very legitimate activities. There might be more restraints a coming—severe restraints. In chapter 8, the Corinthians were the example; in chapter 9, Paul will be the subject; he will begin using the 1st person masculine singular. He will speak of other Apostles as well, but he will use himself as an example. He will let them know that even he is not exempt from forgoing a few rights. Who else would have greater liberty or better understand his liberty than an apostle? But Paul faced more restraints than the run of the mill believer. As a leader and as an apostle, he has an obligation. This is a super-obligation. Some of us may be concerned that we will have to make some major sacrifices ourselves. Paul makes it clear that he is guided completely by the law of love, for the sake of the gospel and the sake of the teaching of doctrine. We don't have to sacrifice our liberties all of the time, and other times that we have to partake of these liberties freely. For Paul, there is no deviation and no letup in his daily life. What is the reason for him above all people to supremely sacrifice so much in his life. The answer is, grace. Paul is teaching grace; he is the apostle of grace. By some of the things which he forgoes, others will see the grace of God in logistics and in other areas. The law of supreme sacrifice is about revealing grace and taking grace further than it has ever gone. It goes almost to a surreal realm. Paul goes way above and beyond even of that he would ask the Corinthians. Paul would rather die is the statement, than ever be a stumbling block for anyone for any reason.

Bobby's given all of the laws before, and he said he would cover it later, which is now. The law of supreme sacrifice is an integral part of the next two chapters.

Supreme Sacrifice

1. Supreme sacrifice is directed toward God, and not toward man, like the law of love.
2. It is the highest dedication to the Lord that a believer can express in every respect, which is why it is directed toward God.
3. Although it is directed toward God, the results of the sacrifice hugely affect other believers and unbelievers, which is the purpose of this sacrifice.
4. The supreme sacrifice involves the complete abandonment of legitimate functions in life. This is not a temporary situation.
5. The purpose of such a surrender is to more diligently serve the Lord in a more specialized capacity. This is the most specialized capacity, which is the gift and office of apostleship. He is the apostle of grace, the apostle of the mystery doctrine, the apostle to the gentiles. We are indebted to him greatly. Paul was integral to everything that we know about Christ and about Bible doctrine. So much is from Paul; that was his specialized capacity.
6. This doctrine only applies to just a very few believers. It does not generally apply to the Christian life. Only a handful of believers ever live under this law.
7. This is a strict doctrinal application made by a very mature believer. Immature believers cannot operate under this law (and you think there is a reason not to mature). We are studying this because it is here and there is application to us.

8. This is strict application of some doctrine made by a very mature believer. Most of us will have temporary abstinence in our lives; this is permanent. Despite this, Paul was one of the happiest and most content men. His circumstances were terrible, and yet he was extremely happy. No one has ever existed under these conditions before. Paul had been persecuted, brutalized, stoned, etc. and he was happy.
9. What he sacrificed was often not even a doubtful activity. Recall what the Corinthians were asked to sacrifice were doubtful things, but, for him, it is not doubtful.
10. Marriage is a legitimate activity, with regulations and rules, but it is not doubtful; however, it was part of Paul's supreme sacrifice.

At a very young age, Paul was a Hebrew of Hebrews; very high up. Pharisees were supposed to have wives, which suggests that he had a wife at one point? Is he a widower? Did his wife desert him? A wife would have been a great encumbrance to his missionary work and teaching. He did not take a wife, although he had every right to. A man of Paul's genius and accomplishments would have seemed to be very attractive to some women. He abstained from an activity that could never be called doubtful. Commissioned by Jesus Christ Himself, which Paul took very seriously.

11. We will probably never have to live under the law of supreme sacrifice.
12. We should be already able to tell that this is an abnormal way of life in anyone's book. It is not suited for very many people

This chapter cannot be used for the purpose of all of those who have gone without a husband and wife. Most could do exactly the same thing without doing without.

Okay, why do we deal with this subject if we don't live under the law of supreme sacrifice. However, there will be an application to us.

13. There are some who live under this law. Missionaries, who often must live in primitive conditions of the missionary field. Timothy someone lives in appalling conditions and it takes several days of canoes and walking to get to where she has a ministry. A missionary lives under the conditions of another nation, as
14. An evangelist may give up a close family life for being on the road all the time.

Rick Hughes, for instance, has missed out a lot of the growth of his own children, even though he loves children. That is his supreme sacrifice. What about a pastor teacher? A pastor may have to abstain from some normal activities, so the pastor does not always live the normal life that others have. Most pastors do not have to live under the law of supreme sacrifice. Some sacrifices to be made. A wife can be a great help to a pastor teacher, which is not the case for Paul. For Paul, a wife would be a responsibility that he could not afford. A pastor would not necessarily abstain from marriage. Scripture commends marriage for a pastor in Timothy 3:2.

15. The issue motivating supreme sacrifice is always evangelism and the spiritual growth of the individual believer. We will see that supreme sacrifice is often in a leadership position.
16. Supreme sacrifice is a super-application of the law of love and of the law of expediency. The law of expediency is you abstain from activities which may offend or distract from the gospel.
17. Love and expediency are directed toward people, supreme sacrifice toward God.
18. They can be applied by the average believer

This gift fits Paul's lifestyle perfectly. We are not to apply this to areas which are doubtful.

1Cor. 9 Introduction

Lesson #452

Sunday 1 December 3, 2006

Christmas music celebrates the greatest event of human history, when Jesus Christ entered into this world in the hypostatic union, saving all mankind.

Paul changes his approach in chapter 9 and becomes very personal in this chapter. He becomes an example for all of us. We see what is possible in the spiritual life. Paul has pointed out previous to this that the Corinthian believers have failed to advance spiritually and he has told them how to advance. Some believers in Corinth had kept close contact with the world that they were a part of; there was sexual immorality in Corinth; there were Sectarian divisions within the church; there were believers hauling other believers into court in front of the entire community.

In chapter 9, Paul addresses the Corinthians, and us, indirectly, concerning his own life. We will again see the law of love and the law of liberty in this chapter, even though these terms will make some of us cringe.

There is an additional law in this chapter: the law of supreme sacrifice. We will walk away from this study understanding what this means to us. Paul goes way beyond what any believer does in the law of love. Paul has all the same liberties as do any of the Corinthians as do any of us. Paul's self-denial is not for bragging rites; he is not presenting himself as an example. Paul is a teacher, and he will use himself as an example to teach. Paul will take the bit in his teeth, so to speak, and reveal things in his life, and he will teach grace to these immature believers. He teaches grace and doctrinal orientation as the bedrock. Without impersonal love in our soul, that we have built in the edification complex, we cannot function as mature believers in this life.

Paul's love is so great, he will endure things so great that we cannot even imagine. In 2Corinthians, we will come across quite a list of what Paul has endured. Paul build impersonal love as a part of the edification complex structure in his soul. His supreme sacrifice allows him to focus more fully on his mission and on his ministry. His personal life takes a distance second place. In his self-denial, Paul is then capable of accomplishing the great purpose which God set for him. When Christ came to him, Paul realized how mixed up he was persecuting Christians.

He expresses the highest dedication to the Lord through the law of supreme sacrifice, which is directed toward God, and not toward man. It involves the abandonment of a completely legitimate function or functions in life. That in itself should wake us up. These are things that we all do, and take for granted; and Paul forgoes them. He does this to more diligently to serve the Lord in a more specialized capacity. Paul's great sacrifice is his purpose, which is to bring the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ to the world. Often the sacrifices which he has to make were things which are not even doubtful activities. These are things which are not doubtful to anyone. They are normal, legitimate activities, like marriage. Paul never took a wife as an Apostle, as does every believer in Jesus Christ, as does every human being; that is normal, which is how Scripture describes it. It is a blessing for mankind to be married (although some are married and think that they are in the supreme sacrifice in order to stay in this marriage).

There is some speculation that Paul was married at one time, as he was a pharisee from a very young age, and people had to be married in order to become pharisees. However, we don't know what happened, whether he was or not, whether his wife died or left him when he became a believer, or anything else. Paul was not single because of being a homo. A wife for him would have been a great encumbrance to his ministry.

Even unbelievers could not deny his right to marriage. Paul was even criticized by some for not being married, by those who wanted to discredit his apostleship and him. Paul received criticism for almost anything that he did. Paul receives criticism for an area where he should have never been criticized. They criticized his great mission in life. We are not a stumbling block to those who criticize your spiritual advance.

This doctrine of supreme sacrifice only applies to a very few people. It does not generally apply. There are times when it might apply in specific areas to anyone. This is a strict, doctrinal application made by a very mature believer. This requires some great maturity to understand first where it is necessary, and then to be able to determine to make that call.

The law of supreme sacrifice means obstinance in some area of life which is completely legitimate. Paul can eat things sacrificed to idols. He may not have done so in Corinth, but this does not mean that he abstained in every city. Paul made decisions to abstain in certain areas where we would never make a decision to abstain in.

It is obvious that there are reasons for Paul to abstain in a normal life, since he was doing so much. However, what about today? A missionary chooses to go to an area which is not nearly as pleasant as we find here in the US, and they often live in a culture which is not just difficult, compared to what we enjoy here, but even hostile toward them. There are many compensations to this loss, one of which is seeing many people come to Christ in an area where no one has been before.

An evangelist is a traveler, who stays on the road, who may miss a close family life, which is legitimate. He must go on the road in order to find those who want to hear the gospel.

The pastor teacher may forgo many normal activities in order to study and teach. In that deprivation, there is great satisfaction and reward in other areas. Don't ever feel sorry for any person who has forgone this or that legitimate activity in order to function within their spiritual gift.

The chapter itself. Paul uses a great literary device in this chapter; he uses hyperbole; he exaggerates in order to make a point. It doesn't make this any more or less accurate. Paul truly lives under the law of supreme sacrifice under his own choice, but he knows not all believers must live like him. We should never be a stumbling block to anyone or a distraction of the presentation of the gospel to anyone. This grabs our attention. You cannot hear of what Paul has endured by way of deprivation, and not be profoundly affected. The abnormal lifestyle which Paul lives under perfectly fits the gift of Apostleship. Paul is not abnormal; he is not an abnormal person; he simply lives an abnormal lifestyle. His lifestyle and mission does not fit us, but the application does.

This entire chapter applies to all believers, and it is a heightened example of the law of love for us. What we will see and hear is not theoretical doctrine simply because it is so extreme. There is no such thing as theoretical doctrine. Doctrine is not speculative or theoretical. Looking at the principles of the Bible might be looked at in an abstract and philosophical way, but that is not how it is to be understood. However, the Bible is absolute truth.

Bobby has seen people taking reams of notes, and for 50 years, there was a tremendous amount of doctrine dispensed from this pulpit. However, if they put these notebooks on the shelf and make no application. All doctrine represents the applications and mandates through his Word. Is Bobby there for entertainment? Go to a movie, a concern, get involved in your favorite hobby, but don't expect it from Bobby. 4 hours from his pulpit a week allow us to get through the week of human viewpoint. What we get from his pulpit is our only line of defense against all of the human viewpoint that we face day after day.

Paul is making this application to himself, and not to the Corinthians. Paul always errs on the side of unmitigated abstinence. Paul would rather cut off his arm that obstruct someone from seeing the gospel of our Lord.

1Cor. 9:1

Lesson #453

Sunday 2 December 3, 2006

We do not know how God taught Paul; we don't know what means that God used. But we do know that what Paul has written has been kept by the Holy Spirit, and is accurate in all respects. Paul, wherever he happened to alight, he would write, perhaps on velum; and he wants to say exactly the right thing in exactly the right way. Suddenly it dawns on him, I just wrote chapter 8 about how the Corinthians should not be stumbling blocks, and how can I hammer this home to them? And he decides to use himself as an example. He wants to cement these concepts in their minds, and he uses himself as an illustration. He uses his life in general, and we have just seen the law of supreme sacrifice in the last hour. We know this, as Paul used the 1st person pronoun extensively in this chapter. This chapter gives specific insights as to how Paul lived his life and how he applied doctrine in his own life. We get to see his thought process and we get to see what makes him tick, and how doctrine cannot be corrupted. We are going to come away from the study of this chapter with an understanding that there is no compromise of doctrine in the life of Paul.

Now we will get off track, we will make mistakes; and there should never be a compromise in the sense where we always know what the truth is. We always know what the real guide for our life is. No matter where we go in life and no matter what kind of trouble we get into, we know what the guide is. There is no compromise in Paul's soul. He proves it by the way he lives.

Let's get into the background of this chapter. Everywhere that Paul went, and he went all over the ancient world, the middle east, Mesopotamia, moving around constantly. Everywhere he went, and every step that he took, he was dogged by legalists. They harassed him; they heckled him, they stoned him, they beat him, they whipped him. They hated the doctrine of grace, as sadly so many do. In some circles, the gospel is called easy believism. As if there was anything easy about providing salvation for us. Believers who want to do something will come after believers who are grace oriented every time. A lot of these were Jews steeped in the Mosaic Law. Paul had to bring the message of grace to all who would hear it. But everywhere he went, they dogged him. Grace threatened their pre-conceived notions of pleasing God. It took them out of the salvation equation. It was all up to them, in their own minds. They wanted the kudos of spiritual life; they wanted the world to know that they were great keepers of the Mosaic Law, even though many of them were not even saved. They were too arrogant to allow for the grace of God in their life. You can be too arrogant to allow the grace of God to work in your life.

They denied even that Paul was an Apostle, in order to discredit his message. If you are grace oriented, you can never be discredited, no matter what anyone else says about you. These legalist sought to discredit Paul.

Paul makes an απολογία, which is a defense of the faith. It departs from Bible doctrine, and sometimes that defense is necessary in order to bring the gospel to someone who is negative. Called apologetics, where we talk to unbelievers in terms that they understand. Paul will use this approach to defend himself and his ministry. He must show how the Lord takes care of him, even though he chooses to live in great deprivation. Logistical grace is evident in every step that he takes.

Paul could do things that we could only imagine; many were flashy temporary gifts, but they were used in order to gain a hearing; this way he could say, "I am a messenger from Jesus Christ." He did what he did in the power of the Spirit, but he always went to the gospel. Grace orientation first. When you can apply impersonal love to all mankind, then you can apply the law of love when it is necessary and appropriate.

There are about 120,000 Americans in a place where none of us would want to be. These men sacrifice their time with their families, the comforts of home, and some even make the greatest sacrifice. We have great soldiers in this country who can accomplish the mission they are given. This is living the law of supreme sacrifice for us. The Corinthians may ignore it, but Paul is going to make certain that they see it.

Paul begins this chapter with 4 though provoking questions.

1. Am I not free?
2. Am I not an apostle?
3. Have I not seen Jesus our Lord [in the flesh]?
4. Are you not our work in Christ ?

An interrogative sentence with the negative ουκ, which demands a positive answer...am I not...? And the Greek demands that we say, you are this or that. Each of the 4 questions demand an affirmative answer. He has been gone from Corinth for some time, so he reintroduces himself to this group.

Ελευθερος = freedom, independence, not in a state of being bound up. Thayer: 1) freeborn; 1a) in a civil sense, one who is not a slave; 1b) of one who ceases to be a slave, freed, manumitted; 2) free, exempt, unrestrained, not bound by an obligation; 3) in an ethical sense: free from the yoke of the Mosaic Law.

Paul is not bound as a Christian, but this is something which he has chosen. He is not required to do this; he does not have to live as he does. First, Paul remains single, even though he has every right to be married. He takes no wages from anyone in his ministry. Nowhere does he allow anyone to pay him. He is free from the Mosaic Law, and yet he lives under the Mosaic Law, even though he does not have to. He does this for the purpose of evangelism and doctrine. There is nothing wrong with him living under the Mosaic Law, as he wants to reach the Jews. He wants to make sure that the transition is clear to those he teaches, although he obeys it himself. He lives in a way that he does not have to live.

Paul teaches them, come on, Corinthians, these little sacrifices which I ask you to make are nothing. Again, in this chapter, Paul uses himself as an extreme example of the law of love. And he also shows that there is nothing self-serving in his great authority. Paul was an Apostle to the Gentiles, and he moved Christ out of the Jewish realm and to the realm of the Gentiles, and there is nothing self-serving in his position.

The difference between what Paul taught in grace and what the legalists taught was so marked, that Paul was able to clearly present the difference between legalism and grace. These people ended up looking like idiots and the gospel of grace came through loud and clear. Paul did not have to succumb to their legalism, their prejudices, etc. Paul is even free from the stringent rules which he applies to himself and follows. We all live under a higher purpose. We can ask, why do I live, what is my purpose in life? If to glorify God is not our answer, then we are confused. No matter what direction our life goes, we are to serve God; we are to glorify Jesus Christ.

Just as we have many members in one body, and not all members have the same function.... Paul had a mission, and we have a mission. We may lack the operations order, but we are still a soldier, we are still in combat; we have a divine mission. Paul makes supreme sacrifice so that we can understand grace.

1Cor. 9:1 Am I not free? Am I not an apostle? Have I not seen Jesus our Lord? Are not you my workmanship in the Lord?

1Cor. 9:1 Apostleship

Lesson #454 Wednesday December 6, 2006

Rev. Dan Ingram sitting on the bench with Bobby. He's in Washington DC area. He was ordained at Berachah.

Paul begins this chapter with 4 autographical, rhetorical questions, each of which demand an affirmative answer. When a conversation begins to lag, just ask someone about themselves, and that will perk up the conversation; people like to talk about themselves.

Paul is beginning to write about himself so that we can become acquainted with him. This is to get the Corinthians to make a doctrinal application. They must see and hear that there is no compromise of doctrine in the soul or lifestyle of the Apostle Paul. He is certainly human with an old sin nature and he can sin like anyone else. After 8 chapters, Paul shifts from the you of the Corinthians to the I of himself. Paul lives and breathes doctrine, and is therefore a good example for us to emulate. We all have a service to the Lord and this service increases as our spiritual growth increases. Paul abstains from a number of wonderful things in this life, from things which are not even remotely doubtful (like marriage) in order that we consider the impact of our every action. Paul's view is simply this: apply doctrine first and everything else falls into place. Doctrine is not a genie that you rub in order to get 3 wishes (or 10 wishes. Doctrine puts us into the life which God designed for us. This plan gives us our best lives. This puts us onto the best road that we could be on.

3 Fold Doctrine in Paul's Soul

1. Doctrine should not be compromised in our life ever. This is the doctrine which builds norms and standards in our conscience.
2. There is no substitute for doctrinal orientation. What wins out? Doctrine in your soul which provides the solutions of your daily problems or that thing you want the most?
3. There is no other way to glorify God.

As a Christian and as an Apostle, Paul is not bound by the stringent conduct which he has placed upon his own life. Paul does not have to choose to live the way that he does. Freedom demands responsibility, and Paul shows great responsibility. He takes his responsibility to its furthest limit. Paul lived under the doctrine of supreme sacrifice; but he doesn't do that in order to get kudos from others. Paul's example of himself is truly effective.

Paul has the highest rank in all of history. He is at the top of the heap. He is the final human doctrinal authority. He is the man who wrote that doctrine. Nothing wrong with capitalism, but there is plenty of greed at the top.

Paul must get through to these Corinthians. In chapter 9, Paul claims all of these liberties. There is nothing that Paul would do to become a stumbling block for someone else. He did not exercise his rights. Paul saw the big picture and he knew what his place was in the big picture. He had the greatest privilege of anyone who has ever lived; and he had more doctrine than anyone else.

Paul in chapter 1 calls himself a slave. Now, how can he be a slave and free? Am I not free?

Paul has the greatest spiritual authority. Am I not an Apostle? Paul will fulfill the mission of his which began on the Damascus road. He will not let anything in this life get in the way.

What did Paul endure in order to accomplish his mission? 2Cor. 11:24–29: 5 times I received 39 lashes, which was probably the max. He was beaten until his back was raw. Severely beaten by rods. Stoned and left for dead. Shipwrecked, and he spent 1.5 days in the water. I have been on frequent journeys in dangers from rivers, dangers from robbers, dangers from my countrymen, dangers from the gentiles, dangers in the city, dangers in the wilderness, dangers on the sea, dangers among false brothers. I have been in labor and hardship. We will see that Paul chose a vocation outside of the ministry in order to support himself. He had every right to be supported by those he taught grace to. I have been through labor and hardship through many sleepless nights, in hunger and thirst, without food, in cold and exposure. Paul was not an ascetic looking for more pain. He took it anyway. He is not a self-imposed martyr. Through all of these dangers, God protect Paul; and when it was time to go, then God took him.

Those who teach the Word of God have enemies. You cannot be growing spiritually without having a few enemies. Some factions denied that Paul was an Apostle.

Power grabs occur in churches just like anywhere else; denigrate others in order to raise up yourself. These factions were falling all over themselves to take Paul down. Paul knows that they will never have to live as he does, but that they would observe him and get the point.

What Does it Take to be an Apostle?

Who is an Apostle? How can one become an Apostle?

1. Etymology of the word: αποστολος
  - a. Classical Greek: this word is 500 years old before found in the New Testament
  - b. Originally it designated a high ranking Admiral

- c. This high-ranking person was chosen by a counsel to command an army or a fleet in a military
  - d. Another use in Athens. This was a great colony maker; great colonialists. They were,
  - e. The governor was a Greek colon was an Apostolos;
  - f. Also used to refer to a teacher of philosophy, ostensibly sent by Zeus as his messenger, making him a messenger of the cheap gods. A philosopher represented the thinking of the gods to the hoi palloi.
2. Apostolos.
- a. All 3 uses have a common frine: apostollos carried the highest command
  - b. Also a commander with the highest authority.

1Cor. 9:1 Am I not free? Am I not an apostle? Have I not seen Jesus our Lord? Are not you my workmanship in the Lord?

1Cor. 9:1 Apostleship

Lesson #455

Thursday December 7, 2006

Anniversary of Pearl Harbor.

We take freedom for granted in this country; the blood and sweat and tears of men who have gone before bought our freedom for us; and we have so much of it. No nation in the history of man has had these kinds of incredible freedoms. We still have wonderful and gallant soldiers who fight for us in far off lands and take them for granted; although they don't.

When Paul said, Am I not free? he understood freedom. Paul knows that freedom cost everything to the Lord Jesus Christ. Paul was probably the greatest man of doctrine in the church. Paul was also free not to take advantage of all the liberties which he has in Christ. Whether we know it or not, we are all slaves to the Lord Jesus Christ. Paul lived this; very few of us do. Paul had the highest rank of anyone in the church age; the rank of Apostle; the CEO of the church, the general of generals. However, with this great rank, he had great responsibility. People want rank and power but they are not interested in the responsibility that goes with that. Paul limited his freedom because he understood his position. Paul would reveal by means of the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, these new doctrines. Paul will freely choose to alter his lifestyle of freedom to forgo this freedom for the service to Jesus Christ. We may have to forgo our freedom now and again; but Paul choose to forgo his freedom regularly; he did not do it grudgingly. He knows full will that God's grace is sufficient for all o fhis needs. God's grace was sufficient for his personal happiness. Thank God that Paul chose to be a slave to the Lord. Our life should be one of slavery to the Lord as well. Our life is or should be dedicated to the plan of God.

Am I not an Apostle? Paul here is making a statement of another limitation of his freedom. He will fulfill the obligation that this requires. One of the reasons that Paul wrote this verse, is that his position of authority had been challenged by his enemies. He was in the middle of the angelic conflict like you would not believe. His very office and gift are being challenged. These antagonists want to discredit Paul to all the churches, in order to elevate their own ambitions. Can you imagine opposing the plan of God for your own interests?

God is not going to be mocked; we cannot attack God or God's man in leadership and walk away unscathed. Those who attack those in a position of leadership in the church will end up with mental attitude sins that rip themselves to pieces, beside divine discipline. God did not allow these attacks in the time of the Apostle Paul (that is, they did not go unpunished), and He will not allow it today. If Bobby is out of line, God will deal with him; if Bobby is out of line, God will deal with him directly. Just do not get in the way of the plan of God.

Bobby is a living testimony that we just need to stand back and let God take care of the opposition. You don't want to get in the way of the power of God. Paul will defend so that they understand his authority and his mission, so that they can benefit from his teaching. He defends himself so that his opposition will not have the floor, and keep others from benefitting from Paul's ministry.

Apostleship

In understanding who Paul is, we understand more of what he has to offer us.

1. Αποστολλος = Apostle. 500 year old word by the time of the New Testament. 3 ancient uses for it.
  - a. A military commander, who was in charge of an army or navy expedition.
  - b. A governor of a Greek colony.
  - c. A philosopher sent by Zeus as his messenger, to reveal the thinking of the gods to humans. Paul was a messenger to reveal the very thinking of God to the human race.
2. The Apostle carried the highest authority and he was a messenger of God.
3. The New Testament use of αποστολλος.
  - a. First, it is used to refer to the Lord Jesus Christ Himself in Heb. 3:1. Therefore, holy brothers, you who share in a heavenly calling, consider Jesus, the apostle and high priest of our confession, who was faithful to him who appointed him, just as Moses also was faithful in all God's house.
  - b. He is the messenger of our salvation.
  - c. He is the One sent by God the Father.
  - d. Jesus Christ carried the highest authority on earth that any man ever had.
  - e. He was the absolute commander of His disciples and followers, and today, He is the absolute ruler of the body of Christ. He is the head of the Church.
4. The second use in the New Testament:
  - a. It was used for a pioneer missionary; a man who spread the gospel throughout the ancient world; this was a delegated function in the early church age. They went in all directions.
  - b. This pioneer missionary was, in this sense, an Apostle; a 1st century evangelist who bore witness of Christ; he was a messenger of Christ.

- c. He was an itinerate missionary sent by the Lord Jesus Christ to make disciples of all nations. Matt. 28:19 We don't know exactly what happened to these pioneer missionaries or even to the 12 disciples.
  - d. These could be considered colonial or delegated Apostles. These pioneer missionaries were missionary rulers.
  - e. They were call Apostles here in the same sense as Greeks who would found and govern a colony.
  - f. These men carried the office of Apostle; not the office, but the gift. They had lesser gifts, than the gift of Apostleship. They had the authority to establish churches and they might be evangelists, prophets or pastor teachers.
  - g. They were underneath the spiritual gift of Apostle; they did not carry this rank themselves, but were under the authority of someone with this gift.
  - h. Barnabas was an Apostle in this sense. Gal. 2:9 Acts 14:14
  - i. Barnabas could could out and form churches; to recognize and train men as pastors, to appoint them to churches, and to then move on.
  - j. James, the Lord's half-brother (1Cor. 15:7 Gal. 4:19).
  - k. Apollos, who was a pastor of Corinth. 1Cor. 4:6, 9 He failed in Corinth, but successful eslehwre.
  - l. 1Cor. 2:25
  - m. Rom. 16:7 1Thess. 1:1 2:6 are more examples of colonial Apostles.
5. 3rd use of Apostle in the New Testament (it appears 80 times), and it most often refers to the 11, minus Judas Acts 1:26 and Paul.
- a. These 11 were Apostles first to Israel for 3 years, during our Lord's ministry. Matt. 10:2–6 and then to the church until 96 A.D.
  - b. The Apostles to the Church were not appointed until after the resurrection of Jesus Christ. No Apostles to the church before. Eph. 4:8, 11
  - c. These 12 men had the spiritual gift and the office of prophet. The Holy Spirit sovereignly bestowed this gift upon them; just these 12 with this particular commission and function.
  - d. Some of these men are more active than others. This could be that we just heard little about them. Many gaps in their history insofar as the Bible is concerned.
  - e. Extra-Biblical accounts of these, may be tradition, heresy or eyewitness. This information must be taken with a grain of salt.
  - f. Matt. 10:2–4 lists all of the Apostles.
    - i. Cephas or Peter. He is one of the most active and of the inner core and he was a writer of Scripture. He became a pillar of the church and the subject of some false doctrine.
    - ii. Andrew, Peter's brother. He was almost an honorary Apostle, and he appears to be barely involved and he had a short life.
    - iii. James and John, sons of Zebedee. 2 of the 3 most active of the original 11; and a part of the inner circle of our Lord. These are the ones that Jesus spoke to the most. They are the central focus of Apostleship in the New Testament. They are the writers of a lot of Scripture; James wrote the book of James and John wrote a number of books. He died a quiet, natural death.

- iv. Philip, who is the first one directly called by Christ. Mostly named in close connection with Andrew, the brother of Peter. No other mention in Scripture of him. He is said to have written the gospel of Philip, which is apocryphal, and never seen as inspired. This is probably false.
- v. Bartholomew, also known as Nathaniel, and he is not mentioned at all in the New Testament. We have no clue as to what happened to him. This does not mean that he had no ministry; and it does not mean that he did not do very important work. We may not have heard of them primarily because they did not write Scripture. They did not write, but they may have been missionaries throughout the most outermost parts of the earth.
- vi. Doubting Thomas. He did not start off well. He sat in front of Jesus Christ, and he asked, "Show us the Father." "We don't know where you are going, so how can we know the way?" Also called Diddymous, which means twin. Extra-Biblical sources have him going to India, and these sources are within 100 years of the Apostles, so there could be some truth here.
- vii. Matthew the tax gatherer, and hated for this reason. The IRS of the Roman colonies. He wrote the gospel of Matthew; he observed the Lord first-hand; and little else is known about him.
- viii. James the son of Altheas, and he disappears from the Bible very quickly. He is called James the Lesser, simply because little is known about him.
- ix. Thaddyus and also called Judas, not not equivalent to Judas Iscariot; little is known about him. Extra Biblical sources have him preaching, performing miracles and planting churches in Mesopotamia.
- x. Simon the Zealot, who began as a member of the Zealot party who wanted to throw off the Roman rule. Constantly in rebellion against Rome. Fanatics. They looked for the Messiah to deliver them from Rome.
- xi. Finally, Judas Iscariot, who committed suicide, and was replaced by the Apostle Paul.
- xii. There is Mattias who was elected an Apostle, and whether he possessed this gift is in question. But since Jesus Christ gave the gifts on the Day of Pentecost, he coul dnot have been elected to this office. Humans cannot elect that which is sovereignly bestowed by God the Holy Spirit. The church voted for Matthias, but that was not God's choice, and he is never heard from again. He may have had a ministry, but we do not find him in the book of Acts after this.

6. The 11 and Paul had the spiritual gift of Apostleship. 1Cor. 12:28 Eph. 4:11 no gift like this in the history of the Church.
- a. These 12 carried the highest gift which God delegated to the church.
  - b. An Apostle had authority over all local churches. This is why Paul was challenged by his opposition. He had that authority and they wanted it. A pastor has authority over one local church.
  - c. According to 1Cor. 12:28, the gift of Apostleship is 1st in order of merit. All the rest is spread out underneath.
  - d. The gift was designed for 2 purposes:
    - i. The formation of the canon of Scripture, the New Testament. They were designated as writers of Scripture and they were inspired by God the Holy Spirit. There was a restriction to 30-96 A.D.; no Scripture after that. They wrote and taught during this time period.
    - ii. The second purpose was to provide leadership in the pre-canon period of the Church Age. They represented the Lord Jesus Christ during this time.
      - (1) This involved the establishment of local churches and local church policy. They also taught and wrote.
      - (2) This involved teaching the mystery doctrine of the church age; they took up the slack where no canon existed and had not been distributed. They stood in until the canon was done.
      - (3) Maintained a theology with a dispensational nature.
      - (4) They trained up pastors.
      - (5) Their leadership functioned to send out colonial Apostles; they were commanding generals and they sent out brigade generals to do some of the work in the field.
      - (6) These men governed the colonial Apostles.
7. The Qualifications of an Apostle. These are critical.

1Cor. 9:1 Am I not free? Am I not an apostle? Have I not seen Jesus our Lord? Are not you my workmanship in the Lord?

1Cor. 9:1 Apostleship

Lesson #456

Sunday 1 December 10, 2006

Glenn sang a poem written by Bob.

4 questions introduce this chapter: am I not free? Am I not an Apostle? When you are free, you have much more latitude than a slave has. Paul has the freedom to choose the course of his life within the parameters laid down by Bible doctrine. Paul has the limitations of Scripture; but he will impose other limitations upon himself. Paul has the spiritual gift and the office of Apostle. He will limit his freedom much like Jesus Christ limited His own. In the Church Age, no one has a higher rank than Paul (although some may be equivalent to him in rank). With this high rank goes great responsibility. Freedom and rank demand responsibility. Rank demands leadership. Paul must be responsible and a leader; he must lead by what he says and by what he does. A leader leads by example. A leader does not need to be better than those that he leads, but he must take responsibility for those below him. As the greatest leader in the church, Paul must set the greatest example; he must apply the law of love in a spectacular and easily observable way. The law of supreme sacrifice one on of Paul's actions. Some believers think that they must do something for God to impress Him. It is utilization of God's operating assets which impresses Him. Paul's actions indicate that he does not live by empty words. This is the thinking of the Apostle Paul.

What is the impact of Apostleship in the church and how does it impact 1Cor. 9? People challenge the highest rank in church and question doctrines from Paul. Some do this out of negative volition. God hammered Paul on a number of occasions for what Paul had done.

Αποστολλος = *Apostle

1. The etymology. Classical Greek, where it occurred 500 years before 1Corinthians.
  - a. A military commander.
  - b. A governor of theses ;
  - c. A philosopher sent by Zeus to convey the thinkin of the gods.
  - d. Key points of meaning: e
2. The New Testament relates back to the Classical Greek.
  - a. He was sent by the Father to reveal the father and se be our substitute on the ocrss;
  - b. He is unequivocally the head of the church, Eph. 5
3. 2nd use in the New Testament, Apostleship refers to a messenger type function. The messengers of Christ were messengers; not philosophers. This is an itinerate missionary sent by Christ to make disciples of all the nations.
  - a. This missionary went among the heathen, did some evangelizing and then formed the churches. They acted as colonial apostles or pioneer missionaries. They were not on their own; they were under the authority of a real Apostle
  - b. They did not have the spiritual gift of Apostleship. There were the gifts of pastor teacher, evangelism, etc.; and the delegated authority to establish churches.
  - c. Examples: Barnabas (Acts. 14:14 Gal. 2:9).
  - d. A moveable seminary.
  - e. James, the Lord's half brother (2 other James who were actual Apostles). Gal. 1:19 1Cor. 15:7
  - f. Apollos, who had a tough time with the Corinthians. He did not go back to Corinth, but Paul sent him elsewhere.
  - g. Epaphroditus, under Paul. He had letters from Paul.
  - h. Adronicus and Junea (Rom. ); 1Thess. 1:1 Timothy and ?

4. 3rd use used about 80 times in the New Testament. This is the 11 disciples who became first, Apostles to Israel, and then to the church.
- a. Eph. 4:8 appointed after the resurrection.
  - b. Some are well-known; some not all, concerning these 11 (or 12) men.
  - c. List of the 11: Matt. 10:2–4 lists them all.
    - i. Simon, who is called Peter; one of the most active inner corps of Christ's disciples. He became a recognized Apostle and a writer of Scripture.
    - ii. Andrew, Peter's brother. He was the first of the Apostles to believe in Jesus Christ. He was a fisherman, who was attracted to the gospel through the ministry of John the Baptist. Andrew went straight back to his family and brought Peter in. Andrew was present at many significant events: the feeding of the 5000, the baptism of Jesus. Apocryphal literature tells us about his later life. Tradition has him in Babilonia, the Kurds and the Pantheons.
    - iii. James, the son of Zebedee, one of the 3 James in Scripture. He was the brother of John. First disciple called in Galilee. In all lists, James occupies a place of prominence. He and John called the sons of thunder. Maybe sarcastic; they were impetuous perhaps. Possibly a reference to their power and ministry. Killed by Herod Agrippa I, in Acts.
    - iv. Then there is John, the 2nd most active Apostle. Wrote John, 1,2,3 John and Revelation. He lived the longest—to 96 A.D.
    - v. Christ spoke directly to Philip and appears, after that, only in the book of John.
    - vi. Philip brought Bartholomew into the fold. No mention of his later ministry reported to have been martyred in Hieropolis, head down. Most Apostles were martyrs.
    - vii. Bartholomew also called Nathaniel, and only found in the gospels. Tradition has his ministry in India or Parthia.
    - viii. Thomas or Doubting Thomas. He asked Jesus about where Jesus was going and God told him. Possibly went to India.
    - ix. Matthew the tax gatherer; and they were hated more than the IRS today. They took what they wanted and gave what they wanted to the Roman government. Many scholars attribute the gospel of Matthew to him, and very little else known about him.
    - x. James the son of Alphaeus. Difficult in Scripture to determine which James is referenced. He could be the son of Mary, the other Mary; but both in the same family. This would make him the cousin of Jesus Christ. Disappears very quickly.
    - xi. Thaddeus, also called Jude.

- xii. Simon the Zealot. Begun as a member of the revolutionary party in Judah. The Jews hated the Romans and many figured that Christ would save Israel from the tyranny of Rome.
- xiii. An election of Matthias in Acts 1. Judas committed suicide, and Peter called for a replacement, and decided that tlection. Would be impossible for him to be an Apostle. Only God can elect someone to this position.

We know all we need to know in the letters of the Apostles.

1Cor. 9:1 Am I not free? Am I not an apostle? Have I not seen Jesus our Lord? Are not you my workmanship in the Lord?

1Cor. 9:1 Apostleship

Lesson #457

Sunday 2 December 10, 2006

Paul writes the inspired Word of God. He is inspired to write about himself. There is no way that we can understand what heaven will be like; but Bobby hopes that there is a History Channel in heaven; and he'd like to see a program on the Apostles. It would be interesting to see if any of these traditions are correct or not.

We are seeing who Paul was in this chapter; and he gives us this information in v. 1: he is free and an Apostle. This gift and office is challenged in Corinth by those who oppose his ministry, by those who hate the doctrine of grace. Some want to get their own message in there.

Paul says, I am going to live my life in a way that is an extreme example of the spiritual life; he decides to limit his freedoms severely; those which we take for granted and things which are not doubtful things. Paul decides for the purpose of the gospel and the communication of Bible doctrine that he will restrict himself in areas which are not doubtful. He does this because he is an Apostle and because he has a mission. We study this doctrine because it is important to know who these men are.

Apostleship [Continued]

2. This is a unique and spiritual gift. Eph. 4:11
  - 1) The Apostles carried the highest authority in the Church Age.
  - 2) An Apostle has authority over all local churches, in contrast to the pastor whose authority is limited to one local church.
  - 3) The gift of Apostleship is first in order of merit, according to 1Cor. 12:11? They had a gift and mission that none of us have.
  - 4) The gift was designed for two purposes: to form the canon of Scripture, the New Testament.
    - (1) They had the authority and function to write. The nacent period of the Church Age, and they were restricted from 30–96 A.D. That was the period of Apostleship. They also provided leadership in the pre-canon period of the Church Age. Someone has to have the authority; and there was not enough in writing to solidify this.

- (2) Leadership involved the establishment of local churches and politicizes. Also, to teach and clarify the mystery doctrine of the Church Age, doctrine which had never been heard before in history. It was the doctrine that the Apostle Paul and others wrote so that we would understand what we have in the Church Age. Bobby could stand up and give his opinion on this or that, like many pastors throughout the US; but his authority is derived from the Bible, and they are a result of the Christian way of life.
- (3) They maintained a theology with a dispensational purpose. This was entirely new thing, an entirely new age.
- (4) The authority to train pastors to carry on in what they spoke and wrote.
- (5) The gift also functioned in sending out colonial apostles.
- (6) This gift allowed them to govern the colonial Apostles.

3. Qualifications of an Apostle. Do you volunteer and get the gift after being s worn in? What do you look for in an Apostle?

- 1) You had to be present during the earthly ministry of the Lord Jesus Christ; and none of us can make that claim.
- 2) They saw Him and witnessed His deity and His humanity. Eyewitness to His deeds and were eyewitnesses to His life. However, this leaves out Paul, who studied at this time to become a pharisee; and he hated Jesus Christ and was a persecuter of Christians. Paul doesn't fit this criterion. However, Paul did communicate the mystery doctrine to the gentiles. Paul gave a unique testimony to the life of Jesus Christ. Paul lived the Christian life and defined it for us.
- 3) All the Apostles were witnesses to the resurrected Christ. Paul saw the resurrected Christ; and the others (1Cor. 15:5–8).
- 4) An Apostle was sent by Christ Himself. Christ commissioned the Apostles. This precludes the doctrine of apostolic succession.
- 5) Only these men met these requirements: Paul and the 11. Not the same for the colonial apostles.

4. What did the Apostles do?

- 1) These men wrote what they studied. Luke is the only Gentile to write Scripture, and Luke became the historian of the Church. Mark recorded the book from his association with Peter.
- 2) There is no understanding of Jesus Christ or mystery doctrine without these men. There is none.
- 3) Once they became founders of the church, they became the pillars of the church. Gal. 2:8–9.

- 4) They set the norms for teaching doctrine and set the relationships among other believers in the church. They were the examples when it comes to teaching. 1Cor. 8 and 9 give us examples of their life. Acts 2:42
- 5) Apostleship as a spiritual gift had to be bestowed by God the Holy Spirit. Christ commissioned, but the Holy Spirit sovereignly bestows the gifts.
  - (1) Apostles were especially empowered. John 20:22 Acts 1:8 2Cor. 12:12
  - (2) They were able to endure extreme hardships, sufferings, shame, martyrdom. Only John, insofar as we know, died naturally. Acts 3:8 2Cor. 11:25–27
- 6) How does Paul establish his authority? How does he clearly identify that he is an Apostle? Paul had other gifts which showed him to have this gift.
  - (1) These are temporary gifts so show that there is no question that they had divinely delegated authority. These additional gifts are credentials; Apostolic credentials.
  - (2) Miracles, tongues, healing and several others. Acts. 5:15 16: 28:8–9 healing is one of the most abused, because so many want their pain removed. Don't ever fall for that. We will all be in pain and suffering; we will all have aches and pains and diseases and we will all die. What we do on this earth does stand for eternity.
  - (3) Temporary spiritual gifts given to establish and identify doctrinal truth and those in possession of it until the canon of Scripture had been completed and circulated. How do the Corinthians know that Paul is teaching truth? It is a part of his credentials. Many people today try to mimic these gifts; but these gifts no longer exist. The gift of pastor teacher who knows the original languages. Do not fall prey to the healers or to the tongues crowd, with their plants in the audience to be healed.
  - (4) Once the person was identified as an Apostle and once the canon of Scripture was completed, these gifts were removed forever. At least in the Church Age. Unsure whether they will reappear in the Tribulation. Acts 19:11–12 Paul could heal; but he could not at a later date (Philip. 2:27 2Tim. 4:20). The gift of healing was not primarily done to alleviate suffering; but to present His credentials as Messiah to those who saw Him.
  - (5) since 96 A.D., when the canon of completed, these gifts are no longer in existence: Apostleship, prophecy, miracles, healings, tongues, interpretation of tongues, the gift of discerning spirits; the gift of faith, the gift of special knowledge and wisdom which went beyond the norm. We do not know exactly how all of these gifts worked.
  - (6) Today these gifts are extinct. No one today can cure illnesses or any of the others.
  - (7) The Apostle as a human author, prophesied details of future details of future dispensations of the Tribulation and the Millennium.

(8)

Any claim of Apostleship today is heresy and blasphemy. This gift is no longer given out. The false doctrine of Apostolic Succession. This was established by the Catholic church; and, Catholic, it means universal; and, this church became apostate. Gnosticism was countered by another heresy, Apostolic succession. The gnostics claimed to have secret traditions passed one down from the Apostles. A standard ploy to claim an exclusive knowledge. One example of this today is Mormonism, that they found an example of Scriptures in NY from some angel who deposited it there. Anyone who makes any claim like this is apostate, just like the gnostics of 190 A.D. They believed that they had extra-Biblical knowledge which frequently contradicted what the Bible says. If it contradicts Scripture, it is false doctrine. It cannot be new revelation; if it agrees with the Word of God, then it is not new revelation, as it already exists in the Bible. The Catholic Church had to counter this knowledge; they claimed that each humanly selected Bishop was a successor to the Apostles. This way, there can be no secret traditions held by others. They were the guardians of the knowledge. This counter was nother false doctrine. They became the guardians of Scripture; but they did not always guard it very well. Many added to the Bible, and misinterpreted Scripture for their own use. Abuse of Scripture was horrendous in the Middle Ages, so they began to hide the Scriptures from the people...did not want anyone to see the Bible. Called the Dark Ages because no one could be illuminated. These Bishops withheld Scripture from the common people. Whycliffe was hounded everywhere when he bagn to spread the Word of God; and he was persecuted for doing this. In the Roman church, Apostolic succession was traced from Peter to the reigning pope; and he is called the direct descendant of the Apostle Peter. The laying on of hands is given as the means by which the gift is passed along; but this gift died in 96 A.D.

Bobby will go through Matt. 16:18 next time, which is misinterpreted by the Catholic church. The importance of the knowledg of the Greek will be seen.

1Cor. 9:1 Am I not free? Am I not an apostle? Have I not seen Jesus our Lord? Are not you my workmanship in the Lord?

1Cor. 9:1 Apostleship

Lesson #458 Wednesday December 13, 2006

Paul had some authority and rank wherever he went. He probably was not an imposing figure, but he apparently attracted attention. He was a Roman citizen, and therefore had greater privilege than the countless non-citizens that he ran into. He was a pharisee at one time in his life. As an Apostle in the family of God, he reached a pinnacle, his most elevated position.

However, even with this great rank, Paul had great humility. He wanted the Corinthian church to understand his authority over them, yet his humility before God. As an Apostle, he would have been the most mature of believers and the highest ranking. However, he wants these believers to understand the supreme sacrifice that he would make in order to serve those who are in his charge. Paul takes the exact opposite course that his status affords him.

The Corinthians need to understand that with rank there comes great responsibility. They are fighting for rank and influence, yet Paul has it—a higher rank than they will ever have. They want the authority but they don't really have any idea about authority. People want to follow Paul; they are not made to follow him. Grace will always attract great opposition. Grace attracts legalists like moths to a flame. The Corinthians did not understand what the Christian life is all about. Paul will show them by extreme example what his position is, in the scheme of God's plan. He will show how much greater the impact of his life will be. First Paul must make them understand as we must understand the power and privilege of the great apostolic office which was bestowed upon Paul.

Apostleship

If Bobby takes too long on Sunday to give these points, then they stop writing. He's going to give us more time tonite.

3. The qualifications for an Apostle, and these qualifications make Paul unique.
  - a. Being present at the earthly ministry of the Lord Jesus Christ.
  - b. They saw Him and witnessed His deity and His uniqueness. Literally thousands of people saw Jesus Christ in the flesh and rejected Him. The Jewish leaders not only reject Him, but they were jealous of Him.
  - c. These men gave eyewitness testimony to His deeds and to the decisive events in his life. 1John 1:1–3
  - d. All the Apostles were witnesses to the resurrection (or had seen the resurrected Christ).
  - e. An Apostle was sent by Jesus Christ Himself (John 20:21). Jesus Christ commissioned the Apostles. Only these 12 had these qualifications.
4. What was the Apostolic function?
  - a. These were men inspired by the Holy Spirit to write Scripture. All of these books are divinely inspired. They were all Jewish except for Luke, who was the only Gentile. He was a physician and an historian, and he recorded the things which Paul could not. Luke wrote both the history of Jesus Christ and of the early church.
  - b. For us, there is no understanding of Christ or of mystery doctrine apart from the Apostles. The Apostles had to interpret the meaning of our Lord's life and ministry.
  - c. These men were the founders and pillars of the early church.
  - d. They set the norms for teaching doctrine and for relationships between believers in the church. 1Cor. 8–9 deals with these relationships.

- e. Apostleship as a spiritual gift had to be bestowed by God the Holy Spirit. Our Lord commissioned them.

- a. John 20:22 Acts 1f:8 5:15 16:1–18 28:8–9 2Cor. 12:12 Empowerment of the Apostles.
- b. They were able to endure extreme hardships, martyrdom. They got plenty of opposition that we could never stand. Acts 12f:1–3 2Cor. 11:25–27

6. To establish their authority and to identify them to the rest of the world, Apostles had additional spiritual gifts.

- a. These were temporary spiritual gifts so that there was no question as to the divinely delegated authority of those who had these gifts. These were Apostolic credentials. There were only 12 and they only lived until 96 A.D. No one had gifts like the Apostles. This identified them in the ancient world.
- b. A few of these temporary gifts were miracles, tongues and healing. Acts 16:16–18 Acts 28:8–9
- c. Temporary gift given to establish doctrine and truth until the canon of the New Testament had been completed and circulated. Did no one any good until they got the canon. These epistles are letters and many of them circulated these letters to the other churches. At a later date, these were all gathered and put into a collection of Scripture.
- d. Once the authority of the Apostle was established, once he was identified as an Apostle throughout the Roman empire churches and beyond, and once Scripture had been completed, these temporary gifts were removed. Paul could heal, but later he could not.
- e. Since 96 A.D., when the canon was completed, these gifts disappeared: Apostleship, prophecy, discerning spirits, temporary gift of faith, knowledge, miracles, tongues, interpretation of tongues and healing. No reason to speak in tongues when no one else can understand what you are saying.
- f. Today, all spiritual gifts are permanent; there are no temporary gifts given in order for you to identify those with special powers. The next thing is they will say, I have new revelations. Oh, yeah, and give me money too.

7. The Apostle as a human author of the New Testament prophesied details of future dispensations: Tribulation and the Millennium (1Thess and Revelation and even Peter).

8. Any claim of Apostleship is heresy and blasphemy.

- a. 170 A.D. Apostolic succession proposed by the Catholic (common) church; by the 16th century, this all needed reform. The Roman Catholic church reacted to gnosticism. “We have extra knowledge not given to the Apostles.” This was a challenge, and it was countered with Apostolic succession; each Bishop carried the authority of the Apostles and each was a true successor. As Apostolic successors, “We have extra knowledge from God.” And this gets us to ex-cathedra. They did not want the gnostics to corner the market on knowledge, even though there was no new knowledge. They traced this Apostolic succession to the Apostle Peter. Peter supposedly with prayer and the laying on of hands transferred the power and authority that God had given him, sometime before he died. Matt. 16:18 is the foundation for this. "And I tell you, you are Peter, and on this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. I will give you the keys of the kingdom of heaven, and whatever you bind on earth shall be bound in heaven, and whatever you loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." (Matt. 16:18–19). There is a play on words here. Peter's real name was Simon, but Jesus Christ renamed him Peter, which means stone. Peter is in the masculine gender; but He says "Upon this Rock I will build My church" which is the feminine noun πέτρα, which cannot refer to Peter, who is a man. Πέτρα is a large rock, a formidable position, a fortress. This can only be Jesus Christ. When Peter got something in his mind, it stayed there. He was hard to move; and he was a leader and a spokesman for the Apostles. Peter was prominent. Peter was the first to confess Jesus Christ, and therefore, he is the stone. However, he is not the founder of the church; Christ is the chief cornerstone. The founder is the πέτρα. The church was built upon the immovable fortress of Jesus Christ. This heresy was not corrected until the reformation by Martin Luther. He knew there was no Apostolic succession. In one sense, we are all πέτρος. The church consists of all those stones which are in union with Jesus Christ. We are also immovable in union with Jesus Christ.

9. Summary: the Apostles left behind 3 things: the inspired writing of the New Testament; the churches which they founded; pastors and teachers that had been trained to carry on (not as Apostles but as teachers of the Word). The office of Apostleship could not be bestowed by a mere man.
10. There could be no more Apostles in the original sense, since no one could meet the qualifications that they have.
  - a. The real successor to the Apostles is not some man in a beautiful church; the real successor to the Apostles is the New Testament itself.
  - b. The inspired Scripture continues their ministry within the church as do that pastors do. No present-day pastor is an Apostle.

Have I not seen my Lord? Perfect passive indicative of horaô. This was one of the criteria for Apostleship. He had not seen Jesus Christ before He had ascended. 1Cor. 15:8–9 Acts 22:6–18: "As I was on my way and drew near to Damascus, about noon a great light from heaven suddenly shone around me. And I fell to the ground and heard a voice saying to me, 'Saul, Saul, why are you persecuting me?' And I answered, 'Who are you, Lord?' And he said to me, 'I am Jesus of Nazareth, whom you are persecuting.' Now those who were with me saw the light but did not understand the voice of the one who was speaking to me. And I said, 'What shall I do, Lord?' And the Lord said to me, 'Rise, and go into Damascus, and there you will be told all that is appointed for you to do.' And since I could not see because of the brightness of that light, I was led by the hand by those who were with me, and came into Damascus. "And one Ananias, a devout man according to the law, well spoken of by all the Jews who lived there, came to me, and standing by me said to me, 'Brother Saul, receive your sight.' And at that very hour I received my sight and saw him. And he said, 'The God of our fathers appointed you to know his will, to see the Righteous One and to hear a voice from his mouth; for you will be a witness for him to everyone of what you have seen and heard. And now why do you wait? Rise and be baptized and wash away your sins, calling on his name.' "When I had returned to Jerusalem and was praying in the temple, I fell into a trance and saw him saying to me, 'Make haste and get out of Jerusalem quickly, because they will not accept your testimony about me.' Paul was going to damascus to find and kill Christians. Our Lord has a sense of humor; Paul goes from being one of the greatest killers of believers in Jesus Christ, to a man clearly transfigured, as our Lord was transfigured before him.

