But before we note the second phase of this particular verse, the exegesis, we have to have an improved translation from the Greek. We begin with the conjunction kai which begins this verse and is used here to emphasise a fact as surprising, noteworthy, and unexpected. So instead of translating it “and” the correct translation should be “Nevertheless.” Next we have a technical idiom for pregnancy, a prepositional phrase which follows the kai: e)n plus the locative of gaster. Gaster means the womb, and it is literally “in the womb.” Next is the present active participle of the verb e)w which means to have. Literally, it is translated “having in the womb.” It is an idiom, however, and it means she was pregnant, “Nevertheless she was pregnant.” The historical present tense views the past event of the virgin birth and its consequences with the vividness of a present occurrence. The historical present is an idiom from the primitive syntax of the Indo-European branch of languages. There was a time when time relations were indicated by the context rather than by inflexions, just like in the Hebrew and other Semitic languages. Hence, there was a time in the Indo-European languages when differentiation between the imperfect and the aorist tenses did not exist. This point of syntax, the historical present, antedates it. This is why we translate a present participle in the past tense. The active voice: under the concept of the double entendre both the virgin Mary and the nation Israel produce the action of the verb.

Because the Jews have rejected the virgin pregnancy of Mary and the virgin birth of Jesus Christ they suffer the birth pangs of a child never born in their thinking. This explains the whole principle of historical holocaust related to Israel.

The participle is a circumstantial participle which is often rendered into the English by a finite verb. Furthermore, the action of the present participle is coterminous with the action of the main verb. The main verb is presented next after a connective conjunction kai. It is the present active indicative of the verb krazw, usually translated to cry or to cry out. It really means to scream or to shriek, “and she screamed.” The present tense is a historical present viewing past holocausts with the vividness of a present occurrence, that same point of pre inflexional Greek syntax; but it is also construed as a futuristic present in that it anticipates the context where the Jews at the end of the Tribulation suffer the greatest wave of anti-Semitism in all history, the super holocaust. The active voice: the emphasis of the verbal entendre now shifts from the virgin Mary to the Jews at the end of the Tribulation who now produce the action under the double entendre. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical as well the eschatological reality plus the sign of the main verb in coterminous action.

Next we have a present active participle of the verb o)dinw, and it means to suffer in labour pains. It means excruciating pain in this case. The present tense is a futuristic present denoting the holocaust at the end of the Tribulation which has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as already occurring. The active voice: the nation Israel under the principle of holocaust produces the action of the verb — the holocaust pregnancy, the pregnancy where the birth pangs continue and are perpetuated all of the way to the second advent and no birth ever takes place. The participle is circumstantial plus the fact that the action of the present participle is coterminous with that main verb, the screaming verb.

Note how the emphasis of the double entendre changes after the second conjunction kai. We go from the historical present to the futuristic present in order to change the emphasis from the first advent of Christ which unbelieving Israel has rejected to the second advent when the Jews are anticipating deliverance. But the unbelieving Jews will never have it. The Tribulation is the period of the greatest holocaust in history; it is, again, the third woe or the seventh trumpet and Satan personally leads the third demon assault army.

So far the translation: “Nevertheless she was pregnant and she screamed, suffering from labour pains.”

Now we have the final kai, translated “and,” plus the present active participle of the verb basanizw which means to torture, to be in excruciating pain. Again, the futuristic present denotes the holocaust at the end of the Tribulation, the future attack on the Tribulation Jews personally led by Satan. The greatest wave of anti-Semitism has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain in thought that it is contemplated as already coming to pass. The passive voice: the Jews of the world in the Tribulation receive the action of the verb and this unmasks the double entendre. The Jews are the products of their own decisions. God gave Israel the fifth cycle of discipline but He does not give them, as a point of discipline, the holocaust. The holocaust is inevitably the result of their own decisions. Regardless of the holocaust, the outbreak of anti-Semitism, the pattern is always the same. First the Jews make a decision from a position of weakness and they reject the sign of the virgin birth. This means they reject Christ as saviour. But it means more than that in the double entendre, it means that the embryo is never delivered. The unbelieving Jew will not, as it were, permit Christ to come from the womb and therefore the mother, Israel, is in great, great pain because there is no delivery, there is no birth. The birth pangs have been going on now for almost two thousand years and there is no delivery. Remember that we are dealing with unbelieving Jews, they are the ones who are the victims; but they are the victims of their own decisions from a position of weakness.

So first of all the Jews make a decision from a position of weakness and enter into a double entendre: Christ is not born, there is no first advent. And a mother who cannot deliver and continues in that state then comes into a situation of great torture, that great pain in the holocaust whenever it occurs.

Secondly, in a decision from a position of weakness they lose control of their lives and as victims of their own bad decisions they suffer the pain, the birth pangs, perpetuated without relief. They become victims of some terrible holocaust.

Thirdly, the holocaust is brought on by their own decisions, and remember the principle that man is the product of his own decisions, not his environment.

This does not mean that we in any way condone any holocaust, far from it. We go back to the Abrahamic covenant. We understand as believers that we are never to contribute in any way to the discomfort of any Jew, or, as a matter of fact, to any race, it is a violation of the doctrine of impersonal love, gate six of the divine dynasphere.

Fourthly, as a result the Jews lose all sense of personal destiny since they cannot relate properly to the Messianic passages of the Old Testament prophets. So they make decisions from a position of weakness, they lose all personal sense of destiny, they have no control over their lives, and with those three factors they are just like a woman who is in a stage of birth pains but can't deliver. The pain goes on but the delivery does not occur. That is the double entendre. The participle is circumstantial.

Next and the final word in verse two is the aorist active infinitive of the verb tiktō which means to give birth, to be delivered. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety: they want it but it doesn't occur; they are looking for the Messiah but He doesn't come. Instead comes some form of a holocaust periodically, whenever there is a collective number of bad decisions resulting in bringing about disaster for themselves. The active voice: the remnant of Jewish believers produce the action of the verb at the second advent, they will be delivered. They will not only be delivered but they will be delivered under the restoration of Israel as a client nation to God, they will pass through the baptism of fire unscathed, they will become the cadre for the population explosion and the client nation Israel in the Millennium, and they will be the beneficiaries of the fulfilment of the unconditional covenants to Israel, the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic, and New covenants. This is the infinitive of conceived result which is assumed as the consequence of the second advent. However, only born-again Jews are delivered at the second advent. Unbelieving Jews follow the analogy of the double entendre. Their unbelief means that Christ was never born, and since Christ was never born they can never be delivered. Inasmuch as Christ is still in the womb they are never delivered as per the analogy to child birth.

Note how the double entendre makes the point in the first phrase and then fades out to give way to the interpretation that Israel in past history and Israel at the end of the Tribulation suffer terribly from anti-Semitism led by Satan. They suffer because they have never given birth to Christ, as it were. They have rejected the sign of the virgin birth, they have rejected the last phrase of something they utter on every Sabbath day: Adonai echad.

Translation of verse 2: "Nevertheless she [a double entendre which includes both the virgin pregnancy of Mary and the holocaust pregnancy of unbelieving Israel] was pregnant, and she [unbelieving Israel of the holocaust pregnancy] screamed, suffering labour pains [the periodic holocausts of history], and she was tortured [the great holocaust at the end of the Tribulation] to give birth [the be delivered from the anti-Semitism by the coming of Messiah].”

The principle

The Jews want the Millennium without the virgin birth. In other words, unbelieving Israel wants the crown without the cross. But the doctrine remains: you cannot have the crown without the cross. You cannot by-pass the cross, you cannot by-pass salvation whether Jew or Gentile. Hence, the analogy between the Jewish holocaust and the torture of the pregnant mother who cannot deliver the child. Israel cannot deliver the child but the child can deliver Israel. The child cannot be born unless the Jews of the Tribulation are born again by faith in Christ. Deliverance comes, first spiritually through regeneration, being born again, before deliverance can come physically for Israel through the wall of fire that protects them to the point of the second advent. The principle always remains: the cross must come before the crown. There is no deliverance for Israel apart from recognition of our Lord's omega glory which starts at the virgin birth. The unbelieving Jews must learn the meaning of the last phrase of Deuteronomy 6:4 — Adonai echad, “our Lord is unique”.

Now we move to the virgin pregnancy. All the cells of the human race are contaminated by the old sin nature, with one exception. Through meiosis and the function of polar body 23 chromosomes are thrown off in the ovum leaving 23 uncontaminated chromosomes in the female ovum prior to fertilisation. This phenomenon in the female is based on the fact that the woman was deceived in the garden. The woman was the only one who took the forbidden fruit from the tree. The only way that man or woman could sin was by an act of volition. There was no immorality in the garden, there was no temptation to any form of sin related to a system of morality. No system of morality existed, everything was perfect: perfect environment and two perfectly constructed people created by our Lord Jesus Christ.

The woman broke down first under the temptation from Satan. The appeal to the woman was identical to the appeal to Satan himself in the prehistoric angelic conflict; it was an appeal to her arrogance. Satan discovered that the woman could be flattered. Arrogance makes anyone weak, man or woman. Whenever we get into arrogance we are in a state of weakness, we are involved in cosmic one, gate one, and we are now candidates for demonisation, demon telepathy or demon influence.

The woman took the fruit from the tree. She disobeyed, she was in a state of arrogance and she succumbed. But the woman was ignorant of what she was doing, she committed a sin of ignorance. Adam looked at the first woman, took the fruit out of her hand, and committed the original sin of cognisance.

The old sin nature resides in the cell structure of the body. The old sin nature is the source of temptation and the objective is for the old sin nature to gain control of the human soul. Guarding the gate of the soul is human volition. It may be a sin of ignorance or it may be a sin of cognisance but whether we know it is a sin or not is not the issue. The issue is: do we want to do it? If it is a sin of ignorance and we pass it through we are guilty of sin. All sin comes from human volition. It can be a sin of ignorance or cognisance but it makes no difference, we are responsible for our own decisions. We make a decision to sin whether we know it is a sin or not. Where the difference lies is in the original sin. The woman committed a sin of ignorance, therefore she became the child-bearer. Therefore, for the first time she had a womb, and periodically through meiosis and polar body there are 23 cells that are uncontaminated by the old sin nature. The man in copulation provides the other 23 and they are contaminated by the old sin nature. All members of the human race, including the virgin Mary, have old sin natures. That is because Adam sinned a sin of cognisance, and therefore the man is the source of the old sin nature. Whether it is a boy or a girl in embryonic form it eventually emerges and God imputes life but the fact remains that everyone gets the old sin nature.

The old sin nature comes through the male in copulation. Cut that off and God the Holy Spirit provides 23 perfect cells for a virgin pregnancy, and that excludes the old sin nature being formed with the embryo. It excludes, therefore, the imputation of Adam's original sin.

When we are born into the world human life is imputed after birth to the human soul. Simultaneously, Adam's original sin is imputed to the genetically-formed old sin nature. That is because of the affinity factor which always exists in real imputation. There is affinity between Adam's original sin and the old sin nature because it is Adam's sin that started the old sin nature. The old sin nature is genetically-formed through the 23 male chromosomes which fertilise the female ovum, and so because of this marvellous device we are born physically alive and, in the wisdom of God, spiritually dead so that if we die before reaching accountability we are automatically saved. What happens to our personal sins? They are never imputed to us for judgment. Instead, they were imputed to Christ on the cross for judgment, opening the door of salvation — the saving work of Christ. We are condemned by Adam's original sin.

When our Lord came into the world human life was imputed by God the Father to His soul. Human life resides in His soul forever, as with us. But Adam's original sin could not be imputed because there was no male providing 23 contaminated chromosomes. Instead, He had a human spirit, He was born trichotomous. Adam's sin couldn't be imputed and, of course, there was no old sin nature. Through His human spirit was given the first and greatest form in spiritual life: the prototype divine dynasphere. Now the Holy Spirit, gate one, filled Him from the womb. Secondly, we have the tremendous development of His objectivity, His enforced and genuine humility, the rapidity with which He grew in favour with God and man. It is also said: "We beheld his glory, the glory of the uniquely-born of the Father". So He moved rapidly in all of the prototype divine dynasphere, and He qualified to go to the cross because His humanity never moved out of the divine dynasphere, doctrine of impeccability. Because Jesus Christ is God he is not able to sin; because Jesus Christ is true humanity inside of the prototype divine dynasphere, given as the first Christmas present imputed to His human spirit, he was able not to sin. He was therefore qualified to go to the cross and be judged for our sins.

No one understood this better than Israel because Israel had the first sign, the clearest sign. The sign of Israel in Revelation 12:2 is that Israel ignored the signs, ignored the doctrine, ignored the message, rejected it. Yet, today Israel still says Shamah Yisrael, Adonai Elohenu, Adonai echad, Jehovah is our God, the Lord is unique. They say it in ritual but they reject it, so they are just like a pregnant woman and the birth pains have begun. And they continue and they continue. She is overdue 2000 years and the pain goes on. The pain is called holocaust. This is the greatest double entendre of all time. The Jew who rejects Christ as saviour says in effect that He isn't born. As a result he is like a woman with an embryo not born, not delivered, in pain constantly. He is uncomfortable all the time as an unbeliever, he faces terrible holocaust periodically brought on, of course, by the function of his own volition.

So we have the concept of the virgin pregnancy of Mary and the virgin birth of Jesus Christ, and there can be no efficacy to the saving work of Christ on the cross without the virgin birth which led to His efficacious, saving work on the cross. The virgin birth was the sign to Israel but the Jews rejected it so they had to become a sign themselves throughout history. The very fact that periodically throughout history there is a holocaust is because he has rejected his own sign to become a sign. The sign was a virgin birth, and so in the double entendre the birth doesn't take place. To the unbelieving Jew, Messiah the Son of God doesn't exist and therefore the birth doesn't take place.

Unbelieving Israel is like a pregnant woman, uncomfortable. Then comes the time for delivery — birth pains, holocaust. In between they, of course, get shorter as delivery occurs and they are going to get shorter as the second advent approaches, they are going to come closer together in the Tribulation. But there will be periodically a holocaust, that is the message of the double entendre. The holocaust is based upon decision. Everyone is responsible for his own decisions and the Jew is responsible for his decisions. He has a marvellous heritage and yet he rejects his heritage because his heritage really begins with the virgin birth — salvation. And so when he says no to that, well, he is pregnant and trying to deliver and can't. That is a picture of the holocaust and gives us the rest of the double entendre.

Then, the final thing in this verse is anti-Semitism, an historical fact. Satan is behind anti-Semitism. Anti-Semitism is the co-operation of the volition of the Jew with the Satanic plan to destroy him. There is only one other thing for us to realise as a believer: our function at gate six, impersonal love, includes Israel, and we are never to engage in any form of anti-Semitism. We do not have to glorify the Jew but we must treat him with the virtue of the divine dynasphere, that virtue-love that integrity produces, the same attitude toward him that we would have toward any Gentile.

Those Jews who have refused to see in Christ at the first advent the fulfilment of the sign are still waiting for deliverance from Messiah, and this, of course, results in holocaust.

In Revelation 12:2 we start out with the conjunction kai, used here to emphasise a fact as noteworthy and unexpected. It is translated “Nevertheless.” Next comes a technical idiom for pregnancy made up of three words: the preposition e)n plus the locative of gasthr, “in the womb,” and with it the present active participle from the verb e)w, “having in the womb,” literally. It is an idiom meaning “she was pregnant.” Translated: “Furthermore, she was pregnant.” “She” refers to the double entendre, the virgin pregnancy of Mary and also to Israel who is the first sign in verse one. In the participle we have a historical present viewing the past event of the virgin pregnancy and its consequences with the vividness of a present occurrence. The active voice: under the concept of the double entendre both the virgin Mary and the nation Israel simultaneously produce the action of the verb. Because the Jews have rejected the virgin pregnancy of Mary and the virgin birth of Christ they suffer the labour pains of a child never born in their thinking. This leads directly to holocaust. This is a circumstantial participle which is often rendered in the English by the finite verb. Furthermore the action of the present participle is coterminous with the action of the main verb.

We have a connective kai, “and.” Then the word for labour pains, the present active indicative of the verb krazw which means to scream, “and she screamed.” The historical present views the past with the vividness of a present occurrence. This may also be construed as a futuristic present in that it anticipates the context where the Jews at the end of the Tribulation suffer the greatest wave of anti-Semitism in their history. The active voice: the emphasis on the double entendre now shifts from the virgin Mary to the unbelieving Jews at the end of the Tribulation. The declarative indicative mood is for the historical as well as the eschatological reality, plus the sign of the main verb which is coterminous with the action of that participle.

Then we have another present active participle from the noun o)dinw which means to suffer from labour pains. The futuristic present denotes the holocaust at the end of the Tribulation but it will also explain every holocaust up to that time. This has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain in thought that it may be contemplated as already coming to pass. The active voice: the nation Israel (the first sign in verse 1, the woman) produces the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial plus the fact that, again, the action of the present participle is coterminous with the action of the main verb. Note that the emphasis of the double entendre changes after the second kai. We go from the historical present to the futuristic present to change the emphasis from the first advent to those events which immediately precede the second advent. The end of the Tribulation is the period of the greatest Jewish holocaust in all of history. It is a part of the third woe, that part known as the seventh trumpet, and Satan personally leads this all-out attack.

Then we have another conjunction kai, translated “and,” and another participle, the present active participle of basanizw referring to torture. These are all words of great pain. Again we have a futuristic present denoting the holocaust at the end of the Tribulation, the future attack of anti-Semitism. This time we have the passive voice: Jews of the world in the Tribulation receive the action of the verb. The double entendre is now unmasked, the unbelieving Jews of the Tribulation are the products of their own decisions. The pattern of holocaust, therefore, is always the same. First, Jews make a decision from a position of weakness: they reject the sign of the virgin birth. Secondly, a decision from a position of weakness means that they lose control of their lives, and therefore they will become the victims of a terrible holocaust. Thirdly, the holocaust, therefore, is brought about by their own personal decisions collectively amalgamated. Fourthly, as a result the Jew loses all personal sense of destiny since they cannot relate properly to the Messianic passages of the Old Testament. So the pattern of every holocaust is brought out by the passive voice of this participle.

The final verb in this passage is an aorist active infinitive from tiktō which means to give birth or to be delivered. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. And it emphasises the obsession of a woman in labour, the obsession to get rid of the foetus. The active voice: then remnant of Jewish believers produce the action of the verb at the second advent — the restoration of Israel, the fulfilment of their covenants. This is the infinitive of conceived result which is assumed as a consequence of the second advent.

Translation: “Nevertheless she [the double entendre which includes the virgin pregnancy of Mary and the holocaust pregnancy of Israel. In one case Mary was delivered so that 33 years later we might be delivered. In the second case there is no delivery, just a perpetual labour pain] was pregnant and she screamed, suffering labour pain [anti-Semitism since the cross], and she [Israel in the Tribulation] was tortured [the great holocaust in the last half of the Tribulation] to give birth [to be delivered by the God of Israel, the Lord Jesus Christ].”

Principle

1. Only born-again Jews are ever delivered from holocaust. Deliverance for the Jew is to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. That is the first good decision, and after that all the good decisions that relate to doctrine. For the dynamics of spiritual life are never found in action, they are found in thought. Good action that glorifies the Lord is only meaningful if it is preceded by thought. The motivation must be right for the function to be acceptable to God. The dynamics of spiritual life is in thinking.

2. Unbelieving Jews follow the analogy of never being delivered. All unbelieving Jews in the last half of the Tribulation, as well as in this 20th century, go through the process of being pregnant, coming to the point of labour pains, and never being able to deliver. This is essentially the definition of holocaust.

3. The Jews want the Millennium without the virgin birth. In other words, unbelieving Jews want the crown without the cross. But the doctrine remains: You cannot have the crown without the cross. Therefore the analogy between the Jewish holocaust and the torture of Israel as the pregnant mother who cannot deliver the child. Israel cannot deliver the child but the child can deliver Israel is the message of this passage. The child cannot be born unless the Jews of the Tribulation are born-again by faith in Christ. Deliverance comes first spiritually through regeneration before deliverance comes physically through the wall of fire. In other words, the cross must precede the wall of fire that protects the believing Jew from the holocaust.

4. The virgin pregnancy and the holocaust pregnancy are the issue. Without the virgin pregnancy of Mary and the virgin birth of Jesus Christ there can be no efficacy or saving work of the cross. The virgin birth was the sign to Israel that the sign was rejected and the stubbornness of Israel results in the holocaust of Israel. Since the unbelieving Israel says that the baby has never been born they suffer the perpetual torture, the perpetual birth pangs, the holocaust of history.

Jeremiah chapter 22, the curse of Jehoiakim and Coniah.

Verse 18, "Therefore thus says the Lord with regard to Jehoiakim the son of Josiah, king of Judah."

Jehoiakim was the name given to a young prince by the name of Eliakim. He was given this by Pharaoh Necho. The world at the time of Jeremiah was a fight between the great Chaldean empire and Egypt. Between the two is Israel. The ruler of Egypt is Pharaoh Necho, a very brilliant ruler. The ruler of Chaldea is Nabopolassar, very shortly to be replaced by his son, Nebuchadnezzar. There would be a great battle on the Euphrates river at a place called Carchemish which would cause the rise of the Chaldean empire and the fall of Egypt. But the Jews often had problem of betting on Egypt and that was the foreign policy of Israel at the time of Jehoiakim. He was the second son of Josiah and when his father died in battle Jehoiakim became the client king to Pharaoh Necho, and Pharaoh Necho gave him the name. So Jehoiakim was put on the throne by Pharaoh Necho because he was anti-Chaldean in his policy.

After the battle of Carchemish where Pharaoh Necho was defeated Nebuchadnezzar came into Jerusalem. He captured Jehoiakim with the intention of taking him back to Babylon in chains. But he changed his mind when news came that his father Nabopolassar had died and that if he wanted to succeed his father he had better go back to Babylon in a hurry for he had some enemies there. So he said to Jehoiakim: "You are now my vassal king, pro-Chaldean and anti-Egyptian. I will leave you on the throne." And he left. But Jehoiakim began to be pro-Egyptian which led to all the trouble.

In his function of evil Jehoiakim is compared to Manasseh in Ezekiel 8:5-17. He was a very petty, arrogant, vindictive ruler. One of the great ministers of the time, a prophet name Uriah, was pursued and murdered personally by the king. He also did everything he could to destroy Jeremiah. After three years Nebuchadnezzar came back and took over from Jehoiakim.

Verse 19, we have the story of what is going to happen to Jehoiakim. He will have the burial of a jackass, "Dragged off and thrown beyond the gates of Jerusalem."

Verse 20, “Go up to Lebanon and cry out,” they are going to have historical disaster. “And lift up your voice in Bashan; cry out from Abarim ...” the various areas where historical disaster will occur.

Verse 21 — “I [Jeremiah] spoke to you [Jehoiakim] in your time of prosperity.” There is the key always: the people who face death and face life successfully are those who listen to doctrine in time of their own prosperity. God gives every one of us a chance to learn the whole realm of doctrine and it is called “our time of prosperity.” If we fail and we go negative then God substitutes for prosperity disaster, our own personal holocaust. That is what happened to Jehoiakim.

“But you replied, ‘I will not listen!’ [negative volition]. This has been your pattern from your youth [negative volition, bad decisions from a position of weakness in time of prosperity]. For you will not listen to my teaching.”

Verse 22, The wind [judgment] will blow away all your shepherds [pastors],” there were teachers of Bible doctrine everywhere at that time but the people would not listen, “in their time of prosperity.”

Remember that Israel is simply a personal photograph of each one of our souls. God never allows a believer to go without a time of prosperity, i.e.. a marvellous opportunity to learn Bible doctrine and to grow in grace.

“And your lovers will go into captivity [slavery].” So whatever it is that you did when you rejected doctrine you are going to be separated from that. Part of your punishment will be to lose your pleasure. This adds up to a very simple point of doctrine: Pleasure is not pleasure without doctrine first. Doctrine becomes the basis for capacity for happiness, capacity for blessing, and capacity for pleasure.

It needs to be understood that there were three times before Nebuchadnezzar destroyed Israel he came to see them. The first time was in the year 605 BC after the battle of Carchemish, the second was in 598 BC, and the third was in 586 BC. The intervals were times of prosperity when they had a chance to recover.

After the battle of Carchemish Nebuchadnezzar took hostages for the good behaviour of Jehoiakim. So in 598 when he came back because of the Jehoiakim revolution Nebuchadnezzar returned and besieged Jerusalem. During the siege the Jews got chicken-hearted and sent a deputation out to Nebuchadnezzar and said: “We are not in this. The king made us do it. To show you our good faith we have assassinated the king and we will not even give him a burial.” And they pointed to the gate of Jerusalem out of which they came, and at a nod a corpse came over the wall and bounced on the dust. That was Jehoiakim. That was the funeral of the jackass!

They went back and made his son Coniah king. Coniah ruled for 100 days and then Nebuchadnezzar’s armies broke through and took the city. Coniah was taken back as a prisoner. Then a new man was put on the throne, the last king of Israel, Zedekiah who ruled from 598 to 586 BC. Zedekiah began in obedience to the Chaldeans but later led a revolt, and that was the time when Nebuchadnezzar came back and took everyone, the fifth cycle of discipline administered.

Verse 23, “You who dwell in Lebanon.” Why did Jeremiah mention Lebanon? Because Lebanon was where all of the wealthy people and all of the aristocrats had their summer palaces. “Who build palaces with cedars.”

Now, how can you communicate to the negative Jew that he is going to have a holocaust? This has the same connotation as Revelation 12:2.

“How you will groan when your labour pains come.”

Because Jehoiakim had made bad decisions from a position of weakness he lost all personal sense of destiny. He therefore lost control of his life. With those factors going against him he was in labour pains. Nebuchadnezzar came back in BC 598 and that was the end for him. There is the holocaust and it was brought on by the Jews, not by the Chaldeans. God used the Chaldeans to destroy negative volition in Israel so that true Israel could be perpetuated. There cannot be a holocaust without negative volition by a certain number of Jews making thousands of bad decisions from a position of weakness.

“Pain [holocaust pain] like a woman in labour!”

Jehoiakim was murdered by his own palace guards and thrown over the wall. The curse goes down to the next generation. This is a four-generation curse: Jehoiakim the son of Josiah, Coniah, Shealtiel, and the curse stopped on the fourth generation. Shealtiel will have no surviving children and he will adopt the greatest man of his age, Zerubbabel. We call this the Coniah curse because it not only has a connotation here but it has a connotation further down the line with Joseph.

Zerubbabel is in the line of Joseph legally — the line down through Solomon — but he is not the real son of Shealtiel. He is put in the genealogy as the son but he is the adopted son. His real father and grandfather are in the other royal blood line that came down from David and Bathsheba through Nathan.

Verse 24, “ ‘As I live,’ declares the Lord, ‘even though Coniah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah were a signet ring [succession in the royal line] on my right hand, yet I would still pull you [Coniah] off my finger.’ ”

This means that Coniah is rejected as the blood line. He is still in the blood line of Christ but he is rejected; he is in the second generation of the curse. Coniah had a son, Shealtiel, who adopted Zerubbabel as his legal heir, so that Zerubbabel is the fourth generation where the curse ends because he is not in the blood line. Our Lord Jesus Christ is never associated with Coniah or Jehoiakim or Shealtiel, that part of the line is out.

In Matthew 1:12 we have the legal line; in Luke 3:27 we have the blood line, the switching of the blood line. And who was the real father of Zerubbabel? His grandfather was Neri; his real father was Pedaiah. Jehoiachin or Coniah and Neri were cousins. Shealtiel was the cousin of Pedaiah. When Shealtiel did not have an issue then he adopted Zerubbabel and the blood line moved from the Solomon side of the fence to Nathan's side. The virgin Mary was descended from Nathan's side, and she married the legal side as represented by Joseph. But the blood line switched at Zerubbabel.

Matthew 1:12 gives the legal line, and it says: "And after the deportation to Babylon [in 586 BC], to Jeconiah [or Coniah] was born Shealtiel; and to Shealtiel, Zerubbabel." In Luke 3:27 we pick up the real grandfather, Neri. Who was the real father of Zerubbabel? Pedaiah, says 1 Chronicles 3:19. Neri is the great great grandson of Nathan. Pedaiah is his son and Zerubbabel is his grandson. Jeconiah or Coniah is the great, great, great grandson of Solomon. They are both royal line. But this was the legal line. The blood line was Solomon but they switched at Zerubbabel and went over to Mary's side of the fence. Joseph and Mary eventually brought the two lines back together. But when Joseph and Mary had children outside of our Lord Jesus Christ none of those children would ever occupy the throne of David. The Lord Jesus Christ does that and, again you see, they're out.

The holocaust syndrome

1. The Jews made a bad decision from a position of weakness where they rejected the sign of the virgin birth, which means that they rejected Christ as their personal saviour. (This is a general situation and does not refer to Jews who have personally trusted in Christ) Idolatry characterised the rule of Jehoiakim, 2 Kings 23:37. He was number one in the four-generation curse — Exodus 20:3-5. His idolatry was merely a manifestation of his rejection of Christ and his negative volition toward the doctrinal teaching of Jeremiah and other great men of that time. So inevitably the bad decision from a position of weakness is the cause of all historical disaster, whether Jews or Gentiles.

2. A decision from a position of weakness means loss of control of their lives. This means that they become the victims of some terrible holocaust. So the holocaust for Jehoiakim and his son Coniah was the terrible disaster of 598 BC, plus the four-generation curse which switched the blood line of the Davidic dynasty from the genealogy of Solomon to the genealogy of Nathan, a point which is extremely important.

3. A distinction from a position of weakness amalgamated with other distinctions from a position of weakness means a maximum number of responsible people in a nation lose control of their lives. Therefore they become the recipients of historical disaster. Remember the historical trend: people are the products of their own decisions and not their environment.

4. The holocaust is brought on by personal decisions, so that the holocaust is the product of many bad decisions from a position of weakness (cosmic one and cosmic two, Satan's system). Holocaust only overtakes adults who are involved in the cosmic system.

5. As a result the Jews lose all personal sense of destiny since they cannot relate properly to Messianic passages, their own doctrine, in the Old Testament. By negative volition, rejection of Jesus Christ as saviour, inevitably they come to the point of the pregnancy leading to the time of delivery, and the delivery is the holocaust. They refuse to accept the virgin birth so to them the baby is not born and they suffer the labour pains of no birth, a holocaust.

6. The holocaust syndrome always follows the same pattern. It is, of course, a Jewish syndrome in part. It is also Gentile syndrome where the people of any client nation to God in the Church Age are involved. First of all, bad decisions from a position of weakness; secondly, bad decisions result in loss of control of one's life; thirdly, loss of control of one's life results in loss of a personal sense of destiny.

7. Therefore the holocaust syndrome is just as pertinent to Gentiles as it is to Jews.

Jeremiah 22:25, "and I shall deliver you into the hands of those who are seeking your life [Nebuchadnezzar], yes, into the hands of those whom you fear, even into the hands of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of the Chaldeans." This was fulfilled first in 598 BC.

Verse 26, "I will hurl you and your mother who gave you birth into another country [Babylon] where you were not born, and there you will die." Coniah was influenced by his mother, but they are going to a land where they were not born.

Why the sin unto death for Coniah? 2 Kings 24:8,9. "Jehoiachin (Coniah) was eighteen years old when he became king, and he reigned three months in Jerusalem; and his mother's name was Nehushta the daughter of Elnathan of Jerusalem. And he did evil in the sight of the Lord, according to all that his father [Jehoiakim] had done." According to Ezekiel chapter 19 that Coniah learned all of his evil from his mother.

Verse 27, "But as for the land [Israel] to which they [the Jews] desire to return, they will not return to it." The only one who would return is Zerubbabel. The Coniah generation would die in slavery; with the lifting of the curse in the Zerubbabel generation he would return to the land in BC 536 and complete the temple by 516.

Verse 28, "Is this man Coniah a despised and shattered idol? A broken pot no one wants?" — even on the throne he was a broken pot.

How can you be a broken pot?

1. All you have to do is make negative or bad decisions from a position of weakness — life in the cosmic system.
2. You will therefore lose control of your own personal life.
3. You will lost your personal sense of destiny which comes from advance, from momentum, gate four of the divine dynasphere.

“Why has he [Coniah] and his descendants been thrown out [of the blood line of David] and hurled into a land [Chaldea] they have not known?”

Not only did Coniah lose the throne but, more than that, he is under a curse, the curse of being eliminated from the blood line of Christ. This curse was fulfilled finally through the virgin birth of Christ. Joseph is the legal line and Mary is the blood line descended from Zerubbabel. Coniah was cut off twice under the curse. First he was cut off with the adoption of Zerubbabel as his grandson and, secondly, the virgin pregnancy leading to the virgin birth. The virgin birth, then, completes the curse on Coniah and the cut-off which is prophesied in this passage.

Jeremiah 36:27, “Then the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah after the king [Jehoiakim] had burned the scroll [a portion of the book of Jeremiah], even the words which Baruch had written at the dictation of Jeremiah, saying, ‘Take again another scroll and write on it all the former words that were on the first scroll which Jehoiakim the king of Judah burned. And concerning Jehoiakim king of Judah you shall communicate, “Thus says the Lord, You have burned the scroll, saying, ‘Why have you written on it that the king of Babylon [Nebuchadnezzar] shall certainly come and destroy this land,’ a prophecy of the fifth cycle of discipline which occurred in 586, ‘and shall make man and beasts to cease from it?’.” This was his excuse for burning that portion of the book of Jeremiah. “ ‘Therefore thus says the Lord concerning Jehoiakim king of Judah, “He shall have no one to sit on the throne of David,’ never again would anyone in his genealogy ever occupy the throne of David, ‘and his dead body shall be cast out to the heat of the day and the frost of the night. I will also punish him and his descendants [Coniah and Shealtiel] and his staff for their iniquity, and I will bring on them [BC 598] and the inhabitants of Jerusalem [BC 586] and the men of Judah [BC 586] all the historical disaster [or holocaust] that I have declared to them — but they did not listen [to me]’.”

They never do listen. There never is a holocaust of Jews or a holocaust of Gentiles without warning first. And this is the epitaph: “They did not listen to me.”

Jeremiah 22:30, “Thus says the Lord, ‘Record this man [Coniah] childless, a man who will not prosper during his life; furthermore none of his line will prosper sitting on the throne of David or ruling again in Israel’.”

Note

1. David's line through Nathan is recorded in Luke chapter three. David's line through Nathan started out the legal line, and at the time of Zerubbabel it became the blood line. We know this from verse 31 where it says, "The son of Nathan, the son of David."
2. In this line is Zerubbabel, mentioned in the Nathan line, Luke 3:27, "the son of Zerubbabel, the son of Shealtiel, the son of Neri." In other words, Shealtiel adopted Zerubbabel because Neri was his true grandfather and Pedaiah was his true father.
3. Zerubbabel is also mentioned in the Solomon genealogy: Matthew 1:6, "and to David was born Solomon."
4. Zerubbabel is adopted into this line according to Matthew 1:12. Zerubbabel occurs in both lines. "And after the deportation to Babylon, to Jeconiah [Coniah] was born Shealtiel." But notice the next phrase, the word "born" is no longer used: "and to Shealtiel, Zerubbabel." He adopted him.
5. Zerubbabel's real father is mentioned in 1 Chronicles 3:19, "And the sons of Pedaiah were Zerubbabel and Shimei."

So there is a four-generation curse — three or four, it all depends on when the hate stops. Hate has to do with involvement in cosmic two. Jehoiakim was involved in the cosmic system, that is where it began. Then his son Coniah followed in his footsteps. Shealtiel was the end of the line so that he adopted Zerubbabel, his cousin's son, and thereby perpetuating the line. The blood line then switched. The legal line and the blood line are both found in 1 Chronicles 3:17-19. The legal line: 1 Chronicles 3:17, "And the sons of Jeconiah, the prisoner, were Shealtiel and his [adopted] son [Zerubbabel]." The blood line: verse 19, "And the sons of Pedaiah were Zerubbabel," mentioned first. He is called the son of Shealtiel in a number of passages, Ezra 3:2; 3:8; 5:2, because Shealtiel adopted him. Also in Nehemiah and Haggai 1:1, 12, 14.

The holocaust syndrome

1. The Jews made a decision from a position of weakness when they rejected the sign of the virgin birth, which means that they rejected Christ as their personal saviour. 2 Corinthians 4:3,4, the blinding of the mind occurs in the cosmic system: scar tissue of the soul.

2. Decisions from a position of weakness means loss of control of their lives. This means that they become the victims of some terrible historical disaster or holocaust.
3. A decision from a position of weakness amalgamated with other decisions from a position of weakness mean loss of control of the lives of a maximum number of people in the nation so that they become the recipients of historical disaster or holocaust.
4. The holocaust is brought on by personal decisions so that holocaust is the product of many bad decisions from a position of weakness, involvement in the cosmic system.
5. As a result the Jews lost all personal sense of destiny since they cannot relate properly to the Messianic passages of the Old Testament.
6. The holocaust syndrome always follows the same pattern: a. Bad decisions from a position of weakness; b. Bad decisions mean loss of control of one's life; c. Loss of control of one's life results in loss of personal sense of destiny.
7. Therefore the holocaust syndrome is just as pertinent to Gentiles as to the Jews. It just so happens that our passage is dealing with the Jews by way of interpretation. The concept is the same.

That brings us to the vocative in Jeremiah 22:25, Eretz, eretz, eretz. It doesn't mean earth, it means land, the land of Israel: "O land, land, land, hear the doctrine of the Lord." That is the only way that we can be delivered.

Verse 30, "Record this man childless" the word 'record' is the word kathab and it has to do with making their genealogy, "a man who will not prosper during his life." Why? Because for the believer or the person who has the opportunity [the unbeliever] lack of prosperity comes from one source only, negative volition toward doctrine. A man who will not prosper during his life, "for none of his line will prosper." That is Coniah and Shealtiel. "Record this man childless," then, depicts Israel both in the Church Age and during the Tribulation. Specifically it depicts unbelievers of Israel, those who have rejected Christ in the time in which we live. The unbelieving Jew has rejected the sign of the virgin birth.

The second sign [Revelation 12:3] starts with the sign of the red dragon.

We begin with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated "Then." Then we have a nominative neuter singular from the adjective a)lloj, "Then another." With that adjective comes the subject, shmeion, translated a sign but it means a miracle that a lot of people see and draw conclusions from. It means a miracle, something that is contrary to the usual course of nature.

We have noted that there are seven signs found in the book of Revelation, the first was Revelation 12:1. We also have noted that the Jews constantly seek signs or attesting miracles so that they are distracted from Bible doctrine, 1 Corinthians 1:22; John 4:48. The sign about to be revealed in the eschatology of Revelation is one the Jews would never constantly seek, and having found it they would never believe in Christ as a result of it. The sign given to Israel in the Tribulation is the source of all anti-Semitism. "Then another attesting miracle [sign]."

The aorist passive indicative of $\omega\rho\alpha\upsilon$ comes next in our passage. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, the observing of the sign. The passive voice: the subject, the second sign of anti-Semitism receives the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the second sign, the reality of terrible anti-Semitism reaching its peak in the last half of the Tribulation, the time of the eschatology of the devil's desperation, but very much in evidence in the world somewhere in every century.

Next we have a prepositional phrase $\epsilon\nu$ plus the locative singular of $\omega\rho\alpha\nu\omicron\upsilon$. As we have anticipated that this sign deals with Satan as the source of anti-Semitism we should note where Satan is located when the sign is presented. He lives in heaven. While Satan is the ruler of this world he commutes in order to run this world. He actually resides in heaven and will until the time of the devil's desperation which is the middle of the Tribulation. Then we have a connective $\kappa\alpha\iota$, "and," followed by a demonstrative particle, $\iota\delta\upsilon$, taken from the aorist active imperative of $\omega\rho\alpha\upsilon$ and is translated "behold." The nominative of appellation uses three words to follow (A nominative of appellation is quite unusual, especially when we are expecting it to be a nominative subject), $\mu\epsilon\gamma\alpha\lambda\omicron\varsigma$, $\pi\upsilon\rho\omicron\upsilon\varsigma$, and $\delta\rho\alpha\kappa\omega\nu$. $\mu\epsilon\gamma\alpha\lambda\omicron\varsigma$ is an adjective describing this dragon; $\pi\upsilon\rho\omicron\upsilon\varsigma$ means red; the noun $\delta\rho\alpha\kappa\omega\nu$ is transliterated "dragon."

The word $\delta\rho\alpha\kappa\omega\nu$ is derived from an Attic Greek verb $\delta\epsilon\rho\chi\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$ which means to see clearly. In the book of Revelation it always refers to Satan and it is a fascinating derivation. It should be noted that $\delta\rho\alpha\kappa\omega\nu$ was used in Attic Greek for serpents because there was snake worship at Delphi and other places. As a matter of fact the priestess who handled the snakes was called in the Greek $\pi\upsilon\theta\omicron\upsilon\nu$, translated "python" in English. $\delta\rho\alpha\kappa\omega\nu$ is referred to a snake who can see clearly, and the snake who saw clearly was the snake who became to woman's pet in the garden and, as a result, persuaded her. First of all, to sell her he had to get her into a state of arrogance. He persuaded the woman by appealing to what became her vanity. He saw clearly the issue and he saw that he could not attack the man in the form of the serpent because the man, Adam, was in charge. Adam would simply order the woman to eat and then she would be innocent because she would simply be obeying her husband. But by attacking the woman first and getting her to eat the forbidden fruit, and then getting her to act as his agent for the man, then you have the fall of both. Therefore, dragon or $\delta\rho\alpha\kappa\omega\nu$ has come down to us from the connotation of the beginning. Every culture has the serpent or dragon related to demonism, the python of Delphi in Greece, for example.

"Then another sign was seen in heaven; and so, behold, a great red dragon."

The great red dragon, by the way, is also described in the Old Testament in Job 26:13 under such titles as rahab where it is translated “leviathan” and, of course, means a great snake or dragon, also, in Isaiah 51:9ff. It is also interesting to note that in Job 40:15-24 this same dragon is called “behemoth.” In Isaiah 27:1 he is called “leviathan.” But the best translation is the one we get in Genesis 3:1-5, “Now the serpent was the most subtle of all creatures.” Amos 9:2 develops the same concept. So whichever term is used we are still talking about Satan.

Next we have a present active participle from the verb ε)χ)ω, and it means here to have. The present tense is a descriptive present for what occurs during the Tribulation. Therefore we call it a futuristic present which denotes Satan’s control in the Tribulation. He is still the ruler of the world and, as a matter of fact, for the first time in all of his rulership since the beginning of history Satan is forced to live on the earth, he is cast out of heaven. While the Satanic influence of nations in the Tribulation has not yet occurred it is regarded as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as already coming to pass. The active voice: Satan produces the action of the verb in the Tribulation. The participle is circumstantial used for a relative clause.

We now have two accusative plural direct objects composed of a number and a noun, ε)π)τα and κεφαλ)η, “seven” and “head”; “and he has seven heads.” Then we have a second accusative δεκα [ten] and κ)ρ)ο)ι [horns], “and ten horns.”

Before we can examine the seven heads or the ten horns, or the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation, we should finish up the verse which simply says, “furthermore on his heads were seven crowns.” But we should notice what is not used here. We would expect στεφανοι because it is so frequently translated as crowns. Instead we have in the Greek διαδημα referring to crowns of rulers, not crowns which were decorations for Roman soldiers or crowns of Ivy leaves won at some of the games in the Roman empire. We are never going to sort this out until we go to Daniel chapter seven.

Daniel 7:2, “Daniel spoke and said, ‘I was looking in my vision by night, and behold, the four winds of heaven’ ...”

We have studied the wind machine and how they control weather. Here they are used to indicate that Jesus Christ controls history: the rise and fall of empires.

“... ‘were stirring up the great sea [referring to the peoples of the world], and four great beasts were coming up from the sea, differing from one another [in other words, they emerged as evil powers]’.”

In verse 4 we meet the lion and he is the Chaldean empire, the first one coming up out of the sea. Here suddenly we have a great empire which in 606 BC at the battle of Carchemish completely destroyed the Egyptian empire of Pharaoh-Necho.

In verse 4 the bear is the rise of the Persian empire and the rise of the greatest people in the ancient world. In verse 6 we have the leopard, the rise of the Macedonian empire followed by the Hellenistic monarchies.

It is the fourth beast of verse seven which comes into focus here with heads and horns, the Roman empire. "After this I kept looking in the night visions, and behold, a fourth beast, dreadful [Rome's conquests] and terrifying [as a result of all of these conquests, and starting with the second Punic war, Roman mobs developed in the cities and a form of socialism was developed] and extremely strong; and it had large iron teeth. It devoured and crushed, and trampled down the remainder with its feet [the expansion of the empire]; and it was different from all the beasts that were before it [it became the first Gentile nation to God and the environment for the rise of Christianity], and it had ten horns [the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation]."

No nation ever survives the negative volition of its own population. And when a nation comes to the point where it is no stronger than the masses of people in that nation — generally described historically as the unthinking masses — they do not survive, they destroy themselves. Every one of the nations we are studying in Daniel chapter seven was great and powerful and had tremendous influence, and they lost all of these things in time of prosperity. They all had one thing in common: the pattern of greatness followed by destroying themselves. We are the products of our decisions individually; we are the products of our decisions collectively.

The fourth beast of Daniel 7:7 is the Roman empire. The Roman republic could not function as a client nation to God, it had to become an empire. This beast is called "dreadful" and it is a very accurate prophecy. The people who hold all records for cruelty in the ancient world are the Romans but their cruelty was harnessed to great self-discipline. So instead of arousing antagonism through cruelty alone they disciplined their cruelty so that they simply aroused fear which made conquest easy. "Dreadful" refers to the Roman conquest of the Mediterranean states by which they became a world power, and this took place between 264 and 146 BC. Rome conquered all of the Hellenistic monarchies, the Syrian empire of the Seleucids, the Egyptian empire of the Ptolemies, the Macedonian empire, the Carthaginians, and the Mediterranean became a Roman lake. The word "terrible" refers to the Roman mobs which resulted from the second Punic war and the beginning of socialism which coexisted with Rome as a republic and as an empire. The record for socialism existing in the world is still held by Rome, from the second Punic war until 476 AD, a little over 650 years. That is the longest running record for socialism. From time to time it sapped the strength of the Roman empire, destroyed it economically resulting in all kinds of dictatorships and eventually ruined everything. No nation ever survives socialism. Sooner or later it destroys it. "Extremely strong" refers to Julius Caesar and his famous five years between 49 and 44 BC when he put his genius to work and developed a system which would provide the stability for five hundred years as an empire. Except for the Antonine Caesars the rulers of the empire were unstable but it really didn't make any difference because Caesar devised a system whereby the rulers had very little to say, and so that the empire had stability no matter what monster was ruling in Rome.

The Roman empire “was different from all of the beasts that were before it.” This difference is because it was the first Gentile client nation to God, it was the beginning of the times of the Gentiles, and it was the environment for the rise of Christianity. It was different for another reason. Basically, all of the conquering groups before, such as the Egyptians and the Assyrians, were uncultured and generally relatively racially pure, although not altogether. They had one culture and they built everything around one culture and did very well with it. But the Romans were multiracial, multicultural (they had many cults and religions), and the thing that held them all together and made them so very strong was a system of government to which all kinds of cultures, all kinds of attitudes, all kinds of races and religions, could subscribe. Therefore, it became the environment for Christianity.

We move now to the Tribulation and the revived Roman empire. We are studying two empires: the historical Roman empire which began in BC 30 with Octavius Augustus and ended in 476 AD; the prophetic Roman empire which is the Roman empire of the Tribulation and will be referred to as the revived Roman empire. And when it said “it had ten horns” it is referring to the revived Roman empire.

Verse 8, “And while I was contemplating the horns.” Rome as a client nation to God officially terminated in 476 AD. From 476 there were many other Gentile nations which functioned as client nations to God. The ten horns of the revived Roman empire in the Tribulation are simply ten nations because horns refer to nations. Ten nations out of the old Roman empire will come together to form a new Roman empire, a power bloc in order to have economic, military and all other advantages. We don’t know exactly who the ten horns are except that they are parts, nations, which were part of the old Roman empire. Their major advantage is that they will eventually become the ecumenical religion of the world. Remember that religion is Satanic.

“behold, another little horn” — this is a dictator who decides to take over this confederation. It starts out as a confederation of nations. This dictator is obviously Satan’s man, he “came up among them, and three of the first horns were uprooted before it.” So there is a little horn who is a dictator and there are three big horns, and what he does is to defeat three out of the ten so that the other seven surrender to the dictator. That is how we get seven crowns. There are originally ten nations, three are defeated by the dictator and the seven decide it is better to surrender and become part of the big team. So there are seven crowns but ten nations before the war took place. This is a war in the first half of the Tribulation moving toward the middle of the Tribulation. By the middle of the Tribulation this little horn will not only be dictator of the ten nations, the revived Roman empire, but he becomes the religious leader of ecumenical religion.

“and behold, this horn [dictator of Revelation 13:1-10] possessed eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth that spoke arrogantly.” The eyes like the eyes of a man is an idiom for this dictator’s genius, his evil genius. He is an animal in his modus operandi but he is an evil genius. “A mouth that speaks arrogantly” refers to great eloquence.

Verse 9, “I kept looking until the thrones were set up.” These are the nations of the Millennium to be ruled by mature believers of the royal family, “and the Ancient of Days [literally, “the eternal one,” Jesus Christ at the second advent] took his throne [Matthew 25:31]; his vesture was like white snow, and the hair of his head like pure wool. His throne was a flame of fire [the judgment of individuals and nations in the Tribulation, especially the baptism of fire], its wheels were a burning fire [the judgment of the nations of the Tribulation at the second advent].”

Verse 14, “And to him [our Lord Jesus Christ] was given dominion, glory and sovereignty, that all peoples, nations, and languages might serve him [Millennial reign of Christ]. His dominion is an everlasting dominion which will not pass away [it will continue beyond history into eternity]; furthermore his kingdom is one which cannot ever be destroyed.”

Verse 18, “But the saints [regenerate or spiritual Israel] of the Highest One [the Lord Jesus Christ referred to as Adonai echad] will receive the kingdom [they will receive Israel as a client nation to God, the fulfilment of the Palestinian covenant] and possess the kingdom forever and ever [fulfilling the covenants].”

Verse 19, “Then I desired to know the exact meaning of the fourth beast [the Roman empire], which was different from all the others, most terrifying, with its teeth of iron and its claws of bronze, and which devoured, crushed, and trampled under foot whatever was left,”

Verse 20, “and the ten horns which were on its head, and the other horn [the dictator] which came up, and before which three of them fell, namely, that little horn which had eyes [genius] and a mouth that spoke arrogantly, and whose appearance was more arrogant than his contemporaries.”

Verse 21, “ I kept looking, and the horn was making war against the saints,” now we are back to anti-Semitism and exactly where we are in Revelation chapter twelve, “and winning over them”

Verse 22, “until the Ancient of Days came [second advent], and pronounced judgment in favour of the saints [the born-again Jews or spiritual Israel] of the Highest One [Jesus Christ the God of Israel], and the time arrived when the saints [Tribulational believers] took possession of the kingdom [the Millennial Israel].”

Verse 23, “Thus he said: ‘The fourth beast will be the fourth great empire on the earth [Roman empire], which will be different from all of the other empires, and it will devour the whole earth, both tread it down and crush it.’

Verse 24, ‘As for the ten horns [the revived Roman empire], out of this kingdom ten kings will arise [in the Tribulation]; and another [little horn] will arise after them, and he will be different from the previous ones and will subdue three kings.

Verse 25, [The last half of the Tribulation] ‘And he [the dictator, when he takes over] will speak against the Host High and will oppress the saints [Jewish believers of the Tribulation plus Gentile believers], and try to change the times and the laws; and they [the saints] will be delivered into his hands for three and a half years [the last half of the Tribulation].

Verse 26, 'Then the court will sit [second advent of Christ], and his empire [power] will be taken away completely and destroyed forever ...' "

From what we have noted: There will be in the Tribulation a ten-nation confederation [in the first half of the Tribulation], the revived Roman empire. Then comes the dictator who will rise up in the middle of the Tribulation and will conquer three of the ten nations resulting in control over the remaining seven. This power bloc of the Tribulation will be studied in Revelation chapter 16 as the king of the west, and in Revelation 17 and 18 as the religious ruler of ecumenical religion

Revelation 12:3, "Then another sign was seen in heaven; and behold a great red dragon [Satan] who had seven heads and ten horns," the revived Roman empire is one of his instruments to seek to gain control of the earth before the second advent, "furthermore on his head seven crowns [the seven surviving nations of the little horns (of Daniel 7) conquest]." We will study this man in detail in Revelation 13:1-10. We will see him later on in Daniel 9:26 as "the prince who shall come," — "the man of sin" in 2 Thessalonians chapter 2, and the scarlet beast of Revelation 17:8-13. Satan completely controls this man.

When Jesus Christ was being directly tempted by Satan during His first advent, Satan took Him to a high spot where He could see the kingdoms of the world. And he said: "If you will fall down and worship me I will give you all of these kingdoms." Satan is the ruler of the world, he has the power to give all the kingdoms of the world to someone who is dedicated enough to follow him. Our Lord said no, but in the Tribulation there will be a brilliant man of genius who will find a way to be so dedicated to Satan that he becomes a ruler of at least a quarter of the world, for a short time. In eternity past Satan wanted to be like the most high God, he wanted to rule in place of God, and that arrogance immediately limited him. A creature is limited. We as creatures can never challenge God.

Verse 4, the source of anti-Semitism, the greatest of all evils.

The fact that Satan controls the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation provides information regarding this control over mankind. We begin with the connective conjunction kai which can be translated "and" or "then," plus the nominative subject o)ura for the tail of the dragon. O)ura represents the throwing off of a harness. The dragon's tail is not controlled, it is totally out of control. As a result you have the worst kind of barbarianism, the masses of people without any harness of self-discipline, of honour, integrity, enforced and genuine humility. Then we have the possessive genitive from the intensive pronoun a)utoj, referring to Satan under the dragon image. The tail of the dragon [Satan] represents the persuasive power in his prehistoric angelic conflict. Satan, as Lucifer the son of the morning, was the first creature in all of history to throw off the harness. In throwing off the harness, to reject every restriction which had previously existed on himself, and because of his great authority as the anointed cherub, there were very few restrictions. But arrogance removed them all, and in arrogance Satan said: "I will be like the most high God."

When anyone throws off the harness they inevitably can get other people to go with them. There are always people out of harness just waiting to line up with some leader who throws off the harness. That is how we have, right now this day, millions and millions of demons, two categories: the disembodied spirits and those who have bodies. The origin of these creatures were decisions from a position of weakness, and from those decisions came the tremendous concept of loss of control of their lives, followed by loss of a personal sense of destiny which made them followers of Satan. These followers are mentioned first by the present active indicative of the verb surw which means to drag, to pull. When a leader throws off the harness there are always those who are ready to be pulled. They are lawless; they are without harness; and the basic characteristic of being without harness is arrogance, rejecting all authority, feeling threatened by anyone who seems to be better in any category of life, and therefore trying to compete with that person and often doing so by maligning, gossiping and, in many cases by the use of violence.

The historical present tense views the past event with the vividness of a present occurrence. It is a pattern set by Satan in the prehistoric angelic conflict which has continued through human history right down to this moment, and will continue throughout the rest of the Church Age and after the Church Age in the Tribulation. The active voice: Satan produces the action of the verb in the prehistoric phase of the angelic conflict, and he did so by ceasing to function in the purpose for which he was created.

The tail of the dragon dragged away in revolution. And then we have what it did: "a third of the stars of the heaven," the accusative singular direct object of tritoj, plus the descriptive genitive plural of a)sthr, and a possessive genitive singular from o)uranoj.

The question is: what are the stars? Stars are used for angels in Job 38:7, "When the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God [angels] shouted for joy." The message of Bildad to Job in Job 25:1-6, "Then Bildad the Shuhite answered, 'Dominion and respect belong to him who establishes order in the heights [heaven]. Can his troops [the elect angels] be numbered? and on whom does his light not rise?' "

The light does not rise on fallen angels, they have thrown off the harness. There came a time when certain angelic creatures also threw off the harness. Satan was the first. He took one third of the angelic creatures with him; two thirds remained in harness. God created all of us for a purpose. When you throw off the harness the purpose is gone.

" 'How then can a man be righteous before God? Or how can one who has been born of a woman be pure? Even in the moon has no brightness and the stars [fallen angels] are not pure in his sight, how much less man who is but a maggot, and the son of man who is only a worm!' "

Isaiah 14:11b, "Maggots are spread out beneath you, and worms are your covering." That is a description of barbarianism, a description of people — an individual or a group of individuals, or a national entity. When the people of a nation throw off the harness they are self-destructive. This verse describes Satan's fall and those who followed him.

Verse 12, "How you have fallen from heaven, O star of the Morning [Satan], son of the dawn! You have been cast down to the earth, you who have weakened the nations!"

What does Satan do to weaken nations? He weakens nations by getting people to throw off the harness. Verse 12 in essence describes the second fall of Satan which occurs in the middle of the Tribulation.

Verse 13, "But you said in your right lobe, 'I will ascend to heaven [the thinking of Satan when he threw off the harness at the time of his first fall]; I will raise my throne above the stars of God [angelic creatures]. I will sit enthroned in the mount of the assembly [the assembly of angelic creatures in heaven] in the uttermost extremity of the north.

Verse 14, "I will ascent above the heights of the clouds [angelic masses]; I will make myself like the most high God."

Answer to that: verse 15, "Nevertheless you will be cast down to Sheol [third fall of Satan which occurs at the second advent], you will be thrown in to a corner of the abyss." No one as an individual can throw off the harness of life and survive, it is self-destructive.

Note that in Isaiah 14:12 Satan is called the morning star, while in verse 13 the angels are called the stars of God. And just as the stars are used for angels in Job 25:5, 38:7; Isaiah 14:12, 13 so stars are used for angels in Revelation 12:4.

The harness for the royal family of God in this dispensation is the divine dynasphere and the believer without the harness resides and functions in the cosmic system. Therefore the harness protects the believer against the cosmic system with its demon influence. When the royal family of God is in the harness of the divine dynasphere they make decisions from a position of strength, they have control of their lives and have a personal sense of destiny. Furthermore, when the royal family of God is in the harness of the divine dynasphere they advance to maturity forming the pivot which preserves, blesses and prospers the client nation. Without the harness of the divine dynasphere there is no pivot of mature believers, no Christian dynamics, and that means that the client nation suffers as well as the individual. The worst thing, of course, is no glorification of the Lord Jesus Christ.

The Bible talks about a harness in terms of a yoke in Matthew 11:28-30. Often the word yoke is used as a part of the harness, "Come unto me, all ye that labour [work to the point of exhaustion] and are burdened down [by problems], and I will give you rest [eternal salvation and then the harness of the divine dynasphere]."

In verse 29 where Jesus, anticipating the royal family of God, says, "Take my yoke [harness, the divine dynasphere] upon you," this is the harness of life inside the divine dynasphere, "and learn from me [Gate four of the divine dynasphere]," for I am virtuous [life inside the divine dynasphere] and humble in the right lobe [Gate three]; and you shall find rest for your souls.” The “rest for your souls” is, first of all, having made good decisions from a position of strength, having control of your own personal life, and having a personal sense of destiny. Therefore, you feel threatened by no one, or no situation.

Verse 30, “For my yoke [or harness] is pleasant, and my load [residence, function, and momentum inside the divine dynasphere] is light.”

The translation of Revelation 12:4 so far: “And his tail [Satan’s power] dragged away [that is, the revolution in heaven] a third of the stars of the heaven [the fallen angels].” Continuing, we have the intensive use of the conjunction kai which is translated “in fact”. Then the aorist active indicative of the verb ballw which means here to throw or to hurl, “and he [God] threw.” The culminative aorist tense views our Lord’s casting of Satan and his fallen angels out of heaven in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the greatest wave of anti-Semitism in all of human history. This verb refers to the second fall of Satan.

We have to look at the falls of Satan under three categories. The first fall of Satan was the prehistorical fall, the revolution which began in heaven in which he took a third of the angelic creatures with him. This occurred before the creation of man. The second fall occurs in the middle of the Tribulation when Satan is cast out of heaven and begins the time of the eschatology of the devil’s desperation. The third fall is the second advent when Satan is removed from rulership of this world and incarcerated for one thousand years. We are noting now the verb which relates to the second fall of Satan.

In the active voice of the verb God Himself produces the action of the verb in the middle of the Tribulation by removing Satan and all fallen angels from heaven. They are confined to the earth and this is the beginning of the closing in and the closing out of Satan’s activity as the ruler of this world. Right now Satan has access to any part of the universe and his headquarters is in heaven though he commutes to the earth to rule the cosmos. Then, of course, in the middle of the Tribulation he will be confined to the earth. At the end of the Tribulation he will be confined to Sheol where he will serve a thousand-year sentence. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical reality of Satan being cast out of heaven with his fallen angels in the middle of the Tribulation.

The result of this brings out all the genius of Satan. Satan has a concept that is brilliant but he is not going to have the nerve to complete it. He is going to try to destroy in desperation certain categories that have always been a thorn in his side. One will be believers, the others will be all Jews whether they are believers or unbelievers; and we are looking at that phase of his desperate plan, the attempt to destroy all Jews on the face of the earth. All anti-Semitism originates with Satan and this is his last desperate chance.

“in fact he [God] threw them [Satan and all fallen angels],” the accusative plural direct from a)utoj, “them,” referring to fallen angels plus their leader. This is where the desperation begins. Then the preposition e)ij plus the accusative of gh, “to the earth.”

Once Satan is confined to the earth he expresses his frustration and his wrath together with his genius to formulate a very bold plan: use everything at his means, including the third demon assault army plus ecumenical religion which will be formed under the dictator of the revived Roman empire, plus all other means at his disposal to eliminate all Jews on the face of the earth. There are a lot of reasons for that. One of the most obvious is that God has not yet fulfilled His promises to Israel. He is waiting until the right time. God's timing is absolutely perfect and at the second advent all of the unconditional covenants will be fulfilled. They have never been fulfilled up to this moment. There is one paragraph of the Abrahamic covenant which is being constantly being fulfilled: God punishes and destroys believer or unbeliever who seeks in any way to be anti-Semitic. In order to fulfill the Palestinian covenant Jews must be alive at the second advent. David will have a son, the Lord Jesus Christ, who will reign forever and the New covenant to Israel guarantees that the Jewish nation which is restored at the time of the second advent will be a client nation throughout the Millennial reign of Christ and throughout all eternity.

The point is that the faithfulness of God versus the genius of Satan is the great issue from the middle of the Tribulation, the time of the eschatology of the devil's desperation, the last three and a half years of the Tribulation. This is the great time when Satan will try to do several things, one of which is to destroy the Jews, and another is the use of religion. Religion always has more power than culture and when religion becomes the culture of a nation or a people or a tribe or a group you have exploitation. Satan will use religion, unconventional warfare, conventional warfare, and he will use anti-Semitism.

We have next the nominative singular subject drakwn, referring to Satan who is the author of anti-Semitism, "then the dragon." Then we have the perfect active indicative of the verb i(stemi, "stood." This is the usual translation but when followed by the improper preposition e)nw pion it has a different meaning. Often the meaning of Greek words are determined by the words around them. It is translated correctly, "in fact he [God] threw them down to the earth: then the dragon stood before the woman." When it says to stand before the woman it means to stand in the sense of antagonism. The dragon sought to destroy the woman is what it means. The dragon appeared before the woman and he appeared in a hostile sense, so i(stemi while it has the connotation of attack and we can translate it "stood," it really means "then the dragon appeared before the woman with hostile intent." The woman in past history was the virgin Mary but the woman in the Tribulation is Israel. The perfect tense is the perfect of existing state in which the past is dropped from the thought and attention is focused upon the existing state. The active voice: Satan as the author of anti-Semitism produces the action of the verb, and the indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the intensified anti-Semitism prior to the second advent. We have the improper preposition and we have the genitive singular gunh with it, and it means Israel.

Again we go back to the double entendre because this happened twice. Satan sought to destroy Israel at the point of the virgin birth because while the Jews didn't understand it as a sign, Satan did. And just before the second advent Satan will once again go after the woman which is Israel in the middle of the Tribulation.

The articular present active participle of mellw is the verb that means about to be. The futuristic present denotes a future action because the virgin birth was already firmly resolved in the plan of God. The active voice: the virgin Mary produces the action of the verb. The participle is used as a relative clause. With this we have the aorist active infinitive of the verb tiktw which means to deliver, to give birth. The aorist infinitive denotes that which is eventual or particular, while the present infinitive indicates a condition or a process. The culminative aorist views first of all the virgin birth in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the strategic victory of our Lord in the first advent as a result of that virgin birth. So it goes back to the first advent and gives us at the point of the virgin birth the hostility of Satan which will be analogous to the hostility of Satan toward the Jew in the Tribulation. The active voice: first of all the virgin Mary produced the action of the verb in history, and then Israel will produce the action of the verb in the future: Israel is about to be restored, they are about to give birth to a new nation. The infinitive is the infinitive of intended result where the result is indicated as fulfilling a deliberate objective. "Then the dragon [Satan] stood before the woman who was about to deliver a child".

We have noted the virgin birth, the hypostatic union, the impeccability of Christ, and the reason why Satan tried to frustrate these things. So we see Satan as the loser in the angelic conflict because of the virgin birth and because Christ went to the cross, and because He won a strategic victory in bearing our sins in His own body on the tree. There is no way that any creature can defeat the creator. Satan has challenged the creator before in the first advent; he will challenge the creator in the middle of the Tribulation. These are the two greatest challenges he has ever offered though he is constantly in a state of hostility toward our Lord. One of the great problems that Satan faces is the extension of the prehistoric angelic conflict into human history and this means the problems of the angelic conflict in the Tribulation. Man was created to resolve the angelic conflict. Satan recognises this and therefore has taken control of man as the ruler of this world. One of the major problems of Satan in human history is Israel and it has been Satan's objective to destroy Israel. Satan understands the Davidic covenant and he has two chances to hinder its fulfilment: one which occurred in the first advent, and he failed; the other will occur in the Tribulation when he will fail again.

Satan is especially sensitive to the Davidic covenant and its significance. Satan attempts to frustrate the incarnation, he has always understood the consequences of the Davidic covenant and with this in mind when Adam was given a wonderful promise concerning the Messiah, how Christ would come as the seed of the woman. Satan understood that and therefore he motivated Cain to murder Abel. The demon genetic attack on the human race in Genesis 6:1-13 were attacks on Adam's seed. But then when Satan discovered that it was no longer Adam's seed, because Adam's seed was now very extensive and had narrowed down to Abraham's seed, then he limited his attack. Now all he had to do was to attack the seed of Abraham, so Sarah wound up in the harem of an Egyptian king in Genesis 12:10-20, and Pharaoh commanded to kill the entire male line of Israel in Exodus 1:10, 15,16, and Pharaoh attempted to annihilate Israel at the Red Sea in Exodus 14. All of these were, of course, hindered; they were attacks on Abraham's seed. Then once again it narrowed down to David and Satan worked on the seed of David. We have the case of the son of Jehoshaphat. Jehoshaphat arranged a marriage between his son and Athaliah, the daughter of Jezebel, uniting two systems of evil: the apostasy of Israel at that time with the phallic cult of the Phoenicians. Then Jehoram, when he came to the throne, killed all of his brothers, and the Arabs killed the sons of Jehoram and only one person was left, and that was Jehoahaz, 2 Chronicles 21. Athaliah, the daughter of Jezebel and the mother of Jehoahaz, killed everyone in the royal seed, and so it narrowed down to Joash of 2 Chronicles 23. So Satan was so successful that the line came down to one person. At that point we have the development of the seed again: God protected that very fine thread.

Then we have the case of Hezekiah who had no children when he was attacked by the king of Assyria and his great army. He was surrounded and about to be wiped out and God delivered him and preserved him until he had a son to perpetuate the line. Haman's conspiracy to annihilate the Jews in Esther is another illustration. All of these were attacks on the seed of David.

"Then the dragon stood before the woman who was about to deliver the child." That is first of all the virgin Mary and the child was our Lord Jesus Christ, but there was a revival of the woman Israel in the Tribulation, one of the tremendous impetuses of Israel which occurs often in history. The point is, Satan's number one target has been and always will be the Jew.

By rejecting Messiah throughout its history Israel is pregnant and frustrated because the pregnancy always come up to the point of delivery, the labour and the labour pains which is the holocaust, but they never, never deliver. Israel followed the principle of throwing off the yoke of their great tradition in the Old Testament, in the Word of God, and therefore periodically they are going to have terrible labour pains in which they scream in their torture which is the holocaust. But we have also noted that there are Gentile holocausts for the same reason. God protects the human race from barbarism by destroying those segments of the human race, Jew or Gentile, who would destroy the human race. Therefore it is inevitable that there would be holocausts for Israel and holocausts for Gentiles.

We resume with the purpose clause which is going to bring us into the subject of anti-Semitism. The purpose clause contains the expression of Satan's anti-Semitism related to the first and second advents of Christ. It is introduced by the conjunction i(na, translated "that" or "in order that." We have a secondary conjunction which introduces a temporal clause, o(tan, ordinarily translated "when" or "whenever." It introduces a temporal clause in which the action of the subordinate clause precedes the action of the main clause. So the subordinate clause is introduced by the word "when," "In order that when."

This is followed by the aorist active subjunctive of tiktō, which means to give birth, taking us back in history to the virgin birth, "when she gave birth." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the virgin Mary produces the action of the verb, starting with the virgin pregnancy and ending with the virgin birth. The subjunctive mood is used in the subordinate clause to indicate a purpose clause with i(na. This would be a potential subjunctive implying a future reference and qualified by the element of contingency.

Then we have Satan functioning, “in order that when she gave birth he [Satan].” Satan’s objective from the moment of the virgin birth. All previous attacks of Satan on the line of Christ have failed. Now we have a whole new set of attacks and one of them is anti-Semitism. In throwing off the yoke in eternity past Satan became the greatest barbarian of all time and therefore it is inevitable that he will use barbaric methods against anything that stands in his way, and more than anything else the very existence of any Jew on the face of the earth stands in his way. Therefore the inevitable holocausts. God protects and preserves the Jew. The Jews who are involved are the Jews who are involved in the pregnancy-holocaust, they are in labour pains but they never deliver. Those are the ones who are destroyed by the holocaust.

“he might destroy her,” the aorist active subjunctive of katesqiw which means to devour, to eat completely, so it comes to mean to totally destroy. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the potential action of the verb in its entirety. Satan has never succeeded in destroying all of Israel in any holocaust. The active voice: Satan produces the action of the verb under the policy of anti-Semitism. The potential subjunctive which is qualified by contingency that Satan is able to accomplish his objective. Satan will never accomplish his objective even at the point of his greatest power in the middle of the Tribulation.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object teknon referring to the Lord Jesus Christ historically, and with that a)utoj, the possessive genitive feminine, “her son” referring to the woman Israel throughout history and referring specifically also to the virgin Mary under the double entendre.

The attack of Satan is accomplished through Herod the Great — Matthew 2:12-19. Herod the Great is descended from Esau and is one of the great men of genius in history. Herod ruled the middle east and he did so as a client king to Rome. His genius at the end of his life was harnessed in a most unusual way to seek to destroy our Lord. Matthew’s account was the protection of our Lord from Satan’s greatest attempt to destroy Him during His childhood.

Anti-Semitism is the determining factor in the historical trends of Gentile nations. The fall of great men and great nations is directly related to their attitude toward the Jew. Anti-Semitism is first of all blasphemy. God does not need any help in His discipline of the Jews. But, secondly, it is the great barbarian activity of throwing off the yoke.

“It is a noteworthy fact of history that great conquerors such as Alexander, Caesar, and Napoleon always treated the Jew well. On the other hand lesser men endowed with narrower outlooks have failed to recognise the Jew and have sought to crush him. But such methods are contrary to nature, and tyranny, whether toward the Jew or toward any others, has never secured any permanent results. The same policy, anti-Semitism, has characterised subsequent dynasties from the Assyrians to the Romanovs and the same fate has overtaken them. The Jews have survived their disappearance from history” — Encyclopaedia Britannica, 14th edition, vol. 13, p5.

In verse 5 we find the strategic victory of the first advent in the middle of Satan’s great plan to destroy. We noted in verse four his tail, Satan’s power, dragged away in the prehistoric revolution in heaven “a third of the stars of heaven.” They threw off the harness. They were the fallen angels who followed Satan in the prehistoric angelic conflict, “in fact he [God] threw them [Satan and all the fallen angels] down to planet earth.” That is the future time when the devil’s desperation begins; “then the dragon [Satan] stood in opposition to the woman [Mary] who was about to deliver a child [anticipating the virgin birth of our Lord Jesus Christ] in order that when she gave birth he [Satan] might destroy her child [the humanity of Christ in the first advent].” This was one of the greatest attacks Satan ever made on our so great salvation, our spiritual life, and on the true meaning of the angelic conflict. But it did not succeed, according to verse 5.

One of the things that stands out is the efficiency of God’s plan so that inordinate competition against it could not succeed and never will. A second thought also comes out before we even get into the passage, and that is the great principle of the harness: the tremendous self-discipline and the tremendous system of authority and discipline that will exist in the perfect environment of the Millennium so that at the end of 1000 years of perfect environment where there will be no death except capital punishment, where everyone will have the perfect environment for happiness, where the world will not lack anything by way of food or water or any natural resource, where everything will be perfect environment. But perfect environment must have a harness and at the end of 1000 years of perfect environment we will see that the harness is thrown off.

We begin now with the incarnation in the first advent. We have the conjunction kai introducing a result from what precedes. In spite of Satan’s great plan and his great power as the ruler of this world he does not succeed. The aorist active indicative tells us why: the aorist active indicative of the verb τίκτω which means to give birth to a child, “And then she gave birth to a child.” The aorist tense is a reference to the virgin birth of Christ as the first fulfilment of the Davidic covenant, hence a constative aorist which contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: national Israel, along with the virgin Mary, is producing the action of the verb under the double entendre. National Israel produces the action of the verb through the tribe of Judah, the family of David, the virgin Mary. The indicative mood is declarative for the virgin birth, the incarnation, the hypostatic union.

“Then she gave birth to a child,” the accusative neuter plural. The child: even though Jesus Christ came in His humanity as a man, we notice that the accusative neuter plural direct object of ἔτεκεν which means a son is in the neuter gender because of the uniqueness of the person of Christ and what He had to do for us. We also have an accusative of apposition, ἄρσενος, a male son, our Lord Jesus Christ at the first advent in hypostatic union. It is interesting that we would have the words “male son,” which is the corrected translation, in the neuter gender and in the feminine gender, for ἄρσενος is a feminine gender. Why? The neuter gender indicates a great personal sense of destiny; the feminine gender indicates that Jesus Christ in His humanity had to constantly respond to the will of God the Father, and therefore the dynamics of the phrase, "a male son." The first advent was necessary to accomplish the strategic victory of the angelic conflict related to eternal salvation. The second advent of Christ is the time of fulfilling unconditional covenants; it is a tactical victory.

Next we have a reference to the first advent. The strategic victory of the angelic conflict took place at the cross. Our Lord's personal sense of destiny led Him to the cross. He was perfect in the prototype divine dynasphere in His humanity, He was qualified to go to the cross and bear our sins. As He approached the cross He expressed the repugnance of bearing our sins, "Father, if it be thy will let this cup pass from me." The feminine gender of the word "male" simply indicates the fact that He responded to the Father's will: "nevertheless, not my will but thine be done." He was single-minded, says the neuter gender, and He went to the cross, and on the cross He received the imputation and judgment of our sins. This is the basis of our so great salvation.

Now the second advent is mentioned briefly, starting with a relative pronoun, o(j which refers to Christ at the second advent because personal sense of destiny means His return and the establishing of His Millennial reign under the system of harness. The present active indicative of mellw means that it hasn't happened yet. Mellw is a verb talking about a future event which is brought close to you, not in time but in thought. We do not know when the Millennial reign of Christ will begin. We translate: "who was about to." The futuristic present tense denotes an event which has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain in eschatological doctrine that in thought it may be contemplated as already coming to pass. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb at the second advent and His Millennial reign. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the Millennial reign of Christ which is 1000 years of perfect environment following the second advent.

So we have "who [the Lord Jesus Christ] was about to rule," the present active infinitive of poimainw, which doesn't mean to rule ordinarily, it means to shepherd. Poimainw for His rule in the Millennium means that people in perfect environment are exactly like people in the environment of today. People en masse are no good! They still have the old sin nature, they are still fickle, up today and down tomorrow, changing their minds constantly. That is the principle. Therefore they must have: not basileuw, which would be rule in the sense that we use it, but poimainw, a shepherd with a stick. Sheep are stupid, therefore they must have a harness to enjoy perfect environment. There will be no revolutions, no activists, no Christian activism in the Millennium. Again, we have the futuristic present denoting an event which has not yet occurred but is brought into our thought to see the principle, "who is about to rule." This is the Millennium. With this we have the accusative plural direct object composed of an adjective paj, "all," and a noun e)qnoj, "all nations," followed by e)n plus the instrumental of r(abdoj plus the instrumental from sidhroj, "a rod of iron," an iron sceptre. The iron sceptre is the harness. Our Lord has a yoke for the harness today which is easy: "Come learn from me, my yoke is easy, my burden is light." What lightens burdens are the three stages of the faith-rest drill! But here we have a different harness, an iron sceptre emphasising our Lord's absolute power and the use of it in the case of anyone who gets out of line. Apart from the integrity of our Lord Jesus Christ and His iron sceptre there is no way that perfect environment on planet earth can be perpetuated for 1000 years. It is impossible to maintain perfect environment when man has an old sin nature without a harness, the old sin nature requires restraint. While Satan's cosmic system is not operational during the Millennium human volition plus the old sin nature can still get out of hand very quickly and must be controlled for maintenance of perfect environment. God has provided for us today the laws of divine establishment so that without perfect environment we can still fulfil the functions of the angelic conflict: the use of our own free will, self-determination.

The system which has been designed, the divine dynasphere, for the royal family in the Church Age is specifically to give the opportunity of receiving great blessing from life in historical prosperity or in historical adversity. No one can challenge the creator, our Lord Jesus Christ. A demonstration of this principle is the fact that even though it has been Satan's objective since human history began, and specifically with the beginning of the Jewish race, to annihilate the Jews and to remove them from the earth so that God cannot keep His word to them at the second advent. There must be Jews living in every generation from Abraham down through the Tribulation and to the point of the second advent of Christ. The Jews themselves — those who are unbelievers — cannot understand this even though they are constantly reaching out and groping.

When we come to second advent and perfect environment we have the principle that apart from the integrity of our Lord Jesus Christ and the authority of His iron sceptre there is no way that perfect environment on planet earth can be perpetuated for the last 1000 years of history, the Millennial reign of our Lord Jesus Christ. The sceptre of iron shatters human vessels, which emphasises capital punishment, the suppression of concepts such as crime and other concepts where violence is used to solve problems. Under the laws of divine establishment only capital punishment provides fear of the law on the part of criminals and respect for the law on the part of law-abiding citizens.

We have noted in the past that there is a legitimate violence which biblically is used in three areas: the function of law enforcement in line of duty operation, the function of the military establishment in defence of one's country — and there should be in both cases the freedom to use violence, and a third area: you have the right as a law abiding citizen to protect your privacy, your property, and your life. In a barbarian society violence is necessary to protect your privacy, your freedom, your property. In such a society there is always a liberal element that tries to abolish violence. These are the people who are in favour of a nuclear freeze, the yellow-bellied cowards who are afraid of military service, the people who are constantly popping up here and there who have no concept of historical reality.

The divine policy regarding the use of unlawful violence becomes pertinent at this point. Who uses unlawful violence? Criminals, gangsters, terrorists, paramilitary organisations, mercenaries, religious fanatics like Islam and its so-called holy wars. There are three exceptions which are the lawful use of violence, as we have noted.

The divine policy is first given to us in Genesis 9:5,6, "Most emphatically, I will require your lifeblood [if you try to solve your problems by violence and you therefore infringe upon the freedom of someone else], I will demand an accounting from [not just human beings] every animal [which kills a human being]. And from every man [who murders man], from every man's brother I will demand the life of the man [who murders]. Whoever sheds man's blood by man [in authority] his blood will be shed," the judicial modus operandi resulting in the establishment yoke and the administration of capital punishment. You cannot suppress crime and unlawful use of terrorism without the proper professional use of capital punishment, "for in the image of God he made man."

What does it mean that man was made in the image of God? It is not referring to overt appearance at all. It means three things that relate to the soul. In the essence of God are three factors which we have in the essence of man's soul. It means first of all self-consciousness, awareness of one's own existence, which is absolutely necessary to establish the awareness of the existence of others. No person can ever be thoughtful and sensitive of others unless he is aware of his own existence because he starts from a base of virtue from his own existence; secondly, moral reasoning power. Key words: "I ought"; thirdly, self-determination: "I will." That is the image of God. We have volition, free will, and we have the right of self-determination.

So the policy of God in Genesis 9:6 is capital punishment. A second declaration of this policy was given by our Lord Jesus Christ to Peter when Peter tried to solve a problem by violence. Peter began to understand that the Lord was in danger and when in the garden the temple guard came to arrest our Lord he was determined to defend Him. He pulled a sword and hacked off an ear. Matthew 26:52 tells us what our Lord said. He again declared the divine policy regarding the use of unlawful violence: "Return your sword to its scabbard; for all who draw the sword will die by the sword." That does not refer to the military or to law enforcement, and it doesn't even refer to a person protecting his own life. "For all who draw the sword" is the unlawful use of violence. For those who use unlawful violence the divine policy is that they will be destroyed by unlawful violence or legitimate violence. Violence will overtake them. If it is legitimate violence they will die by capital punishment. Those who live by violence have thrown off the harness.

Romans 13:3,4 gives us the third statement on divine policy: "For government authorities are not a cause for fear for moral function," moral function means civilisation, harness, and the solving of problems apart from violence, "but for evil function," the use of violence. "Really, is it your desire not to fear authority? If that is your desire, keep on doing good." In other words, be a law-abiding person. Resolve your problems within the framework of legitimate establishment authority, "and you will have recognition from it [the protection provided by legitimate government]; for it [client nation government] is a minister of God to you for the purpose of good," protection of your freedom, privacy, life and property. "But if you do evil," civil disobedience, the use of violence, to solve problems, "keep on being afraid; for it [the government] does not carry the sword [capital punishment] in vain."

Capital punishment must be a legitimate function of government and certain criminal must be continually, habitually executed. A criminal has no rights. Those who make the decision to commit crime, those who use violence in crime — murder, rape, armed robbery, whatever it is — should die by the sword [capital punishment], not be put up at taxpayers' expense. Fear of the law is a restraint, a harness for those who are tempted.

“for you see it [government of a client nation] is the minister of God for the purpose of administering punishment to him who practices evil.”

The principle of the divine policy was stated in Exodus 21:12 — “He who strikes a man so that he dies shall emphatically be put to death.” Numbers 35:30, “If anyone murders a person, the murderer shall be put to death on the evidence of witnesses, however no person will ever be put to death on the evidence of one person.” Capital punishment is not arbitrary, it is a judicial process the termination of which is execution.

There is a lot of injustice in the world, a lot of violence by which people appear to get away with it. They don't get away with it because of the court of final appeal which is mentioned in Romans 12:19, a mandate to us as believers: “Never take your own revenge, beloved, instead give place to punishment from the justice of God [let the High Court do the punishing], for it stands written [Deuteronomy 32:35], ‘Judgment [punishment] belongs to me, I will repay, says the Lord’.” In other words, no one ever gets away with unlawful violence. If the courts do not seem to do anything about it, if law enforcement seems to have overlooked it, if the military establishment has not been able to take care of it, leave it in the Lord's hands. He will take care of it: the application of the essence rationale in the second stage of the faith-rest drill to the situation. The justice of God which provides your blessing will be the means of resolving the problem.

Again, in Revelation 12:5 the iron sceptre is simply an extension of the divine policy throughout human history. The divine policy rejects the unlawful use of violence and punishes it judicially through the laws of divine establishment and through category three doctrine; the Lord intervenes. The iron sceptre also administers national punishment to criminal nations during the Millennium as during history.

Principle

1. The Millennium is a time of perfect environment, therefore the Millennium is a time of prosperity. Consequently, though there must be the iron sceptre of law enforcement and capital punishment to pass the prosperity test during the dispensation of perfect environment.
2. For freedom to be perpetuated there must be authority. Authority cannot exist without the sword of capital punishment: it puts teeth in the law.
3. Therefore a principle of history: you cannot have freedom without authority and you cannot have authority without freedom. Freedom and authority, therefore, must coexist.

4. Freedom without authority is anarchy; authority without freedom is tyranny.
5. The same principle holds true in the spiritual realm. Freedom without the authority of doctrine is antinomianism; authority without freedom is legalism.
6. In the Millennium freedom plus authority will provide the basis for legitimate self-determination in the perfect environment of our Lord's rule. If there was no capital punishment in the Millennium there would not be perfect environment very long. In other words, you cannot have good environment today and perfect environment in the future Millennium without authority.
7. Therefore the volitional issue of the angelic conflict will continue in the Millennium, and people will be evangelised because of freedom and they will have freedom because of the Lord's authority. Furthermore, people will be saved through the use of their own volition in the environment of freedom and salvation will be the same as it has always been since the beginning of history: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved."
8. That same freedom of the Millennium will permit the rejection of Christ as saviour without any form of spiritual or temporal bullying.
9. Freedom in the Millennium means exemption from arbitrary control of the volition. Freedom in the Millennium is maintained by our Lord's iron sceptre, hence the iron sceptre of Christ will guarantee privacy, the sacredness of property and human life in the Millennium. Freedom is the policy of God in the creation of the human race and the perpetuation of human history to resolve the prehistoric angelic conflict. Freedom, therefore, will exist under the authority of our Lord Jesus Christ in the Millennium.

Hence the principle: You cannot rule with a golden sceptre of perfect environment without the iron sceptre of authority and integrity. Law enforcement, honourable jurisprudence, strict punishment, are necessary for restraining the principle of trying to solve problems by violence.

Psalm 2:10-12, a passage dealing with the Millennium. "Therefore you kings, be wise; be warned, you rulers of the earth. Serve the Lord with respect, and rejoice with anticipation. Kiss the son, lest he be angry, and you perish in the way [capital punishment], for his wrath is kindled for a little while. How blessed are those who take refuge in him."

Kissing in the ancient world was a sign of submission to authority. Kissing the Son is recognition of His authority and thereby avoiding punishment and discipline from His iron sceptre. The relationship between the first advent and the second advent with the iron sceptre is stated in that same Psalm in verses 7-9:

"I will proclaim the decree of the Lord [God the Father]: he said to me [God the Son], 'You are my Son, today [first advent] I have begotten you [virgin birth]. Ask from me, and I will give you the nations [the Millennium] as your inheritance [coronation at the second advent], plus the very ends of the earth as your possession [the Millennial reign of Christ]. Therefore you will rule them [the nations of the Millennium] with an iron sceptre, and you will shatter them like pieces of pottery [capital punishment in the Millennium].”

You will note that the iron sceptre of our Lord’s authority in the Millennium shatters both individual criminals and conspiratorial nations, those who seek to disturb the peace.

The genius of Satan has used the question, “How can a loving God send his creatures to the lake of fire?” as the appeal to the sentence, and as a result, in order to resolve the whole issue and to demonstrate the fallacy of the devil’s argument in court, man was created. We are here as an inferior creature but possessing one thing in common with the angels: self-consciousness, moral reasoning power, self-determination, the image of God principle. That is why man was created in the image of God. Man was created in the image of God to resolve the angelic conflict.

Man is able to make moral decisions. We set up certain standards and once we determine what is right we say, “I ought to do what is right; I ought to do good rather than evil; I ought to do right rather than wrong; I ought to do this rather than sin.” And all of these concepts and functions are being observed by millions of angels, and this observation is a great court. Human history is simply a higher court resolving the problem of the fall of Satan and the third of the angels that he took with him.

The answer to this objection by Satan is found in the essence, the character of God, and a new creation was necessary to make an objective approach to the subject. It could have been pointed out very easily as it was in the original trial how and why and under what conditions every fallen angel failed, and when he had the grace opportunity, whatever form of salvation was offered, and he used his reasoning power to reject it. He was aware of his condition under self-consciousness, he was aware of the grace of God offer, and in self-determination he went negative and said, “I won’t.” That happened long before man walked on the face of the earth.

Any limitations on divine power are self-imposed to resolve the angelic conflict, to allow you to follow your own volition to its logical conclusions of failure or success. God is perfect; He can do no wrong. Satan, in his defence of the fallen angels, implies that God did a wrong thing when He created angels because He gave these creatures volition. But forget volition for a moment, it is absolutely useless without self-consciousness. Animals do not have this same self-consciousness, but the key to the human soul is the fact that it has self-consciousness. Self-consciousness, that part of the right lobe we call the conscience where we develop norms and standards, gives options in life under the principle of volition. That is what man has in common with the angels. The angelic body is superior in every way to the human body.

Everything that God has done for us is a manifestation of His perfect essence. Salvation manifests the sovereignty of God, the love of God, eternal life, His immutability, His virtue and integrity, etc. Logistical grace brings out His faithfulness. So we see the manifestations of His perfection. The pattern of angelic negative volition is expressed in two ways. First, Satan’s original sin of negative volition, and the angelic rejection of Christ. The creation of man to resolve the angelic conflict had to start on the same high note as the original creation of angels. Therefore, so as not to complicate it, there was one man and one woman in the garden, perfect provision and perfect environment, but there had to be a test for man's volition right from the start. Man was not created with a volition locked in positive, that wouldn't be volition.

Man and woman were self-conscious, they were aware of each other in perfect environment. They had the daily conversations with our Lord Jesus Christ which established the principle of their conscience, and they were told, not once but perhaps many times, that it was forbidden to eat from one tree named the knowledge of good and evil. They didn't know good and evil.

Man was the ruler of planet earth not knowing, of course, that Satan had been the previous ruler because it was his headquarters. Before the earth was prepared for man's habitation of it God took the ice pack off the earth and made man the ruler of it, which was immediately a challenge to Satan. But Satan, in his investigation of the situation, saw something immediately: Adam was not only the ruler of the world but he was the authority over the woman, so Satan realised that he had to make his attack on the woman. And he did. When the woman held out her hand and extended the fruit Adam had the function of his volition: the woman outside of the garden or Jesus Christ in the garden. He chose for the woman outside of the garden. The punishment was pronounced on the man and on the woman. The woman was made subordinate to the man, which she didn't like, and in Genesis 3:21 she decided she would always do something about it ...

"And the Lord God made garments of skin for Adam and his wife, and clothed them." He was demonstrating that He was going to give them both a great volitional opportunity and that He was going to make this opportunity available not only to them but to their progeny. The killing of an animal always correctly depicts the work of our Lord Jesus Christ on the cross. Notice that in verses 17 and 19 man was to be the bread winner. In all of this development of the curse the woman would always have to face a very special volitional problem: would she accept the authority of man or not? In effect, chapter three of Genesis says that this is a man's world. There is no way to get around it, it is a man's world and that is a part of the harness.

The woman said in Genesis 3:13, "The serpent deceived me, and I ate." The woman with a perfect soul was subject to deception. She, every day, along with the man had heard our Lord Jesus Christ make dissertation after dissertation, and yet the woman had failed. Arrogance was her first sin, like Satan's. She sinned first. She didn't know what she was doing, therefore the man who knew what he was doing is the basis for the old sin nature.

Verse 16, "To the woman he said, 'I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception. In sorrow you shall bring forth children; and your desire shall be to your husband,' a normal desire, 'and he shall rule over thee'," the basis for human history: the man will always rule over the woman. The woman is a responder. She is going to conceive; in sorrow she is going to bring forth children. And why does it say, "and thy desire shall be to thy husband"? Why even mention it? For the simplest of all reasons: the woman, like the man, will have her own harness to fight. The desire is put there as the harness, because the woman is going to resent and fight it, reject it. And she has to have something to accept or reject. Without that desire civilisation could not exist.

Everything that is stated in Genesis chapter three by way of judgment is not something like Satan's great trial (and the fallen angels) whereby you could say, "We can't do it, we are not going to do it, it is unfair." But God gave man and the woman in that trial the same deal that He gave Satan. Satan said, "How can a loving God cast His creatures (fallen angels) into the lake of fire?" That is the great issue. So when God condemned man everything that He mentioned had to do with temporal life, not eternal life. Everything in Satan's trial had to do with eternal condemnation. Why the difference? Because when you get down to that one verse on the coats of skin you have it. The issue was going to be a new tree of life, the cross, and throughout the Old Testament that cross would be depicted by an altar, and an animal would be on that altar. The blood of the animal would depict eternal salvation and the coat of skin would be the righteousness imputed, so that human history would exactly parallel divine history of the angelic conflict. So the angels could now watch the volition of man. Man failed the first test and from then on man would reproduce and the angels would observe.

The creation of man, then, resolves the angelic conflict and answers the appeal of Satan. To resolve the angelic conflict an inferior creature, man, is placed on one planet, the earth, possessing one thing in common with the angels as rational creatures, the image of God factor, the bona fide function of volition, Psalm 8:3-5; Hebrews 2:7. Human volition is therefore tested in exactly the same pattern as angelic volition. Angels began in status quo innocence; mankind began in status quo innocence. Angels sinned, Isaiah 14, the negative volition of Satan; the angels that followed him, Revelation 12:4. Mankind sinned: negative volition of Adam and the woman. God provided salvation for the angels, unknown as to its nature but the opportunity was there; God provided salvation for mankind. As a result angels are divided into two categories, according to Revelation 12:7; mankind is divided into two categories, according to John 3:36.

Two tests have been instituted, then, for man's volition. Under perfect environment mankind is prohibited the use of one tree, just a volitional test, and man could only fail by negative volition. There was no sin in the perfect environment of the garden until man brought it in by volition. There would be no sin in the garden until man used his volition to sin: disobedience to God's prohibition. In the case of the woman it was arrogance; in the case of the man it was a desire for the woman. Therefore it was switched: the woman will desire the man.

Then in sinfulness after the fall of man salvation is promised and offered to the human race, Genesis 3:15. Such salvation involved Christ dying twice on the cross, Isaiah 53:9; 1 Peter 2:24; 2 Corinthians 5:21; Colossians 2:12. The issue is different from the garden and perfect environment. In the garden the issue was a prohibition, therefore it emphasised negative volition: no, don't do it! But after the fall of man it is positive volition toward the new tree, the cross. Positive volition expressed in a non-meritorious way, "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." Faith is non-meritorious positive volition. Man's entrance into the plan of God through faith in Christ destroys the devil's appeal; it resolves the angelic conflict. The issue: Will man, inferior to angels and equipped with the same free will (volition, self-determination), choose for or against the plan of God, the grace of God? The solution: if even one member of the human race receives Jesus Christ through personal faith the angelic conflict is resolved, Hebrews 1:4-14; the entire chapter two; Colossians 2:14,15. Therefore operation footstool, Psalm 110:1; 1 Corinthians 15:24,25; Hebrews 1:13. This is why angels are watching and why we have angels rejoicing over one person, one sinner, who repents — Luke 15:7,10. Angelic observation is the issue. As a result of the angelic conflict, then, there is the plan of God in its three phases for mankind — phase one, salvation: faith in Christ; phase two: the believer in time; phase three: the believer in eternity. Through the fall of man Satan gained control of the world, however; but even though Satan is the ruler of this world he is not necessarily the controller, the ruler, of man as an individual. Human volition and/or free will makes man a free agent in the devil's world. Man can choose between the plan of God or Satan's plan: the divine dynasphere versus the cosmic system. The issue: Salvation through faith in Christ frees mankind from Satanic control and domination. The exception, of course, is the cosmic system. Hence, after salvation the more the believer learns doctrine, the more he advances inside the divine dynasphere, the greater his freedom and the greater his capacity to operate independently of the cosmic system. Satan is the ruler of this world, 2 Corinthians 4:4; John 12:31; 14:30; 16:11; Ephesians 2:2.

Angels observed Jesus Christ from the time of the virgin birth until the ascension, 1 Timothy 3:16. Fallen angels are organised under Satan's command to resist and oppose the believer, as in Job 1:6; 2:1-3; Ephesians 6:12. Angels are watching all of us as believers, according to 1 Corinthians 4:9; 6:3; 11:10; Ephesians 3:10; 1 Timothy 5:21; 1 Peter 1:12.

The angelic conflict, then, answers basic questions: Why man on the earth? Inside of man's soul volition is linked to the work of the cross, the new tree, and the cross resolves the angelic conflict. The victory of the angelic conflict is inevitable according to Colossians 2:14,15; Hebrews 2, because in every generation of human history there are those who believe in Jesus Christ. It answers the question: Why sin? Sin resolves the issue of phase one in the plan of God. Our sins were never imputed to us for judgment, they were imputed to Christ on the cross. It explains: Why suffering? It explains the plan of God and the royal family at the present time. It explains why we have chaos on the earth. It explains the principle that God's blessing for the believer who advances to maturity is as valid in a time of historical disaster as it is in a time of historical prosperity. And, of course, we learn that there are two kinds of spirituality: one for the Church Age, the filling of the Spirit must be compatible with the absence of Christ from the earth. Hence the filling of the Spirit produces what Christ would produce were He on earth because when He was on earth He functioned inside the prototype divine dynasphere; He has given us the operational divine dynasphere. In the Church Age the filling of the Spirit is never characterised by emotion. Emotional stimulation can be produced by a lot of things, but not by the filling of the Spirit in this dispensation. However, in the Millennium when Christ is present on earth the purpose of the filling of the Spirit is appreciation of Christ, and in the perfect environment of the Millennium the filling of the Spirit will be characterised by emotion and ecstasies, as per Joel 2:28,29. Such emotion and ecstasies at that time cannot be distorted by the presence of demons and the presence of Satan who are incarcerated during the Millennium.

So the angelic conflict explains much: the superiority of the law of spirituality over the Mosaic law; if Christ is greater than angels then revelation through Christ is superior to that which is administered by angels. The Mosaic law was disseminated and taught by angels, according to Acts 7:38; Galatians 3:19; Psalm 68:7; Deuteronomy 33:2. That is why the doctrine of the Church Age is a mystery doctrine.

The doctrine of the ascension is mentioned in the last phrase of Revelation 12:5. This final phrase begins with the conjunction kai, translated "furthermore." The nominative subject teknon, "child," goes back now to the first advent of Christ. With this we have the possessive genitive of a)utoj which in the feminine refers to Mary and her son. Then the verb which brings into view with the doctrine of the ascension, the aorist passive indicative of a)rpazw which means to be caught up, to be taken up, and it is a specific reference to our Lord's ascension. The culminative aorist views the ascension of Christ in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. The result is obvious: our Lord receives a new royal title and, of course, this is the basis for the Church Age in this aorist tense. The passive voice: Christ receives the action of the verb, He receives ascension which terminates the first advent. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the ascension of Christ. To guarantee that it is the ascension we have two prepositional phrases. In each case it is the preposition proj plus the accusative. Proj plus the accusative has several meanings. It means face to face with, in the presence of, before. We have proj plus qeoj here, "face to face with God [God the Father]," followed by proj plus qronoj, "before the throne." There is a conjunction kai between them, and it is translated "even." So the translation would be: "furthermore her son was caught up face to face with God, even before his throne."

The ascension is that doctrine of Christology pertaining to our Lord's first change of residence in hypostatic union. Beginning with the virgin birth Jesus Christ came into the world, first advent, and became unique as the God-Man. He was on the earth for thirty-three years, culminating with the cross, resurrection and ascension. The ascension is the first permanent change of station. It terminated the first advent and Jesus Christ went to heaven for the first time as the God-Man. It is followed by another doctrine which is always connected with it: the doctrine of the session where our Lord was told to be seated at the right hand of the Father in the place of honour. These two doctrines always go together and actually explain why we have the Church Age.

It was the ascension of our Lord and His session at the right hand of the Father which gave Him His third royal title. That was the first time our Lord had a royal title minus a royal family. His first royal title deals with the fact that He is God: His title is Son of God. He has a royal family: God the Father and God the Holy Spirit. His second royal title is son of David: when He became true humanity He came in the Davidic dynasty. He had a royal family: the family of David. But when He ascended and was seated at the right hand of the Father and was given His third royal patent — King of kings and Lord of lords, the bright morning star; there was no royal family. Therefore, God the Father who is always the planner did something that had never been done before in history and would never be done again, and that is to form a royal family on earth. Believers in this dispensation, the Church Age only, are this royal family. This royal family is called "Church," "body of Christ," "royal family." All of this means that as royal family we are a part of an unusual and special plan.

The ascension and the session of our Lord at the right hand of the Father is the basis for changing the dispensations, the basis for an entirely different way of life which incorporates everything that believers were mandated to do in the past, such as the faith-rest drill, a new power, a new system related to the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. God the Holy Spirit did not have a ministry with every believer in any past time before the Church Age. And God the Holy Spirit will not have a ministry with every believer in the Tribulation, only in this dispensation and the Millennium. So it is entirely different and for this reason we cannot go to the Old Testament for the details of the royal family plan. This is why the royal family plan is often called the doctrine of the mystery. "Mystery" means not known to those who are not in the fraternity. In the ancient world a mystery was the doctrine that belonged to a Greek fraternity and only the initiates understood the doctrine. And this is what we have. The Christian way of life was never known or revealed by the Old Testament prophets, it is a modus operandi for the royal family only. In the Christian way of life blessing belongs to the believer who advances to maturity even though he lives in a time of no prosperity historically. That is another great change.

The historical account of the ascension is given in Acts 1:9-11, (Our Lord had predicted the beginning of the Church Age with two doctrines: the baptism of the Holy Spirit and the ministry of God the Holy Spirit in Acts 1:5 and 8), "And after he had said those things, he was lifted up while they were looking on, and a cloud received him out of their sight. And as they gazed intently into the sky while he was departing, behold two men in white [teaching angels] clothing stood beside them; and they also said, 'Men of Galilee, why do you stand looking into the sky? This Jesus, who has been taken up from you into heaven, will come in just the same way as you have watched him go into heaven'." This is the first announcement of the ascension. They did not know His destiny; they could not see His destination because His destination was the third heaven.

The significance of the session of Christ is brought out in many ways. For example, in Psalm 110:1 it was prophesied as the terminating point of the first advent: "Sit down at my right hand" is the doctrine of the session. The session and the authority of Christ is found in Romans 8:34. The ascension and session are related to present ministries of our Lord and divide them from the past ministries where He was judged for our sins on the cross and where He began with the formation of the royal family. The ascension and session of Christ is always related to the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. It is the boundary line between the Old Testament functions of God the Holy Spirit to a few, like kings and prophets, and the universal ministry of God the Holy Spirit to every believer (every believer does not have the filling of the Spirit but every believer is indwelt by the Spirit). The line of demarcation between the Church Age ministry of the Spirit and the Old Testament is the ascension and session of Christ. Ephesians 1:20, "which power [of the Holy Spirit] had been operational in Christ [in the prototype divine dynasphere], the Father having raised him from the dead [resurrection of His human body], and having seated him at his own right hand in the heavenlies.” “Having seated Him at His own right hand in the heavenlies” is the ascension and session of our Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore there is a new mental attitude mandated as a result of this doctrine. This new mandate is found in Colossians 3:1,2, “If therefore you have been raised in Christ [we are in union with Christ] keep on desiring to possess and endeavouring to obtain the above things [the doctrine given in the first two chapters of Colossians] where Christ is sitting at the right hand of the Father. Keep thinking objectively about the above things [Bible doctrine], not the things on the earth [the things of the cosmic system].”

The cosmic system can only function in Satan’s kingdom and Satan’s kingdom is on earth. And so inside of the divine dynasphere the ministry of God the Holy Spirit is to provide us perception, and therefore objectivity about categories of doctrine, and we have to be objective about all of them to fulfil the plan of God. In that very context where this mandate is given we are told that Christ is sitting at the right hand of God. This is what differentiates us from the Old Testament saints and gives us a far greater opportunity.

The ascension and session of Christ is also related to the celebrityship of Christ, Hebrews 1:3, where a description of the Lord is as follows:

“Who being the radiance [the flashing forth] of the glory and the exact image of his essence.” The flashing forth of His glory is the fact that His resurrected body has that uniform of glory that radiates from the body. The exact image of His essence is Jesus Christ as God. So here we have a statement of the hypostatic union with emphasis on resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ.

“also sustaining all things by the verbal expression of his power.” The universe is held together by the verbal expression of our Lord’s power.

“Having himself accomplished the purification of sins [the cross, where He was judged for our sins], he was caused to sit down at the right hand of the Majesty in the highest places.”

In other words, taking this hypostatic union from the cross where He accomplished purification from our sins He was caused to sit down. That means resurrection, ascension and session, and that is His present status quo as the God-Man.

In Hebrews 1:13 again the subject of the ascension and session is mentioned, and this time in relationship to the angelic conflict: “But to which of the angels has he ever said at any time, ‘Sit down at my right hand, until I appoint your enemies the footstool of your feet’?”

That is a question that demands a negative answer in the Greek, “to no angel at any time.”

Prior to our Lord’s ascension and session mankind always operated under a specialised priesthood. In Israel the priesthood was the tribe of Levi, the family of Aaron, and only those who descended from Aaron were priests. By definition a priest is a man representing humanity to God. Outside of Israel there was the family priesthood: the head of the family was the priest. Abraham was the head of his family, therefore he was a priest. Both priesthoods were specialised. That means that if you at a certain period of time wanted to worship, you took an offering, went to the priest, and told him your sins. The priest had one hand on the head of the one who was announcing or confessing his sins, and that was a transferring of the sins that had been mentioned over to the lamb [representing Christ], which is an illustration of what happened on the cross — all personal sins were imputed to Christ and judged by God the Father. Now, in the Church Age, every one of us in the royal family of God is his own priest. We do not go to any priest to represent us before God.

Hebrews 8:1 — “Now the main point of what has been communicated is this: we have such a category of high priest [Jesus Christ], who has sat down at the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens,” therefore Jesus Christ starts a new priesthood, a royal family priesthood; and if you are a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ you are a member of the royal family, you represent yourself to God. We are our own priest and that has never been true before.

Our passage in Revelation 12 says: “her son was caught up face to face with God, even before his throne.” That broke the back of the devil. In Hebrews 10:12 — “But this one [Jesus Christ], when he had offered one unique sacrifice on behalf of the sins for all time, sat down on the right hand of God.” This verse is extremely important for this reason: When we came into the world God imputed human life in every individual case and, at the same time He imputed Adam’s original sin to that genetically-formed old sin nature so that we were born physically alive but spiritually dead. And we were not dead on the basis of our personal sins: “the wages of sin [one sin: Adam’s] is death”; “for by one man sin came into the world, and by one man death by sin.” Death by sin is the spiritual death; Adam’s sin is imputed to our genetically-formed old sin nature and our personal sins are definitely not judged by being imputed to us, they were imputed to Christ on the cross; that is the unique sacrifice.

So we have the principle that the ascension of our Lord and His session at the right hand of the Father is the basis for occupation with Christ: “Looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame [of bearing our sins], and is seated at the right hand of the Father.” So this doctrine is constantly emphasised.

The strategic victory was not overlooked by the apostle Peter when he said in 1 Peter 3:22, “[Jesus Christ] who is at the right hand of God, having gone into heaven, after angels [fallen angels] and authorities [the authorities who rule the world: Satan and his demon system] and powers had been subordinated to him.” So the session confirms the celebrityship of Christ, Acts 2:33; 5:31; Philippians 2:9.

The ascension of Christ verifies the efficacy of the sacrifice of our Lord on the cross, Hebrews 9:23,24, “Of necessity, therefore, on the one hand the models of things in heaven be cleansed with the shadows, but on the other hand the heavenly realities themselves with better sacrifices than the shadows [of animal blood]. But Christ has not entered into the holy of holies made with hands, the model on earth, but instead into heaven [the reality] heaven itself [into the presence of God] on behalf of us.”

The ascension means the strategic victory of Christ and therefore the ultimate defeat of Satan, operation footstool mentioned prophetically in Psalm 110:1, and quoted in Luke 2:42, 43; Acts 2:33, 34; Hebrews 1:13. The second advent will terminate operation footstool: Christ will supersede Satan as the ruler of this world, Zechariah 13:2; Colossians 2:15. The ascension of Christ indicates the completion of His mission in the first advent; it indicates the complete victory in the angelic conflict: it has already been won. The second advent, then, is merely a tactical victory to complete the coup de tat. Furthermore, the ascension of Christ reveals the postponement of the Millennial reign of Christ to permit the calling out of the royal family of God which gives us the greatest opportunity that believers have ever had. If you are a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ you have options and opportunities that did not even exist in the lives of the greatest believers in the past. Satan can do nothing about the formation of the royal family of God. He can attack it, he can pick at it, but he can't stop it. The royal family of God is being formed in Satan's kingdom right now. Satan has no power to stop the formation of the royal family of God, and when the royal family is completed and the resurrection or Rapture of the Church occurs, and Satan recognises the Tribulation as the end of the Age of Israel when he is cast out of heaven in the middle of the Tribulation and comes to the earth, that is the time of the eschatology of the devil's desperation.

The ascension also indicates the failure of Satan to destroy Christ during the first advent as per his plan stated at the end of Revelation 12:4, “then the dragon [Satan] stood before the woman [the virgin Mary & Israel] who was about to deliver a child [anticipating the virgin birth] in order that when she gave birth he [Satan] might destroy her child.” He did not succeed in that objective in the first advent.

The principle that comes out of this is very simple: No creature has the power to challenge the creator. Therefore when we as creatures try to challenge the creator, our Lord, it comes from arrogance, and arrogance is false power. Arrogance is blind and irrational; arrogance is self-destructive; arrogance rejects divine authority and seeks to overthrow it; arrogance resents human authority, especially establishment authority. The Satanic revolution was demonstrated a complete failure by the death, burial, resurrection, ascension of our Lord Jesus Christ; and anyone who sides with Satan by being involved in the cosmic system becomes a loser. The only way a believer can become a loser is to become involved in the cosmic system and, therefore, share Satan's defeat even though he has eternal life. The fact that Satan could not pre vent the ascension of Christ, even though billions of angels formed up to try to stop it, merely confirms the fact that Satan will never be able to prevent the second advent and the tactical victory of our Lord.

1 John 4:4, “Greater is He who is in you than he who is in the world.”

Verse 6 is the divine protection of Israel from the great holocaust of the Tribulation. Already there is an application before we begin: no one is going to take you out of this world until God permits it. No personal disaster, no national disaster, no conspiracy or plot of any kind can remove you from this life until God permits it.

The King James version of verse 6: “And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she had a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there a thousand, two hundred and three score days.”

We begin the translation with the connective conjunction kai, translated “And so.” The nominative singular subject h(gunh is “the woman,” true Israel, Jewish believers facing the greatest of all holocaust situations in the Tribulation. True Israel follows the pattern of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob by personal faith in Jesus Christ for salvation. And because of their faith in Christ, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were selected instead of their brothers for their perpetuation of the Jewish race. Hence, the woman does not refer to racial Israel, she refers in this passage to the Jewish believer in the Tribulation. Furthermore, we will see that it is referring to the Jewish believer of the first half of the Tribulation who was given the command to flee. In the second, those who were saved in the second half of the Tribulation, before the second advent, are given a different command and that is to fight. Notice that these are antithetical commands given to Jews who believe in Christ in the Tribulation. Gunh refers to Jews who believe in Christ in a future time. These Jews were evangelised by the 144,000 Jewish evangelists which we studied in chapter seven.

Next we have an aorist active indicative from the verb feugw which means “fled,” “And so the woman fled.” The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. In other words, it takes the obedience of the regenerate Jews of the first half of the Tribulation who follow the instructions of Matthew chapter 24 and gathers them into one entirety. If they are going to survive to fulfil the plan of God they must run.

In other words, you have to be flexible when you get into the plan of God. The inflexible thing in the plan of God is Bible doctrine, but you have to be flexible. What you do by way of application to a certain situation demands that you have a detailed knowledge of God’s plan and the ability to make more than one application in the variety of situations in this life as a believer. One thing characterises the legalistic believer: he is inflexible — about people, situations. Flexibility is extremely important. The active voice: the regenerate Jews or true Israel of the first half of the Tribulation produce the action: they ran. They probably wanted to stay and fight; that would have been inflexibility. The true application to their situation in their half of the Tribulation is run; in the last half of the Tribulation it is fight. So in application, you have to know when to fight and you have to know when to run. Your survival doesn’t depend on what your instinct is. If you as a believer live by your emotions or what is sometimes called “your instincts” you are not going to make it.

The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of their obedience to the divine instructions resulting in their preservation, their prosperity, their blessing.

Then it says in a prepositional phrase, e)ij plus the accusative of e)renoj, “into the high desert country.” The wilderness or the high desert country refers to Moab, Edom, Ammon and places like Petra. Next we have a particle of place, o(pou, “where,” followed by the verb, the present active indicative of e)xw. The present tense is a customary present denoting what may be reasonably expected to occur under the protective care of God when that is related to the three stages of the faith-rest drill. The active voice: God produces the action by providing a place where Jews saved in the first half of the Tribulation can have a refuge. In other words, o(pou or “where” denotes there is only one place where the Jews in Palestine can go and be absolutely safe for the rest of the Tribulation. They not only have to go there in the first place, but they have to stay there in the second place. Once you get in the will of God there is also the staying power: two facets of the faith-rest drill. The indicative mood is declarative for a refuge for Jews saved during the first half of the Tribulation.

Then we have two more words, the accusative singular direct object from topo, “place.” And with it we have the adverb of place e)kei, translated “there.”

“And so the woman [true Israel, believing Jews evangelised during the first half of the Tribulation] fled to the high desert country [the mountains of Matthew 24:16, or Edom, Moab, and Ammon of Daniel 11:41] where she had a place of refuge.”

This place of refuge is prepared by God, the perfect passive participle of e)toimazw, “which has been prepared.” God does not neglect the believer in time of disaster. Only the believer neglects God in time of prosperity and often loses out in disaster. By prosperity is meant opportunity, not prosperity in the sense of success. We all have an opportunity to learn doctrine, so this is a period of opportunity. We may not have this period always. The dramatic perfect tense emphasises the results of the completed action of the verb, a haven for believing Jews who are saved during the first half of the Tribulation and delivered by the grace of God in the last half.

We notice first the remnant evangelised in the first half of the Tribulation. Generally they are evangelised by 144,000 Jewish evangelists. In obedience to the Word of God they flee to the high desert country of Edom, Moab, and Ammon, Daniel 11:41. The second category are the remnant evangelised in the second half of the Tribulation and generally they are evangelised by Moses and Elijah, the two witnesses that we have studied. Instead of fleeing, their refuge is in Jerusalem and they fight the king of the north in the final phase of the Armageddon campaign, Zechariah 14:1-7. So in category #1 we have the fleeing remnant in the first half of the Tribulation; in category #2 we have the fighting remnant in the last half of the Tribulation.

This dramatic present tense refers to the first group, those who run in obedience to the Word of God. The passive voice: the place of refuge receives the action of the verb, i.e., a haven being prepared for refugee born-again Jews. The participle of circumstantial. Then we have the origin of this refuge, the preposition a)po plus the ablative of source, qeoj, “from the source of God,” or we could translate this also the ablative of means, “prepared by God.” Generally the ablative is not the regular expression of means, the instrumental case is, but when the expression of means is accompanied by implication of origin or source then the ablative is used. So we have, "which has been prepared by God."

Daniel 11:41, "He [the king of the north] will invade the Land of Beauty [Israel during the Tribulation], and many [Jewish people involved in the cosmic system] will fall; but [by way of contrast] these [true Israel, believing Jews evangelised in the first half of the Tribulation] shall escape danger from his hand: in Edom, Moab and the foremost cities of the sons of Ammon." That is the place prepared by God.

Note: A place of danger is a place of refuge if you are in the divine dynasphere. No matter how bad things become historically the prosperity provided in the last four gates of the divine dynasphere is extended to believers in disaster as in time of historical prosperity. So historical prosperity or historical disaster has nothing whatever to do with your blessing. The world can be in the worst type of disaster and that does not in any way hinder your blessing from momentum. The world can be in a time of prosperity and if you are in the cosmic system then you are going to have your own personal disaster. Therefore, as a believer related to the plan of God, phase two, you make your own prosperity or your own disaster. Therefore you do not run with the trends of history. The only time the trends of history are meaningful to you: if you are in the cosmic system God will often use historical disaster to punish you, and all other believers in the same status quo. But inside of the divine dynasphere you make your own blessing; inside of the cosmic system you make your own disaster. While historical trends apply to groups of people in this world they have no application to you unless you are earmarked in this year for the sin unto death or some special divine punishment. To have a personal sense of destiny you must live in the plan of God so that you know personally that you are not going to be destroyed by historical disaster and, in fact, you will find great blessing. The same blessing God would give you in historical prosperity He will give you in historical disaster. You make your own way. You make your own failures by bad decisions, and all bad decisions relate to the cosmic system; you make your own prosperity by good decisions from a position of strength. Therefore you, from making good decisions from a position of strength, have control of your life in historical disaster, in historical prosperity, and you have a personal sense of destiny no matter how bad things become. That is true for these Jews no matter how bad things become in this greatest holocaust of all history.

Matthew 24:15, the amplification of this passage: "Therefore when you see what is called the Abomination Of Desolation [the detestable idol of destruction, the image of the dictator of the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation] which was spoken of by Daniel the prophet, standing in the holy place (let the doctrinal one make application)."

The Jews living in Jerusalem have responded to the message of the 144,000 evangelists and have accepted Christ by the hundreds of thousands. They have spent a couple of years in doctrine and they now have a very important message. Right in the middle of the Tribulation in the temple, in the holy of holies, up goes this statue called the Abomination of Desolation or, literally, the detestable idol of destruction. It will be broadcast all over town, everyone will know about it, because a deal is made between the Jewish dictator of Israel and the Gentile dictator of the revived Roman empire. In this treaty which is beneficial to Israel apparently, according to that dictator, instead of Judaism there will be an overt acceptance of ecumenical religion. When that happens an idol will be placed in the holy of holies in the temple, and this is the warning given by Daniel in 9:27; 11:31; 12:11. But here the Jews are growing in grace, they have heard Bible doctrine, they are learning many wonderful things, they are enjoying prosperity, and all of a sudden they are warned to move to their place of refuge because the wall of fire for the Jewish believers of the first half of the Tribulation is a geographical location — Edom, Moab, and Ammon.

Verses 16-20, “Then those same ones [Jewish believers positive toward doctrine] in Judea [the Tribulational State of Israel] flee to the mountains [high desert country]; let him who is on the roof not come down to pack needed things that are in his house; and let him who is in the field [people in business] not turn back to get his coat,” don’t go home to get anything; as soon as you hear, get out! “But woe to those who are pregnant and to those who are nursing babies in those days!” It is difficult to travel under those conditions, “Furthermore pray that your flight does not occur during inclement weather, or on the Sabbath day;” traffic problems.

So this is the signal to leave; those who remain will die. The believers who go in obedience to the Word of God, making the right application, the faith-rest drill, are going to make it. The negative believers are going to die. Here is a great lesson that ignorance is one of the greatest destroyers. Ignorance is self-destructive, not only in the Church Age but in the dispensation which follows the Rapture.

When mother stops, God takes over. That is the story of the Word of God. The mother is pregnant but there is not life in the womb. No mother ever created life; no mother and father ever produced life. They produce the basis by which the human race is perpetuated to fulfil the angelic conflict. Therefore, the concept that somehow pregnancy is glorified merely goes back to the fact that pregnancy is a part of the curse on the woman for her part in the fall. But what happens after that is extremely important because human life is the monopoly of God. Only God can create human life and only God has created human life. After the foetus has emerged from the womb that human life is imputed to the format soul of the foetus from the womb, so that God imputes life after birth. The mother’s job is over after birth as far as that person is concerned in relationship to what follows — human life. And the fact that God imputes human life to male and female after the foetus emerges from the womb becomes an extremely important principle of doctrine for it basically means that God has a purpose for every person who has ever existed.

Matthew 24:15, note how these believing Jews were able to escape to a place of refuge. “Let the doctrinal believer make application”. There comes a time in historical disaster when all the doctrine you have learned in historical prosperity must be applied to the situation; when the glorification of the Lord Jesus Christ demands that you think clearly, think under pressure, therefore to possess courage, for courage is the ability to think under pressure, to make application from what you have learned. That is exactly what we have here, "Let the doctrinal believer make application." During those three and a half years of the first part of the Tribulation many of the Jews are very positive to doctrine. They learned and they understood the eschatology which they had to apply when it became history. When eschatology becomes history only those believers who are positive toward doctrine and have done their homework are able to survive.

The passage we are studying is Revelation 12:6, and this is the first half of Matthew 24, but as we examine now the purpose clause which follows it will give us opportunity to go back to Matthew 24:21. But in Revelation 12:6, note the corrected translation as far as we have gone in our study, a translation which applies to a future time but has application to us now. God has a purpose for your life. If you have a personal sense of destiny from the perception of Bible doctrine then you will recognise God's purpose for your life, you will have a personal sense of destiny, you will have control of your life, you will continue to make good decisions from a position of strength, and in time of historical disaster you will be magnificent, first in your thinking and then in your application. You will function automatically under the three stages of the faith-rest drill, you will constantly have in the front of your mind, as you do now, the essence of God rationale, the plan of God rationale, the logistical grace rationale, the imputation of God rationale. These four are the most basic rationales in the function of your spiritual life and without cognisance of them you cannot function effectively in time of historical disaster. And that isn't all. Neither can you function effectively in time of historical prosperity. In time of historical prosperity you will lack capacity; in time of historical disaster you will fall apart, you will make the wrong decisions because you have no personal sense of destiny. Until you understand these rationales you aren't even in a position to make major decisions in life. The same great blessings that God gives in prosperity He also gives in disaster to those who are prepared for it through daily perception of Bible doctrine.

Revelation 12:6, "And so the woman [true Israel, believing Jews who have been evangelised during the first half of the Tribulation] fled to the high desert country, where she has a place of refuge which has been prepared by God."

"Prepared by God" applies to you today. God has a place of refuge for you. In time of prosperity your place of refuge is in the perception of Bible doctrine which gives to cognisance of God's plan for the royal family, the modus operandi of the divine dynasphere. But God also has a plan for you in time of historical disaster; He has a place prepared for you.

Now we move in the middle of verse 6 to divine provision. We begin with the conjunction i(na which introduces the purpose clause. We translate it "that," or "in order that." With this we have the adverb of place, e)kei referring to a geographical location. With us it is not a specific geographical location in time of disaster. You are safe as a positive believer living inside of the divine dynasphere. Safety is not a geographical location in this dispensation; it will be in the future. Safety is your position in Christ and your residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. So this purpose shows us that in the future, in the Tribulation, there will be a geographical place of safety, i.e. for those who are Jewish believers in the first half of the Tribulation. In the second half the Jewish believers are going to be in a hot spot where they are going to fight and terminate the battle of Armageddon.

“that there they may sustain her [Israel],” the present active subjunctive of the verb trefw which means to nourish or to sustain. Trefw is used for a mother nourishing her child, but it comes to mean to sustain or to support. The progressive present tense is for an action in the state of persistence. The active voice: guardian angels produce the action of the verb in sustaining that area, cutting it off and isolating it from any Satanic attacks, either direct or through human activity. The subjunctive mood is a potential subjunctive, it implies a future reference and indicates that all believers will not be smart enough to know when to get up and move. The potential subjunctive is also qualified by the element of contingency: they must remain there in the place of refuge for the rest of the Tribulation in order to survive to the Millennium. Whether they remain or not is the subject of Matthew 24:21-27.

Matthew 24:21, “for at that time [moving now to the last half of the Tribulation] there will be great oppression such as has not occurred since the beginning of the world,” it will be the greatest holocaust of all time, a Jewish and Gentile holocaust but here we are dealing with Jews and therefore it applies to them, “until the present time, nor ever will occur.” In other words, this is the greatest human disaster in history.

Verse 22, “And unless those days [the last half of the Tribulation] had been cut short, no human life would have been delivered; but for the sake of the elected to privilege,” in every period of history, in every generation there is always the election to privilege that belongs to any believer. In this case the elected to privilege are Jews who have accepted Christ as saviour, who must be alive for the return of Christ at the second advent for the fulfilment of the unconditional covenants to Israel, for the perpetuation of the human race in the Millennium, “those days will be cut short.”

Verse 23, At that time they are going to be tested. You cannot make a decision, you cannot fulfil the highest function of the faith-rest drill, which is the application of a rationale, not a verse; and when you have control of your life, without having it challenged. Here is the challenge in the middle of verse 23: “Then if anyone shall say to you, ‘Here is Christ,’ or ‘There is he,’ do not believe that person.” Now you have taken a stand and you have to switch gears and refuse to believe what is false. In the application of the rationales avoid getting into some emotional activity, something that is false.

Verse 24, “For false Messiahs and false prophets will appear on the scene and will show great signs and miracles, to deceive, even the elected to privilege.” How do you avoid being deceived? By listening to people? No. You avoid it by applying Bible doctrine from your own frame of reference, your own right lobe. There is always someone standing around to counsel you. You must always choose between that person and what Bible doctrine in your right lobe says. The minute you start being counselled by legalistic Christians you have lost control of your life, you have no personal sense of destiny, and you will begin to make bad decisions from a position of weakness. “Do not believe,” it says at the end of verse 23. How do you avoid this sort of thing? The answer is found in the essence of God rationale, the plan of God rationale, the logistical grace rationale, and the imputation of God rationale. There is no substitute for these things. The whole point is that you must become spiritually self-sustaining before historical disaster, because you will never make it after historical disaster. You do the counselling you have learned and not from the false prophet.

Verse 25, "Behold, I have told you in advance." Our Lord has said this to the disciples over and over again and Matthew remembered the words of our Lord, "I have taught you these things." Underline two words: "in advance." You learn in advance, you learn in time of prosperity for times of historical disaster.

We have with this in our passage, Revelation 12:6 — the accusative singular of a)utoj, "to sustain her [Israel]," the Jews who were smart enough to go to the place of security; but are they smart enough to stay?

Verse 26, "Consequently, if they shall say to you, 'Behold, there he is out in the desert,' do not go out of the refuge, or, 'Behold, he is in one of the inner rooms,' do not believe him."

Verse 27, How will they know? "For just as lightning comes from the east and flashes to the west, so shall the coming of the Son of Man be."

The principle: Whenever there is a time of historical disaster for believers who have been positive toward doctrine it always clear exactly what they should do. They will have no problem in making the right decision from a position of strength: their perception and understanding of doctrine. No greater illustration could be used than lightning. One thing about lightning: if it is on the horizon you can always see it. If it is right up on you, you don't see it but you do hear it. So you know when lightning is around; and, by the same token, when the true second advent occurs, when Messiah returns, these Jews will know it. It will be just as clear as lightning that you can see on the horizon. And just as lightning can be observed by all, so also the second advent. Everyone on earth will see Christ when He returns, according to Revelation 1:7. Lightning travels fast, with great speed, and so also the second advent will occur quickly, Revelation 22:7,12.

One other sign is given regarding the second advent, in Matthew 24:28, "Wherever there is a corpse, there the vultures will be gathered." So if there is any doubt about it look out from the high desert country and look toward Jerusalem and you will see more vultures than you ever dreamed possible on this earth. The vultures will be gathered because of the tremendous destruction of the armies in the state of Israel during the last phase of the Armageddon campaign. From the high desert country the believing Jews who fled in the middle of the Tribulation will be able to see literally thousands, and perhaps even millions, of vultures feasting on the carrion of human bodies. In fact it will take seven months to bury the dead, according to Ezekiel. Those who are killed in Palestine during the last phase of the Armageddon campaign, their corpses will be strewn throughout the country. So obviously, then, it will be clear. They will know when it is time to come down. They will see more vultures than they have ever seen.