Our Lord spoke to Paul, and He said, "Get up, Paul; for this purpose I have appeared to you; to appoint you a minister and a witness." Now Paul is a minister and a witness; Paul has been a believer for a few seconds when Jesus Christ tells him this. The gospel and the mystery doctrine would be preached to Paul. The road is where he received his direct commission from the Apostle.

1Cor. 9:1 Am I not free? Am I not an apostle? Have I not seen Jesus our Lord? Are not you my workmanship in the Lord?

1Cor. 9:1

Lesson #459 Thursday December 14, 2006

The first 3 rhetorical questions: Am I not free? Am I not an Apostle? Have I not seen Jesus our Lord? Paul has all of the qualifications to be an Apostle and he functions in the office of an Apostle. The fact that Paul was given this spiritual gift limits the freedom that he has. His mission to to preach the gospel and establish churches and write the Word of God; and these things cause him to put certain restraints upon himself. He has a pretty full plate, and it really does not allow him the same kinds of freedoms that we all have; and, he limits himself in some areas, in order to further his mission.

The 3rd question: Have I not seen Jesus our Lord? This is a defining attribute for being an Apostle. This was one of the main criterion for becoming an Apostle. However, the other Apostles saw our Lord before the ascension; and Paul saw Him after. These appearances were certainly unique within that 30 day time frame. Paul was certainly left out of this.

Appearances of Jesus Christ

1. He appeared to the 3 women prior to this.
2. He appeared to Peter in the late afternoon, maybe around 6 pm. By this time, they had barely begun to understand what their duties would be. One reason that Jesus appeared to them was to reach these rather despondent disciples; and as a witness to His resurrection. Luke 24:34
3. He appeared to James His half-brother in the late afternoon. 1Cor. 15:7 this was a very special visit to James, who was a colonial apostle, but not a full-on Apostle. Interestingly enough, Jesus' brother James did not accept Him as his Savior. James returned to Jesus' other half-brothers and sisters and witnessed to them, and they believed.

4. The 3rd (or 4th) appearance was to the 10 Apostles in the upper room. John 20:19–24 This again was their pick-me-up. At this appearance, Jesus reminded them that they had been commissioned to be His witnesses. He also gave them an anointing of the Holy Spirit in the upper room. This would strengthen them until Pentecost. They needed some spine to operate.
5. Thomas was missing from this appearance in the upper room. Thomas was the one who doubted when Jesus said, “I go to prepare a place for you.” He expressed doubt, even 8 days after the resurrection. Thomas needed more evidence. Thomas would not believe the resurrection merely from the witness of others. So, 8 days after the crucifixion, our Lord appeared to Thomas. John 20:24–29 1Cor. 15:25? This emphasized the essential quality of faith as believing in those who testified. This was critical for Thomas and for all future generations of people who would hear the gospel.
6. Paul appears to 7 disciples on the shore of Galilee, those who would become Apostles, for a seaside breakfast, and Peter got special attention. John 21 Peter had denied the Lord 3 times and was really in the dumps over this. He told them that they had to be occupied with Him. Here I am, I will live forever, I am your Messiah, and I will be with you always.
7. 6th: He appeared to all the Apostles, and to 500 others in Galilee. Matt. 28:6–20, and this passage is known as the great commission. The 500 others were included in this great commission. Their mission was to scatter, and to go out to the uttermost parts of the earth.
8. 7th One final appearance to the Apostles in Jerusalem. They went to Mount Olivet, and they watched Him ascend into heaven. Mark 16:1–20 Acts 1 They were told to wait for 10 days, until Pentecost, and then He gave them the indwelling and the filling of the Holy Spirit. Now they were ready to go to the 4 corners of the earth.

They makes this observation empiracally. Paul was not present for any of this. He got no instructions from Jesus personally. He did not wait to watch our Lord die.

More Points

1. Paul was a zealous unbeliever, and he thought he was doing great work for the Lod. He got knocked off this horse and he was completely blinded for awhile. This was the moment that Paul was converted by the appearance of Christ.
2. Paul saw in this moment the same Lord that the others had seen ascending into heaven, 40 days after the resurrection.
3. Paul had to become a believer in Jesus Christ; before he could be commissioned. He had heard all about the Lord Jesus Christ. He knew all about Christ’s life and refused to believe.
4. While laying in the dirt, Paul heard the voice of Christ giving him instruction.
5. Paul was empowered by the Holy Spirit just as the others were.

6. Like the others, Paul got some instructions. He was to go to Damascus (or Jerusalem?) And to await further instructions. Paul could see nothing until he was given the proper instructions.

The questions below all require affirmative answers. Paul said "I'm an apostle; this is my passport." That means he has seen the Jesus Christ.

Paul seldom uses the name of Jesus without the title of Christ, either before or after. Here he does not, calling Him Jesus must be Lord. Paul makes this identification himself.

Summary Points

1. The 11 were witnesses to the life of Jesus. The Apostles had to see this first-hand as they did not believe much of it.
2. On the Damascus road, Paul saw the resurrected Christ. An association with the risen Christ was critical.
3. Thus Paul by using the name of Jesus in the way that he did, associates himself with the risen Christ.
4. He did not merely see the 2nd person of the trinity. He heard words of doctrine reiterate the gospel.
5. He would continue to give witness to the risen Christ. His mission was to preach the gospel.
6. All the signs of an Apostle followed.

His 4th questions: Aren't you my workmanship in the Lord? They were the result of what Paul was commissioned to do.

They had seen Paul and all he could do; they were fully aware of his evangelistic work there. His was a work in Corinth and every city that he visited. All these early churches were Paul's work. He did all that he did because of the gift of Apostleship and the power of the Holy Spirit. He is presenting a credential; he is not bragging to them. No one else could have done this; no one. Paul is spreading the gospel to the uttermost parts of the earth. He is sent by the Lord Jesus Christ. Now that they know this and have been made aware of this. How much more effective will his message be when he establishes the high rank.

They saw what this means; we hear from Scripture what it means.

Impact on Corinthians

1. Such a great exalted man now puts others before Himself.
2. Paul considers their spiritual well-being to be more important than his physical well-being.
3. So even though Paul has every right to the greatest privileges.
4. Paul has greater rights, but he does not claim them for his own benefit. Think about what Paul did for the Corinthians. They were stabbing him in the back, and he was quite humble.

Paul kept his eyes on the Lord Jesus Christ no matter what; he applied the Law of Love. He applied the Law of Supreme Sacrifice. How could Paul have endured all of this, and these Corinthians did nothing but bad-mouth him. This same power is available to us as well. Paul never arrogantly announces, you cannot advance as far as I can.

1Cor. 9:1 Am I not free? Am I not an apostle? Have I not seen Jesus our Lord? Are not you my workmanship in the Lord?

1Cor. 9:1–2

Lesson #460

Sunday 1 December 17, 2006

Bobby has found that personal anecdotes are excellent ways to teach doctrine. Hearing Bobby make an application to his own life, often makes it easier for us to apply the doctrine to our own lives. We all have our own little story; and much of the time, it is inconsequential. However, when Paul opens a door to his life, we need to perk up our ears to listen.

The breed Apostle is not extinct. They revealed the mystery doctrine. We cannot grow in grace and knowledge apart from Scripture. Paul wrote most of the epistles and he has the great impact on us today. The Apostles only lived during the time of Christ until 96 A.D. A very short time on this earth. Paul did not have any history with Jesus Christ on earth, during His earthly ministry, like the other Apostles, who spend 3–4 years with Him. Jesus lived for about 30 years and spent only 3–4 years in a public ministry. At around age 12, Jesus and his family left for Egypt, and there is a long period of time that we know nothing about Him.

Paul did not have any of this experience; he did not know Christ on this earth, apart from the short meeting on the road to Damascus. During this time period, Paul was a young pharisee, and his desire was to kill any believer in Jesus Christ. However, Paul would, in the future, meet the same criteria as met by the other Apostles.

One of the credentials of being an Apostle is one who has seen our risen Lord, which Paul did see. When Paul asks, am I not an Apostle? Have I not seen Jesus our Lord? he is stating one of the requirements for his gift/office of Apostleship. The last recorded appearance of our Lord Jesus Christ is Jesus Christ appearing to Paul the Apostle (although what about John in Revelation?).

The shekinah glory must always be connected to the 2nd person of the Trinity. Peter, James and John also witnessed our Lord in His glorified state.

Paul became a believer in Jesus Christ after being an eyewitness to His glory. Would it be that simple today. We must present that same Jesus Christ to the world, as that is how others will receive the Lord today, is through our words. Same voice as from the burning bush; same voice as spoken from on high when giving the Ten Commandments;

Paul was blinded, but he got back on his horse and was led to Damascus on this horse, and went to a house, and he receive instructions from Jesus Christ through Ananias. Annanias was sent to Paul, and Annanias knew who Paul was, and he knew the Paul had come there to kill him, so he did not really want to go; however, that made sense for him to go to Paul.

Paul is a believer with instructions and he is given a direct commission as an Apostle. Acts 9:15–16. Verbal instructions from Christ to be a witness and a teacher, similar to Matt. 28:16. Paul was also empowered by God the Holy Spirit, just like the 11 had been. So, Paul met the criterion for Apostleship.

Are you not my work in the Lord? The Corinthians may have not thought about this much, but Paul evangelized them in that area and set up their church. He also showed them many signs and wonders to these people, as his credentials as an Apostle. And, many of them had these girst manifest themselves as well. Now, many of them had some of these gifts. Paul writes this divinely inspired instruction to these Corinthians. Now they had been reminded in v. 1 who Paul is, and Paul reminds them that they know this, as he evangelized and organized them. This makes them breaking up into little groups a rather stupid thing to do. That is, some of them cannot say, “I am of Paul” and “I am of Apollos” etc. That would be silly to not be of Paul, as he evangelized them and set them up.

Paul did not claim the great privileges that he had at their expense. He was not attempting to personally benefit from his position or authority. He reminds them of his high rank, so that when he refused to utilize these privileges, it would have a greater impact on them. Paul could have been a pope of sorts at that time, but he chose not to be. He wanted them to comprehend the critical nature of what he had done on their behalf.

What Paul wanted them to recognize his application of the law of love and the law of supreme sacrifice; and he put their needs above the privileges of his life. Paul, a great leader of that time, was doing what great spiritual leaders do.

Paul wanted the Corinthians to follow the mandates of the spiritual life. What he said was probably quite shocking to these self-centered Corinthians.

1Cor. 9:1 Am I not free? Am I not an apostle? Have I not seen Jesus our Lord? Are not you my workmanship in the Lord?

Paul reveals in this second verse why he has made an issue of his Apostleship. If I am not an Apostle to others, at least I am an Apostle to you. They themselves were witnesses of his gift. You are the seal of my Apostleship in the Lord.

Paul begins with a 1st class considtion. Paul uses this negative clause to make a point. Here, we have the word others [of the same kind]. These others could be from any church.

Bobby has seen groups and individuals who opposed Bob. Yet he stood there for 53 years because that is where God wanted Bob to be. Some did not have very pleasant lives after this opposition. Those who denied the Apostleship of Paul, for whatever reason. When you get up after some pastor and you decide to correct the situation, you had better be very careful. That can result in a personal disaster. You can end up being a human shield, and you end up standing and taking the arrows the pastor-teacher would normally take.

1Cor. 9:2 If to others I am not an apostle, at least I am to you, for you are the seal of my apostleship in the Lord.

1Cor. 9:2

Lesson #461

Sunday 2 December 17, 2006

The Apostle Paul will present himself as an example of obstinance in certain areas where we are surprised that he would abstain from. These are not even doubtful things, but completely legitimate activities, e.g., marriage.

Paul meets all the qualifications of an Apostle. If to others, I am not an Apostle, at least I am to you... In spite of everything that they have seen and heard, some look upon Paul as something other than an Apostle. They are fully aware of who he is. No matter what others think, these Corinthians at least should know, as they are the evidence of his gift. Paul cannot prove that he has seen the risen Christ, and it is apparent that the others with Paul heard His voice but did not see Him. So, it is only Paul's word that he has seen the risen Christ. However, the Corinthians are evidence in themselves of his gift of Apostleship. Paul could not prove empirically that he had seen the risen Christ, as it was only his word; they were comparable to doubting Thomas. When Thomas saw the nail prints in His hand, and he felt them, he believed Jesus Christ.

This is very similar to the women who first witnessed our Lord's resurrection: Mary, Joanna, and Mary the mother of James. They saw the angel there who said, "He is not here; He is risen." As soon as they spoke of what they had seen, most of the others did not believe. Peter didn't believe them, but he still ran out to the tomb and discovered that it was empty.

Paul faces this same sort of skepticism from the Corinthians and others. Some don't believe it; but you should believe it is Paul's contention here.

Paul uses the noun sphragis (σφραγίς) [pronounced sfrawg-IHÇ], which means a seal; 1a) the seal placed upon books; 1b) a signet ring; 1c) the inscription or impression made by a seal; 1c1) of the name of God and Christ stamped upon their foreheads; 1d) that by which anything is confirmed, proved, authenticated, as by a seal (a token or proof). Strong's #4973.

Wherever Paul went, the Holy Spirit's ministry was evident. It was never more evident than with Paul. Paul taught with incredible power. This was a person that many had not even heard of. Jesus Christ? Who is that? Some, at best, thought that He was just one of many gods. For them to accept Jesus Christ, that took some powerful teaching. Paul led them through common and efficacious grace to salvation. Paul was the common grace for these unbelievers. Paul taught them the unique spiritual life of the Church Age, that no one had heard of in the Church Age before. How could Paul bring this knowledge? This was the spiritual life that the Lord Jesus Christ pioneered on this earth. Paul was a vehicle for this work in Christ, and they came to know Christ through Paul. So, what is the difference? What about someone who can teach the gospel and someone who could teach doctrine? How is Paul different? The teaching of these things can be done today. However, the criterion for Apostleship is unique; furthermore, all of this information is brand new at this time.

There are unique gifts, like Rick Hughes can speak to a crowd and get their attention and give them the gospel. But at Paul's time, the church was in an embryonic state, and many of the protocols had not even been explained thoroughly to all believers in Jesus Christ. Paul was the messenger of the unique new spiritual life which they now possess. No one else but an Apostle has the information that Paul did at that time.

During our time, a pastor can be illuminated; but Paul was divinely inspired; the very words he used was given to him. Bobby merely teaches what is already written.

There is another factor that the Corinthians should recognize in Paul as an Apostle. Paul showed some spectacular spiritual gifts and these gifts were bestowed upon other believers in Corinth as well. The Corinthians were loaded with spectacular spiritual gifts, although many of them were temporary gifts. There are those today who think they have these gifts; but the spiritual gifts of the Bible are found only back in 96 A.D. and no later. Nowadays, the name of Jesus Christ is believed in without miracles and without tongues. How these gifts were used then and how they are used today are completely different. These healing services draw a big crowd; they draw big money. Every one of the Apostles and every one that Jesus Christ healed, later died. These spiritual gifts had a great impact on the church at Corinth, and they utilized these gifts themselves, found in 1Cor. 10:12. What did Paul bring with him? And to another, the affecting of miracles; and to another, prophecy;... Prophecy was not necessarily a telling of future events, but church age doctrine. ...to another a discernment of spirits; to another, speaking in tongues; to another, a translating of tongues. These people used these gifts as a way of identifying truth. Paul was not just some itinerate preacher, teaching whatever. Some were Judiazers who continued to teach the doctrines of the Old Testament. They should have understood that Paul was special. They received the same gifts that Paul had when he taught, so that they could be authenticated as touched by the Holy Spirit.

These Corinthians divided themselves up by their gifts as well. Not only were they divided by teachers whom they revered, but by gifts as well. "You got these gifts; where do you think you got them?" All the signs and gifts of the Apostolic office was with Paul, and yet so many denied it. Paul was the one who brought them to the Lord Jesus Christ, teaching them about grace and the Lord Jesus Christ; Paul had taught them and taught their pastors. Paul was doing it all, but that was his gift. All they had to do was open their eyes and think about what they were seeing. Too many just wanted to climb their way to the top of the church hierarchy, that they did not even put things together. The Corinthians themselves are the visible proof of Paul's spiritual gift.

Do you ever wonder about this spiritual life; you can't see it, you can't see it; you can't prove what your spiritual gifts are. However, if you simply take your eyes off yourself and look around you and see how your life works, it all makes sense. The spiritual life makes an impact and changes your life from the inside out. Bobby can see it in his father, who is unintelligible in his speech, and yet, he still prays; and he has no moments of agitation, which is a common effect of this disease. However, Bob shows no agitation in his life. He is still under the grace of God. The same things go on in our lives day after day, and if we look, we can see it. It is not a miracle; but it is still miraculous.

1Cor. 9:2 If to others I am not an apostle, at least I am to you, for you are the seal of my apostleship in the Lord.

Lesson #462 Wednesday December 20, 2006

Letter from a former teen class member. She was in a Pacific Island nation in the peace corps, and said it is one of the most isolated places in the world. A very warlike people until the gospel reached them; and the climate and fabric of their society changed. No clean water or economic development, but generally very happy. Huge groups of believers.

Logic is something that not all of us have; and some of us have no idea what it means. Paul makes a great deal of use of logic in making cases for Bible doctrine. He uses logical illustrations and he is very good at it. He was possibly a debater. He may have even been a little pugnacious in his approach. He did not mind an argument.

A systemized part of this is apologetics; part of apologetics is seeking to verify faith. Question of the credibility and the veracity of the faith. There are times when we can have doubts about what we have heard. Another part of apologetics is answering questions of skeptical unbelievers. Sometimes, you have to overcome questions of the faith.

An example of apologetics. A believer may go through a certain process. You believe something, e.g., the doctrine of resurrection. This might be a difficult thing to grasp; you believe it, but you may not be able to fully understand it. If Christ did not rise, then Christianity is false. If you have ever had a question about resurrection, then you have a mental struggle; and you ask yourself, is there any evidence of such a seemingly impossible thing happening? How do you resolve this conflict? You must come to a resolution. You come to a resolution through some empirical or logical proof. You must know something first; you must know a few facts. You know that all the disciples and 500 others saw the risen Christ. That is a Scriptural fact. There is a second fact; the Apostle Paul claimed to see the glorified Christ on the Damascus Road. After Paul's confrontation, there was a radical change. Obviously, something did happen to the Apostle Paul. That is an historical fact. Based on the evidence, the facts are logical and a firm basis for what is established. You determine that the resurrection occurred, based upon the change of behavior in Paul. The study of doctrine is all about this. You come to an enhanced appreciation of that which you believe. This logic is not a necessity for faith; and you can believe with or without apologetics.

Paul uses this argument in vv. 1–2. The Corinthians should accept him as an apostle. Paul tells the Corinthians “You are the seal of my Apostleship; you are my workmanship.”

Today, apologetics is primarily used to give the gospel to unbelievers, and it is taught in seminaries to present the gospel. It is used to overcome objections presented by unbelievers. No one is saved by a logical argument or by apologetics; it is a matter of faith. No one can argue someone into the kingdom of heaven; you cannot sell them faith; apologetics only goes to the assent level. What can apologetics do? It can break down intellectual roadblocks to faith (but it may not). In an unbeliever’s mind, if something is logically false to the believer, then it cannot be believed. So, when we overcome some of the logical objections. An example would be an argument for the existence of God. Teleological, the ontological arguments for the existence of God. Such arguments may not save a person, but they may be a tool in witnessing. 2. Apologetics may demonstrate the inadequacy of world views (like humanism or evolution). No matter how logical an argument is, it will not produce faith. If some recognizes that there are holes in humanism or evolution; then they might be more open to the faith. We do believe in an historical figure. On the other hand, the same people may believe in life on other planets; but it makes more sense to believe in Jesus Christ, an historical figure with many witnesses. 3. Apologetics can expose distortions of Christian doctrines. Acts 17:16–18:1 is apologetics being used by Paul and it got him nowhere. Paul left Athens here and went to Corinth. 4. Ultimately, faith must be expressed by the individual.

This briefly gets us warmed up for Paul’s argument. The Greek word for defense is ἀπολογία, from whence we get the word for apologetics. There is no apology here; it is a defense of him and his faith. Paul is defending to those why a defense is necessary. Why did he begin to use logic? Paul has begun to use logic in a very straightforward method.

If to others, I am not an Apostle... Paul began to defend his Apostleship. He was trying to elicit from the Corinthian believers the validity of the law of love. Paul makes a statement of his liberties in order to gain the assent of his critics in Corinth. Paul has a right to live like any other believer lives. However, he also reveals that he is willing to make a sacrifice, the sacrifice that an Apostle makes in order to teach doctrine. By citing these things, he proves his position as an Apostle. He also exemplifies his office as an Apostle. He proves his position as an Apostle. The Corinthians understand this. The law of love might be γνῶσις, but it needs to be epignôsis. The principle applies to us. Paul goes to great extremes in his apologetic.

1Cor. 9:2 If to others I am not an apostle, at least I am to you, for you are the seal of my apostleship in the Lord.

The word for examine is ἀνακρίνω = to examine. This is a forensic, judicial, legal term. It is more intense than that. It might be thought more as to cross examine. This is the intense way that Paul’s apostleship is questioned; it is as if these Corinthians are judges of Paul’s gift. It is like someone interrogating Bobby about his spiritual gift. His standing before us and teaching us is good evidence. The letter which he read is evidence of his gift. That is the point of Paul’s argument: these Corinthians are his workmanship. They should know he is an Apostle as they are the evidence of this. One must be very careful when one decides to be antagonistic or critical of someone who functions by means of the Holy Spirit.

You may listen to someone who does you know good; that does not mean that he is not a pastor; he must might not be your pastor. You need to move out quietly and find your right pastor-teacher.

Indictments of Paul:

1. He's not married, so there is something wrong with him.
2. All the other Apostles are married (or most of them are). Liberals accuse Paul of being homosexual because he is unmarried; they are simply critical and they want to discredit him.
3. Paul refused to take a salary in Corinth; he refused to accept support from the Corinthians. Therefore, his message must be worthless. The Corinthians did not understand grace. Paul was teaching grace by his refusal to take personal support from them. There was nothing wrong with Paul's message; it was the most valuable thing that he could give.

1Cor. 9:3 This is my defense to those who would examine me.

So Paul answers this indictment with an illustration: the illustration of his right as an Apostle. If Paul is proven by these dissenters not to be an Apostle, then his message is at risk. Paul begins his apologetics with an illustration. Do we not have a right to eat and drink? Do we not have a right to take along a believing wife, like Cephas? He proves his Apostleship in vv. 1–3, and he then goes on to deal with his rights in vv. 4–5. He has a right to sustenance, to having a wife and family and to support from a church. However, Paul does not take advantage of these rights. Paul wants the Corinthians to make the connection between this and the stumbling block defense. There is a necessity for them to apply the law of love among themselves. Maybe the law of love is an extreme case to indicate the concept of love among the brothers? Paul's defense is his supreme sacrifice, which will have great impact on these people. In Corinth, Paul worked as a tent-maker, the greatest man of doctrine in the world, and this could be such a distraction. Paul did this voluntarily. Paul is making an argument with great force. He is totally within his rights as an Apostle to certain liberties.

He begins in v. 4 with a double negative. A double-negative requires a positive response. Do you mean to say I have no right to eat and drink? The logical response is, of course Paul has every right to eat and drink whatever he wants. Paul changes something; he changes from 1st person singular to 1st person plural. In v. 4, Paul goes to the subject we. The others are a part of his defense. Briefly, the people in Corinth were divided into factions, one claiming Peter as their man. Paul will use Peter as a defense. If they claim Peter, then they must claim Paul.

1Cor. 9:4 Do we not have the right to eat and drink?

v. 3 signifies an απολογία, which is a defense. When studying classics at UT, there was Plato's book Απολογία, Paul is dealing with the ανακρινω of the Corinthians. They are intensely grilling or examining Paul, as an attorney would cross-examine a witness. They are cross-examining, and Paul will defend himself. Some have challenged the validity of his Apostleship. Some of these Corinthians act as if they are jurists in some very important court. Will not the Lord Himself vindicate the Apostle Paul? Paul will make a defense, because he is not just defending himself or his privilege, but there is something more here, which demands Paul to make a defense. The very force of Paul's message depends upon his defense. If his Apostleship is impugned and disparaged, so then is the doctrine which he teaches to those who listen. This affects his flock in Corinth. No one is going to listen to a man whose position is under question. In his defense, he must defend himself; and this is so he can teach. A minister today who is defamed and defrocked has his voice silenced, no matter how doctrinal his message is. Paul's antagonists are trying to do this to him. Paul is trying to defend himself against this indictment against himself.

The Charges Levelled Against Paul

1. The first charge against Paul is that he is not married. Maybe there is something morally wrong with him? Weren't most of the Apostles married? Isn't this a requirement? However, Paul is single with no prospects.
2. Paul worked and did not take money for his teaching and he never asked for a dime. Maybe Paul is afraid to charge for such a preposterous message? What is grace and how does it work? Grace doesn't pay the bills. You have to have support. Legalists always attack grace.
- 3.

What can Paul do to make a defense. "You Corinthians are the proof of my defense; look at your; you are my work." Actually, Paul is the vehicle through which the Holy Spirit works. Paul has started to defend himself in v. 3.

Paul's Defense

1. Paul will use himself as the defense.
2. He will testify to his supreme sacrifices, made in the very area of his indictment. The indictment itself is wrong and the charges should be dismissed.
3. The Corinthians themselves are the witnesses who can back up Paul's claims.

The remainder of this chapter is Paul's defense.

Paul's Defense

1. Paul's illustration of the supreme sacrifice.
2. The proof of his Apostleship is shown through his own sacrificial actions.

3. Paul will cite his own choice to live his life as an extreme exemplary of the law of love.

1Cor. 9:3 This is my defense to those who would examine me.

Do we have the right to eat and drink? To take a wife? Paul asks, "Do I not have the right to basic support, sustenance; family support and financial support?"

Μη ουκ = absolutely not; two negatives is extremely strong and this is answered positively. Do you mean to say that we have no right to eat and drink? . The charge is ridiculous; of course they have the right to eat, drink and have a wife.

In v. 4, Paul says we; in the previous 3 verses, Paul said I. Paul now includes someone else besides himself. They are now becoming witnesses. Who are the brothers of the Lord? Barnabas in v. 6, and some others are named; and these make up the 1st person plural. These are rights which are extended to men who are Apostles and have other specific duties. All of this does not leave much time for these men to support themselves. The rights in question deal with outside support.

Εξουσια = right, privilege, authority. In this chapter, the best way to render it is a privilege granted to a person. Under the law of liberty, Paul is free and he has privileges and rights, which are granted to Paul as they are to every other believer. Paul is free to partake of these privileges or not. The choice he makes is his defense. There are other things involved here; it is the matter of law of liberty and the law of love. Paul, in order to defend the law of love, means that Paul must go overboard in order to legitimize it.

ingressive Aorist active infinitives (ingressive means that the action is contemplated at its beginning). Paul is entering into the state of eating and drinking. The infinitive indicates purpose; why does Paul make the decisions that he does. It is for the purpose of eating and drinking. This is more than just a parallel subject to chapter 8. Eating and drinking is puny compared to what Paul is going to get to. There is some doubt here which can be associated with eating meat offered to idols. Do you mean to say we have no privilege granted to us for the purpose of eating and drinking? Are you sure you want to say that? Or, Do you mean to say that we do not have the privilege of eating and drinking? Of course we have this privilege! I have the right to be married; I have the right to take a salary for what I do.

Paul's point is these legalists are attacking grace; they always go after the plan of God. They question what is legitimate.

All of us must eat and drink; this is a matter of survival. So why would Paul make an issue of eating and drinking as a privilege? In v. 4, eating and drinking is figurative. The figurative meaning of eating and drinking is the support necessary to maintain one's life and ministry. This support includes financial support.

What is the Privilege?

1. Paul has the right and privilege of being financially supported by the gifts and donations of fellow believers.
2. This includes financial assistance and remuneration for living and continuing his work. We all expect to be paid for our work. Does anyone work for free? Does anyone go off to work for 8 hours and get nothing for it? If you did, people would consider you out of your mind. We expect it; that is normal. That pays rent and puts food on the table.

Apaphroditus, Timothy and Paul are all laborers. Not one of these men has a specific person who pays the bills or supports them. They don't punch a clock; they don't work for a boss or a company. There is no one designated to sign their paychecks. Their spiritual mission—they are not working for anyone in any money making enterprise, depending upon the magnitude. There is nothing wrong with this expectation. There is nothing wrong with making a living; with getting subsistence.

Paul's points

1. Paul has the privilege of being supported; he has the means of being supported and he should be paid for his labor. This
2. They may be giving grudgingly or of necessity, which is the wrong motivation.
3. Paul knows that their grace orientation is more important than his receiving of support. Here is a man dedicated to his work. That is a great sacrifice and that is his defense. The Corinthians can corroborate this.
4. This grace orientation goes directly to Paul's mission to teach these people grace.
5. Paul's mission is more important than his own survival. There is more to this than simply a sacrifice on his part.

1Cor. 9:4 Do we not have the right to eat and drink?

Paul names a second privilege in the 5th verse: Do we not have the right to take along a believing wife, as do the other apostles and the brothers of the Lord and Cephas? It was well-known to the entire church that Peter was married and Peter is well-known in general. This gives additional reason why Paul is legitimately allowed to be married. This logic is doubly-effective. Some of those in the Corinthian church are confused by Paul not being married. "You know Peter, an Apostles, and he is married; therefore, I have the privilege of being married." They accept Peter. They can't deny Paul without denying Peter, and Peter is not an issue. They have already made a big issue of who they are going to follow: Paul, Peter, Apollos, the Lord.

V. 5 also begins with a double-negative. Paul expects a positive answer. Εξουσια always brings in the grace aspect. Paul is going to sacrifice the great things in life; Paul totally gives up his right. Paul could have required the Corinthians to pay him for what he did, but he made a point of not doing that. He wanted them to understand the doctrine and the gospel are never for sale.

Never give if you are confused about giving. Marriage is the bedrock of family and nation and it is a privilege to be married; Paul claims this privilege, and yet forgoes it.

1Cor. 9:5 Do we not have the right to take along a believing wife, as do the other apostles and the brothers of the Lord and Cephas?

2Cor. 5:18–19

Lesson #none

Sunday 1 December 24, 2006

The morning of Christmas Eve; probably one of these will be a Christmas message, and the other a part of the series? Bobby welcomes the visitors and introduces them to rebound.

As believers in Jesus Christ, we have a message to the world, and this message is most visible to the unbeliever during Christmas, and almost all people think about Christ during this time. We have the message of Christ for Christmas.

Since we are studying the Corinthians, we should have a Corinthian Christmas, and let's begin with a question: what exactly does Christmas mean to us? The Christmas message in our soul is directly related to our understanding of this day. 2Cor. 5:18–19: All this is from God, who through Christ reconciled us to himself and gave us the ministry of reconciliation; that is, in Christ God was reconciling the world to himself, not counting their trespasses against them, and entrusting to us the message of reconciliation. To the non-Christian world, the Christmas story is some myth that began just one more religion in the world, in which there are many. To them, it begins a human life, and they see Him as a great moral man and a great teacher. Humanism is the religion today; and they see man as the great aspect of this world. They examine the cultural relationships of men, and hopefully thereby understand their own life and purpose. Man as a subject is most interesting to the unregenerate mind, who sees nothing beyond himself. Man cannot elevate himself above what he is already is. We cannot lift ourselves above our own faults and sins. We cannot remove our innate nature which is unchangeable, despite our best efforts. Man cannot understand himself, without understanding the permanence of his own nature. In short, man needs salvation from himself; we need to be saved from ourselves. Man cannot elevate himself to deity; he cannot reach deity on his own. For this reason, God orchestrated the Christmas event to change this. Christmas was the advent of the source of our salvation. God was in Christ reconciling the world to Himself. The birth announcement of Luke 2:7: And she gave birth to her firstborn son and wrapped him in bandages and laid him in a manger, because there was no place for them in the inn. At this moment, God of the universe, the Creator of all mankind, became flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld His glory, as the glory of God. God had taken on human life and form for an unimaginable purpose. He was the only one to reconcile the enmity. All the devices and all the machinations of man could never accomplish reconciliation with God. God cannot compromise; He cannot compromise His perfect righteousness and integrity. Almighty God, immutable God. To compromise with sin brings God down to our level. Literally a man without sin; no inherent sin and no committed sin. Only He could reconcile God and man. Acts 4:12: Neither there is salvation in any other, for there is no other name under heaven given among men by which we must be saved. We are lucky that God did not leave us in our fallen condition. Heb. 1:1–3. God spoke to OT is in many way, in these last days, He has spoken to us in His Son, whom He has appointed heir of all things, through Whom He has created all things. The same baby who created the world lays in straw in a manger. And when He had made a payment for sins, and sat at the right hand of the Father.

For us, this morning, the significance of this day is the unveiling of God to man. God was in Christ reconciling the world to Himself. This revelation was not complete, simply because God appeared in man. His first clothes are swaddling clothes, bandages. These are death clothes. He was not born to live; He was born to die. These are certainly different events, His birth and death; but only the latter fulfills His purpose.

The star of hope for man shines. Matt. 1:21: "She will bear a son, and you shall call his name Jesus, for he will save his people from their sins." The shadow of the cross fell across the manger. The announcement of salvation. This is the same announcement found in Luke 2:10–12: And the angel said to them, "Fear not, for behold, I bring you good news of a great joy that will be for all the people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, who is Christ the Lord. And this will be a sign for you: you will find a baby wrapped in swaddling cloths [bandages; death clothes] and lying in a manger."

John 3:17: For God did not send His Son into the world to judge the world [we were already judged], but that the world might be saved through Him. Since then the children share in flesh and blood; and He Himself likewise shared in the same, He appeared in the form of a man, that through death, He might render powerless him who has the power of death [Satan]. He was born to reconcile us and also won the strategic victory of the Angelic conflict. He saw in the manger and cross shadow His own doom. The plan of God was in full force as that baby lay in the manger.

Matt. 1–2 and Luke 1–3 make up the birth chapters. The Old Testament also provides a wealth of information about the Lord Jesus Christ. What we find in the Old Testament is proof of just Who and What the Messiah would be. 35 of 39 of the Old Testament books speak of the Messiah; the birth of Jesus is the complete fulfillment of the appearance of the Messiah.

Many examples of Messiah. He would be the descendant of Abraham (Gen. 12:3 Matt. 1:1 ), Isaac (Luke 3:34), Jacob (Num. 24:17 Matt. 1:2); from tribe of Judah (Gen. 49:10 Luke 3:33); heir to throne of David (Isa. 9:7 Luke 1:32–33). Born in Bethlehem (Micah 5:2 Luke 2:4–5, 7). Born of a virgin (Isa. 7:14 Luke 1:26, 30–31). Prince of Peace (Jer. 31:15 His appearance would trigger a slaughter of children (Matt. 2:16–18). Messiah would come out from Egypt (Hosea 11:1 Matt. 2:13–14). These were written 500–1500 years before His birth. God revealed these things directly to the prophets in the Old Testament, and for one reason only, so that all Jews would recognize the signs of the King of Kings. So they could clearly see Him as the promised Messiah and accept Him as the Passover Lamb, Who takes away the sin of the world, the reconciler between God and man (Isa. 53). But, for the most part, the Jews and there religious leaders rejected Him. This is why the Jews and the Romans killed Him. The Jews wanted a physical liberator from Rome; not a spiritual liberator from their sins.

The Bible does not speak of just one advent of Jesus Christ. The angel speaks to Mary, "Do not be afraid, Mary; for you have found favor with God. Listen, you will conceive in your womb and bear a Son and you will name Him Jesus, and He will be the Son of the Most High, and He will reign over the house of Jacob and His kingdom will have no end." The Romans mocked Him with the sign the King of the Jews on the crucifix. We are not left out, as Gentiles. We are also related to that glorification.

1Thess. 4:15–17: We who are alive and remain at the coming of the Lord will not precede those who have died before; the dead in Christ will rise first, and then we shall rise to meet the Lord in the air.

For many, there is no Christ in Christmas. There are pageants, shepherd scenes, etc., and so many of these are perfunctory; lip service. This is so far above the materialism of this world. His incomparable gift to you and me. God was in Christ reconciling the world to Himself. We carry this light to the world. We relate the greatest message that was ever told.

1Cor. 9:4–5

Sunday 2 December 24, 2006

Paul is taking incoming rounds and he is defending himself. My defense is this. God can vindicate anyone so much better; however, God has allowed Paul to vindicate himself for our benefit. The very force of his method depends upon his defense. It is never the man; it is always the message. Our mission is to think with the very mind of Christ; that is what we are to do as believers. There is nothing on this earth; no circumstance and no pleasure which can take the place of our spiritual growth. We are to grow in grace and knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. We need to know the doctrine which He brought through the Apostle Paul. Paul also defends the mystery doctrine which He reveals. Paul was an ambassador, as are we. Paul went all over the ancient world; he founded churches, and he told unbelievers all over exactly what Bobby told us earlier this morning. Paul interpreted the coming of Jesus Christ theologically. How will He defend His Apostleship, and he will do it with illustrations of his rights. Today, everyone is concerned with rights. Paul had rights as a believer in Jesus Christ, and these are actually privileges which he enjoyed as an Apostle, but privileges which he never took advantage of; and he defends his position. When you debate and are antagonistic to those who speak the truth, you are antagonistic toward the One who died for us. Even Christians are like this; even believers are antagonistic toward His Word, they are antagonistic toward those who teach the Word. You cannot oppose the teacher of the Word without opposing the doctrine. Our Lord Jesus Christ was the ultimate sacrifice; He died for us. The Apostle Paul can never make a sacrifice like that, but he can exemplify a sacrifice like that. Paul will die to defend. Here, he shows the sacrifice of his life. Paul was making a defense of Christmas; he was making a defense of the very mind of Christ. He was living a sacrificial life. Can't you Corinthians live by the law of love toward one another? Can you put the daggers away for a little while? Can you take them out long enough to apply a little doctrine?

It is amazing as to how people get bent out of shape; what makes them mad at a pastor; you don't like his voice, his attitude, his language. However, most of the time, when you reject the man, you are rejecting the message.

Charges Against Paul

1. Paul would not accept money for his teaching. Maybe his message is worthless because he is not charging for it? Paul's antagonists did not understand grace. Doctrine is never for sale. No one should charge for teaching the gospel or doctrine; never give grudgingly or out of necessity. Grace is the message of the Lord Jesus Christ. Grace is the plan of God. God's grace provided salvation through that child in the manger. Paul defends grace by not charging a salary. Paul is a genius out there sewing tents in order to make ends meet. It is always grace; that is what it is always all about.

Paul begins his defense in v. 4: Do we not have a right to eat and drink? It is a privilege of grace to receive income for his labor, so that he can continue his critical mission. Don't we work so that we can survive? Paul was being attacked for this very grace privilege. The present under our trees represents God in the manger 2000 years ago. Everything about Christmas represents the grace of God. It is worth defending; it is worth our life.

1Cor. 9:4 Do we not have the right to eat and drink?

2. He was not married, and therefore, there is something wrong with Paul. Maybe he hated women? Maybe there was something deeply wrong with him? Don't we have a right to have a wife, like Cephas?

Is it not true that we have no privilege? God has ordained marriage for the blessing of the human race; and it is a part of our corporate witness. Marriage is a privilege for the recipient. What God has provided is also a gift. This greatest relationship that people can have with one another.

To take along = περιπαλω = to lead around, to carry about in one's company. This speaks to the man's leadership role in marriage. Feminists don't like this. Man, a leader? I'm a better leader than any man I've ever met. There is also the connotation of traveling, and brings to our thoughts Paul taking a wife around with him all over the ancient world.

Gen. 2:15 the wife is the helper of the man. There is nothing wrong with the wife as a helper, a partner in the ministry. Paul cites Peter as an example of this. Their women were logistical grace for their ministries. However, because of Paul's extensive travels, this would be too hard on a wife; and Paul did not want to fail as a husband. His choice here has everything to do with his grace message, and yet he is attacked for not having a wife. Αδελφη γυνικος = a believing wife. This refers to a woman who is a believer in Jesus Christ. The Christian wife is the object of the infinitive to lead around. This shows that the forced celibacy of the clergy was unknown at that time. However, this has become an enforced function of those very high up in the Catholic church. Those who reject marriage reject the grace of God. Paul's mission is the uncovering of the grace of God. He can have the greater privilege of revealing the grace of God. What are a few moments, days or even years of loneliness. We should never be lonely. We have the greatest gift; we have the Lord Jesus Christ, and He never departs. So we spend a few moments in this life in a little loneliness, but we are looking at eternity when there will be no more tears, pain, death, loneliness, etc. Bobby has gotten some wonderful messages from those in Iraq and Afghanistan. They carry the gift of Jesus Christ with them. We have received the greatest God, the grace of God. Never forget it. Thank God for all that He has given us tomorrow when we eat our lunch.

1Cor. 9:5 Do we not have the right to take along a believing wife [i.e., a Christian wife], as do the other apostles and the brothers of the Lord and Cephas?

1Cor. 9:4–6

Lesson #465 Wednesday December 27, 2006

10 am one service Sunday am; 2nd service that night at 8 pm.

Paul is making a defense of his Apostleship. Paul defends himself against those who question his gift and office; Paul is not simply defending himself to further his own personal ambitions or to maintain his authority; what Paul needs to do is to make certain that his message is not disparaged. Paul must vindicate himself so that his message is vindicated. Paul defends this message and is, in fact, abstaining from some behavior which is absolutely legitimate, which deflects any charge of Paul enjoying privileges which the ordinary hoi poloi does not get. Paul apparently takes fewer liberties with his life than any of the Corinthians.

When Paul says, "Don't we have the right to eat and drink?" This covers more than simple eating and drinking. Paul must survive and make a living in some way. Paul has a support from an outside source; which does not mean just money. Believers put him up in their home; he is fed and clothed by them as well, we might reasonably assume. However, he also supported himself with tent making. He received support from a number of different sources in those days. This v. 4 refers to financial assistance. Paul is a laborer in Christ; he does not include just himself here, but the others in his missionary team. Paul is not a slacker; he does not kick back and rest on his laurels. He does the job that he needs to do on this earth in preparation for his eternal life. No one sends Paul a paycheck or a support check. Bobby is given money only from Berachah. Paul and these other Apostles do not have just one source of income. There was no ancient world corporation; they did not remain in one church. Therefore, their support varied from month to month and came from several different sources. Some pastors have to work outside their ministry, which detracts from their ministry. There is such a thing as a professional missionary, a professional pastor, a professional evangelist. These are those whose ministry is disturbed when they have to do additional work.

1Cor. 9:4 Do we not have the right to eat and drink?

Do we not have a right to take along a believing wife? This is a privilege, and not a burden. Present active indicative of περιπαῶ = to lead around, to carry about in one's company. In this case, it means to lead around a wife. This is the leadership role of the husband in marriage.

Paul did such extensive traveling, that he would be leading a wife all over the place. Paul walked or took passage on a ship. He covered a lot of ground. His journeys were truly journeys. Most of the ships weren't all that sea worthy and they tried to hug the coastline as they traveled. If married, Paul had the added responsibility of packing along a wife; but Paul needed to move fast and light, and she would have to move with him. She had to face just as many dangers and hardships as Paul faced. It would have meant added expense for her and children, if that happened. The other option would be to leave the woman at home, which could have been almost all the time. Paul was always on the mood. A wife would just slow him down. Now, on the other hand, a wife could have been a good helper for Paul; no doubt, Peter's wife was a part of his logistical support (which does not make them 2nd class citizens; it is not degrading to be a helper).

Paul was the greatest missionary and church planter of that time; he sacrificed a great deal to not have a helper, companion, partner, etc. Note that Paul mentions a believing wife; there is no way for him to just have any gal as a wife; must be a believer. It is not just about any old believer; or any old wife. It is also important that a woman must be very mature wife, spiritually speaking. She would have had to be dedicated to support Paul's atypical lifestyle. There must be a dedication to this mission. He can't just grab the nearest willing woman to haul along. This is why Paul would need to have a spiritually mature woman, because of his own dedication. She must be totally willing to subordinate herself to her husband and his mission. This applies to all men with a communication gift throughout all generations. The pastor's mission takes priority; now, he has a responsibility toward his family, but to his mission first. It is always the mission first; in the military and in a spiritual existence.

Bob found time for Bobby, especially at a young age; but he kept his mission a priority. He spoke 9–10 times a week at times. The pastor, the teacher, the evangelist has a mission, and the mission takes priority.

Bobby thinks of Billy Graham and his wife. His wife had the added burden of taking care of the family and the logistical support; and she wrote a book about it. She was extremely successful at doing this. They are a perfect example of rm/rw. Marriage is a privilege, as you become double-combatants in the Angelic Conflict.

Paul would have been a leader, a man of doctrine, a man which great authority; and he would have seemed attractive to some women, even though he was probably not very attractive physically. Paul had leadership and one of the greatest positions of leadership. You can't fraternize with everyone, as people will eat your time up; and they don't even realize it. Paul had great character and a great sense of responsibility; and he knew to be dedicated to his mission. This defense here reveals his great dedication to the mission.

Even as the rest of the Apostles... Does this mean that all of the Apostles were married? This does not demand that; at least Peter is, and it indicates, probably, that most of them were married. In essence, plenty of the Apostles are married and they have availed themselves of that privilege.

Then Paul mentions the brothers; the brothers of the Lord, which has been the subject of much speculation. Who are these brothers? Lord is in the possessive genitive, which refers to a type of ownership; a closeness; something we have and possess. He has a close relationship with whomever these brothers are. We are all in union with Christ. Definite article refers to a very specific group of brothers; not generally referring to believers, but specifically to the actual brothers of Jesus Christ. They should be taken here as immediate family. These would be the natural children of Joseph and Mary after the incarnation. Only Jesus was a virgin pregnancy/virgin birth. Matt. 15:35 Mark 6:33 It could be the brothers; or could be their cousins. Mary did have a sister Mary, which was not out of the ordinary in the past.

What is the big deal about the brothers of the Lord? They are mentioned here because they were distinctive men in the ancient church. This is also mentioned because Jesus Christ was not married. Paul mentions the Apostles and the brothers of the Lord; but, obviously, he does not include Jesus here, for those who believe the Divinci Code. In general, these are married people. This is a normal thing; this also indicates that being unmarried is a thing which should be a part of the church. Most of the Apostles and brothers of the Lord was married; which indicates that his choice not to be married is unusual and not to be taken as the norm.

1Cor. 9:5 Do we not have the right to take along a believing wife, as do the other apostles and the brothers of the Lord and Cephas?

There is the privilege of not working. Don't Barnabas and I have the right not to work? Have we not the privilege of not working? Paul works himself to death. The idea is, he should not have to support himself apart from his teaching and evangelizing ministry. Εργαζομαι = manuel labor. Almost all had to indulge in manual labor to make a living; everyone was blue collar for the most part. Paul means to say here, he and Barnabas should have been able to forgoing manual labor in order to make a living.

1Cor. 9:6 Or is it only Barnabas and I who have no right to refrain from working for a living?

1Cor. 9:6–7

Lesson #466 Thursday December 28, 2006

Paul makes his defense by naming privileges and then saying why he does not utilize them. Εξουσια = right, privilege. 1Cor. 9 is a chapter on grace and Paul is teaching grace to a group of believers who are anything but gracious. "We must do something for the Lord; we must do something to be holier than we were yesterday." But we do not have to do anything to gain the favor of God by way of works. God's grace will be apparent that we will not believe it. We will realize suddenly how different our thinking is from the rest of the world.

Bobby has seen so many times the straight line of grace—true north. When someone is just 1 degree off from grace, and the further along that we go, the deviation becomes greater and greater. You may have a teacher and his protegee who are accurate; and then, their congregation just gets a little off-kilter; and they end up going way off.

The privilege of not having to go to work. We all get up and we have to trudge off to work. Sometimes people hate it their entire lives. You have to work. Paul says, “We have the privilege not to work.” More accurately: “Do we not have the privilege of not working?” The word for work is εργαζομαι = manual labor.

3 reasons why Paul does not have to εργαζομαι.

1. Paul and Barnabas have the privilege of forgoing manual labor. No construction, no difficult work out in the awful weather. Farmer, shepherd and soldier are 3 who live out in the elements and their labor is manual.
2. Paul does not have to work for wages outside the ministry.
3. They have a privilege to being supported by the churches, so that they are not distracted from the spiritual duties.

Rich Hughes thought he was a pastor teacher, and a friend of his thought he was an evangelist; and it turns out that they had it flip-flopped. Evangelists should evangelize and then point the way toward a good church where a person can grow. A missionary plants churches, setting up churches and getting it started, and allowing indigenous types to take over.

Paul taught the mystery doctrine of the church age. Paul had it all. It was a full time job in itself. “We have the privilege of not εργαζομαι-ing.” If, Paul has this right, and Barnabas has this right as well. The Corinthians understood that this include Apollos, Timothy (both thrown out by the Corinthians, a bunch of legalists who wanted power).

Bobby could have some songs and young people on the stage doing things, but this does not stimulate a person’s spiritual growth. Churches are filled with babies who do not want to hear the word but want to be entertained. As we grow, we in essence have our own ministry in our own little world.

For Bobby; it is great; things just pour into his mind. He starts in the morning and at noon or 1, it is like a few minutes have passed by. He loves going to work.

Why did Paul mention only himself and Barnabas? Barnabas was Paul’s companion on his very first missionary journey. After being knocked off his horse on the Damascus road. Later he too a boat from Antioch to... Then walked to Galatia, backtracked to Pamphilia, picked up a ship there, and went to Cyprus. Barnabas was with him every step of the way and Barnabas followed Paul’s example. They did not accept any wages from anyone. These people were used to money being wrung out of them by religious leaders, and there was no good reason for it other than some religious figure wanted it. They did not understand giving as a grace operation. Paul and Barnabas took jobs on the journey.

Wherever they went, wherever they could, they picked up odd jobs. Paul sewed tents; maybe Barnabas did as well. This is how they survived their missionary journey.

The Christian world heard about Paul and Barnabas and heard that they went through these cities and refused money for support. How many people work hard and don't get paid for it? Maybe you think you don't get paid enough, but you do get paid.

Paul was the founder of most of these churches, and word got around about Paul and the teaching of grace; and Paul did not accept any money. Paul needed them to understand grace as he understood grace. They lived under the law of supreme sacrifice. He is free under the law of liberty of taking a salary from the churches; but he taught doctrine for free in order to teach grace. Everywhere, churches have their hand out. Some churches will even remove a certain part of your salary; they take it right out of your account (with your permission). No one affiliated with Berachah will ask for money. This founder of churches, acted as a common laborer. No haughty rabbi would have done this; they would expect to be supported. Paul is not arrogant. This is what Paul demonstrated...a mature believer who was grace oriented.

1Cor. 9:6 Or is it only Barnabas and I who have no right to refrain from working for a living?

People in the ancient world understood Roman soldiers; they were very professional; and when Paul used them as examples, people understood. Who becomes a soldier at his own expense? Who plants a vineyard but does not eat of it? Or who tends a flock and does not use the milk of the flock? These are 3 basic vocations in that agrarian society. Everyone can understand 2 or 3 of Paul's examples. When you work, you expect compensation for your labor. They receive their support directly from what they do. Today, we might be some check from someone we have never met, who does not know us; because we work for some company. All of these deal with direct remuneration.

If the working man receives remuneration for their labor, then should not the Apostle or the pastor teacher or the missionary also receive remuneration for his labor? Should they not receive remuneration from the same field in which they work?

The first vocation named is as a soldier (Bobby's first steady job). No one wants to go to war at their own expense. Οπισθιον = at one's own expense [of equipment, rations and salary; logistical support]. GI = government issue. Every person in the military is issued all that they need in order to go to war. No soldier outfits himself. Bobby did have to buy the dress uniform. Dative plural = on his own equipment, rations and money. There was a time, in our own history, like the revolutionary war, and some of the other early wars, you came to fight with whatever it was that you had. They all just showed up. 35 different rifles to provide ammunition for. It was not until the Civil War until there was a more standard issue. A dative of disadvantage. It is not to the soldier's advantage to pay for his own logistics. You don't have an army without logistic. You get soldiers who are foragers, scavengers and even deserters. Armies at time went through a land and they were scourges; they raped the land and took whatever they could carry. Without logistics, the primary mission is forgotten.