Revelation 12:6c, we have one more phrase: “one thousand, two hundred and sixty days.” That is the shortened last half of the Tribulation. It is listed by days under the principle that every believer must live every day at a time as unto the Lord. This time is 42 months or three and a half years, shortened up a little. This is the time of Satan’s desperation, the time which begins with the abomination of desolation in Jerusalem and goes to the second advent. Hence, this is the last half of the Tribulation and during this time Satan will launch the greatest attack in history against the Jews. The objective will be to wipe out all Jews prior to the second advent of Christ so that when Christ returns there will be no Jews to regather, there will be no Jews to receive the unconditional promises of the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic, and New covenants to Israel.

There are two applications of doctrine to those surviving this great holocaust. The application is to flee if you are saved in the first half of the Tribulation. Regenerate Jews must understand the eschatology of the abomination of desolation. Once they have arrived in the place of refuge they must apply the doctrinal principle we have noticed, which is of course, to stay there and not be deceived. The same doctrinal principle is found in Exodus 14:13,14 where Moses said to the people: “Do not fear! Stand fast and watch the deliverance of the Lord which he will accomplish for you today.” Moses was appealing to them to be able to think, to use the plan of God rationale which had been so clearly delineated prior to leaving Egypt. You have to be able to think under pressure, that is courage; thinking doctrine under pressure is courage. “The Lord will fight for you while you keep silent.” They were all whining and complaining, typical of people under pressure when they become cowards and emote. They were to wait for orders, and they would get them. Once the Red Sea parted they would know exactly what to do. This means that they would depend at this point upon the leadership of Moses.

Mobs cannot think and people under the control of their emotion cannot think. They were just a stupid mob. They were bright people but you take Jews and mass them all together with their high IQs and they are just another stupid mob. Principle: The masses cannot think. When you join a mob you are just another stupid jackass! You can’t think in mobs. The mobs that cheered Pompey one day during his great triumphal procession, jeered him before he died. The mobs that cheered Caesar assassinated him later on. The mobs have never changed, and people don’t change; and when you join a group and start advocating something, you are no brighter than the dumbest person in that mob, and you have reduced your IQ to zero. So you have to avoid crusades; you have to avoid getting emotional and joining some mob for some alleged rights. Mobs cannot think. It is very easy to join the mob because the mob always comes up with propaganda. All the cults are designed for mob organisation; all the songs and all the slogans are designed for mobs.

So what did Moses tell them? What you have to understand when you face historical crisis, just as much as the Jews did when they came to the Red Sea and the armoured forces of Pharaoh behind them were closing in: “Stand fast! Watch the deliverance of the Lord which he will accomplish for you today... the Lord will fight for you, while you keep silent.”

What is the difference between a mob and a military organisation? The military organisation is silent, they wait for orders. Someone is in authority and gives orders. With the mob, someone stirs them up and runs them down the streets screaming. God would give the orders to Moses and he would relay them to the people.

This same principle applies to the place of refuge. These Jews are to stand fast for 1260 days, or three and a half years. They were to do nothing, they were to remain where they were. There God has provided for them a wall of fire, and there they are protected and not anywhere else. By listing this time in terms of days the obvious principle emerges: believers are to live one day at a time. Psalm 25:5 — “Guide me with your doctrine and train me, because you are the God of my deliverance. All day long I have confidence in you.”

Undoubtedly the Jewish refugees were offering the prayer of Psalm 90:12, “teach us to number our days [“correctly” is added in the Hebrew], that we may achieve a right lobe full of wisdom [the proper application of doctrine].”

Psalm 119:97, “How I love your doctrine! I think about it all day long.”

2 Corinthians 4:16, “Therefore we are not discouraged, for though our outer man is decaying, yet our inner man is renewed day by day.”

The provision of logistical grace is the sustaining factor for Jewish believers of the first half of the Tribulation, for outside of that refuge is going to the greatest holocaust of all time and for them they will know the truth, then, of Lamentations 3:20-25. Recall is the application of doctrine, and you need humility to apply doctrine just as you need humility to learn doctrine. There is no virtue in life without humility; there is no dynamics without it. “The Lord’s compassions never fail. They are new every morning; great is thy faithfulness. ‘The Lord is my portion [my provision],’ says my soul, ‘Therefore I have confidence in him.’ The Lord is good to those who trust in him, to the soul who seeks him”.

The counterpart for the royal family is found in Ephesians 5:14,15 — “Therefore, he communicates, ‘Wake up you sleeping ones [get out of the cosmic system], Get up from among the dead ones [the believer involved in cosmic two], And Christ will shine on you [life in the divine dynasphere].’ Therefore beware that you walk accurately [doctrine, thought], not as unwise ones [cosmic involvement], but as wise [believers living, residing, functioning, inside the divine dynasphere], constantly buying time [one day at a time], because the days are evil.”

Proverbs 3:16, “Length of days is in her [doctrine’s] right hand; and in her left hand are riches and honour.”

These are the principles that apply in time of historical disaster.

The motivation for the holocaust of the Tribulation has to do with Satan being expelled from heaven. In verse 7 we have warfare in heaven, the last campaign to ever be fought in heaven, and this is the only time that it will be of such as nature as to include the clash of soldier-type angels.

In the past we have noted the angelic order of battle. It begins with our Lord Jesus Christ who is the Commander-in-Chief of the army of elect angels, under the title of Adonai Sabaoth, translated generally, "the Lord of hosts." The word "host" meant "army" two or three hundred years ago when the King James version was translated. So He is the Lord of the armies, His title as number one in the angelic order of battle. Number two in the order are the archangels or army commanders, and two of them are mentioned in the Bible, Michael and Gabriel. Two are mentioned in the book of Enoch, an extra-biblical source, Raphael and Uriel. Michael commands the army of angels who defend Israel. For this reason he has an additional title: he is called the prince of Israel in Daniel 10:21. In the past Michael fought with Satan over the body of Moses, according to 2 Peter 2:11 and Jude 9. Michael defends Israel in the Tribulation, according to several prophecies, Daniel 12:1; Revelation 12:7.

In Daniel 12:1 we read, "Now at that time Michael, the great prince who stands guard over the sons of your people [the Jews in every generation of human history], will arise. For there will be a time of great distress [the Tribulation] such as never occurred since there was a [client] nation," since the time of Moses and the Exodus, "until that time [the Tribulation]; furthermore at that time your people [the Jews], everyone who is found written in the book [of life], will be rescued [by the second advent]."

Gabriel is not only an archangel or army commander but is an officer of arms in the angelic college of heralds. He is commissioned to explain to Daniel the vision of the ram and the he-goat in Daniel chapter eight. He was sent to Zecharias to announce the birth of John the Baptist.

Number three is the angelic general staff, studied before in Revelation chapters four and five in connection with leading in the worship in heaven. Number four is called Sabaoth, and this would be the rank and file of angelic creatures. It refers to the fact that there are a number of categories among elect angels in that particular group, including the guardian angels in Psalm 91:1ff; a river of fire battalion mentioned in Daniel 7:10; the angelic armies is described in Psalm 103:21, "Bless the Lord, all you angels who are in his armies, you who serve him doing his will"; Psalm 148:2, "Praise him, all his angels; praise him, all his armies of angels!" And when a pur sui vant angel announced to the shepherds the birth of our Lord he was joined by a multitude of heavenly armies praising God, according to Luke 2:13. At the time of the birth of our Lord the entire elect angelic army of angels passed in review. We have ministering angels included in this group, according to Hebrews 1:14. It is quite an extensive group even though there are only four categories in the order of battle.

Revelation 12:7 begins with a connective conjunction kai, translated "and," followed by the aorist middle indicative of the verb ginomai, "And there was." The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety: warfare in heaven. Right now there are two categories of angels located in heaven: Satan and his special imperial guard plus all other categories of fallen angels; also a great many of the elect angels. Right now there is a sort of an armed truce in heaven but it will break out into open war when God gives permission. That occurs in the middle of the Tribulation. In the meantime Michael is itching to get his hands on Satan, being most anxious to prove that he is as tough as Satan. The middle voice: this is a deponent verb which is, of course, middle in form, active in meaning. The warfare produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the last battle in heaven. This battle in heaven, by the way, precedes the Armageddon campaign which breaks out shortly thereafter on earth. Reason: Satan is confined to the earth. Today Satan is not confined in any sense of the word.

The next word is a predicate nominative which goes with ginomai, the word polemoj in the Greek which is very rarely used as “war”; it is used generally for a battle or for a campaign. Here it appears to be more of a battle than anything else. This translation is used in contrast to the angelic conflict in heaven which has been going on for millions of years and during all of human history. So polemoj means that this is an actual armed conflict between elect angels and fallen angels. The area for the battlefield is given in the prepositional phrase e)n plus the locative of o)uranoj, “in heaven.” Translation so far: “And there was a battle in heaven.” The conflict finally breaks out but God holds it in check until the middle of the Tribulation. One of the most important things about making staff decisions is timing. It is always better to choose your own battlefield and your own time. In that way the person who has control, who actually makes the choice of battlefield and timing, inevitably wins the battle and the campaign; and of he does it often enough wins the war.

One of the greatest blessings in life is to have good timing. There is a right time to do a right thing. You can do a right thing at the wrong time and it is still wrong; you can do a right thing at the right time and it is right. It is arrogance that motivates a believer to do a right thing at the wrong time. For example, to try to straighten someone out when it is none of your business. You may be right but in trying to do it you are wrong. God’s timing is perfect. If God straightened out the person it would be the right time; when you try to straighten out someone it is the wrong time.

We see now the antagonists. First of all, on the Lord’s side we begin with the army commander. This would be Michael and his army of angels “fought against,” the aorist active infinitive of polemew which means to fight a battle. The culminative aorist tense views the angelic battle in heaven in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing angels. Michael and his elect angels won the battle. In the Greek you generally have the winner mentioned first. Satan and his demon assault army were driven out of heaven and confined to planet earth. The active voice: Michael and the army of elect angels produce the action. The infinitive of actual result. This is the way it will happen in the middle of the Tribulation.

We have a prepositional phrase to show the antagonists with the protagonists, meta plus the genitive of drakwn. Meta generally means “with,” but it is translated correctly here “against.” Then we have the dragon, who is Satan of course, and his army mentioned. We have a dual subject: drakwn is a part of the nominative: “the dragon and his angels fought back.” We have the aorist active indicative again of polemew. Altogether it simply says: “Now there was a battle in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon [Satan]; furthermore the dragon and his fallen angels fought back.”

Note that the initiative belongs to God. Because God has control of the timing the initiative belongs to Him. From the word order it is concluded that the attack was initiated by Michael and his elect angels. At present and during the course of human history up to the middle of the Tribulation Michael is restrained from either verbal or military attack against Satan. Michael is the greatest illustration of leadership in the angelic realm because of his tremendous self-restraint. The man who controls great armies must first of all control himself. Michael is the perfect illustration of this principle. You cannot control others if you do not have control of yourself.

In Jude 9 we read: "But Michael the archangel, when he disputed with the devil about the body of Moses, did not dare to bring a slanderous accusation against him, but said to him, 'The Lord rebuke you'."

In other words, this is restraint. Michael would love to tear into Satan. Even though Satan was created greater and stronger than Michael, Michael is now greater than Satan. He is in that new order of seraphs.

Principle: Even people who deserve to be slandered are not to be slandered. That is the principle of casting all your cares upon Him; that is the principle of putting it in the Lord's hands; and that is the basis for avoiding that piece of arrogance called crusader arrogance. Even people who are wrong, even people who are evil, are not to be slandered. Why? When you slander someone else you are blaspheming God. You are saying that God is not in control.

Verse 8, the outcome of the battle, the victory of the elect angels: "And [they] prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven." This is merely the continuation of the last half of verse seven moving into verse eight. We have the connective conjunction kai again, followed by the aorist active indicative of i)sxuw which means to overcome, plus the negative o)uk, "they did not succeed." They did not have the power; they did not win. And with the idiom we have a conjunction kai emphasising a noteworthy fact, therefore translated "nevertheless," "nevertheless they did not win." The aorist tense of i)sxuw is the culminative aorist, it contemplates the defeat of Satan and fallen angels in its entirety. We don't know how long the battle lasted; it took place right in the middle of the Tribulation; but this passage emphasises its existing results in the culminative aorist. Satan is cast out of heaven, his army is driven out of heaven and confined to the earth, resulting in the greatest wave of anti-Semitism the world will ever know. The active voice: Satan produces the negative action of not being able to overcome Michael, while the suffix, a third person singular, includes the third demon assault army as well. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical reality of what we might call the eschatological reality of a future event that happens in the middle of the Tribulation.

When Michael is finally permitted to launch his attack against the fallen angels with his angelic order of battle, he succeeds completely. He is prepared for that day.

Principle: Whether angels or human beings God uses prepared people, prepared creatures. The preparation is the perception of Bible doctrine plus its application within the framework of motivational and functional virtue. You are never prepared, nor can you be prepared as a believer living in the cosmic system. You can only be prepared by living consistently in the divine dynasphere, utilising every provision to live and to function there at gate four, getting the momentum that will take you to gate eight. There is where prepared people live. Our usefulness to God does not depend upon our zeal, i.e. like the people who are going to run out and “do great things for God.” Zeal is no substitute for being prepared.

One thing about Michael: he will have the greatest hour of any army commander in the history of the universe, and it will represent every category necessary for preparation, his leadership ability, his self-restraint, his total rejection of any form of arrogance, his ability to be patient and to maintain a high level of motivation and performance in that great angelic army that he commands. This is a reminder for all of us that there is no substitute for being prepared — which has nothing to do with zeal. You have to be able to think doctrine if you are going to be prepared. When Michael is prepared he is given a command, and he is ready. God uses prepared people, but remember: he wins under God’s orders; he never gets out from under God’s authority. No one is ever great who gets out from under authority; it destroys greatness.

Resuming in verse 8, the negative conjunction o)udh is translated “neither.” With it we have a temporal adverb e)ti, meaning “no longer.” We translate it “in fact a place was no longer found.” The word “place” is the nominative singular from topo)j. This is a place in heaven. Then the aorist passive indicative of the verb e(uriskw, “found.” The culminative aorist tense contemplates the vacancy in heaven in its entirety. It emphasises it from the viewpoint of the existing results. Satan was not only thrown out of heaven but so were all fallen angels, and they are now confined to planet earth. The passive voice: the place receives the action of the verb — negative place, “no place found.” This is a part of the idiom of Satan’s excommunication from heaven. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of Satan’s permanent expulsion from heaven.

With this we have the objective genitive plural from the intensive pronoun a)uto)j which is rarely ever used as an intensive pronoun. Instead, it is used as a personal pronoun, third person plural, referring to both Satan and his entire army of fallen angels. It is translated “for them,” both Satan and the third demon assault army. Then the prepositional phrase en plus the locative of o)urano)j, “in heaven.”

“Nevertheless he [Satan] did not win the battle of heaven; in fact a place was no longer found for them in heaven.”

Until this time, and during the entire course of human history, Satan has lived in heaven. So has his special imperial guard, the ones that lost the battle and went out with him. Though he was the ruler of this world Satan always lived in heaven. He wanted to take over heaven; he was never able to take over heaven though he always tried. That access is denied for the first and only time in the middle of the Tribulation, which means that for the entire course of human history Satan has lived in heaven and merely comes to the earth at times in the ruling of his kingdom. This begins, of course, the eschatology of the devil’s desperation which is covered in detail in Revelation chapters 12-19. One of the functions of Satan in heaven today is to slander and malign believers. Our advocate is the Lord Jesus Christ who defends us in heaven.

The eschatology of the devil's desperation

By definition the devil's desperation begins at this moment when he is expelled in heaven. This will be in the middle of the Tribulation. We will be in heaven. Once Satan is confined to earth he is desperate to avoid certain judgements. He realises that he has lost the battle and therefore in his desperation Satan attacks Israel in the greatest of all holocausts which is the seventh trumpet and the beginning of the third woe. The third woe is actually the entire course of the devil's desperation. It is broken down into six parts:

Part 1, the beginning of Satan's desperation, the great holocaust of Israel, the seventh trumpet which is the beginning of the third woe, Revelation 12:12-17.

Part 2, we meet the devil's two witnesses, the two great dictators of the last half of the Tribulation. One is a Gentile dictator of the revived Roman empire; the other is a Jewish dictator of the state of Israel in the Tribulation. We meet them in Revelation 13.

Part 3, evangelism continues on the earth in spite of the fact that all of the demons are on the earth, both those who are disembodied spirits and those who have bodies, and it is the worst time of tribulation the world will ever know — Revelation 14.

Part 4, Revelation 15 & 16. While Satan is still ruler of the world in the last half of the Tribulation, and now confined to the world, his kingdom has become his temporary jail, divine judgment is administered through the seven last plagues or the seven goblet judgements.

Part 5, Satan's last attack on the human race. The devil finally plays his ace trump just before the second advent. Religion has always been the devil's ace trump and in the last half of the Tribulation he has organised the greatest system of ecumenical religion the world has ever known — Revelation chapters 17 & 18.

Part 6, The second advent of Christ where Satan and his whole system, both angelic and human, is defeated and destroyed. Satan is imprisoned for 1000 years.

Satan's tyranny and frustration will be seen in the policies of his dictators in Revelation. The consequences of Satan's desperation will be studied in the Armageddon campaign — Revelation chapter 16:12-16. The greatest attack of Satan's desperation coming from religion will hit the entire human race, but especially Israel, the last half of chapter 13 as well as chapters 17 & 18. Satan's human armies of the Armageddon campaign are destroyed; Satan's two dictators are cast into the lake of fire; and in Revelation 20:1-3 Satan himself is dethroned and incarcerated in the abyss for 1000 years, his last 1000 before he is freed for a short time. His sentence was served in full during the Millennium and once he is let out the first thing he does is start the big revolution called the Gog revolution. From that point on it is all down hill into hell and the lake of fire forever.

Therefore, the eschatology of Satan's desperation begins with the expulsion of Satan and all fallen angels from heaven in the middle of the Tribulation and concludes with the second advent of Christ three and a half years later. Essentially then, it is the last three and a half years of the Tribulation and the last half of the book of Revelation which is devoted primarily to the devil's desperation — chapters 12-19.

Verse 9, the result of the victory and the beginning of the eschatology of the devil's desperation begins. We begin, as usual, with kai, the sequential conjunction translated "Then." The conjunction gives the final results of the battle of heaven mentioned briefly in verses 7 & 8. The subject is composed of several words: the nominative singular from the adjective megaj and the noun drakwn. "And the great dragon," "was thrown out," the aorist passive indicative of the verb ballw. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. Once Michael is permitted to go into action it is no problem at all. It is a very short battle; Satan doesn't have a chance. The only reason Satan can flex his muscles today is simply because God permits it as part of the angelic conflict and part of the options we as members of the human race, and specifically born-again believers, exercise in relationship to the flexing of Satan's muscles. The passive voice: Satan receives the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of cleansing heaven of all fallen angels led by Satan himself. "Then the great dragon was thrown out of heaven."

As a result of the victory of the battle of heaven Satan and all fallen angels were thrown out, and it indicates they were thrown out with ease. For the first time since the angelic conflict began in eternity past heaven was cleansed of all fallen angels. That is not true today, it has never been true both in the prehistoric angelic conflict and in the human history phase of the angelic conflict. This can be classified, then, as the second fall of Satan.

We are studying the phrase in verse 9 where the great dragon was thrown out of heaven. The first fall of Satan occurred in prehistoric times and was the first revolution of any creature, the prehistoric fall which actually began the angelic conflict.

Isaiah 14:13,14, the principle of this fall: "But you said in your right lobe [thought], 'I will ascend to heaven; I will raise my throne above the stars of God [angelic creatures], and I will sit enthroned on the mount of the assembly in the uttermost extremity of the north. I will ascend above the heights of the clouds [angelic masses]; I will make myself like the Most High [God]'."

Ezekiel 28:12-18 notes that same fall of Satan: "You had the seal of perfection," he was absolutely perfect as a creature from the hand of God, "full of wisdom and perfect beauty." He was smart enough to know that he was the most beautiful creature that ever came along and he was handsome enough as a creature to try to use his brains, his genius to his own advantage. If there is anything that destroys talent, beauty, brains, anything that can be considered worthwhile, it is arrogance. First there is the thought of arrogance and then there is the action of arrogance or the decision of arrogance. With Satan, first he thought it, then he decided it, and then he did it. He led the first great revolt in the prehistoric angelic conflict.

Verse 13, "You were in Eden, the garden of God," he was also in perfect environment. The original sin of angelic creatures was like the original sin of human creatures, it occurred as a decision in perfect environment. Adam was perfect in beauty and in brains just as Satan was, and the environment was perfect. So immediately we know that there are three things that you can do without as far as happiness in life is concerned: a. To be a genius mentally; b. Physical beauty in some form; c. Perfect or improved environment. And yet it is interesting that people associate happiness with these three things although they are the least important things in life as far as happiness is concerned. These three factors do not bring happiness to the one who has them. Happiness is a state of mind, the capacity of one's soul. It is the absence of arrogance and vanity, bitterness, vindictiveness, implacability. Happiness is something that all members of the human race are born without. We are not born happy, even as we are not born free [we were born helpless]. Happiness is not the beauty you acquire from birth, or the lack of it, the brains, IQ or lack of it, it isn't the environment. Those things do not make happiness. Happiness is acquired with or without these things by the amount of truth that goes into the human soul. That is the way it was with the angels.

Satan was created an adult with perfect beauty, with the greatest genius of any creature, and with perfect environment. He did not have to acquire these things, he had them from the start of his life. He was the sum total of perfection. So he made a decision. He wanted something more, God's power. And so a new factor comes in: arrogance promotes ambition [inordinate ambition]. The lust for power has its roots in arrogance. It is much more than simply having the ability to manipulate people. The arrogance part that starts it all says, "Look at me." It is self-preoccupation, a desire for recognition.

What is the most unstable type of life on the earth today? People when they get together in a mass. When they start striking; when they start this or that type of march; everyone is reduced to the lowest common denominator, the dumbest person in a crowd of a thousand parading or marching for some cause. Whoever the dumbest is everyone has reduced himself to that point. Why do they do it? Because as an individual they can't attain anything so they get into a group where they think they can attain it; they are recognised in a group. But masses are the most unstable thing in the world. By comparison a den of wolves is much more stable. There is nothing more disgusting than a mass of people pulled together by their arrogance and their lust, looking for something to make them important for they associate being important with happiness. Mobs have lost their individuality, they are no longer making decisions from their soul, from the truth that they have. They are slaves to a demagogue. Mobs or masses have no control over their lives. There is no cause in the world that is worth joining a mob going somewhere to be stupid. That's activism. Far more dangerous than nuclear weapons are mobs.

All of this started with the first fall of Satan.

Verse 15, "You were blameless in your ways from the day you were created until unrighteousness was found in you." The first sinner of all creatures was Satan. He had everything to make him happy but he lusted for power.

Verse 17, "Your right lobe was lifted up [arrogance] because of your beauty; you corrupted your wisdom by reason of your glamour.

Verse 18, "By the multitude of your iniquities in dishonest transactions [conspiracy], you have desecrated your sanctuaries."

That was the first fall of Satan and that is why man was created: to resolve the angelic conflict. That is why we have one thing in common with the angels, the various parts of the soul.

The second fall of Satan comes in the middle of the Tribulation when Satan is cast out of heaven, the beginning of the eschatology of the devil's desperation. That is found in Isaiah 14:12; Ezekiel 28:16; Luke 10:18; Revelation 12:7-9.

The third fall of Satan is at the end of the Tribulation. Once Satan is confined to earth he has passed the peak of his power. His power is limited because he is confined to earth in the last half of the Tribulation, but he is still the ruler of this world. But when the second advent of Christ occurs he loses his power completely. Isaiah 14:15 says, "Nevertheless you will be cast down to Sheol, to the recesses of the pit [the abyss]." Revelation 20:1-3 gives us that fall in detail.

The eschatology of the devil's desperation is coterminous with the second and third falls of Satan. It is the last three and a half years of the Tribulation. Satan resides in heaven from the time of his first fall in the angelic conflict and he continues to reside in heaven until the middle of the Tribulation. The devil's desperation is a system of eschatology that cannot become history until Satan is cast out of heaven and can no longer have access to that place. The eschatology of the devil's desperation is the period of maximum creature power pitted against the omnipotence of God. Its termination demonstrates the doctrine that the creature can challenge the creator because he has the volition, but he can never win. When you are involved in a battle you cannot win you can never be happy. Born again believers as well as unbelievers in the cosmic system are challenging the creator, the Lord Jesus Christ. That is why in Philippians chapter three certain believers are called the enemies of the cross. The creature who challenges the creator is a loser and losers are never happy. There is no excuse, of course, for a believer being a loser. Any believer who gets in the cosmic system makes bad decisions from a position of weakness, loses control of his life, has no personal sense of destiny, and is a loser. No greater tragedy exists in this life than to use human volition to side with creatures, and Satan, against the creator. This is siding with two categories of creatures: fallen angels and people living in the cosmic system, believers and unbelievers. Human history is the account of man's volition deciding for either creature power or the divine power of the Lord Jesus Christ. And since creature power has lost, and always will, all creature power is related to what is false and what is deceptive. So it is always false, deceptive and minus virtue. But creator power, the creator being our Lord Jesus Christ, is always true [Bible doctrine], always gives the person involved integrity, and instead of deceit the development of a winner. So man's volition only has power as it identifies with creator power rather than creature power. The power man possesses is no greater than the power with which he identifies. You can join the masses and mobs who are seeking glory, seeking happiness, seeking power, seeking recognition, or you can remain an individual and identify with the creator power, the system which God has provided in this dispensation, the divine dynasphere. Nothing is more important than identifying with the power of God, and this begins with the decision to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.

In the rest of verse 9 we have the identity of the dragon. We have some nominatives of appellation. The first of these is o)fi]j, an onomatopoeic word born by imitating the natural sound of the snake. With this we have the adjective a)rxaioj, translated "ancient," "the ancient serpent." The serpent was the most beautiful of all lower creation and therefore was the pet in the garden. Before the serpent crawled it walked, and when the serpent walked it was the most beautiful of all creatures. The serpent of the present time is one of the most repulsive; it is not the serpent of the garden. These nominatives are in apposition to drakwn and so we translate, "the great dragon, the ancient serpent," Genesis 3:1.

We have an articular present active participle which follows, kalew, "who is called." The definite article is used as a relative pronoun translated "who." The present tense is a perfective present referring to a fact of nomenclature which has come to be in the past but is emphasised as a present reality. The passive voice: the dragon or drakwn receives the action of the verb, a circumstantial participle used to introduce a nominative of appellation. He is no called by the appellative diaboloj meaning slanderer, accuser. It is derived from the Greek word diaballw which means to slander. He is the maligner, the accuser, the slanderer. That is what devil means. The word diaboloj translated "devil" in English is synonymous is kathgor which means accuser. Devil means slanderer, gossip, accuser. When it says in the next phrase, he is "called the devil," this means he is the accuser, the slanderer of the brethren. We will see this in verse 10 where he is said to accuse believers.

Believers continue to sin after salvation, 1 John 1:8,10. Satan accumulates a sin file on every believer, taking cognisance of the activities of any and every believer in cosmic one and in cosmic two. The longer one stays, the bigger the file! Then Satan goes into the presence of the Father in heaven and slanders and accuses the believer. But every believer has a defence attorney in heaven, Jesus Christ, who defends our case when Satan brings accusation into the court of heaven — 1 John 2:1. The basis of our Lord's defence is the fact that these sins which Satan mentions in heaven were judged on the cross, according to 2 Corinthians 5:21. All personal sins in history were imputed to Christ on the cross and judged. Therefore when Satan accuses the believer in heaven the case is always thrown out of court. After this the sins of the believer become a family matter for the administration of discipline.

The final nominative of appellation is the word Satanaj, "Satan" which is taken from Aramaic. Satan is the enemy of God, he is the enemy of the believer, he is the enemy of Israel. God has logistically provided for every attack of the devil.

Satan

1. Satan was the highest of all angelic creatures before the fall. He was the anointed cherub.
2. But Satan is now lower than a new order that was created as a result of the angelic prehistoric conflict, the order of the seraph. The cherub only has four wings; the seraph has six wings. The fact that Satan commands all fallen angels is taught in Matthew 8:28; 9:34; 12:26; Luke 11:18,19. Satan is the ruler of this world — Luke 4:5-7; John 12:31; 14:30; 16:11; 2 Corinthians 4:4; Ephesians 2:2.
3. As the prehistoric super creature Satan had three falls.
4. As far as human history is concerned Satan has two advents. He entered the garden of Eden to tempt the woman, Genesis chapter 3; he also returns to the earth a second time at the end of the Millennium and in a conspiracy starts the last revolution of history, the Gog revolution.
5. The devil is the central antagonist of the angelic conflict in human history, Hebrews 1 & 2.
6. Satan has an organisation to defeat mankind — Ephesians 6:10-12. Since Satan means "enemy" he is the enemy of the Church, Revelation 2; he is the enemy of doctrine, Matthew 13:9; he is the original murderer of the human race, John 8:44; he is the enemy of Israel, Revelation 12:13; he is the enemy of Christ, Revelation 12:4.
7. The devil has strategy to control nations, Revelation 12:9; 20:3; he has strategy to control the human race. In the development of the cosmic system he has found the perfect way of doing it, 2 Corinthians 2:11, we are not ignorant because we have a detailed profile of him in the Word of God.

Moving on in verse 9 to the verb of deception, we have the articular present active participle of the verb planaw, translated to "deceive." We translate it as a relative clause because the definite article is used as a relative pronoun, translated "who," "who deceives." This is a progressive present tense, it denotes action in the state of persistence, therefore present linear aktionsart. The active voice: Satan produces the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial and it is a reminder to us that no matter how bright or smart you are, no matter how much doctrine you have learned, Satan is smarter than any of us as a creature. Only residence in the divine dynasphere, persistence in the perception of doctrine is going to protect us from this type of deception.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object composed of two words. First of all an adjective, o(loj, which means entire. O(loj refers, in this case, to the entire human race. With this we have a noun meaning the world in the sense of all of its inhabitants, o)ikoumenh. In the time of the Roman empire o)ikoumenh referred to people living on the earth. In fact it was often used for the inhabitants of the Roman empire and as such it refers to mankind in general. It is translated “the entire inhabited earth” but it is referring to mankind on earth.

In the middle of the Tribulation Satan and the fallen angels are cast down to the earth, as we have noted in the great war in heaven. Again, it is repeated under the aorist passive indicative of the verb ballw. With all of his tremendous ability he cannot challenge the power of the creator and so he was hurled down. Furthermore, he was hurled down by his contemporaries, Michael and his army. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the eschatology of the devil’s desperation which is the last half of the Tribulation. The passive voice: Satan receives the action of the verb after having access to heaven during the entire period of the prehistoric angelic conflict.

Our of this verb and the passive voice comes a concept which has to do with us. What are our abilities? What are our achievements? What makes us great or better than our peers, or better than others? What is the thinking in our soul whereby we can say that we have success and others do not, whereby we regard ourselves to be above others, superior to others, better than others? Whatever it is, whatever the system of competition, if it is inordinate competition it is in cosmic one and is the basis for weakness. Being in cosmic one is preoccupation with self; being in cosmic two is antagonism toward truth; and the thing that we have to remember is that no matter how great we are or how strong we are, no matter what abilities or what achievements we have in life there is always someone better. If our happiness is based on being better than anyone else in a certain sphere, in a certain activity, it is a concept totally detrimental to Christianity. We have to recognise that no matter how good we are or how great we are someone is always better, and the fact that they are better doesn’t make them happy and it certainly doesn’t make us happy. The point is: none of us are actually strong no matter what talent or achievement we have. Therefore we must find a power greater than ourselves. That power can be found in one of two ways: through truth; what we think is the important factor, the motivation in life, the greatness; or through a system of arrogance and inordinate ambition, a system of recognition and praise, of striving and competing, and this of course is the cosmic system. All believers after salvation make this decision: basically to go with the truth (Bible doctrine), or basically they make a decision to go with the cosmic system. It is the cosmic system, of course, that is so destructive: where believers have such a miserable time on this earth, and where they lose out.

Satan was hurled down to the earth, so all of his achievement ends in being hurled to the earth. The preposition e)ij plus the noun gh, “to the earth.” In the meantime Satan, the greatest achiever of all time, is very unhappy; he is the most miserable creature in the universe and he continues to evangelise through misery. Note that he took all of his crowd with him, “and his angels [fallen angels],” the nominative plural subject a)ggeloj plus the intensive pronoun a)utoj. This is the beginning of the eschatology of the devil’s desperation. Satan only has a short time before the second advent, three and a half years. Once the second advent occurs, however, both Satan and all of the fallen angels are going to be incarcerated. Satan will be imprisoned in the abyss for 1000 years — Revelation 20:1-3. Then he will be given his freedom for a short time and he will start a conspiracy on earth, the Gog revolution, and again he will be cast into the lake of fire. The fallen angels will be thrown directly into the lake of fire at the second advent, according to Matthew 25:41. This is what we call the baptism of fire.

Translation of verse 9: “Then the great dragon, the ancient serpent who is called the Devil, and Satan, who keeps on deceiving the entire world, was thrown out of heaven: he was hurled to the earth; furthermore, his angels were thrown out with him.”

Verse 10, a proclamation of victory. We begin with the sequential conjunction kai, translated “then,” and the aorist active indicative of the verb a)kouw which means to hear, to listen: and it means that the one who is listening or hearing is teachable; in fact, one of the most teachable of all persons in the history of the Church, the apostle John himself whose humility made it possible for him to master a tremendous amount of information. He was always teachable, he had no problem of arrogance.

The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. In order to learn you have to listen; you can’t talk and learn at the same time. The active voice: John as the human author of Revelation produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality. He not only listened but he listened and learned.

The accusative singular direct object is from two words: the adjective megaj which ordinarily means “great” but here means “loud”; and then the word fwnh, “voice.” With this the prepositional phrase to tell us the place from which the loud voice originated, e)n plus the locative of o)uranoj. “Then I heard a loud voice in heaven.” The present active participle which follows is simply translated “which said.” It is the participle of the verb legw, the verb that is built upon the noun logoj which means word, doctrine, principle, and many other things. This is the basic verb of communication. The descriptive present tense is for that which is now going on in the narrative. The active voice: while the author of the loud voice is not identified it seems to belong to the highest of all angels in the college of heralds. He is an officer therefore of seraph rank. This is a proclamation dealing with the defeat of Satan, an angel, therefore it belongs to the realm of angelic heraldry.

The interesting thing is that we can learn something from the one who made the proclamation. As the king of arms he has now been promoted to a rank which did not exist when the angelic conflict began. The highest-ranking angel prior to the angelic conflict in prehistoric times was Satan the anointed cherub. A seraph is an angel who was lower than Satan when the angelic conflict began but he was a plugger who hung in in faithfulness to the Word and to truth; and eventually, because of truth, he became a winner and now is ranking superior to Satan for all eternity. The message we receive from him: It pays to be a pluggger; it pays to stay with truth; it pays to stay with Bible doctrine.

Next we have the announcement of the second advent and this is a victorious proclamation, but it is not the announcement of the greatest of all victories because the greatest occurred at the first advent. So we have to learn to distinguish between strategic and tactical victory.

Strategy is the military science of everything that is involved in troops up to the point of the battlefield. It has to do with logistics, mobilisation plans, organisation, order of battle, how troops move in logistics to a point of concentration. Once they reach a point of concentration and a battle ensues the movement on the battlefield is called tactics.

In strategy our Lord Jesus Christ broke Satan's back by the first advent. His strategic manoeuvre was to become true humanity and the God-Man. As the God-Man Jesus Christ came into the world and received human life: the doctrine of the hypostatic union. The reason for all of this is because when we come into the world human life is imputed to our soul after birth. Adam's original sin is imputed to the genetically-formed old sin nature, and that means that all personal sins are never imputed to us for judgment. The wages of sin is death and we are spiritually dead at birth because Adam's sin is imputed. Our personal sins are never imputed to us for judgment, instead they were reserved for our Lord Jesus Christ and were imputed to Him for judgment on the cross. When our Lord came into the world through the virgin birth, inside the prototype divine dynasphere, in His humanity He continued to live a perfect life though He was tempted far beyond anything we have ever known. When He went to the cross His humanity alone could be judged for sin — as God He could have nothing to do with sin — and therefore He was judged on the cross. When that judgment was completed He said, Tetelestai, "if is finished," and when He said those words Satan had been strategically defeated. That was the strategic victory of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The strategic victory, however, was not completed until He died physically. His death on the cross bearing our sins is spiritual death. It was followed by spiritual death: Christ died twice on the cross. He was three days in the grave followed by resurrection and ascension, and when He was told by God the Father to "Sit down at my right hand until I make your enemies the footstool of your feet," he was speaking to the humanity of Christ. Jesus Christ as God does not sit; Jesus Christ as true humanity does, and that is when He received that great third royal title, the one which called for the Church Age. There was no royal family to go with that title; we are the royal family. The Church Age was inserted into history at that point and the royal family is being formed at this time. The reason the royal family is being formed at this time and not some other time is because our Lord Jesus Christ did not receive this royal title until after the ascension, and the moment that He sat down the strategic victory was completed. This was a strategic victory.

Now there is still a tactical victory, and that comes in three parts: the first part is anyone, any member of the royal family, who during the Church Age lives inside of that same divine dynasphere, God's plan for the royal family in this dispensation. After the Rapture of the Church there is the Tribulation, and in the Tribulation there is also a way of life which goes back to the spiritual life of the Old Testament believers: the three stages of the faith-rest drill. And there is individual tactical victory for anyone who resides and functions, and has momentum, inside the divine dynasphere, achieving gate eight. But the tactical victory culminates when our Lord returns to the earth at the second advent. At that point Satan is overthrown as the ruler of this world and we have 1000 years of perfect environment on the earth. That is all part of the tactical victory. The tactical victory, then, begins at the Church Age and goes all of the way through to the Millennium.

So we have the announcement now of the tactical victory. We begin with the adverb of the present in general which is called a)rti, and it means "now," referring to the present in general terms. With this we have the nominative singular subject from the word swthria. Sometimes it means salvation in a personal sense of redemption but more often than not, as here, it simply refers to deliverance and that is the correct translation here. "Then I heard a loud voice in heaven which said, Now deliverance." The second advent is a time of deliverance for those believers who are winners in the Tribulation. The winners generally survive, a few of them are used as martyrs to demonstrate the power of doctrine, but the second advent is the time of their deliverance; they survive the last half of the Tribulation.

The first advent was swthria, i.e. salvation in terms of the cross, Jesus Christ taking our place, but the second advent is physical deliverance, and therefore the corrected translation: "Now the deliverance." The deliverance refers to the second advent of Christ, His deliverance from violence, tyranny, religion, persecution, warfare, anti-Semitism, the demon assault army, deliverance therefore from demons who are disembodied spirits and demons who have bodies, deliverance from the cruelty of unbelievers, and the terrible cruelty of born-again believers who live in the cosmic system. So the deliverance is very meaningful.

Next comes the aorist middle indicative of the verb ginomai. Ginomai has two connotations. It means to become something you were not before (when speaking of an individual); also it has to do with something that appears on the scene in the sequence of history. In the sequence of history in the future the second advent is said to come. "Now the deliverance [the second advent] has come." The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the period extended over a period of time. It recognises, for example, the succession of events leading up to the second advent, and with the adverb a)rti it refers to the events of the last half of the Tribulation. The middle voice: this is a deponent verb, middle in form, active in meaning. The deliverance produces the action of the verb. This is, of course, an announcement of victory, therefore an announcement of proclamation for winners. The indicative mood is declarative viewing the action of the verb from the viewpoint of reality.

Then we have the adjunctive use of kai, translated "also," and an appositional nominative from the noun dunamij, "power," a reference to Christ as God, therefore His omnipotence. It is also a reference to the true humanity of Christ in hypostatic union, therefore Christ in the prototype divine dynasphere. Jesus Christ returns to the earth in His hypostatic union. That is the concept of this part of the proclamation. Jesus Christ returns in the power of His hypostatic union which includes His omnipotence as deity and His impeccability as resurrected humanity.

With this we have the conjunction kai translated “even,” and then the nominative of exclamation from the noun basileia and it refers to the Millennial kingdom. It is a reference to the Father’s plan for the last 1000 years of history. God the Father plans for Jesus Christ to rule the world, beginning at the second advent. Satan is superseded and put into prison for 1000 years. That is the time of perfect environment on the earth. This kingdom is characterised by perfect environment: no warfare for 1000 years, very little crime and the criminals executed — the only occasion of death in the Millennium, and the lion and the lamb will lie down side by side.

This kingdom belongs to God, the descriptive genitive of qeoj, “the kingdom of God.” Furthermore, to understand that John is a believer we have the possessive genitive plural from the personal pronoun e)gw, and it is correctly translated “our God.” We have a personal relationship with God forever, and while the Millennium is still human history and is a thousand years in length it is not eternity. In the Millennium those who are winners in the Church Age are going to rule something.

Then we have a connective conjunction kai translated “and,” then a nominative of exclamation, e)cousia which generally means authority. It has a secondary meaning of power but the ordinary word for power is dunamij. This word really means authority. Of course, with authority goes power; that is how the Greek derives its secondary meaning. “And the authority.” But whose authority? The possessive genitive from the noun Xristoj, the authority of Christ. And we have again the possessive genitive of the intensive pronoun a)utoj used as a personal pronoun for God the Father, “and the authority of his Christ.”

Translation of verse 10 so far: “Then I heard a loud voice in heaven which said, Now the deliverance [second advent] has come, also the power [Jesus Christ in hypostatic union], even the kingdom of our God [God the Father’s plan for the Millennium], and the authority of his Christ.” Christ has authority under the plan of God the Father to rule the earth for the last dispensation of history, a dispensation lasting 1000 years. With this authority Christ’s rule will provide perfect environment so that human history will terminate as it began. Human history began with our original parents in the garden, Adam and the woman, living under perfect environment for an unknown length of time. History began with perfect environment; history will terminate with perfect environment.

In the first period of perfect environment, operation Eden, the woman was deceived and determined to destroy it. The man took his cue from the woman and did likewise. So we have man rejecting perfect environment. In the last dispensation of human history, the Millennium, there will again be perfect environment. At the end of that time Satan is released and he is going to find malcontents under perfect environment. Why? There are no solutions, temporal or eternal to man’s problems apart from salvation through faith in Christ. Perfect environment is not a solution but a status to be enjoyed by believers who have maximum doctrine resident in the soul. Without capacity for life, for happiness, perfect environment is meaningless. Environment is neither the cause of happiness nor the cause of failure. People do not fail because they come up in poor environment. People like to blame their failures on their environment and, of course, people think that good environment is a way of happiness; but environment is neither the cause of happiness nor the cause of failure. Man must use his volition to make right decisions in both adversity and in prosperity. Man's volition continues to resolve the angelic conflict even in the perfect environment of the Millennium. The perfect environment of the Millennium requires two important facets: the perfect planning of God the Father and the authority of our Lord Jesus Christ — authority becomes a major issue.

We are responsible for our own decisions in life and with that responsibility we have the concept of authority. We are in effect, through our own volition, the authority over our lives and good decisions mean that we will have control of our lives and a personal sense of destiny. Bad decisions, of course, imply that we will lose control of our lives and have no personal sense of destiny. The difference in decisions is the difference of whether we execute God's plan for our lives or not. It is also the difference between blessing and cursing, between happiness and misery, a meaningful life on this earth or a meaningless life on this earth. Believers are constantly making decisions with regard to the cosmic system versus the divine dynasphere, God's plan for the Church Age believer. We have to make these decisions for ourselves, no one can make them for us. Decisions are always an important thing and decisions must always be made with a sense of responsibility, therefore under the concept of true authority.

Even in perfect environment authority is absolutely necessary. In the perfect environment of the Millennium those things which constitute freedom are going to have complete expression in every possible way. Privacy and freedom absolutely go together, you can't have one without the other. Privacy will be sacred, life will be sacred, property will be sacred, and law enforcement will be so great that it will be very rare to find any kind of crime, "and the authority of his Christ." Everyone will have maximum opportunity under perfect environment to express his own freedom, to make his own decisions. But it is possible to make bad decisions even in perfect environment that will destroy your own personal blessing and have an influence on others. Christ has the authority under the plan of God the Father to rule the earth during the last 1000 years of human history, and with this authority Christ's rule will provide perfect environment so that human history will terminate as it began. Man was given a tremendous responsibility at the beginning of human history, he was given perfect environment in the garden. The only way that he could destroy that environment was to make a bad decision and in order that there might be a volitional test one tree was forbidden in the garden. Any time that the tree was touched perfect environment would be destroyed, so man and the woman had a responsibility. The man had the greatest responsibility because he had a job, he was the ruler of the world. The woman also had a job, she was the responder to the man. They had everything going for them but eventually they rejected perfect environment.

Actually it was the woman who started the ball rolling. Satan knew that when he attacked the human race he had to attack where there was no authority. Therefore he chose the woman for his attack. She had no authority as far as the rulership of the world was concerned. Had he begun with Adam and succeeded in tempting him the woman would have merely responded to Adam's command and therefore would have no responsibility. So Satan had to attack the human race in a way so that responsibility would exist in both cases. Therefore he started with the woman. The woman was responsible for her own decisions and he attacked her on that basis. The woman's act was simply negative volition which destroyed perfect environment for the woman and resulted in the first sin in the human race. The man who was in authority did not even have to go to the tree, he took the fruit right out of the hand of the woman. So perfect environment was destroyed by negative volition, and this was the first sin. Therefore, of course, man and the woman had to take the responsibility for their decisions and from that time on Satan became the ruler of the world; and throughout human history the man and the woman have struggled with an imperfect environment, improved by good decisions and destroyed by bad decisions — the exchange between civilisation and barbarianism throughout human history.

God set up another tree, the cross, so that positive volition could reverse what happened in the garden, and therefore "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." But all of this is under the rulership of Satan. When Christ returns to the earth He will establish again perfect environment on the earth and man's volition will still be the issue. Perfect environment in the garden: volition is the issue; in the stage of sinfulness and evil on the earth, volition is still the issue; in the last 1000 years of human history, the Millennial reign of Christ, volition continues to be the issue, and it always starts with personal volition.

In this verse we have the words, "the authority of his Christ." This rule will be a demonstration that perfect environment is not the solution to man's problems, only regeneration. In other words, Jesus Christ will use maximum authority to provide maximum freedom, maximum self-determination. But there is no eternal life apart from your own decisions. The rule, then, will be a demonstration that even though God provides 1000 years of perfect environment and the authority to enforce perfect environment against bad decisions, perfect environment is never the solution to man's problems.

There are no solutions, temporal or eternal, to man's problems apart from salvation through faith in Jesus Christ. This is the only freedom option that is open in a time of great disaster. Perfect environment is not a solution, it is a status to be enjoyed by believers who have maximum doctrine resident in the soul and therefore capacity for happiness, capacity for life, capacity for blessing. Without capacity for life and happiness perfect environment becomes meaningless. Environment is neither the cause of happiness nor failure. Man must use his volition to make right decisions in both adversity and prosperity, and man's volition continues to resolve the angelic conflict in the perfect environment of the Millennium as well as the obvious imperfect environment of the time in which we live historically, and yet a time when the greatest challenge to human volition exists.

Perfect environment is maintained by authority just as imperfect environment is maintained by authority. People often fail to recognise that freedom demands responsibility. It demands humility and virtue. So the demands of freedom for its perpetuation become very important. First there must be a personal sense of responsibility and, with it, there must be virtue to make right decisions for freedom. Thirdly, freedom cannot exist without authority. So personal authority and freedom must always recognise true authority or options for freedom are lost. In the Millennium our Lord Jesus Christ provides perfect freedom for the citizens but perfect freedom does not mean that all will be winners. It simply means that they are free to make their own decisions.

Next we have the announcement of Satan's defeat in the battle of heaven. We start out with a causative conjunction o(ti and it is correctly translated "because." With this we have the nominative singular subject, a synonym for Satan who is the present ruler of the world, kathgor, which means accuser, a word used for a prosecuting attorney. And who is this accuser prosecuting? The genitive plural of relationship from a)delfoj, the royal family of God at the present time: "because the accuser of our brethren [fellow believers]." This function will continue until Satan is cast out of heaven. Note that Satan confines his slander and his accusations to believers only. The inconsistencies, the malfunctions, and the failures of unbelievers, since they are in his control and under his kingdom, are not mentioned. These accusations are made in court and the court convenes in heaven.

"who constantly brings charges against them," the accusative plural direct object from a)utoj. Satan is constantly making accusations against believers.

The participle which follows is taken from the verb kathgorew. The definite article is used as a relative pronoun. The progressive present tense is for an action in a state of persistence: he will do this until he is thrown out of heaven. That means that during the entire Church Age, every time that the court convenes, Satan is always there loaded with accusations about individual believers. The active voice: Satan produces the action of the verb, and the participle is circumstantial. And he does this "before our God," a prepositional phrase which is followed by the adverbial genitive of time from two words: the word for day and the word for night.

The translation from the middle of verse 10, "because the accuser [Satan] of our fellow believers who constantly brings charges against them before our God day and night."

Then the last phrase which is eschatological does not apply to us but comes at a future time. The Greek word here is ballw, "has been thrown out of heaven." The culminative aorist tense views the expulsion of Satan from heaven in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. No longer will Satan be allowed to accuse believers in the court of heaven. Therefore the termination of Satan's slander in heaven begins the eschatology of the devil's desperation. The passive voice: Satan receives the action of the verb, he is excommunicated from heaven and forced to live upon the earth during the last half of the Tribulation. The declarative indicative mood is for the reality of Satan's expulsion.

Principle: While the devil persecutes believers on earth he prosecutes believers in heaven. As long as we are alive he will put pressure on us on earth but he will also go to heaven and prosecute.

We are studying the casting out of Satan in the middle of the Tribulation and then the time of the devil's desperation. After Satan is cast out of heaven he is no longer able to accuse believers, therefore he is going to spend all of his time in attack upon two categories: believers and Jews in general in order to head off the inevitable tactical victory of the second advent.

In verse 11 we have the triumph of the Tribulational believers under maximum pressure. There are three bases for victory in this passage. The first has to do with eternal salvation, the doctrine of soteriology indicated by the "blood of the Lamb." Secondly, there is the application of Bible doctrine to experience, "the word of their testimony." Thirdly, they had absolutely no fear of death.

One of the great things that destroys human function in this life is the fact that so many people are afraid of death. Apart from the Rapture of the Church death is inevitable. The real key is first of all to be prepared for death and that preparation requires personal faith in Jesus Christ. After eternal salvation through faith in Christ the next step in preparation for death is the daily perception of doctrine, for life and death are dealt with in a victorious and a wonderful manner in exactly the same way: the perception of doctrine and its application to the situations of life and situations related to dying. Once death occurs there is no more sorrow, no more tears, no more pain, no more death, the old things have passed away. At that particular point we are absent from the body and face to face with the Lord, so for the believer it is a time of great blessing, but it is knowing these things and applying these things that is important. Those who understand death and can face death without fear have capacity for life and happiness and blessing, for actually the two go together. Really, living and dying are a part of the same package and that is why it is included in verse eleven.

Before we get into the eschatology of the devil's desperation we need to know that believers came out on the long end as far as that terrible time is concerned. Therefore, even before we begin our study there is a reminder to all of us as believers that the same blessings that are promised to believers who have advanced to maturity are promised to the individual believer in time of historical adversity as well as in time of historical prosperity. The greatness of the believer in time of extreme historical disaster is really the subject of verse eleven. We must anticipate this verse by recognising that while the devil prosecutes believers in the court of heaven he persecutes believers in his kingdom on earth.

Today Satan attacks us in two ways. He builds up a file on the believer, takes it to heaven, and slanders us in the court of heaven. We have our own defence attorney there, the Lord Jesus Christ. He not only attacks us through the cosmic system on earth then, but he attacks us behind our back in the court of heaven. Once Satan is cast out of heaven in the middle of the Tribulation, then, he can no longer prosecute believers, slander believers, accuse believers in heaven. Therefore, one option is left: the persecution of believers on planet earth, and this is intensified during the period we are about to study. No matter how intense the persecution of the Tribulational believer is there are many winners against Satan. Doctrine is greater than any adversity this life has to offer, and those who have doctrine resident in the soul and can apply it and use it on a daily basis, and those who can make decisions from this perception of doctrine, are on top of every situation and every circumstance in this life.

The basis for victory over Satan during the time of his desperation is presented by three principles in this verse: the positive decision to believe in Christ for eternal salvation; the many decisions from a position of strength after salvation — this means perception and application of doctrine and having control of your life; the personal sense of destiny which makes Bible doctrine so important in life itself. Therefore each of these three principles is related to some phase of the spiritual life.

First we see the tremendous victory of regeneration. The first great decision we make in this life in regard to anything spiritual is the decision to personally believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. As usual we begin with the connective conjunction kai introducing a result from what precedes. It is translated “Furthermore.” Next we have the nominative plural subject from the intensive pronoun a)utoj, “they.” “They” refers to believers under pressure from Satan, the people who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ at a future time in history. These people are going to be able to overcome every bit of intensified hatred that Satan can bring in their direction.

With this we have the aorist active indicative of the verb nikaw, the verb for overcoming, to win a victory: “Furthermore they overcame him,” a)utoj, Satan. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It takes the occurrence of faith in Christ, the moment of that one decision, gathers it up into a single whole — the instant, the momentary action, that moment when someone makes a decision — and continues it forever. That is the kind of constative aorist we have here. The active voice: people in the time of greatest historical disaster execute the action of the verb by believing in Christ. The indicative mood is declarative viewing the action of the verb from the standpoint of reality in the most difficult period of all human history.

“Furthermore, they,” believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, “overcame him,” the accusative singular of the direct object from a)utoj. How did they do it? We have three principles now: first of all the preposition dia plus the accusative singular of a(ima, “through the blood”; and with this we have the subjective genitive form the noun a)rnion, “Lamb,” one of the titles of our Lord Jesus Christ in His saving work, “through the blood of the Lamb” or “because of the blood of the Lamb.” This is the saving work of our Lord Jesus Christ.

There are two concepts of the blood of our Lord on the cross. There is His physical death and there is His spiritual death. There is one figurative use of the blood of Christ on the cross and there is one literal use. In both cases it has great significance in as much as when our Lord Jesus Christ was on the cross He died twice. The question arises quite frequently whether we have the literal blood of Christ here or the spiritual blood of Christ, since a(ima is used both ways. The literal blood of Christ always refers to His physical death, 1 John 5:6. This is the sign that the saving work of Christ was completed. In John 19:4 and 1 John 5:6 we have a reference to the somatic death of the Lord Jesus Christ, and wherever the somatic death is mentioned we have literal blood. Of course, all of these passages came from the fact that the Gnostics claimed that Christ was never true humanity and the cross was an optical illusion. Therefore John wrote to refute this blasphemy and we have references to the blood of Christ which are referring to the literal blood of Christ. But the blood was not shed; this blood was still in His body.

The somatic death of Christ makes irreversible changes and they begin at various rates after the cessation of breathing. These changes include the cooling of the body, the development of muscular rigidity plus autolysis, and when we have a reference to the physical blood of Christ on the cross it generally refers to autolysis, the breakdown of the cells and their relationship to gravitation, the gravitation of the blood to the dependant parts plus the clotting of the blood. When our Lord's heart and lung action ceased His blood began to sink to the dependant parts of the body, His internal organs. Jesus Christ did not bleed to death, in fact He bled very little.

In John 19:30 our Lord "bowed His head," it says. But the Greek says he pushed His head forward," so that the Roman spear would penetrate His chest cavity and not His diaphragm. As a result, some time later when the Roman soldier came by to check and see if He was dead he plunged the spear into His chest cavity. In 19:34, "but one of the soldiers pierced His chest cavity with a spear, and immediately there gushed out blood clots and serum." By pushing His head forward as He died physically our Lord prepared His body, now dead, for the thrust of that Roman spear which would reveal not only the true humanity of Christ but demonstrate the fact that He did not bleed to death, and that any reference to blood in salvation was a figurative reference to blood, not the literal blood of His physical death.

This emphasises a very important fact: Jesus Christ on the cross did not bleed to death. After His physical death most of His blood was still in His body and due to gravitation had settled in the right and left ventricles. That is because He pushed His head forward on the cross when He died. So when the soldier's spear penetrated the chest cavity of our Lord's corpse blood clots and serum gushed out. John's observation of this fact at the cross was medical proof of His somatic or physical death, therefore proof that our Lord was true humanity united with undiminished deity forever.

When the blood clots separated into blood clots and serum it was proof that our Lord did not bleed to death. If a person dies through excessive loss of blood these blood clots and serum do not form inside the corpse. Whatever blood remains in the body when the cause of death is bleeding the process of autolysis does not occur. If a person dies from excessive bleeding the blood remaining in the body exists in the same whole red form that you see when you cut your finger. External bleeding was not the cause of our Lord's death so the literal blood of Christ has no direct relationship to the saving work of Christ on the cross. His blood is simply a sign that His saving work was completed, and because His work on earth was finished He died physically. If there had been internal haemorrhaging there would be very little blood left in the heart and the blood clots, of course, would not gush out when the Roman soldier penetrated the chest cavity with the spear thrust. Therefore the sight of blood clots and serum is not only a witness to the true humanity of Christ in hypostatic union but at the same time medical proof that our Lord did not bleed to death.

Actually, what we have in our passage, “Furthermore, they overcame him because of the blood of the Lamb,” refers to the spiritual death of Christ which preceded His physical death, and the blood we have in this passage refers to the figurative blood of Christ, His spiritual death on the cross, His saving work. Just as sins were imputed to the animal on the altar in the Old Testament to illustrate the cross, so sins are imputed to Christ and judged when He actually went to the cross. The blood of the animal sacrifice is literal but the blood of the cross is figurative.

When it says “because of the blood of the Lamb” there has to be something else that is there. What does it mean? What they did was believe. Blood represents three major doctrines of soteriology: redemption, which is directed toward sin; propitiation, which is directed toward God; reconciliation, which is directed toward man — man is reconciled, God is propitiated or satisfied, sins are forgiven because they were judged on the cross, and redemption plus propitiation plus reconciliation equals the figurative blood of Christ. And that is exactly what we have. People hear the doctrine of redemption and believe, or they hear it from the standpoint of propitiation and believe, or they hear it from the standpoint of reconciliation and believe.

Remember the doctrine of reconciliation: there is a barrier between man and God made up of sin and the penalty of sin, and so on. When Jesus Christ was being judged for our sins every item in the barrier was removed so that there is now no barrier between man and God. Therefore man simply steps over the line by believing in Jesus Christ. That is the doctrine of reconciliation: man is reconciled to God.

Take the doctrine of redemption: man is born in the slave market of sin and Jesus Christ purchases his freedom; man hears that news in the slave market and he is free. All he has to do is get up and walk out — believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. Christ paid for our freedom on the cross and therefore when we believe in Christ we simply walk through that door into freedom, the freedom of eternal life.

Or taken from the standpoint of propitiation. Propitiation was portrayed in the holy of holies. Inside of the ark of the covenant were the three items that represented sin. Over the top of the ark of the covenant was the mercy seat, the golden throne. On each end of the golden throne was a cherub. One cherub represented the righteousness of God; one cherub represented the justice of God. On the day of atonement when the high priest came in and sprinkled blood over the top of that mercy seat it meant that blood covered for our sins, and it meant that the righteousness of God looked down at that blood and was satisfied. Christ was judged for our sins, the justice of God looks at the blood and is satisfied, the justice of God judges those sins. So that sins are covered [atonement] by the fact that God the Father is propitiated by the work of Christ — the blood of the lamb represents the work of Christ; the righteousness and justice of the Father are satisfied.

So there are many ways of looking at the imputation of our sins to Him but it all adds up to the figurative blood of Christ, the work of Christ on the cross for our sins, the saving work of Christ that provides eternal salvation.

How do people overcome Satan in the last half of the Tribulation through the blood of Christ, as per this passage? They understand some portion of soteriology, some portion of the gospel, and they make a positive faith decision: they believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. Once they have made that positive non-meritorious decision to believe in Jesus Christ they have joined the millions of people before them who have broken the back of Satan by believing in Christ. For at the end of the prehistoric angelic conflict Satan said, "It is not fair for a just God to put His creatures in the lake of fire", and the fact that any creature believes in Christ demonstrates the fallacy of that position. But in a time when Satan is personally on earth and confined to earth it is intensified. Therefore the first stage of overcoming the cosmic system of Satan is to believe in Christ, for another thing happens when people believe in Christ beside the imputation of divine righteousness, regeneration, the possession of eternal life, and so on: they are immediately lifted out of the cosmic system. In the cosmic system there are two forms of demon activity: demon influence [demon telepathy, control of the mind] and demon possession, which is demon control of the body. When a person believes in Christ he is immediately pulled out of the cosmic system and out of the control of demon influence and demon possession; he is taken out of the kingdom of darkness and is brought into the kingdom of the marvellous light of His son. So this is a tactical victory which goes with the strategic victory, "they overcame him because of the blood of Christ." The first great victory over Satan is the victory of a one-shot decision: personal faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

The first step, then, in overcoming Satan in the Tribulation, or in any period of human history, is to personally believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. The decision to believe in Christ is the basis for victory of the angelic conflict, therefore victory over Satan. It is freedom from the cosmic system. It may be only temporary but freedom it is. Note that volition is involved as the solution to the angelic conflict, volition is always the issue, and once again, as always in life, self-determination is the great issue. You have in your soul, no matter how weak you are, free will. You have human volition and that human volition can make decisions linking up with the power of God and therefore breaking the power of Satan in the life. This, then, is the beginning of victory in the life; this breaks the back of the ruler of this world. Think of it: there is no system of strength, no system of personality dynamics, no system of power on this earth whereby we can cope with the super creature, Satan, who is the ruler of this world. Therefore we must recognise our weakness and link our weakness with God's strength, and the linking of our weakness with God's strength comes in three phases of a system.

From the time of our birth we are under the laws of divine establishment which is a divine system of authority to protect us so that we can reach adulthood and make that great decision, the decision to believe in Christ. The way of salvation is a system in itself: God provides the salvation and we simply respond in a non-meritorious way by believing in Christ. And then the third part of the system is God's plan for the believer in time, and while in our dispensation it has to do with the divine dynasphere certain aspects of the divine dynasphere carry over.

Spirituality in the Old Testament was primarily the three stages of the faith-rest drill, after perception of doctrine, and they did have a system of spiritual growth through perception and they did have the attainment of maturity. It is not exactly the same as the divine dynasphere for God the Holy Spirit in the Old Testament did not indwell believers — only a few, to give them special power for a special mission. The same thing is true of the Tribulation: you go back to Old Testament spirituality. But there is a system and that system is the basis for overcoming Satan. Satan is overcome when unbelievers use the laws of divine establishment to stay out of the cosmic system, but if they get into the cosmic system and stay there the decision to believe in Christ immediately pulls them out of the cosmic system and puts them back into God's plan plus giving them eternal life. Then God's plan for the believer in every dispensation of history is of such a nature to give tactical victory over Satan in time. But it all begins at the cross and the reason that we get to the cross, the reason that there is civilisation, the reason that client nations exist, the reason that people have freedom to hear the gospel, freedom to be evangelised, freedom to accept or reject Christ as saviour — is based upon the laws of divine establishment and the authority pertaining to it.

The decision to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ is the thing that breaks the back of Satan. The next decision is related to Bible doctrine. Once a person accepts Christ as saviour he is now in a new combat, he is on the side of the Lord in the angelic conflict. He has, again, options but instead of a one-shot option he has daily options, developing the principle that good decisions result in great blessing; bad decisions, the antithesis. The person who constantly makes good decisions from a position of strength has control of his life and has a personal sense of destiny which is absolutely necessary for historical disaster, and there is no greater historical disaster than the last three and a half years of the Tribulation: the time when Satan and all fallen angels are confined to the earth and cosmic evangelism is at its strongest point. All of that demands that good decisions be made from a position of strength, and believers do it, and that becomes the victory of Bible doctrine.

We continue in the middle of verse 11 with the connective conjunction kai, "and," followed by a prepositional phrase: dia plus the accusative singular of logoj. Logoj here means doctrine, and it is correctly translated, "and because of doctrine." Next comes the ablative of means singular from the noun marturia. The ablative is not the regular case for expressing means, the instrumental is, but it may be used when the expression of means is accompanied by the implication of origin or source. The doctrine or logos is the origin or the means of their testimony during the time of the eschatology of the devil's desperation. "Because of doctrine," and we have to supply a word because this is elliptical, "applied by means of their testimony. The word "their" is the possessive genitive of the intensive pronoun a)utoj, "their testimony." "Because of doctrine applied by their testimony" gives us our second victory.

Translation: "Furthermore, they overcame him [Satan] because of the blood of the lamb [1st victory: the saving work of Christ on the cross. The victory is believing in the Lord Jesus Christ] and because of the doctrine applied by means of their testimony [second victory]."

Three things are necessary to glorify the Lord in any period of time. First of all a personal sense of destiny from the inculcation of Bible doctrine, requiring hundreds and even thousands of positive decisions. Secondly, constant decisions from a position of strength and the application of doctrine to experience. Thirdly, the believer must remain in control of his life through the avoidance of the cosmic system.

Principle: Perception and application of doctrine during the last half of the Tribulation produces all three factors and becomes the basis for the second victory over Satan. In the last half of the Tribulation abnormal circumstances demand the intensification of inculcation of doctrine, daily application in the time of the devil's desperation, and therefore momentum tests are intensified. The testimony of the winner in the last half of the Tribulation is the application of doctrine to abnormal circumstances of historical disaster. But by way of understanding the principle today, the victory over Satan on the part of the believer is the application of doctrine. A lot of people are really confused about what constitutes reward at the judgment seat of Christ. It has nothing to do with witnessing for Christ or any form of Christian production or works. This is a falsification and distortion of Bible doctrine. You don't have to hustle and work for God in order for reward. The result of becoming a mature believer is production but production is not the means.

The testimony of the winner in the last half of the Tribulation is the person who has spiritual growth under these abnormal circumstances — spiritual growth through perception of doctrine. The perception of doctrine leads to the application of doctrine. One of the great doctrines that will be applied with great results is the doctrine of the physical death of the believer. Because of the shortness of this period every minute counts and the believer cannot afford to miss even one lesson taught by Moses or Elijah or angels or other sources of communication of doctrine in the last half of the Tribulation. Historical trends will be delineated by means of eschatology, especially the eschatology of the devil's desperation.

Proverbs chapter eight, probably more than any other passage, dramatises the situation with regard to doctrine in any dispensation, but above all the last half of the Tribulation — the personification of Bible doctrine and its implication for our lives.

Verse 1, "Does not doctrine cry out," doctrine has an invitation. Cry out here means not to be in pain but to be inviting you. As a believer doctrine invites you, "Does not perception of doctrine raise her voice?" From now on the feminine pronoun, third person, refers to doctrine.

Verse 2, "She [doctrine] takes her stand on the high places by the road, where paths meet," doctrinal teaching at intersections where people come together and form crowds.

Verse 3, "She [doctrine] extends her invitation beside the gates of the entering of the city" — where the news media hang out! In other words, places for communication, "At the entrance [city auditorium] of the doors she cries out."

Verse 4, "To you, O mankind, I communicate [doctrine is speaking], and I lift my voice to all the human race."

Verse 5, “You who are ignorant [believers], gain knowledge of doctrine; and you fools [negative believers], understand doctrine [before it is too late].”

Verse 6, “Listen, for I [doctrine] shall communicate noble things [honour code]; and the opening of my lips will communicate integrity.”

Verse 7, “For my mouth will communicate truth; evil is an abomination to my lips [doctrine does not encourage evil or anything related to the cosmic system].”

Verse 8, “Integrity shall be all the communication of my mouth; nothing is twisted or perverted.”

Verse 9, “All of them [doctrinal categories] shall be integrity to the one who is caused to understand, and accurate to those who find doctrine.”

Verse 10, “Take my instruction [doctrine is more valuable than anything in life], and not silver, and knowledge of doctrine rather than finest gold.” [Your scale of values changes when you begin to grow in grace. It isn't the material standards of values that are important, it is doctrine that is important]

Verse 11, “Doctrine is more valuable than jewellery; and all desirable things cannot be compared with her [doctrine].”

Verse 12, “I, doctrine, live with wisdom [if you have doctrine you can apply it; wisdom is the application of doctrine], and I gain knowledge of man's thinking [if you want to understand people, learn doctrine].”

Verse 13, “The respect for the Lord is to hate evil; interlocking system of arrogance, also the evil modus operandi [function], therefore I [doctrine] hate the perverted mouth.”

Verse 14, “Counsel is mine [doctrine is all the counsel you need] and sound wisdom; I [doctrine] am understanding, integrity belongs to me.”

Verse 15, Those who are successful in life and in positions of authority, like kings: “By me [doctrine] kings reign, and rulers decree righteousness [make laws that are just].”

Verse 16, “By me [doctrine] both rulers and nobles govern, including all righteous [honourable] judges.”

Verse 17, “I [doctrine] love those who love me; and all those who diligently seek me [positive volition] will find me.”

Verse 18, Material blessing, part of the supergrace blessing that comes to the believer who advances to maturity. “Riches and honour are with me, enduring wealth and righteousness.”

Verse 19, "My production is better than gold, even pure gold, furthermore my profit surpasses choicest silver."

Verse 20, "I [doctrine] march in the way of honour [integrity], in the middle of the road of integrity."

Verse 21, "Giving wealth to those who love me [if God doesn't promote you, you are not promoted], that I may fill their treasuries." Supergrace blessings imputed to the mature believer overflow under the principle of blessing by association.

Verse 22, "The Lord possessed me [doctrine] at the beginning of his plan, before his works at the beginning of time."

Verse 23, "From eternity past I [doctrine] was established [doctrine is the mind of Christ, therefore doctrine pre-existed all creatures], from the beginning, before the world began."

Verse 24, "Therefore before oceans I was born, before there were springs abounding with water."

Verse 25, "Before mountains were placed on the earth, before the hills I was born".

Verse 26, "Before he made the earth and places outside [space outside of earth], or any of the dust of the earth."

Verse 27, "When he established the heavens, I [doctrine] was there, when he decreed boundaries for the oceans I was there."

Verse 28, "When he made firm skies above, and fixed securely the fountains of the deep,

Verse 29, "When he set the sea and its boundary, so that water should not overstep his command, then I [doctrine] was with him [Christ]."

Verse 30, "I [doctrine] was his delight day by day, stimulated always in his presence."

Verse 31, "Rejoicing in the earth, his world in fact, my delight was in the sons of Adam."

Therefore Bible doctrine must be the life of the believer, says verse 32 and following:

Verse 32, "Now therefore, my sons, listen to me [to doctrine]: happinesses to those who guard my ways."

Verse 33, "Concentrate on the communication of doctrine and become wise, and do not reject it."

Verse 34, “Happineses to the one who listens to me [doctrine], guarding daily at my gates, waiting at my door posts.”

Verse 35, “For he who finds me [doctrine] finds capacity for life, furthermore he receives grace from the Lord.”

Verse 36, “But he who misses the mark with me [doctrine] injures his own soul [we are also the products of our own negative volition toward doctrine]; all those who hate me love the sin unto death.”

Note: The first half of verse 36 talks about residing in cosmic one; the last half of the verse talks about residing in cosmic two. “He who misses the mark with me injures his own soul.” We are talking about believers who are preoccupied with self in the twelve gates of interlocking systems of arrogance. They are preoccupied with self, they are not anti-doctrine at all, they just don’t have time for doctrine. There are too many other things that they consider more important. This is called grieving the Holy Spirit, and the believer who grieves the Holy Spirit isn’t against doctrine, he is just not going to be consistent in his intake of doctrine.

When you get over to cosmic two you have antagonism to doctrine — the nine gates of interlocking systems of hatred, or quenching the Spirit. That is mentioned in the last half of the verse, “all those who hate me [doctrine] love the sin unto death,” eventually they will have to be removed from this life.

Basically, that is the concept we have in verse 11 of Revelation chapter 12. There are two parts to the angelic conflict as it extends into history. There is the strategic angelic conflict and there is the tactical side of the angelic conflict. When our Lord died on the cross that was the strategic victory; when our Lord returns there will be the second advent and the tactical victory. In the meantime, anyone who believes in Christ is a winner strategically in the angelic conflict so that in effect all believers are strategical victors. But it is the tactical victory that is in view with Bible doctrine, it is the believer in time, phase two of God’s plan and daily attitude toward Bible doctrine in both perception and application becomes the tactical victory. So you can be a strategic winner and a tactical loser. A strategic winner has eternal life but in eternity he doesn’t have anything to show for the time he spent on earth. And what this second phrase is emphasising is the importance of being a tactical winner in time.

What this second phrase, “they overcame him ... because of the doctrine applied by means of their testimony” is emphasising is the importance of being a tactical winner in time, the importance of growing in grace, the importance of daily perception of doctrine, the importance of application of doctrine to the eight momentum tests that every believer must pass before he becomes a winner. That is why we are left on this earth: to become winners. The tactical winners are the ones who are going to be decorated with the order of the morning star, the various crowns; they are going to be the ones who will have the uniform of glory, the ones who are going to be on the honours list so that while the Tribulation is occurring on earth they will be presented in the court of heaven. Not all believers will be presented in the court of heaven, only those on the honours list. Then, at the second advent, those who are tactical winners are going to rule a nation in this world. There are going to be billions of Christians in heaven but there may be less than a million that are winners and are going to have all of these tremendous eternal advantages. The difference is your daily decision with regard to Bible doctrine.

There is no equality in heaven. Heaven is a perfect place and a perfect place is based upon self-determination. You get into heaven by non-meritorious self-determination, i.e.. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." That is a one-shot decision and that is your strategic victory, but after that tactically you have to make a lot of decisions. The decisions you make on earth determine your status quo in eternity. No one can do it for you, and if you are bullied into making these decisions then you are not going to last, only until the bully is gone because you are leaning on the bully for a crutch and you can't do that. It has to come from you. You must be self-motivated for self-determination, for tactical victory. Tactical victory is strictly your business.

If you have the tactical victory it wipes out fear in your life. Then you can fasten your seat belt for the great disaster that is coming, ride it out, see it through, and watch it with fascination.

Self-determination is destructive without doctrine for you have no information on which to make a decision from a position of strength. But the person who in self-determination is positive toward doctrine and a tactical winner is not going to lose out. He is going to gain no matter what the historical circumstances may be.

One of the first signs of becoming a winner is that you are not afraid of death. Death has no fear for the mature believer, the one who has tactical victory. Believers who are losers are always afraid of death and Satan has the power to give them fear of death because it is one of his principles inside of the cosmic system.

The victory over maximum pressure starts with the intensive use of the conjunction kai, "in fact." It goes to the aorist active indicative of the verb a)gapaw plus the negative o)uk, "they do not love." The culminative aorist tense views the action of the verb in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. The existing results include the Lord, Bible doctrine, being the most important things in your life. The active voice: Tribulational believers who are tactical winners produce the action. The declarative indicative mood represents the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality.

Next we have the accusative singular direct object from the noun yuxh, referring to the soul. With the possessive genitive from a)utoj, "their life." Then we have an improper preposition a)xri plus qanatoj, "to the point of death." The living Word, Jesus Christ, and the written Word, Bible doctrine, were more important than life itself. They were strategic winners because they had believed in Christ; they were tactical winners because they had advanced to maturity in a very difficult time.

This passage does not imply martyrdom as such (In certain cases, of course, it would include it), it really deals with right priorities. Doctrine must be more important than life itself. When doctrine is more important than life itself life itself becomes wonderful and you have no fear of death. When reality is found in Bible doctrine instead of life the reality of life is harnessed to the greatest power in human history, the Word of God. Bible doctrine must be more real than the reality of historical adversity and pressure. In the time of Satan's desperation only Bible doctrine can cope with the realities of terrible historical disaster, and after that, persecution. The believer in the cosmic system will avoid reality and the reality of historical disaster will fall down upon him with great pressure. The believer with doctrine and right priorities will cope with the realities of historical disaster.

Translation: "Furthermore they overcame him [Satan in the time of his desperation] because of the blood of the Lamb [strategic victory, the saving work of Christ on the cross], because of doctrine applied by means of their testimony [tactical victory: perception and application of doctrine]; in fact, they did not love their life to the point of [being afraid of] death."

There are two categories of winners in the Christian way of life: the strategic winner and the tactical winner. Every Christian is a strategic winner. The one who believes in Christ is a strategic winner in the angelic conflict. The result is eternal life and a resurrection body. The tactical winner is the believer who resides, functions and continues his momentum inside the divine dynasphere. He is the one who achieves gate eight. The fact that every believer is a strategic victor is simply based on the saving work of Christ and one decision, but it is the hundreds and even thousands of decisions after salvation that produces the tactical winner. So, again, the believer in Christ is a strategic winner with the potential of being a tactical winner in the angelic conflict. In other words, it is possible and God has so designed the Christian way of life, His plan, so that we can be a double winner. To be a double winner the believer must make consistently good decisions from a position of strength and remain inside the divine dynasphere, recover the divine dynasphere as quickly as possible. The believer who is only a strategic winner becomes a tactical loser. To be a tactical loser means to reside and function inside the cosmic system. The believer who is both a strategic and tactical winner will receive great blessings in time and greater rewards at the judgment seat of Christ.

Principle

1. The strategic winner glorifies by his one-shot decision — faith in Christ.
2. The tactical winner glorifies Christ through his advance to maturity inside the divine dynasphere.
3. The strategic winner receives a resurrection body and eternal life but loses eternal reward.

4. The tactical winner in addition receives supergrace blessings in time plus eternal reward in the eternal state.

5. The strategic winner is supported by logistical grace while the tactical winner is supported by both logistical grace and supergrace blessing.

6. Therefore, God's grace provision for the strategic winner is the saving work of Christ on the cross plus, of course, logistical grace support, plus maximum divine discipline in time. The strategic winner only, lives in the cosmic system, so he gets maximum divine discipline.

7. However, God's grace provision for strategic and tactical winners adds the provision of logistical grace, supergrace blessings, plus momentum testing, and his suffering is for blessing.

8. Again, all believers are strategic winners by virtue of having believed in Christ, so all believers are strategic winners in the angelic conflict because of the saving work of Christ on the cross. 9. Only the unbeliever is a strategic loser in the angelic conflict, therefore the unbeliever will share the destiny of Satan forever and ever, and he lives under Satan's system in time which is the cosmic system.

10. The carnal or cosmic believer, then, is a strategic winner but a tactical loser in the angelic conflict. We are left on this earth after salvation to be a tactical winner.

11. The believer who is both a strategic and tactical winner has made thousands of decisions from a position of strength, generally has personal control of his life and has a personal sense of destiny from the inculcation of Bible doctrine and its application to his circumstances.

12. In addition the tactical winner possesses an edification complex in time plus the uniform of glory to go with his resurrection body in eternity.

We as believers have one certain victory which is strategic: "For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world; and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. And who is the one who overcomes the world, but he who believes that Jesus is the Son of God?" That is the strategic victory. When you believed in Christ that moment is the moment of strategic victory for you. Then there is the reason why we are left behind, and that is the tactical victory. The grace provision for the strategic winner is the saving work of Christ; the grace provision for the tactical winner is the divine dynasphere. All believers are strategic winners but not all believers are tactical winners. The tactical winners are the ones who advance to maturity.

The difference between the two victories

1. Under strategic victory we have the one-shot decision, faith in Christ. This produces a strategic winner in the angelic conflict in contrast to the unbeliever who is a loser in the angelic conflict. In the tactical victory we have a contrast. Instead of a one-shot decision you have to make thousands of positive decisions with regard to the plan of God, the system, positive decisions toward the plan of God which is the divine dynasphere, and the Word of God which is Bible doctrine. This produces a tactical winner. You make a lot of decisions with regard to all of the gates. You make decisions with regard to re-entering gate one, a rebound decision; you make decisions with regard to the use of the faith-rest drill, the function of gate two; you make decisions with regard to authority, enforced humility leading to genuine humility; you make decisions every day with regard to Bible doctrine, perception, and decisions with regard to application. This results in gate five, your motivating virtue toward God; gate six, your functional virtue toward man; gate seven, the basis for all momentum is the eight momentum tests; and gate eight, the winner's gate, tactical victory.
2. Under strategic victory Christ is glorified by one decision, the positive decision to believe in Christ; but on the tactical victory side Christ is glorified by many decisions.
3. Under strategic victory we have a result, eternal life plus a resurrection body, but no eternal reward; whereas on the tactical victory side, for those who have it, the result is eternal life, a resurrection body, plus the uniform of glory with the resurrection body, plus fantastic blessings in time and eternal rewards. So for the believer who wins the tactical victory there is a phenomenal system of blessing in time, supergrace blessings, but even a greater system of reward and blessing in eternity. That is, reward above and beyond what the believer with only the strategic victory possesses.
4. Under strategic victory the strategic victor who fails to advance lives in the cosmic system, and he fears death; whereas on the other side, the tactical winner lives in the divine dynasphere and has no fear of death.
5. The strategic victor is sustained in time by logistical grace only whereas on the tactical victory side he is sustained in time by both logistical and supergrace blessings.
6. The cosmic believer is a strategic winner but a tactical loser; the believer in the divine dynasphere is both a strategic and tactical winner, a dual winner instead of just a single winner.
7. That means that the strategic victor glorifies God only in the eternal state whereas the tactical victor glorifies God in time and in a special way in eternity.
8. The strategic victor only is disciplined in time. His life is characterised by great frustration and failure, and he is always mixed up and confused, never gets straightened out and jumps from one thing to another; whereas on the tactical side all suffering is for blessing, he is oriented, he knows what he is doing, he has control of his life.

9. The strategic victor only makes wrong decisions after salvation. His life is characterised by wrong decisions whereas the life of the tactical victor is characterised by right decisions. Wrong decisions means that while he has eternal life he is going to be low on the totem pole in eternity.

Ephesians 4:11-16, a concept we have to constantly remember. You can't have a tactical victory without a pastor, a right pastor, a consistent teacher of the Word of God. And you have to be consistent in exposing yourself to his teaching. One of the differences between a strategic winner only and a tactical winner is the fact that a tactical winner always finds a right pastor and sticks, whereas the strategic winner only is running around looking for the right pastor, looking for something to soup up his life and compensate for his discipline, his misery, his frustration, and his confusion.

Revelation 12:12 is where we actually begin the eschatology of the devil's desperation. Here is where we begin the great holocaust against the Jews. This is also the seventh trumpet and the beginning of the third woe. The seventh trumpet is the holocaust against the Jews but the third woe includes the entire eschatology of the devil's desperation and starts at verse 12 and goes to chapter 20, verse 3.

The contrast between heaven and earth after the expulsion of Satan is the general subject of verse 12. We begin with the celebration in heaven. Once Satan is cast out it is like cleaning the stables. The stench of the fallen angels in heaven since prehistoric times down to the Tribulation is removed. Therefore we begin with dia plus the accusative of the immediate demonstrative o(utoj, literally translated "Because of this," but it is an idiom and it should be translated "For this reason."

Next we have a present middle imperative of the verb e)ufrainw which means to be glad, to rejoice. Actually it is not the usual word for rejoice [xairw], this word means more to celebrate, it connotes jubilation over God's eschatological act of judgment. He has thrown Satan and all fallen angels out of heaven, "For this reason keep celebrating." The progressive present tense signifies the action in a state of persistence, present linear aktionsart. The middle voice is a dynamic middle emphasising the part taken by the subject in the action of the verb, and it refers to all of the elect angels in heaven plus all of the believers in heaven at that time, some have resurrection bodies, like the Church, some have interim bodies waiting for their resurrection. All the Old Testament saints are in interim bodies waiting for the second advent when they will have their resurrection. But everyone is included in the celebration; everyone is qualified to celebrate. The interim body is designed for great happiness. The imperative mood is the imperative of permission in which the imperative complies with inclination on the part of the object of the command. Note that this also implies no gloating. The elect angels, the royal family of God (Church Age believers), the Old Testament saints, celebrate in the purest and most virtuous sense of the word. There is no gloating.

If it is true that there is no gloating in heaven then it is also a part of the plan of God. There is no place for gloating at any time, under any circumstances, for the born again believer to gloat. To the extent that you gloat you have not only transferred from the divine dynasphere to the cosmic system, you have not only committed a sin, but the very content of gloating eliminates virtue, honour, integrity in the life. Locked-in gloating is a sign of instability and unhappiness in your life. Avoid gloating like the plague for gloating is a plague guaranteed to destroy your happiness. Gloating is the destroyer of virtue.

“For this reason keep on celebrating.” To whom is this addressed? The vocative plural of ο)υρανο)ι, “O heavens.” The plural of the vocative indicates three categories. First of all the elect angels, those who entered into an eternal relationship with God during the course of the prehistoric angelic conflict. Secondly, believers with resurrection bodies. In the middle of the Tribulation this will be believers of the Church Age. The third category is believers in an interim body, the Old Testament saints and the Tribulational martyrs of the first half of the Tribulation. This is a great celebration because everyone involved has capacity to celebrate without arrogance, without gloating; to celebrate in the purest, finest sense of the word; to celebrate with total capacity for happiness. This celebration in heaven is coterminous with the seventh trumpet, the beginning of the third woe on earth, the time of the eschatology of the devil’s desperation. The vocative plural refers only to those in heaven. There will be happiness on the part of certain believers in the last half of the Tribulation who have tactical victory.

Next we have the articular present active participle from the verb σκηνω)ω. The word is derived from σκηνη) which means tent, often referring to the human body. Σκηνω)ω means to bivouac, it means to be living in a tent in heaven. Hence, it refers specifically to the believers in the interim body. In John 1:14 this verb is used for Christ tabernacling on earth in the first advent. Here, of course, it refers to the fact of Tribulational martyrs and also the Old Testament saints, “and you who tabernacle [live in an interim body].” The definite article is where we get the words “you who.” The perfective present tense is for what comes to be in the past but is emphasised as a present reality. Since the moment of their physical death the Old Testament believers and Tribulational martyrs have been living in the state of perfect happiness in the interim body. The active voice: the Old Testament believers and Tribulational martyrs produce the action. The participle is circumstantial, plus the fact that the action of the present participle is coterminous with the action of the main verb.

“For this reason be celebrating you heavens,” that is the elect angels in heaven plus the Church Age believers in resurrection bodies, and Old Testament believers plus Tribulational martyrs who live temporarily in the interim body. While there is celebration in heaven there is the greatest historical disaster in human history on earth, the eschatology of the devil’s desperation. It begins here when the third woe which begins with the seventh trumpet is mentioned. Then we have the Greek onomatopoeic word ο)υαι, the way they said woe. The word is used for extreme pain, nausea, etc. It says woe to planet earth first because the planet earth is described as both land and sea. The second woe was the sixth trumpet, Revelation 9:13-21; the third woe begins at Revelation 12:12 with the seventh trumpet. The seventh trumpet is in 12:12-17. The third woe covers the time from Satan’s expulsion from heaven to his imprisonment in Revelation 20:1-3. While the third woe and the seventh trumpet occur simultaneously they are not the same. The seventh trumpet is the great holocaust of Israel in the last half of the Tribulation. The third woe includes this great wave of anti-Semitism but includes all of the events in the last half of the Tribulation.

So we have “Woe,” and the woe is directed according to two accusatives, both are direct objects: the first is the word gh which means “earth,” and with it, qalassa, referring to the sea. It should be translated, “Woe to both land and sea.” That means woe to the planet earth. This is the third woe of the eschatology of the devil’s desperation.

We now get a brief explanation with the causal use of the conjunction *o(t*i, translated “because.” Then we have our subject, the nominative singular from diaboloj, “because the devil.” Then we have the aorist active indicative of the verb katabainw “because the devil has come down.” The aorist tense is a culminative aorist viewing expulsion of Satan from heaven in its entirety, but regarding it from the viewpoint of existing results, the eschatology of the devil’s desperation. The active voice: the devil or Satan produces the action of the verb, he is thrown out of heaven; he has come down. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the fact that never again will Satan or the fallen angels, the demons, ever be in heaven. In other words, that period of time from the expulsion of Satan from heaven to the second advent now begins. It is called the third woe or the eschatology of the devils’ desperation.

Next we have a prepositional phrase, proj plus the accusative of the personal pronoun su, and it is translated “face to face with you.” The expulsion of Satan from heaven results in levelling him to the place of human history. He is confined now to human history; he is out of the prehistoric phase. He therefore is very frustrated.

When you have made your own mistakes through your own bad decisions it is inevitable that there will be a certain amount of self-justifying frustration, the attempt to justify yourself because all of your house of cards has tumbled down and instead of blaming it on yourself you blame it on others. Arrogance always blames it on others. This is the difference between arrogance and humility in disaster. The person who has made some bad decisions and is now in the state of humility takes the responsibility for his own decisions, but the person who is involved in the cosmic system is arrogant and the same disasters resulting from his bad decisions he always blames on others. The person in the divine dynasphere has the good sense to blame himself. If you blame yourself you move on but if you blame others you spend the rest of your life trying to get even — for your own bad decisions.

Next we have the present active participle of e)xw, “and he has.” With this we have an accusative singular direct object of two words, megaj and qumoj. When this is put together it is really an idiom. It is literally, “he has vehement anger,” but the idiom means that he foams with fury. Frustrated arrogance produces maximum anger directed toward others. Arrogance always blames others for one’s own mistakes or bad decisions. If you are in a state of humility you recognise your own bad decisions and you take the responsibility on yourself. Therefore you can recover. The recovery is based on the fact: “So I have made mistakes. I am still alive so I'm just going to keep rolling." But arrogant people, when they make bad mistakes, always blame others. They have no virtue and they never recover. This means that arrogance always produces in disaster a vehement rage. The idiom here means foaming with fury. Qumoj is derived from the classical Greek verb quw which means a violent movement of air, water, ground. It means to boil over. So foaming with rage is what our word means.

Principle: Bad decisions in the cosmic system produces frustration. The frustration, however doesn't exit until your own bad decisions produces adversity. With this adversity you have frustration and the frustration says, "Look, I'm not going to take responsibility, that would be virtuous. I'm going to blame others." Others then become the object of your frustration which expresses itself in anger, bitterness, vindictiveness, implacability, irrationality, and often revenge. People actually take revenge on others for their own bad decisions. Satan doesn't take responsibility for his decisions; he invented the system. Revenge generally motivates terrible violence and great historical disaster.

In the final phrase we have the present active participle of the verb o)ida, "knowing that his time is short." He knows this because he knows eschatology. We have the conjunction o(ti denoting the content of Satan's knowledge followed by the present active indicative of the verb e)xw, "that he has," the static present for something to be taken as a fact. The active voice: Satan produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. With this the accusative of the extent of time from two words: o)ligoj, which has all kinds of meanings, "little" or "few," and with it the noun kairoj for "time," "knowing that he has a little time," which is simply an idiom meaning "knowing that his time is short."

There are all kinds of situations where people simply realise the time is short, or they think the time is short. In this case it is true, he has three and a half more years of freedom before he goes to jail and he has that short time to prevent going to jail for a thousand years. There are two kinds of people who face the facts of life from time to time. One way or another the time is short. There are those who are minus virtue, integrity, honour, and there are those who have virtue, integrity, and honour. Those who have integrity and honour have made good decisions from a position of strength, they have personal control of their lives, and they have a personal sense of destiny. Self-determination leads to a personal sense of destiny. Those who are minus virtue have made many decisions from a position of weakness. They do not have control of their lives and they are minus a personal sense of destiny. Satan falls into this category. It is almost impossible for us to realise the implication of this last phrase in verse 12. The reason: Satan is the greatest genius creature of all time. He has more talent, more ability, more personality than we have in thousands of talented people in this world today; and it is very frustrating for a creature who knows that he is superior to all other creatures to realise that they are passing him by every day through truth, the Word of God, Bible doctrine. That's why in the translation of verse 12 he foams with fury. He has great anger, great rage, knowing that his time is short.

There comes a realisation in the lives of people, both good and bad, when they know that in some way the time is short. Those who feel this pressure and who are minus virtue always come up with a series of evils. This series of evils is based on arrogance, vanity, pride, vindictiveness, implacability, and hatred, and it always brings out the worst in them. They also come up with a system of modus operandi which is minus common sense and everything they do turns to evil because of the principle of their lives up to that point. Satan, of course, is the quintessence of evil. Up to that point those who have virtue relax, they don't panic, they don't try to accelerate anything, they carry on as usual because they are living day by day in the plan of God, making all their decisions from a position of strength. The fact that the time is short doesn't change a thing because even if the time ran out they would still be doing the same thing. If the time is short and your lifestyle is right, you carry on as usual. When you have the right kind of a lifestyle you have control of your life. You don't change your lifestyle and go in for accelerated loss of common sense; in other words, accelerated nonsense. The last three and a half years of the Tribulation is the acceleration of Satan's bad decisions. He must crowd all of the evil in his system into three and a half years. That's why those three and a half years are called the "great" Tribulation. Whenever it creeps into your consciousness that the time is short you immediately accelerate whatever you have in your soul, but for the person who has done it right, made the right decisions, the believer who has advanced to maturity, he carries on as usual.

Satan with all of his genius, being the inventor of evil, having made more bad decisions than any creature in history, has three and a half years to crowd all of his evil into that short period of time before he goes to jail, before he loses rulership of the world. So everything we are about to study is accelerated. Satan has always hated the Jews and, of course, he is going to attack the Jews.

Verse 13, begins Satan's attack on Israel. The first thing he does is express hatred, vindictiveness, implacability. Satan has no love, no virtue; he is evil. So we now begin the third woe with the seventh trumpet.

We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated "Now," and with that we have a temporal conjunction o(te), "Now when." Then the subject: the nominative singular drakwn, "dragon," referring to Satan. "Now when the dragon," followed by the aorist active indicative of o(raw), he now becomes aware of the shortness of time. "Now when the dragon saw." The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: Satan produces the action of the verb at the beginning of the time of his desperation. This is the beginning of the eschatology of the devil's desperation. He has been thrown out of heaven and he knows that he has three and a half years left. The indicative mood is declarative representing the pressure on the greatest creature genius of all time.

With this we have the conjunction o(ti) indicating the content of his realisation. "Now when the dragon saw that he was thrown out of heaven," the aorist passive indicative of ballw. He is aware that the time is short because the beginning of the short time is being cast out of heaven. As an observation he made he cannot escape the reality of the plan of prophecy, and he reads the prophecy into historical trends. The aorist tense of ballw is a culminative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. The pressure is on because the time is short. The culminative aorist indicates that the results are going to be the intensification of all evil that he has possessed and developed over the period of the prehistoric angelic conflict and the few thousand years of human history up to this point. For a creature as smart as Satan that is enough to accumulate a tremendous amount of evil. Once it is clear that the time is short then all of the monster comes oozing out. Satan has what might be classified as relatively unchecked power and he has all of this genius and ability to go with it. His first act of going berserk is to express the hatred and cruelty of his soul — well disguised but there. His hatred and cruelty is going to be expressed toward the Jew. Actually, the eschatology of the devil's desperation runs into the tactical victory of our Lord's second advent, but the Lord's tactical victory includes all the events of the second advent plus His Millennial reign on earth. The Lord's tactical victory, then, begins with the second advent and terminates with the Gog revolution when Satan gets out of jail.

The passive voice: the dragon or Satan receives the action of the verb. He receives the realisation that he is now confined to the earth and can no longer travel to heaven, which means that God has taken away from Satan and all of that demon army the ability to travel through space much more rapidly than the speed of light. For the first time none of them have any access to heaven and Satan and all fallen angels feel the implications of being helpless. There is nothing worse than a person who suddenly is helpless and who has practised evil all of his life. In desperation he tries to use the power of evil to break out of the pressure, i.e.. the time is short, and he still thinks he can win.

People who lose control of their lives and have no personal sense of destiny are always going to be winners, they think to themselves. They rationalise: "We're going to get doctrine later on. As soon as we get things straightened out we'll start taking in doctrine." Those are the ones who never can handle any kind of adversity or any kind of pressure. Satan gives us the perfect illustration of the problems that come with that pressure. There comes a time when you think you have the world by the tail, like the devil does, and suddenly you discover that even though you are the ruler of the world and have all the high-sounding titles that go with it that you are absolutely helpless. What good is it, asks Satan, if I am the ruler of the world and can't carry on the fight in heaven? As far as he is concerned it is no fun to be the ruler of the world and live in the world. Satan doesn't want to live here, he just wants to run it. Most people don't live in the factory they own, they live out in the country in much more pleasant circumstances. Satan lives in heaven at the moment, he just rules this earth. What a terrible thing it is going to be when he has to live here!

The indicative mood is declarative for the future reality of this point of eschatology. Then we have the prepositional phrase e)ij plus the accusative of gh, "to the earth," a reference here to planet earth. He no longer has any access to heaven.

People who have no control of their lives are people who always say they are going to do the right thing later on, "I know I should get doctrine, I know I should do this, but I have all these things I have to straighten out first." Those are the people who cannot take pressure when it comes. They are the ones who say they know doctrine is important, they like doctrine, "But right now I just don't have the time." And when the time is short and the pressure has come it is always the same thing: they are always absolutely helpless to face disaster. When helpless people face pressure they always fall apart; they can't take it. They therefore perform evil through one of two avenues: evil through sin, evil through human good, or evil through both.

Many Christians are lined up with evil as soon as they get some pressure simply because they never establish a system of priorities on a daily basis. You must have a daily system of priorities. It is your daily perspective through doctrine that gives you the power and the ability to face disaster. If your daily priorities include doctrine first then this is going to be a wonderful day and tomorrow is going to be a wonderful day because you establish a routine by which you make positive decisions for doctrine; you have personal control of your life, and you have a personal sense of destiny. You have it on a daily basis so that when you go into the storm of pressure and adversity there is no problem at all, you are ready for it, you have established a routine of proper priorities. The life that doesn't have routine is not organised for either adversity or prosperity. What is meant here is routine in terms of priorities in life. What are your priorities in life? What is first? What is important? If your priority is doctrine and you are consistent you are going to make right decisions with regard to doctrine and your daily life is going to be wonderful.

"Now when the dragon saw that he was thrown down to earth." We now have two eschatologies, one leads into the other. This will be the rest of the book of Revelation. We have the eschatology of the devil's desperation and we have the eschatology of the Lord's tactical victory. There are three concepts. The eschatology of the devil's desperation begins with the expulsion of Satan from heaven, a disaster. But interestingly enough Satan is kicked out of heaven and he goes down to the earth which he rules and where he is miserable and will now express all the evils of his person. But the Lord's tactical victory begins when He comes to earth. He isn't thrown out of heaven, He has control of His life and He comes of His own volition. Satan wants to stay in heaven and cannot; the Lord comes to the earth because the Lord has control of His life; Satan has no control of his life. Our Lord has a plan that is related to everything that is virtuous and wonderful, and Satan's plan is doomed because Satan is kicked out of his house. The Lord comes to the earth because He has a purpose in doing so and the day of the second advent is the day of His tactical victory, a moment of great happiness and rejoicing. He is in control, He has power, He has made all the right decisions. Satan has made all the wrong decisions and when he is tossed to the earth he is frustrated and angry.

The eschatology of the devil's desperation ends at the second advent; the Lord's tactical victory ends at the Gog revolution. The second advent puts Satan down but the Gog revolution also puts Satan down. Satan comes back after being in jail for a thousand years, and did he learn anything? He did not. As soon as he gets out he starts a conspiracy. He finds again perfect environment on the earth, this time under the rule of the last Adam, the Lord Jesus Christ. In that situation what does he do? He destroys perfect environment for quite a few people and that revolution ends in disaster because any revolution ends in disaster. Arrogant people are unteachable. You can put arrogant people in Bible class for one thousand years and they still haven't learned anything! When you are preoccupied with yourself you cannot learn anything that is worthwhile. Satan learned nothing, he is thrown out again, only this time there is only one place for him to go. At the second advent he is simply put into jail which is the abyss; he is in solitary confinement for a thousand years, but as a result of the Gog revolution he is thrown into the lake of fire for eternity. So he never did learn anything and, of course, never have a lot of people in this world.

In the eschatology of the devil's desperation we have his confinement to the earth for three and a half years. And what does he do with this power that he has been exercising in prehistoric times and throughout human history? Does he use it to any advantage? No. He simply accelerates the use of his unchecked power to produce the greatest disaster in human history, the last three and a half years of the Tribulation. In the eschatology of the Lord's tactical victory he has another confinement: to the abyss for one thousand years. And he learned nothing. So we go back to a principle that we must never forget: to the extent that you entertain any form of arrogance in your life, it can be self-righteousness. Self righteous believers do not like a ministry that pops them good! And self-righteous believers can only learn certain things. It takes consistent day-by-day humility to be teachable and without that daily humility you learn nothing, arrogance distorts but never applies correctly because arrogance uses truth, arrogance does not learn truth.

The time of the eschatology of the devil's desperation is the beginning of a series of confinements and restrictions which terminates with Satan spending all eternity in the lake of fire. Think of it: the greatest and most attractive creature that ever came from the hand of God will spend eternity in the lake of fire. First Satan is confined to the earth for the last three and a half years of the Tribulation where he desperately tries to frustrate the inevitable tactical victory of Christ. At the second advent Satan is seized and cast into the abyss for 1000 years — further confinement and restriction.

When people will not use self-control and will not limit themselves in the field of evil or sin or human good, then God will lock them up in one or another category of prisons. We must regulate our own lives. Only you can regulate your life; only you can control your life.

At the end of the Millennium Satan is released from his prison and he begins another conspiracy against Christ and the perfect rule of the Millennium which results in the Gog revolution. When the revolution is suppressed Satan is cast into the lake of fire forever. Being in jail for a thousand years didn't teach the devil a thing about his own responsibility to himself. So the devil's desperation defines the confinement and the restriction of the devil, beginning with his expulsion from heaven.

From the middle of the Tribulation his freedom to roam the universe is curtailed, he is no longer free to move around. He is in his own kingdom which he has created as a jail and since he has this great anger and frustration we have a tough time on the earth. As he becomes more desperate he takes his arrogant frustration out on people. In essence, by the function of his own volition Satan seeks to destroy his own kingdom in order to frustrate the plan of God. He seeks to destroy the human race which he rules. He does not succeed though his power to do so is far greater than any other creature. Nevertheless Satan is still a creature.

And the principle: no creature, no matter how powerful, can ever successfully challenge the creator. To attempt such is a blasphemous thing, the epitome of creature arrogance. In any creature arrogance is the ultimate destructive force. No creature, man or angel, has ever profited from arrogance and no creature ever will. The essence of cosmic one should teach us this very important lesson.

We have already studied in the first part of chapter twelve the concept of the holocaust syndrome. We have seen how the Jews made a decision from a position of weakness when they rejected the sign of the virgin birth, which means that they rejected Jesus Christ as their personal saviour. Historically all of us are the products of our own decisions and the great tragedy which overtook Israel in AD 70 was the result of many decisions from a position of weakness. Idolatry characterised the rule of Jehoiakim in the past, before they went out the second time under the fifth cycle of discipline. In 2 Kings 23:37, speaking of king Jehoiakim: "He did evil in the sight of the Lord according to all that his fathers had done." With Jehoiakim begins the four generation curse which is found in Exodus 20:3-5 and terminates by saying, "visiting the iniquities of the fathers on the children of the third and fourth generations of those who hate me." After the fourth generation things change but in three or four generations a nation can be destroyed. A decision from a position of weakness means loss of control of one's life and when a maximum number of people make decisions from a position of weakness then it means loss of freedom to a national entity. Everything from a nuclear ban to every form of anti-military which is so prevalent today is an illustration which overtakes a nation of a social degeneracy, a spiritual degeneracy, an economic degeneracy, which spells doom for a nation unless there is an enlargement of the pivot of mature believers. Without that pivot there is not even the opportunity of fighting for freedom.

A decision from a position of weakness means, then, loss of control. This means that those involved become the victims of some terrible holocaust. It meant the holocaust of Jehoiakim and his son Coniah. The four generation curse meant loss of control of the lives of many people in Israel at that time, and so the holocaust came and they were destroyed. In the fourth generation Shealtiel had no heir so he adopted Zerrubabel causing the blood line to switch from Solomon to Nathan for our Lord Jesus Christ. We have noted, then, that a decision from a position of weakness amalgamated with other decisions from a position of weakness results in those involved becoming the recipients of a great holocaust. While this passage with which we are involved studies the Jewish holocaust there are many holocausts in history. There are Gentile as well as Jewish holocausts. Any group of people who continue to make bad decisions over a period of three or four generations inevitably become involved in a terrible national or racial disaster, and that national or racial disaster is the holocaust judgment which comes from their own bad decisions; not from outside sources, for any group of people whether a nation or a race must inevitably make bad decisions over a period of three or four generations before they are overtaken by historical disaster which destroys them.

The Jews lost all personal sense of destiny. They lost this through the rejection of Bible doctrine. Their culture was not strong enough, no culture ever is, for their culture was based on Bible doctrine which they had rejected; and so, of course, they could not relate properly to messianic passages. They could not understand, for example, the various signs given to Israel, the sign of the virgin birth, so that to them the baby is not born and they continue in their holocaust pregnancy. This has happened many times in history, the holocaust syndrome always follows the same pattern, bad decisions from a position of weakness. Bad decisions resulted in loss of control of their lives, and loss of control of their lives resulted in loss of personal sense of destiny. The result was seen historically in our own generation between 1933 and 1945, the great holocaust with Jews standing passively in line to enter the gas chambers and to be destroyed. This is the holocaust syndrome. It results, of course, from loss of motivation, loss of desire for freedom, loss of the ability to have principles upon which to fight for one's freedom. Slavery exists because people do not resist, because they have the holocaust mentality. But Satan is a very special way is antagonistic toward the Jew, and so while the holocaust is always caused by those who are the victims in a period of either three or four generations the victims have made wrong decisions from a position of weakness. They have rejected truth, they have rejected Bible doctrine, they have no will to resist, they have no will to fight, and therefore they are caught up in historical disaster. It could happen to us as well just as it happened to Israel many times in the past as well as it will in the future.

In verse 13 we begin with the great holocaust of Israel in the last half of the Tribulation. We resume in the second half of the verse with the aorist active participle of diwkw which means to persecute, "and he persecuted." One of the first things that frustrated people always do is to persecute. Unhappy people become natural bullies. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. We have the action of anti-Semitism which occurs over the entire three and a half years of the last half of the Tribulation. Specifically this constative aorist contemplates in its entirety the several major waves of anti-Semitism. The first attack occurs in verse 15; the second attack occurs in verse 17. The active voice: Satan produces the action of the verb, he is the author of anti-Semitism throughout human history. The participle is circumstantial and therefore translated as a finite verb.

Whom does he persecute? The accusative singular direct object from the noun gunh, the same word we found in verse one, "woman," referring to Israel, "and he [Satan] persecuted the woman [Israel]." This is the greatest wave of anti-Semitism in history.

It is fascinating to study the end of medieval times and historically how they blend in with the Renaissance and the Reformation, and probably two of the most interesting of all of the centuries of human history occurred in the 15th and 16th, and even the 17th centuries. Those three centuries are transitional historically, not only for western Europe but for the world, and in that time we have some of the major holocausts against Israel. That period of time was a period of toleration and persecution amalgamating to form a great deal of confusion to historians. It was one, of course, where we see the great principle of religion destroying virtue and the natural instincts of grace. Religion was the Roman Catholic religion on the one hand and Islam on the other, and it is fascinating to see that all of a sudden Islam would tolerate the Jews because the Roman Catholics were persecuting them. Then, when Islam began to persecute the Jews the Roman Catholics would tolerate them. This went back and forth during the middle ages. When Islam started to grow in the seventh and eighth centuries it began to attack the Jews, so the Jews went to Spain. But when they were settled in Spain for a couple of hundred years, forming the middle class (all of the great doctors in western Europe were Jews, the bankers were Jews, the whole system that made Spain so great just before the Renaissance began and into the Renaissance up to the time of Charles the 5th and Philip the 2nd was this tremendous middle class made up of Jews and Moors) Charles the 5th and then Philip the 2nd immediately attacked the Moors and the Jews. The toleration was gone. But by this time Suleyman (Solomon) the Magnificent, the great Ottoman Turk ruler of the 16th century, became very tolerant and so the Jews moved back into Tunisia, North Africa, Turkey, all of the places where they were welcome, meaning that the Jews during the medieval times were battered around like a tennis ball, back and forth across the net. Sometimes they were safe under the religion of Islam and sometimes they were safe under the religion of the Roman Catholics, but they were never safe at the same time in either place and they could never really settle down. In other words, they suffered terribly throughout the middle ages.

Conclusions

1. Religion destroys virtue and the natural instincts of grace.
2. Religion produces arrogance and ignorance which overrides tolerance, high IQ, and substitutes cruelty. (Remember that Christianity is not a religion) Arrogance plus cruelty lowers the IQ of the people involved to zero.
3. A religious society cannot think and therefore emotes in the presence of mobs to cause persecution, cruelty and destruction of life.
4. Religion — and this was true of Islam at certain times and the Roman Catholic church and the Greek Orthodox church at certain times, and even farther on in India it was true of Hindus, and others — rejects the function of free will and the option of self-determination for others. In other words, “You can only be free if you accept our religion.”
5. Therefore Medieval history right up through the time of the Renaissance and Reformation not only caused the rise of cities but the inevitable rise of city mobs to function under terrorism.
6. This includes the rise of anti-Semitism for arrogance becomes a substitute for reason and produces a victim, a target for hatred, vindictiveness, implacability. Since 70 AD that target has all too often been the Jew.
7. Such a target was the Jew in the middle ages linking up to the time of the Renaissance and Reformation. Mobs had all the arrogance of unchecked power roaming the streets of medieval towns and cities, and all too often selected the Jew as a target.

“he [Satan] persecuted the woman.” This is the greatest wave of anti-Semitism in human history coming up in the future in the last half of the Tribulation. Satan’s objective at that time is the total destruction of Israel — racial, religious and regenerate — the objective of Satan as related to the understanding of pre-Millennialism.

Pre-Millennialism is the only system of eschatology which recognises the fact that God has unconditionally promised Israel certain things. He has made unconditional promises in certain paragraphs of the Abrahamic covenant, in the Palestinian covenant, the Davidic covenant, and the New covenant to Israel. These have never been fulfilled and will not be fulfilled until the second advent, so when Christ returns He must find Jews to be the recipients of these unconditional promises. If Satan can destroy all Jews then our Lord would not be able to keep His word. Satan understands this issue even though a lot of believers today do not. At the second advent Israel will be regathered, purified by the baptism of fire, and the true Israel of regenerate Jews will enter the Millennium as recipients of these unconditional promises.

First there will be the regathering of Israel at the second advent, which means Jews will be scattered throughout the earth. This is taught in Isaiah 5, 10, 11; Joel 2; Zechariah 10. Then follows the baptism of fire which separates Jewish believer from unbeliever. The Jewish believer goes into the Millennium; the Jewish unbeliever goes into the lake of fire. Then follows the fulfilment of the unconditional covenants to the born-again Jews, as per Romans 11:27 — “Also this is the covenant to them [Jewish believers] from me [Jesus Christ at the second advent], when I have removed their punishment for sins,” the fifth cycle of discipline will be removed at the second advent. The devil understands this doctrine so well that he will be happy to enlist people at any time in a wave of anti-Semitism. Don’t ever be sucked into such an evil thing for this is a Satanic principle and it is a guarantee to make your life miserable. Those who attack Israel must recognise the principle of divine discipline against themselves.

The next phrase, and the last phrase in this passage before we get into the holocaust concept, begins with the nominative feminine singular from a qualitative relative pronoun o(stij), translated “who,” and it indicates that certain persons belong to a category, and the ones that are being persecuted are in category Israel. Next we have the aorist active indicative of the verb tiktō reminding us of verse two and the double entendre, “who gave birth.” The aorist tense is a constative aorist contemplating the virgin pregnancy, the virgin birth, in its entirety. The active voice: Israel is the source of the humanity of Christ and the resultant hypostatic union, therefore Israel produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the fact that our Lord Jesus Christ came in the flesh through Israel, the tribe of Judah, the family of David. And it is translated “who gave birth to.” The accusative direct object is made of several words meaning a male child, Jesus Christ in hypostatic union. It is a reference therefore to the first advent of Christ, the strategic victory of the angelic conflict. As a reference to the first advent and the strategic victory it also is a reminder of Satan’s attempt at the end of the Tribulation to try to head off the fulfilment of all the unconditional promises to Israel by the destruction of Israel. Satan has been defeated strategically and he is trying to head off being defeated tactically.

Without the cross there could be no crown for true Israel, and Gentiles of the Old Testament who are believers, the body of Christ, the royal family of God, all depend upon the first and second advents for the complete fulfilment of God's plan for each one of us. The cross must come before the crown and only through the cross can there be members of the human race to be delivered at the second advent.

The translation: "Now when the dragon [Satan] saw that he had been thrown to the earth he persecuted the woman who gave birth to the male child."

The persecution of the woman refers to the great holocaust.

Why the holocaust?

1. Passive arrogance demands the function of active arrogance against it. Basically that is why we have historical disasters of all kinds.
2. Passive arrogance is generally associated with the enjoyment of freedom and prosperity for three or four generations.
3. The freedom and prosperity originates from a large pivot of mature believers plus the principles of establishment like freedom through military victory, free enterprise economy, a vigorous unculture, and the universal recognition of the sacredness of freedom, privacy, property and human life. All of this becomes the basis for the development of passive arrogance. The victims of any holocaust are always involved in passive arrogance, they attract active arrogance against them.
4. Passive arrogance accepts freedom and prosperity totally apart from human virtue and a sense of responsibility. It assumes that one has a right to all of those blessings without any adherence to the laws of divine establishment.
5. Passive arrogance on the part of the Jews of the dispersion results in active arrogance on the part of their persecutors.
6. No nation or race ever experiences a holocaust without the historical demand for it.
7. Hence, negative volition, apostasy, and passive arrogance of indifference creates the vacuum which attracts the persecution of active arrogance, holocaust, and historical disaster.

A second principle

1. Evil demands evil, cruelty demands cruelty, because passive arrogance demands the function of active arrogance against it.
2. Active arrogance punishes passive arrogance until the active arrogance through prosperity also becomes passive. There is a constant series of historical disasters because active arrogance is hungry and it punishes passive arrogance.
3. Today a nation can be the instrument of punishment through active arrogance and tomorrow the victim of holocaust through enjoying prosperity too well and entering into the condition of passive arrogance.
4. The punishing nation or group generally has to be very cruel to punish cruelty. The punishing nation must be evil to punish evil in another group. Not only do individuals have to take responsibility for their own decisions but so do nations.
5. This has always been the pattern of history, therefore it is part of the historical trend which explains not only the Jewish holocaust but the rise and fall of nations and empires.
6. Satan with his active arrogance frustrated by his fall from heaven is the instrument of punishment of the Jews' in the last half of the Tribulation. They through their own cosmic involvement have entered into a state of passive arrogance, and passive arrogance always attracts active arrogance against it.
7. Therefore the group, the nation, or the people who practice anti-Semitism generally possess an active arrogance plus evil. This causes them to gravitate to passive arrogance and attack it from a position of evil. In other words, passive arrogance is the victim of active arrogance.
8. This does not justify anti-Semitism but explains it in terms of historical trends.
9. The Jews who will be the victims of Satan at the seventh trumpet in the middle of the Tribulation are those apostate Jews who have developed passive arrogance through their residence and function in the cosmic system. Passive arrogance attracts persecution from active arrogance.

A third principle

1. Both ideology (like communism) and religion destroy virtue and with the destruction of virtue the natural instinct of grace and tolerance.

2. This is because religion, unlike Christianity, produces arrogance, ignorance, cruelty and persecution which overrides tolerance. It substitutes for tolerance cruelty. When tolerance leaves cruelty arrives.

3. Since a religious society cannot think or reason it becomes emotional with blind arrogance. This emotion produces mob violence, persecution of passive arrogance, cruelty resulting in the holocaust for its victims.

4. In other words, religion stifles freedom — illustrated by Spain in the time of Charles the fifth and Philip the second — the function of free will and self-determination. Therefore religion loses toleration as the essential part of freedom.

6. Religion does not allow others to make mistakes but persecutes them vigorously.

7. Medieval history not only records the rise of towns and cities but the inevitable rise of mobs to function under the principle of arrogance and intolerance, therefore terrorism of active arrogance. Mobs are emotional and they tend toward the terrorism of active arrogance.

8. Therefore anti-Semitism alternates with tolerance toward the Jew but never for more than three or four generations.

Active arrogance always seeks and attacks passive arrogance. The Jews had developed passive arrogance before they were persecuted under the principle of anti-Semitism. Hence the principle: All of us as individuals and nations — not just the Jews, Gentiles as well — are the products of our own decisions, and when our decisions lead us to the point of passive arrogance there is always some barbaric group, like the communists, with active arrogance ready to attack. Again, this does not justify anti-Semitism for a part of Christian virtue of impersonal love toward all includes the Jews.

A fourth principle

1. A great nation is built on humility, never arrogance. Humility tolerates; arrogance persecutes. Humility produces virtue; arrogance produces evil.

2. When humility and virtue existed, and wherever it existed, the Jews were tolerated and accepted. But where arrogance existed the Jews were persecuted under the principle of anti-Semitism.

3. However, the Jews themselves who were the victims had developed a passive arrogance to attract the active arrogance of anti-Semitism. This is not only true of Jews, it is also true of Gentiles, it just so happens that our subject in Revelation twelve is anti-Semitism.

4. Active arrogance is inspired by an outside source, Satan and his cosmic system, but passive arrogance is produced from an inside source, by bad decisions from a position of weakness.

5. Passive arrogance is subjective toward its victims while active arrogance is objective toward its victims and therefore initiates the anti-Semitism, the cruelty. This is also true in historical disasters among Gentiles.

6. Active arrogance is motivated by hatred, implacability, vindictiveness. Passive arrogance is motivated by a sense of superiority, self-righteousness and hypocrisy. That is what happened under the Third Reich.

7. Passive arrogance persecutes in a civilized way — through sarcasm, through ridicule and slander; active arrogance persecutes in a barbaric way through violence, cruelty, destruction.

8. Passive arrogance does not kill its victims directly but active arrogance tortures, mutilates, murders, annihilates.

9. When active arrogance attacks active arrogance we call it war, but when active arrogance attacks passive arrogance we call it persecution.

A fifth principle

1. Many Jews have escaped anti-Semitism. That is because they lived in the environment of Christian virtue which emphasises residence, function, momentum, in the divine dynasphere and therefore results in impersonal love toward all, which means tolerance.

2. In the environment of toleration the Jew is accepted, loved, respected and, again, even tolerated under principles of establishment freedom.

3. Such environment requires a large pivot of mature believers and general prosperity in the client nation.

4. That large pivot of mature believers becomes the nucleus not only for the client nation to God but for its prosperity. Inevitably such a nucleus provides that blessing by association known as national prosperity.

5. From national prosperity often comes arrogance, failure to pass the prosperity test. The leaders and the majority of the citizens become involved in the cosmic system which has various categories of arrogance which destroy the client nation.

6. The arrogant nation under the influence of the cosmic system develops two basic categories of failure: holocaust, in which active arrogance persecutes passive arrogance; historical disaster, which includes social degeneration, economic depression, and military disaster.

7. The nation involved might be classified as apostate and have a triple collective identification, identified through the principle that national decisions from a position of weakness: firstly, like socialism and activism that destroys the nation; secondly, historical loss of a national sense of destiny, or even a false sense of destiny like self-righteous interference in the local affairs of other nations; thirdly, national loss of control through bad foreign or domestic policies, or both.

A sixth principle

1. Under the principle that passive arrogance attracts persecution from active arrogance it must be concluded that the holocaust cannot exist apart from bad decisions on the part of the victims.

2. Individuals and groups must take the responsibility for their own decisions, and many bad decisions from a position of weakness on the part of the victims cannot be ignored.

3. The Jews who rejected Christ as Messiah and saviour at the time of the Roman empire had rejected through their own free will the signs which God had provided for Israel. All of these signs are rejected by strong negative volition which in turn creates first passive arrogance in cosmic one and then active arrogance in cosmic two. This means that the Jews are the products of their own negative decisions, even though they continue to use Deuteronomy 6:4 in their ritual.

A seventh principle

1. Like the double entendre which we studied in Revelation 12:2, to the unbelieving Jew the Messiah has never been born, there has been no virgin birth. Therefore his historic suffering is called the holocaust pregnancy — anti-Semitism during the time of his dispersion. Unbelieving Israel in the Tribulation “was tortured” — that is the future holocaust of the last half of the Tribulation, “to give birth.” To the unbelieving Jew Christ is not yet born and has not yet come and the labour pains continue in the last half of the Tribulation.

2. Since to the unbelieving Jew the virgin birth of Christ has never taken place his historical and eschatological suffering from anti-Semitism is classified as holocaust pregnancy, the intense labour pains with no delivery.

3. Therefore the holocaust syndrome basically has three parts. First, the Jews make negative decisions from a position of weakness when they reject the sign of the virgin birth, which become tantamount to rejecting Christ as saviour. So there are always negative decisions, rejection of truth, as the first phase of the holocaust syndrome. Secondly, this decision from a position of weakness means loss of control of their lives because they are outside of the plan of God and do not have the protection of the plan of God against holocaust or historical disaster. Thirdly, the Jew who rejects Christ as saviour cannot properly relate to the messianic passages of the Old Testament, therefore he has no personal sense of destiny without these passages. So the third part of the holocaust syndrome is of loss of personal destiny.

4. Since man is the product of his own decisions, not his environment, he brings on the holocaust of anti-Semitism through his own personal decisions. This does not mean that because the Jews have made wrong decisions we should enter into any antagonism against them.

An eighth principle

1. In the eschatological holocaust of the Tribulation born-again Jews are delivered by the second advent. Hence, under the analogy of the double entendre the deliverance of Christ at the virgin birth is analogous to the deliverance of believing Israel at the second advent.

2. Believing Jews with Bible doctrine come through those three and a half years of holocaust that is anti-Semitism totally unscathed because they are in the plan of God for the Millennium.

3. Unbelieving Jews of the Tribulation follow the analogy of never being delivered, for to them Christ has not yet been born. Hence, they are not born-again but continue in the labour pains of holocaust.

4. The unbelieving Jews want the crown without the cross. They always assume that the Millennium is going to come but they have not accepted Christ, hence the analogy between the Jewish holocaust of the Tribulation and the torture of the pregnant mother who cannot be delivered. The labour pains of the holocaust continue unless the Jew is born-again through faith in Christ. Until they accept the virgin pregnancy and birth they possess the holocaust pregnancy from which deliverance can only come through a spiritual birth, i.e.. faith in Christ.

Verse 14, the deliverance of regenerate believers or true Israel in the first half of the Tribulation. We have the tendency to think that once we get into unstable times, once we get into any form of historical disaster, that somehow the opportunity is gone for the believer. In fact, the opportunity and spiritual impact is even greater. We do not need historical prosperity for Christian blessing. Christian blessing comes in any circumstances. There is no question about the fact that we are in a transitional period as far as human history is concerned. Therefore there are terrible uncertainties, many instabilities, many people losing out, many people gaining, that is always the way it is in history, and people become very concerned and insecure. One of the manifestations of the insecurity is the phenomenal drug abuse today. But, again, no matter how great the disaster, whether it comes from war, famine, disease, economic depression, social degeneration, it does not change God's plan for your life and it does not hinder your opportunity for impact nor the fantastic blessing that can come to you through the daily exercising of your options.

We begin verse 14 with the conjunction kai, emphasising a fact as surprising and noteworthy. It should be translated "Nevertheless." The subject of this verse is composed of seven Greek words. First we have a nominative plural from the definite article a(i, and with it we have an indeclinable numeral duw. Then we have a nominative plural which is the actual subject from pteruc which means "wing." Then we have two definite articles in the genitive singular, tou, and the possessive genitive of a)etoj which is used for an eagle, sometimes a hawk, and sometimes a large buzzard. This is followed by the descriptive genitive from the adjective megaj. Altogether it says, "Nevertheless the two wings of a great eagle."

In Exodus 19:4 the Lord was speaking to Moses and to Israel, and said, "You yourselves have seen what I did to the Egyptians [at the Red Sea], and how I carried you on eagles' wings, and brought you to myself." The Jews weren't picked up on eagles' wings and carried to the Lord. They didn't die and they didn't ride eagles! It simply is used here for the Lord's logistical grace protection of the Jews in their Exodus wanderings. They wandered into every kind of trouble, they made a lot of trouble for themselves, and along the way a lot of people made trouble for them. But the point is, eagles' wings in Exodus 19:4 are simply used for systems of divine protection.

In Deuteronomy 32:9-12 another eagle passage is pertinent to this. "For the Lord's portion is his people; Jacob is the allotment of his inheritance. He found him in a desert land [in slavery in Egypt], and in the howling waste of the wilderness; he encircled him, he cared for him [God cared for the Jew and the Jew didn't care for God], he guarded him as the pupil of his eye. Like an eagle [an analogy] that stirs up its nest, that hovers over its young, takes them out, and spreads its wings and catches them: so the Lord alone guided him, and there was no foreign god with him." So it is the spiritual training of Israel during those forty years. "Like an eagle" is an analogy.

The Bible dictates divine protection for true or regenerate Israel in the first half of the Tribulation. There is a great evangelistic push right after the Rapture when 144,000 Jewish evangelists have a phenomenal response to the gospel. This divine protection may be administered through angels but actually the divine protection, the eagle, is administered through the content of the scriptures, such as Matthew 24:15ff. Here is an eschatological warning to true Israel or believing Jews living in Palestine in the middle of the Tribulation. These people have been evangelised by the 144,000. They are now warned to flee to the high desert country, and in obeying that command they are going to be protected, as per our passage, “Nevertheless the two wings of a great eagle [divine protection of true Israel].” Both groups of Jews in the Tribulation, those who believe in the first half and those who believe in the second half, are delivered by the second advent of Christ as per the Word of God, but they must follow the Word, otherwise they wind up martyrs. All too often, but not always, martyrs are the stupid ones, the non-flexible ones. There are a lot of martyrs in the Tribulation because they are stupid, arrogant, inflexible. Each group must use the faith-rest drill but with a different application. One group runs away and the other group stays and fights. True Israel in the first half of the Tribulation must flee using God’s logistical grace described in the context of the two wings of the eagle; the second group of true Israel in the second half of the Tribulation must take the opposite application: they must stand and fight. To stand and fight for the first group means certain death and, conversely, for the second group to flee is certain death. Each group must make the faith-rest application from the rationales and it will result in the flexibility which will preserve them.

Next phrase in our passage is the aorist active indicative of the verb didomi. Anything given by God is always a matter of grace. It isn’t given, it isn’t deserved, and therefore this is classified as logistical grace provision. “Nevertheless the two wings of a great eagle [divine protection of Israel] had been given.” “Had been given” is the translation of the culminative aorist tense, contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety but regarding it from the viewpoint of existing results, the protection and the eventual deliverance of those believers of Israel in the first half of the Tribulation, those who follow instruction, those who utilise the general mandate for the faith-rest drill and the specific mandates for fleeing to the high desert country. The passive voice: the regenerate of Israel receive the action of the verb, specifically those of the first half of the Tribulation. The declarative indicative mood represents the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality, and the reality is simply this: the positive believer advancing to maturity in any time of historical disaster is not in any way deterred by the adversities of history, from the blessings that belong to that individual who advances to the winner’s gate, gate eight. There is no promotion, no system of prosperity, that you cannot have in the greatest time of historical adversity.

Principle: God’s plan continues and has the same blessings, the same rewards, the same promotions, in historical adversity as in historical prosperity. God’s plan does not take cognisance of circumstances; God’s plan works in all circumstances of life. So no matter how bad things become God’s plan for your life doesn’t change, the momentum factor does not change as a mandate from God, and you are not deprived of any blessings because you move into a time of historical adversity.

With this we have the dative singular indirect object from the noun gunh, referring here to Israel, specifically regenerate Israel in the first half of the Tribulation. The dative of indirect object has the connotation of indicating the one in whose interest the act is performed. This becomes, therefore, a dative of advantage. It is to the advantage to be a believer in times of historical disaster. The advantages of being a believer are obvious eternally but the advantages of being a believer are just as great in time of historical adversity as in time of historical prosperity.

With this we now have a purpose clause and it is introduced with the conjunction i(na, translated “that” or “so that,” and with it we have the present middle subjunctive of the verb petomai which means to fly, “that she might fly.” We notice the futuristic present denoting an event which has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as already happening. This is a way of emphasising the assurance of deliverance to those who follow instructions given in doctrinal form. Those who follow Bible doctrine never lose but they have to be persistent and they have to be consistent in the perception of doctrine. Those who follow instruction through the application of eschatological doctrine to the historical circumstances are going to come up winners in time of the greatest historical disaster in all of history. The futuristic present here is dealing with a future eschatological function, the direct middle in which the subject acts with a view toward participating in the outcome, the deliverance from anti-Semitism in the last half of the Tribulation. The potential subjunctive mood implies a future reference and is qualified by the element of contingency, namely the perception of pertinent doctrine and application through the function of the faith-rest drill.

The question arises whether this is a literal or a figurative use of flying. The Bible does not say certain things. What the Bible does say is that flight from Jerusalem and Judea is necessary. The means is not specified. The trouble is that people like to be sensational when they come to eschatology and the eagle is not an aircraft as some of the more sensational have tried to indicate. But God’s logistical grace and deliverance in time of disaster is the issue. They are not actually literally flying, they are being delivered by logistical grace.

We then have a prepositional phrase in this sentence, e)ij plus topo) plus the descriptive genitive of a)utoj, “in her place,” feminine because the woman is the feminine gender referring to Israel, “so that she might fly to her place.” This place of refuge is described three times in eschatological passages: Daniel 11:31, the land of Edom, Moab and Ammon; Matthew 24:16 — “the mountains”; Revelation 12:6, “the high desert country.” All three descriptions are accurate. God has prepared a special place of refuge for those regenerate Jews of Palestine who accept Christ as saviour during the first half of the Tribulation. The place is the provision of logistical grace and the challenge to perpetuate the faith-rest drill once they have arrived.

Next we have the temporal clause which is the provision of logistical grace. Always remember that no matter how great the adversity to an individual or to people collectively as a nation God still has a plan for your life and logistical grace is still functional. So the temporal clause begins with the particle of place, o(tou, translated “where,” plus the adverb of place e)kei, “in that place.” The adverb of place emphasises the fact that the plan of God at the right place at the right time is only arrived at by the use of Bible doctrine previously given. You are not left in the dark. So that if you are not in the right place at the right time it is your responsibility — negative volition. God has never left any generation of believer without a place of refuge, without protection, and the fact that believers are destroyed in any given generation, overcome by historical disaster, simply means they have been negative toward doctrine. They have rejected the Word of God, they are the products of their own decisions. We are always the product of our own decisions, not our circumstances.

The next verb is the present passive indicative of the verb treqw. Treqw means to be sustained. If ever there is an important verb for us as we face the possibility of historical disaster in our own time, and for those in the future, and those who have adversity in the past, it is this word treqw. It means to nourish when dealing with children but when dealing with adults or people under adversity it means to be sustained. Again, we have the futuristic present denoting an event which has not yet occurred but is so certain in thought that it is contemplated as already occurring, even though it won't happen until the Tribulation. The passive voice: those Jews, true Israel, who believe in Christ in the first half of the Tribulation and who follow the instructions of the Word of God, receive the action of the verb in the form of logistical grace provision. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of logistical grace support of those Jewish believers who obey the instructions —Matthew 24:15-20.

The subject “she” refers to regenerate Israel of the first half of the Tribulation, “where in that place she [regenerate Israel of the first half of the Tribulation] will be sustained [the provision of logistical grace].”

We have one more phrase for time. Time is used in the singular for one year, xairoj, plus times [two years], and then we have the phrase for a half year, e(misuj, “for three and a half years,” the last half of the Tribulation. Then there is one more phrase in the verse which has to do with the serpent or Satan: the preposition a)po plus the ablative of separation from proswpon which some time means face and sometimes means presence. Here it means from the presence of. Then the possessive genitive from o)fij, the general word for snake, “from the presence of the serpent.” The serpent is used instead of Satan or devil because during the last half of the Tribulation Satan will attempt to lure or get born-again Jews to leave their place of refuge. They are safe as long as they stay in their place of refuge and apply Matthew 24:21-30 as a part of the faith-rest drill. Just as the serpent tempted the woman in the garden so the serpent will tempt the woman Israel in the place of refuge — Matthew 24:23,24. Satan knows that the Jews are safe in that high desert place and therefore must lure them out of their place of safety, their place of refuge.

Translation: “Nevertheless the two wings of the great eagle [divine protection of true Israel] has been given to the woman [logistical grace provision for regenerate Israel in the first half of the Tribulation] so that she [true Israel] might fly to her place of refuge [Edom, Moab, and Ammon], where in that place she will be sustained for a time [one year], plus times [two years], plus one half time [one half year], from the presence of the serpent [Satan].”

We now move to the first attack of the third demon assault army in verse 15. The nominative singular subject is o)fij, the word we noted in verse 14, an onomatopoeic Greek word as so many words in ancient languages happened to be. The o)fij is the hiss of the serpent, defined in the context (Revelation 12:9) as the title for Satan. With this we have the sequential use of the conjunction kai indicating that this attack follows Satan's expulsion from heaven, and it begins the eschatology of the devil's desperation. The first item on the agenda of the third woe (or the time of the devil's desperation) is the seventh trumpet or the great Jewish holocaust of the last half of the Tribulation.

The aorist active indicative of ballw follows. The word means generally to throw. It is used, however, with the ablative singular of the noun stoma which means mouth, and e)k plus stoma plus ballw reads: "Then the serpent projected from his mouth." The word "his" is the possessive genitive of the intensive pronoun a)utoj used as a personal pronoun, third person. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. Here the action is the attack of the third demon assault army. "Projected from his mouth" means he gave the orders for the attack. The active voice: Satan commanding the third demon assault army personally produces the action of the verb. The accusative neuter singular direct object from u(dor is translated "water". Water is used here as in Isaiah 8:7,8. Water as a flood is often used for invading armies, and here it refers to the third demon assault army which has been defeated in the battle of heaven and the remnants of it, along with the first and second demon assault armies have been pulled together for this last great historical disaster.

We have a comparative conjunction which follows, o(j, translated "like" or "as." It connotes that what is coming is going to be an analogy. Then the appositional accusative potamoj, another word for water: water in a river. It usually means a river but it actually originates from an Attic Greek word, the verb petomai, and it means to move with a tearing speed, hence it is used in noun form for water rushing quickly. It is used in the Attic Greek as an analogy for violence. So we translate it, "water like the violence of rapids" or "like the force [power] of a flood."

Then we have an improper preposition o)pisw plus the genitive singular of gunh, used here for Israel, "after [overtaking] the woman [Israel]." Israel overtaken, destroyed in the holocaust, refers to unbelieving Jews. Those believing Jews who followed the instructions of Matthew 24 are safe. The attack of the third demon army is compared to a helpless person about to be taken in the rapids or a wall of water of some kind of flood and drowned. It is obvious from the analogy that Israel is helpless apart from divine intervention. But God keeps His word and there will be live Jewish believers to receive the promises of the unconditional covenants at the second advent. While Satan seeks to destroy all Jews in this great attack the evangelising of Jews, their following the Word of God, growing in grace, learning doctrine, using the three stages of the faith-rest drill, will ensure their survival.

Principle: Believers with spiritual maturity not only survive in times of disaster but, more than that, they even have fantastic blessing. The function of supergrace blessings to winners who achieve gate eight continues in historical adversity as well as in time of historical prosperity.

This means that there never was a disaster in history that did not have its survivors. Survival is not a matter of reading books on it but having a phenomenal flexibility and having developed already as a believer the habit of making good decisions from the application of doctrine. So that survival is a matter of grace, not a matter of great wisdom in planning. When disaster hits you must always be flexible. Flexibility starts with the ability to think and to improvise from thought solutions in the place where you are located. It means the absence of fear. Fear is the inability to think under pressure. The greatest thing you have going for you is not some plan that you have developed and everything related to it, the greatest thing going for you is the ability to think under pressure. And you have to start out with a spiritual factor: God has a plan for your life, you are still alive, God has a purpose for your life; and since God has a plan for your life and a purpose for your life you must improvise in whatever area God has placed you. Flexibility is one of the marvellous things that accompanies the development of virtue in the divine dynasphere.

So we have survivors, and these people survive because of this phenomenal flexibility, but flexibility isn't the whole answer, it is only the attitude you must take when you find yourself in disaster. The grace of God always meets the flexibility of believers who apply doctrine in adverse conditions. Without God's grace all the flexibility in the world cannot survive but while this flexibility is manifesting itself in the application of doctrine — the use of the three stages of the faith-rest drill, whatever it may be — the grace of God is always providing that way of escape, whatever it is. Disaster limits what you can own and have and possess but disaster is unlimited in the field of thought and flexibility and application for survival. Grace provides options for grace-oriented people but you have to recognise the way of escape, you have to be able to apply the doctrine, you have to have common sense and use it. Historical peril and greatest dangers from disaster do not shut down the volitional options of the Jews who are the recipients of this attack. God imputed life to all of us; God has a purpose for our lives, at salvation He imputed eternal life; God has even a greater purpose and therefore God's purpose can be accomplished. The people who do not survive, the losers, are simply those who didn't have the doctrine, the preparation, the grace orientation, to make the right decisions when the time came.

There's nothing like enjoying and having capacity to enjoy the wonderful blessings that you have in historical prosperity, but you must never permit the great blessings of historical prosperity to suddenly become the greatest source of danger in historical disaster. It is always a possibility unless you are very flexible. You must be able to enjoy what you have and to walk away from it at any time that the balloon may go up.

The objective of Satan's attack is given in a purpose clause. It is introduced with the conjunction i(na, "that," Next we have the aorist active subjunctive of the verb poiew, and we have an accusative singular direct object from a)utoj, "that he might cause her." Now how do we get the word "cause" out of pioew? The culminative aorist views the objective of Israel's destruction in its entirety. Satan has a plan: destroy Israel. He now has his third demon assault army and the remnants of his first and second demon assault armies and pulls them altogether to destroy Israel. So the culminative aorist tense views the objective of Israel's destruction in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of its potential results: no Jews left to receive the fulfilment of the unconditional covenants. He wants the return of Christ with not a Jew left alive and, therefore, Christ will not be able to keep His promises. So he is going to try to destroy all Jews first. Now, where do we get the word "cause"? The active voice. This is a causative active voice in which Satan as the subject performs the action through intermediary means. In other words, he does it through the demon assault armies, he doesn't personally lead the attack. This is equivalent to the hiphil stem in the Hebrew. The idiom often occurs in using an intransitive verb in a transitive sense. The subjunctive mood is potential, it forms a purpose clause and implies a future reference. The potential subjunctive is qualified by the element of contingency. The contingency is based on the potential success of the attack made by the third demon assault army.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object from a compound noun, potamoqthj, and it means to be drowned in a flood water. So we have: "that he [Satan] might cause her [Israel] to be swept away by the rapids [or, drowned in the flood waters]." The objective of Satan, then, is twofold: to bring Israel to the point where she has lost control of her own destiny, like a person swept away in a flood and drowned, and to destroy Israel so that she has no destiny. This adds up to frustrating the plan. Frustration of the plan of God is always Satan's objective. Only those Jews who believe in Christ and learn Bible doctrine will have a personal sense of destiny in this crisis. They will maintain control of their lives in this crisis and they will continue to make decisions from a position of strength in this crisis; and for those reasons they will be able to survive. Those Jews who had believed in Christ and advanced through the perception and application of doctrine continued in the greatest adversity to have a personal sense of destiny, to maintain control of their own lives, and continue to make good decisions from a position of strength. From the time of Abraham to the present and continuing into the Tribulation and up to the second advent Satan has always been the enemy of Israel. Israel only has a personal sense of destiny when related to Jesus Christ, the God of Israel, and when not related to Jesus Christ the Jews flounder in their terrible attacks from Satan which we call holocausts. To be a racial Jew does not imply a personal sense of destiny. To be a racial Jew and to reject Jesus Christ as saviour substitutes arrogance for a personal sense of destiny. Apart from faith in Christ no one can have a personal sense of destiny for the plan of God begins at the cross.

Strictly speaking, the waters in this verse could just as easily have been flood waters or rapids or tidal waves, or any great flow of water which has a power representing the principle of great adversity. The attacks of the third demon assault army, the devil's guards, are pictured as a wall of water pursuing Israel. To be overtaken by the wall of water, whether it is a tidal wave or rapids, and drowning is the destruction of Israel by analogy. Hence, to be more consistent with the completion of the analogy in the next verse rapids probably can be used to represent this passage.

Translation: "Then the serpent [Satan] projected from his mouth water [the third demon assault army] like the rapids [great force and violence] to overtake the woman [Israel], in order that he [Satan] might cause her [Israel] to be swept away by the rapids [drowned in the flood waters]."

Dictators

Dictators are people who always know what is best for everyone else and seek to impose that knowledge on others without their consent. Therefore a dictator rejects freedom of choice and self-determination as the right of every individual. Dictators can be social, political or religious, seeking to impose their ideas on what is best for you totally apart from the function of your own volition. They refuse to permit you to make your own mistakes, they only want to make mistakes from their bad decisions, not yours. Consequently, dictators are both arrogant and self-righteous since the two characteristics are joined in the unholy matrimony of tyranny. Dictators use force to superimpose their will and ideas on the masses and therefore dictatorship inevitably rejects the principles and doctrines related to human freedom, self-determination, and the laws of divine establishment. Dictators insist on having their own way because their arrogance assumes that their way is superior. Hence, dictators assume perfection for themselves and imperfection for everyone else. They can only exist and function in the atmosphere of the cosmic system. A maximum number of people living in the cosmic system creates a vacuum for the rise of dictatorships while only the pivot of mature believers creates environment for the dynamic function of human freedom.

The dictatorship of Satan reaches its historical peak in the last half of the Tribulation because a maximum number of people in the world at that time demand such evil. Satan moves into that vacuum created by their negative volition. The mind must be exploited by Bible doctrine to make significant decisions for freedom.

Intolerance

One of the most fascinating periods of history is the Renaissance which preceded the Reformation. Most people think that the Renaissance was a time of tolerance but historically it was one of the greatest periods of intolerance in all of history. The new discoveries, the great talent, the rise of neo-classicism, all of these things produced one of the strongest areas of intolerance in history. The Roman Catholic church was intolerant of the Renaissance. The Renaissance resented the Roman Catholic church so the active arrogance of the church and the passive arrogance of discoveries such as Galileo's inevitably lead to great conflict.

Since a religious society cannot think or reason it generally becomes emotional with blind arrogance. This emotion produces first intolerance, an active form of arrogance, then violence and persecution, and the persecution is always directed toward passive arrogance, and cruelty results in some form of holocaust. Religion stifles freedom, the function of free will and self-determination, therefore religion loses toleration as an essential part of human freedom. Religion does not allow others to make mistakes but persecutes them vigorously.

There is no such thing as the perpetuation of tolerance, for the perpetuation of tolerance demands historically the perpetuation of humility. They go together. There never has been in the history of mankind the perpetuation of tolerance and humility for more than four generations. After that some form of active or passive arrogance rears its ugly head and the trouble begins again.

The Jews had to develop passive arrogance before they were ever persecuted, however. That is one of the basic principles of anti-Semitism. Passive arrogance demands persecution from active arrogance and there is always some form of stupid, ignorant active arrogance to persecute those who are in passive arrogance. Hence the principle: all of us as individuals and nations are the products of our own decisions.

Verse 16, the divine deliverance of Israel. God always delivers winners. Their preparation does not have to be of the nature where people are doing special things for survival, they have their survival built up and constructed in their soul through the perception of Bible doctrine and with this they have that innate ability to be flexible in every circumstance of disaster.

Verse 16 is a continuation of the analogy. This time instead of the analogy of disaster as in verse 15 we have the analogy of deliverance. We begin with the conjunction kai emphasising a fact as noteworthy, hence it is translated "Nevertheless." With this we have our subject in the nominative singular gh referring to planet earth. Sometimes it refers to the land of Israel. The word has a number of meanings but here it refers to land as opposed to water in the analogy. Land means safety from water and therefore in the analogy God provides safety for Israel through the greatest holocaust of history. However the safety is only provided for those who are believers in the Lord Jesus Christ and those who have advanced to maturity, those who would be classified as winners. "Nevertheless the land", which means safety from water. For regenerate Israel in the first half of the Tribulation land would refer to a literal land mass. It refers to Edom, Moab and Ammon of Daniel 11:41, the mountains of Matthew 24:16, the high desert country of Revelation 12:14. This is the area designated for safety provided by God for those Jewish believers converted by the 144,000 evangelists in the first half of the Tribulation. In the analogy, however, there is more land mass than flood in this case and this becomes a picture of divine deliverance of Israel during the greatest holocaust of their history, the land mass protects from the water. The land can be construed both literally and figuratively and still communicates the concept of God's faithfulness to Israel, their deliverance from the floodwaters of anti-Semitism both in the future as well as now.

Then we have the first verb, the aorist active indicative of bohqew which means to help, to furnish aid. We will translate it "helped." The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: by analogy there was more land mass [divine power] than water [Satan's power], therefore the land mass or divine power used as an analogy for the deliverance of believers, specifically believing Jews in the middle of the Tribulation when this terrible holocaust begins. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of eschatological reality.

Now how can we derive some understanding or blessing from this since it doesn't apply to us directly? You always have to have the interpretation first. In this passage the interpretation deals with a future time, the middle of the Tribulation. But it does have some application to us today and it was written for our admonition as well. When you have tried everything to try to find a way of escape in time of historical disaster, whether it is economic, social or military, you go back to the principle: God has a plan for your life. As a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ God has a purpose for your life. His plan and His purpose mean that He will deliver you in time of historical disaster provided, of course, that the historical is not used for your punishment. The protection, then, from historical disaster and the deliverance from historical disaster inevitably comes from your perception of Bible doctrine; for it is the function of the soul, the use of your free will, the decisions that you make, your thoughts, your ability to look at life from the divine viewpoint that makes it possible for you to be delivered. Deliverance is not physical. Deliverance is in the soul for those who are in the plan of God. If God is not using disaster to punish you He is using disaster to demonstrate His power, His grace, His deliverance and, above all, to reorient us to His grace; a process which has to continue all of the time. It is very easy for us to forget the grace of God as soon as we have any prosperity, any blessing. As soon as we get our eyes on the source, of course, we remember but by getting our eyes off the source of blessing, the source of everything that we have, and getting our eyes often on the gifts, we lose track of life and fail to remember that God still has a purpose for each one of us. No matter how great the disaster may be God can very easily deliver you from the worst situations that life has to offer.

“Nevertheless, the land helped the woman,” the dative singular, indirect object from the noun gunh, referring to true Israel. The dative of indirect object indicates the ones in whose interest the act is performed, and the act in this case are born-again Jews in the Tribulation. The analogy to water in the form of flooding represents the tremendous power of Satan in the form of the attack of his demon assault army. The land mass represents the power of God which dissipates and neutralises the violence of historical disaster. In other words, the strong current of the water does not have power over the stable land mass.

We have the conjunction kai again, this time it is the emphatic use translated “in fact.” Again we have the nominative subject gh referring to the land mass as the power of God in the analogy, in fact the land mass [divine power] protecting the believer in historical disaster. Then we have a second verb, the aorist active indicative of a)noigw, used here in the sense of opening, “in fact the land mass opened.” The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety: the deliverance of Israel from Satanic attack in the Tribulation. The active voice: the land mass, representing divine power, produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for a statement of eschatological doctrine in the Tribulation.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object from the noun stoma which means mouth, but here we probably have more of a connotation of some draining system to drain off water, “opened its mouth and.” Then we have the deliverance in the aorist active indicative of the verb katapinw which means to swallow, to drink down. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. In the analogy the flood waters represent again the power of Satan and the third demon assault army. The land mass represents the power of God protecting Israel in the greatest hour of its need, the holocaust of the Tribulation, the time of the devil's desperation. All Satanic attacks are made against the grace of God (one of the greatest is religion). The grace principle is the key to the land mass.

The accusative singular direct object of potamoj which follows represents the flood waters of the seventh trumpet, the anti-Semitism of the Tribulation. Again, water is often used in scripture for masses of people as invading armies, and here the water represents the assault of the third demon assault army. Just as land mass dissipates the power of flood waters or tidal waves so the land mass as the power of God neutralises the violent attack of the third demon assault army. Of course, the question is pertinent: What Jews are delivered in this greatest holocaust of all? Obviously this is true Israel, those Jews who personally accept Christ as saviour, who have followed the doctrinal mandates given in Matthew chapter 24, beginning at verse 15. They have utilised the faith-rest drill to be in the right place at the right time.

This brings us to a principle that applies to us today, those of us who are members of the royal family of God in the Church Age. To be in the right place in the right time is one of the highest achievements of life. It is impossible for any person to second-guess and decide what is being in the right place at the right time. The ideal in life is not to make money, not to go in for some form of achievement. Achievement is something you do not seek if you are in the right place at the right time. Achievement finds you, success finds you, greatness finds you by being in the right place at the right time. So for those who feel that they don't have much going for them, don't feel as though they are really achieving much in life, and therefore feeling a little despondent about lack of success, should remember this principle: being in the right place in the right time is often the key to success. How can you be in the right place at the right time in historical disaster? There is only one way and that is to firm up in the plan of God the modus operandi designed for you: residence, function, momentum inside the divine dynasphere. God has a plan for your life. That plan has been in existence since the day you believed in Christ as your saviour. It is very easy for you to spend all of your time under the plan of God in discipline. That means you will be in the right place at the right time for discipline. You will be functioning in a state of terrible misery. But for those who move on with Bible doctrine, for those who have consistent positive volition, there is the great principle of being in the right place at the right time provided by God. David would still be a shepherd and we would never have heard of David had it not been for the fact that he was in the plan of God. As a shepherd boy in the plan of God he wound up on the battlefield in the right place at the right time. He was the only one who heard the challenge of Goliath, the great Greek giant, and actually met that challenge. Why was he in the right place at the right time? Because he had taken in maximum doctrine, he had lived in obscurity, he had lived in a marvellous state of humility and virtue, and God put him in the right place at the right time. The right place at the right time with God's help means success, inevitable success. It means that you will succeed in life and that you will fulfil the plan of God, and your success will glorify the Lord. The Jews who glorify the Lord in the last half of the Tribulation are in the right place at the right time.

The source of Tribulational anti-Semitism is then given in the last half of this verse — the accusative singular of the relative pronoun o(j, “which,” refers to the water, the tidal wave, the attack of the third demon assault army called “flood” or “rapids.” Then we have our subject, the nominative singular from drakwn referring to the dragon. It is a reference to Satan himself. Then the aorist active indicative of the verb ballw referring here to throwing out or projecting, “which the dragon projected.” The aorist tense is the constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: Satan personally commands this demon assault army. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the eschatological attack of the third demon assault army with the stated objective of destroying all Israel on the earth — “which the dragon [Satan] projected from his mouth,” e)k plus the ablative of stoma again gives us the concept as to where the attack initiates.

Translation: “Nevertheless the land mass [referring to divine power] helped the woman [Israel], in fact the land mass opened its mouth and swallowed the flood waters [the seventh trumpet, the attack of the third demon assault army against the Jews] which the dragon projected from his mouth.”

This results in a second attack against regenerate Israel, given in verse 17. When there is frustration and anger arrogance intensifies. Therefore the arrogance of Satan intensifies and expresses itself in his rage.

The conjunction kai introduces a result from what precedes, translated “then.” We have the nominative singular of drakwn, “then the dragon.” The verb is the aorist passive indicative of o)rgizw referring here to rage or anger. The aorist tense is a constative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety: rage which results from frustrated arrogance. The most dangerous people in the world are the people whose arrogance has been cornered and put down, people who are cowards, weak, unstable. Once you get them in a corner they are like a wild animal because their arrogance has been frustrated. Frustrated arrogance is motivation for a great percentage of the evils in the world, not just sin but sin combined into some form of evil. Satan himself, the inventor of evil, is in that category at this moment, “the dragon was enraged.” The passive voice: Satan receives the action of the verb from his frustrated arrogance. He has intense anger, resentment, animosity, indignation. He was infuriated because he was frustrated in his endeavour to destroy Israel. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of Satan’s extreme anger, and it is directed toward Israel, e)pi plus the locative of gunh, referring to the woman, Israel. It is always amazing that the arrogant person, when he attacks someone else and does not succeed in his attacks, becomes perpetually resentful toward that person.

The last half of the Tribulation, then, is characterised by a series of Jewish holocausts, the greatest in all of human history. Anti-Semitism as a policy of the last half of the Tribulation is therefore stated in the next phrase. We have the connective use of the conjunction kai, “and.” Then we have the aorist active indicative of the verb a)perxomai, “and he went off”. Often when there is frustrated arrogance there is also some form of neurosis or psychosis.

In Satan there is psychopathic behaviour with regard to the problem. He will not take the responsibility for his own decisions and therefore frustrated arrogance gives him the motivation to continue trying to destroy the Jew right down to the point of the second advent. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. Satan again is producing the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of Satan's action based on the policy of anti-Semitism.

We can learn something from Satan's tantrum. Once you are in a state of arrogance and that state of arrogance is frustrated by some relationship with someone, and you become angry or enraged, this becomes motivation for a lifetime of vengeful activity: a lifetime, not just of sin but of intensified sin parlayed into evil, and therefore a life of self-induced and self-perpetuated misery.

What did Satan go off to do? The aorist active infinitive of poiew means to produce something. What is produced is determined by the accusative object of the infinitive which is polemoj which means to make war. So he went off to make war. The aorist tense is a constative aorist for an action extended over a period of the last half of the Tribulation, the time of the eschatology of the devil's desperation. The active voice: Satan produces the action of the verb. He still has his arrogance, he still has his frustration, he still has his anger, he is therefore motivated to spend the last three and a half years as the ruler of this world in trying to destroy the Jews. The infinitive of intended result means simply that when the result is indicated as fulfilling a deliberate objective, the destruction of Israel, it is so used.

With this we have the fact that while the demon assault army destroyed a great many Jews they did not destroy the remnant, those who were believers and were advancing to maturity. They are mentioned in the preposition meta plus the genitive of the adjective loipoj, referring to those who were delivered and will continue to be delivered, the remnant, the survivors, plus the possessive genitive singular of sperma referring to the Jews specifically. It is generally translated "seed", here it refers to posterity.

"Then the dragon was enraged with the woman. Consequently he went off in a huff [arrogance plus anger] to make war against the survivors of her posterity [those Jews who survived the initial holocaust in the Tribulation]."

By this time the remnant of Jews who had survived were mostly believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, as indicated by the word loipoj meaning remnant, survivors. Obviously some Jewish unbelievers were still alive to be dealt with at the baptism of fire when Jewish unbelievers will be cast into the lake of fire forever and ever, according to Isaiah 1:25-27; Ezekiel 20:34-38; Malachi 3:1-6; 4:1-2.

That brings us to the holocaust target for the next three and a half years. That target is specified in an interesting way by the articular present active participle of the verb terew. The definite article is used as a relative pronoun, "those who." The present tense is progressive for the action of obedience on the part of those who survive. They survive not because they were in some safe place out of town but because they had doctrine resident in their souls and they were flexible. The active voice: the Jewish believers or true Israel produce the action. The participle is circumstantial, “because those who kept observing”.

Then we have the accusative plural direct object from $\epsilon\eta\tau\omicron\lambda\eta$ referring to the mandates of doctrine. These mandates are said to belong to God, the possessive genitive of $\tau\omicron\iota\iota$, “those Jews who kept observing the mandates of God.” The mandates of God have to do with Bible doctrine. These commandments or mandates are not the Mosaic law but divine commands given to regenerate Israel in the middle of the Tribulation. The concept of $\epsilon\eta\tau\omicron\lambda\eta$ can be expanded to include the whole realm of doctrine, which implies application of doctrine to their own situation. Of course, this doctrine had to be learned before it could be applied.

Next we have a connective $\kappa\alpha\iota$ followed by the present active participle of $\epsilon\chi\omega$, the verb meaning to have or hold or both, “those who keep on having.” The present tense is a progressive present for action in the state of persistence, present linear aktionsart. The active voice: Jewish believers, true Israel, produce the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial, translated like a finite verb. The accusative singular direct object of the word $\mu\alpha\rho\tau\upsilon\rho\iota\alpha$ has to do with the testimony of life as well as lips; their testimony before God, before angels, primarily. It also has something to do with their testimony before the world but if the testimony before God is correct everything else falls in line, “and those who keep on having the testimony of Jesus”. The subjective genitive means that the noun produces the action. It could also be a possessive genitive, the testimony belongs to our Lord.

Translation: “Then the dragon was enraged with the woman. Consequently he went off in a huff to make war against the survivors of her posterity, those believing Jews who keep on observing the mandates of God and who keep on having the testimony of Jesus.”

The dynamics of doctrine in historical disaster

1. Bible doctrine in the right lobe of the mentality of the soul is the greatest power in life. No matter how great the historical disaster Bible doctrine is greater. Vincit omnia veritas: “doctrine conquers all.” The mind must be exploited by Bible doctrine to make significant decisions for freedom, for glorification of the Lord, for advance to maturity.
2. So it is with these Jewish believers who are delivered in the last half of the Tribulation. Through perception and application of doctrine they obey the mandates of God. They are the ones who are attracting persecution from Satan, not because of passive arrogance but because of active testimony for the Lord.
3. Through perception and application of doctrine they keep on having a witness or testimony to our Lord Jesus Christ.
4. While Satan is a genius and the ruler of this world he cannot contend with the active power of Bible doctrine perceived and applied in his domain, the world. Of course, doctrine is useless unless it is loaded into the gun -loaded into the right lobe. E)pignwsij doctrine is the only doctrine that can be applied.

Remember that man is inferior to the angels by creation, and through regeneration and perception of doctrine man as a believer is able to contend with fallen angels and their five attacks on the human race. In the next chapter, Revelation 13, Satan will fight believers both Jew and Gentile through temporal power. The temporal power includes both a Gentile and a Jewish dictator. Believers in the Tribulation will face both demonic [angelic] and human opposition, and never will there be a greater demonstration of the power of Bible doctrine resident in the souls of believers than in that future stage of human history.

In our Bibles we find seventeen verses in this chapter. However, in the Greek there is one more verse. It is not found in the English.

It starts out with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated "and." Then there is a verb, the aorist passive indicative of i(stemi. It means to take a stand, "Then he [Satan] took his stand." The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. Since i(stemi is an intransitive verb that means to offer resistance the verb means to take a stand. The passive voice in the intransitive use of i(stemi in the passive, which means that Satan or the dragon produces the action of the intransitive verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of Satan's continued opposition to all categories of believers in the last half of the Tribulation. The place where he took his stand is mentioned by a prepositional phrase: e)pi plus a)mmoj. And with that we have qalassa, "Then he [Satan] took his stand on the sand of the sea".

The sand of the sea refers to the next chapter and the two dictators who serve Satan during the time of the eschatology of the devil's desperation. The sea refers to the sea of nations during the last half of the Tribulation. The sand refers to the fact that Satan is confined to the earth during the last half of the Tribulation. This verse is found in all the best manuscripts; it is not found in the King James version of 1611.

Chapter 13

Here we have a chapter where prophecy is interpreted by history and the Roman empire is the background for the passage. Rome, while still a republic, became an empire. The historical Roman empire became the first client nation to God and the preserver of western European civilisation. This is going to become a very important principle when we get to chapter fourteen because in that chapter we are going to see several very valuable principles. The human race cannot be destroyed by anything that man does or anything that man constructs. The human race cannot be destroyed by man's volition or by any nuclear weapons of any kind. The human race is going to continue until the end of human history. This means that while man is capable of destroying himself God intervenes with divine judgment before this happens. All divine judgment comes from the same source as divine blessing, the justice of God, and some of the greatest blessings that come to the human race come in the form of judgment, because certain segments of degeneracy are wiped out and certain segments of religion are wiped out. The greatest enemy to the destruction of the human race is not in the field of sophisticated weaponry, not nuclear weapons, but on the one hand degeneracy and the inevitable result of self-righteousness in religion on the other. Religion and degeneracy are far more dangerous than any nuclear weapons or any human power that has ever existed on the face of the earth. So God blesses us with judgment. He also blesses us individually with adversity and some of the greatest blessings that come to us come in time of adversity, not just in time of prosperity. Prosperity is obvious, adversity is not obvious and yet it should be for the believer who understands the system and has advanced to gate seven in that system, the divine dynasphere.

We learn also that many of the things that we are going to study in this passage about dictatorships and about the use of human power are prophecies of the future but they are interpreted in terms of history of the past. Therefore this becomes a very unusual chapter and it leads to another unusual chapter: how God uses divine judgment in order to, preserve the human race. The human race has been preserved many times by civilisation from a Gentile client nation but many more times the human race has been preserved by divine judgment. Divine judgment is one of the greatest things we have going for us and that means that adversity for the believer is not designed to destroy him or to make him distraught in any way but is designed to bless him. Our blessings come in rather strange packages as far as unbelievers are concerned or human viewpoint thinking of believers, and therefore you can count on it that when you are in a time of adversity there is blessing in it for you just as in a time of prosperity. The source of the blessing is the same — the doctrine you have accumulated and the ability to recognise and have a personal sense of destiny, and to utilise the doctrinal rationales in that connection.

Out of the historical Roman empire there emerges an eschatological empire of the future. We are going to study in chapter thirteen the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation. We will also study in the last half of the chapter Israel as it will exist as a nation in the Tribulation, not as a client nation to God but, first of all, as a source of antagonism and, secondly, as the objective of the ecumenical world religion system, where they finally get to Israel with ecumenical religion. It must be kept in mind, then, that ecumenical religion is Satanic and it is just as dangerous as any other form of adversity in life. Degeneracy and religion are man's two greatest enemies for both are the products of man's volition, and man uses his own volition to destroy himself. We would not be here today were it not for the fact that God has judged the human race periodically. These judgements are the perpetuation of the human race, not its destruction. They only destroy certain portions: the religious portion and the degenerate portion.

The revived Roman empire of the Tribulation will not exist in crystallised form during the Church Age. We see constantly in the news people advocating and looking toward a united states of western Europe, the combining of western European powers, and we see, of course, the economical factors already there, the military factors there in NATO. There are already those particular areas which foreshadow what will happen in the Tribulation, but this might be a very temporary thing unless, of course, the Tribulation is going to occur in this or the next century. We have no way of knowing when the Tribulation will begin and we cannot say dogmatically that this is a sign of the times because there are no prophetic signs for the coming of the Tribulation. No man knows the day or the hour of the Rapture or the resurrection of the Church. What we see are historical trends but not necessarily indicative of the fact that the Tribulation is just around the corner. Nevertheless, when the Tribulation comes certain things will be true. There will be a very strong state in the middle east called Israel and there will be a revived Roman empire, a united states of western Europe. The revived Roman empire of the Tribulation, however, is not going to exist in any crystallised form until after the Rapture.

This chapter, then, is the prophetic message regarding the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation and its relationship to the nation Israel during the time of the eschatology of the devil's desperation. In this particular area we have to note certain principles. We have to note, first of all, that in the first ten verses we will study a Gentile dictator, the ruler of the revived Roman empire in the last half of the Tribulation. We will also study a Jewish dictator in verses 11-18. He is the ruler of Israel in the last half of the Tribulation. Both of these dictators are found throughout the scripture and therefore they are called many things by different writers of the scripture.

The general historical situation in the Tribulation: it is a time of power politics, a time when nations band together with nations, not in loose treaties as in the past but in strong spheres of influence. The state of Israel is a hub in the Tribulation from the middle and toward the end, and this hub is in a very precarious situation. After the first three and a half years of the Tribulation four great spheres of influence emerge in history: the king of the north, the kings of the east, the king of the south [Pan-Arabic bloc], and the western union. The king of the west plays a big part in our passage. The king of the west is the united states of western Europe which we call the revived Roman empire.

Rome of the past will be revived but the Romans of the past will not be the Romans of the revived Roman empire because the Romans of today are not the Romans of the past. There have been the invasions of many races and the Romans of today are made of almost every combination of people imaginable. The peninsula of Italy has housed many nations.

The Jews and the Romans are the major factor in our passage. The two greatest people of the ancient world were the Romans and the Jews. They were great for different reasons but there is no group of people in all of ancient history who are as great as the Jews in certain areas or as great as the Romans in certain other areas. Therefore it is fascinating to find them in the future having as great a future in the Tribulation as they had greatness in the past. It was inevitable that the two peoples whose history extended over a thousand years should encounter each other at various times in the course of past history. The Romans and the Jews met at the crucifixion of our Lord Jesus Christ where the two greatest systems of law in the ancient world combined to put our Lord on the cross. The Jews were the only client nation of the Old Testament times and of ancient history, and when the Romans administered the 5th cycle of discipline to the Jews in AD 70 they became the first Gentile client nation in history. So the only client nation of ancient history, the Jews, were followed by the first Gentile client nation, the Romans. At the same time all the blessings of the ancient world had their source in Israel just as the blessings of modern history originate from the same source, the Word of God, for both the Old and the New Testaments were written by Jewish authors. The only possible exception might be Luke. It is inevitable that these two greatest peoples of ancient history should meet, then, in the future.

A word about dictators. Dictators are people who always know what is best for everyone else and they seek to impose that knowledge on others without their consent. Hence the dictator rejects self-determination, freedom of choice, as the right of every individual members of the human race. Dictators reject the laws of divine establishment, they reject privacy, private ownership of property, and they reject the sacredness of life, for dictators generally are bad administrators and when they are the simplest solution to administration is to get rid of the opposition. Dictators can exist in every area of life. There are social dictators who dominate a social scene through intrusion into the privacy of others. There are political dictators, religious dictators, and others for the purpose of superimposing their ideas regarding what is best for you totally apart from the function of your own volition or any form of self-consent. Dictators refuse to permit you to make your own mistakes and in that sense they can be classified as arrogant crusaders seeking to run your life by their own standards, or lack of them, and that means that in their philosophy of tyranny dictators only want you to make their mistakes from their bad decisions. They want to make the decisions for everyone. Dictators are arrogant and often very self-righteous since the two characteristics are joined in the unholy matrimony of tyranny. Because dictators use force and violence to superimpose their will and ideas on the masses they inevitably reject doctrines and principles of establishment related to human freedom and self-determination.

Perhaps the greatest danger comes from those who have great power and use that power to intrude upon the privacy of others. For example, the news media. They face a great temptation. They have tremendous power today and when they use their power to intrude upon the privacy of others then it becomes tyranny. They are no longer dealing with news, with what is actually going on, but they are actually on crusades and they intrude upon the privacy of people in order to put them down, to eliminate them as a check on their crusades.

Dictators can only exist, function, and succeed in the atmosphere of untruth and the atmosphere where Bible doctrine is rejected or distorted, in the atmosphere of the cosmic system of Satan, and in the atmosphere of the historical environment where the cosmic system has major influence. We see it today in two trends in our own country: the rise of religion as over against Christianity which is not a religion, and with the rise of religion the rise of degeneracy. They always rise together. There are those who react to degeneracy — like homosexuality — and get into self-righteous religion, and there are those who react against self-righteous religion and get into something like drug addiction or some hell-raising activity which is simply a reaction.

A maximum number of people, then, living in the cosmic system always creates a vacuum historically, and into that vacuum is drawn some demagogue who has the qualities and the qualifications to become a dictator or a tyrant. The only defence against this is the pivot of mature believers. This creates the environment for the dynamic function of human freedom. The mind must be exploited for truth to make significant decisions for freedom.

The Gentile dictator of the Tribulation is found in the first ten verses of our chapter and beginning in verse one we have the empire of the Gentile dictator. In verses 1-10 we are now studying the Gentile dictator of the last half of the Tribulation. He actually becomes a dictator in the first year or two of the Tribulation.

In verse one the first problem we have to face is the textual problem. “And I stood on the sand of the sea” is not found in the original text. It is a correction of the missing verse of the previous chapter. Chapter 12:18 says, “and he [Satan] took his stand on the sand of the sea.” As in Daniel chapter 7:2,3 the sea represents the nations of the world. The sea may be calm or it may be stormy, a picture of the interaction of nations in human history. The calm suggests peace and the storms suggest warfare. The various functions of the sea portray the various interactions of nations in history. The currents of the sea are like the political trends in any given generation.

During the time of the eschatology of the devil’s desperation Satan takes a stand on the earth because he no longer takes a stand in heaven. That was the significance of the missing verse that we studied in chapter 12:18. Satan is confined to the earth during the last half of the Tribulation. This chapter actually begins, then, with the phrase, “And I saw a beast rise up out of the sea,” and since that is where the Greek text begins, that is where we begin, with the revived Roman empire.

We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, correctly translated “Then.” Next is the aorist active indicative of the verb o(r)aw, “Then I saw.” The constative aorist tense contemplates the apostle John’s vision in its entirety. It takes the rise of the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation, during the time of the devil’s desperation, and gathers it up into one entirety. What John sees in this context parallels what Daniel saw in Daniel chapter seven. The active voice: the apostle John produces the action of the verb. We saw that Satan took a stand on the sands of the sea but it was John who saw the vision. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of John’s vision as a part of the eschatology of the devil’s desperation.

The accusative singular direct object from the noun qhrion is used for the first dictator. It certainly is an apt word, it is “beast” in the sense of a real animal but it is also used for people of a bestial nature. Here the noun has a human connotation. Confusion is added to the problem by the fact that the King James version translates two Greek words the same. The other is zoion which simply means a living creature. The noun zoion is used for elect angels, the four angels of Revelation 4:6-9. Qhrion is used, and has been used in Revelation 11:7, for Abaddon the prince of demons, the murderer of the two witnesses, Moses and Elijah. Qhrion is also used for those unbelievers who are completely demonised in the cosmic system. We have two in this chapter: two dictators. One is the dictator of the revived Roman empire, the other is the dictator of the state of Israel in the Tribulation. So we translate it: "Then I saw a beast monster," the dictator of the revived Roman empire. The most demonised members of the human race are these two dictators.

This dictator receives his power from Satan under two principles. Firstly, he is demon-possessed to the maximum in the cosmic system. In other words, his rise is based upon his advance into evil in the cosmic system. He is also under demon influence and demon telepathy which is transference of thought from Satan to this dictator. Secondly, this dictator uses to the maximum the power of evil. The cosmic system is his contact with the supernatural power of Satan.

The dictator uses his great power of evil to gain his rulership, and there is a principle here. The power of evil can never penetrate a group apart from that group's consent or apart from that group's characteristic of evil. In other words, the power of evil can only succeed where evil exists. If, instead of the power of evil, there is the power of doctrine, there is the power of a pivot, there is the power of the Word of God, then the power of evil simply cannot make any inroads at all.

The power of evil belongs to Satan but the power of evil is delegated in various components of strength to those who live in the cosmic system, and Satan uses believers and unbelievers in the function of the power of evil. The sad thing is that you can't recognise the power of evil by the personality because some of the sweetest, most righteous, moral people that you ever see have received from Satan the power of evil. They will come in very subtly and malign and gossip and question and produce doubts and make their infiltration into any organisation of any kind. The power of evil is designed, one way or another, to distract you from Bible doctrine, from the daily intake of Bible doctrine, from growing spiritually in grace. The power of evil is always going to attack, therefore, any area where there is a possibility of forming a pivot. And it always starts with sweet people maligning, gossiping, expressing jealousy, bitterness, vindictiveness, implacability. The power of evil always infiltrates through motivational evil, it never starts out through functional evil. Functional evil always follows motivational evil.

So we must understand that the two men that we are studying, the dictator of the revived Roman empire and the dictator of Israel in the Tribulation, came into power through evil. The power of evil belongs to Satan and he delegated it to these two people under conditions that we will note.

This beast monster is said to have an origin: the preposition e)k plus the ablative of qalassa, "from the source of the sea." This is the sea of nations during the Tribulation. The accusative neuter singular present active participle from a)nabainw means coming up out of the sea. The present tense of the participle is a retroactive progressive present, it denotes what has happened in the past. In the beginning of the Tribulation the united states of western union begins to rise and continues into the present time, the middle of the Tribulation. The revived Roman empire of the Tribulation produces the action of the verb and the participle is used as a relative clause because of the retroactive progressive present. It is going to be translated by the English perfect, "Then I saw a beast dictator [Satan's slave, the Gentile dictator of the revived Roman empire in the last half of the Tribulation] who had ascended from the sea." The revived Roman empire of the first part of the Tribulation comes out of the sea of nations, fighting and jockeying for power in the Tribulation.

Next we have a present active participle from e)χw. The retroactive progressive present is known also as the present of duration, what is begun at the beginning of the Tribulation and is continued into the middle. The active voice: the dictator of the revived Roman empire produces the action. This is a circumstantial participle and a circumstantial participle in the Greek is often translated with a conjunction "and" and a finite verb. So we translate: "and he had." Then we have kerata deka, deka for ten plus the accusative plural direct object from keraj, "ten horns."

The horn is a symbol of power in the Word of God and the ten horns are ten nations which were once part of the old Roman empire. Not only is the horn a symbol of power and authority but horns represents nations or groups who possess power and authority by combining. In Daniel 8:20,21 we have a ram with two horns. This is the Persian empire: one horn for the Medes; one horn for the Persians. In Amos 6:13 arrogant Israel boasts about her conquest of Gentile nations whom they call horns or powerful nations. In Jeremiah 48:25 the horn of Moab is the power and sovereignty of Moab as a nation. Moab at its peak. In Daniel 7:7ff ten horns are the ten nations combined to form the revived Roman empire in the Tribulation, while the little horn of Daniel 7 is the dictator we are studying at the present time. So the word "horn" is found quite frequently in relationship to nations and, in the plural, nations combined together. In Zechariah 1:18-19 we have four horns, four empires who administer the fifth cycle of discipline to client nation Israel. They are Assyria, Chaldea, the Hellenistic empire of the Seleucids, and Rome. Therefore it is concluded, of course, that horns are legitimately used for powerful nations performing certain functions related to their power.

Translation: "And he [the dictator of the revived Roman empire] had ten horns." It would be nothing but speculation to determine the ten horns or nations which compose that revived Roman empire of the future. The problem is that we don't know when the Rapture is going to occur. If the Rapture were to occur sometime in the near future then we could do a little speculating but if the Rapture is not going to occur for another thousand years nations are going to change and the names are going to change. While the sea in this verse represents the great mass of nations of the Tribulation it can also refer to a literal sea, the Mediterranean which became a Roman lake after the third Punic war. So it could be nations bordering on the Mediterranean or expanded to include other nations as well. If the Rapture should occur sometime soon nations which were once in the Roman empire sound like this at the present: Italy, France, Spain, Switzerland, Austria, Bavaria, England, Holland, Belgium, West Germany (not East Germany), Yugoslavia, Greece, Romania, Bulgaria, Morocco, Algeria, Libya, Tunisia, Egypt, Western Turkey, Syria, Lebanon. All of those nations are modern nations and all of them were once in the old Roman empire. Nations definitely not involved: East Germany, Russia, Iran, the USA, Saudi Arabia, Afghanistan, Pakistan, India, China.

The real key to understanding the horns in verse one is to go to Daniel chapter seven where we have some expansion. Daniel 7:2,3, “Daniel said, ‘I was looking in my vision by night, and behold, the four winds of heaven [the rise and fall of empires under a principle: Jesus Christ controls history] were stirring up the great sea [four empires were stirring up peoples and nations of the world]. And four great beasts [empires] were coming up from the sea [Gentile nations], differing each from the other’.”

Verses 4-6 describe these empires. In verse four we have the lion, the Chaldean empire, followed by the bear in verse 5 which is the Persian empire, followed by the leopard in verse 6, the Hellenistic empire of Alexander the Great which disintegrated into the Hellenistic monarchies after Alexander’s death.

In verse 7 we pick up the concept. “ ‘After this I kept looking in the night visions, and behold, a fourth beast [the historical Roman empire, the first Gentile client nation], dreadful and terrifying and extremely strong; and it had large iron teeth [Rome from BC 146-49, the transitional period from republic to empire]. It devoured and crushed and trampled down with its feet the rest [the expansion of the Roman empire]; and it was different from all the beasts that were before it [it became the first Gentile client nation to God], and it [the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation. Moving from Rome of the past to Rome of the future] had ten horns’.”

Rome as a client nation to God started in AD 70 with the fall of Israel. Long before that the transition had been occurring. What held up Israel as a client nation during the transitional period was the ministry of the apostles — Paul, John, Peter, James. Rome as a client nation to God continued until AD 476. From 476 AD and throughout the rest of the Church Age other Gentile nations function as client nations to God. Gentile client nations cease to exist at the Rapture because the pivot of mature believers is removed from planet earth by resurrection — no pivot; no client nation. All the pivots go up at the Rapture. After the Rapture comes the Tribulation and the revived Roman empire under the concept of the ten horns of Revelation 13:1; 17:1-17; Daniel 7:7. These ten horns are taken from the countries mentioned above.

Verse 8, “ ‘While I was contemplating the horns [the ten nations combined to form the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation], behold [in the middle of the Tribulation], another little horn [dictator of the revived Roman empire], came up from among them, and three of the first horns were uprooted [in order to establish his dictatorship he had to fight and defeat three out of the ten nations before the other seven surrendered to his power] before it; and behold, this horn possessed eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth that spoke arrogantly’.”

In other words, in the middle of the Tribulation, or just before that time, a dictator [the little horn] emerges and conquers three of the nations in this confederation. The others surrender to his power. He then becomes an absolute dictator over this power bloc of the Tribulation. This fact explains our ten horns in Revelation 12:3; 13:1; 17:3.

Daniel 7:9, “ ‘I continued looking [past the Tribulation and second advent and Millennium] until thrones were set up [the nations of the Millennium. The thrones are set up so that believers of the Church Age who are winners can rule nations in the Millennium], and the Ancient of Days took his throne [the coronation of Jesus Christ at the second advent]; his clothing was like white snow [the uniform of glory over His resurrection body], and the hair of his head was like pure wool [the strategic victory of Christ at the first advent]. His throne was a flame of fire [the baptism of fire, which means that only believers enter the Millennium, unbelievers are cast into fire], its wheels [the chariot of fire which we studied in Ezekiel] were a burning fire [the judgment of the baptism of fire at the second advent].’ ” Verses 10-12 describe details of the second advent judgements.

Verse 14, “ ‘And to him [Jesus Christ] was given dominion [rulership of the world], glory and sovereignty, that all the peoples, nations, and languages might serve him. His dominion is an everlasting dominion which will not pass away; furthermore, his kingdom is one which will never be destroyed.’ ”

Verses 18-26, “ ‘But the saints of the Highest One [Jewish believers or true Israel] will receive the kingdom [the restoration of Israel as a client nation to God under the Palestinian covenant] and possess the kingdom forever.’ ”

‘Then I desired to know the exact meaning [interpretation] of the fourth beast [the historical Roman empire], which was different from all of the others, most terrifying, with its teeth of iron and its claws of bronze, and which devoured, crushed, and trampled under foot whatever was left, and the meaning of the ten horns which were on its head, and the other horn [the dictator of the revived Roman empire] which came up, and before which three of them fell [were defeated], namely, that little horn which had eyes [genius combined with demonism] and a mouth that spoke arrogantly [eloquence from the cosmic system], and whose appearance was more arrogant than his contemporaries.’ ”

“ ‘I continued looking while the horn was making war against the saints and winning over them until the Ancient of Days came [second advent of Christ], and pronounced judgment in favour of the saints of the Highest One, and the time arrived when the saints took possession of the kingdom. Therefore he said [interpretation]: ‘The fourth beast will be the fourth empire [the Roman empire] on the earth, which will be different from all the others, and it will devour the entire earth and tread it down and crush it. As for the ten horns [revived Roman empire], out of this kingdom ten kings will arise [the first half of the Tribulation]; and another [the dictator who takes over about the middle of the Tribulation] will arise after them, and he will be different from the previous ones [because he is Satan’s servant, both demon-possessed and under great demon influence] and he will conquer three kings. He will speak out against the Most High and will impress the saints of the Highest One, he will try to change times and laws; and they [believers] will be delivered from his hands for three and one half years [Jews delivered from the holocaust]. Then the court will sit [second advent of Christ], and his dominion [Satan as the ruler of the world] will be taken away, to annihilate and to destroy to the end [to the end of the Millennium, until he is released]’.”

We note in Revelation 13:1, “having seven heads.” The ten horns are the confederation of nations which form the revived Roman empire in the first half of the Tribulation. The seven heads are the nations who did not have to be conquered. Because in this confederation of ten nations we have so many bad decisions from a position of weakness the vacuum is created. Out of that vacuum came a dictator. First these nations would not accept this man until he ruthlessly conquered three of them and the other seven accepted his dictatorship. In that way he became the dictator of the revived Roman empire and the phraseology “seven heads” refers simply to those nations which were not conquered but came under the power of this dictator. The seven heads, then, are the surviving nations in the revived Roman empire by the middle of the Tribulation. Hence, we have the first and last status of the revived Roman empire in the Tribulation. In the first half of the Tribulation a ten-nation confederation; in the last half of the Tribulation a seven-nation dictatorship.

We have next a phrase which is called the interpretive use of the conjunction kai. This is the idiomatic use, the interpretative kai, and should be translated “this means.” So after the ten horns and seven heads we have kai meaning “this means.” Then we have the prepositional phrase e)pi plus the genitive of keraj, meaning horns. This means that “on his horns” (we have the possessive genitive of a)utoj, the intensive pronoun uses a personal pronoun), the revived Roman empire during the first half of the Tribulation, “were ten crowns,” deka diadhma [diadhma is the ruler’s crown]. In the first half of the Tribulation, then, the dictator was part of a political confederation, ten nations of the revived Roman empire. In the last half of the Tribulation he rules what is left of it after he conquers it.

The revived Roman empire in the last half of the Tribulation is then described. We have a connective kai this time denoting a contrast with the previous phrase, translated “but.” Again we have the preposition e)pi but this time plus the accusative of the noun kefalh, “but on his head.” We had in the previous phrase e)pi plus the genitive, emphasising contact. This time we have e)pi plus the accusative, emphasising motion or direction. In the first half of the Tribulation the dictator has contact but in the last half of the Tribulation the dictator has motion, he is in control of the revived Roman empire, “but over his head [the revived Roman empire] the name,” the accusative singular direct object from o)noma, meaning name, designation or person. Then the accusative plural in apposition to that: blasfhmia, blasphemy, “but over his head the name blasphemy.” Blasphemy simply refers to the fact that he is the head of the ecumenical religion of the Tribulation. He has a religious empire as well as a political empire. His political empire is mentioned in the “seven heads and on his heads were ten crowns.” So he controls the entire Roman empire. The ten crowns refer to the original ten nations.

There are two things that create a vacuum in any nation at any time. One is stupidity: you stop thinking. When you stop thinking you create a vacuum for a dictator. That is what happened to Nazi Germany, to Russia, to China. That explains the rise of communism; it invades where the vacuum exists. The other part is when you make bad decisions from a position of weakness. You lost control of your own life and you have no personal sense of destiny, and your status quo contributes to the national lack of control and the nation's failure to have a sense of destiny. One way or another, every nation after four generations of degeneracy is destroyed.

A vacuum was created in this ten-nation confederation and out of that vacuum comes a dictator. He conquered three and ruled seven but the other three are also under his control. That is all this is saying: "then I saw the beast dictator [Satan's man] who had ascended from the sea [because he was in an area where negative volition created a vacuum that sucked him up], having ten horns and seven heads, and on his horns were ten crowns [on his horns — the revived Roman empire; the ten crowns — the political empire during the first half of the Tribulation] but over his head [revived Roman empire during the last half of the Tribulation] the name of blasphemy [Satan's last great attack against the human race: ecumenical religion]."

In the last half of the Tribulation the dictator has absolute control politically, but something is added and something is taken away from his absolute control. Taken away are the ten crowns of the ten horns, which means they are no longer independent states in a confederation but a part of a single empire, the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation. Added to the seven surviving states is the name "blasphemy," indicating that this is a religious as well as a political dictatorship. The worst thing that could happen is to have both a religious and a political dictatorship. The revived Roman empire in the last half of the Tribulation is religious and political, and we will see how this ecumenical religion not only gains control in the revived Roman empire as a Satanic power but also takes over the state of Israel where people will say in that day, "It can't happen, Judaism will resist it." But Judaism has no power apart from Bible doctrine. Judaism will have a system of religion without the doctrine of the Old Testament.

Verse 2, the precedent and power of the empire. This takes us back to Daniel chapter seven for explanation in verses 3-6. This is the passage which will explain the system of precedence.

"And four great beasts were coming up from the sea [of nations], different from one another," a phrase which means idiomatically that they follow each other historically, they do not coexist. "The first [the Chaldean empire] was like a lion [that will explain "lion" in Revelation 13:2] and had the wings of an eagle [the rapidity with which the Chaldean empire came into prominence]. I kept looking until the wings were plucked [that is Nebuchadnezzar's madness resulting in the palace revolution of Daniel chapter four] and it was lifted up from the ground [the restoration of Nebuchadnezzar] and made to stand on two feet like a man [Nebuchadnezzar's conversion]; a human mind was also given to it [eventually he became very brilliant from his learning of doctrine]. And behold another beast, a second one, resembling a bear [the Median-Persian empire which lasted two centuries]. He was raised up on one side [the Persians dominated the Medes], and three ribs were in its mouth between its teeth [the story of Cyrus the Great: the first rib are the Medes, the second was Lydia, the third rib was Babylon and the fall of the Chaldean empire in BC 539]; and thus they said to it [the bear], 'Arise, devour much meat!' " This is the expansion of the Persian empire from India on the east to Greece on the west. These conquests were divine judgements on demonised empires practising idolatry, Isaiah 41:2-7; 44:28; 45:1-13; 2 Chronicles 36:22-23; Ezra 1. God used a born-again believer [Cyrus] to exercise judgment. Degeneracy hit in all of these great nations all at the same time. God used the Persian empire also to protect and restore Israel to its client nation status.

In Daniel 7:6 we read: "After this I kept looking, and behold, another one, like a leopard [Alexander the Great and his Macedonian empire], which had on its sides four wings of a bird [the first wing was the conquest of Asia Minor, the second was the conquest of the Mediterranean world, the third was the conquest of Persia's eastern empire, and the fourth was the conquest of Parthia]; the beast also had four heads [Seleucus, Ptolemy, Cassander, Lysimachus, heads of the Hellenistic monarchies], and dominion was given to it."

Revelation 13:2 has the same beast analogy. It begins with a connective kai, introducing a result from what precedes. It is translated "Furthermore." The aorist active indicative of o(raw follows, "Furthermore I saw." The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, the parade of empires which sets the precedent. The active voice: John is the human author and he produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality.

Then we have the subject, the nominative singular from qhrion, which means the beast monster, and we are looking now at the revived Roman empire. "Furthermore the beast which I saw," and then the perfect active indicative of e)imi, "was," and with the comparative particle o(moioj, "was like."

Next we have the instrumental of association of the noun pardalij, which means leopard, "was like a leopard," The leopard, as we saw in Daniel, is the Macedonian and Hellenistic empires. This analogy denotes the rapid conquest of the dictator in forming the revived Roman empire. He had the speed of Alexander. We are talking about a future ruler of the revived Roman empire in the Tribulation who will break all records for conquest and he is compared to the rapidity with which Alexander the Great conquered the world. While it took Alexander twelve years to form his empire this beast dictator does it in less than a year.

The pro-Jewish analogy of the first half of the Tribulation is brought up next. We have the adjunctive use of kai, "also." We have the nominative plural from the noun pouj and the possessive genitive a)utoj, "his foot," "also his foot was like." And then we have the descriptive genitive of a)rchoj for the bear. The bear refers to the Persian empire. And what is the precedent that the Persian empire set? It was pro-Semitic. Not only did the Persians treat the Jews well but they also sponsored their return to the land and the restoration of the client nation. Hence, the analogy of the bear is a reference to the Roman dictator's pro-Semitic policy toward Israel in the first half of the Tribulation and after his sensational conquest at the time of the middle of the Tribulation. It is only after the abomination of the desolation is put up in Israel that anti-Semitism rears its ugly head. The revived Roman empire is pro-Semitic in the first half of the Tribulation, right up until the middle of the Tribulation, but with the fall of Satan from heaven there is suddenly an outbreak of anti-Semitism. So we have the bear which is analogous to the dictator's pro-Semitic policy in the first half of the Tribulation.

Then we have thirdly, the lion, the anti-Semitic policy of the last half of the Tribulation. We have the connective conjunction kai, a nominative singular subject stoma and, again, the possessive genitive from a)utoj, "and his mouth." Then we have an ellipsis which demands the verb to be, "and his mouth was like the mouth of a lion." The lion refers to the Chaldean empire which was anti-Semitic. Therefore it establishes analogy with the Roman dictator's policy at the end of the Tribulation. He became anti-Semitic. Each empire of the past had a characteristic which would be found in the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation.

Translation: "Furthermore the beast which I saw [the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation] was like a leopard [the dictator's rapid conquests in the first half of the Tribulation is compared to the rapid conquest of Alexander the Great], also his feet were like the feet of a bear [the dictator's pro-Semitic policy in the first half of the Tribulation is compared to the pro-Semitic policy of Persia], and his mouth was like the mouth of a lion [the dictator's anti-Semitic policy in the last half of the Tribulation]."

Note the reverse order of the animals in Revelation chapter thirteen. In Daniel chapter seven the lion came first, then the bear, and then the leopard. The reason for that is quite obvious. In Daniel seven the lion came first historically, then came the bear, and finally was the leopard. That is the historical order of Daniel chapter seven, but now when we come to Revelation chapter thirteen these are reversed because these analogies are related to the Tribulation, not to past history. The pro-Semitic policy of the Roman dictator of the Tribulation came first in which he made the treaty. The period of the bear or the pro-Semitic policy is when the king of the west, the revived Roman empire, made the treaty with the state of Israel in the Tribulation. But behind that pro-Semitism was religion. The dictator was the head of ecumenical religion of the Tribulation and he wanted to bring Israel into the religion. The greatest persecutors of Israel have always been religion. (Bible Christianity is not a religion) Ecumenical religion, once the dictator of the revived Roman empire became its head and accepted the rulership of ecumenical religion in the world at that time, began persecuting the Jews.

Next we have the connective kai followed by the nominative singular subject drakwn, "dragon." Satan is the highest of all angelic creatures and the ruler of all fallen angels, Matthew 8:28; 9:34; 12:26; Luke 11:18,19. Satan or the dragon is the central antagonist of the angelic conflict; he is the anti-God creature of creatures, Hebrews chapters one and two. Yet God did more for him than any other creature. So why would Satan be against God? How could he turn on someone who did so much for him? In one word: arrogance. Sometimes arrogance is called vanity, sometimes it is called pride, but arrogance can change people instantly and always for the worst. When the believer gets involved in the cosmic system he turns on the one who has given his eternal life and every fantastic, marvellous blessing, and even keeps each one of us alive.

Satan is a genius, and he is a genius when it comes to organisation. He has a great system of organisation, Ephesians 6:10. He is also a criminal, and when you are a good organiser and a criminal it is natural that you are going to get into trouble. As a criminal he is the original murderer in history, John 8:44. Satan is the enemy of God, and being the enemy of God what Satan hates the most is truth, Bible doctrine. He can't stand Bible doctrine. Satan is the ruler of this world and is far superior in every way to the creatures of this world, and yet we have one thing that gives us great power, the ability to resist, the ability to see through him, the ability to discern, and the ability to fulfil the plan of God, and that is Bible doctrine. And so what defeats Satan is not any attractiveness, not any beauty, not any wisdom or talent that we might have, and above all not any form of self-righteousness (the quintessence of arrogance), is Bible doctrine resident in the soul. Naturally, therefore, Satan is the enemy of Bible doctrine, Matthew 13:9, 39.

Satan is also a great strategist. 2 Corinthians 2:11 "... in order that no advantage be taken of us by Satan for we are not ignorant of his strategy." Satan has all of the natural advantages over us but it is one thing to have natural advantages over someone and something else to take advantage of someone. The difference is volition. No one can take advantage of you apart from your own consent, apart from the function of your own volition. By creation Satan is superior to us in every way but Satan cannot take advantage of us unless we agree to it from the function of our own volition. What protects our volition from making those wrong decisions, bad decisions from a position of weakness, is Bible doctrine. Ignorance is what ruins us as believers. Arrogance and ignorance are our two greatest enemies.

2 Corinthians 11:3 says, "But I am afraid, lest as the serpent [Satan] deceived Eve by his craftiness your minds will be led astray from the simplicity and virtue of devotion to Christ." There is a phenomenal gem. The point being: Satan must deceive our minds. And why our minds? Because the mind is the recipient of Bible doctrine. You are not led astray in any way except through the mind because that is where your volition is and the source of all sin, the source of human good, the source of evil. Devotion to Christ is the system in the divine dynasphere.

2 Corinthians 11:14, "Satan disguises himself as an angel of light."

Revelation 13:2, "and the dragon." Let us see what Satan is doing here, the aorist active indicative of didomi, he is giving something. Watch out when the devil gives away something. When Satan starts to give you something it means that you are now his slave if you accept his gift. So you have to be careful who is giving you what; "and the dragon gave," the constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: Satan produced the action of the verb through the delegation of authority to the Roman dictator. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical fact that during the Tribulation Satan gains by giving. That is what people often have in mind when they give you something. This is why giving in the local church must always be anonymous. The pastor must not know who is giving what because people often give to a pastor so that they can tie him up and use him for whatever ends they may have down the line. So when people give the pastor shouldn't know anything, and when people give they should give as unto the Lord.

“and the dragon gave to him,” the dative singular indirect object from a)utoj. This is the intensive use and it is translated “to him.” Once the devil starts giving away something you are under his power if you accept his gifts, and if he gives power then he controls you and the power you have is his power, you are a puppet on a string.

We have what he gives in the accusative singular direct object, dunamij. God gives dunamij and Satan gives dunamij. God’s dunamij to the royal family is the divine dynasphere. Dunamij is where we get dynasphere; that is the plan of God. But Satan also gives a system of power related to the cosmic system, “and the dragon gave to him his power.”

Satan, then, as the super creature does possess great power. For example, Satan can blind the minds of unbelievers when they are exposed to the gospel, according to 2 Corinthians 4:3-4, but he just can’t reach in and coerce volition. How he blinds is he starts giving presents. There is nothing that will blind people more than to receive gifts without understanding what is behind it — not love, but control. Basically, there are two reasons why people give: because of love and to control. There are people who will do a favour to you because they want to control you; other people will do a favour for you because they love you. When giving is an expression of love and the favour comes there are no strings. But when giving is going to demand favour down the line and there are strings it is always to control you. One nice thing about grace: no strings.

So we have the power of Satan, and the power of Satan is in giving. He is giving because he has strings. Satan doesn’t do these things unless God permits it, and there is a reason for it. Satan tried to gain power over Job and failed, and when Job would not accept his presents then he became vindictive. If you refuse the gifts of someone who is trying to control you the next step is vindictiveness. Many a person will turn against you with vindictiveness simply because you rejected their presents and therefore wouldn’t come under their control. That is why Satan killed the children of Job. But the children of Job weren’t much good anyway and God gave Job other children later on. It was really a case of God permitting it and it turned out for good because Job rejected Satan’s gifts.

Satan motivated Cain to murder his brother Abel. First of all Satan had to hook Cain. Satan gave Cain the most beautiful farm in the world at that time and all of the food grown at Cain’s farm was magnificent. In fact, it was so good that Cain was arrogant about it and when it was time to bring a gift to God, instead of bringing the lamb and the shedding of blood which represented the cross he brought all this beautiful fruit and vegetables. And who has been giving him all this great success in farming? Satan. So Cain brings all this produce that Satan has given him and says, “Look God, here’s my gift”. God rejected it. So then Satan motivated Cain to murder, John 8:44; 1 John 3:12.

Satan is often the executor of believers who are sentenced to the sin unto death. That is vindictiveness. Cf. 1 Corinthians 5:5; 1 Timothy 1:19,20.

Satan's power is obviously then related to use and function of violence. But it doesn't start there. Satan hooks people by giving them something. A gift from Satan is the beginning of trouble. So the first object here is that the dragon gave to the dictator his power.

Then he gave a second thing, "and his throne." The dragon is the ruler of this world. So we have a second accusative, qronoj. He gave him not only power but a title to go with his power. This dictator is Satan's servant. This dictator gave his soul to the devil. In return for his total dedication to the devil the dictator of the little horn of Daniel chapter seven receives great power and great authority. It is one thing to have power, it is something else to have great authority to go with it. The extent of his authority: he had the political rulership of the revived Roman empire; he was the religious leader of Satan's ecumenical religion of the Tribulation.

Translation of verse two: "Furthermore the beast which I saw [the dictator of the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation] was like a leopard [the dictator's rapid conquest in the first half of the Tribulation], also his feet were like the feet of a bear [the dictator's pro-Semitic policy in the first half of the Tribulation], and his mouth was like the mouth of a lion [the dictator's reversal to anti-Semitism policy in the last half of the Tribulation]: and the dragon [Satan, the ruler of this world] gave him to him [the dictator of the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation] his power, and his throne, and great authority [political authority as the ruler of the revived Roman empire and religious authority as the ruler of ecumenical religion]."

We are going to study two dictators in chapter thirteen but we need to spend a little time first on a principle or two by way of introduction.

First of all we are going to note in this chapter two kinds of dictators. One is a Jew and one in a Gentile; one is a Roman and one is a Jew. It is interesting that we should have in the Tribulation of the future a Jew and a Roman as the two great dictators of the Tribulation. The two greatest people of the ancient world were the Jews and the Romans. It was inevitable that the two people whose history extended over a thousand years in the ancient world, and whose history is almost longer than any people of any time, should encounter each other in the course of human history. The Romans and the Jews met at probably the most dramatic point, the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ. They represented the two greatest systems of law in the ancient world and, as far as the Jews are concerned, the greatest system of law in all of human history. And it is interesting that these two fantastic systems of law were used to put our Lord Jesus Christ on the cross. It wasn't just the Jews, it was both Jewish and Roman law. So Jews and Romans met at the cross.

The Jews were the only client nation of the Old Testament times in ancient history and when the Romans finally administered the fifth cycle of discipline in AD 70 they became the first Gentile client nation in history. While all the streams of ancient history flow into the lake called SPQR [The Senate and the People of Rome] all the streams of modern history flow out of the lake called SPQR. At the same time all blessings of the ancient world had their source in Israel. Just as history flows into and out of the Roman empire all the blessings of the ancient world flow in and out of Israel. It is inevitable that the two greatest peoples then should meet in ancient history, for one of them has all the trends of history, one of them has all the blessings of history. And just as they have met in the past to form some of the most dramatic pages of history so they will meet in the future to form the great drama of the last half of the Tribulation.

The history of the Tribulation prophesied in chapter thirteen finds Rome and Israel meeting again during one of the most dramatic moments in all of history. They meet in the form of their two dictators: the dictator of the revived Roman empire and the dictator of Israel in the Tribulation.

Dictators

1. Dictators are people who always know what is best for everyone else and seek to impose that knowledge, however limited, on others without their consent. The difference between a legitimate ruler and a dictator is the one word “consent”. People who are legitimate rulers rule by the consent of the people; illegitimate rulers or dictators rule without consent.

2. Hence the dictator rejects freedom of choice and the principle of self-determination as the right of every individual member of a society. In effect, a dictator rejects freedom and he assumes the right to live everyone else’s life for them.

3. Dictators can exist in every category of life. We are going to study the eschatological aspect but there are dictators in social life who superimpose their will on the social circle. There are, of course the political dictatorships. We are filled with them in our time in history; they have existed in the past. There are economic dictatorships and religious dictatorships. Some of the latter are great dictatorships such as in the Reformation — Luther, Zwingli, Calvin.

It is one thing for people to present to you their ideas, which is legitimate, but to demand, even with the use of force, that you follow their ideas is something else. The only legitimate dictatorship is parents over children.

4. Dictators refuse to permit you to make your own mistakes. In that sense they are arrogant crusaders seeking to run your life by their standards or lack of standards. This means that in their philosophy of tyranny dictators only want you to make their mistakes from their bad decisions.

5. Therefore dictators are inevitably arrogant, self-righteous. Even the most evil of men, due to their arrogance, have self-righteousness.

6. Because dictators inevitably have to use force and violence to superimpose their will and ideas on the masses they inevitably reject doctrines and principles of establishment related to human freedom and self-determination.

7. Dictators insist on having their own way because their arrogance assumes that their way is infinitely superior. For this reason dictators assume both perfection and infallibility either in themselves or the system that created them.

8. Consequently, dictators can only exist, function and succeed in the atmosphere of the cosmic system of Satan. That means the historical environment where the cosmic system has major impact.

9. In other words, a maximum number of people living in the cosmic system create a vacuum for the rise of a dictatorship, while only the pivot of mature believers creates the environment for the dynamic function of human freedom. Human freedom isn't always dynamic but when it is it is because of a pivot of mature believers. Freedom, like any other system, can be abused.

The greatest protection against any system of aggrandisement is the mind, the right lobe of the soul. The right lobe of the soul must be exploited by truth to make significant decisions for freedom. All freedom comes from truth: "You shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Sometimes significant decisions are fighting for freedom; sometimes significant decisions are defining freedom in terms of truth, category #1, doctrine: laws of divine establishment.

A second point of introduction

Revelation thirteen is a chapter where prophecy is interpreted by history. For example, Rome or SPQR while still a republic became an empire. To understand Rome you must understand the roots of Rome, and while Rome in its infancy was often a kingdom it crystallised into a republic, and while it was a republic it became an empire. Nationally Rome was a republic and, as a matter of fact, up until the last couple of hundred years of Roman history it continued to be a republic nationally because of the senate. It was only when the senate was packed out and became a useless tool that we have dictatorship in the Roman empire. The fact that there were rulers calling themselves Caesar does not mean that they were a dictatorship, as long as you have the senate you still have the republic. But that is nationally. The great problem in the last 200 years of Rome as a republic was the struggle between the fact they could handle Rome because they had been learning how to do it for 500 years of their history. They had seven hundred years as a republic, they had to learn how to handle a republic. They had accepted their system and had learned how to handle their problems by setting up systems to do it. The senate was the basis for the republic, but while they could administer their own nation, as a republic they could not administer an empire. The Romans never learned how to do it as a republic and that is why they became an empire. In other words, they either had to give up everything outside of Rome and the small area of Italy that they controlled as their nation or accept the empire and come up with something new, and the only Roman who was flexible enough to think in terms of good administration outside the country and citizenship for people outside the country was Julius Caesar. He was the first man who really could think clearly and therefore it was Julius Caesar who was the end of the republic and the beginning of the Roman empire.

So in this chapter we have prophecy interpreted by history. It is not an accident that we have a revived Roman empire in the Tribulation. Rome, while still a republic, became an empire. They did not go from a dictatorship to an empire, they became an empire while they were still functioning as a republic.

The historical Roman empire became the first Gentile client nation to God. Not only was it a client nation to God and the preserver of civilisation but it became the preserver of western European civilisation as we know it today. Furthermore, Rome did two things as an empire. It established a system for missionary activity all over the world. It also evangelised for civilisation. When various other peoples were conquered by the Romans they wanted to be Roman, they admired Roman civilisation and therefore they would start to ape the manners of the Romans. In effect this was tantamount to the Romans evangelising for civilisation. The barbarians who conquered Rome were civilised. The only ones who were not were the Mongolian types who were barbaric and resisted all forms of civilisation. So the historical Roman empire became the first Gentile client nation because in the ancient world there was more freedom in the Roman empire by the time of the Antonine Caesars than in any other nation in the history of the ancient world. People had more freedom, more self-determination, more laws of divine establishment by which self determination was possible.

Out of the historical Roman empire emerges an eschatology, the eschatological empire of the future. What Rome represented in the ancient world a future empire will represent in the Tribulation. Hence, the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation. It will not exist in crystallised form during the Church Age though the seeds are planted through any historical trend to form a united states of western Europe, or better yet, a united states of western Europe, middle east and North Africa. For we think of the Roman empire as western Europe but the Roman empire extended across North Africa and the middle east, and what we now call Turkey. Iran was not ever in the Roman empire, neither were Saudi Arabia nor Russia. The revived Roman empire of the Tribulation will therefore not exist in crystallised form until the Rapture occurs.

With this in mind we can look at another concept of introduction. Chapter 13 is divided into two parts. In the first ten verses we study the Gentile dictator, the dictator of the revived Roman empire. In verses 11-18 we study the Jewish dictator, the dictator of Israel in the Tribulation. These two dictators need to be identified outside of chapter thirteen as well as explained inside of the chapter.

The Gentile dictator of the revived Roman empire has nine different identifications (aliases) in the scripture:

1. He is the feet of the image in Daniel 2:31-35.
2. He is the little horn of Daniel 7:8,9, 19-26. 3. He is the prince that shall come in Daniel 9:26,27.
4. Ezekiel calls him the prince of Tyrus in 28:1-10 (Tyrus is Latin for Tyre).
5. From the standpoint of his statue Daniel calls him the abomination of desolation, as does Matthew — Daniel 11:31; 12:11; Matthew 24:15; Mark 13:14.
6. He is called the man of sin in 2 Thessalonians 2:3-10.
7. He is also the Antichrist. The preposition “anti” has two meanings: against and instead of. So both of these dictators are anti-Christ. This one is anti-Christ [against Christ] and as such he is mentioned in 1 John 2:18, and will be studied in Revelation 13:6.
8. He is the scarlet-coloured beast on whom the great prostitute rides in Revelation 17:3, 8-13.
9. He is the beast out of the sea in Revelation 13:1-10.

At some point in these ten verses most of those passages just mentioned will be brought in, either by way of amplification or to give us additional information about this dictator.

The Biblical identification of the Jewish dictator. Five aliases are found in the Word

1. Dan the serpent (an interpretative alias), Genesis 49:16-18.
2. The king who shall do according to his own will, Daniel 11:36-40.
3. He is the Antichrist in the connotation of the preposition anti [instead of]. He passes himself off as Christ. He comes instead of Christ, hence he is the false Messiah of Matthew 24:23,24; Revelation 13:11, 13,14.
4. He is also the false prophet of Revelation 16:13; 19:20; 20:10.
5. The beats out of the earth [land, of Israel], Revelation 13:11-18.

By way of summary of the two dictators called the first and the second beast

1. The first beast is a Gentile; the second beast is a Jew.

2. The first beast is a political dictator of the revived Roman empire in the Tribulation; the second beast is a political dictator of Israel in the Tribulation.
3. The first beast is a religious leader of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation; the second beast is the leader of Judaism in the Tribulation.
4. Each beast is an antichrist. The first beast is anti-Christ in the sense of against our Lord; the second beast is anti-Christ in the sense of “instead of” — the false Messiah.
5. The first beast is totally demonised in the cosmic system; the second beast is also eventually totally demonised in the cosmic system.
6. The capital of the first beast will be Rome; the capital of the second beast will be Jerusalem.

The general historical situation in the Tribulation

The state of Israel is surrounded by four great spheres of influence in the time of the devil's desperation. There is the king of the north, comparable today to the Russian communist bloc. We do not know when the Rapture is going to occur and so these are all based upon what we have now. They are comparable. The kings of the east or the kings of the sunrising would be comparable today to the Chinese bloc. In world war two that would have been comparable to the Japanese empire, and if the Rapture doesn't take place for a thousand years, or even 200 years, it will be some other empire that will be in the east. The king of the south would be the pan-Arabic bloc. The king of the west is the revived Roman empire. So Israel is surrounded, as it were, by four great spheres of influence. In making comparisons it is not implied that these four power spheres of the 20th century are the prophetic fulfilment, but they are simply contemporary approximations. However, for us to have a frame of reference these comparisons with contemporary history are offered and will be developed in great detail in Revelation chapter sixteen.

In verse 3 the revived Roman empire in the Tribulation is presented. The revived Roman empire must be distinguished from other great empires during the Tribulation in that it is a civilised empire. The point is that civilised people are just as evil as barbarians. Civilised people have old sin natures; civilised people can be just as cruel as barbaric people can be cruel. There is no distinction between them because the only restraint and the only production of virtue comes through the truth of the Word of God. The first category of truth, the laws of divine establishment, are for unbelievers as well as believers so that unbelievers at least can be virtuous in this life. But the second two categories belong to the believer only: category #2, the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, and category #3, Bible doctrine for the believer.

Verse 3 starts with the death of the old Roman empire in the first half of the verse. “I saw” in the King James version is not found in the original manuscript. It actually begins with the conjunction kai which is a sequential conjunction and is translated “Then.” Then the accusative singular numeral e(ij, “one,” followed by the verb o(raw. Actually it isn’t found here but since it was the last verb it is used here. “Then I saw one.” Since “one” is in the accusative it must be the object of a verb, so this is why it is inserted, it is not actually found in the original. We can translate it, if we want, simply, “Then one of his heads.” We have the prepositional phrase e)k plus the ablative of kefalh, plus the possessive genitive of a)utoj.

This is the beginning of an explanation. “One of his heads” is the historical Roman empire in the time that John wrote the book of Revelation. We are going to see the future Roman empire in the Tribulation in terms of the past. Revelation 17:10 says, “And there are seven kings: five are fallen [five had fallen in John’s time], one is [the sixth king was the Roman empire at the time of the apostle John], the other has not yet come [the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation].” The five that are fallen refer to the empires of Egypt, Assyria, Chaldea, Persia, the Hellenistic empire of Alexander the Great. So this subject will occur again: the fact that there was an old Roman empire, and it must be distinguished from the future empire of the Tribulation.

The Roman empire became the historical centre of gravity, the first Gentile client nation to God. It is the central lake into which all the streams of ancient history flowed, and from which all the rivers of modern history flow out. Rome began as a village of rude shepherds and Rome went on to become a great empire, but it took a little time: namely, seven hundred years. First there were shepherds on the banks of the Tiber. Then the history of the growth from a village to a city state, and from a city state to a nation, a united Italy, and then the growth of that united Italy into a world empire. When Rome began as a republic and officially became an empire after the death of Julius Caesar it didn’t change Rome. Egypt, Assyria, Chaldea and Persia could not make such a transition from republic to empire, or from empire to republic. In other words, from one form of government to another form of government. Rome demonstrated a remarkable flexibility, it not only survived going from a republic to a dictatorship but it became stronger and greater in making the transition. A continuity, of course, is important for stability and Rome was the only great empire in the ancient world that completely changed its governments, going from antithetical forms — republic to dictatorship — and doing so without any destruction and, in fact, with improvement. Continuity was necessary for stability and the first client nation to God had to be stable. There is the necessity of stability for the formation of a pivot.

The transition, then, from the republic SPQR to the empire SPQR did not change the underlying ability of Rome nor its stability which first became the Gentile client nation to God, but never as a republic. It was Rome’s stability in making the transition from republic to dictatorship that was so useable by God, not its form of government. Form of government is not the issue. Any form of government can provide freedom. With some forms of government it is more difficult because dictators gain and hold their power usually by some form of violence, something that becomes an enemy of freedom; but this was not true in the Roman empire. The Roman empire and the man who would rule it had nothing to do with the greatness or the freedom or the rights of self-determination throughout the empire. Actually, Rome never became civilised as a republic. They had great law but the Romans in their republic were very cruel people, they were a barbaric people, they were shepherds. As they gained power, and their lust for power and their lust for plunder became greater and greater their cruelty extended with it. But once the Romans became an empire and once they had a dictatorship form of government they were actually civilised as over against being barbarians in the republic.

Manifest destiny is a great issue at this time. The history of the Roman republic is one of tragedy of establishment stability alternating with socialism and civil war, but none of these things actually could provide the background that was necessary for the first Gentile client nation. So manifest destiny brought out the genius of Rome whole socialism and the demands of the masses brought out the weakness of the Roman republic. When the masses dominated the republic it became a democracy and therefore became extremely unstable. The result was 200 years, not four years, of terrible civil wars. But when the genius of Roman rule and legal procedure dominated the republic, then they would have a little breathing space. And it was the empire, not the republic, which became the great client nation to God.

It is interesting that most modern historians will try to glorify the republic and try to find in the republic all the greatness of Rome. But the republic brought out all the worst in Rome: its cruelty, its inability to administer an empire, its terrible attitude toward people and toward life in general, plus the destruction of freedom through socialism, through feeding the masses, feeding and entertaining of those out of work. In fact they encouraged people to be out of work so that the Roman land owners could buy up more and more farms and become even greater.

In Luke 21:20,24 we have a key passage in relationship to Rome: "But when you see Jerusalem surrounded by armies [these were the three legions of Rome surrounding the walls of Jerusalem in AD 70], then know [this was addressed to believers living in the Roman empire] that her desolation [of Israel] is at hand [the fifth cycle of discipline, the destruction of Israel as a client nation to God].

"They will fall by the edge of the sword, and will be led into slavery into all nations; and Jerusalem will be trampled underfoot by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." That happened in AD 70 and that will be the story of Israel until the second advent of Christ. Never again will there be a Jewish client nation to God until the end of the Tribulation, the second advent of Christ. There will be Jewish nations; there have been Jewish nations since the fall of Israel in 70 AD; there is a Jewish nation now, but that Jewish nation can never be a client nation to God. The Jews with all their genius will always be controlled and dependant on Gentile nations. This is the times of the Gentiles and in the times of the Gentiles only Gentile nations can function as a client nation to God. Israel depends today on the kindness of strangers in order to be the greatest military power in the middle east. There is no such thing as a great Arab military power. The Arabs are just not military minded and they cannot cut it.

The history of the Roman republic is generally divided into three parts. The first part is the internal conflict between the Patricians and the Plebeians eventuating in uniting the people.

That started in 510 BC and went to 367 BC. Rome had a history of almost 300 years before this but it was a history of kings and peoples. Secondly, the republic had an expansion of the united Rome, first over Italy from 367 BC to 266 BC and then over the Mediterranean from 264-146 BC. Then we have that terrible period of civil war, the internal struggle which comes with prosperity — 146-49 BC. In 49 BC Gaius Julius Caesar had absolute power, and from then until his death five years later in 44 he was the great genius which guaranteed the perpetuation of the Roman republic as an empire. His famous five years are the greatest five years of any genius in the ancient world in turning things around. It can only be compared to what Napoleon did to Europe between 1795 and 1815, and it took Napoleon 20 years. The republic in Rome had little to do by precept or example with modern life, whereas imperial Rome is the explanation of modern history. Because of the corruption of the masses some form of monarchy was inevitable. Monarchy was the only system which could unite the power of the senate at home with the administrative function of the councils in the provinces, and the corruption of Roman citizens, the invasion of barbarians, made monarchy inevitable. The secret to the survival of Rome was better government in the provinces, not at home. And while dictators took over at home the fantastic government in the provinces set up by Julius Caesar guaranteed that Rome would not only be perpetuated from 44 BC at his death but would be perpetuated all the way to 476, and no matter what problems came their way.

Caesar saw the necessity for one-man rule, but only under laws that guaranteed the freedom and self-determination of citizens. Hence Caesar became the champion first of the city mob, then of the many nationalities outside the Roman empire. Caesar was an aristocrat and, in effect, he betrayed his own class. He accomplished politically what Christianity would accomplish spiritually in the Roman empire. Caesar would make Roman citizens out of millions of people in the Roman empire while Christianity would convert those millions to establish the first Gentile client nation to God. Both the mob of Rome and the senate became a clique which would have destroyed Rome but Caesar and his genius became the champion of wide nationalities and he fulfilled the political principle of "whosoever." Caesar, in effect, destroyed the power of both the Roman senate and the Roman mobs and he replaced them with a system of government which blessed and stabilised not only Rome and Italy but the entire empire. While the malt of the old Roman republic was still surrounding some, most of the old forms of the republic did continue. The senate continued to deliberate, councils and praetors were elected as before in the republic, Caesar drew most of the important powers into his own hands. Being a Patrician Caesar could not hold the office of tribune which belonged to the Plebes, so he devised a new tribune power which was granted to him for life. He was also censor for life, he was the head of the state religion, and he was called Pontifex Maximus. This, of course, becomes an illustration of the dictator of the revived Roman empire: head of ecumenical religion and ruler of the empire in the Tribulation. From this he became dictator for life with the title of Imperator for himself and for his descendants.

At this point Caesar's power resulted from the union of tribune power in the city of Rome with pro-consular power over the provinces. Caesar had been a proconsul and understood the problems at both ends. The genius of Caesar extended from the battlefield to the codification of all Roman law, the creation of a great public library. Eighty-thousand landless citizens of Rome were given lands beyond the sea, thus cutting down the welfare roles from 320,000 when Caesar took power to 150,000. And until Caesar the chief duty of the Roman government had been the distribution of food and entertainment to the masses. Caesar reduced the taxes, he made them very fair. He changed the system of ruling the provinces into one of the greatest administrative concepts of ancient history. Instead of plundering the provinces it became rulership of the provinces.

Caesar was also a military genius but he was a great statesman. He was a lawgiver, he was a jurist, he was an orator, a poet, an historian, a grammarian, a mathematician, and architect. The murder of Caesar removed the greatest genius of ancient history but not the system that he had created. After a brief period of anarchy Caesar's work was completed by lesser men. The work of Caesar prepared the way for the dispensation of the Church and the rise of Gentile client nations which would characterised the Church Age. Even though he was an unbeliever his contribution was phenomenal.

"Then I saw one of the heads." This was the Roman empire at the time of the apostle John. The heirs of Julius Caesar are known as the Julio-Claudian Caesars or dictators. They include Augustus, Tiberius, Caligula, Claudius, Nero. Some of them were good and some were not, but whether they were good or bad the system carried them. The system carried the evils of Nero and Caligula just as much as the system carried the good ones like Augustus, Tiberius, and Claudius.

The apostle Paul was the greatest genius of the Roman empire. Thanks to the policy of Caesar Paul was a Roman citizen as well as a Jew by race, but regardless of his race he was the greatest Roman of them all. Thanks to the policy of Caesar, Paul being a Roman citizen was able to do even greater things for the Roman empire, the communication of Bible doctrine. Paul died just before Nero. In fact, Nero died in AD 68 three months after Paul as a penalty for condemning Paul to death. Both men died just two years before Israel was removed as a client nation to God. Paul anticipated it; Nero was the one who started moving troops toward the middle east and it was Nero who sent the first Roman legions to attack Palestine and Jerusalem. It was also Nero who put to death the apostle Paul for which God put him to death.

As a result of the fifth cycle of discipline administered by the Romans in AD 70 the times of the Gentiles began. The times of the Gentiles is defined as the period of history when only Gentile nations can function as client nations to God. It began in AD 70 with the fall of Jerusalem and it goes actually to the Rapture of the Church. There will be no client nations to God in the Tribulation. Once the pivot is removed the we go into a different type of history altogether, no client nations in the time of the Tribulation. It runs, therefore, coterminously with the Church Age after AD 70 but requires a pivot of believers for its modus operandi. There will never again be a Jewish client nation to God until the second advent.

With the death of Paul and Nero the Flavian Caesars came to power, first Vespasian in AD 70 and then his son Titus from 79-81, and then his evil son Domitian from 81-96. It was Domitian who put the apostle John on the Island of Patmos, and once he died then a new era would begin, the great client nation era of Rome. While the ministry of the apostle Paul gave Christianity a vigorous start in the Church Age it was the ministry of the apostle John which resulted in the great period of prosperity, the greatest period of prosperity that perhaps the world has ever known. The year was 96 AD, one of the most important in history. It is important, first of all, because of the completion of the canon of scripture. It is important because of the death of Domitian and the beginning of the Antonine Caesars. It is important for the momentum of the pivot of mature believers which demonstrates the power of Bible doctrine in a very uncertain time of history.

The Antonine Caesars began in AD 96. The first one was a Spaniard named Nerva, an older man about to die. He lived for two years and during that time he released John from his prison on the Isle of Patmos. He did nothing to discourage. In fact, during the two years of his reign Christianity began to expand. Then came Trajan from 98-117 AD, then Hadrian from 117-138, then Antoninus Pius from 138-161, then finally, Marcus Aurelius from 161-180 from when his evil son Commodus followed from 180-182. From 96-182 not one of these rulers was a born-again believer but each one of them followed the system of Caesar and it was the system that made it possible for people to accept or reject Jesus Christ as saviour. It was a period of great evangelism, a period of great missionary activity inside the Roman empire. Very shortly that missionary activity would go outside the Roman empire and to all the world.

War is one of the constants of history and it has not diminished with civilisation or democracy. As a matter of fact in the last 3,421 years of recorded history only 268 years have been without war. Out of those 268 years approximately, 100 hundred of these belonged to the period of the Antonine Caesars. Never before in history has so large a part of the world known such an unbroken time of rest and peace, prosperity and freedom from warfare. Thanks to a large pivot of believers there was economic prosperity and the growth of cities. Rome had a population of over 2-million, Alexandria and Antioch half a million. Corinth, Carthage, Ephesus, Lyons had 250,000 each. The prosperity existed in spite of socialism where the government still supported the unemployed at home. The only prosperity which can coexist with socialism is derived when you have a large pivot of mature believers in a given area.

During the period of the Antonine Caesars communication and travel were the greatest in the ancient world. The roads were safe, piracy was wiped out, the ports were crowded with shipping. Trade flourished as it did not flourish again until after 1492, the time of Columbus. Traffic flowed continually along three main arteries of commerce between Europe and Asia: north by the Black Sea, then by caravan which followed the present Russian trans-Caspian railroad; south by the Suez and the Red Sea to India, and then overland to China; caravans crossing Arabia was the third area. Travel was safe from frontier to frontier so that going from, say, the Thames all the way to the Euphrates was not only safe but was much more comfortable than it would ever be until railroads in the 19th century. People travelled for business and pleasure as never before. The significance of this greatest period of travel also had other concepts which come out later in the Reformation and Renaissance. Obviously safe travel meant the spread of Christianity. But growing socialism could be seen in the Egyptian grain tax of 144,000,000 bushels each year which were transported to Rome to feed the masses.

Military conquests of Rome were made during the time of the republic whereas the empire was chiefly in a defensive posture. Their wars were not for conquest but defence. There were several exceptions. The walls of Rome were no longer on the Tiber but on the Danube, the Rhine, on the Euphrates, Hadrian's wall between England and Scotland. The greatest universities in the world were established at that time in Rome, Alexandria, Athens. Below the universities the Roman empire set up grammar schools which corresponded to our high schools. They did everything to help people to read and write, which also helps in evangelism. The government supported teachers and professors, they were exempted from taxation. The Roman government honoured them in many ways and the result was not only the greatest literacy but education as the means of providing a frame of reference for two languages, Latin, the official language of the empire, and Koine Greek which became the official language east of the Adriatic.

As is always the case with a client nation to God great contrasts inevitably exist. The orgies of the aristocrats, the debauchery of the middle class, the evil of the mobs and rabble coarse and vicious in their violence is contrasted with the fantastic rise of Bible doctrine, the tremendous momentum, the pivot growing and growing and reaching out to people of every class of society. Divorce and slavery threw a shadow across the Roman empire while the evils of the circus increased. And yet, thanks to Bible doctrine and its influence through the pivot of many mature believers there was a strain of virtue, as illustrated by the thoughtful courtesy and sensitive honour of Pliny or the integrity of Marcus Aurelius who wrote on his wife's tomb: "Only once did she cause me sorrow and that was by her death". During the peak of the Antonine Caesars Bible doctrine resulted in the improving the position of the woman. The woman had her greatest freedom and opportunity not in the twentieth century but in the time of the Antonine Caesars. They had equal position before the law which was a tremendous breakthrough in the ancient world. She also became the companion to her husband rather than the slave of the family which was the woman's role in the republic.

Beginning with the emperors from 193 there was a gradual decline in the Roman empire interspersed with revivals such as occurred in the time of Constantine from 312-337, and the peaceful infusion of barbarians which resulted in their conversion and opened the door for the next client nation to God which would be the kingdom of the Franks.

All of this is the Roman empire which is mentioned by, "Then I saw one of his heads." That is the Roman empire at the time of John. But we are going to see that this Roman empire is going to die, it is going to go out as a client nation to God. Our next phrase which is coming up begins with a comparative particle o(j which suggests the manner in which something precedes, so it is translated here "as if." With it we have the perfect passive participle of the verb sfazw, the Koine Greek word for the Classical Greek word sfattw. It mean to be wounded, "as if it had been wounded." This is where we have the beginning of a bleeding nation, the old Roman empire. The perfect tense recognises a completed action with existing results. This is a dramatic perfect representing the existing state of the historical Roman empire.

John was actually writing about the future. The day in which he lived was about to introduce the golden age of the Antonine Caesars but there would come a time later on in the empire, about 410 AD, when things would not be so good. So we have a passive voice with the participle: the historical Roman empire receives the action of the verb when it starts bleeding to death. All great nations, all empires, go down through a process; they do not suddenly collapse. They bleed to death slowly and always it is because of the volition of the individuals in that nation or empire. The passive voice refers to the day in 410 when Rome was captured by Alaric and who practically destroyed it exactly 800 years after it had been captured by the Gauls. The bleeding starts in 410 and it will end up in 476 AD. This is the last days of the Roman empire, the period which sfazw covers.

In 476 Odovacar the German dethroned Romulus Augustus the Little and the history of Rome came to an end with a ruler who was named after the founder of the city [Romulus] and the founder of the empire [Augustus]. The participle is a conditional participle: "as if it had been wounded." The verb sfattw in the Attic Greek is used for a ritual slaying. The Koine equivalent, sfazw, means to slaughter, to kill, to murder in regard to men, to sacrifice in relationship to animals. But in relationship to a nation it refers to bleeding to death. No nation is ever destroyed by an outside power, it is always destroyed internally, and we have the beginning of the internal bleeding of SPQR as an empire.

Next we have a prepositional phrase and we have a lot of history between the participle and the prepositional phrase: e)ij plus the accusative of qanatoj, "to the point of death." In other words, the bleeding started in 410 and the death occurred in 476 AD. "Then I saw one of his heads [the Roman empire at the time of writing] as if it had been wounded to the point of death."

We actually have to go back to the year 376 to see how the bleeding started. Prior to 376 many tribes had been admitted into the boundaries of the Roman empire. Many barbarians had come into the empire. Some of them had been converted to Christianity but all of them had been converted to Roman civilisation. They were proud to be Roman citizens and did everything possible in order to do so. This was an attitude that existed over a number of centuries, for when the apostle Paul was being judged in the middle east his judge was a very prominent Roman centurion, and one of the things that shocked him was the fact that here was Paul who was born a citizen of the Roman empire, whereas the centurion had to spend a great deal of time and hard work and money in order to gain that citizenship. That was the attitude. The objective was always to become civilised and it was considered to be a privilege to be a Roman citizen, and eventually the barbarians were better citizens of Rome than the original Romans themselves.

In 376 the Visigoths, i.e. the west Goths, appeared on the Danube frontier. They were fleeing from the terrible Huns who were the Asiatic Tartars, Mongolians. Valens, the emperor of the eastern empire in Constantinople, gave them permission to cross the border and to settle in his area, but they were told that they would have to give up their arms and Roman agents would supply them with food. The Roman agents pocketed the money and supplied either inferior food or no food at all. This made the Goths angry. They were happy to come into the protection of the Roman empire and they did give up their arms. Once they were on their reservation south of the Danube Roman agents embezzled the imperial funds and the food did not arrive, while at the same time the Visigoths bribed these same agents to let them keep their arms. As a result the Goths marched on Constantinople and at the famous battle of Adrianople in 378 Valens was defeated and slain. He simply picked the wrong people to administer the problem.

The new emperor was Theodosius the Great and he pacified the Goths by giving them land in the Danubian provinces. But in 395 Theodosius died and the Goths revolted under their young chief, Alaric. Alaric decided to take the Goths and start moving. He first went to Greece and he conquered it. He was prevented from moving into Italy by a very famous German who was now a Roman citizen. His name was Stilicho the Vandal, one of the most brilliant generals of his day. He commanded the Roman armies and was able to stop Alaric. But there was an emperor at the time by the name of Honorius and he was very weak, very petty, and very arrogant. He became very jealous of Stilicho and therefore one day he decided to get rid of him. But first, Stilicho not only stopped the Goths but he stopped an army of 200,000 wild Germans who didn't even have a tribal name. They were under a leader called Radagaisus. They had invaded Italy and were besieging Florence when he came back from the defeating the Goths and he stopped them. He didn't even know at the time when he saved Florence and drove out these wild Germans that already the conspiracy for his death was at hand. So Honorius, in his jealousy and suspicion, had Stilicho the Vandal assassinated. He came back to report to the emperor in Rome that he had saved the country and was stabbed to death. When Alaric heard it he turned around and went back and with no Stilicho to stop him Alaric invaded Italy with the Visigoths. The emperor Honorius hid himself while Alaric marched in and took Rome. For five days the city was sacked and after it was over there wasn't much left. This was the beginning of the end of the old Roman empire. So between the participle and the prepositional phrase — “wounded as unto death,” we have a nation bleeding to death.

The Visigoths, under their king Alaric, decided to take all of their plunder and go to Africa by way of Sicily, but he died on his way. He was succeeded by his brother Adolf who married the sister of the emperor Honorius who was still hiding. He then went over to Spain which was held by the Vandals and conquered it. There he set up a famous Gothic kingdom. Many of the Spaniards of today are Germanic, descended from the Goths. The Gothic kingdom lasted for three hundred years until it was finally overrun by Islam, but until that time a very stable government existed when the rest of the world was going mad. Meanwhile two other German tribes, the Bergundians and the Franks broke into the continental empire, while the Angles, the Saxons, and the Jutes, entered England in 408 when the Roman legions were withdrawing. Other races began to break through the barriers of the empire who were not even Germans. So great was the Hun invasion that Rome had to assemble an army of Visigoths, Franks and Bergundians. There were no Romans left to fight, they were too decadent. They faced the famous Hun leader who came in at this time called Attila and the two armies met in 451. It was called the battle of the nations. Aetus, the Roman commander, was German. He had spent his youth among the Huns and he knew how to fight Attila. He was successful in that great battle. While Attila was defeated he began to move east but decided to move south toward Rome. In the meantime the army of Aetius was on the other side of him. He retreated toward Rome.

At this time a lot of myths were established. Pope Leo I went to Attila's camp and persuaded him to move on. That was the great story but there is no truth in it at all. The empire was bleeding to death and Leo didn't have any influence on Attila at all. The real true story is that Attila was now approximately eighty years old and he found a beautiful young girl who was about his 55th wife, and on the night of the honeymoon, as it proceeded, he died of a heart attack.

The perfect passive participle of sfazw indicates that Rome began to bleed internally around 410 but did not terminate until 476. It took 66 years for the empire to die. It generally takes about two generations once the bleeding becomes serious.

Now Aetius who had saved the Roman empire from Attila was assassinated by the Roman emperor Valentinian III who was now on the throne in Rome. Valentinian was just a petty, jealous, arrogant, decadent Roman person and he in turn was murdered by a senator named Maximus whose wife he had raped. Valentinian said: "I am the emperor. All women must worship me, send your wife in here." When Maximus got back in town and found out about it he just went and killed the emperor. Maximus then seized the throne and compelled Eudocia, the widow of Valentinian, to become his Queen. Eudocia got her revenge by hiring one of the German generals just back from the war to come and rescue her. The Vandals then came in and captured Rome and killed Maximus. After the Vandal raid they took all of the great wealth that was accumulated but not moved by the Goths and they decided to take it back to their headquarters in North Africa. On the way over a fleet of some seventy ships got caught in a Mediterranean storm and the wealth of the ancient world is somewhere at the bottom of the Mediterranean between Sicily and Hippo in Carthage.

After the Vandal raid the power of Italy fell to another German general who had just come back with his divisions, Count Ricimer. Then another German general came back after him and said no, I am the ruler, so he killed Ricimer and put his son, Romulus Augustus the Little on the throne. However, he was murdered by Odovacar and Romulus Augustus the Little, who was just a little boy, was pensioned off by Odovacar. Odovacar then came to power and decided that he would rule them but that he would not be emperor, there would be no more emperors. On the day that Romulus Augustus the Little was pensioned off that was officially the end of the empire. No one ever again took the title of emperor though Odovacar tried to reconcile his Roman and German subjects and build up a new nation.

Meanwhile the death of Attila had liberated the Ostrogoths or the east Goths who now invaded the empire. They had a genius king by the name of Theodoric who defeated Odovacar and established a Gothic kingdom in Italy. So there was a Gothic kingdom in Spain, a Gothic kingdom in Italy, the Goths who were originally German barbarians became much more civilised than the Romans and without their degeneracy. They were non-degenerate and therefore for awhile there was a very pleasant place to live in Italy and in Spain and even in southern France. Theodoric the Goth caused everyone to live in harmony and eventually the Visigoths moved out of Italy and the Lombards moved in and the darkness began to cover that land which had once been the home of the greatest empire of all time probably, even to this day. From 476 onward in history there was no longer a Roman empire. The Teutonic peoples of western Europe began to struggle and this culminated in the rise of the Frankish empire for which France is named. The Franks were German, not French. The Frankish empire included what is now Germany and France and it reached its peak under Charlemagne who became the ruler of the next Gentile client nation to God.

Other dates of interest deal with the roots of SPQR but not the official end of the empire: the coronation of Charlemagne in 800, the fall of Constantinople to the Ottoman Turks in 1453, and finally, Napoleon after the famous Battle of Austerlitz caused Francis II who was the emperor of Austria to declare the holy Roman empire officially dead, though it never was holy, it never was Roman, and it really never was an empire.

We are going to make a distinction between the historical Roman empire of the past and the prophetic Roman empire of the future in the Tribulation. We will give the historical Roman empire a beginning date of BC 31 with the reign of Augustus and terminating in 476 AD with the dethronement of Romulus Augustus the Little. That we will call the historical Roman empire for from where we stand it is past history. At the time that John wrote its greatest glories were ahead. Then we note the prophetic Roman empire which begins with the Tribulation, the rise of the Roman dictator of Revelation 13:1-10, and terminating with his judgment at the second advent — Revelation 19:20. We have seen both from Daniel and from Revelation how the Roman empire started and how it fell, and then how we have the rise of the prophetic empire, the one in the future.

We notice next in Revelation 13:3 the connective conjunction kai emphasizing a noteworthy fact and translated “nevertheless.” “Then I saw one of his heads as it had been wounded to the point of death, nevertheless.” Then we have the statement of the fall of the historical Roman empire: “nevertheless,” and then we have a nominative singular subject from plhgh, meaning a blow, a blow which causes death. With it we have a descriptive genitive from qanatoj, meaning death, and then the inevitable possessive genitive of a)utoj, “his” or “its” death. We will translate it, “nevertheless his mortal wound,” even though it means literally, “his death stroke.” It is simply an idiom meaning “his mortal wound,” that is, the destruction of the historical Roman empire in 476.

Then we have the aorist passive indicative of the verb qerapeuw which means to heal. “Nevertheless his mortal wound [his death stroke in 476] was healed.” That is the revived Roman empire in the Tribulation. 476 is when he died; 410 is when the internal bleeding began. By 476 the Roman empire was destroyed and the Teutonic struggle for western Europe began. All of this is in the Church Age. There have been attempts to revive the Roman concept. Mussolini tried it in our century. Even Napoleon tried it in his day and he named his son by the Austrian princes the King of Rome. But there is no Roman empire and we move on to today and the resurrection or the Rapture could occur today, tomorrow, or a thousand years from now. No man knows the day or the hour when the Rapture is going to occur, but when it does there will be no longer any client nations to God. We have one of the great disaster periods of history, Daniel's seventieth week, which we call the Tribulation. The resurrection of the Church means the end of client nations to God but not the end of nations or spheres of influence or power blocs. One of the great power blocs at the start, the ten-nation confederation, eventuating in the middle of the Tribulation in being a seven-nation confederation ruled by the dictator, is the prophetic Roman empire. It will be very much like the old Roman empire with three ingredients: a system of government ruled by a dictator; a system of ecumenical religion; there will be believers in that empire in the future. And so we have the healing. The healing takes place in the Tribulation, it is the revival of the old Roman empire.

The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety: the revival of the prophetic Roman empire in the Tribulation. The passive voice: the prophetic Roman empire receives the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the future reality of the revival of SPQR in the Tribulation, "nevertheless his mortal wound [the destruction of the Roman empire in 476] was healed." This is the revival of the prophetic Roman empire.

There is a more expanded concept found in Daniel 9:24-27. Remember the principle that comes out of this: All nations destroy themselves by the volition of the people in that nation.

Verse 24, reference to the restoration of Israel as it relates to this Roman empire. "Four hundred and ninety years have been decreed for your people [Israel]." Israel has in history two separate periods of four hundred and ninety years and in between we have the seventy years of the Babylonian captivity because the Jews in the first 490 years of their history as a land refused to observe their Sabbatical years, so God gave them their Sabbatical years all at one time, 70 of them in slavery. After the termination of the 5th cycle of discipline in BC 516 and the completion of the walls of Jerusalem in 445 the Jews have 490 more years. The Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written, hence these are 490 lunar years, not calendar years as we know them today. A lunar year has 360 days. 516 BC is the year that the temple was completed under the ministry of Zerubbabel and Joshua the high priest and under the prophetic ministry of Haggai and Zechariah.

"and your holy city [Jerusalem]," a reference to BC 445 when Nehemiah returned to rebuild the walls. 586 BC was when the 5th cycle of discipline was administered by Nebuchadnezzar and the Chaldeans. Fifty years later in BC 536 we have the remnant returning to build the temple. In 516 the temple was completed. In 458 Ezra returned because they still didn't understand that you have to have doctrine to go with it, and he taught Bible doctrine. In 445 Nehemiah returned to rebuild the walls because Jerusalem needed protection. In 445 when the walls were rebuilt is the time when the clock starts for the second 490 years.

Seventy years of captivity ended in 516 but that did not begin their time factor because first of all they had to have doctrine and they had to have a military establishment before they could be a nation again — the two necessary ingredients for the establishment of a nation, and you must have both of them. Under the ministry of Zechariah, Haggai, Ezra, Nehemiah, they finally got into gear and once the walls were completed and Nehemiah had organised their military system then time began again. But that second 490 years stopped at the cross and fifty days later the Church Age, the dispensation of the royal family of God, began with our Lord's resurrection, ascension and session. But the Age of Israel stopped at 483 years and those last 7 years will be picked up in the Tribulation after the Church is removed. God never mixes Israel and the Church. Israel can come into the Church by personal faith in Jesus Christ.

Verse 24 continues with six items which will be accomplished by God at the end of the second 490 years. The last seven years of the Jewish Age is terminated with the second advent of Christ. The first 490 years was terminated with the fall of Jerusalem and the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline; the last 490 terminates with the second advent of Christ, and when He returns He is going to do six things:

- a. He is going to finish the transgression, the second advent termination of the fifth cycle of discipline of client nation Israel. He will finish their punishment.
- b. He will make an end to sin — the baptism of fire which eliminates Jewish unbelievers of the Tribulation from participating in the blessings of the Millennium.
- c. He will make a propitiatory covering over iniquity — the regathering of believing Jews at the second advent to become the client nation to God in the Millennium. This is taught in Isaiah 5:26,30; 10:19-23; 11:11-16; 14:1-3; Joel 2:15ff; Zechariah 10:6-12. This regathering terminates the fifth cycle of discipline for Israel.
- d. To bring in everlasting righteousness — the resurrection of the Old Testament believers and the Tribulational martyrs at the second advent.
- e. To seal up the vision and the prophecy — this is when we have the fulfilment of the unconditional covenants to Israel.
- f. To anoint the holy of holies — the dedication of the Millennial temple. The modus operandi of the Millennial temple is described in Ezekiel chapters 40-48. All six of these items are fulfilled at the second advent of Christ and are a part of our Lord's tactical victory.

The question arises: How does this passage relate to what we are studying in Revelation 13:3? This is found in verses 25 and 26.

Daniel 9:25, the chronology between the administrations of the fifth cycle of discipline. This is the prophecy of the period between BC 445 and AD 30.

In 536 BC Cyrus the Great decreed the return of the remnant to rebuild the temple — Ezra chapter one. In BC 516 the temple is completed. In 458 BC the decree of Artaxerxes caused the return of Ezra and the great doctrinal revival recorded in Ezra chapter seven. In BC 445 the decree of Artaxerxes caused the return of the military genius Nehemiah to build the walls, Nehemiah 2:1-3, and in 445 the time clock again begins. Israel is now once again a client nation to God.

“Then you must know and understand,” first of all you have to know the doctrine and then you have to apply it. This is addressed primarily to Jews who had to understand the eschatology and make application of it, “that from the issuing of the decree to restore and rebuild Jerusalem until Messiah the Prince [the first advent of Jesus Christ] there will be seven plus sixty-two weeks [483 lunar years, not calendar years],” there is an interval, the Church Age, between the 69th and the 70th week. That brings us to 30 AD, the crucifixion of our Lord.

Continuing in verse 25, “it [Jerusalem] will be built again, with streets [literal streets but referring to commerce, social life, spiritual life, normal business activity] and moat [the military establishment], even in times of distress,” in times of distress people still went to Bible class. There was business as usual.

The first increment of 49 years takes us to BC 396, just four years after the completion of the Old Testament canon. Therefore the first 49 years are separated from the others because in that period of time the canon of scripture was completed and circulated. Malachi was completed around 400 BC.

The two great events at the end of the 483 years are given in verse 26, “Then after the sixty-two weeks,” i.e.. the 49 years and then we have 434 years after that, and that brings us down again to our AD 30, “the Messiah will be cut off and have no one,” the idiom means, but not for Himself. He is to be judged on the cross but not for Himself. This is a reference to the saving work of Christ on the cross, “and the people,” the Romans of the historical Roman empire who will destroy Jerusalem in AD 70 and administer the 5th cycle of discipline, “of the prince who is to come,” they are the people of the prince who is to come, and that is what we have been studying, the dictator of the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation. Now, “the People” is the subject and the verb is “will destroy the city.” The Roman people will destroy the city, Jerusalem, in AD 70, “and the sanctuary [the temple]. And its end [end of client nation Israel in AD 70] will come with a flood; furthermore to the end [of the Jewish Age, the end of the 490 years] wars and desolations are decreed.”

In AD 30 our Lord was crucified; the Church Age, the dispensation of the royal family, began. During the period of forty years from AD 30 to AD 70 the Jews were to have their last warning, which they ignored. One of the warnings was the gift of tongues. Israel was a client nation to God during the first forty years of the Church Age and their job was to communicate doctrine to the Gentiles. Their warning [Isaiah 28] was that Gentiles would communicate the gospel to the Jews in foreign languages, and the Jews would be evangelised by the gift of tongues which is getting the gospel in a foreign language. From AD 70 to the Rapture of the Church is the period of Gentile client nations to God. There are no client nations in the period we are studying, the Tribulation, the pivot has been removed. With the removal of the pivot and no client nation status all military organisations get out of line. There is no more honour in the military later on in Israel and we start having wars and desolations which will terminate with the Armageddon campaign. The “wars and desolations” of Daniel 9:26 have no more meaning for one simple reason: no client nation to defend, no pivot to defend, until we get down to a principle: Satan at the end of the Tribulation seeks to destroy all Israel and there will arise another Nehemiah, another David, another Joshua, another great general, and that general will be a believer who will get together a military organisation which will be fighting against hopeless odds but will be delivered at the second advent.

Verse 27, “And he” [the dictator of the revived Roman empire] will make a covenant [or treaty] with the many [a technical word used for Israel in the Tribulation] for one week.” This explains the dictator in the first half of the Tribulation being pro-Semitic. In the middle of the Tribulation he becomes anti-Semitic, “but in the middle of the week [of the Tribulation] he will put a stop to the sacrifice and the food offering,” he has allowed Israel to continue the practice of Judaism as a part of the treaty, “and under the aegis of the abomination [ecumenical religion of the Roman dictator] there comes one who causes desolation [the Roman dictator] until the end [of the Tribulation], then what is decreed shall be poured out on this desolator,” Revelation 19:20.

In the last part of Revelation 13:4 we see the admiration of the masses for the revived Roman empire of the future in the Tribulation. We have the connective conjunction kai, “and,” the nominative feminine singular adjective o(loj, which means here “entire,” and with it the nominative feminine singular subject gh, “the entire earth [world].” Then we have the verb, the aorist passive indicative of qaumazw, which means to be amazed, astonished, to be in total admiration. The culminative aorist tense views the astonishment, the admiration, in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the spread of ecumenical religion. The dictator is the religious leader of a world movement (ecumenical religion) in the Tribulation. The passive voice: the entire world receives the action of the verb, minus those who have some doctrine and discernment, and this is our first point: in the Tribulation, as even now, only those who have a maximum amount of doctrine have the ability to discern both the trends of history and to avoid being carried away by super amazement or total admiration. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the total admiration of the masses, the people of the world, for ecumenical religion.

Next we have an improper preposition, o)pisw plus the genitive of qhrion, the prepositional phrase is an idiom which means following — “and the entire world was amazed and followed the beast.” It means to follow the beast dictator in their admiration. The entire world was impressed, amazed. This is the second principle: People are impressed by power. The beast dictator of the revived Roman empire certainly impresses the masses. The greatest power in the world is Bible doctrine but these people have rejected Bible doctrine. What impresses them? Political power, but the power that impresses the masses will be destroyed at the second advent of Christ. This means that people should be impressed with truth rather than power. There is more power in doctrine than in all of the political power of the world. However negative volition is impressed with various categories of power rather than Bible doctrine because with Bible doctrine you have to think, you have to apply it in your own life, whereas with political power someone else thinks for you. These people are impressed by this beast dictator because he is a religious leader and a political leader; he thinks for them in the religious area, he thinks for them in the political area. When people are impressed with the truth they follow the Lord through His system and Bible doctrine, but when people are impressed by power they follow some arrogant dictator like the beast dictator of the prophetic and revived Roman empire.

Verse 4, the worship of power in the Tribulation. We have a connective conjunction kai, translated "Furthermore," followed by the aorist active indicative of proskunew which means to worship. Here we have people worshipping a creature. The first creature they worship is Satan himself who is called the dragon, then they worship the power and the person to whom he gives that power. So they worship an invisible creature to them but they are aware of him and they know him through their residence in the cosmic system.

The principle that we are going to see that is so important is that they worship power in human beings. The problem is that is a misdirection of worship for the true basis for worship must be truth, Bible doctrine. When you worship power instead of truth then you are in trouble.

"Furthermore they worshipped," the constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the masses of people throughout the world who admire the dictator of the revived Roman empire produce the action of the verb, and they do this through ecumenical religion in the last half of the Tribulation. For ecumenical religion gives them the opportunity of, first of all, expressing their worship toward a person they can see, a human being who is the dictator of the revived Roman empire; and the one who gave him power who is a creature they cannot see, Satan as the ruler of this world. First of all they see the power, they learn something about the power, they learn the religious system, and they direct their worship toward the visible and then toward the invisible. That is a sign that they do not have virtue, impersonal love toward all mankind and personal love for God. Why? Because with their very own volition they have rejected truth and have gone positive toward power. Positive volition toward truth is Christianity; negative volition toward truth is religion. Remember that Christianity is not a religion. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of Satan's ecumenical religion in the Tribulation.

With this we have the dative singular indirect object from the noun drakwn, transliterated "dragon." This refers to Satan as the ruler of the world, so in effect this is devil or demon worship which becomes an integral part of ecumenical religion in the last half of the Tribulation, during the time of the eschatology of the devil's desperation. That is the greatest period of religious activity in all of history. We have seen it as the greatest period of evangelism in history but simultaneously there is the great counterattack, the great evangelism on the part of Satan.

Now religion and Christianity are not the same. Religion has been invented by Satan to counterfeit the plan of God and to fulfil Satan's objective to be like the Most High God, one of the five objectives he stated in Isaiah in the prehistoric angelic conflict. In Christianity man seeks and finds God through personal faith in Jesus Christ which is, of course, tantamount to God seeking man. In other words, in Christianity God seeks man through Christ; in religion man seeks to gain the approbation of God through his own works. Religion emphasises the evil genius, then, of Satan; Christianity represents the perfect integrity and grace of God.

Since religion is the counterfeit of Christianity the Bible mentions at least nine of these counterfeits which are used to deceive.

1. Satan has a counterfeit gospel, some system of works, 2 Corinthians 4:3,4.
2. Satan has counterfeit ministers, 2 Corinthians 11:13-15.
3. Satan has a counterfeit doctrine, 2 Timothy 4:1.
4. Satan has a counterfeit communion table, 2 Corinthians 10:19-21.
5. Satan has a counterfeit righteousness, motivated by arrogance — Matthew 19:16-28.
6. Satan has a counterfeit spirituality, the legalism mentioned in Galatians 3:2,3.
7. Satan has a counterfeit modus vivendi, Matthew 23:13-26.
8. Satan has a counterfeit power, 2 Thessalonians 2:8-10.
9. Religion has a counterfeit god, 2 Thessalonians 2:3,4.

Ecumenical religion in the Tribulation must have, therefore, its own false teaching. Therefore we note some of the characteristics of these false teachers or false prophets who will exist in a very real way in the future, just as they do today and just as they have in the past.

First of all, false teachers practice hypocrisy from the base of arrogance, gate 1, cosmic 1. They use often a phoney facade of piety, whatever it takes to impress you. If you are impressed by piety they are pious, if you are impressed by zeal they are zealous, if you are impressed by inflexibility they are dogmatic and inflexible with you, though they do not agree. So false teachers practice hypocrisy using a phoney facade — Matthew 7:15; Romans 16:18.

Secondly, false teachers function under human public relations modus operandi. They use the legalism of some form or sometimes the phallic cult, but they use some system to court their victim. They do not evangelise in reality, they court, they give you attention. They do not give you truth, they do not give you doctrine and let the chips fall where they may, they find out what you want to hear and they let you hear it. Legalism is used as a system of courting in Galatians 4:17,18; 2 Timothy 3:5-7.

There are always some people who are really impressed with self-sacrifice, and when you take self-sacrifice to the ultimate this really impresses people. Therefore you find in the 2 Timothy passage, for example, "forbidding to marry". They are going into the ultimate of asceticism. Asceticism impresses people, and Satan uses asceticism in order to gain converts just as often as he uses the phallic cult.

Thirdly, false teachers appeal to human arrogance and pride by giving you personal attention. People need truth, not personal attention, but religion reverses it and says people want attention, we will give it to them. People need truth, not a friendly organisation. Churches where truth is taught are not designed to be lonely hearts clubs, though you will find some of the greatest friendships in the church where truth is taught for the greatest foundation for rapport among believers is the mutual acceptance of Bible doctrine.

Fourthly, false teachers promote idolatry as the devil's communion table.

Fifthly, false teachers are the promoters of arrogant self-righteousness and all forms of legalism, 1 Timothy 1:6,7.

Finally, false teachers not only exist in every generation of the Church Age but they intensify their efforts during the Tribulation.

One of Satan's major objectives is to siphon off worship from God and direct it toward himself, and all religions do this one way or another. Furthermore idolatry in religion becomes the worship of the invisible creatures, the demons themselves, 1 Corinthians 10:20.

The powerful dictator

One of the greatest traps in the world is public opinion. Public opinion is, of course, one of those vacillating things oscillating between approbation and disapprobation, and when people become involved in the cosmic system they become extremely sensitive to what other people think of them. In personal love that is a normal thing but when one wants the approbation of the general public he is trapped. No one was ever more trapped than the man who will live in the future, the dictator we are studying. More than anyone else he is going to lust for the approbation of the public. One of the easiest ways to do this is probably to gain power.

There are many businesses that depend upon public opinion and there are many normal functions in economic life and social life where public opinion and the approbation of the public is a desirable factor. But when you desire it personally and associate it with your own glory then you are really trapped. As a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ you will never be trapped in the sense of the dictator we are studying because his lust for power and his desire for maximum approbation from the public is going to cause him to end up in the lake of fire. This is impossible for the believer but what is very possible when one is involved in cosmic one is the fact that misery is self-induced if we are interested in gaining the approbation of the crowd. Obviously, again, there are certain kinds of businesses and certain kinds of function in life where crowd approbation is involved, but when you want it for yourself and when you associate it with your own personal happiness you can count on it that you will never be happy.

If we were to interview our dictator right now, although prophetically he is not on the scene as yet, we could ask him how it feels to be the most powerful man in the history of the world. This man we are studying reaches the very peak of success in every possible field. He is the epitome of greatness politically in his day, a future day in the Tribulation. He will be great from the standpoint of religion and will be the religious leader of the world. He will receive greater religious approbation than any other human being in all of history. He will also have phenomenal success as a military man, so in at least three professions, and perhaps more, he will reach the peak among his contemporaries in the Tribulation period. He will also have power, influence and approbation that far exceeds anything we know at the present time.

So great and so powerful is this man that he is studied from at least three different viewpoints in the scripture. He is seen as a great military leader in Daniel; he is seen as a great political leader in our passage; he is seen as a person who more than anyone else in history learned the secret of surrendering himself to Satan and gaining more power from Satan than anyone ever had in the past. He has the power to work miracles or to delve into extra natural phenomena and impress people with it — not the ability to impress people by the genius of his own mentality or personality but by the use of extra natural power. We see the same thing in religious realms in cults today where people are impressed with so-called divine healers, or those involved in the tongues movement, or those who appear to have some supernatural experience and to demonstrate some supernatural power. It has been a way of life in other parts of the world such as India and Africa.

2 Thessalonians 2:1, “Moreover, brethren [royal family of God], with reference to the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ [the Rapture of the Church], and our gathering together to him.”

Every now and then we have an appeal made in the scripture on the basis of the application of our eternal future, the resurrection. There is a time coming when all of us will have a permanent body that will serve us magnificently throughout all eternity. Every now and then it is a good idea to take a look ahead and see what is coming up for all of us. We will never spend one second in the lake of fire and there is, therefore, this marvellous future prospect. There is a legitimate anticipation which is a part of happiness. Happiness doesn't mean that you have to be thoroughly satisfied with your circumstances at the moment. They may be very adverse and therefore you can anticipate better circumstances and better times ahead. That is what it means when it says, "we urge you". Now we have you in a happy frame of mind, says Paul, and the reason he wants the Thessalonians to be in a happy frame of mind is because the Thessalonians have been suckers for human approbation. They have become involved in cosmic one and they have this lust that they associate with happiness.

Verse 2, "that you be not easily shaken in mind," the mind should be strong because of doctrine; it should be strong because of the plan of God rationale, "nor disturbed, neither by a personality." One thing that often bothers people and causes them to be unhappy all the time is personalities in their vicinity. How are you going to keep from being shaken by personalities? By having doctrine in your soul, "nor by an evil policy," that could be an evil policy in business, or a policy of any category in life, "neither by a false doctrine," false doctrine, of course, always shakes the mind, "nor by a bad motive," it is easy to read other people's motives and therefore to become disturbed, "nor through a forged epistle," the Thessalonians had received a forged epistle. It did not come from Paul. There was a nearby cult which had sent this out as an epistle from Paul, "as from us, alleging that the day of the Lord had come." In other words, there were some people who said the day of the Lord had already come. Hard times had come and when things get bad people say, "We are in the Tribulation." There was a Tribulationist cult and they said they were living in the Tribulation and that the Rapture would not come until the end of the Tribulation, or the middle of the Tribulation. Paul is going to refute this by bringing in our subject: the dictator of the revived Roman empire.

Verse 3, "Do not let anyone deceive you in any way, since the day of the Lord [the Tribulation and second advent] cannot come unless the departure [Rapture of the Church, the resurrection of all royal family] has come first, and [after that Rapture] the man who is lawless [antiestablishment], the one doomed to destruction, shall be revealed."

It is interesting that Paul would say at the end of verse three that the most powerful man in all of history as a political dictator, as a religious leader, as a military genius, and as a miracle-maker, would be doomed to destruction; but before he is he has to be revealed.