Bobby gives an example. By 1918, Germany has faced naval blockages and no outside supplies were getting in. Not enough food or commodities. The previous winter in 1918, the general population had very little to eat. Very little coal and it was the coldest winter of the decade. The German army took on the greatest offensive of WWI, conceived by Ludendorff and his sidekick Hindenberg. Ludendorff ran Germany at this time. This was his plan, and there was a real chance for Germany in 1918 even under these conditions. The Russians had bowed out, as they shut down the eastern front, since the Russians went into their revolution in 1917. Now there was just the western front. They put all of their offenses into this front. Their soldiers were hungry and thirsty. They got a great breakthrough. Most of it was a stalemate, from the North Sea to Switzerland (?) and they fought over this 1500 mile strip for most of the war in trenches. Germany broke through the allied lines and began a drive to Paris, and if they reached Paris, the war was over. However, this German offensive broke down because they were hungry. They liberated food. They went into cellars, and they found wine. They gorged themselves; they got drunk. And they began fighting for their own gain; and they lost for that reason. They eventually got into plunder, pillage and rape. They were now fighting for themselves; not for the objective of winning the war. When an army fights on their own rations, they degenerate into a rabble.

1Cor. 9:7 Who serves as a soldier at his own expense? Who plants a vineyard without eating any of its fruit? Or who tends a flock without getting some of the milk?

1Cor. 9:7-9

Lesson #467

Sunday 1 December 31, 2006

As believers, we should have respect for the laws of divine establishment; secondly, for the uniform of those who protect us (the police and armed forces) and thirdly, for the Word of God.

Tonight will be a New Year's message; and Bobby has been asked to make a prediction. The Word of God does show us the trends of history. Paul makes a very unusual defense of his Apostleship; if he is not an Apostle, then what he says and writes is suspect. It would make it suspect as to what we do in church. Paul's defense in 1Cor. 9 is critical. His message is being attacked through the legitimacy of his spiritual gift. His defense is made by his voluntary lifestyle choices, and what he has chosen to forgo, as an indication of his mission. Without his function, we have no church and we have little or no Scripture. The Apostles are critical, or we do not know what we have or who we are.

Sacrifice is only meaningful if you give up what is desired and attainable. It is meaningful if most people would have this same privilege. Paul is giving a great deal up in order to complete his Apostolic mission.

Among other things, eating and drinking are privileges which he does not forgo, per se, but the financial support which allows him to eat and drink. He has the right and privilege of an Apostle to be remunerated for his spiritual work. In v. 5, he has the privilege of leading along a wife, a companion and helper; yet, Paul will forgo this privilege.

Paul will address getting paid for what he does; and he has the right and privilege to be supported, as referenced in v. 4.

Illustrations of v. 7

1. Who serves as a soldier at his own expense
2. Who farms and does not eat from the produce.
3. Who attends to a flock but does not use the milk of the flock.

Everyone is familiar with these 3 occupations. The Roman empire became an empire because of its military. When writing the prison epistles, Paul uses many military illustrations. As believers in the church age, we should honor the uniform of our country. Who serves as a soldier at his own expense? Every soldier should be given the necessary logistical support out in the field and he should get remunerated for this work. Without this logistical support, a soldier often becomes a scavenger, which leads to plundering, raping and burning. The army becomes a rabble out for their own gain. A soldier not only deserves to be supported and paid, but it is critical in order for him to do his job. In the ancient world, these 3 illustrations involve a huge amount of work, with very little extra time. These people obviously need to be lawfully remunerated for the work that they do. It is just and correct for Paul and others to be supported as pastors, Apostles, teachers, evangelists and missionaries. Why would a minister be required to support himself? We do not expect that of anyone outside the ministry.

What is supplied for sustenance comes directly from the occupation. In the ancient world, the plunder and pillage was given to the soldiers. Winning was an incentive, particularly of the Barbarians who were on the fringe of the empire. They sometimes put the cart before the horse; they often put the cart before the horse, and began pillaging first, which is why the Roman army was more disciplined and able to take out the Barbarians for about a century. There was financial remuneration for the Roman army apart from the plundering and pillaging.

Paul's analogies are succinct and understandable to his readers. Paul understood exactly what he was doing when he added the word ποιμην = shepherd. There is a built-in parallel between a shepherd and a pastor-teacher.

Pastor and Shepherd Compared

1. Just as the shepherd has authority over the flock, so the pastor has authority over his flock as well.
2. In the realm of the pastor-teacher, ποιμην connotes the authority vested in the pastor of the church. Bobby's authority does not mean that he runs our lives; or that he follows us around and tells us what to do. It is doctrine where he is authoritative. He is aided by a board of deacons.
3. Ποιμην has a 3rd connotation apart from authority: provision and guidance for the sheep; the logistics for the sheep. He provides for their shelter and food. He keeps them safe.

4. This is also true of the ποιμνῆν in the spiritual realm. Eph. 4:11–12
5. The literal shepherd provides care, nourishment, and guidance to the flock.
6. The pastor supplies spiritual care, protection, nourishment and guidance to the congregation. This is done through the teaching of Bible doctrine. The pastor should receive his sustenance from the congregation which he serves.
7. Remuneration comes from a shepherd's own flock, whether an actual shepherd or a pastor.

No shepherd, soldier, or farmer functions apart from being remunerated by his profession.

3 Logical Conclusions

1. If remuneration drawn from one's vocation is the natural order of things,
2. Therefore, this should be the same principle for an Apostle. There is a lot of work involved with being a pastor-teacher.
3. Today for those whose vocation is pastor-teacher, missionary or evangelist, the remuneration principle is exactly the same.

1Cor. 9:7 Who serves as a soldier at his own expense? Who plants a vineyard without eating any of its fruit? Or who tends a flock without getting some of the milk?

We begin with a negative particle μή, which expects a negative answer (as οὐκ expects a positive answer). Paul is asking rhetorically, are these simply human viewpoint ideas? Is he simply making this up for his own benefit? Paul did not make this up in order to make a buck, nor is he a salesman, trying to make a dollar from what he can sell. He is a legitimate teacher of the Word of God, which he brings to them as an Apostle. Paul does not speak as would another person. He is not trying to up his salary. He is not trying to get a better contract. Ministers do not negotiate. A congregation may starve a pastor, and the pastor should not say a word. Bobby's grandfather was a pastor of the largest church in Arizona, and he was paid slave wages, and he never complained.

Paul now utilizes his rabbinical training. In a former life, he was a rabbi, and he knew the Law. He went from being a murderous rabbi to a grace oriented believer in a few moments (well, to a believer, anyway). Paul probably had much of the Old Testament memorized. Paul's proof will come to them from the Law, which was given to Israel by Moses. Moses was a divinely inspired writer of Scripture; God used Moses to present the law to Israel. Everything that Israel needed to live was given him in a theocracy.

Paul and Moses were great men because they were both grace oriented. God favored Paul because he was grace oriented, and for no other reason. Doesn't the Law teach these things? Paul uses οὐκ which expects a positive answer. Hell, yes, the Law teaches this! Bobby is going to close with a caution: this citation does not mean to the Mosaic Law governs the church. There are court battles going on because some think that the Mosaic Law is equivalent to Christianity. Church Age believers do not live under the statutes of the Mosaic Law. We are not required to live under the Mosaic Laws; however, most of the 10 Commandments should be followed, as these laws transcend dispensations. This Law is still of divine origin, and it is filled with divine principles and doctrine. Doctrinal principles are always important to us. The Law does not constitute our spirituality.

1Cor. 9:8 Do I say these things on human authority? Does not the Law say the same?

1Cor. 9:9 For it is written in the Law of Moses, "You shall not muzzle an ox when it treads out the grain." Is it for oxen that God is concerned?

Joshua New Year's Eve Service Lesson #none Sunday 2 December 31, 2006

Freedom and Mohammed are incompatible. Freedom of the press taken down by threats over a cartoon. Misguided hope of gaining peace with those who hate us, who see us and Israel as the great Satan. Would we want to compromise with the real Satan in the Angelic Conflict? So, for them, there is no real compromise; there is only maneuver and out-maneuver which will result in their victory. The muslim opposes self-determination; example: the suppression of women in their society; they devalue all non-Muslim life; the Muslim evangelist is not a messenger for Allah but a murderer for Allah. There are a few more moderate Muslims who remain enslaved to their religion out of fear for their own. Can we win this war against the Muslim? Joshua 11:15–18: Just as the LORD had commanded Moses his servant, so Moses commanded Joshua, and so Joshua did. He left nothing undone of all that the LORD had commanded Moses. So Joshua took all that land, the hill country and all the Negeb and all the land of Goshen and the lowland and the Arabah and the hill country of Israel and its lowland from Mount Halak, which rises toward Seir, as far as Baal-gad in the Valley of Lebanon below Mount Hermon. And he captured all their kings and struck them and put them to death. Joshua made war a long time with all those kings. He left nothing undone; conquest and destruction of the enemy. Joshua 11:10–14: And they struck with the sword all who were in it, devoting them to destruction; there was none left that breathed. And he burned Hazor with fire. And all the cities of those kings, and all their kings, Joshua captured, and struck them with the edge of the sword, devoting them to destruction, just as Moses the servant of the LORD had commanded. But none of the cities that stood on mounds did Israel burn, except Hazor alone; that Joshua burned. And all the spoil of these cities and the livestock, the people of Israel took for their plunder. But every man they struck with the edge of the sword until they had destroyed them, and they did not leave any who breathed.

What was this city which required utter destruction, where they left no one alive who breathed? These were the Canaanites, who God told Israel to destroy. What kind of people were these Canaanites? They worshiped Baal and other false gods. They were serious idolaters who were involved in bestiality, incest, and human sacrifice, all motivated by demonism. This demonism could have an effect on a client nation. There is always a direct correlation between the rise and the fall of a people and their interest in the phallic cult and the occult. The Canaanite complete abandonment of all that is right; and they must not be allowed to disrupt client nation Israel. Wouldn't this be a holocaust? Wouldn't the UN come down on Joshua? Of course they would; but he was under divine mandate. Any foothold in demon activity can cause national disaster.

Joshua was very successful in carrying out God's mandates, but the Jews did not stay with God's program. The Jews continually went a-whoring after Baal. Eventually, the 5th cycle came. This demon influence is why God demanded that Joshua destroy these people.

Our situation with Islam is not much different than Joshua's. The solution: leave nothing undone. They struck every man with the sword until they destroyed them; they left no one to breathe. Bobby is not advocating that we destroy every Arab in the Middle East. However, the war must be done in such a way as to crush the Muslims; that which would attack our freedom. This must be done no matter how much it costs no matter how long it takes. Americans do not understand the threat nor do they understand a military solution. The Muslims are as evil as Hitler and Stalin. Do we have the will for a long fight with a relentless and intractable enemy?

There is always the second solution in leaving nothing undone. The second solution is the solution; the unfailing solution for any client nation. Joshua means savior; it is equivalent to Jesus. Joshua delivered God's people from wandering in the wilderness.

Joshua 1:5, 6, 8 is the second solution: No man shall be able to stand before you all the days of your life. Just as I was with Moses, so I will be with you. I will not leave you or forsake you. Be strong and courageous, for you shall cause this people to inherit the land that I swore to their fathers to give them. Only be strong and very courageous, being careful to do according to all the law that Moses my servant commanded you. Do not turn from it to the right hand or to the left, that you may have good success wherever you go. This Book of the Law shall not depart from your mouth, but you shall meditate on it day and night, so that you may be careful to do according to all that is written in it. For then you will make your way prosperous, and then you will have good success. You will meditate on the book of the Law day and night. Joshua had two constant companions, wherever he went. He had the Living Word, Yahweh "I will not fail you and I will not forsake you." And he had the written word implanted in his soul. Joshua was strong and courageous. He was also a type of the Lord Jesus Christ. It is the Lord Jesus Christ who brings salvation to all; and it brings freedom from Satanic intrusion.

Joshua followed every order that he received. He also represented the spiritual solution as a type of the Savior to come. Joshua 11:23: So Joshua took the whole land, according to all that the LORD had spoken to Moses. And Joshua gave it for an inheritance to Israel according to their tribal allotments. And the land had rest from war. Peace through military victory; victory demands that wars are won, and that is only done by killing the enemy. We wrongly shun this divine perspective.

However, we did kill innocents in Dresden, Nagasaki and Hiroshima. Joshua was a military victor and a victor in the angelic conflict. We as a nation and as individual believers are in the same position as Joshua; we face an evil enemy as well as a religion of Satan. We are in a combat that will determine the future of the US.

What about the spiritual solution? Today, we have the opportunity to observe the delicate balance between the client nation and its downward spiral. The Muslims are at war with Christianity, and in their minds, it must be wiped out.

The enemy of Israel was Satan himself, manifested in the demonism of the Canaanite. Our enemy is Satan himself in the form of the Muslim religion, and their desire to destroy us.

We have soldiers in Iraq; but we are also in combat in the angelic conflict. We are the infidel in the mind of Satan; we are the ultimate target of Satan's strategy of destruction. We are the front line defenders. We are the ones under direct attack. The mind of Christ inculcated in our soul is our deliverance. It is ultimately us, not the military, that preserves this client nation to God by the doctrine in our soul.

Psalm 55:22–23: Cast your burden on the LORD, and he will sustain you; he will never permit the righteous to be moved. But you, O God, will cast them down into the pit of destruction; men of blood and treachery shall not live out half their days. But I will trust in you. Saddam Hussein did not live out half of his life; nor did his sons and half-sons.

We must realize that we must defeat the forces of evil religion. This war is not about democracy in the Middle East. The US represents Christianity to them, whether we do or not. They understand their war against us as war against infidels. When we turn on our tv and see the Iraq war, we are seeing the Angelic Conflict. We must stamp into their mind, that we are willing to fight; we have to show them that we are not weak. They need to know that we are as determined as they are to defend Christianity.

The military represents the protection for the client nation; but the military is not the first decision. We are to depend upon God. Even if the US does not defeat her enemies on the battlefield; even if we leave the job undone; God never leaves the job undone. God never leaves us without protection; and Satan will never be the ultimate winner, through the Muslims or through anyone else.

In the coming year, things may look very grim to us. Our policy in Iraq may be led astray by well-meaning politicians. The past sacrifices of our soldiers may be forgotten in our rush to get out of the Middle East. We might disregard or excuse their actions. Some may even alledge that we are the reason for all of these problems. However, we are the salt of the earth, not the cause of all problems but the solution.

God can overrule treason and foolishness in high government places. Already Muslim sectarianism is tearing Iraq up. Their terrorism is turning on themselves. Muslims are turning on Muslims. No cohesion or unity in Islam or in any Satanic religion.

As a believer in the Church Age, we have far beyond what Israel had. We have the operational spiritual life by which our Lord won the strategic victory of the Angelic Conflict. We should dedicate ourselves to wisdom in 2007; if our nation offers to placate insane Muslims; in the end; what does it matter. We have the stability and promises of Bible doctrine, back by God Himself. Doctrine comforts us in times of adversity; it solves problems in our life. As God said to Moses as the Red Sea, “Stand back and observe the deliverance of the Lord.”

1Cor. 9:7–9

Lesson #468

Wednesday January 3, 2007

v. 8: I am not speaking these things according to human judgment, for does not the Law say these things? Human judgment and divine law are set against each other in a comparison. We will have to see how the Mosaic Law fits into Paul’s teaching, as he is a teacher of the mystery doctrine. Israel would love to have what we have.

These things refer to remuneration for work done; something which we all do. V. 7 is where we get the 3 illustrations. Who serves as a soldier at his own expense? Who plants a vineyard without eating its fruit? Who tends a flock without getting some of the milk? Most everyone goes to work in order to get paid. Farmers subsist on the produce that they grow with their own hands. Remuneration is gotten from one’s own vocation. Remuneration is the same for an Apostles as it is for anyone else who works for a living. The same principle applies to missionaries and evangelists.

1Cor. 9:7 Who serves as a soldier at his own expense? Who plants a vineyard without eating any of its fruit? Or who tends a flock without getting some of the milk?

Paul will defend this principle by citing divine origin. Remuneration is not some human invention, although man has altered and disregarded this principle. Keep in mind what Paul’s objective is and how these principles fit into Paul’s overall scheme.

Paul’s Conclusions

1. People work and get remunerated for their work; the three named in his illustration labor and get paid; his conclusion is, he should get paid as well.
2. Paul should not be undervalued for his work.
3. Some may challenge his privilege for remuneration, based upon the fact that Paul is not a manual laborer. Almost everyone in the ancient world worked with their hands in order to survive; but Paul did not work hard with his hands.
4. However, Paul is a shepherd; ποιμην means shepherd. He works very hard with his mind.
5. Paul should not be short-changed or cheated by those he serves.
6. As an honest laborer, Paul has the right and the privilege of any other worker, even though he does not work in the same way.
7. So Paul is a worker who should be justly compensated for his work, just like anyone else. Paul is not saying these things in order to get money; he is not being self-serving. He has a reason for telling them that he is worthy of his wages; because, he won’t accept wages. Paul is making it clear that taking money is his right and privilege; however, Paul would not take them.
8. This illustrations are a part of his Apostleship and...

9. Everyone thinks about money and often scheme on how to get money and how to get their salaries.

Paul is not making some new precedent here; this is also supported by the Law of God. Paul is not excluding himself, and he is making it clear that even the Law supports payment for spiritual workers. These principles apply to the missionary, the evangelist and the pastor-teacher. The principle is the same.

Furthermore, this is not just human judgment, but it is the Mosaic Law, which Paul will quote to prove a point. Paul is now going to use this principle and restate it for the Corinthians. Why would Paul want to go back to his rabbinical sources? Why doesn't he just state it himself? Paul, the divinely inspired author of many of the epistles is taken under the inspiration of God the Holy Spirit and applying something from the Old Testament to his life today.

We can't just go back to the Old Testament and grab any old verse and decide this is how we are going to live. Therefore, we need to look at the Mosaic Law.

The Mosaic Law in Relation to the Church

1. The Mosaic Law is crammed with principles of divine establishment. It is a divinely inspired portion of Scripture. However, how much attention do we give the Law?
2. The Law contains doctrinal principles which can be applied today.
3. This is not a green light to apply all the statutes of the Mosaic Law.
4. The Mosaic Law is not our national code nor does it point to the spiritual life as some of it did with Old Testament Israel.
5. We do not need the shadow Christology which pointed to Christ; we do not need a shadow rebound; a shadow justification or shadow
6. We don't need prophecies of the Messiah, as the Messiah has already been here.
7. Our spiritual life never revolves around keeping the Law.
8. The spiritual life of Israel never revolved around the Mosaic Law.
9. The life, death, burial, resurrection, and session of Christ. Jesus is the only person to perfectly keep the Mosaic Law.
10. The plan of God for the church takes it precedence from the prototype life of Christ.

The Mosaic Law is the basis for all law and should have memorials to it.

What was the Purpose of the Law for Israel?

1. To teach the elementary principles of God's Law for His people; what did He expect of Israel as a client nation.
2. The Law laid the ground work for the nation of Israel.
3. In the spiritual realm, the Old Testament indicates that man sins and that he needs salvation. These are the divine standards.

4. The Law revealed the perfect nature of God; the Law reveals God. The Old Testament has great references to the attributes of God. These Jews fell so short of these standards. Every person would have realized that he could not meet God's standards.
5. No one can be saved by keeping the Law.
6. Mankind with his sin nature cannot equal God; they rejected the law, which at best, told them how to be forgiven. His people rejected Him for the very Law he gave.
7. The Law pointed toward the grace of God in removing our sins.
8. The Law pointed toward Christ as the Messiah and the Savior. The Law pointed to the theocratic kingdom which they sought. They are still looking for the Messiah.
9. The Law contained Soteriology and Christology in the Levitical sacrifices.
10. The innocent lamb sacrificed on the altar was a picture of Christ's atonement for sin. Every slaughtered lamb represented Jesus Christ.
11. The Law continuously in all of its statutes shadowed the one salvation event in history...the person and work of the Lord Jesus Christ.
12. Every aspect of the life of the nation Israel was covered in the Law. It was comprehensive. And elaboration of freedom, authority, privacy; military policy, the IRS and taxation; diet and health regulations, laws of evidence, types of punishment. Moses refused to take the mantle of the king.

Deuteronomy and Leviticus carry most of the divine laws.

One of the problems we observe the other night was that Israel chased after other gods.

The Old Testament predicted the cross, e.g., Isa. 53–54; the chosen people who chose not to be the chosen people.

1Cor. 9:8 Do I say these things on human authority? Does not the Law say the same?

1Cor. 9:9 For it is written in the Law of Moses, "You shall not muzzle an ox when it treads out the grain." Is it for oxen that God is concerned?

The law of a witness to the coming messiah; a revelation of theology: Christology, theology, Soteriology. It was a code of conduct for; here's how a theocracy works. We have the Law of Christ.

"God Himself in the Mosaic Law gave us this principle; do I not have a right to it?" What did Paul mean by that?

1Cor. 9:9

Lesson #469

Thursday January 4, 2007

The Old Testament is used extensively in the New Testament, so we have to figure out how to handle that.

The Mosaic Law is a huge codex and it is extensive and has many parts. Does this mean that we should take the whole Mosaic Law as our guide. All authors of Scripture use Old Testament Scripture, and it is used in a number of different ways in Scripture.

Now, why should Paul shift from a remuneration concept to refer to one precept of the Law. The Mosaic Law is packed with doctrine and divine principles. Moses was divinely inspired, although there are a lot of ways to write divinely inspired Scripture. Paul wrote a letter like any other letter; but, what Moses wrote was direct dictation, for the most part. There were other ways; the prophets had visions. All of the last six chapters of Daniel is eschatology. Divine inspiration comes in a number of different ways. The Law of Moses is, in fact, the voice of God. Mosaic Law principles can be applied to the church, but only be a divinely inspired author of the New Testament. Certain quotes were brought into the New Testament for specific reasons.

Bear in mind, under the Law, remuneration was provided for the Levites and for the priests; however, no such situation existed for the believers in the Church Age.

The Mosaic Law can only be used in a very limited context today. The Jews no longer wanted a theocracy; they desired a monarchy, which they got in Saul. God's voice is heard in the Mosaic Law; but the voice of the people is not the voice of God (vox populi vox dei?).

The Levitical rituals pointed toward the work of the grace of God in removing our sins.

The New Testament is our testament; although the Mosaic Law points to Christ; but the New Testament develops the pertinent doctrines completely.

Every aspect of life was covered in the Mosaic Law; in "Everything that you do, I will tell you have to live." The Law was famous for its eye for an eye, tooth for a tooth punishment. The Law was also a witness to the coming messiah;

In a theocracy, God rules through various men. The Law is not our precedent and the church is not spiritual Israel which inherits the laws of Israel.

The Mosaic Law is occasionally brought into the church in ways that it shouldn't be. Instead, we have the Church Age doctrine. The Lord Jesus Christ fulfilled the Law. Paul will use the Law to bring in a specific principle into the New Testament.

We are God's family; we are His people. The standards of the Law have been superseded. Since Paul used this verse, that indicates that the Law has some meaning in itself as an Apostle, Paul can use any point of doctrine.

No one in the church is expected to use the Law as we use the epistles. For Paul, the Old Testament was his Scripture (and the Scripture of Jesus).

Here's what it meant in its own context

1. When you muzzle an ox, they cannot eat while working.

2. The meaning is connected to its use in the Old Testament. They used this Scripture, but do not assign it

Lesson #470

Sunday 1 January 7, 2007

We have spent a day or two on oxen, and have gotten a great deal from that principle. Bobby is amazed by those who read through the Bible a couple times and say, "I think I've got the gist of this."

Bobby has the privilege of studying almost every day and to bring doctrine to the people of his congregation. This includes knowledge of the unique spiritual life. Our knowledge is translated into rationales, which we can transfer in application for every aspect of our lives. Bobby knows what his job is; people don't, but he does. Absolute truth is the very nature of the Scripture which we study. We need to distinguish between human viewpoint and divine viewpoint. Bobby's obligation is to study and teach, and he must make every effort. Bobby's shame is directly related to our ignorance; it is his responsibility to teach us. If he fails to teach us, then shame is due him; if we know nothing, then shame on us. If we know nothing, we are dishonored before Jesus Christ. Lack of knowledge brings us discipline. Bobby must present what he studies so that he is not ashamed. Our obligation is to learn. It would be a shame to squander all that God has provided for us. The Apostle Paul has set the standard for every pastor-teacher. Paul was willing to sacrifice for the message and for the hearers.

We have the words of truth which Paul did not write to the church, which is the rest of the canon of Scripture. Bobby introduces all of this, as Paul himself utilized other portions of Scripture in order to make his points; and he does so in our passage. The Mosaic Law is packed with principles and divine establishment.

For the church, there is a dispensational difference as to how the two portions of Scripture apply or don't apply to us. The Mosaic Law was a code of conduct for Israel and it was. The Mosaic Law was important to guide a nation under God. The church and Israel are both guided by Scripture. The Old Testament was the Bible of Jesus Christ. All the doctrine that they knew at that time was the Old Testament.

Paul understood what he was doing, and he knew the Old Testament; and he also knew how to integrate it into Church Age as well. The Old Testament could only be used in a limited way.

The Old Testament is not even a Church Age.

Great principles and great doctrines in the Old Testament; but we do not live by it. Paul uses some tidbits from the Old Testament in this dissertation.

What does muzzling an ox have to do with the remuneration principle? Paul will use this quoe to prove church Age. Paul uses this passage and applies it in just the way that he wats to. Muzzling it. The ox who is muzzled could not eat. Grain falls at his feet, so that he can eat as he works. What does this have to do with the remuneration principle? From his work, the unmuzzled ox could eat freely while working.. “Well, God is not all that concerned with oxen, is he? Psalm 147:9 Matt. 6:f God dies for men; not for animals. Since Christ died for us, we are greater thab him. There are folks that we love, but we do not . Since God is concerned with animals .

1Cor. 9:9 For it is written in the Law of Moses, "You shall not muzzle an ox when it treads out the grain." Is it for oxen that God is concerned?

This Old Testament can be applied to ox, igt can be applied to us.

Δια εγω = by us. Οχι = because. On the basis of; these are emphatic particles. Because of us, it is wrtten that this has an application to us. Paul will relate this passage to human beings. Present active infinitive of μετεχω = to share.. Paul is offering a

Paul learned God's Word through repetition; this is how we learn. We need inculcation; it is the way we learn. Bobby might tell us the same principle many times.

1Cor. 9:10 Does he not speak entirely for our sake? It was written for our sake, because the plowman should plow in hope and the thresher thresh in hope of sharing in the crop.

1Cor. 9:11–12

Lesson #471

Sunday 2 January 7, 2007

Bobby invited everyone to leave last service if they are not interested in inculcation. He assumes this is a fairly unusual invite. Paul's talked about soldiers, plowmen, oxen. Now he will turn to himself.

Notice that Paul makes no pleas here; you need to give me the money in your pocket. Some disasters with a previous assistant pastor. He came back and wanted to know the 20 wealthiest people at Berachah. He spoke to Bob and there was an interesting reaction. Bob called him in and told him where the door was and how fast he should leave.

Paul does not say, “I want my money. I am doing great work; give me my money.” Paul asks a lot of questions in this chapter. He makes the reader think about what he is saying and answer in their heads the questions that he is asking. Paul's question here is not asked in order for him to get paid. In doing this, the grace message comes over loud and clear. Sowing spiritual things and reaping material things. This is true for the pastor, the evangelist and the missionary.

1st class condition here, which is an assumption for the sake of argument. You can assume something to be true, and the conclusion should be true if the assumption is true. The second assumption is based upon the truth of the first assumption. No one can deny that Paul has sown spiritual things among them. As Paul preached, he probably saw more than anything else people rejecting his message. Paul did not do what he did for money. There is not enough money in the world in order to remunerate him for what he has done.

Paul uses the pronoun ὑμεν Paul sowed in them (you, here). Those who knew Paul up close knew his dedication. Many people opposed Bob and for many reasons, either for his doctrine or personality; but they could never fault him for his dedication or his love of the word. Bob could not even survive original on his first salary. He cashed in stocks, etc. to make it. Bob loved what he did; and Paul loved what he did.

Adjective μέγας, a comparative adjective. Paul is a master of logic; he is a debater; he uses specific words to bring out points. Is it so great or is it unreasonable should be the way that we understand this. Paul is logically progressing, from an animal to a plowman. Pastors could be included here under the we. There is a logical understanding here. There is no greater commodity than spiritual food.

Another 1st class condition in the second phrase. Paul should be able to sow spiritual things and reasonably reap material things. Σαρχικός which has its root in flesh, carnal, sinful. Belonging to the order of earthly things, earthly things, material things.

Material Things

1. The congregation shares in the spiritual things of the Apostle and we still do. Everyone who listens shares in the sowing of spiritual things.
2. Likewise today the spiritual things of the pastor things, the evangelist and the missionary sow spiritual things. Bobby is a farmer in this analogy.
3. They in turn share in the congregation's material things. As a matter of the remuneration principle.
4. Each has something to give to the other. In essence, Paul is talking about a transaction here. Each has something to give the other.
5. Those who minister should be remunerated by those they minister to. Paul is making this point in every possible way. He uses an agrarian illustration.
6. This principle can be applied to pastor-teachers who minister (meaning sowing spiritual things; not hand-holding, counseling). Teaching the Word of God. He should be remunerated by those in the local church that he serves.
7. The evangelist and the missionary also need to be paid. The pastor-teacher is easy, as he serves a particular local church. However, the evangelist and the missionary do not.

8. They should be supported for their spiritual work by the material things of individuals and various churches which sponsor them. These groups are more like the Apostle Paul. Several churches and missionaries organizations might support them.
9. Hence the principle of remuneration in life; we are all remunerated for what we do. It also applies in the spiritual realm, as well as in the economic and material realms. It applies equally. Bobby's grandfather was a pastor for 50 years in the 1st Baptist church of Tucson; yet he was given starvation wages. He did not complain and God blessed him. You don't ask for anything; it is a grace situation. Even when you lack some things. The thinking is, "I am a business person and I should be paid more than a person who teaches doctrine." Paul was worth more than any person that we know. However, many churches starve their pastors.
10. Local church is responsible to pay wages to those who serve in spiritual positions.
11. Paul has the liberty and the privilege to participate in the principle of remuneration on the basis of providing the most indispensable service in the Christian life. And our (their?) hearts may be encouraged having been knit together in love and attaining all the wealth that comes from the full assurance of understanding resulting in a true knowledge of God's mystery. Paul was worth his labor. What is a little remuneration in comparison to what Paul brought to the Corinthians. The remuneration was a trivial benefit compared to what he brought to them. There are no rancorous negotiations in order to obtain a better salary.

Operation grace world missions, where individuals can give and they send the money to the missionaries. No one has to ask anyone for money.

We should understand the immeasurable wealth of Bible doctrine in our souls, and we should be motivated to support organizations which so provide for us. So many churches today demand that we give under compulsion. No one ever compels anyone in Berachah to give. If you gave money and you gave it under compulsion, then go back and get it. You can do this without embarrassment. There must never be a price on doctrine.

The support for the ministry comes from the grace of God. It is grace all the way. You can sit in this congregation in 50 years and never give a dime, that's fine. No one wants money in Berachah from someone without doctrine. When we mature, then giving is up to us.

1Cor. 9:11 If we have sown spiritual things among you [and we have], is it too much [is in unreasonable] if we reap material things from you?

Don't Apostles have a greater right than anyone to collect money from the churches? However, we have not enforced this right. Rather than take a dime from anyone under compulsion, Paul would rather work himself in some other vocation, in order to teach without the problem of money and those who are not grace-oriented. Paul was not a martyr or an ascetic.

The world does not understand grace; this is the devil's world and it does not understand grace.

1Cor. 9:12 If others share this rightful claim on you, do not we even more? Nevertheless, we have not made use of this right, but we endure anything rather than put an obstacle in the way of the gospel of Christ.

1Cor. 9:12

Lesson #472

Wednesday January 10, 2007

Paul has a team, where he uses the term we.

Paul's Reasoning

1. Paul used deductive reasoning, e.g., v. 11; if we sowed spiritual things with you, should we not sow material things from you? The Corinthians benefitted from his teaching; the Corinthians are the seal of his Apostleship. Paul uses deductive reasoning. Remuneration is fair. Paul has every right and every privilege to be remunerated for his occupation.
2. Paul proved his illustration by using the occupations soldier, shepherd, which all were aware of. Each occupation benefitted from his occupation. Similarly, Paul should benefit from his occupation. The plowman and the thresher should plow and thresh in hope of sharing in the harvest. There is the illustration of the ox, who should not be muzzled while he treads down the grain. Most everyone was involved in a hand-to-mouth subsistence.
3. Paul cites the Mosaic Law, the big guns, and tells the Corinthians that "You are not to muzzle the ox while he is threshing." God is not concerned about oxen, is He? The man involved in the ministry is worthy of his wages. Nothing could be more important than the mind of Christ. The local church is responsible to those who serve and feed them (with spiritual food).

The work done by Paul is worth a great price. Everyone in this world has a right to get paid for what they do. If others share the right or privilege over you, do we not more? Nevertheless, we did not use this right. V. 12 makes an assumption of reality to begin with. There are others of the same kind or category and they claim the privilege of ; Paul was the primary man; Apollos left; Timothy got kicked out. Paul says, there are others of the same category and they also deal in spiritual things. These others are not specifically identified. There is a lot of speculation at this point.. God the Holy Spirit did not choose to name these.

If these are others of the same kind; then they are probably teachers, true or false teachers. Some in Corinth claimed to be teachers, but they were in it for their own benefit.

Based upon the supreme sacrifices that is Paul enduring, he expects a positive response. Money seems to be a topic for this group. The Corinthians cannot distinguish truth from falsehoods. Cannot determine who are con men as opposed to grace oriented types. Paul puts his word. You concentrate on the message first; then God takes care of the rest.

Unfortunately, too many missionaries and pastors and evangelists today can hardly wait to ask for money. Money is one of the great teachers of grace. Grace has been challenged in Berachah and at R. B. Thieme Jr. Ministries. All chapter 9 is about grace. Every generation must have someone to teach doctrine. There will be those who come after it as well.

Paul never saw the sort of remuneration that many believers today get. Bobby has seen advertisements for churches that he found to be unbelievable. There are all kinds of things which go on outside the church. Paul's ministry benefits all of them.

One of the great lines of grace: we did not use this privilege. Pastors, missionaries, evangelists all have expectations of being supported; and those who don't might be those who a church cannot afford to pay (a tiny congregation).

The word nevertheless contrasts his right to be paid with his refusal of same. The gospel is grace; doctrine reeks of grace. Paul does not want anyone to think he is charging for any of this.

6 Points

1. No one should ever charge for the gospel or for Bible doctrine; yet everyone seems to, price lists, papal, selling books, etc.
2. Grace is compromised as soon as that happens. There is no rationalization that you can give to justify all of that. We need to reflect God's grace in all that we do.
3. The plan of God, which is grace, is obscured by pleas or requests for money.
4. Remuneration is authorized by Scripture, but it should never compromise grace. That's the difference between wages and charges.
5. From salvation to the 39 absolutes that we receive at salvation and all the resources that we have to execute the spiritual life, all of it is grace.
6. Is there some area in the Christian life which is not grace?
7. No price can ever be placed on what God has designed and given us. God gave this to us; are we going to turn around and charge someone for it? Bobby is ashamed to see beggars on tv asking for money. It's everywhere and people even cry and get it. It is an indictment of grace.

So, even though a salary is authorized, Paul does not want to allow anyone. The point is the motivation; what drives Paul? It is not the money. He has to live, but he has to accomplish the plan of God for his life. Paul preaches because he must; it is his calling, it is his passion. He lives by the grace of God.

Principle

1. Grace must always be first in the life of any pastor, evangelist, missionary or any Christian. We aren't excluded here.
2. It is not Paul's wages or his perks or his lucrative book deal which matters.

3. You cannot preach grace on the one hand and have your hand out on the other. Sometimes this call for money is blatant. We need money for a new building to better serve the Lord, etc. Or we need money to convert the heathen. Deputation work, is where guys are sent out to various churches to beg for money. Better to go to the mission field and never having to ask for money and never having to make that a part of your ministry. No missionary that Berachah supports will ever come into Berachah and ask for money. There is no greater picture than the grace of God than this. There is enough to disseminate the gospel.

Bobby reads the financial policy of Berachah.

1Cor. 9:12 If others share this rightful claim on you, do not we even more? Nevertheless, we have not made use of this right, but we endure anything rather than put an obstacle in the way of the gospel of Christ.

Lesson #473

Thursday January 11, 2007

Jefferson and Adams in the 1700's and Muslim pirates, who trafficked in people. Muslims held a great deal of hostility toward America, even though they did not know anything about America. It was explained that all nations who rejected Islam were their enemies. Millions of dollars were paid in order to get safe passageway through the Mediterranean. A full 20% of our budget was devoted to paying of the Muslims. Millions for defense but not one cent for tribute” is where this quote came from, from Jefferson. 1805, Tripoli was taken and all Americans freed. Complete victory over the Muslims, from the Halls of Montezuma to the Shores of Tripoli preserves this is song. This is why Jefferson had a copy of the Koran. Was this an article?

Others of the same kind are those other than Paul and his immediate group; and if these received remuneration for their work, then Paul and his group should as well. Do we not more? Paul has a greater right to remuneration than anyone else; he held the highest rank of the church; his preaching and teaching and writing is foundational. Paul does not simply have a local ministry.

Paul makes an amazing statement. Nevertheless, we did not use this right. Paul has neverf asked these people for any money for his invaluable service; through him, they believed in Jesus Christ. Through him, they learned to walk.

Why Paul did not Ask to be Remunerated

1. Paul declined remuneration in order to demonstrate grace. His Apostleship is God's grace gift to the church.
2. Paul's services in the gospel were given free of charge.
3. No believer and no man with the gift of communication should ever charge for the gospel or for Bible doctrine.

4. You cannot preach grace on the one hand and have your hand out on the other. They are not compatible.

There are legitimate things to support, but you do not demand money; never forget Philip. 4:19: My God shall supply all your needs through His riches in glory in Christ Jesus. Don't give money until you are grace oriented.

Legalism is everywhere in so many churches. A call for money is very subtle at times. There does not have to be a direct plea; it can be subtle; little hints dropped, buzz words. Credit cards seen on websites in order to indicate that money needs to be supplied. It might be okay if it can be assured that everyone who gives has the right motivation and understands the principles involved. Displaying a credit card does not really provide information to the person who might give. This seems more like a payment due; but it appears as a demand for money to those who are not grace oriented. You do not get doctrine by paying for it.

Now, giving money is a necessity in order to support a ministry. Giving is not a necessity if it is grudging. When a believer properly motivated, then a call for money is not necessary. It is up to us and our grace orientation and our association with the Lord. If God does not supply the funds through grace giving, then that is not a ministry which He supports. God will support those ministries which do the work that He requires of them.

Bobby considers it a privilege to watch how God supplies the funds. It is refreshing not to ask for any money and yet it is supplied. In no other way is it so obvious. This tells us that God approves of what is going on.

If they organization has the gospel all screwed up and they don't teach doctrine, then they won't get money unless they ask for it and pitch for it. It is about attitude and motivation.

Bobby is going to offer another illustration; there was a movement afoot to sell the property where Berachah is located. The reason for it, the grace of God has supplied this property for this church and the grace of God will be served to sell the property. The property was bought in 1958; it was a rice farm. Surrounding Berachah was fields. What happens when the property is sold for millions? They get calls all the time to sell that property. Why do we need millions of dollars in the bank? We do not need to be secure with money in reserve; we need to be secure with God, Who supplies all our needs.

When we wander into Berachah, we should notice that it is all grace. Paul did not make use of any of the funds available to him. The Corinthians made a lot of money; the center of commerce. All he had to do is ask, but he did not. Paul spread the gospel throughout the ancient world.

Bobby does not have to come before the congregation to ask for money and tell us what we could use it for. It is grace. Passing the plate is a reminder of the principle of giving. The plate is a teaching device. Do not give unless you are grace oriented and motivated to give.

Paul is the Apostle of grace and he teaches grace in every way. The remuneration principle is not a call for money.

Close out Points

1. Paul would rather endure hardship than compromise grace.
2. He will never compromise the gospel by claiming the right of remuneration, which he has.
3. What is this all about?
  - a. This is actually a call to apply the law of love, as he demonstrates through the law of supreme sacrifice.
  - b. Paul's supreme sacrifice of forgoing remuneration is really about the law of love; it is the whole point of chapter 8.
  - c. Financial support is merely the illustration.
  - d. Paul loves these people, the unlovable, in spite of their recalcitrance, he is willing to go through great sacrifices for them. He will go through extremes to show it.
  - e. Paul wants no money from the Corinthians because they cannot apply the law of love; they have no humility, no grace orientation. Paul is showing them the true principle, illustrating it with money, so he will not take money from them.
  - f. Thus, if Paul took the money, they would be supporting Paul from the wrong motivation
  - g. Through Paul's sacrifice—not being paid for his services—Paul would teach them correct motivation.
  - h. It is a simple grace rule of thumb; it's about money. If you have to ask for it, the Lord is not in it. Doctrine is the only prompter.

Certain ones claim the privilege of being supported by the Corinthian church. Paul states that he and his bunch have a greater claim over the Corinthians than do these others. However, Paul has not required these Corinthians to pay him. They have not enforced the obligations of the Corinthians to him and his crew. Ingressive aorist of to make use of. Paul uses the negative particle ouk with κράομαι.

We have also ἐξουσία = right, privilege here. . chraomai (χράομαι) [pronounced CHRAW-oh-my], which means to receive a loan; 2) borrow; 3) to take for one's use, to use; 3a) to make use of a thing. [Thayer definitions]. Strong's #5530.

The Apostle Paul has the privilege, but he is not making use of this privilege; he is not demanding this privilege. Paul is using this to make a principle of doctrine clear. Paul even has the right to require remuneration; but he does not enforce this right.

The key is, the law of love. These people do not understand the law of love, so he is going to demonstrate the law of love as he has practiced with them. He has a legitimate salary or support due him, but he does not. He does not want to take support from those who do not understand the law of love; he cannot take money from those who do not understand grace.

1Cor. 9:12 If others share this rightful claim on you, do not we even more? Nevertheless, we have not made use of this right, but we endure anything rather than put an obstacle in the way of the gospel of Christ.

1Cor. 9:12–14

Lesson #475

Sunday 2 January 14, 2007

You may think that Paul is a complete idiot to work for free. There are those who share in the right to be remunerated at the church of Corinth; but none have as great of a right as Paul. Paul is making a supreme sacrifice here. Paul is a 201cp organization; he is a non-profit organization. These Corinthians do not understand grace, so they can't come to him on the basis of grace. We endure all things. Grace orientation is a marathon; it is how we live and how we think for the entirety of our lives.

Stego (στέγω) [pronounced STEH-goh], which means to bear up under suffering [Thieme]; deck, thatch, to cover; 1a) to protect or keep by covering, to preserve; 2) to cover over with silence; 2a) to keep secret; 2b) to hide, conceal; 2b1) of the errors and faults of others; 3) by covering to keep off something which threatens, to bear up against, hold out against, and so endure, bear, forbear. Thayer definitions. Strong's #4722.

Paul is very quiet about his complaints. Paul made a very conscious decision to refuse to take financial support from the Corinthians. Paul is uncomplaining. "Give me a little money so I can spend time preparing your sermons, etc." Paul doesn't say that. He willingly forgoes this salary. He is moonlighting to make extra cash; he never makes an issue of this, until now, in order to make a point. He is explaining the law of love. Paul is not teaching paupers here; they have money. You would think Paul would just lay it on the line and say, "Dammit, you owe me money; give me my money." Paul approaches this in a different way so that he does not hinder the gospel of Christ.

How could money be a hindrance to the gospel of Christ to take money? Wouldn't that mean that Paul works less?

egkopê (ἐγκοπὴ) [pronounced ehg-koh-PAY] which means to impede [Thieme]; a cutting (made in a road to impede an enemy in pursuit); 2) a hindrance. Found only one time in Scripture—1Cor. 9:12. Strong's #1464.

Paul spoke grace and he lived grace. He did not want to impede the spiritual progress of those in Corinth. There were no believers outside Jerusalem until Paul went out there. He had to work to evangelize the city of Corinth. He could not take money in support from unbelievers. That would destroy the issue of the gospel. The gospel is grace. Unbelievers would assume that they were buying their way into heaven.

These people had no frame of reference when it came to grace. Paul's mission was to teach the free gift of grace. These people understood religion; they understood paying for a religion; they understood that heaven (or, whatever) was not free.

Now there is a second motivation among these people. They qualify but are they able to apply doctrine correctly to support Paul. Asking them for money is almost like asking unbelievers for money. Paul never asks for money from unbelievers. He never passes the hat. These believers in Corinth do not understand grace, and Paul wants them to clearly understand the this is grace.

They might ask, what is Paul's real motivation for establishing a church in Corinth? They might think that Paul did it in order to get money. Many people work just to get money; that is the only thing that motivates them. Paul establishes a church here, a church there, and then has them send him money. Some pastors and evangelists make incredible profits by standing in front of groups and teaching. The appearance is God for sale. This fits in with the unbeliever cynic.

Why Did Paul Forgo Pay?

1. Paul did not want to arouse suspicion when it comes to Paul's motivation. He does not want them to think that money is an issue.
2. Any cynicism as to Paul's motives would have diminished his preaching and teaching. We, as believers, have some cynicism about the operations and functions of some churches; what about unbelievers? Wouldn't they be even more cynical?
3. Paul knows that any doubt would discredit the gospel and defrock him as an Apostle. This is what people are trying to do to him.
4. So, Paul will bear any suffering rather than hinder the progress of his ministry. Paul does not want to hinder the gospel and he does not want to hinder the teaching of grace. He will bear any suffering rather than hinder the progress of grace.
5. Paul will not give his opposition anything by way of ammunition to be used against him. We have given our weapons and ammunition which has been used against us.

Many churches understood grace; and they provided Paul with an income. The church at Ephesus understood what Paul did and supported him financially.

1Cor. 9:12 If others share this rightful claim on you, do not we even more? Nevertheless, we have not made use of this right, but we endure anything rather than put an obstacle in the way of the gospel of Christ.

In v. 11, Paul makes an assumption that he has sown spiritual things in the Corinthians. "Is it too much that we reap material things from you?" An agricultural analogy.

1Cor. 9:11 If we have sown spiritual things among you, is it too much if we reap material things from you?

Bobby goes right to v. 13: Do you not know that those who are employed in the temple service get their food from the temple, and those who serve at the altar share in the sacrificial offerings? V. 11 is the principle and v. 13 is the illustration. Paul sows spiritual things just like the Jews who perform sacred services in the Temple. They Corinthians knew that the heathen priests eat from the meat that was sacrificed. In fact, how much more should Paul receive as compared to the pagans, as he is sowing the truth. Christianity is based upon the grace of God; the others are based upon legalism.

Then Paul makes the additional application: In the same way, the Lord commanded that those who proclaim the gospel should get their living by the gospel. This is some of the payoff for all that he has done. The Lord has directed those who proclaim the gospel. What else needs to be said? Couldn't he have said this back in vv. 3–4? Why did we go through all of the illustrations and analogies. Primary reason: the Corinthians are living proof of Paul's accurate teaching. Paul has every right and privilege to take money from them. That has an impact and it should have an impact on us. This is a command for the evangelist and missionary not to support themselves in some other vocation. The congregation suffers.

There are circumstances which are exceptions to the principles given by Paul.

1. The pastor should not take what his congregation is not capable of giving.
2. He should not put someone at risk when it comes to feeding a family. A pastor should never deprive a family.
3. The pastor does not compromise grace in order to insure his own remuneration.

Bobby was watching some guy peddling a CD telling others how to become millionaires if they would just buy his CD; and he did it in the name of Jesus Christ.

Berachah in the early years could not pay him enough to cover his living expenses. So he just cashed in stocks in order to keep teaching; he lived off his own savings and depleted these savings. God honored Bob's motivation to teach the Word of God. There is never a time when the Lord does not honor a pastor who wants to teach the Word of God. I've been young and I have been old, and I have not seen the Lord's servants begging bread. When Bob taught, the issue was never money; and the same held for the Apostle Paul.

A pastor is a specialist and well-trained in what he does. It takes years for a pastor to get to the point when he rightly divides the Word of Truth. The individual believer is also to witness and evangelize, but they would not be considered a specialist in this area.

1Cor. 9:12 If others share this rightful claim on you, do not we even more? Nevertheless, we have not made use of this right, but we endure anything rather than put an obstacle in the way of the gospel of Christ.

1Cor. 9:13 Do you not know that those who are employed in the temple service get their food from the temple, and those who serve at the altar share in the sacrificial offerings?

1Cor. 9:14 In the same way, the Lord commanded that those who proclaim the gospel should get their living by the gospel.

Paul makes his strongest statement in v. 15; if you forgo money, you understand that; but this is an extremely strong statement. Paul stayed single; he could have used a wife for support, but he did not think it was fair to drag a wife around or to subject a woman to all the dangers which he faces.

In v. 15, Paul needs to move to the 1st person singular, as he can only make this choice for himself. Bob would never stay in a home of someone; only in a hotel in order to study. Others would demand everything from the host. These pastors can be the worst possible house guests. Some men have a knack of getting you to empty your pockets on their behalf.

Every possible huckster technique is on tv today of religious types who want our money. Because of circumstances, Paul is laying aside what is due him. He has evaluated the situation in Corinth, because the gospel would be obscured. Paul does not want his sacrifice to be a phoney one.

Paul means it this time when he says, "I would rather die than compromise the gospel." That is not an hyperbole. Paul's one fear is failing the Lord in accomplishing the commission for which he was given.

Duty and unit integrity for a soldier are more important than death. Soldiers aren't looking to die, but these thoughts and feelings take precedence over their own well-being. Paul would rather die than let God down. And there is the same group dynamic among soldiers.

1Cor. 9:15 But I have made no use of any of these rights, nor am I writing these things to secure any such provision. For I would rather die than have anyone deprive me of my ground for boasting.

Aposiopesis is the leaving out of a few words. This was an impact; it is not used for clarity but for impact. Some of the greatest literature uses metaphors and other literary devices. Paul is being artistic with his words, so that we don't miss it.

Better for me to die than for any man to make my boast an empty one. Which verse is this?

Paul has every right to be paid for his spiritual services. His modus operandi is, he blows into a town, he evangelizes them, and then those who believe in Jesus Christ, he teaches them the mystery doctrine. Then he leaves behind a pastor to guide them. That pastor has a right to be remunerated as well as Paul. The one who sows spiritual things, should be remunerated for his work. What else needs to be said about this? This is for the evangelist, the pastor and the missionary.

Then Paul goes from the 1st person plural to the 1st person singular, now speaking only of himself: v. 11, he says we; in v. 15, Paul says I.

1Cor. 9:11 If we have sown spiritual things among you, is it too much if we reap material things from you?

Paul made a clear case that one cannot dispute—that those who sow spiritual seed deserve to be paid for their work. Now, we can only understand the grace of God through Paul's teaching. We all understand that we need money to live; but remuneration can end up distorting grace. Therefore, the Apostle Paul uses this illustration. Paul affirms that he has no intention of changing in the future. "I am not doing this so that it can be done so in my case." Paul is not going to come back on these people and demand money once they get straightened out. Paul is not temporarily putting aside his wages to get later; he will never accept wages. Paul does not want some critic to come along and say, "Paul is going to get his hand into your back pocket somehow."

In v. 15, Paul is not taking this approach in order to get more support from them at a later time. You turn on a Christian station, and they will beg for your money, give you sad eyes; etc. It would be better for me to die than have any man make my boast empty. Paul does not want to fail the plan of God for his life. The worst thing is for him not to accomplish that which God commissioned him to do. This is not hypothetical; it is not hyperbolic. Paul is not making some idle boast here. Similarly, we must accomplish the plan of God for our lives. If we are able to say, I would rather die than not accomplish the plan of God for my life, then we understand the spiritual life.