Verse 4, the description of the dictator: "who opposes [the Lord Jesus Christ. He is anti-Christ] and exalts himself above every so-called god or object of worship, so that he is installed in the temple of God [the Jewish temple of the Tribulation], proclaiming himself to be God."

Verse 5, "Do you not remember when I was still face to face with you [Paul taught the Thessalonians face to face and then moved on], I constantly taught you these things?" Paul constantly taught the Thessalonian believers eschatology. He repeated again and again.

Verse 6, "And so you know the one [the Holy Spirit] who restrains [Paul taught them the system, gate one: the filling of the Holy Spirit, etc.] ... "

It is God the Holy Spirit who acts as a restrainer on total disaster in history. And how does God the Holy Spirit perform this? He does it by those in the system, the divine dynasphere. Every decision you make within the system: to recover the system through rebound, to live at gate two through the function of the faith-rest drill, to have basic virtue, humility, teachability, to learn daily Bible doctrine, advancing to maturity at gate eight and, therefore, being recruited for the pivot for God the Holy Spirit works through the pivot. There is a restraint on degeneracy, a restraint on evil, but the restraint comes through the formation of the pivot.

“ ... so that he [the dictator of the revived Roman empire] may be revealed [in his own dispensation].”

This dictator would probably have come before. Other dictators have made deals with Satan before. There are ways in which people can make a deal with Satan and other people have done it but they have never succeeded as this man succeeds. The reason is because even though it may be very small the very existence of the pivot in this world guarantees a certain restraint upon degeneracy and barbarity in history. It doesn't mean that certain areas will not be degenerate and barbarous but it does mean that there is not the unrestrained evil that will exist in the Tribulation. The reason is that in every generation there are always just a few who advance to maturity, a few who grow in grace and reach gate eight. Those few act as the restrainer. God the Holy Spirit works through them.

Verse 7, “For the mystery of lawlessness is already operational,” right now we have the mystery of lawlessness. There are people right now in this world who have made a deal with Satan and in whatever area they have chosen they are Satan's own hand-picked shock troops. They are periodically demon-possessed but, more than that, periodically they are Satan-possessed. There are people right now who have the same power that this future dictator will have but the existence of the pivot acts as a restrainer. Your existence as a mature believer acts as a restrainer in history. There may not be many believers who have reached gate eight in our generation but the ones who have act as a restrainer. Lawlessness is already here but it is in its mystery form, it has not been revealed in its form and cannot be so revealed until the Tribulation, “only he who now restrains [God the Holy Spirit] will continue that ministry through the system until he is taken out of the way.”

When the Rapture of the Church occurs the system goes with it, and gate one as the power system goes with it, and we return to the Old Testament form of the ministry of God the Holy Spirit which is quite different from that today. The Church Age is the only dispensation in which God the Holy Spirit indwells every believer and you can be filled with the Spirit. That never existed before and it will never exist in the Tribulation.

Verse 8, At that time [the Tribulation] the lawless one [the Roman dictator] shall be revealed,” he will go farther with Satan's power than any human being in history because there is no pivot of mature believers, “whom the Lord shall destroy with the breath of his mouth,” when he is destroyed he is destroyed by, as it were, the least power of God which is greater than any power of a creature. God's power is infinitely greater than any power that any creature has or any power that any creature possess and delegates or bestows on another, “in fact he shall neutralise him by the very appearance of his coming [the second advent];

Verse 9, “whose presence [the dictator] in history shall be according to the modus operandi of Satan [Satan gives him his power], with all power,” Satan has never been able to delegate such great power and have it turn out successfully for him. That is because of the pivot. The very moment the Rapture takes place there are no believers left on the earth, and with no believers you have no pivot. That means unrestrained evil for the first time in history and that is when this man who made a deal with Satan is brought by Satan to the forefront. He becomes the great dictator “and by means of miracles.” Why miracles? Because when it comes to seeing a miracle that is where you get the masses and approbation from the crowd. That is exactly what this man did. While he has all of these great abilities in all of these realms it is the miracle that does it; “even wonder of miracles of the lie,” Satan has miracle ability and he gives this power to this one man.

Verse 10, “and by means of all deception of unrighteousness to those who are being led astray,” if you are negative toward the truth you are a sucker for a miracle. If you reject Bible doctrine then you are open for a life of unhappiness self-made, “deprived, destroyed, because they do not receive the love of the truth,” there is the issue: Bible doctrine. If you reject the truth you are never going to have happiness in life, “in order that they might be delivered,” they have rejected truth by which they might be delivered from this delusion.

Verse 11, “And so for this reason God sends them the modus operandi of delusion and error, a deluding influence, so that they believe the lie [the miracle], Verse 12 — “in order that they all might be condemned because they do not believe the doctrine, because they have taken pleasure in unrighteousness.” What kind of unrighteousness? The lie.

Verse 13, “But we are always obligated to give thanks to God concerning you,” there is a pivot of mature believers in Thessalonica, royal family, “having been loved by the Lord, because God has elected you [royal family] from eternity past to salvation by means of sanctification from the Spirit [the system] and by means of belief in doctrine.”

This gives us a little profile of the person we are studying and we are ready for Revelation 13:4 again. “Furthermore they worshipped the dragon [Satan] because he gave absolute power [and authority] to the beast [the dictator of the revived Roman empire].”

Why did they worship the beast? O(ti, the word “because,” “he [Satan] gave,” aorist active indicative of didomi. Satan can only give power to someone who has gone through a complete system of discipleship to him, someone who has achieved more in the cosmic system than anyone before him, a totally evil human being. That is exactly what we have, “because he [Satan] gave.” The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The dictator of the revived Roman empire, this genius, receives something from Satan. At a time when there is not restraint he receives the power to perform these miracles.

The dictator of the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation receives two things and they are all gathered into one, the accusative singular direct object from ecousia, which means both power and authority, but here it combines them, "because he gave absolute power to the beast." The active voice: Satan produces the action of the verb in giving authority and power to this dictator. The indicative mood is declarative for the future reality of this beast dictator receiving authority and great power from Satan. Then we have the dative singular indirect object from qhrion, the beast [dictator].

Note that the beast dictator of the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation is a political ruler over the prophetic Roman empire and he is a religious leader over ecumenical religion in the Tribulation. Behind all religion Satan lurks as the source of religion and the object of worship in religion. Furthermore religion produces every category of violence in warfare.

There is nothing worse than any member of the human race being worshipped by other members of the human race. It means two things: firstly, those who do the worshipping are arrogant and have no capacity for life or love or happiness or blessing; secondly, the one who receives this abnormal adulation is also very arrogant and has no capacity for life, for love, for happiness or blessing. But more than the fact that a group of people worship some man is the fact that it has an adverse effect historically and it is always the development of a hurricane, a great tragedy, a great disaster in history. As we study the great dictator of the revived Roman empire in the Tribulation we note the great unhappiness of this man, the terrible end of this man. We have seen that he was a genius in four different fields and more than any person who ever lives Satan could use this man. He sold out to Satan at a time when there was no restraint on the activity of Satan's man. He became Satan's man in the Tribulation when all restraint had been removed and he became the leader of ecumenical religion.

Once you get into religion it is inevitable that you are going to get into the worship of some human being. No human being is worthy of worship. Respect, love, appreciation, friendship, but not worship. So we have the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, "also," followed by the aorist active indicative of the verb proskunew, "also they worshipped." The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, it actually suggests there is a pattern: people who worship a person do so from the arrogance of their souls. They find that they cannot compete with the power of the dictator so they succumb to it emotionally and they worship the dictator as a part of the modus operandi of ecumenical religion. The word we are using for worship here is the word for the worship of God, which is legitimate and normal for those who have Bible doctrine, but this does not mean that we should worship man. Idolatry was the means worshipping Satan in the past, and still is. Satan, like God, is invisible. Satan is a creature; God is the creator.

Once a person gets into Satan worship there are no restraints inside that person's own soul. They become very emotional and they think the most important thing in life is to be happy, to have a good time. This is anything but innocent when they get into such things as the phallic cult. That is exactly what happens in this case and it is all linked up to religion which makes it legitimate. It makes it a part of worship and sooner or later, once idolatry and Satan worship begins in any form, it is inevitable that people look for a person of power to worship — a phenomenon that occurs in the Tribulation. It is a phenomenon that brings great disaster to people — crime, for example.

This ecumenical religious system will spawn the greatest violence of all time in the history of the world. This dictator is called “the beast” because he is under the control of the ruler of this world, Satan, and has absolutely no restraint of any kind because of compassion. In the Tribulation there is no normal compassion in life, people do not feel sorry for people unless they are believers with Bible doctrine. There is no client nation in the Tribulation, there is a very small pivot because it is constantly being martyred by the beast dictator. Therefore restraints that we have today will not exist and that means an outbreak of violence such as the world has never seen. The only protection comes from this beast dictator. People respect his power, get under his organisation, have an ID card, so that they are in some measure at least for part of the Tribulation protected from this violence.

This aorist tense suggests a process whereby Satan finally gets a religion that sets aside every standard of category #1 truth, the laws of divine establishment. Violence is the order of the day and there is no compassion, and there is no kindness to strangers. The aorist tense also explains the idol or the statue of the dictator, called the abomination of desolation. The active voice: those involved in the ecumenical religion of the Tribulation will engage in idolatry of worshipping the statue of this dictator. This dictator can only be in one place in one time so people worship a statue of him. So we combine worshipping man with worshipping fallen angels all in one category of religion. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical reality of this situation. The dative singular indirect object of qhrion follows, and again we have the word “beast” referring to a human being — “they also worshipped the beast dictator.”

Principle: This is a trend which has existed to a limited extent since the beginning of human history, and what it really amounts to is not so much man worshipping man as man worshipping power and the person who has that power. It is tantamount to a worship of power and worship of power always goes with arrogance. Those who worship power will never appreciate freedom. Their whole life is characterised by false motivation. They are ambitious for more power, they want to succeed in some field, they want approbation. Once a person begins to worship power they desire approbation: the two go together.

The rationale of ecumenical religion is given very briefly in one phrase. We have the present active participle of legw. Legw means to speak but legw also means to reveal logoj. Logoj means thought and so they are speaking their thoughts. This could even be translated “to think,” “and they thought.” They are now expressing thought. This is a present active participle. The circumstantial participle is translated by the finite verb and preceded by the conjunction “and.” This is a legitimate into-English translation of the circumstantial participle. The futuristic present tense denotes an event which has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as already occurring. This is something that will be thought in the future. The active voice: the religious disciples of Satan’s ecumenical religious system produce this action.

Then we have the interrogative pronoun tij which introduces the first of several admiring questions, “who.” The ellipsis demands the verb to be. When people are thinking they do not necessarily think in full and complete sentences, so we have “who is,” and then the comparative adverb o(moioj. They are making comparisons, and this is important because truth comes in absolute form. Truth is not relative. The application of truth is only relative because we apply doctrine to different situations. The different situations are relative but the truth is absolute. Here we note immediately, by o(moioj, “Who is like,” that this is a relative thing, this is a matter of comparison, “who can compare with.” They said, “who is like,” and as soon as they put the word “like” in they are showing that they cannot think in terms of absolutes. If all a person can do is think in terms of relative concepts they have no happiness, no truth, no stability, no life, no capacity for anything. A soul must have absolute norms and standards from absolute truth to have capacity for love, life, and happiness.

“And they said, Who is like,” and then the dative of comparison, qhrion, “who is like the beast?” This is the expression of their thinking while they are worshipping. People are impressed with power and people who are impressed with power will never be impressed with freedom and will never have capacity for happiness or life. And when power becomes religion then you are dealing with evil. When power becomes religion also there are multitudes of converts and Satan’s whole system of false doctrine is always in terms of relatives. He gains his converts through miracles and people who are impressed with miracles are always a sucker for this system. So it boils down to this: when people do not have truth or doctrine they are impressed with the wrong thing.

Then it goes on to ask a second question. The connective kai tells us that this is the second one. We have the interrogative pronoun tij again, “and who.” This shows what they are worshipping, “who is able,” the present active indicative of dunamai. Their whole life is saying, “Who is able?” In other words, who at this moment can do the most for us?

Now what are they worshipping? The negative volition population are obviously kow-towing to someone. The question comes up and it is completed in the aorist active infinitive of verb polemew which means to make war, to fight. So we translate it: “Who is able to fight against him?” And “against him” is meta plus the genitive of the intensive pronoun a)utoj. There is a declaration of power. The dramatic aorist of polemew is for a state which has just been realised. It is an idiom which is used as a device for emphasis. The active voice describes the subject as producing the action of the verb or representing the state expressed in the verbal idea, and we have a conceived result in this second question. “Who is able to fight against him?” These two questions may be the liturgy for the ecumenical religion which is nothing more than a demon cult.

“They worshipped the dragon because he gave absolute power to the beast dictator: they also worshipped the dictator, and they thought, Who is like the beast? who is able to fight against him.”

There is, of course, in this type of liturgy a fear. Religion inspires fear; doctrine inspires honour, integrity, virtue, good motivation, a sense of destiny, control of one’s life and thousands of decisions made from a position of strength. Remember, the great temptation that Satan offered Christ, the kingdoms of this world in Matthew 4:8,9 — “The devil took him to a very high mountain, and showed him all the kingdoms of this world, and their glory [glamour]; and he said to him, ‘All these things will I give to you, if you will fall down and worship me’.”

Satan has always had this power. He has only offered this much power, all the kingdoms of the world, twice. He offered it to Christ when He was on earth and he will offer it in the future to this great dictator. What our Lord rejected this dictator of the revived Roman empire will accept, and through the medium of the beast dictator Satan becomes the object of worship in ecumenical religion of the Tribulation. This dictator is Satan’s puppet to simulate the devil’s arrogance, worship and admiration from the masses.

The passage we are studying forms a kind of composite of all of the dictators of all time. We have seen in this great dictator of the future, the dictator of the revived Roman empire, all of those characteristics which are related to his total dedication to Satan, Satan’s system, and everything that he expected to get from it. As we go along we see the various functions of power which come from his dictatorship, his religious power, for example; he is the ruler of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation. One of the things that has limited the power of some of the great dictators in our own day has been their antagonism toward religion as we know it. Hitler, for example, even though he was demon-possessed, was very anti-religious. The same thing could be said for Joe Stalin and all of the rulers in the Russian communist empire. One of the many self-limiting systems of power with many of these dictators is the fact that they have not explored the possibility of controlling people through religion, for religion is designed to do exactly that. Dictators generally, in our day at least, emphasise the political power and as a result they often lose opportunities for greater enslavement and control of people. We have, for example, Mussolini and his whole concept was to revive the glories of Rome. In so doing he inspired the Italian people to things that ordinarily they would not have accomplished. He did, of course, clean up Italy in a most remarkable way but his problem was that he used culture as the system for gaining power. He was out of his league when he hooked up with Adolf Hitler because Hitler knew how to control Mussolini through political power and the use of the military. As a result Mussolini lost out as a dictator.

There never has been in history and there never will be anyone comparable to the dictator we are studying because he combines everything. Some dictators use the economic approach, some the cultural approach, some the military approach, some the political approach and some the religious approach. But like most people in the day in which we live when people have a tendency to major in some specific area, or to emphasise only one aspect of a situation and become an expert in a limited field, these dictators all miss something. The other factor is, as we noted in 2 Thessalonians chapter two, these dictators are all under some restraint. In the Church Age we have a pivot. It may be small, it may be large, but whether it is small or large it does act as something of a restrainer. The pivot will be removed, of course, at the Rapture of the Church so that all restraint is removed.

But the biggest problem with dictators throughout history is that they have a tendency to see only one side of a situation in the acquiring of power. All of the leaders in Islam, for example, emphasise religion almost to the exclusion of everything else. It is very difficult, and this is true of people in general, to see all sides of a situation or to develop a balanced concept of a situation. Many of the dictators and people who have the tyrant power and absolute rulership are often quite on the stupid side and there is some system that is carrying them or they have majored in one area and know it well. We are looking in our passage at the total dictator. There have been men who have had dictatorial powers in the past who were men of genius and the men of genius are the ones who come the closest to really understanding all aspect of what it is to be a dictator. For example, Frederick the Great of Prussia probably more than anyone else was a man of great genius, but he also had the composite concept. A dictatorship is not necessarily a bad thing provided it is related to virtue, honour and integrity; but when it is related to the cosmic system then it becomes a great power for evil. Only humility uses power and authority properly.

In verse 5 we note the arrogance and the power of the dictator of the revived Roman empire in the Tribulation. We have a new type of power coming up. We have seen his political power, we have seen his religious power, we have seen his power to grab the masses through miracles. Now we are going to see another aspect of his power in this passage and we are also going to see his failure to use his authority properly because of arrogance. Satan is the greatest genius creature that ever lived and yet with all of his genius he was never able to use authority properly. Arrogance destroys the proper use of authority.

We have the connective kai emphasising a fact as surprising and unexpected, translated here "Furthermore." Next we have the aorist passive indicative of the verb didomi, which means to give or to delegate. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, hence a fact or action extended over the last half of the Tribulation, the time of the devil's desperation. The passive voice: the Roman dictator of the prophetic Roman empire receives the action of the verb. This is a declarative indicative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of eschatological reality. With this is a dative singular indirect object from the intensive pronoun, used as a personal pronoun, a)utoj, "to him." Satan gives to the dictator this great power. This man has power in all of these areas and they are all brought together under something that is absolutely necessary in order to gain and control and keep all of this power together, and this is the ability to communicate. Some people are always promoted beyond their ability to handle the power because their capacity for power is limited by their ability to communicate. One of the most important things in the world are not the communications systems that we have established in this age of scientific miracles but the ability of the human being to communicate. We are talking now about the basis of life itself, the ability to communicate. The individual, if he is going to utilise power properly, must have the ability to communicate and to be understood. And that means that first of all he must have the ability to think. One's communication can never exceed one's thinking for communication expresses your thoughts through your mouth. You can take all kinds of courses in public speaking but you will never advance in most of the areas of life unless you have the ability to communicate lucidly what you think.

Communication is used for many things. Our dictator whom we are studying uses communication to sell himself. That is his job: to make himself appealing to the maximum number of people with different views of life.

We have then accusative singular direct object from the noun stoma, "mouth." People have been great in many fields of public life simply because they had great speaking ability and were able to form thoughts and were able to communicate those thoughts. This man would never have been a success if he had not learned to communicate his ideas. His ideas were evil but, after all, he is dealing with the devil, the origin of evil. Apparently he did not have the ability to communicate at first but the devil gave him this ability because he is representing Satan himself — "Furthermore there was given to him [the dictator of the revived Roman empire] a mouth," eloquence. He is said in the present active participle of lalew to communicate, he is speaking. Unfortunately, what follows indicates that he was on the evil side of the fence. The pictorial present tense depicts a future event in the process of occurrence. The active voice: the dictator who has greater power for evil than any human being almost who has ever lived produces the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial.

With it we have the accusative direct object made up of several words. The first is an adjective used as a noun, megaj, meaning arrogant words here. Arrogant words express an arrogant mind. We are talking about evil and systems of evil, and when these are presented then you have the whole story. Arrogant words are not necessarily bragging about yourself; arrogant words are the statements of principles that are false. And why are they arrogant words? Because this man speaks what is false. He gives false principles but he gives them eloquently and persuasively. They sound good because he is such a great speaker.

Then we have another word. Evil comes in many forms and blasphemy is always any statement made about God. We have the conjunction kai and the accusative plural direct object from blasqemia, "and blasphemies," speaking against God. Megaj refers to speaking that which is wrong, giving that which is false about human life; blasfemia is giving that which is false about God. Anyone who is going to be a dictator has to sell himself to a maximum number of people. He has to have the ability to speak and to express thoughts and to communicate evil in a persuasive way. That is what we have at this point: the dictator speaking in the power and the arrogance of the cosmic system with its demon influence and demon possession offers the world a man-made Millennium if the world will simply turn to Satan. But neither the genius of Satan nor the combined efforts of man can duplicate the perfect environment of the coming Millennial reign of Christ.

It is fascinating that if any man can stand up and offer perfect environment people will vote for him. It is an offer that the ruler of this world can fulfil on a limited basis and so people always buy it, but when the Word of God and its magnificent eschatology says that in the future there will be one thousand years of perfect environment born again theologians in many denominations reject it. People who have the ability to understand it reject it.

So here is an arrogant eloquence, a dynamic person, communicating the doctrines of Satan as per 1 Timothy 4:1, “But that same [Holy] Spirit explicitly communicates [reports] that in letter periods of time [the time between the first and the second advents] some [believers] will become apostate [depart from the doctrine], paying attention to deceitful spirits and concentrating on doctrine from demons,” doctrines of demons will be communicated in the Tribulation through such demon-possessed and demon-influenced personalities as the dictator of the revived Roman empire and the dictator of Israel.

The general summary of this dictator’s message is found in Daniel 7:25 — “And he will speak false doctrine against the Most High God and he will oppress the saints of the Highest One [believers in the Tribulation]; furthermore, he will try to change the times and the law; and they [believers] will be under his power for three and a half years [the time of the eschatology of the devil’s desperation].”

The modus operandi of this dictator is patterned after the various gates of the cosmic system. His converts will live and degenerate in the cosmic system.

We now note the power of the dictator in the second half of verse 5. We start out with a connective conjunction kai, meaning “and,” followed by the aorist passive indicative of the verb didomi which means to give or bestow, sometimes it even means to delegate, “and there was given.” The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It takes the last half of the Tribulation and gathers it up into a single whole. The passive voice: the dictator of the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation receives the action of the verb from the power of Satan as the ruler of this world. The indicative mood is declarative for a future reality of the authority of the Roman dictator.

Next we have e)cousia again, the accusative singular direct object. It means really in this passage absolute power. With this we have the aorist active infinitive of poiew which means here to function. He was given power or authority to function. The culminative aorist tense views the function of this dictator in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the evangelism for Satan which occurs in the last half of the Tribulation. With this we have an active voice in which the dictator produces the action and the infinitive is intended result, the fulfilment of a deliberate objective, therefore the blending of purpose and result, “and there was given to him authority to function,” and then the time is given as forty-two months, the last three and a half years of the Tribulation.

At this point there is a fantastic principle hidden away in this phrase. This man is a genius and he surrenders himself in such a way to Satan as to have the greatest power of anyone of any dictatorship that ever existed. He combines military genius, political genius, and with this in a most unusual way a religious genius, and in these three categories he manages to accumulate fantastic power, not only over the ten-nation confederation of the revived Roman empire but at the same time a great portion of the population of the earth, through ecumenical religion. The reason for this is given in the fourth part of his profile which has to do with his ability to perform miracles. As we have seen miracles appeal to emotion and a large portion of the world at any time in history is always very emotional, and therefore very up or very down because instead of being rational, instead of looking at history from the viewpoint of Bible doctrine people look at it from the standpoint of emotion. People respond to their circumstances. Whether they are local circumstances or whether it is world history they respond emotionally unless they have doctrine to do otherwise. This man's genius gives him the power to rule, the power to control, but that doesn't make him popular. What makes him popular is the emotional approach, and we have his power to perform miracles. We have also noted a fifth category and that is the power of communication, eloquence in public speaking which is a part of his public image.

But with all of this power, with all of this ability, with all of this talent, like so many people before him there is always an absolute truth that captures him. That absolute truth comes in relative increments; that absolute truth is time. Time limitation is the sixth and final part of the profile of this great dictator. There is a time limitation on human power. Human power is terminated by that absolute doctrine called death, and all of the great dictators with all of their ability, with the tremendous use or abuse of their power, have finally been overtaken by time. There is a time limitation on any form of human power or human success or human greatness. The time limitation on human power can be one of two things: death or some form of divine judgment apart from death. This dictator, like all of the great dictators of the past, is going to lose out because of time. That is mentioned at the end of the verse. And so that last phrase, "to function for forty-two months" refers to the time limit.

Translation of verse 5 — "Furthermore there was given to him [the Gentile dictator of the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation] a mouth [eloquence] speaking arrogant doctrines and blasphemies; also there was given to him authority to function forty-two months [the last three and a half years of the Tribulation]."

Principle: Those who reject or divorce themselves from truth seek arrogance. They may speak arrogance with power, they may speak arrogance from degeneracy, but the content of their speech is inevitably arrogance. Arrogance, of course, is motivating evil as well as functional evil. Life in the cosmic system is always divorced from the truth. That is why we are constantly warned as believers to rebound, to name our sins, to function under the privacy of our priesthood, to recover the divine system and to function in the divine dynasphere.

Without truth there is not a way to have a relationship with God. Truth must be a part of our thinking. It is truth by which we are saved, it is truth by which we must live, it is Bible doctrine which we must use to make daily application to life. Truth is the greatest antidote to the Satanic system, to his genius for lies and, as far as evil is concerned, to avoid it. Without truth we have no place to go, no understanding of the present, no hope for the future and no way to profit from the past. In other words, without truth [Bible doctrine] we are nothing. Only truth in three categories can make life meaningful and wonderful and give us the capacity for happiness.

That brings us now to verses 6-8 where we see the policy of this dictator. We begin by noting the anti-Christ policy in verse 6. This dictator is now seen as the Antichrist.

We begin as usual with the connective conjunction kai, followed by the aorist active indicative of a)noigw which means to open, "And he opened." With it is the accusative singular direct object of stoma, "And he opened his mouth." We have just seen under the fifth part of his profile that he has tremendous public speaking ability. Now he is going to use it. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, the hundreds of speeches that this man made in a short time by which he was able to superimpose his thinking, his policy, his politics, his religion, his blasphemous concepts on the people of the world. He will have a world-wide public speaking ministry. The active voice: the dictator of the revived Roman empire produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality.

The purpose of it all is given in a prepositional phrase: e)ij plus the noun blasphemia. Blasphemies has a very definite connotation. Blasphemia means first of all to malign your neighbour, to run down someone you can't stand. It means that you are arrogant: the subject is always arrogant, always vain, and he functions at gate one of cosmic one. That means he has arrogance or jealousy. People run down other people, they malign and judge, because they are jealous, because they are not getting enough attention, not being recognised often enough. They are hypersensitive, they are bitter because of some frustration, they have not received the perpetuation of attention and love that they think they deserve. They are vindictive or implacable or full of self-pity. Whatever the reason may be blasphemia means to malign the object of antagonism. When one is preoccupied with himself, living of course inside of cosmic one, and does not receive the attention he thinks he deserves, the alternative is very simple: malign, judge, run down, seek revenge, destroy the object of hatred in any possible way.

Sometimes it is directed toward a group of individuals, the "I'll show you" attitude, and one's life becomes motivated just to prove to that group how stupid they were not to accept you and give you proper recognition and honour. It also is used against anything where people disagree. It can be used against a political party. So blasphemy has to do first with maligning people or groups of people or organisations that involve people or places where you have been rejected.

Our passage goes on to show us that in this case we are not talking about public speaking about people, we are talking about public speaking to meld people into an attitude against God. We have the preposition pros plus the accusative of qeoj, "against God." This is why one of his titles is Antichrist, because the word "anti" means against. It also means "instead of" but he is obviously against our Lord Jesus Christ, and so he opposes our Lord and used his great eloquence to speak against our Lord. It means "against" as a title for the Roman dictator in 1 John 2:18 and in our passage, Revelation 13:6. It means instead of or in place of for the Jewish dictator whom we will study next. He comes in place of Messiah in Matthew 23:23,24 and in Revelation 13:11,13,14. Through the Roman dictator Satan attacks the essence of God and the essence of God rationale.

This man is a military genius and we have already seen in our dispensation that a client nation to God cannot exist without a pivot. There must be a pivot of mature believers. The larger the pivot the greater the prosperity of the nation. There must also be one other factor and that is the military establishment. This man is not only a military genius but he is out to conquer the world. He is limited in his time and will not quite succeed. In conquering the world, how do you destroy opposition? Not necessarily by using his military genius but by using his religious genius. The greatest world peace movement of all time will come from his anti-God speeches. He is not only anti-God but he will use religion to conquer great portions of the world. He will talk about disarming, nuclear freezes, about all of the things that communist propaganda has thrown successfully into the western world and shaped the thinking of so many people — people who are not communist but just stupid. We are going to have a situation where there will be anti-God blasphemies being spoken, a religious system to actually bring in great world peace, the announcement that Satan will bring in the Millennium before the second advent can occur. This is why the period is called the time of the devil's desperation. He has only three and a half years to try to put into operation control and conquest of the world. The blasphemies therefore will include every doctrine related to the future of Israel including the regathering of Israel at the second advent, the fulfilment of their unconditional covenants. The ecumenical religion therefore sponsored by the Roman dictator will also be used in the modus operandi of blasphemy for religion is the devil's ace trump in any generation of history. Actually, there are three targets in this great public speaking attack, one of the greatest propaganda attacks of all time.

We have noted that in this verse the dictator opened his mouth in blasphemies against God. Now we have the three targets for his blasphemy. The first is the person of God. We have seen that blasphemy refers to slandering of individuals and that it is motivated by arrogance. Now we have the verb, the aorist active infinitive of blasphemew, and it first of all means to slander, and when it is directed toward people that is the way it should be translated rather than to transliterate it. The transliteration really deals with God. "And he opened his mouth in blasphemies against God, to blaspheme his person," the accusative singular direct object of the word onoma means person as well as name. The culminative aorist tense views slander in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. The existing results are obvious from the relationship between the constative and the culminative aorist. The dictator has great public speaking ability. He is a great communicator and his eloquence results in the invigoration of the people of the day to hate. He is on a hate God program. His eloquence results in the invigoration of an ecumenical religious system in the last half of the Tribulation and the whole objective of this religion is to hate God and hate those people who have any relationship with God. The religion is anti-essence of God, anti-Trinitarian, and anti-Christ. The active voice: the dictator of the revived Roman empire produces the action of the verb. This is an infinitive of intended result. The result indicates the fulfilment of a deliberate objective and therefore the blending of purpose and result. By slandering the person of God each member of the Trinity is attacked in relationship to their respective areas of faithfulness to mankind. God the Father is the author of the divine plan. He is under attack. God the Son is the executor of the divine plan, emphasising salvation through faith in Christ. He is under attack. God the Holy Spirit is the revealer of the divine plan. He is under attack. The attack upon Christ, in effect, is an attack upon all three members of the Trinity.

Secondly, there is an attack against the tabernacle of God. We find the connective kai followed by the accusative singular direct object of the noun skhnh, and it means “tabernacle.” With this is the possessive genitive of a)utoj, “and his tabernacle.” This is actually the tabernacle of the testimony, the tabernacle of Exodus 27:21; 29:4; Numbers 1:1, which had to be perfectly constructed to scale in heaven as a heavenly memorial to the person and the work of Christ during the first advent. So when it says, “and his tabernacle,” we are talking about a tabernacle in heaven that follows the exact scale of the tabernacle of Israel. The tabernacle of Israel was designed to teach eschatology to them for the coming of Christ was future to the people of Israel at the time of the tabernacle. In order for people to understand Christology in their day there was constructed to scale this tabernacle. Every part of the tabernacle became the doctrine of Christology and the doctrine of soteriology. This tabernacle is now moved to heaven and in heaven there is a tabernacle which is constructed to the same scale with the same connotation, the only difference being that now that Jesus Christ has come in the flesh. Now that the first advent has occurred and we have the strategic victory of our Lord in the angelic conflict the tabernacle in heaven does exactly the same thing as the communion table on earth. The tabernacle in heaven is a memorial to the strategic victory of Christ on the cross.

Salvation by grace through faith in Christ is slandered in every generation but Satan makes a concerted effort to destroy this truth in the last half of the Tribulation, and this is the second category of attack, the tabernacle of God. It must be remembered that the tabernacle and its furniture was actually used by the Levitical priests to teach every aspect of the person and the work of Christ and the tabernacle is very meaningful therefore in Jewish evangelism of the Tribulation. Therefore it was maligned by Satan. Thirdly, the sons of Israel are under attack. The Jew is a walking testimony to the faithfulness of God. Whether he is a believer or an unbeliever is not the issue. The fact that the Jew lives on planet earth during the rest of history, all the way through the Tribulation, indicates the faithfulness of God.

Next in the text we have a pun, the articular present active participle of the verb skhnow. Skhnh and skhnow form the paronomasia: one is the noun, the other is the verb. The verb means to live in a tent, “and those who tabernacle.” To illustrate the paronomasia: “And he opened his mouth in blasphemies against God, to blaspheme His person, and His tabernacle, and those who tabernacle in heaven”. The last phrase is the preposition e)n plus the locative of o)uranoj.

It always bothers Satan when he is kicked out of heaven that heaven is filled with Jews who are saved. There are Gentiles too but here, of course, it is talking especially about the Jewish believer. The definite article is used as a personal pronoun and a relative pronoun. The present tense is a perfective present tense, it refers to what has come to be in the past, Jewish believers going to heaven after physical death, and it is emphasised as a present reality to Satan. During the last half of the Tribulation we have the eschatology of the devil’s desperation when he is confined to the earth. He cannot go to heaven any more and heaven is filled with those people he despises and has sought to destroy in every generation. There was never a generation of human history in which Satan has not tried to destroy all Jews on the face of the earth. So obviously Satan does not laugh at this paronomasia. What really bothers him are all of these Jews he has tried to destroy and the fact that many of them, because they have personally believed in Christ and have responded to the message of the tabernacle, are now in heaven.

Translation: "And he opened his mouth in blasphemies against God, to slander his person, and his tabernacle [the memorial in heaven to the person and the work of Christ], and those [Jewish believers] who tabernacle in heaven."

In the first advent of Christ, Christ tabernacled on earth: John 1:14, "The Word [the living Word] became flesh [hypostatic union, the first advent where Satan was strategically defeated] and tabernacled [skhnow] among us." He didn't dwell among us. To dwell would mean to stay down here permanently. He only came for a short time to totally defeat Satan and provide for each one of us eternal salvation, and so the word "tabernacle." He just came for a bivouac, to pitch a tent. He is the tent, the tabernacle, "and we beheld his glory, glory as of the uniquely-born one [virgin birth] from the source of the Father, full of grace and full of doctrine."

Because our Lord tabernacled on earth, says John, a lot of members of the human race are going to tabernacle in heaven. Because Christ tabernacled on earth you as a believer will tabernacle in heaven forever. Tabernacling in heaven means residence in the interim body, and what is so wonderful about this and what really angers Satan is that even the worst Christian loser that ever lived will reside in heaven and be very happy as he awaits the resurrection and the resurrection body, while at the same time Satan is confined to the earth and can no longer go to heaven.

We have noted that Satan gave the dictator of the revived Roman empire the greatest power the world has ever known, but no matter how much power he was given he is no stringer than time, and time runs out and the power is gone. Sic transit gloria munde: "the glory of the world passes away."

What is it that Satan can't stand more than anything else. He knows his time is short, and that bothers him. Satan, as one of the greatest creatures of all time, cannot stand to be laughed at and this paronomasia is really laughing at Satan. All people who are arrogant take themselves seriously, so seriously that they can never stand to be laughed at. This is exactly what John 1:14 and Revelation 13:6 does: we have Satan laughed at. The death of a believer has great dignity, great blessing, great power, and Satan has never been able to cancel it, even though he has the power of death, as we are told by the Word, and often is permitted to take believers out of the world in a painful way as discipline. Once the believer dies Satan has lost control of that believer now matter how great a loser, no matter how long he lived in the cosmic system. Satan with all of his power and all of his ability has lost control.

Verse 7, the dictator has a domestic policy. Why? Because all violence, all degeneracy, all disorganised evil is eliminated by even the worst dictators. Why do these people always eliminate these things? Because since Satan has been the ruler of this world since the fall of man he has tried to produce the Millennium. it isn't that Satan doesn't want to produce good, but it is impossible. He doesn't have the power or the ability because of arrogance, because of innate evil, cosmic one: his prehistoric attitude and policy by which he swept one third of the angelic hosts into his system. Satan wants to produce good and when Satan uses dictators like Hitler and Stalin one of the things they do is try to eliminate private violence. They go for organised evil. Remember that organised evil always tries to produce good and actually uses a facade of pseudo good: "Look what we are doing for you." Therefore it tries to become a substitute for regeneration and by becoming a substitute for regeneration it inevitably produces, among other things, religion. But it also produces a domestic policy, and what is the one thing that challenges this facade: the dictator with the facade of good produced under the principle of organised evil? He knocks out the crime, the criminal, you no longer find petty crime on the streets or private or public violence. All violence is now in the hands of the government.

But there is always a challenge to this because the man who does this, the dictator, always takes away freedom. And who is it that stands up for freedom? The born-again believer who knows Bible doctrine (not the born-again believer in the cosmic system). The born again believer with doctrine in his soul becomes the enemy, so we have the persecution of the believer. Why does the dictator persecute the believer? Not because he wants to persecute the believer, the dictator wants to avoid that as much as possible, but because the believer with doctrine is the great challenge to his system of organised evil.

In verse 7 we notice the dictator's policy of persecution in the first part of the verse and then his tremendous power in the last. We begin with the connective conjunction kai which now advances the argument, and is translated "Furthermore." The aorist passive indicative of the verb didomi follows and it means to give, "Furthermore there was delegated," "to him," the dative singular direct object from a)utoj, the intensive pronoun used as a personal pronoun and referring to the dictator of the revived Roman empire. So this is Satan giving something else to his dictator, his man. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, hence a fact or action extended over the last half of the Tribulation, the time of the devil's desperation. The passive voice: the dictator receives the action of the verb; he receives power. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality, reminding us once again that while there are many forms of evil power and many forms of illegitimate power on this earth, because Satan is the ruler of this world and Satan uses people, there is one person that Satan can never touch — the believer with doctrine resident in his soul. The power of doctrine is greater than any human power of any kind on this earth, religious or political, or any power that represents evil.

"Furthermore it was given to him," and, of course, what is given to him is power, "to make war against the saints." "To make" is the aorist active infinitive of the verb poiew. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it views the persecution of believers in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, namely the testing of Tribulation believers with great historical disaster.

Strangely enough, Satan's man takes over government after government. Government is designed by God to be a power for good, Romans 13, but government is only a power for good when category one truth, the laws of divine establishment, are found in its constitution and carried out properly by those in a position of leadership. Government has the responsibility of providing a military establishment to defend the freedom of people. A military establishment would be, of course, a system of law courts and a police system protecting from crime within and the military establishment to protect from the criminals without, i.e. the nations who would attack. The rest is all pivot. But when you have a nation with no pivot, which is all too often in history, and you have no law courts to define freedom and protect the rights of individuals then inevitably you will have crime — private violence, public violence, and from those two, degeneracy. It is degeneracy that is used by the dictator. Germany was in a state of degeneracy when Adolf Hitler came to power; communist Russia was in a state of degeneracy when Lenin came to power. This is always the way.

Two things can happen when a nation is in a state of degeneracy: God can destroy it or He can give it a living discipline rather than a dying discipline. The fifth cycle of discipline would be the dying discipline; the dictatorship would be the living discipline — the strong man comes to the front: things are so bad we must have a strong man to solve everything and along comes the dictator.

The dictator of the revived Roman empire has only one thing to stamp out: the truth. Evil in an organised form cannot exist with truth. Truth and degeneracy can coexist. It coexisted in Sodom. Degeneracy is disorganised evil but organised evil, dictatorship, must stamp out the truth. This has been a procedure followed in communist China, in communist Russia, in Cuba, and wherever the communists have gone this has been the procedure. So that when the strong man comes he always makes war against those who have the truth, and therefore the accusative singular direct object of poiew, polemoj, which can be used for warfare or for battle. We translate it, “to make war,” and then we have the preposition meta plus the genitive plural from a(gioj. A(gioj means to be set apart. What sets apart certain people? Their knowledge of doctrine; doctrine resident in the soul. These are the people that organised evil must destroy. Organised evil gets rid of crime, of degeneracy, but with it they always take away freedom.

In cosmic one self-righteous arrogance is morality, very strict morality, a morality that any unbeliever can follow. But when you have morality in the cosmic system — arrogance can produce great morality — there is one thing missing: the virtue of the Christian way of life. Morality minus virtue is self-righteous arrogance and a part of evil. There is nothing wrong with being moral but morality doesn't have any power. Morality is for believers and unbelievers to live side by side and respect the rights and the privacy and the freedom of each other, but there is no power in strict morality. The Christian way of life is not a system of morality, it is a divine system of virtue. Virtue is far greater than morality. This dictator rises to power by using morality: “I'm going to stop all the crime.” Hitler stopped all the crime too, the Government was committing all the crime. That is organised evil.

We have a connective kai which tells us that this power means to overcome, physically here. This power meant that many believers with doctrine were tortured and killed. Power was given to take their life but even though the dictator had the power to torture and kill he did not have the power to cause them to renounce Christianity and become a part of the system. Doctrine in the soul is far more powerful than the greatest evil in the world. Even though this power was given, God permitted this, the aorist active infinitive of nikaw, to overcome, to conquer. The constative aorist is for a fact or action extending over that period of time known as the eschatology of the devil's desperation, the last half of the Tribulation. The active voice: the dictator of the revived Roman empire had this power. He didn't use his system of government, he didn't use his political system in order to wipe out the saints, he used ecumenical religion. Religion always produces zealots. Religion appeals to arrogance and religious people in their arrogance are zealous to kill believers with truth. That is the system the dictator uses to overcome them, to get rid of them, to conquer them; but they do not renounce the truth. This emphasises the evil nature and the great evil of religion. Remember that true Christianity is not a religion but a relationship with God through faith in our Lord Jesus Christ. Religion as a principle represents the evil genius of Satan. Basically religion was originated by Satan to counterfeit the plan of God and to draw worship to himself and away from our Lord Jesus Christ.

Verse 7, "Furthermore power was given to him [the dictator of the revived Roman empire] to make war against the saints, and to overcome them." Nikaw is the verb to "overcome," the aorist active infinitive here.

We have noticed in this principle that there are two kinds of evil: organised evil and disorganised evil. Disorganised evil is called basically degeneracy, and there is always coexistence between degeneracy and believers advancing to maturity, believers with a high spiritual content to their lives. So in disorganised evil degeneracy and spiritual advance coexist, even though they are antithetical. The principle is that it is very difficult for truth to continue, for doctrine to be taught, and for believers to grow when there is organised evil. Disorganised evil and doctrinal believers coexist. Here we have a statement, then. To overcome has to do with the fact that disorganised evil no longer exists in the revived Roman empire. They were conquered, "to make war against the saints and to conquer them." The aorist tense, again, is a constative aorist for a fact or action extended over that period of time known as the devil's desperation, the last half of the Tribulation. The dictator produces the action of the verb through ecumenical religion which is one of the great systems of organised evil. This emphasises that organised evil has a great system for persecuting the truth.

The ecumenical religion of the revived Roman empire is spread through false teachers. Satan doesn't like to use unbelievers as false teachers because there is no rapport between the unbeliever and the believer. As a result the more unbelievers that are pulled into the cosmic system and get into this concept of morality without virtue, this function in the cosmic system, this zeal without knowledge — the implacability and inflexibility concept — the more they become eloquent evangelists for the Satanic system. So to be successful any Satanic evangelist must practice hypocrisy, and the hypocrisy is the natural result of being moral without virtue: arrogant self-righteousness plus crusader arrogance.

One of the other factors that is inevitable: in order to cover up your own inconsistencies you must develop a pleasing public relations personality. There is nothing wrong with a pleasing personality. In fact the genuine pleasing personality is the flexible personality, where you hear something that is false and you don't challenge everything that is not true but you are tolerant and you listen and you relax. You wait until the Lord gives you some wisdom or the right opportunity and therefore you are not a zealot.

The Tribulational martyrs simply have to take a stand for the truth. In fact they are forced to the place where they must publicly renounce Christ, or they must state that they refuse to do so and that is when they are martyred. But we are talking about the believers now who become the evangelists for Satan. They must have either a good public relations personality or a flirtatious personality to court others for religion. Religion courts; Christianity evangelises. In representing Satan they appeal to the arrogance of others and they always approach with the idea that you must improve your life. Religion always talks about improving one's life and performing good works, and working one's way into a relationship with God. Generally the converts of evangelists for the cosmic system become arrogant like himself.

The infinitive is the infinitive of intended result when the result fulfils the deliberate objective of getting Tribulational saints involved in the cosmic system. This is accomplished through ecumenical religion. The objective is often fulfilled in the relationship to believers by some form of inculcation of arrogance, one of the twelve gates. With this we have the accusative plural direct object from a)utoj, an intensive pronoun used as the personal pronoun.

We have two antithetical categories of believers who were conquered in this war against the saints. When the saints are being conquered they are being conquered in two ways. There are two kinds of believers here: the believers who are negative toward doctrine and the believers who are positive toward doctrine. Category #1, believers who were negative toward doctrine were punished by God through this dictator and his system of organised evil for their cosmic involvement. They will die the sin unto death in the last half of the Tribulation. But then we have the believers who were positive toward doctrine, and they glorify God by remaining faithful to the Word. Their life was not as important as doctrine. For these believers their life was Bible doctrine and they demonstrated the fact that Bible doctrine resident in the soul is much more powerful than the greatest power of the greatest dictator in history, the dictator we are studying. There is a far greater power in your soul as a believer when you have doctrine than any human system of power that has ever existed.

A specific area has to be involved in organised evil so in the remaining part of verse seven we have the evil dynamics of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation. The connective conjunction kai, translated here "and," is followed by the subject in the nominative singular. The subject is the noun e)cousia, meaning power or authority, "and authority." Then we have the aorist passive indicative of didomi which means to give or to delegate, "was delegated." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The passive voice: the power or the authority receives the action of the verb: it is delegated. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of prophetic or eschatological reality. We have a dative singular indirect object of a)utoj, "to him," the dictator of the revived Roman empire. Translation: "and authority was given to him."

Next we have the preposition e)pi plus the accusative, where it is translated “over,” “authority was given over.” And then we have the adjective paj, and paj is going to cover four different categories, “over every,” and then there are four categories. Each of the four categories is a noun in the accusative singular. The first is fulh and it is correctly translated “tribe” and it is a reference to Jews, both in Israel and throughout the world. That is the first category. The second one is the accusative singular from the noun laoj which means “people.” The third is the accusative singular from the noun glossa, and it means “languages,” but it is mistranslated throughout the New Testament “tongues.” It is in the singular and with paj it comprehends all languages. Finally we have the accusative singular from the noun e)qnoj, used here for nations. Now we have a corrected translation of the entire verse but we note the last half of it: “to make war against the saints, to conquer them: and authority was given to him [the Roman dictator] over every tribe [the Jews], and people [citizens of the revived Roman empire], and languages [foreigners living outside the revived Roman empire], and nations [Gentile nations in contrast to the Jewish nation].”

Note the four categories over which ecumenical religion has power and authority because it penetrates into areas where it has no legitimate authority. It penetrates into nations where it has no legitimate authority under the principle of separation of religion and state. It penetrates into areas of a foreign language where it has no authority because it does not think in the same language. It penetrates into areas of citizens of the revived Roman empire and destroys their freedom of choice. It also penetrates into the Jewish area and therefore runs across the boundaries of the cultural background of the Jews as well as their concept in religion.

The leader of ecumenical religion who is the dictator of the revived Roman empire is politically only a dictator of a great empire but religiously, as a religious leader, he has influence way beyond the boundaries of his great empire. And the principle is always the same: religion extends its evil influence where political power cannot penetrate. Hence, through political and religious power the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation accomplishes what the historical Roman empire and the holy Roman empire were never able to accomplish: to actually conquer the world through religion.

While the Roman dictator has universal control of people of the world through ecumenical religion it does not bring world peace which has always been one of the front motives of ecumenical religion. In fact religion cannot bring peace to the world; religion is the source of many wars. As a matter of fact religion is going to be the source of war in the last half of the Tribulation. Historically, prophetically and biblically religion starts wars. Only the pivot of mature believers and only orthodox Christianity can provide any interlude of peace, as illustrated by the Antonine Caesars from 96-192 AD.

Verse 8, the dictator’s foreign policy. His alliance with Israel is that part of the foreign policy that God the Holy Spirit sees fit to advise us.

The ecumenical religion of the Tribulation is mentioned first. We have the emphatic use of the conjunction kai, translated “in fact,” and the nominative plural of paj, the adjective used as a substantive, “all.” It refers to Jews living in Palestine during the Tribulation, to the nation Israel in existence in the Tribulation. With this we have the articular present active participle from the verb katoikew which means to dwell or to live. The definite article is a nominative plural used as a relative pronoun. Its antecedent is a nominative plural o(l, "who." Then we have the customary present tense denoting what habitually occurs among Jews who live in Israel during the last half of the Tribulation, the time of the eschatology of the devil's desperation. The active voice: Jews living in Israel during the last half of the Tribulation are going to produce the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial and we have a prepositional phrase to amplify the participle: the preposition e)pi plus the genitive of the noun gh, "in fact all who live in the land." Then we have the main verb, the future active indicative of the verb proskunew which means to worship, "will worship." These are unbelieving Jews. The believing Jews in the middle of the Tribulation all flee. They leave the land. Then there is evangelism in the last half of the Tribulation, so "all" does not include those Jews who are evangelised in the last half of the Tribulation.

The accusative singular direct object of a)utoj is translated "him," and it refers to the dictator of the revived Roman empire as the ruler of ecumenical religion. The worship part is ecumenical religion. And notice that one of the categories of the previous verse has been taken. The category was fulh, "tribes," Israel. Outside of the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation is Israel and all of a sudden Jews in Israel are worshipping the dictator. They are in Jerusalem; he is in Rome. This is ecumenical religion. He has no political influence at this point, that will come as a result of religion. It is religion which penetrates the strong culture of the Jews. No matter how strong the culture may be, no matter how strong the Jews may feel, if they reject the truth and they reject the One who is the truth, Jesus Christ, their Messiah, their culture is not strong enough, their truth in category #1 is not strong enough, and religion will penetrate this most powerful of all cultures and will convert the Jews and bring them into line politically in every possible way. As the converts grow in Palestine, in the land of Israel, they put political pressure on their dictator who is then forced to make a deal.

The future tense of proskunew is a gnomic future, it is for a statement of fact or performance which may be rightfully expected to occur when the Roman dictator is able to start converting through ecumenical religion Jews in the land of Israel. The active voice: unbelieving Jews in Israel will produce the action of the verb, they will be converted by their rejection of the gospel. This creates the vacuum, and into that vacuum goes the false teaching of ecumenical religion. The indicative mood is declarative for the eschatology of the situation. We have eschatological reality of a treaty between the revived Roman empire with its ecumenical religious system, and the Jews with Judaism minus doctrine. This becomes a great issue for whenever anyone, no matter how strong a people may be, rejects the truth the vacuum is opened and through that vacuum goes into the soul these concepts. These false concepts are accepted, they get into the cosmic system, and once these Jews are in the cosmic system they put the pressure on their own dictator and he, therefore, is forced to make a treaty. And, by the way, it is a minority that does the job.

And that is the way it is in history. Majorities never influence history, it is the minorities that are organised, minorities with a system, minorities with motivation. And minorities often take away from the majority freedoms they enjoy simply because they have a strong system. It is that old principle: “the wheel that squeaks the loudest gets the grease,” and you can amplify that right into the principle of historical trends.

The entire world will not worship the beast since there are two areas developing and will develop by the middle of the Tribulation. There is first of all the king of the north. There are also the kings of the east, the king of the south, the Arabs stay with Islam. These three blocs are the only places where there is no penetration of ecumenical religion. The religion of Islam rejects the ecumenical religion of the revived Roman empire. The oriental system will consolidate under whatever there may be at that time to reject it, and the northern country is isolated. But the revived Roman empire will penetrate everywhere else, including the western hemisphere.

Minorities run the world, and when a nation is prosperous it is because a minority of born-again believers in a national entity have advanced from gate four to gate eight. The majority is never right and the majority never has any influence in history. The majority is just a great big slob mob waiting to be influenced by an organised minority. No majority in history has ever had any influence. The impact of history is always with the organised minority. And, as a matter of fact, the principle is true even where there is good instead of evil, for it is a small pivot of mature believers who provide the prosperity for all when we have it. It was also a pivot of believers, a small percentage of the population in the Roman empire that were the basis for the most fantastic prosperity the world has ever known during the time of the Antonine Caesars. It is always the minority that is organised and has a system that has the influence.

It was no problem for the unbelieving Jews in Israel to hook up with the revived Roman empire. The treaty is described in Matthew 24:15 and Daniel 11:44 briefly. But brevity does not keep us from understanding in detail exactly what happened.

Principles

1. There is no real power in public opinion. Public opinion caters to the viewpoint of the majority and majorities have no power or control in history. It is always the minority which controls or influences history. Sometimes it is a good minority, like a pivot of mature believers in a client nation to God. Frequently, however, it is a minority for evil which controls the historical trend. Organised minorities produce dictators. Public opinion reacts to these minorities but public opinion has no organisation and no power. What is public opinion? Public opinion is today's news, and tomorrow it is gone. Public opinion can bully the weak but public opinion has no power. Public opinion can flatter the successful but, again, it has absolutely no power. Public opinion only has clout with arrogant and stupid people, but it has no power even as stupid people have no power. Stupid people are lemmings, pawns in the game. The only way that you and I keep from being pawns in the game is by maximum perception of Bible doctrine. Public opinion is all too often only a system of self-righteousness, arrogance and mass hysteria which assumes that their condemnation has power or influence in history. It has none. People often operate on the false premise that public opinion has influence over evil, while in reality evil cares nothing for public opinion.

2. We have noted that in the first half of the Tribulation this dictator was pro-Semitic. It suited him to be pro-Semitic. We have also noted that organised evil, whenever organised evil meets a goat, a sacrifice, something to advance its own power, it always picks something and becomes anti-something. This explains why we begin to see a very strong minority in our day who are involved in anti-Semitism. It is one of the signs that out of degeneracy organised minorities are beginning to function. We might ask how this man, the dictator of the revived Roman empire, could be pro-Semitic for three and a half years and then turn around and become anti-Semitic. He is organised evil, he is working for Satan his master, it is no problem at all for organised evil to reverse its policy, e.g. the attitude of the Chinese communists when they took over in China and used Christians in coming to power but once they were in they said, "Out." Power grab is the name of the game.

Verse 8, "In fact all [Jewish unbelievers in the last half of the Tribulation] who live in the land shall worship him."

These are unbelievers who are religious. Religion is always on the side of organised evil. In the treaty between Israel and the dictator of the revived Roman empire Israel needs help. She is caught between four great power blocs. Israel has an affinity for organised evil because they have already been contacted by its religion. So there is going to be a great treaty between Israel in the Tribulation and the revived Roman empire, and part of that treaty is the fact that all of Israel must accept systematic evil in its most powerful form: religion. In the temple in Jerusalem an actual statue of the dictator of the revived Roman empire will be put up and worshipped.

Israel faces a problem. The Jews are always going to have problems as a nation. Israel right now is debating whether they are going to have to make a deal with Russia or China. They always have to make a deal with someone because they are surrounded by Arabs — envious people. After the Rapture in the middle of the Tribulation they will be debating that same issue again, and in the Tribulation there will be a power that does not presently exist as such: the revived Roman empire, a united states of western Europe. In the future the dictator of Israel will turn to the dictator of the revived Roman empire and make a deal. He has to make a deal to survive. That is the problem that Israel has today; that is the problem that Israel is going to have in the Tribulation.

Principle: Weak or weakened people can only survive by compromise. That is true of individuals and it is true of nations.

Israel is a strong nation but they are in a weak position. They are going to be in that position in the middle of the Tribulation. They will select the revived Roman empire, and in making a deal with the revived Roman empire ecumenical religion becomes a part of it. They have to accept the religion of the revived Roman empire and are compelled to put an image up in the Jewish temple, the abomination of desolation. They will "worship him," the dictator of the revived Roman empire, that is the point of the treaty: the revived Roman empire agrees to protect Israel in return for certain economic considerations and religion.

Next we have a very strange Greek development in this verse. We have, for example, o(u ou. O(u is a relative pronoun and it is in the genitive singular from the relative pronoun o(j. It is a descriptive genitive singular whose antecedent is the genitive paj.

“Whose name” is what comes up next because we have o(u ou gegraptai to o)noma, so we go from o(u over to o)noma. O)noma means person, name, and sometimes it means personality. So we will start this phrase, “by whose name.” It is necessary to have something to show in the English what the idiom is going to be, so we will translate it, “this means, of course, everyone whose name.” The “everyone” comes from paj, “in fact all.” Then we have the phrase, “has not been written in the book of life.” This “whose name has not been written in the book of life” becomes a qualifying factor to show that there are those who will not compromise in Israel in those days because they are believers, and why they will not compromise, and how far flexibility can take you, flexibility can never take you to the compromise of doctrine. You must be flexible when you are in a position of weakness but your flexibility must never include the compromise of the Word of God.

The word o)noma means “name,” and while the King James version translates it “names” (plural) it is name in the singular in the Greek, indicating that salvation is a private matter between an individual and God. Privacy, wherever you find it, is a very important thing. Privacy means freedom. Disorganised evil certainly believes in privacy, it wants privacy to go out and raise hell! Organised evil says you can’t have your privacy, it wants you on a computer, it wants to know all of your business. When you are on a computer and you have a social security number you have lost part of your freedom. And why are those social security lists so important? Why is it important to get your name on a computer? So that organised evil can control you when a dictator comes. That is organised evil, the kind of problem we have in the last half of the Tribulation. Privacy is so important to freedom.

Degeneracy likes privacy too. The only thing is that when degeneracy is crime then the criminals have no right to privacy and the criminal’s privacy is surrendered because he is committing crime. He must be apprehended and properly punished and removed from a free society. He has no rights of a free society. In a general state of degeneracy only the criminals must be eliminated but that does not hinder the freedom of degenerates who are not criminals and it doesn’t hinder the freedom of believers and law-abiding citizens of all kinds. So privacy becomes a major issue and organised evil wipes out privacy.

“Everyone whose name has not been written.” There is a book where you do want your name written. Then the verb itself should be noted, it is the perfect passive participle of grafw which means to write, “which has not been written.” The perfect tense is a perfect of existing state, i.e. an intensive perfect where the action of negative volition toward the gospel means that you are not in the book of life. Everyone has two chances to have eternal salvation and get their name recorded in the book of life. The first chance is at God-consciousness, the next is at gospel hearing. The perfect tense is an emphatic method in the Greek of presenting a fact or condition. It is a strong way of saying that a thing is. All believers have their names in the book of life. The passive voice: the Jews of the last half of the Tribulation who reject Christ as saviour receive the action of the verb. This is a circumstantial participle.

What is this book of life? We have the preposition e)n plus the locative of biblion plus the descriptive genitive singular of zwh, “the book of life,” “everyone whose name has not been written in the book of life.” The book of life is a registry of everyone who believes in the Lord Jesus Christ during phase two of their lifetime on earth. That is the way the book of life will appear in heaven: it will have the names of everyone who has personally believed in the Lord Jesus Christ; it will not have the names of unbelievers as a registry book in heaven. When people are born into this world apparently their names are in the book of life but when they reject Christ as saviour their names are blotted out of the book of life. So, first of all, the book of life is a roster of all born-again believers. It is so described in Philippians 4:3; Revelation 3:5; 13:8; 17:8; 20:12,15; 21:7.

By imputation of human life at birth all members of the human race have the same chance and are put in that book. That imputation is made by God. Life is imputed after birth and the very fact that God imputes life to the soul means that that person is in the book of life. Their name is not blotted out of the book of life until they depart from this earth without accepting Christ as saviour. As long as they live on this earth they have a chance to be saved but when they die, if they have not believed in Christ then their name is blotted out of the book of life and they are in another book, the book of works. The book of works is used as the indictment to send people to the lake of fire forever and ever.

We are dealing with unbelievers, those who are not registered in the book of life. In this context we are talking specifically about Jewish unbelievers living in the state of Israel in the last half of the Tribulation. The owner of the book of life is mentioned next. He is mentioned in the phrase tou a)niou, referring to the Lamb. This is the possessive genitive of the noun a)noion and it means actually “belonging to the Lamb,” “the book of life belonging to the Lamb.” The Lamb emphasises the saving work of Christ on the cross; it relates the animal sacrifices, the Levitical sacrifices, with their actual fulfilment when our Lord was on the cross between heaven and earth and being judged for our sins.

Next we have the articular perfect passive participle from an Attic verb sfattw, which is sfazw in the Koine Greek. The translation is “belonging to the Lamb who has been slain.” The definite article is used as a relative pronoun referring to Christ as the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world. The dramatic perfect tense of sfazw presents a completed action with emphasis on existing results from that completed action. The Lamb was slain so that we can have eternal life. The passive voice: Christ receives the action of the verb on the cross. The participle is circumstantial.

Then we have a prepositional phrase, a)po plus the locative singular from the noun katabolh, “from the foundation.” With this we have the descriptive genitive of kosmoj, referring here to the world system, Satan’s world system, “of the world.” The Lamb didn’t have to become slain until Satan became the ruler of the world, so we don’t have the usual word. In talking about the planet we have the word gh, but we are talking about the world system came into existence after man sinned, after man lost the rulership of the world. The plan of God for our salvation was designed in eternity past before the foundation of the world but it became necessary to put it into operation when man sinned. The work of Christ was entered into the computer of divine decrees billions of years ago. The omniscience of God the Father entered the work of Christ into the computer and, of course, we know the printout, our so great salvation. Remember that salvation came before sin in the plan of God.

Translation of verse 8 — “In fact all Jewish unbelievers of the last half of the Tribulation who live in the land [the nation Israel in the last half of the Tribulation] will worship him [the dictator of the revived Roman empire, the religious leader of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation]; this means, of course, everyone whose name has not been written in the book of life belonging to the Lamb who has been slain from the foundation of the world.”

The King James translation of verse 9 is: “If any man has an ear, let him hear.” What is left out is important. We have had this phrase seven times before in chapters two and three but on those occasions there was added the phrase, “what the Spirit saith to the churches.” That was the Church Age where we studied the historical trends of the Church Age, the only dispensation in which there is no prophetic historical trend. All trends are historical in the Church Age but once the Church is removed, the resurrection or the Rapture of the Church, the completion of the royal family of God, then we go into the Tribulation and historical trends are based entirely on prophecy. In Revelation chapters two and three we read, “what the Spirit saith to the Churches.” The Church is gone in the Tribulation.

The first word in verse 9 is the conditional particle $\epsilon\iota$, it introduces the protasis of a first class condition. That means an assumption or supposition from the viewpoint of reality. The reality in this case is assumed to be true. If this had been in a second class condition then the assumption would be that some people do not have ears and therefore can't hear. If it had been a third class condition then you could choose as to whether you have ears or not. If it had been a fourth class condition it would express a wish that you had said something you shouldn't and you wish that people didn't have ears. “If” means “If and it is true,” it is an assumption of truth.

Next we have the nominative singular of the indefinite pronoun $\tau\iota\varsigma$. An indefinite pronoun takes people in general and takes a chunk out and says that this category is different from the rest. This is a category of people and they are distinguished from other people by such and such and so and so. The Greeks had a word for it, $\tau\iota\varsigma$. So the indefinite pronoun represents a category and in this case it represents believers in the last half of the Tribulation. That is the time of the devil's desperation, the last three and a half years before the second advent. And he says, “If anyone,” and “anyone,” being the indefinite pronoun $\tau\iota\varsigma$, indicates that out of all the people alive on the earth there is a special category, those who have believed in the Lord Jesus Christ, and they are in view here.

Next we have the verb, the present active indicative of $\epsilon\chi\epsilon\iota$, “if anyone has.” The static present represents a circumstance which is assumed as perpetually existing, people have ears. The point is: everyone has an ear. Everyone, therefore, has the ability to understand, to comprehend, to learn. When it says, "If anyone has an ear," it means a lot more than just having ears, it means having the ability to learn. There is no excuse for any member of the human race not understanding what is going on historically. The problem is that just because we have the apparatus for learning doesn't mean that we are going to learn. Volition is the problem. Some people are unteachable, they don't want to learn. Having ears means having the potential to learn and one of the worst things that can happen to anyone in life is to not be curious about anything.

"If anyone has an ear." The active voice: believers in the Tribulation produce the action in this case. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the assumed premise.

With it we have the accusative singular direct object from the noun ouj, the word for ear. As an organ of hearing the ear represents the principle of perception and, of course, inasmuch as no one earns or deserves the right to have an ear the ear represents non-meritorious perspicacity. Much of the learning at the time of writing of the book of Revelation depended upon hearing and concentrating on what was being taught. Therefore the possession of ears is analogous to the function of GAP, the perception of Bible doctrine through a grace system. Part of logistical grace is the divine provision for the believer to learn doctrine. The assumption, then, of the protasis is that any believer in the last half of the Tribulation has received as a part of logistical grace the opportunity to learn doctrine by which he can make right decisions from a position of strength in time of historical disaster. Furthermore he can maintain control of his life and he can have a personal sense of destiny by which he advances to maturity and glorifies the Lord Jesus Christ in whatever is left of his life in time. None of this is possible apart from the consistent and intensified perception of Bible doctrine.

Principle: Momentum meets the exigencies of life. A learner will be a doer, a learner will be a person making right decisions and right orientation to life.

Something that should be emphasised in our study of historical trends is the fact that historical crisis and historical disaster always provides an opportunity for people who would otherwise never be known in history. They rise to the front. Any believer in the last half of the Tribulation who after salvation has made right decisions on a daily basis are going to be the men of the hour. Right decisions from a position of strength prepares one for historical disaster. Our right decisions have to do with momentum in the system. Our relationship to Bible doctrine in the system, Gate four, determines our relationship to the Lord because the one thing that the Lord uses in promotion is virtue.

All virtue begins at gate four: enforced and genuine humility. Humility is always directed toward authority. It is the basis of all virtue. Humility is never directed toward freedom. Virtues do not begin with freedom, freedom is merely the environment for expressing them. Humility is always directed toward authority: authority that is unfair, unjust, or authority that is fair and just; antithetical systems of authority but authority nevertheless. Some of the greatest testings in life come from the fact that people cannot handle authority, and if you can't handle authority you can't handle freedom because whether we use freedom properly or not is determined by our attitude toward authority. Authority isn't always fair and many of the authority tests come from authority that isn't fair. We cannot learn unless we have a respect for authority and understand authority as a principle, not as a person or persons with whom we have contact, and often unfavourable contact. Authority is not a person. People often hate police officers. That is because they have rejected authority and therefore they have no virtue. The police officer represents authority and therefore they hate the police officer. When a nation is overtaken by a crisis or historical disaster, if that nation is generally anti-authority the nation is destroyed. If that nation is pro-authority they are pulled together and they survive.

It is true of us as individuals. We are greater for recognition of authority than we are for using freedom. The utilisation of freedom in itself is nothing, it is the basis by which we approach that freedom that is important. You cannot learn Bible doctrine unless you have an ear. The ear is the perceptive system, but it is more than that. The ear indicates that there must first of all be a recognition of authority, the most basic virtue in life.

Remember: momentum meets the exigencies of life. Loss of momentum from doctrinal perception means failure in historical disaster. The believers who are losers in the last half of the Tribulation are going to be overwhelmed by their circumstances. They do not have confidence in God because the only believers who have confidence in God are those who are consistent in the perception of doctrine. Consistency is the important factor.

We note next the aorist active imperative of the verb akouo which means to hear, and it is used for perception of doctrine, daily perception of doctrine. It means perception under normal times, perception under difficult times preparing for historical disaster. "If any man has an ear, let him hear." Why? Because your daily perception of doctrine is your biggest asset because it produces motivational virtue. Motivational virtue is confidence in God. For example, if you are getting a raw deal from a boss, or if someone maltreats you, someone is unfair and unjust; if you have confidence in God, so what! If your confidence is in God from your daily perception of doctrine and you are getting a raw deal you have to go back to a basic principle in your life: God has a plan for your life, there are no accidents in the Christian life, and if you have confidence in God there is no such thing as unfairness because God isn't unfair and He uses the unfairness of man to promote His people. Right decisions from a position of strength in our daily normal lives is the only preparation for the crisis and you don't get that way by an occasional visit to church or an occasional flicking of the button of a tape recorder.

The constative aorist tense is for a fact or action extended over a period of time, the last half of the Tribulation. It takes positive volition toward doctrine and gathers it up into a single whole. It takes every day under all circumstances no matter what is happening to prepare for the crisis.

The third person suffix of the verb refers to the believer living in the time of the eschatology of the devil's desperation, the last half of the Tribulation. It applies to believers of all dispensations, that is why it is in the Bible. By interpretation this is eschatology; by application it belongs to you and to me today. The imperative mood expresses and appeal to the volition of the believer living in the last half of the Tribulation but it is there for our study as an appeal to us. This is an imperative of command, it is a divine mandate to the believer that living in time every moment is a challenge. Life is a challenge, the ups and downs of life are a challenge.

The omission of the phrase found in chapters two and three, “what the Spirit saith to the churches”, is another confirmation of that eschatological doctrine that the church does not go through the Tribulation but is resurrected prior to Daniel’s seventieth week. God never confuses or mixes His plan, He always keeps Israel and the Church separate. God’s plan for the royal family or Church Age believers always includes born-again Jews but God’s plan for Israel does not include born-again Gentiles.

So once the royal family is completed and resurrected under the title of the Rapture of the Church “let him hear” is the mandate. Such a mandate we have in the Church Age for without Bible doctrine we are never going to make it and without Bible doctrine we cannot approach historical disaster with a personal sense of destiny.

Verse 10 in the King James version doesn’t even sound as though it belongs here. It is confusing and is not what the Greek says. In verse 9 we saw the mandate: gate four, keep on doctrine, every day, momentum, momentum, momentum. Make good decisions from a position of strength, have control of your life, and as a result have personal sense of destiny. Now what happens if you fail to do this? This is the story we have in this passage. First of all we have the loss of a personal sense of destiny through the function of violence, violence in the sense of evil.

We begin with the conditional particle e)l, “If” (and this is introducing a first class condition), an assumption or a premise from the viewpoint of reality. With this we have the nominative singular subject from the indefinite pronoun tij (without an accent. With an accent on it it means who, what, or why) which defines a specific category. The category is terrorists, war lords, criminals, mercenaries and gangsters. All of those in the last half of the Tribulation who throw off the harness of establishment and civilisation and practice violence apart from the authority of establishment are included. The authority of establishment includes the police officer and the soldier representing his country in combat but it does not include the mercenary who fights for profit and plunder. Tij represents the category: those who resort to unlawful use of violence become the victims of violence.

Violence never solves problems. Instead it results in loss of control of one’s life plus a loss of a personal sense of destiny. Mercenaries use violence not as a representative of their own nation but for profit or plunder, for the sheer love of killing. Hence, this is not dealing with the military service for one’s country or the function of the police officer in line of duty, it is dealing with lawless people who use violence for pleasure, for profit, for plunder. The use of the word “pleasure” here speaks of that form of arrogance which derives pleasure from the use of violence to bully, to intimidate, to control others apart from establishment authority.

Next we have the preposition e)ij plus the accusative of the noun a)ixmalosia which means captivity, “into captivity.” The absence of a verb here means that this is an obvious ellipsis and the question arises: what verb denotes the true meaning of the passage. Suggested translation: "If anyone leads others into captivity." That seems to be the best verb to use for this particular ellipsis. Ellipsis always demands the insertion of a verb to complete the idea. The unlawful use of violence deprives of freedom, privacy and property, three things to which you have a God-given right.

The next phrase starts out with the preposition e)j plus the accusative singular of a)ichmalosia, the same thing again. It includes any form of violence, criminal action, which enslaves, imprisons, destroys the freedom, the property, the life of others. This can be construed as enslavement, false imprisonment, being held as hostages by terrorist groups. It can include religious or political groups who seize for the exploitation of their political or religious activities, whatever their objective happens to be. It also is to seize for the exploitation in the field of prostitution. This is the first conditional clause that observes the use of violence to deprive people of their freedom, their property and their life. The people who do this always have a purpose. They do this to advance themselves but they have made bad decisions from a position of weakness, they have lost control of their own lives, they have no personal sense of destiny, no confidence in God, no courage toward man and circumstances.

The second conditional clause: we have e)i again, and while the first conditional clause deprives others of freedom and property the second conditional clause uses violence to deprive people of their lives. Note the word "deprive" in contrast to the word "defend" in this passage. We do have the right to defend our freedom, our property and our lives. The principle: violence deprives, freedom defends. This is why we have both law enforcement and the military establishment to defend our freedom from both domestic and foreign violence. So we have the conditional particle e)i introducing a protasis of a first class condition, an assumption or premise from the viewpoint of reality, if and it is true.

Next we have the nominative singular of tij again, the indefinite pronoun which represents a category, the same category: criminals, gangsters, mercenaries, terrorists, and paramilitary groups, religious and political. These are the ones who throw off the harness of establishment and establishment authority and wallow in the cosmic system where they use violence to deprive others of freedoms, rights, property, lives. Again we translate it, "if anyone". Beyond this the Greek text must be used to correct the translation of the King James version.

Next we have the prepositional phrase e)n plus the instrumental from the noun maxaira. The maxaira is the famous Roman short sword. We translate: "with the sword," "if anyone with the sword." Next is the future active indicative of the verb a)pokteinw which means to kill, "if anyone shall kill with the sword." The predictive future tense anticipates what is expected to occur in the last half of the Tribulation: violence and more violence. The active voice: criminals, gangsters, terrorists, etc. produce the action of the verb in the last half of the Tribulation. The indicative mood is used for the reality of the assumption or premise of the first class condition, hence declarative for the reality of future violence in the last half of the Tribulation. This is not the use of weapons legitimately.

Then we have the impersonal verb of compulsion or unavoidable fate, dei, and it is translated “must.” Next comes the accusative singular of general reference from the intensive pronoun a)utoj, translated “he,” “he must,” followed by the aorist passive infinitive of a)pokteinw, “he must be killed.” The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The passive voice: the subject receives the action of the verb under the principle of living by violence resulting in dying by violence. The infinitive is the infinitive of result. In other words, those who function under the principle of unlawful terror are going to be killed by unlawful terror. Next comes the preposition e)n plus the instrumental singular of maxaira again, meaning “by the sword,” “must be killed by the sword.”

The divine policy regarding the use of unlawful violence goes all the way back to Genesis 9:5,6, “Most emphatically I will require your lifeblood; I will require an accounting from every animal [who murders] and every man [who murders], from the hand of every man his brother I will demand the life of man.”

That is capital punishment going through judicial procedure, not through a mob taking the law into its own hands.

“Whoever sheds man’s blood, by man his blood will be shed,” that is the judicial modus operandi resulting in the establishment of guilt and the administration of capital punishment. When there is no capital punishment crime is motivated to continue using violence. The only way to stop criminals is to put their own lives on the line.

Matthew 26:52, Peter has just done the dumb thing, he has tried to stop our Lord from going to the cross and dying for our sins. The Lord has explained it all to him but he never caught on. He is going to defend the Lord. When the temple guard came out to take our Lord in then garden out came the sword. He is brave and stupid. He cut off an ear, using violence to solve a problem, but what he was really doing was slowing down the plan.

“Then Jesus said to him [Peter], Return your sword to its scabbard; for all who draw the sword [the unlawful use of violence, crime],” Peter is not a soldier, he is not in law enforcement, and he is not defending his personal property, “will die by the sword,” either capital punishment from a system of justice or the inevitable result of God’s law: those who live by violence will inevitably die by violence. Romans 13:3,4 adds to this. Exodus 21:12 adds — “He who strikes a man so that he dies shall definitely be put to death.” Numbers 35:30 — “If anyone murders a person, the murderer shall be put to death on the evidence of witnesses (plural), however no person shall be put to death on the evidence of one person.” The court of final appeal is found in Romans 12:19 — “Never take your own revenge, instead give place to punishment from the justice of God, for it stands written, ‘Punishment belongs to me, I will repay, says the Lord.’ That, of course, is to cool us down when we get hot-headed.

The last phrase of verse 10 becomes extremely important to us because this is the only way we are ever going to put it together. It should be translated, “In these circumstances” or “under these circumstances.” It is the adverb of place, w(de, and it is an adverb used as an idiom. It means “under these circumstances.” Under the historical circumstances in which we find ourselves. Next we have the verb, the present active indicative of e)imi, the verb to be, “in these circumstances a personal sense of destiny is,” present linear aktionsart, is and always will be. What is a personal sense of destiny in the time of the devil’s desperation, the last half of the Tribulation? What is a personal sense of destiny in the time that we are facing in the near future, historical disaster? In these circumstances a personal sense of destiny is. And then we have the predicate nominative u(pomonh. The personal sense of destiny, the active voice of e)imi, produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is a declarative for the reality of a fact: in the most adverse circumstances of life, in the worst circumstances of life, whether it is a personal disaster, a national disaster, a global disaster, you can have a personal sense of destiny, you can have confidence in God, you can have courage toward man and circumstances. You don’t have to fall apart, become emotional, become irrational, or have a nervous breakdown. You can face up, and that is what we have in the last part of this verse. What is u(pomonh? It means endurance, fortitude, steadfastness, perseverance. This is a technical reference to the function of the three stages of the faith-rest drill.

Then we have the connective conjunction kai and the predicate nominative from the noun pistij. Ordinarily pistij means faith. Actually it has three meanings. In the active sense means trust, confidence, faith. In the attributive sense it means that which causes faith or trust — faithfulness or reliability. In the passive sense it means what is believed, hence it means doctrine, the body of faith. Number three is the one that is used here. The possessive genitive of a(gioj follows, “the doctrine of [belonging to] the saints [believers].”

“under these circumstances, a personal sense of destiny, is [the function of the faith-rest drill] the steadfastness, the constant courage, and the doctrine belonging to the saints.”

There is your personal sense of destiny: the doctrine you have learned. The only way to approach the coming disaster is to take in doctrine consistently every day. That is the only answer; that is the only hope.

Translation: “If anyone [those who use unlawful violence] leads others into captivity he will go into captivity: if anyone [those who use unlawful violence] shall kill with the sword he must be killed with the sword. In these circumstances a personal sense of destiny is the fortitude, the steadfastness, and the doctrine belonging to the saints.”

We are now about to study a Jewish dictator who is contemporary with the dictator of the revived Roman empire. The Jewish dictator is not a military genius but he is, however, a political genius and a religious leader passing himself off as Messiah. Like the first dictator we have studied there is a time limitation on this man’s power, the last three and a half years of the Tribulation.

We begin verse 11 with the conjunction kai in the Greek. Here it is the sequential use of the conjunction and is correctly translated “then” instead of “and.” With this we have the aorist active indicative of the verb o(raw which means to see, “Then I saw.” And with this we have the accusative neuter singular direct object from several words, first of all the adjective a)lloj, meaning another of the same kind of dictator. He is not different from the first. There are some minor differences: the first dictator we studied, the dictator of the revived Roman empire is a Gentile; this dictator is a Jew. Outside of that he has the same profile that we have noted in the first dictator. The noun is the same that describes this dictator as the last one, qhrion, which means beast dictator, someone who has no true morality, no honour, no integrity, no sense of responsibility, no virtue, functioning as a dictator.

The verb o(raw in the constative aorist represents an additional vision. The active voice: it is the apostle John who produces the action of the verb. "Then I saw another beast dictator." This is Satan's slave, the Jewish dictator of the nation Israel in the last half of the Tribulation, the time of the devil's desperation.

Next we have a present active participle from the verb a)nabainw which means to come up, to rise to power actually, "Then I saw another beast dictator who rises to power." The pictorial present tense brings into focus a picture of the events in the process of occurrence. This is an eschatological passage but it is used in the grammatical sense of the pictorial present. The active voice: the Jewish dictator of the last half of the Tribulation produces the action. The participle is circumstantial.

We have with this a prepositional phrase which is mistranslated, e)k plus the ablative of source from the noun gh, "out from the land," the land of Israel. This Jewish dictator in the last half of the Tribulation reaches the peak of his power during the eschatology of the devil's desperation. His modus operandi is recorded in greater detail in Daniel 11:36-39.

"Then the king [the Jewish dictator] will do according to his own will [this is an absolute dictatorship], and he will both exalt and glorify himself above every god [this is the character of the dictator as the false prophet Revelation 16:13; 19:20], furthermore he will speak blasphemous things against the God of gods [Jesus Christ as the God of Israel]; consequently he will be successful until the Tribulation has been completed, for what has been decreed [in eternity past] will be accomplished [in time].

"Furthermore he will not understand the God of his fathers [he will not understand the Lord Jesus Christ], nor does he have any desire for women, nor does he recognise any god [he is an atheist]; for he will glorify himself above all.

"Nevertheless he will give honour [a treaty recognition] to the god of fortified cities [the dictator of the revived Roman empire] ...

"Furthermore he will construct a system of defensive fortification with the help of this foreign god [the dictator of the revived Roman empire]; to those who acknowledge him [the worship of the Jewish dictator as Messiah] he will enrich them with great wealth, and he will cause them to rule over the many [the Jews], and he will distribute the land for a profit [price]."

The Messiah when He comes is going to distribute the land according to tribes. The false Messiah distributes the land according to price — whoever pays him the most.

In Revelation 13:11 he is called “another beast dictator.” “Then I saw another beast dictator who rises to power from the land [Israel].” The first thing we notice about this man is not his military genius but the fact that he, too, is a religious genius. Remember that religion is the devil’s ace trump and that religion is the source of all evil. Religion is one of the ways in which Satan rules and administers the rulership of his world. So we have again the connective conjunction kai, translated “and,” plus the perfect active indicative of the verb e)w, “and he had.”

Then we have the accusative plural direct object from the noun keraj with the adjective numeral duw, “two horns.” Then the accusative neuter plural from o(moioj sets up a comparison, “like,” plus the dative of person or thing, a)rnion, “like the Lamb,” a)rnion referring to our Lord Jesus Christ. In Revelation 5:6 we noted that Jesus as the Messiah is the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world, and He is said to have seven horns. We noted there that the Lamb was the Lord Jesus Christ controlling history. The lamb with two horns is a dictator controlling a very simple empire in the Tribulation. Since the horn symbolises human power and authority the two horns of the lamb represent the civil and the religious power of this Jewish dictator. He is the lamb with two horns. He is said to rise to power from the lamb, “and he had to horns like a lamb.” In Revelation 5:6 in contrast Jesus Christ, the true Messiah is said to have been killed as a sacrifice and He is now said to be standing in the middle of the throne with the four angelic heralds, and in the middle of the angelic staff He had seven horns. These seven horns include, first of all Jesus Christ controlling history. He controlled history in seven ways: the age of positive volition in the garden of Eden; the age of negative volition, from the fall of man to the fall of Babylon, the first United Nations; the dispensation of nationalism, the period of Gentile nations; the dispensation of Israel; the Church Age; the Tribulation; the Millennium. That adds up to His seven horns; Jesus Christ controls history.

The two horns of the Jewish dictator, again, represent his function as false Messiah over Judaism and as dictator over Israel. Translation: “Then I saw another beast dictator who rises to power from the land; and he had two horns like a lamb.” In passing himself off as Messiah to Israel this dictator is able to explain to us several passage of scripture.

Genesis 49:16, Why doesn’t Dan have representation among Jewish evangelists in the Tribulation? “Dan shall rule his people,” the dictator of Israel in the Tribulation is from the tribe of Dan. Dan is very apostate during this period, “as one of the tribes of Israel,” this explains why Dan is omitted from the list of Revelation chapter seven. Dan is also omitted from the genealogy of 1 Chronicles chapters 2-10. Dan was the first tribe to become involved in idolatry — Judges 18:30, and the last tribe to recover their inheritance in Joshua 19:47-49. So Dan is famous for apostasy and out of the tribe of Dan comes the dictator we are studying.

Verse 17, “Dan shall be a serpent on the road, a viper along the path, that strikes the horse’s heels,” the horse is Israel in the Tribulation, “so that the rider tumbles backwards,” the rider is Jewish believers living in Israel during the last half of the Tribulation.

Verse 18 is the cry of Jewish believers living in Israel during the last half of the Tribulation, "O Lord, I wait for your deliverance." That will be their constant prayer.

The Jewish dictator, then, comes from the tribe of Dan which is famous for its apostasy in the past and infamous for its apostasy in the Tribulation. Religion is always the worst persecutor of true believers. Satan, the author of religion, uses this instrument in the hands of this dictator to neutralise and destroy Jewish believers in the Tribulation.

Matthew 24:21, one horn is the political power of Dan as we have noted in Genesis, the other horn of the dictator is here in verses 21-27.

"For at that time [the last half of the Tribulation] there will be great tribulation, such as has not occurred since the beginning of human history [the kosmoj], nor ever will occur. And unless those days [the time of the devil's desperation] had been cut short, no human life would have been delivered; but for the sake of the elect to privilege [Jews who are believers and alive at the second advent] those days shall be cut short. At that time [after the born-again Jews have reached the high desert country in the middle of the Tribulation] if anyone says to you [during the last half of the Tribulation], 'Behold, here is the Messiah,' [believers have to come to the point in time of disaster where they can distinguish between what is true and what is false] or 'There is the Messiah', do not believe that person."

In other words, people who teach what is false must not be believed. How can you tell the difference? Maximum perception of Bible doctrine gives the ability to distinguish the true from the false. Those who fail to learn doctrine will be deceived. How can these people tell that Messiah has not come? They know all of the signs of the second advent, including the fact that the entire earth will be covered with a great light, "Behold, every eye shall see Him." That is one of seven biblical concepts by which they can tell. Failure to understand that particular point of eschatology means that they will be martyred for their stupidity.

"For many false Christs and also false prophets will appear and will show great miracles and extra-natural phenomena." If there is anything that impresses the believer who is negative toward doctrine it is a miracle. It is something he can't explain and he is always impressed by something he can't explain instead of being impressed by what is easy to understand in Bible doctrine. So there will be very emotional people and they will be impressed by the miracles, "to deceive, even the elected to privilege [Jewish believers living in that place of refuge in the mountains of Edom, Moab, and Ammon], if that were possible," third class condition: whether it is possible or not depends entirely on whether the believers have enough doctrine or not.

"Behold, I have told you in advance." In other words, they are to understand the eschatology because eschatology prepares for future events.

"Consequently, if they shall say to you, 'Behold, there he is out in the desert,' do not go [do not leave your place of refuge], or 'Behold, here he is in one of the inner rooms,' do not believe that propaganda." Why? You will know when Christ returns.

“For just as lightning comes from the east, and flashes to the west, so the coming of the Son of Man will be.”

Just as lightning can be seen by all, so also everyone will see the second advent — Revelation 1:7. Furthermore, the second advent, like lightning, will occur quickly, according to Revelation 22:7, 12. In other words, there is no excuse for believers who are saved in the first part of the Tribulation and who have used the faith-rest drill to be lured out by propaganda. This dictator has two horns. One horn is his great civil ability, his other horn is his great religious leadership. In historical crisis God has always provided a way of escape. In the first half of the Tribulation believers have escaped to Edom, Moab, and Ammon; they are up there in the high ground and they are there because they have utilised the three stages of the faith-rest drill. In the third stage they have made the proper conclusion. But being there for another three and a half years people have a tendency to become bored once they have succeeded in the crisis, and they fail to realise that you must keep going with doctrine and that you are going to be tested. So these people become a little lazy about doctrine, a little indifferent, and they get bored. Along comes someone who says that Christ has returned, and that they should come down. If they come down they will be captured and martyred, and so in order to avoid that they are warned: ‘Learn to distinguish what is true [Bible doctrine] from what is false.’ And you can’t do it unless you are prepared by day-by-day-by-day perception of Bible doctrine. You never know what portion of the Word of God is going to be important to you. One slip into the cosmic system and believers will succumb to the propaganda of the Jewish dictator, and these are the ones who are martyred in the last half of the Tribulation.

The principle that must be emphasised: No believer can think or discern beyond the inventory of his ideas. Therefore the daily perception of doctrine will provide for us the necessary inventory of ideas so that we can be winners both in personal and in historical disaster. We are limited in the application of doctrine: we cannot apply what we do not know. People think in terms of their inventory of ideas, therefore the importance of Bible doctrine resident in the soul to provide the right inventory and to fill up all of those shelves with application for every situation and circumstance in life, whether prosperity or disaster.

At the end of verse 11 we have Satan getting into the picture because this servant of the devil, this dictator, has the rhetoric of Satan. We have the conjunction kai which has an adversative connotation here. Therefore we translate it “but” instead of the usual “and.” With this we have the imperfect active indicative of the verb lalew. It means to speak in a flowing manner and is used here for the connotation of eloquence. Ordinarily the imperfect tense denotes linear aktionsart in past time. The imperfect differs from the aorist in representing a process rather than a simple event. The imperfect differs also from the perfect tense in that it represents a process but has no connotation of the completion of that process. The imperfect fails to imply the attainment of the end to which the progress is made. This is therefore called an inceptive imperfect, denoting the beginning of the process or, as in the case of eschatology, an action on the point of occurring. The active voice: the dictator of the Jewish nation is another one of those great public speakers of the Tribulation. Along with the first dictator he has tremendous skill in the field of communication of ideas. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the dictator's Satanic rhetoric in the future.

With this we have the comparative particle o(j, translated "like," and with it the appositional nominative from drakwn, "dragon," and dragon refers to Satan. Translation: "but he kept speaking like the dragon." Total cosmic involvement gave this Jewish dictator the genius of Satan in communicating his ideas. His ideas are false, he is locked into the cosmic system. As an unbeliever this Jewish dictator is the recipient of both demon influence and demon possession in the cosmic system, therefore he is a brilliant salesman of the Satanic plan.

Again, the principle that we want to remember is that no one can think beyond the inventory of his ideas. Only the daily perception of doctrine will provide the necessary inventory of ideas to cope with both personal and historical disaster. Therefore the importance of Bible doctrine to provide that inventory so that we can be winners in time of historical disaster.

Principle: no believer can think beyond the inventory of his ideas

This is true of people in general. When people are working in a certain kind of business, in a certain kind of profession, in any kind of an organisation, no one has the capacity to think beyond the inventory of his ideas. If the idea isn't there, the thought is not there; if the thought is not there, the ability is not there. This is why we see people get promoted beyond their capacity. But we want to apply the principle specifically to the believer.

1. When the believer is faced with personal or historical disaster he must be able to cope with the problem or problems from his own personal inventory. No believer should be dependant on others when it comes to personal or historical disaster. This does not mean he will not receive encouragement from others but the point is that in disaster you yourself as an individual are isolated. When the believer has faithfully taken in doctrine and added to his inventory and passed all of his tests he has a full inventory when he moves into disaster; and there is nothing that he cannot handle, he is totally and completely spiritually self-sustaining. He has prepared himself by good decisions from a position of strength.

2. No one solves his problems by relying on the inventory of someone else's ideas. You may take some good advice and have an immediate solution because you took that advice, but it was someone else's advice, it was not your application of doctrine. Therefore you did not gain any strength from it, only the person who gave you good advice. Of course, if the person gives you bad advice then they are in trouble with you.

3. Therefore the necessity for maintaining a large personal inventory of doctrinal principles, categories and rationales for every situation in life — including happiness.

4. Only the daily perception of doctrine will accumulate the necessary inventory of ideas by which we can cope with personal and historical disaster.

5. The winner in disaster can make the right application of doctrine to his circumstances. That is because in time of prosperity he has been consistent in the accumulation of a large inventory of Bible doctrine. Therefore he makes right decisions from a position of strength, he maintains control of his own life in disaster, and even in the worst of historical disasters he has a personal sense of destiny.

Verse 12, the forum and religious policies of this Jewish dictator. We have the emphatic use of the conjunction kai translated "In fact." With this we have the present active indicative of the verb poiew, which we will translate here "exercises." The reason for that translation is the accusative singular direct object of e)cousia, he "exercises authority." The present tense is a perfective present, it denotes a continuation of existing results from the treaty between the revived Roman empire and the state of Israel in the last half of the Tribulation. Here it denotes a fact which has come to be in the past but is emphasised as a present reality. The active voice: the dictator of Israel in the Tribulation produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the future eschatological reality of the exercise of great power on the part of the Jewish dictator as the result of his treaty with the revived Roman empire.

The dictator now feels strong. Before he was very weak because he realised the four spheres of influence were about to destroy him, he couldn't hold out against them. But as soon as he has a treaty he feels strong, he has depended upon the help of a foreign power.

Next we have a possessive genitive from three Greek words: the definite article tou, followed by prwtj, followed by qhrion, "the first beast dictator," the Gentile dictator of the revived Roman empire. one adjective comes next in the Greek that modifies e)cousia, and that is paj, "all."

"in fact he [the Jewish dictator] exercises all the authority of the first beast dictator," which means that in the last half of the Tribulation there is a definite treaty between the state of Israel and the revived Roman empire.

Then there is another phrase, an improper preposition, e)nw pion plus the intensive pronoun a)utoj, "in place of him" or "on his behalf." This indicates an alliance between the Gentile dictator of the revived Roman empire and the Jewish dictator of the state of Israel during the time of the devil's desperation.

In his foreign policy, then, the Jewish dictator makes an alliance with this prophetic Roman empire and he exercise all of the authority [religious] of the Roman dictator in the function of that large and great ecumenical religious system. The basis of the treaty, then, between this revived Roman empire and the state of Israel is religion, the ecumenical religious system, and under the provision of the treaty the state of Israel adopts ecumenical religion as its system. That means that traditional Judaism in Jerusalem has to be set aside and there in the temple in Jerusalem the great statue of the dictator is set up that is called the abomination of desolation — the signal for believers of the first half of the Tribulation to get out and into the mountains of Edom, Moab and Ammon where they will be safe unless they listen to some of the propaganda. The Jews who have a good inventory of doctrinal concepts obey the command. There will also be some emotional believers who will decide to stay and fight. All Jewish believers who disobey this command will be killed. Again you see the principle: you must have a good inventory of ideas; you must have doctrine and you must be able to rightly divide the Word of truth. That stability, therefore, becomes one of the great characteristics of the believer who has a maximum inventory of ideas through the daily intake of doctrine.

The cosmic system is also designed to make the believer fanatical. This is one of the greatest problems with believers, they become totally and completely fanatical and in this way they ape every characteristic of dictatorship that we are studying. The fanatical believer is only different from the evil dictator in degree, otherwise there is no difference between a fanatical arrogant believer and any dictator that has ever lived. Fanaticism is defined as zeal without knowledge, no inventory of ideas. The believer cannot think, again, beyond his inventory. Fanaticism by-passes or ignores the principle of virtue-first. The fanatic has no virtue, only arrogance. Hence, fanaticism is irresponsible arrogance without even the motivational virtue of gate 5 or the functional virtue of gate 6 in the divine system. Fanaticism is arrogant obsession with self minus doctrinal inculcation, so that cosmic fanaticism and total obsession of self seems to characterise not only the two dictators we are studying in this chapter but also believers living in cosmic one.

We have noted the profile of the beast dictator. The first beast dictator and the second beast dictator have a similar profile with several exceptions. The first beast dictator, the dictator of the revived Roman empire, is a military genius and he gains control of the revived Roman empire in the last half of the Tribulation. He is also a political genius and a religious genius. He also has the ability to appeal to the stupid. The stupid are always impressed by miracles. The lower your inventory of truth the more you are impressed by Satanic miracles and, of course, Satan is in the miracle business. He communicates this function to his servants, special servants who are in the public eye. Of course this is the appeal to emotionalism in the masses.

We have noted that the majority of people never control anything; we have noted that public opinion is almost totally meaningless and can only bully the weak. But this also means that public opinion is always impressed by what they cannot understand since they have no inventory of truth. Miracles were performed in the Old Testament in times of apostasy, like the apostate generation of the Exodus. Miracles were performed by our Lord in a time of apostasy, the apostasy of Israel during the first advent of Christ. Miracles are not a sign of power except in the function of our Lord's fourteen miracles which were given as a sign of His Messiahship. People are always impressed by miracles because they are stupid, because they are emotional, and therefore they have no inventory of Bible doctrine. Today there is no gift of miracles, and yet we find many people in our generation alleging to have the power of miracles. These people are making an allegation which is not true and they are being used by Satan in the cosmic system. They do perform acts of Satanic function and they are all designed with one thing in mind: to keep you as a believer from having an inventory of Bible doctrine in your soul. Those who worship power and idolise evil will never appreciate freedom or have any capacity for happiness, and this not only includes the dictators who rule countries today but it includes the dictator in the pew, the arrogant born-again believer living in the cosmic system. When people do not have truth or doctrine they are always impressed with the wrong things and they always distort the truth.

We noted that the dictator of the revived Roman empire had a dynamic in the field of verbal communication. So does our second dictator. The ability to communicate, of course, is one of the most important functions in life and the ability to communicate may mean the ability to communicate truth or what is false — to be persuasive in either case. As far as these dictators are concerned they communicate what is false to further eliminate any inventory of Bible doctrine in the soul. Of course, one nice thing about all human power is that it has a time limitation.

We have noted in the past that there is no power in public opinion. Public opinion caters to the viewpoint of the majority and the majority have no power or control in history. A careful study of history indicates that it is always a well-organised minority that controls. Illustration: The French revolution; the communist minority in the Russian revolution; the Nazis were a minority in Germany. Public opinion always reacts to these minorities but public opinion has no organisation, no power; public opinion is news today and gone tomorrow. Public opinion has no power against organised minorities and their depredation. Public opinion, therefore, can only bully the weak and flatter the successful; it has no power with the communists, for example, who ignore it.

One thing we have not brought together in the profile of the dictators we are studying is the fact that the power of the dictator prevents him from thinking beyond the inventory of his own ideas. The corrupting influence of power not only erases the norms of divine establishment and supersedes the standards of category #1 truth, the laws of divine establishment, with some terrible use of power but it hinders the cosmic dictator actually utilising any previous inventory of honourable principles that he may have possessed in his lifetime. This explains the conflict between organised evil as represented in the dictatorship and disorganised evil of free enterprise represented by crime, homosexuality and crusader arrogance. While disorganised evil and degeneracy coexist together with Christianity organised evil cannot tolerate Christianity even as organised evil does not tolerate degeneracy. A careful study of history will see that this is often the case. Remember also that morality can be just as much a part of degeneracy as immorality. The key to degeneracy is the study of arrogance we have made, the twelve gates of cosmic one.

We note in verse 12 that “he [the Jewish dictator exercises all the authority [temporal and religious in Israel] of the first beast dictator on his behalf, and he forces the land ...” He is going to force upon them a new religious system. The basis for the treaty between the revived Roman empire and the state of Israel in the last half of the Tribulation is really ecumenical religion, and under the provision of the treaty the state of Israel adopts this ecumenical system of the revived Roman empire.

At this time we must turn to Daniel chapter 12 to see something of the repercussions of accepting this ecumenical religion.

Daniel 12:11, “And from the time [the middle of the Tribulation] that the regular sacrifice is abolished.” One of the first things that the dictator must do is to order the abolishing of the sacrifices where the five categories of Levitical sacrifices are offered, speaking of the doctrines of propitiation, unlimited atonement, the various categories of soteriology and the basis for the rebound technique. Those sacrifices are offered in the Tribulation once the temple is reconstructed. Then the dictator suddenly decides that no longer will animal sacrifices be offered. Animal sacrifices, of course, were merely a way of teaching the doctrines of Christology and soteriology before the completion of the canon of scripture, “and the abomination of desolation [a statue of the dictator of the revived Roman empire] is set up, there will be then 1,290 days [the last three and a half years of the Tribulation, the same as the 42 months of Revelation 13:5].”

The first 45 days of the Millennium are now brought into focus in Daniel 12:12 — “How blessed [happy] is he [the Jewish believer in the last half of the Tribulation who keeps waiting, the dynamic function of the three stages of the faith-rest drill] and therefore attains [still lives] during the 1,335 days!” The difference between the 1,335 days and the 1,290 days of the last half of the Tribulation is 45 days, so these are the 45 days into the Millennium. At that time the Jewish believers will observe the first feast of the Tabernacles which portrays the Millennium.

This celebration is actually described in Zechariah 14:16 — “Then it will come to pass that everyone who is left of all the nations that went up against Jerusalem [certain armies that attacked Jerusalem in the Armageddon campaign] will go from year to year to worship the King, the Lord of the armies, and to celebrate the feast of the Tabernacles.” (The feast of the Tabernacles is described in Leviticus 23:33-43) While this verse emphasises Gentile believers who survive the Tribulation and the baptism of fire of Matthew 25 there are also Jewish believers who survive and they are mentioned in Ezekiel 20:34-38. They are the ones who enjoy those extra 45 days which were mentioned in Daniel 12:12.

Returning to Revelation 13:12 we note the religious policy of the dictator of the revived Roman empire. So far in our passage: “In fact he [the Jewish dictator] exercises all the authority [both temporal and religious in Israel] of the first dictator on his behalf ...”

We resume with a connective conjunction kai, translated “and” or “then.” Next is the present active indicative of the verb poiew. Generally poiew means to do, to make, to manufacture. Here it means to force. The present tense is a perfective present, it denotes the continuation of existing results. It denotes the abuse of this power. Dictators generally are non-enlightened, they abuse their power. Very few men in history have had that much power without abusing it. The active voice is a causative active voice and that it where we get the translation “he forces.” The indicative mood is potential indicating a status or condition.

Next we have the accusative singular direct object from the noun gh, referring here to the land of Israel in the last half of the Tribulation, “and he forces the land.” This is part of the double accusative direct object of personal and impersonal object. Next is an articular present active participle from the verb katoikew which means to reside or to be a citizen, referring to the citizens of the land, “then he forces the land and those who reside in it.” The definite article in the accusative plural is used as a direct object and as a demonstrative pronoun. It refers to the citizens living in the future in the state of Israel. The descriptive present tense is for the citizenship now performing an action, they are being acted upon by the abuse of power. The active voice: the Jews living in Israel are going to be the subject of the action. They produce the action of being citizens in a dictatorship and citizens in a dictatorship have restricted freedom or no freedom, depending upon their compliance to the policies of the dictator. In other words, the dictator is using and abusing his power with regard to the citizens of the state of Israel in the future. The participle is circumstantial. With this we have a prepositional phrase, en plus the locative of a)utoj, “in it,” “and those who reside in it [the state of Israel].”

Next we have the purpose clause. We have the conjunction i(na to introduce a semi-final purpose clause. A semi-final purpose clause denotes the direction of the action in the main verb to a given result which is sought for or anticipated. It is sought for in this case. The dictator is trying to use his power to force people to worship in the ecumenical religious system of the revived Roman empire.

There is a principle here: No one can force you to worship apart from your own free will. The key to worship is volition, free will. You have the right to accept or reject what is taught, you have the right to worship or not to worship, you have the right to choose to serve under the Lord’s divine system [the divine dynasphere] or not. You must have, of course, privacy for all of this. The major principle is your personal freedom. If you are ever going to be spiritually self-sustaining you must make your own decisions from a position of strength. You must have a personal control of your life and a personal sense of destiny, and you cannot do that unless you have your privacy.

This beast dictator comes along and he says that all religions in the state of Israel are wiped out. That would include the cultural religion which is Judaism. Today Judaism is a cultural religion. Why? Because they have ritual without reality. There will also be certain Jews who have personally accepted Christ as saviour, they are evangelised as we have seen in Revelation chapter seven and we will get additional information in chapter fourteen. And then there are a certain number of other religions. There is a religious tolerance until this treaty with the dictator of the revived Roman empire when everyone must then conform to the ecumenical religious system of the dictator. Everyone will come in and bow down in the temple to what the Bible calls “the abomination of desolation.”

And so the subject then, “and that they should worship”, the future active indicative of the verb proskunew. Notice that worship follows force. Any time that any church, any group, any organisation, demands that you must believe this or else is out of line. The truth must be communicated but you have the option of accepting or rejecting that truth. No one has the right to force you and when people are forced to accept the truth then you have organised evil, you no longer have the function of freedom. The whole purpose of Christianity is to foster freedom and Christianity actually says a person can accept or reject Christ and that it is a person's personal business. If a person accepts Christ he must always keep his doctrine straight and never confuse Christianity with the state. The state must always be separate from Christianity. Therefore Christians have no right to enter into civil disobedience, "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's." It must be recognised that everyone has a right to be wrong and everyone has a right to be right; everyone has a right to choose for themselves, in fact they must choose for themselves. We are studying dictatorship in terms that say no, you cannot. Occasionally, there are enlightened dictators who are different, like Frederick the Great who even set up an officer's code for the army which demanded that cognisance be given to the claims of Christ on the life and that all virtue in the military must be directly related to the principles of Bible doctrine in the scriptures. He didn't demand that his officers accept Christ as saviour but this was the standard. He also despised socialism in any form. Frederick the Great understood freedom and said it was the motivation for everything in life.

Now we have anti-freedom with these two dictators in this purpose clause, "In fact he [the Jewish dictator] exercises all the authority of the first dictator on his behalf, then he forces the land [Israel] and those who reside in it to worship the first beast dictator." This is the accusative singular direct object of the adjective prwtoj and the noun qhrion.

Then we have Israel becoming a centre of ecumenical religion. We have a descriptive genitive singular from two words: the relative pronoun o(j and a)utoj, "who of him," but translated correctly into English by combining these words to read "whose." Then we have the nominative singular subject plhgh, which is not a wound as such although it can be translated "a mortal wound"; it means a death stroke, a fatal wound. The stroke of death, qanatoj, is a part of the noun and the word formation and it is literally the stroke of death but it means the fatal wound. It is an idiom and is a reference to the historical destruction of the old Roman empire in 476 AD, the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline to Rome as the first Gentile nation to God. And then we have the aorist passive indicative of the noun qerapeuw which means to heal, "the fatal wound was healed." The constative aorist tense views the revival of the Roman empire in the Tribulation in its entirety. The passive voice: the historical Roman empire of the past receives the action of the verb as a prophetic empire in the future. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical trend of the Tribulation presented in the form of eschatological doctrine.

Translation of verse 12 — "In fact he [the dictator of the Jewish state in the Tribulation] exercises all of the authority of the first dictator [the Gentile dictator of the revived Roman empire] on his behalf, then he [the Jewish dictator] forces the land [Israel] and those who reside in it to worship the first beast dictator whose fatal wound [fall of the historical Roman empire] was healed [the revival of the Roman empire in the Tribulation]."

Once you begin to learn Bible doctrine you begin to develop an inventory of ideas, and the sooner you do the sooner you will mature and have the ability to discern, to be spiritually self-sustaining. When the average person sees a miracle or what appears to be a miracle he immediately is terribly impressed and immediately assumes some great ability to the one who performs it, and he even adheres to and believes anything that the one who performs the miracle has to say. This has been the system for religion throughout the centuries. The reason that people are impressed by the superficial, the stupid, and the idiotic is because they have no inventory of ideas and cannot think in terms of principle. No inventory means that you are going to be very emotional, very stupid, very unhappy, and you will never be able to understand what is going on and will be a loser all of your life. That is exactly what is going to happen to a lot of believers and unbelievers in the Tribulation.

In verse 13 we have the amplification of the religious modus operandi of the Jewish dictator and the function of miracles is the title of the verse. In the King James version it says, "And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men."

This evil man, this dictator, this representative of Satan, is performing extra-natural phenomena, miracles, and a lot of people are impressed. With unbelievers you would expect it; with believers you wonder why. Just because someone performs a miracle it doesn't mean that it has anything to do with the truth. The sooner you are able to think in terms of truth, the sooner you have an inventory of ideas related to truth, i.e. doctrine, the sooner you will be spiritually self-sustaining, discerning, and have the ability to see that a miracle in itself is utterly and totally meaningless. It is an amazing fact that while the Jews have always been smart and some of the greatest geniuses of all time, yet "the Jews seek a sign [miracle], the Greeks seek wisdom." Here are the smartest people in the world and they are always looking for a miracle. They are seeking miracles; they are impressed with miracles. If there is anything that neutralises inherent smartness and high IQ it is to look for miracles rather than explanations related to truth and to Bible doctrine. In every age of human history there are always a large number of suckers, idiots, imbeciles, stupid people, born with high IQs but are taken in by miracles. A miracle means nothing unless it is related to the truth. Our Lord performed miracles for one reason: to demonstrate His Messiahship. It was a demonstration of who and what He was and the purpose of our Lord's miracles was to gain a hearing for His message so that people would hear the truth. It is an amazing thing that every nitwit in the world who comes up with a miracle always gets a gathering. The first principle we note in verse 13 is that people are more impressed by what they see than by what they think.

We start with the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, translated "Furthermore." Then the present active indicative of poiew which means here to perform, "Furthermore he [the Jewish dictator] performs." With this we have the accusative neuter plural direct object from two words: an adjective megaj and with that, shmeion, "great miracles." These miracles are performed through the power and the manipulation of Satan as the ruler of this world so that the masses of people living in Israel and Jews throughout the world will actually believe that this is the Messiah. To make a false Messiah appear like a real Messiah requires miracles to deceive the people. People are always deceived by miracles, even someone who promises them miracles — like politicians. Satan produces the miracles to palm off the false prophet, the dictator of Israel, as the false Messiah.

Then we have an illustration of his miracles. We start with the conjunction i(na, generally used for a purpose clause, but this is a most unusual use of a conjunction. It is used here as a substitute for the explanatory infinitive. The infinitive cannot be used without a demonstrative, therefore i(na is substituted and it should be translated, “for example he even.”

Now we have our present active subjunctive in poiew meaning to cause, “he even causes.” The tendential present tense is used for an action which is purposed or attempted though it is not actually taking place at the moment. It is eschatological, in other words. We have the causative active voice for an action through an intermediary means. Satan is the source; the dictator of Israel as the false Messiah is the means. The subjunctive mood is potential implying a future reference, therefore we are looking at an eschatological picture. Then we have the accusative singular direct object from the noun pur, the word for fire, “for example he may even cause [it doesn’t say that he will] fire.”

Here is where why we have i(na with the exegetical infinitive, the present active infinitive of katabainw, “to come down.” This is a pictorial present. The active voice: the dictator, passing himself off as the Messiah, in other words deceiving people, produces the action of the verb. He does it in the last half of the Tribulation when dupes are needed and being enlisted by Satan. The infinitive is the infinitive of intended result, it blends a purpose and a result, and since the result fulfills a deliberate objective to deceive the people into thinking that the dictator is the Messiah it means it is accomplished, there is one born every minute. Then the fire is said to come down from heaven, from the sky, e)k plus the ablative of o)uranoj. This is one time it doesn’t mean heaven, it just means from the direction of the sky. Then there is one more preposition, e)ij plus the accusative of gh, “to the land” or “to the earth.”

One other thing is necessary to complete the concept of the miracle. We have three prepositional phrases in a row: the improper preposition [an improper preposition is really an adverb used as a preposition] e)nw pion plus a)nqrwpoj. A.T. Robertson, a famous Greek exegete in his day, said that Elijah had called down fire from heaven, James and John had once even urged Jesus to do this miracle in Luke 9, the idea being that this is an imitation of that concept. This was obviously an attempt to use a little one-upmanship against the two witnesses, Moses and Elijah. We studied this in Revelation 11:5 where it says that fire shoots out of their mouth and it destroys their enemies. Obviously, here, there is no attempt to portray the truth, only to put down the truth. When the truth is being portrayed it is a legitimate function and the whole objective is not to perform the miracle but to get a hearing for the truth. Here it simply to destroy any hearing of the truth.

The corrected translation: “Furthermore, he [the Jewish dictator] performs great miracles, for example he may even cause fire to come down from heaven to the earth in the presence of the people.”

Miracles minus doctrine are meaningless. Even worse, they are deceptive. Miracles often manifest divine power but very infrequently in the time in which we live. All too often they manifest the power of Satan working through people involved in the cosmic system. And the principle that must always be remembered: God never performs miracles to relieve suffering or pain, otherwise God would provide miracles in every case of suffering or pain and there would be no suffering or pain. Any miracle from God usually alleviates suffering, but that isn't its purpose. Jesus didn't come to the earth to alleviate suffering otherwise all the time He was on the earth no one would have had any pain or suffering. Yet people came to Him suffering and in pain. So it is obvious that our Lord did not perform miracles to alleviate suffering, He performed miracles to call attention to His person and His message. So God performed miracles in the past to give accreditation and hearing to both the Old Testament prophets, the heralds of the first advent, our Lord Jesus Christ, the apostles and prophets prior to the completion of the canon of scripture. We do not live in the age of miracles. People looking for miracles do not understand truth. Often they are merely emotional about their own problems but not rational. Miracles today are being used by Satan himself.

Miracles

1. Miracles without truth are meaningless. They are deceptive.
2. Miracles often manifest divine power. They were so used in the past to accredit Moses as God's messenger. (Satan was in the court that day too, and he performed miracles through the Egyptian priests)
3. God never performs miracles to relieve suffering or pain. His miracles do alleviate suffering but if He does it for you, why not for thousands of others.
4. God performed miracles in the past for one reason: accreditation. He performed miracles so that people would recognise "this prophet is from God". Elijah performed seven miracles; Elisha performed fourteen because he asked for a double portion. Why did God permit Elijah to perform miracles? So that people would listen to his message. It isn't the miracle, it is the message. Miracles do not form an inventory of ideas in your soul. It is doctrine, it is the message that performs the inventory of ideas. Our Lord, on one occasion, even delegated the seventy disciples, gave them the power of miracles and said to them that if the people would not hear their message (they will see the miracle) that they were to pick up their sandal, fill it full of dust, shake it out and leave town. Why? Because they wouldn't hear the message. They would sit around all day and see the miracles. It is the message that is important.
5. The purpose of these miracles in the past and miracles in the Tribulation was so that a message could be given, to give Bible doctrine a hearing, and to keep believers functioning in the plan of God. God assumes that once you have it in writing, the Word of God, you are ready for the fact that instead of miracles God intends for you to use your volition today, tomorrow, the next day, the next day, because the whole purpose of life and the secret to life is what you have in your soul: truth. We start out minus truth in the frontal lobes of the soul and the purpose is to get that truth.

6. Satan performs miracles to distract people; our Lord performed miracles to attract people to the doctrine. Satan performs miracles to distract people from doctrine and to hinder the believer from executing the plan of God. In other words, Satan performs miracles to evangelise for the cosmic system. He doesn't perform them directly, he performs them through cosmic evangelists, believers and unbelievers in the cosmic system.

7. Hence, it is not the miracle performed but the content of the message that accompanies the miracle. If the message is Bible doctrine the miracle is genuine but if the message promotes false doctrine or evangelisation for the cosmic system the miracle is a distraction from Satan.

This leads us to the overall conclusion regarding verse 13: People are more impressed by what they see than by what they know.

In verse 14 we have the resultant function of the deception. We have the connective conjunction kai again, "and." With that we have i(na again plus the subjunctive, the present active subjunctive of planaw, the key to miracles, the purpose of miracles as far as Satan is concerned. It means to deceive. That is the purpose for miracles. And who would be deceived by miracles? Someone who had a very low inventory of ideas, someone who had no inventory of doctrine, no inventory of truth. The customary present tense denotes what habitually occurs when Satan begins to perform miracles through some human being. The active voice: the human being in this case is the dictator of Israel in the last half of the Tribulation; he produces the action; he produces the miracle. The subjunctive mood is potential implying again an eschatological reference. The articular present active participle of katoikew follows and it means those who reside in the land. Here is a perfect case of where the participle is used as a noun rather than as a verb. We translate it: "and so that he [the Jewish dictator] might deceive the residence of the land. We have the preposition e)pi plus gh again and it refers to the land of Israel. The residence of the land would be Jews living in the land of Israel in the last half of the Tribulation.

Then we have another prepositional phrase, dia plus the accusative of shmeion which means miracles or signs, "because of the miracles," and then the accusative neuter plural from the relative pronoun o(j, "which." Another verb follows, the aorist passive indicative of didomi which means to give or to delegate, "which were given." The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The passive voice: the dictator of the state of Israel receives the action of the verb, the power to perform miracles. The indicative mood is declarative, a statement of the origin or source of the miracles as the sign. Then we have the dative singular indirect object from a)utoj, used as a personal pronoun, "to him." In other words, he was given this power to perform these miracles.

Then, again, the aorist active infinitive of poiew, meaning to perform. And, again, the improper prepositional phrase e)nwpiou plus qhrion, "in the presence of the beast dictator." In other words, the beast dictator of Israel performs these miracles in the presence of the dictator of the revived Roman empire, which means that sometime in the last half of the Tribulation after the signing of the treaty the dictator of the revived Roman empire will travel to Jerusalem for the opening of the new religion, the ecumenical system. When he does the dictator of Israel will perform these miracles in his presence. Apparently there will be opening ceremonies for suckers!

Translation: "And that he [the Jewish dictator] might deceive the residence of the land [the purpose of miracles] because of these miracles which were given to him in the presence of the beast dictator [of the revived Roman empire]."

So in order to destroy Israel in the last half of the Tribulation the Jews must be deceived by the two dictators: the dictator of Israel through the performance of miracles is able to deceive many Jews as the false prophet and the false Messiah; the dictator of the revived Roman empire deceives the Jews through bringing ecumenical religion to the land. The principle is: A deceived people are a fallen people; a deceived people are a degenerate people. Remember that degeneracy has two categories — a moral degeneracy and an immoral degeneracy — but whatever the category of degeneracy may be a deceived nation is a fallen nation, a deceived nation is a degenerate nation. Only truth or Bible doctrine can protect people as individuals or nations from nations from self-destructive deception. Please notice that the deception is really self-destructive. They stand there and watch the miracles; they go to see the miracles; they are positive toward the miracles.

The greatest system of deception, therefore, is religion: religion of cosmic two and the arrogance of cosmic one. When people reject the truth or Bible doctrine they are vulnerable to deception. First they get into cosmic one where they are preoccupied.

Problem: How are you going to get the Jews to abandon their traditional Judaism? These are unbelieving Jews who are in ritual without reality, and by the thousands in the middle east at that time their traditional religion is Judaism, except for those who have personally accepted Christ as saviour. The answer to that is found in 1 Corinthians where it says that the Jews seek a miracle, the Greeks seek wisdom. It would take a miracle in order to actually get them to abandon their traditional religious attitude of Judaism, and that is exactly what happens. Satan empowers the dictator in Jerusalem to start performing miracles and they are done in the name of this dictator and in this way the Jews amalgamate their traditional Judaism with ecumenical religion. Remember that the dictator in the revived Roman empire is the head of ecumenical religion, so in order to destroy Israel in the last half of the Tribulation the Jews must be deceived by both the Jewish and the Gentile dictators. The dictator of Israel through the performance of these miracles is able to deceive the Jews and cause them to abandon their traditional Judaism.

The mandate of deception is given in the last part of verse 14, starting with the word "saying," the present active participle of the verb legw. However, it is not going to be translated as in the King James version, "saying," because the circumstantial participle is best rendered into the English by the conjunction “and” plus the finite verb, and we are going to translate it, “and he kept saying.” The progressive present tense signifies action in the state of persistence, present linear aktionsart. The active voice: the dictator of Israel in the last half of the Tribulation passing himself off as the Messiah, known also as the false prophet or Antichrist, produces the action of the verb.

Next we have an articular present active participle from the verb katoikew. This is a participle used as a noun or a substantive, and it is a participle in the dative plural, therefore the indirect object, “and he kept saying to the residents.” And then we have e)pi plus gh, “upon the land” literally, but we translate it in better English, “of the land [Israel].” We have next an aorist active infinitive from the verb poiew which means here to manufacture, “he kept urging the residents of the land to manufacture.” The aorist infinitive denotes that which is eventual or particular in contrast to the present infinitive, so it gathers into one entirety the many speeches that the dictator made. This dictator is very successful because he can communicate. Then we have the accusative plural direct object from e)ikon, referring to an idol. Then the dative of reference from qhrion, “to manufacture an idol to the beast dictator.”

“and he [the beast dictator] kept urging [mandating] the residents of the land to manufacture an idol to the beast dictator.”

The mandate to Israel from the beast dictator who is both the false prophet and the false Messiah is therefore related to idolatry which is constantly prohibited by the Word of God. The mandate related to this idolatry exposes the Jewish dictator not as the true Messiah but as a false Messiah. This brings us, then, to the concept of idolatry in the future even as we have noted it in the past.

Throughout the history of Israel as a client nation to God they were constantly warned against idolatry. Idolatry is always related to religion and idolatrous religion is always related to demon possession of the unbeliever and demon influence of the believer. As stated in the next verse, verse 15, idolatry is contact with demons, demon worship, and therefore it is Satan worship. Idolatry is the subject of the first two commandments in the decalogue. The first commandment prohibited mental idolatry, as illustrated in Deuteronomy 5:6-7; the second commandment prohibited overt idolatry as per Deuteronomy 5:8-10. Because idolatry involves life in the cosmic system, reversionism, scar tissue of the soul, all of the evils of the phallic cult, and it is often called spiritual adultery. The analogy to idolatry and spiritual adultery is found in Jeremiah 3:8-10; Ezekiel 16:23-43; 23:24-30; Revelation 17:1-5. Idolatry, then, is the basis for becoming involved with demons. For the unbeliever it is demon possession and demon influence; for the believer it is demon influence only. This is why idolatry is called the devil’s communion table in 1 Corinthians 10:19-21. Furthermore, idolatry is related to the phallic cult in Ezekiel 22:3-18; 23:37-39.

The greatest motivation to evil in all of history is religion. Religion motivates evil. Remember that Christianity is not a religion. Religion also results, therefore, in great functional evil. We have studied before the phallic cult and noted that the phallic cult produces both idolatry and from that idolatry immorality. Immorality destroys freedom.

The ten commandments are not dealing with sin as such, they are dealing with the principle of freedom. For example, the phallic cult produced great immorality in Leviticus 18:3-25. Immorality is an attack upon freedom, an attack upon the privacy of property, the rights of individuals, the sacredness of human life. Immorality attacks every aspect of freedom. Freedom and immorality simply cannot coexist. Furthermore, as we have studied both organised and disorganised evil, when you have freedom you have disorganised evil in two categories: immoral degeneracy and moral degeneracy. Moral degeneracy is perhaps the most subtle of the two, it is self-righteous arrogance, but both categories are involved in degeneracy. Degeneracy as a system of evil always coexists with Christianity and whereas there may be attacks on Christianity from time to time they are limited, it is not an overall system of persecution. Christianity goes over into degeneracy and evangelises; degeneracy under the cosmic system goes over to Christianity and does some evangelising and born-again believers become involved in some form of moral or immoral degeneracy. But all that is because of the existence of freedom.

Now, degeneracy and evil does something else. Degeneracy finally becomes overpowering if you have too small a pivot in any given generation when the pivot shrinks, and the expansion of degeneracy with the immoral phase destroys freedom. The moral phase attacks freedom too. Self-righteous people say you have to do it their way and they persecute you if you do not. But eventually it knocks out freedom and inevitably on this structure of degeneracy, both moral and immoral, comes the real enemy of Christianity: organised evil. As long as you have disorganised evil you are free to say, "I accept it" or "I reject it." Disorganised evil is something in which you do not have to get involved, you still have the right to say yes or no. But once you have organised evil all of that changes, you have no option. They are gone.

Degeneracy in the form of disorganised evil eventually opens the door for the rise of a dictatorship, but in the meantime as long as you have status quo of a client nation Christianity and disorganised evil coexist and continue to coexist under the principle of freedom. It is organised evil that will not tolerate either Christianity or degeneracy in either of its forms. Organised evil always has its own facade of self-righteousness and that facade will not tolerate the truth, in our case Christianity; in the future, born-again believers, and it will not tolerate degeneracy. One form of degeneracy is crime, and organised evil wipes out crime, but it has its own crime. It doesn't like competition. The Government murders people as in Russia and in China, and other places; the Government commits all the crime. That is organised evil and organised evil systematically destroys anything that has a system of toleration related to it.

The phallic cult always includes immorality. It includes demonism, Leviticus 20:6; it includes human sacrifice, Leviticus 20:1-5; it rejects establishment authority, Leviticus 20:9; it produces degeneracy, Leviticus 20:10-23; it is related to idolatry and demonism and the phallic cult, of course, promotes homosexuality, bestiality, incest, Deuteronomy 12:9-31. So there is a tremendous breakdown. In other words, when the Jews came into the land for the first time and took over the land, the greatest warning was against idolatry. Why idolatry? Because idolatry is a system that amalgamates moral degeneracy with immoral degeneracy and once it amalgamates the two then it establishes a dictatorship called organised evil. It takes over disorganised evil and converts it to organised evil and at the same time maintains a close contact with demonism. This is what destroyed the Canaanites. The land of Canaan was once a great nation but it had been destroyed and the final punishment of Canaan was the fact that the Jews came in and took over the land. There were several exceptions. For example, the Philistines who were Greeks came into that particular area and were left there as a test, as were the Phoenicians. The Jews had a generation that failed the test and they took over the same customs as the Canaanites, as the Phoenicians, as the Philistines, and the result, of course, was devastating to them. Idolatry and the phallic cult helped, then, to destroy Israel as a client nation to God and resulted in the fifth cycle of discipline. This is the subject of many passages in Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel.

This is what we have, then, so far in our passage: “and that he [the Jewish dictator] might deceive the residents of the land [the state of Israel in the last half of the Tribulation] because of the miracles,” the Jews with all of their natural brilliance are impressed by miracles, “which were given to him [Satan gives the power of miracles to this dictator] in the presence of the beast dictator.” In other words, Satan honours the Gentile dictator of the revived Roman empire as the leader of ecumenical religion, “and he [the Jewish dictator] kept urging the residents of the land to manufacture and idol to that beast dictator.”

That brings us now to our relative clause which presents the historical and prophetic Roman empire. Once again we see the historical Roman empire which is introduced by the nominative singular of the relative pronoun *o*jj, and it will be translated “who.” This introduces the historical Roman empire.

With this relative pronoun we have the present active indicative of the verb *e*xw. It is the historical present, it views the past event with the vividness of a present occurrence. The active voice: the historical Roman empire, the first Gentile client nation, produces the action of the verb. This is a declarative indicative for the fall of the historical Roman empire in AD 476. The accusative singular direct object of plhgh gives us the word that is going to be used to indicate the fall of the Roman empire, and that is the death stroke or the mortal wound, and then the descriptive genitive of the noun maxaira, “of the sword.” This is the Roman sword. The Romans destroyed themselves. If the Barbarians had destroyed them then God the Holy Spirit would not have permitted this vocabulary, maxaira. Instead we would have had r(omfaia, the Barbarian sword. The Romans destroyed themselves, and it brings up the principle again: No nation is ever destroyed by an outside nation, they merely come in and finish the job. A nation always destroys itself by its own bad decisions.

While many tribes and Barbarians had been admitted into the Roman empire as allies and had proved faithful defenders of the frontiers it was the Visigoths who really started the ball rolling. By this time the Romans had departed from category #1 truth, the laws of divine establishment, and there was not a very large pivot of mature believers. And so the Visigoths appeared on the Danube. When a client nation breaks up the repercussions are terrible throughout the world and in the case of the Roman empire there were terrible repercussions from the break-up of the client nation to God. Masses of non-Germanic Barbarians began to invade the empire, some of the wildest people in the world — the Slavs, the Huns, the Tartars, and others.

So this is the death stroke of the sword, “who had the stroke of the sword.” This dictator is said to be related to the historical Roman empire, “and has revived,” the aorist active indicative of the verb zaw, which means to live, and “has come to life” would be a good translation. The culminative aorist tense views the revival of the Roman empire in the Tribulation in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, namely the basis for Satan’s decisions of desperation in the last half of the Tribulation. The active voice: the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of this eschatological event in the Tribulation. The revived Roman empire in the Tribulation will be composed of ten nations which were formerly a part of the historical Roman empire. We will not be here to see it because the Church will be removed by the Rapture. The Roman dictator conquers three of the ten nations before the remaining seven surrender to his power. The Roman dictator is also the religious leader of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation and therefore the aorist active indicative refers to the revived Roman empire.

Corrected translation of verses 13,14:

Verse 13, “Furthermore he [the Jewish dictator of the state of Israel] performs great miracles. For example, he may even cause fire to come down from heaven to the earth in the presence of the people [the Jewish people in the state of Israel].

Verse 14, “And so that he [the Jewish dictator] might deceive the residents of the land [the Jews living in Israel in the Tribulation] because of the miracles which were given to him in the presence of the beast dictator [the dictator of the revived Roman empire]: and the [the Jewish dictator] keeps urging the residents of the land to manufacture an idol [the abomination of desolation] to the beast dictator, who [the historical Roman empire] had the stroke of death [the fall of the historical Roman empire], and has revived [come to life, the revival of the Roman empire in the Tribulation].”

In verse 15 we note first of all that the image is related to demons and therefore a sign of demon power. We begin with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated “Then,” followed by the aorist passive indicative of the verb didomi, which means to give, to bestow, or to delegate. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The passive voice: the Jewish dictator of the state of Israel receives the action of the verb, the ability to perform a trick with the statue known as the abomination of desolation, the statue of the dictator of the revived Roman empire. The dative singular indirect object of a)utoj follows, an intensive pronoun used as a personal pronoun, third person, because the personal pronoun from the Attic Greek was not brought over. It is translated “to him,” referring to the Jewish dictator of Israel. The ellipsis demands some word like e)cousia or dunamij, some word for power or authority, "Then it was given to him [the Jewish dictator] the power."

Next we have an aorist active infinitive of didomi again, same word repeated. It means here to provide. The culminative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results: the deception of the people. People who are negative to truth are easily deceived. The active voice: the dictator of Israel during the Tribulation produces the action of the verb. To sustain his false claim to Messiahship and to provide worship for the Roman dictator he must, of course perform something that will deceive the people. The infinitive of actual result is here and with this we have the accusative singular direct object from pneuma, meaning a spirit, not the Holy Spirit. Pneuma has a number of interesting meanings. It originally meant "breath," then it came to mean "spirit." Sometimes it is used for the Holy Spirit; sometime it is used for life, since life and breathing are generally related in some way. Also it is used here for a certain type of demon: it means an evil spirit, a demon. It also refers to a ventriloquist type demon who controls the vocal cords of unbelievers when they are demon possessed and this is the type we have in this passage.

This ventriloquist demon is first found in the Old Testament under the Hebrew noun Ov (long "O"). The ventriloquist demon could work in two ways, according to the Old Testament scriptures. The voice could be thrown from out of the ground as though the dead were speaking from their burial place, or the voice could be thrown from the mouth of some individual who was demon-possessed. The Greeks had a word for it and this same demon is called e)ggastrimuqoj, pronounced engastrimuthos. So the ventriloquist demon is designated pneuma or spirit. The noun pneuma does not always refer to demons but it does in Matthew 8:16; Mark 1:27; 6:7; 3:11; 5:13; Acts 5:16; 8:7; 1 Timothy 4:1.

The ventriloquist demon is also associated with the gift of tongues. There is a legitimate speaking in tongues on the part of unbelievers who are demon-possessed by the e)ggastrimuqoj demon. When born-again believers are speaking in tongues allegedly, they are faking it all the way. When unbelievers are speaking in tongues there is no fakery there at all, the demon is actually there and using the vocal cords of the unbeliever he possesses. But whether it is a believer or unbeliever speaking in tongues it all adds up to the same thing: no one has legitimately used the gift since August of AD 70.

In Revelation 16:13, 14 we read, "And I saw from the mouth of the dragon [Satan during the time of his desperation] and from the mouth of the beast dictator [from his eloquent speech], and from the mouth [eloquent speech] of the false prophet [the Jewish dictator], three unclean spirits [ventriloquists, or e)ggastrimuqoj demons who control human vocal cords] like frogs. For they [the demons] are the spirits of demons performing miracles, who go out [as Satan's ambassadors] to the kings of the entire world [earth], to assemble them for that final war of the great day of God the Almighty one."

The Koine Greek however merely refers to the demon as pneuma. "And it was given to him [the Jewish dictator] the power to provide a spirit [ventriloquist demon]". In this case the spirit or demon is given to the idol known as the abomination of desolation and mentioned in Daniel 11:31; 12:11; Matthew 24:15; Mark 13:15. The idol is the image of the dictator of the revived Roman empire in the Tribulation. The original and historical idol known as the abomination was the statue of Antiochus Epiphanes put up in the temple in the time of the famous Maccabean war in BC 167 on the 25th of December. Up to that time 25 December did not have too much significance.

With this we have the dative of reference of the noun eikon, used for an idol or an image (the abomination of desolation) and then a descriptive genitive from qhrion, the beast dictator. So we have the beginning of a translation: "Then it was given to him [the Jewish dictator of the state of Israel] the power to provide a demon spirit [ventriloquist demon] for the idol of the beast dictator ..."

Mark 13:1, "And as he [our Lord Jesus Christ] was leaving the temple, one of his disciples said to him, 'Teacher, what massive stones and what wonderful buildings!'"

Verse 2, "Then Jesus replied to him, 'Do you see all of these great buildings? Not one stone shall be left on top of another which will not be torn down.'" The doctrine He has taught inside of that building is permanent but the building itself is not. They were emphasizing that which is not going to last. This was fulfilled in August of AD 70.

Verse 3, "Later as he was sitting on the Mount of Olives opposite the temple, Peter and James and John and Andrew questioned him privately, Verse 4, "Tell us, when will these things happen [the question is actually answered in Luke 21:20-24], and what will be the sign when all of these things are going to be fulfilled?" The sign will be the destruction of the temple, just as in 586 BC when Nebuchadnezzar destroyed the temple, the sign of the fifth cycle of discipline. The disciples are still interested in signs, not in doctrine. All of that will change, however.

Verse 5, "The Jesus began to teach them [He warns them first], 'Beware that no one misleads you'."

Verse 6, " 'Many will come in my name, alleging, 'I am he [Messiah]!' and will deceive many more'." In other words, there is a sucker born every minute and people who reject truth are always deceived. In the Tribulation they will be deceived because there will be a statue in the temple which will start talking. The nitwits will believe it.

Verse 7, " 'And when you hear of wars and rumours of wars, do not be frightened; for these things [historical trends] must occur; but that is not the end [“end” is a technical word for the Tribulation]'."

Verse 8, begins the historical trends of the Church Age: " 'For nation will rise up against nation, and kingdom against kingdom; there will be earthquakes in various places; also famines. These things are the beginning of birth pangs [the holocaust pregnancy, historical disaster]'."

Verse 9, the Tribulation begins: “ ‘But you must be on your guard [when the Tribulation begins]; for they will deliver you over to the Sanhedrin [the Jewish courts of the Tribulation], and you [Jewish believers] will be flogged in the synagogues, and you will stand before governors and kings for my sake, as a testimony to them’.”

Verse 10, “ ‘And the gospel must first be preached to all nations [grace before judgment, the evangelism of the Tribulation]’.”

Verse 11, “ ‘And when they arrest you and bring you to trial, do not worry ahead of time about what you will say, but communicate whatever is given to you in that hour; for it is not what you say but the Holy Spirit [who teaches what you say extemporaneously]’.”

Verse 12, “ ‘And brother betray brother to death, and a father his child; and children will rebel against their parents and cause them to be executed’.”

Verse 13, “ ‘And because of me you will be hated, but he who stands fast to the end [of the Tribulation] will be delivered [by the second advent]’.”

Verse 14, the middle of the Tribulation: “ ‘And when you see the abomination of desolation standing where it should not be [in the holy of holies of the temple in Jerusalem] (let the student understand)’.” Being a student is more than learning, being a student demands application of what you learn, “ ‘then let those who are in Judea [the first segment of believers saved in the first three and a half years of the Tribulation] flee to the mountains [Edom, Moab and Ammon]’.”

Verse 15, “ ‘Furthermore let him who is on the roof of his house not go down, or enter in [to his house], to get anything out of it;”

Verse 16, “and let him who is in the field not turn back to get his coat.”

Verse 17, “But woe to those who are pregnant and those who are nursing babies in those days!”

Verse 18, “But pray that it will not occur in the winter,” extreme weather.

Verse 19, “For those days [the last half of the Tribulation] will be tribulation [historical disaster and holocaust] such as has not occurred since the beginning of creation which God created, until now, and never shall be.”

Verse 20, “And unless the Lord [Jesus Christ who controls history] had shortened those days [the last half of the Tribulation] no person would have been delivered; but for the sake of the elected to privilege whom he has chosen, he shortened those days [so that believers will be alive at the second advent].”

Next: Warning to the Jewish believers of the first half of the Tribulation who have fled to the high desert country is now apropos. So beginning in verse 21, what about those who fled?

Verse 21, “And at that time [the last half of the Tribulation] if anyone says to you, ‘Behold, here is the Messiah’; or ‘Behold, he there’; do not believe him;

Verse 22, “for false Christs and false prophets will appear on the scene, and will perform signs and miracles, to deceive the elect, if that were possible” — third class condition meaning some will be deceived. That means that once they hit the high desert country they cannot neglect their doctrine. It must be kept current for application.

Verse 23, “But be alert; behold, I have told you everything in advance,” no excuse.

Verse 24, “But in those days, after that tribulation, the sun will be darkened, and the moon will not give its light,

Verse 25, “and the stars will be falling from heaven, and the powers that are in the heavens will be shaken.”

Verse 26, “And then they shall see the Son of Man coming in clouds with great power and glory.”

Verse 27, the regathering of Israel: “And then he will send forth the angels, and will gather together his elect to privilege [born-again Jews] from the four winds of heaven [the four weather areas], from the farthest end of the earth to the farthest end of heaven,” the farthest end of the earth: living Jews will be regathered; the farthest end of heaven: the resurrection of Old Testament Jews who have believed in Christ.

That brings us now to the demon function of the image in Revelation 13:15. It begins with the conjunction i(na) introducing a final purpose clause which expresses a distinct objective or purpose conceived of as the aim or action indicated in the main verb. The objective is stated in two verbs, speaking and manipulating through an apparent miracle to gain control of human volition — tantamount, of course, to Satan worship through ecumenical religion. We translate it “so that”.

Next comes the conjunction kai, translated “even,” “so that even.” Then the subject in the nominative case, e)ikon, “the image,” followed by the possessive genitive of the beast dictator and the aorist active subjunctive of lalew, another communication verb which means here to speak, “so that the image might even speak.” The constative verb contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, the function of the ventriloquist demon in making the image appear to speak. The active voice: the ventriloquist demon produces the action. The subjunctive mood is the potential subjunctive for a final clause with a future reference.

Then we have a connective conjunction kai, “and,” followed by the aorist active subjunctive of poiew translated here “cause.” The culminative aorist views the apparent miracle in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the assassination or execution of those who refuse to worship the idol. And, again, i(na plus the subjunctive is for the final clause.

The second use of i(na introduces a sub-final clause which denotes the direction of the action which is sought or anticipated, translated “that.” What is sought or anticipated is the death of those who will get into the ecumenical religious system. They are described by the nominative plural of the correlative relative pronoun o(soj, “as many as.” And then the conjunction e)an plus the negative mh, meaning “if not,” “and cause that as many as do not,” this is an idiom. Then we have the aorist active subjunctive of proskunew, meaning to worship, “as many as do not worship.” The ingressive aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its beginning. In other words, do not get down and worship. The active voice: believers who are positive toward doctrine in the land of Israel in the Tribulation will refuse to worship the image in the temple. The subjunctive mood is potential, having the element of contingency.

With this is the dative singular indirect object of e)ikon, the “image,” and then what happens to them: the aorist passive subjunctive of a)pokteinw, and it means “should be put to death.” The constative aorist means that they will be executed instantly. The passive voice: those who refuse to worship the image receive the action of the verb, martyrdom. And, again, i(na plus the subjunctive expresses a semi-final clause. The principle: Frustrated religion always resorts to violence to get its way. The use of violence to coerce volition reveals the Satanic nature of volition both now and in that future day.

Translation: “Then it was given to him [the Jewish dictator of the state of Israel] to provide a demon spirit [ventriloquist demon] for the idol of the beast dictator, so that the image of the beast dictator might even speak, and cause that as many as do not worship the image of the beast dictator would be put to death [executed].”

In verses 16 and 17 we see the economic policy of the Jewish dictator. The first thing we notice is the computerised system of persecution which begins the doctrine of computerised tyranny. What we have here is the principle that “high-tech” has got an evil application, like most 20th century developments. It really isn’t the scientific development, it is the people who use it and apply it and, of course, we have an evil application of high technology in the last half of the Tribulation.

Verse 16, We notice the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai which is translated, “Furthermore,” followed by the present active indicative of poiew. Poiew is a very common verb and generally it is translated “to do, to make, to manufacture.” It actually has another meaning, “he causes.” The present tense is a pictorial present, it presents to the mind a picture of events in the process of occurrence. Here we have eschatological events. The active voice is the causative active voice in which the subject is related to the action of the verb through an intermediary means. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of a future policy, not too different from policies of the past. With this we have the accusative plural from the adjective paj, translated “all.”

Then we have some appositional accusatives, and with them we have to translate it, “Furthermore he causes everyone.” And then we have five appositional accusatives, each one is in the plural. The first one is the adjective mikrw, a word used of persons to indicate stature, or age, but not here. It is used here in the connotation of influence or power and it means the least, those who really do not have any power at all. Too many people without power always want power whether they are qualified or not. Generally their very desire and lust for power means their disqualification.

With this we have another adjective megaj which is translated “great” and means those who have some power or influence. Megaj is also an interesting adjective because it is one of the few that always has the accent on the first syllable. So we have the small and the great, referring to those who have power and influence and those who do not. Often those who have the power and the influence are under a greater power, the concept of dictatorship.

The third and fourth categories take into contrast: first of all we have the accusative plural plousioj, “rich.” No matter how bad the times someone always uses bad times to their own advantage. There are those who become rich in bad times because they either have courage or ability to utilise bad times to their own advantage. But the next one is typical and one that should be called to the attention of all countries that practice socialism: ptoxoj, “the poor.” Jesus said: “The poor you have with always.” Poverty will never be eradicated. You can alleviate suffering through some form of charity but there will always be poor people just as there will always be rich people, illustrating the principle that there is no such thing as equality in the human race. There is ability used; ability not used. There is lack of ability, lack of courage, lack of aggressiveness, many explanations for the contrast, but inevitably there will always be the rich and there will always be the poor. There will always be the free and there will always be the slave. The word e)leuqeroj presents us with the free. It does not mean freedom in the sense we understand it but having made good decisions, having the ability for more decisions. Good decisions produce more and more options for great decisions. The principle is that a consistent life of good decisions will open up options for greater decisions. The accusative plural of douloj which is translated “slave” means people who by bad decisions limit their decisions, loss of freedom because their options were not opened. So we have six appositional accusatives, they are divided into three couplets and therefore we have three categories. The first category would be the achievement category. It means the successful and the unsuccessful. The second category is economic: the rich and the poor. The third category is social: the free and the slave.

So the word “all” is described in terms of these appositional accusatives. “Furthermore he forces everyone, the small and the great, both the rich and the poor, the slave and the free.” Of course, this is dictatorship. Dictatorship superimposes power and authority over everyone, usually erroneously but not always. The result is that we have an achievement category where even the achievers have lost their influence, the successful have lost their influence, and social success is also included here.

Note that in the greatest period of historical disaster in all of human history, the time of the devil's desperation, the last half of the Tribulation, that Jews living in the middle east both fail and succeed. The real surprise is that during historical disaster people distinguish themselves from their peers in three categories. Category #1, achievement in many areas of professional and government function; category #2, economic success. There will be a certain type of entrepreneur who will take risks in adverse times and become very wealthy; category #3 is social achievement or success which also occurs in times of historical disaster. In past history nearly every great royal family became prominent in a time of historical disaster when the crisis ability paid off in the rise to social prominence. All past greatness usually comes from this system. Note also that in time of historical disaster there are always those who are going to be losers and those who fail. Hence the obvious existence of the small who have failed in disaster, the poor who have failed economically, the slave whose survival in historical disaster depends on the charity and the ability of someone else. Historical disaster, then, is designed to bring to the top those who have some form of ability, some form of courage, some very strong drive in the field of strength in time of adversity. Historical disaster therefore is a producer of opportunity and greatness, it does not mean bad times for those who have a good mental attitude, who have made good decisions from a position of strength, have control of their lives and a personal sense of destiny. The principle then is that historical disaster is an opportunity for greatness. Latent ability goes unnoticed in times of historical prosperity but historical disaster provides the opportunity for greatness, the achievement on the part of those who would lack opportunity in normal times.

Historical disaster is necessary for the survival of a nation and is just as important to the strength of a nation as times of prosperity. Historical disaster is not only necessary for the survival of a nation but at the same time it reveals latent ability and provides future leadership and greatness through the promotion of the crisis personality. Prolonged and extensive prosperity in a nation guarantees the ascendancy of mediocrity and if the nation is to continue there must be historical disaster so that the mediocrity is eliminated. In time of extensive historical prosperity the opportunity for those who have real potential in greatness is not there. So disaster is a good thing for a nation. Periodic disaster is a healthy thing for a nation to provide opportunity for those who have the ability and it washes out the mediocrity which has destroyed the nation. The ascendancy of mediocrity denies opportunity to those who have real potential of greatness. The historical disaster must provide opportunity for talent and potential greatness to express itself if the nation is to survive. Therefore we should look upon historical disaster as believers with three applications: a. Historical disaster indicates the fact that the pivot of mature believers has shrunk and that you and I as believers have failed in our responsibility to God; b. All things work together for good; c. Divine discipline is needed to perpetuate the human race. All three of those applications are positive applications. Disaster renews the nation.

The categories here give us one more principle: National disaster also emphasises the true doctrine of man's inequality. God has provided and given us life not because we are equal but because we have equal opportunity. The only thing that all people have in common where equality exists is that part of the soul called volition. You are free to choose to make a good decision or a bad decision. Salvation is a decision. When Christ died on the cross He died for all. He was judged for the sins of the entire human race and therefore whosoever believes in Him has everlasting life. It doesn't matter whether a person is rich or poor, an achiever or a failure, a winner or a loser. Christ was judged for everyone on the cross. But notice that the decision of salvation is "whosoever believeth," and that is a positive decision. Furthermore, it is a non-meritorious decision as many other decisions in life happen to be. But you make one decision and you have eternal life. Volition is the only equality in the human race.

Once you start using your volition there is inequality. Some people use their volition and make constant good decisions to become winners in life. Others use their volition in a negative way and they become losers in life. Therefore you have great inequality, and the greater the freedom the greater the inequality that exists. Freedom guarantees inequality in life so national disaster always emphasises the true doctrine of man's inequality.

All of mankind are the products of their own decisions. Man apart from God and Bible doctrine uses prosperity to attempt the impossible — the equality of man. Man in his arrogance, in his crusader arrogance, in his self-righteous arrogance, influenced by Satan himself — that is Satan's favourite line: all men are equal. No they are not. The only equality that God has provided is to give everyone the same start in life, you have volition. Man is not born equal and does not live in a state of equality with others. Equality is a myth, the deception of Satan as the chief evangelist for the cosmic system. Equality is also the greatest form of human hypocrisy. The fact that man has free will and self-determination guarantees the fact that equality will never exist in the human race. And many races talk about being downtrodden, but there are always people in that race who use their volition to rise to the top. It is true in every race. There is no such thing as a deprived race, that is only the crying of the losers in that group. Always you are going to find people saying that but race is not an issue. It is a false issue. Neither is economic status an issue. The fact that man has free will is the issue.

All forms of socialism are the expressions of arrogance, the opportunity for the demagogues to seize power by false promises. Man cannot make man equal with other men. What is impossible for man is only possible with God, and God has done it for us. And where did he do it for us? At the point of salvation every believer receives 36 things. Every believer has tremendous opportunities. Every believer enters into union with Christ. "In Christ" is a great phrase. It doesn't make any difference what your race is, what your economic status is, whether you are rich or poor, whatever your status may be all believers are entered into union with Christ. So all believers with their volition and the wonderful system that God has provided with its eight gates gives you the opportunity. In that system God will take you to the top and you will be a winner, but if you make a decision to get into the cosmic system you are going to be a loser all of the way. The very existence of the divine dynasphere versus the cosmic system tells us that there is no such thing as equality. The believer in the divine dynasphere is infinitely superior to the believer in the cosmic system.

Volition is the divider of people. Inequality is based on the function of freedom and using one's volition to make either good or bad decisions, for man is the product of his own decisions. Prosperity provides limited opportunity for success and gives rise to the dominance of mediocrity, but historical disaster and crisis provides the opportunity for greatness.

That brings us now to the system of computerised tyranny. It should be noted that high technology is no better than the people that use it. Evil people using high technology come up with evil applications. High technology in the Tribulation is going to be the master system of enslaving most of the world. Most of the world are going to be slaves because they are under computerised tyranny. The system which will be described in the next two verses is tantamount to computer control of the people of the world. Hence, we are about to study the principle of computer tyranny or the destruction of human privacy and the enslavement of the world in the Tribulation. Remember that freedom cannot exist without privacy. Privacy and freedom must coexist and every attack on privacy is an attack on human freedom. The computer and high technology have many wonderful applications but in this passage we are going to study computer tyranny, the answer to evil bureaucracy's dreams. The potential dangers of high technology have nothing to do with advance in science but they have everything to do with the application. To have a computer record of criminals is a good thing for law enforcement but to have a computer record of law-abiding citizens eventuates in control of those law-abiding citizens, hence it destroys their freedom. The criminal, of course, has no right to his freedom but the law-abiding citizen has every right to freedom and privacy. Computer technology used to control people and privacy destroyed is what we will have in the Tribulation.

That brings us now to the conjunction idna and the study of computerised tyranny, the eschatological aspects of high technology, computer control of people throughout the world and the principle of the destruction of human privacy through high technology. Remember that freedom cannot exist without privacy, the two must coexist. idna is a conjunction introducing a final purpose clause which expresses the purpose of the main objective of the action of the main verb. With this we have the aorist active indicative of didomi, "that they should give." The culminative aorist tense views the event in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results: control of the people of the world through ecumenical religion. Ecumenical religion, however, works through a system of giant computers throughout the world, but especially there is one in Israel to control the people there. The active voice: the subject in the active voice produces the action of the verb and since the subject is taken from the third person plural suffix of the verb the question arises: who is the subject? And a plural subject indicates a system of bureaucracy based on high technology. So we have a plural subject because we are dealing with bureaucrats of the future, a computer system that has programmed away the privacy of the citizen in the hands of bureaucrats. This system is not only used in Israel, it is used throughout the entire revived Roman empire and most parts of the world in the last half of the Tribulation; every place where the state has accepted the ecumenical religious system of the beast dictator of the revived Roman empire. Those who adhere to the ecumenical religion are going to receive a card or its equivalent, an ID card. This permits them to buy and sell. In other words, to live and function in the economy of the world-wide religious system. Without this card or its equivalent, a computer mark on the hand or on the forehead, the people who reject the religion of Satan will be ostracised from society, persecuted and martyred. Hence, the subject is the tremendous number of bureaucrats in every country during the last half of the Tribulation who administer the system of computerised tyranny. The subjunctive mood goes with i(na to form a purpose clause. With this we have the dative plural indirect object from a)utoj, the intensive pronoun used as a personal pronoun, third person. It is translated “to them,” “that they should give to them.” This is used as the personal pronoun to identify the worshippers of the beast dictator of the revived Roman empire. Hence, the ID card or its equivalent, the mark of the beast, is necessary for survival. “That they should provide them” is the way we translate didomi.

Next we have the accusative singular direct object from the noun xaragma, “mark.” It means something engraved, something etched, something imprinted. The Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written and in the Attic or Classical Greek xaragma was used for the strike of a snake, it was used to mean an inscription, and for the branding of camels or slaves to denote ownership. It was used for a soldier in the Roman army when he enlisted: his serial number was branded on his hand. In effect then, this ID card of the ecumenical religious system of the revived Roman empire is some kind of a technical brand to relate to the key of the computer system. This mark or identification card is necessary for social activity, business activity, religious activity, and even survival at that time. And since the ID card is so important to avoid loss or counterfeit the card is printed or engraved or somehow marked on the body of the individual. Furthermore it is marked where it can be easily observed: on the right hand or on the forehead. Those who are great, rich and free will probably have the privilege of the ID card on the right hand; those who we noticed previously as small, poor or slaves will have the ID mark on the forehead — verse 16:

“Furthermore he causes [or forces] everyone, the small and the great, both the rich and the poor, both the slave and the free, that they [the bureaucracy of ecumenical religion] should provide them [those who come into the religious system] and ID card [a mark, a code, a number, a brand] on their right hand or on their forehead.”

This, then, is the system of computerised tyranny. 666 can be in the future a code number, an ID card, imprinted on the right hand or the forehead and related to the code system in the computer which has the names of all of those who are members of this ecumenical system of the future. This code number could be tied into the computer’s memory system which has a detailed information about each convert in the cosmic system. The fact that the ID card is not carried on one’s person in some plastic form indicates the advance in technology at that time. Apparently it may not even be visible except under a certain light. A plastic card, of course, can be lost or counterfeited but the code number 666 indelibly marked on the right hand or the forehead cannot be lost.

Verse 17, the policy of economic tyranny related to it. This time we combine the two words that we have started with in our Greek for the last several verses. We have the connective conjunction kai and with it the conjunction i(na plus the negative mh to introduce a negative purpose clause.

Next comes the subject, the nominative singular subject of the indefinite pronoun tij. The most fascinating thing about the indefinite pronoun is that it is definite. It is used to represent a definite category. With the negative mh it is translated “no one,” “And that no one.” Then we have the present middle subjunctive of the verb dunamai which means to be able, “And that no one should be able.” The customary present tense denotes what habitually occurs under computerised tyranny of the ecumenical religious system of the future. The middle voice: this is a deponent verb, middle in form, active in meaning. The subjunctive mood is used with i(na to form a final purpose clause.

Then the aorist active indicative gives us the tyranny, a)gorazw which means to buy. The aorist tense is an ingressive aorist contemplating the action at the beginning. The active voice: people within the range of the power of ecumenical religion produce the action, the infinitive of actual result. This is followed by an aorist active infinitive of polew which means to sell. In other words, we are talking about business activity, “And that no one should be able to buy or to sell.”

Principle: We should remember that religion [Christianity is not a religion] is always cruel, it is always vindictive toward those who reject it. Ecumenical religion of the Tribulation is no exception, it carries the same inherent evil and cruelty found in world religions today, like Islam or Hinduism.

The World Council of Churches plus the National Council of Churches is a good illustration of the cruelty of religion. The National Council of Churches purports to be tolerant of everyone and take in everyone with different views, and they are always out in some form of social action. But the vindictiveness is seen in the fact that today the World Council of Churches and the National Council of Churches are supporting terrorism. In the case of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation the same trend is seen. It persecutes the nonconformist by starving him out. There is also, of course later on, martyrdom, persecution, torture, murder, but here we simply have the economic isolation of the nonconformist. There is no honour code in ecumenical religion, no virtue, no grace, no system of impersonal love toward all. Instead there is demonism, terrorism, persecution and economic ostracism. In short, everything which characterises religion, the use of force, violence, and the hypocrisy of human love on the other hand, produce arrogant self-righteousness as well as ascetic self-determinism. Next we have the threefold description of this ID card. It begins with an idiom, e)j mh, in the next phrase, literally it is “if not,” but it is an idiom meaning “except.” And with this we have the articular present active participle of the verb e)jxw, “except he who has.” The present tense is a perfective present, it refers to a fact which has come to be in the past but is emphasised as a present reality. The active voice: the adherents and converts of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation produce the action. The participle is circumstantial.

Now we have the three ways in which the ID card is set up. First there is a general ID card in the accusative singular direct object of xaragma, translated “mark” and it a reference to the ID card for members of the religious system. Secondly, there is an ID card for the clergy in ecumenical religion. This is brought out with two words, the accusative singular direct object from o)noma which means sometimes “name,” sometimes “person,” sometimes “identities,” sometimes even “personalities.” Here it means “name.” With it is the descriptive genitive of the noun qhrion used for the beast dictator, the dictator of the revived Roman empire, “the name of the beast dictator.” This is a second ID card and this is a special card for leaders and clergymen in the ecumenical religious system of the Tribulation. So we have first of all the ID card called “the mark,” “except the one who has the mark [or brand], or the name of the beast dictator [a special leadership card with the name of the religious leader of ecumenical religion], or the number of his name.”

We have third identification: the code number. First there is disjunctive particle h, “or”, and then the accusative singular from the direct object of a)riqmoj, and with it a descriptive genitive of o)noma, the possessive genitive of a)utoj, “for the number of his name.”

Translation: “And that no one should be able to buy or sell, except the one who has the mark [the ID card], or the name of the beast dictator [special leadership card for religious leaders], or the number of his name [the code number related to the computer system].”

Principle: Religion destroys the privacy of the individual. In that way, again, we see a contrast between religion and Christianity. Christianity recognises the privacy of the royal priesthood; religion is anti-privacy. To the extent that churches stick their nose into your business, to that extent they are religious instead of Christian. Religion is self-righteous and, of course, self-righteousness comes from arrogance. Self-righteous people always invade the privacy of others.

Verse 18, we start out with the adverb o(de. It is correctly translated “Here.” With it we have the present active indicative of e)imi, “Here is,” plus sofia, the predicate nominative singular translated “wisdom.” Here it means wisdom in the technical sense of application of Bible doctrine. Wisdom is the application of Bible doctrine, but you have to know Bible doctrine before you can apply it. Doctrinal application in this context refers to the interpretation of the historical trends from the eschatological revelation of this passage.

There are two ways of determining historical trends. The first is prophecy, which is pertinent in every dispensation except the Church Age. The second is the application of doctrine which is pertinent in every dispensation of human history but the only system for determining historical trends in the Church Age. The historical trend in view in this passage is computerised tyranny, the control of the economy through a programming system in high technology. It distinguishes between those who adhere to the ecumenical religious system and those who reject it. It is all on the computer. This verse gives the Tribulation believer the opportunity of making his decision before the pressure and before the persecution exists. This passage will be studied very carefully once the Tribulation begins and every believer throughout the world where ecumenical religion goes will definitely have to know about this and prepare his decision. It gives the opportunity to think about it before it happens. That is what wisdom is: the opportunity to have the information before the decision is made. This is a general principle as far as the Word of God is concerned: don't go to press without the facts, always research the situation. Gather all the information before you make decision. God recognises this principle and gives a future generation of believers the opportunity of researching it, of knowing what is going to happen so when it happens they will have their answer, they will be able to say, "I refuse to become a part of this system."

Next we have the articular present active participle of e)w, "he who has," and then we have the accusative singular direct object from nouj, which generally means the mind but it also means the faculty for thinking, and we are going to translate it, "he who has the ability to think." The ability to think here is an idiom meaning "get the facts before you make your decision, do not go off half-cocked."

Then we have the aorist active imperative of yhfizw which really means "let him compute." "He who has the ability to think, let him compute." In other words, it is a mechanical high-tech system, a computer system 666 versus your brain. Your brain is a computer, or should be. If you fill it up with doctrine it will compute. So you have human computer versus mechanical computer. The culminative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the ability to know the facts first and make a decision on the basis of truth, Bible doctrine. The active voice: the believer who understands the pertinent eschatology produces the action of the verb. He has a human computer, a brain, that can outthink the mechanical system. This is the imperative of permission which recognises the fact that you may or you may not believe and you may not know and you may not obey. Then we have the accusative singular direct object from a)riqmoj again, "let him compute the number of qerion, the beast dictator."

"Here is wisdom [the application of pertinent doctrine to the historical trend]. He who has the ability to think [the believer functioning under the first two stages of GAP, reception and retention] let him compute [the function of the third stage of GAP, recall and the application of pertinent doctrine to the historical trend at that time] the code number of the beast dictator."

Principle: The believer must be cognisant of doctrine and inculcated with it through the function of Gap in order to use his spiritual computer against the mechanical computer.

The ability to think comes through perception of Bible doctrine, perception of the truth, while the application of that doctrine forms the historical trend in the mind. In other words, understanding historical trends through the application of doctrine facilitates dealing with those trends. You anticipate the trend, you make your decision, and once you are under pressure you stand by your decision. The believer continues to have confidence in God, in God's plan through the adverse or prosperous circumstances of history. As a matter of fact historical adversity does not affect the plan of God for the believer, nor does it hinder divine blessing in time of great historical disaster.

The explanation: We begin with the explanatory use of the post positive conjunctive particle gar, "for." We are going to get an explanation. Then the present active indicative of e)imi, "for it is." The static present tense represents a condition taken for granted as a fact. There is a computerised system in the future, there is a code number for this particular subject to draw out the memory of the computer with regard to who adheres to the ecumenical religious system. The active voice: the number 6 produces the action of the verb, since 6 is the number of man in the Bible. However, the code number is 6 tripled, hence the deifying of man through the cosmic system. Six tripled is simply the deifying of man. There are three members of the Godhead: God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit; each one has identical essence. Six represents man; 666 = man deified. It isn't six hundred and sixty-six, it is simply 6 tripled.

Then we have the predicate nominative of a)riqmoj again plus the possessive genitive of a)nqrwpoj, "for it is the number of man." The Bible explains what the number is before the number is given.

Satan's approach to mankind in the garden of Eden was the appeal to the arrogance or deification of man. The ultimate in man's arrogance is his own deification. Genesis 3:5 explains this phrase, "you will be like God," the deification of man, 666, "knowing good and evil." The tripling of the number of man is 666, hence the deification of man in Satan's cosmic system. The deification of mankind is the function of the cosmic system of Satan.

It must be remembered that 666 is the code number in the computer and it designates all the members of the ecumenical religious system. The code number leads to a memory bank where all adherents to ecumenical religion are recorded plus all information concerning their personal life. The memory bank in the computer destroys both the privacy and the freedom of those who fall into this ecumenical system. Those people who are not in this memory bank of the computer are believers whose perception of doctrine has caused them to make a decision, and they reject this apostasy. Such believers will not have the ID card, 666. They will be persecuted, excommunicated from society, some will starve to death, others will be tortured. Many are going to survive and be preserved for the Millennial reign of Christ. This is a part, then, of historical disaster in the time of the devil's desperation. Nevertheless, in the worst of all historical disasters in history God will preserve many thousands of born-again believers right under the nose of the dictator, in all of the danger spots, and they will be preserved until the second advent to form the cadre for the population explosion of the Millennium. If there is any significance in the number 666, apart from computerised tyranny, it is the deification of man inside the cosmic system.

Chapter 14

The subject of Revelation chapter fourteen is the divine victory during the time of the devil's desperation. In the first five verses we see the victory of the plan of God, and in verses six through twenty the victory of the judgements of God. Then in chapters fifteen and sixteen we have perhaps the most dramatic part of the entire book, the divine judgment during the devil's desperation: the Armageddon campaign.

Verse 1, we have a sequential use of the conjunction kai which begins the passage, "Then," and with it the aorist active indicative of the verb o((raw which means to see or to look, "Then I looked." We have the constative aorist tense contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety. This is the sequence which gathers together everything in John's vision of this chapter. The active voice: John the apostle as the human author produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of John's vision recorded as part of the New Testament canon. Then we have a conjunction kai again but this time it is used in its connective sense and is translated "and." Then a demonstrative particle i)dou which means "behold." "Then I looked, and, behold. I)dou is always used to introduce something new. The form is actually based on the aorist middle imperative of o((raw. We translate it "behold" but it must be understood that this is a new vision and we begin a new subject.

We begin with the nominative singular subject a)rnion, translated "Lamb" and referring to our Lord Jesus Christ in His first advent. It refers to the fact that there were many ways of portraying Christ before the first advent occurred. The first advent is the transitional period between the Age of Israel and the Church Age and, of course, in the Age of Israel they did not have a completed canon of scripture. They needed many illustrations in the field of soteriology and Christology and so had a modus operandi related to the tabernacle and the temple. All of the articles of furniture spoke of some phase of the work of Christ on the cross, some phase of His unique person as the God-Man in the first advent. Also, of course, they had five different Levitical sacrifices: three were used to portray the cross; two of them to portray the rebound technique. So the word "Lamb" simply brings into focus everything that the Jews learned in the Old Testament through the various ritual concepts. They had ritual teaching, but ritual without reality is meaningless and when the Jews rejected Christ as saviour that meant that they had ritual without reality, and they would simply hang on to the ritual and say no: negative toward the reality, the reality being the person and the work of Christ on the cross. The word "Lamb" refers to the fact of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world in John 1:29. The Lamb always emphasises the humanity of Christ in His hypostatic union. As eternal and infinite God Jesus Christ cannot sin. He cannot be tempted, He cannot solicit to sin, or have any contact with sin. Hence, the Lamb emphasises the true humanity of Christ; the true humanity of Christ received the imputation of our sins on the cross. “Lamb” emphasises, then, the strategic victory of Christ on the cross during His first advent, and now through the verb it is related to the tactical victory of Christ at the second advent.

We find the Lamb under the perfect active participle of i(stemi, “standing.” The perfect tense connotes completed action with emphasis on the result. This is a dramatic perfect describing the existing state of our Lord in a very vivid and realistic way as the resurrected Christ. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb when He returns to the earth at the second advent. The participle is circumstantial. So in the first advent our Lord went to the cross and provided eternal salvation by being judged for our sins. At the second advent we have His tactical victory, the superseding of Satan as the ruler of this world, and the beginning of the Millennial reign of Christ. So i(stemi is used in the sense of the second advent, the tactical victory of our Lord Jesus Christ.

With this we have a prepositional phrase, e)pi plus the accusative of o)roj, “on mount.” Then we have the indeclinable noun, Siwn, but we stay with the Hebrew form, Zion, “the Lamb standing on Mount Zion.” When we get to chapter sixteen and study the Armageddon campaign we will see that the Lamb standing on Mount Zion is the ultimate in ending that campaign. Mount Zion, of course, refers to the Millennial Jerusalem. The time noted will be immediately after the regathering of Israel, and the second advent as the tactical victory of the angelic conflict, then, marks the termination of the time of the devil’s desperation. Mount Zion is chosen as the place of the victory celebration since Israel will be a client nation in the Millennium. The title of our Lord Jesus Christ as Lamb emphasises the fact that the cross must precede the crown. Faith in Christ must precede an eternal relationship with God. At the cross Satan was the ruler of this world but at the second advent Christ will be the ruler of this world forever. Satan will make one more attempt to overthrow our Lord at the end of the Millennium. In the meantime our Lord Jesus Christ will be ruling the world during that period of one thousand years, and that is the significance of His standing there.

Then we have a connective conjunction kai to add another accusative. This time we have the word o)noma, “and the name.” We translate so far: “Then I looked, and behold, the Lamb was standing on Mount Zion, and with him ...” When it says “with him” we are going to be looking at the 144,000 Jewish evangelists, and “with him” is meta plus a)utoj. With Him are those who are going to be the great evangelists of the future.

Once the Church is removed from the earth by the resurrection, the end of the Church Age, we have no client nation to God because we have no pivot, we have no believers. We studied in chapter seven, however, that 144,000 Jews will accept Christ through reading the Bible. These 144,000 Jews will enter into one of the greatest periods of evangelism the world has ever known. They are said to have a name now: the present active participle of e)xw, meaning to have. They are going to have the name of our Lord. The present tense here is the perfective present, it denotes what has come to be in the past but emphasises a present reality. The 144,000 great evangelists of the future produce the action. The action is circumstantial and the name of Christ is on some kind of a priestly mitre which comes down over the forehead. It is not actually on the forehead itself but is on some kind of a mitre.

Translation: "Then I looked, and behold, the Lamb was standing on Mount Zion, and with him 144,000 who have his name [the name of Christ] and the name of his Father written in their foreheads [on a priestly mitre which covers the forehead]."

This is a reminder to believers of the Church Age that evangelism is motivated by our royal priesthood and the function of our royal ambassadorship. Every believer is a priest and represents himself before God; every believer is an ambassador, which means he represents God to mankind. So each one of us has a dual function in life. The very fact that the priestly mitre comes into view here and that the 144,000 have it emphasises the fact that all evangelism in any dispensation must be related to our attitude toward God. Therefore the priestly mitre is used.

The name of the Father demands some explanation. God the Father is the author of the divine plan: "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son." The plan always begins at salvation. Jesus Christ is the one who executes eternal salvation as God the Son; God the Holy Spirit reveals it. The name of the Father is written because He is the author of the divine plan; the name of the Son is written because He is the entrance into the divine plan. The name of God the Holy Spirit is not written because He is the unseen power of evangelism and the unseen power of the spiritual life after one is evangelised.

So written in the priestly mitre on the foreheads of the 144,000 evangelists is a reminder to believers of the Church Age that evangelism must be motivated by our royal priesthood and must be the function of our royal ambassadorship. But the mitre in context is a special type of head gear related to the fact that certain Jewish believers in the Tribulation will function in special evangelism to take up the slack for client nation Israel. That is the major factor at this point. There is no client nation once the Rapture occurs and there will be no client nation to God during the Tribulation. In the first half of the Tribulation we have 144,000 Jewish evangelists taking up the slack; in the last half two Jews are brought back, Moses and Elijah, to take up the slack for that principle.

We are dealing in verses 2 and 3 with a passage where we have a heavenly celebration of the tactical victory of Jesus Christ. We begin verse 2 with a sequential conjunction kai, translated "then." Next comes the aorist active indicative of the verb akouo, which means that John is tuned in with his musical ear, "Then I heard." The aorist tense is constative aorist, contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety. The entirety of this action will take place in verses 2-5. The active voice: the apostle John produces the action and now he has to write, put into words, what he hears in terms of music. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the fact that John not only saw the heavenly choir, the heavenly orchestra, but he also heard their concert as it will be conducted at the second advent.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object from the noun phōnē, referring to sound, "Then I heard a sound." The sound must have a source and John identifies it as being from heaven: e)k plus the ablative of o)uranoj, “from heaven.” The sound from heaven is the singing of the angelic choir. Millions and millions of elect angels blending their voices in harmony to form the awesome sound of the victory celebration of our Lord’s tactical victory of the second advent.

There are two analogies which John made to the sound. The tremendous volume seems to be in mind with the first analogy: he says, “like the sound of many waters.” This means a very majestic sound. So the volume of many thousands of voices blended in perfect harmony is an awesome thing, like a waterfall. The second analogy is “like the sound of loud thunder.” The loud thunder again gives us the tremendous volume where so many voices are involved. It is a perfect choir and this means the balance of the voices is absolutely perfect. The angelic choir of heaven is compared to the majestic and awesome sounds of nature. The singing of millions of elect angels is both worship and celebration. It is done in perfect musical form. The principle is that singing is a bona fide part of worship.

The conjunction kai advances from the analogy to the reality and it is translated “furthermore.” Again we have the nominative singular subject fwnh for the sound, the accusative singular from the relative pronoun o)j, and repetition of the aorist active indicative of a)kouw; which means in the repetition that he was very happy to hear this sound, it was totally and completely inspiring. O(j introduces a true analogy. The real musical instruments will be used to accompany this hymn of tactical victory. The Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written and we have a descriptive genitive plural from a noun kiarwdoj, referring to one who plays a musical instrument known as a harp. The playing of the harp is in the present active participle of kiarizw, and it means to play a harp. The pictorial present presents to the mind of those of us who are the readers a future event in the process of occurrence, but an event which John had the opportunity of both seeing and hearing. The elect angels produce the action of the verb, which again shows us that they were instrumentalists as well as great vocalists. They are said to be playing, the preposition e)n plus the instrumental plural of kiarw. They are playing on their own harps, the possessive genitive of a)utoj. Literally, it is “like the sound of harpists playing the harp with their harps,” but it comes to mean “harpists playing on their harps.”

In the next verse 144,000 evangelists of the Tribulation are going to join the angelic choir in heaven so that a remarkable musical rendition is performed with the sound of music carrying through the entire universe.

Principle: Musical instruments are a legitimate function in worship. Musical accompaniment is not only legitimate but so often necessary in the expression of singing of hymns. In fact, the very word “psalm” means hymns accompanied by musical instruments, Psalm 93:2; Colossians 3:16; Ephesians 5:19. The use of musical instruments for worship is found in many passages such as 1 Chronicles 16:42; Nehemiah 12:36; Psalm 33:2; 92:1-3; 144:9.

Translation: "Then I heard a sound from heaven, like the sound of many waters, like the sound of loud thunder; furthermore the sound which I heard was like the sound of harpers playing on their harps."

Anticipating the next verse, they are going to sing a song and, of course, one must understand the words to sing it. Since the words are doctrine only those who know doctrine can sing the hymn of tactical victory. In heaven the elect angels understand the whole realm of eschatology. They understand the significance of the second advent of Christ and therefore they sing about that subject in the heavenly choir, accompanied by other elect angels who are musician angels. This is a phenomenal vision and the principle is very simple: there is no phase of worship which is meaningful unless one understands doctrine and relates the lyrics to the music. Music always appeals to the emotion. The point is that all amusement and all entertainment is a balance in the soul of the response of the emotion to the mental function. There must be a relationship. Music is one of the greatest sources of entertainment because when it is done right it balances between the emotional and the mental. The principle here is that worship is not meaningful unless we can balance out the lyrics. The lyrics must appeal to the mentality while we are having an emotional experience. Bible doctrine is not only the key to understanding the plan and will of God but Bible doctrine is also the key to expressing our worship.

Verse 3, the new song in heaven about our Lord's tactical victory. We have the conjunction kai which introduces the verse as the result from what precedes, and we translate it "And then." Next we have the present active indicative of a)idw which means to sing, "And they were singing." The futuristic present denotes an event which has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as coming to pass. The futuristic present is simply a way of explaining the vision as the writer saw it and relating it to the future. The active voice: the angelic choir of elect angels in heaven produce the action of the verb initially while the 144,000 evangelists on earth in resurrection bodies join the angels in heaven in singing this hymn of our Lord's tactical victory. They are the only ones who understand it. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality. A comparative particle o(j is omitted in the best manuscripts and is not really necessary. We should read, "they were singing a new hymn". The word "hymn" is o)ide.

Now we have a series of prepositional phrases. The first one is "before the throne," a reference to the throne of God in heaven. The second is "before the four angelic heralds [the four living creatures]," seraph heralds, ranking third behind the king of arms and the officer of arms. So we note that there is an audience in heaven: the members of the Godhead [it is before the throne], and it is also said to be before the "elders" which are the staff officers.

It sounds like this: "And then [after the instrumental introduction by the harps] they were singing a new song [the hymn of our Lord's tactical victory of the second advent which terminates the time of the devil's desperation]." It is interesting to note that the worst period of human history ends in triumphal singing; "before the throne [in the presence of God the Father], and before the angelic heralds, and before the angelic staff officers [the 24 elders in the angelic order of battle].”

This is the hymn of tactical victory or the new song. It is used to dramatise the fact that Satan is the loser in the angelic conflict: he has lost; he has been set aside.

Since Christ is on earth in the second advent there is the antiphonal part of this hymn sung on earth at the second advent. The conjunction kai introduces limited participation on the earth. It is used to emphasise a fact that is surprising, unexpected, noteworthy, and is translated “furthermore.” But we find out that the singing on earth is limited to one group. The adjective o)udeij is used as a substantive and in the nominative singular is translated “no one.” It is referring to those who do not participate: the imperfect passive indicative of dunamai, “no one was able.” Then we have a strange thing: not to sing. Obviously you can’t sing it unless you have learned it. We have the aorist active infinitive of monqanw, which means to learn, meaning that people on the earth do not sing this because they do not know it. The ingressive aorist contemplates the action of the verb at its beginning. The active voice: mankind on earth produces a negative action, they do not learn it, the infinitive of actual result. With this we have again o)ide, the song, the hymn of our Lord’s tactical victory. So it should be translated, “furthermore no one was able to learn the song [the hymn of our Lord’s victory],” except the 144,000 Jewish evangelists.

The hymn of tactical victory is sung in heaven by the choir of elect angels accompanied by musical instruments which we call harps. The hymn was unknown on earth except for 144,000 Jewish evangelists of the Tribulation who sang it as an expression of their knowledge of Bible doctrine in worship. The hymn of tactical victory was the source of great encouragement to those 144,000 evangelists who faced tremendous opposition in the first half of the Tribulation, and apparently were all martyred because they are standing there in resurrection bodies as they sing. Music, of course, could be a stimulus and an encouragement under great pressure, and these evangelists were under great pressure. But in their greatest adversities the 144,000 evangelists maintained their doctrinal integrity as part of the system, the plan and purpose of God for their lives, because they knew doctrine. And part of their integrity and modus vivendi is stated in the next two verses. Obviously they lived, as we studied before in Revelation chapter seven, abnormal lives by human standards. They were motivated by doctrine and especially doctrine set to music. The new song was composed in heaven where it was sung before the throne of God and the angelic college of heralds in the elect order of battle. The victory hymn was revealed to one category of believers when they went to heaven and the 144,000 evangelists did learn this song, did come back with Christ, were their in resurrection bodies, and when He stood on Mount Zion they sang the same song that was sung in heaven, on earth. The fantastic doctrine as stirring music was a source of blessing and motivation to these honourable and courageous believers, and they have the privilege of being the travelling choir who brought the message from heaven in song.

“... furthermore no one was able to learn the song except the 144,000.” “No one” refers to mankind. We have one more thing about them: they are said to have been redeemed from the earth. We have the articular perfect passive participle of the verb a)gorazw which means to buy, to purchase, to redeem, and it means here, "who have been redeemed".

In this verse we have the words, "who have been redeemed." There are two categories of redemption found in the Bible. The first is redemption at salvation, the doctrine of being delivered from the slave-market of sin by personal faith in our Lord Jesus Christ. That is the redemption of the soul. The second redemption, the redemption of the body, occurs at resurrection. Here we have the word "redeemed" used in the second sense, the redemption of the body. They are serenading our Lord in their resurrection bodies. Redemption as a doctrine of soteriology is directed toward sin, while propitiation as a doctrine of soteriology is directed toward God; reconciliation toward man. Redemption of the soul at salvation is actually discussed in the next verse where it is pertinent to the context, but in this verse we note the redemption of the body: they are singing in resurrection bodies. In other words, when they went to heaven after their martyrdom sometime during the first half of the Tribulation they were taught this song by the angelic choir.

Romans 8:23 gives redemption in the same sense we have it here: "And not only this, but also we ourselves, having the first fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, eagerly awaiting for the adoption as sons, the redemption of our body," a reference to the resurrection.

Ephesians 4:30, "Stop grieving the Holy Spirit, by whom you have been sealed for the day of redemption." The day of redemption is the day of the resurrection of the body.

Next in our verse we have a prepositional phrase: "they have been redeemed from the earth." This takes us back to a)gorazw. The definite article of that perfect participle is used as a relative pronoun whose antecedent is the 144,000 Jewish evangelists. They now stand in resurrection bodies at that famous castle Zion with our Lord Jesus Christ. The dramatic perfect tense completes the action with the emphasis on the existing result. The existing result: they serenade our Lord Jesus Christ as the Son of David returning to the place where the Davidic covenant will be fulfilled. Apparently the 144,000 Jewish evangelists were all martyred before the second advent. The passive voice: the 144,000 Jewish evangelists receive the action of the verb, their resurrection bodies, redemption. The participle is circumstantial.

In these first three verses we have a number of things that deal with sound. We have the sound of music and the 144,000. In verses four and five we will see something about these people and why they are standing there.

There are three explanations in verse four and the first one has to do with the fact that they have not been distracted by normal living. We have the nominative plural of the demonstrative pronoun O(utoj, "These." It refers to the 144,000 and no other. These are the ones we have seen in their resurrection bodies on Mount Zion and they are the only ones who know this hymn which is sung in heaven. Then the present active indicative of e)imi, "These are." The predicate nominative plural is actually a relative pronoun, o(i ,

“These are the ones who.” The relative pronoun has an antecedent which is the demonstrative pronoun referring to the 144,000. So far then, “These are they [“they” is not found here but is necessary as a part of an ellipsis] who.”

Then we have the aorist passive indicative of the verb molunw plus the negative o)uk. Molunw means to be made impure and we translate it, “have not been defiled.” Originally it meant to soil, to smear with dirt, but came to connote sexual defilement of some sort. It is used for a general function in contrast to various aspects of sexual activity. The verb is used primarily for the function of the phallic cult but in 1 Corinthians 8:7 it was used for the defilement of the conscience. So it isn’t altogether a term related to sex. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist viewing the restraint in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. It is hard to imagine but what we are going to have here is the fact that these 144,000 evangelists managed to be happy without sex. The passive voice: the 144,000 Jewish evangelists of the Tribulation receive the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of their self-restraint with regard to sex. Normal sex is with women, so we have meta plus the genitive of the noun gunh, “with women.” The explanatory phrase which follows indicates that we are not talking about fornication or any abnormal sexual activity. We are talking about the normal function of the human race.

These 144,000 Jewish evangelists are actually normal men who have the right to expect that at a certain point in their life to enter into sexual relationship on a non-sinful basis. But they are not going to do so. We are talking about the fact that they could but didn’t. The reason they didn’t is because of the nature of their job which will not be finished until the middle of the Tribulation. They have to complete their work in three and a half years, starting at the beginning of the Tribulation when they are saved. They must evangelise throughout the world in that short period of time and that means their responsibility to God calls for great concentration. It means that they are not going to live normal lives, e.g. family life, domestic life. The secret is concentration.

The point is that when God gives certain people a job to do and they only have a short period of time in which to do it, concentration is the secret. Life on this earth is short and therefore one of the secrets to life and happiness is not pleasure, the one word is “concentration.” What every you are doing concentration is the key. Happiness comes from concentration. When you concentrate on something in which you are interested that is happiness, mental happiness. Successful people are people who can concentrate. Talent can never be manifest without concentration; nothing in life is ever achieved without concentration. Concentration is the key.

The impressive thing about these 144,000 evangelists is that they are good. And why are they good? Because they are concentrators. The average evangelist today is all talent and no message, or very little. They demonstrate no doctrine. The evangelist should go through theological seminary just as much as the pastor; he should know doctrine just as well as the pastor. The evangelist without doctrine is just another entertainer, so the evangelist must be a concentrator and know his message. His job is to get out the message.

There are three categories of believers who cannot live an absolutely normal life:

The missionary, because he leaves the normal circumstances of life and goes to unfamiliar circumstances.

The evangelist, because the study requirements of an evangelist if he is going to do his job right are great. He has to know the doctrines of soteriology and Christology better than anyone else, and he has to know what is going on in circumstances of life currently so that he can relate his message to what is being taught without having opinions that are controversial. He is not teaching the whole realm of doctrine and therefore is not allowed to have opinions, but he has to know what is going on and blend into it with his message. He has to be a concentrator.

The pastor, who has a better chance of living a normal life but too much normal living becomes a distraction to him too. His job is communication to people so his social life has to be relatively limited.

The point is that these three categories of Christianity require concentration above and beyond normal concentration in life: concentration in learning, concentration in communication. It is very wearing from time to time and occasionally a missionary, an evangelist, a pastor, will be completely mentally fatigued, worn out, because there is so much of the day that is required for concentration. Yet, concentration is happiness and it isn't a bad thing at all.

Here in our passage we are talking about refraining from legitimate sex. In order to achieve their objective these 144,000 evangelists of the Tribulation operate under a law: the law of supreme sacrifice. They have three other laws under which they could operate — the law of liberty, the law of expediency, the law of love, but they are operating under the law of supreme sacrifice as noted by the next three words in the Greek: parqenoi gar e)isin. There is the post positive explanatory gar, the present active indicative of the verb to be, e)imi, and the predicate nominative plural from parqenoj which means virgin, “for they are virgins.” We will translate it, “for they are celibates.” The progressive present tense of e)imi is for action in the state of persistence, present linear aktionsart. The active voice: the 144,000 evangelists produce the action. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. So we have: “These are they who have not been defiled with women, for they are celibates.” That is a statement of the law of supreme sacrifice.

There are four laws of Christian behaviour

1. The law of liberty, always directed toward self and your rights as a Christian. Biblically you have the right to do certain things that will not cause you to sin and lose fellowship with the Lord. That is your freedom, your law of liberty, expressed in 1 Corinthians 8:4,9.

2. The law of love, directed toward God and others. Gate 5, motivational virtue: personal love for God; Gate six, functional virtue: impersonal love directed toward all. In essence, this law avoids offending the weaker brethren and becoming a distraction to their spiritual growth. This law is expressed in 1 Corinthians 8:13.

3. The law of expediency, directed primarily toward the unbeliever. Expediency deals with evangelism and the individual's testimony toward the unbeliever. The unbeliever often superimposes certain standards on the believer, standards which are nonsensical. He expects the believer to comply and exemplify these standards regardless of their spiritual connotation. Therefore the Christian must often refrain from doing certain things not because they are wrong but because they prevent the unbeliever from seeing the true issue of salvation, faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. This law is expressed in 1 Corinthians 9:16-23; 10:23.

4. The law of supreme sacrifice, always directed toward God. This is the highest law of Christian behaviour. It requires the believer to often forsake normal living and legitimate function in life in order to serve the Lord in a specialised capacity or in an historical emergency. This law is stated in 1 Corinthians 9:1-15.

The 144,000 Jewish evangelists of the Tribulation demonstrate the highest possible spiritual life by functioning under the law of supreme sacrifice. Their personal love for God supersedes their normal desires in life. They can concentrate on God. The gift of evangelism carries a tremendous responsibility, the time is short in the Tribulation, and therefore these honourable believers cannot have normal relationships in life and at the same time do their job. They must choose between their job and normal relationships in life. For them marriage would be a distraction to the normal fulfilment of their mission which requires unusual concentration and expenditure of energy. Even in the best of times it is difficult for those who have the gift of evangelism to do their job right and at the same time have a normal life.

We come to the principle behind the use of the law of supreme sacrifice in the evangelistic function of the 144,000 Jewish evangelists of the Tribulation. There are two reasons why this happens. The first, as we have seen, is concentration. Marriage would have been a distraction to their mission of evangelism in the Tribulation. The Tribulation generation is under extreme historical disaster and is generally characterised by world-wide degeneration. That is an important point for the second concept. When there is evangelism in any time of historical disaster there are always very moral unbelievers even in the presence of all the degeneracy. Moral unbelievers always exist in a degenerate society. They are generally characterised by great self-righteousness, self-righteous arrogance. Arrogant people, especially arrogant self-righteous people, are always the most difficult to reach in a time of historical disaster. What reaches the immoral unbeliever? The judgements. In other words, immoral unbelievers are sensitive to divine judgment. In fact divine judgment is always the last system for evangelisation. But the people who are not sensitive to judgment are moral unbelievers — self-righteous arrogance. So we have a second principle and that is the fact of this law of supreme sacrifice to evangelise everyone in that generation because everyone includes, always in a degenerate society, a certain number of very moral self-righteous people. Morality and self-righteousness will never save anyone. That is works.

Matthew 24:34, "Truly I say to you, this race [Jewish race, not generation] shall not vanish [pass away, a reference to the Jews in the Tribulation] until all these things take place.

In both halves of the Tribulation we have a very unusual category of people. Just because society is generally degenerate it doesn't mean that all unbelievers are degenerate, far from it. There is always the moral unbeliever and the moral unbeliever will be very prominent in the Tribulation as in any other period of history. What we are really dealing with here is the moral unbeliever. In any dispensation or period of history the most difficult people to reach with the gospel are the moral, self-righteous unbelievers.

Verse 35, our Lord makes a statement that has nothing to do with the Tribulation but has to do with a principle that will be fulfilled in the Tribulation. Many of the Jews, both believers and unbelievers, are going to live through the Tribulation. When our Lord returns at the second advent there will be Jews alive. "Heaven and earth shall pass away [reference to the end of the Millennium], but my words [doctrine, eschatology] will not pass away."

Verse 36, "But concerning that day and that hour [the day of the second advent, the fulfilment of the unconditional covenants to Israel] no one knows, not even the angels in heaven, nor the Son, but the Father only." God the Father is the author of the plan. Israel's future is the Father's plan. Jesus is speaking from His humanity. His deity will know.

Verse 37, "For just as in the days of Noah ..." There is an analogy to just before the flood came and just before the second advent comes. This is not an analogy between Noah's day and the Rapture. The Rapture isn't even taught in the book of Matthew. Noah evangelised for 120 years and people asked him why he was building a boat when there was no water. He said the judgment is going to come and when it does it will be final, all unbelievers will drown. The only way that unbelievers could avoid drowning was to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. Over in the Tribulation the 144,000 are going to preach for three and a half years and then there will be Moses and Elijah, and so on. That means there will be seven years only and that everything is more concentrated and that more concentration is necessary. It means that the law of supreme sacrifice is necessary for the evangelists in the Tribulation. The judgment of the second advent is just as final on unbelievers as the judgment of the flood in the days of Noah. All unbelievers drowned in the days of Noah; in the day of the second advent all unbelievers are going to be cast off the earth — the baptism of fire. In Noah's day it was water; in our Lord's second advent it will be fire, they will be executed by burning, so that only believers will go into the Millennium as the cadre to repopulate the earth under the perfect environment of the Millennium.

"... so shall the coming of the Son of Man [the second advent, not the Rapture] be."

Verse 38, "For in those days which were before the flood ..." Degeneracy is obvious but moral degeneracy is not. What do moral people always do — even moral degenerates? They marry. So we are dealing now with moral degeneracy. And what is moral degeneracy? Not sin. "... they were eating and drinking [which is not talking about sin here], they were marrying and giving in marriage," all moral activity. They were moral people carrying out moral functions in life. Obviously in the Tribulation we have a generally degenerate situation throughout the earth but degeneracy never hinders a moral person from living a moral life. Moral people go right on being moral no matter what is happening around them. Where did these people get morality? Training in the home. It never leaves them. There never was a time in the history of the world when there were not moral unbelievers. There is no reference in this verse to the degeneracy. Where do you find degeneracy? In Genesis chapter six.

'... until the day that Noah entered the ark.' And why did Noah enter the ark? Noah and his family all entered the ark because they were the only believers on the earth, and Noah as an evangelist had been preaching for 120 years. But notice: Noah not only did not reach the degenerate but Noah did not reach any of the moral. Why? Because he was married and had children. Frankly, they said, "He's no better than we are. He is moral; we are moral." And at least three families gave their daughters in marriage to the three sons of Noah.

But what does our passage in Revelation say? "These are they who have not been defiled with women, for they are celibates." Not married, not having legitimate sex, not marrying and not giving in marriage. Note that in the time of Noah the degeneracy in the earth was so great and the immorality was so great that God had to destroy all the human race but Noah and his family. Note also that with all of these immoral people in the world there were moral people on the earth who also drowned, who also rejected Christ as saviour. They drowned because they didn't accept Christ as saviour. Why didn't they accept Christ? The evangelist was no better than they were! He was married, he was obviously having legitimate sex in marriage, he had three sons. Three different families gave their daughters to those sons on marriage but it didn't change their attitude toward the gospel. The most difficult people to reach in evangelism are the moral self-righteous unbelievers. They are just as good as you are, why should they accept Christ? That is their attitude. There were a lot of moral people that drowned. They heard the gospel but they didn't accept it.

There comes a time in history when the only impact on the moral unbeliever is a super morality, the law of supreme sacrifice. But we don't happen to be living in that dispensation, although it may be true that is required from time to time even in ours because every truly great missionary, every great pioneer missionary, was a single man who went to the field and burned himself out.

Verse 39, "and they did not understand [ignorance based on preoccupation with their morality, with living to the rejection of eternity] until the flood came and took them all away [they were drowning before they understood], so shall the coming of the Son of Man be [the second advent]."

Verse 40, the analogy is related to the second advent. "Then there shall be two men in the field; one will be taken [by judgment, the baptism of fire], and one will be left [the believer who goes into the Millennium].” The one who is taken here is a moral person by the context, a moral unbeliever.

Verse 41, “Two women shall be grinding at the mill [normal living]; one will be taken [a moral woman, an unbeliever], one will be left [a believer going into the Millennium].”

Verse 42, “Therefore be on the alert [normal and moral people can handle historical disaster but they cannot handle the terminating judgment of the second advent], for you do not know which day your Lord is coming.”

This is an alert for the moral unbeliever. Why? Because he is so good he doesn't bother with eternity. He doesn't give it a thought. He hears the gospel message and he says, “I am as good as that person”. The only evangelism which reaches the moral unbeliever is the law of supreme sacrifice. That makes him sit up and take notice and then listen to the message. That is why the 144,000 had a super morality and righteousness. They denied themselves normal things in life, such as marriage and legitimate sex.

With that in view let's take the second principle. The first principle was the importance of concentration. The second principle is the evangelism of the self-righteous and moral unbeliever during the Tribulation:

1. In time of great degeneracy and historical disaster there are always a certain number of moral and self-righteous unbelievers. Immorality-type degeneracy does not influence them at all.
2. Like the rich young ruler in our Lord's day they are very moral, very self-righteous, and very unsaved. The man had the gall to go to Jesus and say, “What do I lack for eternal life?”
3. Morality cannot save, only faith in Christ.
4. Morality is human works and only the work of Christ on the cross can provide eternal salvation.
5. Therefore, the evangelists of the Tribulation to get the attention of the moral and self-righteous unbeliever must be super moral without self-righteousness. Therefore he lives under the law of supreme sacrifice and adds virtue to his morality. The moral unbeliever has no virtue to add to his morality.
6. The arrogance of self-righteousness is manifest in the principle that the moral unbeliever will never listen to anyone he considers inferior to himself in the function of morality.

The unbeliever has a problem. He has morality but he doesn't have something that only the believer can have, and only the believer with doctrine: + virtue. The only thing he can add to his morality is + arrogance. What keeps the moral person from adding arrogance to his morality so that it is self-righteous morality? One thing: humility. Humility is a basic virtue and he can have humility by his enforced obedience to authority. He cannot have the genuine humility that belongs, however, to the believer in the sense of the ministry of God the Holy Spirit and the function of the Word in his life. But he can have humility and only that humility can protect him from arrogance. But the moral unbeliever says, "Look, before I will listen to you I must be impressed with you." The degenerate unbeliever doesn't say that, only the moral unbeliever. And how do the 144,000 evangelists prove they are greater? They look over to the moral unbeliever and say, "Look, you are having legitimate sex in marriage. I am not married and I am not having sex." And the unbeliever says, "Okay, I'll listen to you." That is the principle.

We have next the second reason for their learning the new song when no one else could learn it, and that has to do with their momentum of tactical victory. We begin with the nominative plural subject from the immediate demonstrative pronoun o(utoj, "these." The demonstrative pronoun emphasises a designated object in the eschatological vicinity of the writer and refers, of course, to the 144,000 Jewish evangelists and why they are the only ones who are singing this song on earth. We have an ellipsis which demands the verb to be, "these are," and then we have the articular present active participle from the verb a)kolouqew, "to follow," and we translate it "they who keep following." The definite article is used as a personal pronoun and the relative pronoun is introducing a relative clause. The progressive present tense: an action in the state of persistence, hence present linear aktionsart. The active voice: the 144,000 Jews we have been studying produce the action. The participle is circumstantial. Then we have a dative singular indirect object from a)rnion, referring to the Lord Jesus Christ as the Lamb of God. It is a reference to our Lord's saving work on the cross which is the subject of the teaching of the 144,000 Jews. "These are they who keep following the Lamb". This is a reference to motivational virtue. The 144,000 Jews who are acting as the evangelists of the Tribulation have to be very strongly motivated to follow their modus operandi. Motivational virtue is their personal love for God, their occupation with the person of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The principle is a very simple one: The law of supreme sacrifice can only function from motivational virtue of personal love for God, sometimes called occupation with Christ. If you do not have a very strong motivational virtue there is no possible way that you can function under the law of supreme sacrifice. It is the one of the four laws of Christian behaviour that demands very strong motivational virtue. To use the law of supreme sacrifice requires the greatest motivation of the spiritual life and the 144,000 Jewish evangelists are motivated in their application of the law of supreme sacrifice.

Next we have an adverb of place, o(pou, "where," followed by a present active subjunctive of u(pagw plus a)n, "wherever." The verb u(pagw originated in Homeric Greek and had the connotation of leading someone somewhere, and it continued that connotation. It also means to lead under, like leading horses under a yoke. In the Koine Greek the verb means to go, e.g. to go on a journey. It means here to lead and we translate it "wherever he may lead," a)n is where we get the word "may." The present tense is a customary present, it denotes what habitually occurs and may be reasonably expected to occur, that is, their obedience to divine will and purpose in a very difficult time of history. The 144,000 Jewish evangelists produce the action. The subjunctive mood is potential implying a future reference and qualified by the element of contingency. You have to be in fellowship with the Lord, you have to know doctrine. The contingency means you have to know a lot of things. You just simply cannot say, "I am a Christian, I am doing the will of God." It just isn't that simple. Being a believer does mean that you are automatically doing the will of God. So that brings into focus the principle of divine guidance, a doctrine of determining the will of God for your life and doing it.

Divine guidance has two principles: cognisance and execution. First of all, you cannot do the will of God without knowing it. No one does the will of God in ignorance. The principle of execution has to follow it. Divine guidance is first of all the communication of the will of God through Bible doctrine. Obviously the more doctrine you know the more you can understand the will of God in any given moment and situation. The only classification for knowing positively what the will of God is relates to Bible doctrine. When it says they were following the Lamb wherever He may lead remember that during the Tribulation Jesus Christ, the Lamb of God, is in heaven. They are not following Him into heaven, they are doing His will on earth. So we follow Him through the function of the soul. Executing the will of God is the function of the soul's volition, and the tool by which you use it is doctrine. You have cognisance of doctrine in your soul and with that doctrine you can then decide to do God's will or not. And there is no excuse for believers not knowing what God's will is in a general way from learning basic doctrine. Doctrine in the soul is your weapon. There is your knowing the will of God.

There are three categories of divine will which exist in history. First of all there is divine sovereignty, a volitional factor: the sovereignty of God the Father, the sovereignty of God the Son, and the sovereignty of God the Holy Spirit. There are three members of the Trinity, they are one in essence, they all have the same amount of sovereignty. So the first of the three categories of will to exist in history is the sovereignty of God. The will of God, of course, must be consistent with His other attributes and personality. God cannot compromise His essence. God is a person; there are three persons in the Godhead, and personality connotes self-consciousness as well as self-determination. God recognises Himself as a person and as such He thinks, He decides, He acts rationally. The sovereignty of God is manifest in the divine decrees. God's sovereignty is related to His omniscience, He knows everything that is knowable: what will actually happen and the alternatives; what could have happened but did not. Only what you really think, only your motivation, only your decisions and actions are entered into the computer of divine decrees. Then, of course, you get your printout which is history. That is a part of the decrees. Omniscience knows the alternatives as well but they are never entered into the divine decrees. The will of God or the sovereignty of God is His all-inclusive purpose concerning all that ever was or ever will be among creatures, angelic and human. This will and purpose originates within Himself and therefore the will of God was objectively designed for His glory, for His pleasure, for His satisfaction. God's decrees do not originate from His foreknowledge. In the logical order of function the foreknowledge of God makes nothing certain, it is merely one of the printouts from the computer of divine decrees. In essence, then, all things depend on God's will and nothing is certain apart from God's will; which is another way of saying that nothing has ever taken God by surprise, He knew it in eternity past.

The principle of the will of God is grace. The divine outline of human history in the dispensation or the programming of the ages is purely a reflection of His will. The divine objectivity is preservation and deliverance of believers. The work of God we call providence by which He moulds all events into the fulfilment of His purpose. Preservation is another technical word which means the existence of things. Providence directs their progress. Existence is preservation; providence is their progress. Hence the will of God can be described by four theological words. The will of God is directive: God has a plan for our lives; the will of God is determinative: God has permitted non-meritorious volition to bring us to the place of blessing or the place of cursing; the will of God is permissive: negative volition toward doctrine is permitted but divine justice provides awesome and painful discipline; the will of God is preventative: it provides doctrine, establishment laws, and discipline to keep human volition inside the will of God.

The second category of will is the will or the volition of angels. Angels have negative and positive volition. Negative angelic volition is the basis of the angelic conflict. Satan was the first in that category.

The third, and the one that relates to human history is human volition, which is the subject we are studying at the moment under the phrase "these are they who keep following the Lamb wherever He may lead". We are talking about divine guidance and that brings into focus the concept of human volition. 1 John 3:23 is a good place to start with divine guidance because it gives us a simple axiom on which to start as members of the human race: "This is his mandate [will]." First of all it is a mandate to the unbeliever to believe in Christ, and secondly it is a mandate to the believer: virtue first, "that we believe in the name of his Son Jesus Christ, then love one another [the principle of virtue first], just as he has given us commandment."

Three categories

There is the viewpoint will of God. In essence, what does God want me to think? What is orthodox thinking? What is thinking that is the will of God and thinking that is not the will of God? Obviously, thinking that is not the will of God deals with arrogance in cosmic one and sin in cosmic two. The only way that you can ever execute the viewpoint will of God is through cognisance of Bible doctrine. You must be positive toward doctrine. The less doctrine you know the more it is impossible for you to think the will of God. The will of God always starts with thinking.

There is the operational will of God. What does He want me to do? This can be very subjective or objective. How do you keep it objective? Doctrine again. There are a lot of things that we do where we don't say, "Is this the will of God?" But there are major functions in our life that are definitely things that we do and we have to ask, "Is this the will of God?" Violence and maligning people who disagree with us is definitely not the will of God. "What does God want me to do?" has many answers and they can never be answered without learning doctrine. It is not only what God wants us to do but what God does not want us to do. You learn both ways through doctrine.

There is the geographical will of God. Where does God want me to be? We have to answer that for ourselves. Does God want me to be at Bible class or does He want me to be at a football game?

That brings us to the classification of the will of God and we have three categories: First of all there is the directive will of God — this is what God wants you to do; secondly there is the permissive will of God — He lets you do it and live even though He said you couldn't; thirdly, there is the overruling will of God. In Numbers 22:12 God said to Balaam, "Do not go with them," the king of Moab wanted the Jews cursed so they called Balaam to do it, "you will not curse the people; for they are blessed." But there was a big fee involved so Balaam went. Verse 20 — "And God came to Balaam at night and said to him [God does not overrule volition], "If the men have come to call you, rise up and go with them; but only the word which I speak to you shall you do." That was the permissive will of God; He let him live. Finally in verse 23 there was the overruling will of God. Balaam stood up to curse them but God put words in his mouth that blessed them. Three times Balak said to curse them and three times Balaam tried to and he couldn't. Finally Balaam said to Balak, king of Moab, "I'll tell you what you can do. You can't destroy them this way but send all your beautiful women down to the men's camp, get them to fornicate, that will destroy them." And that is what happened. Even the overruling will of God didn't stop Balaam. He loved money.

Then there is the academic concept of divine guidance, the principle of doctrine in the soul. Like Psalm 32:8, "I will instruct you and teach you in the way which you should go; I will counsel you with my eye upon you." The word is "instruct" here, it means to teach doctrine. That is the key.

Or Isaiah 58:11, "Therefore the Lord will continually guide you, and satisfy your soul in scorched places [in time of depression], and give strength to your bones; therefore you will be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water who waters do not deceive." The key is, the Lord will continually guide you and He does this through Bible doctrine.

Proverbs 3:1-6, "My son, do not forget my doctrine, but let your heart keep my commandments [you have to know doctrine to do the will of God]; for length of days and years of life, and prosperity they will add to you. Do not let grace and doctrine leave you; bind them around your neck, write them on the tablet of your right lobe. So you will find grace and good understanding in the sight of God and man [being guided by God not only gives you a wonderful relationship with God but with man as well]. Trust in the Lord with all your right lobe, and do not lean to your own understanding [don't depend on your understanding, depend upon doctrine]. In all your ways acknowledge him and he will direct your paths."

The filling of the Spirit is an issue, Ephesians 5:14-18. In this dispensation this is said to be definitely a part of the will of God. The principle of spiritual growth, momentum in the spiritual life, is also the will of God. It is momentum, of course, that makes it possible for us as those who are believers in the Lord Jesus Christ to know the will of God and to execute the will of God.

The will of God has a mechanical aspect: the principle of guidance through prayer, Acts 11:5; guidance through thinking, Acts 11:6; guidance through perception of doctrine, Acts 11:7-10; guidance through providential circumstances, Acts 11:11; guidance through the Holy Spirit, Acts 11:12; guidance through fellowship with believers and comparison of spiritual data, Acts 11:13,14; guidance through the recall of doctrine, Acts 11:16.

This is the second reason why these Jewish evangelists were the only ones who sang the new song on earth. "These are they who keep following the Lamb wherever he may lead."

We now have the third phrase which explains why they were the only ones singing this song: their strategical victory which preceded their tactical victory. Again we have the nominative plural subject from the immediate demonstrative pronoun ο(το)ι. It is referring to the 144,000 Jewish evangelists and is translated "these." Then the aorist passive indicative of the verb ἀγοράζω meaning to purchase, to redeem, to buy. There are two categories of redemption as we have noted: the redemption of the soul and the redemption of the body. In this verse the redemption of the soul applies, it refers to the doctrine of redemption from soteriology. The concept of redemption is very simple. We are all pictured as members of the human race inside the slave-market of sin and the principle is that at the cross our Lord provided the necessary freedom; He paid the purchase price and now we are free to leave the slave-market. We leave by believing in the Lord Jesus Christ. The aorist is the culminative aorist, it refers to a fact which has come to be in the past and contemplated in its entirety but emphasised from the viewpoint of existing results. The existing results: these people have salvation, they received Christ immediately after the Rapture. The passive voice: the 144,000 evangelists receive the action of the verb — redemption. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of their eternal salvation after the Rapture of the Church. Since there were no witnesses they have not been saved through witnessing. They did not hear any preaching of the gospel through evangelists, they simply read the passages of scripture for themselves and responded to them by faith in Christ.

They are said to be "from among men," the prepositional phrase ἀπό plus the ablative of ἀνθρώπων. There were no saved people. "Men" here does not mean male, it is a generic term for mankind, "these have been redeemed from among mankind."

Then we have the nominative singular of apposition ἀπαρχή, "firstfruits." It indicates that these 144,000 Jewish evangelists scattered throughout the world were the first believers of the Tribulation. They are also the evangelists, they begin the great harvest of souls during that period of time. With this we have the datives of possession from two nouns, θεῷ referring to God the Father, and the noun ἀρνίον referring to the Lord Jesus Christ as our saviour. The word "Lamb" connects the presentation of salvation in the Old Testament when they slaughtered the lamb on the altar, the physical death of the lamb representing the spiritual death of Christ on the cross. So it links the lamb sacrifices of the Levitical offerings with the work of Christ on the cross.

Translation of verse 4: "These are they [the 144,000 Jewish evangelists] who have not been defiled with women; for they are celibates. These are they who keep following the Lamb wherever he may lead. These have been redeemed from among mankind, the firstfruits belonging to God [God the Father, the author of the plan] and to the Lamb [God the Son, the executor of the plan on the cross]."

The reference, then, is to the 144,000 Jewish evangelists of the Tribulation and they have fulfilled the divine system of priorities as the firstfruits to God the Father and God the Son. These priorities are the same in every dispensation. The principle remains the same: in God's plan, mandates first; in God's system, virtue first; in God's purpose, Christ first; in God's policy, grace first; in God's objective, momentum first; in God's authority, doctrine first.

This last phrase really belongs with the next verse. The end of verse four which says, "these have been redeemed from among mankind, the firstfruits belonging to God and to the Lamb," is a part of the doctrine of sanctification as it occurs in the Tribulation. There are three categories of sanctification and they are analogous to the three phases of the plan of God.

The first category of sanctification is phase one sanctification: salvation. The moment we believe in Christ in this dispensation we enter into union with Christ. Union with Christ at salvation is phase one sanctification. In other words, this is one of the 36 things that God does for every believer at salvation. And so it will be in the Tribulation except there will not be 36, there will be something less than that.

Then, phase two salvation is God's plan for the believer in time. Phase two of the plan of God has its own system of sanctification which has to do with advancing to maturity.

Then there is phase three sanctification which is the possession of eternal life or enjoying eternal life in the possession of a resurrection body.

So we have phase one, salvation; phase two experiential sanctification; phase three, ultimate or eternal sanctification. We have just seen in the last part of verse four a reference to phase one sanctification. God does a certain number of things in every dispensation for a person at the moment he makes the decision to believe in Christ, and they are irreversible and unchangeable. The next two categories of sanctification are found in verse five.

Verse 5, the sanctification of the 144,000 Jewish evangelists of the Tribulation. We begin with the experiential sanctification of phase two. Once the Church is removed we go to the Tribulation and we go to the manifestation of spirituality. They are not all indwelt by the Spirit. The indwelling and the filling of the Spirit is unique to the Church Age and will exist in the dispensation of the Millennium.

God the Holy Spirit only indwelt a few people in the Old Testament dispensation: kings, prophets, writers of scripture, very few. So experiential sanctification was manifest in an entirely different way, by overt function. But once you come to the New Testament and the Church Age all believers are indwelt by God the Holy Spirit. All believers are commanded to be filled with the Spirit and to walk in the Spirit, the function of gate one of the divine dynasphere. As a result experiential sanctification is always related to the filling of the Holy Spirit and the consistent perception of Bible doctrine. Once the royal family is removed you go back to Old Testament times and when dealing with experiential sanctification or spirituality in the Tribulation you go to an entirely different system. The emphasis is on how you handle your mouth, what you say or do not say. It is not until the second advent that every believer is again filled with the Spirit, Joel chapter two, which is a Millennial passage.

We start with the conjunction kai, introducing a result from what precedes, "Furthermore." Next we have the nominative singular subject yeudoj and with it the negative o)uk. Yeudoj means "lie" and o)uk means "no" or "not." So we translate, "Furthermore no lie [or deception]." What this is saying is that virtue is first in every dispensation as a principle of the spiritual life and experiential sanctification. So "no lie" means virtue. This is the status of experiential sanctification in phase two of God's plan for the believer in the Tribulation and, as a matter of fact, the principle for the believer in any dispensation. "Furthermore no deception was found." This does not mean they were sinless, it means that they produced virtue in their spiritual lives. We have the aorist passive indicative of e(uriskw, "was found." The aorist tense is the constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. In other words, the general characteristic of these 144,000 believers scattered throughout the world preaching the gospel is virtue first. No deception was found in them. The passive voice: the subject receives the action of the verb, they were not deceitful. That means they were virtuous. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of their integrity, including their humility, their motivational and functional virtue. And where is this manifest? Not in the overt function of their life, not even in thought as such, but we have a prepositional phrase to tell us exactly where it was found, e)n plus the locative of stoma, "mouth," and with this we have a)utoj, the possessive genitive plural, "in their mouth." This is experiential sanctification of the firstfruits, the first people to be saved in the Tribulation, the 144,000 Jewish evangelists. This fulfils the system in the divine plan for the believer: virtue first, humility as the foundation for virtue, motivational virtue which is always directed toward God, and functional virtue which is directed toward mankind and the circumstances of life.

There is more than meets the eye in this because we are dealing with the doctrine of the sins of the tongue in effect. It must be remembered that sin is defined as any transgression of divine law but it is much more emphatic than that because sin is actually defined as failing to meet the standards of God. For example, the Mosaic law represents the standards of God in part, and there are many other standards of God and many other statements of sin besides the hundreds of commandments that are found in the Mosaic law. There are, of course, two categories of sin: known sin, a transgression or violation of a divine standard — you know the standard. Therefore it involves human perception or cognisance of the standard and you deliberately use your volition to violate it. In other words, you not only wanted to do it but you knew that when you were doing it you were sinning; and there is the unknown sin, a transgression or violation of divine standards in which the act is committed without human perception or cognisance. You wanted to do it but you didn't know it was a sin. You are still responsible because you wanted to do it, volition being the issue.

There are three kinds of sin. The first category is what we might call imputation. This is the sin that we received at birth, Adam's original sin which is imputed to the genetically-formed old sin nature. The second is the perpetuation of sin, the old sin nature, since each member of the human race receives at birth the old sin nature. It is the source of temptation to sin. Then there is personal sin the source of which is human volition.

Our subject deals with experiential sanctification which is said to relate to personal sins, "Furthermore no deception was found in their mouth." There are three categories of personal sin. The first category is mental. For example, all motivational evil at cosmic one, gate one, is a personal mental sin such as arrogance, jealousy, hatred, etc. The second category are verbal sins: gossip, maligning, slander, judging, lying, etc. And the third category is the overt category: murder, adultery, stealing, drunkenness, drug addiction.

James 3:6 introduces the category of verbal sins. The greatest manifestation of humility verses arrogance, or virtue versus carnality, is found in verbal sinning because all verbal sin is the result of mental sins. The mental sins come first. Mental sins motivate verbal sins. If you are jealous of someone you malign them, if you are bitter toward someone you attack them with slander. So the actual overt manifestation of experiential sanctification is the control of the tongue or the sinning of the tongue in the Tribulation, because the verbal is the manifestation of the mental attitude. Therefore, verbal is emphasised.

"And the tongue is a fire [in the sense of being destructive]..." The tongue is the instrument of speech and we are talking about speaking sins, verbal sins "the cosmos of wickedness [or deceitfulness]." When you are guilty of sins of the tongue you are in the cosmic system, "the tongue is set among our members as that which contaminates the entire body, therefore setting on fire the cycle of existence, and being set on fire by the agency of Gehenna [a synonym for the cosmic system]."

So the sins of the tongue are described by James as being the most destructive. They are like a fire, they start in one spot and they go everywhere.

Proverbs 6:16-19, a passage where sins are categorised, the seven worst sins. Out of the seven sins which God despises three of them are related to the tongue. Three of the sins are mental, three are verbal, and one of them is an overt sin.

"There are six things which the Lord hates, yes, seven which are an abomination to his soul: arrogant eyes." The eyes are the window of the soul, they reflect the thought. So number one is a mental sin: arrogance, "a lying tongue," a sin of the tongue, "and hands that shed innocent blood," murder, the only overt sin in the list, and completes representation from all three categories.

Verse 18, “a right lobe which devises evil plans,” conspiracy, revolution. Related, therefore, to any system of combining these three sins. All conspiracy and revolution is spawned and motivated from arrogance. All conspiracy, revolution and civil disobedience involves the sins of the tongue, and all conspiracy, revolution and civil disobedience eventuates in violence, and that brings us to murder. So what we have by way of structure in verse 17 is one from each category of sins: arrogance, lying and murder. Then we have it all brought together in verse 18, “feet which run rapidly to evil,” referring to other mental sins which are motivational evil. Running to evil is motivation: gate one of cosmic one, “a false witness who utters lies,” a sin of the tongue, slandering by introducing false evidence, “and the one who spreads strife among the brethren,” done with gossip, maligning, and slander.

The sins of the tongue never exist without mental attitude sins. Six out of the seven sins in Proverbs relate to mental and overt modus operandi. Evil, therefore, is always related to the sins of the tongue. Self-righteous people have rejected grace standards of doctrine and are therefore involved in the cosmic system. The existence of their self-righteousness is always morality plus arrogance.

These 144,000 Jews are great evangelists and one of the things that is manifest is the fact that no deception was found in their mouth. They were virtuous with regard to the sins of the tongue. This means, as per Psalm 5:8,9, that there was no implacability or vindictiveness motivating them, “O Lord, lead me in your grace righteousness because of my enemies; make your way smooth before me. There is nothing in what they say [they were slandering, gossiping, maligning; their inner soul is destruction [mental attitude sins]; their throat [from which they speak] is an open grave [what comes out of their mouth by way of conversation is the stench of death. They slander, they malign]; They flatter with their tongue.” Slander is a sign of cosmic involvement, James 4:11.

The doctrine of sanctification is not only a categorical development of the plan of God but also it helps us to understand the spiritual life in any given dispensation. The Old Testament dispensation had one category of spiritual life, the Church Age has another, the Tribulation goes back to the Old Testament times, and then the Millennium has an entirely different one. Sanctification is the technical term for describing the plan of God in terms of the divine objective as far as each phase of God’s plan is concerned. Therefore sanctification becomes a very technical theological word for the status of the believer in the three phases of the plan of God. Phase one of the plan of God is salvation. That decision: “Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved”; phase two is the believer in time, beginning at the point of salvation and going to the point of death or the Rapture, whichever occurs first; phase three is the believer in eternity. Each one of these phases, therefore, has a category of sanctification. Sanctification, then, means to set apart, to consecrate; it means the plan of God in terms of this concept. The resurrection, ascension and session of our Lord Jesus Christ abrogated the old contract of the Mosaic law and simultaneously interrupted the Age of Israel. So the Age of Israel which had been continuing until that time was suddenly brought to a halt by the death, burial and ascension of our Lord Jesus Christ. Once our Lord was seated at the right hand of the Father He was there without a royal family for His third category of royalty, and therefore the Church Age is inserted in order to call out a royal family of God to compliment our Lord’s third royal warrant. Having no royal family, therefore, the Age of Israel had to be temporarily disrupted and will be continued in the Tribulation. The royal family of God functions under these three phases of God's plan as did the Old Testament believer who was saved the same way that we are but with a slightly different approach. Everything for the Old Testament believer was in the form of prophecy and the fact that they had Levitical offerings, animal sacrifices, and the modus operandi of the Levitical priesthood merely was used to reach not only salvation, by grace through faith, but also at the same time, to teach the spiritual way of life which always begins with rebound. So there was for the Old Testament believer a way of salvation the same as ours, only he looked forward to the cross, we look retrospectively at the cross historically. Therefore the material is slightly different because in the Old Testament they were taught with ritual. Now, of course, the ritual is all set aside, we have the completed canon of scripture, the Word of God which liveth and abideth forever. Therefore, of course, we have in every dispensation the problem: not what is the way of salvation, because it is uniform for all of the dispensations, but the question always arises: after salvation what is the plan of God? what is spirituality? what are the divine objectives? They are always the same in the sense of glorifying the Lord but the mechanics are different. Basically the experiential sanctification of the Old Testament was the function of the faith-rest drill; now we have added to that the function of the divine dynasphere. In the Tribulation it goes back of course to Old Testament times and the function of the faith-rest drill. Then at the second advent it changes once again in compliance with the characteristics of the Millennial reign of our Lord Jesus Christ, the last dispensation lasting one thousand years. Sanctification is a word, therefore, that means that God has a purpose for every believer from salvation to eternity. Every believer, then, has a life which has meaning and purpose and definition as far as the Word of God is concerned.

In John 6:69 we read: "And we have believed, in fact we have come to know that you are the Holy One from God." Sanctification takes its title from this phrase referring to the Lord Jesus Christ, "you are the Holy One from God." In other words, the phrase reads in the Greek $\alpha(\gamma\iota\omicron\upsilon\sigma\tau\omicron\upsilon\varsigma\ \tau\omicron\upsilon\ \theta\epsilon\omicron\upsilon$. The word $\alpha(\gamma\iota\omicron\upsilon\sigma\tau\omicron\upsilon\varsigma$ is the word that means Holy One. $\alpha(\gamma\iota\omicron\upsilon\sigma\tau\omicron\upsilon\varsigma$ also means sanctified or sanctification. It is a Greek word that also has other meanings as well; it means "saint." So we have the word $\alpha(\gamma\iota\omicron\upsilon\sigma\tau\omicron\upsilon\varsigma$ first used of our Lord Jesus Christ, and because it was used of Him and because he is the prince ruler of the Church, therefore it has entered our vocabulary under a very technical sense. The Lord Jesus Christ, being the Holy One of God in hypostatic union, those in the Church Age who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ are also called $\alpha(\gamma\iota\omicron\upsilon\sigma\tau\omicron\upsilon\varsigma$, and it is translated "saints." $\alpha(\gamma\iota\omicron\upsilon\sigma\tau\omicron\upsilon\varsigma$ is, of course, one of the words of sanctification. The noun relates us to the plan of God for the Church Age, the calling out of the royal family, and that special gift of the divine dynasphere.

The first phase of sanctification is salvation, phase one. It is the same for every dispensation: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." The third phase of sanctification is eternity which either begins with death or resurrection, whichever occurs first. It is the same for all dispensations in that if you die physically you have an interim body in heaven until your appropriate resurrection, and then a resurrection body forever and ever. So believing on the Lord Jesus Christ for phase one sanctification and phase three sanctification, the possession of a resurrection body, are always the same for every dispensation. The only differences come in phase two or experientially, what is the Christian way of life?

Experiential or phase two sanctification is therefore a major issue, and when we learn something about one dispensation and its system of experiential sanctification we learn something about others, whether by way of contrast or the similarity. For example, in our dispensation we have the divine dynasphere. Sanctification means to be set apart unto God, and residence in the divine dynasphere is being set apart unto God. Experiential sanctification — phase two sanctification — is gate one, the filling of the Holy Spirit; gate two, which is basic Christian modus operandi. That brings into view the spiritual way of life in other dispensations — the function of the faith-rest drill, the function of the rebound technique. So actually gate two brings into the picture all that is required of Old testament believers, all that is required of Tribulational believers, and adds it to the Christian way of life for the Church Age. Then, of course, gate three, basic virtue which is directed toward authority, enforced and genuine humility; gate four, perception and application of doctrine, perception based upon the function of our royal priesthood, application based upon the function of our royal ambassadorship.

The perception and application of doctrine also belongs to experiential sanctification in any other dispensation. However, doctrine was presented in a different way. There was no completed canon of scripture in Old Testament times and as a result of that it was difficult to have one system of teaching. So there were dreams and visions, various forms of extra-natural and supernatural revelation. There was the function of teaching angels, there was communication through ritual, and then there were portions of the Word of God as they existed at various stages of history. So perception of doctrine has always been a part of God's plan for the life of the believer on this earth. Gate five is motivational virtue directed toward God; gate six is functional virtue directed toward man and circumstances. Testing exists as a part of the spiritual life in every dispensation. In this particular dispensation, the Church Age, there are eight categorical tests that must be passed before we attain maturity. Gate eight, the attainment of maturity, is actually the point at which we arrive at experiential sanctification. Experiential sanctification in principle is the same in every dispensation, it is the attainment of spiritual maturity.

But when the Rapture of the Church takes place the Church is removed. At that point there are no longer any client nations on the earth. At that point the divine dynasphere goes to heaven, it is no longer operational. At that point (those who are saved, the firstfruits of the Tribulation, are the 144,000 Jewish evangelists whom we have noted as the first people to accept Christ as saviour in the Tribulation) what was the believers' way of life, what was phase two for them? We go back first of all to the function of rebound, then the function of the three stages of the faith-rest drill, and we go back to the principle of the perception of Bible doctrine as the means of advancing to maturity. And when you put all these together you have some mature believers. The 144,000 are said to be mature believers and the reason for it is that they attain through the daily perception of doctrine a very rapid spiritual growth which results in this fantastic thing that happens to them — spiritual maturity, which is absolutely necessary for the job the Lord has for them.

There are different words that describe sanctification. A(gioj is the first, a noun which means “Holy One” when applied to our Lord Jesus Christ, as in John 6:69. It is also used sometimes for the Holy Spirit, and is also translated “saint” and becomes a synonym for members of the royal family of God. A second word is a(giothj, generally translated “holiness” in the New Testament. This means the status quo of the royal family of God, to share the holiness of God. A(giothj is used primarily for one of the 37 things that happens to every believer at salvation: he enters into union with Christ, he is said to be a(giothj, he is in union with the a(gioj tou qeou forever. A(gioj means holiness, the status quo of the believer in phase one sanctification, for phase one sanctification is union with Christ. Then there is a third word, a(giwsunh, which means sanctification and is translated that way: it means blessings flow through the grace of God down the grace pipeline, and these blessings include our contract [we have the new covenant forever] and the three categories of sanctification that go with it. There are two other words. There is a(giosmoj which is both an adjective and a noun. It means holiness, consecration, and is also translated “sanctification.” Then we have the verb which means to sanctify, a(giazw. They all have one thing in common: a(g, the suffix of the word, and it means to set apart, to consecrate, and this is where we get the concept of sanctification.

There are certain agents of sanctification that are mentioned in the Bible. For example, the agent of phase one sanctification or salvation is the Lord Jesus Christ — Hebrews 10:9,10. “At that time [in the cradle] he [our Lord Jesus Christ in hypostatic union] said, ‘Behold, I have arrived to accomplish your plan.’ He therefore abrogated the first covenant [the law] in order that he might establish the second.” That means that the Christian way of life would be different from the Old Testament. It would include the faith-rest drill, rebound, and other factors, but the entire experiential sanctification would be different as noted by the fact that the first covenant or contract was abrogated and a new contract was established, “by means of which will [or purpose] we [believers of this dispensation] have been sanctified [sanctified in the past at salvation with the result that we remain consecrated to God forever] through the offering of the body of Christ.” In other words, when we believe in Christ we enter into union with Christ and we can never lose our salvation. This is phase one salvation and our Lord is the agent of sanctification, Hebrews 10:14, “For by one offering he has perfected for all time those who are sanctified.”

As far as phase two sanctification, life after salvation. There are two agents. These two refer to this dispensation specifically: God the Holy Spirit, Romans 15:16, “sanctified by the Holy Spirit,” or 2 Thessalonians 2:13, “sanctification by the Spirit [Gate one of the divine dynasphere] and faith in doctrine [Gate four whereby gnwsij is converted into e)pignwsij].” That is essentially the principle of sanctification in the New Testament and in the Church Age. Bible doctrine, then, is also an agent of sanctification experientially, John 17:17, “Sanctify them by means of the doctrine, your word [the Bible] is doctrine,” and Ephesians 5:26, the water of the Word is Bible doctrine. These are the agents of sanctification as far as phase two is concerned. The agent of sanctification as far as eternity is concerned has to do with receiving a resurrection body. That becomes the agent from which all blessings of eternity relate.

Phase one sanctification takes cognisance of the fact that our Lord Jesus Christ as the Holy One of God went to the cross where He received the imputation of our sins. The justice of God the Father judged those sins when they were imputed to Christ on the cross so that the work of salvation was accomplished. Salvation was completed on the cross, nothing can be added to it, so that the way of salvation has to be compatible with the finished work of Christ on the cross. The compatibility is found in the word "faith," "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." This is compatible because faith is a non-meritorious system of perception, the object of faith has the merit.

The sanctification which follows is everything that God does in any given dispensation for the person who believes in Christ. In our dispensation God does the most, 37 things, and positional sanctification or phase one sanctification is primarily our union with Christ. This distinguishes Christianity as a relationship with God from all religions. Religions all originate with Satan; Christianity originates with God and Christianity is a relationship with God through faith in Christ, union with Christ forever. The believer never gets out of that union and he shares the life of Christ, His sonship, His heirship, His destiny, His election, everything that belongs to Him. That can never be changed and that distinguishes the royal family of the Church Age, believers of this dispensation, from all other dispensations. That essentially, then, is phase one sanctification and that is why it is called "sanctified in Christ Jesus," because it is related to positional truth.

Phase two sanctification goes right back to the divine dynasphere. We can never get out of that top circle but we can, of course, get out of the divine dynasphere. We fail by sin, getting us into Satan's cosmic system, therefore the importance of the rebound technique to recover life in the divine dynasphere. This is, of course, the whole realm of experiential sanctification. Experiential sanctification has a purpose, an objective, which is to advance to maturity. But this is the experiential sanctification of the Church Age.

Phase three sanctification is divided into several parts. It can begin at death, absent from the body, the physical body of this life and face to face with the Lord. They have an interim body in heaven and great blessing. During that time the Tribulational martyrs are going to offer imprecatory prayers. These martyrs who offer the prayers are going to return with our Lord Jesus Christ in a resurrection body, also a part of phase three or eternal sanctification. 144,000 of those Old Testament saints and Tribulational martyrs are going to stand on Mount Zion and they are going to sing that song that no man knows except the 144,000 among members of the human race. They are going to sing that song in the presence of our Lord at that time.

Notice the development of a principle. At the end of Revelation 14:4 we have salvation: phase one sanctification, "These [the 144,000] have been redeemed from among mankind," phase 1 sanctification, "the firstfruits belonging to God and to the Lamb." Then we noted something about how spiritual life is manifest in the Tribulation. We find that spiritual life is mentioned under the concept of the sins of the tongue, that those who avoid slander, maligning, judging, lying, and other evils related to the sins of the tongue, these are the ones who achieve experiential sanctification. The manifestation of the spiritual life of the Tribulational believer is his control and his use of the organ of speech, the tongue, “Furthermore no deception was found in their mouth.” So that is phase two sanctification or experiential sanctification.

We move on to the end of verse five where we have two words only for ultimate sanctification. In the King James version this is incorrectly translated. These two words are a)mwmoi e)isin in the Greek, “they are blameless.” We have first of all the present active indicative of the verb e)imi, “they are.” The present tense is a static present it denotes the eternal state of the 144,000 Jewish evangelists. In other words, their eternal sanctification. They are standing on Mount Zion with our Lord Jesus Christ in their resurrection bodies, they have entered phase three of the divine plan which we call the status of ultimate sanctification. The active voice: the 144,000 Jewish evangelists of the Tribulation produce the action of the verb at the beginning of the Millennium. This, of course, means they are in a state of ultimate sanctification. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of doctrine regarding the eternal state of the 144,000 Jewish evangelists — status, ultimate sanctification.

With this is the predicate nominative plural from the noun o)mwmoj which means unblemished or blameless. The King James version has “before the throne.” It does not occur, it is not found in the original, it simply says they are blameless. We know they are not before the throne, they are on Mount Zion. Phase three sanctification: “they are blameless.” They are in resurrection bodies and that means they are blameless forever and ever. No matter how the believer has failed in time he is absolutely blameless in the resurrection body. He may be deprived of the great blessings that belong through rewards but he will be in a resurrection body forever. All believers are going to terminate blameless in the resurrection body. That is one of the greatest acts of God. Not only are we saved through faith in Christ but He is going to take the worst believers, the best believers, all having committed some form of sin during their time on this earth, and He is going to make all of them blameless. Only God can do that.

In verses 6-20 we have the victory of the judgment of God. God is victorious in judgment just as God is victorious in the function of His grace. No matter what God does He always comes out the winner. The judgements which are administered through Jesus Christ the Son of God as the angel of the Lord, and through the six angels of this context from the angelic college of heralds, makes God a winner. The first angel is found in verses 6 and 7, and the first angel teaches us the principle that grace precedes judgment. We note in verse 6 that the world is evangelised during the devil’s desperation and from this point on in the next few verses we are going to study operation high noon. We have six angels plus our Lord Jesus Christ in the rest of this chapter.

Verse 6, we begin by noting a few things from the Greek. We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated “Then,” followed by the aorist active indicative of o(raw indicating the fact that the vision of John continues. Much of the Word of God was revealed to the writers of scripture in the form of visions. We have “Then I saw.” We have a constative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety. The action of the verb is verses 6-20, the victory of the judgment of God. The active voice: the apostle John as the human writer of the book of Revelation produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for eschatological reality, the doctrinal content of this vision.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object of two words: the adjective a)lloj, meaning another of the same kind, and with that the noun a)ggeloi meaning angel, "another angel." The angel involved is a pur sui vant officer in the angelic college of heralds and he is assigned to the administration of grace before judgment. Therefore he must disseminate the gospel to the entire world. He is said to be flying, the present active participle of the verb petomai. The present tense is descriptive for what is now going on in the eschatology of the vision. The active voice: it is a deponent verb which means that it is middle in form but active in meaning. The pur sui vant officer of the angelic college of heralds produces the action.

The next phrase gives us our title for this particular part of our study. We have e)n plus the locative of mesouranhma, "in mid-heaven." High noon or the zenith of the sun is the meaning of it. So we translate it: "Then I saw another angel flying at high noon," the zenith point of the sun in any given time zone. So we now have operation high noon. Hence, mid-heaven refers to the first heaven or the atmosphere at midday. Since the zenith of the sun is midday it would be the best time for the communication of the gospel.

The purpose of the pur sui vant officer is given next, "and he had," the present active participle of the verb e)w. This is a pictorial present, it presents to the mind a picture of the eschatological event in the process of occurrence. The active voice: the pur sui vant officer in charge of the everlasting gospel produces the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial, it expresses an attendant set of circumstances and it is best rendered into the English by the word "and" plus the finite use of the verb.

Next we have the accusative singular direct object from two words: a)iwnoij, which means eternal, and with it the word e)uaggelion, the word for gospel. Translation: "and he has the eternal gospel." That is, he has the doctrine: category one, the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, the plan of salvation.

What is the eternal gospel? Does it differ in any way from the gospel, period? The eternal gospel emphasises the fact that the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ is the only preparation for eternity. The gospel is always the same; the good news is the fact that Christ provided eternal salvation for us. Remember that the word "gospel" means good news, always. The fact that we are sinners is bad news and that is not the issue in the gospel. The fact that we are born into the world is where the gospel begins because when God gave us human life and imputed that human life to the soul He simultaneously imputed Adam's original sin to the genetically-formed old sin nature. That is where spiritual death occurs. God didn't wait until we sinned personally. If God had waited until we sinned personally He would have been unfair because a lot of people die before they sin personally and therefore would automatically be assigned to hell. But if anyone dies before reaching accountability he automatically goes to heaven because you can't be saved until you are condemned. Salvation demands condemnation first, and the condemnation is "the wages of sin is death," and the wages of sin is the imputation of Adam's sin at birth. The fact that we have all these personal sins is not the issue because those personal sins are never imputed to us. God imputed Adam's sin to us and saved our personal sins for the judgment of the cross. That is our Lord's spiritual death on the cross; He was judged for our sins.

The point is that the wages of sin is death, and that is bad news. The gospel begins with the fact that Christ then judgment of our sins on the cross. That is where the good news begins because the good news says that Christ did something about it. Christ is the only saviour, He is the way, the truth and the life, no man comes to the Father except by Him. And only by believing in Christ can you have eternal life, and the fact that salvation is free because Christ said it is finished. He did all of the work; is good news. So the work of Christ — redemption, reconciliation, propitiation, imputation, justification — is good news, and Christ is the issue of salvation. The eternal gospel is the same gospel we have today, it is the fact that Jesus Christ was judged for our sins, He took our place. And there is an historical trend that before any great historical disaster there must always be the proclamation of the gospel. In the Tribulation there is going to be the greatest of disasters in all of history and therefore the gospel must be proclaimed first. So the eternal gospel emphasises the fact that the gospel is the only preparation for eternity. Furthermore, historical disaster is used as warning judgment and before even the greatest of historical judgements come there is first of all the proclamation of the gospel under the principle of grace before judgment.

The eternal gospel is preached or announced by a pur sui vant officer of the angelic college of heralds, hence emphasis on the fact that the second advent which terminates the time of the devil's desperation is the last chance for that generation to be saved prior to the baptism of fire. For when Jesus Christ returns to the earth He is going to separate the sheep from the goats, the good fish from the bad fish, the wise from the foolish virgins, and the unbelievers are going to be cast alive into the lake of fire. The believers will form a cadre for the population explosion in the Millennium. So the Millennium begins with believers only, which means that it is not only the beginning of a dispensation but it is also the beginning of a civilisation.

The adjective a)iwnoij [eternal] does not change the nature of the gospel, it remains the good news that Christ died for our sins on the cross. The issue of the gospel, again, is not sin but the work of our Lord Jesus Christ in bearing our sins. The pur sui vant officer will present the gospel message and he will therefore present the saving work of Christ in perfect form. He will be the greatest of all evangelists, a teaching angel. He will avoid all false issues of legalism, he won't have people raising their hands or walking aisles, etc. He will provide accurate information without adding to the gospel. In other words, he will not get in the way of God the Holy Spirit with regard to that very important decision, personal faith in our Lord Jesus Christ.

There are six different adjectives which are used with the word "gospel" in the New Testament. In Romans 1:16,17 we have "the gospel of Christ." Here we have emphasis on the person of the gospel, the Lord Jesus Christ as the only saviour. The apostle Paul uses the phrase "my gospel" or the phrase "our gospel," 2 Corinthians 4:3,4 and 2 Timothy 2:8. This emphasises the fact that every believer possesses the gospel, though in the context of these two verses the apostle Paul possesses the gospel and is responsible for its dissemination. The pronoun “my” refers to Paul, the pronoun “our” refers to all believers, but the emphasis is on Christian responsibility in communicating the gospel as opportunity presents. Then there is the phrase, “the glorious gospel” from 1 Timothy 1:11. This emphasises the source of the gospel, the eternal and infinite God, and therefore we are dealing with an absolute truth. The “gospel of peace” in Ephesians 6:15 emphasises the doctrine of reconciliation in the presentation of the gospel. Because of the gospel the barrier between God and man is removed — the good news that man is reconciled to God because Christ has broken the barrier between man and God through His saving work on the cross. The word “peace,” of course, is technical for reconciliation. The “gospel of the kingdom” in Matthew 24:14 is not a different gospel but it has a different emphasis. It emphasises the fact that the unconditional covenants to Israel — the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic, and New covenants — are only fulfilled to those Jews who believe in Christ. So it is a message to Israel: You must be born again to benefit from the unconditional covenants given to Israel. Then our passage in Revelation 14:6 has “the eternal gospel” and has emphasis on the fact that grace precedes judgment and that the second advent is the last chance to be saved because of the baptism of fire. The gospel is the only preparation, then, for the eternal state and the eternal state begins for the unsaved Jew and Gentile at the second advent.

So far, then, we have noted: “Then I saw another angel flying at high noon, and he has the eternal gospel.” Regardless of any qualifying adjective or any other word that qualifies the gospel the gospel always remains the same in every dispensation. The content of the gospel is the same, the means of salvation, faith in Christ, is always the same. This means that no one is saved in the Age of Israel by keeping the law. That is legalism or salvation by works — Ephesians 2:8,9. The gospel preaching, then, of the pur sui vant officer dramatises the principle that the world is evangelised in every generation of human history. The fascinating part of the time of the devil’s desperation or the last half of the Tribulation is that the angelic college of heralds is involved in evangelisation along with the 144,000 Jewish evangelists. The principle is: grace precedes judgment. No generation of human history has been judged without ample opportunity to use their own free will to receive Jesus Christ as personal saviour. The fact remains for every generation from the salvation of Adam and Eve right down to the present that “neither is there salvation in any other, there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved.”

Next we have an aorist infinitive of the verb e)uaggelizw which means to announce or proclaim the gospel or good news. The culminative aorist tense views the communication of the gospel in its entirety during the time of the devil’s desperation but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, namely the completed evangelisation of the world in the last half of the Tribulation. By evangelisation is meant a clear delineation of the gospel, it does not mean that everyone is saved. Everyone has a chance to be saved, there never has been a human being in all of history who has not had a chance to be saved, either at God-consciousness or gospel hearing, or both. The active voice: the pur sui vant officer from the angelic college of heralds produces the action of the verb at operation high noon. At high noon every day in every time zone he announces the gospel. The infinitive is the infinitive of local time derived from the locative of time en plus mesouranema, the word for high noon or the zenith of the sun. So operation high noon is a saturation of the gospel.

Next we have a prepositional phrase, e)pi plus the accusative plural of the present middle participle kaqhmai. E)pi actually occurs three times in three different phrases. E)pi plus the accusative occurs twice, each time emphasising direction and would be translated “to.” E)pi plus the genitive occurs once and connotes contact with planet earth and will be translated “on.” This is e)pi plus the accusative and it should be translated “to those who are residing on the earth.” Kaqhmai has a definite article with it and it is used as a personal pronoun for the living population of the world in the last half of the Tribulation. The last half of the Tribulation will be the greatest period of historical disaster that the world has ever known and yet there is a tremendous population throughout the world despite a great disaster, proving again the principle that there is no system of military destruction, no system of tyranny, no natural disaster of any kind that will completely destroy the population of the world. The population of the world will continue and there will be people on planets earth until the end of the Millennium. This phrase indicates a total saturation of the gospel under the principle of high noon evangelism. The present tense of the participle is a progressive present signifying action in a state of progress and is a reference to unbelievers living in the last half of the Tribulation. They continue to live in spite of everything. This is a middle voice, deponent verb, middle or passive in form, active in meaning. The unbelievers of the Tribulation produce the action of the verb, they continue to survive in spite of all kinds of disaster. One of the great disasters will be warfare. The participle is circumstantial.

Then we have another participial phrase following, e)pi plus the genitive of gh, referring to planet earth in the last half of the Tribulation and it is translated “on the earth,” “to those who are residing on the earth.” And then immediately we have another prepositional phrase, e)pi plus paj plus e)qnoj, “and to every nation.”

Translation: “Then I saw another angel [the pur sui vant officer from the angelic college of heralds] flying at high noon [the zenith point of the sun in any given time zone], having the eternal gospel to announce the good news to those who are residing on the earth, both to every nation, and tribe ...”

Operation high noon starts out “to every nation and tribe.” Every nation comes first as a part of this final prepositional phrase. Operation high noon evangelises people of nations. All evangelisation in the history of the world must consider the four categories that we have in this passage. The first category is e)qnoj as the object of the preposition, and operation high noon evangelises people by nations. God does not recognise internationalism, His plan is by nations. Furthermore, freedom is guaranteed through divine institution #4, nationalism. But freedom is destroyed by internationalism which is a Satanic device for cosmic evangelism in the world’s population. All systems of internationalism are evil. All evangelism is done within the framework of a national entity; God rejected internationalism when he destroyed the tower of Babel and therefore we have nations. The missionary, the evangelist goes into each nation with the gospel. That is God’s plan. In this case we have one messenger announcing to nations at high noon in every time zone of the world. World communism, of course, is a convenient vehicle for Satan's modus operandi and word communism is another form of internationalism and, again, evil.

Before each one of these categories we have the connective conjunction kai, so it is "both to every nation ["both" comes from the repetition of kai. When you have a series of kais the first one is generally translated "both" and then after that "and"] and tribe." Tribe is in the accusative, it is also the object of the preposition, and it is the noun fulh. Fulh or tribe is specific, it refers to the evangelisation of the Jews. Jews throughout the world are evangelised in operation high noon. Then we have another connective kai and this time the accusative singular from glossa, a word that is generally mistranslated in the Bible. It should not be translated "tongues," it is a reference to languages. So it is "to every nation, and tribe [the nation Israel], both language," the word here refers to every language of the world and refers to the floating population of the earth not associated with either a Gentile nation or with the Jews. The eternal gospel will be communicated to every floating population on planet earth, their language will be included and they will receive the message. The final word is the word laoj, also in the accusative, then object of the preposition e)pi. It is correctly translated "people," and this refers to wandering people or dislocated persons in every time zone of the earth. So the last four nouns, nations, tribes, languages, people, define categorically the participle kaqhmai, those who are dwelling on the earth. There is nothing left out, every category is included.

Translation of verse 6: "Then I saw another angel flying at high noon, and he has the eternal gospel to announce the good news to those who are residing on the earth, both to every nation, and tribe, and language, and people."

The principle: The time of the devil's desperation, the last half of the Tribulation, is a time of complete and total evangelism. The world will be completely evangelised at that time, just as in every generation, every period of history. The fact remains that there never was a time when anyone was without the opportunity of believing in Christ.

At the second advent of Christ which terminates the Tribulation there is the baptism of fire which takes all the unbelievers off of planet earth (This is there verse of the Rapture) and places them in the lake of fire. So the time is short; people must make a decision in the last half of the Tribulation.

Verse 7, what is given here is in addition to the gospel of the saving work of Christ on the cross. The angels emphasise redemption, reconciliation, propitiation, imputation, every aspect of the saving work of our Lord on the cross. In this verse we are given two additional gospel approaches. The inference of this extrapolation is that you already understand the saving work of Christ. In other words, this angel is going from time zone to time zone and giving additional information that these people do not as yet have. They have the gospel, they have heard it, they have been saturated with the message, but they are given some new information, something that is added to propitiation or redemption, or reconciliation, or unlimited atonement. The eternal gospel includes everything pertaining to the work of Christ on the cross, and the gospel approach is given this time from a slightly different standpoint. First of all, from the standpoint of coming divine judgment, and secondly from the standpoint of relating the saviour on the cross to the creator of the universe. Hence, the angelic herald adds several new inferences which have not been given so far: the fact that judgment is coming and the fact that the only saviour is the creator of the universe.

One final principle in anticipation of this context: the message of the gospel must have good acoustics. There is no sense in giving a message, no matter how clear, no matter how eloquent, no matter how lucid, unless the acoustics are good. No message can be better than the acoustics which carry that message and no matter how great the message if the acoustics are bad the message is lost. This is why the canon of scripture is in written form because it eliminates the acoustical factor. The message must be disseminated, however, through the voice and therefore acoustics must be good enough for everyone to hear. Hence, the tremendous voice of the angelic officer preaching at high noon is the acoustical system. This acoustical system is introduced with the present active participle of the verb legw, "And he spoke." This is a futuristic present, it denotes an event which has not yet occurred, the communication of the gospel by the pur sui vant officer from the angelic college of heralds. However the eschatological event is regarded as so certain that in thought it may be contemplated as already occurring. The active voice: the pur sui vant officer produces the action. The participle is circumstantial. It is translated therefore as a finite verb with the conjunction "and," "and he spoke."

Then we have his acoustical system. Angelic creatures apparently have the ability to be heard in the same manner that we can hear thunder. They have tremendous vocal apparatus and the vocal apparatus of this particular angelic creature is absolutely phenomenal. All of the acoustical adjustments are made in the vocal cords of the angelic creature, and this is not surprising since in one of the descriptions of Satan as an angelic cherub in eternity past indicates that he has a voice like a pipe organ. They apparently have the ability to project their voice and be heard for miles just as thunder can be heard. They also can be heard with tones that are very clear and magnificent, and so we have the prepositional phrase e)n plus the instrumental singular of two words: megaj, meaning "loud" here, it could be heard in the whole time zone; and then the noun fwnh, "and he spoke with a loud voice." His voice could be projected so that every word could be understood very clearly, and it is projected at high noon, the zenith point of the sun, in any given time zone. Furthermore, it has to be repeated in all the languages of that time zone, so the ability of this pur sui vant officer in communicating the gospel is phenomenal.

Next we have the gospel approach from the standpoint of divine judgment, and the principle should be noted: It is to be understood that the entire field of soteriology and Christology was presented to mankind every day at high noon during the last half of the Tribulation. Consequently, what is emphasised in this verse is merely additional material pertinent to that time. The gospel is presented in every generation of human history. Quite often historical trends of a certain generation determine a different emphasis in the presentation of the gospel. Presentation in the communication of the gospel will have an emphasis that relates to the time, the historical times, customs, culture, that may exist. The approach here is the fact that there should be fear if you reject the gospel. This is not always the approach in every generation but it is the approach of this angelic messenger. He does this every day at high noon. Everything is silent and only one voice is heard, a voice like thunder but which is broken down into languages in that time zone, and in every language some emphasis of the gospel is given. Here we have that which is unique to the last half of the Tribulation.

The aorist passive imperative is given first for this is the emphasis given by the angel, fobew. Fobew means two things: it means to fear and it means to respect. It also means awe added to respect and fear. This is an aorist passive imperative and so we translate it "fear." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The passive voice: deponent verb, passive in form and active in meaning: the unbelieving population of the planet earth is given this mandate. They are to produce the action of the verb. They are to have such awe, such respect, such fear of eternal God that they respond to the gospel by believing in Christ. This is not the imperative of command but the imperative of entreaty which does not convey the finality of a command but has the force of urgency, therefore an appeal to human volition to believe in Christ before it is too late. In some periods of history and at some times the word "repent" is used to emphasise the fact that you must change your mind about Christ to have eternal salvation. In other periods fear is used, fear related to judgment. In other generations it is simply the emphasis of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, the only way of salvation, the only way of blessing and prosperity in time, the only way of happiness in time and in eternity.

The object of the verb is the accusative singular from qeoj, "fear God." The generic use of the definite article accompanies it, therefore the personal pronoun is definitely not translated. The generic use of the definite article always refers to the manifest person of the Godhead. That is our Lord Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ is said to be the only manifest person in John 1:18; 6:46; 1 Timothy 6:16; 1 John 4:12. This fear of God, then, is based on the proximity of the second advent and the finality of the judgment that occurs — the baptism of fire. It should be noted that God the Father has committed all judgment into the hands of God the Son, as per John 5:22,23,27. The unbelievers of the last half of the Tribulation, therefore, have a choice: either believe in Christ for eternal salvation or be judged by the Lord Jesus Christ at the second advent at the baptism of fire. The same choice exists, of course, in every generation under different conditions: "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; he that believeth not the Son shall not see life but the wrath of God abideth in him." The difference is that there is no time limit, it is only an individual time limit. When this angel is communicating at high noon in every time zone the time is short. The entire period that we are discussing is only three and a half years in length and it is shortened down, and every day there is a gospel message to everyone in that time zone, every language, every people. Regardless of any barrier that might exist in communication it is overcome acoustically, linguistically, and in every other way. This is the most lucid presentation that will ever occur. The issue is always the same in the gospel: "What think ye of Christ?" But, of course, the emphasis that goes with this is the fact that the time is very short.

We have a slightly different emphasis for one reason. We are born at a certain point. We come to God-consciousness at a certain point. At that point we are either positive or negative, the function of our volition, and we either want to know more about God or not. Then we move on to the point of gospel hearing and at that point we are either positive or negative. We may say no the first time we hear the gospel, we may say no every time. Or we may say yes, we may believe in Christ the first time we hear the gospel, but the point is that this is an individual matter because we all have a different time limit. None of us ever know when we are going to be taken out of this world, therefore there is always the urgency when the gospel is presented to accept it now, not to delay. This angelic creature presents that urgency. Now is the time of acceptance, now is the day of salvation. For the unbelievers of the last half of the Tribulation there is an urgency. That is why at high noon every day over all of the distractions of life comes the angelic creature with the announcement of the gospel. And, of course, in every generation there is an urgency to accept Christ now, not to postpone it.

Verse 7, "And he [the first pur sui vant officer from the angelic college of heralds] spoke with a loud voice, Fear God ..."

What is this angelic college of heralds? It is a special group of elect angels who in eternity past made the right positive grace decisions for our Lord and are now in their eternal state and serving Him in the extension of the angelic conflict into human history.

First of all we note that the ruler of the college of heralds is no other than the angel of the Lord, the Lord Jesus Christ. It is not known if the Lord Jesus Christ had to take the form of an angel to provide salvation for elect angels or not. That is something that we will learn in eternity. But we do know that there are four appearances of Christ in human history and one of those appearances is an angelic form under the title of the angel of the Lord. This is called a theophany. A theophany is an appearance of Christ prior to the first advent. In other words, prior to the hypostatic union. He came also in human form, the wrestler who whipped Jacob. One of those theophanies, then, the one that we are interested in, is the fact that Jesus Christ is the angel of the Lord, and under this title He is in command of the angelic college of heralds. His second appearance is the incarnation, the first time He appears in the hypostatic union, the God-Man, which is His permanent appearance for all eternity. His third appearance is called Christophany. A Christophany is a post-resurrection appearance of Christ on earth. There are nineteen such appearances. Finally, the second advent, the return of Christ to the earth in His hypostatic union to supersede Satan as the ruler of this world will be studied in Revelation chapters 19 & 20.

Jesus Christ, then, as the angel of the Lord commands the angelic college of heralds. In this theophany our Lord Jesus Christ controlled history and carried out the plan of the Father in Old Testament times. The angel of the Lord is often identified as God in such passages as Genesis 15:7-13; 22:11-18; 31:11-13; 48:15,16 and many many passages. But we only want to note that He is in command of the angelic college of heralds.

There are in the angelic college of heralds three ranks of elect angels who are so involved. Not all of the elect angels are in the college of heralds, only the special ones, only those who were outstanding in the prehistoric angelic conflict. And they are divided by rank under the Lord. The highest rank under the theophany of Christ is the seraph rank angels in this angelic college, and they have six wings, the highest badge of rank and elect angel can wear. Next we have the cherub rank angels who have four wings, again an insignia of rank.

The seraph rank did not exist until after the fall of Satan. The highest-ranked angel was Lucifer the son of the morning and he was a cherub, he had four wings. All angels do not have wings, in fact very few angels have wings. The cherub was the highest rank when Satan fell. A new rank called seraph was created as a reward for those who had outstanding records among the elect angels, those who advanced to whatever their spiritual maturity happened to be. The third category of angels would be the wingless category, and they are distinguished from other wingless angels in that they are in the angelic college of heralds.

We learn that seraphs have six wings from Isaiah 6:2. When the angelic creatures entered into their eternal state and Satan made his courtroom appeal and human history was started to resolve the angelic conflict everything was crystallised as far as the elect angels were concerned. So when Isaiah wrote about the seraphs he said in Isaiah 6:2 that a seraph stood above him having six wings. Two covered his face. That is the virtue and integrity of the seraph. Secondly, he said that with two he covered his feet. That is respect for divine authority and the system. And with two he flew. That is the modus operandi of good decisions, control of the life, and a personal sense of destiny in prehistoric times. The highest rank of all of these seraphs is the king of arms. He had a special ministry to Isaiah in the Old Testament times. So we are now looking at seraphs which is the highest ranking of angelic creatures. There are no seraphs among the fallen angels, we are talking about elect angels. Number two in the seraph rank are the officers of arms. There are at least three of them which are found, for example, in the book of Revelation, Revelation 14:15; 18:1; 20:1-3. Finally in seraph rank is the full rank of herald where we have four seraph angels, Revelation 4:6-8, the four living creatures who are mistakenly called "beasts". Each of these, too, had six wings.

The second rank in the angelic college of heralds [those who have done the unusual in their advance to maturity] are cherubs. The cherub rank is lower than the seraph rank. There are only four wings in the rank insignia of the cherub. The highest-ranking cherub in eternity past was Satan. He is called the anointed cherub in Ezekiel 28:14. He was court-martialled, according to Ezekiel 28:15-19 and Isaiah 14:12-15.

This brings us to the word pur sui vant for the cherub rank are in the pur sui vant rank. Pur sui vant is an old French word. In the history of the arms of the college of heralds in England the pur sui vant were used as messengers for kings and princes, both in war and in peace. As a badge of office they wore the coat of arms of their royal lord. In England the college of heralds was also known as the college of arms, and pur sui vant originally connoted an attendant to the king. But it became a technical word for functionary rank below a herald, having rank and similar duties but below the rank of a herald. There were four pur sui vant officers in the college of heralds. In our analogy the pur sui vant officers in the angelic college of heralds we simply call cherubs.

Among the elect angels the following are considered cherubs or pur sui vant officers: the cherubs who guard the gates of Eden in Genesis 3:24; the four cherubs, one at each wheel of the chariot of fire, 2 Samuel 22:11; Psalm 18:10; Ezekiel chapters 1 & 10; the pur sui vant officer who commanded the wind cells, Revelation 7:1,2; the seven thunders who are pur sui vant officers who have the gift of teaching, Revelation 10:3,4; the evangelist pur sui vant officer in charge of crisis evangelism, Revelation 14:6; the pur sui vant officer who announces the fall of ecumenical religion of the Tribulation, Revelation 14:8,9; the pur sui vant officer who carries the sickle and administers judgment in the last half of the Tribulation, Revelation 14:17. Finally, the wingless rank in the college of heralds who would be the pur sui vant messengers in contrast to their officers.

This all has an application to us. We are not going to be equal in heaven. We are not equal on earth; we will never be equal in heaven. In fact, God devises inequality as a grace system. The greater the freedom the greater the inequality and the interesting thing is that not only do we have inequality on this earth because of freedom — also because this is the devil's world, but that is another story — but once the devil is out of the picture and we move into eternity we are going to see inequality again. Everyone who is a believer will have a resurrection body but we have noted that there are tremendous differences beyond that resurrection body.

In verse 7 all pur sui vant officers have loud voices. Even pur sui vant messengers have voices that can be heard all over the world. We have seen that the word “fear” in this verse means awe and respect, and therefore taking cognisance of what God has to say: His principles, His plan. It should be noted that God the Father has committed all judgment to God the Son, according to John chapter five and the unbelievers of the last half of the Tribulation have a choice to make: either to believe in Christ for eternal salvation or be judged by our Lord Jesus Christ at the baptism of fire. And we are going to see another parallel, a parallel between divine discipline of the believer and divine judgment of the unbeliever.

Divine discipline is technically, then, for the believer; divine judgment is technically for the unbeliever. The unbeliever makes bad decisions and therefore the laws of God catch up with him and he actually makes his own discipline. When a believer makes bad decisions he punishes himself with his bad decisions with the consequences of them. The same thing is true of the unbeliever who makes bad decisions and he gets the same kind of punishment. Then, divine discipline actually begins for the believer with the first category, warning discipline, “Behold I stand at the door and knock.” Then it goes to intensive discipline if the believer remains in the cosmic system and doesn't rebound. Finally it goes to dying discipline and God removes the believer with the sin unto death. The same thing is true and we will see it in Revelation chapter sixteen. For the unbeliever in crisis evangelism there is warning judgment. It may be a personal judgment. It may be some family disaster. It can be both personal and sometimes national, but there is warning judgment and if the unbeliever ignores that there is another step in crisis evangelism: operation high noon. We have already seen warning judgements in Revelation — the seals and the trumpets, the warning judgements to the unbeliever under crisis evangelism. Then the third category is dying judgment and that will occur at the second advent, the baptism of fire when all unbelievers are going to be removed from the earth and cast into the lake of fire.