The construction of the Greek has something that we don't find in the English. This is an aposiopesis, which means in silence. This means that there is a word or words omitted in this text. These words are omitted in order to give great emphasis to what is being said. Great authors use literary devices in order to make clear what it is they are saying or to make what is being said memorable. Paul is doing this for effect, to place emphasis on the content. Paul wants us to focus on what is here. We are to be impressed with its importance. Paul does not want us to miss what is here. Literally, he says anyone makes my boast empty. The translator does not render this literally, so that it makes sense. Than have any man make my boast an empty one. The English loses the emphasis. Paul's abbreviated expression is much more dramatic; it carries his firm resolve to carry through on his sacrifice. It indicates Paul's intensity on this subject. There is not weakness; there is no fear. The importance of the assertion is found here. This is no idle, empty boast.

What is the purpose of Paul's emphasis?

1. So no one in Corinth can impugn Paul's motives.
2. After reading this line, no one should suspect Paul of asking for money or anything else by way of support, nor expect that he will in the future.
3. This is the strongest statement that Paul ever makes; the setting aside the law of liberty for the law of supreme sacrifice. He's made this statement in several ways so far, e.g., v. 12. Paul here is adding many exclamation points.
4. The power of the sacrifice would be lost if Paul's motivation could be questioned in any way.

Paul had no grounds for glorifying himself or his ministry. Paul is compelled to do what he does. The gospel and Bible doctrine in our souls is what Paul is communicating here. No ministry should be distinguished by fund-raising; it should be distinguished by grace.

Complaints the believers at Berachah aren't doing enough; they just come into church, learn and leave. You cannot be grace oriented without doctrine and you cannot make choices without knowing what you are supposed to do. Your service for the Lord is not your spiritual life, but it is the result of your spiritual life.

1Cor. 9:15 But I have made no use of any of these rights, nor am I writing these things to secure any such provision. For I would rather die than have anyone deprive me of my ground for boasting.

Bobby is going to cover several verse now: For if I preach the gospel, that gives me no ground for boasting. For necessity is laid upon me. Woe to me if I do not preach the gospel! For if I do this of my own will, I have a reward, but not of my own will, I am still entrusted with a stewardship. What then is my reward? That in my preaching I may present the gospel free of charge, so as not to make full use of my right in the gospel. Paul's reward is not to gain any reward from teaching; his reward is to not get any money for what he does. His reward is not to receive a reward for teaching the gospel.

A pastor has not reason to strut or swagger as he goes across the stage; it is not about who has the best skills or the knack for fund-raising or the biggest congregation. Some look better and some preach better. None of us have anything that we can boast about. The motivation of any pastor comes from a source beyond human motivation. We all want things and we all have human motivations to do this or that; but our human motivation should not be in play as we teach. The pastor should have no reason to boast. A pastor who wants to build some Christian empire. There is no reason for a pastor to teach apart from the reward of seeing people grow spiritually. It does not matter whether a pastor teaches to 10 or 100 or 10,000. Pastors have no reason to boast nor do those under him. Do not think that we are the one to receive the kudos; we are wherever we are to accomplish the plan of God for our life.

The Lord provides for us in wonderful ways. I am old and I have been young and I have never seen those of the Lord's begging bread. Bob's reward was seeing spiritual growth in his congregation as he taught. That should be the motivation of his minister.

1Cor. 9:16

Lesson #478

Sunday 2 January 21, 2007

Bobby and his congregation must be study to show ourselves approved. We are implanting doctrine into our souls. The Apostle Paul was speaking of his own motivation; he could reap material rewards, but he never used this. He needed to make it clear that his motivation was never associated with what was due him. Grace is paramount in the Christian life.

For if I preach the gospel, I have nothing to boast of. Paul is under compulsion to never glorify himself. A ministry will suffer, even if it grows. The congregation will lose momentum. The other sure sign is, you will be asked for money. Making money is a major issue. Bobby is not indicting anyone in particular here. Bobby does not want to judge any other pastor; he is teaching a principle as it is found here in the Word of God. If you aren't growing where you are, just move on quietly, and don't try to recruit everyone that you know there.

Bobby is emphasizing self-motivation to all pastors and, also, to all who hear him. It is just as important for a doctor to examine himself as it is for a patient to be examined. Every pastor, missionary and evangelist must consistently evaluate himself.

What is our motivation in life? What is it? It is okay to want things in life or to be successful in life. But what is the priority? What do you place first? This does not mean that you need to live in rags; this does not mean that you have to give yourself poor. You cannot have any real motivation without doctrine in your soul.

When a pastor's motivation is wrong, it will be clear to those that he teaches. The sacrifice that Paul makes are a super application of the law of love and the law of expediency. Expediency is directed exclusively toward the unbeliever. The law of love is applied exclusively to the believer. Apart from that, these are very similar laws in purpose. The law of expediency means you refrain from certain activities because they may offend or detract from the gospel of Jesus Christ. The law of love: you are not to be a stumbling block to believers. In both cases, do not make yourself an issue. The Corinthians have already received the charge of the law of love. This needed to be applied among themselves in order to simply get along. This meant that they were not maturing spiritually. Corinth had a real problem with growth and interaction with fellow believers.

Law of love in chapter 8; and the law of expediency in this chapter. This will help us to evangelize the unbeliever. We all have this charge. The evangelist has the ability to attract people to himself. Rich Hughes, for instance, can attack people on a large scale and on a small scale; and they will listen to him. We do not all have this gift. We are all ambassadors for Christ. If I preach the gospel, I have nothing to boast of.

Paul essentially began the church among the Gentiles. He had an incredible impact among the Gentiles. But he says, "I must evaluate myself." Woe to me if I don't proclaim the gospel. Any man then who was an Apostle had to deliver. There is no higher privilege than that of an Apostle.

Question: why is it Paul who is the great Apostle? Why were the other Apostles not as well-known? Why didn't God get Paul as an Apostle during His life on earth? Why did God give Paul the mission of teaching the mystery doctrine? Why did God have Paul be the one to evangelize the Gentiles and be the minister to the Gentiles. Why, in the book of Acts, do we have the hand off from John and Peter to Paul?

We must stop and ask ourselves, what have we done with this great spiritual life that God has given us? Wherever we find ourselves in life, whether on the right road or the wrong, we are still in a position to serve. We pick ourselves up, dust ourselves off and we move on.

If you take in doctrine and are filled with the Holy Spirit, whatever you do when filled with the Spirit is divine good and is rewardable. Those who criticize you are probably building this great pile of human works to be burned at the Judgment Seat of Christ.

When the opportunity presents itself, we must take it. It does not matter what others think of you; it doesn't matter if you don't know anything. A few words about who Jesus Christ is and what He has done is something you must be prepared to give now and again.

V. 16 begins with εαν + ευαγγελιζω (present middle indicative) = if I proclaim [preach]... The subjunctive mood + εαν indicates the subjunctive mood. There are two protosises in this verse. There is the 3rd class condition, which is the more probably future condition; that which is more likely to occur in the future, in the near or far future. The subjunctive mood means that there is this element of uncertainty; here, there is likelihood that it may occur. It is most likely that Paul would proclaim the gospel from that point forward.

There is an element of contingency in this verse, primarily for the sake of his argument. This makes Paul's answer. It is his premise. There is also a present tense which indicates that Paul will continue specific acts of preaching. The present stresses his teaching at specific times and places.

The second use of ευαγγελιζω, which is in the aorist active subjunctive; a constative aorist; the action is viewed in its entirety. Individual acts are not in view, but the whole picture is seen here. The aorist signifies that his teaching is one unified event.

If Paul does not choose to preach the gospel, then he says in his conclusion, woe is me. If he overlooks the mission given to him by the Lord. He has nothing to boast of as he is under compulsion. Boasting always indicate arrogance. Boasting is an attitude; an attitude of arrogance. Paul's teaching must be entirely grace-oriented. If grace is not in the gospel, then it is not the gospel. If we must do something for salvation, then that is bad news. The grace of God is the good news that He has done it all for us.

Summary Points

1. Paul's commission, his gift, the empowerment of the Holy Spirit has nothing to do with Paul's abilities. Paul is greatly blessed with innate abilities.
2. Paul is a genius, but it is a part of his function of his gift; it is a part of his gift.
3. That genius takes him nowhere apart from the filling of the Holy Spirit and the gift given him by God the Holy Spirit.
4. Therefore, it is through God's grace that God's purpose is accomplished. It is not accomplished because of us, but because of God.
5. Boasting is out. God is not going to give Paul greater blessing based upon his numbers; the size of his churches. It is not about what we have done; but it is about what God does through us. If we are not motivated by the doctrine in our souls, then it is meaningless. There is nothing wrong with the motivation of the light of eternity. We would like to have a few rewards. How do I go tripping through life? What is my purpose?

1Cor. 9:16 For if I preach the gospel, that gives me no ground for boasting. For necessity is laid upon me. Woe to me if I do not preach the gospel!

1Cor. 9:16

Lesson #479

Wednesday January 24, 2007

God never intended for us to simply take Scripture for what it means to us; as a subjective understanding. There is only one way to interpret. Bobby isn't perfect, however. Bobby has been studying under the filling of the Spirit with the hermeneutical background. If Bobby is faithful, there will be enough for us to grow from.

We begin v. 16 with a conditional statement; a more probable future condition. It means that Paul's preaching is very likely to occur in the future. There is an element of contingency; there is an uncertainty in this premise. Maybe he will preach and maybe he will not. Are there any people who possibly think that Paul would consider not preaching. For if I preach the gospel... Why didn't Paul use a 1st class condition, as we all know he will. Grammar and syntax come into play here. The 3rd class condition provides an eventuality for the sake of making his point; for the sake of a doctrinal argument.

This is problematic for many, as young people do not know English grammar. Bobby didn't really get English grammar until he took Greek. Paul later says, Woe to me if I don't preach the gospel. Paul could choose not to preach, but if he does, he is a dead duck. Preaching is not really an option for Paul; it is not an option for anyone who is a communicator of doctrine, who has a communication gift. He is giving a reminder and a warning. Woe to me if I fail in the proclamation of the gospel. Serious damage to Paul if he does not preach the gospel. Paul is addressing his motivation. He addresses in a backdoor way his motivation for preaching the gospel. The apodosis is the conclusion of the first phrase, if I proclaim the gospel. If I proclaim the gospel, there is nothing for which I can boast [or take credit]. None of this was about him. There is nothing there which he can take credit for. It is not about him. His preaching must be entirely centered on the grace of God. It is not centered upon his work as a spokesman for God. Paul is like a presidential press secretary. They stand on a dias in front of a room, informing the press, and therefore, to the entire nation. The press secretary's announcements are not about himself; he is only a middle man. If he makes an issue of himself, he fails and he is fired. Paul is the press secretary of Jesus Christ and His grace policy; and there is no reference to Paul. No communicator of the gospel should inject himself into the grace announcement. The issue is not the Corinthians nor the relationships among one another. Woe to people who communicate the gospel and make issues of themselves.

In this passage, we are getting a bit of a microcosm of Paul's message to these Corinthians. Paul must proclaim the gospel. As we go through this, we will begin to further understand the law of expediency. Do not ever inject yourself between an unbeliever and the message of the gospel. Paul's commission, his gift and the empowerment of the Holy Spirit have nothing to do with Paul and his ability. These doctrines were brand new when Paul taught them; never before heard. Paul was God's choice to bring most of the mystery doctrine to this world.

No matter how great a human being Paul is, he cannot function in his spiritual life without the gift given him and the filling of the Holy Spirit. From the time that Paul was blasted off his horse on the road to Damascus, to this time, he was a man who had nothing to boast about.

There is something more here that we should not forget. It is something that every believer must realize. Compulsion is critical. This is not a very well liked work in this culture. As believers, we are under compulsion as well. Paul was under compulsion, but so are we.

Επικειμι = to press upon, to urgently demand, to be compelled to. Obviously, some people do not like this kind of pressure. This explains why God leaves Paul on this earth; this is why Paul lives. What is impressed upon him is his commission given him on the Damascus road. There is no way that we can get around this compulsion. He is addressing the Corinthians. How could he reject such a directive? And how about them? The primary reason that God leaves Paul in this world is this direct.

Our compulsion is, when we deviate from His plan, we receive discipline; and we are no witness in the appeal of Satan. When you don't fulfill your commission, what you get is woe. God knows just how to do it to gain our attention. Many think that their main purpose in life is being kind, being upbeat, helping people through crises. A pastor may think he is to marry and bury and counsel; but to stay out of the way of other believers.

there are some funerals when the Lord Jesus Christ is never mentioned. Bobby read an obituary about a reverend. It was a very long obit and there was not one mention of God, Jesus Christ, salvation, the way to heaven. It is a total tragedy when the name of Jesus Christ is not heard in a funeral. Bobby is under compulsion to do this. He can see it when people are squirming or others are riveted. They must think about death during a funeral; they have to.

The other tragedy is evangelists who want to attach other works to salvation. It is sad that an evangelist does not give the true meaning of the cross.

5 Points of the Gospel Message

1. Christ is the only means of reconciliation. Christ removed the enmity between God and ourselves. Slaves cannot free slaves. You cannot do enough works for God to love us and take us into heaven. "You've got to be really good." "Well, how good? 70% good and 30% bad?" There is no answers to a question like this. Only Christ who can reconcile enmity between us and God.
2. Unlimited atonement; God has died for all mankind. He was a propitiation for not only us but for the entire world.
3. The Lord Jesus Christ took the penalty of sin which was rightfully ours and bore it so that we don't have to. Expiation.
4. Jesus is God and man in one person. This makes a great difference; He stood between us and God. He is the only true intermediary.
5. Jesus is the only means of our salvation as He is the mediator between God and man.

If we know these 5 points, we can present the gospel at any time to anyone. So many who claim to be evangelists do not preach the simple truth of the gospel. Instead, they preach works, social activism, politics; or whatever crusade that they are on to change the devil's world.

Our compulsion is not to create human good; it is to produce divine good. Paul is compelled; we have the same compulsion and the same mandate to present the gospel. It does not matter what people think of us. Our reward is not tied to our self-esteem. It is a great experience in life to witness someone going from hell to heaven by believing in Jesus Christ because of your words. It is one of the great experiences of our life.

1Cor. 9:16 For if I preach the gospel, that gives me no ground for boasting. For necessity is laid upon me. Woe to me if I do not preach the gospel!

1Cor. 9:17 For if I do this of my own will, I have a reward, but not of my own will, I am still entrusted with a stewardship.

Now we come across an oxymoron. Paul is compelled to preach; and he says, in v. 17, if I do it voluntarily, I have a reward.

1Cor. 9:18 What then is my reward? That in my preaching I may present the gospel free of charge, so as not to make full use of my right in the gospel.

1Cor. 9:16–17

Lesson #480

Thursday January 25, 2007

A key word επικημι or αδικημι = compulsion. Paul was pressed upon or urgently demanded Paul will accomplish his mission or he will die trying; he will not be defeated.

Our compulsion and obligation should be to give the gospel to the unbeliever. Bobby made up the verb last night compulse.

The word compulsion might need a bit of explaining. Mistakes can sometimes lead us in the way that we need to go. There is a negative connotation to this word with regard to freedom or with regard to psychology. The formal definition an uncontrollable and an unwanted urge to perform a certain action; failure to perform the act leads to overt mental problems? The use of compulsion that Bobby used, did not mean to use it as a psychological disorder. We are compelled by divine mandate by divine fiat to present the gospel to a lost and dying world.

For Paul, not to preach would bring on divine discipline. In a psychological disorder, there is nothing beneficial about the mental disorder compulsion. Paul would express anguish in divine discipline, but it would be to his benefit.

1Cor. 9:16 For if I preach the gospel, that gives me no ground for boasting. For necessity is laid upon me. Woe to me if I do not preach the gospel!

Paul links his compulsion to volition and to reward. For if I do this voluntarily, I have a reward; but if I do this against my will, I have a stewardship entrusted to me. We might expect that the two halves of this verse should be parallel. We might expect something like, for if I do this voluntarily, I have a reward; but if against my will, then I don't get a reward. The final phrase is somewhat confusing.

V. 17 begins with εἰ + the present active indicative of πράσσω = to do, to practice. The use here is a 1st class condition. Practice here means to do something regularly; it is a part of your daily life; it is habitual, customary. ἑκὼν = willingly, voluntarily. For if I willingly practice preaching the gospel... or, If I willing and regularly proclaim the gospel... The conclusion: then I have a grounds for a reward. So, why does Paul say that he has a reward, when he kept saying over and over, I don't want to get paid by your guys. The word is μισθος = payment for work done; wages. Okay, why is Paul going backwards? Well, let's say it means Paul gets rewards in heaven. That might make sense; but it does not quite seem to fit. Here, it is a specific reward on earth for doing something here. However, this complicates this passage considerably.

What was Paul's reward for preaching?

1. The μισθος has to be an early reward.
2. The problem is, Paul refuses wages, but still practices preaching willingly.
3. Paul's reward must take on a different form. What form? If it is not wages, what kind of reward is it?
4. V. 18: Paul's reward is the privilege of not receiving wages. Why?
5. This is so Paul can better present the gospel of grace, which is a reward in itself. Grace is his reward.
6. Paul wants no taint of charging for the gospel, also seen in v. 18.

7. To accomplish this (teaching grace), to make sure there is no misunderstanding the grace of God in no remuneration, Paul is willing to forgo the right and privilege of wages for his work. He still has a reward for willing preaching.
8. In this refusal, grace comes through loud and clear. That in itself is a reward for him.
9. Paul's reward is accomplishing the mission of presenting grace.

This verse is tight; it fits right into the context. More factors need to be taken into account. This is the first part. Paul is under compulsion to preach the gospel. Being compelled to do something seems to be the opposite of being willing; so what does that matter? Paul is mandated to preach; does it matter if he does it willingly or under compulsion? Why mention both of these all at once. Regardless of whether it is willingly or compelled, Paul will get a reward for proclaiming the gospel. Paul has gone out of his way to prove this fact. If you work, you get paid. It is great when we like our work. However, whether we like our work or not, we still get paid. If we go to work to make money or because we love it, we still get paid. So, why does Paul bring this up?

1. Compulsion to practice preaching is not incompatible with willingly preaching.
2. We have a right to get paid, regardless of which way we do it.
3. Willingness seems to be the reward.
4. What is the importance of mentioning compulsion?

What is the Reason for Mentioning Compulsion

1. This is no doubt that this is what God had in mind for Paul. Here's your mission, God said to Paul; and he was compelled at this point.
2. The privilege is not receiving money, but seeing the eyes of those who understand grace. Compelled and willing are both reasonable here.
3. Paul has been compelled to preach from the moment of conversion.
4. This is even a stronger reason; Paul is motivated to do this. Paul is even much more worthy and he still refuses monetary reward. Some people understand nothing else but monetary reward.
5. Receiving wages is not just tied to compulsion but also to motivation. This is the first time that Paul has talked about motivation. He brings in a completely new aspect at this point. This is what he wants us to understand. He is speaking of his own motivation.
6. Motivation is made the critical factor in v. 17, as it is in almost everything in life.
7. So in preaching, in the motivation of his preaching, reward is stressed for a willing attitude.
8. Paul willingly accedes to preach the gospel. 1st class condition; he willingly teaches. This is the opposite of Jonah, who had no interest in going to Nineveh. He did not want to go and teach the Assyrians, and he hated them. When Jonah got to Nineveh, he did it under compulsion. Jonah missed out on a great reward here.

9. So, is that not worthy of higher wages? Wouldn't greater motivation take Paul further?
10. And is not the proper motivation from the filling of the Holy Spirit divine good? Paul is producing divine good. Jonah didn't.
11. That reward is the sense of mission accomplished. Some people get paid the big money to do certain things; but some just love to do it.
12. Therefore, v. 17 strengthens Paul's case for remuneration, but he is strengthening his case in a whole different direction because he is working willingly. It is much easier to pay a willing employee than it is to pay a grouching, complaining one.
13. Willingness to work is just one more reason that Paul is greatly worth his remuneration. And so his is an unassailable motivation to preach.

A reward in heaven is not excluded here; that just isn't the focus.

Paul's enemies are questioning his motivation; they are questioning his authority; and Paul here cuts through all of that. The receiving of the wages of compelled or willing preaching is deserved; Paul can have his wages regardless, no matter what his motivation is. And he receives great benefits, and he is remunerated by those he serves, whether under compulsion or willingly. In any case, he is not obligated to take the wages. The primary lesson is the grace of God and how wonderful it is.

Money is necessary; we live that way. Our primary mission is the spiritual life; and we exhibit grace with our life and with our mouth. This is for all of us; not just for Paul.

1Cor. 9:17 For if I willingly and regularly do this [proclaim the gospel and the truth], I have a reward, but not of my own will, I am still entrusted with a stewardship.

1Cor. 9:18 What then is my reward? That in my preaching I may present the gospel free of charge, so as not to make full use of my right in the gospel.

1Cor. 9:17

Lesson #481

Sunday 1 January 28, 2007

The two compound clauses would have been parallel, but they are not. Reward if you willingly preach; and no reward if you don't. However, that is not what Paul says here. What Paul says is so unexpected; the final line in v. 17 seems to come out of nowhere. What is an entrusted stewardship? Why do we find this instead of I have no reward? There is a reward for the willing practice of proclaiming the gospel and proclaiming divine truth. The reward that Paul has in here cannot be monetary reward; and if it isn't that, then we would think, an eternal reward; but that is not it either. This verb does not directly allude to the crowns that we find mentioned throughout. It would make sense, at least superficially, that Paul is speaking of eternal rewards; however, as we get into this verse, it is going to be clear that this is about earthly rewards.

Bobby is going to lead us into becoming Biblical sleuths. This is a reward in this life for us just as much as for Paul. We get paid in this life, even though we aren't evangelists, missionaries or preachers.

Explain Paul's Reward

1. The Greek noun is μισθος, which does mean reward.
2. Literally, it means payment for work done.
3. In this case, the work done is Paul's willing practice of preaching the gospel.
4. However, that cannot be a monetary payment, as he has refused money for his work from the Corinthians. It is his privilege and right, but he refuses to take it from them. What money they give would have been offered grudgingly and of necessity. They would not understand grace if they had to pay him for teaching them.
5. Paul's reward/payment must take a different form than a simple monetary one.
6. In v. 18, we are told about Paul's reward: his reward is not charging for the gospel that he teaches. His reward is the opposite of money; he does not charge. That is his reward.
7. That is grace preaching; preaching for no material reward.
8. No money is required to hear the gospel or to accept it. Paul's payment could not be material in any way: a house, a chariot and of course not money.
9. Paul's reward is connected to the grace function of his preaching.
10. What is clear is that Paul's reward is completely in the realm of grace and grace excludes preaching for monetary gain. His reward is only in the realm of grace in this passage.
11. Paul's reward is directly connected in v. 17 to his willing proclaiming the gospel and Bible truth.

In church history, there has been a lot of charging for the gospel and for divine truth. The television evangelists should not charge for the gospel. His reward is connected to grace function and is connected to his willing teaching of the doctrine.

3 Things

1. The grace preaching of the grace gospel; God does not sell salvation. This comes through loud and clear to these believers.
2. This is a reward because Paul knows that he has willingly accomplished his commission before the Lord. Mission accomplished: making certain that they understand grace.
3. Paul's commission is revealing God's grace plan to the church. He is to reveal the mystery doctrine to the church.

Paul's conclusion: When Paul willingly proclaims the gospel to unbelievers, the act itself is his reward. Fulfilling his mission is his reward.

We have a mission; we are told to go to the corners of the earth and present the gospel of Jesus Christ. It is a great thrill to be able to pass along the gospel to anyone. No matter how much you hate someone, no way would you want to see them spend eternity in hell. Paul is one of the happiest men in the world, as he is accomplishing the mission that God placed him on the earth to accomplish. That which we accomplish is eternal; we can take this with us. The grace satisfaction and reward goes with us. Our reward might just be that we have presented the gospel or gospel truth, and their eyes light up; they understand; it makes sense to them.

Paul is also compelled to teach, as his spiritual gift dictates and as God's plan has designed for him. The compulsion to preach, which is Paul's mandate, and his willing preaching are all compatible. Just because you are ordered to do something, that does not mean that you do it willingly. You might not do something if it is someone else telling you to do it. Some autocrat can tell you, "Do this and I'll fire you" and it is natural to respond, "Hell, no!" However, there are times when you might really want to do that thing. One is obligation and one speaks to your motivation. When they intersect, it is the best of all worlds. This is the first time that Paul addresses motivation. Paul preaches because he wants to; not just because he has been compelled to. In his being compelled, Paul endures incredible hardships.

It is quite unpleasant if you hate what you do, even when you get paid to do it. Bobby and others quite enjoyed jumping out of planes, and they got paid for it. Sometimes Bobby teaches and realizes, I can't believe that I get paid for this! A real reward is if you like doing what you do, and you get paid on top of that. Most people get along paycheck to paycheck.

Another illustration: giving money. The plate comes by and you don't want to, but you felt compelled to or you saw everyone else do it, and so you thought that you needed to. However, to give willingly is pleasing to the Lord. We think about getting something tangible in return for money; however, can you imagine that the act of giving money is your reward? You know in giving the money, you are furthering the gospel and Bible doctrine. That can be a reward in itself. There is tremendous satisfaction in doing things for a reward. Our motivation comes from our maturity. It comes from doctrine resident in our souls.

1Cor. 9:17a For if I willingly [voluntarily] and regularly do this [proclaim the gospel and the truth], I have a reward,...

In the second half, Paul makes a hypothetical case; what about when I am unwilling? This is the motivation of being unwilling to do what the Lord wants us to do.

1Cor. 9:17b ...but not of my own will, I am still entrusted with a stewardship.

1Cor. 9:17b

Lesson #482

Sunday 2 January 28, 2007

The reward for Paul is the preaching itself. Paul can either preach willingly and receive a reward; and, in the second half, he says, If I preach against my will, I am still entrusted with this stewardship. Whether Paul accomplishes his mission or not is another story; however, he is compelled to teach.

Paul makes a negative hypothetical assumption. If it happens, and it is true. The assumption is, he does not practice preaching willingly, but he does teach. There is no teaching vs. not teaching; Paul deals with teaching willingly versus teaching unwillingly. Reward or not, it is the mission which is important. Against my will covers the wrong motivation or working with a bad attitude. Therefore, Paul will not recognize that preaching to unbelievers is its own reward. There is no satisfaction in teaching from the wrong motivation; there is no satisfaction from doing something from the wrong motivation. Maybe you are ashamed of the gospel; who cares what someone else thinks of you? If you associate with someone who is not interested in the gospel, you will go to the lowest common denominator. You need to weed people out; then you learn what they are like. You learn then whether they are gracious, mean, or whatever their deep down attitude is. Nothing brings out a person's true attitude like the gospel. When you do it willingly, when you are not ashamed of who you are, people will respond or they will react. If they respond, you may make one of the greatest friends in your life. If they react, you might get a reaction that, even 10 years with that person would not bring it out. Whether we give the gospel willingly or unwillingly, we are doing a great thing. However, if we do things grudgingly, we will never learn of the inherent rewards. It is the preaching of the gospel that matters. It is not whether you do it willingly or unwillingly. Unwillingly, means you won't get the personal satisfaction of giving the gospel and understanding its impact. However, regardless, the issue is not our satisfaction or lack thereof; what is important is the gospel. Paul still has the job entrusted to him. It is the mission; not our own reaction to it. It is the mission; I am superfluous. Paul is dealing with the undeniable purpose of the preaching of the gospel. Even if I preach against my will, I have a stewardship provided for me. God's purpose is accomplished whether done willingly or unwillingly. It never goes away, as long as he is alive; and as long as we are alive, it never goes away. We might be compelled and we might be highly motivated. We will be tortured until we get with it; He disciplines those whom He loves. God's purpose gets done no matter what. So, Paul says, I have a stewardship entrusted to me, no matter how I feel about it. Whether Paul feels good about what he does, or whether he feels compelled only, God has still entrusted him with a mission; with a stewardship.

The Greek noun is οἰκονομία = stewardship. One cognate is οἰκονομῶς = manager of a household, a steward, the position of a household manager. Οἰκονομία is stewardship; it is the work or the act or the function of managing a household. This is applicable to an affluent household. There was a lot of slavery in the Roman empire. It was often the slave who ran the household.

Feminine noun: οἰκονομία (οἰκονομία) [pronounced oi-koh-noh-MEE-uh], which means the management of a household or of household affairs; 1a) specifically, the management, oversight, administration, of other's property; 1b) the office of a manager or overseer, stewardship; 1c) administration, dispensation. Strong's #3622.

Verb: oikonomeō (οἰκονομέω) [pronounced oi-koh-noh-MEH-oh], which means 1) to be a steward; 2) to manage the affairs of a household; 3) to manage, dispense, order, regulate. Strong's #3621.

The slaves there would often be entrusted with the family jewels; with the family money. But, importantly, slavery could be comfortable and even desirable. Often, they could do better in slavery than on their own. Many essentially became members of the household, to some degree.

This is a position of great responsibility; this is a matter of great freedom, in fact, for some. In order to run a household, you can't be under someone's constant thumb. There must be some freedom to function. It is still a service impressed upon a slave. A slave can function willingly or not; and slaves are always compelled. They can hate it or enjoy it; no matter how they feel, the position and the responsibilities are still there.

Paul sent a slave back to his master because the slave became a believer and the master was a believer. What was most important was the mission. The slave went back, and whatever God had for Onesimus was within the realm of his position.

Some can function in this position, which they are compelled to do; and their motivation is quite separate from their responsibilities. How someone feels is not the focus of this passage; the focus of the passage is the mission. Even if Paul does not voluntarily do what His Master commands, he is still entrusted with the job. He has a commission; it has been mandated, and he must do it one way or the other. Principle of monetary remuneration is still in effect, even if someone doesn't deserve it; even if they have a bad attitude; and even if they don't want it.

Illustration: maybe there is a waiter in a restaurant who was horrible and you did not tip them; he still got the job done anyway, even with a bad attitude; and he got paid his minimum wage. The principle is, the man worked and he gets paid for the work even if his attitude is bad; you should not leave him nothing. He gets paid for what he does; that is graciousness on our part. It is petty to withhold any tip from him.

What is the point in all of this?

1. The Corinthians know that Paul preaches willingly; he loves what he does; and he does with enthusiasm. They see it. It is easy to tell when you can tell that he likes what he does.
2. Paul was not only under compulsion, but he also had correct motivation in fulfilling his obligation. The second half of the verse, the second hypothetical, is simply theoretical.
3. Paul had a pure motive when he refused to take a salary. He was not using his gift to receive a big paycheck. He was not grudgingly working with a bad idea, and then demanding pay. Nor was he being penitent; he did not need to dock himself pay for having the wrong attitude.
4. Paul was a magnificent steward of the gospel.

5. He was an example of great motivation and the desire to get the job done, even without pay.
6. The attitude that Paul had is clear; from the obligation to preach and the willing acceptance to do so.
7. Either way, willing or unwilling, in this final phrase, it is Paul's mission that is critical.
8. Why did Paul make an issue of this? Not even Paul's enemies could question his motivation when it comes to willingly accomplishing his mission; and for the motivation behind refusing a salary.
9. The stewardship, Paul the slave, happily did his job. That was the only thing that mattered. It was not remuneration and it was not freedom which were important; it was the mission; and he enjoyed it.
10. Paul understood something else: he understood that the grace of God would never fail him in providing him whatever was necessary in order to accomplish his mission. When the mission was over, he would profit. He had a reward on this earth and a reward in heaven. To live is Christ and to die is profit. Now we understand Paul's meaning.
11. The Corinthians needed to see grace in action, and Paul is the epitome of grace in action. They should understand his emphasis, and so should we. It is the mission.

1Cor. 9:17b ...but not of my own will, I am still entrusted with a stewardship [or, the management of a household or household affairs].

1Cor. 9:18 What then is my reward? That in my preaching I may present the gospel free of charge, so as not to make full use of my right in the gospel.

1Cor. 9:18

Lesson #483

Wednesday January 31, 2007

The Bible has one meaning and one meaning only, the one which God intended. We don't get to have several different opinions here. There appears to be some redundancy in this chapter; Paul seems to be saying the same thing over and over again. This is the principle of repetition.

The Corinthians desperately need to observe grace in action. There is no other gospel than the gospel of grace, and yet, they don't seem to get it. They haven't quite mastered grace. Paul believes that they need to see grace in action; they need to see Paul apply this in his life. Grace in action is a part of the spiritual matriculation of the Corinthians (and all believers). Paul has set up this opportunity for them in chapter 9. Through his own action, grace will be seen by these people. Paul has refused to take any money from the Corinthians for his support, because he recognizes the danger of creeping legalism in their church. He must demonstrate grace. We have seen Paul's supreme sacrifice, which, the main one is, he does not take funds from the Corinthians. He is not teaching for food, shelter or money. This standard is hardly followed by anyone else today. Paul is not speaking of a material reward in this principle of remuneration.

Paul introduces his true reward, which is his purpose in life. If I do this voluntarily, I have a reward. It is all about his preaching; not about the results. The result of his preaching is not emphasized (his reward). He is not concerned with the reward here. He focuses on the preaching itself. His mission is to preach and he practices this mission willingly and with enthusiasm. He has correct motivation in fulfilling his obligation. He is a good steward. We normally hear this with regards to money. Those who are stewards of the money of Berachah church are careful. Paul is a steward, but not of money. His stewardship is his work. He happily fulfills his stewardship. He focuses on his mission, not his reward.

Why Paul Emphasizes his Mission but not his Reward

1. Paul wants the grace preaching of the grace gospel.
2. Paul wants us to understand his reward is his willing accomplishment of his Apostolic commission.
3. That commission is his privilege of revealing God's grace and God's grace plan through the dispensation of the church.
4. Therefore, when he willingly preaches the gospel, which he does, which is the stewardship entrusted to him, which is the gospel itself. He is a steward of the gospel. The stewardship is to be accomplished whether done willingly or unwillingly. We know Paul does it willingly. The act itself, then, is its own reward. His reward is not monetary. It is the preaching itself which is his reward.
5. Paul has the great inner happiness from seeing the Lord. That is a great reward. This is what God has designated for us to do from eternity past. When we understand this plan and execute it, it is one of the greatest feelings in life.

As you remain in fellowship for a longer period of time and grow, you become more and more relaxed and more satisfied with life.

There must be no mistaking with Paul's reward. He declares his reward to be exactly the opposite of material. In v. 18, Paul will say that he will not make full use of his right in the gospel.

This does not mean that you need to eschew all material things. There is nothing wrong with material things. The only problem is if your priorities are wrong; then something is wrong. Don't get the idea that mere ownership is wrong.

Our reward is not the approbation of others; it is not the accumulation of material things; it is serving the Lord right along with what He has for us to do.

Legalism is everywhere; and it is probably very little different from when it was found in Corinth. Paul has a true burden for these people and for them to understand grace. There should never be an association of grace with a monetary price. In 16th A.D., there were indulgences, where people paid in order to remove all punishment for their sins. A bishop or one of the popes would forgive you. Bobby saw a great movie called Luther. There was a huge attack by Satan in these indulgences. They would lessen the punishment to those in purgatory. The problem was, these indulgences could be bought. They could even get people out of purgatory. We cannot pay for sins which Jesus Christ died for. The simplest soteriology is completely adulterated in order to make money. St. Peter's was built from these indulgences, which completely violate this passage. It is a tomb to those who reject truth. These indulgences were part of what got Martin Luther to reject Catholicism. He examined the book of Romans and realized the fallacy of what he believed as a Catholic priest. He posted his 95 theses and then went to war against Romanism.

In any case, Paul's motivation not be attributed to a lust for money (or to any lust, e.g., ego lust). Paul has the pure motivation of bringing the gospel to unbelievers and preaching church age doctrine to believers. It is always an attack from his own camp. Some unbeliever radicals or some Judiazers; but mostly, the attacks against Paul came from within the church itself. The deal was, Paul did not worry that much about the outer world. They couldn't take him out of this life until his work was done; his concerns were with those things occurring inside the church.

Paul kept his focus on his mission and upon grace orientation. His mission accomplishment of the stewardship entrusted. There is no reward in ego-lust. Bobby possibly chose this book to teach because Paul lays out what we should do, in very practical terms.

Present middle participle of εὐαγγελίζω. There are many kinds of clauses that this could be, and here it is a temporal participle, which limits the action of the verb by introducing a limitation of time. When I preach [proclaim]... Iterative present tense, which refers to things which recur at successive intervals of time. This is preaching which occurs over and over again. Therefore, this should read whenever I preach... There is never a charge for proclaiming the gospel.

Paul's payment is to be able to offer the gospel free of charge. This is a great bit of logic. His payment is not to receive a monetary reward for preaching the Word of God. Grace is free.

Unbelievers should never be hit up for money; they should never get the idea that the gospel is for sale. It is grace or nothing; that is what Paul's preaching must reflect. No one can buy their way into heaven. No one can give something in exchange for their souls.

Bobby went to a packed house funeral; 600 people, and the gospel was never given; how much money this man gave to the church was spoken of. At a funeral is a time when people are most receptive to the gospel. They are most vulnerable at this time. Bobby's funeral service is nothing but the gospel.

The final sentence is a result clause; the Greek is great with identifying these types of phrases. Aorist middle infinitive of κατακραομαι, which means with the result that I don't make full use of my right in the gospel.

If a congregation was not grace orientated, he did not take their money, like Thessalonika and Corinth. Aorist active subjunctive of τίθιμι = I place, I put something somewhere; I may place before, I may offer. Paul offers the gospel without charge. He does not get full use of his privilege. He chose not to be paid. He is not going to a lost and dying world and say, If you pay me, I'll preach to you.

Paul could have put today's televangelists to shame, if he so chose. He could have picked up tons of money, but did not. The reward is the execution of the Christian life, not the remuneration for what you have done. Paul's payment for preaching is to not get paid.

1Cor. 9:18 What then is my reward? That in my preaching I may present the gospel free of charge, so as not to make full use of my right in the gospel.

We will go from money to a status in life. Paul will say that he is free from all [mankind]; but he has willingly made himself a slave to all, that he might win the more. Paul does something that noone does. Paul goes from freedom to slavery, which is his next supreme sacrifice.

1Cor. 9:19

Lesson #484

Thursday February 1, 2007

This begins a new paragraph, although, of course, it is still connected to what has gone before. Paul has a divinely sanctioned privilege to which he is entitled. He has shown conclusively through illustration and through an Old Testament quote, that he has the privilege of remuneration. However, it is his supreme sacrifice to give it up. Paul sacrificed his remuneration for a very good reason. He demonstrates his privilege of remuneration. He had the privilege, and he also had the privilege to decline it, which is what he has done.

Now, we are going to go to other areas where Paul has sacrificed as well. Vv. 19–23, he goes through the basic. What spiritual maturity the Corinthians had is a demonstration of what Paul has taught them by way of Bible doctrine. They can observe themselves and they can observe how Paul serves them. The supreme sacrifice of wages for his work was made for their sake.

They needed to see the law of love in action and now they need to see grace in action. They needed to learn how to apply the law of love; Paul will teach them through exhibiting the law of supreme sacrifice. He is not through demonstrated the grace of God and his love for them. He will now cover other ways that Paul sacrifices himself on behalf of his hearers.

Most of these stewards that Paul is writing about are slaves. They are household slaves; some were financial household slaves, and they controlled the money of a wealthy family. They had a stewardship and a function to handle the finances of this family. Paul continues with this line of thought in v. 19, and he will demonstrate the scope of the sacrifice that he will make in the law of love. These verses will complete Paul's thoughts which were begun in chapter 8. This message that Paul is giving is a message to the strong. This is addressed to strong believers with doctrine.

Paul will demonstrate the law of love to these Corinthians in a way that will completely explain to them. He will present the necessity of something here. This will be an example of his love toward them and his love for the Lord Jesus Christ. Paul radically demonstrates the laws of love and expediency. They are just different subjects of love. Expediency is love towards the unbeliever; and the law of love is toward the believer. They need to understand how to do the same thing. Paul has extended the law of love to believers. He will essentially extend this law to unbelievers, but he does it for a different reason to get the same results (grace adjustment and grace orientation in the spiritual life).

The law of expediency to aimed toward that first adjustment and the law of love toward...? Maybe we are getting this in too much of an abstract way. The Corinthians must not only extend the law of love to fellow believers, but they must also extend the law of love to unbelievers in their periphery. We should extend the law of expediency to unbelievers and the law of love toward believers.

The example of the law of expediency that Paul offers: I am free from all men, but I have made myself a slave to all. Paul was born a Roman citizen, and, as such, has all the rights and privileges of a Roman citizen. He places himself in bondage, even though he is entirely free. Paul refers to the liberty cited back in v. 1. He is free and he refuses to use it. Not only does he not exercise his freedom, but he finally concludes I am not free. Today, we think of moving from slavery to freedom; however, it is just the opposite here.

Our freedom in the US has been obtained via the blood of hundreds of thousands of soldiers. We are the only country in history to fight a civil war in order to free slaves. The Brits did this over a century; we did it over 4 bloody years. No one has done this more quickly in history.

The Corinthians had to be the lousiest bunch of church-going Christians in the ancient world, and Paul says he would enslave himself to them. However, we are also slaves. We have freedom to live the spiritual life which God has given us, and yet we are slaves to that truth. It is an interesting position; greatest slavery in the world, and we are better off as slaves than someone else. Slaves can have great responsibility; and Paul had a great responsibility with regards to the gospel. Slaves are punished when they fail; when they run away. But the Lord will bring us back where we want to be.

No man is free of all men; we all interact in some way to this or that person. No one is entirely free. Potentially, this is possible. Freedom without responsibility is not true freedom. Paul can't mean that he is free from responsibility nor can he claim to be independent of all men, as he interacts with men constantly. What does Paul mean? In Paul's previous illustration, the emphasis was not on his rights and privileges, but his choice not to use these rights and privileges. Paul is free not to use his freedom.

Paul is Free from all Men

1. Paul is free from people in the sense of having volition to make his own decisions before the Lord.

2. Paul is free not to take the whims and desires of others. How many choices do we base on the strengths and weaknesses of someone else? Someone else has good ideas about what we should and shouldn't do. It's easy to listen to advice from this great paragon of strength.
3. It does not matter what anyone else thinks about his decisions.
4. Paul is free of human viewpoint pressures.
5. Paul makes his choices based upon his own soul. We are free from all of these people around us, but enslaved to the truth.
6. Paul knows the truth and the truth has made him free. I
7. The criterion for Paul's choices is his responsibility before the Lord.
8. Paul's primary choices are made by application of doctrine. Not pleasing or satisfying the demands of people.

We're responsible to the Lord, and it takes strength to say no when we want to say yes.

Summation

1. This means free from our primary relationship people are secondary relationships to our relationship with Jesus Christ. Our relationship with him is growth and prosperity.
2. We are not bound by the human viewpoint pressures.
3. This frees us to pursue our primary relationship with God.
4. Approval of God rather than the traditions or the approval of men.
5. Paul is free from all of that; he makes his choices as being free and based upon the plan of God for his life.
6. Admittedly, God's plan involves interaction with people; there must be this interaction with others. That is the whole point of slavery.
7. Although the plan of God involves interaction with people, it is not their approval which is his criterion for his choices.
8. Our choices and his choices must be approved by God, based upon the criterion of God's viewpoint in our souls. We are not free from Bible doctrine and the mandates of Bible doctrine. We are enslaved to the truth, and we express that in personal and impersonal love toward believers.

Sunday 1 February 4, 2007

Very cool music with the offering; with a viola or violin?

For though I am free from all men is, by itself, an absurd statement. No one is free from all human beings; no one is without interaction, obligation, etc. Especially the Apostle Paul, who is traveling, evangelizing and teaching. It is his responsibility to interact with believers and unbelievers alike. So, what does he mean here? Paul does not have a primary relationship with anyone; he is not married. He has responsibilities and obligations and interactions; but there is not a primary relationship. He still loves people and he enjoys friendships. You will know the truth and the truth will set you free; free to apply doctrine; free to apply divine viewpoint. Being free of all men means that Paul has a choice; he can be affected by Bible doctrine or by human viewpoint. He is free from human viewpoint; because he knows the truth. He is free from all men, in that he can make his own decisions based upon Bible doctrine. Paul is able to be free from human viewpoint, while still being able to associate with people.

Paul never shuns his responsibilities toward others. They are defined by the plan of God; not by the plan of people. His life is not satisfying the demands of people. He is free from all that by his own choice. God's plan always comes first; we spend too many years trying to please people who have human viewpoint. Real freedom is when we comply with the plan of God. This does not mean that we don't have responsibilities or close relationships. We just need to bear in mind the #1 priority. What is Paul's choice that he makes independent of human factors? I have made myself a slave to all. Paul is absolutely free, and yet he has made himself a slave. He has every freedom, and yet he is a slave here. This is not a choice that many ordinary people would make. He is a slave in the sense of being a steward of the gospel. Example of a missionary Tim who passed away with his wife in a bus accident in Brazil.. He had a good job, but he spent all of his life taking the gospel to people who had never heard it before. Tim came from a Plymouth Brethren Bible doctrine, and was fairly doctrinally straight. He taught believers who had not heard the simplest of doctrines, like rebound.

Law of expediency: to win people to Christ. Paul makes the statement that he has become a slave, even though he is a free Roman citizen. He was not even a slave in the human sense of the term. Philip. 2:7: The Lord Jesus Christ took on the form of a bond servant. He did this in order to bring salvation to you and me. Christ is the only one who can rescue us from the bondage of sin.

Paul makes the Choice to be a Slave

1. To bring the message of the gospel to everyone he came in contact with.
2. That is Paul's absolute priority, as was the priority of our Lord Jesus Christ. Nothing could deter our Lord from the cross; very few things that could deter Paul, although Paul did get off track now and again. By and large, Paul could not be deterred from what God had for him to do.
3. Paul made the choice to give up his freedom (the law of liberty) in order to comply with the laws of expediency and love.
4. Paul was completely inflexible when it came to doctrine and the gospel. He was flexible in many ways; he was in constant hardship. However, when it came to the gospel or doctrine, Paul would never give way. Even the praetorium guard who watched over Paul when in Rome were affected by him. Paul did what he did, that he might win the more. It was never about Paul, but about his mission. Paul accepted his slavery as the greatest service of his life.

Paul was an unimpeachable servant of the plan of God. None of us will go through the trials or hardships that Paul faced. We are no less servants or slaves where we live. We are called to be imitators of Paul and of the Lord Jesus Christ (who pioneered the divine dynasphere). Our sacrifices can never equal those of our Lord. Quite rare to even approach the personal sacrifices of Paul. We can certainly imitate it. We all have the choice to curb certain freedoms in order to preserve our witness before the unbelieving world.

What is our Slavery all About/

1. Expediency in our life is about maintaining our testimony to the unbelieving world. We are a slave to the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. We must, therefore, maintain our witness to the unbelieving world.
2. We choose to refrain from certain activities as a witness from time to time. We must refrain from them because they may offend or detract from our testimony and our witness of the gospel.
3. Any activity which detracts from the gospel. [cell phone goes off]
4. It is not a bad servitude to be a slave to Jesus Christ. It is an entrusted stewardship. God trusts us as a slave with His work; with his gospel; with His doctrine.
5. The principle: our witness for the Lord Jesus Christ takes precedence over all other relationships with the unbeliever. Over friendship, over a working relationship, and over a romantic relationship (which we should avoid anyway).

We bring the gospel undiluted; and then we are to grow in grace and knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ.

The Rationale for the Law of Expediency

1. Paul is the servant of the Lord Jesus Christ; and thus
2. Christ commissioned the Apostle Paul to preach the gospel as a steward of the master.
3. Paul will complete his mission, in a way that best reaches a lost and dying world. He takes his slavery very seriously. Paul is not trying to escape or to get his freedom.
4. In that sense, Paul puts himself in slavery to bring the clear message of the gospel of grace to all.
5. Paul's own comforts and desires for his life have become secondary to his mission. We don't have to give up everything; we just need to have priorities.
6. Paul is the entrusted steward who is compelled, but willingly accepts his slavery. He is a slave and placed in slavery. Slaves normally have nothing to say about their slavery.
7. That is the divine viewpoint which we should always take note of. We are compelled to be a slave, from the moment we believed in Jesus Christ. Is this among the 39 irrevocable things?

Slavery is the impact of vv. 17 and 19; dedicated to Tim Lipsey as a missionary in Brazil.

Communion Sunday

We have been a week out of class. This is what we are, which Paul teaches in an analogy. Although I am free from all men, I have made myself a slave to all that I might win the more. If Paul is a slave, then in what sense can he be free? Slaves are the opposite of freedom. Paul is free from a primary relationship with men; this does not mean that he is a hermit; he has friendships, but he is not married. He is free to have a primary relationship with God. He is free from the need to have approval of men or of the traditions of men. Now that Paul is free from such human viewpoint entanglements, why does he now turn around and call himself a slave to men? He's free of men, so why does he call himself a slave of men.

As an Apostle, Paul has a great responsibility to all men; he brings the message of the Lord Jesus Christ to all unbelievers. He must win the more in his slavery. That is his absolute priority in life. This is quite a statement. He is a servant of the Lord Jesus Christ first and foremost by being a slave to preaching the gospel to all men in his path. He fulfills the law of expediency to all unbelievers. Expediency requires Paul to use every means at his disposal to bring the gospel to a lost and dying world. He must effectively present the gospel. One believer sacrifices much for the benefit of many believers. He presents the pure and true gospel of grace. This takes maximum personal love toward God and impersonal love toward men in order to pull this off. This is what makes the mature believer the great witness. The most dangerous believer is the new believer who tries to present the gospel and knows very little. Your effectiveness increases exponentially with your maturity. In order to fulfill his Apostolic mission, Paul must be expedient toward all unbelievers.

The Model Paul must Present to the World

1. Paul must maintain a testimony to the unbelieving world.
2. It is refraining from any activity which may offend or detract from the testimony for Jesus Christ. The issue is the gospel and not some extraneous thing.
3. Sometimes one must set aside things which are lawful, available and desirable.
4. This is the call to slavery. It is a grand servitude. This is an entrusted servitude. We are the most dependable and faithful of all men. We are entrusted stewards of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Our witness for Christ takes precedence over all other relationships with unbelievers in this world. We don't often think that witnessing take precedence over all other things. It take precedence over romantic relationships, over business relationships, over familial relationships. Our testimony for Him is never superceded by friends, loved ones, or anyone else that we work with. We may have these relationships, but their eternal future is dependent upon your focus and priorities. This is so that those you have a relationship will have the greatest opportunity in life. To win the more does not mean that Paul is going to win more believers than anyone else; nor does it mean that he will witness to a majority of men. He is not fomenting a soul-winning competition for others. That is a misdirected motivation. It is sometimes hidden in holy language; called accountability. Make your brother and sister accountable to you; the mature believer is to monitor the immature believer. Make sure they stay in line, make sure they do the amount of witnessing to meet our standards. At the same time, we can insure self-righteously, that they are moving ahead and on the right track. At best, you can get a spiritual dependence here, if the immature believer takes you seriously. Doctrine, not people pressure, advances your spiritual life. Accountability is inordinant competition, an abuse of stewardship, and spiritual bullying.

1Cor. 9:19 For though I am free from all, I have made myself a servant to all, that I might win more of them.

1Cor. 9:19–22

Lesson #487

Sunday 2 February 11, 2007

The paradox of being free and being a slave. You are free of the human viewpoint entanglements of this life. You have the capabilities of being free of those things which would destroy your spiritual life. Now, why would you be a slave? Why does he mean, you are a slave? He says this so, he can win the more. This is not a competition, ego-trip. A slave has no right to tell anyone about anything. You do your job as unto the Lord; the Master is the only one we need to please, Who is Jesus Christ. We are not answerable to man.

What Does Paul Mean to win the more?

1. This is a comparative word; it means Paul will win more than he would have otherwise. By focusing on his stewardship, he wins more than he would otherwise.
2. Slavery is the epitome of the law of slavery and the law of love. He will do anything within the parameters of Scriptural mandates to win the unbeliever.
3. This is also the epitome of supreme sacrifice; Paul will undergo any sacrifice necessary. He counts himself as a slave.
4. Also in view here is, setting aside the law of liberty, advanced in chapter 8.
5. Paul covers all the laws with this slavery analogy. Expediency, love, supreme sacrifice and the law of liberty are all covered and combined in this one verse, as a slave, in order to win the more.
6. In one analogy, Paul takes the evil of physical slavery to men and turns it into the positive spiritual slavery to Jesus Christ; he takes what is anathema to man and makes it beautiful.

Paul is just beginning his slavery analogy; it is just too good. What a great teaching device this is. It is a great stewardship entrusted to him. When he talks about slavery in the Roman empire, this is an institution with which men there were well-acquainted; and our slavery was nothing by comparison.