Next we have the connective conjunction kai followed by the aorist active imperative of the verb didomi, “and give.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety and in this case the entirety is when the individual believes in Christ. So the constative aorist takes up one second any time when through crisis evangelism an unbeliever believes in the Lord Jesus Christ. That is called “giving glory” to God. That is because Christ dying on the cross was a strategic victory and that is the strategic victory of the believer. So in one second that anyone believes, that is the aorist tense here. The active voice: the unbeliever in the last half of the Tribulation produces the action of the verb in crisis evangelism. He produces the action of believing in Christ, called here giving glory to God. The imperative mood is the imperative of entreaty, it is an appeal to human volition to accept Christ as saviour. Here is a case where the imperative does not convey the finality of a command but has the force or urgency of a request. And with this we have the accusative singular of doxa, correctly translated “glory” and is an idiom referring to believing in Christ, “Fear God and give glory to him,” the dative singular from the intensive pronoun autoj used as a personal pronoun, “to him.” Why? “Because the hour of His judgment has come, “because,” the causal use of the conjunction o(ti followed by o(ra, and this is the message that will be preached in crisis evangelism.

The time is short to believe in Christ. We are now down toward the end, we have crisis evangelism, they have already had the first stages of it in the first half of the Tribulation. The warning judgment was the seven seals and the seven trumpet judgements. Now we are getting ready to go into the intensive judgements which will be the seven vials or bowls, and then there will be dying judgements in which all unbelievers will be cast into fire. It is called the baptism of fire and it occurs at the point of the second advent. That is the hour being mentioned here. We have the descriptive genitive from the word krisij, “judgment,” followed by the aorist active indicative of the verb e)rxomai, “has come.” E)rxomai is a culminative aorist, it views the baptism of fire in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of its existing results. That is, eternal judgment to those who do not accept Christ by the time of the second advent. At that particular moment it is all over. That is the same as death would be in our dispensation right now in the Church Age. As long as you are alive you can have salvation but the moment you die it is all over. Death is the last chance. But with these people, those who are still alive at the second advent, that is their last chance. The active voice: the hour or the baptism of fire produces the action. This is a declarative indicative for the immanency of the final stage of judgment, dying judgment. “And he [the pur sui vant officer from the angelic college of heralds] spoke with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him [believe in Christ]; because the hour of his judgment [the baptism of fire] has come.”

The eschatology of the devil’s desperation, then, for the last half of the Tribulation terminates with the second advent and this judgment. The baptism of fire begins eternity for all unbelievers who survive the Tribulation. They will be judged by our Lord Jesus Christ, they will be cast into the lake of fire where they will scream in agony until they are brought to their final judgment at the great white throne.

This particular message has some very definite application. This message and warning of the pur sui vant officer from the college of heralds fulfils the principle of crisis evangelism, and that is grace before judgment. As long as you are alive you can be saved. There is no such thing as the impossibility of being saved, it just takes more sometimes to bring a person around to reality when they have said no to the gospel. When we get over to Revelation chapter sixteen we will see that all unbelievers in this period of the Tribulation are thoroughly cognisant of the gospel. They know the message of Christ dying for their sins, they know how to be saved, they have to have some reality and the reality comes from divine judgment. There is warning judgment — the seals and the trumpets; there is intensive judgment, the seven bowl judgements; and if they ignore that then there is nothing left but dying judgment, the baptism of fire. Every believer receives warning of judgment before he is disciplined, and so it is with the unbeliever. Nations, groups, and individuals are warned by the function of God's grace policy before judgment is administered, either by divine discipline to the believer or historical disaster to groups of people. God never condemns anyone without giving them more than adequate opportunity to reverse that.

Continuing in verse 7 we have one more phrase. The next word is the connective conjunction kai followed by the aorist active imperative of the verb proskunew which means to worship, worship in the sense of veneration and homage. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, i.e. the last half of the Tribulation is involved. The unbelievers of the last half of the Tribulation are enjoined to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, therefore produce the action. This is the imperative of entreaty. In evangelism you don't order anyone to believe in Christ and when the imperative mood is used in the Greek New Testament it is always the imperative of entreaty where human volition is involved. In other words, a direct command is not given here. This is not the finality of a command but it has the force of urgency, a request, an appeal, and therefore it is in keeping with the high noon evangelism we have been studying. With this is the dative singular indirect object from the articular aorist active participle of the verb poiew, and it is translated, "him who has made or created." The definite article is used as a personal pronoun for our Lord Jesus Christ who is not only the saviour of the world but He is the creator of the universe, John 1:3; Colossians 1:16,17; Hebrews 1:10.

Next we have the constative aorist of this participle, contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety; that is, Jesus Christ did not create the world in seven days. Jesus Christ created the universe in an instant. Then we have the elapse of maybe millions of years, maybe thousands, we do not know and will not until we get to heaven, but a tremendous amount of prehistoric time in the which the angelic conflict went full force. So we have the prehistoric angelic conflict. Then one day when Satan fell and the conflict finally reached its peak Satan had made his headquarters on planet earth. When the Lord condemned him after the trial He shut down planet earth and packed it in ice. Then when Satan appealed his case and said, "How can a loving God treat His creatures this way?" To resolve the Satanic appeal history began with the creation of man. But the earth had to be restored and it took six days to restore it for man's occupancy.

Next in our verse we have what He created. We actually have four accusative direct objects of the participle and they present categories of our Lord's creative activity. Remember the second person of the Trinity is the actual creator of the universe. He did not create it five or six thousand years ago, the probable duration of human history, but He created it millions of years ago possibly. We have the accusative singular of o)uranoj, "heaven," which really means the atmosphere here. Then we have the accusative singular of a second word, gh, referring to land mass. Next is the salt water area of the earth, the accusative singular of qalassa. The fourth accusative is the noun phgh, translated "fountains," fresh water on the land masses, and with the descriptive genitive of u(dor here, "fountains of water."

Translation of verse 7: "And he [the pur sui vant officer from the angelic college of heralds] spoke with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him [believe in Christ]; because the hour of his judgment has come: and worship [venerate, render homage] him [the Lord Jesus Christ] who created the atmosphere [heaven], and the land mass [the earth], and the sea, and the fountains of waters [fresh water on the land mass]."

Verse 8, the second angel announces a judgment that we are not going to study until we get to chapters 17 & 18. A great portion of the book of Revelation is designed to condemn religion. Religion is one of the worst things that has ever happened to man and the reason that religion is so bad is because religion contains both concepts of degeneracy. Religion has all of the factors of degeneracy. Religion is the invention of Satan; it is his attempt to counterfeit Christianity. Religion falls into two categories as far as its modus operandi is concerned, and these are the two categories of degeneracy. First of all, religion has a strong morality (some religions, not all) which is linked with arrogance to form self-righteousness. You will often have religious groups killing people, having no regard for life or property because of their arrogant self-righteousness. Then, on the other hand, you will find the phallic cult in which have phallic degeneracy, and this is usually related to idolatry and demonism. And this is where you have all of the sexual distortions, human sacrifice, and all the rest. These are antithetical but both are religious. Religion is actually the principle of degeneracy.

We start out in verse eight with the second angel. The second angel is called "another angel." The word "another" is a)lloj, meaning another of the same kind. In other words, we have another cherub-ranked angel, a pur sui vant officer. This was also called deuteroj, the "second one," an adjective numeral used as a substantive. The adjective is used here because we have a)ggeloj, "Then another angel." The second one is said to have followed: the aorist active indicative of a)kolouqew. This is a sequence so we have the word "followed." Again we have the constative aorist and again the second pur sui vant officer produces the action, and again this is declarative for eschatological reality. "and he kept saying," the present active participle of legw is present linear aktionsart and should be translated, "Then another angel, the second one, followed and kept saying."

Then we have a nominative subject from the proper noun Babulon, "Babylon." The word "city" in the King James version is not found in the original, so we are not talking about the city. This is not a reference to the city of Babylon, this is a reference to ecumenical religion of the Tribulation which runs under the title of Babylon since Babylon has been a centre and was once the capital of ecumenical religion. We have already seen from Revelation 13:4ff that Satan's ecumenical religion of the Tribulation is under the leadership of the dictator of the revived Roman empire. The second pur sui vant officer announces the end of the time of the devil's desperation and it is going to end with destroying his strongest point which is religion: the religion of the revived Roman empire. Babylon is also called by the appositional nominative megalh, "the great," "Babylon the Great."

Then we have the strange saying where we have the words "has fallen" repeated for some reason. The aorist active indicative of piptw is the word for "fallen." It is given twice. We have the culminative aorist viewing the event in its entirety but regarding from the viewpoint of existing results, the destruction of Satan's greatest influence on the human race which always has been religion. Ecumenical religion produces the action of the verb and the indicative mood is declarative for the reality of this. The same verb, the same aorist active indicative is repeated a second time to indicate that the message is repeated at high noon in every time zone of the earth, so that people can understand that regardless of their brand of religion, religion has no future. So that is the message for that particular day.

The indictment is also given with it. We have the nominative feminine singular of the definite article used as a personal pronoun and should be translated "she," i.e. ecumenical religion in the last half of the Tribulation. "She" is the principle that Satan in the last half of the Tribulation will combine into one religion the entire world of Romanism, the World Council of Churches, international Protestantism, Neo-Judaism, a number of cults and religions which will flourish in the Tribulation. All of these cults and religions will be combined into one great ecumenical system through residence and function in the cosmic system. While at the present time these religions are often fighting each other and culturally they are antagonistic, eventually they are going to get together. They are all going to be on the same side so that all of the phallic cults and all of the self-righteous crusader organisations with all of their activists are going to be one big religious family. The two categories of demonisation will occur in this ecumenical religious system. There will be demon influence which we have studied as demon telepathy in which demon influence, the thinking of both believer and unbeliever in the cosmic system is involved. Here we are really talking about the unbeliever in the Tribulation. That means that there are going to be certain people who are self-righteous in the cosmic system and in their self-righteousness arrogance they are going to be under demon telepathy. There are also going to be those who are on the phallic side of the fence and they also are going to be in this religious system and will be under demon possession. So you have demon influence and demon possession both manifest.

"she," ecumenical religion, "has caused." The word "because" in the King James version is not found here in the Greek. What has she caused? We have the perfect active indicative of the verb potizw which means to cause to drink, "she has caused all the nations to drink." The perfect tense is a dramatic perfect which combine of the wraths the concept of existing results, completed action, with the fact that this goes on as a modus operandi. The existing status quo is described in a very realistic manner. So the dramatic perfect emphasises the results of the action. This is ecumenical religion in the Tribulation. Therefore operation high noon not only announces the fall of ecumenical religion but at the same time exposes its modus operandi. The active voice: ecumenical religion under the title of Babylon the Great produces the action of the verb. This is a causative active voice.

The indicative mood: this is actually going to happen. God is going to permit religion to continue until the end of the Tribulation and then it will be destroyed.

Then we have our prepositional phrase “from the wine,” e)k plus the ablative of o)inoj. Wine is not used here in a literal sense. The cup here is quite different from any other, it is the descriptive genitive from qumoj, “wrath.” This is a cup of divine wrath, it is not any form of liquid or fermentation. This is the wine of divine judgment on ecumenical religion. It finishes up with a descriptive genitive of porneia, which is not literal fornication. Here we have it in its figurative sense meaning cosmic involvement or unfaithfulness to the plan of God. So under the principle of spiritual fornication we have apostasy, reversionism, cosmic involvement through the function of religion which is the devil’s ace trump. Evangelisation for Satanic religion is like being seduced into fornication by a beautiful woman. Religious lust is in view here, however. Cosmic evangelism results in making the world drunk on religion and that is why our Lord tells us that the last half of the Tribulation is the worst time in all of human history. This is because it is religion’s greatest hour. Remember that religion has two ways of converting people. One is through fornication and the other is through self-righteousness. So it appeals to everyone: some want to fornicate; some want to be self-righteous. Religion is the period of total degeneracy.

Cosmic evangelism, then, results in making the world drunk on religion. Religion is Satanic in contrast to Christianity, and the apostasy of ecumenical religion is spiritual adultery, the fulfilment of religious lust. Religious lust, whichever form it takes, always stimulates arrogance. Inevitably, therefore, there is a connecting link. All forms of lust come, of course, from the old sin nature, but they are always linked to man’s arrogance, not his ego. Ego is merely the self-righteousness of the soul but all lust is related to arrogance. All sins that relate to lust are related to arrogance.

Then we come to the third angel where we get a warning to the people of that time against the ecumenical religious system, and this is accomplished in verses 9-11.

In verses 9 and 10 we have the warning of the third angel and we have a conditional sentence. Verse 9 is the protasis of that conditional sentence and verse 10 is the apodosis.

We begin verse 9 with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, “Then.” Then we have the nominative singular subject from two words, a)lloj and a)ggeloj, “Then another angel,” the third one, and this is the pur sui vant officer of the angelic college of heralds. Then we have the aorist active indicative of a)kolouqew which means to follow. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the pur sui vant officer produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality, “followed them,” referring to the first two pur sui vant officers. They come in sequence, in other words.

Now we have the protasis of the first class condition. It is introduced by the conjunctive particle e)i, and it is a conditional particle correctly translated “if,” introducing the protasis of a first class condition. The protasis acts as a premise in the use of the Greek debater’s technique. The protasis of a first class condition assumes that the premise is true, it is reality, therefore many people living during the last half of the Tribulation will become converts to ecumenical religion. That is what the first class condition says. The first class condition, therefore, is called supposition from the viewpoint of reality, therefore logically the apodosis will be a reality also. The reality of the apodosis will be judgment. Those who become involved in religion at any time in history have great disaster but the greatest disaster of all is to be religious in the Tribulation.

If there is anything by which a person handicaps himself in life it is to become religious. By becoming religious is meant to follow the cosmic system of Satan who has set up a religious system. The divine judgment on Satan's religious system occurs periodically to individuals involved as well as to the entire system.

The next word is the indefinite pronoun tij [without the accent] in the nominative case. Without the accent it is called an indefinite pronoun, and an indefinite pronoun refers to a definite category of mankind living on planet earth, those who become religious. If you ever want to blind your own thinking and lose touch with reality, if you want to get mixed up in a hurry, if you are just dying to be confused, then the thing to do is to "get religion." This is not referring to Christianity because Christianity is not a religion. The greatest blinder of the minds of the human race is religion. The indefinite pronoun here is telling us that we are dealing with religious people. The evangelism of ecumenical religion is based on the fact that there must be a most unusual miraculous approach in the Tribulation to give these people even a chance. Volition, of course, is always the issue in the angelic conflict and every person must take the responsibility for his good or bad decisions. In this case we have bad decisions from a position of weakness. First, the decision to enter the cosmic system and to live there; secondly, the result of residence in the cosmic system: both demonisation and conversion to ecumenical religion; thirdly, the worship of the dictator of the revived Roman empire, which is what comes up next.

"If anyone worships," the present active indicative of the verb proskunew. The futuristic present: it hasn't occurred yet but it will. The active voice: converts to Satan's ecumenical religious system in the Tribulation will produce the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the future eschatological reality of this situation. And whom do they worship? They worship a person. There is a great deal of difference between admiration of people which is normal, and worship of people which is abnormal. While admiration is perfectly normal the worship which is described here is definitely abnormal, and the point is that religion makes people abnormal. Religious people are not normal people. When a person becomes tainted with religion in cosmic one he is preoccupied with self, and once he is he even distorts truth and doctrine. He takes it out of its context and says, "I know doctrine, you are wrong." To be discerning is normal; to be critical is abnormal.

Notice what this passage is telling us. "If anyone worships the beast dictator," he is a man, the Gentile dictator of the revived Roman empire in the last half of the Tribulation. He is also the leader of Satan's ecumenical religious system. But it is the worship of a person and there is a great deal of difference between loving a person and worshipping a person, between admiring a person and worshipping a person. Worshipping a person is preoccupation with yourself; loving a person is concentration on the object of love. Anyone who worships someone else also worships himself, and his arrogance shows under this principle. Under what condition is he worshipping? He says, "I am worshipping the beast; I am worthy to worship the beast; I am an important person." So any time that man worships man it is a two-way street for arrogance. The worshipper is arrogant, he is living in the cosmic system; the object of worship is arrogant. It is a locked-in arrogant situation and that starts abnormality and is the explanation as to how the phallic cult developed in the ancient world. There is always some aspect of the phallic cult because it is an abnormal situation. The key is arrogance because arrogance always divorces us from reality.

Virtue forms the basis for concentration on the object, and people who have virtue have sensitivity because of their virtue. And they are normal. But people who are abnormal, religious, worship man and, therefore, in that sense they attach great importance to self, they are hypersensitive.

"If any man worships the beast dictator and his image," the accusative singular direct object of four Greek words: kai is the connective conjunction, and then the accusative singular of a)utoj, "his," and e)ikon which is translated "image." This image is a facsimile of the future Roman dictator whom we have studied in the previous chapter. It is called by the Bible the abomination of desolation. The overt sign of allegiance to Satan's religious system is idolatry, the worship of the idol. The image is not only worshipped in the temple at Jerusalem but throughout the world by converts to the ecumenical religious system. This worship is classified as the devil's communion table in 1 Corinthians 10:20, 21.

Then we have added to this, "and receives his mark." The word for receive is the present active indicative of the verb lambanw. The present tense is a futuristic present denoting an event which has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain that in thought it is regarded as already occurring. The active voice: the unbeliever, in this case in the last half of the Tribulation, who rejects the gospel produces the action of the verb by becoming religious. The alternatives are very simple: either you are a born-again believer or you become religious. The indicative mood is a potential indicative of impulse: you don't have to go this way. Then we have the accusative singular direct object from xaragma, "mark." There is no definite article with it so we translate it with the definite article in it because that is the way the Greek idiom goes. This xaragma is an ID card to indicate that the holder is a member of the ecumenical religious system, therefore a system of identifying converts. This ID card or mark is given to everyone who becomes a member of the system and it is apparently related to some futuristic system in the computer field and is not something you carry. Those who have this ID card are those who have rejected the gospel and who have accepted the ecumenical religious system, and the fact that they have this card means that they are in the computer.

Next we have two prepositional phrases: in the first, e)pi plus the genitive, and in the second, e)pi plus the accusative. E)pi plus the genitive emphasises contact whereas e)pi plus the accusative emphasises direction. The first one, then, says "on his forehead." In other words, there is some kind of a system where they put in his forehead the ID card. In the second case we have, "or on his hand." It depends upon the individual and apparently there is some kind of classification here in which the forehead has a greater connotation than the hand. In the future those who are in the clergy will apparently have the brand upon the forehead. That means special privileges. Those who have it on the hand are just the run-of-the-mill crowd who do not get preferential treatment.

Translation: "Then another angel, the third one, followed him and kept saying, If anyone worships the beast dictator and his image, and receives his mark on his forehead, or on his hand... "

That is only half the sentence, it is the protasis of a first class condition meaning there are a lot of people who are going to do it.

In verse 10 we have the apodosis. The wine of the ancient world was extremely strong. They didn't go, for example, by vintage years, good years and bad years. In the ancient world they harvested and it went from the bare feet of those who tramped down the grapes practically into the wine skins over night. So when they poured wine out of a goat skin it wasn't taken straight so they always mixed their water with wine. The secret was to have the right kind of water and the right amount to be mixed with the wine. In that way it was palatable. If it was drunk concentrated it was horrible.

The wine of the wrath of God means we are getting ready for concentrated judgment, and concentrated judgment means the object is the worst thing in life. And the worst thing in life is religion, it is concentrated arrogance which can be in moral form or immoral form but whatever the form may be the greatest judgements are always against arrogance. Therefore for all of us for our own sake, to the extent that we are arrogant to that extent we are sinning the worst possible sin. The base for all sin and the sin that brings down the greatest punishment from God, and the greatest system of sowing and reaping the divine law of repercussion whereby we make the decision and we are the products of our own decision is arrogance. The worst of all sins is the sin you think — arrogance. It is a sin you think in the cosmic system in cosmic one, and all religion is related to preoccupation with self. Religion caters to you; religion makes you feel important. The truth is always related to reality and you see yourself as you really are.

So verse 10 dramatises the doctrinal principle that all people are the products of their own decisions. In this case unbelievers who adhere to the ecumenical religious system of Satan, worship the beast dictator, receive their ID card, are the products of their own decisions. They made the decision. One thing about arrogance: it always makes bad decisions and refuses to take the responsibility for them. How do you divorce yourself from reality? What is reality? How do you divorce yourself from it? By making bad decisions and not taking the responsibility for them. Once you become irresponsible in arrogance you divorce yourself from reality. it is impossible to see reality. Arrogance takes responsibility for good decisions, when people say, "Well done", and ignores bad decisions where one has failed. By ignoring bad decisions you get away from the rebound technique entirely. So the phraseology of this verse indicates that these unbelievers of the Tribulation who possess this mark or ID card have first of all participated in the devil's communion table. Therefore they will drink from the cup of concentrated divine judgment.

The period from the departure of the Church, through the Tribulation to the beginning of the Millennial reign of Christ is probably one of the biggest transitional periods in all of human history. In addition to that it is the most disastrous period of human history, a period of concentrated negative volition, a period of great divine judgment, and also a period which demonstrates more than any other period the fact that man is the product of his own decisions. We manufacture our own misery with our own volition and our bad decisions.

Man is on this earth because he is the extension of the angelic conflict. Man is basically on the earth, therefore, to make a choice between glorifying God or glorifying Satan. Every person sooner or later does one or the other. Often it starts out as a combination, that is due to the reality of sin. And sin is not something that stops at salvation, sin merely takes a great many more forms after salvation and, of course the necessity for the rebound technique and the recovery of fellowship with God, getting back into the divine atmosphere. So much for the believer. But the unbeliever doesn't have that recovery factor, and because he doesn't he develops in his soul a tremendous antagonism toward the truth.

All of us are here for a purpose and while the material found in relationship to the Tribulation and much of the material we are studying, therefore, in the book of Revelation is certainly discouraging because it demonstrates that man is not getting better, man is only going to get worse. Man by man's efforts cannot improve man's circumstances. That eliminates all crusader activity. You can't straighten out anyone; you can't even straighten out yourself. Only doctrine, only truth, can come into the soul and do it. And people will resist the truth but you do not have to resist the truth and you can have a life of great happiness and great blessing on this earth, that is the whole grace structure.

But that life of great blessing and great happiness can never be divorced from why we are here, and we are here because of God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit. Therefore there is a sense in which the believer, through his daily perception of doctrine, maintains a God-consciousness (erroneously called "practising the presence of God") of the invisible; the eternal, infinite and invisible God. That awareness is very important because it keeps us from the discouragements of life, it keeps us from following the trends of our weaknesses, whatever they may be. It keeps us from getting down which is very easy in times of economic disaster, historical disaster and in time of change. The human race cannot absorb rapid change without almost a complete and total nervous breakdown of the human race. The changes that have occurred in the twentieth century are so rapid, so great, and so unusual, that it almost more than man can handle. Our flexibility is not up to it. Until we understand our role we as believers are not going to change history by getting into any crusade activity. We aren't even going to change history by winning souls to Christ. We are not going to change history by the things that we do and the things that are commanded by way of Christian service. Witnessing for Christ and other things of this type are very important but the only way that we are going to change history is to learn to sit down and watch history and at the same time grow in grace, for it is the pivot of mature believers that makes the difference. The only bright spots in the Tribulation are the same as the bright spots at this stage of the Church Age, this twentieth century which is changing so rapidly and so rapidly is coming to a close. Therefore we have a great deal we can pick up and learn from the Tribulation. We can learn a great deal about foreign policy, domestic policy, the importance of establishing the truth and how the unbeliever can be blessed through it. We can learn how the believer can be blessed and glorify God all at the same time.

At this particular point we are getting ready for the greatest judgment that God will ever administer to mankind in the historical sense. It is called the seven last plagues in chapter fifteen; it is called the seven bowl judgements in chapter sixteen. In the meantime we are getting ready for it. We are beginning to see the function of certain angelic creatures, pur sui vant officers, members of the angelic college of heralds holding the cherub rank. Each one has a message and each message has an overall principle: grace before judgment. God never judges the human race or allows the human race to almost destroy itself without first of all giving warning. We say "almost destroying itself" because God will never permit the human race to destroy itself. In fact, the human race having the ability for individual and often collective and mass self-destruction cannot destroy or blot out the entire category of mankind. That is impossible and it will never happen. Neither nuclear weapons or any other sophisticated activity of destruction will ever destroy the entire human race. The idea that disaster wipes out the population of the human race is one of the ludicrous ideas that frighten all kinds of people today. Man does not have that capability. Man is the product of his own decisions and when you get enough collective decisions so that you develop some form of degeneracy or some other form of historical disaster then inevitably the tide must keep going, and eventually it will come back and there will be still people on the earth. When disaster comes along it is not the end of anything. As a matter of fact, the end of the Tribulation is going to be the beginning of one thousand years of perfect environment on the earth. But the interesting thing is that if you put man in perfect environment it doesn't change a thing. It doesn't change his personality, his old sin nature, his attitude. Man in perfect environment is just as snotty, just as evil as man in bad environment. The only difference is that in bad environment he is a little more fearful and a little more restrained.

We have already begun to note that verse 10 dramatises the doctrinal principle that all people are the products of their own decisions, and in this case the unbelievers who adhere to the ecumenical religious system of the Tribulation, Satan's system, and worship the beast dictator, receive this ID card related to some super computer system, are the products of their own bad decisions. The phraseology of this verse indicates that these unbelievers of the Tribulation who possess this ID card or mark have first of all participated in the devil's communion table.

We have motivational evil as well as functional evil in this ecumenical religious system of the future. Motivational evil is always arrogant preoccupation with self. Man loses his perspective when he is preoccupied with himself. He also becomes distracted from the truth and eventually indifferent to the truth. That, of course, is residence in cosmic one. Then there is functional evil, the manifestations of evil in cosmic one and the anti-doctrine attitudes in cosmic two. In the Christian Eucharist of the royal family, the Church Age believer, we have both motivational and functional virtue. Satan's system has motivational and functional evil. The bread in the communion service is motivational virtue of our Lord Jesus Christ functioning at gate five of the prototype divine dynasphere. His personal love for God the Father motivated the humanity of Christ to go to the cross and bear our sins.

The cup is functional virtue of our Lord Jesus Christ in His modus operandi at gate six of the prototype divine dynasphere. In being judged for the sins of the world our Lord demonstrated in personal love for all mankind. Therefore we anticipate a doctrinal principle: every member of the human race is the product of his own decisions, good or bad. These unbelievers of the Tribulation drink from the cup of the demons through the function of their own free will. Their own self-determination is the basis for their condemnation.

The application of this principle to the believer should be obvious. He is provided with doctrinal information and whether he accepts it or not, absorbs it or not, benefits from it or not, is strictly a matter of his own volition. From that comes either his spiritual failure or his spiritual success. In other words, whether he is a winner or a loser is determined by the function of his own volition toward doctrinal teaching.

In the next phrase we have the baptism of fire. We have the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, translated "also." We have the nominative singular from a)utoj, the intensive pronoun used in the Koine Greek as a third person personal pronoun. A)utoj is correctly translated "he," so kai plus a)utoj is translated "he also." The nominative singular subject of the intensive pronoun refers to unbelievers who are converted to Satan's religious system. That means all unbelievers who live in the cosmic system in the last half of the Tribulation. With this we have the future middle indicative from the verb pinw, and it means to drink, "he also shall drink." The predictive future anticipates an event which is expected to occur at a future time, the time of the devil's desperation, the last half of the Tribulation. This is a direct middle voice in which the agent acts with a view toward participating in the results of the action. That is very important because it takes us back to the principle in this passage: we are the products of our own decisions. People, of course, do not deliberately want to suffer but every time we get away from Bible doctrine and our consistency in learning the Word we are preparing for ourselves a large potion of suffering. Here it is called the wine or the anger of God. This is exactly what happens to the human race in a short seven years during the Tribulation when it makes an accumulation of bad decisions. Never in the human race has greater evangelism occurred than in the Tribulation. You don't have to go from door to door to evangelise in the Tribulation, you don't have to grab somebody and ask them if they are saved, because angels are doing the evangelising, people are doing it, great evangelists are doing it, and some of the greatest messages in the history of the world will be given. There will be greater exposure to the truth in a seven year period than the world has ever had before. Everyone will be evangelised time and time and time again. But you can only go so far with evangelism. You can't reach in and turn off the negative and turn on the positive. You can't force people to accept Christ. There will be greater resistance to the gospel and greater resistance to truth in general in the Tribulation than in any other period of history, so there is a special drink for those who make these decisions, saying no, "he also shall drink from the wine of the wrath of God." Drinking from the cup of the devil's communion table results in drinking from the sup of divine judgment. To worship under the Satanic religious systems of the Tribulation, all combined into one ecumenical organisation, is to guarantee great judgment. Those unbelievers who adhere to ecumenical religion in the Tribulation are the products of their own decisions. By their own free will they have drunk from Satan's cup, his communion table, therefore they will drink from the cup of divine judgment. The indicative mood is declarative for the future reality of how it will all end, the baptism of fire.

We have “he also shall drink,” and then the prepositional phrase, e)k plus the ablative singular from the noun o)inoj. We have qumoj which means anger or wrath and it is a descriptive genitive. And with it we have the appositional genitive from qeoj, “the wine of the anger of God.” We are talking about an anthropopathism. God doesn’t get angry and God doesn’t sin. These are simply words indicating a divine policy in terms of human vocabulary. An anthropopathism assigns to God some human attitude, something we can all understand like anger or hatred or love or a change of mind, in order to explain a divine policy in terms of human frame of reference. These attitudes do not really belong to Him. God does not have wrath but what better way to explain the intensity of divine judgment than “from the wine of the wrath of God”?

Next we have the articular perfect passive participle from kerannumi which means to mix, and with the objective genitive of the adjective a)kratoj which means unmixed, it is translated “which has been mixed unmixed.” This is what we call in the English language an oxymoron. An oxymoron is a combination of contradictory words designed for an epigrammatic effect. This oxymoron is an expression of John’s wit. The fact that he used this oxymoron probably puzzled the people who first read it. How can you have the wine of the wrath of God which has been “mixed unmixed”? That is the problem. Well, it is an analogy to the fact that the judgment of the baptism of fire is concentrated like a drink prepared without a mixture to make it palatable. This is wrath unmixed; it is not palatable. The judgment that comes at the end of the Tribulation at the baptism of fire is very unpalatable. There is no way that anyone is going to like it who is involved.

The morphology of kerannumi may help us. The definite article is used as a relative pronoun. The perfect tense is completed action. The unbeliever involved has made bad decisions from a position of weakness. That is regarded as completed action, he has said no continually for seven years to the gospel. So at this judgment he must take the responsibility for his decision to reject Jesus Christ as saviour. Hence, a dramatic perfect tense emphasising the result of free will function of volition in the last half of the Tribulation. The passive voice: the judgment of the baptism of fire receives the action of the verb, undiluted wrath of God, fire that burns forever, and those in it are conscious of that fire and they have all of the necessary nerve centres to constantly suffer in the most horrible way. The telic participle denotes a future purpose. No matter how long you refuse to take the responsibility for your own decisions there comes a payoff moment. The payoff moment in the passage we are studying is the baptism of fire. The telic participle denotes the future purpose, the policy of God to judge all unbelievers of the Tribulation. All unbelievers who are alive will be cast alive into the lake of fire with special emphasis on those who have become involved in Satan’s ecumenical religious system. The end of all religion is eternal suffering. Religion is one of the worst evils to afflict the human race for it reflects the unbelievers continued residence and function in the cosmic system.

This is said to be “in the cup of his anger,” e)n plus the locative singular from pothrion, “in the cup.” It is literally, “in the cup of his anger.” We have a different word for anger this time: the descriptive genitive of o)rgh. We had qumoj and now we have possess but describes divine policy in terms of the human frame of reference. The basic difference between qumoj and o)rgh is that qumoj is the mental attitude (generally) and o)rgh is the expression of that attitude in action, in violence.

“He also shall drink from the wine of the wrath of God which has been concentrated in the cup of his anger.”

Religion is one of man’s greatest expressions of arrogance for it is the assumption that he can do something to gain the approbation of God or, on the other hand, he doesn’t need the approbation of God. There are many categories of religion. Christianity refutes religion, as per Ephesians 2:8,9, at the point of salvation. Religion is arrogant blasphemy which ignores the saving work of Christ on the cross and substitutes one’s own works for that of our Lord. Religion, of course, is blindness — “If our gospel be veiled, it is veiled to them who are lost, in whose case the god of this world [Satan] has blinded the minds of the unbelieving, that they may not see the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God.”

What is this wrath of God that comes down upon people? “He shall also drink from the wine of the wrath of God which has been concentrated in the cup of his anger.” We are going to see next who is going to be tormented in fire.

In Matthew 3:11 we have a reference to the baptism of fire, “As for me [says John the Baptist], I baptise you with water [because you have changed your mind] for repentance [a reversal of opinion], but he [our Lord Jesus Christ] who is coming after me is mightier than I, and I am not fit to unlace his sandals; he himself will baptise you with the Holy Spirit [the Church Age] and with fire [the baptism of fire at the second advent].”

For those who believe in Christ there is union with Christ [in the Church Age], the baptism of the Spirit; for those who reject Christ during the Tribulation and they are still alive will have the baptism of fire.

Verse 12, “And his grain shovel [winnowing fork] is in his hand, he will clean his threshing floor [the world]; and he will gather his wheat [believers: only they can enter the Millennium] into the barn, and he will burn up the chaff [unbelievers alive at the second advent] with unquenchable fire.”

The baptism of fire is the judgment of those unbelievers who survive the Tribulation. They are divided into two categories: Jewish unbelievers and Gentile unbelievers. As chaff, sometimes called tares, these unbelievers are removed from the world so that only believers form the cadre for the population explosion of the Millennium.

The time of the baptism of fire is given in 2 Thessalonians 1:7,8 — “And to give relief to you who are afflicted along with us, when our Lord Jesus Christ shall be revealed from heaven [second advent] with his mighty angels, in blazing fire dealing out judgment to those who do not know God, even to those who do not obey [believe] the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who will pay the penalty of eternal destruction away from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power.”

There are three basic parables on the baptism of fire. One is found in Matthew 13:24-43, the parable of the wheat and the tares. The wheat: believers going into the Millennium; the tares: the living unbelievers cast out. There is the parable of the good and the bad fish in Matthew 13:47-50. There is the parable of the ten virgins in Matthew 25:1-13. The wise virgins are those who are believers: they enter the Millennium; the foolish virgins are the unbelievers who are cast out into fire: the baptism of fire. The punishment area for the baptism of fire is called Sheol or Hades and it is known as “torments”.

Matthew 24:36, an explanation of our passage in Revelation 14:10. “But of that day and hour no one knows, not even the angels of heaven, nor the Son [His humanity], but the Father alone.

Verse 37, “For the coming of the Son of Man [second advent] will be like the days of Noah.”

The days of Noah was a time of great degeneracy but that isn’t what is described in the passage which follows where there is no sin described.

Verse 38, “For in those days which preceded the flood,” they were living normal, social lives, “they were eating and drinking,” they were having great social life and that social life was a distraction to crisis evangelism. They were enjoying themselves so much that they didn’t bother to think about the future, all they could think about was their way of life, “they were marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered the ark.” They were just simply having a good time and therefore they were not interested in the future; they were not interested in the principle: “What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole the world and lose his own soul?” There is nothing wrong with having a good time except when the good times are a distraction to evangelism or the momentum of the spiritual life.

Verse 39, “and they did not understand until the flood came,” they had been the recipients of crisis evangelism but they never understood until the flood came and they then discovered that they were not prepared, “and took them all away [the judgment removed the unbelievers from the earth], so shall the coming of the Son of Man be.” Why didn’t they understand? Because their social life, their marriage, their preoccupation with their pleasure and their legitimate fun, kept them away from Noah’s great evangelistic messages. They didn’t understand, they were ignorant.

Verse 40, “At that time [of the baptism of fire] there will be two men in the field; one will be taken [the unbeliever taken out of the world, the opposite of the Rapture], and one will be left [the believer going into the Millennium].”

Verse 41, “Two women will be grinding at the mill; one will be taken, and one will be left.”

Verse 42, Hence the prophetic mandate to the people of the Tribulation: “Therefore be alert, [regarding historical trends] because you do not know on what day our Lord will return.” This is a part of crisis evangelism.

We have noted the baptism of fire which is mentioned in verse 10 of Revelation chapter fourteen and we notice its emphasis in the last part of the verse. The eternal results of bad decisions are found at the point of the conjunction kai, “and.” And with this the future passive indicative of the noun basanizw which means to be tormented, “and he will be tormented.” Bad decisions are defined in this context as negative volition toward the gospel during the crisis evangelism, operation high noon, during the last half of the Tribulation. Those who constantly hear the gospel and repeatedly say no create a series of systems called negative volition. People who constantly reject truth accumulate so much scar tissue of the soul that they find themselves incapable of reversing their decision, and this is what happens here. The vacuum created by negative volition has also brought into the soul a tremendous amount of false doctrine which is called “strong delusion” in 2 Thessalonians chapter two. In other passages it is simply called “hardness of heart.”

Here we have the phrase “and he will be tormented.” This is the eternal result of the bad decision rejecting Christ as saviour. The predictive future anticipates an eschatological event, the baptism of fire after the second advent. The passive voice: the unbeliever who survives to the end of the Tribulation will receive the action of the verb. Then we have a prepositional phrase, e)n plus the locative of two words: pur [fire] and qeion [burning], “burning fire.” It is actually fire and sulphur, “in fire and burning sulphur.” The fire and the burning sulphur is temporary until the end of the Millennium when the same person who has repeatedly rejected Christ as saviour during the Tribulation will be judged at the great white throne and transferred to the eternal lake of fire. The baptism of fire does not deal with that eternal state called the lake of fire but with a temporary type of situation.

The extension of the angelic conflict is mentioned in the next phrase: an improper preposition e)nwpiwn which means in the face of, or face to face with. Sometimes it means simply “before.” With it we have the word a)ggeloi, and a(gioj the adjective, “and before his holy angels,” a reference to the elect angels who are watching human history for the ultimate solution and resolution of the angelic conflict. Human history is the extension of the angelic conflict and the function of man’s free will in human history will demonstrate the fairness of the justice of God in sentencing all the fallen angels to the lake of fire; a sentence rendered prior to human history but carried out after the termination of history. According to Matthew 13:41,42 elect angels are agents in the execution of the sentence, this judgment, the baptism of fire. But in a broader scope in the doctrine of the angelic conflict angels are observing mankind during human history. In the great spiritual warfare of the present time we are not spectators at all; we are the gladiators, we are on the field, we are the ones participating, and the stands are filled with elect angels. Elect angels do have the opportunity of observing us.

Angels observed our Lord Jesus Christ during the hypostatic union, His incarnation and first advent, according to 1 Timothy 3:16. Elect angels observe and rejoice over anyone who access Christ as saviour, Luke 15:7,10. Angels observe the modus operandi of believers in time and there are a large number of passages that tell us that, 1 Corinthians 4:9; 6:3; 11:10; Ephesians 3:10; 1 Timothy 5:21. All of those are Pauline epistles. Also 1 Peter 1:12. We are under observation by angelic creatures: that is, the winners, not the losers.

The winner in the angelic conflict is mentioned next. We have the same prepositional phrase: "and in the presence of the Lamb," the improper preposition ἐν plus τῷ, referring to the Lord Jesus Christ. The Lamb is always identified as our Lord Jesus Christ, as per John 1:29. When John the Baptist saw the coming of the Church Age in the future, looked back into the past and saw some differences developing and said concerning Jesus Christ, "Behold the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world."

The Lord Jesus Christ is the Lamb of God. There are two phrases used in the New Testament in order to depict the person and the work of Christ on the cross. One is the word "lamb" because it was used as a sacrifice and it taught the doctrine of soteriology and related it to Christology. The other is the word "blood" which refers to the saving work of Christ on the cross. All judgment is committed to the Lord Jesus Christ because He is the winner of the angelic conflict. The title of "the Lamb" indicates our Lord's strategic victory on the cross where He was judged for our sins, and while the event described eschatologically refers to our Lord's tactical victory it is always based upon the fact of His strategic victory. Our Lord Jesus Christ is represented as the winner under the title "the Lamb," and therefore He has the right of judgment at the baptism of fire.

Israel as a client nation to God no longer functions in that capacity during the Church Age. The fifth cycle of discipline was administered to them in AD 70 and that means we live in the times of the Gentiles. This becomes important when we understand that never again would there be a Jewish client nation to God until the second advent. That means that throughout the Church Age there will be many Jewish nations but none of them have any client nation status, and never will. Only when our Lord restores Israel at the second advent will there be such a thing. Since AD 70, and to the end of the Church Age, the times of the Gentiles have been given to us as told by our Lord in Luke 21:24. That means that only we as Gentile nations can function as client nations to God. Because of our Lord's strategic victory of the first advent and the calling out of a royal family this dispensation is the intensification of the angelic conflict. People often think that the Tribulation is the worst period in history. Well it is from the standpoint of the multiplicity of disasters but from the standpoint of the intensification of spiritual conflict we live in that dispensation. Therefore angels, elect as well as fallen, are observing us. Once the body of Christ is completed then comes the resurrection, the Rapture of the Church, and we are removed from the earth. During the Tribulation there will be no client nation to God. There will only be individual evangelists such as the 144,000 Jews, Moses and Elijah, and the pur sui vant officer of operation high noon. Then comes the second advent with the tactical victory of the Lamb of God, operation footstool. It is first given to us prophetically in Psalm 110:1. This verse is so important that it is quoted six times in the New testament. Each context is very important as far as the angelic conflict is concerned for that is exactly what happens. Our Lord resolves the angelic conflict and the last phrase of our verse 10 reminds us of that: "and in the presence of the Lamb." The quotation of Psalm 110:1 is found in Matthew 24:22; Mark 12:36; Luke 20:43; Acts 2:35. It is quoted twice in the epistle to the Hebrews, 1:13; 10:13.

The Lord Jesus Christ ascends after His resurrection and is seated at the right hand of the Father. Then comes the calling out of His royal family which is associated with His third royal warrant. Then at the completion of the royal family is the Rapture of the Church, followed by the Tribulation and the second advent. At the second advent there are three phases to operation footstool. That is where His enemies are made the footstool of His feet.

The first phase is the triumphal procession. The tactical victory of the second advent is related to victory over two categories of creatures: unbelievers who survive the Tribulation and the fallen angels. The unbelievers who survive the Tribulation are removed from the earth to make way for the Millennial reign of Christ. Several passages of scripture use the analogy to the Roman triumphal procession in which both prisoners and booty were displayed first. Then came the victorious Roman general in his golden chariot and a slave standing at his side repeating the Latin phrase: sic transit gloria munde. Another slave would stand on the other side and hold a crown over his head. Sic transit gloria munde was to remind him that the glory of this world passes away while the other slave held the glory of this world in the form of the crown. Then there would be other people walking in the triumphal procession. They were prisoners. Often they would go by and would say in great sarcasm to the cheering crowd: "We who are about to die salute you." At the end of the procession they would be executed.

In the triumphal procession the central figure, however, was the winner riding in the golden chariot. After the winner came the officers and the decorated heroes of the campaign, and they were followed by the victorious army. In the analogy the prisoners to be executed are the fallen angels and their leader, Satan. The victorious proconsul is our Lord Jesus Christ in the analogy, and the heroes and the officers who followed are comparable to the Church Age heroes, those who advanced to maturity, the decorated Church Age believers, decorated at the judgment seat of Christ. Next come the believers of the Church Age who are losers. They spent their life on earth in the cosmic system, they have a resurrection body, but no rewards, no decorations, no coat of arms. They are not mentioned on the honours list and there is no order of knighthood after their name in the Lamb's book of life. They are present by the grace of God and glad to be there but they have nothing to show for their life on this earth. That means that every second, every minute that we are on this earth has meaning as far as God is concerned, as far as His plan is concerned. The greatest happiness and the greatest blessing we can have in time or in eternity is related to this principle: the execution of the plan of God, the advance to maturity.

The second phase is the termination of the triumphal procession. At the end of the triumphal procession the royal family in resurrection body cast the fallen angels, the demons, into prison — Colossians 2:14,15 cf. Zechariah 13:2. The description of the termination of the triumphal procession is described in the resurrection context of 1 Corinthians 15:23-25, "But each [believer in his resurrection body] in his own battalion: Christ the first fruits [Alpha company] ... "

When it says “each one in his own battalion” we have a battalion review. There are two battalions to pass in review in history: first, the battalion of believers and last, the battalion of unbelievers. In each one of these battalions are companies. In the first battalion are four companies: Alpha company, the first to pass the reviewing stand: resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ; Bravo company: the Rapture of the Church; Charlie company: the Old Testament saints and Tribulational martyrs who receive their resurrection bodies at the second advent; Delta company at the end of the Millennium: all other believers will receive resurrection bodies. At the end of the Millennium the second battalion passes in review and they wind up in the lake of fire.

Verse 24, “... then the end [of the Tribulation, the second advent of Christ], when he delivers up the kingdom of God, even the Father [Christ at the second advent takes the rulership of the world away from Satan and gives it back to God the Father who in turn gives Him the rulership of the world], when he [our Lord] has abolished all rule [the rulership of Satan over this world] and authority and power [the removal of Satan’s cosmic system].”

Verse 25, “For he must reign [the Millennial reign] until he has put all his enemies under his feet.” So we note that operation footstool does not terminate completely until after the Millennium and Gog revolution.

But there is a third phase to that triumphal procession: the incarceration of Satan. Satan is going to serve a prison sentence of 1000 years during the entire time of the Millennial reign of Christ. The last act of the angelic conflict occurs when he is released from prison, comes back to the earth and starts a revolution.

Remember that winners in the system, believers who are victorious during the Church Age, return with Christ and will actually be in that triumphal procession: 1 Thessalonians 3:13 — “... at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all of his saints.” While this phrase includes all believers of the Church Age, only winners share in the glory of it all, as per Colossians 3:4 — “On the occasion when Christ, our life, shall become manifest [second advent], you also [winners who are decorated] shall become manifest with him in glory [the uniform of glory].” The winner is on the honours list so that during the Tribulation he is presented in the court of heaven — Revelation 2:28.

Translation of verse 10: “He also shall drink from the wine of the wrath of God which has been concentrated, yet undiluted, in the cup of his anger; and he will be tormented in fire and burning sulphur before his holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb.”

Verse 11, the eternal condemnation of negative volition is the closing concept in this paragraph. We have the torment of their sentence. This is the first thousand years of their eternal punishment.

The sequential use of the conjunction kai continues the story of these unbelievers after the second advent and the beginning of the Millennium, “Then.” Then we have a nominative singular subject from kapnoj, “smoke,” “Then the smoke.”

Lang's Commentary, vol. 12, p287, "Smoke is a phenomenon attendant upon imperfect combustion. If they burned with free devotion in sacrificial fire they would blaze refulgently without smoke. The more the flame is restrained by resistance the thicker and blacker is the smoke which pours forth."

Why smoke then? Because these people who are unbelievers in the Tribulation have been evangelised by 144,000 thousand of the greatest evangelists who ever lived. Moses and Elijah were brought back from the dead to evangelise them. And then they had this magnificent angel from the college of heralds, the pur sui vant officer of cherub rank under operation high noon, and at the zenith of the sun in every time zone every day for three and a half years he gave them the great message of the gospel. And they resisted it, and they resisted it. So what this commentary is saying is that the more they resisted the flame the smokier the flame becomes. They resisted in time; they resist in the fire. That is how tough scar tissue of the soul is. Scar tissue of the soul doesn't burn, it just smokes. It is resisting, as it were, the flame. So those who learn to resist the gospel are going to spend eternity in fire making smoke. They are still resisting.

Next in the verse we have a descriptive genitive from basanismoj and it means torment with a)utoj, "then the smoke of their torment." Finally we get a verb, the present active indicative of a)nabainw, which means to ascend, to go up. The smoke goes up, and it is the only thing that ever goes up from this fire. Translation: "then the smoke of their torment keeps rising". The fact that the smoke keeps rising emphasises the doctrine of eternal and conscious punishment of unbelievers. Man is the product of his own decisions both in time and in eternity for mankind is dealing with a just and righteous God. The present tense is the perfective present for what has come to be in the past, the baptism of fire and then of course the lake of fire, but is emphasised as an eternal reality, hence an extension of present linear aktionsart into eternity. The active voice: the unbelievers produce the action of the verb, and here is a specific group of unbelievers who lived during the last half of the Tribulation and become converts to ecumenical religion. The indicative mood is declarative for the eschatological reality of eternal judgment of all unbelievers in human history.

In eternity the pain for the unbeliever is intense and never stops, and there is no loss of consciousness and there is no escape. It is amazing how many escapes we have from pain in time; but that is time, not eternity, "then the smoke of their torment keeps rising forever and ever." This description of eternal judgment of all unbelievers in human history emphasises the importance, then, of 2 Corinthians 6:2, "Behold, now is the time of acceptance; behold, now is the day of salvation." Opportunity to make good decisions or bad are confined to time. Once eternity occurs decision-making is over, so that unbelievers, those who reject the gospel, are the products of their own bad decisions. In eternity it is too late. When a person dies still saying no to the gospel that is the end of the line. There are no decisions made in eternity and there is no reversal of the status. Those who say yes and believe in Christ have eternal life in a resurrection body and no one can ever change that. All decisions are limited to time and in eternity everyone will take the responsibility for his own decisions whether he wants to or not. No decision in life, therefore, is more important than a decision dealing with an absolute. The absolute: "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; but he that believeth not the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him." Salvation is an absolute. You can be positive or negative. You can believe in Christ and have eternal life; you can reject Christ and have eternal condemnation. The fact of death is an absolute of life; the fact that after death no more decisions can be made is very important. It is fascinating that you are responsible for every decision you make in this life. It can be a good decision; it can be a bad decision. No greater decisions can be made than those that are in the absolute category. There are many relative decisions in life: Where should I go to school? Where should I be educated? Whom should I marry? With whom should I associate in social life or business life? All of these things deal with relative factors but when you are dealing with eternity then you are dealing with an absolute and you can't afford to make a mistake. Repeat: You can't afford to make a mistake.

God is so gracious that when it comes to the absolute of salvation you only make the decision once. When it says, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved", you only do it once. You only have to believe one time, it doesn't say to keep believing, it doesn't say reaffirmation of faith, it doesn't say anything about having to make it again. Only once. This is the greatest decision we ever make and it is dealing with an absolute — eternal salvation. You only have to believe once and forever and ever you have eternal life. So here is God's grace. When it comes to the most important decision one can make in this life you only make it once, and after that no matter what you do it doesn't change a thing: you can't lose that salvation. The fact of death also means the fact of eternal judgment for those who reject Christ as saviour. Death is an absolute, Hebrews 9:27ff. Decisions dealing with absolutes are much more important than decisions dealing with relatives of life. The saving work of Christ on the cross is an absolute; salvation through faith in Christ is an absolute; rejection of Christ as saviour resulting in eternal judgment after death is also an absolute.

Notice, too, in the rest of this verse that there is no rest in the lake of fire. We have a conjunction kai introducing a result from what precedes, it is translated "furthermore." Then the present active indicative of e)wx plus the negative o)uk, "furthermore they do not have." The present tense of duration denotes what has begun in the past and continues into the present time. Next is the accusative singular of a)napausij, "rest." That, of course, is very important. No change, "then the smoke of their torment keeps rising forever and ever: furthermore there is no rest day or night for those who worship the beast dictator." Bad decisions, lots of bad decisions, made in time. These bad decisions mean eternal judgment. This idiom emphasises the fact that in eternity there is no loss of consciousness, no rest or cessation of the pain.

And for whom is this disaster? For a certain category who worship the beast. Bad decisions related to absolutes have temporal and eternal repercussions, pain and disaster. The combination of unbeliever reversionism, cosmic involvement, blackout of the soul, scar tissue of the soul, produces locked-in negative volition and arrogant stubbornness which rejects the daily high noon evangelism from the angelic college of heralds. Crisis evangelism is the most intense and powerful form of gospel preaching and it has the fewest converts in the last half of the Tribulation. The combination of historical and natural disaster does not change the minds of those unbelievers involved in Satan's ecumenical system. Neither the warning judgements of the seven seals and the seven trumpets, nor the intensive judgements of the seven last plagues, nor the powerful evangelism of the 144,000, the television ministry of Moses and Elijah, nor the fantastic high noon evangelism of the cherub rank pur sui vant officers from the angelic college of heralds changes locked-in negative volition.

Translation of verse 11: "Then the smoke of their torment [the eternal consciousness of the unbeliever in the lake of fire forever] rises forever and ever: furthermore there is no rest day or night, for those who worship the beast dictator and his image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name."

In verses twelve and thirteen we see what happens to believers. How are they going to survive in all of these problems? When the Tribulation ends with the second advent of Christ and Christ returns with His Church in resurrection bodies there are going to be a tremendous number of believers who have survived all of the disasters. There is, of course, a great application to this principle. No matter how great the disasters of the world there is no form of disaster that can destroy the entire population of the world. The very promise which was given to Noah as a part of the Noahic covenant guarantees that there will be many people on planet earth until the very end of history. In the Tribulation there will be people who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and personally receive Him as saviour. Out of that group there will be a tremendous number of survivors and the reason for their survival is given in verses 12 and 13. They are winners. Not all believers are winners. All believers are winners at one point only and that is strategic victory at the moment they believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. It only takes one decision for salvation but to enter into the state of these people who are going to be judged at the end of the Tribulation it takes thousands of decisions of locked-in negative volition. It is a demonstration of the fact of the power of man's decision.

The real issue in verses 12 & 13 and in many verses throughout the New Testament is what happens after salvation. What does the believer do after salvation? It only took one positive decision for salvation but after that it takes many many daily positive decisions. So historically in the Tribulation there are going to be people who are believers who make daily positive decisions for the gospel, for doctrine, for the laws of divine establishment. And there are going to be millions of unbelievers who are going to say no to the gospel every day at least once, and often more than once. Some of these unbelievers will be alive at the second advent having said no to the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ many times. Never underrate the power of human volition. God invented human volition to resolve the angelic conflict and the tactical winner is the believer who continues to make good decisions from a position of strength. He has control of his life; he has a personal sense of destiny.

In our passage we are about to study confidence in God. Confidence in God comes through perception of Bible doctrine. Take for example, the days of Hezekiah. Hezekiah was warned by Isaiah, one of the few who had confidence in God: “Do not go down to Egypt for help.” Egypt had a tremendous army. The great threat was the empire of Assyria which was about to attack the Jews who were trying to get help, and the people wanted to depend on other nations. Isaiah walked into the court because he was a member of the aristocracy and also the cousin of king Hezekiah, and he said to the king: “Woe to those who go down to Egypt for help.” The Jews had just sent a delegation to Egypt because the army of Israel was in terrible shape. Assyria was about to attack and they hit the panic button. Then Isaiah went on to say, “Don’t depend on horses and chariots. Don’t depend upon the infantry of Egypt.” He gave an illustration: “If you depend upon the spears of Egypt it is like falling down upon that spear-point and putting it through your hand.” Then, of course, his marvellous messages in Isaiah 36 and 37: “It is time O Israel, client nation, to have confidence in God.”

That is a principle. But how do you fulfil the principle? Doctrine, doctrine, doctrine, and more doctrine. You can never have enough doctrine. They ignored it and the Assyrians came, and as they came they destroyed the Jewish army. But before they came they met the Egyptian army and wiped them out. What saved Israel? How did they survive it all? Through a pivot of mature believers. And how did God honour that pivot? The Assyrians had used a strategic envelopment, whipped the Egyptian army, and in the siege of Jerusalem had clobbered the Jews. Then, one day there were still a few good men fighting in the Jewish army and they held up 200,000 concentrated Assyrian troops when the Lord Jesus Christ wiped out all of those troops. Why? There were those who had confidence in God and were watching the event. They weren’t running around trying to straighten anything out. When you have confidence in God at gate five as a motivating virtue then at gate six you have a functional virtue: courage, courage toward man and circumstances. The most difficult courage is to sit in the stand and watch history go to Hell, stay loose, and not get involved except the right way: change the world and turn it upside down by your advance to spiritual maturity.

Verse 12 — we start out with an adverb of place called o(de and it is translated “Here,” but the meaning is not “here” at all, it is idiomatic and means “Under these circumstances” or “In this case.” So immediately we are talking about historical disaster. The idiom means, “Look, we are on the verge of great historical disaster but in the meantime we are in simple historical disaster. Under these circumstances someone has to come to the rescue. How does it all happen?”

Next we have the nominative singular subject u(pomonh which can be translated “patience” and is on certain occasions. It does mean patience; it also means endurance, fortitude, steadfastness, perseverance, courage. So we translate it: “Under these circumstances courage.” And then what kind of courage is going to turn the tide of history: the possessive genitive plural from a(gioj, courage of one category called a(gioj. It is translated “saints” and it does mean set apart, but it has even a stronger meaning than simply saint. It means set apart, and set apart ones are those believers who are positive toward the plan of God and functioning in the divine system as it exists in the Tribulation. “Fortitude of the saints,” when we talk about courage we are not talking about impulsive action, we are talking about thought, we are talking about the ability to think under pressure. “Fortitude of the saints” indicates the fact that people, believers as a category of people, are learning doctrine daily, are growing in grace, have arrived at gate five and gate six and are fulfilling the first mandate of the Christian life: virtue first.

Next we have the present active indicative of e)imi, “there is.” We have already noted the fortitude of the saints and o(de is going to be translated with e)imi, “This calls for the fortitude [courage] of the saints.” Everything we have been studying with regard to the Tribulation and how these judgements will be administered against the unbelievers of the world during the Tribulation, that awful time of historical disaster, calls for tremendous courage or fortitude on the part of the saints. In every dispensation there is the principle of motivational virtue and in this case the motivational virtue is confidence in God. Then there is functional virtue, the counterpart of confidence in God, and that is courage toward man and circumstances. Confidence in God comes from perception of doctrine; perception of doctrine comes from the function of humility.

Now we have a translation, remembering that e)imi is a customary present from what may be reasonably expected to occur when the believer has momentum from his own positive volition. Remember that you must motivate yourself. The active voice: the Tribulational believers who follow the colours of daily perception of doctrine produce the action of the verb. The declarative indicative mood is for the future reality of the courage or fortitude of believers living in that terrible time of historical disaster.

What is the believer’s responsibility in the time of great historical disaster? Sit in the stands and watch the tremendous historical events. Don’t get involved with the things that are happening. Every day we can see things that raise our ire and we want to change everything. Watch, but do not participate. The only participation is positive volition toward doctrine for the only way that we can deliver our country in its time of need and approaching historical disaster is the daily perception of doctrine, our spiritual growth, and the development of a large enough pivot to offset the situation. Fortitude means firmness of mind in meeting danger or adversity. Therefore it is a synonym for courage. Courage is the ability to think under pressure.

Literally this would be translated, “This is a case for the fortitude of the saints,” but the idiom should be translated, “This calls for the fortitude [the functional virtue of courage] of the saints [positive believers living inside the system as it exists in the Tribulation].”

The literal translation does not follow the nature of the case, it simply does not relate to the previous dissertation on Satan’s ecumenical religious system, therefore the importance of translating this phrase in the true meaning of its idiom.

Note the implications of the idiom: Ecumenical religion of the time of the devil’s desperation demands the application of doctrine in two areas. First, with regard to false doctrine of ecumenical religion of the Tribulation: the believe is challenged to use the three stages of the faith-rest drill with emphasis on the essence of God rationale as well as the plan of God rationale. When this occurs there will be a true dynamic. Secondly, with regard to cosmic evangelists, friends and loved ones who seek to proselyte the believer for the cosmic system, virtue must be applied. Virtue-love: if we have personal love for God as a motivating virtue we will have impersonal love for those who are cosmic evangelists. If we have confidence in God as a motivating virtue we will have the functional virtue of fortitude toward man and circumstances. That will give us the ability to resist. The application belongs to us, the interpretation belongs to the Tribulational believer. So this means that we must have motivational virtue before we have functional virtue, and this calls for the fortitude or courage of the saints.

Then the tactical victory is mentioned with the articular present active participle from the verb terew which means to observe, to keep, to fulfil. The definite article is used as a relative pronoun whose antecedent is "the saints." The present tense is the progressive present for action in a state of persistence, namely the persistence of positive believers, believers who have the right priorities, believers who put doctrine first and continue their positive volition no matter how terrible the trends of history become. While there is no divine dynasphere in the Tribulation there is still the divine system in every dispensation. The system that belongs to the royal family of God is expressed in terms of its power, the dynasphere, but the system as the plan of God in every dispensation follows the same principle: virtue first is the priority. Gnwsij doctrine must be converted into e)pignwsij for virtue to exist in the life. The active voice: the Tribulational believer who is positive toward doctrine produces the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial.

With this is the accusative plural from the direct object e)ntolh, meaning mandate. Those mandates mean recognition of divine authority. Divine authority is delegated in two ways: in the Word of God and in the communication from the pastor-teacher. The mandates are said to be in the ablative of source singular, "from God." The ablative of source implies that the original plan of God for the Tribulational believer contributes the virtue function of courage under pressure from Satan's ecumenical religion. This also fulfils the concept of the divine system. Even without the divine dynasphere the system always has the same priorities: in God's plan, mandates first; in God's system, virtue first; in God's purpose, Christ first; in God's policy, grace first; in God's objective, momentum first; in God's authority, doctrine first.

God's plan for the believer, therefore, has eight characteristics regardless of the dispensation. Mechanically we have the divine dynasphere but in every dispensation there are eight characteristics.

First of all, God's plan, and you as a believer are in God's plan for this dispensation, has a purpose. The purpose is to glorify Christ through spiritual momentum and advance to spiritual maturity. The purpose is always there. God sustains us for a purpose. Whether we are winners or losers God is going to sustain us but it is the winner who fulfils the purpose.

Secondly, there is an objective: to become a winner, to advance to spiritual maturity. The winner rejects Satan's ecumenical religious system in the Tribulation. The winner is positive toward Bible doctrine. Thirdly, there is a policy in God's plan. Grace is always the policy in the administration of His plan whether Church Age believers or Tribulational believers.

Fourth, there is a system: virtue. Hence, the second priority is virtue first.

Fifth, there is a point of reference: the justice of God, one half of divine holiness or integrity.

Sixth, we recognise authority: the Word of God is the authority, hence the priority of doctrine first in one's scale of values.

Seventh, a result: the believer makes good decisions from a position of strength, maintains control of his life, and has a personal sense of destiny.

Eighth, we have an enemy: the cosmic system of Satan, the source of Satan's ecumenical religious system of the Tribulation.

So we have the principle: "those who observe [or keep, or fulfil] the mandates from God." This is the winner, this is the one who succeeds. And how does he become a winner? We have the connective conjunction kai, "and." This conjunction separates the system from the means of fulfilling the system. Next we have the accusative singular from pistij. Pistij means three things: faith, the concept of faithfulness, what is believed and/or the whole realm of doctrine. It should be translated here: "and doctrine." Then we have a very strange phrase, the possessive genitive of the name of the humanity of Christ, I)hsouj, "Jesus," "and the doctrine of Jesus." The doctrine belongs to Christ and to His humanity because in the prototype divine dynasphere our Lord learned this doctrine. Bible doctrine is the mind of Christ but Bible doctrine is also what the humanity of Christ learned and how it sustained Him for the strategic victory of the cross.

Translation: "This calls for the fortitude [courage] of the saints who observe [or fulfil] the mandates from God, and the doctrine of Jesus."

General Patton: "There is a time to take counsel of your fears and there is a time never to listen to your fears. It is always important to know what you are doing. The time to take counsel of your fears is before you make an important battle decision. That is the time to listen to every fear you can imagine. When you have collected all of the facts and fears and made your decision, turn off all your fears and go ahead with the battle. Every plan you make in war is going to be a live or die decision: you will either live or die as a result of your decision. Since we are not afraid to do either there is no reason to take counsel of your fear. The chance of being killed in combat is not as great as being killed on our highways. If you want to take counsel of your fears, stop driving a car. And don't crawl in bed at night, more people die in bed than anywhere else. The person who cannot face death has truly never faced life because every day of life is a day closer to death. To take counsel of your fears about death is to destroy the day that you are living."

In the Tribulation there are going to be a lot of martyrs. We have already studied these martyrs from the standpoint of their imprecatory prayers; now we are going to study them from the standpoint of the doctrine of death itself.

Verse 13, the victorious death of Tribulational believers. This is an addendum, a mandate from heaven. We have seen the judgements which come to the unbelievers in the Tribulation, we have seen the evangelism and the principles of evangelism related to judgment. Just as there is discipline for the believer when he fails, first of all warning discipline, then intensive discipline and eventually dying discipline, so with the unbeliever there is a system of evangelism that is related to judgment. There is warning judgment, then there is intensive judgment and eventually dying judgment or the baptism of fire at the second advent of Christ.

We begin with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, "Then," followed by the aorist active indicative of the verb a)kouw, "I heard." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: John the apostle, the human author of Revelation, produces the action of the verb. The declarative indicative mood is for the historical reality of an interruption, to make an insertion about the fact that when matures believers die it is a glorious victory. The victorious death of certain believers living in the Tribulation is our subject.

Next we have the objective genitive singular from the noun fwnh, "voice." The voice is said to come from heaven, the preposition e)k plus the ablative of o)uranoj: "the voice from heaven." Then the present active indicative of legw, "saying." The pictorial present pictures in the mind the study which is an interruption of the general study, the judgment of the unbeliever. The active voice: inasmuch as God the Holy Spirit is the divine author of scripture it is concluded that the voice is the voice of God the Holy Spirit. The Bible is said to be the Word of God the Father, Hebrews 4:12; the Bible is said to be the mind or thinking of Christ, 1 Corinthians 2:16; the Bible is said to be the voice of the Spirit, Hebrews 3:7. This is a reference to that voice of the Holy Spirit.

God the Holy Spirit so supernaturally directed the human writers of scripture that without waiving their human intelligence, their individuality, their literary style, their personal feelings or any other human factor, His complete and coherent message to mankind was recorded with perfect accuracy in the original languages of scripture, the very words of the original bearing the authority of divine authorship.

The mechanics of inspiration are stated in 2 Timothy 3:16, "all scripture is God-breathed [qeopneustoj]." There is therefore the inhale in which God the Holy Spirit communicates to the human author God's complete and coherent message, both for that generation and all subsequent generations. The writer, like John, has other messages for his generation which are not reduced to writing. Only that which is pertinent for all generations is actually reduced and recorded in the Word of God. Hence, the input, the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. There are many passages on this phase of inspiration: 2 Samuel 23:2,3; Isaiah 59:21; Jeremiah 1:9; Matthew 24:42,43; Mark 12:36; Acts 4:24,25; 28:25. So in the inhale God the Holy Spirit provides the information for the human author — generally an apostle but not always.

Then there is the exhale. The human writer, like John, writes down in his own language this divine message to mankind. This doctrine of verbal plenary inspiration means that no passage of scripture originates from man's thinking, man's rationalisation, man's deductions or conclusions. The apostle is not giving his own conclusions, he is exhaling in writing which is the formation of the canon of scripture God's complete and connected thought toward man, but he is doing so with his own literary style, his own vocabulary.

In 2 Peter 1:20-21 we have a mistranslation in the King James version. It should read: "Knowing this first, that all prophecy of scripture [all eschatological doctrine] does not originate with one's own explanation [or deduction], for prophecy was never produced by the design [the purpose, the will] of man, but men [human writers] communicated from God, being carried along by the Holy Spirit."

This is what we have here: "Then I heard a voice from heaven which said..." The participle is circumstantial, used for a relative clause, "which said." Next we have the aorist active imperative from graphein, "write": the mandate. It is a culminative aorist, it views the interruption by God the Holy Spirit in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, namely the insertion of an additional point of doctrine: the beatitude of dying grace. This beatitude of dying grace is an insertion. The active voice: God the Holy Spirit produces the action of the verb giving a command for this insertion. The imperative mood is an imperative of command, a mandate from God the Holy Spirit. This information must be given. It is not only necessary for the Tribulation believers who will so die, it is necessary for believers in every generation before that time.

Next we have the beatitude of supergrace death. We begin with the nominative plural subject of makarioi. It is in the plural and it denotes transcendent happiness in life. We translate it "blessed." In the plural we have a stylistic form of the beatitude. It means literally, "happineses." Then we have the predicate nominative plural from nekrotai, the "dying" ones, those who are going to be casualties during the Tribulation, there are many martyrs in the Tribulation. It is a reference here to the mature believers of the last half of the Tribulation who experience martyrdom and at the same time they die under the principle of dying grace. Then the articular present active participle apothniskontes, "who die." The aoristic present tense, punctiliar action in present time: they are just going to suddenly die after being tortured, abused, and being the subjects of violence. The active voice: specifically here, mature believers produce the action. The participle is circumstantial. Apparently immature believers, believers who are living in the cosmic system, are just simply going to give up.

John is going to show that there are certain people whom are not included here. This is a specific category of believer. In Colossians 2:6,7 we have the phrase, "according as you have received to yourself Christ Jesus the Lord, so keep walking in him, having been rooted and constantly built up in him, being stabilised by means of doctrine in the manner you have been taught, overflowing with thanksgiving." This is the category of believer who is going to die in this particular passage: the ones who have learned doctrine and take a stand for the Lord; those who have grown spiritually. Doctrine vindicates the essence of God.

Romans 3:3,4, "What then? If some did not believe, shall their unbelief cancel the faithfulness of God? Definitely not. Furthermore, let God continue truthful, though every man a liar, even as it stands written, 'That you might become vindicated by means of your doctrine, and that you might become victorious when you are maligned.' " This is the category of believer involved in this beatitude.

So we have, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord," and "in the Lord" is simply the prepositional phrase en plus the locative of kurioj, and it means "in the Lord's time" here. These are Tribulational saints, therefore. They are not in union with Christ because they do not live in this dispensation, the Church Age. "In the Lord" in this dispensation means positional truth, the baptism of the Spirit, union with Christ. Positional truth, however, is the monopoly of the Church Age and this context is the Tribulation. The royal family is formed by means of the baptism of the Spirit; all of us are "in Christ," in union with Him. This prepositional phrase is different, it is referring to the fact that they die in the sense of the Lord's perfect timing. There is a time to live and there is a time to die.

So far this is what we have by way of corrected translation: "Then I heard a voice from heaven which said, Write, Blessed are the dead [mature believers who are martyred in the last half of the Tribulation] who die in the Lord [in the Lord's timing]."

For the mature believer that is always true. When he advances to maturity in this dispensation, in the divine dynasphere, the mature believer always dies in the perfect timing of the Lord. The reason is because the mature believer first of all makes good decisions from a position of strength. Secondly, he has control of his own life. Thirdly, he has a personal sense of destiny. Therefore under the Lord's magnificent blessing His timing is perfect. The issue in death is not when you die but it is whether the timing is right or wrong. There is nothing more important than dying under God's perfect wisdom and God's perfect timing, and that is true for mature believers as illustrated by Hebrews 11:13, "According to doctrine [doctrine resident in the soul] all these died under the principle of dying grace, not having received the promises, but having seen the same [the promises of the future] from a distance, and having saluted and embraced them [the second and third stages of the faith-rest drill] also having acknowledged that they were strangers and transients passing through the earth." In other words, referring to those who are mature believers. This is the concept of dying grace.

The Bible has a great deal to say about physical death. Death is associated with ending revolution in Numbers 16:25ff; death is a matter of the sovereignty of God based on His omniscience, His knowledge of all the facts, Psalm 68:19,20. In Song of Solomon 8:6 we have a very interesting phrase: "True love is stronger than death." Furthermore, God can and does prolong life so that death is postponed, as per Psalm 102:19,20, 2-34; 118:18; Proverbs 14:27. Jeremiah 9:20-25, women have to be taught to face the death of their loved ones. The sin unto death does not bring glory to God, Isaiah 38:18. Death cannot be faced when the norms-standard function of the right lobe of the conscience is destroyed, according to Lamentation 1:19,20. Dying grace is a promotion for the believer, Philippians 1:21, and God provides in dying grace, Amos 5:8, for the mature believer. God delivers the believer from death, Psalm 33:19.

In our phrase, "Blessed are they who die in the Lord," we are dealing with the concept of dying grace, the death of the mature believer. Dying grace is for mature believers: Psalm 33:18,19, "Behold, the eye of the Lord is on them who are occupied with him [who respect Him], on those who have confidence in his grace [motivational virtue of the mature believer: confidence toward God], to deliver their soul from death [or, in time of death], and to keep them alive in time of disaster." Dying grace takes the fear out of death: Psalm 23:4, "Even though I walk through the valley of the deep darkness of death, I will not fear harm, for you are with me." In other words, the believer who is occupied with the Lord recognises the principle that death is just another phase and a mere step into eternity. Therefore, Psalm 116:15, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his godly ones [the mature believers]." So dying grace is the last paragraph in supergrace blessing, and dying grace is one of the greatest blessings in life. For the believer who has had the experience of all categories of divine blessing this is the greatest of all. Dying grace, therefore, is the bridge between supergrace blessing in time and surpassing grace blessing in eternity. In dying grace the believer walks over a bridge: he walks out of time and he walks into eternity. He leaves behind supergrace blessings and in eternity he will go to surpassing grace blessing.

Therefore the importance of momentum, the importance of advancing to maturity, the importance of advancing to the high ground. Attitude toward Bible doctrine is the determining factor. The time for the formation of positive or negative attitudes toward doctrine is called the time of being sustained by logistical grace. As soon as we accept Jesus Christ as our saviour, at that moment we are moving into logistical grace, we have received the imputation of God's righteousness. The justice of God is the origin of the imputation and down that grace pipeline is the faithfulness of God in providing everything necessary to keep us alive. All of us have, therefore, X amount of time on this earth assigned to us by God. When that time is finished the soul of the believer leaves the body: absent from the body and face to face with the Lord. The believer in heaven occupies an interim body and whether he is a winner or a loser after his physical death he has great happiness, great blessing in the presence of the Lord. He is recognised by his friends and in this interim body, face to face with the Lord, he recognises friends and loved ones. It is a wonderful time of blessing. This interim body continues until the Rapture of the Church, and when the resurrection of the Church occurs then the believer who has been with the Lord all these years receives his resurrection body. So the interim life in heaven for those of our loved ones and friends and all believers who have departed since the Church Age began are in a state of great happiness, whether they failed or succeeded in this life. In the concept of this principle we have the fact that those who are mature can anticipate some fantastic eternal blessings which we have studied.

The apostle Paul said in Philippians 3:13, "Members of the royal family, I evaluate myself as not having seized and held the high ground of maturity; but one thing on which I concentrate: I forget those things which are behind and press toward what lies ahead of me. I therefore keep advancing to the objective [gate eight] for the purpose of reward belonging to the upward station from the God in Christ Jesus.”

Once you settle the matter of dying, once you have no fear of death, once you understand all of these principles and apply them in the dying grace rationale, then you have capacity for life, capacity for blessing. You are able to handle life and you are able to enjoy life: death is already resolved. Death is an absolute; death is a certainty, in fact if the Rapture doesn't occur within a reasonable time everyone of the present day will be dead and will have had the experience of dying grace (provided you have advanced to maturity), and will know what it means to enjoy an interim body and an interim life in the presence of the Lord. The exception to dying grace is the disciplinary exception: the principle of dying the sin unto death. Once you have settled this doctrine, once you understand the dying grace rationale, you have been able to overcome through the application of doctrine the greatest fear that people have in this life: the fear of death. Once that is behind you then you are prepared to face any set of circumstances in life. You are prepared to fulfil the principle that it is time to get up in the stands, sit in the stands, watch historical disaster go by, and by positive volition toward doctrine turn around the whole situation. If you go out and start doing things — go on crusades, try to straighten out this world and solve the country's problems, join this and that organisation and hustle around — then you are missing the boat: you are distracted, you are in a state of crusader arrogance and negative volition. Positive volition demands that we sit, learn doctrine and enlarge that pivot, for that pivot is the only thing that is going to save the nation. That means that any time you get involved in trying to straighten something out, trying to crusade, trying to right the wrongs, trying to bring good out of evil, you are missing the boat entirely.

Once we solve the problem of death then we go to the problem of life. And if you sit down and watch history and grow in grace, move from gate four to gate eight and avoid all of the distractions of crusading activity (all you are doing is whitewashing the devil's world) then there will be a change in the nation. The deliverance of the nation depends entirely upon the believers attitude toward Bible doctrine.

Then there is a principle that applies to you. It is found in Job 5:19-27. When you learn the principle of positive volition on a daily basis, then as you sit in the stands this is what God provides for you logistically:

“In six troubles he will deliver you,” the hiphil imperfect of the verb natsal and it means a rescue or a deliverance. It emphasises the wall of fire principle related to logistical grace. As long as you have momentum in the spiritual life you also have that wall of fire. That has been true of every dispensation but is especially true in this dispensation where the wall of fire is defined as the divine dynasphere, “furthermore in seven evil will not touch you,” the qal imperfect of naga means to touch, but it also means something else: it means to meddle. Evil will not interfere with you; evil will not meddle with you; evil will not be able to distract you from the mission that God has assigned to you as a believer.

Verse 20, Logistical grace, the wall of fire is parlayed into various categories of deliverance. We start out with the qal perfect from the verb padah, it means to preserve, to redeem, “In famine [the first category of disaster: economic depression] he will preserve you from death, and in war from the power of the sword," the safest place for the mature believer, the believer who has momentum, is on a battlefield. So every believer who is a professional soldier needs a relationship with the integrity of God, "from the power of the sword."

Then we get down to two more categories of great disaster in history. One of them is found in the niphel imperfect from the Hebrew verb chabah. Chabah means to be hidden.

Verse 21, "You will be hidden [protected] from the scourge of the tongue," social disaster: to be maligned, to be judged, to be the subject of gossip, to be the object of all categories of vindictiveness and implacability and personal revenge. But then comes the big one: "Neither will you be afraid of destruction," the word for destruction is shob, and it refers to violent death. It would be very pertinent, therefore, to Tribulational believers, "when it comes."

Verse 22, "You will laugh," the laugh of humour, not the laugh of hysteria: the relaxed, humorous approach developed from perception, application, flexibility of maximum doctrine resident in the soul, "at violent death and economic depression; and from the wild animals of the earth you will have nothing to fear." Wild animals in the time of writing were a source of violent death in peace time as well as in war. So the Bible has to be interpreted in the time in which it was written: wild animals represent violent death. The mature believer is preserved from all the instruments of death until the Lord is ready to take him home. Therefore he has a relaxed mental attitude, the sense of humour with regard to death.

Verse 23, "For your contract will be with the stones of the field," the stones of the field were used as weapons at the time of writing. In other words, there is no bullet with your name written on it until the Lord is ready to take you home, "and the wild animals [a source of destruction] will be at peace with you." In other words, no instrument of death can remove the mature believer from this life until God permits it and only the integrity of God can transfer the believer from time to eternity. Therefore neither historical, natural, any environment that is dangerous, or any other category of disaster can kill the believer.

Verse 24, "Therefore you will know that your tent [the human body] is in a state of prosperity," no matter what circumstances may exist there is prosperity for the mature believer. Notice the word "know," knowledge of doctrine, "for you will visit your home [heaven] and you will not forfeit your reward," the future. The mature believer will receive in eternity tremendous eternal blessing.

Verse 25, "And you will know [knowledge of doctrine] that your seed shall be numerous," this is an idiom for prosperity, usually related to loved ones left behind but the principle of historical impact is there as well. The word "seed" can refer to loved ones by natural generation, by regeneration, friends, anything, and blessing by association is one of the things that you leave behind. When the mature believer dies he leaves behind a heritage, a will that cannot be broken. His loved ones, his friends can be unbelievers or believers and they are going to be blessed by association with him — “and your descendants will be like the grass of the earth,” blessing by association for loved ones is the issue.

Verse 26, “You will come to the grave in full vigour,” in all matters of life and death timing is important, and in the dying of any believer God’s timing is perfect because God is perfect. This is a very important doctrine to us but far more important to the believers of the Tribulation. And the illustration of timing is taken from agriculture, “like a shock of corn in its season,” there is a right time and a wrong time to pick corn, only the expert can determine. God is the expert; He knows best. And notice that this verse does not promise us a long life, it promises us a full life.

Verse 27, The mandate for all believers of all generations: “Hear it and know it [or apply it] for yourself.”

Now we go into an interim idiom. It is a very unusual idiom made up of a preposition and an adverb, and the interim idiom is designed for an insertion by God the Holy Spirit at this point after the phrase, “who die in the Lord.” We have the preposition a)po plus the adverb a)rti. It would be translated “from now on” literally, but this is an idiom and there is a special blessing for those mature believers in the last half of the Tribulation, the time of the devil’s desperation, who handled their martyrdom rather than becoming converts to Satan’s ecumenical religion. Inasmuch as makarioj is in the plural it refers to the principle of dying grace at the point of their martyrdom plus the fantastic eternal rewards and decorations which they will have forever and ever. The plural indicates the status of these believers after death. A)p plus a)rti is an interim idiom, it does not modify the beatitude directly but it refers definitely to life after death for those mature believers of the last half of the Tribulation who are martyred. The point is that they are much happier in eternity than they ever would be had they compromised their stand for the Lord and become members of the ecumenical religious system of Satan.

There is a principle that comes out of this for all of us: There is no happiness, there is no blessing to be found in religion.

How do we translate this idiom? It is translated “from now on.” And with this we have a third word nai. It is called the affirmative particle and it means “yes.” So our translation in the middle of verse 13 begins, “yes, from now on.” Remember that in the original manuscripts there were no punctuation marks found in the Greek, and this means that the punctuation marks in the Greek New Testament have been added by translators and our English version is simply an interpretation. Most interpreters assume that the idiom of time, a)p a)rti, modifies the beatitude, which it does not. Instead it goes with the affirmative particle. So actually we begin a new sentence in the middle of this verse.

With this we have a nominative singular subject from the noun pneuma referring to God the Holy Spirit. With that we have the present active indicative of the verb legw which means to speak or to communicate, “Yes, says the Spirit, from now on,” or “the Spirit says, yes.” The static present of the verb legw presents a dogmatic statement of doctrine. God the Holy Spirit produces the action in the active voice, and the declarative indicative is for a dogmatic statement of doctrine in the assertion. The insertion by God the Holy Spirit is in the form of a purpose clause and it begins with the conjunction i(na. It is translated “that” or “in order that,” and here it introduces a semi-final purpose clause which denotes the direction of the action of the verb toward a given result which is anticipated, “Yes, says the Spirit, from now on in order that.”

Then we have the future passive indicative of a)napauw, and it means to receive rest, to receive refreshment, “in order that they may rest.” The future tense is a predictive future, it anticipates dying grace, entrance into the eternal state through having an interim state and an interim body. The passive voice: the martyred believers of the Tribulation receive rest in the interim state. Remember that the interim state is the time between their physical death and the time of the receiving of the resurrection body. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of blessing in the interim state.

With this we have the have the preposition e)k plus the ablative of kopoj, “labour,” very difficult labour. It means to make decisions against the grain. With this is the possessive genitive of a)utoj, translated “from their labours.” Translation: “Yes, says the Spirit, from now on in order that they may rest from their labours.” The labours has to do with coping with the adversities of great historical disaster at the end of the Tribulation when mature believers are a special target.

The eternal reward for the victorious dead is now mentioned. We have the explanatory use of the conjunctive particle gar, “for,” and then the nominative plural subject of e)rgon, the plural meaning deeds and accomplishments in conjunction with the priorities of God’s plan. E)rgon does not refer to deeds like witnessing, it refers to modus operandi like momentum in the daily perception of doctrine. It means virtue first, doctrine first, Christ first, the system first [as it exists at that time]. We translate it: “for their accomplishments.” Then the present active indicative of a)kolouqew, “will follow.” The futuristic present, the eschatological event: following their death they are going to have fantastic blessing. The active voice: the accomplishments of the mature believer in functioning under God’s plan and God’s system produces the action. The declarative indicative is for a dogmatic statement of doctrine: God never overlooks the following of His priorities, the execution of His plan, and the advance to maturity, establishing doctrine first in the life. Then we have the preposition of accompaniment, meta plus the genitive of the intensive pronoun a)utoj, “with them”, and it can be idiomatically translated “will accompany them.” By application this refers to us as well as to them.

Translation of verse 13: “Then I heard a voice from heaven which said, Write, Blessed are the dead [mature believers martyred in the last half of the Tribulation] who die in the Lord. Yes, says the Spirit, from now on, in order that they may rest from their labours [coping with the adversities through doctrine]; for their accomplishments will accompany them [into the eternal state].”

You have heard the phrase: “You can’t take it with you.” It is not true, you can take it with you. If you follow the priorities of God’s plan and God’s system you can not only take it with you but you will have it forever.

Verse 14, Jesus Christ is the key to history. Whether a person makes wrong decisions or right decisions it doesn't change the fact that no decisions will ever change the fact that Jesus Christ controls history and that Jesus Christ is the key to human history.

We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, "Then." It follows in sequence. Next, the aorist active indicative of o(raw which is used to introduce every vision in the book of Revelation. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the vision in its entirety. The active voice: John, the human writer, produces the action: he sees the vision. The declarative indicative represents the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. The communicator of doctrine therefore must always be in touch with reality is the meaning of this format. These visions are a reality from the divine viewpoint. Anyone who communicates doctrine, anyone who learns doctrine, anyone who applies doctrine, must always be in touch with reality and it is doctrine that puts us in touch with reality, not our experiences. In other words, the reality that counts is reality from the divine viewpoint, and that means doctrine must be in the soul. Experience is not always reality from God's viewpoint.

There is a constant battle during our life on this earth that when there is a conflict between what the Bible says and some experience that someone has, like allegedly being healed, the object of a "miracle." The problem with experiences is that you never have all the facts; the problem with doctrine is that you must have all the facts. Doctrine will give you the facts. When there is a conflict between Bible doctrine and our experience, doctrine is right.

Next we have the connective conjunction kai, "and," and with it a demonstrative particle i)dou which means "behold" but behold seems to have lost its punch. "Achtung" in the German gives a better idea. Next we have the nominative of appellation, nefelh, and it refers to a cloud. And it is a leukoj cloud, a "white cloud." In other words, it isn't a stormy cloud. "Then I looked, and behold, a white cloud." So the first thing we see is the setting. Clouds are associated with both the first and second advents of Christ. In the first advent there was the cloud from which God the Father spoke about God the Son. The same cloud was used on the mount of transfiguration, Matthew 17:5. The second advent: "Behold, he is coming with clouds, Revelation 1:7. The clouds are associated with the strategic and tactical victories of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Then we have the Lord sitting in His "chair," the articular present active participle of the verb kaqhmai, "sitting." The definite article is used for both the personal pronoun and the relative pronoun "he who." The pictorial present tense presents to the mind a picture of the event in the process of occurrence. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ produces the action. This time the principle does not deal with reality as such but with victory. The posture of our Lord Jesus Christ sitting indicates the strategic victory of the first advent. The participle is circumstantial. "And he [our Lord Jesus Christ] was sitting on the cloud." We insert the verb e)imi because of the ellipsis here, "was." Then the comparative particle o(moioj, "was like," and then the title for our Lord in His first advent when He first became true humanity, "the Son of Man."

Translation so far: "Then I looked, and behold, a white cloud and he who was sitting on the cloud was like the Son of Man."

Since clouds are often associated with angels it probably represents the entire angelic college of heralds. This is a reminder that our Lord Jesus Christ was the winner in the prehistoric angelic conflict and again He is the winner in the historic angelic conflict. As eternal and infinite God our Lord Jesus Christ won: He was the winner in the prehistoric angelic conflict. As the God-Man Jesus Christ is the strategic winner by His first advent; He will be the tactical winner by His second advent. Jesus Christ, therefore, had to be a man to go to the cross and be judged for our sins, and this phrase indicates that Jesus Christ controls history: He sits on the clouds. So we now meet the winner, the victor, of human history.

No matter what happens in history it is all going to turn out well. Things do not often go well in many generations but it is going to turn out well. The present active indicative of εἶπω means to have, to have and to hold. The static present is for a condition which will perpetually exist. The golden crown or the wreath represents our Lord's strategic victory. He is the winner of the angelic conflict and the golden crown represents the royal title, the royal warrant, He received. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action. No matter how bad things get just remember how it is all going to turn out. The circumstantial participle is often translated with the conjunction and the finite verb form and that is the way we translate it here: "and he has." Then στεφανοῖ for the crown. This is the crown you win, not a crown you inherit.

Because of our Lord's strategic victory of the first advent he is now entitled to judge the world. Once He wears that crown he has a prerogative that goes with that crown. Part of the fact that Jesus Christ controls history is the fact that He has the authority at any time to judge any segment of the population of this world. This was taught in John 5:22,23,27. "For not even the Father judges anyone, but he has delegated all judgment to the Son in order that all may honour the Son, even as they honour the Father ..." The Jews as unbelievers recognised only God the Father as the God of Israel. They did not understand the true meaning of Deuteronomy 6:4 and they could not do so apart from appreciation of the victory of the first advent. Our Lord Jesus Christ is then judge of human history and as the judge of human history He is going to set up a system. The fact that He is sitting on His "chair" [the cloud] and watching history means that He controls history. Not only does He control history but He is the winner of history, therefore we are identified with Him.

The passage coming up is a most fascinating passage from the standpoint of office procedure, from the standpoint of procedure in any organisation. We are going to see all of the VIPs in heaven, they are going to do different things. The voice of the Father will come out of the temple. He is going to send one of the highest-ranking angels in the college of heralds. Then there are other angels in the college of heralds and another high-ranking angel is going to come from the altar where the Tribulational martyrs have been with their imprecatory prayers. There are another couple of high-ranking angels who are going to be given the administrative responsibility. They are going to have a sickle. One of them is going to come out of the temple and is going to be on standby reserve until a certain point. And we are now going to see how the court of heaven functions, and its functions under the system of protocol.

And this now brings us in anticipation of a great principle: The best things in life come from humility as the base of virtue, self discipline, being organised in your life, reducing your own life to a routine. To the extent that you reduce your life to a routine you destroy the confusion and you make two things very good for yourself. First of all your spiritual life which is the basis of your happiness and, secondly, your social life which is the human expression of your happiness. Your spiritual life expresses your happiness toward the Lord; your social life expresses your happiness in the direction of mankind. But the real secret is to have a routine. You have to make good decisions; you have to have self-discipline. But that whole system will only function under protocol. There has to be protocol; there has to be civilisation.

The average fundamentalist Christian sneers at protocol, he is a law unto himself. In fact the average fundamentalist is absolutely stupid when it comes to protocol. Protocol is the system that God has set up for believers. Historical disaster means no protocol, no authority, no orientation. Protocol is the use of manners, the recognition of authority, the recognition that we must operate within a system, and that everyone can express and utilise their freedom if we all operate within that system. The greatest periods of civilisation we have ever known historically have always been protocol periods. England in the last century was a protocol period. Protocol is absolutely necessary for the survival of civilisation.

We are now living in a time of great degeneracy, a time of immoral degeneracy and, what is even worse, moral degeneracy, both categories. We are surviving because it is all disorganised evil, but then you get organised evil in a dictatorship that you have when the Christians get persecuted. But even when you have organised evil as we studied in chapter thirteen and when protocol goes our Lord still sits in His cloud with His crown on His head. Degeneracy destroys protocol; organised evil guarantees that protocol will not exist at all. Therefore our Lord from His throne sets up a system of protocol whereby the human race continues to exist, and always will until the end of time. The human race as such will never be wiped out, although from time to time certain portions of the human race will be wiped out. When there is no civilisation and people live on planet earth God provides a system of protocol which in effect protects the positive believer unless it is his time to be taken home to be with the Lord.

So we have the Lord sitting on the cloud with His crown and He also has one other thing. We have the connective conjunction kai and the accusative singular direct object from the noun drepanoj, "and a sickle." Furthermore it is said to be o)couj, a "sharp" sickle, and it is in His hand. The sickle is the symbol of judgment.

Now, what does the Lord provide in the worst period of human history for disaster? In the last half of the Tribulation before the second advent we have the crown which He wears. He provides a protocol whereby people will survive no matter how much they try to destroy themselves. The world will never be destroyed by nuclear weapons, by war, by disease, by earthquakes or tidal waves. etc. Certain parts of the world will have population loss from all of these things but the crown indicates that Jesus Christ controls history and in the worst periods of history He sets up a protocol system related to positive volition toward doctrine: the wall of fire whereby people survive. Believers and unbelievers, both will survive before the second advent. Part of His protocol system is the sickle, the symbol of divine judgment. Judgment, disaster, is used to protect the human race from destroying itself. God destroys those segments who have this self-destructive tendency. Divine judgment is an operation that cuts out the cancerous part of mankind so that the rest can function in a wonderful way.

In recent times there have been many signs of some the difficult situations which will occur in the Tribulation. We are not in the Tribulation and we may not even be near the Tribulation. Between us and the Tribulation is the Rapture or resurrection of the Church which will remove all believers in a moment of time from this world. The Rapture could occur today but it could also occur a thousand years from today, we do not know the day or the hour. But we do know that there are certain historical trends which we have been studying eschatologically and which also have historical implications. And certainly by sitting in the stands and watching history developing before us we learn many interesting things. In our passage these trends have reached their peak. They have come to the point where there is total degeneracy and where people are at the mercy of terrorism on every hand.

In verse fourteen we have just concluded a passage dealing with our Lord Jesus Christ controlling history and we terminated with the issue of protocol. By way of introduction to verse 15 we stop and take a look at the function of protocol. Civilisation cannot exist, not only without the principle, but also without its function. We note that heaven operates under a marvellous system of protocol: the chain of command for the seven last plagues of the Tribulation.

In eight points we have the structured interpretation for the rest of the chapter

1. Since God the Father has delegated all judgment to God the Son He sends from the temple in heaven a messenger, the officer of arms, to our Lord Jesus Christ with permission for the seven last plagues, verse 15. This is the beginning of a system of protocol. The officer of arms is one of the highest ranking angelic creatures in the angelic college of heralds. He is second only to the king of arms. So we are dealing now with protocol. Remember that protocol is structured by authority and the authority originates from truth. You cannot have civilisation without protocol.

2. As the judge our Lord Jesus gives the orders, then, to administer the seven last plagues — verse 16, where our Lord swings the sickle and the earth is reaped. Inevitably, as the judge, our Lord executes the orders related to the seven last plagues.

3. However, the manner in which the seven last plagues are executed on the earth is a protocol function, a co-ordination in the chain of command in the highest-ranking angelic creature. These are aristocracy of elect angels.

4. The pur sui vant officer in charge of the judgment squad in this passage and in the next two chapters comes out of the temple and he moves to a position of standby reserve waiting for orders, verse 17.

5. In the meantime the king of arms, the highest ranking elect angel in heaven outside of Michael and Gabriel, comes from the altar of imprecatory prayers with a confirmatory order of execution. He brings with him all of the imprecatory prayers of the Tribulational martyrs, verse 18. This confirmatory order relates the imprecatory prayers of the Tribulational martyrs to the divine order sent by God the Father from the temple. He has delegated all administration of judgment to the Son.

6. We now have staff co-ordination. One of the living creatures [one of the four angelic heralds] issues the bowl judgements to the judgment squad. The judgment squad is made up of seven pur sui vant messengers whom we will study in chapter 15:7.

7. After this the pur sui vant officer who is on standby takes command of the judgment squad and goes into action, verse 19.

8. This results in the seven pur sui vant messengers of the judgment squad going into action. The action of the first: Revelation 16:2; the action of the second: Revelation 16:3; the action of the third: Revelation 16:4; the action of the fourth: Revelation 16:8, and so on. So that inevitably it is the squad that goes into action and fulfil the whole concept.

Our passage actually begins in verse 15, and from verse 15 to the end of this passage we are going to deal with the pur sui vant function of this squad. They are the judgment squad, their action will be studied in detail and the whole thing is structured on a principle of protocol. All protocol is based upon authority. There is always a system of authority and we have noted the principle: you cannot have freedom without authority. Authority and freedom must coexist. Freedom without authority is anarchy; authority without freedom is tyranny.

We are getting ready to study verses 15-19 which looks fairly simple but is a very complex passage because it keeps saying another angel does this and another angel does that. So we are going to study protocol in heaven and learn the doctrine that finite and temporal power can never compete with divine power, and it all starts with the concept of protocol in heaven. It all began with our Lord's great victory at the cross where He was judged for our sins and as a result of this He is going to terminate Satan's rulership of the world at the second advent. Then the final part of this passage: the saviour of mankind is also the judge of human history, and because of our Lord's strategic victory of the first advent He is entitled to judge the world during the course of human history. That includes the Church

Age, the Tribulation, the Millennium, and the terminating point of history which is the Gog revolution. All of this was possible because He was judged at the cross. The One who was judged at the cross for our sins now becomes the judge of human history.

Protocol in heaven is the interpretation of the rest of this chapter. Protocol is defined as a rigid long-established code prescribing complete deference to superior rank, and strict adherence to due order of precedence and precisely correct procedure. Protocol, therefore, recognises the principle of authority under the laws of divine establishment. Protocol recognises and obeys authority and consequently protocol requires virtue for its existence. Protocol is related to basic virtue in life; basic virtue demands the recognition of authority. We have studied gate three of the divine dynasphere: basic virtue. Basic virtue is always directed toward authority. Protocol is related to motivational virtue through the principle of the believer's worship of God. We have noted several of the motivational virtues. For example, we have noted under motivational virtue directed toward God, personal love for God; and it has a counterpart: impersonal love toward all mankind, functional virtue. We have also noted confidence in God. This leads to courage toward circumstances as the functional virtue. Worship toward God is a motivational virtue and that worship of God produces a true morality toward all. True morality is virtue, not self-righteousness. The fact that protocol is a part of God's plan, His policy, His system for believers on earth, emphasises the conclusion that protocol also exists in heaven. God has established a system of protocol in heaven for creature power cannot compete with divine power. That is true on earth and it is true also in heaven. Arrogance is the worst of all sins because arrogance seeks to compete with divine power. The basis for our study of protocol in heaven, Revelation 14:15-19, is the fact that authority exists in the highest sphere of angelic power, the elect angelic college of heralds.

We should notice that the system of authority in heaven is based on five categories: Category #1, God the Father as the author of the divine plan for the human race; category #2, God the Son is the winner in that plan for the human race; category #3, God the Holy Spirit who is both the revealer and the power of the divine plan; category #4, certain elect angels of the highest aristocracy, the elect college of heralds are involved in the administration of the plan; category #5, certain members of the human race have received the grace of God in the form of a spiritual gift and authority and responsibility. That would be the apostle John in our context.

The chain of command for the seven last plagues

1. Since God the Father has delegated all judgements to God the Son, as per John 5:22,23,27, we find Him in the heavenly temple sending orders regarding judgment — the last judgements of the Tribulation. He sends these orders to God the Son by angelic messenger. The angelic messenger who carries this order must be of the highest rank in the college of heralds [he is the second highest], he is the officer of arms.

2. In the order of protocol God the Son as the judge executes the mandates of God the Father in verse 16.

3. Between verses 15 & 16 we have a whole system of protocol which is given in verses 17-19, they actually occur between verses 15-16. This system of protocol results in the greatest judgment the world has ever known: the seven last plagues of the Tribulation, also known as the bowl judgements of Revelation chapter sixteen.

4. At this point a judgment squad of seven pur sui vant messengers is formed: the lowest rank in the college of heralds, the college of heralds being the highest aristocracy. They are wingless angels but they were great in the prehistoric angelic conflict and they now hold a very high rank of aristocracy. The judgment squad of pur sui vant messengers is formed for the actual administration of the seven last plagues. The pur sui vant officer in command of that execution squad is simply called in verse 17, "another angel." These angels are all different, they are involved in a system of protocol.

5. In the meantime verse 18 brings in another angel. This is the king of arms who comes from an entirely different source. He is the highest-ranking elect angel. The angels are all in eternity. Their eternity began before man was created with the great judgment of fallen angels when they were sentenced to the lake of fire. The sentence has not been carried out because Satan appealed: "How can a loving God cast His creatures into the lake of fire?" And God is demonstrating that during human history. Man was created to resolve the angelic conflict and that is why we are here: we are resolving the greater conflict of greater creatures. The "another angel" of verse 18 is the Paul or the Moses of angelic creatures, he is the king of arms, the highest-ranking angelic creature. The only other angels who could be as high-ranking would be Gabriel and Michael, but they are in the angelic order of battle, another form of aristocracy. The king of arms in our passage comes from the altar of imprecatory prayers with a confirmatory order of execution. This confirmatory order relates the imprecatory prayers of the Tribulational martyrs to the divine orders sent through the chain of command. That is the function of the king of arms.

6. Next comes staff co-ordination. One of the living creatures of Revelation 15:7 issues a bowl to each member of the execution squad. The bowl is called a "vial" in the King James version but in the Greek it is the word fialh, a bowl. It is a super grenade but instead of pulling out the pin the angel on command will pour it, and when he does one of seven horrible judgements will hit the earth. When the grenade is pulled on number six bowl we are going to have world war, called "the war of the great God Almighty", and we are going to study one campaign which is mentioned specifically: the Armageddon campaign.

7. Then the pur sui vant officer who went on standby goes into red alert in verse 17 and assumes command in the execution squad in verse 19.

8. The execution or judgment squad made up of seven pur sui vant messengers goes into action, each one in sequence on command of the pur sui vant officer, and will pull the pin on his grenade. He will pour his bowl containing one of the seven last plagues, chapter 16.

That is a co-ordinated action in heaven resulting in judgment on the earth. Right now these co-ordinated actions are going on in heaven, right this minute. Right now this same protocol system is being used. There are no mistakes in history. Defining the phrase “another angel” in this context is the key to understanding protocol in heaven. Each angel is different in rank and functions in the context from a different rank. Fundamentalist Christians don’t like rank, they all want to be equal or a little better than the next person.

Verse 15, this is the officer of arms, the second-ranking elect angel in heaven. We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated “Then.” We have a nominative singular subject made up of two words: a)lloj, an adjective, and with it we have the noun a)ggeloj, “another [of the same kind] angel.” This is one of the highest of the elect angels. This angel in that prehistoric conflict was one of the greatest of all spiritual giants. He is a messenger from God the Father to God the Son and his high rank is involved in this very important message. He is said to come out: the aorist active indicative of the verb e)xerxomai. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, the deliverance of the Father’s message to the Son. And the messenger is very important. Just like Wellington at the battle of Waterloo: all the members of his staff were aristocracy. Everyone who is on the staff of God the Father is an aristocrat. The officer of arms comes out of the temple. The active voice: the officer of arms produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of eschatological reality. The source of the order that is going to completely change the earth in the last half of the Tribulation: the preposition e)k plus the ablative of naoj, “from the temple.” This is the heavenly temple.

Only the highest ranking angels in the college of heralds are involved in this operation. That is important. Here is judgment coming to the earth; here are people who are going to blame the judgment on everyone else. We are going to see that this judgment is administered by the execution squad; we are going to see men blaspheming; we are going to see them blaming God, they never think to blame themselves. But all judgment that comes historically and eschatologically to planet earth and to the population of planet earth always is the result of man’s bad decisions. We are all the products of our own decisions.

Then we have the ministry of the officer of arms given in the present active participle of the verb krazw which means to shout as if there is a great battle and he has to be heard. This is a verbal order, “and he shouted.” The aoristic present tense expresses punctiliar action in present time. That is, the time of John’s vision in AD 96, not the time of fulfilment. The active voice: the officer of arms from the angelic college of heralds produces the action. The participle is circumstantial which is translated with the conjunction and the finite verb. This is a legitimate translation of the circumstantial participle, “and he shouted with a loud voice,” e)n plus megaj plus fwnh. The loud voice simply indicates the conditions of the earth. Things are so bad, there is so much disaster. Man is bent upon self-destruction and to preserve man from self-destruction God now judges the human race. If man is left alone he would destroy himself but divine judgment protects him from destroying himself. Destruction solves the problem of destruction.

There are two categories of destruction in disaster. There is first of all human self-destruction and then there is the function of God's justice. The human self-destruction would have wiped out the human race but God always enters into the scene with a protective judgment which always punishes those who have it coming and protects the rest of the human race. This principle of doctrine is the basis for the conclusion that there never will be the destruction of the entire human race.

Next we have "to him who is sitting on the cloud," and "sitting" is the present active participle of the verb kaqhmai. The pictorial present presents to the mind a picture of events in the process of occurring. Our Lord is constantly sitting there under the principle that Jesus Christ controls history. The definite article is a dative of indirect object plus the fact that the definite article is used for the personal and relative pronouns in this translation. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ in hypostatic union is now in control of history. Jesus Christ controls history. He is sitting on a cloud, and note again that the officer of arms from the angelic college of heralds functions as a royal messenger from God the Father to God the Son. God the Father is in the third heaven; God the Son is, as it were, hovering over the first heaven in the atmosphere. An angel is not giving the command, he is conveying the command. God the Father as the author of the divine plan for the human race gives the command, while God the Son as the saviour and judge of mankind executes the orders. This is a reminder of John 6:38 which says: "For I have come down from heaven, not to do my own will, but the will of him that sent me." Our Lord spoke this from His humanity in the hypostatic union.

Now we have a very fine point of Greek grammar here. In the previous verse, verse 14, we have the phrase that He was sitting on the cloud. That was e)pi plus the accusative which means direction, it means "toward the cloud." But in verse 15 we have the same phrase but e)pi plus the genitive, and it means contact, so now He is sitting on the cloud. The direction from which He controlled the earth in the previous verse, e)pi plus the accusative; the fact that Jesus Christ controls history continually in every generation of history, e)pi plus the genitive. While both phrases are translated the same, "on the cloud," they have different meanings. A case in point: the interpretation of the Bible requires a working knowledge of the original languages. Therefore anyone going into the ministry without the original languages is handicapped and limited as to his ability to interpret the Word of God. This cuts down on his ministry and makes him dependant on others — and sometimes dependant on the wrong people.

Next we have the conveyed command: the aorist active imperative from the verb pempw which means to send. The aorist tense is constative, contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety. It will regard in its entirety the next three chapters. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb. Why? John 5:22, 23, 27. This is the imperative mood of entreaty which does not convey the finality of a command but has the force or urgency of a request. And the accusative direct object from the noun drepanoj refers to the judgment which is about to take place. Drepanoj is the sickle, the symbol of divine judgment on the human race in the last half of the Tribulation. Notice that Christ sends the sickle but the angel from the college of heralds conveys the order from God the Father, "send your sickle," the possessive genitive of su because in this passage there are several sickles. Su is the pronoun and it refers to the Lord Jesus Christ who controls history. He has control of all divine judgment, therefore, in human history. Then the continuation of the command: “and reap,” the aorist active imperative from the verb qerizw human race during the last half of the Tribulation during the time when things are going to be worse than they ever have in history, and it is viewed in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of its existing results. What is the result? There is a principle: Jesus Christ controls history. There is no judgment on the human race without a thorough system of protocol occurring in heaven. That thorough system of protocol in heaven is related to the decision, in this case negative decision, on earth. We ask for it! God’s judgements are always just, in fact they are more than just, they protect the human race from self-destruction. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action through the administration of divine judgment. They are called the seven last plagues in Revelation 15:8; they are called the seven bowl judgements in Revelation chapter 16. The imperative mood of entreaty, once again, conveys not the finality of a command but the urgency of a request.

We now look at the explanation for all of this. Why was the command given from God the Father to God the Son? Because God the Son has control of all judgment in history. The causal conjunction o(ti comes up next, “because.” Then the nominative singular from the noun o(ra which means “hour,” “because the hour.” Jesus Christ sitting on the cloud represents the protocol principle of history that Jesus Christ controls history. There is something to keep Jesus Christ from controlling history and that is the function of human volition and the cosmic system of Satan. These oppose that principle and therefore we are the products of our own decisions; and when we make too many bad decisions from a position of weakness the next thing that happens is we lose control of our own personal lives, collectively the nation loses control, we have no personal sense of destiny, the nation has no sense of destiny, and we revert then to the degeneracy factors: the moral degeneracy factor which is arrogance and the immoral degeneracy factor. As long as we have disorganised evil Christianity can coexist with it. Christianity converts a few people out of disorganised evil; disorganised evil converts a few people out of Christianity for the cosmic system. Under freedom they coexist and it is not until organised evil comes into the picture that Christianity is systematically persecuted and martyred. Organised evil functions generally as a dictatorship, but there is the intervention from heaven and the protocol system in heaven leads to divine judgment: the divine judgment of Adolf Hitler, the divine judgment of Joe Stalin, the divine judgment of dictators — the intervention of divine judgment to protect the human race. Self-righteousness is not protocol, it is arrogance and pseudo-morality.

When it says “because the hour” it is a reference to time of judgment. A saturation of degeneracy on the one hand and self-righteousness on the other hand has resulted in the need of judgment to preserve the human race from its own self-destruction. One of two things can happen when believers become arrogant and self-righteous, pseudo morality, and when disorganised evil gains power. Out of this chaos there can come a dictator, and that means organised evil, or there can come protocol judgment from God which will deliver. So we have the aorist active indicative from the verb e)rxomai and that means to come, “the hour has come.” The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The principle: God’s timing is perfect, and the hour has come for the administration of divine judgment to preserve the human race and keep it from destroying itself historically. The creation of man was designed to resolve the prehistoric angelic conflict and therefore God must preserve the human race to the end of history, and there are two ways of doing it. One is through evangelisation which leads to believers on the earth and the principle of the pivot; the other is the protocol judgment. Therefore divine judgment ends up the various categories of evil which develop through residence and function in Satan's cosmic system. The active voice: the right time produces the action of the verb. The right time is God's timing. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of divine judgment in human history, and we must remember that no matter how bad things get historically that this is a part of God's marvellous plan to protect us. When times get bad you must remember the protocol interpretation of history.

We have one more phrase: "to reap," which is the aorist active infinitive of the verb qerizw. Not only is God's timing in everything perfect, including divine judgment, but there are certain Tribulational martyrs who have been offering their imprecatory prayers in Revelation 6:9-11, and they are waiting for God's timing in the matter. They know that God has His perfect timing and at the right time He will judge through the system of protocol in heaven. One of the most difficult things for the believer to do, of course, is to wait on God's timing. When we fail to wait for God's perfect timing we as believers postpone His blessing. The aorist tense here is a culminative aorist, it views divine judgment of the human race during the last half of the Tribulation in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results: the administration of divine judgment to preserve the human race. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb through the administration of divine judgment but He administers through a protocol system related to the angelic college of heralds. The infinitive of intended result: when the result is indicated as fulfilling a deliberate divine objective, hence a blending of both purpose and result. Divine judgment is the counter-fire that keeps from destroying the entire human race. Man left to his own devices would destroy himself but that will never happen because of the protocol interpretation of history.

The historical necessity for judgment is given in the closing phrase, "because the harvest has become overripe." We have a second causal conjunction, o(ti). The second causal conjunction provides a second explanation for the imperative of entreaty and relates it to the doctrine of historical trends. When the human race through cosmic involvement is in danger of total self-destruction then God intervenes with a judgment to destroy segments of the human race where the infection, the disease, is. That means the organised evil first of all and then other forms of degeneracy.

The "harvest," qerismoj, which means a harvest of judgment, hence a harvesting of arrogance: religion, degeneracy, self-righteousness, and the sexual, criminal, psychotic arrogance which we have studied. And where does this take place? — the genitive of place from the noun gh which is used for planet earth, "the harvest of the earth has become overripe," says the aorist passive indicative of xerainw. The constative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety indicates the saturation of evil has reached the destructive point for the human race, the entire obliteration of the human race. Therefore a counter-fire must be started. The passive voice: planet earth receives the action of the verb, a saturation of evil, religious, degeneracy of all forms, arrogance in every form. The principle is that we are the products of our own decisions. A maximum number of bad decisions jeopardises the perpetuation of the human race. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical and eschatological reality of the evil saturation of the human race which apart from divine intervention and judgment would be destroyed. The destruction of the human race, however, will never occur in human history because of man's failure. Not only will man continue to live on the earth but God's plan and blessing for the believer continues in the worst of historical disaster. The circumstances of life can get very bad but that does not change the principle of divine blessing for the advancing believer. No circumstance of life can deter the plan of God for your life unless you decide that it should. Your volition, not evil circumstances and historical disaster, determine your blessing or your misery while living on this earth. History, therefore, cannot overcome you unless you decide to let history do so. History will only overcome you if you decide to live in the cosmic system. The worst of historical circumstances are still a time of great blessing for the mature believer and if you decide to live in the divine dynasphere, God's system, then God's plan for your life spells out blessing. Historical disaster, therefore, does not hinder divine blessing for the believer who has momentum in the plan of God, but historical disaster is a means of punishment of both believer and unbeliever residing in Satan's cosmic system.

Translation: "Then another angel [the officer of arms] came out of the temple, and shouted with a loud voice to him who was sitting on the cloud, Send in your sickle and reap: because the hour has come to reap; because the harvest has become overripe."

In blessing or in judgment God's timing is absolutely perfect. God's judgements are blessing both to the believer and to the human race in general because divine judgment protects the human race from self-destruction and perpetuates the human race to the end of history. Nothing, therefore, can destroy the human race until the end of history. But our own bad decisions can destroy us. The justice of God has always been man's point of reference since the fall of mankind in the garden, and this point of reference guarantees the continuing existence of the human race until the termination of human history at the end of the Millennium.

In verse 16 we have the judgment from the Son of God. We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai translated "Then." With this the nominative singular subject from the articular present active participle, the verb kaqhmai. Jesus Christ still controls history, "Then he who was sitting on the cloud." The definite article is used as a personal pronoun referring to our Lord Jesus Christ. The present tense is a pictorial present, it gives to the mind the eschatological picture in the process of occurrence. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ in His hypostatic union produces the action of the verb, Jesus Christ controls history.

The posture of sitting connotes our Lord's strategic victory in the first advent which was attained at the cross where He was judged for our sins. God the Father did His last personal judging, as it were, at the cross when our sins were imputed to Christ and the integrity of the Father, namely one half of divine integrity, the justice of God the Father, imputed our sins to Christ and they were judged. After the resurrection, ascension and session of our Lord, seated at the right hand of the Father, He was given His third royal warrant, "King of kings and Lord of lords," and with that royal warrant He now controls history. That includes the administration of judgment from heaven which is necessary to keep man from destroying himself. Left to our own devices there would be no person left on the earth, we would destroy ourselves by our own bad decisions. The judgment from the Son of God is administered through protocol in heaven. The protocol involves one of the two great aristocracies, the elect angelic college of heralds. The judgment of the Son of God is administered through the function of these aristocrats from the prehistoric angelic conflict.

The fact that our Lord was sitting on the cloud means that Jesus Christ controls history. In the first advent, the hypostatic union, and the cross, our Lord Jesus Christ provided the basis for eventually taking the rulership of the world, the last 1000 years of human history, and He will take it from Satan. Jesus Christ controls history now; he will control history in a direct and visible way in the future. Today His control is invisible, it is accomplished through the protocol of heaven which we have been studying. Revelation 1:7, remember He is coming with clouds. Now he is sitting on a cloud; then He will come with clouds.

Continuing in verse 16 we have the aorist active indicative of the verb ballw which is going to be translated as a transitive verb here, meaning the movement of throwing or propelling, and in this case to swing a sickle. The swinging of the sickle eliminates a certain portion of the population of the world. In order to protect the world from self-destruction, to protect mankind from destroying himself by his stupidity, we have the sickle judgements. While the Lord Jesus Christ is said to swing the sickle here we are going to see in the verses to follow that it is accomplished through a protocol system related to the angelic order of battle and the elect heralds.

This is followed by the accusative singular from drepanon, the sickle as a sign or symbol of judgment. The active voice: Jesus Christ who controls history produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of doctrine, the fact that Jesus Christ controls history.

It is said to be swung "over the earth," e)pi plus the accusative from gh. In other words, Jesus Christ administers judgment to perpetuate the human race. This is accomplished through the protocol of the angelic college of heralds and the function of the judgment squad. "Then he [our Lord Jesus Christ] who was sitting on the cloud swung his sickle over the earth..."

Then we have the earth as the subject: the nominative singular of gh, "and the earth was reaped." This is a reference to planet earth during the last half of the Tribulation, the time of the eschatology of the devil's desperation. The aorist passive indicative from the verb qerizw indicates the judgements of the seven last plagues or the bowl judgements of Revelation chapter sixteen, "and the earth was reaped." The culminative aorist tense views our Lord's judgment of planet earth in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the perpetuation of the human race for the rest of history.

Were it not for these periodic judgements there would be no human race. The human race would not have survived were it not for the great universal flood of Noah's day when eight believers survived to start a new civilisation. These judgements in Revelation chapter sixteen are the worst judgements in human history and we will note that while they are very intense there is one very pertinent fact: at the end of these judgements there will be the second advent. The second advent will end the last world war in history and the middle east campaign related to that world war is the Armageddon campaign.

When the second advent occurs the largest portion of the population of the world will have survived the most intense disasters in history, the seven last plagues. There will be believers who will survive; there will be unbelievers who will survive. There will be believers in two categories: believers who have kept their momentum through perception of doctrine and who are winners; believers involved in the cosmic system who are losers. Primarily the believers who survive and go into the Millennium are going to be winners. Most of the losers will die the sin unto death during this period of terrible disaster. The believers who go into the Millennium are going to be the cadre for the repopulation of the earth for the last 1000 years of human history. The unbelievers in the baptism of fire who are removed are, of course, those unbelievers who survive this terrible holocaust of the last half of the Tribulation. They are cast into the fire; they are the tares. The wheat goes into the Millennium, "as in the days of Noah so shall be the days of the coming of the Son of Man," says Matthew 24, "one is taken [the unbeliever], the other left [the believer going into the Millennium]."

But the point to be noted right now is that they survive these things. No matter how bad things become and no matter how great disasters overtake certain portions of the earth's population the population of the world will never be destroyed by any of these things, nuclear weapons included. There is no force operating on earth or in heaven which can destroy the human race until God's plan is completed. God's plan for human history is not terminated until the end of the Millennium. The great change that is going to come, the worst disaster period in all of human history is this period called the time of the devil's desperation, will be followed by the greatest period of prosperity the world has ever known. Following the Gog revolution at the end of the Millennium our Lord will destroy the entire world as we know it today and the universe through a nuclear reaction and then there will be the new heavens and the new Jerusalem. So God's plan for mankind on planet earth continues and there will always be plenty of people to accept or reject our Lord Jesus Christ as saviour. The total annihilation of the human race is absolutely impossible.

The passive voice: planet earth receives the action of the verb as a part of the Father's and the Son's execution of the plan through divine judgment. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of future historical fact, a part of the eschatology of the time of the devil's desperation.

Translation: "Then he who was sitting on the cloud swung his sickle over the earth; and the earth was reaped."

Principle: Divine judgment, no matter how severe, prevents the human race from total self-destruction. Man left to his own devices would eventually destroy himself on the earth. If God did not interfere in human history there would be no human history, therefore every act of divine judgment is the gracious function of our Lord Jesus Christ to actually preserve the human race and the fact that divine judgment means that the human race will never be totally destroyed throughout the course of human history. Divine judgment is a part of God's gracious protection and perpetuation of the human race from self-destruction through its own bad decisions. Man's lust for power alone could destroy man from the face of the earth under the principle that the demand for power exceeds the need for power. People are always demanding power but it isn't necessary for them to have power; people are demanding authority and it isn't necessary for them to have authority, and when too many people demand authority you have democracy which is degeneracy and the worst form of government — not even a form of government actually. Since people are the products of their own decisions there are no tragedies in history, merely disasters manufactured by bad decisions from a position of weakness. To keep these bad decisions from totally destroying mankind on the earth God has provided a system of divine judgment. These judgements are the backfire, the counter-fire, to stop the forest fire. Therefore even though history is the record of man's decisions and actions which are self-destructive it is Jesus Christ who controls history, it is Jesus Christ who preserves mankind from the evil consequences of his own bad decisions.

We have the mechanics of our Lord's reaping in verses 17-20 and this will record protocol in heaven. For the mechanics on earth, Revelation chapter 16; for the mechanics in heaven, the rest of this chapter and a very short chapter fifteen.

Verse 15 must be read with verse 16 because between them we have the whole protocol system of heaven. The second highest-ranking aristocrat in all of heaven, the officer of arms, leaves the presence of God the Father in the temple and moves to the cloud where our Lord sits as a result of His third royal warrant and from where He controls history. Our Lord administers all judgment. A message goes from God the Father, the author of the plan for the human race, to God the Son. It is an important message because the second highest-ranking angel in all of the elect system brings it. Why not the highest? Because he is over at the altar of imprecatory prayers. He is the angel with the golden shovel. In verse 16 we have the reaping of the earth. The actual reaping of the earth takes place in chapter sixteen, the bowl judgements.

Between verses 16 & 17 the following things take place. In verse 17 the pur sui vant officer who commands the execution squad comes out of the temple. He will move to standby waiting to be given his command of the judgment squad, but not until verse 19. In the meantime in verse 18 the highest-ranking angel in the college of heralds, the king of arms, comes to the altar of imprecatory prayers to co-ordinate the judgements with the prayers of the Tribulational martyrs. They have been making very powerful intercession and their powerful intercessions are imprecatory prayers which are going to be answered, so their is a co-ordination factor in the protocol. Protocol in heaven always takes cognisance of human prayers. In verse 19 the pur sui vant officer assumes command of the execution squad. In Revelation 15:6 the execution squad is formed in the temple in heaven. In Revelation 15:7 the angelic herald issues a bowl to each member of the squad. In Revelation 16:2,3,4,8,10,12,17 each member of the execution squad pulls the pin of his grenade, he pours out his judgment bowl on the earth. This fulfils the action between Revelation 14:15 and 14:16.

Historically periods of prosperity are always based upon the practice of protocol for the practice of protocol is the general function of the laws of divine establishment: category #1 — Bible doctrine. Wherever there is protocol the barbarians are pushed back and civilisation becomes a reality. This part of our century is the day of the barbarians, the concept of protocol has been pushed into the background. Periodically, as a result of divine judgment protocol reasserts itself and people become civilised again.

We are studying protocol in heaven but we are reminded that this protocol is only practised by one group in heaven, the elect angels. Many of the fallen angels, as we noted in Revelation chapter twelve, are still in heaven and they will not be thrown out of heaven until the middle of the Tribulation which begins the time of the devil's desperation. Because this is true we have a protocol organisation in heaven and we have non-protocol. One of the manifestations of non-protocol is what Satan is doing every day. He appears in the court of heaven and selects a few believers, sometimes many believers, and brings accusation against them. These accusations are generally true but that is because they are the result of the function of the demon intelligence organisation. They are usually related to sins and the failures of believers involved in the cosmic system, and since believers are involved in the cosmic system it is very easy to report on them and keep track of them. Then, of course, when the true accusation is made our Lord Jesus Christ who represents us in heaven as our defence attorney points out that these failures on our part are under the blood of Christ, they were judged on the cross; and God the Father pronounces the same statement day in and day out, year in and year out, century in and century out: "Case dismissed". This is going on all the time so that this function of Satan becomes a matter of gossip, maligning and judging, and it gives us some clue as to what lack of protocol means in a church as well as in any organisation. It is gossip, maligning, judging, the various categories of the sins of the tongue.

So we can see the failure or success of any organisation can be due to lack of protocol. Protocol is necessary in the function of a team, a business, or any organisation of any kind, including the local church. Protocol for those who have passed into their eternal state is also a function forever and ever. Protocol is here to stay because the angelic creatures who were involved in the prehistoric angelic conflict, the elect angels, are practising protocol. To practice protocol is to practice virtue; to practice protocol and virtue is to function under the principles of recognition of authority. In eternity there is even more established authority than there ever was in time. Furthermore it is a permanent authority, an eternal authority, as we studied in the doctrine of the order of the morning star, the uniform of glory, the various crowns, the gazebo in the garden, and other things that we have studied in Revelation which deal with rewards for winners in time during the course of the angelic conflict. We already have a picture of what it will be like when we are in heaven in our resurrection bodies by the fact that there is, even in the angelic realm in the order of elect angels, a definite system of protocol. This system of protocol means differences in rank and there is an eternal respect for this rank.

Again, we define protocol as a rigid long-established code which prescribes complete deference to superior rank or authority, strict adherence to due order of precedence and precisely correct procedure.

Protocol recognises the principle of authority under the laws of divine establishment. Protocol recognises and obeys authority, and consequently protocol demands virtue. You cannot have protocol without virtue therefore virtue always precedes protocol, and it is inevitable that if you have virtue you will function under protocol. Let's take, for example, the plan of God for the Church Age believer. Gate three is basic virtue. Basic virtue is, of course, humility — enforced and genuine. It is always directed toward authority. There is protocol, therefore, in the plan of God when authority is recognised. For example, a believer who has humility is flexible, and you have to be flexible to recognise varying systems of protocol in different countries and different locales and different places. One thing about true humility: it brings with it flexibility so that you do not make an issue of yourself and become offensive in some sphere of activity outside of your own.

Take prayer, for example. No prayer that you utter is ever going to be heard without recognition of protocol and, before protocol, humility. If you do not have enforced and genuine humility your prayers will never be heard, "If I regard iniquity in my heart the Lord will not hear me." Iniquity in that passage in the Psalms deals primarily with arrogance in its various categories. To offer a prayer in arrogance is not only the principle of sin but it is the principle of lack of protocol. To pray to the Father and to make some request or even some intercession for someone else, to ask God for something, and to do so in a state of arrogance is blasphemy because your prayer does not recognise protocol. Even in the approach to prayer all prayers are offered to God the Father in the name of the Son in the power of the Holy Spirit. Even our Lord Jesus Christ as our great High Priest making intercession for us offers His prayers to God the Father. And when God the Holy Spirit offers prayers "with groanings which cannot be uttered" they are offered to God the Father. Protocol in prayer means effectiveness in prayer.

Protocol, therefore, recognises and obeys authority; protocol, therefore, requires virtue. Protocol is related, therefore, to basic virtue in life: enforced and genuine humility. Protocol is also related to motivational virtue. Motivational virtue is gate five of the divine dynasphere. It is always directed toward God and it is always a function of the royal priesthood, just as humility as a basic virtue is the function of the human personality, so motivational virtue is the function of your royal priesthood, always directed toward God. Gate six is functional virtue, always the function of your royal ambassadorship directed toward man and circumstances. So every category of virtue has a direction, every category of virtue has an involvement. Humility is your personality. The function of motivational virtue toward God, your royal priesthood. The operational or functional virtue toward man and circumstances is your royal ambassadorship. Therefore they all demand protocol. Protocol is the structure of civilisation, the modus operandi by which all of us function in the plan of God without interfering in the momentum of someone else who is a believer.

Protocol is related to motivational virtue and to functional virtue. The fact that protocol is a part of God's plan, God's policy, and God's system for believers on earth emphasises the conclusion that protocol also exists in heaven. God has established a system of protocol in heaven for creature power cannot compete with divine power either in heaven or on earth. Therefore, beginning in verse 17 we are going to see the modus operandi of this protocol just as we have seen the modus operandi of protocol in history. All protocol recognises not only authority but it recognises any category of nobility.

We are dealing with a system or order and rank, a system of protocol in heaven. When Satan fell he was the highest-ranking angelic creature. He was a cherub. He is called "the anointed cherub" as Lucifer the son of the morning. As a cherub he had four wings, his badge of rank. So there was a system of rank prior to the fall of Satan, and the highest-ranking angel was Satan or Lucifer the son of the morning, as he was called. Once Satan fell he took with him a third of all angelic creatures. The over a period of perhaps a million years, perhaps thousands — we do not know the length of time since it was prehistoric — there was the angelic conflict. Many of the cherubs who were lower in rank than Lucifer apparently chose for the Lord so that eventually over a period of time we have elect angels and we have fallen angels. Fallen angels are divided in to many categories but we are looking now at the elect angels. The prehistoric angelic conflict came to a close and all angelic creatures by that time had either decided for the Lord so that they are simply called the elect angels, or the non-elect angels or fallen angels who followed Satan. The elect angels then went into their eternal state, just as one day with the Rapture of the Church we will receive a resurrection body which begins our eternal state. So the elect angels have an eternal form to their body which would be comparable to a resurrection body; they are in the eternal state. Going into the eternal state they had an evaluation comparable to our judgment seat of Christ at the Rapture. In that evaluation there were winners and losers according to that evaluation. There were the top winners, and a new order was created called the seraph order. This order never existed before and it was a very small group of angels with six wings. They are divided into two systems of aristocracy: the college of heralds and the order of battle. For example, Michael and Gabriel, undoubtedly seraphs, are the highest-ranking angelic creatures forever and ever. In the college of heralds we have the king of arms, at least two officers of arms, four with the rank of full herald.

In the trial of the fallen angels Satan immediately acted as the defence attorney for all of them. His whole defence in the court of heaven was based on the question: How can a loving God cast His creatures into the lake of fire? The sentence was pronounced: lake of fire for all fallen angels. Because of that defence of Satan God then created an inferior creature called man. Man was placed on one planet and is used to resolve Satan's appeal. Human history demonstrates the fact that God does not lose His integrity and that love is not really the issue. The issue is the volition of creatures. The fallen angelic creatures were negative, they refused whatever salvation God offered. Now the same volition as angels is carried into human history and man makes his own decisions and is the product of his own decisions while angels, as it were, are in the stands watching human history.

Now we leave prophetic history and we go to heaven to see the protocol in heaven. In this protocol in heaven we find first of all the king of arms. He is the highest-ranking angelic creature and he is in the seraph rank. Then there are at least two officers of arms under him, and then those with the full rank of herald, four. There are probably seven seraphs in the angelic college of heralds and there are at least two seraphs in the order of battle, Michael and Gabriel.

The king of arms we have studied in Revelation 5:2 where he is called the “powerful angel.” Again in Revelation 10:1 he is called the “powerful angel.” He is also called the angel with the golden shovel in Revelation 8:3-5. He is the angel who processes all of the imprecatory prayers of Tribulational saints.

Then below him is the officer of arms, which we have noted in verse 15 as “another angel”. Then the full rank of herald, mistakenly translated by the word “beast” in the King James version — Revelation 4:6-8. The Greek word means “living creatures” and they are angelic heralds. One of these is found in Revelation 15:7.

Then we have a category in the angelic college of heralds comparable to Satan’s rank, the cherub rank. One is very prominent in this passage, the pur sui vant officer. He is going to command the execution squad of seven found in Revelation chapter fifteen.

Then there are the wingless heralds called the pur sui vant messengers.

Protocol without virtue is ritual without reality. For the eternal state of these elect angels all protocol has eternal virtue, and these categories of angelic aristocracy emphasise the importance of protocol in God’s plan for the believer on earth and in heaven. Protocol, therefore, must inevitably be associated with great blessing. For us as believers living in the Church Age protocol is related to the priorities of the plan of God. Remember: In God’s plan: mandates first; in God’s system: virtue first; in God’s purpose: Christ first; in God’s objective: momentum first; in God’s authority: doctrine first.

God’s plan for the believer in time has protocol in the three functions of virtue, as we have noted. Worship is a motivating virtue resulting in the functional virtue of what we have classified as virtue-morality. Hence the principle: no virtue; no protocol. God’s plan functions on protocol in three categories of virtue.

In our passage we are now back on the subject of imprecatory prayers which we noted first in Revelation chapter six. They were legitimate imprecatory prayers from the Tribulational martyrs. The imprecatory prayers of the Tribulation martyrs was foreshadowed by imprecatory prayers found in the Psalms. Most of them had to do with the time of David. These are actually the only two recordings of this particular concept and they do set some precedent where integrity is involved.

Note, for example, some of the phrases in Psalm 13. David started out in verse 1, “How long?” In verse 2, “How long will my enemy triumph over me?” In verse 3, “Look on me and answer, O Lord, my God.” Inverse 4, “My enemy will say I have overcome him, my foes will rejoice when I fall.” That is part of the content of an imprecatory prayer. It is a prayer, however, which is related to the success of David’s enemies.

Imprecatory prayers have a double content. First of all a prayer for deliverance and, secondly, a prayer for the justice of God to be exercised in unfair treatment.

In Psalm 54, “Deliver me, O God, by your person, vindicate me by your power.

Hear my prayer, O God; listen to the words of my mouth.

Strangers are attacking me [unjust treatment], and men of violence seek my life; men who have no regard for God.

Behold, God is my helper; the Lord is the sustainer of my soul.

Let the evil return to those who slander me; in your faithfulness destroy them.” That is the heart and soul of an imprecatory prayer.

Imprecatory prayers take cognisance of divine integrity and divine justice and imprecatory prayers must be offered from a position of virtue, being in fellowship with God.

Psalm 143, while the entire Psalm is an imprecatory prayer the last two verses, verses 11 and 12, certainly illustrate the principle.

“For your name’s sake, O Lord, preserve my life [imprecatory prayers often have to do with deliverance, though not always]. In your righteousness [integrity] bring my life out of trouble. In your grace silence my enemies, and destroy all who afflict my soul; for I am your servant.”

The imprecatory prayer has to be prayed from a position of integrity, a position of momentum, and a position of maturity. Most people who pray imprecatory prayers get an immediate answer in operation boomerang. Whatever they prayed for the destruction of their enemies they prayed from the viewpoint of revenge. God has made it very clear: “Revenge belongs to me, saith the Lord, I will repay.” So whenever you pray a prayer of revenge you always get an immediate answer, operation boomerang. Whatever you ask for your enemies generally comes to you, except your life is not taken, at least not at that moment. You may be under the sin unto death but it will take a little time. So always remember that the imprecatory prayer is a weapon which can only be successfully used in the hands of a person with maximum virtue, a person with spiritual maturity.

Psalm 35

Verse 4, “Let those who seek my life be disgraced and put to shame; may those who plot my ruin [those who devise evil against me] be turned back and humiliated.” Notice that he has the concept of virtue. He has been unjustly treated and therefore he prays for the thing to bounce back on them. But he doesn’t pray for their death here.

Verse 8, “May ruin overtake them by surprise; may the net which they hid to trap me entangle them.” David recognises a principle here: people are the products of their own decisions. Therefore his imprecatory prayer follows that line in verse 8. “May they fall into the pit [their ruin].”

Verse 15, “But when I stumbled they gathered in glee; attackers gathered together when I was unaware,” the same idea as vultures attacking some animal that has broken its leg and is now helpless, “they slandered me without ceasing.”

Verse 26, here is the gist of an imprecatory prayer: “May all who gloat [gloaters have it coming] over my distress be put to shame and humiliated; may all who exalt themselves over me be clothed with shame and disgrace,” a very wise prayer, by the way, because you will note that the worst thing that can happen to a person who suffers from arrogance is humiliation. So the prayer reflects the tremendous spiritual wisdom of David.

Psalm 69, an imprecatory prayer dealing with those who hate you without a cause.

Verse 4, “Those who hate me without a cause are more than the hairs of my head; those who would destroy me are powerful.”

Verse 22, “May their tables set before them become a snare; and when they are in prosperity, may it become a trap,” a prayer for misery in prosperity.

Verse 23, “May their eyes grow dim so that they cannot see [blindness], and may they suffer from terrible nervousness.”

Verse 24, “Pour out your wrath on them, let your fierce anger overtake them.”

Verse 25, “May their bivouac be desolate; may none dwell in their tents.”

Psalm 109 is the ultimate in imprecatory prayers.

Verse 1, “O God whom I praise, do not be silent!”

Verse 2, “For they have opened their wicked and deceitful mouths against me [slander]; they have maligned me with lying tongues.”

Verse 3, “With words of hatred they surround me, they attack me without a cause.

Verse 4, “In return for my friendship they act as my accusers; but I am in prayer.”

Verse 5, “They repay me evil for good, and hatred for my love.”

Verse 6, “Appoint an evil man to oppose them; and let an accuser [satan in the Hebrew] stand at his right hand.”

Verse 7, “When he is tried, let him be found guilty; and let even his prayers become sin.”

Verse 8, “Let his days be few; let another take his office.”

Verse 9, “May his children become orphans, and his wife be a widow.”

Verse 10, “May his children be wandering beggars; and seek alms far from their ruined homes.”

Verse 11, “Let creditors seize all that he owns; may strangers plunder the production of his labour.”

Verse 12, “May no one extend kindness to him, or take pity on his orphaned children.”

Verse 13 — “May his posterity be cut off; let their names be blotted out of the next generation.”

Verse 16, “For he never thought to show kindness, but persecuted [hounded to death] the poor, the needy, the broken-hearted; he put to death the despondent of the right lobe.”

Verse 20, “May this be the Lord’s payment to my accusers, and to those who speak evil against my soul.”

There is no commentary in the Bible that says these prayers are wrong. They could be, depending on the one who prays. The believer who prays from the cosmic system and offers such a prayer from arrogance is into operation boomerang and he will be hurt by it.

We do have numerous passages in the book of Revelation on the subject of imprecatory prayers from the Tribulational saints. The angel we are studying is about to process all of them and make them a part of the historical disaster that comes to the world at the end of the Tribulation — the seven last plagues. The fifth angel, or the pur sui vant officer, is about to assume command of the execution squad. He is on standby until he assumes command.

The king of arms now comes into the picture in verse 18. He is the highest-ranking angel among the elect angels, the apostle Paul or the Moses of the elect angels. In the chain of a command there is no higher-ranking angel except our Lord Jesus Christ under the title, "the angel of the Lord." The imprecatory prayers now come into the picture. The imprecatory prayers of Revelation 6:9-11 is what starts the ball rolling in verse 18.

"And when he [our Lord Jesus Christ] had broken the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of those who had been murdered because of the Word of God, and because of the testimony which they had maintained: furthermore they shouted and said, O sovereign Lord [Christ in hypostatic union], holy [the integrity of Christ as eternal God] and true [the integrity of the humanity of Christ in hypostatic union], How long will it be before you judge and avenge our blood on the population of the earth? Also a white robe [interim body] was given to each one of them [Tribulational martyrs]; and they were told that they should refresh themselves a little while longer, until the number of their fellow servants, even their brethren, were to be killed even as they had been, should be completed."

Now the king of arms must co-ordinate this.

Verse 18, First of all we have the interim use of the conjunction kai which should be translated "In the meantime." With this we meet the king of arms under the title of the adjective αλλοj and the noun αγγελoj, "another angel." This is the king of arms, and it will be noted again that he comes from the same headquarters system under the verb ε)xερομαι. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The king of arms produces that action. This is a declarative for eschatological reality.

Then we have the relative clause introduced the articular present active participle from the verb ε)χω, "who has." The definite article is used as the relative pronoun. The perfective present refers to a fact which has come to be in the past but is emphasised as a present reality. Here is an angel who is now completely and totally superior to Satan in every way, and he won his state of aristocracy. He is a member of the new knighthood and he has the rank of king of arms of the angelic college of heralds.

What he has is given is in the accusative singular direct object ε)κουσια, "authority," which is said to be ε)πι plus the genitive of πυρ, "over fire." This is a reference to the fire in the altar of incense where there are thousands of imprecatory prayers which have been uttered.

In Revelation 8:3-5 we see what is meant by having authority over the fire: "In the meantime another angel [the king of arms] came and took his place before the altar [the golden altar of incense where intercessory prayer is made], and he had an incense shovel made of gold; consequently much incense was given to him, that he might offer with the prayers of all the saints [Tribulational believers] on the golden altar which was before the throne. Then the smoke of the incense, along with the prayers of the saints [imprecatory prayers first mentioned in 6:9-11], went up before God from the hand of the angel [the king of arms]. Then the angel took the incense shovel, and filled it with fire from the altar [that is where we get the phrase, "he had the authority over the fire"], and he hurled it to the earth: and there followed peals of thunder, loud noises, flashes of lightning, also an earthquake [a warning of coming judgment]."

Notice in verse 18 that the angel, the king of arms, does not come from the temple, he comes from the golden altar of incense, e)k plus the ablative of qusiasthrion, a reference to the altar of incense. He gives an order. He has the right to do so because he is in a co-ordinating position and he ranks highest in the chain of command. He is superior to the pur sui vant officer who commands the execution squad made up of pur sui vant messengers.

We have the connective kai, "and," followed by the aorist active indicative from the verb fwnew, "and he called [or spoke]." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the king of arms produces the action, declarative for eschatological reality. And he shouts with a "magnificent" voice, megaj, "to him," the pur sui vant officer who is placed on standby ready to assume command of the execution squad, "who had the sharp sickle," the symbol of divine judgment. "Send in your sharp sickle" is a repeating of the command he has already received from our Lord. Once this is all co-ordinated he will assume command of the execution squad. Notice that this is an order from God the Father to the Son, relayed over to the king of arms as well as relayed directly to the Son. It is from the Father in the temple to the Son on the cloud, from the Son on the cloud to the king of arms at the altar of incense, while we have on standby the pur sui vant officer who will command the execution squad.

What does all this mean? It means that protocol is necessary for victory. It means that without protocol it is impossible to be a winner. Protocol always implies rank, authority, and is a reminder of the importance of basic virtue which is humility. No matter how high you go in life (this is your personal application right now) there is always going to be someone better, someone higher. If you become frustrated because someone is better, someone is greater, someone is higher, someone is superior, then you are downward trail; from thereon it is arrogance all of the way to your own self-destruction. You can only learn protocol through doctrine and the road to protocol is through the principle of virtue first. First there must be humility, enforced and genuine, then there must be motivational virtue directed toward God, and finally there must be functional virtue directed toward all mankind. This is all a principle that we learn from the protocol of heaven, for God's plan demands of us that the protocol of heaven be our daily modus vivendi on earth. Protocol means rank, authority, superiority. You and I are not in this world to be "better than" anyone else. We are here to have that one thing that is greater than anything in life, and must be acquired. The greatest things in life are acquired, they are not inherent. Whether you are inferior to anyone else or think you are, or someone tells you you are, is not an issue. You are never going to enjoy life as long as it bothers you that someone is better, and when you get involved in the various systems of trying to straighten out life on the basis of equality, a red herring and a dead end for those who follow it. The protocol of heaven is designed to teach us the most basic system of living.

The angel is now going to give a mandate which is the answer to the imprecatory prayers of the Tribulational martyrs. Imprecatory prayers are a human appeal to divine justice rather than lust for revenge. All of this is based on protocol but we should note that protocol is based on respect for authority, not fear of authority. The function of protocol is based on virtue, not superiority. Protocol orientation demands confidence so that no one is disturbed by someone having greater authority or greater power than another. Protocol without virtue is like ritual without reality.

In heaven protocol is the function of aristocracy: those elect angels who were winners in the prehistoric conflict. This protocol in the angelic college of heralds leads us to the conclusion that in the prehistoric angelic conflict God's plan for elect angels included the same principles we are studying: virtue first. Virtue overcomes the whole basis for Satan's cosmic system. Satan's cosmic system begins with motivational evil. Motivational evil is arrogance, jealousy, bitterness, vindictiveness, implacability, hatred. Functional evil are the gates of cosmic one plus the gates found in cosmic two, but motivational evil is the beginning of all of it. Here we have the principle that virtue conquers jealousy, a motivational evil. Virtue is actually the key, then, to everything. Protocol demands virtue and without protocol virtue is non-existent.

Translation of verse 18: "And in the meantime another angel [the king of arms] who has authority over fire [the fire of the altar of incense] came out from the altar: and he shouted with a magnificent voice to him [to the pur sui vant officer placed on standby waiting for command] who had a sharp sickle..."

We have a seraph giving a command to a cherub who in verse 19 will assume command of the execution squad. Every time there is a divine judgment on earth it is a system of protocol, a system of checks and balances, a system of co-ordinating prayers that are legitimate.

Note that there is order in heaven, nothing is ever done in a haphazard manner but a chain of command exists to demonstrate the deliberateness of divine judgment on certain segments of the human race in order that other segments of the human race can continue in history. Behind every divine judgment is divine wisdom, which means that historical disasters from God or personal disasters is a matter of all things working together for good. That means there are no accidents in the Christian life. It means that every disaster, both personal and collective, protects both the born-again believer and the entire human race from destroying itself through degeneracy or self-righteousness. For the believer with doctrine, therefore, disaster is really not disaster but a blessing in the form of divine judgment, fulfilling the principle, of course, that there are no accidents in the Christian life.

Then the mandate is given in the aorist active imperative of the verb pempw which means to send in. It has the connotation of attack. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It contemplates the overall attack, the form that the judgment will take at the end of the Tribulation. The active voice: the pur sui vant officer on standby waiting to command the judgment squad produces the action of the verb. The action of the verb will be Revelation chapter sixteen where each member of the squad will pull the pin of his grenade and throw it on the earth where there will be tremendous divine judgment. Remember that being on standby simply means that he is waiting for his command to be formed. His command will be formed in Revelation chapter fifteen verses six and seven. Under his command will be seven angels, pur sui vant messengers who will form the squad. In chapter fifteen these seven pur sui vant messengers who have the seven last plagues are going to be presented to us. In chapter sixteen they will fulfil this command.

This is the imperative of command followed by the accusative direct object from the noun drepanon, "sickle," and with that o)cuj, "sharp." The sickle is sharp. Anytime God's judgements are given they are very sharp, "send in your sharp sickle." The sharp sickle are the seven judgements which we will study in chapter sixteen. The sixth one is the Armageddon campaign which is one campaign in the great world war of the last half of the Tribulation.

You will note how many times divine victory comes through divine judgment. We first saw this principle at the cross. When we were given human life at the moment of physical birth that human life was imputed to the soul of each one of us. At the same time Adam's original sin was imputed to the genetically-formed old sin nature. That means that we were condemned under Romans 6:23, "The wages of sin is death," at the point of birth. We were born physically alive and spiritually dead. That is to protect those who never reach accountability. They have to be condemned before they can be saved. The condemnation occurred at birth and therefore if they die before reaching accountability they automatically are saved.

In the meantime no personal sins were ever imputed to us for judgment. Instead, they were imputed to our Lord Jesus Christ on the cross. He bore our sins in His own body on the tree. He who knew no sin was made sin for us. This is the function of divine justice. The justice of God the Father set aside God the Father's love for God the Son. Love was superseded. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son" is only a side of this principle, but His justice had to go into action and He took all of those personal sins in the history of the human race and at the cross they were all imputed to Christ and judged. That is what the scripture means when it says, "God commendeth his love toward us in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." Our sins were imputed to Christ, not to us. They were judged on the cross, and that is why we have this non-meritorious system of salvation: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved."

Why Christ? Because He is the only saviour, He was the one who was judged for our sins. Jesus Christ is not simply a religious leader, he is the only saviour. Our Lord Jesus Christ was judged for us on the cross. Faith is a non-meritorious system of perception, there is no merit in the subject, all of the merit is in the object. Judgment is the basis of victory. Our Lord was judged for us on the cross and therefore judgment is always the basis for victory, judgment is the means by which God actually perpetuates the human race in history.

The human race would have destroyed itself and almost did so in the time of Noah, and God came along with judgment because out of all of the millions of people who lived on the earth in the time of Noah only eight were qualified to continue under the principle of protocol and civilisation. At the second advent the same thing will happen again. Unbelievers will be cast off the earth, the baptism of fire, and believers will be the cadre to go in for the population explosion of the Millennium. But there never has been a time since the creation of man when man has not occupied the earth. Sometimes we are down to just a few people but that will only happen once and that has already occurred at the judgment of the universal flood. The Noahic covenant was given, saying that man will never be destroyed from the earth, that God will see to it that he is not, and that anything that threatens the total destruction of the human race will be eliminated by divine judgment. Divine judgment, therefore, is the point of reference from the fall of man to the Millennium. Divine judgment is the basis for divine victory. You and I have eternal life because of divine judgment. Our substitute, the Lord Jesus Christ, took our place on the cross.

The command is given to the pur sui vant officer: "Send in your sharp sickle," the seven last plagues of the Tribulation, "and harvest the cluster of grapes."

The harvesting of the cluster of grapes has to do with the divine victory. Note how many times divine victory comes through divine judgment. This is because divine judgment is the point of reference from the fall of man to the end of the Millennium. Divine judgment is the basis of our so great salvation as we have noted. That is the principle that blessing comes through judgment. Blessing often comes through adversity. Prosperity is merely the result sometimes of blessing through adversity. Divine judgment is the means for perpetuating the human race so that every generation of history has the opportunity of eternal salvation and the blessings of the plan of God.

Next we have the connective conjunction kai and the aorist active imperative of trugaw, which means to harvest. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It refers to the fact or action extending over a period of time, the last half of the Tribulation; specifically the time covered by Revelation chapter sixteen in which degeneracy in every form is judged. In chapter fifteen this judgment harvest is designated as the seven last plagues, while in chapter sixteen it is called the seven bowl judgements. The active voice: the pur sui vant officer commanding the execution squad is going to produce the action of the verb. The accusative singular direct object from the noun botruj means "cluster of grapes." With it we have the ablative plural from a)mpeloj which means "vines." Translation: "Send in your sharp sickle and harvest the cluster of grapes from the vine of the earth."

The cluster of grapes is very important here because it refers to the various categories of degeneracy that have to be eliminated in order for people to survive the last year of the Tribulation. The ablative of source from the vines connotes the idea of separation accompanied by the implication that the original situation of degeneration during the last half of the Tribulation would destroy the human race even before the second advent were it not for these seven judgements. The harvesting of these clusters of grapes is amplified in chapter sixteen where the mandate is executed. There is a continuous chain of command, a system of protocol, which brings all of this into operation.

We have perfect divine timing at the end of this verse. It is mentioned as perfect divine timing. We have a reason for all of this. Harvesting the cluster of grapes means that we have a saturation of three categories of degeneracy that will destroy the population of the earth in that year, or shorter, prior to the second advent. Therefore we have to eliminate through these seven last plagues the degeneracy that would be self-destructive. Three categories are involved: organised evil, the greatest danger to mankind which does not tolerate Christianity or disorganised evil. Disorganised evil and morality will also be judged. So the whole judgment is to protect the human race so that it can be perpetuated to the second advent.

Next it says, “because its grapes are ripe,” the aorist active indicative of ajkmazw, which means they are rotten. Ajkmazw has the connotation of reaching its peak, of being overripe, and therefore being rotten. The saturation of degeneracy throughout the world in the last half of the Tribulation threatens the survival of the human race. The human race cannot continue to exist with this degeneracy which has saturated every level of society. So to protect the human race from the self-destruction of degeneracy God judges the degenerate areas so that the human race can be perpetuated for the rest of history, the last part of the Tribulation and the entire part of the Millennium. Hence, the historical trend: divine judgment in the form of historical disaster protects the human race from self-destruction and degeneracy. The wine of the wrath of God is administered to protect the human race. Principle: God’s judgements are a part of God’s blessing to the human race. The active voice: the degenerate part of the human race produces the action of the verb under the analogy that the clusters of grapes have ripened to the point of degeneracy. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical reality of the various categories of degeneracy.

Translation of verse 18: “In the meantime another angel [the king of arms] who had authority over fire came out from the altar [of imprecatory prayers]: and he shouted with a magnificent voice to him [the officer who will command the execution squad] who has the sharp sickle, and he said, Send in your sharp sickle, and harvest the cluster of grapes [the saturation of human degeneracy] from the vines of the earth [wherever human degeneracy is located on earth]; because its grapes are ripe.”

Verse 19, the actual target is reached and is destroyed. We notice immediately in this verse that the pur sui vant officer now assumes command. First of all we note the success in the fact that he is going to assume command, and when he does he will be successful. They have selected exactly the right angel for the job. Notice he is not from the angelic order of battle. For this particular job he is from the angelic college of heralds. The angelic order of battle fights generally in heaven and protects certain segments of believers in earth. But when it comes to a strict military operation of judgment it is the angelic college of heralds that provides both the command and the personnel under that command. This command goes to the pur sui vant officer. He is the angel of verse 19.

We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated “Then,” and the nominative singular subject ajgeloj, referring to the angel in command. He has a successful command function and we learn this from the aorist active indicative of the verb ballw. We translate it “swinging the sickle.” He executes his orders; the mission is going to be successful. The aorist tense is a constative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety. We look ahead and see that he will be successful as the commanding officer of the execution squad. In chapter fifteen we will see how the squad is formed; in chapter sixteen we will see the squad going into action. The active voice: the pur sui vant officer who has been on alert, on standby, will now assume command. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the fact that he is successful. This means that a very special angelic creature has been selected for command. He has proved himself in the prehistoric angelic conflict.

Next we have “against the earth,” e)ij plus the accusative of gh. We have already taken up the words “his sickle” which is the accusative direct object from the noun drepanon, plus a)utoj. The swinging of the sickle against the earth is the brief as to how it all turns out. We look ahead and we see that the execution squad under the command of this angelic officer does a great job. Revelation 21:9 even tells us that later on they have other jobs.

Principle: God selects certain believers to fulfil divine missions because they are great. Greatness comes through the priorities of the plan of God. God has a plan for your life. Whether you fulfil that plan or not ...

Greatness comes from such decisions as virtue first, doctrine first. God uses prepared people. That is the issue in this particular passage; that is the issue in the next three chapters. Only prepared people are used in this way by God. If you are a crisis personality it means that you have trained for it over a long period of time. It means that you have taken in doctrine constantly, it means that you have developed the three virtues of the divine dynasphere. It means that you are a prepared person. All of the preparation is invisible as far as others are concerned but the results are visible.

God has a plan for your life and that plan includes nine characteristics

1. It includes a purpose: to glorify the Lord Jesus Christ in time, therefore to achieve tactical victory through spiritual momentum.
2. It has an objective: to advance to spiritual maturity in the plan of God. There is no momentum outside of His plan.
3. A policy: grace is the policy of God in the administration of His plan for the Church Age believer, known as the royal family of God.
4. A system: virtue first is one of the priorities in the plan of God.
5. A point of reference: the holiness or integrity of God is the point of reference, divine integrity is composed of two attributes: the justice of God and the righteousness of God.

The frames of reference which are not involved in this dispensation: not the sovereignty of God, as per hyper-Calvinism; not the omnipotence of God, as per the healing movement; not the love of God, as per emotional fundamentalism.

6. An authority: the Word of God is the authority. God has delegated responsibility of communication of doctrine to the gift of pastor-teacher. Other responsibilities go with other spiritual gifts. All believers have a spiritual gift.

7. A result: good decisions from a position of strength in the system. That means you have personal control of your life and eventually will have a personal sense of destiny.

8. An enemy: the cosmic system.

9. A protocol: three categories of virtue in the divine dynasphere form the principle of the protocol in the plan of God. God's plan does have protocol just as many facets of God's plan have protocol. For example, prayer has protocol. All prayer is addressed to the Father in the name of the Son in the power of the Spirit.

The system of priorities in God's plan

In God's plan: mandates first; in God's system: virtue first; in God's purpose: Christ first; in God's policy: grace first; in God's objective: momentum first; in God's authority: doctrine first.

The system works around the divine dynasphere which has been given to this dispensation only. The prototype divine dynasphere was proved by our Lord Jesus Christ. We have eight gates which are a part of the system.

Gate one: the filling of the Holy Spirit. The ministry of God the Holy Spirit is based on a system of protocol. God the Holy Spirit does not indwell believers in the Old Testament. He empowered a few under the doctrine of enduement, e.g. David, Elijah, Elisha, certain prophets, writers of the Old Testament. The Church Age is the only dispensation, until the future one in the Millennium, when God the Holy Spirit indwells every believer, winner or loser, carnal or spiritual. And this is the only dispensation in which the entire plan of God revolves around the power of God the Holy Spirit. Being filled with the Spirit is entrance into the divine dynasphere through gate one. Walking in the Spirit is functioning at the various gates. This is the power system.

Secondly, there is the basic modus operandi which is so necessary to develop objectivity in the spiritual life. Many born-again believers are psychologically very subjective. They are subjective through every type of environmental process, every type of psychological system, and subjectivity has to be set aside. Subjectivity is basically set aside, first through the basics involving the rebound technique, and then the three stages of the faith-rest drill. Objectivity is absolutely necessary in the divine system, there is no place for subjectivity. Subjectivity is always related to arrogance and involvement in the cosmic system.

The third gate is enforced and genuine humility. This is basic virtue directed toward authority. Basic virtue is always humility, and humility in several categories is orientation to life. Without humility there is no success in any aspect of life where success can be measured. That is the teachability gate.

Gate four is the momentum gate. Remember that in each one of these gates there is a system of protocol, an organised system, God is not the author of confusion. At gate four we not only see our momentum but the function of our two royal warrants. Each one of us is a priest; each one of us is an ambassador for Christ. Perception of doctrine: the function of our royal priesthood; application of doctrine: the function of our royal ambassadorship.

That leads to gate five, the place where protocol reaches its peak in manifestation. Gate five is directed toward God, it is the motivational virtue of the Christian way of life.

Gate six is directed toward man and circumstances. It is functional virtue.

Gate seven with its eight major momentum tests necessary to reach maturity.

Gate eight is spiritual maturity.

Virtue is found in gate three, five, and six. This is where protocol is always manifest. There is an organised system of protocol in every one of these gates. We are not studying at the moment in this part of the eschatology of Revelation the Christian way of life but we are studying the concept of protocol. This means that since God has a plan for your life as a believer you cannot afford as a believer to sit on the bank waiting for the river to pass you by. You have to learn doctrine today, tomorrow and the next day. Then, the day after you will put the plan of God into operation — first on a simple basis, and then in the greater complexities of the concept of protocol. Your life will be changed.

In the time in which the book of Revelation was written the Roman empire was the first Gentile client nation to God. Virgil said: "Advance in virtue". That pretty well summarises the concept of protocol. Or, as one of the Latin writers once quipped: "Magna est veritas et brevalavit," doctrine is powerful and ultimately will win. That is the concept in the plan of God.

This means there is a system. Without a system you have no standard; without a system you have no co-ordination; without a system you have no performance; without a system you have no effectiveness. In the divine system the ability resides in the essence of God while compliability rests with the volition of the believer. Without the divine system the believer has no standards to distinguish the plan of God from Satan's cosmic system. The difference is between morality which is the virtue-morality of the plan of God and the arrogant morality of the cosmic system. The believer has no co-ordination for application of doctrine to circumstances of life. Becoming spiritually self-sustaining and fulfilling the system all demand understanding a protocol. As you understand the plan of God the divine system of protocol unfolds. The believer has no performance, he has no momentum, he does not fulfil the right priorities in the plan of God. The believer has no effectiveness, neither the attainment of spiritual maturity nor the glorification of our Lord Jesus Christ and, furthermore, he has no legitimate Christian service. Therefore, of course, it is important to understand protocol.

That is protocol on earth very briefly as it relates to us in the Church Age but what we are here to study is protocol in heaven because that is the subject of Revelation 14:15-19. Protocol is defined as a rigid, long-established code prescribing complete deference to superior rank and strict adherence to due order of precedence. A precise and correct procedure results.

Protocol recognises therefore the principle of authority under the laws of divine establishment. Protocol recognises and obeys authority, consequently protocol requires virtue for its existence. Protocol is related to basic virtue in life which is enforced and genuine humility because basic virtue is the basis for everything, not only for success in life as an individual, but for functioning in the divine plan, the divine system, which God has provided for us. Protocol is related to motivational virtue through the principles of the believer's worship of God, and protocol is related to functional virtue through the modus operandi of the morality of virtue. The fact that protocol is a part of God's plan, God's policy, God's priorities, God's system, emphasises the conclusion that protocol exists in heaven. That is what this passage is all about. No judgment of any major type nor judgements of the most minor and minute type ever occur without the function of the highest-ranking possible protocol in heaven: God the Father, God the Son, specifically mentioned in this passage, and the angelic college of heralds. The fact that authority exists in the highest sphere of angelic power in the angelic college of heralds is a very important part of this concept.

The coexistence of a dual nobility in a land is not unusual. In heaven we have the angelic order of battle and the angelic college of heralds. For aristocracy there is always the protocol. The protocol in heaven is very precise, very exact, and very important because it means that nothing by way of historical disaster ever occurs on earth apart from a whole system and a process of check and countercheck, balance and counterbalance. Everything that happens to you by way of personal disaster and everything that happens to us as a nation by way of disaster results from a protocol system in heaven.

Remember: Protocol is based on respect for authority, not fear of authority. Protocol always involves the volition and the mental attitude of those who do not have authority. Protocol is based, therefore, on virtue, not on superiority. Protocol orientation demands confidence so that one is not disturbed by the greatness, the superiority, the authority, or the power of someone else. In heaven protocol is the function of aristocracy: the elect angels who were winners in the prehistoric angelic conflict. This protocol in the angelic college of heralds leads us to the conclusion that in the prehistoric angelic conflict, before man was created, God's plan for the elect angels included the principle of virtue first.

Verse 19 is not the function of the execution squad, it is merely some of the results: "Then the angel [the pur sui vant officer] swung his sickle against the earth [the administration of the seven last plagues]..."

Next we have "and he harvested," the connective use of the conjunction ka plus the aorist active indicative of the verb turgid. This refers to the function of the seven last plagues. The culminative aorist tense views the judgment in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the terrible historical disasters that precede the second advent of Christ. The active voice: the pur sui vant officer who has been on standby, now assumes command of the execution squad. He fulfils his function. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of eschatological reality.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object from a)mpelobj. It refers to vines, the vines of the earth. The vines of the earth represent the areas of degeneracy, the areas of religion, in the last half of the Tribulation. We have seen that there are actually three areas of degeneracy in the last half of the Tribulation: organised evil, disorganised evil, and immoral degeneracy. The vines or clusters of grapes indicate the fact that man by man's volition produces historical circumstances which are self-destructive and, therefore, to protect man from destroying himself, there is divine judgment which comes from the system of protocol.

Man always brings on historical disaster and inevitable divine discipline through the decisions of his own volition. Self-determination is always the basis for personal and historical disaster. Bad decisions from a position of weakness always result in cosmic involvement. So man would destroy himself left to his own devices. The counter-fire to stop the fire, as it were, is the divine judgment which intervenes into human history to protect man from destroying himself. In historical disaster man loses control of his life, he has no personal sense of destiny. Maximum bad decisions made by mankind on the cosmic system demand, therefore, divine judgment and historical disaster to perpetuate the human race. The human race is actually perpetuated by the wisdom of God in the perpetuation of historical disaster. The harvest of the vines is the result of man's negative volition while the pouring out of the bowls of divine wrath in Revelation chapter sixteen is the execution, divine judgment, or God's wrath in order to deliver and protect the human race from self-destruction and to eliminate the cancerous portions that are destroying mankind on the earth.

Again, the conclusion from all of this: man will not be able to destroy man from the earth. There is no system of nuclear weapons, nerve gas, chemical warfare, nothing whereby man will be able to destroy himself from this earth. Man by man's efforts cannot destroy man. God overrules from the protocol in heaven through the gracious judgements of historical disaster. Man will continue to live on planet earth until history is completed at the end of the Millennium. So the swinging of the sickle, the harvesting, is the function of the pur sui vant officer in command of the execution squad.

Next we have the process of divine judgment, “and he threw them.” We have the connective conjunction kai, and the aorist active indicative from the verb ballw which means to throw. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. Man is the product of his own decisions. Bad decisions of cosmic involvement are harvested, put into the winepress for divine judgment. The active voice: the harvested vines with their clusters of bad decisions are put into the winepress by the pur sui vant officer functioning through his execution squad. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the divine collection of bad decisions which are accumulated over a period and are harvested for divine judgment. There is no word for “them.” It is understood as a direct object of the context but there is no word for it in the Greek, “and he threw [them] into the winepress,” e)ij plus the accusative of lenoj. The winepress always refers to divine judgment, it represents the accumulation of bad decisions from man’s free will, man’s decisions from his position of weakness on a part of a segment of the human race. The winepress indicates a process in which divine judgment does not act until there has been an accumulation of bad decisions relating to motivational and functional evil of the cosmic system. This winepress is also called megaj, the adjective which is used with it meaning “great.” It also means powerful. Megaj has as many as thirty related meanings.

Then we have a descriptive genitive of qumoj used with the possessive genitive of qeoj, and we have an anthropopathism. The meaning of the wrath of God: divine justice is man’s frame of reference for both blessing and cursing from God. The blessing originates from the fact that divine justice imputed all man’s sins to Christ on the cross and then judged them. This blessing is where God’s plan and God’s system for mankind actually begins. Eternal salvation through faith in Christ is the beginning of everything. Rejection of Christ as personal saviour is where the cursing begins, John 3:18. The wrath of God expresses the function of divine justice with regard to historical trends. The accumulation of evil in the form of degeneracy, religion, the morality of arrogance, endangers the very existence of the human race and their right of self-determination. Therefore these saturations of evil result in divine judgment for the purpose of perpetuating the human race.

Translation: “Then the angel [the pur sui vant officer] swung his sickle against the earth [the seven last plagues], and he harvested the vines of the earth [all the areas where degeneracy, religion and pseudo-morality existed], and he threw them [the clusters of grapes or vines] into the great winepress of the wrath of God.”

There is no way to reconcile Christianity and philosophy. Philosophy always comes up short. This is demonstrated by the apostle Peter when he says that [2 Peter 1:3] “seeing his divine power [the divine dynasphere] has given to us everything pertaining to life and godliness...” So the brilliant minds, the men of genius in philosophy who strive to attain virtue never arrive there. Yet we, with all of our stupidity, can get into the divine system, after we understand it, and function in it and produce what men throughout the ages have desired to produce and could never achieve, virtue. “... through the true knowledge of him [Christ] who called us to his own glory [the prototype divine dynasphere] and virtue.” We were not called to self-righteousness, we were not called to a system of philosophical speculation, rationalism and empiricism; we were not called to go out and try to use our volition and achieve virtue. Virtue is only manufactured inside of the divine dynasphere.

Continuing in 2 Peter 1:4 -9, “Through which things [both the divine dynasphere and the manufacture of virtue in it] he has given to us his precious and magnificent promises, that by them you might become partakers of the divine nature [through residence and function inside the divine dynasphere, through the system: virtue first], having escaped the corruption that is in the cosmic system by lust. Now for this reason also, applying all diligence in your doctrine supply virtue [doctrine supplies virtue], and in your virtue, knowledge; and in your knowledge, protocol [self-discipline], and in your protocol, perseverance, and in your perseverance, godliness [gate eight of the divine dynasphere]; and in your godliness, capacity for love [the manifestation of virtue-love], and in your capacity for love the virtue of impersonal love. For if these virtues are yours increasing [momentum and residence in the system], they render you neither useless nor unproductive in the true knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. For he who lacks these virtues is blind or short-sighted, having forgotten purification from his former sins [having forgotten rebound, therefore outside of the divine dynasphere].”

The apostle Paul in Philippians 4:8 says, “Therefore, royal family, everything that is true [doctrinal], everything that is honourable [integrity], everything that is just [fair], everything that is pure, everything that is capacity for love, everything that is commendable, if there is any virtue [virtue must come first], and anything worthy of praise, you concentrate on these things.” Protocol becomes the structure for putting together the virtue.

We resume in Revelation with the terminating point of the seven last plagues. Chapters fifteen and sixteen will be the fill-in. But what is the end of it all? How is evil going to end up in the human race at the closing moments of the Tribulation? With all of the system of protocol in heaven, with all of the fairness, with all the justice, with the perfect function of virtue in the angelic college of heralds, with the great leadership involved, what is the end result? Notice that out of the whole system of protocol comes a system of justice on earth, and a system of justice on earth demands the death of the guilty. The guilty have resorted to violence; they must die by violence. The blood mentioned at the end of this chapter is the inevitable result of the honourable function of the protocol in heaven. There are certain members of the human race that must die for the human race to be perpetuated.

Verse 20 — we start with the emphatic use of the conjunction kai, “In fact.” Next we have the nominative singular subject lhnoj, the winepress, where all of this judgment is occurring. Then the aorist passive indicative of the verb patew which means to trample, to trample down, “In fact the winepress was trampled.” The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It is a reference to the angelic officer in charge of the execution squad. One of the execution squad will do this in chapter sixteen, the sixth pur sui vant messenger. It is a reference, then, to the final phase of the Armageddon campaign. The passive voice: the winepress is the accumulation of cosmic evil from man’s bad decisions, and it receives the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the future reality of the Armageddon campaign as the sixth bowl judgment and its inevitable result. Then we have an adverb used as an improper preposition, e)cwqen, and with it we have the object of the preposition which is polij, “outside the city.” Polij is going to refer to Jerusalem several times in the next context. This is a reference to the siege of Jerusalem. We have the slaughter, then, of the final phase of the Armageddon campaign.

The nominative subject in the singular is a(ima and this represents all of the slaughter on the battlefield of the Armageddon campaign and of the general world war which occurs at that time. A(ima is the word for blood. It can be taken as literal blood but actually it is a figurative use for people dying. They don't all bleed to death but blood is used in that sense. Then we have e)k plus the ablative of lhnoj and it refers to the winepress, "and the blood from the winepress." Then the aorist active indicative from e)cerxomai, translated here "flowed out." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, it takes the slaughter, the annihilation of the enemy in the last world war in history, including the Armageddon campaign, and gathers it into a single whole. The active voice: the blood of the annihilated armies produces the action of the verb. In other words, great casualties. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the great slaughter which shocks the world at the point of the second advent. Next we have an Attic Greek adverb, a)xri, used as an improper preposition with the genitive of xalinoj, a horse's bridle. Then the final phrase, "a thousand, six hundred stades." A stade is roughly 200 yards. 1600 stades is roughly 180 miles. Hence, within the 180-mile radius of Jerusalem there will be a tremendous slaughter which terminates the Armageddon campaign.

This last verse, which doesn't really connect with anything, it just gives believers confidence so that they know how it is going to turn out.

Translation: "In fact, the winepress was trampled outside the city, and blood flowed out of the winepress up to the horse's bridle, as far as a hundred and eighty miles."

This fulfils the prophecy, for example, of Isaiah 34:5,6, "My sword is satiated in heaven," the protocol of heaven related to the slaughter of Armageddon, "The sword of the Lord is filled with blood." Ezekiel 39:2-5 describes the same slaughter: "And I shall turn you around," speaking of the king of the north in the invasion of Armageddon, "drive you on, take you up from the remotest parts of the north [the invasion point], and bring you against the mountains of Israel. And I shall strike your bow from your left hand, and smash your arrows from your right [the neutralisation of infantry weapons]. You shall fall on the mountains of Israel, you and all of your troops, and the people who are with you [allies]; and I shall give you as food to every kind of predatory bird and the beast of the field. And you shall fall on open fields; for it is I who have spoken, declares the Lord God."

We are talking here about slaughter in the millions. And we are also talking not about violence in terms of terrorism but are actually discussing professional killing, not murder. In other words, how do you stop a raging fire? Light a backfire. That is exactly what we have. Remember that all legitimate killing of people, all just killing of people, all killing from virtue, must be professional. The person who gets emotional in warfare is a poor soldier. He must be professional, he must concentrate on his weapon, not on who is being killed out there. There should never be one qualm of conscience if you understand virtue, if you understand protocol. Protocol plus virtue equals professionalism. There must be no emotion, no conflict.

The burial of the army of the king of the north is found in Ezekiel 39:11-12, "And it shall come to pass in that day that I shall give Gog a burial ground there in Israel, the valley of those who pass by east of the sea, and it will block traffic. So they will bury Gog there will all of his army, and they will call it the valley of Hamon-gog [the armies of Gog]. For seven months the house of Israel will be burying them in order to cleanse the land [of their corpses].”

In verse 13 we have the story of the burial ground. It will be a memorial to the glory of God for the power of God is infinitely greater than the power of Satan and his system of evil in this world. “Even all the people of the land will bury them; and it will be a memorial for them on the day that I glorify myself, declares the Lord God.” Joel 2:20 describes this same slaughter: “And I will remove the northern army far from you, I will drive it into a parched and desolate land, in fact its vanguard into the eastern sea [the Dead Sea], its rear guard into the western sea [the Mediterranean]. Then its stench will ascend into the air and its foul smell will come up,” and next it describes the military glory of this great army of the king of the north, “for it has done great things.” But that is past history, they are now corpses. In Revelation 19:21 we have once again a reference to this principle. In this passage in general, what do we have? Divine victory during the time of the eschatology of the devil’s desperation. It includes several factors. First, the defeat of the remnants of Satan’s three assault armies, demon armies. Secondly, the defeat of demonism by mature believers through virtue, through the development of Bible doctrine. Protocol virtue defeats demonism, the invisible army where there are no corpses involved but where the weapon is the protocol of the divine dynasphere, the production of the three categories of virtue. Thirdly, the victory of the Tribulational martyrs who accept death rather than renounce our Lord Jesus Christ as the living Word and Bible doctrine as the written Word. Fourth, the divine victory over the Antichrist army of the Armageddon campaign which includes the deliverance of Israel. Fifth, the divine victory over ecumenical religion, the subject of two chapters yet to be studied in Revelation chapters 17 & 18. Sixth, the deliverance of Israel, the fulfilment of the unconditional covenants at the second advent of Christ. Seventh, there will be the removal of Satan as the ruler of this world and he is put in prison for a thousand years during the Millennial reign of Christ.

Chapter 15

The beginning of the devil's desperation is the middle of the Tribulation and two things occur at that time, both found in Revelation chapter twelve: the expulsion of Satan from heaven (12:1-12) and the seventh trumpet, the great holocaust attack on Israel (12:13-17). It must be remembered that all of this comes to pass because people ask for it. We are the products of our own decisions, one of the most basic concepts in the doctrine of historical trends. Nothing ever happens to the human race apart from bad decisions from a position of weakness. Then, secondly, we noted in chapter thirteen the devil's two dictators: the Gentile dictator of 13:1-10, the dictator of the revived Roman empire and the leader of the ecumenical religious system which is the greatest concentration of evil of all time; then, in the last half of chapter 13, verses 11-18, we studied the Jewish dictator of the state of Israel in the last half of the Tribulation. In chapter fourteen we noted the divine victory during the time of the devil's desperation. In verses 1-5 we studied the victory of the plan of God. In verses 6-20 the victory of the judgment of God and the concept of protocol in heaven, relating it to protocol as a part of the divine system in God's plan for your life.

Next in chapters fifteen and sixteen, they go together: divine judgment during the devil's desperation. In chapter fifteen we see protocol functioning in the seven last plagues in heaven and then protocol functioning in the seven bowl judgements on earth in chapter sixteen. In chapters seventeen and eighteen we have two chapters concentrated on the evils of religion and how religion is the most evil system that Satan has ever invented. We will see in chapter 17 the fall, the judgment of the political aspect of ecumenical religion, and then in chapter 18 we will see the fall of the so-called spiritual aspect of ecumenical religion. Actually, these two chapters, 17 & 18, are simply an amplification of the seventh bowl judgment. Then we will move on to chapters nineteen and twenty to the termination of the devil's desperation. In chapter nineteen is the second advent of Christ, and in chapter twenty, verses 1-3, the imprisonment of Satan.

We should notice as we proceed that the seven last plagues of chapter fifteen are identical to the seven vials or bowls of chapter sixteen. They are synonymous terms. We know that from chapter 21:9. In heaven they are simply called plagues; on earth when they are administered we can call them bowls or grenades or vials.

In chapter 15:1-4 we have the sign in heaven. In verse 1 we see the last of the Tribulational judgements, the greatest historical disaster in all of man's life on earth. Now we meet the execution squad. These seven angels are the execution squad.

This is said to be a great sign in heaven. We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated "Then," followed by the aorist active indicative of the verb o(raw, "Then I saw." The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, and this is the vision of the next two chapters, the seven last plagues or the seven bowl judgements. The active voice: the apostle John produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the vision of the seven last plagues of chapter fifteen which are synonymous with the seven bowl judgements of chapter sixteen. With this we have the accusative neuter singular direct object, and we have the adjective. The direct object is composed of a)lloj, meaning another of the same kind, another system of judgment, a system of judgment similar to the seven seals and then the seven trumpets. And with this we have the noun shmeion which means a sign or a miracle, something that is contrary to the usual course of nature. This means a miracle of divine origin which is performed by God as a vehicle of revelation or communication of Bible doctrine to those who have so far rejected it. God is going to get the attention of the negative part of the human race. "Then I saw another sign," another sign because there are seven signs in the book of Revelation, starting in 12:1 at which point we noted them briefly. The Jews are constantly seeking signs or attesting miracles so that they were distracted from Bible doctrine and looked always for the miracle. So when we have a reference to signs in the book of Revelation we know that we are going to be dealing with Israel and the state of Israel. In John 4:48 our Lord said, "Unless you see signs and wonders you will not believe." He was addressing Himself to the Jewish nation, those who rejected the fact that He was the Messiah.

Principle: Miracles, supernatural activity, is not the basis for faith in the Lord Jesus Christ or perception of doctrine. The reality of doctrine is far greater than any miracle that anyone ever sees, and miracles generally become a distraction for miracles are performed by Satan and by Satan's organisation. Therefore you do not assume in this time of a completed canon of scripture that a miracle means that a person comes from God. The person may be using a Satanic miracle for false teaching to gain adherents. The age of miracles is over, it ended with the completion of the canon of scripture. The reality of truth is found in Bible doctrine, not in the function of miracles.

Miracles or signs without doctrine are a distraction from doctrine but when the sign is given by God it is to teach Bible doctrine. This sign is in heaven therefore it is not visible to us, only through the eyes of John. It is not the performance of a miracle on the earth but a system of protocol related to the supernatural in heaven. Here we have a sign that teaches the eschatology of the seven last disasters in history.

The location of the sign: e)n plus the locative of o)uranoj, "in [the third] heaven." Since this is a sign in the third heaven, the abode of God, it will be a teaching sign to introduce the eschatology of the seven last plagues. We know that this sign is doctrinal teaching, a teaching aid actually, in the field of eschatology because it is described by two adjectives.

The two adjectives which follow: the accusative singular of megaj. Whatever it is, in the eyes of God it is "great"; and qaumastoj, which has several meanings as an adjective. It is used for things related to God, and it is the verbal adjective meaning marvellous, astonishing, noteworthy. "Then I saw another sign in heaven, both great and remarkable." It describes the content of the seven last plagues, the greatest disasters of history. Judgment from God is always awesome, therefore it is noteworthy, it is remarkable, it is the means by which God evangelises and gives a last chance to those in history who are being judged to believe in Christ.

The concept is very simple: Divine discipline is for the believer; divine judgment is for the unbeliever.

We are now in the second stage of divine warning to the unbeliever. The grace of God is always there, grace precedes judgment, judgment is used to present grace in a stronger form. The seven pur sui vant angels who act as the execution squad are now introduced. They are said to be "seven angels," e(pta plus a)ggeloj. These angels are pur sui vant messengers and they are all aristocrats. They must be able to think, to obey, to execute, under the system of protocol. In this operation none of the common angels, the angels who failed or the angels who did nothing during the prehistoric angelic conflict, are involved. This is a job for aristocrats. Aristocrats among creatures are always the right ones for the crisis. They will follow divine orders right down to the last point, and that is exactly what we have here. This is an execution squad of aristocrats, pur sui vant messengers from the angelic college of heralds. This squad will not go into action until chapter sixteen. The first of the seven will pull the pin on his grenade in 16:2, the second one in verse 3, the third in verse 4, the fourth one in verse 8, and so on. The order of battle in the administration of these seven judgements is very carefully handled in every echelon of the angelic college of heralds and we will note their various functions.

Next we have a present active participle from the verb e)w. The lesson we probably supposed to learn here is that if you want a job done right give it to someone who is high-class enough to do it. The point is: scum never can do the job. The difference between scum and high-class in Christianity is the difference between life in the divine dynasphere and life in the cosmic system. In other words, Christians in the cosmic system, no matter what their social status may be, are scum and cannot do anything for God. The majority of born-again believers live in the cosmic system, therefore they cannot execute God's plan on earth. And there were a lot of those in the prehistoric angelic conflict who are not doing the job. They didn't do the job then; they are not given the job now. The ones who are ready for the crisis, the crisis personality, are believers living in God's plan, function in God's system. He has the right priorities, the necessary virtue. This execution squad is taken from the aristocracy, the angelic college of heralds. The same thing is true when God wants a member of the human race to do something. He gets the believer who is living in the divine dynasphere, the believer who is consistently positive, the believer who in that sense is the spiritual aristocrat, the crisis personality, the one who can stand in the gap. Always a minority of believers are involved but those are the believers that God can use.

So we have the present active participle of e)wx, and the pictorial present actually presents to the mind the eschatological events in heaven under the same concept we have studied, protocol. The active voice: the pur sui vant messengers from the angelic college of heralds, aristocrats, produce the action. They are a lower category of aristocrat, they are wingless angels, in contrast to their commanding officer who is a seraph. We have seen that their commanding officer was under the command of a staff: the king of arms, the officer of arms, the Lord Jesus Christ, God the Father.

The circumstantial participle follows and we have with this an accusative direct object, and the direct object is first of all a numeral, e(pta, “seven.” Next is e)sxatoj, and that is very important. The word is “last,” “the seven last,” because this is the end of all historical disaster. All disaster in history is going to terminate with these events. This will be the last war in history and the whole topography of planet earth is going to undergo some tremendous changes. There are going to be all kinds of disasters and this is the last of it. We use the word “plague” here in the King James version which is more or less of a transliteration from the noun plhgh. Plhgh really means disaster but these are seven historical disasters or seven plagues.

Next we have the causal use of the conjunction o(ti, “because.” Then e)n plus the locative of a)utoj, “in them.” What is in them? The nominative singular subject qumoj, “anger,” “wrath”; and the possessive genitive of qeoj, “of God.” This is an anthropopathism. God does not get angry but to explain divine policy in terms of human frame of reference we have the word wrath or anger used. Then the aorist passive indicative of telew, “has been completed.”

The word which will come up in the next chapter is fialh, mistranslated as “vial” in the King James version. That is actually a bowl, and that bowl is going to be shaped more or less like a grenade and inside is the qumoj, the wrath of God. Each member of the execution squad pulls his pin, pours out the content of his bowl. There are seven of them and they are called the seven last judgements. They are far worse than anything the world has ever experienced or ever will. That is why the last half of this period is called “the great Tribulation”. And because it is so bad people would say there is no way you could live on the earth, but there will be millions of people who will survive these things — believers and unbelievers. One of the things we will learn is how they survive, why they survive.

“because in them the wrath of God has been completed.” The culminative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, namely the administration of the seven last plagues which are synonymous with the seven bowl judgements of the next chapter. The passive voice: the wrath or judgment of God receives the action of the verb, completion. The indicative mood is declarative for the eschatological reality of the completion of divine judgment prior to the second advent.

Translation: “Then I saw another sign in [the third] heaven, both great and awesome [or noteworthy], seven angels [the execution squad] who have seven plagues, the last ones; because in them the wrath of God has been completed.”

In verse two we have the victorious martyrs of the future. We are going to see a great principle, that those who have Bible doctrine, those who are believers and have learned truth, have great victory in death just as they do in life. Those who understand doctrine and believe it, those who utilise the rationales of the second stage of the faith-rest drill, always understand the fact that death is not a disaster and that there are no accidents in the spiritual life. When death overtakes anyone of us it is not a tragedy, it is not a disaster, it is time for the Lord to take us home. We understand that no one ever departs from this earth by death, believer or unbeliever, apart from the Lord's permission. When people die in a so-called tragic way it has something to do with their decisions in life, and when believers die it has everything to do with God's decision in heaven. For the born-again believer whether he was a winner or a loser in this life makes no difference. When he dies it is a victory, it is a celebration. He is absent from the body and face to face with the Lord, he is in an interim body and he is in a state of perfect happiness. The losers will have embarrassment only at the judgment seat of Christ. When the Lord calls anyone home it is His call. It is not even a guess, it is the Lord's time, it is the right time.

We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, "Then," the aorist active indicative of the verb o(raw, which means a vision given, an eschatological vision to John so that he can tell us about some future generation. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, the vision of the Tribulational martyrs is gathered up into a single whole. The apostle John produces the action of the verb, he has given this doctrine. The declarative indicative mood represents the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. It is going to happen in the future.

Here are some people who are going to die young. They are going to be martyred because in a short period of time after their conversion they learned a lot of doctrine. That means there will be some good Bible teaching from angels, from Moses, from Elijah, from a lot of different sources. The Tribulational is a period of great doctrinal teaching as well as great evangelism. And because these people refuse to accept religion they are going to be killed by religion.

We have a comparative particle o(j here which tells us "something like." It means something like a sea of glass here, it is not a direct analogy. It is something very beautiful and described from the eye of John whose frame of reference goes to a magnificently calm sea. It is so calm and so clear that it looks like crystal. So we have the accusative singular direct object from qalassa, and with it we have a descriptive genitive u(alinoj, "sea of crystal." It is something like a sea of crystal, something like a sea but it is calm, no waves. The sea of glass or crystal represents the interim state of believers who are waiting for the resurrection body in heaven. In chapter 4:6 the sea of glass depicted the interim state of Church Age believers as the royal family of God but in this passage we have something slightly different: believers of another dispensation. They are in a state, of course, of perfect bliss in their interim body while waiting for their Rapture. In this passage we have the interim state of Tribulational martyrs, those who are waiting for their resurrection bodies at the second advent. In the interim state these Tribulational martyrs have offered imprecatory prayers which will be answered in the administration of the seven last plagues or historical disasters which are synonymous with the seven bowl judgements. Two passages describe the Tribulational martyrs who are the sea of glass, 6:9-11; 7:13-17. This explains our sea of glass. It is refreshment, tranquillity, great happiness. The sea is of glass, it cannot be influenced by the winds and the tides, there is no rough sea in heaven. There is no unhappiness or misery for any believer immediately after he dies. The only time he would be unhappy would be to experience shame as a loser when it is time to pass out rewards and decorations and to see if he was on the honours list or not.

This sea of glass is said to be mixed with something, the perfect passive participle from the verb mignumi. The perfect tense denotes completed action with existing results from that action. It refers to the imprecatory prayers which occur at intervals as different martyrs join the host in heaven. The Tribulational martyrs do not spend all their time in prayer but occasionally as their numbers swell in heaven they offer this category of prayer. The existing results of this action are found in four chapters, chapter 15, the seven last plagues as a part of the function of protocol in heaven; chapter 16, the seven bowl judgements; chapter 17, the amplification of the seventh bowl judgment in the destruction of the political aspect of ecumenical religion; chapter 18, the destruction of the religious Babylon takes place. The passive voice: the sea of glass receives the action of the verb, which means that the tranquillity of the interim state is punctuated by certain activities such as the imprecatory prayers. The participle is circumstantial and used here as a relative clause. With this we have the instrumental of association singular from the noun pur, "fire." The fire refers to the imprecatory prayers of the Tribulational martyrs.

The winner status of these Tribulational martyrs is mentioned next. We have the use of the conjunction kai, translated "even." Then the accusative plural direct object, and in that direct object we have this form: touj. That is the accusative plural of the definite article used as a personal pronoun and referring to these who have died during the Tribulation — "even those." Then the present active participle from the verb nikaw, "victory." We translate it: "even those who have departed victorious." The present tense of duration translated like a perfect tense in the English indicates that what has happened in time, these people were winners in time, winners over the great religious system which persecuted them, continues in their present interim state. The active voice: the Tribulational martyrs who have advanced to maturity in the system produce the action. The participle is circumstantial.

The victory is said to be from the beast dictator, e)k plus the ablative of qhrion. It refers to the beast dictator of the revived Roman empire who is the religious ruler of the ecumenical system. No human being will ever exploit the cosmic system's power like this future dictator will.

The victory of these Tribulation martyrs is based upon three factors. First of all, they made good decisions from a position of strength. Their position of strength is their knowledge of doctrine, their understanding of the divine system, the divine plan for their lives, as it exists in that period of history. Secondly, they have personal control of their lives and they make their decisions knowing the consequences will be death. Thirdly, they have a very fine personal sense of destiny. These Tribulational martyrs departed from life victorious over the beast dictator because they used a greater power than the most powerful person who will ever live as far as human beings. While the divine dynasphere is no longer the system for the Tribulation the divine plan has all of the categories in the divine dynasphere. The primary difference in God's plan for the Church Age believer and these men of the future is that they have a slightly different ministry of God the Holy Spirit, it goes back to the time of the Old Testament. But apart from this the principle is the same: victory over the beast dictator is the result of becoming a winner by daily decisions for the divine system. The believer who is a winner has much greater power than the most devout Satanic servant in the cosmic system. Since Satan is the ruler of this world his servants often have greater political power but this power cannot force renunciation of Christ from a mature believer. The areas of victory over the beast dictator are given in the passage as it unfolds.

Next we have the connective conjunction kai, "both," and then a preposition e)k plus the ablative of e)ikon. With it we have a)utoj, the intensive pronoun used as a personal pronoun, here a possessive genitive, "both from his image." The image, of course, is the symbol of the dictator of the ecumenical religious system. Since idolatry is the best means of demon contact idolatry is necessary for the ecumenical religious system of the beast dictator. We have a second conjunction kai translated "and," "and from the number of his name," again we have a repetition of e)k plus a)riqmoj.

We have previously noted in chapter 13:14-18 that the number of the beast dictator is 666. All that 666 is is a part of computerised tyranny of the ecumenical religious system of the Tribulation. Computers have many applications. Most of them are good, many of them are not. Crime by computer is obviously one of the misapplications but computers are definitely here to stay and the fact that the dictator in the future is going to establish an ecumenical religious system and computerise the whole system these things should not surprise us at all. Of course there is no honour or virtue in Satan's ecumenical religious system and we will see that in chapters 17 & 18. We have already noted the ID card issued to the adherents of Satan's ecumenical religious system of the Tribulation, and it is tied up to a computer number. Apparently 666 is nothing more than a code number or representative of a code number for computerised tyranny. The religious persecution will be against those who reject the religious system through demonism, terrorism, social and economic ostracism, violence, torture, execution. All of these things will be experienced primarily by those who are believers in the Lord Jesus Christ.

The principle: Religion destroys the privacy of the individual with its freedom plus self-determination, and this historical trend in the Tribulation, computerised tyranny, has already begun in this decade by technology.

We have to be very careful as so-called fundamentalist Christians. Fundamentalists have a very bad habit of getting extreme and really going overboard. Computers have good applications and they have bad applications. That depends on the individual involved. So don't be a stupid "fundy" and go around saying, "Down with computers"! Obviously the person who is making the application here is a genius whom we studied in chapter thirteen, verses 1-10. He makes maximum use of the computer to find out who is for him and who is against him. This means that computerised tyranny which is already used in some cases in some places apparently is going to be a thing of the future just as many of the blessings of the computer will be available. And, of course, this does not imply the proximity of the Tribulation because computers are here but it means that whenever the Tribulation occurs there will be a maximum use of it in the field of tyranny. Computerised tyranny must be related to something. Who would think of making the computer a system of tyranny? Well, what is the most evil thing in the world? Religion. And remember Christianity is not a religion, Christianity is a relationship with God through personal faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. It is a relationship, not a religion. But religion is salvation by works, by morality, by joining a church, by changing your behaviour pattern, by philosophical application. The world is filled with religion because Satan is the father of all religious systems, and in the future religion will make an evil application of the computer. Computerised tyranny, then, is a religious program system which controls through the computer the life of mankind on the earth during the Tribulation. The number 666 is nothing more than a code number in which the computer designates all members of Satan's ecumenical religion in good standing during the last half of the Tribulation. 666 is merely the key to the memory bank, and the memory bank of the computer destroys both the privacy and the freedom of those who are outside the religion and becomes the means of persecuting of believers during this awful time in human history. So obviously this is an application with which we cannot agree. Any application which destroys the privacy of the individual is not a good application because without privacy you cannot have freedom.

The phrase "and over his mark" is not found in the manuscript at this point. Notice the difference in the translation. The preposition e)k in this context must take its meaning from the verb nikaw and therefore it is translated "over," rather than the usual "from" or "by." There is a comparison of power and the power of Bible doctrine resident in the soul versus the power of this great dictator, and there is a principle that comes out of this: the greatest power in the world is what you think. If you think erroneously it becomes a power for evil; if you think correctly according to truth and doctrine then it becomes a power for good. And so the greatest power in history is not the power of arms but it is thought in the soul. So the power of life is in the power of thought and the more doctrine you have you increase your power in the field of thinking.

Next we have a perfect active indicative from the verb i(stemi, and it means to stand, "and they stood." It is a dramatic perfect tense, therefore a rhetorical application of the perfect tense used to describe a fact which is unusually vivid and to describe it in a very realistic way. Like the intensive perfect it emphasises the results of the action, the blessings of the interim state for the believer who died before his resurrection. He died as a martyr standing for doctrine, refusing to compromise doctrine. The active voice: believers in the Tribulation who are martyrs produce the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial, it expresses an additional fact of thought which is best translated in the English by the use of the finite verb and the conjunction "and." With this we have the preposition e)pi plus the accusative of qalassa, "on the sea of glass."

Then they are said to be holding something: the present active participle of e)xw, "holding." The present tense is a pictorial present, it presents to the mind a picture of eschatological events in the process of occurrence. The active voice: the Tribulation martyrs produce the action. Again we have a circumstantial participle but emphasis here is on the fact that the action of the present participle is coterminous with the action of the main verb. The previous circumstantial participle is translated as a finite verb, so when we put it together it says, "they stood on the sea of glass holding" something from God, and that would be the accusative direct object of kiqara, "harp."

The harp is a musical instrument and we note something of its significance as far as the Bible is concerned. The harp is a musical instrument but it is always associated with something in the Bible. It is associated with happiness. Hanging a harp, for example, on a willow tree is a sign of great misery. When you are not playing a harp is a sign of unhappiness. Hanging a harp on the willow tree is a sign of not only great misery but it means that because it is no longer in use there is no happiness in that vicinity. This was found in Psalm 137, "By the rivers of Babylon." The Jews were out under the 5th cycle of discipline. They were in a state of slavery, therefore they were in a state of misery. They no longer enjoyed the freedom and the blessing that they had previously known as a client nation.

So Psalm 137:1 begins by expressing the 5th cycle of discipline. "By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down and wept when we remembered Zion [the hill which was the headquarters for the client nation]. On the willows in the middle of it [the river Babylon] we hung our harps." So they hung their harps on the willows, indicating that they were in a state of great sadness.

Isaiah 24:8, "The gaiety of tambourines ceases, the noise of revellers stops, the gaiety of the harp ceases." The harp is always associated as a musical instrument with some form of happiness.

Describing the 5th cycle of discipline in terms of no happiness, Ezekiel 26:13 says, "So I will cause the sound of your songs to cease, and the sound of your harps will be heard no more."

It is concluded that the sound of the harp was the sign of genuine happiness based on the laws of divine establishment. The fact that these martyrs possess harps indicates that they are in a permanent state of happiness. The sea of tranquillity or the sea of glass indicates the blessing of the eternal state, as per Revelation 21:4, "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; there shall be no more death; neither shall there be any sorrow, or crying, or pain; for the former things have passed away. The harp, therefore, makes a beautiful musical sound to accompany the content of doctrine in the psalm or hymn which will be sung in the next two verses, 15:3,4. The hymn sung by the Tribulational martyrs will express their happiness, their blessing, their point of contact for such blessing from their grace orientation and momentum while they were living in phase two. Note also that Bible doctrine resident in these Tribulational martyrs gives them victory over the power of the personality of one of the most powerful people that ever lived, the ruler of the revived Roman empire. Hence, they passed the people test. They also won over the pressure of organised religion, economic pressure, and public opinion pressure. They passed every test. Therefore they glorify the Lord and they enter into heaven for a well-deserved victory celebration.

Translation of verse 2: “Then I saw something like a sea of glass [the interim state of tranquillity belonging to the Tribulational martyrs] which had been mixed with fire [prior persecution and also the imprecatory prayers of 6:9-11]: even those who had been victorious over the beast dictator [of the revived Roman empire], both over his image [the abomination of desolation], and over the number of his name, and they stood on the sea of glass, holding harps [indicating great happiness] from God.”

It is inevitable that since these Tribulational martyrs are winners — they have taken a stand for Bible doctrine which has cost them their lives — that they would have something to sing. They are going to sing as an expression of their morale, as an expression of their mental attitude, as an expression of their happiness, as an expression of the fact that they are winners and they know that they are winners. In verse 3 we have the victory hymn of the Tribulational martyrs.

First of all we have the title of the hymn that they sing. This follows the Hebrew system of including in the actual verse itself the title that is going to be given. We have a connective conjunction kai translated “And.” Then the present active indicative of the verb a)idw, the Greek word for singing. The futuristic present tense denotes an event which has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as already coming to pass. The active voice: the Tribulational martyrs express their happiness in song. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of singing expressing happiness. The accusative singular direct object from the noun o)ide follows, the word for hymn or a song, sometimes translated “ode.” Then we have the possessive genitive singular from the proper noun from the word Mwsej which is more or less transliterated, “And they sing the song of Moses.”

Then a brief word about Moses, the appositional genitive of douloj indicates the thing that is emphasised here, plus the possessive genitive of qeoj, “the servant [or slave] of God.”

One of the nicest things about using our freedom properly is to become God’s slave. It is by far the greatest status quo in life: the status quo with the greatest amount of happiness, the greatest amount of blessing, the greatest amount of virtue, the greatest amount of everything that is worthwhile. You have to work hard to become a slave and it is by far the greatest of all states as far as life is concerned. Once you are a slave of God, God as the slave-master provides everything that we will ever need and more besides. We have the greatest privilege in the world because we do not have to become involved or entangled in the affairs of this world, Satan being the ruler of this world, we can simply fulfil God’s plan for our lives and life becomes very simple and very meaningful and very wonderful.

The hymn of Moses is actually divided into two parts: the book of Exodus, chapter 15, and the other at the end of the ministry of Moses in Deuteronomy. The beginning of the ministry of Moses is characterised by the hymn celebrating the Lord’s deliverance of the Jews in the Red Sea incident. The end of the ministry of Moses is characterised by the hymn he wrote to teach the Jews after his death, Deuteronomy chapter 32. The purpose of the hymn of Moses is given in Deuteronomy 31:18-22.

Anticipating the apostasy of Israel in the land after the death of Moses our Lord said to him, "But I will surely hide my face in that day [the day of negative volition, reversionism, apostasy, scar tissue of the soul] because of all the evil that they will do [the cosmic involvement of the Jews of the next generation], for they will turn to other gods. Now therefore write this hymn for yourselves, and teach it to the citizens of Israel; put it in their mouth, in order that this hymn may be a witness for me against the citizens of Israel.

For I will bring them into the land flowing with milk and honey, which I promised to their fathers, and when they are eaten and are satisfied and become prosperous, then they will turn to other gods and serve them [they wouldn't pass the prosperity test]," no nation ever permanently passes the test of its own prosperity. Very few nations can stand over 100 years of prosperity, "they will both spurn me and break my covenant."

This is why the hymn was written, and the singing of this hymn by the Tribulational martyrs is a reminder that they passed the prosperity test, and then some.

"Then it shall come to pass when many evils [cosmic involvement] and troubles have come upon them, that this hymn will testify before them as a witness (for it shall not be forgotten from the mouth of their descendants); for I know their motivation which they are developing today, before I have brought them into the land which I have promised them. So Moses wrote this hymn the same day, and he taught it to the sons of Israel."

It is a hymn to remind every generation that the key to everything in life is not the prosperity they happen to be enjoying at the moment but how that prosperity came about. The key to almost everything in life is not what you have that you enjoy but, how did it come to pass that you have what you enjoy? How did it come about that you are prosperous? The real key is not what you are enjoying but the origin of what you are enjoying. And lest we forget, every blessing we have in this life, every bit of happiness, every bit of success, everything that is worthwhile, comes through the grace of God. God is the source of our blessing. And the same grace of God that gives us these things can remove them at any time, and generally the removal occurs because we can't handle prosperity. So we have the song of Moses. It was taught to the children of Israel so that they would always associate their prosperity in the land with the source of all prosperity, the Lord Jesus Christ Himself.

A detailed analysis of the two hymns of Moses reveals the fact of the faithfulness and the grace of God through Israel, in spite of their many failures and many acts and functions of reversionism. He maintained them as a nation for almost 500 years even though they failed Him in time. These hymns are sung by the Tribulational martyrs who are now in heaven. Many of them are Jews who are living in the interim state as a part of their worship of our Lord Jesus Christ who is also the God of Israel. and even though Israel has failed as a client nation to God, and even though the Jews are scattered through the fifth cycle of discipline, the point of the hymn is the faithfulness of God. God is faithful to Israel and He will restore them top client nation status at the second advent.

The Tribulation is Israel's darkest hour but while it is the darkest hour the principle must always be remembered that it is always darkest before the dawn. The dawn of Israel's greatness will come at the second advent. At that time the unconditional covenants will all be fulfilled to Israel. In the meantime Israel strives mightily but they will never make it because the source of their blessing is the same as the source of our blessing — the Lord Jesus Christ. Furthermore, referring to the first part of the hymn of Moses in Exodus 15, the Lord will deliver regenerate Jews of the Tribulation at the second advent just as he delivered Israel from the armoured forces of Pharaoh by opening up the Red Sea. Therefore the Jews of the Tribulation who are believers in Christ must fulfil the same principle that the Jews fulfilled at the Red Sea under the command of Moses: “Stand still and watch the deliverance of the Lord.” To stand still means to do nothing, no crusader arrogance, no social action, no getting involved in this or that or the other thing. To stand still means to sit in the stands and watch the fascinating events of history unfold before your eyes. While people do not realise it your truly dynamic contribution to history is your spiritual advance from gate four to gate eight. So “watch the deliverance of the Lord” is one of the factors that was fulfilled by these Tribulational martyrs, and while they died from religious persecution they watched the deliverance of the Lord. This means that the historical disasters generation by the seven last plagues will not destroy either Israel or the entire human race.

Next we have the doubling of kai, which is translated “both and.” They sing both the hymn of Moses and then a second hymn, the descriptive genitive of a)ρνιον, “the hymn of the Lamb.” A)ρνιον refers to the saving work of Christ on the cross: “Behold the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world.” All blessing from the Lord Jesus Christ begins with the most permanent of all blessing which is eternal salvation. From the moment that we believe in the Lord Jesus Christ we come under logistical grace, whether we are winners or losers. Whether we succeed spiritually or whether we fail spiritually God is going to sustain us, God is going to provide for us, God is going to bless us, so that inevitably we are forced in to a position of thanksgiving when the reality hits. So we have a reference here to the Lamb, the Lord Jesus Christ, who during His first advent became our substitute, was judged for our sins on the cross. He is described as the Lamb of God. Many times in the book of Revelation our Lord Jesus is described under this title. He is described under this title as a reminder that the source of all blessing in life in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Next we have “and they sang.” We have the present active participle of the verb legw, which means to speak, to communicate. Here we are going to translate it singing, as a finite verb because it is a circumstantial participle, a pictorial present, to emphasise the lyrics, not the magnificent tune, whatever it was. The active voice: the Tribulational martyrs in their interim state. Note that to play harps they must have an interim body.

The summary of that they sang is given in four lines. The first and third lines present a subject while the second and fourth lines give a vocative phrase which describe the uniqueness of the person of Christ related to His hypostatic union. Line one in the summary gives us the plan of God. The second line describes the power of God in the hymn. The third line the point of reference for God’s plan, and the fourth line the Millennial victory of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The first line is the principle of the plan of God and is described in terms of wonderful adjectives. We have the nominative neuter plural subject megaj. Megaj denotes greatness in relationship to visible phenomena. It was also used in connection with persons and objects who had force, power, or prosperity. Hence, it is often translated “powerful,” “dynamic” or “mighty.” Megaj was also used in connection with epiphanies of great deities and heroes. The general connotation continues in the Koine: great, splendid, magnificent, noble. With this we have a second adjective, the nominative plural adjective qaumastoj. Qaumastoj has a number of meanings: admirable, wonderful, remarkable, awesome. Both adjectives are in the plural indicating more than one facet of greatness plus more than one facet of being marvellous. We translate them, “great and marvellous.” The verb, because of the elliptical nature of the song, is left out. It would be the verb to be and we know this because the next word is a predicate nominative plural from e)rgon, correctly translated “deeds,” “works,” “actions,” “accomplishments,” “functions.” With it we have the possessive genitive from the personal pronoun su, “your deeds,” the deeds of our Lord Jesus Christ. This refers, of course, to the grace of God, and the whole point of the plan of God is found right here. It isn’t what we do, it is what God does, what God has done, what God will continue to do all of the way into eternity forever and ever. So the true concept of thanksgiving is right here as well as the true meaning of grace.

The concept

1. Everything in the plan of God is the work of God, the action of God, the deeds of God. Grace is God working for us. Therefore the source of thanksgiving, the source of all blessing: God the Father, author of the plan; God the Son, the executor of the plan on the cross and the basis of all blessing; God the Holy Spirit who gives us the reality of these blessings.
2. This is illustrated by the divine system of the plan of God for the Church Age believer. In the plan of God we have the divine dynasphere. It was given to us.
3. The first line emphasises grace as the policy of God in His plan for the believer.
4. We are saved by grace, therefore we are to live by grace. There is no difference in the pattern between salvation and the Christian way of life.
5. Under the policy of grace God does the work. God does the planning, God provides the means, God prospers or disciplines the believer, whatever is called for by His perfect wisdom.
6. Therefore there is no place in the plan of God for human merit, human ability, human success and attainment, or human personality dynamics. Grace excludes all human ability from the plan of God.

7. God is perfect; His plan is perfect. Man is imperfect, therefore man's participation must exclude his human imperfection. A perfect God does not include in His plan human imperfection, sin and failure. So whatever you have by way of assets or defects neither is in the plan of God.

8. Grace does not permit human merit to function in the divine plan either at the point of salvation or at any time thereafter. The first line commemorates the grace of God as the policy of His divine plan for mankind: "Great and marvellous are your works." This is just a summary, not the entire lyrics in the first line.

Note that saving grace, logistical grace, supergrace blessings, and even grace rewards in eternity all exclude human merit, human works, human ability, human self-righteousness that is human morality, human personality, or anything else that man can do by way of self-improvement. From the imputation of divine righteousness at salvation and the establishment of divine justice as the believer's point of reference there is no room, no place for human works in any category. That means that all Christian service that would involve works must be motivated by the blessing of God. The intrusion of one good deed or function of human self-righteousness compromises the essence of God and therefore becomes legalistic arrogance, blasphemy in cosmic one. The divine system in which we function as believers demands our faithfulness, our consistent good decisions from a position of strength, but neither our faithfulness nor decisions are related to any form of human merit inside of the plan of God and the divine system. Nothing teaches grace like the doctrine of imputation and the doctrine of the divine dynasphere, and nothing attacks grace like residence and function in the cosmic system of Satan. It is therefore the quintessence of arrogance to assume that we as believers must help God. God does not need our help; we need His help, His grace, His plan, His system, His power, His protection, and the development of virtue which He has provided.

The works of God mentioned in the first line of this hymn include everything that God does in His plan, His system, His provision, for the believer in any dispensation. While we as believers in the Church Age make application to the divine dynasphere these Tribulational martyrs do not have the divine dynasphere. They sing of God's policy and His plan in a different dispensation, but involving the same principle, not the same identical mechanics.

We are noting the victory hymn of the Tribulational martyrs. They are actually going to sing two songs, each is given a title. One is the song of Moses and the other is the song of the Lamb. We are not given the entire hymn, we are merely given the gist of it in certain lines.

It is inevitable that people in heaven will sing during the worst part of human history. The worst historical disasters of history are concentrated into the last eighteen months of the Tribulation when every conceivable thing that could go wrong goes wrong. Nothing goes right for anyone except for a few believers here and there who have Bible doctrine, and their prosperity continues while other believers make the decision not to renounce doctrine and are martyred. And while the worst period of human history occurs there is wonderful singing in heaven. This great singing and great happiness simply recognises that the divine judgment of homo sapien has always been the basis for preserving man on planet earth in history and that there would be no preservation of man, that we would not be here today, were it not for divine judgment.

How can any form of music be a distraction? It can be a distraction because the lyrics are false, or because the type of music simply appeals to the emotion without having it related to some form of doctrinal truth in lyrics.

We have next in our passage the content part of the hymn that God wants us to understand. We have the present active participle from the verb legw which introduces the lyrics. The present tense is a pictorial present presenting to the mind a picture of eschatological events in the process of occurrence. The active voice: this is a song for winners only and therefore the Tribulational martyrs who have all made a choice would rather be faithful to Bible doctrine than to live in the devil's world when that becomes an issue. They are winners, they had control of their lives right up to the moment of their death, they had a personal sense of destiny, and therefore they sing under the concept of protocol this magnificent hymn in heaven.

The four lines which are given are not the lyrics of the entire hymn. They are given to us because they have meaning and application to our lives today. The first line deals with the plan of God, the second with the power of God, the third with the point of reference with God, and the fourth line with the Millennial victory of our Lord Jesus Christ.

“Great and marvellous are your works.” This line is given so that we can understand that the plan of God is the work of God. Everything in the plan of God is great. That means that everything in the plan of God is the work of God, the action of God, the needs of God. The first line emphasises grace as the policy of God in His plan for the believer. We are saved by grace; we live by grace.

In our second line we have the doctrine of divine essence coming up because if there is anything that we need to understand it is not human power and what human power can do. We have a vocative singular beginning the second line, the vocative singular of the noun kurioj, “Lord.” It refers here to the deity of our Lord Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ is undiminished deity, there never was a time when Jesus Christ did not exist, there never was a time when He did not have all of the attributes of God. Therefore He is so-equal and coeternal with God the Father and with God the Holy Spirit. In Revelation 4:8 kurioj refers to our Lord's third royal patent which He received as a result of the strategic victory of the cross. So whenever we find this we know that it is generally referring to the Lord Jesus Christ, though there is one passage in the New Testament where God the Holy Spirit is called kurioj or “Lord” and occasionally we will see God the Father called “Lord,” e.g. Psalm 2, “the Lord said to my Lord,” God the Father said to God the Son.

Next, to make sure that we understand that we are talking about Jesus Christ as God we have the generic use of the definite article plus the nominative singular, o(qeoj, “the God” or “God.” The definite article does not necessarily have to be translated. “O Lord, the God,” our Lord's first royal patent as eternal God, coequal with the Father and with the Spirit. The generic use of the definite article comprehends a category which is distinct from all other categories. In other words, Jesus Christ as God is unique. As God our Lord's royal title is Son of God, His royal family being the Father and the Spirit. This is a unique situation and it is always comforting to know when in the time in which we live there are so many uncertainties, so much instability, life can never go along on a level plane for any length of time, that we are related to the God of the universe. So this is called a nominative of explanation which emphasises the thought with great distinction. The nominative of explanation places a great deal of emphasis on the person involved in that noun.

Next we have a generic use of the definite article plus another nominative of exclamation, pantokratwr. This is an important word because some of the most powerful demons, the demons that influence the rulers and dictators of the world to gather people together for war and to cause trouble, are called kosmokratwr. We will meet the kosmokratwr in chapter 16 because they are responsible for the final world war in history. Pantokratwr is the title given to our Lord as over against kosmoskratwr, the most powerful demons in Satan's organisation as the ruler of this world. We are going to translate this, "O Lord, the God, the omnipotent one."

Now that is the line but it doesn't explain what the line means. What the line means is the fact that we must inevitably understand what the Word of God reveals about the attributes of God, the essence of God, the characteristics of God. And to make sure that we understand that principle a third line is added in which we are once again going to see the emphasis on who and what God is, who and what Christ is, and how these things relate to us personally. Anyone's plan is no stronger than that person. God has a plan for your life and that plan comes from infinite eternal God. Therefore, understanding the character of God is very important. We must understand the essence of God to relate the wonderful plan He has designed for you.

We have a third line and it emphasises who and what God is. It begins with the fact that we have a point of reference now in our relationship with God but it doesn't start out with the point of reference as such, merely the predicate nominative plural description of it. We have the predicate nominative plural from the adjective used as a noun, dikaiōj. Dikaiōj means righteous but it must be understood that it is in the plural. Once we understand that we have a little bit of a problem. The plural includes two concepts of perfect integrity: the justice of God and the righteousness of God. When they are put together they are called holiness or the integrity of God. Therefore we have a reference to the believer's point of contact which is divine justice, and the basis for the believer's blessing which is the imputed righteousness of God. Therefore they are brought together under the plural of this adjective used as a substantive. First of all the believer has a point of contact which is always divine justice, not divine love. Secondly, he has a basis for blessing. All of us as believers possess God's perfect righteousness as of the moment of faith in Christ. That grace pipeline goes from the justice of God to the righteousness of God. God has worked out a way to bless all believers, winners and losers, and to bless them without compromising His essence. There is no compromising His essence because all blessing in two categories, logistical grace and supergrace, come down the grace pipeline. They do not depend on who and what we are. While we will translate dikaiōj “righteous” in the singular it must be understood that it is in the plural and that it includes both attributes of the integrity of God.

Next we have a predicate nominative plural from a)lhqinoj. A)lhqinoj means “true” and it is a reference to Bible doctrine by which the believer advances in the plan of God. There is no advance, there is no plan of God, until you can think and think doctrine. To think doctrine you have to learn doctrine. Every bit of thinking that you will ever do in this life is the courtesy of someone who started you out in life, and thereafter. You were taught words, vocabulary. Your ability to think will never exceed your vocabulary. For the losers who never learn Bible doctrine will never understand Bible doctrine, they will never grow in grace, they will never be in the plan of God. So we have the word “true.” It is the provision of Bible doctrine by which the believer learns the plan of God and advances in the plan of God.

We have studied the principle of virtue first, the mandate of God’s plan. Here we have something that goes with that, “righteous and true.” Since both of these are in the predicate nominative we have to have a subject. It comes next in the Greek but it comes first in the English, the nominative plural subject is o(doj. O(doj refers to a way, a path, a street, a road. With it is the possessive genitive of the personal pronoun su, “your ways”: the divine modus operandi of the plan of God, the whole concept of virtue first, the whole concept of the power system in God the Holy Spirit, the concept of the faith-rest drill, the concept of enforced and genuine humility, the concept of the perception and application of doctrine, the whole concept of momentum, the basis for everything that is true in the plan of God, all true motivation is motivational virtue directed toward God; all true function is functional virtue directed toward man and circumstances, the adversity tests which are a blessing in the life, and eventually, of course, arrival at the point of being a winner, gate eight, spiritual maturity. This is what God has planned for us. “Your ways,” the divine modus operandi, the plan of God, “your ways are righteous and true.” That is the fourth line, and the fourth line reminds us, then, that we must understand exactly what is meant by “your ways” and why He is called the “omnipotent one.”

Psalm 85:8, “I will hear what the God the Lord will say,” in other words, wisdom comes from God. Positive volition is expressed in the first line [I will hear]. That means respect for authority, enforced and genuine humility. So here we have the first stage in the function of GAP, reception. You are not going anywhere in the Christian life until you are briefed, until you hear what God has to say, and hear it on a regular basis as it is communicated from the Word of God, “for he will communicate peace [prosperity].”

Where it says “peace” in the King James version the word which is used in the Hebrew, shalom, has two meanings: peace between God and man and the prosperity which follows that. This refers to the removal of the barrier between man and God. Jesus Christ removed the barrier so that man by the work of Christ on the cross can have a permanent relationship with God. That is what peace means. “He is our peace,” says the apostle Paul. Then that word also connotes prosperity. Once we have accepted Christ as saviour all of us immediately come under a prosperity principle: starting with day one at salvation and continuing thereafter as long as we are on this earth we are under logistical grace. The first meaning of logistical support is that God has a purpose for your life. Our support comes from God, “to his people,” client nation Israel is in view by interpretation but by application it is our country, “and to his gracious ones.” Who are the gracious ones? They are the ones who keep us going, the ones in the pivot, the ones who arrive at gate eight, maturity, “but let them not return to stupidity.” When man neglects Bible doctrine he returns to stupidity.

Verse 9, “Nothing but his deliverance is near to those who respect [reverence] him.” Even in the worst of historical disaster of history during the seven last plagues there will be many believers who will survive. This reverence or respect would be our gate five: motivational virtue directed toward God. There is always deliverance for them. Why? “In order that glory may dwell in our land.” Respect comes from the laws of divine establishment. Reverence is virtue-first, motivational virtue. The result: Glory can only dwell in the land when there is a large pivot of mature believers. People who have accepted Christ as saviour, then, have entered into the system. God is perfect; God has a perfect system; God has a grace system. Those believers who follow the system are winners and provide prosperity for everyone else, blessing by association. It is the mature believer, the one who advances to maturity, who provides the blessing by association.

Verse 10, “Grace and doctrine have met together.” That is the secret to everything in life. God sustains through grace. Grace only meets with doctrine. God’s grace is there and we are all sustained by it, but the key to understanding the grace of God is doctrine. You will never know and understand the grace of God unless you are positive toward doctrine. Grace is the function of the justice of God in the imputation of divine blessing to the believer as a possessor of divine righteousness. Grace is the principle of the system and doctrine is the momentum of the system, so we have the principle and the basis for advance. For the system to work among believers in the fulfilment of the plan of God the believer must benefit from grace and he must learn Bible doctrine.

“Righteousness and peace have kissed.” Righteousness refers to the imputation of divine righteousness which not only provides justification at salvation but is the basis for all blessing thereafter. To understand the system the believer must understand the integrity or the holiness of God. Once grace and doctrine meet notice who does the kissing — righteousness and prosperity. Righteousness is virtue that develops from that indwelling righteousness of God. You are in the plan now. God is going to provide everything you need in the plan to make decisions, and that righteousness should be parlayed into love, capacity for happiness, capacity for blessing. But you don’t have that capacity until you have the virtue. Virtue first. If you love God you have motivating virtue and it comes from Bible doctrine. If you love God and have motivating virtue you will have functional virtue and that virtue gives you your capacity for life.

Verse 11, “Doctrine [doctrinal teaching] shall spring up in the land [client nations to God]; and righteousness [God’s righteousness] shall look down from heaven [the potential for great blessing].”

Verse 12, "Also, the Lord himself will give the good [divine blessing from X+Y+Z]; and our land [client nation] will give her increase [prosperity which comes from the pivot of mature believers]."

Verse 13, "Righteousness shall go before his face [before Him], that he [the believer] may march toward the way."

The believer is not told to walk in the way here, he is told to march toward the way, or march in the way. When you march you have a system of authority. When you march there is logistical support, there is a whole system behind you, and that whole system depends upon who and what God is.

That brings us right back to our phrase in verse 3. Here are people who sing of this very thing. "Great and marvellous are your works," divine deeds which are the function of the grace policy of the plan of God. The second line gives us those nominatives of exclamation that describes the awareness, the love of God at gate five: "O Lord [Jesus Christ: His third royal title], the God [Jesus Christ as God: His first royal patent], the omnipotent one [the power of God's plan for the believer]." The third line: "Your ways are righteous and true."

When things are at their worst in the last half of the Tribulation believers in heaven are very happy because they now have confidence having seen our Lord face to face. Whatever doubts, uncertainties, instabilities that existed prior to coming to heaven once they are there they are very happy, they have a lot to sing about. We now notice they were singing, why they were happy, why they were occupied with the person of Christ.

We are noting the essence of God. The word "essence" comes from a Greek adjective, sometimes used as a substantive, ousia. The Greek word means substance, hence essence. It means the inward or the true nature, the intrinsic nature, the qualities or the attributes of a person. Essence also implies being or existence and therefore before we can understand why these people are so happy and so blessed in heaven we have to understand the persons who makes it all possible. Each member of the Trinity has identical essence. From the standpoint of essence God is one but from the standpoint of persons God is three separate and distinct persons each having something to do with us and our plan.

The true theistic concept of the universe is that the universe is composed of material and immaterial. Matter is material; God is immaterial, John 4:24. Human creatures are both material and immaterial, 2 Corinthians 4:7, 16.

God lives; God is life. God does not possess life as we do but God actually lives. All life is from God but not of God as the pantheists claim. God is a person. Personality connotes both self-consciousness and self-determination. As a person God is sovereign and this is expressed and manifest in His self-determination through the function of His divine volition. Animals, lower creatures, are conscious but not self-conscious. Animals have determination but not self-determination. Man, on the other hand, is a person possessing to a limited degree both self consciousness and self-determination. God is infinite, He is an infinite personality with absolute will or sovereignty plus His absolute perfection. God's absolute will and perfection characterises both His design and His execution — Ephesians 1:9,11. God is to an absolute degree all that constitutes personality. He is Himself; He knows Himself to be beyond comparison with any other being. God is the source of our blessing, the source of the plan, the system, the mandates, the entire concept.

In the song of Moses we should notice that there is a balance of what is going on. We have the earth during the Tribulation, the worst period for historical disaster. However, in heaven things are very smooth. We have the sea of glass concept, we find great happiness there and we find a lot of people who have their priorities straight and put Bible doctrine and the Lord Jesus Christ before any system of religion, any system of coercion. Inevitably they give up their lives in so doing so that they leave earth and go to heaven. There they have perfect happiness, they do not have any of the problems that people on earth have who are believers. Here on earth we cannot see Him; here on this earth we love Him whom we have not seen, our only seeing of God comes from our perception of Bible doctrine. But once in heaven in the interim body, and once the capacity has been raised from almost zero to one hundred percent, there is fantastic happiness; a happiness that does not depend on other people but a happiness which is truly oriented to one person, the Lord Jesus Christ.

But we can have that happiness and blessing now without the interim body by simply understanding from the Word of God those things that pertain to divine essence. Actually there are three divine attributes which are pertinent to us and to God's plan for us at the present time. These attributes are noted in part both in the song of Moses and the song of the Lamb in this and the next verse. The three attributes are God's knowledge, God's love, and God's integrity. That is the order in which we develop the concept because without knowledge there is no love and there is no integrity or virtue among believers in the Lord Jesus Christ or human beings.

We start with the fact that billions and billions of years ago, long before any creature existed, long before the universe was created, God the Father, God the Son and God the Holy Spirit eternally existed. Each member of the Godhead is eternal, each member of the Godhead has, therefore, eternal knowledge. Now what is eternal knowledge? Obviously it is a knowledge that is not learned, it is a knowledge that has always existed. It is a knowledge that is not acquired academically or through experience. God is infinite; His knowledge is infinite. It is superior, therefore, to any creature knowledge. There are only two categories of creatures who have potential and real genius knowledge: the angels and members of the human race. Time has nothing to do with God's knowledge. It has everything to do with our knowledge, in fact our knowledge is related to how we use our time and how we relate our time to the priorities of our life. The future is as perspicuous to God as the past and since God is a person and since He possesses both self-consciousness and self-determination He therefore acts rationally. Always He acts rationally because His rational acts are compatible with His absolute will and perfection. Because God is infinite His knowledge is without boundary or without limitation. There was never a time when God did not know everything, He has never learned anything. Therefore, God's knowledge is never complicated by ignorance or absurdity. God exists eternally, He is unsustained by Himself. He is also unsustained by any other source and therefore His knowledge is as unalterable as He Himself is. We are sustained by God. We, under the wonderful principle of His plan of logistical grace, are sustained by Him. We are totally dependent upon Him and couldn't last a minute in the devil's world without Him. Every blessing that we will have in times of historical prosperity or adversity will all be from one source, and we can look in one direction: "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift."

God cannot change or be inaccurate, therefore God's knowledge cannot change. God's knowledge is never partial, is never inaccurate, and it is never distorted. God's knowledge, therefore, is as unalterable as Himself and God's knowledge precedes both time and space. Therefore God's knowledge is not subject to any limitation of time or space. God's self-knowledge precedes God's decrees with regard to history and that is because God is eternal. The decrees, of course, simply deal with history. God's knowledge therefore cannot be more and it cannot be less than it is at any time.

Each member of the Trinity has two kinds of perfect knowledge. The first kind is subjective knowledge. God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit have perfect subjective knowledge, each one about Himself, and that knowledge is perfect. When we have subjective knowledge about ourselves it is distorted, it is arrogant, it is imperfect, and usually a tremendous hindrance. If we have too much subjective knowledge about self the kindest thing that can be said for us is that we have an unfortunate personality. But God has perfect subjective knowledge about Himself. Also, all three members of the Trinity have perfect objective knowledge about themselves. So they have two categories of perfect knowledge about self and when we put these two together in the theological classroom we call it the omniscience of God. Omniscience has to do with other categories as well. Self-knowledge deals strictly with the divine attributes: God knows Himself; God knows the other two members of the Trinity.

Omniscience is not all the knowledge of God but is one category only. Omniscience refers to creatures. All God's knowledge about creatures has always existed. God has always known about every creature that has ever existed or ever will exist. Hence, omniscience is defined as God's objective knowledge of the universe and His creatures, and since God is infinite it is without regard to time or any other space limitation. Omniscience is God's knowledge of the universe and creatures and it is wonderful to know that someone really understands us. Our problem in this life is that we do not understand God. Our only way to understand God is through Bible doctrine, through perception of the attributes of God as they are revealed in the scripture. Omniscience, therefore, deals with the universe and with creatures. Omniscience knows everything that has ever happened since creatures existed.

The omniscience of God knows the alternatives of history, the probable and the reality, the potential and the reality. God therefore knows perfectly, eternally, simultaneously, all that is knowable, both actual and possible. The actual is fed into the computer of divine decrees to become human history; the probable is that which could have happened but which did not — the potential of life. Every minute detail of both angelic and human history is in the mind of God at all times. Therefore, omniscience perceives the free as free, the necessary as necessary, together with all the causes, conditions, relations, as one indivisible system of things, every link of which is essential to the whole.

There is no such thing as perfect happiness without eliminating all of the absurdities. Since we can't have perfect happiness on earth we can have the next thing to it. We can through God's system, God's plan, God's wisdom, the mandates that He has given us, the priorities like virtue-first, actually eliminate all that is absurd in life and have the most magnificent blessing. But in eliminating these things we do not develop a superiority complex. If anything we develop a greater sensitivity, a greater compassion, a greater understanding of all of those in our vicinity.

Then there is the foreknowledge of God. It is different from the omniscience of God. Omniscience feeds the computer; the printout is the foreknowledge of God. For example, John wrote the book of Revelation. He actually wrote it from the standpoint of God's foreknowledge, not His omniscience. God's foreknowledge simply looked into the computer, took out the Tribulation, took out the Church Age, for example — Revelation 2 & 3, and printed it for a moment and it is now called the book of Revelation. It is a printout before it occurs. Every bit of prophecy unfulfilled in the scripture is merely a printout from the computer before they happen to teach us, to help us, to orient first to God and then to our circumstances in life. So Revelation is designed for our blessing and the only thing we need to know about foreknowledge is that it is the printout of the computer of divine decrees. Nothing is foreknown until it is first decreed. Only the computer of divine decrees establishes reality, which means that foreknowledge follows as the printout of the decrees. The foreknowledge of God makes nothing certain but acknowledges what is certain: the content of divine decrees.

We have a relationship with God through knowledge, His knowledge of us, His knowledge of Himself, His knowledge of history, His knowledge of everything.

God is love, 1 John 4:16. God is infinite and eternal; God exceeds all boundaries of time and space. God always has existed. Eternal means there never was a time when He originated. Therefore God possesses eternal and infinite love, for like all divine attributes love belongs to the essence of God. God is immutable, therefore the love of God is unchangeable. The love of God has always existed, like God's knowledge. There never was a time when God did not possess maximum eternal love, love that transcends any concept of time and space. The love of God is unchangeable, consistent, and compatible with His perfect essence.

In contrast to human love God's love does not have to be sustained by emotion. Emotion out of place is where silliness begins and where we get into pseudo-spirituality. Emotion in its correct place is always subordinate to thought. When emotion takes over the soul then we have all of the disasters, psychoses, all of the systems of disorientation to reality in life. There is nothing wrong with emotion. God has given us emotion but He has given us emotion as the appreciator of truth. When there is no truth or doctrine in the soul the emotion immediately gets out of line. God is love but we must understand that God's love is totally related to virtue and totally disassociated with emotion. Emotion in itself is a highly volatile and unstable attribute. It must be put within boundaries, it must be subordinate to virtue, to thought, to things that make it meaningful and wonderful. But God has no emotion and one of the most difficult things for man to understand, even in the face of divine revelation, is the fact that God's love is perfect, the quintessence of virtue, and has no emotion whatever.

God's infinite and eternal loves exists without an object or with an object. God has always been love whether there has been an object around or not. Before any creature existed God was love. Perfect love is resident in the perfect essence of God. That is where we begin to understand virtue-love. That is where we begin to understand impersonal love toward all members of the human race.

God's love is perfect because God has perfect integrity. God has perfect virtue, the virtue of His justice and righteousness. Therefore God's love cannot be separated from His integrity or His holiness. God has the perfect virtue for perfect love and the pattern is set, therefore, between the love which has eternally existed between the members of the Trinity. Each member of the Trinity loves the perfect righteousness of the other as well as His own. Divine love, therefore, is backed up by perfect virtue and is directed toward perfect integrity. God loves us because we have His righteousness and He has always loved His righteousness. Therefore we will always have His righteousness and God will always love us.

God's love does not require an object but when the object is mankind perfect integrity plus perfect love results in divine impersonal love toward believers who have +R and divine impersonal love toward all mankind. When Christ died on the cross He demonstrated divine impersonal love toward all mankind. Remember that all personal sins were never imputed to us for judgment. The only sin by which we have been judged as spiritually dead was at the point when human life was imputed to the soul after birth. Simultaneously Adam's original sin was imputed to the genetically-formed old sin nature. We were born physically alive and spiritually dead. Because we were spiritually dead with the help of the old sin nature we commit X number of personal sins and all of those personal sins were accumulated in the computer of decrees. God knew in eternity past all of the sins that would be committed in the human race. Therefore when Jesus Christ went to the cross and bore our sins He demonstrated His impersonal love toward the entire human race. The attitude of the human race could not destroy the virtue of our Lord.

Revelation 19:10, 11, the book of Revelation is a book to understand God, the events of the future are incidental, the future is in the hands of God. "And I fell at his feet to worship him," worship comes from understanding God. There is no worship until you understand God. "Him" here is not God, it is a teaching angel, but John was so carried away by what he had learned that he thought that he was talking to God, so he fell down at his feet. But notice that the angel corrects him: "And he said unto me, See not [an idiom: Don't you understand?]: I am your fellow servant, and of thy brethren that have the testimony of Jesus for the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy." If you want the summary of the book of Revelation in one phrase, this is it: “the testimony [communication] of Jesus.” The story about Jesus, including the doctrine of divine essence.

“And I saw heaven opened, and behold a white horse; and he that sat upon him was called Faithful and True”. The first thing we hear of the second advent are the attributes of our Lord Jesus Christ on that white horse. He is faithful; He is doctrine [truth].

Divine love is the only motive, divine justice is the only source of logistical grace. Divine love is personal toward believers who become winners through advance to gate eight; divine love is impersonal toward all believers in both interim grace and in the resurrection body. Divine love is personal, however, in eternal blessing and reward, but divine love is impersonal in the provision of grace.

There are three things we have to know about God in relationship to mankind to understand God’s plan and to understand why people are singing in heaven and are happy when things are bad on earth. When things are bad on earth it is reflected in sadness. “There is no singing in the streets,” as Isaiah put it, “no happiness in Israel.” But there is always singing in heaven. People in heaven do not see us but they do see the Lord and that is why they are happy.

The real key to understanding God and His plan for us is to understand His integrity. His integrity is our point of reference, not His love, not His sovereignty, not His omniscience. You have to have a point of contact. When you enter a house the door is the point of contact for the house. The point of contact for Christianity is the integrity or holiness of God. Behind that are all of these attributes: God is love, God is omniscient, God is sovereign, God is immutable, etc. But our point of contact is one half of divine holiness or integrity, the justice of God. God is fair to all of us, there never was a Christian who didn’t get a fair shake. God’s righteousness is the principle of divine integrity; God’s justice is the function of divine integrity. Therefore there is nothing man can do or say to change or influence, to coerce or bribe the integrity of God. All divine blessing for the believer originates from the justice of God. It flows down the grace pipeline to the righteousness of God which indwells every believer.

In Revelation 15:3 it says “they sing,” Tribulational believers who have had a rotten deal from ecumenical religion, from the dictator of the revived Roman empire. They sing both the hymn of Moses the servant of God and the hymn of the Lamb. In line three: “your ways [divine modus operandi in the plan of God] are righteous,” both the justice of God as the point of contact in the plan and the imputed righteousness of God as the recipient of all categories of grace in the plan. Why does the word “righteous” include both justice and righteousness? Because as we note in the exegesis it is in the plural, “and true,” the provision of Bible doctrine by which the believer advances in the plan of God.

In the fourth line we have the nominative of exclamation, also a vocative, of the noun basileuj, a reference to our Lord as the future ruler of the world, “O King.” With this is the descriptive genitive plural from e)qnoj, “King of the nations.” This is a reference to the nations of the Millennium and they sing about it in anticipation of the great victory which is about to occur.

In verse 4 we have a six-line summary of the hymn of the Lamb. We have had a four-line summary of the hymn of Moses, the servant of God. There are six lines here, just as in the previous hymn there are four lines. These hymns are being sung by happy people in heaven who understand the reality of God and His plan in detail.

We have in the hymn of the Lamb here a series of interrogatives. They begin usually with the interrogative pronoun or with the conjunction kai which links several of them. We begin therefore with the interrogative pronoun tij, translated "Who" since it is in the masculine gender. With this we have the aorist passive subjunctive of the verb fobew. Fobew is used with the double negative o)u mh. Fobew is a great word to use here for this reason: it not only means fear but it means awe, it means respect. Whether we are looking at it from its negative standpoint of fear or whether we are looking at it from its positive standpoint of respect for someone it always has the same connotation in its several meanings — no absurdities, no silliness. If you fear someone the absurdities are eliminated. When there is awe and respect in the presence of a great leader you eliminate the silliness, there is no nonsense.

The double negative with the subjunctive mood is an Attic Greek form of negation regarding the future. This, of course, is a passage dealing with the future. The future has to do with the second advent of Christ and a specific event related to it, the baptism of fire. This is a Classical Greek form which strengthens the negation. A double negative in the English is a positive; a double negative in the Greek is a stronger negative. The time will come when all people will fear the Lord and in a moment of time at the second advent all nonsense will be eliminated from the earth for the perfect environment of the Millennium will be free from absurdities, nonsense, and silliness. In other words, silliness, nonsense and absurdities all relate to the devil's original sin of arrogance.

There is a great deal of difference between silliness and humour. Humour is related to virtue; silliness is related to arrogance. The gnomic aorist tense is for a point of eschatological doctrine which is so axiomatic in character, so fixed in its certainty, that it is described by the aorist tense just as though it were actually occurring now instead of at the second advent of Christ, a future time. The idiom is generally translated by the English present tense even though it is in the aorist, and we translate it "who will not fear." The passive voice: the subject, mankind living on earth at the time of the second advent, receives the action of the verb. The subjunctive mood of emphatic negation means the potential subjunctive implying a future reference. It means at that time reality will come to everyone. Reality and orientation to reality eliminates silliness and at that moment of time, at the second advent of Christ, for both believer and unbeliever there will be reality. The element of contingency requires that the population of the Tribulation remain alive to the point of the second advent in order to experience this fear, this awe, this respect. People are going to live to lose their silliness.

Some of the better MSS add the accusative singular direct object su, not found in the King James version because it was not found in the original language group from which the King James was taken. It is correctly translated “you,” “Who will not fear you, O Lord.” Textus Receptus, an inferior group of manuscripts of the 9th century from which the King James version was translated, does not have su and it is because Codex Aleph and the papyri are much older. In the study of the science of textual criticism it is very important to get back the original.

The first line, then, refers to the attitude of people when Christ returns to the earth and every eye will see Him. The tactical victory of our Lord brings fear and awe from the entire surviving human race. There will be believers: they will have awe; there will be unbelievers: they will face reality with fear. So the second advent is the moment of truth, the moment of reality. The believer faces reality with respect and awe; the unbeliever faces reality with fear.

How you face reality is determined by what you have in your soul with which to face it. A lot of people never face reality so they never know what they have in their souls. Once you come face to face with reality what you really are will be manifest, and you will be able to know whether you passed the reality test or not by whether you are afraid or confident, whether you have fear of the Lord or respect for the Lord. That is the issue at the second advent.

Then comes the vocative kurioj referring to our Lord Jesus Christ who returns, “Who will not fear [or respect] you, O Lord.” This is a quotation from Jeremiah 10:7. The context of Jeremiah 10:7 is the evil and irrationality, the silliness and the nonsense of idolatry.

Note Jeremiah 10:3-8. “For the customs of the people are delusion.”

People set up two things in their life to give them stability: routine and customs. What is the difference between routine and custom? Routine is what you do every day; custom is what you will do, for example, on Thanksgiving — you will eat turkey, you will have a family gathering, you will do something outside of the routine.

“Because it [an idol] is wood cut from the forest.” Israel entered into idolatry at that time: silliness, vanity, nonsense. They worshipped something that is carved out of a tree, “The work of the hands of a craftsman with a cutting tool. They decorate it [the idol] with silver and gold; they fasten it down with hammer and nails so that it will not fall over. They [the idols] are like scarecrows in a cucumber field, furthermore they cannot speak; they have to be carried because they cannot walk! Do not fear them for they can do no harm, neither can they do you any good.

“There is none like you, O Lord; you are great, and your person is great in power. Who would not fear you, O King of the nations? Indeed it is our due! For among all of the wise men of the nations, and in all their kingdoms, there is no one like you. But they are altogether silly and foolish [full of nonsense], they are taught by worthless wooden idols!”

Just as in the time of Jeremiah, so in the time of the Tribulation, the last half of it, there will be a saturation of idolatry. Idolatry is demon worship, according to Deuteronomy 32:17 which is part of the hymn of Moses.

There is a pattern to these five lines. The first line asks a question and the second line asks a question. The third line begins with a causal conjunction o(ti and the fourth line begins with the causal conjunction o(ti and then the fifth line also.

The second line begins with the conjunction kai, "and," used to present the second question with regard to our Lord Jesus Christ at the second advent. Remember that this is being sung by Tribulational martyrs in heaven in the future, therefore we have the future active indicative of the verb docazw which means to glorify, "and who will glorify." The future tense is a deliberative future used for a question of uncertainty in future time. The active voice: only the mature believer with maximum doctrine resident in his soul will fulfil the action. The indicative mood is interrogative.

It must be remembered that while generally speaking the book of Revelation describes the Tribulation, chapters 6-19, it is obvious that we are to derive application from the eschatology of the Tribulation. This question was written by John and it was circulated to the churches as well as representing future potential. The question for us at this moment: "who will glorify?" And then we have the accusative singular direct object from o)noma, meaning the person of the Lord Jesus Christ. With it we have the possessive genitive from su again, "and who will glorify your person." That is a question we need to answer before we get to thanksgiving so that thanksgiving will be meaningful.

Who glorifies the Lord, and how do they glorify the Lord? The person who glorifies the Lord is the person who takes in doctrine on a daily basis. You have to have facts before you can fulfil the plan of God; you have to know doctrine and you have to have the ability to learn it, the various gates of the divine dynasphere. The indicative mood is an interrogative indicative, it assumes that there is an actual fact or doctrine which may be stated in answer to the question. And there is. If you are taking in doctrine on a daily basis, if you are using rebound when necessary to guarantee and ensuring the filling of the Spirit, if your life is characterised by the rationales of the second stage of the faith-rest drill, the essence of God rationale, the logistical grace rationale, then you are beginning to be objective about life. If you have enforced and genuine humility then you have the teachability to learn doctrine. If you are functioning at gate four you will start making its applications.

In every dispensation God has a system by which the believer can glorify the person of our Lord Jesus Christ. To qualify you first of all have to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, you must be the possessor of eternal salvation. Once that is accomplished there is a system and the mandates remain the same for every dispensation. Always there is virtue-first and doctrine first. Since the Church Age is the dispensation of the royal family of God or the body of Christ the divine system for us is absolutely unique: the modus operandi of the divine dynasphere.

The second line: “and who will glorify your person?” Only the believer who advances, only the believer who has momentum in the plan of God.

The third line brings it down to a principle and we have the beginning of three causal clauses. O(ti is used as a causal conjunction and can be translated in a number of ways. It is translated here “because” or “since.” The next word is an adjective, monoj, used as a part of the subject referring to our Lord Jesus Christ, the basis of all thanksgiving. With this we translate also the word “you,” “only you,” our Lord Jesus Christ. However, what is said of Christ is also true of God the Father and God the Holy Spirit because next we have the word a(gioj which refers to holiness, virtue, integrity. Only God has perfect integrity so a(gioj is the fact of the hypostatic union of Christ. He has perfect integrity in His deity, but we have also noted that the humanity of Christ has perfect integrity because He was given at birth the first Christmas present, the prototype divine dynasphere. Our Lord was filled with the Spirit from His birth. Our Lord developed humility, enforced and genuine, in His family life and by the time He was twelve He had reached maturity. That is why the third line says, “only you are virtuous.” Only God has the capacity to be patient with us, only God has the capacity to find a way to give us things and bless us even though we are losers as far as His plan is concerned. All of this is related to His holiness. God gives us blessing because one half of His holiness, divine righteousness, is inside of us, and He imputes all of these blessings, all of this divine support, all of this keeping us alive, to us from His integrity or holiness.

The fourth line also begins with the causal conjunction o(ti, and so does the fifth line, and once again in the fourth line we are going to have a cause, related now to history, “because all nations.” We have as our subject the adjective paj plus the noun e)qnoj, both of them in the nominative case, “all nations.” We are talking about nations at a certain point in history. We are still on the subject of the end of the Tribulation and the second advent of Christ. This is referring to nations in an attitude toward God in the future, the future being the second advent of Christ. That is why we have the future active indicative of the verb h(kw which means to come, “all nations will come.” The predictive future anticipates the Millennial reign of Christ after the second advent. The active voice: all the nations of the world will come to our Lord Jesus Christ when He begins His reign. Jesus Christ will return to the earth, supersede Satan as the ruler of this earth, and literally rule for a thousand years.

The worship of nations in the Millennium is the subject of many passages of scripture and is, of course, a part of the eschatology of the Millennial reign of our Lord Jesus Christ, Psalm 2:8,9; 24:1-10; 66:1-4; 72:8-11; 86:9; Isaiah 2:2-4; 9:6,7; 66:18-23; Daniel 7:14; Zephaniah 2:11; Zechariah 14:9. Nations will come to our Lord Jesus Christ ruling in Jerusalem to worship Him. The continuation of the fourth line tells us that is exactly what they are going to do.

We have the connective conjunction kai followed by the future active indicative of the verb proskunew, the word for worship. The future tense is a predictive future, it anticipates the eschatology of the Millennium. The active voice: the Gentile nations of the Millennium, however they are divided, will produce the action. The action of the Gentile nations portrays the ultimate triumph of our Lord Jesus Christ in both the prehistoric angelic conflict as well as the extension into human history. The indicative mood is declarative for the eschatological reality of international worship of our Lord Jesus Christ during the Millennium. It is very important to understand that there will never be international worship of our Lord until the Millennium. There will always be nations in opposition to God until the second advent, in fact the greatest opposition to God among nations will occur during the Tribulation.

Finally, we have the improper preposition enwpon plus the genitive of su, referring to our Lord Jesus Christ, "and they will worship before you." The fact that nations will actually worship before the Lord Jesus Christ is a phenomenon that could only exist when He is the personal ruler of the world. They have to see Him to worship Him, they have to benefit from the perfect environment that He will provide. This means they will worship Him because they are personally materially benefiting from His rule. People will go along with any system of government that benefits them personally no matter what system it may be. People are selfish inevitably.

The word for "worship," proskunew, calls for some amplification because people apparently have a great deal of difficulty understanding what worship is. So we notice a few passages of scripture.

Psalms 29:1,2. In this particular psalm we have the principle of application of doctrine under the word "ascribe." "Ascribe to the Lord, O sons of power [believers who are advancing and who have momentum in the plan of God, absolutely necessary for worship], ascribe to the Lord glory and power. Ascribe to the Lord the glory of his name; worship the Lord in the majesty of his integrity."

To understand the integrity of God is to begin to understand the principle of worship. It must always be applied.

The New Testament passage in which our Lord discussed worship is found in John 4:22ff where a Gentile woman came to the Lord and had a conversation with Him about worship, and how they worshipped on the mountain where He was standing. This led to a short dissertation on the principle of worship as it existed at that time and as it would exist in the Church Age. "You worship what you do not know [ignorance of doctrine guarantees malfunction of worship]; we worship what we know [the true concept of worship has always been knowledge. From knowledge of doctrine worship springs]; for salvation is from the Jews."

To understand the true meaning of worship in the Age of Israel they had to understand that salvation is from the Jews. In other words, in the Old Testament times and specifically in the dispensation of Israel they had a system of worship which taught salvation and other doctrines. To understand worship in the Old Testament you had to understand the Jewish system of Levitical offerings, the articles of furniture in the tabernacle and later on in the temple. When these things were understood then worship could be understood for all of these articles dealt with the person and the work of Jesus Christ. Ritual was used because the canon was not yet completed and it was much easier to communicate through training aids. The ritual was a system of training aids. Therefore our Lord said at the end of verse 22, “for salvation is from the Jews.” He was also announcing the fact that He had come in the flesh as the son of David. He came as a Jew, He would go to the cross as the perfect Jew and He would bear the sins of the world in His own body on the cross.

Verse 23, “But the hour is coming, and now is, when true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in doctrine,” note the absence of definite articles. The absence of the definite article in front of “spirit” means the ministry of God the Holy Spirit, and in front of “truth,” the ministry of Bible doctrine. This is, of course, a prophecy of the Church Age and the divine dynasphere, “for such people the Father seeks to be his worshippers.” The Father seeks those who know doctrine to be His worshippers, and that is why our Lord concluded in verse 24: “God is spirit; and those who worship him must worship in Spirit and in doctrine.” He was anticipating the function of the divine dynasphere, and the reason He says “the hour now is” is because inside the prototype divine dynasphere the humanity of our Lord was filled with the Spirit at gate one and He had learned in His humanity maximum doctrine at gate four. He was referring to His own function inside of the prototype divine dynasphere but He would give to the royal family of God the operational divine dynasphere with that same gate one and that same gate four so that all worship in the future would relate to the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. You cannot worship unless you are filled with the Spirit; you cannot worship unless you know Bible doctrine.

Philippians 3:3, “For we [believers in the Church Age] are the true circumcision,” in the past Israel was a client nation to God, the custodian of Bible doctrine, “who worship in the Spirit of God,” and then he adds something because Paul wrote when the Lord Jesus Christ had been glorified. He had been resurrected, He had ascended, He was seated at the right hand of the Father, and He had received His third royal warrant, “and glory in Jesus Christ, furthermore put no confidence in the flesh.” To the extent that believers put confidence in the flesh it is impossible for them to worship. This means probably that a very small percentage of born-again believers actually ever fulfil the principle of worship during their lifetime, for there must be no confidence in the flesh, we must glory in Jesus Christ — gate five of the divine dynasphere, we must worship in the Spirit of God. All of this requires knowledge of Bible doctrine. Human worship is the expression of the believer’s category one personal love from gate five. As we are filled with the Spirit, gate one, and as we learn to rebound so that we can recover life inside the divine dynasphere and be freed from the cosmic system of Satan, as we have enforced and genuine humility — which is teachability, we produce, therefore, the power, objectivity and the teachability to function at gate four — the momentum gate: perception and application of doctrine. The first result is always motivational virtue directed toward God, and that motivational virtue directed toward God is the true functional worship. It includes three factors: personal love for God which comes from knowledge of Bible doctrine; confidence in God which comes from Bible doctrine; worship of God. All true worship begins for us as we develop the motivational virtue of gate five. When we develop motivational worship at gate five we also develop capacity for life. That is why gate six comes next, it gives us the capacity for life through impersonal love, through courage toward man and circumstances, and true virtue-morality. So the divine dynasphere then becomes the key to the function of our royal priesthood in worship. And while worship is the priestly function of the believer at gate five of the divine dynasphere it is not a true function apart from the interlock of the gates which precede. So the concept of worship becomes very important. The worship function demands life and residence inside of the divine dynasphere.

Revelation 4:10,11, "The twenty-four elders [angelic staff officers from the angelic order of battle] will fall down before him [the glorified Christ] who sits on the throne, and they will worship him who lives forever and ever. Then they will lay down their crowns before the throne, and say, 'You, O Lord, are worthy to receive glory and honour and power.'"

In order for the angelic creatures to give these things in worship — glory, honour, power — they have to possess them. You cannot give in worship what you do not possess. Inasmuch as the elect angels are in their eternal form they have glory, so they can give to God glory. They can also give Him honour and they can give Him power. While we are not yet in our resurrection bodies and our permanent form for glorifying the Lord in that sense we can give two out of the three categories: honour and power.

The reason for this is given at the end of verse 11, "because you [referring to our Lord Jesus Christ] have created all things, also because of your sovereign will they existed and they were created." This becomes the basic concept, therefore, for worship.

Giving glory means face-to-face worship in a resurrection body. At present under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit the believer can give a form of worship which he possesses — a mind to concentrate on doctrine, a voice to sing His praises, a volition to perpetuate perception of doctrine and from that to give from the blessings we receive. Capacity for worship must precede the function of worship and until we have a resurrection body we will not be able to give glory. This body of corruption which we now possess cannot give glory to God as the highest category of worship. Corruption must put on incorruption; this means the resurrection.

Our passage in the fourth line says "because all nations will come [to Jerusalem] and they will worship before you." This is a Millennial passage and we note the principle behind it. The worship of the Millennium is based upon two factors: our Lord provides perfect government throughout the world and perfect environment. This means that there are two categories of people who are going to worship: Millennial believers with doctrine and those who are simply enjoying the benefits of perfect environment on the earth as unbelievers. When Satan is released after his thousand years of imprisonment those who have given superficial worship to our Lord, unbelievers who are simply benefiting from perfect environment, will move over to Satan's camp for the Gog revolution.

In Psalm 2 we see some of the concepts in this hymn which is sung at a future time. Verses 1-3 is the situation in the time of the devil's desperation. In other words, it starts in the last half of the Tribulation.

Verse 1, "Why do the nations rage [the eschatology of the devil's desperation], and the people plot in vain?" It is a time of great conspiracy.

Verse 2, “The kings of the earth take their stand [the revived Roman empire, the power blocs of the Tribulation take a stand against God], and the rulers plot together against the Lord, and against his anointed one [God the Son],

Verse 3, [This is what they think] “Let us break their bands [the authority of divine establishment], let us destroy their restraint [the function of divine establishment], let us throw off the chains [the basis by which God protects the human race].”

Inverses 4-9 we have the plan of God the Father mentioned.

Verse 4, “He [God the Father] who is enthroned in heaven laughs: the Lord scoff at them.”

Verse 5, “Then [at the end of the Tribulation] he will speak in his anger [God the Father judges, the source of the seven last plagues], and he will terrify them in his wrath.”

Verse 6, “But as for me [God the Father] I have installed my king [coronation of Christ after the second advent] on Zion, my holy mountain [the ultimate and tactical victory of our Lord in the angelic conflict].”

Verses 7-9, Jesus Christ controls history.

Verse 7, “I will proclaim the decree of the Lord [the printout of the computer of divine decrees]: he [God the Father] said to me [God the Son], You are my Son [first advent]; today [moment of the virgin birth] I have begotten you.”

Verse 8, After His death, burial, resurrection and ascension, “Ask from me, and I will give you the nations for your inheritance, plus the very ends of the earth as your possession [the Millennium].”

Verse 9, “And you will rule them with a sceptre of iron; and you will shatter them to pieces like pottery.”

Verses 10-12, divine advice to the nations of the Tribulation.

Verse 10, “Therefore you kings [rulers, become wise — perception of the gospel, perception of doctrine]: be warned you rulers of the earth.”

Verse 12, “Kiss the Son [faith in Christ, perception of doctrine], lest he become angry, and you perish in the way, for his wrath may soon be kindled [the approaching judgment, grace before judgment]. Blessed are those who take refuge in him.”

In Psalm 66:4 we have the worship that will occur in the Millennium. “All the earth shall worship you [Jesus Christ], and will sing praises to you; they will sing praises to your person.” That will occur on earth while the angelic choir is singing in heaven.

Psalm 86:9, “All nations shall come and worship before you.”

Isaiah 2:3, “Many people will go and say, Come, and let us go to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us concerning his ways, and that we may walk in his paths: for instruction will go forth from Zion, and the word of God from Jerusalem.”

In Psalm 22:27-31 we have another such category of information.

Now for the fifth and last line of the hymn, we start with the conjunction o(ti for the third time. It is used for the third, fourth and fifth lines, “because.” Then we have a nominative plural subject from dikaiwma which means “righteous acts,” “because your righteous acts,” a reference to our Lord’s judgements at the second advent. They include the sentencing of Satan to a thousand years in prison plus the elimination of all unbelievers from the earth in the baptism of fire, plus the Millennial rule of Christ deciding what nations will exist in the Millennium and what nations will not. With this is the aorist passive indicative of the verb fanerow which means to manifest or to be revealed, “because your righteous acts have been revealed.” God is perfect virtue, as we have studied, and from that perfect virtue comes perfect justice to everyone as well as every nation in the world. God’s justice extends to nations, to groups of people, and to individuals as well. The culminative aorist tense views the righteous acts of our Lord at the second advent in their entirety and regards it from the viewpoint of what results — perfect environment on the earth for 1000 years. The passive voice: the righteous deeds of our Lord Jesus Christ received the action of the verb, manifestation to the entire world. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of a series of eschatological actions of the Lord Jesus Christ at the second advent.

Now we have the entire hymn to the Lamb in its summary. The first line: “Who will fear you, O Lord,” a reference to the attitude of the world population at the second advent of Christ, including fear, awe and respect. The second line: “and who will glorify your person.” That brings us up to maximum worship. Only the mature believer of the Tribulation will glorify the person of Christ. The third line: “because only you are holy [only you have perfect virtue, perfect justice and righteousness].” The fourth line: “because all the nations will come [to Jerusalem] and they will worship before you.” The fifth line: “because your righteous acts have been revealed,” the action of our Lord Jesus Christ is the news of the Millennium.

In verses 5-8 we have the vision of the heavenly temple or the barracks of the execution squad.

Verse 5 — the continuation of the vision. We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated “Then,” followed by the prepositional phrase meta plus the accusative neuter plural of o(utoj, “After these things,” a correct and precise idiom to indicate the relationship between previous history and the present moment being described. “After these things,” therefore, includes the vision or great sign of the seven last plagues, verse 1; the vision of the victorious martyrs, verse 2; the victory hymn of the Tribulational martyrs, verses 3-4.

The principle is a very simple one. Prophetic subjects must be developed in the sequence of divine thinking.

Here God's policy is grace before judgment, always. There is always a grace period prior to any judgment of history and that grace period gives opportunity to reverse bad decisions from a position of weakness under the principle of repentance or changing one's mind. There are two categories of repentance which exist to reverse the repercussions of divine judgment. The first is the decision to believe in Christ, the decision of salvation. This is called the repentance of the unbeliever. Repentance simply means a change of mind. The second is the decision of rebound, the repentance of the believer resulting in deliverance from the cosmic system.

"Then after these things," after the vision of the Tribulational martyrs in heaven and their victory hymn, "I looked," the aorist active indicative of o(raw). Looking here has to do with concentrating. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. This can be classified as the vision of the source of the seven last plagues or the seven bowl judgements. The active voice: the apostle John as the human author of the book of Revelation under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of eschatological doctrine and the fact that much of historical disaster comes from the court in heaven and it protects mankind, perpetuates the human race.