In the subsequent verses, he will give examples of what his slavery is, so that we will understand what our slavery entails. What is our situation in slavery?

1Cor. 9:19 For though I am free from all, I have made myself a servant to all, that I might win more of them.

Paul became a Jew to win the Jews; he put himself under the Law to win those under the Law. For those outside the law, Paul put himself outside the law to win them; for those who are weak, Paul became weak, so that Paul became all things to all men so that he might save some. Material things did not drive the Apostle Paul. He is not about finding great comfort and security in life. Slaves do not live by means of comforts and material things; he does not have these things, nor does he want them. These are not his goals in life. Preaching the Word of God is his entire focus in life. These verses will explain his expediency and ours as well.

Paul begins his groupings in slavery. To the Jews I became as a Jew, in order to win Jews. To those under the law I became as one under the law (though not being myself under the law) that I might win those under the law. How can Paul become a Jew if he is already a Jew? This is applied to the most frustrating, hard-headed believers that one could imagine. The Jews did not like Jesus Christ, those who had rejected Him. As a pharisee of pharisee, as a Hebrew of Hebrews, he knows of their negative volition. Paul no longer thinks or considers anyone in racial terms; he has left this behind. He is the farthest thing from a racist. He does not exclude any race. He does not exclude anyone who is not Jewish. We now live in a parenthesis. We are the church and we are different; we have different resources and different assets. Gal. 3:28: There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither slave nor free, there is neither male nor female, for you are all one in Christ Jesus. There is no racial divide, no social divide, and no gender divide for believers. This verse indicates the equality of all believers in Christ Jesus. This is the only place where equality truly exists. We have equal privilege and equal opportunity for spiritual advance. We have equality of service to the Lord Jesus Christ. These other things should never be made an issue of. There is great inequality in our spiritual life; there is no spiritual egalitarianism. What we do have is 39 irrevocable absolutes and the 1 revocable asset (the filling of the Holy Spirit). There is inequality of advance; some advance and some do not; but that is on us. This is where we can experience inequality, but it is a matter of volition. We all have the ability to advance as far as our volition allows. There is an inequality of spiritual gifts, so to speak. However, whether one is a pastor-teacher or an evangelist, or someone whose spiritual gift is sweeping out a church, God rewards these equally. It is a matter of how we grow spiritually, and that is a matter of volition. No one can bar us from spiritual growth; we cannot be barred from the use of our spiritual gift. We have different capacities, but we have equality.

Spiritual gifts are varied, and each of us has at least one. Paul had the temporary gifts and all of the communication gifts. Paul brought us the New Testament in many respects. We have only one gift as a part of the body of Christ. These gifts do not qualify us to be great evangelists or pastors. Even the evangelist must place himself under the authority of a properly prepared pastor-teacher. Evangelists are not designed to interpret Scripture. A person with the gift of helps has a great gift, but not to teach the Word of God.

So many Christians fancy themselves as theological experts and then they begin to lead Bible studies; and then they read Scripture and take it out of context. They give weight in places where there is no weight; they distort doctrine where there is no reason. Without the proper gift, they confuse the body of Christ. A lack of the theological framework. They lack the languages, hermeneutics; and arrogance dictates that they do it that way. Unfortunately, some pastor-teachers are not teaching doctrine, or they encourage their parishioners to study on themselves. Rick Hughes is not a pastor and he knows it; so he teaches, but he gets it elsewhere. He might put his own spin on it or his own illustrations to it; but the interpretation comes from his being taught.

If you want the notoriety of this or that gift, you might want to look at the other side, as it is a lot of work. When the Holy Spirit does not give someone a particular spiritual gift, then they are out of line if they try to act as if they have this gift. If you cause divisions within a church, then you are not clarifying doctrine. Rebound is so simple; you name it and it is all over with. How do you clarify something which is so simple and easy to understand.

You must apply humility, and that is required for every spiritual gift, and grace-orientation is the basis for the function of every spiritual gift. It is not about the person presenting doctrine. When someone does not have that gift, then we are dealing with arrogance.

It takes great guts to stand in front of people who are naturally antagonistic, and give them the gospel. Bobby sees it when he presents the gospel at a funeral. You simply present the gospel and let the chips fall where they may. Paul is as humble as any man who has ever lived. They are great men, men who have every right to be arrogant, but humility is their essence.

Paul had no prejudices in the realm of race, gender or station in life. He's been accused of such things, like misogyny, but he was not. Good parents do not favor one child over another; the Lord Jesus Christ favors no child over another. By the way, Paul is not attempting to be politically correct. These kinds of prejudices were ingrained in Paul's society. There was legislation which supported gender-prejudice; which supported racial prejudice, which supported differences in class. This is the first time in history when such a statement is made. This is ground-breaking, and it goes against political correctness of Paul's time period; this is a viewpoint universally rejected by those outside the faith, and by some inside the faith. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither slave nor free, there is neither male nor female, for you are all one in Christ Jesus (Gal. 3:28).

Paul uses the verb γίνομαι; there is no direct object, but a predicate nominative. The sides of the verb are equated. Γίνομαι represents a process, something which is not equivalent at the first. Paul calls himself a Jew. He was a Jew before and believed in Jesus Christ. Paul is not converting to Judaism. Paul is not talking about a temporary conversion; he is not becoming an actual Jew in order to present the gospel to Jews.

There is a qualifying word here: ὅς = as, like. This is a comparison; a simile. There are two unlike objects. He has already said there is no race; Paul said, I became as a Jew. So, in what way has he become under the Law? Lawless? A Jew? Weak? This is about the expediency of slavery. He does not go outside the parameters of doctrine or his purpose to present doctrine. I have to develop something in order to get a hearing from some. Paul wants to gain a hearing for the gospel. We must become all things to all men. We don't become a different race to witness to that other race; we look to gain some rapport with those to whom we are speaking. Paul is already a Jew, racially; but he is in the body of Christ, where there is no racial difference. Being willing to develop this rapport is what it takes to gain a hearing with those in this or that realm.

1Cor. 9:20 To the Jews I became as a Jew, in order to win Jews. To those under the law I became as one under the law (though not being myself under the law) that I might win those under the law.

1Cor. 9:21 To those outside the law I became as one outside the law (not being outside the law of God but under the law of Christ) that I might win those outside the law.

1Cor. 9:22 To the weak I became weak, that I might win the weak. I have become all things to all people, that by all means I might save some.

1Cor. 9:20

Lesson #488      Wednesday February 14, 2007

Race is one of the most controversial subjects today, even in our pluralistic society. Every race and religion reside within our borders. There are clashes when this occurs. For better or for worse, race is an issue. Racial voting blocks; concerns over civil rights; an issue in education, affirmative action, quotas. Sometimes the race card is played; some racial agendas put forth in public. The mere charge of racism stymies debate. Being called a racist is the kiss of death. Any unintended or inadvertent racist comment can ruin a career; and an occurrence of it can be called institutional racism. There can be very partisan racial debate.

Thomas Sowell is someone that Bobby reads, who gives a thoughtful approach. Some, instead of treating all Americans as individuals first, not as part of a racial group. The Biblical view, there is neither Jew nor Greek, slave nor free, male or female. By and large, slavery was a rampant institution in Paul's time, and for Paul to say, "There is neither slave nor free" was a groundbreaking statement for that day and age. Neither male nor female was groundbreaking as well.

It is going to appear in this passage that race is some sort of an issue. These verses are not about race per se. Paul is a Jew; he was born a Jew. So, what does it mean when he says, "I became like a Jew." This is about unbelievers and the gospel. The real focus is heathenism. If you want equality, win unbelievers to Christ.

Became is a correct rendering of γίνομαι. A guy that Bobby knows is teaching and evangelizing in Huntsville; and even teaching a little Greek. This verb here does not take an object; it takes a predicate nominative.

Gal. 3:28, Paul was formerly a Jew. Here, it is a reference to culture and religion. Paul is not is not being temporarily converted to Judaism. He does not have to become a cultural or religious Jew in every respect. There is a limitation by the comparative particle ὡς = as, like. This is a simile; a comparison between two unlike objects. He is like a Jew in certain ways, but not in all ways.

How Paul Became a Jew

1. Paul acted in superficial ways like a Jew..
2. He Obligated some of their practices which did not conflict with doctrine or the gospel.
3. He observed portions of the Mosaic Law which did not run counter to church age doctrine that he taught. The Mosaic Law was designed for client nation Israel.
4. Paul became as a Jew, affirming at the same time, that this was a matter of expediency.
5. In Paul's nominal observances of their traditions and law were not mandatory or binding to Paul. It was completely voluntary to Paul.
6. Nor did Paul ever allow the assumption by anyone that such expediency was part of the gospel. It was a means to present the gospel. What Paul did with the Jews was expedient; and it was not a part of the gospel.
7. Paul never became so much of a cultural or religious Jew that he compromised any part of the gospel.

8. Paul did not become a legalist, which is extremely important, affirming the Law as a means of pleasing God.
9. Becoming as a Jew was only a nod to their traditions to gain a hearing for the gospel.
10. It was not an immersion or a theological acquiescence as a religion or a cultural practice. Paul did act in certain ways as a Jew to win certain Jews for Christ. He became as a Jew to establish rapport with Jews.

Paul's mission was partially a transition from the Age of the Jew to the Church Age. So Paul could not enter into legalism. He spoke to many Jews, but he could not compromise; but he could be expedient. No preconceptions for the Gentiles.

An Application for Us

1. Gaining rapport with unbelievers is a bona fide operation for witnessing for Christ. Someone thinks well of you and they want to know what makes you tick.
2. However, do not claim to be or become what the unbeliever is. That is the limit.
3. You can only go so far in gaining rapport with unbelievers.
4. You do not compromise or acquiesce to human viewpoint for the sake of rapport. An example from the news recently. Megachurch pastors signing on the help with global warming with the radical environmentalists. Joining up with pantheist and radical environmentalists can be very dark territory.
5. Neither do you participate in the meaningless rituals of religion to gain rapport. Example: taking communion when it is interpreted as transubstantiation. It is a false doctrine that the bread and wine become the flesh and blood of our Lord. All kinds of weird doctrines associated with this church: prayers for the dead, mass, etc. are not ways to gain rapport for the gospel.. This muddies the gospel; works confuse the gospel. However, do not make a spectacle of not participating. Do not make an issue of the correct doctrine, which will turn anyone off. When Bobby gives communion, it is information which can be passed along to the unbeliever. Don't participate in false doctrine. You can only go so far with the law of expediency.
6. You can present the gospel without compromising doctrine and without offending those who listen to you. Don't offend others; simply give them the truth. Rarely does someone believe in Christ when you witness to them. Often things happen to them and they think about the truth and then they believe.
7. All unnecessary roadblocks must be moved from the clear presentation of the gospel. Don't ever make an issue of yourself. Don't make an issue of their beliefs. Don't set up roadblocks.
8. All of this is the application of the directive in v. 20a to become as a Jew, but not a Jew in every sense of that word.
9. There are other pitfalls in gaining rapport and gaining a hearing
10. Do not become emotionally involved with an unbeliever that you want to become a believer. You can't get romantically involved with an unbeliever. You cannot compromise with human viewpoint, which is what can happen in a romantic relationship.

11. Don't do anything which violates the law, criminal or civil, in order to witness.
12. The gospel is not furthered by civil disobedience, e.g. joining a protest march. We are not called to whitewash the filth of the devil's world. A protest march does not solve the problem of the old sin nature. Christians in seminaries sometimes get judged on political issues and how involved they are with these political issues (apparently, abortion). The activist Christian can end up injecting legalism into the gospel. You may have observed so-called ministers stridently politically posturing for whatever. Yet, rarely do they give the gospel. In fact, generally not at all when on camera.
13. Do not compromise in the realm of friendship. The greatest aspect of friendship is missing when both are not believers. The unbeliever brings us down to their level so easily.

Timothy, Titus and the ritual of circumcision. Acts 16:3 Timothy was circumcised in order to get a hearing. However, Titus was not circumcised, as it mixed up the gospel with circumcision. Gal. 3:2–5

1Cor. 9:20 To the Jews I became as a Jew, in order to win Jews. To those under the law I became as one under the law (though not being myself under the law) that I might win those under the law.

1Cor. 9:20

Lesson #489

Thursday February 15, 2007

vv. 20–21 are peoples that Paul became like, and he became like these groups in order to evangelize them; that is the overarching principle. The transformation that Paul talks about only goes so far. Paul was involved with the Jews and these other categories in superficial ways; he did accommodate them in some ways, but he did not join up with them completely. Paul was a racial Jew by birth; but Paul could not become what he already was; so this is not about race, bloodlines, or birth. There is no such thing as racial differences for those in Christ, ditto for gender or social status. In the body of Christ we are not separated. Paul does cite his racial heritage as an opening; but not a way of compromise. This is a methodology. Paul became as a Jew to establish rapport with Jews. This is a legitimate way to gain a hearing. This shows affiliation and affinity. The association that he had with these people was for the purpose of evangelization. Paul mainly associated with Gentiles; but he did not associate with Jews to get a little taste of home; nor did he want to temporarily revert to Judaism. He does not require solidarity with his brothers because of race. This had a purpose of gaining congruity. This attained a condition of agreement in non-essentials; the essentials of Christianity, soteriology, etc., were never compromised. He was simply removing unnecessary roadblocks. It was not his purpose to offend them; he did not want to emphasize their differences nor was he looking to sell out in some way. He wanted them to relax and to think of them in terms of who he is. This is also our mission as an ambassador for Christ. This causes nothing but subjectivity. Paul's sole purpose was to evangelize as he became as a Jew.

Paul used Jewish law and Jewish practice to his advantage. The illustration is circumcision. Acts 16:3: Paul was beginning a new missionary journey and he wanted Tim to go with them; so he circumcised Timothy in order to reduce that barrier. Sounds like supreme sacrifice to me. Paul did not want Timothy's background to be a stumbling block to the Jews. This is a ritual that means nothing to the Gentiles; but it appears to be conversion to the Jews. Gentiles who became believers in the Old Testament were circumcised. Now, it has no meaning; but this allowed for the opening of the lines of communication between Timothy and any Jews they might evangelize.

The second example is Titus in Gal. 2:3: there was an infiltration of Judizers who infiltrated the churches after Paul evangelized. They tried to get the believers to go under the Law. Titus, as a Greek, was compelled to be circumcised. The Judizers demanded that Titus be circumcised. In v. 4: He did not allow himself to be circumcised because of the legalists there. These legalists sneaked in to spy out the liberty of their church. Christ saves us; not the Law. They came in for the purpose of bringing them into bondage. Bondage is the legalistic interpretation of the Mosaic Law. Paul refused to circumcise Titus in this circumstance. With Titus, it would appear as if Paul was knuckling under the Mosaic Law. The gospel cannot be compromised in the attempt to communicate the gospel.

Circumcision

1. Circumcision was never a means to salvation. The legalists had many demands, even though this was not necessary even in the Old Testament.
2. Circumcision was a new racial species which began with Abraham. Circumcision was a sign of salvation.
3. This is a sign of Abraham's faith in Jehovah.
4. This ritual was later distorted by legalistic Jews and saw law keeping as a means to salvation. It is a sign of faith. Judaizers saw it as a sign of God's people.
5. Circumcision is no longer necessary today.
6. Col. 2:11: In him also you were circumcised with a circumcision made without hands, by putting off the body of the flesh, by the circumcision of Christ, we are made a new spiritual species in Christ. In Him, we are circumcised...with one not made with hands. The removal of flesh is the removal of the sin nature. In salvation, the sin nature can be temporarily stifled. The sin nature is a part of the cell structure of our bodies; it is removed positionally.
7. Philip. 3:2b: Beware of the of the false circumcision [which is the removal of skin from the phallus]. we are the true circumcision. Positional sanctification; we are separated unto a spiritual life; we are the true circumcision.

Even Paul, in all of his greatness, did make a mistake. He has an old sin nature and that carries him too far. The incident occurs in Jerusalem. Paul ended up bringing Gentiles into the Temple. That is never to be done. It did not gain approval here. For his improper nod, they tried to kill him. God did correct Paul's deviations. Acts 21. Excellent treatment in the Spiritual Dynamics series.

This should help with understanding the second half of this verse. Paul is not under the Law and he should have nothing to do with being under the Law this is how Paul becomes a Jew under the Law, without being really under the Law.

The Principles that we should know

1. Paul did oblige some of their practices. He could only go so far with that. Paul did observe portions of the Mosaic Law.
2. Nothing which obscured or violated the gospel or church age doctrine. Bobby might bring in Pat Cate, a missionary from Iran when the Shah of Iran was there. He can explain how this is done without compromising the gospel.
3. Paul learned the hard way in Acts 21. He violated the gospel and church age doctrine here.
4. Paul placed himself as under the Law. He did not want to offend the Jews and give them a change at the gospel. It is easy to get off onto side issues or to get off on yourself; our mission is to present the gospel; not to present your knowledge. Example of being in a cafeteria line and not eating bacon by a 7th day adventist. The Mosaic Law had no validity in Paul's spiritual life. He made that mistake only once. As an Apostle to the Gentiles, Christ is the end of the law to all who believe. Our Lord was the only One Who could keep the Law; to fulfill the Law.

The Church Age believer is a new species, and we are not tied to legalism. Paul did give a nod to the Law, but it was never an issue in the gospel. Paul could have ignored every ritual in the Law and he was just fine.

1Cor. 9:20 To the Jews I became as a Jew, in order to win Jews. To those under the law I became as one under the law (though not being myself under the law) that I might win those under the law.

1Cor. 9:21 To those outside the law I became as one outside the law (not being outside the law of God but under the law of Christ) that I might win those outside the law.

1Cor. 9:22 To the weak I became weak, that I might win the weak. I have become all things to all people, that by all means I might save some.

1Cor. 9:20

Lesson #490

Sunday 1 February 18, 2007

We all have some similarities; we are all in union with Christ; we are all baptized by God the Holy Spirit. As a body and as individuals, we all have access to rebound; we can name our known sins at any time.

One of our commonalities is a spiritual gift, given to us at the moment of regeneration by God the Holy Spirit. There are different areas along with the application of doctrine of our soul which direct the practical side of God's plan for our life. For some believers, just the mention of witnessing sends them into spasms and tremors. Some people are introverted, and sometimes they are rejected, they feel embarrassed; they had an aversion to those who push their ideas on us. This can even lose some close family ties. Sometimes, witnessing can separate families, especially when witnessing is done incorrectly.

Others are very extroverted and have a zeal to communicate their salvation to others. An obvious eagerness to share it and there seem to be no inhibitions on your part.

There are a number of reasons why a person may find it easy or difficult to witness. Whether extroverted or introverted, bold or timid, our effectiveness in witnessing largely depends upon our spiritual maturity. Overzealousness and shyness can be both overcome with spiritual maturity. We are most effective in our mandate to witness when we have doctrine in our souls.

Rejection, fear, and embarrassment all fade when you build an edification complex structure in the soul. A witnessing mandate is effective. You don't have to win an argument, theological or political; all you have to do is present the gospel.

The verses which we are examining tell us how to present the gospel. Paul is one of the greatest evangelists in the world; "I became as a Jew to win Jews; to those under the Law, I became as one under the Law, so that I might win those under the Law." You maintain a witness to the outer world regardless of the cost. What does it matter the few years that you are on this earth. What matters is, you live your spiritual life and follow the mandates of Scripture.

Some of us just don't like people much; the more people I meet, the more I like my dog. However, you must have a concern for those who are spiritually dead; even sacrificing certain activities in life in order to gain an opportunity to present the gospel. We are never told to abandon Biblical mandates or get involved in apostate activity.

Paul uses his racial, cultural and religious heritage. Paul has left behind this heritage of being Jewish; he is no longer in his own eyes a Jew—not culturally, religiously or ethnically. Gal. 3:28; there is neither Jew nor Gentile. Paul does not see himself in racial terms. In expediency, as this passage says, Paul returns to these roots in a limited way, which is a tip for us. How does Paul become a Jew, being that he is one? What Paul is doing is, he is opening some lines of communication with his old ethnic group. However, Paul does not in anyway compromise with their culture or religion. He cannot do this. The Law of Expediency is a method for witnessing. You don't become a drug addict in order to arrest a drug addict would be a parallel. You don't become an addict in order to witness to an addict. Paul had some affinity and affiliation with Jewish culture and religion, and he was willing to allow for that; however, you cannot acquiesce to the sins or evil of others. Never become legalistic, as that clouds the gospel. Don't try to change their evil ways before witnessing to them, for instance. No vows, no joining in on religious ceremonies. Paul makes them aware that he knows where they are coming from; but he does not go there. Paul tells them that he has been where they are; he understands their life and religion. But he has something much greater to show to them. Becoming a Jew is for the purpose of gaining some congruity, and it is finding agreement in some nonessentials.

Points of Application

1. Paul did not offend them in his contact with them by emphasizing his differences with these. He emphasized their similarities. Don't offend.
2. By becoming as a Jew, Paul removed unnecessary roadblocks to a hearing of the gospel. These seem to be common sense, but sometimes people cannot apply doctrine. Presenting the gospel to someone that you just don't like is quite difficult. Like Jonah and the Assyrians.
3. What Paul wanted to do is to bring an ease and an openness to the association.
4. Paul wanted to remove the emotional element between people; and this so easily causes subjectivity and misunderstanding and it masks the message. You must get the emotional aspects out of the way. These Jews still live under the Mosaic Law. They are still governed by the Mosaic Law. The Mosaic Law becomes the point of contact. First you make contact, then you find a point of contact, and then you bring them something which they are desperate to hear. This is an area where Paul needs to be careful, so that; for these, the Mosaic Law is their salvation. Paul cannot return to the Law to live under it; that would be a compromise. He cannot compromise, even though he has an excellent point of contact with the Mosaic Law. Paul knows the nonessential parts of the Law. He know what conflicts in the Church Age. You may only have affinity in the nonessentials. Antinomians and legalists have difficulties mixing; however, Paul can mix with both. Paul cannot adhere to Judaism, but he can develop a rapport.

There are more opportunities available to the mature believer, because he is less likely to muck it up. Part of our maturity is understanding these techniques. To gain rapport but you do not compromise doctrinal principles. So Paul does not live under the Law; but he lives as under the Law. This means that Paul obliges some of their cultural practices. He does observe portions of the Mosaic Law. He cannot and will not obscure or violate the mystery doctrine of the church age.

Acts 21:18–37 was his mistake and this was a disaster. Paul is very emotional about his past and about these Jews, but here he has lost his perspective. Paul even draws some Gentile believers into this mess. You don't bring Gentiles into the temple, which defiles the Temple; and this made the Jews irate. Paul knows that the Mosaic Law has absolutely no validity for the Christian way of life. He uses it, but in such a way that no one thinks that there is validity in following the Law in the Church Age. This is his development of rapport for these Jews. We cannot compromise with human viewpoint or with false doctrine. We must establish some kind of rapport, which is easy with those that we have an affinity with.

Consideration for Us

1. In the point of contact, nothing of importance is conceded in the perception or the presentation of the gospel.
2. No creeping legalism. This might even be a weakness, and it is easy to allow that to creep into our witness. No false religious rituals in order to gain rapport. Do not take communion where transubstantiation is a part of their theology.

3. No compromise to the basic tenets of Christianity; not to the essentials.
  - a. Grace, faith alone in Christ alone. No works can be inserted here.
  - b. The resurrection, which is a part of the gospel. You cannot give credence to anything else. You do not argue different theories of resurrection. If that is an issue with someone, let it alone.
  - c. The doctrine of sin and the depravity of man. It is easy for a liberal who sees man as essentially good with a few problems here or there. There is never a good enough person to be saved. How good is enough? Where is the dividing line? We cannot be good enough to gain God's favor or bad enough to escape His grace.
4. We must understand that the power of the gospel and the common grace ministry of the Holy Spirit is infinitely greater than any rapport that we can develop. Rapport is a method to gain a hearing; but speaking the gospel is the most important.
5. Beware of creating false issues in the declaration of the gospel. Making ourselves an issue is not something we ought to do.

What about those with whom you have no natural affinity? What about those that you do not like?

1Cor. 9:20 To the Jews I became as a Jew, in order to win Jews. To those under the law I became as one under the law (though not being myself under the law) that I might win those under the law.

1Cor. 9:21

Lesson #491

Sunday 2 February 18, 2007

Paul is a Hebrew of the Hebrews; a genius, a man who knew the Mosaic Law and probably had a good deal of it memorized. The Jews saw the Gentiles as ignorant pagans. The Jews saw the Gentiles as inferior; and Paul saw them as extremely inferior. It is ironic that God made Paul the Apostle to the Gentiles. It was easy for Paul to become a Jew; he understood that quite well.

To those outside the law I became as one outside the law (not being outside the law of God but under the law of Christ) that I might win those outside the law. Paul is not referring to outlaws or criminals; he is simply speaking about Gentiles who were never under the Law. This is without any allegiance to the Mosaic Law. These are Gentiles who have nothing to do with the Mosaic Law. They don't know about the Mosaic Law and they don't care about the Mosaic Law. Paul, a man of the Law, has to become as one without the Law. The range which is sometimes required. You never know who you might run into. We might have a difficult time witnessing to a Muslim; they are enslaved to that religion. Are you prepared to do that? Do you know how to do that? Knowing a little about the Koran is helpful; but you simply must know grace. Every other religion is about works; it is about merit; it is doing something to impress God. If there is any positive volition, a Muslim will jump at grace.

These are heathen; these are polytheists. These are the same kinds of people that Paul encountered when he walked into Corinth. They came out of the temple of Aphrodite. He is directly addressing the Corinthians in v. 21. He applies the same illustration to them as he did to the Jews. Most of the believers in the Corinthian church were Gentiles, and they all recall Paul coming to town and presenting the gospel. Paul did not speak of the Law of God to them; he did not tell them about the Mosaic Law. Paul gave up much to win these people to Christ. It is the doctrine of grace which wins these people to grace. This tells us how far Paul went and what he did not do to reach them. These Corinthians lived without the Mosaic Law. However, they were the beneficiaries of Paul's slavery to the gospel. There was no more potent example that Paul could have used. As believers, they began to understand expediency and the grace of God. Now that Paul is gone, who is responsible for spreading the gospel? These people are. These people are too busy stabbing each other in the back to think about the gospel. What do I have to do to bring the gospel to someone that I have absolutely nothing in common with? We heard the gospel from someone else who was a slave; an evangelist, a pastor or an individual. We have an eternal future because of these people. We may have rejected it at first or tried not to listen; but someone brought us this information and it stuck; and at some point, we believed. We are the result of what the Lord Jesus Christ did for us on the cross. There are millions out there who are completely lost. To some, we will be the only point of contact. Does this apply to us? The gospel is the power of God unto salvation. God can use this information so that God the Holy Spirit might use it at some time.

It might be better to have a technique; a way of approaching, which will make the most sense to these people. How many of us have ever taken the time to sit in an easy chair without tv and think about how should I present the gospel? Just go over in your mind what is the gospel and see if you can put together the gospel. This is like practice for the big game. You cannot witness unless you know the whole gospel. You need the wisdom of when to present it and how to package it in the best possible terms to the one to whom you are speaking. First and foremost, witnessing is the message, not the technique. Don't let the tail wag the dog.

How do you witness?

1. Do not muddle or confuse the gospel message; know it and be able to communicate it.
2. Know these 3 doctrines: redemption, reconciliation and propitiation.
3. Know a few verses which present faith alone in Christ alone.
4. Can you define the person and work of Jesus Christ. If you can do that, you are able to give the message of the gospel.
5. Do not every make an issue of yourself. That is the whole purpose of expediency. Paul did not make himself the issue. He did not make the points of differences the issue. He makes Jesus Christ the issue. Do not overextend the rapport. Never emphasize yourself or your expediency. Do not overemphasize the great sacrifice that you have made or witness of this person. Rapport with an unbeliever comes with a natural association. We have all kinds of associations in life and there is a built-in point of contact that we can develop. You can present the gospel to strangers, but most of us should be dealing with those people that we know. We deal with the best point of contact; with the people.

6. Don't concentrate on what you can get from these people; our goal in witnessing is not to impress them with yourself; or to wallow in the muck with them, or to win some political argument with them.
7. What Paul did not do is wander into the heathen temple and participate in some heathen activity in order to gain a hearing. What do we do with unbelievers? We don't hold our noses while they do something we hate; we just don't participate.

Antinomian means without the law. They had no constraints and no absolutes which defined establishment or morality for them. Their religion was the phallic cults. Everything was okay; there were no constraints, there were no boundaries. Becoming antinomian means there are no constraints. Indulging your sin nature in lawlessness is not the proper approach to someone who is without the Law. The Mosaic Law was divinely inspired; so there is morality and divine principles to be found in the Law.

When Paul came into contact with heathen, he did not make an issue of the Mosaic Law. He did not mention the Mosaic Law. It is a non-issue.

Judaizers had infiltrated the Corinthian church and were teaching that man is spiritual by following the Mosaic Law. This filled the church with false doctrine as well. Paul never made an issue of the Mosaic Law. This counteracted these Judaizers. These Judaizers were trying to inject the Law into the Christians life or into the gospel. Paul does not inject something into the gospel which does not belong there.

Illustration of golf; get a few lessons, learn the fundamentals, and then practice before you head out onto the course. The Mosaic Law is not what these people needed to hear. This is not what these people needed. They need doctrine. Why introduce the Mosaic Law to those who did not need to know it? There was no rapport which comes with the Law; so nothing would be gained by speaking about the Law.

With a Jew, Paul could speak about the Law and make connections between the Law and the sacrifice of Jesus Christ. To a person without the Law, this meant nothing. Something like this only clouds the issue of the gospel. You gain nothing by demanding that heathen change their evil ways. This is a false issue. You do not try to get someone to reform their evil life; that has nothing to do with the gospel. Paul, for rapport, would refer to the Law when dealing with the Jew; and not at all with the Gentile. The idea is, use a little common sense when approaching your audience. Evaluate your audience a little bit and know their background. Use that background and think about it a little bit. What is the approach? Use the correct caliber when you go shooting; use the correct caliber when presenting the gospel. You must take their backgrounds, to some degree, into account. Give the gospel; that is what we are charged to do. To those who are without law [like a Gentile], I became as one outside the Law; Paul let God's Word change them; he did not go to get them to change first; you give them the gospel and let God take care of things from there.

To you Gentiles, by the way, you are not without Law. So Bobby will explain this next time. The Law of Christ.

1Cor. 9:21 To those outside the law I became as one outside the law (not being outside the law of God but under the law of Christ) that I might win those outside the law.

1Cor. 9:22 To the weak I became weak, that I might win the weak. I have become all things to all people, that by all means I might save some.

1Cor. 9:21–22

Lesson #492    Wednesday February 21, 2007

vv. 20–23 presents the practical aspect of presenting the gospel. At some point after salvation, we begin to understand the various aspects of doctrine. You begin and continue to progress. You are growing and you apply; on the tail end of all of this, you begin to serve the Lord. At this point, your spiritual gift begins to kick in. When you begin to understand the in's and out's of soteriology and you begin to put all of these doctrines together, you get to a point where you can make a lucid and clear doctrinal presentation. As you grow, the plan of God moves through you; and you spend your time often walking through doors.

The practical side of presenting the gospel; how Paul uses the law of expediency in order to present the gospel. He will look at two major categories, which indicates that different approaches are used with different people.

Paul has been liberated by the gospel and by Bible doctrine, the mystery doctrine; so he does not want to revert back to being under the Law. In v. 20, Paul becomes as a Jew to establish rapport by acknowledging his own background.

Paul doesn't want to even think about race; there is no race in Christianity; however, Paul chooses to identify in part with those of particular races. The Jews keep the Law in order to gain salvation, and only someone in total denial can ever think that they are good enough.

The gospel can never be discredited in order to gain a hearing. We don't compromise the gospel when witnessing.

Gentiles were seen by the Jews as uncivilized, as not worth a second look. Often a racial conflict between these groups—Jews and Gentiles. Paul tells them, "I became as one of you—without Law." Paul could not reach them by becoming what they were.

other churches might combine a little doctrine with some philosophy or other things. This compromises grace..

Too often we hear misinformation in these places; like repent of your sins. this verse can be horribly misunderstood and misapplied. Don't ever inject any kind of works, including repentance from sin. Paul needed to understand where these people were coming from. Paul is simply using a different approach for different folks.

No rapport would be gained by bringing up the Law with the gospel. We all live under some kind of law. Paul puts in the parenthesis, "Some of the Corinthians are slowly going to the purpose is service, and the intention there is to produce devotement. Pillow talk and witnessing are not to be combined; you don't become antinomian. If you do not violate divine law in order to witness εἰμι + μ we're still under antinomianism is not the way to approach witnessing. Paul now defines the new law that these believers are under. Paul calls it the law of Christ, which defines the parameters. What is Paul's stance? He is without the Mosaic law of Israel, but he has common ground can be a very important part of witnessing.

What is the Law of Christ to which Paul confirms

1. The divine law of the church aged. Rom. 8:2 For the law of the Spirit of life has set you free in Christ Jesus from the law of sin and death.
2. It is a law of grace, it concerns the Holy Spirit. This law has set us free from the law of sin and death. We enter this world spiritually dead.
3. The Mosaic law was weak by the flesh.. The Mosaic Law can point the way, but it cannot solve the problem of sin and death.
4. The solution is sending His own Son in the flesh.

His own Son is undiminished deity and perfect human. He was the only One to fulfill perfectly the Mosaic Law. Kenosis is the second doctrine; God voluntarily emptying Himself of the independent use of his divine attributes. He came in the likeness of sinful flesh. Rom 8:3 For God has done what the law, weakened by the flesh, could not do. By sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh and for sin, he condemned sin in the flesh, in order that the righteous requirement of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not according to the flesh but according to the Spirit. Our Lord's sacrifice is the key for us. He fulfills the requirements of the Mosaic Law. Christ fulfilled the Law for us so that we might be saved. Therefore, we are supposed to live the law of Christ.

5. The requirements of the Law are conditionally fulfilled in us. He became righteousness for us; He became our righteousness. He has given us everything; this is how we fulfill the Law of Christ, experientially.
6. This is the Law which Christ prototyped.
7. This is the mandate of God that we live that life
8. What is the Law of Christ? Positional and experiential sanctification

1Cor. 9:21 To those outside the law I became as one outside the law (not being outside the law of God but under the law of Christ) that I might win those outside the law.

1Cor. 9:22 To the weak I became weak, that I might win the weak. I have become all things to all people, that by all means I might save some.

1Cor. 9:21

Lesson #493

Thursday February 22, 2007

Bobby might return to the Law of Christ tonight.

Joel Rosenberg: Muslims accept Jewish Messiah. More muslims converted to Jesus Christ in this past decade than any other previous decade. A record number observing Christian holy days. Iraq more than 5000 new converts to Christianity with 14 new churches in Bahdad and Kurdistan. In Egypt, some reports say 1 million have trusted in Christ in the last decade or so. In 1990's, 3000 copies of the Jesus film sold each year; last year 600,000 this past year. On outskirts of Cairo, there are 10,000 believers who meet. Afghanistan only 17 converts before 9/11; now over 10,000. Same in other countries. 1 million Sudanese since 2000, despite a radical Islamic regime. Seminaries. Why such a dramatic awakening? People have seen real Islam, and want something else. Now, more than 1 million Iranian believers. Every year, 6 million convert to Christianity every year now. The God of the Bible is moving powerfully throughout the Muslim world.

<http://joelrosenberg.blogspot.com/search?q=cairo+egypt+muslims>

The war in Iraq has another purpose than simply the war on terror.

Review of v. 21: to those without the Mosaic Law, as without Law [which is an elliptical phrase, meaning, I became as one without Law, parallel to v. 20] There was always divine law, even though the Gentiles had no knowledge of that law. In his work of evangelism, Paul had a stipulated boundary, which is what the Law of Christ was all about. He could only go so far to establish rapport and to share the gospel.

The Law of Christ

is an encompassing term, including all that

1. This is the divine law of the dispensation of the Church. This replaces the Mosaic Law of the previous dispensation.
2. The Mosaic Law has been abrogated by Christ, during the age of the incarnation.
3. Rom. 10:4: For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to everyone who believes.
  - a. Christ was born without an old sin nature. No other like Him. No other person was born without a sin nature.
  - b. Our Lord maintain perfect righteousness throughout his life. He maintained that righteousness.
  - c. Therefore, unlike any other person in all history, Christ fulfilled the Mosaic Law in all of its requirements. The Jews strive to fulfill the Mosaic Law, and not one of them ever did it.

- d. This qualified Him in His humanity to be the perfect sacrifice as the perfect man for our unrighteousness and spiritual death.
  - e. Because of His sinlessness, He was the only one who could propitiate the wrath of God toward mankind.
  - f. Jesus is the only man free of sin, and therefore, the only one to free Himself from slavery. This is what he does on the cross.
  - g. Only through His perfect sacrifice could the enmity between God and man be reconciled. The perfect righteousness of God is being combined with reconciliation. This is only possible if Jesus is perfect righteousness; otherwise, He could not substitute.
  - h. Jesus is the only one who could fulfill the Law and be our substitute. In His perfect righteousness, He was the end of the Law.
4. As also a part of Rom. 10:4, we have the Law is fulfilled in Christ. 1Cor. 1:30: But by His doing [His substitutionary death on the cross]; you are in union with Christ, Who became in us wisdom from God and righteousness and sanctification and redemption.
  5. Christ is the end of the Mosaic Law for righteousness. The Mosaic Law is no longer the standard for perfect righteousness, Christ is. The Mosaic Law was a standard which no one would fulfill.
  6. We as believers now have a position of righteousness in union with Christ. Positionally, we have the righteousness of God. It was imputed to us at the moment of faith in Christ. Christ was the end of the Law for righteousness, and it is now our righteousness. That is called justification.
  7. In justification, we recover positionally what Adam lost at the fall; He lost his perfect righteousness at the fall; and when he fell, we fell.
  8. In this status of justification, which is nothing more than the imputed righteousness of God in us, we as believers in the Church Age have a new law under which we live; the law of Christ. Christ is the end of the Mosaic Law.
  9. Back to Rom. 8:4: this actually describes the law of Christ, that those in union with Christ live under this law, and what it takes for us to meet the requirements of this law. In order that the requirement of the Law [Christ died, fulfilling the requirement of the Mosaic Law]; might be fulfilled in us, there is a new status, Christ is our righteousness; we live under righteousness, because we are made righteous.
  10. Here is that Law: We who do not walk according to the flesh.
    - a. The flesh is the sin nature. It is carnality. Walking in the flesh is living under the control of the sin nature. The law of Christ is not walking in the flesh.
    - b. Israel was unable to keep the Mosaic Law, the standard of righteousness, which is our new standard. With a sin nature, they could not keep the law.
    - c. No one could keep the law because of the sin nature. Therefore, they could not meet the standard of righteousness. The Mosaic Law pointed at their sin and their inability to do anything about.
    - d. The Church Age believer; when we walk in the flesh, we are not fulfilling the requirements of the law of Christ.

11. But according to the Spirit ends Rom. 8:4
  - a. Unlike the Mosaic Law, which cannot be fulfilled, we can fulfill the Law of Christ this is something we can fulfill.
  - b. The unique spiritual life given to us in the church age is totally dependent upon the filling of the Holy Spirit.
12. Living this spiritual life under the filling of the Holy Spirit, provided through the work of Christ on the cross, justification, is keeping the Law of Christ.
  - a. Executing the spiritual life is fulfilling the requirements of the law of Christ. The more we mature, the more we fulfill the requirements of the law.
  - b. The law of Christ includes positional sanctification, positional sanctification and experiential sanctification.
  - c. We are set apart unto Christ positionally in salvation. Since we are set apart with the righteousness of God in us, we now have the authority of
  - d. We live under and fulfill the law of Christ as we grow and execute the spiritual life.

This is the meaning of the Law of Christ in the parenthesis. That is the whole of Church Age doctrine. Paul set aside his personal things, Jewishness, Roman citizenship, Heb. 10:1–9 is another passage on this. The only other issue of the gospel is how do you present the gospel so that Jews will listen.

How does Paul present the Gospel of Christ under

1. Always under the law of spirituality.
2. We witness in the filling of the Holy Spirit.
3. That is the power of our spiritual life in witnessing; the greatest power on earth. This will help us in opening lines of communication. It will help us in our attitude of fulfilling the gospel.
4. The spiritual life does not function apart from the Holy Spirit. So we cannot witness and function without the witness of the Holy Spirit. He will bring about ways to present the gospel that we might not ever consider.
5. Our spiritual growth and application of doctrine is our living under the Law of Christ. That is how we fulfill the Law of Christ. The Law of Christ is the spiritual life. We fulfill the mandate as we walk filled with the Holy Spirit.
6. We are all charged with personal evangelism. It can be ultimately fulfilled when we operate under the Law of Christ.

The concept is like the game of golf. Much easier to start with instructions by a professional. That keeps us from having to unlearn ingrained bad habits. Better to get the fundamentals down first. Legalism is a very bad habit that is hard to unlearn once it is embedded in our souls. Paul no longer has to deal with his legalistic bothers.

Paul is under the Law of Christ, but he emphasizes some Muslims observe their own. No reason to mix the Mosaic Law and evangelism. Too many evangelists add they don't need to repent of their sins and be saved; just give the gospel of grace and do not confuse it with superfluous works and facts. Spiritual growth changes. At salvation, we are not experientially changed.

We must meet the standard of God's righteousness. No longer is Paul under the Mosaic Law. What does it mean for Paul to become weak?

1Cor. 9:21 To those outside the law I became as one outside the law (not being outside the law of God but under the law of Christ) that I might win those outside the law.

Witnessing (1Cor. 9:21–22)

Lesson #494

Sunday 1 February 25, 2007

Bobby left out 2 lines from Lamentations, and apparently I missed this. ☺

Christian evangelism is the big topic, vv. 20–23; Paul is showing that there are different approaches for different folks; the gospel should always be accurate, but it can be tailored to reach a person when he is. I'm a believer, but no evangelist; I should leave this to those who have the proper gifts; I just don't have that. Witnessing is the responsibility of every believer in the Lord Jesus Christ, so that we cannot put this off on others. Acts 1:8: "But you will receive power when the Holy Spirit has come upon you, and you will be My witnesses in Jerusalem and in all Judea and Samaria, and to the end of the earth." The first phrase has been misinterpreted as a second blessing which is given to all believers, for those who speak in tongues after salvation. This was said 10 days prior to the beginning of the Church Age. Jesus is speaking to the Apostles. On the day of Pentecost, the Holy Spirit was sent by Jesus Christ, the day that the Church Age began. The second set of instructions should be applied to all of us in the Church Age. "You will be My witnesses...to the ends of the earth." All believers are responsible to give the gospel to whomever we come into contact with who is an unbeliever. That is our little corner of the world. For some, this can end up being a rather remote portion of the world. There are times when our tongue is tied, when it comes to sharing Jesus Christ with others. If you are prepared to witness, then it is much easier than when we are not. Just as Bobby would never step into the pulpit unprepared, so we should not walk out into the world apart from knowing the gospel of Jesus Christ, in order to fulfill this great commission of Acts 1:8. We run into all categories of people, and we must know what sort of approach to take. You cannot communicate what you don't understand. We may know just enough to say, "Faith alone in Christ alone." You may not know much else. The more limited our grasp of the gospel is, the more timid and less effective is our presentation. As a result of our evangelistic ineptitude, the person to which we preach the truth, gets a distorted approach. If we falter in this mandate, by not speaking when we should; we fail completely. How many times have well-meaning but ignorant witnesses mistakenly... There is too much fervor sometimes, too much legalism, etc. to present the true gospel. Or, indifference to witnessing, no matter who you come into contact with. The mandate of our Lord is, "You will go to the uttermost parts of the world."

An Essential Outline for Witnessing (A Syllabus)

1. Basic knowledge of witnessing involves the purpose of Jesus Christ and what He accomplished on the cross. You'd think anyone who is saved could articulate this, but they can't. Test yourself by presenting the gospel to someone in your own mind; what part of the gospel would you present? Redemption? The barrier? Reconciliation? Practice the gospel presentation from time to time. If we are ready, we will get the opportunity, and we will be able to make the presentation.
2. The challenge of witnessing comes from the doctrine of unlimited atonement (1John 2:2). Christ died for all mankind. Jesus Christ died for everyone, including Hitler and Stalin. To God, all sin is repugnant; we may have a hierarchy to which we adhere, but God rejects all sin.
3. The method of witnessing is enhanced by our positive mental attitude. We must prepare ourselves mentally to carry out the great commission. We need a good mental attitude. As we grow spiritually, our mental attitude improves. Some people might say, "I don't want the mandates of the Lord to intrude on my life; I like my life the way it is." There is no greater life than a life filled with the Spirit and spiritual growth. John 15:2–16 2Peter 3:18 Some people have problems witnessing because they are concerned about what others may think of them. Some care about what other unbelievers think of them. As our personal love for God develops, it outweighs these other notions: timidity, fear of rejection, etc. There is no way to please everyone and to make everybody like you.
4. Confidence in witnessing; we get this from our own assurance of eternal security and our desire to share the benefits of salvation with others. Nothing is more horrible than the idea of the Lake of Fire. God is a God of love, but of justice and righteousness as well. There is nothing the unbeliever needs to do but accept what He has done on our behalf.
5. The effectiveness of witnessing depends upon one thing: that we are prepared with a message; but the greatest effectiveness comes when filled with the Holy Spirit. In Acts 1:8, the Holy Spirit comes first, then we have our effective service.
6. Communication of the gospel occurs in two ways: verbally and with your life, the example that you lead. Our attitude under pressure; people watch us when we are believers under pressure. In the work place, do you become unglued when things don't go like you want them to. Why do I want to listen to the gospel when Charlie Brown is no better than I am under pressure? Are we retaliatory? Nothing presents the grace of God more than the grace that we exhibit. Presenting the gospel does not have to be entirely formal; often, it can just be in passing. A question to ask some, especially religious types: how do you get to heaven? Usually, it is based upon how good they are. By grace you are saved, not of yourself, lest you boast. Where is the cut off? At the end of your life, have you done enough works? Have you done enough nice things? What is the cut off point for doing enough good?
7. There is a reward for witnessing—an eternal reward, as a part of our service for the Lord. There are crowns laid up for us in heaven, as well as crowns for those on earth.
8. Paul sees giving out the gospel as a privilege. Paul is willing to go whatever it takes in order to reach various individuals. Anything that it takes, short of compromising the gospel or his spiritual growth. It takes some thought to find this common ground. You cannot compromise with heathen religion or heathen behavior to present the gospel; but, you can participate in areas of non-essentials. Paul builds bridges, but he does not stay on the other side of the bridge.

1Cor. 9:22 To the weak I became weak, that I might win the weak. I have become all things to all people, that by all means I might save some.

1Cor. 9:22 Witnessing

Lesson #495

Sunday 2 February 25, 2007

The doctrine of Witnessing is not nuanced; either you witness or you don't. We all have different thoughts about this; we are at different levels of maturity. We are weak in one area; strong in another; but, in any case, we are mandated to present the gospel. When the Apostle Paul teaches us about evangelism, we need to listen. 1Cor. 9:22 goes a long way in presenting the gospel. Witnessing can result in one person spending eternity in heaven. Paul commends to us the concept of personal evangelism; it is our concept, a very practical doctrine meant for our service.

To the weak, I became weak, that I might win the weak. I have become all things to all men so that, by all means, I might save some. There is the absence in this verse of ὅς (hos). There is a real identification with this group. Paul was weak. Paul became as a Jew; as a gentile; but, here, he is weak. The noun is ἀσθεναῖς = weak; no prominence in life; unsuccessful by human standards, the little guy; the anonymous person, Walter Mitty. There is not the sense of being physically weak. Now, this does not describe the Apostle Paul, who is the epitome of one whose life impacts the world; and even, by human standards, Paul was a man of great stature—he was a Hebrew of the Hebrews and a Roman citizen. Paul began as a man of great stature. After leaving this behind, he became famous throughout the ancient world; he was the traveling Apostle; they all knew him. He was famous; an intellectual; a man of great learning. Admired, loved, and hated. In human terms, Paul was a man of power and influence; he was a man who swayed people; he presented a message. In many ways, he was a human celebrity; a man everyone knew; not an ἀσθεναῖς. Paul could not give up his office of Apostleship; nor did Paul go into some phoney humility mode, shuffling his feet and always looking down; whatever people think is humble. False humility is an outward appearance, and that is not the weakness which is being spoken of here. Paul's success in life was not self-promotion, but the promotion of Jesus Christ. Reaching maturity is being used by Jesus Christ and he was promoted within our Lord's plan. Paul did not mind getting in the trenches where other people lived. He was not above it all. In his preaching, he entered into the circumstances of many other people. He revealed his own weaknesses—he did not confess his sins to others—but he did reveal what his weaknesses are, e.g., the thorn in his flesh. Something which does not seem to disappear, but it just gets worse. The good I ought to do, I do not; and the evil which I would not do, I do. Paul is simply talking about the control of the Holy Spirit. No matter what our status is, we have the obligation to give the gospel to whomever we come into contact with. This may involve stepping up or stepping down. Paul knew how to identify with these people, even though he had a high human status. Others knew that Paul understood the hardship of their lives. Their lives were hard, there was a lot of manual labor, they did not live long. Let them eat cake. Marie Antoinette, who got married off to the king of France; neither person was very intelligent. Most of Paris was starving, and when Marie, when she heard most people did not have bread, said, "Then let them eat cake." She wasn't being sarcastic, but did not recognize where others were during her life. She did die well, when beheaded; that good can be said about her.

We do have a clue here as to how Paul became weak in his life. Paul was a tentmaker, and tents there were made of leather, and he took up leatherwork when he decided not to take money from the Corinthians. In not taking remuneration, Paul taught grace. Paul was right down where the rest of them lived. He knew what it was like to work with his hands; he knew what it was like the sweat and to do menial work. This is a vocation which would not make the best use of Paul's many talents. This was an approach; a technique to present the gospel; and he would do anything in order to present the gospel. The plan of God is not about our talent, and this certainly took Paul to places and to relationships where the gospel could be shared. The weakness that Paul shows is a picture of the grace of God. Witnessing is not only what you say, but it is what you do. What are you willing to do to present the gospel to others? Why should you sacrifice something in life, so that someone else can hear the gospel? What does it matter that you live in the lap of luxury, when our eternal future is secure, and our status in eternity depends upon the production of divine good. There is no comparison, when you have the correct perspective. Our purpose in the light of eternity is what is important. Then the law of expediency makes sense to us. Then we see what it takes to bring the gospel to one person. When doctrine is brought into our lives, it brings dependency upon God. We are all dependent upon the grace of God. We are weak. We don't have to become weak. We sin, we have failures and successes, but we are weak. Paul admits to being weak many times. 2Cor. 12:10: I am well content with weaknesses, with insults, with distresses, with persecutions, for when I am weak, then I am strong. All those situations that you can do nothing about—when you recognize that, that is when you are strong. The strongest we will every be is, when we face death, when we know we are one breath away from eternity. We die in strength because we live in strength. This is how we live as a mature believer; that is noticeable. We witness with our life as well as with what we say. Our lives need to be in line with grace orientation. This is the concept of living. Strength and weakness.

Jesus Christ appeared in the likeness of sinful flesh. He was perfect; He never made a mistake and He never sinned. He came in true humanity, and He suffered in the same ways that we do, and faced the same hardships that many people did. He had to work; he lived right where we live. He identified with us. Fully human, and He did it for one reason—Jesus was the manifestation of the grace of God. Could Paul do anything less than pound leather? For our sakes, he became weak. Paul was no self-effacing; he did not whine about his life and he did not tell everyone in the shop that he deserved more and should be in better circumstances and that he was above all of this. Our place is not to whine about our circumstances. This does not mean that we cannot better ourselves; however; but we are not to whine about it; nor do we throw a fit when we can't move on up.

No power on earth like a presentation of the grace of God. It is the power of God unto salvation; they will reject it or they will latch onto it. We simply need to present it. We don't need to persuade anyone; that is what common grace is all about. We do it where we live; golf for a living, and you are in contact with those who swing a golf club for a living. If we work in a factory, then there are people all around us who work in a factory. If we are a professional, then we are working with gobs of people in an office environment. Don't be afraid to step up to the plate, give the message, and then step back and enjoy it.

1Cor. 9:22 To the weak I became weak, that I might win the weak. I have become all things to all people, that by all means I might save some.

1Cor. 9:22

Lesson #496      Wednesday February 28, 2007

To the weak, I became weak, that I might win the weak. Ασθενής = weak. Here, weak does not mean someone who throws like a girl; but this is a person with very little influence. The Apostle Paul is a far cry from a weak man, and he lives in a global environment and he is well-known in many ways. So, how can a man like the Apostle Paul be weak from the human perspective? He is a man of power and influence. He is a leader of a great, spiritual movement. This is a man of influence. He evoked devotion from many. He brought the gospel and doctrine to them. Paul was controversial even to the point of being hated by some; but he was commissioned as an Apostle; and he was marked in a very special way right from the beginning.. Paul had all of this and he knew it. He knew what kind of power and influence that he had. If he gave false doctrine, then this affected many people. But, he had something which people in a position of power do not have. He had true humility; true grace orientation. He possessed this in all of his great power and influence. This is true humility, not the kind when he shuffles his feet and looks down a lot. He had grace orientation in abundance. He was a strong man in this way. How did he become weak?

How Did Paul Become Weak?

1. Paul became weak by putting aside the powerful stature of his office.
2. In doing this, his objective was to demonstrate grace orientation in his life. Without grace orientation, you have no spiritual life. Paul want to teach this.
3. The best way for Paul to demonstrate and hence to teach grace orientation was to show humility in his life. He did this under reduced conditions. He lived humility; and he did so under reduced conditions for living. The Apostle Paul rejected remuneration from the Corinthian church. Paul was without funds and he had to work in order to make ends meet.
4. Paul reduces himself in his means, as a teaching device for believers. This taught grace, it showed grace in humble circumstances.
5. This is a comparison between human weakness and the divine strength of grace orientation.
6. The comparison shows how divine strength through the spiritual life and dependence upon the Lord's strength, and how this offsets all human weakness. In our weakness, we are strong. We demonstrate God's grace.

7. Realize who Paul is writing to: the Corinthians are believers, and many of them are very successful and rich. These are arrogant believers who have more problems than most churches will ever have. They needed to know the difference between arrogance and humility. These are people who thought more highly of themselves than they should.

Rom. 12:3: For by the grace given to me I say to everyone among you not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think, but to think with sober judgment, each according to the measure of faith that God has assigned. We should think a little doctrine. Use a little doctrine that we are learning. For through the grace given to me (the Apostle Paul knows the doctrine and is grace oriented); I say to every person among you (this is said from a position of strength), do not think of yourself more highly than you ought to (residing in arrogance), but to think so as to have sound judgment (spiritual maturity and grace orientation, and the application of doctrine in your life) as God as allotted to each in a measure of faith.

You react to someone, like your boss, and you react, making an issue of yourself; that is not sound judgment; that is not application of doctrine in the soul. You aren't to think so highly of yourself as to trump your boss.

Paul used weakness to demonstrate the strength of the spiritual life. He reminded the Corinthians of his grace approach when he evangelized them. He did this when they were unbelievers. This reminded them of his humble circumstances. He reminded them of humility and what God did by way of logistical grace to take care of him. He spoke to them from his humble circumstances.

How Did Paul Accomplish Asthenês

1. When Paul arrived in Corinth, he took up leather working (Acts 18:3). He was a tanner; a leather-worker; he worked with his hands. He is the man who brought mystery doctrine to us.
2. In other words, the majority of people in the city saw and could identify with Paul and his circumstances. Most of the people in the ancient world were working people, in agriculture or with their hands in some way or another.
3. Paul entered into the circumstances of most people. He wanted to go where they were. He may have even worked in a public place, and he could gather a crowd, having the gift of evangelism.
4. They saw Paul's hardship and they knew that he understood their position in life. Yet he could speak about strength in a life that they did not understand. They listened.
5. Paul did not take the easy road, which he could have. He could have walked into town with a pocket full of money collected from other churches, and lived relatively well. Paul thought about who his targets were and moved into a position like theirs. He reached educated and uneducated people. This is done without compromising the gospel or compromising doctrine.

6. Paul reduced his circumstances to reach common ground and to build rapport with unbelievers.
7. This is another of the things which Paul is willing to do in order to spread the gospel; he is effective at it. He is one of the most effective evangelists of the church age.

There is a reward even here and now for giving the gospel; seeing someone respond.

...that I might win the weak. Paul, in human terms, was somebody; he was adaptable, flexible, and real to those with whom he came into contact. Paul was not condescending; he was not impeious; he was not shoving the gospel down anyone's throat. Paul empathized with them and he became a part of their lives, to some extent. This is not always easy; it takes some preparation, some time and some thought. In making a living, Paul got down in the trenches with these people. Can you show some graciousness? It is all about applying doctrine. When you represent the Lord Jesus Christ, based on the spiritual life which He has given us, we have become the greatest salesman on earth, as we have the greatest project on earth.

Paul was a man of great eloquence; he was educated, and a man of great intellect and learning and probably incredible to listen to. But he did not try to astonish people or to impress them; he adapted to his audience. He brought the word to people at their own level. He wanted all of them to understand what he had to say. He was eloquent to those with little vocabulary, and to those with a great vocabulary.

This is not a politician talking through all sides of his mouth, talking this to one audience, and that to another. Taking positions that they believe their audience wants to hear. Paul was expedient, but he was not deceptive; that is where he drew the line. He was a real person. He simply met them on common ground. He removed false issues concerning self. He demonstrated humility. Expediency is not a bad word here; it is not to be thought of in the way that politicians are expedient. Be creative in your approach to others; and be nice to them as well.

What a load to try to get someone to change their evil ways when giving them the gospel. If Paul wanted to make an issue out of himself, he would not have started out as a leather worker. Witnessing is not an ego trip; a person's ambitions and conceit should be taken out of the equation. Getting people in some sort of competition in order to witness is a guilt trip. The key is humility. We can be babes in the gospel and present the gospel; but when you are grace oriented and maturing, then you become much more effective. Then you can adapt; you can be flexible; you can meet people where they are.

Grace is our life; we live grace, we present the gospel in grace; if we can do that, we can be effective.

1Cor. 9:22 To the weak I became weak, that I might win the weak. I have become all things to all people, that by all means I might save some.

We are dealing with some general principles of witnessing. You can witness by you life or by your lips.

The second half of this verse is summative in nature. I have become all things to all men, so that by all means, I might save some. This is the law of expediency. Paul became like a Jew, although he did not violate the gospel or affix any legalism to the gospel. Paul became as a gentile. Paul became ἀσθενής in order to reach people where they lived. He is a slave, a Jew, a gentile and weak.

Slave, Jew Gentile and Weak

1. These are all expedient measures to establish rapport with unbelievers.
2. Paul used different and appropriate approaches to evangelize. Different strokes for different folks.
3. When Paul gave the gospel, he read his audience and p. You don't have to become a physicist in order to speak to a physicist. You simply open lines of communication. Paul read his audience and targeted them in their own environment.

There is no injecting ego or narcissism into the gospel. You do maintain your own style, but no with a preoccupation. Attract attention to the message and not to yourself. People do competition in order to witness; how many they witness to becomes an issue. When you make a false issue of yourself, that is a disaster. The focus should be on Jesus Christ. He should be the only issue; no one else or no other object should be presented.

In becoming all things to all men, Paul removed all false issues—especially himself. The law of expediency is to maintain focus and humility. It is the key to the witness of your 1Thess. 2:3–5: For our appeal does not spring from error or impurity or any attempt to deceive, but just as we have been approved by God to be entrusted with the gospel, so we speak, not to please man, but to please God who tests our hearts. For we never came with words of flattery, as you know, nor with a pretext for greed--God is witness.

Exhortation is a bold and confident presentation of the gospel. Life is filled with persuasive interactions, e.g., the carf that you bought—probably the result of some persuasive. The Holy Spirit makes the gospel perspicuous to the unbeliever. We are not responsible to clos

Gospel presentation cannot come from error

1. Witnessing always demans that the content of the gospel be correct.
2. Basic observations:
  - a. Christ paid the penalty
  - b. The subject is Jesus Christ and we need to know him backwards and forwards

- c. Never add any kind of works to the gospel.
- d. Do not ever sacrifice accuracy by introducing false issues, including ourselves.
- e. Witnessing is not about appeasing a giant ego
- f. I'm on fire for the Lord; but a fire burns too and the first burnt out.

Second main caution: The Gospel Presentation should not come from impia

- 1. Rebound before witnessing; you need to be filled with the Holy Spirit.
- 2. What does the Holy Spirit do? He provides the believer with doctrinal wisdom
- 3. The Holy Spirit can bring you the proper amount of preparation
- 4. Production of divine good, which is one of the

the Third caution

Not by way of deceit

- 1. The word means huckster, con man
- 2. Doulos is the word that Paul chose to indicate slavery
- 3. The gospel should not be watered down or changed to have an of k
- 4. Don't water it down; always present it the way that it is.
- 5. Under no circumstances should the gospel be polluted with additions
- 6. Commitment; feeling sorry for you sinning telling someone that they need to feel sorry about their sins pollutes the gospel. Coming forward also pollutes the gospel. Activism; do-goodish. All kinds of philosophies and people tack onto the gospel

Mix the point of salvation with your spiritual life. But your spiritual life so none of these approaches should never be motivated by ego-trips or gimmicks.

Paul closes out with by all means save some. The Holy Spirit makes the gospel clear to the human spirit. The Holy Spirit acts temporarily. The Holy Spirit helps to explain whatever might be missing from the gospel message. The gospel is in the soul of the unbeliever. Now it is his true and common and efficacious grace. The Holy Spirit takes it from there.

There is nothing that we can do when we face positive or negative signals. We should not feel guilty when they reject the gospel. Present the gospel and some will be saved. If you present the gospel, some will be saved. That is the end of it; the bottom line.

we are the communicator just as much as a pastor. It is our responsibility. `Thess. 3:8: but just as we have been approved by God to be entrusted with the gospel, so we speak, not to please man, but to please God who tests our hearts. The grace of God is clearest when we run out of steam. It is always for our best interest. Paul could make a great presentation if he just understood grace in order to preach the gospel of grace.

Entrusted

1. someone is entrusted with out money.
2. Paul is likened to a household slave in charge with a family's finances. The entrusted slave. God expects a return on His investment.
3. The investment of the gospel by those who mental attitude
4. We have the privilege of passing along the gospel to others and passing on the message of the grace of God, seeing common grace in action.
5. What are the dividends? People who receive Jesus Christ.

We are bankers with the gospel. We take it in and give it out and it comes back doubled, tripled never forget, the Holy Spirit accomplishes this. But we are mandated to present the information of the Holy Spirit. Witnessing is a partnership.

1Cor. 9:22b I have become all things to all people, that by all means I might save some.

1Cor. 9:22b 1Thess. 2:3-5

Lesson #498

Sunday 1 March 4, 2007

The second half of this verse seems to be an impossible assertion: I have become all things to all people, that by all means, I might save some. Politicians try to do this, which is something which we see on a daily basis. No true chameleons who try to fit into whatever environment that they find themselves. Egos will get in the way of accommodating all men. But this is not Paul's meaning here. He is not being a chameleon. This is not an announcement of his generic, watered-down personality that Paul is touting here. This is the law of expediency in witnessing and evangelism. This is Paul's adaptability or flexibility. Paul never used the Law in a legalistic way; but he used the Law to reach the Jews; he became a Gentile in order to speak to the Gentiles, without the Law. He became weak; he downgraded his conditions of living in order to reach people where they live. He is not a weak man, but he downgraded the way he lived in order to reach others where they live. These are expedient measures to reach unbelievers in whatever state that they are in. Paul read his audience and used different approaches to reach different men in whatever where was appropriate. Therefore, he came to them as a Jew, as a Greek or as a Roman. However, he never compromised the message to accommodate the unbelievers incorrect notions about the gospel or grace. This reveals the humility with which Paul approached the unbeliever. There are so few who were Paul's equal or superior. He was a mature believer and yet had great humility in his soul. The Lord Jesus Christ should be the only issue; and if Paul needed to sacrifice this or that in order to open lines of communication, this is what Paul would do. Paul was a slave to the Lord in evangelism; it is never about Paul; it is always about Jesus Christ. Witnessing is never an ego trip; it is never narcissism. Some churches even have competitions or foment competition. So, when Bobby came into T&P, there was a chart with how many people they had witnessed to. Witnessing is not an ego trip. Expediency demands that a person's conceits and ambitions be removed from the witnessing equation. There is only one focus. That focus is the Lord Jesus Christ. There are many ways in which you cannot become all things to all men. The gospel of Jesus Christ is the great leveler. The gospel is the power of God to salvation. Speaking the gospel is more power than anything else that you can say. No matter how erudite you are; no matter how well you know the English language, there is more to the gospel than anything else we can say.

Common grace: the Holy Spirit acts as the human spirit, so that we might understand the gospel, as an unbeliever, we lack the human spirit which can process gospel information. This is common grace. The unbeliever hears what we say and the Holy Spirit makes this understandable to the soul of the human soul. Does he accept or reject it? This is a very relaxing piece of information. In sales, being the closer is extremely important; the Holy Spirit is the closer in all gospel presentations. Gospel exhortation does not come from error. The content of the gospel should be correct, clear and lucid. The Holy Spirit can help in this, but it is best to clearly understand the gospel in your soul. The more you know, the better. Of course, you have to know when to stop. The gospel must be presented in a lucid manner.

False issue; is the Bible the Word of God? We know the Bible is, but the unbeliever does not know that. Give them the gospel; don't get sidetracked into evolution or proving the Bible. The gospel does not come from error. Don't add to the gospel of grace. No works will get anyone to heaven. Do not bring anything else into the gospel, such as life reformation, church attendance, repentance, committing one's life to the Lord, etc. You don't commit anything to God when you don't know Who He is. Growth in grace is commitment, and it is a process, one a one-time deal. We don't have to repent of our sins, as Jesus Christ died for our sins. Evangelists and Christians all over the world use this concept of repentance. There may or may not be an emotional reaction. An old time one, believing in Christ was associated with coming forward. Walking down an isle in order to confirm your salvation. A public display is not necessary to be saved. It is just like saying you need to be baptized to be saved. Joining a church is a part of some gospel presentations. Do not mix the follow up with the gospel. You may help a new convert that they need to understand the Person they just believed in. However, growth is not an issue to the unbeliever. There is nothing about believing which involves spiritual growth; these things should not be mixed. No social gospel; don't get people to believe in Jesus Christ with doing good things. Mixing philosophy and the gospel; no need for that. And the worst is legalism. All of these things are distortions and errors of the gospel. The gospel presentation should not come from impurity (carnality). The Holy Spirit provides the person with gospel recall.

Sensitivity; you read your audience and taylor your presentation of the gospel to who they are. The gospel should not be diminished nor watered down. Deceit here is δωλος and it came from a dishonest barkeeper. He gave whatever grog they asked for at first, but once they got inebriated, then he began to water the drinks down. A huckster, a con, a cheat. We are ambassadors of the gospel of Christ to the rest of the world. We should never water down the gospel; we should never dilute or pollute the gospel.

Paul learned grace through hardship. Paul did not dwell on his own sufferings. We need to speak the gospel of grace as approved by God. We have been approved by God's grace when we understand His grace. ...just as we have been approved by God to be entrusted with the gospel... God made a deposit with Paul as a steward. God expects a return on His investment. You make a deposit, and you expect a return on that investment. God has deposited to us the message of grace. We have the privilege of passing on the message of the gospel to others, and the dividends returned to the Lord are those who respond to the gospel. ...so we speak, not to please men, but to please God, Who tests our hearts. If we are lauded as a great evangelist in our church, that is fine; but it is much greater to hear “well done, my good and faithful servant” from Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ knows when we witness for our own glory.

1Thess. 2:3–4 For our appeal does not spring from error or impurity or any attempt to deceive, but just as we have been approved by God to be entrusted with the gospel, so we speak, not to please man, but to please God who tests our hearts.

We don't approach someone with flattering speech. This is not the correct way to present the gospel. Often, flattery is deceptive, and a used in persuasive conversation.

1Thess. 2:5 For we never came with words of flattery, as you know, nor with a pretext for greed-- God is witness.

1Cor. 9:22b I have become all things to all people, that by all means I might save some.

1Cor. 9:22b–23 1Thess. 2:5–9 Lesson #499 Sunday 2 March 4, 2007

No matter how introverted we are, we have the greatest message on earth; get over yourself; stop thinking about yourself. That is putting yourself over the gospel, a matter of life and death. You have the gospel, the greatest news available to all men. A gospel booklet is important if you have a relationship with someone; handing it to strangers often lands the booklet in the trash.

God has made a deposit of the gospel to us; it is a financial term, which we are entrusted with. We speak, not as pleasing men; not to bolster our human self-esteem; but it is a part of our spiritual self-esteem. How people perceive us is meaningless. Difficult for most people to be perceived by others in a bad light. Most of us don't like to disappoint people; they don't like to have people disregard us or reject us. People don't have to like us when we present the gospel. We only need to please God, who examines our hearts. He knows our motivation. For we never came with words of flattery,... There are high pressure salesmen; and some churches present evangelistic classes, but their approach is often a human viewpoint approach; the method is emphasized over the message. If you know the gospel, then the method is not the issue. The gospel stands on its own. We do not need subterfuge to communicate the good news. It stands on its own. There is no pretext for greed. Paul was not greedy when it came to evangelism.

Paul's Evangelism as a Pretext for Greed

1. Paul never held a fundraiser for the gospel. He was careful to never association money with the gospel.
2. Paul never knowingly accept money from unbelievers for the Lord's work.

3. The only issue to an unbeliever is the work of Christ on his behalf. Whenever money is brought up, the immediate association is buying one's way into heaven. The main reason for the reformation; the church was selling indulgences, and Luther protested this (the Protestant church). How many times is the plate passed during an evangelistic meeting?
4. To use the gospel to raise money only raises the false issue of buying salvation. Money should never be associated with salvation.

1Thess. 2:5 For we never came with words of flattery, as you know, nor with a pretext for greed-- God is witness.

The Apostles had maximum authority.

What does V. 6 Mean?

1. If Paul had asserted his authority, he would be making an issue of his own power, success, or influence. It would have been easy for Paul to make an issue of himself. We did not seek glory from men. When someone hears the gospel from you and believes, they will appreciate it.
2. Never witness for self-glorification or to promote oneself. That is expediency. Do not seek your own glory. But we were gentle among you, like a nursing mother taking care of her own children. A good mother never puts herself above her children; and a good intelligent woman never puts herself over her husband. If she cannot do that, then she is not a responder. The mother is always cognizant of the baby's needs before her own. The nursing mother does not make an issue of herself. She doesn't say, I don't feel like nursing today.

1Thess. 2:6-7 Nor did we seek glory from people, whether from you or from others, though we could have made demands as apostles of Christ. But we were gentle among you, like a nursing mother taking care of her own children.

Paul uses himeromai in v. 8.

Fond Affection in Witnessing

1. This is used especially for parents who have lost a child and have a deep grief for their loss.
2. The word indicates a continuing state of mind in which the strongest kind of love is experienced for an absent loved one. Many of us have a wonderful fragrance of memory of those we have loved, but have departed from this life.
3. There should be a powerful ache in our hearts for the lost. Fond affection is far too weak; this is a deep, powerful ache in our souls for the lost. They will be lost for eternity. It is so incumbent upon us to present the gospel to them. If someone we know dies without the Lord Jesus Christ, we will never see them again; and they will spend eternity in hell. And yet, we must be circumspect not to turn them off to it as well.

Paul himself experienced this ache of soul, and he was eager to give the gospel. Paul was willing and eager to share the gospel, no matter what the cost.

1Thess. 2:8 So, being affectionately desirous of you, we were ready to share with you not only the gospel of God but also our own selves, because you had become very dear to us.

They were to consider in retrospect, the great sacrifices that Paul had made to bring the gospel to them. They needed to recall what Paul had done to bring the gospel to them. The great desire and motivation that a believer should have for a lost and dying world.

In Acts 18:3, Paul was a leather-worker, so that he did not burden new believers with having to take care of him monetarily. After working all day, he dragged himself into Bible class and presented the gospel and Bible doctrine. We ought to be able to afford 7 hours a week in learning God's Word out of an entire week. You deal with those day in and day out with those you worked with day in and day out. Paul worked to the point of total exhaustion.

1Thess. 2:9 For you remember, brothers, our labor and toil: we worked night and day, that we might not be a burden to any of you, while we proclaimed to you the gospel of God.

Back to v. 22: this is his relationship to the unbeliever.

1Cor. 9:22b I have become all things to all people, that by all means I might save some.

Do not ever mix salvation with what comes after. The spiritual life is not to be muddled with salvation. Paul expands on this idea of v. 22. All that Paul does is for the purpose of communicating the good news. This is a range of things. All of the personal sacrifices; all of the different approaches. Everything applies to us. It all applied to us. This is a summation statement. It is a statement to us of the 3 laws which we have studied. Paul defines our mission for us, wherever we may be.

What do we do for the sake of the gospel? Paul was willing to do all for the sake of the gospel. He did all things without violating the mandates of God under which he lived. This should all fall right into place for us. Paul wants the Corinthians to go back and recall all that he has said to them. This takes dedication which can only come from one place. The more we grow, the more we are dedicated. For every believer, the plan of God includes personal evangelism.

Most of us will never have to make the kind of sacrifices which Paul makes. Some of us will have to make a sacrifice now and again, and it might require some self-discipline. This begins by dragging yourself off to church.

ἵνα γίνωμαι = in order that to become. Aorist active subjunctive. Then the nominative singular of συγκοινωνός = a co-partner, one who shares. In order that I might become a co-partner... Then we have αὐτός in the genitive neuter singular ...of it [the gospel]... Paul does all things for the sake of the gospel. He spreads the gospel to the Jews, the gentiles, to the weak; he does all things for the sake of the gospel, for the purpose of increasing the gospel. Paul was to increase the witnessing from those who are beside him. He wants all to share in evangelization of others. Co-partner refers to us. We are all co-partners in the gospel. Not one of us is excluded. Paul cannot do it on his own. No one can do it on his own. For each one of us, there will be great earthly blessings. It is like watching your kids grow up; all these co-partners. Each of us has the common goal of evangelism. The great satisfaction of seeing others believe, and then see them witness to others as well. We may never voice it to one another, but we experience the same thing.

1Cor. 9:23 I do it all for the sake of the gospel, that I may share with them in its blessings.

This completes witnessing in vv. 19–23. A summation of this information will be Wednesday.

1Cor. 9:19–23 Witnessing

Lesson #500

Wednesday March 7, 2007

The great commission was for believers to go to the ends of the earth, which, for some of us, could be going to the end of the block. Fellow-partaker = co-partner. Paul lived for the gospel, and the other half was the mystery doctrine. He evangelized in every city that he entered, and down every road he traveled, and spoke to everyone he encountered. Paul was gifted and he went beyond his gift, and took part in personal witnessing as well. He had to evangelize in order to teach doctrine to anyone; you have to have believers first. He set up his own congregations from city to city. Paul was severely persecuted by the enemies of the gospel. If we present the gospel to anyone, we will run into opposition at some point. We should welcome this; we should not fear it. With doctrine in the soul, we can handle any opposition. This opposition never deterred Paul. All that he did was in order to communicate the gospel to everyone with whom he came in contact. The Bible does not call us to give up everything for the gospel; but, even if we are not called to give up our entire lives for Him, we must realize that this is the purpose.

Very few will have to go as far as supreme sacrifice, but there are always sacrifices that we must make. All of this applies to us as well. We cannot forget that we are fellow partakers of the gospel. We are ambassadors to individual people; are we ready to present this message to the world and do we have the desire to do so? This is our obligation. Now to sum up vv. 19–23 about personal evangelism. Apparently, this will be an extensive doctrine.

The Doctrine of Witnessing

1. The definition: this is the responsibility of every believer to communicate the gospel to others on a personal basis.
2. What is the gospel?

- a. The gospel is not from the mind of man. The Apostles did not make this up. Gal. 1:11.
  - b. The gospel is the power of God with reference to salvation. 1Cor. 1:18 Eph. 6:17 2Tim. 1:8 we can speak with the power of God.
  - c. The gospel stands on basic Soteriological doctrines found in the Word of God. 1Cor. 15:1–4 Col. 1:5 1Thess. 3:2 The Bible is the absolute standard for the truth of the gospel. 2Peter 5:21
  - d. Basic doctrines of the Bible are the powerful weapons for witnessing.
  - e. The gospel is one part of the mind of Christ. It defines His person and His work. Greatest news in history. 1Cor. 2:16
  - f. The gospel is never ineffective when given. Isa. 55:11: so will my word be when it goes from My mouth; it will not return to me empty, without accomplishing what I desire.
  - g. The gospel endures forever; it is eternal; it is eternal truth. Luke 21:33 1Peter 1:25
3. Witnessing is a part of Christian service in 5 areas:
- a. Witnessing is related to the function of our spiritual gift. Our witness falls inside the parameters of the operation of our gift. Many have the gift of helps, which gift puts us into contact with unbelievers in the course of fulfilling the gift. We might spend time in hospitals, etc. and we come in contact with those who do not know Jesus Christ. We are a comfort to those who are in pain. We never know when we might be able to present the gospel inside the parameters of that gift. Bobby, as a pastor-teacher, will present the gospel as a part of his message or in the closing prayer. Bobby also has an obligation to witness on a personal basis.
  - b. No matter what gift we have, we are still mandated to represent the Lord Jesus Christ before the world. We are not so compartmentalized that we don't. Witnessing is an extension of our royal ambassadorship. 2Cor. 5:20
    - i. The Lord Jesus Christ is our sovereign, and as such, He sends us into a foreign country to represent Him. We have a duty of royal ambassadorship.
    - ii. As an ambassador, we personally represent Jesus Christ; we get instructions directly from Him.
    - iii. We bring as ambassadors the message of hope to the hopeless citizens of the world. In effect, we go to 3rd world countries.
    - iv. Ambassadorship emphasizes that all believers are in full time Christian service. We do not participate in witnessing all the time; but we should always be ready and willing to do so.
    - v. Witnessing as ambassadors is one fulfillment of the call to serve and glorify the Lord Jesus Christ. We are to glorify Jesus Christ in our bodies. Here, when we speak the truth of the gospel, we are glorifying God.

vi. Ambassadorship requires proper motivation. That motivation should be grace orientation. An ambassador must have knowledge; and we must know the content of the gospel. The ambassador must be prepared. An ambassador must have protocol.

c. Witnessing is related to our royal priesthood; we need no one to intercede to God for us. We don't need a priest to pray for us or to pray for our sins.

i. One function of the royal priesthood is the principle of intercessory prayer; prayer for divine intervention. Prayer is powerful in witnessing.

ii. Do not pray for God to coerce a person's volition to respond to the gospel. Man's free will coexists with God's sovereignty.

iii. God does work circumstances so that the unbeliever has the opportunity to hear and to understand. "Heavenly Father, bring these people to the point where they will hear.

iv. Pray that God opens doors so that we have the opportunity.

v. Pray also that the gospel might continue to be disseminated in our nation. The world comes to the US to hear the gospel. Instead of complaining about it, evangelize them. My heart's desire and my prayer for them [Israel] is for their salvation. We should pray for the salvation where our soldiers are. No one would be getting into Iraq with the gospel with Saddam in charge. Our soldiers are not sacrificing their lives in vain. We should pray that these soldiers open some doors. Pray for positive volition for Iraq, for they need it.

vi. Witnessing is related to our invisible impact for Christ; personal, national and in the angelic conflict. Satan and the fallen angels grimace when they see us present the gospel.

vii. Witnessing for personal evangelism functions in addition to mass evangelism. Witnessing functions in addition to church evangelism. Bobby presenting the gospel in church does not relieve us of our duty to various people that we come into contact with.

4. The agents of witnessing:

a. The family plan: Adam and Eve as the first parents witnessed to their children. With children, you start early and often. Drum in the gospel and get them to respond. They should never get past the age of 6 or 7 without being believers in Jesus Christ.

b. The national entity. Client nation Israel was responsible to give the gospel, person by person. Rom. 3:1-2 Israel will once again in the Tribulation evangelize the world.

c. Israel was responsible in the Age of Israel and the Tribulation; in between times, there is the Church, corporately responsible for giving out the gospel.

d. The witness of the life. The unbeliever who knows that we are a believer (we are not a covert witness). The unbeliever observes us as a believer and knows our modus operandi. This witness of the life is about two things: the law of expediency that Paul is commending in 1Cor. 9:20-23 1Thess. 1:5:

For our gospel did not come to you in words only, but also in power and in the Holy Spirit and with full conviction. Just as you know what kind of men we proved to be for your sake. Paul lived under the law of expediency and supreme sacrifice. 2Cor. 5:14–21 6:2

- e. The 4th agent of witnessing is the convincing ministry of God the Holy Spirit. John 16:8.
  - i. This is the pre-salvation clarification of the gospel.
  - ii. The Holy Spirit is the sovereign executive of the gospel; all instructions and power from Him.
  - iii. Remember the unbeliever has no way to understand the gospel. The Holy Spirit must act as the human spirit for the unbeliever. He cannot, on his own, understand the reality of the gospel. John 16:8–11 the unbeliever does not accept the gospel or the Bible as the Word of God. He needs the Holy Spirit to make this real to him. That the Bible is the Word of God is not the issue to the unbeliever. Just speak it; don't argue.
  - iv. We must use Scripture, which is the power of God to salvation. The Holy Spirit uses the words of God to convict. He makes the issue real, using the power of God for salvation. It is way beyond anything that we can do.
  - v. Our effectiveness for witnessing depends upon the Holy Spirit, so we need to be filled with God the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit can bring to mind the best way to present the gospel to whomever we speak to.
- 5. The prerequisite for effective witnessing: knowledge of doctrine pertinent to evangelism.
  - a. The believer's ability to witness for Christ is based upon his perception of the gospel of Jesus Christ. So we need to grow in grace and knowledge.
  - b. Another prerequisite is that the believer must be accurate in his knowledge and presentation. The gospel needs to be clear and accurate.
  - c. In witnessing for Christ, the believer must understand the issues and make them clear.
  - d. The issue is always the person and the work of the Lord Jesus Christ. It is never about personal sin or adding something to getting salvation. Sin is paid for; you need to know about it, but you don't need to make an issue out of it.

Witnessing

Thursday March 8, 2007

People received the Holy Spirit at different times, as it was not known to all believers that Jesus Christ sent God the Holy Spirit to them. "You will be My witnesses in Jerusalem and in all Judea and in Samaria and even to the remotest part of the earth." (Acts 1:8), which is known as the great commission. The dynamics of witnessing depend upon the Holy Spirit; and it also depends upon the accuracy of human communication.

Bobby, because of this, is putting together this doctrine of witnessing together.

Witnessing

1. Witnessing is the communication of the gospel to unbelievers on a personal basis. Personal evangelism. The gospel is the power of God unto salvation. 2Tim. 1:10: But now has been revealed by the appearing of our Savior Who abolished death and brought immortality through the gospel. The gospel is never ineffective when spoken, as it is backed by the Word of God when spoken.
2. Witnessing is a part of Christian service in 5 areas:
  - a. Falls inside the parameters of your spiritual gift. You often witness when functioning under this spiritual gift.
  - b. Witnessing is an extension of our royal ambassadorship. We bring hope to the hopeless citizens of a lost and dying world. This requires proper motivation, some knowledge (the content of the gospel and pertinent doctrines); and we must be prepared. For us, this means spiritual growth and doctrinal orientatin. Witnessing is related to our royal priesthood, which includes direct prayer to God. Intercessory prayer is a part of our priesthood. Pray that God works circumstances to bring a person to the point of seeing a need for something greater than themselves. When you realize that you are inadequate, then you might be brought to a point of being able to think about the gospel. God will not compel anyone to believe in Him. Witnessing is realted to our invisible impact for Christ. Every time we witness to someone, Satan does not like it. Personal evangelism functions in addition to mass evangelism and church evangelism.
3. Agents of witnessing.
  - a. The family is the agent for witnessing to children. This is no substitute for our presentation of the gospel.
  - b. All believers as members of the body of Christ.
4. The convincing ministry of God the Holy Spirit in common grace: He is the real persuader in witnessing; yet, when we present the gospel. The Holy Spirit makes this clear.
5. The pre-requisite for witnessing is knowledge of doctrine pertinent to evangelism.
6. What are the pertinent doctrines necessary to make the gospel clear?
  - a. Doctrine comes from Scripture, from Biblical principles. Knowing Scriptural passages which declare the way of salvation is critical. We must know some passages of Scripture related to Christ and His work on the cross. We have to have something in our mind. Bobby reels off some verses about salvation, which we ought to learn. It is not bad to learn your memory to learn some of these verses.
  - b. We need to know the doctrines related to Scripture; e.g., grace.
    - i. The gospel is grace. They are synonymous. Christ did all of the work; He took upon Himself all that we deserve by way of punishment.
    - ii. Central theme of salvation is grace Gal. 2:16 Eph. 2:8–9

- iii. Do not add anything to the gospel of grace.
- iv. The concept of grace declares that the spiritually dead person cannot be saved by any system of human works. That which distinguishes Christianity from every other religion on earth—God's grace. No matter what religion there is, it is all works; except for Christianity. We have the only message of grace.
- v. Salvation is not accomplished by persuading the unbeliever to give up certain activities. "Give up your evil ways and believe in Jesus Christ." That is not the way to do it. Don't ask them to feel sorry for their sins. Positive thinking is not salvation. Changing one's personality is not salvation. Joining a church, making Jesus Lord of our life; in salvation, He is already our Lord, and this comes to pass naturally as we grow. Be baptized, give money, give a one-time commitment, etc. None of these things are a part of salvation.
- vi. The doctrine of heathenism. Anyone who does not believe in Jesus Christ is a heathen. Heathen are not people from some other place; they aren't Muslims, Hindus or Buddhists or degenerates or recluses or rastifarians. If a person living next door to you who doesn't believe in Jesus Christ is also a heathen.
  - (1) God consciousness—the point in time when a person is capable of recognizing the possibility of a supreme being. This is why child evangelism is important.
  - (2) Any time during the life of a heathen, should he or she desire the gospel, God will make the gospel available; and we may be the vehicle to reach the heathen. Somehow, in some way, God the Holy Spirit will send them the gospel.
  - (3) Adjunct objections: the old objection to Christianity: What about those who have never heard? Who live in remote areas? False issue; God knows where positive volition exists. What about those who never reach God-consciousness? 2Sam. 12:15 deals with them.
  - (4) Hamartiology—the doctrine of sin. This includes Adam's original sin and the old sin nature. Because of that, we are separated from God; spiritually dead, and unable to have a relationship with Him. It is a part of the barriers between man and God. Those to whom we speak are hopelessly lost. The good news: Behold the land of God who takes away the sin of the world.
  - (5) Reconciliation is about the barrier between man and God—2Cor. 5:21. We are reconciled to God in salvation. We are mandated to give the word of reconciliation as well. Remove the barrier between man and God. Redemption: we are freed through the purchase of Jesus Christ. Propitiation—the sacrifice of Jesus Christ satisfies the just demands of God the Father for perfect righteousness. There is no wrath directed at us. Rom. 3:25 2:2. Justification: crediting perfect righteousness to us. We just become righteous. Unlimited atonement—Jesus Christ paid the penalty of sin, and died for all mankind. 1John 2:2. If you know any or part of these doctrines, you can witness to anyone. The judgment of human good. Any of these doctrines are talking points. When these doctrines are in your brain, God will bring these to your mind when presenting the gospel. Human good was rejected at the cross; human good was not judged. Christ did not die for human good. Human good produced by the unbeliever will be judged in the end times. It will be the basis for the indictment of the last judgment. Rev. 20:12–15. At the last judgment, called the great white throne, we see the sentencing of those who reject Jesus Christ, and they are thrown into the Lake of Fire for eternity. Human good falls short of the righteousness of God. Human good gets you nowhere if you do not believe in Jesus Christ. The importance of this doctrine is the good words of the unbeliever can never gain the favor of God.

- (6) Soteriology,
- (7) Eternal security is the expression of God's grace; once saved, always saved. The one moment when we are saved is good for all eternity. God will never take away salvation once it has been given. Memorization is just repetition. The great thing about this doctrine is it alleviates the fear of trying to maintain salvation. Without this doctrine, a person falls back on works for salvation. How you live after salvation is between you and God. It has nothing to do with eternity.
- (8) Doctrine of the love of God, His righteousness and His justice. This could take a long time. God's love and His righteousness and His justice are the cause for everything that God does for us. Love is the motive for our salvation. Justice and righteousness are the means for accomplishing what His love desires. How can a God of love send me to hell? The greatest thing that was ever done in history is, Jesus took on our sins. This is the expression of the love of God. God's righteousness had to be satisfied; His justice had to be satisfied.

7. The dynamics of witnessing depend upon the believer's mental attitude related to spiritual growth. Rom. 1:14–17: I am under obligation both to Greeks and to barbarians, both to the wise and to the foolish. So I am eager to preach the gospel to you also who are in Rome. For I am not ashamed of the gospel, for it is the power of God for salvation to everyone who believes, to the Jew first and also to the Greek. For in it the righteousness of God is revealed from faith for faith, as it is written, "The righteous shall live by faith." You are ready and eager to head out to provide the gospel for the unbeliever. We look for ways to do so. His love is the greatest love in history; we should never be ashamed of His love. We aren't ashamed and that makes an impression on others. If we find ourselves being ashamed, we need to drop back and figure out where we are in our spiritual life.

Witnessing Doctrines

Lesson #502

There is no other person by which we must be saved. Rom. 5:8: God demonstrates His love for us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. The judgment arose from one transgression, which resulted in spiritual death in all of us. The free gift arose for us from many transgressions, resulting in justification—grace, justice and love. Eph. 2:8–9: By grace you are saved, not of works, lest any man should boast.

There are a number of doctrines which we must know in order to witness; grace and the gospel are synonymous. Grace is all that man is free to do on the basis of what Christ did on the cross. We are unsaleable apart from Christ's work on the cross. There is no system of works by which we might be saved. Grace is the distinctive feature of religion. Salvation is not accomplished by baptism, persuasion of the unbeliever (to give up their evil activities), feeling sorry for your sins, feeling any emotion whatsoever, guilt (which is not a pathway to salvation); to stop sinning (which can only come from spiritual advance, and it never comes to a complete halt); improvement of personality or behavior through positive thinking. No one enters heaven on the basis of positive thinking; only the power of the Holy Spirit brings you to heaven. Jesus is Lord when we express faith. He becomes Lord experientially as we grow in grace and knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ. There is no such thing as baptismal regeneration, which is a public profession of faith. It is a symbol of being buried with Him and being raised with Him. Making a one-time commitment to Jesus Christ is also not a way that we are saved. The only commitment that we can make is "Father, I believe in Jesus Christ." No unbeliever or a new believer can make a one-time commitment to live the spiritual life. The new believer must learn about the spiritual life, so that his commitment grows on a daily basis. We must grow and the commitment grows with us. These are fallacies of Christian thought.

The doctrine of heathenism: a heathen is anyone who is not saved. God the Holy Spirit knows where positive volition exists. This is an objection, and a very poor objection. We are going to hear about the most remote parts of the earth next Sunday. Someone will be sent to witness, even to the most remote parts of the earth. No one will be left out who expresses an interest in God consciousness.

What about those who never reach the age of accountability? They are automatically saved; no gospel acceptance is necessary, as God's grace provides for them.

The doctrine of sin which we must understand when we speak the gospel. How do you, as an imperfect man, approach God, Who is perfect? Our Lord made sin a dead issue in salvation.

What did Christ's work on the cross accomplish? The doctrine of reconciliation: Christ removed the enmity between God and man. Redemption: He bought us off the slave market of sin. Propitiation: He satisfied the righteousness of God on the cross.

The judgment of human good. This is another approach to the gospel. The works of the unbeliever can never gain the favor of God for salvation. Human good is in fact the basis for the indictment of the last judgment. The unbeliever has accepted his own human good works and has rejected the grace of God for relationship with God? How good do you have to be in order to gain God's favor? You can't be that good.

Eternal security. "I'll believe in Christ, but I can't hold out." Once saved, always saved. God cannot take away salvation. Many Christian denominations do not believe in eternal security. How we live our lives after salvation does not affect the status of eternal life ever. No fruit inspectors in the congregation are required. Our salvation never depends upon what we do for God. It is based entirely upon what Jesus Christ did for us on the cross.

The doctrine of the Essence of God: His love, righteousness and justice, which was presented in the communion service. His desire was to save us. His integrity and His justice were the mechanics of our salvation. What His righteousness condemns, His justice judges.

You don't have to be a Muslim to speak to a Muslim; a Buddhist in order to speak to a Buddhist; a physicist in order to speak to a physicist.

1Cor. 9:

Lesson #503

Sunday 2 March 11, 2007

The Ichthus symbol.  $\text{Ιχθϋς}$  = fish. This was a sign of a person being a Christian when believers were persecuted. Matt. 4:19, disciples are called fishers of men.

The Metaphor of the Fisherman

1. A fisherman must have a desire to fish. A believer in Jesus Christ is a fisherman. We must be motivated to fish, to overcome any hardship to find the fish, and willing to apply the law of expediency (like, you walk quietly in the water).
2. You must be equipped to fish. You must be ready and able to give the doctrines which are related.
3. You must be willing to go where the fish are; you can't fish in your bathtub. You might have to go out of your way in order to present the gospel. You cannot withhold the gospel from those you don't like. It is still a fish, no matter how undesirable they are. Missionaries deal with abhorrent cultures. All the more reason to give them the gospel.
4. Fishermen must use the right bait. There is a science as to what kind of bait to use; the time of the year, the place where you are fishing. The gospel with the content clearly defined, but there are variables depending upon the fish. The approach that we use on the unbeliever can determine whether there is an interest or no interest.

You must understand where they are coming from and use the power of the Holy Spirit to determine what to do.

5. You need patience. Stay out of the Holy Spirit's way and let Him work. Do not try to step in and try to force the issue. You don't need to check on them, pound them until they are sick of seeing you. Give them the gospel and be patient.
6. The fishermen will be rewarded in time. The satisfaction of landing the big one or seeing someone believe in Jesus Christ. There are rewards in eternity as well.

Example of expediency in fishing: in a boat, you can race around at any speed; when you are walking in the water, you can swim, splash, and jump around. These are legitimate activities that you are not prevented from doing. However, it is expedient to not do these things when fishing.

Now, to return to the Doctrine of Witnessing:

The Doctrine of Witnessing

9. The boundaries of the gospel. The Scripture defines the person and work of the Lord Jesus Christ. Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures; He was buried and He was raised on the 3rd day according to the Scriptures. The content of the good news is, Christ did something about us on the cross. We are lost; we are sinners. The resurrection guarantees our eternal life. We live because He lives. If Christ is not raised, then we have no hope. 1Cor. 15:4
10. Never try to force a decision for Christ. Do not goad them. That is the work of the convicting ministry of God the Holy Spirit.
  - a. Always remember that the unbeliever should be allowed freedom and privacy in order to make a decision. Heads bowed and eyes are closed. It is between the individual and God.
  - b. After you speak the gospel, then leave the results with God. That is the concept of patience. Do not harass them. Give them the gospel and let it do its work.
  - c. The gospel is designed to persuade, but not to compel or force the believer to believe in Jesus Christ. The inquisition was a violation of this. People are not to be converted to Jesus Christ through torture. However, harassment can be moderate torture.
  - d. Voice emotional begging and public harangues. Present it concisely and with clarity; do not use a gimmick.
11. What are the pitfalls in witnessing?
  - a. Do not argue with a person. You can present a very logical argument and provide outstanding rebuttal arguments. You are to present gospel information; not win a debate. Don't argue. Be calm and cool if they want to argue, turn it back to the gospel in some way.

- b. Do not be sidetracked by false issues, like is the Bible the Word of God; is evolution true, etc. Do not be diverted into disproving certain things. Discussing religion or social problems or activism. Heathenism should not be an issue.
  - c. You may have to overcome objections like the things above, and you should have an answer in mind, but you must be able to go back to the gospel. Do not dwell on these side issues.
  - d. Don't get into a rut in your presentation. Be adaptable and be flexible. What works with one person does not work with another. Listen to what they say.
  - e. Do not embarrass people. Deal with individuals alone whenever possible. Do not require them to make some sort decision in front of a group, as in at the dinner table. These people might be their friends, they may not know them, they may dislike them. Other people should not be an issue.
  - f. Do not set quotas; Christian competition. We are on the same team. We are not in competition with one another.
  - g. Do not measure your spiritual life by the extent of your witnessing. This is one distortion of witness, of many.
  - h. Do not judge others based upon their apparent failure to witness.
  - i. Do not brag about your witnessing; God knows what we have done. If it is divine good, then we have the satisfaction of doing a good job. You don't need to tell others.
12. The follow up or supplement 1Thess. 2.
- a. Someone believes and then they wonder, what's next? They need basic doctrine. Babies need simple food; not advice, counseling or legalism. They need to learn what has happened to them and Who and What Jesus Christ is. You need knowledge of this new life.
  - b. What is our job in all of this? We need to encourage the new believer in the importance of doctrine. Rick Hughes sometimes will teach basic information after presenting the gospel after they have been saved. A study hall class; a crash course in Christianity.
  - c. You direct them toward a good doctrinal church.
13. Some wonder if maybe we should be a missionary. To spread the gospel in a foreign land.
- a. Do you understand and can you clearly communicate the gospel and pertinent Bible doctrine. You are both a purveyor of the gospel and basic doctrine. George Mueller is a great missionary and he's been to the Camarroom in Africa. He teaches indigenous people to be pastors. You must have a clear message of basic doctrine
  - b. Do you witness regularly at home? To those in your immediate periphery. If you don't witness to those next door, will you do so overseas?
  - c. If you are mum in your own neighborhood, you will soon wither or be overwhelmed in a country of opposition.

- d. Can you master another language? Do you have any linguistic skills at all? You must be able to speak in their language.
  - e. Do you manifest maturity and stability in your spiritual life and show true concern for lost souls.
14. Is there a generic or a canned presentation to witnessing? Something you can memorize, e.g., the 4 spiritual laws of campus crusade. The answer is yes and no.
- a. On the yes side: The answer is always the same: the person and work of Christ. It is the same basic message to everyone.
  - b. If your message is canned, have a good opening. Get an interest going.
  - c. Tell them who Christ is and what He has done. If you must memorize something, then tell them. Can you write up the gospel in your own words? Is there a paragraph you can write about how you were saved?
  - d. Always close with the method of salvation: faith alone in Christ alone.
  - e. On the No side: you must be flexible and adaptable in a presentation. You must be able to deviate from it a little bit.
  - f. Do not have such a rigid, mechanic approach that you take no account of who you are speaking to.
  - g. Evaluate the background, the culture, etc. of the person to whom you are speaking. Recognize that they are not generic. God brings to us the people to whom we can best witness...friends, family, relatives. When we speak to someone, then we will know what to say and when to say it.
  - h. See where these people are in life and develop the most effective way to approach them and to present the gospel to them. This is not going to happen necessarily when you are all prepared and ready to go. Instead, you might find yourself in an unexpected situation where you don't know what to say at first.
  - i. Flexibility comes from knowledge of your subject.
  - j. Never forget that we have the most powerful weapon of witnessing: prayer. Pray to have just the right way of witnessing to the person in front of you. Pray that this message is simple, and direct and clear.

The final paragraph begins with v. 24. Paul cannot fail in his Apostolic mission that God has entrusted him with.

1Cor. 9:24 introduction

Lesson #504

Wednesday March 14, 2007

An illustration of extreme momentum in the spiritual life. Activity, effort, and the imagery will be in the areas of track and boxing. There are winner believers, which means that there are loser believers as well. Many would say, "No one can be a loser if they are a believer," and, in one respect, that is true. All believers will spend eternity in heaven. Believer losers here sense are losers in the spiritual life. Two lines of truth running through the Scripture: salvation by faith alone in Christ alone. There is nothing we can do about salvation, in terms of earning it; but this is an analogy about winning and losing.

Now, as an unbeliever, there is nothing in our lives which allow us to be winners before God. We are not even remotely close to God's standards of approval. Our salvation is a gift of God and not of works, lest anyone should boast. Salvation is the starting line in the race in the spiritual life. However, you cannot even line up in the race until you have first appropriated salvation.

Heaven is the home of all who believe in Jesus Christ, whether they advance in the spiritual life or not. It is a heresy that you must show some sort of service or some sort of production for the Lord, in order to prove that you have been saved. This is for those who have a preconceived notion of what a believer should be. There are a number of Christians who have not even gotten up to the start line; some do not even recall that they believed in Jesus Christ.

The 2nd line of truth is, there is a spiritual life provided for every believer. There is a spiritual life which God has provided for every one of us. Each of us have that opportunity. God has provided for us the means to be a winner believer. We need to make an effort to apply these various truths to our lives. There is effort and there is also reward. The divine good is rewardable. Our service utilizing our spiritual gift and His resources are rewardable as divine good. However, effort on our part is required. That is what this paragraph is all about. There is extreme effort in the Christian life.

The first truth is all about grace; and the 2nd truth is all about grace. There is some effort on our part. Spiritual growth by using the grace assets is a grace operation. All that is involved does require some effort. Our service is always based upon the grace of God. The race is about the grace of God. We also have volition to execute God's plan. We can never escape His grace. We cannot exist or serve without it.

Effort

1. It is still our volition to advance spiritually which brings us to the finish line as winners. Volition is involved.
2. It is still our production. Production of divine good under the filling of the Holy Spirit that brings rewards from heaven.
3. But it is still service to the Lord un the filling of the Holy Spirit. Service for the Lord results in accomplishing the practical side of God's individual plan for each one of us.
4. The very idea of service and production requires something on our part; the very idea of "well done" requires something on our part.
5. This means spiritual growth and execution of the spiritual life. We must learn about our assets. The very fact that we drag ourselves into Bible class during miserable weather is an effort which we have made. We grow spiritually because of it. Then we execute the spiritual life. Grace assets and volition on our part. There is some effort involved in using rebound and staying filled with the Spirit. The result of execution and growth is application, which requires something on our part—something flowing in our stream of consciousness. Part of the application is our service for the Lord Jesus Christ. That is running and winning the race. Over and above the spiritual gift which God the Holy Spirit gave us.

Let's get the overall analogy:

The Big Picture

1. The self-discipline required in training for the race. Self-discipline takes great effort.
2. Likewise metabolizing doctrine requires self-discipline. As an athlete, we must qualify for the race to begin. There is self-discipline involved here. Some of us understand enforced discipline, but self-discipline seems weird. But it is critical.
3. Self-discipline means consistently getting to Bible class. It takes self-discipline to grow. Priority and self-discipline go together.
4. Then there is race day. You go out of the blocks. If you watch the Olympics, every muscle is standing out for these people. It is all difficult; it is a strain; it involves tremendous discipline to get there.
5. That is analogous to the exertion of the spiritual life. This is something we need to understand: self-discipline and effort in the spiritual life.
6. Crossing the finish line as a winner, is reward for a well-executed spiritual life.

Why is the imagery going to be so effective, and it will be extremely effective even to us. We all have a part in the spiritual life. When Paul begins to write about a race and about boxing; it is the public games which are familiar to these Greeks and it is something that they enjoy. The Olympic games and the Isthmian games. Several other major games in the Greek culture. These games were like the NFL, NBA, etc. rolled up into one great extravaganza. The games were like our World Series. Athletic competition was an integral part of their culture. They talked about it. The Greeks had great admiration for the human body, and some even worshiped it. And athletics is all about the human body. They loved athletic events, as these would be displays of the finest human bodies of that day. These competitions were in the nude as well, so you got to see everything.

This is not unlike our own fascination of the human body or our own passion of the working out. It is all a part of our training. We have a passion for our athletic exhibitions. Now, to work out, it takes self-discipline. If you do that day after day, week after week, and year after year, then you sometimes have to drag yourself to the gym.

The Greeks heard Paul explaining this, and they understood immediately the self-discipline and the competition. It is also important, given all of the factions which they had going on as well.

Οὐκ οἶστω = don't you know? The Corinthians knew about these games, held every 3rd summer, and they were greatly anticipated. Paul may have also been a sports fan. He wrote about them, so it is quite likely that he attended some. Paul was an enthusiastic sort of person. Under the influence of the Holy Spirit, Paul writes about these games, as a metaphor for the spiritual life. There are very few of us who have not been involved in some sort of athletics. We know what it takes to be a good athlete.

The Isthmian games, and they took place on the Isthmis, upon which Corinth was built. These were local games for Corinth. This was the chosen city; they hosted these games every year. There was a wide appeal in Greece and people from all over Greece attended. Sovereigns and subjects all brought together. All the discussion would be about these participants and everyone knew about these who were running the race.

If you won one of these contests, you were immortalized. They busted open a wall into the city, and you walked through, and then it was filled in and a plaque was put up there. The Greek winners were very famous. Also, the athletes today, just as today, they paid a steep price to get where they were going.

They trained naked with oiled bodies every day, rain or shine. Even today, you can't just show up. They all trained for 10 months in one place—the γυμνασιον—a central location of the city, and this was the center of all activity in the city. They trained in front of the eyes of the city in Greece, and they were scrutinized at every turn. The press today is everywhere watching each guy and writing stories about them. People watched them in Greece as well and talked about them as well.

The Greek athletes could not take days off; they could not slough off. They wanted to be favored in the race. They had to train hard for ten months, 7 days a week. Long grueling hours of incredibly difficult conditioning. They all had diets and only allowed certain kinds of food, like no deserts, etc. and anyone could walk away at any time; but they did not. They had their eyes on a goal, and this goal required effort. This was intense and the Corinthian people loved it. And now they understand; they are like these athletes.

The athletes provided with food at public expense. Self-discipline and effort are worth the prize. 10 months of grueling training; the weights. Probably constantly bruised and beaten up.

1Cor. 9:24 Do you not know that in a race all the runners compete, but only one receives the prize? So run that you may obtain it.

1Cor. 9:24 Section Introduction Lesson #505

Thursday March 15, 2007

v. 24 is an obvious metaphor. Paul did not change to speaking about a variety of sports, but he is speaking of a winner in a race as a metaphor. Actual effort is required to reach the finish line of this race. The race analogy to us must conjure up images of self-discipline and self-denial. These things are specifically required in preparation for the race. Then the winner is reward. The winner receives a reward. Each one of us is mandated to do this type of thing. Out of all this comes the metaphor of the race. Since it is a metaphor, we can only take it so far. However, this has many applications to our spiritual life. Paul was probably a sports fan or a sports nut. Paul knew all about these athletic games. He knew exactly what these athletics were all about. The metaphor is an elaborate one. We begin the race by signing up. We do this by faith alone in Christ alone. We sign up and enter the race. There is effort involved, but we must recall that the grace of God is involved in every aspect of the race, even at the finish. Even being required to do certain things still is a matter of grace. We have logistical grace so that we might train, and He has provided us with things like the problem solving devices. Just like the athletes of ancient Greece who are provided with everything to train. This just gets us into the starting line. Then comes the sound of the gun. It take something to get that far. You have to start low, and there are a variety of techniques that you must do. This is not just run; we must know all the nuances of the spiritual life. The image is of us running; it is us running to win the race. This means that we must operate and live in the spiritual life. The mature believer explodes off the blocks and advances down the tracks, straining down the track, knowing exactly how to use your legs, arms, and hands, knowing your idea stride, your movement.

We have to exercise volition. That is the beginning of our effort and we must retain the filling of the Holy Spirit to advance. We must consistently get ourselves to Bible class. We'd rather be home relaxing in our lazy boy with a cold one next to us. Everything is about self-discipline for the race. That means, getting to Bible class consistently.

This all makes perfect sense to the Corinthians. There was a great competition in Corinth, the Isthmian games, which were like the Olympic games. The Greeks admired the human body and the athletes had great bodies in these competitions. The Corinthians like the entire process of the games; they followed some athletes in training. It was a common denominator for many of the Corinthians. So they understood this analogy. This was not just a local thing; they came from all over Greece to see these games. Those who participated were revered; they were immortalized if they won. They were exempted from taxes for the rest of their lives. Everywhere they went, they receive approbation. They trained hard and there was a price for all of this. They trained for 10 months, 7 days a week, with no time off, in the same gym. All the commerce occurred all around them, and people often came to watch these athletes, to see how their training was progressing. Some bet on these athletes; everything that goes on today went on then as well. No matter what the weather, they were conditioning, practicing and training under specific rules which could not be violated. This was just to be able to participate in the race to begin with. 10 grueling months for perhaps a few minutes or hours of sport. They had their eyes on goals. They wanted fame, glory and reward.

This is why Paul used this imagery. These are the results of spiritual training. The rewards are worth the price of self-discipline. Scientists might spend hours in a lab for one discovery. 20 years of training for one year of pasturing. Whatever endeavor you are involved in requires great preparation. This is very true of the spiritual life. Constantly training and constantly taking in Bible doctrine. The application of Bible doctrine is the payoff. It is not a brief moment; it is a way of life. Our life is the time frame of the race. We are distance runners.

The Greek noun for race is σταδιον = arena, stadium; a stod (a measure of distance; 185 meters, a single lap around the stadium); the race itself, a footrace. Who runs the race?

All who show up; all run. The spiritual analogy is obvious and it should be straightforward. It is likened to a footrace.

The Analogy

1. Signing up for the race is faith alone in Christ alone.
2. Someone has paid our entry fee; this is Jesus Christ, Who paid our entry fee on the cross, which puts us in the race.
3. Every believer is like an athlete who runs for victory; we do not run to be a loser. We are not an athlete unless we run to win.
4. As believers we are contestants in the race. Our spiritual life is the race for us. We prepare for this run with the doctrine that we take in.
5. Do not take the analogy too far. Easy to go overboard. We are not in competition with each other. We are not in competition.
6. We are in the race not just to run, but we are in the race to win, and there is no excuse for not winning.
7. There are rules and restrictions in becoming a winner. For example, 2Tim. 2:5: he does not win a prize unless he obeys the rules. In the athletic realm, this is a strict athletic regimen. This qualified them to run as winners. No one worked out in the gym for 10 months to be a loser. They all saw themselves as winners. In the spiritual realm, this is metabolizing doctrine; spiritual maturity. As a mature believer, we are winners in the spiritual life.

Complying with Biblical Mandates

1. Everything which has been named is running the race;
2. The training and the race last only a specific period of time. A few seconds to several hours. Not long.
3. The analogy is, the time of the race is the time we are allotted on this earth to run.
4. The finish line is physical death; you break the tape when you die and then the Judgment Seat of Christ.
5. At the bama seat, winners and losers are declared and the winners are rewarded. A film that Bobby used to show his soldiers about Jesse Owens, and receiving the gold medals and bowing his head when the national anthem is played.
6. Understand that losing does not mean you lose your salvation; only loss of rewards.
7. Do not take this analogy in the sense of trying to beat out the person who you hang with. God provides millions of rewards; you don't have to trip anyone else up. You don't get to make someone else a loser. We determine our own status; and no one else's. We do not subvert the advance of any other believer.
8. Each person trains and runs as an individual; the focus is on personal performance and results. The idea is to beat the clock, to turn in a good time on the race.

We are on the team of the body of Christ, and we are looking for a team win; we are competing with our teammates. There is a team concept. Individual members of a team can turn in a poor performance. They may be a loser in the race. Defeating one another defeats our purpose for being here. Individual winning furthers the team effort. It is just like a tract meet. Individual awards and team wins. The analogy focuses on running for reward; it is about individual rewards for excellence.

We've all heard the old adage, it doesn't matter whether you win or lose, it is how you play the game. That is for defeatists. How well you run the race determines whether or not you are a winner. Winning is the object. The emphasis is upon us as a believer. There are a lot of people today who don't think that believers can be losers.

It is normal that only one wins a race; you test yourself against someone else. Beating them; it is a great satisfaction that you are better than them. Not everyone will get a prize because some will fail. There are a number of races in the game; there is not just one race. There are all sorts of races. So all race in our area of expertise (which would be our spiritual gift). A number of winners in each race. We can be winners in our own race. Our life is the race that we are in. We can be a winner in it or a loser in it.

It is not our effort alone which makes us a winner. God provides us with everything that we need to be a winner, including the guarantee that we can be a winner. This is true of any believer in Jesus Christ. Is it worth it to prepare? Is it worth it to progress slowly but surely. We will run this race for a few decades; we will enjoy our winnings for eternity.

Is it worth it? You bet it is worth it. If we are a winner believer, no one can take it away from us.

1Cor. 9:24 Do you not know that in a race all the runners compete, but only one receives the prize? So run that you may obtain it.

1Cor. 9:

Lesson #506

Sunday 1 March 18, 2007

It is about 56 A.D. and Bobby can see him seated at the Isthmus games.. From time to time, Paul observed those who trained for the Isthmus games; almost everyone in town watched this training. It entertained them and was a great source of speculation. Probably a good betting line at this time. The Greeks enjoyed their sports just as we do, and they originated the Olympic games. The athletes trained for 10 months in the central market place, rain or shine, heat or cold. They looked for fame, glory and monetary rewards. The entire audience sitting in the stands go quiet, and they await the athletes to come onto the field. They had spent 10 months in self-denial and self-discipline to get to this point. The stode was the 185 meter race, and it only took a few seconds for it to be over. Paul was sitting in Ephesus a few years later, and he is writing a letter to the Corinthians, and he thinks about these Corinthian games and his enjoyment of these games, as well as the Corinthian enjoyment of them; so he uses this race to illustrate the spiritual life. Paul gives them an illustration which they cannot miss. We are given the problem solving devices and logistical grace and many more things in order for us to run this race. The grace of God has provided everything for us. There is training and preparation which is needed in order to win the spiritual race; there is growth and training and dedication and sweat. We must metabolize doctrine in order to have a chance to win the race. Metabolizing doctrine requires self-discipline. The Word of God is our life. Every corner of our life is tied to the Word of God. Then, in the race itself, the believer must advance to maturity as the means of moving down the track. We run until we die. As a winner who meets the Lord face to face. The winner receive his reward after completing the race. That is the bama seat of Christ. This is the reward of the winner. We run the race in order to be a winner; there is effort, even though this does not negate the grace of God. We can make ourselves losers, just as athletes without training and discipline cannot be winners. God provides the means and we provide the effort. Our volition is involved here.

The Race we Run

1. Rebound is not a work, but we must make the decision to do it. Without rebound, we are disqualified from the race.
2. We have to get ourselves to Bible class; it is an effort; there is self-discipline involved.
3. We must apply doctrine as it circulates in our consciousness.
4. We will have to endure some hardships and testing along the way. This is for the acceleration of our spiritual growth. God provides the testing; we provide the doctrine.
5. We must have discipline in order to have a prayer life. We are told to pray without ceasing. There is discipline for consistent growth.
6. We must succeed in the function of our spiritual gift, using what the grace of God has given us. We must exercise this gift.
7. We are all required to be involved in witnessing as a part of our spiritual lives.
8. We produce divine good under the filling of God the Holy Spirit. Those who do not perform in this arena will not be winners.

We cannot take this too far. There are degrees of rewards as opposed to races. We are not knocking off other Christians in order to be winners. There are individual rewards, but we are all on the same team. There are team points and individual performance in a track meet.

For we must all appear before the Judgment Seat of Christ. At the resurrection, we receive our resurrection body, and we will stand before the Lord and be rewarded for our service. It will be according to what we have done: good or bad (worthless, human good). At the Judgment Seat of Christ, there are the winners and there are the losers. I wonder if we are speaking of those who do not grow, who do not get filled with the Holy Spirit again, and just are saved but nothing else; and this is in contrast with those who enjoyed some spiritual growth. Losers will have little based upon their non-production; winners will receive recompense for their deeds in the body. Not related to sins...except that, if you are carnal, then you cannot produce divine good. The effort means, we must prepare and we must run. We must do it God's way and not our way. Otherwise, we will finish as a loser. Losers are self-made and arrogant.

Rev. 22:12: “Behold, I am coming quickly, and My reward is with me, to render to every man according to what he has done.” These are the decorations, the eternal blessings, the crowns given to the mature believer. Every bit of divine good goes toward these rewards. There are degrees of reward in heaven based upon our effort. 2Tim. 2:15 (5?) 1John 2:28 and another passage: we stand before God in shame when we do not produce anything.

1Cor. 3:12 wood, hay and straw describes the human good produced by some believers, which will be consumed at the Judgment Seat of Christ. This is great loss of reward. There is no excuse for it. We will be in heaven; it will be wonderful; we will be reunited; but there will always be that distinction of rewards.

The degrees and types of rewards are not the focus of this passage. Paul is not focused on the prize, but on the race itself. Run in such a way that you may win. In many ways, our competition is against ourselves, like in golf, where we play against our lowest scores. We receive an imperishable wreath. In the world, wreaths are perishable; but for winners in the spiritual life, it is imperishable. Such rewards require self-discipline and self-control. Those who we observe in olympic games are those who have practiced for hours and hour, for days and months and years. It requires tremendous self-discipline. We don't get anywhere in the spiritual life apart from self-discipline. Everyone who competes exercises self-discipline.

Present active participle of ἀγωνίζομαι = agony, to carry on a conflict or a contest, striving for mastery in a struggle, self controlled for a reward. Also a rigid denial of harmful activities. The final reward makes the self-discipline to get there unimportant and inconsequential. The accolades, the recognition, the rewards—all make the self-discipline and self-denial inconsequential. This does not mean that we need to be monks in a monastery. The Christian life does not mean that he hate our lives; we share the happiness of God. The self-discipline results in a great life; it is the only life in the spiritual realm. The goal is worth it; living our lives in the light of eternity. With self-discipline, priorities remain in place and the spiritual life is primary. The disciplined life is a great life. Bobby spent 10 years in the military, and it was a great, well-disciplined life. When Bobby left the military, one said to him, “Be careful out there; there is no one in charge.”

Witnessing

Lesson #none

Sunday 2 March 18, 2007

Dr. Paul Cate, former missionary to Iran, removed when the Shah of Iran was deposed.

Sort of a play? I had 3 daughters, if you count them. Been in the country for 9 years and I have never spoken with a Christian before. Do you believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. Don't you believe that God is a Spirit. The Trinity is one in essence, purpose and character. You believe in 3 gods? Who is running the world when you have a dead God. It's not 3 gods. It is like the weather; there is wind, rain, and snow; many aspects to weather. [A discussion between people]. You can't believe it is the Word of God if you lay it on the floor? We don't worship a book. You've changed the Bible; it predicted Mohammed, but you changed it. I guess he took someone out of the audience.

Cate grew up in Berachah. Influenced about the importance of studying the Word of God; and rebound as well. In Iran for 4 or 5 years. It was his calling to speak to Muslims. Probably a higher percentage of Muslims in Houston than anywhere else, mostly because of the oil company. We think of Muslims and sometimes fear comes into our heart. This guy might be a sleeper cell guy. Bomb buses, trains, ships. It is easy for fear to come into our lives. God is not the author of fear, but He is the author of power and of love. It is easy to witness to Muslims as compared to Americans. He asked, "When you go to a Baptist church, which one do you go to?" "I consider it a personal matter; won't talk about it." Muslims love to talk about spiritual things and they are actually very friendly and they also have fears of us; they won't initiate that friendliness unless we do. They will respond in a friendly way. They love to have company and they love to have company. If we take the time to befriend them.

A conference from Chafer Theological Seminary at the Westchase Hilton. Understanding the Muslim mind and sharing the Savior with Muslims and something else. A pamphlet there available as well, "For my Muslim friend." Study, writing, teaching, Muslim evangelism is what they give their time to. Articles by email can be signed up for as well.

C.I. Scofield also a founder of CAM, central American mission (now under a different name); and he said, knowledge precedes action. The Media presents some sensation sides and some unbalanced sides. We are responsible to learn and how to befriend and how to share Christ with Muslims. Muslims today? 1040 window? Where are the least reached peoples in the world? 10-40 degrees above the equator in Africa and Asia are the least reached people. Over 4000 groups of people in this 10-40 window.

What do Muslims believe? A very strong emphasis upon God being one, and they do believe that we worship one God. No pictures inside their churches of Mohammed. God is sovereign and in complete control. Our only responsibility is the submit to him. "God is one; God is the greatest." God is in control. "I have been in Afghanistan for 6 years, and I have not noticed anything about this?" They drive like crazy, thinking that God is in control in all things.

Must repeat that Allah is God and Mohammed is his prophet. They hear "There is no god but god and Mohammed is his prophet" and they hear that from birth, and 5 times a day every day of their lives. Animism is a big part of Islam.

Some of us might say, "Future is good and I hope it will continue so, knock on wood." Animism affects everyone, but Muslims even more so. "Salam elecum" is said to the left and to the right, to their angels on both sides, recording good and bad deeds.

These 5 pillars bind people together; and everyone has the same tiredness and the same thirst. They enjoy breaking the fast at the same time. They all have animism, if they can afford it. Everyone is dressed the same when they arrive on a pilgrimage. All muslims face a rock when they pray. They would never say they are idolatrous, but they are. They throw rocks at a post, which represents the devil.

The top 4 sources of authority in Islam. Like protestants in having no images in their church, but like Catholics having several authorities. 114 seurs (or whatever) are in the order of longest to shortest. When you read it in the chronological order, you see a progression of thinking. Hadith is a tradition. Imams interpret; and there is some sort of an agreement. Two sources of authority which they do not acknowledge: international law and tradition, but they are a source of authority.

What we have in common. Virgin birth, sinless life, Christ came to this earth and will return. They never say "Jesus" without saying "peace be upon Him." This is a great place to begin and a good place to ask questions. Ask what do you believe. There are things that we agree with. They believe that Jesus is the Messiah and the He is the Word of God, although they interpret this differently. The Bible is seen as originally from God. Salvation is by works except for martyrs in holy wars (2 other exceptions: those who give money to build a mosque and if you have 3 daughters and they are godly, there is a straight shot to heaven as well).

The Bible has been changed by Jews and Muslims in their own minds; and they rarely read the Bible, and if they don't like what you show them, they say that "You changed it at that spot" in order to respond. With the Bible, it does not matter if they believe it or not; it is our goal to get them into it. They believe the Mohammed is the final prophet and replaces what came before; the Koran replaces all Scripture from before, and Islam replaces all religion.

They don't believe salvation by faith alone, they do not believe that Jesus Christ died on the cross, they do not believe that He rose from the dead, or that He is the Son of God. Muslims are not our enemies; they have been blinded by our enemy. We need to take the blindness of their eyes and pray for God to dissolve this blindness. A very strong salvation by works.

They will tend to put us on the defensive. That is their approach. They do not have a loving God, the assurance of salvation, or a personal God. We should allow them to talk. No rain for 6 months and 6 months is rains. In Egypt, it rains 3 times.

We should pray to God and ask for rain. The Muslim woman said, No, God knows how much rain we need. They do not believe in a personal god. Ask questions and find out where they are hurting. Pray for the needs in their lives. Inevitably, 50% of the time, after you pray for them, tears will come to their eyes. They have never had a person pray for them to a personal God for them. They do not know a loving God, they do not know a personal God. It helps them to understand God better when we do this.

Assurance of salvation is not something which they have. We tell them, it is not because we have been good, but because of what Jesus Christ has done. We know we have forgiveness this way.

Take some of these points in common and use them with Muslims. The Muslim will agree that Christ is the most supernatural person who has ever lived. On the prophet Jesus, grace be upon Him; do you believe that He had a virgin birth? Oh, yes. In the Koran there is a lot, and a lot which has been changed. His birth was supernatural. Isn't Christ the only person who lived with a mother but no human father. He performed many miracles in love and compassion; he raised the dead. Do you believe that? And they will say yes. His life is therefore unique and supernatural. He will give the gospel here, even though they don't agree with this. He died for you, and paid for you sins on the cross. At the end of His life, He ascended to heaven. Muslims believe this. His life is unique and supernatural. All other men have grades; but Jesus had no grade (grace?). This would make Him the only person who had all 3. Miracles, birth, life, and end of his life. He is the only person in life who had all 3 of these things. The most supernatural person who has ever lived. Moving them from things which they accept.

The Jesus video in a dvd for $4 or $5 in 8 Muslim languages on one video. It is based upon the life of Christ from Luke. That can be a next step.

The Muslims believe in the God; God has all power. If God chooses and wants to reveal Himself, in the Son of God, and to provide salvation by faith, then He can do it, if He so chooses. The Koran is uncreated and eternal; God is uncreated and eternal. So you have 2 gods, right? No. Two eternal and uncreated things, but One God. We have 3 uncreated and eternal things as well: the Trinity.

We can fear Muslims all over; God is not the source of fear. They are blinded by our enemy and they are not our enemies. Pray for them and local and cross cultural evangelists. God has brought Muslims here to present the gospel to them. We need to spend time with them. You don't need to know Islam. We need to be prayerful and loving and prioritize time for them. We can trust God's sovereignty. When they got kicked out of Iran, a handful of believers in Iran; but a larger number now. Why would God have us learn this language? Muslims recognize that Shites and Shua are killing each other; is that Islam? They kill Christians? Is that Islam? www.something.org. In a store, ask where they are from; say you are glad they are here. Do you read the Koran? The Bible? In a cold conversation, and can give them a tract at this point, "For my Muslim friend." God is working in the Muslim world. There are in Hong Kong alone, one lady takes in Indonesian people into her home. A little room, and there are 10-20 people there. She has seen about 3000 come to Christ. 60,000 believers in Algeria. Jonah was afraid of the Assyrians; disciples afraid of Romans and Jews; God has brought these Muslims here to share the gospel.

1Cor. 9:24-25

Lesson #507

Wednesday March 21, 2007

Becoming a winner involves some exertion and some effort on our part; but this does not negate the grace of God in any way for us.

What We Must Do

1. We must advance to spiritual maturity, by exhibiting positive volition, so that we can utilize the resources and spiritual assets provided for us by the grace of God. We must exercise this positive volition.
2. We must consistently rebound and get back into fellowship.
3. We must learn to think with divine viewpoint. This sometimes takes a little effort.
4. Applying this viewpoint to all circumstances in our life; we must make application. These are all defined as an effort, even though these are not human works in the spiritual life. All that we are given are from the grace of God. Problem solving devices.
5. We serve the Lord in the way that we are designated to do so.
6. Service based upon our spiritual gift. When we grow to maturity, maintain the filling of the Spirit, then our spiritual gift will operate to the maximum.

Pat Cate is referred to. Hope that we applied the doctrine that we have learned and the content of the gospel. Learning and executing the spiritual life is how we run the race and become a winner. We should all want that, as long as we are able to look into eternity.

1Cor. 9:24 Do you not know that in a race all the runners compete, but only one receives the prize? So run that you may obtain it.

V. 25 deals with the athlete and compares it to us. The athlete in Corinth and those believers in Corinth all compete for rewards. Agonizomai = agony, to carry on a conflict or a contest [the winner must strive for mastery to win the prize]. there is self-discipline and a denial of pleasures which others are allowed to indulge in. The final reward is so awesome that the effort of denial of certain inclinations in life becomes minor. What is our attitude when we compete? What attitude is required to be a winner? Exercise self-control is the present middle indicative of εγκρατουμαι = to abstain, to be temperate, to be self-controlled, to exercise self-control and obstinance while in training. This is the discipline of the runner or the boxer. If the athlete cannot set aside some personal desires, and other things, then he does not belong in the arena. He must be willing to set these things aside. Self-discipline is critical in the athletic arena. In the analogy, this discipline refers to the setting aside of the law of liberty in favor of the law of expediency. Obviously, there are other things involved in the 4 hours of Bible class, e.g., the hour driving to get there in the first place. There are other Christians who might have more innate talent or are smarter, but they do not have the epignōsis which we have. Paul chose this one verb, and it is critical for us to understand the analogy between us and the runner.

The 6 Critical Analogies of *Εγκρατουμαι

1. The comparisons of Εγκρατουμαι to us. The athlete must decide to enter the gymnasium. "Do I walk through these doors or not?" There will be 10 months of grueling training. He must make this choice to lead a life of self-discipline.
  - a. This is a picture of entering the spiritual life at the moment of salvation. Faith alone in Christ alone, and tha means that you have registered.

- b. There were stipulations to this enrollment, which the athlete had to show when entering. The athlete had to present proofs and credentials.
  - c. No athlete enrolled or entered the gym without proving that he was a free man. Slaves could not run in the games.
  - d. This is a picture of redemption; walking through the gates of redemption.
  - e. As a born-again believer can be assured of our freedom through the slave market of sin. The door has been kicked open, and we are now in the race. Redemption is the door to the race.
  - f. This puts us in a position to run; we are redeemed; freed from the slave market of sin.
  - g. Secondly, they must prove their citizenship; illegal cannot run. This is a picture of union with Christ. We are all citizens in Christ. By God's grace we have the proper credentials.
  - h. Admission into the gym is analogous to the new believer receiving the 39 irrevocable absolutes and the one revocable.
  - i. With his position in Christ and the filling of the Holy Spirit, the believer now can begin his spiritual training. He's walked through the doors; he was the 40 things given to him at salvation, and he can begin training.
  - j. The one objective of the spiritual training is to no longer to be dominated by the old sin nature. You cannot train apart from spirituality. It is not easy to abandon carnality.
  - k. To take in doctrine demands self-discipline. In this case, it is rebound and keep moving. That is the training.
  - l. The more mature we become, the less we are controlled by the old sin nature. That is the progress of our training. This is part of the training; we are advancing. We are getting stronger and in shape.
2. Once in the gym, you don't leave. You cannot just up and leave, like the military. You must stay in the gym (stay in fellowship).
  3. The athlete had to answer an early trumpet call. Reveille are 0 dark-thirty. 7 days a week for 10 months. You conform to the rigid disciplines of the mandates of Bible doctrine. To sleep in means to be disqualified. To not conform to the discipline to the mandates of Bible doctrine is a disqualifier. Bobby is here to give us what it takes to be a winner. We will always have something by which we can grow; something by which we can gain some maturity.
  4. In preparation for the day's training; you've gotten up, the trumpet has sounded; you've had breakfast. The athlete must oil down his body, which is like suiting up for a workout or taping up a muscle. The oil was all the athlete wore. This was done, rain or shine, heat or cold. The analogy is to the tests and hardships in the spiritual life. The tests are for a great reason; they are to accelerate our spiritual growth. We oil up and we go out for our training. 2Tim. 2:4 4:5 Analogous also to be filled with the Holy Spirit.
  5. From time to time, everyone of the athletes wonder is this worth it?

- a. Some quit. Some were on the verge of quitting, despite being on the verge of becoming a winner. Some felt, at some point, that it was not worth it, and they are disqualified.
  - b. They gave up or wavered in their resolve to stay the course.
  - c. The athletes that quit did not have enough self-discipline and they lost sight of the goal of the prize; there was not enough motivation in their souls. Not enough self-discipline. Whenever we quit on something in life, it is all about our self-discipline. We have all begun the spiritual life; do we have enough self-discipline to see it through?
  - d. Those who did not depart from the gymnasium for 10 months fell back on the stability provided by their self-discipline. When there seemed to be no other motivation to stay; only self-discipline kept them going. I started this and I am going to see it through to the end.
  - e. This is a great analogy to the stability of Bible doctrine.
  - f. It is the discipline of the spiritual life through which we keep our great goal in mind.
  - g. When all else points to giving up; when human viewpoint screams to quit and we give in to carnality or to Reversionism, the self-discipline of spiritual advance keeps us going. No one can choose to be a winner and fulfill the objective without.
  - h. Building doctrine upon doctrine provides the stability and strength to see the race through to the finish. Line upon line, precept upon precept, each and every day. This provides the impetus for more and more self-discipline on our part. With more doctrine, we can better see the goal. The closer the athletes get to the 10 month end, the more self-discipline they exert; they had gone that far, and they do not give up.
6. Self-discipline was also required to stay on a strict diet. Wheat, cheese, figs and lean meats. This is all they could eat. No wine, no deserts, no fatty foods. The analogy is using the laws of love, expediency, the law of supreme sacrifice. We have all the liberty in the world. It takes self-discipline to stay the course, when expediency, love and self-sacrifice are all needed.

The athlete uses his self-discipline to get to the reward at the end. In the athletic realm, it is to receive a wreath. Φθαρτον στεφανος which is a wreath of ivy, which many not seem like much. You run and work out for 10 months, and all that you get is this wreath? Maybe it is not worth it? This wreath did not last. Fame was achieved for that moment, but it was fleeting. It did not last anymore than that crown lasted.

This reminds Bobby of those who go to Ranger school and get a little piece of cloth to sew onto the left side of the uniform. Incredible hardships are endured for this little piece of cloth. However, this is worn for your entire military career. This spoke of an elite military man, just as the wreath spoke of the athlete.

The wreath is not the only award. He got a victory parade through town. He got a statue which was raised of him in the public square. There was a large monetary reward. Lifetime ticket to all future games. Exempted from taxation. Fixed for life monetarily. His children were all educated at public expense. Even these rewards will end, despite how incredible they are. These victors are not recalled today; for a few years, they were remembered; but, after awhile, they were forgotten. Their glory was fleeting; and their statues went unnoticed by passers by; and their statues today are dust or sitting in some museum. Human prizes are fleeting; and it fades away. This is what it means when Paul speaks of them running for a perishable wreath.

The point is, do we have the self-discipline to run for eternal rewards?

1Cor. 9:25 Every athlete exercises self-control in all things. They do it to receive a perishable wreath, but we an imperishable.

1Cor. 9:25

Lesson #508

Thursday March 22, 2007

It is critical to advance with self-discipline and self-control. Self-discipline is a paramount trait for the winner believer. A believer cannot get around that trait and advance. Without this, a person will not consistently rebound. Self-discipline to bring yourself to Bible class. There is a volitional aspect tied to self-discipline. You are positive or you are negative; or lukewarm, which goes to the negative side. The Apostle Paul has presented a good analogy between our self-discipline in the Christian life and the self-discipline of the athlete. You cannot be a winner without self control and self-discipline. This is the major thrust of this passage (vv. 24–26).

And everyone who competes in the games exercises self-control in all things. From the moment the athlete steps into the gymnasium, he is involved in self-discipline. He does this to receive a perishable wreath, which is represents a number of other rewards. Self-control is being in control of yourself. This includes some self-restraint; poise under pressure (poise is a fantastic quality in life). Bobby's first run in with poise was as a young boy in little league baseball, and Bob was coaching the team Bobby was on. More was expected from Bobby. Bob told the parents he was going to teach those kids poise and self-discipline; they won't play if they throw their bats down or start crying after striking out. Poise under pressure. When the game was on the line, no one fell apart. Poise requires self-discipline; no one can have poise for you; you must have it for yourself. Self-regulation is also a part of this. You must be able to regulate yourself in this regard. The athlete had things that they could not do in order to advance, and as believers, there are things that we have to abstain from when those things hinder our discipline. The runner and the boxer are both great analogies. These analogies about people who must do this themselves. No one else does it for them.

It take endurance and self-discipline just to get to the starting line. The believer with perseverance and endurance is the best. Without self-control and self-discipline, we are going to end up as quitters lost in negative volition. Positive volition means we come into church, sit ourselves down, and learn. We can't apply certain things, like love, expediency, etc. Most of us will never have to live under the law of supreme sacrifice. What is more important? Witnessing to an unbeliever, or holding onto prejudices against Muslims. There will be testing and there will be crises in our lives. People watch us and when they see poise, they know that we have something else that no one else has. When Bobby's team saw a star kid strike out and throw his bat and go into the dugout and cry, they'd smile, knowing he'd be screwed up for the next couple innings.

Self-discipline goes hand-in-hand with positive volition. When you do something else without a daily dose of Bible doctrine, that is not self-discipline. For a moment, you have negative volition. If it goes on long enough, it becomes a habit, and leads to negative volition. There must be self-discipline. Positive volition and self-discipline are intimately connected.

How Do you Know You have this Self-discipline?

1. A disciplined soul is filled with doctrine. If you are advancing in the spiritual life, then you have self-control; if you have self-discipline, then you are advancing in the spiritual life.
2. Under the filling of the Holy Spirit, divine viewpoint becomes sovereign over your life. It takes over all the human viewpoint which is out there. You do not even know it is happening.
3. The believer with self-discipline will not be controlled by his emotions or by the subjectivity of others. Christianity today is emotional, and wherever you see that, there is no self-discipline. With all of this emotion, there is very little doctrine.

There is nothing wrong with emotion; it appreciates that which is around you. But without self-discipline, emotion can be a terrible curse because it sweeps away self-discipline and truth. When a church is involved in great emotion, then truth will not be found there. Bible doctrine and self-discipline should be at the heart of spiritual advance.

The analogy in v. 25 is to an athlete, and he exhibits self-discipline so that he will be a winner; he must exhibit self-discipline.

The Analogy between the Believer and the Athlete

1. The believer utilizes self-discipline and self-control to advance toward becoming a winner, just as the athlete advances in his athletic skills through self-control, self-discipline, and training.
2. The more self-discipline which is applied, the more disciplined you become. It is practice. It requires practice to become self-discipline.
3. Self-discipline always stands the believer in good stead for maximum effort and effectiveness in the Christian life. The athlete does not win who does not discipline himself in spiritual advance. No effort, no effectiveness without self-discipline.
4. The believer in command of himself trained to discipline himself for spiritual advance has a quality of faith-rest and stability which cannot be matched anywhere.

There is nothing like the self-discipline believer who advances to maturity who has that quality of faith rest and stability.

5. This enables the believer to regulate his own mental attitude, based upon divine viewpoint. This is where faith rest comes from. There is discipline in applying the faith rest drill.
6. With self-control, the believer perseveres in the Christian life, which is executing the plan of God.
7. Maximum production for the Lord is a result. Too often Christianity concentrates on service without preparation. Keep praying; pray for whatever. Anyone can do good deeds; an unbeliever can do good deeds. Rebound, filling of the Holy Spirit, metabolized doctrine, gap, faith rest, stability, poise under pressure.

The mature believer will have a far greater production in a short period of time than a legalistic believer over a long lifetime. Our short sprint with self-discipline is much more important than a believer who is all over the place, with no direction, no self-discipline, no poise, no guidance, and lots of emotion.

Bobby is amazed by what goes on in relation to the spiritual life. They are clearly. In one year, members of Berachah can advance further than most other people in their entire lives. These thoughts are critical for our lives.

There is a result from all this, and this is the reward from crossing that finish line. The athlete gets the perishable wreath, but that includes a whole lot of other things, some of which last a few days and others a few years, and some their entire lives. The glory of the world fades away. Sig transit gloria mundum.

Atherton = αθαρτον = imperishable, incorruptible, immortal. James 1:12: Blessed is the man [a believer] who endures trials, because when he passes the test he will receive the crown of life that He has promised to those who love Him. Gold, silver and precious stones will endure; the wood, hay and stubble will be burned up. Those who love him refers to the mature believer with personal love toward God. Divine good production; and the rewards are not equal. There are degrees of divine good which we produce. There are degrees of rewards. 1Peter 5:4: And when the chief Shepherd appears, you will receive the unfading crown of glory. If the heathen athletes were willing to undergo such an ordeal for a perishable reward, then it makes sense that it would be reasonable for us to go through much less for imperishable rewards, particularly when everything is provided for us. Whether our race goes for a short time or long, our race requires self-discipline. There are rewards not described in the Bible. A few descriptions like mansions or streets of gold and precious stones; but we have no clue; it is beyond us. We have no idea either what will be given to us by way of reward for our spiritual service.

Our distance goal is no other than Christ waiting to place a crown on our heads for all eternity (or whatever reward will be given us). There is no other place where we want to be. Sometimes this will be our motivation. Sometimes we have to keep our eyes on the prize; on the goal, on the reward. Bobby was amazed while sitting at his desk and thinking through all of this analogy. Sports is a great analogy to the spiritual life in many ways. This disciplined effort to apply doctrine and to grow; to witness and to pray is not accomplished in self-indulgence. Are you motivated to pray for anyone in self-indulgence? Are you motivated to witness to anyone when involved in self-indulgence. As Paul said, there is reward in life and in eternity. The growth, application and service. There is a reward in the running of the race. There is a reward that we get out of doing a great job. Satisfaction, approbation, a feeling of accomplishment. With spiritual things, this is eternal. Some people never have these moments in life because they only live for themselves. The military is a great example of the military life, because it is a life of enforced and self-discipline. The greatest soldiers always exhibit strong self-discipline. It is also a life of deprivation and some adversity. There is sacrifice and deprivation; but there is a life which brings the greatest of commodities to a nation: freedom. The kids in Iraq are having an impact on the world, much more than a CEO sitting in a desk making money hand over fist. They are having long-term impact on this world and on thousands, even millions of people.

How can the undisciplined mind of the unbeliever understand the Christian life? The soldiers who live and die in Iraq; it is like our lives in the angelic conflict. We are soldiers and a soldier needs self-discipline.

1Cor. 9:25 Every athlete exercises self-control in all things. They do it to receive a perishable wreath, but we an imperishable.

1Cor. 9:24–27

Lesson #509

Sunday 1 March 25, 2007

Sporting events have been an integral part of societies throughout the centuries. Bobby says this would be an interesting sociological study; they seem to be ingrained in us. When Paul chose to use this, athletics can be considered to be a great metaphor for life. Women may wonder why do men spend hours in all kinds of weather watching sporting events; or why camp out in front of a tv to watch these. Every facet of human life is found in athletic events. It is observable; right in front of us, if we know what to look for. We need to get past just what we see on the field. Athletics are a microcosm of the human condition. Everything is there, behind the scenes and on the field. Success and failure, winners and losers is inherent to athletics. The competition is a war, a mock battle, with tremendous human drama. Overcoming great odds, sacrifices made, the heroic winner, the unlikely winner; a fall from the heights, the pain of losing. You can pick out the arrogant and you can pick out the humble. You see manifestations of integrity and of dishonor both; good and bad choices and the results of these choices. A few hours of a game will show us just what our life is like. It is observable as a metaphor of life. Great lessons to be learned, even for those who observe. Bob used coaching in order to teach great lessons of life. He was able to teach all levels of people, from young kids to people our age. He taught his teams to have the correct attitude; poise, self-control, perseverance. All of these things are a part of life, and Bob made men out of these boys. Bob taught them lessons of life; he taught much more than simply the sport and the skills of the sport.

On these field of friendly stripes are sold the seeds of victory, which, on other fields, will bear the fruit of victory. Written possibly by MacArthur at Nike Field. Paul understood athletics to be a great analogy to life and to the spiritual life; analogous to the winner and loser believers. The drive and motivation to carry on to the finish line. Rewards for victory and loss of rewards for defeat.

1Cor. 9:24 Do you not know that in a race all the runners compete, but only one receives the prize? So run that you may obtain it.

Self-discipline is the key to all things. We receive an imperishable reward. Heb. 12:1–3: Therefore since we also have such a large cloud of witnesses surrounding us, let us lay aside every weight and the sin that so easily ensnares us, and run with endurance the race that lies before us, keeping our eyes on Jesus, the source and perfecter of our faith, who for the joy that lay before Him endured a cross and despised the shame, and has sat down at the right hand of God's throne. For consider Him who endured such hostility from sinners against Himself, so that you won't grow weary and lose heart. The spectators of the spiritual life. Let us lay aside every encumbrance and every sin—this is rebound and the filling of the Holy Spirit long enough to advance and learn some doctrine and application of some doctrine. Let us run with endurance run the race which is set before us. The writer uses the metaphor of the distance race. We run the race with endurance by fixing our eyes on Jesus, the author and perfecter of our faith, who, for the joy set before Him, endured the cross, despising the shame; and has sat down at the right hand of the throne of God. For consider Him, Who has endured such hostilities against Himself... What we face is nothing compared to the hostility which Jesus Christ faced. ...from sinners. Don't grow weary and do not lose heart. We have no right to drop out. Had he dropped out, we would have no hope. We often think when we are happy, we can cruise and run easily. However, in the spiritual life, it is a flat out run to the finish line. Those who claim that they are going to live their life to the fullest, usually don't. However, we should; and there is self-discipline involved, in our lives and in our spiritual live. We should be an imitator of Christ; running the race to be a victor. Some of us don't realize just how closely we are approaching the finish line. Everything we do is a part of moving toward that finish line.

1Cor. 9:25 Every athlete exercises self-control in all things. They do it to receive a perishable wreath, but we an imperishable.

We move into the next couple verses. In vv. 24–25, Paul speaks of other believers; other athletes. Now, in the next two verses, he looks at himself. He was saying, “You must be disciplined;” and now he speaks of his own self-discipline. Nothing will stop Paul from being a winner. No testing, no obstacle, no nothing. Nothing will keep him from exercising his gift of Apostleship. Paul is not worried about the Corinthians and their factions. “I am looking straight ahead at the finish line, and not at those all around me.”

without aim = ἀδελος = aimlessly, uncertainly. This word is used only here, and it speaks of being uncertain or aimless. However, Paul is not uncertain or aimless. He absolutely knows where he is going. Everyone of us has a goal; we all have a common goal and we have individual goals. That is how athletics works. Even though there is effort on our part—or self-discipline—our efforts have no efficacy apart from the filling of the Holy Spirit.

We cannot do it on our own. We have volition; we must make decisions; but we must metabolize doctrine. Prayer without the filling of the Holy Spirit is talking to ourself.

1Cor. 9:26a So I do not run aimlessly;...

Paul was a fighter. Therefore, it is natural for him to move to the metaphor of boxing. I box so that I do not beat the air. Boxing then was quite different. There is physical damage; swollen face, blackened eyes, bruised body. The damage is done to make the opponent quit. The boxers today show speed and power. Might be 10–15 rounds to complete a match and often both are standing after a match.

After the Isthmean games, the gloves were studded. The idea was to hit and to hit fast; you did not want to be hit by the other guy. One or two good punches would inflict serious injury on your opponent. A few punches could end the fight. They did not use the tactic of wearing down an opponent over a long period of time. You don't want to simply beat the air. You want to connect.

Boxing is a man on man battle; and in those days, it was a real battle and there was carnage. This verse speaks of real combat with very real consequences. You did not want to enter into a boxing match there ill-prepared. You took your life into your hands. That could end your life. No rewards for losing; pain, serious injury and death for the loser. Every punch counts. Beating the air could mean great injury. Your punches need to connect. Such an empty punch would be worthless, where a counter-punch could take you out. By analogy, this is not what the believer should do.

Paul will say the same word when referring to tongues—speaking into the air without purpose. No communication; flailing the air without words. Pointless speaking; words thrown into the air. Words which have no meaning at all. No value at all; not spiritual and not any other kind.

The consequences of flailing the air with punches that do not connect. This is like the believer not advancing spiritually; he is clobbered in reversionism.

1Cor. 9:26b ...I do not box as one beating the air.

What will Paul do? So that he does not end up on a stretcher at the end of his life? And what do we do? V. 27 is a metaphor as well, and this is Paul's explanation.

1Cor. 9:27 But I discipline my body and keep it under control, lest after preaching to others I myself should be disqualified.

1Cor. 9:27

Lesson #510

Sunday 2 March 25, 2007

An old program on ABC called the Wide World of Sports. Indelibly stamped into Bobby's mind is the thrill of victory and the agony of defeat. Apparently, part of the intro involved a skier flying off to the wrong side of a ski jump. Paul had no intention in his life of being a loser. Paul was going to box so as not to beat the air.

The first half of v. 27: Paul tells us that he is going to win, and how he will win. The verb υποπιαδζω = to strike one on the face beneath the eye; to beat until black and blue. This is the result of a punch or several punches to the face. υπωπιαζω = 1) to beat black and blue, to smite so as to cause bruises and livid spots; 1a) like a boxer one buffets his body, handle it roughly, discipline by hardships; 2) metaphorically; 2a) to give one intolerable annoyance; 2a1) beat one out, wear one out; 2b) by entreaties; 3) that part of the face that is under the eyes.

We cannot lose. We have the Spirit of God in us; we have the Word of God to guide and motivate us. We have things that the rest of the world has no clue about.

You can always tell a team which is in lousy shape; and when two teams are ready, then it all comes down to the right mental attitude; and, in some cases, a mental attitude can win, even when they are physically inferior. Paul's antagonist was his own body. He had to beat his own body until it was black and blue.

What Paul Means

1. Paul beats himself to conquer himself, so as to lead himself as a slave.
2. Paul does this so that his body will do its bidding in exactly the way that he wants it to. An athlete trains his body until it will do exactly what he wants it to do. He beats himself to get his body to do exactly what he expects it to do. Paul buffets himself to make himself a slave. Paul buffets himself for mental toughness.
3. There is a complete coordination between his mental attitude and his actions. You can have one without the other and end up as a loser.
4. Beating his body black and blue is the perfect picture of the self-discipline of the spiritual life.
5. The mental self-discipline required to grow spiritually is the following:
  - a. You must utilize the filling of the Holy Spirit; rebound. There is no mental attitude of the spiritual life without that.
  - b. The gap. No metabolizing doctrine without it.
  - c. You must build the edification complex and use the problem solving devices.
6. The more you train, the better you become at executing the spiritual life. You will not beat the air in futility. You will go outside the doors and put it into motion. In Bible class, we are sitting in the gym working out. We are pumping iron. We learn rebound, grace orientation, doctrinal orientation. When we walk outside, we will be ready mentally and physically.
7. With self-discipline, you reach championship form.
8. The result in the championship form is the championship performance. Witnessing, prayer, etc.
9. These actions are rewardable. The goal, the perks, the prize. This is why we run. There is not enough wealth in this world to replace it. Self-discipline is the principle of setting aside the law of liberty. There is nothing wrong in the law of liberty; you are living within the confines of the spiritual life. You are running the race.

1Cor. 9:27 But I discipline my body and keep it under control,...

Paul then pictures the self-discipline principle in the next part of this verse. Freedom without self-discipline is loss. Slavery is seen winning. Paul turns the concepts of freedom and slavery around. Freedom can mean loss and slavery can be gain. The 2nd half of the verse reads: ..so that after preaching to others, I myself will not be disqualified.

Emotional Christianity is distorted slavery. The opposite of self-discipline in the Christian life is the emotional Christian. Through the US and the rest of the world, we have emotional Christianity. 20 min. of speaking and a lot of time spent on working you up. It is getting more and more the gist of Christian services. The athletic metaphor is about self-discipline, and it is the opposite of what we find in Christianity today. We go nowhere. The team which gets emotional before the game gets all worked up. Emotion will not carry us. Emotionalism is undisciplined and pointless in the Christian life. It does not matter if you feel good. If emotionalism feels good, it is nothing more than beating the air to no purpose. Undisciplined emotion is the opponent to the doctrinal self-discipline of life. The emotionally dependent Christian goes nowhere. The self-disciplined Christian, who knows how to use the resources which God has given us, thinks with the mind of Christ, is the winner. The emotional aspect of Christianity is in direct opposition to Christianity.

Ask a believer you know, what is the Christian way of life? How do you get rewards? Most have not even a clue as to how to get there. 90% have no clue; many of them do not even know if they are going to heaven.

This does not mean that we should not have emotions; nor does this mean that we should not enjoy. These are the appreciators of our life. Our out of control emotions is an out of control life. As an emotional believer, we are not a winner in the angelic conflict. The soldier might be beligerant, but he has a well-reasoned motivation for what they do. It is not about emotion. The soldier who goes into battle with emotion is the soldier who lets the team down and makes himself ineffective, getting emotional over the first casualty.

This is why Paul camps on the anti-emotional approach, like athletics. Tongues in 1Cor. 14:9 are to be avoided when it involves no self-discipline. The Corinthians are so involved in emotionalism, particularly in tongues, are losers. And, at this time, tongues was legitimate; and yet, they misused it.

We begin this verse with the particles μη προς which are connected to γινομαι. This is an important construction. The subjunctive is a deliberative subjunctive. A very careful consideration is being made. Paul is giving great consideration. He is analyzing in order to do the right thing. This is what you cannot do when your emotions are out of control. Don't be emotional; consider your options. Μηπως is an unusual particle = is it not possible, lest possibly. The subjunctive of γινομαι means I should be. Between this is a whole phrase. ...lest possibly, ...I should be. Paul allows for the possibility that he could fail in the games. Everything that Paul says, I will not fail and yet, here, he speaks of the possibility of failure. Why does he even entertain the notion of failure? He does this for us. He does this because we might consider failing; we might consider beating the air. We might move away from the spiritual life. If Paul is not a slave to his spiritual training, then he could fail in his goal. If he is not a slave; if he does not fail. What are the Corinthians doing? They are failing big time. They are losers. They are emotional and they are already disqualified. There is a way to win and a way to lose, and they are losing. He means, lest possibly, you should lose. Paul is softening the blow by using himself as an example. If you do not exercise the self-discipline necessary to run the race and to right the good fight. The fight of the spiritual life, the fight which gets you to the finish line.

1Cor. 9:27b ...lest after preaching to others I myself should be disqualified.

1Cor. 9:27 10 introduction

Lesson #511

Wednesday March 28, 2007

Paul freely used slavery to illustrate certain spiritual things, as he did with athletics and the military. In 1Cor. 7, he speaks of slavery, and, at one time, there were more slaves in the Roman Empire than citizens. Everyone had knowledge of slavery.

The Bible does not speak out against slavery nor does it call for Christians to try to end slavery, because the Bible does not involve itself with social issues.

A slave is a person in abject submission to his master; and as believers, we have the most benevolent Master ever. Being a slave is a wonderful thing when we are slaves to Jesus Christ. Paul uses slavery in Gal. 3:28 4:1, 7 the book of Philemon. Two uses of slavery, and there is a 3rd use, which is our passage, 1Cor. 9:27. Paul seeks to enslave his body. He seeks to hupoziazo (ὑποπιαζω) [pronounced hoo-poh-pee-aw<sup>d</sup>-zoh], because Paul wants to get his body to do exactly what he wants it to do. The 3rd use is self-discipline, the self-discipline used in order to live the spiritual life. The body is the location of the sin nature. We all have a sin nature in our bodies, within the cell structure of our bodies, which is often called the flesh in the Bible. That corruption also extends to our souls; we are not dualists in Christianity, where the soul is good and the body is bad. The unbeliever can never remove himself from the control of the old sin nature. He is corrupt and he will remain corrupted. He has no respite from this control. The believer out of fellowship is no different, except that he will reside in eternity forever. The unbeliever cannot live the spiritual life; but the believer has a recourse in this matter. There is the problem of maintaining the filling of the Holy Spirit for longer and longer periods of time, which requires spiritual growth. It does us very little good to go in and out of fellowship constantly. At some point, we need to extend this time. In Bible class, ideally, that would be an hour. We must continue to grow spiritually so that we can spend longer and longer periods of time in fellowship. The more we do it, the better shape that we are in. The more we are in fellowship, and the more we stay in fellowship, the more that we grow, the longer we stay in fellowship and the more endurance that we have. Endurance is the name of the game in the spiritual life. We must run the race in the way that God has designed it, crossing the finish line as winners. The use of our spiritual gift is the rewardable aspect of our lives.

This self-discipline is why Paul continues to buffet his body, bringing it under control. Our responsibility is what Bobby is covering. Taking in doctrine and growing in grace and serving the Lord, which is why we beat our bodies black and blue like the Apostle Paul. Paul wants to be a slave to that life.

1Cor. 9:27a But I discipline my body and keep it under control, ....

What are the results of the lack of self-discipline? V. 27b: this is a deliberative subjunctive; Paul is deliberating; he is analyzing, in order to do the right thing. He is thinking. When we deliberate and analyze, we begin to plumb the depths of where we are and what we should be doing. Paul is thinking a negative thought here. Since a negative option exists, there is also the option of going the other way. The subjunctive of ginomai is I should be. All of it lest possibly I should be.

Points on lest possibly I should be.

1. It is possible that Paul can fail; that is what Paul is saying.
2. Paul could fail in the games. He has decided to run in this spiritual race. He is recognizing that he could fail in his spiritual endeavors.
3. Lack of self-discipline would be the reason for his failure. Paul has made a great point of self-discipline, and here he takes the negative side.
4. If Paul is not a slave to his spiritual training—he is building a no-prisoner mentality—he could fail in his goal.

To Paul, this is a totally unthinkable possibility; he is a truly trained athlete who does not entertain defeat for any amount of time. Entertain defeat for too long and it becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy. The final 5 minutes reveal the mindset of winners. The team that comes from behind; they refuse to lose. Paul knows that it is possible, but he will do everything to disallow failure. This is the only attitude to have. We see it all the time in high and low places. There is still that possibility of failure for any believer who is not disciplined. Paul will not beat the air in futility; but he will beat his own body into submission to the plan of God. He will use the self-discipline necessary to live the Christian way of life.

The Corinthians have failed to rebound, they have failed to advance, they have failed in self-discipline. They have to rebound and begin to advance. That should be their goal, and that is the first thing that they must do. One step at a time. Discipline, filling of the Holy Spirit, advance in the spiritual life; you grow a little and you can utilize a little more self-discipline; growth and self-discipline go hand-in-hand. As we develop more self-discipline, we grow, and as we spiritually advance, we develop more self-discipline. A self-discipline failure in the spiritual life is a failure in rewards. This is why Paul can't fail.

In context, this negative possibility has a nasty little word that Paul uses here: adokimos (αδοκιμος) [pronounced ah-doh-kee-moss], which means to be disqualified, disapproved. Paul is preaching doctrine and the gospel; so it can't be that he is failing to perform his spiritual service; he is fulfilling his Apostolic mission. There can be a failure even when the believer is advancing. Paul is moving down the track.

What is it that disqualifies even when a believer performs service for the Lord? Paul is disqualified when he runs without God's system of training. He runs, but operates in carnality. The one who is not filled with God the Holy Spirit, is the loser; he runs, but he is spinning his wheels. He is racing, but he fails. Service alone is not the spiritual life. The fact that we witness for the Lord Jesus Christ does not mean we are living the spiritual life. The spiritual life is spirituality + advancing spiritually + building the edification complex. All of this ends up being effective service. The self-discipline involves winning, which is a constant battle; a constant battle which goes on inside of us. We fight this war every moment of our lives. Sometimes you win and sometimes you lose.

The filling of the Holy Spirit is beating that body; it is beating it into submission. When the believer runs in carnality, he can never be a winner.

We need to stay in fellowship. One or two decisions. When the believer is in the race as a carnal believer, the outcome is always a negative. Growth means more time in fellowship. The keep moving is all about moving in spiritual advance. The more we keep moving, the greater our spiritual advance. If we do this, we are running the race inside the parameters set by God. We will cross the finish line; one way or another, we will get there. The believer is disqualified for reward; a loser, because he produces nothing but human good. Winners are made in self-discipline to live the spiritual life. The grace of God is the most wonderful thing that we have. Every moment of our life; efficacious grace, living grace, dying grace. In order to use this, we must exert some self-discipline. It all depends upon the grace of God, but we have a part in it. Just like an athlete in training. All the things they needed were provided for them.

1Cor. 9:27b ...so that, after preaching to others, I myself should not be disqualified.

The first 13 verses continue the thought that self-discipline is involved in living the spiritual life, just as athletes need it.

Introductory Points for 1Cor. 10:1–13

1. Metabolizing doctrine requires self-discipline. We must focus, we must think. There is gap.
2. Living the spiritual life requires self-control; they go together.
3. Rebound is a part of this self-discipline.
4. The discipline of coming to Bible class on a consistent basis. It is the only way to maintain momentum for spiritual advance.
5. The discipline of application of doctrine to the circumstances of life. The first 5 verses of 1Cor. 10 are amazing. The Corinthians still don't get it; for 40 years they don't apply it. Seeing it over and over again, and they don't get it and they don't apply it. If you don't focus and you don't concentrate, and you lose.

6. The application of doctrine to the spiritual circumstances of life. The discipline of prayer and witnessing on a regular basis. This is the most powerful weapon imaginable. We can speak to the Lord as a royal priest, and He will answer our prayers every single time, provided that we are in fellowship. We may not know what the answer is or we may not like the answer, but God answers every prayer. It takes discipline to do this. Prayer should be a habit. Self-discipline becomes a habit. It is something that we do over and over on a recurring basis.
7. Self-discipline is a prerequisite for a believer to be a winner. Without, we will not be a winner and run the race. We need the discipline in training.

In these verses, Paul uses another illustration to reenforce self-discipline. Also a defense against reversionism. He used athletics in chapter 9, and he uses an equally effective illustration in chapter 10: the history of the Jews and his sojourn in the desert.

Bobby thinks back on Bob's teaching of Exodus; how could they see all of these miracles and still fall apart again and again? They focused only on self, but not on self-discipline. They are a history of spiritual losers. Paul will draw the Corinthians a graphic picture of what they are.

1Cor. 10:1

Lesson #512

Thursday March 29, 2007

It requires self-discipline to serve the Lord and to listen to doctrine. It also requires self-discipline to have a prayer life; the Christian life mandates that we pray without ceasing. This does not mean that you pray without taking a break; you pray consistently, even if it is 5 minutes a day. That is a summation of 1Cor. 9.

Paul uses an equally effective metaphor to show how disastrous are the consequences of failing to be a winner. The Exodus generation is a handbook of losers as well as a handbook of the consequences, as well as a handbook of God's patience with us. If God can be patient with them, then we have a chance. There are many examples of divine providence in the exodus generation.

They followed after Moses to the Land of Promise; so we follow our Lord after believing in Him. Consequences are dire; it is all about self-discipline. It is not a land of milk and honey; and it is not a piece of real estate; the promised land for us is the supergrace life leading to rewards. What better group of losers to hold up to the Corinthians and reveal to them, what a bunch of losers these men are; yet God was patient and gracious. Nothing must deter us from our spiritual advance. God will always provide for us; we must provide the self-discipline and the positive volition.

God's Blessing Upon the Exodus Generation

1. Israel experienced great blessings from God right from the beginning. God said right from the beginning, "I will bless you." God promised them a king and a nation and.

2. They all experienced the miraculousness of the shekinah Glory. God was with them every step of the way. They had the temerity to ask, "Is God with us?" God gave them directions; they had the divine GPS.
3. They were brought through the Red Sea, experiencing divine deliverance. They also saw the army of their enemies obliterated in seconds. God will return at a future time and destroy Israel's enemies.
4. God demonstrated logistical grace as He fed them every day on manna.
5. God continued to supply them with the greatest commodity of the desert: water. For that large of a group traveling through the desert, they were never without.
6. All of these incidents are an example of the faithfulness of His people. Israel viewed His grace on a daily basis, and they still fell into reversionism. The Shekinah Glory was visible every day. God's grace was abundant every step of the way. Yet, their failure was exemplified by the idolatry of the golden calf. While Moses is getting all the laws for this new nation, they were melting down gold to make a calf to worship. There were only two men who saw, understood and believed the promises of God: Moses and Joshua, and their families. God blessed them despite all the losers that were there. Bobby uses the expression Generation X.

This is to show us that we could end up as losers. We are to remember the lessons of self-discipline that we have learned because we are now going to make application. We must follow His Word of maturity into our Land of Promise.

Bobby reads the first 4 verses of 1Cor. 10: I want you to know, brothers, that our fathers were all under the cloud, and all passed through the sea, and all were baptized into Moses in the cloud and in the sea, and all ate the same spiritual food, and all drank the same spiritual drink. For they drank from the spiritual Rock that followed them, and the Rock was Christ.

γὰρ τῆλῳ οὐ = I do not desire [this for you] with the present active infinitive of ἀγνοεῶ = to be ignorant, to not know. . We get the word agnostic from this word. Rom. 1:13 11:25 2Cor. 1:8 and other places where Paul uses this phrase. These are standard words which have a standard meaning. This phrase is used for emphasis. Like I can't believe it!

Paul is emphasizing knowing and applying the principles of the Old Testament. All of the Old Testament narratives have great meaning and application today. The Exodus generation supplies a vast number of them. It was actually rare when Israel followed the mandates of the spiritual life. Inevitably, they went back to what the exodus generation did. What we will see is God being faithful to one of the most carnal and reversionistic generations of believers. God will discipline us in our carnality; we will get spanked. He did it to the Exodus generation over and over again, until they died the sin unto death.

Our fathers were all is a lot packed into one little phrase; this refers back to all of the Jews. It is interesting that Paul says this to Corinthians who are, for the most part, Gentiles. They are Greeks. They were not actually the progeny of Jewish people. How is Paul relating the church to Israel.

This statement is a distinction between dispensationalism and covenant theology

Bobby took a course on continuity and discontinuity of Israel.

1. Is this just a spiritual analogy? Is it a comparison for doctrinal purposes?
2. Does this verse constitute proof that the church is now spiritual Israel? Are we now spiritual Israel?
3. Are the our fathers here our fathers in the spiritual sense? This is a debated question.
4. Is Israel now defunct? Are they gone? Has the church inherited the promises of God. Do the promises of God now belong to the church, which used to belong to Israel? This is all tied up with so many things: the future, how Jesus is involved with the Church and with Israel.

The Church and Israel; the eschatology of the Church and Israel; and the hermeneutics involved. These are all key topics.

The Church and Israel both look to Jesus Christ for salvation in all dispensations. Dispensationalists do not have two sets of salvation. Salvation is the same in every dispensation. No works, no nothing else. The Law never saved anyone in Israel. This is a continuity which runs throughout the entire Bible. Israel knows Him as Y<sup>e</sup>howah, who was manifest in the cloud and the pillar of fire and the burning bush.

What about beyond the generational aspect? What is the difference between believers in the Old Testament, New Testament, Millennium and in the Tribulation? God's plan works itself out in a number of different ways. Are the Church and Israel separate dispensations or do we, as the church, succeed Israel? The Apostle Paul is the major teacher of Church Age doctrine, teaches what? And has God now taken away the status and promises and given them to the Church? Is this why Paul makes this statement, that our fathers are Jews.

1Cor. 10:1 I want you to know, brothers, that our fathers were all under the cloud, and all passed through the sea,

1Cor. 10:1 (Dispensations)

Lesson #513

Sunday 1 April 1, 2007

1Cor. 10:1–4: I want you to know, brothers, that our fathers were all under the cloud, and all passed through the sea, and all were baptized into Moses in the cloud and in the sea, and all ate the same spiritual food, and all drank the same spiritual drink. For they drank from the spiritual Rock that followed them, and the Rock was Christ. Jesus Christ is the 2nd member of the Trinity, the manifested God of Israel, the Shekinah Glory; He is the member of the Trinity who has been seen throughout history.

When we return with the Lord Jesus Christ, we will see Him destroy all the armies of the earth which are bent on the destruction of Israel. This foreshadows that incident.

God prepared Moses for 40 years in the desert to lead the children of Israel out of Egypt. The Jews were said to be baptized into Moses; they were identified with him, as a mediator. This is one of the many illustrations which foreshadowed our Lord. Manna also is an illustration; and the Jews are told how much to gather. V. 4 refers to the never-ending supply of water from the rock. This water was supplied by a rock, which followed them for 40 years? All of these illustrations serve as examples. They are examples of the faithfulness of God. Jesus Christ is always faithful; and these verses are illustrations of His faithfulness. Time and time again, despite God's personal presence, the Jews went on negative. They failed to trust Him even though He was always manifested to them. And daily, they criticized Him. They saw it, they visualized Him, and they never trusted. The Corinthians are some of the worst Christians in the early days of the church. Paul parallels this exodus generation with these Corinthians.

The Corinthians needed these illustrations to see themselves from divine viewpoint. This is a great passage which allows the integrity and the faithfulness of God to come through. It shows them how easy it would be for them to make corrections.

We are comparing Old Testament Israel and the church of the New Testament. So, we need to know where we stand. I want you to know, my brothers, that our fathers [Old Testament saints] were... Now, there were a few Jewish believers in Corinth; but, for the most part, these are Gentiles. How and why are these Jews our fathers. We may not want to claim them, by the way.

Old Testament Scriptures relate to us the miserable failures of these two generations over and over again. Because of these failures, did God abandon them? Did He transfer the promises made to the Jews to us? Have we replaced Israel in the plan of God? After the promises which God made to Israel transferred over to us. This will affect how we live our lives, and how we are to understand much of the Bible. This is a controversy of great importance; and the accurate interpretation of Scripture is involved. Dispensational versus Covenant Theology. Dispensational theology keeps Israel and the Church distinct. We are both people of God, but different. Covenant theology blends these together, making the church spiritual Israel. One becomes the other. Berachah is a Dispensational church.

Dispensation

1. A dispensation is a period of human history.
2. To the Dispensationalist, history is a sequence of consecutive eras, and God administers each era in slightly different ways.
3. The Age of the Gentiles: from the creation of Adam to Moses and the Exodus.
4. At the Exodus of Israel, we begin the Age of Israel. This runs to the birth of Jesus Christ.
5. The Age of the Hypostatic Union: the birth of Jesus Christ until the day of Pentecost, when the Holy Spirit descended upon the believers of that time.

6. Eschatological dispensations: the Tribulation, the Millennium and the Eternal State.
7. The divisions that we make can vary; but there is one distinction which much remain: Israel and the Church must always be seen as distinct.
8. Unique characteristics and commonality. Continuity and discontinuity of these dispensations.
9. Defined in terms. Age of the Hypostatic Union; the revelation of God is in the person of Jesus Christ. A very short dispensation.
10. Each reflects certain details of the unfolding of God's plan for mankind. Each has a unique quality or qualities.
11. The dispensations constitute the divine viewpoint of history. Millions of volumes of history written by man with all kinds of angles, interpretations and facts. Only 2 divine viewpoint of history, under the title of history.
12. Covenant theology does not distinguish between the Church and Israel.
13. Dispensations is a method for interpreting. There is a science of interpreting the Scriptures and this has a great to do with understanding what is going on.
14. We need to know where we stand in relationship go. Is this a simple analogy or are our fathers an indication that we are now spiritual Israel?

After salvation what? This is a very complex subject. The church has not replaced Israel in the plan of God. Paul's statement here does not convert promises to Israel over to us. God does not change any of His promises

The Abrahamic Covenant

1. The Abrahamic Covenant (God's treaty with Abraham) will be literally fulfilled, even those aspects which have not yet been fulfilled. The land promise. The Jews have never received all of the land which God promised. The national promise, in the reign of the Messiah. There is a future for Israel based upon the Abrahamic covenant.
2. The promise to Abraham is an eternal covenant, and to his spiritual heirs. Bobby is talking about Israel; Jews. Gen. 17:7, 13, 19 1Chron. 13:15–19 the promise to Abraham is to the Jews. Abraham is a regenerate Jew.
3. This is an unconditional promise; it goes to Israel, no matter how many times Israel fails. Israel failed again and again, and God is still faithful. If we are to forgive our enemies 70x7 times, shouldn't God hold to this same standard? Recall that God is not like Global warming alarmists; God lives by His own standards.
4. The Old Testament Age of Israel has been interrupted by the Church Age. Its rejection of Christ meant that there were be a period of time when these can be fulfilled. There will be a fulfillment of God's promise to David and to Abraham.

1Cor. 10:1 I want you to know, brothers, that our fathers were all under the cloud, and all passed through the sea,

We are essentially studying our fathers were all. This is an important distinction. Bobby went to a Dispensational seminary. Interpretation of Scripture had unity and continuity in a theology which stressed in continuity. Bobby went to a Chicago seminary later and there were all different kinds of teachers, who taught every different kind of approach. People came out more confused than when they went in. Dispensationalism gives us a overall structure with which to hold things together. Israel had a specialized priesthood. This is not dry theology, but it is critical to our understanding as to what our place is in the plan of God. Scope of dispensations followed. The Tribulation and the Millennium are a resumption of the Age of Israel. God is incapable of taking back his promises; He is immutable. His promises will never change. God promised Abraham a great nation and blessing; that he would be a blessing to all the people of the earth. I will curse them who curse you. We have iron-clad promises made to us as Israel had. Israel is still a separate entity and that God has not abandoned Israel. However, Israel is no longer the focus of the plan of God nor is it a client nation (although, I imagine that speculatively, it could be?). At the rapture of the church, when the trumpet sounds, and we meet the Lord in the air and are ever with the Lord, the Age of Israel resumes. To understand the book of Daniel, we need to understand Old and New Testament prophecy. The dividing line between the tribulation and the Millennium is the 2nd Advent. The 1st Advent was His birth, death, resurrection and ascension. Then He will establish the great Millennial kingdom which He promised David.

The Millennium is the subject of some very interesting theology.

Post-Millennialism: There is a group who think that they can bring on the Millennium by changing the environment that they live in. They think they can bring it on themselves; Christ returns after we set up Millennial conditions. Post-millennialists. Once the throne of God is established at the 2nd advent, the Lord Jesus Christ will reign over His people Israel for 1000 years. We cannot bring His reign in. The time of the Millennium has already been determined by God, and it does not depend upon us.

We will not be here for the Tribulation; we will be removed from the earth before this occurs. We will not have to see that; it will be the Age of Israel; the church will be absent from the earth. We do return with the Lord Jesus Christ at the end of these 7 years, but the kingdom belongs to Israel, and it is the kingdom which fulfills God's promises to Abraham and to David.

The Abrahamic Covenant is the national and land promises made to Abraham and his descendants forever. The Davidic covenant is God's promise to David that his greater son would reign forever.

In covenant theology, the promises are directed toward spiritual Israel, which gives us a whole different view of the Church and Israel. God does not play with words. He is not a double-talker. God means what He says when He says it. What He communicated to Abraham and to David is backed by His character; his promises cannot be revoked or changed. A king and the laws made by a king seen as divine cannot withdraw a law, as we saw in the Book of Esther. How can God do any less? His promises are iron-clad. The regenerate Jew will inherit the Abrahamic and Davidic covenants. Israel falls under these unconditional covenants and cannot be removed. Spiritual birth is necessary in order to be included in this covenant. Rom. 9:6: they are not all Israel who are descended from Israel. Some people have understood this in very strange ways; particularly anti-Semites. They do not understand that God has a future planned for Israel. Some of Israel have believed in Jesus Christ, and some have not. Regenerate Israel receives the promise. The covenant to Israel contains the anti-Semitism clause: “I will curse those who curse you.” This applies to regenerate and unregenerate Jews; even if you made some rationalization that the Jews today are not the Jews of the kingdom, you will be cursed for hurting them. Look at the Arab world today; they are in complete disarray; they are anti-Semitic to the core. When you see one Muslim blow up another Muslim, recall, “I will curse them who curse you.” When we don't stand on Israel's side, the curse will be upon us. Don't play semantics with God and don't try to outsmart God and define Jews in some way to be mean toward them. The curse of anti-Semitism can be leveled to you just as easily as it is leveled against any Arab.

The unconditional covenants of the Old Testament have not been transferred over to the church. We cannot exclude Israel from an eternal future.

Interpreting Our Fathers from 1Cor. 10:1

1. Our fathers addressed to Gentile and Jewish believers in the church is an historical illustration.
2. This is a comparative illustration, setting up a comparison between the church and Israel. Why would he want to confuse us? This is for the purpose of applying certain doctrinal principles applicable to all dispensations and not changes in God's promises.
3. This is a dire warning to Church Age believers. It does not announce a replacement of Israel by Church Age believers.
4. Each dispensation has its own role to play in God's plan. One does not usurp or supercede the other. This introduces an illustration of doctrinal principles. The Exodus generation is our example of what not to do. It warns each one of us what to do. We have a unique spiritual life, but we can falter and fail like the Exodus generation did. We can do the same thing. The church is unique among all dispensations; we have a set of invisible assets and equal privileges and equal opportunity. Race and gender are not issues. Exclusive Aaronic priesthood replaced by the universal priesthood. The Law of Christ replaces the Mosaic Law, which was pioneered by the Lord Jesus Christ during the previous dispensation. Given all of these unique assets, we can be as big a failure as the idiots in the Exodus generation. How on earth could they see the miracles and the visualization and still be the miserable failures that they were? Same as we can hear doctrine day after day and go negative toward it. How can we complain day after day that the plan of God isn't giving us what we want? These Jews blamed God for every thing, until their bones were bleached in the desert; the sin unto death. When we see their failures, we will begin to say, better watch what we do. We have been given so much and to whom much is given, much is expected.

Being under the cloud means that the Jews were guided by a cloud in the Exodus generation. There was this daily guidance. This was not a beautiful cloud to look at; this was the very presence of God, guiding them and leading them through the desert. Ex. 13:21–22: And the LORD went before them by day in a pillar of cloud to lead them along the way, and by night in a pillar of fire to give them light, that they might travel by day and by night. The pillar of cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night did not depart from before the people. Divine viewpoint is our life; we must think with the mind of Christ. God was right in front of them, and they completely forgot about it. Just as we have the Word of God in front of us, and then we walk out of church and forget about it. We will see a blinded people right in front of us. Jesus Christ made it clear to everyone Who He was; and still, people would not believe. Do you think you want or need God in front of you in order to believe? Num. 14:14: and they will tell the inhabitants of this land. They have heard that you, O LORD, are in the midst of this people. For you, O LORD, are seen face to face, and your cloud stands over them and you go before them, in a pillar of cloud by day and in a pillar of fire by night. While the cloud stood over them, they saw Him eye to eye. The cloud and the pillar of fire marked the presence of God, the visible Shekinah glory among His people. How Christ manifested himself and His presence was in the flesh, among His own people, God of the Universe in one person forever. He is present with us and He lives in us. This is the same glory which was in the pillar of fire or the cloud by day. Glorify God in your bodies; from us comes the glory of the Shekinah. Serving the Lord glorifies God. Dispensation continuity/discontinuity. The thread of Jesus Christ throughout history. He does it in different ways, and yet His is always there. We have it all; will we be the exodus generation or will we be Joshua and Caleb, the only two who came into the Land of Promise from gen X. They saw it and believed it, and that is all it takes. We have even more than Israel has.

1Cor. 10:1 The Will of God

Lesson #515

Wednesday April 4, 2007

No believer should ever be ignorant of doctrinal principles; ignorance of doctrine neutralizes us as believers in Jesus Christ. We have no hope without living the life that God has designed for us. We must understand God's word in order to determine what our obligation to the Lord is. We have the obligation to serve Him in the way that He would have us. Unless we know from ἐπίγνωσις doctrine, we will not be able to serve Him to the maximum. Ignorance is destruction. Most of the Corinthians fell under the category of ignorance. Paul has written the first 9 chapters to try to keep them from being ignorant, so now Paul will give them an analogy of folly. He wants to jerk them up and say, "I want you to see the path that you are going down." If we are lacking in certain areas, then we need to make corrections; and the Word of God will help us in this way. In essence, we will put ourselves in the shoes of those in the exodus generation. Gen. x was a generation of losers; and we can compare ourselves to them and determine whether or not this is what we are.

Paul opens the Old Testament analogy by first citing the subject of the analogy. He calls the Exodus generation our fathers. He is not implying that these believers at Corinth are genetic progeny of those from the Old Testament. Nor, does he mean in the spiritual sense that the Abrahamic covenant is now bestowed upon these people. It was a promise; a great promise; a promise of a nation and of progeny which would cover the earth; a promise of a land that would be their own. So now he calls these Corinthian believers the progeny, but as believers; but not as replacements for Israel. Dispensationalism is the only correct way to divide the Word of Truth. Hence, we have a distinctive between Israel and the church.

Israel failed over and over again. These exodus complainers are the epitome of failure. We are the recipient of this analogy. The Old Testament has some of the greatest principles of doctrine and what the Lord has provided.

This is a comparison set up to compare believers in the Age of Israel to believers in the Church Age. Israel still remains a part of the plan of God, even though, at this point the church is functioning, and Israel is on the sidelines.

The cloud marked the presence of God Who guided Israel through the desert. This cloud is an example of the Shekinah Glory. This would be the 2nd person of the Trinity, Jesus Christ, our Savior. It is a fact that the Lord Jesus Christ is present. He has a presence in every dispensation. Under a cloud represents His visible presence. He also has a visible presence as the God-man. Shekinah in the flesh. Jesus Christ now has an indivisible presence in us. It is real, but invisible.

Col. 1:27: To them God chose to make known how great among the Gentiles are the riches of the glory of this mystery, which is Christ in you, the hope of glory. The key to the spiritual life in the Church Age is mystery doctrine, the very doctrine which Paul is teaching. Christ in you is the key here. Bobby's professor argued with him about the meaning here; saying the Holy Spirit in us is what is meant by Christ in you. Jesus Christ indwells our body. Christ in you, the hope of glory. We reflect God's glory; Israel saw the Shekinah glory; but the Shekinah glory dwells within us. A distinctive of the Church Age is Jesus Christ indwelling in us.

It is incredible that the God of the universe, the One leading Israel in the wilderness, the One Who died for us, now lives in us. It is a great concept, understand the progression of Jesus Christ throughout history.

The meaning of this life is to glorify the Person Who dwells in us. Jesus Christ indwells us just like the Holy Spirit. We all know that God is omnipresent a characteristic of Him. However, in this context, God has a very specialized presence. With Israel and on this earth, and now in us.

Num. 12:5: And the LORD came down in a pillar of cloud and stood at the entrance of the tent and called Aaron and Miriam, and they both came forward. This is where the Shekinah met with Israel. Num. 12:6–8: And he said, "Hear my words: If there is a prophet among you, I the LORD make myself known to him in a vision; I speak with him in a dream. Not so with my servant Moses. He is faithful in all my house. With him I speak mouth to mouth, clearly, and not in riddles, and he beholds the form of the LORD. Why then were you not afraid to speak against my servant Moses?" Moses did not look upon God Himself; Moses looked upon some form of God. We don't know what the form was, but Moses was face to face with God in this way.

The Ark of the Covenant, and at the top was the Mercy Seat. Above the Mercy Seat, the Lord met with Israel. The Ark was where the yearly sprinkling of blood occurred, in the Holy of Holies. The ritual blood was sprinkled; His presence was foreshadowed. What more evidence did Israel need to have to know that God was with them. If ever a people had a reason to believe that their salvation was secure, it was these people who observed the presence of God on a regular basis.

Once God delivered Israel out of slavery, then they left and walked right smack dab into the Red Sea. Then they watched the water separate and they walked through, and then they saw the waters come in on Pharaoh and his army. This shows that God takes care of us in every possible way. This is logistical grace. God had provided for the crossing of the Red Sea, and He provides for our crossing of the Red Sea as well. His presence and His guidance is no less real, even though we do not see the same things that He did. They saw two walls of water held up while they walked through. What we have is no less real; they got a visual representation, but we have a greater opportunity and a greater power within us. This is a principle of divine guidance. The cloud which guided them is a picture of the divine guidance of our Lord. This is a clearly revealed illustration of the will of God and that we advance in His plan. He provides everything for us in order to advance.

Divine Guidance and the Will of God for us

1. There are 3 types of divine will: directive will of God (which is the desire of God); these are commands and prohibitions. Num. 22:12—do this, but don't do that.
2. Permissive will of God. This is what God allows to happen. He has given us free will; we make choices, and God permits these choices, even when they are detrimental and destructive. Num. 22:20. Israel had to decide to walk through the Red Sea; you may think twice about walking through that. Israel had to make that choice. It probably was not as easy as it sounds. They may have feared the water more than they feared the chariots behind them. They had to trust God at this point. They had to trust God that He would hold back the water and leader them through this. There are some who know, more or less, what God is going to do for us, but we still have doubts and we don't trust Him. We will see, at the end of the day, that the Lord works in marvelous ways. There is a trust and a faith rest involved in all of this. God has done this before. We do not need to have a moment's doubt, as Israel has pointed the way for us. It is God's will that we make these decisions. Israel had to cross the Red Sea but once, but we have to cross it daily.

3. The overruling will of God. Jesus Christ controls history; Num. 23. Israel as a nation will survive to spite the nations in that region. The Jews will survive; Hitler did his best to destroy the Jew; Satan has done all that he could do to destroy them; but they still survive. Caleb and Joshua who came back with the other 10 and said to go forward, they are the only ones to go into the Land of Promise. The promise continues in these two spiritually mature believer. It is because of these two men that Israel continues as a nation.

Be faithful to doctrine and obedient to God's Word, and you cannot lose. As we advance toward spiritual maturity, our nation will be preserved. His plan includes us as a believer. If only one person marches forward as per God's plan, and the nation will continue. The will of God; he has a plan for us. Paul gives us a history lesson here. Each one of us makes a difference; each one of us. Our relative intelligence is not the issue. We all have equal privilege and equal opportunity to be Caleb or Joshua.

Divine Guidance 1Cor. 10:1

Lesson #516

Thursday April 5, 2007

The Sinai is not a vast desert. The Jews made it to the Land of Promise in a year, but they spent about 40 years in the desert. God's intention and desire was to lead them directly into the promised land. All they had to do was to follow.

In every dispensation, there is revelation and divine guidance for the believers of that generation. It is always there. He would have guided them into the promised land and He guides us into spiritual maturity. Paul uses what God did for Israel to illustrate what He will do for us today. This is an illustration of divine guidance for us. It can come in positive and in negative ways. It is a warning for us not to disregard His guidance.

The Doctrine of Divine Guidance and the Will of God for Us

1. 3 categories of God's will:
  - a. Directive will = desire of God for each individual; at that time, it was for the nation Israel. This includes all of the mandates and prohibitions of Bible doctrine. 2Peter 3:9: the Lord is not slack in the way that some count slackness; He is not willing that any should perish, but that all should be brought to a knowledge of the truth.
  - b. God's permissive will; God allows our free will; the sovereignty of God and the free will of man coexist in human history. God permits the believer to make decisions apart from His plan. He still provides guidance. No question that God gave Israel guidance, and God had to keep bringing Israel back. Part of God's permissive will is that we get back on track, and there is sometimes pain involved.

c. The overruling will of God. Jesus Christ controls history. God allows the free will of man; but, at the same time, He works circumstances in human history so that His overall will and plan will be accomplished. There were visual principles of doctrine: the cloud, the water, the pillar of fire. There were alternatives: the will of God and the other was what He allowed them to do. Even in their final failure in Kadesh Barnea, God continued to work through Israel in order to fulfill His plan, despite their amazing failures. In spite of them ignoring His guidance.

2. There are mandates under the directive will of God. You must know the will of God. One of Paul's key phrases: don't be ignorant. Grow spiritually. 2Peter 3:18: Grow in the grace and knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ. If you don't advance, then you are retreating. Thirdly, you must submit to the will of God. You must stay within the directive will of God's plan.

3. What are the questions we must ask ourselves in order to ascertain the will of God for us. The doctrine of divine guidance is a very basic doctrine. When you hear doctrine, basic or otherwise, it matters at what stage of growth that you are at as to whether or not you get these doctrines. As a more mature believer who piles doctrine on doctrine, then it takes on a whole new meaning once you have become more mature. There are more points of application as you grow spiritually. How do we figure out what He wants us to do. Usually, shortly after they become a believer. After salvation, the spiritual life.

a. What does God want you to think? The viewpoint will of God. Obviously, God wants us to think divine viewpoint. This simply means Bible doctrine; the mind of Christ in your soul. Bible doctrine in our soul guides our decisions. Every decision that we make comes directly from an application of doctrine in our soul. God permits us to do certain things; and he desires that we grow. He wants us to conform more and more to His directive will. It is really not that hard to understand.

b. What does God want us to do? What is the operational will of God? What is His individual plan for us. It is everything that He wants us to do or not to do. This includes several operational techniques; we cannot glorify God without rebound. We are not empowered without Bible doctrine. There are many things beyond this, like occupation with Christ. When we think with the mind of Christ, when we have a personal sense of destiny, when we have spiritual self-esteem, we have there greatest guidance that we could possibly have in this life. There are services like prayer and witnessing. The requirements for doing His will. Know, grow and submit. Volition is always involved in the operational will of God. Our part and His part.

c. Where does God want me to be? We can operate and follow the mandates, and we can think; but there is also a place where God wants us to be. That is the geographical will of God. Many decided that they should be in Houston in Berachah. This cannot be considered apart from His operational will and His directives. Sometimes the overruling will of God places us where we should be. Jonah is an example of someone who went one way when God wanted him elsewhere, and God's overruling will put him in Nineveh.

Acts 16:7 is also God's overruling will, where Paul was to go to Philippi. Many places where we can go.

- d. Some 19th century examples in the great missionary movements. Much was centered in the British Empire and in the US. David Livingston planned to go to China, and he had a great desire to go there; but England and China were in the Opium Wars at that time. So, he could not go to China. He went to Africa instead and was one of the great missionaries there. Adiniram Judson wanted to go to India, and he felt that God wanted him there. When he got to Bombay, they would not let him off the ship, so he ended up in Burma instead and he did a great work there instead. Think of the great, catastrophic events of our life, and they often lead to geographical moves. In the plan and will of God, these events often end up being the best things that could happen to us. All of us would like to pick where God wants us to be; being on the beach somewhere we figure might be the perfect place for us to live the Christian life; however, God chooses and we must find it out. Many ended up in Houston, and there is no greater place for us to be than Houston. Bobby has lived in Oregon and Georgia and other places which are much nicer than Houston; but Houston is the geographical will of God for him.
4. The mechanics of divine guidance. This is the story of Acts 11.
    - a. Guidance through prayer; Acts 11:5 ask God for guidance and be prepared for an answer, because we will get one. It will happen, maybe sooner and maybe later.
    - b. Guidance through the right lobe of the soul. Acts 11:6 Think about your options; don't just plow mindlessly through your life. Think about it with divine viewpoint. You can apply doctrine to yourself ad infinitum. God has an operational and geographical plan for us. It is easy for us to opt for a better place to live, even when we have no reason to go there—except for our own gratification. Don't pick up and charge here or there; wait and grow. Stay in His operational will, and God will move us. Make doctrine your priority and this whole issue will be clear.
    - c. Guidance through God's Word. If His Word is in our right lobe, then we are guided through that. You're not going to hear the direct voice of God Himself. This little voice that comes to them, and such a thing trumps Bible doctrine. "God told me to do it, so I can do whatever I want." People use this all the time. We are not guided through dreams, through Theophanies, through audible sounds. We have God's Word in writing. We do not need extra-Biblical information; we don't need secret codes or latter day prophets. What about revelation? If the code agrees with Scripture, why do you need it? And if it does not agree with Scripture, then it is wrong. There is no new revelation under the sun. Do not entertain those who say they have something which is a little more than the Scripture. Acts 11:7–10
    - d. Guidance through providential circumstances. Acts 11:11 God molds events to guide us in our lives. We need to understand what these circumstances mean in our life. Nothing in our life is an accident; all of it is to further our spiritual growth. There is not one incident in our life which is by chance. The more we apply doctrine, the further along that we go. The more doctrine that we use, the stronger we get in it. We must be sensitive. This requires thought, the mind of Christ and prayer. Circumstances can sometimes be deceptive. You may be confused as to why are you in the mess that you are in. Some are for testing and some are for growth and some are for guidance.

- e. Guidance through the filling of the Holy Spirit. He is our mentor; He teaches us doctrine. Acts 11:12 the filling of the Holy Spirit versus the old sin nature in our souls.
  - f. Guidance through comparison of events. Acts 11:13–15 Which event and circumstance conforms to the plan of God. Prayer is also the key in all of this. Certain events are turning points in our life. Sometimes hard knocks make big changes in our life; and they are meant for our guidance, operationally and geographically. Look at the most traumatic events and notice where they led you.
  - g. Guidance through recalling Scripture; the basis of the faith rest drill. You need to know promises in order to apply a rationale. Acts 11:16 This is what Israel failed to do. They could not use faith rest.
5. The course of our life must be determined by understanding God's will and His plan and His guidance. The will of God continues to be manifested day after day after day. Better to know, grow and to submit to His guidance.

Easter Sunday Philip. 3:8–11

Lesson #none

Sunday 1 April 8, 2007

People have an inclination to become deeply involved with the world around them; the astronomer examine the recesses of space; the oceanographer studies the sea; the geologist examines what is below the surface. Botanist study life forms. Every scientist seeks to examine small portions of God's creation. No one knows all the secrets of the universe; no one even knows all there is to know about their field. It is not different in the endeavor to know Jesus Christ. A search for in depth knowledge of our Savior of His Work and of His mind, we should never cease seeking for that knowledge. It is not on the other side of the world, it is not buried in the deep recesses of the ocean, or somewhere out beyond our universe. It is right before us.

Paul expressed his own great longing and desire to know his Savior, and he longed to participate in His death, burial and resurrection. He desired to be better acquainted with the Lord Jesus Christ, even though Paul was the man of doctrine in his lifetime. Yet, Paul wanted to know more.

If we are believers in Jesus Christ, then we have access to the mind of Christ, His Word. And this is eternal life, that they may know You, and the only true God which You have sent. How could we ever complete our knowledge of Jesus Christ? Such knowledge is critical to our faith and the secret of our faith. It is our eternal competence. Paul's longing for this knowledge is expressed in Philip. 3:10: ...that I may know Him... We have many facts about our president; speculation about what he thinks and what he will do. So we all know something about our president; but only a few know him on a personal basis. Most don't know how he thinks or lives or interacts with others. Likewise, some know something about Christ; they know that He lived and that He performed some miracles and that He was brutally rejected and died on the cross. They know all of these facts, but they do not know Him or how He relates to individuals in an interpersonal relationship. Bobby ran into this at seminary about his own father; lots of opinions but few facts. Just as lots have opinions about Jesus Christ, but they generally lack facts and personal knowledge. We can only gain a relationship through understanding the significance of His death and resurrection. We cannot ever initiate our own relationship. God cannot have a relationship or fellowship with those in a sinful state. We are all born with an old sin nature and with Adam's imputed sin, so we can never meet the standards of God's perfect righteousness.

Philip. 3:8–11: Indeed, I count everything as loss because of the surpassing worth of knowing Christ Jesus my Lord. For his sake I have suffered the loss of all things and count them as rubbish, in order that I may gain Christ and be found in him, not having a righteousness of my own that comes from the law, but that which comes through faith in Christ, the righteousness from God that depends on faith-- that I may know him and the power of his resurrection, and may share his sufferings, becoming like him in his death, that by any means possible I may attain the resurrection from the dead.

Jesus Christ is the only one qualified to make such a sacrifice, the Mediator between God and man. The cross of Christ is where we are able to meet God; He took away the sins of the world. Appropriating this work is done simply; believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and you will be saved. That is the message to the unbeliever. One more thing; He lives; Jesus Christ was resurrected after the cross.

Easter Sunday Philip 3:10

Lesson #none

Sunday 2 April 8, 2007

That I may know Him and the power of His resurrection, being conformed to His death. Paul had more knowledge about Jesus Christ than anyone else in history; who met the Lord on the road to Damascus. He understood who Jesus Christ was and had received more doctrine than anyone that has lived; and he still desired to know more. The most important knowledge that we can have is about Jesus Christ, the gospel of Jesus Christ. The grace of God is the overwhelming God which God has for us. His grace provides us everything; His grace provides everything based upon the cross. He bore our sins; we have sinned continually, and He bore those sins. Yet, He went to the cross for us, willingly.

When we accept the free gift of Jesus Christ, then God turns toward us, and we inherit eternal residence. Philip. 3:10–11 we become family members; we at birth became a part of a family, and you may or may not like it, but we are stuck. The moment we believe in Jesus Christ, we are born-again. It is just like physical birth; there is no way to get out of it. It is an eternal family relationship. Paul is ecstatic that he has a part of this royal family.

Once he becomes and we become a member of this royal family, it does not stop there. Paul has the status of family member, but now he needs to know what that means. He will continue to develop an acquaintance with our Lord. Love is the center of a relationship, and Paul wants to know, as should we. A relationship works both ways, and that is what we have as members of a family; and this relationship must be learned.

John 11:25: I am the resurrection and the life; he who believes in Me will live, even if He dies. Jesus Christ knew the purpose of His life and He had no doubt as to what His end would be; and Paul wants to share in this as well. We must also want this knowledge and this assurance. In the Old Testament, David expressed, in poetic terms; Psalm 42:1–2: As the deer pants for the water brooks, so my soul pants for God. When will I go and appear before my God? This is the same knowledge and relationship on Paul's mind when he writes, I long to know Him and the power of His resurrection and the fellowship of His suffering.

We will focus on the power of His resurrection this morning. These words have a power on their own; the only objective source of a resurrection knowledge is Scripture. Only through Scripture can we know this. The resurrection and the power of God cannot be separated. Scripture gives us the scope of the power of God; and only there do we find the resurrection of Jesus Christ. The Bible is the only place where we learn that there is a power which conquers the grave. The grave is the final resting place. The Bible reveals to us how we may share in the power of God and in resurrection and victory over death. Oh death, where is your victory; O grave, where is your sting? But thanks be to God who gives us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. Victory over death belongs to the resurrection of Jesus Christ; apart from this, death is the master of all human beings.

Blessed be the God and our father of the Lord Jesus Christ. He has caused us to be born again to a living confidence. The reality of the resurrection. The more Bobby knows about Jesus Christ, the more he finds himself being in complete empathy with Paul, and wanting to know the power which goes beyond physical life and death. This is the power which conquers death. Paul's mind did not center on death; his mind is not consumed by death. To live is Christ and to die is profit. Paul had seen death innumerable times, and he, when he wrote Philippians, was under the shadow of death. We may not think about it, we may not want to dwell on it, but it is always there. Paul in this particular moment is focusing on this moment and with great confidence and with great joy and blessing. Paul has victory over death. Paul is interested in life that never ends. For indeed in this house [his body], we groan, longing to be clothed with our dwelling from heaven [the resurrection body which we will have, promised from Jesus Christ because of His resurrection]

What took place with our Lord? He died physically on the cross after saying, Tetelesti in the perfect tense. The work of salvation was completed at that point, and, there was no longer a need for Jesus to remain on this earth. His human spirit went to God the Father (into Your hands I dismiss My spirit) and His soul went into Hades [paradise]. Jesus told the thief, "Today, you will be with Me in paradise." His body went into the ground.

The meaning of death is separation; when we die spiritually, we are separated from our bodies. When our Lord's soul and spirit returned, it was to a resurrected body, although this was a physical body, as Thomas could put his hands where the nail prints and spear hole were. The stone to the tomb was rolled away after Jesus had been resurrected; Jesus walked out of the grave through the stone. At one point, Jesus assembled all the disciples in the Upper Room, and He entered that room without opening the door. A different sort of body. What is the power of the resurrection? We understand what it was, then we can understand what will happen to us. The power of the resurrection is the power of God for the resurrection. No one else has the power over death. No one else has to power to bestow eternal life. Just as the soul and spirit and the new body of the Lord Jesus Christ was risen, every believer will have the same experience and receive the same body at his resurrection. Further, the divine power which raised our Lord from the dead is the same infinite power which raised our Lord from the dead. His body was given power which sustained Him and then raised Him from the dead is also available to every believer. Paul wants to know about this power, because it is his power; Paul can use this same power. This is the filling of the Holy Spirit. Acts 1:8: "You will receive power..." and 10 days later, this power was bestowed upon the Apostles.

For us, it is the identical power that He utilized which is inherent to our Christian way of life. It is our infinite empowerment for the Christian way of life. This was the very power which made it possible for our Lord to be raised from the dead. The background is all in Philip. 3:10–11. There is no greater power than the power over death.

In the Old Testament, very few people had the power which we have. Moses longed to see the day which we have. We have the divine power which was, before our Lord, not operational on this earth. It was demonstrated in Christ.

Moses pointed his staff toward the Red Sea and the sea parted; he hit the rock with his staff, and water came from the rock.

Bobby has often done funerals in places of death, and he wonders what it would be like if Jesus Christ chose to return at that moment to raise the dead. It would be quite a moment. The shout of the archangel; it will be loud and clear, and the noise will be deafening and those who cannot answer this call will be struck with the intensity of this noise. Every believer will meet the Lord in the air with his resurrection body.

Our eternal future is unimaginable, simply because of the power of the resurrection. It is the knowledge of this power which makes life worth living today.

May climbing be what we always long to do; may we die climbing; may we never waver in our advance to the high ground of spiritual advance, and may we always anticipate the moment of our resurrection.

Philip. 3:8–11: Indeed, I count everything as loss because of the surpassing worth of knowing Christ Jesus my Lord. For his sake I have suffered the loss of all things and count them as rubbish, in order that I may gain Christ and be found in him, not having a righteousness of my own that comes from the law, but that which comes through faith in Christ, the righteousness from God that depends on faith-- that I may know him and the power of his resurrection, and may share his sufferings, becoming like him in his death, that by any means possible I may attain the resurrection from the dead.

Lesson #517

Wednesday April 11, 2007

Paul tells them, “I do not want you to be ignorant” and then he goes back to an event from Exodus.

Paul connects the Corinthians with the first generation of the Age of Israel and the first generation of the Church. As first generations, they have things in common. Israel is not replaced in the plan of God by the church. They are temporarily set aside and Israel is no longer a client nation and no longer a theocracy. However, this analogy links Israel and the church for the purpose of illustrating principles.

This is a way that we can see what losers in the Christian life look like; we can look at the Corinthians and see how we stack up. The cloud was a sign, a sign that God was among and with His chosen people. He was there for them; He was their guide. This cloud is the doctrine of divine guidance for Israel. The Exodus generation had visuals that we can only imagine; but every generation has had a host of visual effects.

The parting of the Red Sea is one of the greatest events of the Old Testament; it stands out as one of the great deliverances of all of human history. God promised Abraham certain things and this was the beginning of the fulfillment of these promises. If ever there was a people who were to know that they were being preserved by God, it was this one.

1Cor. 10:1 I want you to know, brothers, that our fathers were all under the cloud, and all passed through the sea,

The emphasis in this verse, and Moses was brought into the picture. Baptism is an identification or an association between one object or person and another. An actual identification is called a real baptism; a representative identification is a ritual baptism. There are those in the Baptist world who believe that baptism is required. Baptism is a ritual and it is an identification. Water baptism represents that reality of our salvation. Baptized into Moses was a real identification. Moses is identified with the cloud and the sea. Moses was identified with the real presence of the Shekinah of the cloud. The identification here is not the sea water of the Red Sea. This is a real baptism. Baptism here is real and not an immersion. Immersion in this case is only for those who are not identified with God. They will die. Their immersion was deep and they never came up from it. The only wet baptism here is of those who are not saved.

Baptism

1. The baptism takes place here at the Red Sea shortly after leaving Egypt.
2. The baptism connects God, Moses and the children of Israel.

3. Moses led the children of Israel out from Egypt with divine guidance.
4. When Moses said "move out" they moved out; when he said "halt" they stopped.
5. Of all these people in Israel, Moses is the chosen leader. Leaders are responsible to the next highest leader. Moses was stuck with these people for 40 years.
6. Moses was responsible for receiving the divine operations order over and over. Moses had direct contact with God.
7. So Moses was the junior officer; the intermediary between God and the people.
8. Hence Moses was identified with God and the cloud; and the people were identified with Moses

The Jews moved out until they came up to this great barrier. They could not get across it; they could not get to the promised land. They saw the sea and no way to get across. It was beyond their ability and time frame to negotiate this sea.

Pharaoh was sitting on this throne wondering why did he let these Jews go; and the Jews are stuck right at the sea. There were 10 devastating plagues, which caused the Pharaoh to let Moses and the people to go. When someone is arrogant and they want what they want, they forget. They don't think about how they got to where they are.

Ex. 14:3 ...or Pharaoh will say of the people of Israel, 'They are wandering in the land; the wilderness has shut them in.' And I will harden Pharaoh's heart, and he will pursue them, and I will get glory over Pharaoh and all his host, and the Egyptians shall know that I am the LORD." And they did so.

Pharaoh got everyone into chariots and they went off after the Jews. As soon as there was no human way for them to escape this force coming at them. The Jews then did not have any military background. The guidance and the will of God is obvious here.

The Jews looked behind them and they could see all the dust and sand being kicked up by the chariots which were coming for them. The Jews had times to work themselves up into a great fear. The Jews knew the great power of these troops; they had real power and psychological control. These Jews suddenly became victims; they had a massive, collective anxiety attack.

Evangelism by destruction. God wiped Egyptians out so that they would know who God is.

They went into blame mode; the people blamed Moses for what was going on. Before this, things were rosy; now things are crappy. They forgot how they got there; they blamed the leader that they could see. Essentially, although the Jews blamed Moses, they were really blaming God. If something does not go your way, you blame God. They blamed Moses, but they really lacked trust in God. Tremendous irony in all of this. Their fear made them victims of the will of God.

As a believer, we are never a victim; no matter how bad the circumstance, this is a part of God's plan. We are never victims in God's plan. They had a victim attitude. It is the attitude of the loser. When you feel like a victim, then you are a loser. That means no faith rest. No confidence in God's perfect plan for your life. You have just turned over the plan of God to someone else.

Moses calmed these people down enough to speak to them. He spoke a short bit. Moses said to the people, "Do not fear." He told them to stand down; to relax. He told them to pay attention to what God would do. God had promised to bring them to the Land of Promise. With God as their power, there is not a power on earth that could keep them from entering into the land.

"Stand by; watch this, check out the show," Moses tells these people. They can pray; they need to stop panicking; they need to stop whining. David had to recognize "The battle is the Lord's." they are acting as if God took these people out of Egypt just to mess with them.

They needed to keep their eyes on the prize; they needed to pay attention to what God does. Moses statement was strong and effective. In very short order, these Jews would get the illustration of how God will care for His people and w

1Cor. 10:1 I want you to know, brothers, that our fathers were all under the cloud, and all passed through the sea,

Baptisms

1. The baptism here took place with Moses and the cloud.
2. In this baptism (the baptism of Moses), it is an association between things, persons, and/or objects. In this baptism of Moses, there was a chain of identifications.
3. Moses was identified with the cloud and with the Shekineh in the cloud.
4. This identification was with God's chosen leader. He was directly responsible to God as the leader of these people. Moses was up to it.
5. So, the identification was of Moses and his appointed authority and his leadership over Israel. It identified Moses authority in their leadership.
6. Moses was God's man; he was chosen in this mission in guiding Israel to the Land of Promise. He spent 40 years in the wilderness, possibly even the same wilderness, preparing.
7. He received orders directly from God concerning his leadership and guidance. Moses knew what he had to do. He got his direction directly from the throne of grace. Sometimes a junior officer doesn't grasp the reason or meaning for an order or there seems to be a disconnect; however, there was no disconnect with God's orders.

8. Moses passed along these orders to Israel, making him a go-between God and Israel. He was an intermediary.
9. This is why the baptism was into Moses as the leader and the ego-between. The baptism was into Moses as the go-between and not into God.
10. The people were then identified with Moses in this baptism.
11. Moses was identified with God's plan for Israel. The people into Moses and Moses with God's plan.
12. The people are therefore identified with God's plan through Moses. Moses was identified with God, the Shekineh glory. He met Jesus Christ face to face. Moses had direct contact with God; the people were indirectly baptized into God, but through Moses. There is a great analogy here as Jesus Christ being our go-between. All mankind is identified with Jesus Christ in order to have a relationship with God. Moses here acts as a type of Christ.

There are a chain of connections here. Moses stands in the middle. His human leadership is connected to God. God is present in the cloud, as a fulfillment of His promise to Israel. There is also the connection between God and the deliverance of the people. Baptized into Moses and the cloud and the sea. This baptism analogy is a reminder to the Corinthians.

We are identified with the same power in us as Israel had guiding and guarding them in the cloud; it is the same person, Jesus Christ, the Shekineh glory to Israel. Israel did not have this ability. They had no indwelling of the Holy Spirit; what they had was external.

There was one more thing in this analogy; we should consider the failure of the exodus generation. No matter what God did, gen X would fall apart, reject Jesus Christ, and refuse to believe the promises of God. This was the generation that was wiped out in the desert. Their spiritual life was what was the faith rest drill, which was their spiritual walk. All they had to do is trust God. The warning to the Corinthians—do not fail like gen X.

Faith Rest

1. Claim a promise from the Bible. If you have nothing else, pick one promise and claim it periodically. Cast your cares on Him for He cares for you.
2. There are hundreds of promises, and we can use them in a doctrinal rationale. They are all backed by the Word of God. We may not suddenly remember a doctrine, but we can recall a promise from Scripture. There is a promise and we claim that promise; and this promise recalls a doctrine. We continue this logical process until we come to a conclusion. Here is our application. All of this is empowered by God the Holy Spirit. We have the internal power; they only had external power.

3. A promise leads to a rationale. Almost every doctrine is a rationale. The essence of God rationale. We apply some of God's attributes to whatever is going on. We simply recall that we are in the plan of God, and sometimes we need to wait.
4. Rom. 8:31: if God is for us, then who can be against us? Going through this drill takes us to a place where we believe these promises. When we apply this promise, our problems seem to melt away.

At one point, the Jews tried to kill Moses, so that they could elect a leader to take them back to Egypt. God promised Abraham a people, a nation and a future; they heard this over and over again. All they had to do was believe it.

Moses stated this rationale for them, and he stated the application directly to them as they camped at the Red Sea. Ex. 14:13–14: And Moses said to the people, "Fear not, stand firm, and see the salvation of the LORD, which he will work for you today. For the Egyptians whom you see today, you shall never see again. The LORD will fight for you, and you have only to be silent." How easy is this. They can see the results that day; within hours. Moses told them to simply stand by and God would take care of it. The Egyptians were the problem; the Jews could see the dust trail of their chariots coming their way. "You will never see these Egyptians again ever." This is the promise. Then Moses applies it for them, "Shut up and watch what God does." This was the simple application; what could be simpler. At the Red Sea and for the rest of their journey, this is all that they had to do. God had promised them a great land and all they had to do is go there and take it.

2Sam. 17:14: The battle is the Lord's. Bobby wonders how could these people not be able to recall vision of the Red Sea, parting for them; and then closing in on the Egyptian army. A great demonstration of God's power and protection, and they were unable to get it. The blindness and the defiance of reversionism. There were those who saw Jesus Christ and saw Him perform miracles and they still did not believe. No doctrine can pierce their negative volition.