Next we have the connective conjunction kai, "and," which introduces the result from what precedes. We now approach the problem of the seven last "grenades" or plagues. They are related to the Tribulational martyrs and their imprecatory prayers. Now we see the barracks of the execution squad. The word "behold" in the King James version is not found in the original language. The next word is the nominative singular subject from naoj, "temple," and with this we also have a temporary form of worship, the genitive of apposition skhnh, "tabernacle." So they are both together: the permanent temple and the tabernacle. The tabernacle is the memorial in heaven to the person and the work of the Lord Jesus Christ in His strategic victory of the angelic conflict, the first advent.

The beast dictator has too much power in order to get any laughs out of this, therefore he has no sense of humour because his power has added to his arrogance. Arrogance has no sense of humour. When facing the power of Satan and his beast dictator the humour must be subtle. Therefore the paronomasia of Revelation 13:6 linked to John 1:14, and now brought out again. But something is added to it. Notice the two words again: naoj then skhnh, the two are linked together. What is so funny about this is that Satan can't stand the fact that our Lord tabernacled among us and now coming out of the temple is going to be a tabernacle that will destroy Satan's power on earth. So the temple is the barracks from which the execution squad will advance. With all of his great power the beast dictator who is the political ruler of the revived Roman empire and the leader of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation cannot perceive the humour of this paronomasia. Reason: he cannot laugh at himself, he takes himself very seriously. When confronted with humour as a weapon he can only riposte with slander.

When believers are beyond the power of evil, evil counterattacks with a distance-type shooting called slander. Doctrine resident in the soul is more powerful than the power of evil as demonstrated by this parry of humour. The skhnh was when our Lord was on earth — the tabernacle; now we have a barracks in heaven and the barracks in heaven is going to send an execution squad to the earth.

Tribulational martyrs have demonstrated that they were beyond the evil of the dictator in two ways. First of all, doctrine was more important than their life. Hence, they became martyrs because their priorities were straight. Secondly, the interim life for the Tribulational martyrs in heaven is totally beyond the influence of Satan who is confined to earth during the last half of the Tribulation. The humour of this is the fact that they are in heaven. Satan sent them to heaven through torture and execution; now that they are in heaven they are beyond his power. Satan only had power over these believers while they were on earth. He killed them and immediately they are out of his power. Furthermore, they go up and they knock on the door of the barracks and they say, "Send out the execution squad". And that is exactly what will happen. The imprecatory prayers means sending out the execution squad.

So we have so far: "Then after these things I concentrated, and the temple, the tabernacle." The arrogant preoccupation with self in cosmic one cannot see the humour between skhnh and skhnow, the two words that are used in the pun.

Principle

1. Like all people with more power than they can handle the beast dictator has no sense of humour, for in arrogance he takes himself too seriously.
2. When arrogance is faced with humour it must retort with slander. Why? Slander is the weapon of the weak to attack the strong. The sins of the tongue are always the weapons of the weak to attack those who are strong, those who are beyond their power. The one who slanders is weak and the object of the slander is strong, so it is the weak attacking the strong.
3. With maximum doctrine resident in the soul the Tribulational believer is beyond the power of the all-powerful beast dictator.
4. In life doctrine in the soul puts the believer beyond the power of the dictator, while in death the interim life in heaven puts the believer beyond the power of Satan. So there is a double protection of all believers: a wall of fire on earth; an interim life in heaven.
5. The beast dictator cannot learn the lesson of humour. With all of his vast power over life and death he cannot control the believer with maximum doctrine resident in the soul.

6. Bible doctrine resident in the soul of the believer is more powerful than all categories of human power. In other words, no one can destroy your power of thinking, only you can do it by bad decisions.

7. Therefore the Tribulational martyr is beyond the dictator's control in life because of the greater power of Bible doctrine resident in his soul. Furthermore, the Tribulational martyr is beyond the dictator's control in death because of his residence in heaven in a state of perfect happiness. In heaven the Tribulational martyr is also beyond the power and control of Satan who has been cast out of heaven in the middle of the Tribulation. Therefore, the humour of it all: they have gone in death where Satan cannot reach them — a bad joke for Satan but a great source of humour to the believers. Even those believers who are losers are beyond the power of Satan in heaven. In death the loser believer is absent from the body and face to face with the Lord. The loser has no more sorrows, no more tears, no more pain, no more death. The loser cannot lose his salvation and the interim life is a blessing to him.

Satan, who has delegated the great power to the beast dictator, has been driven out of heaven permanently in the middle of the Tribulation and therefore he cannot follow, accuse or follow up on martyrs.

Next we have a subjective genitive from the noun marturion, "testimony." So we have another word added to the joke now. That temple is a testimony; that tabernacle is a testimony. Humour can be a testimony when humour is related to doctrine, "and the temple, the tabernacle, which serves as a testimony" is the way you translate the subjective genitive. The subjective genitive occurs when the noun in the genitive case, marturion here, produces the action being related as the subject to the verbal idea and the noun modified. So we translate not "of" testimony as in the King James version, but it is the temple, the tabernacle, which serves "as" a testimony, subjective genitive case. And where is this testimony? "In heaven," e)n plus the locative of o)uranoj.

That temple is the testimony in heaven to the grace of God, for in that temple is the tremendous execution squad. That is where the entire system of angelic hierarchy, the great knighthood, the great aristocracy of elect angels are barracked. The tabernacle in heaven is an eternal testimony to the first advent of Christ. It includes, therefore, the concept of both Christology and soteriology. The tabernacle in heaven is an eternal memorial to the virgin birth, the hypostatic union, the function of the humanity of Christ in the prototype divine dynasphere, the doctrine of impeccability and His qualification therefore to bear the sins of the world. It also includes every concept of propitiation and redemption, the unlimited atonement and, of course, the concept of reconciliation. The tabernacle links Jesus Christ as the God of Israel with His omega glory which is found in Deuteronomy 6. The tabernacle reminds Israel that the cross must come before the crown, therefore two advents are necessary to fulfil the unconditional covenants to Israel. The first advent provides eternal salvation and defines Jewish recipients of unconditional covenants at the second advent as those who believe in Christ only. The second advent provides the historical circumstances for the fulfilment of the unconditional covenants whereas the first advent provided the basis for giving to certain Jews those unconditional covenants, they must have the righteousness of God, and those covenants will be fulfilled from the justice of God to the indwelling righteousness of God at the second advent. The tabernacle has the testimony of linking the Jewish Messiah with the Lord Jesus Christ whose first advent fulfilled all of the prophecies regarding His saving work on the cross. The tabernacle is the eternal testimony, therefore, to our Lord's strategic victory in the historical phase of the angelic conflict. The tabernacle is the eternal testimony to the fact that no human being could ever be in heaven apart from the saving work of Christ. The tabernacle is a part of that great castle, that great barracks. The shadow soteriology and Christology of the Mosaic law is no longer preserved on earth except in the Word of God. Instead it is now a part of that great castle and that great barracks from which all of the judgements of the Tribulation emanate. Those who reject the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ can only anticipate divine judgment both in time and in eternity. Furthermore, they will have no capacity and no way of coping. Therefore the source of divine judgment or the seven last plagues is the temple of the tabernacle in heaven which teaches many facets of doctrine and certain principles: that the greatest power on earth can never harm or touch even a hair of your head as long as you are a believer and inside of the plan of God. This tabernacle in heaven, therefore, is a tremendous memorial to our Lord Jesus Christ.

The tabernacle is said to be opened, the aorist passive indicative from the verb anoigw. There are many gates to this great castle. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. There is a barracks gate and this is the one that will be opened. The passive voice: the great castle in heaven called the temple, the tabernacle, is opened at one of its special gates. The indicative mood says this is important. The opening of the gate of the temple will release from the barracks the execution quad. These are seven great historical disasters which we will study in Revelation 16,17,18, 19, the seven last plagues, the seven bowl judgements, the seven grenades of history. They will be the last call to the population of the world to accept Christ as saviour before the second advent occurs. Once Christ returns it is too late to believe in Him for salvation and all unbelievers will be removed from this earth and cast into fire, as per the baptism of fire.

Verse five: "Then after these things I concentrated, and the temple, the tabernacle which serves as a testimony in heaven was opened."

The ritual testimony to the person and the work of Christ is found through the tabernacle in several dispensations. In the Age of Israel it is called the tabernacle of Moses. Then it was called the temple of Solomon, then the temple of Zerubbabel. In the Church Age there is no tabernacle on earth and the representation of it all is the Eucharist or the Lord's table. In the Tribulation we see where the tabernacle went, it is a part of the temple, the great castle in heaven, the abode of God and certain forms of knighthood among the elect angels. Ritual testimony to the person and the work of Christ in heaven is not only verified by many passages which we have noted, Revelation 11:19; 14:15; 15:5-8; 16:1, but also in the Millennium. There will also be a Millennial temple on earth in Ezekiel chapters 40-47, and again animal sacrifices will be offered in that temple of the restored Israel. The reasons for it are many but among others it is the fact that Israel is restored as a client nation to God. However, in the eternal state there will be no temple, as per Revelation

21:22, “And I saw no temple in it, for the Lord God, the Almighty one, and the Lamb of God, is its temple.”

Very shortly we will be studying Revelation chapter sixteen, the chapter of great historical disaster. Every category of historical disaster is included in it. Therefore, of course, the subject itself demands that we spend some time discussing some of the problems of disaster. As long as believers of our generation identify themselves with stupid thinking we are not prepared for either personal disaster or collective disaster.

Believers today are making the same old mistake, they are being propagandised by the press, by human viewpoint in every possible way. The world is never going to be destroyed by nuclear weapons but as long as believers identify themselves with the mob [public opinion] they can never be prepared for disaster. Mobs are used by demagogues to promote violence and to unnerve legitimate local and national governments. There is, of course, nothing in mob psychology to prepare a person for either personal disaster or historical disaster. Jesus saw the fallacy of public opinion at a certain point in His ministry. It has always occurred even though they did not have newspaper print or the high-tech technology for communication that we enjoy today. But the same situation existed during our Lord's ministry as exists at this moment in our history: believers are being led astray every day because they cannot think in terms of truth, in terms of doctrine, and they are very easily being propagandised by public opinion. Our Lord realised this with His disciples who were born-again believers, and as born-again believers He brought them to a certain point. No one ever taught like our Lord who was obviously the greatest communicator of the truth who ever walked on planet earth. Yet, our Lord came to the place where He could no longer effectively teach and bring people past a certain point spiritually. Therefore He did something about it. He separated those who would continue to be positive from those who would not. He demonstrated to us those who are believers and will fail in time of disaster.

Our Lord saw the fallacy of public opinion; He recognised that believers can only advance to a certain point when they are under the influence of the mob. The Lord, therefore, must separate believers both mentally and spiritually from the influence of erroneous public opinion and the machinations of the mob. Our Lord must also separate these believers physically from this same mob.

So we note three case histories: the story of three distracted believers, believers who did not grow past a certain point. They are believers who are now in heaven in their interim bodies and in a state of great happiness, but believers who were losers in life and this will be reflected in the fact that they will be losers in eternity — no knighthood, no decorations, no rewards accrue to these believers. All three of them fail and we will analyse why they fail. These three believers did not even come to the point of testing, they did not enter into the disaster situation. They were not qualified to do so, they merely merged back into the mob to be lost to the history of their generation.

The first one we will study is going to be a pseudo-intellectual. He is distracted by his own arrogance, his lack of humility or teachability, his rejection of authority, his extreme self-centredness, his lack of virtue. But he was very strong in sincerity, he was emotionally unstable, he was disoriented to reality, and above all he had a false sense of security. He is a scribe, he is a believer with no dynamics for disaster, therefore he will not get into the boat, the boat being the plan of God for momentum in the spiritual life. To us the boat represents the divine dynasphere and its eight gates.

The second is a conventional believer. He has a false system of human protocol; he rejects divine protocol in the plan of God. This believer is distracted by the protocol of society and therefore rejects the protocol of the plan of God. This believer lacks the priority of virtue-first and he will not get into the boat of the divine dynasphere, therefore he will fail in disaster and will never face testing.

The third distracted disciple is the believer with wrong priorities. He is distracted by people and especially by his own love life. Not only does this believer have the wrong priorities but he is confused about the subject of love. He really doesn't understand love and not understanding love he has no capacity for love, therefore he emphasises the wrong things in love. So not only is he a loser spiritually but he is a lousy lover. Furthermore, this distracted believer has failed to properly interpret history, hence he will not be prepared for disaster.

Matthew 8:18, we have the transitional use of the conjunctive particle de, properly translated "now." It indicates a crisis but not the kind of crisis that most people recognise as such. Jesus alone understands that His congregation of believers have now reached a critical point in their spiritual lives because too many of them are being influenced by other than doctrinal concepts. It is an old, old story; it happens in every generation. Too many of His disciples are not prepared for the crisis which is about to occur in their generation.

The nominative subject Ihsouj in the Greek with the definite article defines someone whose identity is clear to the readers. It is our Lord Jesus Christ who is the subject and He anticipates the crisis, anticipates disaster, and therefore makes proper provision for those who are positive. "Now Jesus saw," the aorist active participle of the verb o(raw). Our Lord Jesus Christ understood the trends of history. As God He knew them billions of years ago; as true humanity with maximum doctrine resident in His soul, from His own function in the prototype divine dynasphere, He was qualified to understand the trends of history; not only the overall picture but what was definitely affecting His own congregation. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ produces the action from His application of doctrine. This is a temporal participle and translated "when Jesus saw."

And what did He see? The accusative singular direct object from the noun o)xloj, "crowd." He saw what many of us have seen: public opinion at its lowest ebb, because public opinion based on all sorts of false concepts and erroneous premises. For example, the nuclear freeze group. Anyone with an ounce of common sense plus a little doctrine realises that the only deterrent that the communist Russian empire recognises is the potential of force.

The crowd has gathered in approbation because our Lord has performed a couple of miracles. The messages, the obvious integrity and courage of our Lord Jesus Christ, has attracted the mob but it is primarily the performing of several miracles that has impressed them. The historical circumstances, of course, at the moment were filled with uncertainty for the middle east which was a powder keg at the time of our Lord's ministry. The Jews were looking for a leader. Always in the approach of historical disaster people look for a leader. For this reason the crowd had come to Jesus Christ. They had not come for salvation; they had not come for doctrine; they had come to Him as a leader, a potential deliverer from Rome. They weren't even thinking about deliverance from sin or thinking in terms of spiritual life.

A few things about this crowd as Jesus saw them, because it is true of mobs today just as it was then and mobs down through history:

All mobs are emotional, they are fickle, they are irrational. Furthermore, approbation from a crowd, the masses, becomes a distraction for anything worthwhile. So we have in any mob the breeding ground for arrogance, and mobs function inside the cosmic system. Those who depend upon the crowd for approbation generally have no capacity for life, they are very shallow and very superficial people. They have loss of honour and integrity, if they ever had any in the first place, and they end up with a distorted scale of values, and many of them become demagogues and politicians. Approbation from the crowd when taken seriously destroys moral courage, distracts from doctrine, and guarantees a life of misery in the administration of divine discipline to the believer. Since all mobs are irrational and emotional, and therefore incapable of reason and thought, they fall apart in historical disaster. A crowd destroys human freedom, therefore. A crowd destroys human freedom by demanding equality, everyone in the mob wants to be equal. There is no such thing, of course. Mobs intrude into privacy, they destroy property, they reject authority. A crowd or a mob, therefore, becomes an instrument of evil. No mob has ever been an instrument for good, though they often represent causes that are good or semi-good. A mob easily succumbs to rumour, they are suckers for propaganda, they are victimised by any demagogue who will promise them a Millennium. Freedom is lost in a crowd or a mob and every person who is a part of a mob or a crowd is a slave to irrational and insane emotions. By insane emotions is meant the crowd turning to violence. Violence is a form of evil and in a mob it is disorganised evil.

A mob is a distraction to the perception of doctrine. There are many people in the crowd who have believed in Christ. There are believers and unbelievers in the crowd but there are believers who are being influenced by the mob more than they are being influenced by Bible doctrine. Therefore Jesus must separate the disciples from that crowd. Separation from the mob is necessary to establish our Lord's authority, His teaching ministry, and to continue their momentum so that there will be in client nation Judea a wonderful pivot of mature believers. All believers who advance to maturity must separate themselves mentally from the thinking of the mob. Every believer must make decisions regarding his life and regarding the content of information which he hears. He has no basis for filtering out what is false unless he has previously learned what is true with regard to Bible doctrine. This means that the positive believer from his own free will must separate himself from all distractions, from all influences, and all false priorities in his life. And at some time this is a test, and it is a test which is given before disaster comes. Separation, then, becomes a positive decision from a position of strength. It means that the believer continues to have control of his own life and he will have a true personal sense of destiny.

“Now when Jesus saw the mob around him.” Obviously seeing the mob around Him He recognised the danger and, of course, the same thing is true today even as it was true then. Therefore the primary responsibility for the pastor-teacher is to communicate Bible doctrine to those who are willing to listen without coercion. You can't be forced into learning doctrine, and if you are shamed into learning doctrine you will peel off, even as one of the three categories we are about to study.

Our Lord saw the danger of the mob. And what did He do about it? At this time He had the opportunity of separating them. Today our Lord is not ministering on earth but He has provided a substitute for that boat which will physically separate from the mob, the divine dynasphere, God's plan for the believer.

“Now when Jesus saw the mob around him,” the aorist active indicative of the verb keleuw. It means to give a very strong command, a very dogmatic command, to give a mandate in no uncertain terms. The action of the aorist participle precedes the action of the main verb. The indicative mood of keleuw indicates this is the main verb. Our Lord made an estimate of the situation before He gave His commands. It was a correct estimate of the situation. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. Our Lord Jesus Christ produced the action by the assertion of His authority in a command situation. We will translate it: “Now when Jesus saw the mob around him he gave orders”. There is no teaching, there is no explanation, but He first of all must establish His authority with believers who are going on in the spiritual life. Believers who are going to have momentum must have established in their soul the authority of our Lord Jesus Christ. That authority is delegated today in the written Word and the communication of the written Word. That is why we have the gift of pastor-teacher for that communication.

So first of all the first issue is the authority of our Lord who is teaching the doctrine as over against the attractiveness of the mob. Therefore He gave orders. The expression of the order is in the aorist active infinitive of the verb a)perxomai, “he gave orders to depart.” The culminative aorist tense which views the departure in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, a separation from the thinking of the mob, the influence of the mob, for their spiritual growth. All of us at some time make decisions of separation in order to establish the higher priority of growth in grace, the glorification of our Lord Jesus Christ. This is a middle voice in form but it is active in meaning, it is a deponent verb, and therefore the believer must produce the action of the verb in order to advance spiritually. This is the infinitive of intended result. When the result is indicated as fulfilling a definite objective, it is a blending of purpose and result. Then we have prepositional phrase, e)ij plus the adverb of place from peron, “to the other side.”

Corrected translation: “Now when Jesus saw the mob around him he gave orders to depart to the other side.”

That means to cross the lake. The lake refers to the Sea of Galilee. In this manner the Lord is going to separate positive from negative volition. This is just as true today. The pastor must so teach that there will be from time to time a separation of positive from negative volition. The job of the pastor is not to be popular but to be faithful in teaching the Word so that negative volition is irritated and moves on, and positive volition stands fast to grow in grace. The command to cross the Sea of Galilee causes a crisis among the believers in the crowd. It results, therefore, in several classifications, several categories of believers. Some of these believers are positive and some are not. At this particular point all appear on the surface to be positive. Superficially they are positive but in reality there are different priorities and there are different reasons why these people are following our Lord, why they are a part of His congregation. Therefore our Lord is going to eliminate the weak sisters.

We begin with the case of the first distracted disciple. This distracted disciple is a loser, verse 19-20. "And a certain scribe came and said to him, "Master, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest."

We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, "Then." We have a nominative singular from the adjective numeral e(ij, meaning "one", but used here with the indefinite article to indicate a category. He wasn't the only one in this category but he is typical of it and therefore he is used. The nominative singular subject tells us what kind of a person he was. He was a grammateuj which means a scribe. Grammataej was used in the Roman world for a secretary or a clerk, but it was used in the Jewish world for a scholar, a brilliant student, an expert in the Mosaic law. This scribe or scholar is named because he represents a category, the pseudo-intellectual whose arrogant hang-ups distorts doctrine into a system of rationalism or empiricism, or just a series of confusing epigrams. This man was attracted to our Lord because being smart and having a good intellect he recognised a greater intellect. People who are smart are often initially attracted to people who are smarter. This man was attracted therefore by the obvious genius of our Lord Jesus Christ. He could have been a genius himself but he was a pseudo-intellectual, he was a liberal, and beneath the veneer of his intellectualism was a tremendous emotional distraction. His genius was destroyed by arrogance. Arrogance takes a person who is a genius in IQ and makes him a very vain, superficial type of person. We translate it, "A certain scribe."

Then we have an aorist active participle from proserxomai, which means he approached respectfully. There was nothing in his demeanour to indicate what he was really like. Always remember that when you are in a position of leadership. What people appear to be on the surface is not what they really are. You have to put them under some kind of pressure to find out what makes them tick, and what makes them think. And so it says that he approached respectfully. The constative aorist gathers it up into a moment of time. The active voice: the scribe, full of self-confidence, a pseudo-confidence, approaches with his pseudo-intellectualism and assumes that he is going to handle this magnificently.

A circumstantial participle gives us attendant circumstances, "and he said to him." He addresses Him, respectfully. He calls Him didaskoloj, "Teacher." The respect with which he came forward indicates the fact that he has learned something from an intellect superior to his own. The pseudo-recognition of His intellect does not mean that he respects His authority. This man will always be superficial because he will never think that anyone is really quite as smart as he is. He sees the brilliance of our Lord; he envies it; he is arrogant; he is hanging around to pick up a concept or two; he is simply trying to emulate our Lord. He is a very superficial person with tremendous potential of intellect. So many people with a potential of intellect, so many people with a high IQ, lose out. Most geniuses are losers, not winners. They are losers because of one thing: arrogance. They have inordinate ambition and inordinate competition. This man is competing with our Lord. This person in arrogance assumes that his own quickness with words has made him superior to others, and as is often the case with smart people — those who are divorced from reality to the extent that they are filled with arrogance — this assumption of superiority over others divorces him from reality. This man's potential, which was great, was destroyed by his arrogance.

None of us are free from the danger of this problem. Whatever potential we have in life is destroyed by arrogance. Therefore, to whatever organisation to which we belong it must have a system of authority and a system of discipline in order to curtail arrogance and to recognise potential. Any successful business has found a way to curtail the arrogance of the employees so that a maximum benefit can be gained from their true potential.

Arrogance has blinded this smart believer and it has neutralised his real value. Being smart and having quick perceptive ability the scribe attaches erroneous importance to his pseudo-intellectuality. He is self-centred, divorced from reality, and the result is that he lives in a dream world, and the dream world divorced from reality always produces emotional instability. This man is never prepared for disaster. He also suffers from the occupational hazard of lacking common sense. A genius does not have to lack common sense, but it is inevitable that anyone who is smart will be lacking in common sense because of arrogance. To the extent that arrogance exists in the life of any person who is smart to that extent they are divorced from reality and they have no common sense. A much dumber person with common sense is the person who will stand up in the crisis.

The thing that guarantees this man's destruction is the fact that he has a self-righteous morality; he has arrogant self-righteousness and he cannot cope with reality in normal situations, obviously he will not be able to cope with abnormal situations. He is emotionally unstable and as a result he is not going to get into the boat. This kind of person will never advance inside the divine dynasphere, the plan of God for the believer in this dispensation of the Church.

What did he say to our Lord after that respectful approach? People who are often obsequious in their approach are merely looking for a way to outdo. They are arrogant and it is not genuine or even enforced humility. Beware of the obsequious. He says, "I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest," but that isn't what he said at all. That is simply what the King James version erroneously translates.

There is the future active indicative of the verb akolouqew, and it does mean to follow, "I will follow." The future tense is a predictive future for an event expected to occur in the immediate future. The active voice: this is a false statement produced by the scribe. The scribe produces the action of the verb but the declarative indicative says this is really what he said, even though it is false. The dative singular indirect object from su, the indirect object often indicates, "Look I'm benefiting you by following you." He says, "I will follow you," and this is a dogmatic statement and is exactly what he said, but not all of what he said. The dative case implies that he is doing Jesus a favour, dative of advantage to our Lord. He is making a dogmatic statement for show and a bluff, and he is a faker. How do we know? Because he adds something. He says, "I will follow you anywhere," o(pou, an adverbial particle. But then he adds e)an plus the subjunctive mood in the verb, a third class condition: "I will follow you if — if you go." The present tense of a)perxomai again, a tendential present, used for an action which is alleged but may not take place. The active voice: Christ produces the action allegedly. The subjunctive mood is potential, and he is saying in effect, "Look, for the sake of these knuckle heads I am with you Lord. I know that you are smart, these other people are all stupid so I am going to make a public statement to let you know that I am with you." Typical arrogance.

By the use of the third class condition the scribe not only doubts the departure of Jesus but impugns His motivation. Pseudo-intellectualism is constantly impugning motivation of others. That is a part of the superficiality that develops in a person who would otherwise have great intellect. People with great intellect are often very superficial people. The reason is because of this one factor: they impugn motivation. They assume that no one's motivation would be any different from their own. Being arrogant and self-righteous the scribe who is a scholar in his own right thinks of success in terms of a large crowd, and the reason he says "if you go" is because he knows that the Lord wouldn't leave such a large crowd because he himself wouldn't leave such a large crowd. He can't even imagine Jesus walking out on this tremendous mob of people who are now following Him. He can't even begin to understand that when you have too large a group of any kind there are always people in there who aren't going to go along, and somewhere along the line leadership with courage must smoke them out so that of their own volition they will peel off.

The scribe typifies the smart person whose arrogance destroys his potential. He would follow Jesus as far as the boat and when our Lord finally gets in the boat it is goodbye. He only follows the Lord as long as it does not interfere with his personal concepts, his personal comfort, and his arrogance. Without doctrine the scribe has neither integrity nor moral courage to venture out into the unknown circumstances, and he is not going into a dangerous sea, he is not going into uncertain conditions, and he is not going to leave that crowd. We might call his condition spurious enthusiasm. It is an artificial enthusiasm and it indicates the fact that he has emotional problems even though he is brilliant. Brilliant people are not rational unless they are free from arrogance. This disciple, therefore, was really precipitous instead of perceptive. He was intellectual, he was emotional, he was sincere, he was overtly dedicated and enthusiastic, he was impulsive, he was arrogant, he was a total failure.

We are studying the dynamics of disaster in preparation for a continuation of our study of the book of Revelation. We are doing so from Matthew chapter eight, a very excellent passage for several reasons. First of all because it is a passage dealing with believers who fail to handle disaster on this earth, and the reasons why they do. Generally it is because believers are living inside of the cosmic system and they identify themselves with public opinion which in time of great apostasy and in time of the various categories of degeneracy means a mob.

Identification with the mob means that believers cannot be prepared for disaster. We note our Lord's answer to the scribe, beginning with the connective use of the conjunction kai which is used here in a sequential sense, "Then Jesus said [replied] to him." Now we are ready to develop a syndrome which is characteristic of this man and it will come from our Lord's reply. The subject of the first half of the syndrome is the name of an animal in the Greek, αἰλῶπες, a fox. It is in the plural so He is referring to the foxes categorically. They possess something. The Lord uses a shallow and very superficial answer but which will describe in detail the scribe's syndrome. So He says, "The foxes have dens [lair]." The Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written. In our Lord's day the fox differed from most canine types in that he burrowed a hole for his lair or his den. The fox is regarded here as insignificant and yet he has shelter, even if he has to take the burrow of another animal. And even though the fox is small and insignificant as an animal he does have a home or a shelter. And the point immediately was probably caught by this man because he obviously would take someone else's shelter but beyond that is the concept of his human security which is more important to him than anything else. This scribe, as a teacher of the law, would like to appear pious to those around him and to his contemporaries, But at the same time he is so taken with human security that he will not even pass himself off as a mediocre believer. When there is a conflict between human security and the modus operandi of the plan of God the scribe who operates on his emotion will peel off. His superficial attitude will not give him any strength for any form of testing, any form of disaster. So he has what we will call the fox syndrome. But it is just part of the syndrome; it is really the fox-bird syndrome. The scribe has already selected human security for his happiness.

That is his whole concept of happiness and yet, sooner or later, all of us as believers are separated from any form of human security in order that we might realise the true source of our security. Inside of the divine dynasphere is a fantastic temporal security. It comes from the logistical grace provision. God has provided for us logistically and as long as God has a purpose for our life on this earth we will remain on this earth. Therefore, sooner or later, all of us have to face a certain category of disaster testing and that has to do with the separation of any form of human security in order that we might recognise the true source of our security in time, just as we recognise that by faith in Jesus Christ we have eternal security forever and ever. So the scribe has selected human security for his happiness. He relates this to his emotion which gives him no strength for the crisis. Consequently he is going to fail because of the fox syndrome. If Jesus cannot offer more security than that of a fox then, of course, the human security orientation becomes a distraction to him. He is not told where they are going to stay, what they are going to do, what kind of a crowd they are going to gather. The scribe apparently had a very low opinion of the fox and of the fox's chance for survival. He assumes that the fox has no real security and no chance for survival, and because security is the priority of the scribe he loses the greatest possible system of security one can have in life, a security that guarantees against disaster just as it provides for capacity for prosperity. So we will call it the fox distraction. Emotional fervour and good intention is not equivalent to following Christ and advancing in the plan of God. This believer will have no more momentum in his spiritual life. Though a scholar and a student he has failed to distinguish between the security of the plan of God and human security. Emotion destroys his moral courage and he makes a wrong decision from a position of weakness. He will lose control of his life and he will never have a true personal sense of destiny even as he will have a false sense of destiny as a great teacher of the Mosaic law. Furthermore, the believer's emotions never function properly until doctrine comes first. Even though this is a person of great intellect he will be tripped up by his own emotions.

The analogy between our Lord and the fox will turn away the scribe in great disgust. He has emotional zeal but it is meaningless in facing a small distraction called the security test. Security consciousness and spurious emotions therefore hinder learning doctrine and continuing at gate four. The fox distraction is the negative volition of this intellectual person based on living by his emotions. He has therefore become very superficial in his thinking. The scribe is typical of shallow and superficial believers who never learn enough doctrine to have the right priorities and to understand God's plan. Spurious emotion divorces him from reality in normal times so that abnormal times of historical crisis will destroy him. He will never be in the boat.

Then our Lord moves to the birds, "the birds of the atmosphere have roosting places [or nests]." He makes a very important point of this because at the time of the writing of the Bible the shotgun had not been invented and birds were much more secure than they are now. So it appears that Jesus makes an analogy between the scribe with all of his potential, never to be realised spiritually, and these two animals. For example, the fox is clever; so is the scribe. The fox is a smart animal; the scribe is smart. The fox has a lair, a den, a burrow; the scribe has a very narrow and limited sense of human security. Actually our Lord is comparing the scribe's concept of security and happiness through security as not much more than the lair, the den, or the burrow of the fox. To the fox the lair is his security, but security is never security as long as some more powerful or craftier animal is around to take it away from him. Human security is challenged daily and always proves to be insecurity as well as no happiness. The greatest insecurity results from being security conscious. Security conscious believers rarely advance past a certain point in the Christian life, for the only real security is found not only in faith in Christ but in His marvellous plan which He has provided. We soon learn from gate two of the divine dynasphere that the greatest security in life comes from the application of the doctrinal rationales to the situation. Security, therefore, is related to the divine dynasphere.

So we have the bird analogy. While the fox is analogous to the cleverness of the scribe the bird illustrates his prominence, his wealth, and his success. He is not only a successful teacher of the law but apparently a person of some means. Again, the Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written, and this was written before birds lost a great deal of their security through the shotgun. The bird in the atmosphere was much safer than the fox on the ground and the nest of the bird offered more security than the lair or the den of the fox. The bird, therefore, represents the fact that this man had a form of success and fame, he had great approbation, and he had wealth. This is why he was hanging around our Lord, why he accepted Christ as saviour, to add to his own career. The scribe is clever, like the fox, and he has a form of human security like the bird. A believer who will not depart therefore from the conventional comfort of society, for the unseen benefits of growing in grace, is illustrated by this man. Here is a believer who clings tenaciously to the visible, to the conventional pleasures of life. He refuses to advance beyond a certain point and he will not even have the opportunity of being tested by the crisis.

Jesus concludes, "but the Son of Man has no place where he may recline his head." In other words, the Lord Jesus Christ is not promising any form of human security, not that the believer doesn't have as a part of logistical support all of the blessings that relate to human security from time to time, but as long as human security is an issue the advance in the spiritual life is over. The interesting thing about mentioning the head is that the head is apparently the area which contains the soul, which is immaterial and invisible, and the soul of our Lord contains more doctrine than any other human being. Therefore, resident in His soul are the greatest treasures of life, and He has no place to rest His head. But that is not very meaningful because God the Father is sustaining His humanity inside of the divine dynasphere and He will sustain Him all of the way to the cross where He will be judged for our sins, and then He will sustain Him in resurrection, ascension and session at the right hand of the Father. So the fact that the most important head in history has no place to recline is totally meaningless. The scribe with his superficial scholarship, his pseudo-intellectualism, his arrogance, his spurious emotion, his human security orientation, his lack of faith-rest dynamics, is obviously a failure. This believer will never advance, he will live out his life in discipline and misery and failure, and it won't even take major historical disaster to make him unhappy. Just normal little frustrations will do it all. He obviously has no dynamics for disaster. His only use is to act as a testing point for his friends who are positive to doctrine and who will very shortly leave him behind. The scribe, therefore, illustrates the believer who because of his arrogance and his cleverness is impressed by the superficialities of life. He is very fond of human approbation; he is impressed by the large crowds our Lord has gathered. He is impressed by the miracles, he is interested in the teaching system of our Lord because he is a teacher, and he envies the popularity of our Lord Jesus Christ at this moment. The importance of doctrine eludes him in the pursuit of his false system of security.

And so the fox was clever and the bird was secure, and Jesus takes the fox and the bird and applies the analogy to Himself when He says, "I have no place to rest my head." In reality He wasn't applying anything to Himself, He was applying it to the first failure who by human standards was not a failure at all but by the standards of the plan of God was a total failure. The fox was clever, like the scribe, but his cleverness was shallow and based on impulse and emotion. His security was shallow, based on interest in happiness from that standpoint without realising that he had the wrong priorities. His cleverness produced arrogance while his lust for human security produced complacency. He is self-righteous; he is arrogant; he is very very moral but it is the morality of arrogance, not the morality of virtue. And so in reality he is just another tumbleweed which blows across the page of scripture and then vanishes forever. He will be in heaven but he will not be rewarded. We will be able to note him as having only his resurrection body and nothing to show. And as far as his life on this earth is concerned, as of this moment, he has dedicated himself to a life of great misery and unhappiness.

That brings us to the case of the second distracted disciple in verse 21. "Then another of his students [disciples] said to him, 'Suffer me to go and bury my father'." Going to his father's funeral is not wrong, it is not sinful, it is not immoral, it is not evil, it is a normal and wonderful function. So we are not dealing with sin in this case, we are dealing with another form of superficiality—the protocol superficiality of human society. The pseudo-intellectual disciple called Jesus "Master," but we should notice that in every case history we find a little more advance in the spiritual life. This person recognises Him as Lord, kurioj. Very few believers ever get to the point where they recognise Jesus as Lord. He is Lord, and we are in union with Christ in this dispensation. Therefore the Lordship of Christ is not an issue in salvation, saviourhood is the issue in salvation, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." But to recognise Jesus as Lord requires momentum, gates five, six, seven, and eight, and very few believers get that far. So this man has made some progress in his spiritual life, as noted by the opening vocative singular. He said, "Lord." From the vocative it is obvious that he has learned some doctrine, he has spent some time in our Lord's Bible class. The first disciple recognised Jesus as a professor, some one he can emulate and learn from to enhance his own reputation. This believer, however, is very concerned about people and is therefore very different from the first case. This man obviously loved his father and wanted to attend the funeral, but not so much out of love, as we will note, but from the standpoint of protocol, conformity to the regulations of society. That is more important to him than to continue in the plan of God and perception of doctrine. Society is more important. There are a lot of believers who are this way because there are a lot of legitimate functions in life that are not related in any way to sin or evil. The funeral is merely used as the illustration here. Where the protocol of society is concerned, however, this disciple is inflexible. Traditional observance of a funeral takes precedence over the mandates of Jesus Christ, and that is the issue. Conformity to the customs of society is very important to this man. He is therefore oversensitive to his social life and under-sensitive to his Lord and saviour. If anything in life comes before Bible doctrine, before residence and function in the divine dynasphere, obviously the believer is not prepared for crisis. Recognising Jesus as Lord obviously indicates he is more spiritually advanced than the previous case history who has no spiritual advance at all and no momentum. This man is influenced by what people think rather than by what doctrine says. That is the tragedy of the second case history. Public opinion is more important than occupation with the person of our Lord Jesus Christ. What this man actually said was, "Lord permit me first to go and to bury my father." He didn't say "Suffer me." The aorist active imperative is what is used here and that is what makes so much difference, the aorist active imperative of εἰπάτω. If we were in the indicative mood or in the subjunctive mood it would be certainly a polite request, one that could be dealt with very quickly and the issue could be explained, the man would understand and not attend his father's funeral. But this is an imperative, a gnomic aorist tense for the fact that this case history regarded permission as already granted. So we begin to see a little arrogance cropping up in the fact that having a little doctrine he decides he has all the answers. He assumes that a little is a lot and this is just the beginning of his arrogance. So when he puts it in the imperative mood he is simply assuming that the Lord would recognise this as a legitimate excuse and He would recognise that certainly he should go to the funeral of his father before he did anything else by way of taking in doctrine or advancing in what we would call the divine dynasphere. The imperative mood expresses, therefore, the fact that this man has already decided. The imperative of entreaty has the force of urgency or request, it doesn't have the finality of a command but it implies "I know that you are going to permit me to do it, I know that I have a legitimate excuse."

There are probably millions of believers today with "legitimate" excuses as to why they do not take in doctrine every day. They are not growing spiritually and they are not prepared for the crisis. They easily fall apart simply when public opinion overpowers them, as the media is doing today. He also used an adverb of time, πρῶτον, here: "first." This is the most important. First things first, I must conform to society, I must attend my father's funeral. "Permit me to go and bury my father," which is simply an idiom which says, Permit me to go and attend my father's funeral. This believer has become entangled with the protocol of society rather than the protocol of the divine dynasphere. If he failed to attend his father's funeral his friends and those with whom he had social relationship would ostracise him. This believer thinks more of the approbation of his friends than he does of approbation from the Lord. Therefore he will never advance to gate five, he will never really get in the momentum pattern. There is too much of a conflict. It was convenient up to this point to follow the Lord but now that controversy exists following the Lord or having momentum in the spiritual life becomes inconvenient.

Again, there is nothing wrong with going to his father's funeral but that isn't his problem. The problem goes beyond the attendance at the funeral, it goes to the fact that he will never get away from the concept of human approbation. He will always be distracted by his friends and loved ones and will never pass that simple test that doctrine is more important than any person in life. He will live out his life, therefore, inside of the cosmic system and will eventually die the sin unto death. He had great potential and he started out well as so many believers do in their early enthusiasm with regard to doctrine. His father is dead and the son cannot do anything for his father. He has had enough doctrine to realise that his father is in heaven, a place of perfect happiness. He is now facing a test.

He cannot add to or take away anything from his father's present happiness in the interim life. He will see his father in eternity. So the real issue is what other people will think when he does not attend the funeral. And so: "What will they think if I do not attend the boss's party? What will they think if I do not do this, or that, or the other thing?" If there is a conflict between doctrine and something you want to do or something that will advance you personally by way of a party, by way of a social life of some sort, even a business life of some sort, then doctrine always loses out. When doctrine loses out in normal circumstances you can count on it that you will never ever pass any momentum testing, and when the crisis comes you will fall apart and act like any unbeliever would in your category.

So in life we make our decisions, and this, of course, was a wrong decision. Even the desire to do it was wrong and he has already made up his mind. The imperative mood is the imperative of stubbornness. He had already decided he is going, it is just a matter of a little protocol to come to the Lord and get permission. He will never be able to get past this problem of friends and society. Social life is a more important than spiritual life to him. Our Lord knows the facts; that is the omniscience of His deity. The fact is that this person with all of his sweetness, protocol, and saying the right thing, underneath is a very stubborn person. Once the conflict comes stubborn people demonstrate that they do not have gate three, the virtue of enforced and genuine humility. This man's stubbornness will take him right out of the picture. The only thing the son can do by attending his father's funeral is to satisfy the protocol of his social life, and public opinion and the opinion of society is much more important than obedience to the divine mandate given immediately before: "Follow me." While this disciple has enough doctrine, by the way, to also be very famous as an evangelist he is more concerned about what people think of him. He is typical in many ways of evangelism. Like so many evangelists he appears to be ashamed that his friends will discover that he didn't do something, some legalistic thing, that protocol demands.

The reason we say that he is an evangelist is because Luke also writes on the same subject.

In Luke 9:60 we have what our Lord says by way of an answer: "But you, and only you, go out and you keep proclaiming everywhere the kingdom of God." He was an evangelist. A part of his problem was that he wanted to be well thought of rather than to communicate the truth. Matthew 8:22 — "But Jesus said to him, 'Follow me'." That means move on in the spiritual life, continue your momentum, the present active imperative of a)koluqew which has to do with momentum. He answers an imperative with an imperative. It is a second mandate, so this man is given an opportunity to rethink his position and make an other decision. This is the progressive present for action in a state of persistence — linear aktionsart: Keep moving. The active voice: the second distracted disciple is commanded to produce momentum and to keep going. He is on the right track and should not make a wrong decision at this point. The verb and the command is fulfilled literally by entering the ship, the ship representing the plan of God to us. So it is a matter of keeping moving. Then He makes a rather startling statement when He says, "Let the dead bury their own dead." There are seven kinds of death in the Bible; there are two here: the subject dead, "let the dead," referring to other people in society who are spiritually dead in some cases and in other cases are operationally dead, believers who no longer advance in the plan of God. Our Lord runs two categories together here: those who are unbelievers and those who are believers living in the cosmic system. This man is about to identify himself with these people so that he will be like them. It is inevitable that we are like those with whom we associate. This is our Lord's attempt to protect him from allowing society [his friends] to dominate his thinking. A funeral is a legitimate function, just as a party is a legitimate function, or a football game or a concert, but at some time you have to choose between what is the plan of God and what is a distracting yet legitimate function. That is this man's problem. In the time of great personal problems, natural disasters, or historical crisis, those wonderful parties, the pleasures, the great social life, the entertainment, will not carry a person at all in the crisis. There is no substitute for Bible doctrine. Both legitimate and inspirational pleasures simply do not sustain. They are wonderful for the moment but they have no permanent sustaining value. A funeral is not regarded as a pleasure but it falls into the category of social protocol, and the conflict is obvious. Society says to this man, "You show up at the funeral or we'll cut you off"; the Lord says: "Follow me."

We move to the third distracted disciple, beginning in Luke 9:61, "And another also said, 'Lord, I will follow you; but let me first go and bid them farewell which are at home at my house.'"

We have a transitional particle, the post-positive conjunction de, translated "now," the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, "also," and then the word e(teroj meaning he was a believer but he is still in a different category. If it had been the same category then it would have been the word a)lloj. But this is a third category to demonstrate that certain believers can never succeed in the crisis, "Now another disciple also said." He is a believer, he uses the vocative kurioj, and just like the second disciple he establishes beyond doubt that he has already learned some doctrine.

This believer is also sincere, but sincerity is not a virtue in the plan of God. The priority of the plan of God calls for virtue-first, but the virtue of the plan of God comes at gates five and six: motivational virtue directed toward God; functional virtue directed toward man and circumstances. This believer, therefore, fulfils the principle of 1 Corinthians 12:3, "No one can say that Jesus is Lord except through the Holy Spirit." This man is also emotional but he is emotional without capacity for it. He has a very serious family problem: he loves his wife and children. There is nothing wrong with loving wife and children but he has placed them on a pedestal and therefore he has placed them above Bible doctrine so that he is distracted from it. This means that he has a wonderful situation but no capacity to enjoy it. The most intimate relationships in life and the greatest expressions of love have no prosperity, only unhappiness, unless there is capacity for that love. The capacity for love always comes from virtue, not from rapport, not from attractiveness. With this there is capacity for love and therefore family relationships are meaningful, but without this they are not meaningful. The very fact that the man wants to go back and say goodbye to his family means that he is using his family as an excuse to avoid getting into that boat.

Notice a gradual change as we move from one to the other. The pseudo-intellectual was the first. The second man had his problems in the field of pseudo-security. The third is a man who used his family as an excuse for making wrong decisions, therefore his family fronts for him. Verse 61 says, "And another said to him, 'Lord, I will follow you.' This is the future active indicative of the verb a)kolouqew, taken from our Lord's mandate, for the Lord had said, "Follow me." And this is a predictive future for an event which is expected to occur at a future time. In other words, this man wants to procrastinate for alleged family obligations. He alleges to have family obligations and he must take care of them first. People lose track of the principle that our first obligation as believers is to the Lord so that all other obligations can be fulfilled with virtue, honour, integrity, and a capacity. This is ignored. The active voice: this is the third distracted disciple who intends to produce the action of the verb. He is sincere about it. At a future time he will follow the Lord but at the present he cannot. And this is the potential indicative of obligation, he feels that his obligation to his family is much greater than his obligation to the plan of God and to the Lord. While this is an expression of good intention and motivation it also indicates the clarity of issue in the mind of the disciple. His priorities are wrong — family first and foremost, family before doctrine. So this third category of believer understands the issue and what decision he could make but he wants to procrastinate. He hasn't the virtue, the integrity, to follow through.

The principle: Good intentions are no guarantee of fulfilling God's plan for your life. The expression of good intentions does not mean the execution of the Christian way of life. The expression of good intentions is no substitute for life inside the divine dynasphere. Many people are losers even though they understand the issue. They express good intentions but these good intentions are as far as they go. Good intentions do not mean good decisions.

"I will follow you," he says, "but ..." This is the adversative use of the conjunction de, "but." And then he uses the adverb of priority, prwton, and by using that adverb he expresses his erroneous priority. He first of all wants to have permission to express his goodbyes to his family. In other words, he wants out.

While there are many similarities between the second and third distractions there are also great differences. This believer is not distracted by the protocol of society, as was the second, but he is distracted by the fact that he doesn't really want to go, yet he knows he should. Therefore he must rationalise in his soul some excuse so that he will not have a guilt complex for failure to live up to the plan of God. Believers who have no capacity through Bible doctrine, no capacity for life, inevitably always rationalise their modus operandi and justify their failure. This man will spend his life justifying wrong decisions, justifying his failures. He is a weak sister, he is a loser. He demonstrates, then, that even to state an honourable and a virtuous function does not mean that he is honourable and virtuous, he merely hides behind the facade of his own cowardice. While this appears to be a normal request made to our Lord it is made at an abnormal time, the approach of natural disaster, the momentum testing which will soon follow. This believer will never be tested for momentum, he will spend all of his time suffering because of his bad decisions from a position of weakness, his loss of control of his own life and, inevitably his false personal sense of destiny. The emphasis here, then, is placed on following the Lord into an unknown situation where natural and historical disaster will be a source of testing. This distracted disciple has placed his family as his number one priority. This is his excuse. Many believers fail disaster testing today because they have wrong priorities.

Failure, also, to properly interpret contemporary history results in not being prepared for disaster, and like the other disciples he has no ability to properly interpret contemporary history. He interprets it in terms of his own personal lust and selfishness rather than in the light of doctrinal categories. Obviously the Lord has an answer for him: "Now Jesus replied face to face with him, 'No one, after having put his hand to the plough ...' " Here is a believer who started out the right way with great enthusiasm, with great positive volition, but it was very temporary. He put his hand to the plough. After putting his hand to the plough, fulfilling the priorities of the plan of God, but he got into the same problem that so many do. He finally entered gate one of cosmic one, the function of motivational evil. He looked back. Arrogance guarantees the perpetuation of negative volition in the life. To break the habit of negative volition toward doctrine, to get back to doctrine, not as a convenience of come once in a while to Bible class but as a regular thing for the momentum of the spiritual life, is a very difficult thing because arrogant people are inflexible and they cannot break the pattern of negative volition.

The word "fit" in verse 62 is an incorrect translation. This man is a believer and "fit" is not what it says. It actually says "glances back." We have the verb blepw which means to glance, not to look. The word for "look" is o(raw. He glances back after putting his hand to the plough, and it is a pictorial present for the events on the process of occurrence. The active voice: it is a believer who has momentum, who has started out well. It is a circumstantial participle expressing the attendant circumstances of the loser.

We should notice that "things behind" include many things which are distractions. Many of them are legitimate things that should occur. Everyone has certain responsibilities to family; everyone has certain responsibilities in life. But these responsibilities must never take priority over God's plan and Bible doctrine. Ordinarily, the objects of love synchronise and there is no conflict with the plan of God. Occasionally there will be a testing but where capacity exists, where virtue exists, where integrity exists for momentum in the spiritual life this should not be a problem. The Lord Jesus Christ must, of course, receive number one priority through residence, function, and momentum inside the divine dynasphere. This disciple in his arrogance will fail to understand the analogy answer and he will become disenchanted and disillusioned and will peel off in negative volition. He will be a casualty before the crisis. The principle: A believer who is a casualty before the crisis never survives historical disaster.

The words "is fit," "Is" is simply the present active indicative of e)imi. It is a retroactive progressive present and denotes what is begun in the past, distraction and negative volition, and continues into the present. The third distracted disciple produces the action. It is a declarative indicative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. The word "fit" is a predicate nominative singular from the compound noun e)uqetoj. E)uqetoj is made up of an adverb e)u, meaning well or rightly, and the verb tiqemi which means to place, and actually it means well-arranged, adapted, useful. It comes to mean in modern English, well-adjusted.

Note, then, the corrected translation: “No one, after putting his hand on the plough and glancing backward, is well-adjusted to the kingdom of God.”

“Kingdom of God” is used under the concept of plan of God during the transitional period our Lord was on earth and anticipates the Church Age.

Ploughing is analogous to momentum in the plan of God, the momentum of perception and application of doctrine at gate four. This man went farther than the others but he, too, is a loser. There must be the plugging, the persistence. Persistence is the name of the game.

In Matthew 8:23 we meet those who are qualified. “Nevertheless, when he [our Lord Jesus Christ] boarded the ship, his disciples followed him.” These are the ones who are positive to the plan of God. They were pluggers, they were persistent in the perception of doctrine. They stayed with the ship. They continued their momentum and they finally arrived at occupation with Christ. They entered the ship, gate seven: momentum testing, historical crisis coming up. They are unremitting in their perseverance where doctrine is concerned and they do not allow wrong priorities to distract them as far as God’s plan is concerned. These disciples follow our Lord into the boat, not knowing where He is going, not knowing what is on the other side for them. But they recognise a principle and they use it: they know that the battle is the Lord’s, they know that the logistical grace provision is theirs, and therefore there is no hesitation. It is necessary for them to be tested on the sea before they will ever be ready for the great historical crisis which will come at the end of our Lord’s ministry.

Before any believer can face the storms of life he must get into the ship, he must get into the plan of God and stay with it. No storm or testing ever becomes a blessing in your life until you live and have momentum inside of the divine dynasphere. Because the ship is on the water and isolated from the normal functions of life it is a great time for disaster testing. When the believer enters the classroom of the local church he is also isolated from normal functions in life. The classroom of the local church eliminates certain distractions so that concentration on doctrine will result in perception of doctrine, and once the believer gains momentum from consistent perception of doctrine then, gate seven, comes the testing, then comes the storm. But no storm is a test for blessing for the believer until the believer makes his consistent and daily decisions to put his hand to the plough for living in the ship.

That brings us now in verse 24 to the crisis. “And behold, there arose a great tempest in the sea, inasmuch that the ship was covered with waves; but he [our Lord Jesus Christ] was asleep.”

We have a demonstrative particle i)dou here and it could be translated, “And so, look what happened.” When it says in the King James version the word is not tempest at all. In fact it is not the Greek word for storm, it is the Greek word for shaking, seismoj. It means a shaking on the water, therefore a storm. The word megaj means it was a great storm. The aorist middle indicative of ginomai means that it occurred suddenly, there was no build-up for it. The constative aorist means it was a sudden thing, there was no time to prepare — no time to look up a few verses, no time to offer a prayer.

One thing that is very important in this passage and one thing that must be learned: prayer is a great weapon in Christian service but it is not designed to help you in a crisis. This doesn't mean that prayer doesn't have a place but it does mean that when a crisis comes suddenly you do not have time for prayer, the only thing you have time for is whatever doctrine you have learned and can apply. The three categories of believers which we have studied were incapable of even facing the test but the believers who did have the momentum and were aboard ship and who could face the test, prayer was not the answer to this type of crisis. Application of doctrine from their own souls was the only thing they could use. And the suddenness of the storm turned them into cowards even though they would be winners later on they flunked the test. They flunked the test because they could not think under pressure. The storm was the crisis, the disaster. The disaster, of course, is testing but testing is always designed for blessing and the blessing comes from the application of doctrine, not prayer — the ability to take doctrine resident in your own soul and apply it without anyone counselling you. Two things cannot be used: counselling and prayer. These disciples flunked the test because even though they had the doctrine and knew the right doctrines they couldn't apply them. They couldn't apply them because they turned coward. A coward is a person who cannot think under pressure.

The storm, of course, is designed to teach the futility of human resources. There is no preparation, no ability, no genius, no system of human philosophy that can handle the historical disaster illustrated by the storm. Only the disciples, by the way, who were positive to the plan of God faced the storm; only believers living inside of the divine dynasphere are so tested by storms which prepare them and give them dynamics for great historical disaster. In the storm positive believers learn who and what Christ is, and therefore the storms of life teach the higher form of security from God. The sea is very much like the circumstances of life — variable. One moment the sea is perfectly calm and very beautiful, representing the pleasant circumstances of our life; the next moment the sea becomes stormy and awesome in the fury of its power, representing disaster and crisis in the circumstances of life. The ship represents the plan of God, the divine dynasphere with its mandates and its priorities; and with maximum doctrine resident in the soul the believer can have his greatest blessings in the storm. The fact that the disciples failed merely emphasises the point. They could have succeeded, they could have had the wonderful privilege of riding out the storm and enjoying every minutes of it.

The adverse circumstances of life are like the stormy sea, they provide uncertainty, they indicate lack of human control, they indicate that the resources of life apart from what God has provided are absolutely useless. The ship is the only place of safety in the storm just as the divine dynasphere is the only place of security, safety and blessing in this life. We can't afford to be out of the divine dynasphere for five minutes. Bible doctrine resident in the soul is the basis of capacity for happiness and blessing and the ability to handle the adversities of life. Bible doctrine resident in the soul is the key to our strength and our stability. Many believers never get into the ship because they are distracted by the cosmic system, but those who do face the storm not as a discipline but as a blessing. All adversity which comes to you when you are living in the divine dynasphere is testing and the only place of security in the storm is the ship no matter how unstable it appears to be in the storm. The ship is the divine dynasphere with its mandates, its priorities, its momentum from perception of doctrine. The divine dynasphere, therefore, is the believer's wall of fire. Suffering for blessing is one of the categories that will be noted in this storm. This means that suffering is intimately linked to blessing for believers who put their hand to the plough, who consistently live inside the divine dynasphere. You cannot have blessing from suffering and from adversity and from disaster unless you have Bible doctrine resident in your soul, and that comes from residing in the divine dynasphere.

God does not deliver the believer by cancelling the crisis, He delivers by intensifying the crisis and forcing us to go away from human resources to the Bible doctrine we have stored in our souls from persistent perception of doctrine in Bible class. The blessing, therefore, comes not from avoiding the storm but from riding out the storm; not from the cancellation of the storm but going through it. The mature believer is delivered in the storm, never from the storm. The real blessing is in the storm so that storm reality must be intensified so that the believer comes to the end of any human resources he may choose to insert into the problem. The inserting of human resources into the crisis is like salvation by works or spirituality by works, and one must come to the end of his resources.

“So that the ship was covered [buried] in the waves.” The Greek word is the present passive infinitive of kaluptw which means to be buried. When the disciples embarked with our Lord the sea was calm, and while the sea was calm our Lord went to sleep. With crisis and disaster there is always a calm before the storm and during the calm before the storm the only preparation which can exist is that which is in the soul, life in the divine dynasphere resulting in the perception of Bible doctrine. Therefore, as always, the doctrine must be in the soul. It must be transferred there by the daily function of GAP.

The storms always come suddenly, without warning, and this illustrates the fact that we do not need warning for disaster when we consistently put our hand to the plough or when we are living in the ship of the divine dynasphere. What the disciples needed to ride out the gale was the filling of the Spirit, the second stage of the faith-rest drill, the plan of God rationale, the essence of God rationale, the logistical grace rationale. They needed to function at gate four, the application of doctrine; gate five, occupation with the person of Christ. There are many preparations for disaster so that when it comes suddenly it does not destroy the individual. The only real help in time of the storm, then, is not prayer and not counselling but the resources of doctrine which you possess in your own soul. God uses prepared people; prepared people are inculcated with Bible doctrine. No human preparation can avoid catastrophe in time of disaster, only your faithfulness at the plough which is the daily momentum that you have inside the divine dynasphere.

“but he was asleep,” the imperfect active indicative of the verb kageudw, “he kept right on sleeping. He continued sleeping in the storm. The imperfect tense is linear aktionsart in past time which means that the fury of the storm, the roll of the ship, did not awaken our Lord. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb by sleeping very peacefully. It must be remembered, of course, that only His humanity was sleeping. Deity cannot sleep, does not sleep; it is only the humanity of Christ which is sleeping. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the fact that our Lord was not in any way disturbed by the storm. It wasn't necessary for Him to get up and counsel them. They had in their own souls everything they needed for the crisis and therefore they did not have to awaken our Lord. And while the storm raged on the Sea of Galilee our Lord continued to sleep. Why didn't the humanity of Christ awaken and give them assurance? This is not the way to meet disaster. Disaster is met by thinking — right thinking, doctrinal thinking, doctrinal rationales, application of doctrine to experience. They had the doctrine, they didn't need any personal attention or encouragement from others to pass the test.

While the storm raged on the Sea of Galilee our Lord Jesus Christ continued to sleep. Now, again, we go back to the doctrine that these people should have applied but did not at this time. Jesus Christ is eternal God and He is also true humanity in one person forever. When it says our Lord was asleep, the imperfect of kekeudw, it means His humanity was sleeping. The deity of Christ was not sleeping and was thoroughly cognisant of the storm. The Lord did not need to awaken to counsel the disciples, they had enough doctrine to handle this situation, the Lord does not test them beyond what they are able to stand. They knew the doctrine of the hypostatic union and therefore they should have applied it under the essence of God rationale. Believers in disaster do not need personal attention, they need application of doctrine. Our Lord slept so that the disciples could learn this lesson.

So no matter how strong the wind or how high the waves with Christ in the ship, sound asleep, they are perfectly safe. By sleeping in the storm our Lord teaches these disciples the importance of the inner resources of doctrine. He is doing them a favour by remaining asleep. They must faith-rest the disaster, they must rely on doctrine rather than personal encouragement from someone else. A smooth trip means no utilisation of the Bible doctrine that they have learned, no use of the plan of God rationale, the essence of God rationale, the supergrace rationale, the imputation rationale. So our Lord kept right on sleeping. With the Lord on board that ship could not sink. No storm of life is greater than the power of our Lord Jesus Christ. 1 John 4:4, "Greater is he that is in you than he that is in the world."

The disciples had their eyes on the storm instead of having their eyes on the Lord. Testing through catastrophe and disaster always brings out what we really are. All we have to do to be prepared for any disaster in the world is to take in doctrine on a regular basis. It all forms into a system and the system develops for us whatever problems that we are going to face. No one ever becomes strong until he has passed this category of pressure testing. They will learn from this pressure test in this storm that doctrine can be applied and must be applied. The disciples who were too distracted to embark on the ship will never learn the lesson and they are losers throughout life no matter what life brings their way. Their suffering is always discipline but never for blessing. Believers living in the cosmic system never suffer for blessing.

Verse 25, panic under pressure. We have a connective kai introducing a result from what precedes. We translate it "Consequently." We have the aorist active participle of proserxomai, "and they approached." The aorist tense is a constative aorist gathering up into one entirety all of these disciples doing their best, doing whatever they could, working their way to where our Lord was sleeping. Then we have the aorist active indicative of the verb e)geirw which means they woke Him up. Again, it is a constative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety, they kept shouting at Him until they woke Him up. "Consequently, having approached they awoke him."

Human panic assumes that the Lord is sleeping and therefore not paying any attention to them, whereas in eternity past Christ had already paid attention to them. Human panic is the source of pseudo-prayer, of fear, worry, anxiety, guilt-complex, all of which are sins and, furthermore, sins of motivating evil. The disciples were not thinking. Courage is the ability to think under pressure and at this moment we have one hundred per cent cowardice. It never occurred to the disciples to ride out the storm and see what the Lord had for them. Remember that only the humanity of Christ was sleeping. They were perfectly safe for the Lord knew in eternity past their circumstances at this moment and He has made perfect provision for them. They were on one trip where it would be impossible for that ship to sink and therefore they missed all the fun. It was totally unnecessary for them to wake up our Lord for underneath every one of them were the everlasting arms of Deuteronomy 31:27. Jesus Christ is eternal God. The eternal God is a refuge — He was their refuge. They were perfectly safe. This was, therefore, their great opportunity for the faith-rest drill. They could have claimed a few promises and started thinking in terms of that doctrine they knew. The only doctrine they had to deal with was the doctrine of Christology because the great issue with all of them at this point was that they all failed at the same point: gate five, occupation with the person of Christ. They failed in the field of Christology; they failed to apply the essence of God rationale to the situation.

We have the present active participle of legw. Legw is translated in many ways. It means to communicate and it doesn't always mean to speak or to say. Here it means to shout or to scream, present linear aktionsart, they were screaming. They were in panic palace, therefore they were screaming, not yelling. Yelling would have meant that they were thinking. The active voice: frightened disciples produce the action of the verb. These men aren't always going to be cowards, they are just cowards at this moment so they will learn never to be cowards again. It is possible to be a coward once and then become a very courageous person, and that is what is going to happen to these men. They are going to learn something. The complementary participle completes the idea of the action expressed in the main verb, and we translate it, "and they woke him up screaming." And the vocative they screamed: Kurioj, Kurioj, "Lord, "Lord." The interesting thing is that the vocative they used in the key to everything. That should have started them thinking. Kurioj is our Lord's title for deity, they addressed Him as God. As God, Jesus Christ had delivered them in eternity past and they should be enjoying the storm. This vocative is a reminder that the believer must concentrate, must think in time of pressure. But you have to have something with which to think, you have to have the content of doctrine; and it has to be learned in calm times, in times of tranquillity, that is why we have Bible class, a relatively tranquil time to learn doctrine. Then we have an aorist active imperative of sozw which means here "deliver," "Deliver us." In other words, they were saying, "Help, help." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. One man would say it, another person would say it. This is an imperative of entreaty, it doesn't convey the finality of a command but it has the force of urgency. Irrationality is manifest in the entreaty for deliverance when they are already delivered from the storm from eternity past. Jesus Christ asleep or awake aboard ship is the stabiliser of that ship and no storm or disaster can destroy the ship while our Lord is sleeping. With Christ sleeping during the storm the disciples should have been alerted to the meaning of it all and to therefore have a marvellous ride. Security plus capacity for life means that the disciples in the ship should have been enjoying the storm. Actually the Lord designed it for their blessing and it was only their own failure, the use of their own volition, that caused it to be a time of great panic and misery.

Then the disciples used the present passive indicative of apollumi. Why are they in the ship? The Lord commanded them, the aorist imperative. It was an order. Is God going to command them to get aboard a ship so that they could go out in the middle of the sea and sink? No, they are in the Lord's will in the middle of that storm and they should have known they were in the Lord's will when they boarded ship. They were in the Lord's will, therefore they were perfectly safe. Yet, here they are saying, "We are about to perish [we are being wrecked]." The culminative aorist views the punishment that the ship was taking from the storm in its entirety but emphasises the potential of shipwreck. The passive voice: it was actually the disciples, not the ship, who were being wrecked. This is the potential indicative, the ship was not breaking up but their emotions were breaking them up. Their emotions were out of hand in cowardice and they were cracking up, the ship was not.

Verse 26, the reprimand for the disciples. The storm is still raging and the Lord shouted at them. "Consequently he shouted at them." The nominative neuter singular from the interrogative pronoun tij, "Why, are you cowards?" They were cowards because they couldn't think. We are all potential cowards unless we can think in terms of doctrine under pressure. Then we have a predicate nominative, the word for coward is the Greek word deiloj.

Note that the Lord reprimands the disciples in the ship before He rebukes the sea. By doing this the Lord establishes the priorities of the situation. Obviously the Lord thinks. First the disciples are censured, then the Lord will expunge the storm. The disciples are out of hand matching the fury of the storm. There is no difference between the fury of the storm and the disciples. The storm is shouting and howling and screaming, and so are they; and it will take a long time to bring the disciples under control because their recovery demands the daily positive volition toward doctrine over a given period of time. But the storm will be instantly controlled because the material universe responds instantly to our Lord's authority and command. The Lord's dealing with the storm is a simple thing but with the disciples it will take more than a command. The disciples must learn and relearn doctrine so that the application will be instantaneous, reflex action, next time. Cowardice and fear ruined them on this occasion; next time they will know better and consequently the inculcation of doctrine will do its work.

Fear always wipes out capacity for life, capacity for love, capacity for happiness, but God has provided doctrine resident in the soul so that while the storm rages your soul can be calm and tranquil. Circumstances do not change one's attitude where doctrine exists in the soul. The disciples had the doctrine but they hadn't learned to apply it; they are going to learn a great lesson. This fear of the storm was not lack of doctrine but failure to apply doctrine. Some people have doctrine but they have not learned to apply it.

Our Lord calls the disciples one word in the Greek, o)ligopistoi. O)ligoj simply means little, and pistoj means faith. It can be translated, therefore, “you short-time trusters.” They are short-time trusters. At the point of boarding the ship they obeyed the mandate of our Lord. They boarded under very calm circumstances. They left behind the three categories of believers who are losers from the beginning. But when they stepped aboard that ship they were winners, they were moving in the right direction. They were also aware of the fact that they were winners and therefore their victory made them vulnerable to defeat. The defeat is that they were short-time trusters. Only during the calm were they trusting the Lord. They were great believers as long as everything was going all right but once things were going wrong they became short-time trusters.

As long as things are pleasant, relatively quiet, believers can apply doctrine under calm circumstances, but as soon as the tranquillity is replaced by the storm, as soon as the crisis arises and the disaster occurs, they simply cannot apply the doctrine that they have learned. They are like the soldier who shoots well on the range but under the pressure of combat forgets all of the lessons he has learned. So the vocative answers the question: “Why are you cowards, you short-time trusters?” They are cowards because they are short-time trusters. In other words, they are fair weather believers. As long as there is no challenge they are content to enjoy the messages and miracles of our Lord Jesus Christ, but when the crisis approaches and disasters come they go into shock and their doctrinal thinking is frozen in the deep-freeze of their fear. Doctrine is there but they will never use it in disaster until they learn that Christ is not only their Lord but Christ is the Lord of the storm — just as we have to learn that Christ is the Lord of the disaster.

Jesus Christ controls history, He has provided for us in logistical grace everything necessary for the crisis and for the disaster. We will never be taken from this life until He is ready to take us and until His plan is for our departure. So the logistical grace rationale should have occurred to them. But God does not intend for the believer to run to Him or anyone else in time of disaster since He has provided the basis for utilising inner resources. The believer must throw away his crutches. In other words, as the apostle Paul said in 2 Corinthians 5:7, “we walk by faith and not by sight.” This means that every time we seek help or counsel from another we are weakened. They sought advice from the Lord but the Lord had already given them advice in many, many messages. He had said it all before.

Doctrine is taught so that doctrine can be applied. The disciples have already learned the necessary doctrine, therefore our Lord is sleeping. So He reprimands them, but He doesn't stop there. He then turns and reprimands the storm. “At that time,” the correlative adverb tote, an adverb of time. Just as soon as He had reprimanded them He immediately turns to deal with the storm. The storm has no soul, it is just wind, water, temperature. It then says he got up and reprimanded, the aorist active indicative of e)pitimaw, “rebuked,” and it says that it became perfectly calm. Note that He reprimanded the disciples from a sitting position. They awakened Him and He called them cowards. He was either sitting or reclining but when he goes to reprimand the sea He is in standing posture. Why? The disciples were in the classroom where the posture of the teacher is not the issue, but the storm was on parade where the posture of the commanding officer must be compatible with the situation. He is the commanding officer of the storm. So there is protocol for every situation and our Lord observed not only the priorities of reprimand but the posture for such a category. There is a posture for communicating to the mentality of mankind and there is a posture for communicating to the fury of the material universe.

The verb implies voice usage. The voice of our Lord could be heard above the sound of the wind and the waves. Where the Word of God penetrated there was instant obedience and instant calm no matter how great the turmoil. Protocol must always be the servant of sound doctrine but never the master of doctrine. The storm with all of its fury came to instant calm. It heard the voice of our Lord once and obeyed; the disciples had heard the voice of our Lord many times and had failed. When protocol becomes the master it is a distraction to doctrine, a deterrent to spiritual growth. What appeared to be a miracle was merely the Lord controlling His own creation. Remember that His creation responded to Him immediately whereas believers must on a daily basis use their volition to respond.

There is, of course, a certain amount of superficiality that always accompanies any failure. That is given to us in verse 27. Believe it or not, here is an explanation as to why these positive disciples failed. They were impressed with the wrong things. They were impressed with the power of our Lord and the miracles He performed instead of the doctrine which He had been teaching them daily. No believer can be impressed with the Lord until he is impressed with what the Lord thinks — doctrine, the mind of Christ. You never really get to know another person until you get to know exactly what he thinks, and that often takes a little time and some pressure. It is easy for the Lord to perform a miracle, it only means that the Lord is using His volition, His sovereignty. However, it is difficult to reach believers with Bible doctrine because they not only have free will but they are preoccupied with the things of this life, the things that they are doing are more important. The excuses are always legitimate but the priorities are always wrong. Doctrine must become a reality in the soul before the unique person of Christ can become real to the individual in the storm. The disciples were impressed with the reality of the storm, they were frightened, but not with the reality of Jesus sleeping in the storm, the key to utilising the second stage of the faith-rest drill.

The men were “amazed.” They are called men now instead of disciples. Up until now they had been called μαθηται, students, which is all the word disciple means; now they are simply called ανθρωποι, men, ordinary human beings. Every word in the Bible is important and when the Word of God changes and calls them just “men” they have lost track. The tragedy of so many in our generation is that believers are just people, just ordinary people acting like anyone else. The reason is because of no positive volition. Μαθηται: disciple, student, positive volition; ανθρωποι: negative volition, they had just gone back and joined the mob, they are no better or no worse, no different, but essentially, as far as God is concerned, they are written off as losers. They haven't lost their salvation, they have just lost the whole significance as to why they are left behind in this life.

Instead of using of using doctrine in the crisis they acted like ordinary, cowardly, stupid men. Therefore, the Bible calls them men in contrast to students or disciples which they were called in verse 23 when they embarked on the ship. They were still learning then; now they are not learning at all. No one is ever the same after passing through a test or disaster such as this. The disciples are now men, the worse for having gone through the storm. Doctrine either makes the believer greater in the storm or worse, he is either a winner or a loser. Only the inculcation of doctrine and its proper application really counts.

To prove that these are really men we have the aorist active indicative of qaumazw. It wasn't the disciples who were qaumazw, "amazed," it was "men," the same people called men. As men they were astounded by the miracle; as disciples they would have been astounded by the doctrine. So they are called men. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. At this point they are losers and therefore they are impressed by the miracle, not by the Word of God. The active voice: the believers in the ship, formally called disciples or students, are now simply called men. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of their superficiality. Once you fail to pass the test in a disaster you immediately become a superficial person. As disciples and being positive toward Bible doctrine they were winners, or potential winners, but as men and being negative toward doctrine they are now just shallow, superficial people.

Our life on earth is what we think, and if we become impressed with the miracles of life, as it were, if we become impressed with the emotional aspect of life rather than the rational aspect of doctrine then we are just superficial losers. With emotion now dominating their souls these men now demonstrate the superficialities that can overtake any one of us at any time, and that is to be impressed by what we see in life rather than what we think.

In verses 5-8 we have the vision of the heavenly temple or the barracks of the execution squad.

Verse 5, the continuation of the vision. We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated "Then," followed by the prepositional phrase meta plus the accusative neuter plural of o(utoj, "After these things," a correct and precise idiom to indicate the relationship between previous history and the present moment being described. "After these things," therefore, includes the vision or great sign of the seven last plagues, verse 1; the vision of the victorious martyrs — verse 2; the victory hymn of the Tribulational martyrs, verses 3-4. The principle is a very simple one. Prophetic subjects must be developed in the sequence of divine thinking.

Here God's policy is grace before judgment, always. There is always a grace period prior to any judgment of history and that grace period gives opportunity to reverse bad decisions from a position of weakness under the principle of repentance or changing one's mind. There are two categories of repentance which exist to reverse the repercussions of divine judgment. The first is the decision to believe in Christ, the decision of salvation. This is called the repentance of the unbeliever, repentance simply means a change of mind. The second is the decision of rebound, the repentance of the believer resulting in deliverance from the cosmic system.

"Then after these things," after the vision of the Tribulational martyrs in heaven and their victory hymn, "I looked," the aorist active indicative of o(raw. Looking here has to do with concentrating. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. This can be classified as the vision of the source of the seven last plagues or the seven bowl judgements. The active voice: the apostle John as the human author of the book of Revelation under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of eschatological doctrine and the fact that much of historical disaster comes from the court in heaven and it protects mankind, perpetuates the human race.

Next we have the connective conjunction kai, "and," which introduces the result from what precedes. We now approach the problem of the seven last "grenades" or plagues. They are related to the Tribulational martyrs and their imprecatory prayers. Now we see the barracks of the execution squad. The word "behold" in the King James version is not found in the original language. The next word is the nominative singular subject from naoj, "temple," and with this we also have a temporary form of worship, the genitive of apposition skhnh, "tabernacle." So they are both together: the permanent temple and the tabernacle. The tabernacle is the memorial in heaven to the person and the work of the Lord Jesus Christ in His strategic victory of the angelic conflict, the first advent.

The beast dictator has too much power in order to get any laughs out of this, therefore he has no sense of humour because his power has added to his arrogance. Arrogance has no sense of humour. When facing the power of Satan and his beast dictator the humour must be subtle. Therefore the paronomasia of Revelation 13:6 linked to John 1:14, and now brought out again. But something is added to it. Notice the two words again: naoj then skhnh, the two are linked together. What is so funny about this is that Satan can't stand the fact that our Lord tabernacled among us and now coming out of the temple is going to be a tabernacle that will destroy Satan's power on earth. So the temple is the barracks from which the execution squad will advance. With all of his great power the beast dictator who is the political ruler of the revived Roman empire and the leader of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation cannot perceive the humour of this paronomasia. Reason: he cannot laugh at himself, he takes himself very seriously. When confronted with humour as a weapon he can only riposte with slander.

When believers are beyond the power of evil, evil counterattacks with a distance-type shooting called slander. Doctrine resident in the soul is more powerful than the power of evil as demonstrated by this parry of humour. The skhnh was when our Lord was on earth, the tabernacle; now we have a barracks in heaven and the barracks in heaven is going to send an execution squad to the earth.

Tribulational martyrs have demonstrated that they were beyond the evil of the dictator in two ways. First of all, doctrine was more important than their life. Hence, they became martyrs because their priorities were straight. Secondly, the interim life for the Tribulational martyrs in heaven is totally beyond the influence of Satan who is confined to earth during the last half of the Tribulation. The humour of this is the fact that they are in heaven. Satan sent them to heaven through torture and execution; now that they are in heaven they are beyond his power. Satan only had power over these believers while they were on earth. He killed them and immediately they are out of his power. Furthermore, they go up and they knock on the door of the barracks and they say, "Send out the execution squad". And that is exactly what will happen. The imprecatory prayers means sending out the execution squad.

So we have so far: "Then after these things I concentrated, and the temple, the tabernacle." The arrogant preoccupation with self in cosmic one cannot see the humour between skhnh and skhnow, the two words that are used in the pun.

Principle

1. Like all people with more power than they can handle the beast dictator has no sense of humour, for in arrogance he takes himself too seriously.
2. When arrogance is faced with humour it must retort with slander. Why? Slander is the weapon of the weak to attack the strong. The sins of the tongue are always the weapons of the weak to attack those who are strong, those who are beyond their power. The one who slanders is weak and the object of the slander is strong, so it is the weak attacking the strong.
3. With maximum doctrine resident in the soul the Tribulational believer is beyond the power of the all-powerful beast dictator.
4. In life doctrine in the soul puts the believer beyond the power of the dictator, while in death the interim life in heaven puts the believer beyond the power of Satan. So there is a double protection of all believers: a wall of fire on earth; an interim life in heaven.
5. The beast dictator cannot learn the lesson of humour. With all of his vast power over life and death he cannot control the believer with maximum doctrine resident in the soul.
6. Bible doctrine resident in the soul of the believer is more powerful than all categories of human power. In other words, no one can destroy your power of thinking, only you can do it by bad decisions.
7. Therefore the Tribulational martyr is beyond the dictator's control in life because of the greater power of Bible doctrine resident in his soul. Furthermore, the Tribulational martyr is beyond the dictator's control in death because of his residence in heaven in a state of perfect happiness. In heaven the Tribulational martyr is also beyond the power and control of Satan who has been cast out of heaven in the middle of the Tribulation. Therefore, the humour of it all: they have gone in death where Satan cannot reach them — a bad joke for Satan but a great source of humour to the believers. Even those believers who are losers are beyond the power of Satan in heaven. In death the loser believer is absent from the body and face to face with the Lord. The loser has no more sorrows, no more tears, no more pain, no more death. The loser cannot lose his salvation and the interim life is a blessing to him.

Satan, who has delegated the great power to the beast dictator, has been driven out of heaven permanently in the middle of the Tribulation and therefore he cannot follow, accuse or follow up on martyrs.

Next we have a subjective genitive from the noun marturion, "testimony." So we have another word added to the joke now. That temple is a testimony; that tabernacle is a testimony. Humour can be a testimony when humour is related to doctrine, "and the temple, the tabernacle, which serves as a testimony" is the way you translate the subjective genitive. The subjective genitive occurs when the noun in the genitive case, marturion here, produces the action being related as the subject to the verbal idea and the noun modified. So we translate not "of" testimony as in the King James version, but it is the temple, the tabernacle, which serves "as" a testimony, subjective genitive case. And where is this testimony? "In heaven," en plus the locative of ouranoj.

That temple is the testimony in heaven to the grace of God, for in that temple is the tremendous execution squad. That is where the entire system of angelic hierarchy, the great knighthood, the great aristocracy of elect angels are barracked. The tabernacle in heaven is an eternal testimony to the first advent of Christ. It includes, therefore, the concept of both Christology and soteriology. The tabernacle in heaven is an eternal memorial to the virgin birth, the hypostatic union, the function of the humanity of Christ in the prototype divine dynasphere, the doctrine of impeccability and His qualification therefore to bear the sins of the world. It also includes every concept of propitiation and redemption, the unlimited atonement and, of course, the concept of reconciliation. The tabernacle links Jesus Christ as the God of Israel with His omega glory which is found in Deuteronomy 6. The tabernacle reminds Israel that the cross must come before the crown, therefore two advents are necessary to fulfil the unconditional covenants to Israel. The first advent provides eternal salvation and defines Jewish recipients of unconditional covenants at the second advent as those who believe in Christ only. The second advent provides the historical circumstances for the fulfilment of the unconditional covenants whereas the first advent provided the basis for giving to certain Jews those unconditional covenants — they must have the righteousness of God, and those covenants will be fulfilled from the justice of God to the indwelling righteousness of God at the second advent. The tabernacle has the testimony of linking the Jewish Messiah with the Lord Jesus Christ whose first advent fulfilled all of the prophecies regarding His saving work on the cross. The tabernacle is the eternal testimony, therefore, to our Lord's strategic victory in the historical phase of the angelic conflict. The tabernacle is the eternal testimony to the fact that no human being could ever be in heaven apart from the saving work of Christ. The tabernacle is a part of that great castle, that great barracks. The shadow soteriology and Christology of the Mosaic law is no longer preserved on earth except in the Word of God. Instead it is now a part of that great castle and that great barracks from which all of the judgements of the Tribulation emanate. Those who reject the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ can only anticipate divine judgment both in time and in eternity. Furthermore, they will have no capacity and no way of coping. Therefore the source of divine judgment or the seven last plagues is the temple of the tabernacle in heaven which teaches many facets of doctrine and certain principles: that the greatest power on earth can never harm or touch even a hair of your head as long as you are a believer and inside of the plan of God. This tabernacle in heaven, therefore, is a tremendous memorial to our Lord Jesus Christ.

The tabernacle is said to be opened, the aorist passive indicative from the verb anoigw. There are many gates to this great castle. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. There is a barracks gate and this is the one that will be opened. The passive voice: the great castle in heaven called the temple, the tabernacle, is opened at one of its special gates. The indicative mood says this is important. The opening of the gate of the temple will release from the barracks the execution squad. These are seven great historical disasters which we will study in Revelation 16,17,18, 19, the seven last plagues, the seven bowl judgements, the seven grenades of history. They will be the last call to the population of the world to accept Christ as saviour before the second advent occurs. Once Christ returns it is too late to believe in Him for salvation and all unbelievers will be removed from this earth and cast into fire, as per the baptism of fire.

Verse five: "Then after these things I concentrated, and the temple, the tabernacle which serves as a testimony in heaven was opened."

The ritual testimony to the person and the work of Christ is found through the tabernacle in several dispensations. In the Age of Israel it is called the tabernacle of Moses. Then it was called the temple of Solomon, then the temple of Zerubbabel. In the Church Age there is no tabernacle on earth and the representation of it all is the Eucharist or the Lord's table. In the Tribulation we see where the tabernacle went, it is a part of the temple, the great castle in heaven, the abode of God and certain forms of knighthood among the elect angels. Ritual testimony to the person and the work of Christ in heaven is not only verified by many passages which we have noted — Revelation 11:19; 14:15; 15:5-8; 16:1, but also in the Millennium. There will also be a Millennial temple on earth in Ezekiel chapters 40-47, and again animal sacrifices will be offered in that temple of the restored Israel. The reasons for it are many but among others it is the fact that Israel is restored as a client nation to God. However, in the eternal state there will be no temple, as per Revelation 21:22, "And I saw no temple in it, for the Lord God, the Almighty one, and the Lamb of God, is its temple."

Verse 6 — the seven angels are the pur sui vant angels, the execution squad, those who will administer the final seven judgements of the Tribulation. They are said to possess something, the articular present active participle of the verb exw which means to have and to hold. The definite article is used as a relative pronoun. This is a descriptive present tense. The active voice: the execution squad produces the action. This is a circumstantial participle plus the fact that the action of the present participle is coterminous with the action of the main verb. They are said to have the seven plagues. These seven plagues will be described in other ways very shortly. The seven angels therefore hold seven grenades which are called here the seven last plagues or death blows. They will also be called vials, which is an incorrect translation, they are the bowl judgements of the last half of the Tribulation. Revelation 21:9 is the key passage which tells us that these seven last plagues are identical with the seven so-called vials or bowls in chapter sixteen.

The important thing to note is the uniform worn by this execution squad. Remember that the execution squad is not made up of privates, it is made up of one of the highest echelons of aristocrats among the elect angels and while they are the lowest in the aristocratic order they are still part of the aristocracy. For example, we have at the very top the king of arms. He is the top of all of the people in the angelic college of heralds and is the highest elect angel. He would be comparable to Moses or Paul. Then we have a couple of officers of arms immediately under him, and after that the four angelic heralds, all seraph rank angels. We also have a cherub rank and this includes the pur sui vant officers, one of whom commands the execution squad in our passage. Then there will be seven pur sui vant messengers and these, of course, are the execution squad sent by God. So only the highest-ranking elect angel aristocrats are permitted to handle this kind of an action.

The uniform is described as follows: “dressed in pure linen, also they were wearing a golden baldric across their breasts.” The translation which is given in the King James version is not correct, it doesn't even begin to describe what they were wearing. The perfect passive participle from the verb enduw tells us the uniform that was to be used. The perfect tense is the perfect of existing state in which the past completed action is dropped from the thought and attention is placed on the existing state.

Everything in the Word of God has meaning and purpose, there are no wasted words. Often they do not have direct application to us but in this case they certainly have a pertinent challenge. Some day some of us are going to be in our resurrection bodies and will have the most fantastic uniform, and everything on the uniform will represent the fact that the wearer was a winner. This adds up to something: the uniform they were dressed in here — pure transparent linen. What does that mean to us? It means that some are going to be losers — in heaven with a resurrection body, and that is it. There will be nothing to show for the time on earth. There were no decisions that were compatible with the Word of God, there was no concept of the plan of God, and therefore life was lived out on this earth as a loser. Suffering and misery will be confined to this life and to the judgment seat of Christ where there will be chagrin because of failure. Others will surpass those believers for one reason only: they made right decisions from a position of strength and they kept on making them. There is no such thing as equality in heaven.

So they came out of the barracks dressed in linon, “linen,” and it has very definite meaning. It is the angelic equivalent to the uniform of glory which covers whatever type of resurrection or permanent body the elect angels possess. There are two adjectives which go with it. The first is kaqaroj, which means pure. When it is used for believers later on in chapter nineteen it has to do with the resurrection body and ultimate sanctification. We have not only the imputed righteousness of God now but in the future we will have a perfect righteousness. And with this a second adjective, lamproj which means transparent, shining, or bright, “pure and transparent linen.” This is their basic uniform and being a member of the angelic college of heralds is one of the highest honours and decorations given to elect angels as a result of their performance during the prehistoric stage of the angelic conflict. This is their eternal state, their eternal body, and it also indicates something of their decorations.

As angelic heralds administering the seven last judgements of the Tribulation this uniform represents their Lord and master, Jesus Christ. Hence, the adjective kaqaroj represents the impeccability of Christ during the first advent, whereas the lamproj represents the deity of Christ, and together they remind us of the hypostatic union. This means that the uniform worn by the pur sui vant messengers reflects the strategic victory of our Lord Jesus Christ in the angelic conflict. Therefore all judgment has been delegated to our Lord Jesus Christ.

Next we have the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai which provides additional information. It is translated "also." With it we have a perfect passive participle plus a reference to what is actually being worn. The perfect passive participle plus the prepositional phrase that follows is correctly translated: "Also they were wearing a golden baldric slung across their chests." They are wearing one of the highest and most distinguishing types of decoration related to the time of the Roman empire when the golden baldric was set up in order to carry decorations. This is the uniform of the execution squad that will go into action in the next chapter.

Translation: "Then the seven angels who have the seven plagues came out of the temple, and they were dressed in a uniform made of pure and transparent linen, also they were wearing a golden baldric slung across their chests."

The golden baldric not only indicates the honours and the decorations these elect angels won as winners before man was created but they also indicate war. In this case, it will be God's war against evil and that is exactly what the seven last plagues will do. Remember, the angels are from the college of heralds and they wear victory symbols of our Lord's first advent. "Pure": the impeccability of Christ; "transparent": the deity of Christ; "linen": our Lord in hypostatic union.

Verse 7, the chain of command in the administration of these last plagues. Now, one of the angelic heralds actually gives out to each one of these angels his own special grenade to be used as one of the seven last judgements.

It is said here that one of the four living creatures, one of the heralds from the angelic college of heralds, gave to the seven angels or pur sui vant messengers seven golden bowls. These seven golden bowls are mistranslated in the King James version. The Greek word is fialh and it is actually a bowl with a very narrow neck, so we might call it a grenade.

"Then one of the four living creatures gave to the seven angels seven golden bowls which have been filled with the wrath of God who lives forever."

When it says that they have been filled it means that this has been prepared a long time ago. Until the time for divine judgment comes the herald is the custodian of these seven grenades which contain the seven last judgements. These seven last plagues also answer the imprecatory prayers of the Tribulational martyrs. And there is a principle which comes out of this: God leaves no loose ends in history. Every evil perpetuated against believers, regardless of the dispensation, is put into the computer of divine decrees and at the appropriate time is judged. There are no loose ends in history and this, of course, was great consolation to the Tribulational martyrs. God remembers the victims; evil never remembers the victims. Evil always concentrates on the culprit — on his nice personality, on “he’s been punished enough”, the problems we have today in the administration of justice in our country. But God always remembers the victims, whether they are the victims of disorganised evil like crime or victims of organised evil like governmental persecution. Even though Satan is the ruler of this world no form of evil gets away without punishment from God. There is no evil ever committed in human history that is not handled by the higher court of heaven. The higher court of heaven always functions and the timing of the higher court is perfect, and therefore the importance of what we should call “the patience of the saints.” As believers we have to be patient. As believers we may not even see God’s administration of justice but it will occur and therefore we can avoid the usual problems that people seem to have. They want revenge themselves, forgetting that “vengeance belongs to me, I will repay saith the Lord”. They want to do something about it themselves, they want to get involved themselves, they have a bad mental attitude because of what has happened. But God leaves crimes against believers always punished; they never go unpunished. And since God’s timing is always perfect, either in blessing or in judgment, the believer must avoid becoming personally involved. To this extent all believers, sooner or later, from the function of gate six must become professional — the function of impersonal love, the principle that you do not get upset about your enemies or about injustice which is perpetrated in your direction.

Principle: If the courts of the land will not prosecute leave it to the higher court of heaven where justice is always done.

We have noted the impatience of the Tribulational martyrs in the offering of their imprecatory prayers, 6:9-11, especially verse 10: “How long, O lord.” The rationale which comes out of this: God is perfect, therefore God’s timing is perfect. God’s timing is perfect in blessing; God’s timing is perfect in the administration of judgment.

The content of the bowls or the grenades is then given, the aorist active participle from the verb gemw. It means to be full. It is translated like a perfect tense and the reason is because the culminative aorist views the contents of the grenades in their entirety but regards them from the viewpoint of existing results, the administration of the seven last plagues to planet earth in the last half of the Tribulation. The active voice: the seven bowls, the seven golden grenades, fulfil the action of the verb. We notice that these golden grenades are filled with the wrath of God. Wrath is an anthropathism referring to divine judgment. Seven bowls contain seven last judgements on the human race in the last half of the Tribulation. It should be noted that verse seven is retrospective exposition and fills in the missing link in the chain of command which we studied in the previous chapter, verse 14.

We have noticed now two things in this transitional chapter. First of all, the protocol in heaven which began in 14:17 and goes through 15:7. We will note next the action on earth when each grenade is thrown as a judgment on mankind.

The doctrinal application of protocol in heaven is very important. Note the seven applications of what we have been studying:

1. There is order in heaven. This means that there is order and protocol in God's plan for us in time. The plan of God always follows protocol; the plan of God follows a no-nonsense policy, no silliness, no absurdities. Protocol is a reminder of this principle. The application should be noted: 1 Corinthians 14:40, "Let all things be done decently and in order." Protocol becomes thoughtfulness as a part of the plan of God; it becomes sensitivity; it becomes the function of impersonal love toward all, recognising the privacy of others, the right of others to make their own mistakes or their own success. In other words, avoiding the doctrine of the long proboscis is a part of the protocol principle as expressed in gate six of the divine dynasphere.
2. The highest-ranking aristocracy of elect angels is involved in the chain of command and the execution of divine policy. Note that divine protocol is being executed by the greatest aristocracy in heaven, just as the highest-ranking order of knighthood in the royal family of God will rule and execute judgment for one thousand years of history, in the Millennium. Always, however, God does not permit the peasant to rule; He never permits the scum to function in His organisation. When God wants something done He uses royalty. But you must remember that royalty is acquired. Whatever a person is born is inconsequential. The issue is that aristocracy is always acquired. In human life aristocracy is inherited and that is why aristocracy eventually becomes degenerate, because what is not acquired but inherited often becomes the means of corrupting through arrogance.
3. The success of the mission is based on respect for authority and the virtue of protocol. Respect for authority develops the virtue of protocol in every echelon of command and function.
4. Effective protocol demands virtue, virtue-first. Protocol is meaningless without virtue. Those who carry out this mission of judgment, the seven last plagues, have demonstrated maximum virtue during the prehistoric angelic conflict.
5. The divine plan for the believer in time cannot be fulfilled apart from respect for God's authority, the authority of our Lord Jesus Christ, the living Word; the authority of Bible doctrine as the written Word. So in addition to all of the various categories of authority in life there is the higher consideration, respect for authority in the spiritual realm.
6. Good planning precedes good execution. Chapters 14 and 15 are planning chapters.
7. Any judgements resulting from bad decisions produce hopeless, self-destructive misery. Any judgements originating from God and the protocol of heaven result in the preservation and blessing for some portion of the human race. Add to that the fact that the human race will never be destroyed because of backfire divine judgment.

Verse 8, It should be noted that once the administration of the seven plagues occurs on earth normal times are gone. True historical disaster is always characterised by abnormal times. This is reflected in the fact that in verse 8 the temple is closed. The closing of the temple is a very important lesson. We have, for example, “the temple was filled with smoke from the glory of God,” the ablative of source as the object of the preposition ek, “from the glory of God.” The source of the smoke is the glory or the essence of God. This emphasises the fact that no human being can afford to ignore the attributes of God. The smoke which John saw represents the fact that God is invisible and cannot be seen by human beings, and therefore the smoke indicates the invisible presence of God. Smoke is the perfect manifestation of God to the unbeliever who has rejected both God’s eternal existence and the divine attributes. So, as it were, man’s negative volition produces his own fog (smoke) in his life. God is only manifest to the believer who is positive toward pertinent doctrine and therefore smoke is cleared away by the believer’s positive volition toward doctrine. Some people live in an atmosphere of smoke or fog. But here God is dealing with the unbeliever and therefore the smoke. The only reality of God to the unbeliever is divine judgment. The cloud of smoke in the temple represents the holiness of God. We have studied this concept before in Isaiah 6:3,4. When the Jews assembled under Mount Sinai to meet God the manifestation of His presence was smoke, Exodus 19:18. Smoke from God is related to the function of divine justice and judgment, Psalm 18:8. Cf. Ezekiel 10:2-4, the cloud was the smoke of the glory of God; Exodus 40:34.

The glory of the Lord is the perfection of His character and therefore the judgements of the Lord are just as perfect as the blessings of the Lord. There is nothing unfair, nothing cruel, nothing wrong, nothing that is non-virtuous about these judgements. They are said, therefore, to come “from the glory of God, and from his power.” The omnipotence of God linked with the justice of God indicates the fact that God has the power to execute judgements as well as the perfection to be fair. Furthermore, all divine power is always related to divine justice and this means that whether God is using His power to bless or to curse divine justice is the frame of reference. This is illustrated, of course, by the cross where our sins were imputed to Christ and the Father judged them. The justice, then, of God the Father supersedes the love of God the Father in the function and the modus operandi of His justice.

“Furthermore,” says the last half of the verse, “no one was able to enter the temple,” the aorist active infinitive of eisexomai means the temple was closed. That means entering for worship, entering for any function, and the infinitive is preceded by dunamai. The imperfect of dunamai is the imperfect of description. The active voice: no one in heaven can produce the action of the verb, meaning regenerate creatures who frequently inhabit the temple. The indicative mood is declarative for eschatological reality. The aorist infinitive is ingressive, it means as of this moment no one entered the temple until these judgements were completed. Not even in heaven can creatures, both angelic and human, stand in the presence of God when He is judging a segment of the human race. The function of the justice of God in judgment is overpowering and even creatures in heaven cannot endure the pressure, “until these seven plagues had been completed [administered by the angels].”

Translation of verse eight: “Then the temple was filled with smoke from the glory of God, and from his power; furthermore no one was able to enter the temple until the seven plagues administered by the seven angels had been completed.”

During the time of historical disaster from divine judgment routine-type worship in the heavenly temple is interrupted until this judgment is completed. And why mention it at all? Since we are not going to enter the temple at that time, why mention it? We will be in heaven at that time but why does it tell us that we are going to be shut out of the temple?

Historical disaster and personal disaster disrupts normal function in life. That means that it disrupts normal expression of worship in the local church, and it means to us that the opportunities that you have had to take in doctrine on a consistent and daily basis are going to be shut down. It means that the teaching of the Word of God under normal circumstances of tranquillity will no longer exist.

It is probable that in our lifetime we are going to see this happen. You won't be able to come to Bible class, you will be on your own just like the disciples were in the storm when our Lord was sleeping. They were on their own for a purpose — so that they could use the doctrine they had learned. But they failed. Therefore, they were losers. And just as they were losers in the past there is going to come a time when the doors are going to be shut and you are not going to have the opportunity you have had in the past. And note: Your social life, your pleasures, and the reasons that you could not come to Bible class will not sustain you. All of the fun times that you had will not sustain you, and they won't carry you in disaster. All they will do is bring out the fact that you are a weak sister, that you are a loser, that you are not a winner at all. And just as lack of Bible doctrine means lack of capacity for life and love and happiness it also means that lack of Bible doctrine means no ability for disaster. Disaster is coming, and when it comes normal routine functions of life, its teaching of the Word of God under tranquil circumstances will not longer be available. Then you will discover that all of the things that were more important to you than Bible doctrine, everything that was more important on your priority list — your business responsibilities, your social responsibilities, your children — not sustain you when disaster hits.

Verse one is the confirming order to the execution squad. The passage begins with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated, "Then," followed by the aorist active indicative of the verb a)kouw which means to hear. John either sees or hears everything in these visions and in this case he hears what is said. "Then I heard." The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. John as the human writer hears the information he puts down. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the continuation of the vision of the seven last plagues.

With this we have an objective genitive composed of two words, megaj and fwnh, and it is translated "a loud voice." The source is from the temple. This is the voice of God the Father from the heavenly temple, not the voice of the angel of chapter 5:2 or 7:2 or 10:3, which takes us back to chapter 15:8. It all started with God the Father when the mandate was issued. God the Father in the heavenly temple sends a message to God the Son who is seated on the cloud through the officer of arms, 14:14,15. The Lord Jesus Christ is in charge of all historical judgements, especially this one, the seven last plagues. Therefore in 14:16 He is the recipient of the mandate. The pur sui vant officer who commands the judgment squad comes out of the temple and is placed on standby in 14:17. In the meantime the king of arms comes from the altar of imprecatory prayers with the co-ordinating orders, 14:18, and at this point one of the four living creatures distributes the bowls to each member of the execution squad who are seven pur sui vant messengers, according to 15:1, 7. Next, the pur sui vant officer who commands the execution squad goes from standby to assume command and the result is the function of the execution squad in chapter 16.

Behind all of this is a protocol system. This means, of course, that there are no accidents in the Christian life and this means that there are no accidents in history. It means that everything that happens in history, while we may be very sympathetic with the various categories of disaster which come to various people, it is always the result of their own individual or collective bad decisions.

"Then I heard a loud voice from the temple ..." The present active participle of legw is translated "which said." It is a futuristic present; it is the voice of God the Father producing the action; it is a circumstantial participle. With it we have a dative plural indirect object, "to the seven angels." These are the pur sui vant messengers who form the personnel of the execution squad. This voice from heaven, the voice of God the Father speaking from the temple merely confirms the orders which have been passed down through the chain of command under the doctrine of protocol. And with this confirming order the action actually begins.

The content of the confirming order starts out with the present active imperative of the verb u(pagw, a very strong verb for Go. It is an order to move out as we would say in military language. It is a pictorial present tense, it pictures the events in the process of occurrence and dramatises the great historical disasters that come at the end of the Tribulation. The active voice: the execution squad produces the action in obedience to the imperative mood of command which has gone through channels for the protocol system and is now reconfirmed from the castle itself.

The next word is “pour out,” e)kxew. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of this chapter in its entirety. The active voice: the execution squad will produce the action in obedience to the imperative mood of command. The accusative plural direct object follows, “the seven bowls.” We have a definite article taj denoting a previous reference, the indeclinable numeral e(pta, “Seven,” with fialh, “bowl.” The pulling of the pin of the grenade and the pouring out of the judgment is the execution of the judgements on earth. The seven bowl judgements are synonymous with the seven last plagues, 15:8; 21:9.

All of this verse is interpretation and the idea is not to get application here but to get interpretation for the entire chapter. We are to understand, therefore, that the administration of these seven bowl judgements, called “seven last plagues,” actually come from heaven, from God, and they are very carefully screened through a careful chain of command. The seven last plagues are seven historical disasters and these judgements prepare the way for Israel to become a client nation to God once more in the Millennium. They prepare the way for the unconditional covenants to Israel and these seven divine judgements complete the function of the justice of God in punishing the world and its inhabitants during the time of the devil’s desperation, the last half of the Tribulation.

Translation of verse one: “Then I heard a loud voice from the temple saying to the seven angels, Go out and pour out on the earth the seven bowls of the wrath of God.”

What follows in the obedience of the execution squad is both punishment of evil and evangelisation by disaster. Divine judgment means judgment which comes from heaven and comes from God. It is administered to the earth in the form of historical disaster. It always accomplishes two things: evangelism and the preservation of the human race from self-destruction so that history is perpetuated as far as the angelic conflict is concerned. Here it is going to preserve believers in the Tribulation so that at the end of the Tribulation, even though it is the worst disaster period in history for seven years, many believers will survive.

There are three reasons why we have judgment. First of all, evangelisation. It takes unbelievers who are inside the cosmic system and brings them back to reality and gives them another opportunity to face the issue of the gospel. So always historical disaster is a form of evangelisation and, at the same time a form of preserving believers. Believers are protected in disaster. Then, of course, it always fulfils the principle of punishment.

Verse 2 — we have the first member of the squad executing his command. The first bowl judgment is given entirely in verse two. This is a sort of warm-up to historical disaster in the form of cancer given to certain people. We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, “Then,” followed by the nominative singular of the adjective prwtoj, “Then the first.” The word “angel” is assumed, and rightly so. Then we have the aorist active indicative of a)perxomai, “moved out,” instant obedience. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the first member of the execution squad produces the action of the verb. The declarative mood is for the reality of this judgment beginning.

With this have the connective kai and e)kxew, “and poured out his bowl on the earth.” The aorist tense of e)kxew is a culminative aorist, it views the event in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, divine judgment in the form of historical disaster. This is a dermatological disaster, a disease of a malignant nature. The active voice: the first pur sui vant messenger produces the action. “Then the first angel departed and poured out his bowl upon the earth.” This reveals the primary heavenly virtue, the basic virtue of obedience to divine authority. Behind all protocol is the principle of virtue-first, and the virtue is humility. This angel is in his eternal state, in his status quo of ultimate sanctification. As such he is ready for instant obedience and there will never be any deviation from that. Note that you can be happy in a state of obedience; you can be happy in a state of authority. Authority is orientation to life.

Divine authority was expressed both through channels and directly from the temple. Verse one is actually a repetition of what we have been noting. Authority is a greater issue than freedom in the spiritual life and without authority orientation believers never grow in grace. They pick and choose what they hear, when they hear; they pick and choose the preachers, the ones that will entertain them, and they never settle down to the authority of one minister ever. This means they are unhappy people and they will never grow in the spiritual life. It just isn't done that way. Freedom without authority is not only anarchy but it destroys all virtue in life. Authority is the key to humility, not freedom. The greater the freedom one has the greater the responsibility one has. Hence, freedom demands virtue for its proper usage and function. No freedom is ever used properly when the subject is arrogant. Arrogance destroys freedom long before historical tyranny destroys freedom. Obedience to authority is a virtue in heaven as well as on earth. Obedience to authority is something God requires from all believers as well as elect angels, and it is not degrading to be obedient to legitimate authority.

Now we have the nature of the first judgment and it starts out with the connective conjunction kai, translated “then” or “and,” with the aorist active indicative of the verb ginomai, “became.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The content of the first golden bowl produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the eschatology of reality in this future judgment, a reminder that when historical judgment comes our way, even as it will come in the future Tribulation, it is always brought on by bad decisions from arrogance. Arrogant people, even if they get the facts, never make good decisions. We have the predicate nominative singular from e)lkoj, the ancient Greek word for cancer. It is used for cancer, ulcer, or abscess. Two adjectives describe the ulcer, one is pernicious and the other is painful, “and it became a sore [or ulcer, cancer of the skin], pernicious and painful.”

The interesting thing about the first judgment is the fact that people rarely die from cancer of the skin. It is not one of the big killers but it is painful and that is the whole point. To be in a state of pain is as close as arrogant people can come to reality. When arrogant people are miserable, in a state of pain, they are as close to reality as they can possibly come apart from recovery from the cosmic system.

What follows gives us the devastation of religion in the human race. One of the greatest expressions of evil and arrogance is in the area of religion. Religious people are so arrogant that they get into politics, chapter 17; and then they get into all kinds of weird concepts which forms their religion, chapter 18. Both are judged at the seventh grenade. Ecumenical religion is characterised by the mark of the beast dictator. God gives the religious crowd of the Tribulation His mark of disapproval. The reason this is cancer of the skin is because the religious crowd are all wearing the mark of the beast dictator. Now God has His mark of disapproval in giving them cancer. So it might be said that the first judgment is mild and reveals our Lord's sense of humour.

Next we have e)pi plus the accusative of a)nqrwpoj, "upon those men." A)nqrwpoj refers to a category of mankind. The reason for the word "those" is because we have a definite article used as a demonstrative pronoun to distinguish religious people from the rest of the human race. The worst people are always religious people. These men are categorised by the articular present active participle of the verb e)xw, they are said to "have" something. The definite article used as a relative pronoun, "who." The present tense is a retroactive progressive present, it denotes what has happened in the past: they first of all accepted the ecumenical religion of the beast sometime during the Tribulation and now they have this mark. So it shows what happened in the past and continues into the present. The recipients of this judgment accepted from their own free will the ecumenical religion of the beast dictator and they continued to adhere to that system as indicated by their mark. The active voice: all converts to ecumenical religion produce this action. With it we have the accusative singular direct object from the noun xaragma, a mark. We have previously noted that this mark is a brand or an ID card, 13:16,17. This is the ID card related to the computer to indicate slavery to a system, the ecumenical religious system which is tantamount to slavery to Satan. This brand or mark is computer tyranny, the total destruction of human privacy, therefore cancellation of human freedom. Once these people are on the computer they no longer have any privacy of any kind.

The principle of computer tyranny

1. High technology is no better than the people who use it or apply it. In other words, it has both good and evil connotations because it is no better than the people who use it. Evil people will find evil applications for it; good people will find good applications.
2. Evil people make evil application; good people make good application.
3. Hence, there is nothing wrong with technology and technological advance.
4. The issue is not scientific progress but the nature of people.
5. Freedom cannot exist without privacy. This means that freedom and privacy must coexist. Every attack on human privacy is an attack on human freedom. The answer to every bureaucrat's dream is the system of computerised tyranny, because bureaucrats always want to know all about you and are always trying to stick their nose into your business. They claim that they are doing it for good reasons but it always destroys privacy. When you get on the computer your privacy is gone because Big Brother knows all about you. A good application is to have a record of criminals because criminals have no civil rights and therefore they have no rights to privacy or freedom. They have forfeited their right to privacy and freedom by the very nature of their crime. However, to have a computer record of law-abiding citizens in order to control them destroys their freedom because it destroys their privacy.

The converts to ecumenical religion in the cosmic system are in the computer and have a mark or identification. This is organised evil which makes it possible to torture and kill those who believe in Christ. Ecumenical religion of the Tribulation as a part of organised evil is both cruel and vindictive toward those who reject it. The identification mark and the computer list persecutes the nonconformist. That would be the doctrinal believer. Hence, computer tyranny plus demon terrorism becomes the greatest system of persecution the world has ever known.

The final phrase talks about their worship, the articular present active participle from the verb proskunew, "worship." The present tense is a futuristic present, it denotes something that has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as already coming to pass. The active voice: the Tribulation converts to the ecumenical religious system of Satan produced the action of the verb. And with this we have the dative singular indirect object, "his image." The image is the statue of the dictator of the revived Roman empire.

Note again that the converts of the ecumenical religious system have the mark of the beast dictator on their skin. Therefore God adds His mark to their skin, a malignant ulcer and abscess. The malignancy on the skin match the malignancy of their soul for the most malignant of all souls is the soul of the religious person. They are negative toward the gospel, they have scar tissue of the soul, they reside permanently in the cosmic system.

Translation of verse 2: "Then the first angel departed and poured out his bowl on planet earth; and it became an ulcer on the skin, both pernicious and painful to those men who had the mark of the beast dictator, and who worshipped his image."

In Leviticus 17:7 we learn that people who sacrifice to idols offer their sacrifices to demons. Deuteronomy 32:17, "They sacrificed to demons, not to God, to those they have not known [from doctrine], new demons who come lately, whom your ancestors did not fear."

Heathen nations worship demons, according to Psalm 96:5, "All the gods of the people are demons, but the Lord made the heavens." The word for idols there is really the word daimonia in the Septuagint translation.

Demon worship and idolatry often include child sacrifice, Psalm 106: 37-39.

Demon possession was the basis for capital punishment in Israel, Leviticus 20:27.

Jesus Christ, of course, controls history by the restraint of these demons, Exodus 12:12, “the demons of Egypt”; Numbers 33:4.

Demons are powerless to change the course of history, Isaiah 19:3. “Then the spirit of the Egyptians will become demoralised within them; also I will frustrate their strategy so that they will resort to idols of demonism ...”

Demonism is therefore related to any kind of judgment of a nation, Deuteronomy 18:9-12.

Satan and demons are often used by God in the administration of the sin unto death of a reversionistic believer, 1 Corinthians 5:5; 1 Timothy 1:19,20.

When believers become religious and get into the cosmic one system, and in their arrogance begin to function at the various gates, they are therefore in a place of demon influence and God permits Satan to administer the sin unto death.

Psalms 109:7 tells us that Satan blinds through religion; he shortens life, verse 8; he removes people who have authority [removes their authority], verse 8; he can kill, verse 9; he can persecute children, verse 10; he can remove wealth, verse 11; he can turn everyone against you — verse 12; he can cut off posterity to the second generation, verse 13.

All of this means that many times when the born-again believer has made so many decisions against God, God says, All right, he’s been living in your cosmic system, I’ll let you administer the sin unto death. Satan can never do this, of course, apart from divine permission but Satan has the power of death, 1 John 3:8; Hebrews 2:14,15. Satan was the one who killed the children of Job, Job 1:12, 18, 19. Satan motivated Cain to murder Abel, John 8:44; 1 John 3:12. When given opportunity he can execute believers under the sin unto death, 1 Corinthians 5:5; 1 Timothy 1:19, 20. Needless to say it is a painful way to go.

Verse 3, we continue with the second member of the execution squad. Remember that all judgment from God has a grace connotation and the principle of judgment always has that in mind. The second concept is evangelism. All judgment is designed to evangelise the unbeliever. The unbeliever being brought back to reality then has the opportunity of taking what information he has received about the gospel and relating to his own life. This is often coming to the end of one’s own resources and therefore looking to divine resources for answers. So it becomes the basis of evangelism; it is actually the last call of evangelism. Then, of course, the third purpose for divine judgment is the perpetuation of the human race. Were it not for divine judgment as a sort of backfire the human race would destroy itself.

The word “second” in verse 3 is simply the word deuteroj, and it applies to the second member of the squad. There is no word for angel here. We know it is an angel, a pur sui vant messenger, from the context. The aorist active indicative of e)kxew means that he pulled the pin of the grenade in obedience to the command, "Then the second angel poured out." The culminative aorist tense views the event in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the divine judgment of the sea.

The first bowl judgment was against the epidermis of the worshippers of the beast. The first judgment hit priority target number one: the religious crowd. The religious crowd are the strongest in negative volition toward the gospel or negative volition toward Bible doctrine. They always suffer from blackout of the soul and scar-tissue of the soul, reverse process reversionism.

The active voice: the second pur sui vant messenger produces the action of the verb as a member of the execution squad. This is a declarative indicative mood representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of eschatological reality.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object from fialh, referring to a bowl, and with it the possessive genitive singular of a)utoj, the intensive pronoun used as a personal pronoun because the Attic Greek third person personal pronoun was not brought into the Koine Greek. "Then the second angel poured out his bowl.

The target of the second bowl is given next in a prepositional phrase: e)ij plus the accusative of qalassa, "into the sea." What kind of sea? The noun qalassa can refer to any body of water, salt or fresh. Previously in the first half of the Tribulation as a part of the second trumpet judgment, 8:8,9, one third of the water of the earth was affected but here all of some category of water. Remember that seventy per cent of the earth's surface is water. In the northern hemisphere the ration of water to land is 60.7 to 39.3, while in the southern hemisphere the ratio is 80.9 to 19.1 per cent. It averages out to 70 per cent. The second trumpet judgment was directed toward one third of the water of the earth but this judgment is directed totally. So both freshwater and sea food is affected by this second bowl judgment. However, because of what is coming up in the next verse we have to assume that this is primarily a judgment against salt water and not fresh water as such. There is a little problem here because later on in the next verse we are going to see lakes and the Biblical definition of a lake is a body of water completely surrounded by land whereas in the Biblical definition of seas and oceans there is always some outlet at some point — some flow-in, some flow-out, whatever it is.

The result of this second bowl judgment is now given, "and it became," the aorist active indicative of ginomai. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The declarative indicative mood indicates that the total judgment is on all salt water oceans and seas plus a couple of salt water lakes, "became blood," the predicate nominative of a(ima. The significance of the blood is twofold. It is a reminder to all unbelievers of the end of the Tribulation that they have rejected the gospel, the only way of salvation. The comparative particle o(j plus the ablative of source, nekroj, indicates the nature of the blood, "as from a dead person." Secondly, as the blood is a reminder of the saving work of Christ on the cross it is also a reminder that it is an ocean pollutant and the importance of oceans and seas in sustaining the natural balance of nature cannot be overestimated. So we have pollutant of all the salt water areas, and this illustrates the concept that we see today where people are very sensitive about oil spills is simply a reminder that we as members of the human race are dependant upon these oceans, even though they are salt water. The results are now presented in the context, “then every yuxh [soul] of life,” with it we have zwh.

Translation: “ and it came to be blood of a dead person: then every living creature [every soul of life] began to die.”

Death here means that there was tremendous loss of any type of food from the sea and anything that is beneficial from the sea. And this is only the beginning of these judgements. The ingressive aorist gives mankind a chance to repent, by the way, because the aorist active indicative “began to die” comes from the verb a)poqnhskw. The ingressive aorist denotes the entrance into the state or condition, it doesn’t mean that they all died at once.

The implication of all of this is that all of these people have heard the gospel many times. They have been evangelised, as we have seen, and all have had a chance to hear the gospel. The significance of oceans and seas becoming blood as from a dead man will be discussed when we get to verse six. Needless to say it is a reminder that an unbelieving world has persecuted and shed the blood of believers in Christ and those who communicate the gospel and teach Bible doctrine. While the first bowl judgment was against the epidermis of the religious unbeliever the second bowl judgment is against the conscience of the unbeliever as the seas an oceans become blood as from a dead man. So the second is an appeal to the conscience. Dead believers speak through this judgment.

The third bowl judgment is found in verse 4-7. It is going to take a little longer to develop these because there is an intensity as these develop. This is the administration of the third grenade.

“And the third angel poured out his bowl,” the culminative aorist views the third judgment in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results: divine judgment on the world’s supply of fresh water, “into the rivers,” e)ij plus the accusative of potamoj. All the rivers of the world are going to be affected. Also this judgment is against lakes, “springs of waters.” This is similar to the third trumpet judgment but far more extensive.

Note that all of these judgements are against the unbelievers only. Therefore God has provided at that time some special deliverance for believers on the earth. It should also be noted that these judgements are literal and not symbolic.

Anticipating the next verse, this pur sui vant messenger from the angelic college of heralds is not only a member of the execution squad here to administer divine judgment but he is also a communicator of Bible doctrine. He is a teaching angel, as found in the book of Zechariah. This implies that the teaching angels in the time of Moses who explained the Mosaic law to the people were from the same angelic college of heralds. The third pur sui vant messenger from the execution squad not only throws his grenade but in verses 5 and 6 he teaches the doctrine of the integrity of the divine judge and the guilt of the recipients of the punishment.

So we have in verse 5 the integrity of the judge brought in at this point. This is the proclamation of the third pur sui vant messenger. The greatest teachers from the angelic college of heralds are actually the officers of arms. Remember, they are seraph-type angels. Out of all of the millions of elect angels the angelic college of heralds is the highest form of aristocracy. These are the rewards and decorations that were given.

“Then I heard the angel related to the water judgment saying.” And what was he saying? First of all we have the present active indicative of e)imi. He is addressing himself to our Lord who is the judge, “You are.” The static present is for a condition that has always existed. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ as the judge produces the action of the verb, though the proclamation also applies to God the Father. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality.

Then we have the word dikaioj, used here for Christ as the judge. Later on our Lord is going to be called as the judge, dikaiosunh. The difference: dikaioj has to do with His perfect righteousness; dikaiosunh has to do with His justice and righteousness, with emphasis on His justice. In other words, the holiness of God is involved.

What is the holiness of God? We will use the modern word “integrity.” It is composed of His righteousness and His justice. Justice executes the judgment but it is done from perfect righteousness. The judge is perfect; the judge is eternal. There never was a time therefore when the infinite, eternal Son of God, Jesus Christ, did not have perfect righteousness. And this means perfect righteousness with virtue. Righteousness plus virtue equals the perfection of our Lord Jesus Christ. Many people have morality but it has no virtue. Morality minus virtue equals self-righteous arrogance; morality plus virtue is developed inside of the divine dynasphere; it is a grace system of morality.

“You are righteous [or just]” refers to God, and this means that the righteousness of God and the justice of God which is the source of divine blessing to the believer is also the source of divine judgment of the unbeliever. The justice of God is one half of divine holiness. God’s attribute of holiness is actually two attributes: justice and righteousness. Righteous was imputed to us the moment we believed in Christ and that established the grace pipeline. The justice of God initiates logistical grace support to the righteousness of God. The justice of God, for mature believers, initiates supergrace blessings. All blessing comes from the justice of God and it is imputed to the righteousness of God so that God is not compromised by blessing us. We are still sinners, we are still imperfect, we still fail as long as we live in this life. God, therefore, does not bless us because of what we do. God blesses us because He is perfect. That is the basis of all blessing. Grace is the function of the justice of God in imputing blessing to the indwelling righteousness of God which was imputed to us at the moment of salvation.

When the teaching angel says, “You are righteous [just],” he is indicating once again that just as blessing comes from the justice of God so judgment comes from the justice of God.

And if both blessing and judgment have the same source then all things work together for good. God has designed a way of life, a plan for our lives, whereby we can have the same blessing in time of disaster as in time of prosperity. Even though the circumstances oscillate from prosperity to adversity, from adversity back to prosperity, our life and happiness and blessing goes right on regardless. The justice of God which is the source of divine blessing is also the source of divine judgment. The believer, of course, possesses the righteousness of God; the unbeliever does not. Hence, the same divine justice of God the Father which judged our sins while Christ was bearing them in His own body on the cross initiates the seven last plagues to the unbelievers of the Tribulation. That is why historical disaster. Man is the source of historical disaster, he is the product of his own decisions. There never has been a historical disaster whereby man did not make the decisions that produced it.

Man's negative volition is the source of disaster but God adds something to it for this reason: the justice of God the Father set aside His eternal love for God the Son when God the Son went to the cross. The judging of our sins did not come from the Father's love. Justice always supersedes love in God's dealing with mankind.

The unbeliever does not have the righteousness of God that has been imputed to the believer, and not having that righteousness the only blessing he can get out of any kind of disaster or judgment is to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. So inevitably, all of these judgements are just another way of evangelising and bringing people to the end of themselves. Before these judgements are over it will be seen that no matter how great people are, how smart they are, no matter what provisions they made for disaster, they have absolutely no security. Bit by bit, as each grenade is thrown God takes a little more of their security until there is no human security left. And once no human security is left there is only one thing left, and that is to throw themselves on divine security. So the justice of God the Father which judged our sins when Christ was bearing them is the same divine justice which initiates these plagues, and for the same purpose: to bring people to reality. These same seven last plagues, then, are the expression of God's perfect and eternal holiness or integrity.

Mankind is prone to be critical with regard to His judgements because mankind, of course, does not have all the facts. Furthermore, mankind does not understand either the essence of God or the total depravity of mankind. While man rationalises his sins and disobedience to the plan of God the integrity or holiness of God cannot ignore these things. Man is the product of his own decisions. Bad decisions from a position of weakness inevitably come into contact with the perfect integrity of God. The integrity of God, then, is the source of both blessing and judgment to mankind in human history. All blessings, temporal or eternal, are related to the fact that the justice of God judged all sins when Christ was carrying them on the cross. The very essence of God demands that all divine judgment be the expression of His integrity, whether it is the judgment of the cross or historical disaster in human history. Divine integrity never makes a mistake in either blessing us or in judging us.

Continuing in verse 5, the identity of the judge is now mentioned under the phrase, "You are just, O Holy One, who is, and who has always existed." It is the articular present active participle “who is” that refers to the omega glory of our Lord Jesus Christ. The phrase, “and shalt be,” in the King James version is not given here. But the second coming of Christ is always brought out by “and shalt be,” and because that is going to be a part of our subject it isn’t necessary to bring it in at this time.

Then we have the reason for all of this given in the perfect decision of the judge. We have the causal use of the conjunction $\alpha(\text{ti}$, “because,” and with it the aorist active indicative of the verb krinw , “because you have judged.” The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It takes the seven last grenades of the Tribulation and regardless of how long it takes to administer these judgements gathers them up into a single whole. The active voice: Jesus Christ as the judge produces the action. The declarative indicative mood represents the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality.

We also have the word “thus” in the King James, and that is incorrect and misleading. Actually what is found there is the accusative neuter plural direct object from the immediate demonstrative pronoun $\alpha(\text{utoj}$, and it should be translated, “because you have judged these,” referring, of course, to people in the Tribulation. These are primarily unbelievers judged in the Tribulation but these judgements always do something else: they always pick up a few cosmic believers, believers who are in reversionism to stay are generally picked up as well. However, we are dealing primarily with judgment of the unbeliever.

Translation: “Then I heard the angel in charge of the waters saying, You are just, O Holy One, who is [the omega glory of Jesus Christ in His hypostatic union], who has always existed [the alpha glory of Christ as eternal God], because you have judged these [unbelievers of the Tribulation].”

Principle: Perfect God with perfect integrity can only make perfect judgements; perfect God-Man with perfect integrity can also only make perfect judgements. These judgements emanate from our Lord in hypostatic union. To question the judgements of God is, of course, the quintessence of blasphemy and the ultimate in negative volition. How do believers question the judgements of God? How do believers question the actions of God? When we question the actions of God we are failing to recognise who is in control. The integrity of the judge, then, is the subject of this verse and Jesus Christ as eternal God and perfect humanity in one person forever is the perfect judge with the perfect integrity. It is interesting to note that the perfection of our Lord was attained in time through His residence, function, and momentum inside the prototype divine dynasphere.

Continuing the dissertation in verse six the punishment is equivalent to the guilt of the culprit. When people are punished by God they are guilty. The very fact that He is punishing them means they are guilty? Why? Because God is omniscient. In eternity past God knew of this accumulation of our decisions that lead to sin or to whatever may be punishable. So God is the judge, He knows all the facts, and having a perfect knowledge He says, Guilty. Therefore, the punishment follows.

The causal conjunction which begins verse 6 is translated “For” in the King James version, but o(ti here should be translated “Because.” This is actually the second causal sentence, it introduces the principle that divine punishment matches the crime or the evil of the culprit. “Because they,” the Tribulational unbelievers, have done something. And the verb that is used is e)kxew, used here for religious people killing believers in the Tribulation, and here it means to pour out. They have poured out, “they have shed the blood of the saints.” God’s timing in blessing is perfect but God’s timing in judgment is just as perfect, and it comes from the same source, the integrity of God. God always waits until exactly the right time to lower the boom. In bowl judgements number two and number three, blood on the seas and all of the lakes and rivers, the timing is perfect. This is the absolute perfect time to have that happen so that those who shed the blood of believers are now going to be judged for shedding innocent blood.

“Because they have poured out the blood of the saints and the prophets,” remember, this is an Old Testament dispensation, the Tribulation is the end of the Age of Israel and prophets are simply Bible teachers. Note that the prophets and the gift of prophecy which is now a dormant gift will be revived in the Tribulation. This is because of the nature of the Tribulation which is a time of historical trends being determined by prophecy. And because there is no prophecy used for historical trends in the Church Age since the completion of the canon of scripture the gift of prophecy is dormant. The gift of prophecy is used in the Tribulation for the communication of Bible doctrine, and believers who respond to doctrine will often be martyred along with those who communicate the doctrine. So we have “saints,” the congregation, and “prophets,” those who teach the doctrine. The persecutors are primarily dictators, rulers, and religious types.

One thing about the book of Revelation is that it settles the problem of the noun a(ima, “blood,” in many ways. In chapter one we have the blood of Christ referring to eternal salvation. The blood referred back to the Old Testament offerings which portrayed reconciliation, propitiation, redemption, unlimited atonement, and we have therefore the use of blood in its symbolic sense for eternal salvation.

As we move along in the book of Revelation we come to literal blood. Here we have the blood of the Tribulational martyrs, later on we are going to have the blood of many armies slaughtered on the battlefield in a world war. The last great world war of history comes at the end of the Tribulation and, of course, the Lord Jesus Christ terminates it. The Armageddon campaign, by the way, is the Middle East campaign but the war is global. Until the second advent of Jesus Christ we will never be free from warfare. Warfare is a way of life in the human race, and will continue to be so, our Lord Himself prophesied it.

In this verse we see once again one of the signs of degeneracy and it comes from organised evil. Remember, we have three false systems in a nation: pseudo-morality — maximum arrogance, a system of morality in the cosmic system; disorganised evil; organised evil. Disorganised evil is always tolerant of Christianity in a country because Christianity is always trying to evangelise in that field and disorganised evil is trying to evangelise the Christians. When organised evil comes along it always persecutes the Christians, it persecutes self-righteous arrogance, and it even persecutes disorganised evil because disorganised evil competes with organised evil. This type of thing goes on constantly but the intensification of it will come in the future in the Tribulation when there will occur a tremendous persecution of believers, greater than any persecution of the first century and greater than any persecution in history. Here it is mentioned as “the blood of the saints and the prophets.”

The source of the persecution is twofold. It is primarily religion because religion becomes the state. When religion becomes the state, when religion and the state are one and the same, you have organised evil — the worst kind of organised evil. Religion is always inconsistent because religion does not have Bible doctrine to keep it straight, and not adhering to Bible doctrine religion always gets into irrationality and inconsistency. For example, the World Council of Churches and the National Council of Churches illustrate the point. They have been giving money to various terrorist groups. As soon as they think someone is downtrodden they arm them and they actually sponsor terrorism in many parts of the world through their money. They are inconsistent. They are against violence but they support terrorism and this is what happens when Christianity becomes political. We are not here to be political, we are here to be totally and completely separated from politics. It is not a part of our Christian responsibility to get involved in politics, to get involved in social action, to become involved in the various political activities which eventually lead to civil disobedience. When Christianity becomes involved in politics and tries to tell the state how to run its business, inevitably it leads to civil disobedience. This is why so many born-again believers become revolutionary.

Why are we here? We are in this world but we are not of this world. That means simply that our role in our client nation is first of all to be good citizens, and that means everything that is involved in citizenship that does not enter into politics as such. We should serve in the military, we should pay our taxes and not cheat on our income tax. We should be involved in jury duty because Christians generally can think a lot straighter than most other people about the law. We are to render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, but the only way that we can help our country is to be involved in the plan of God for our lives. We are here to form a pivot to preserve our nation. The more mature believers the greater blessing to our country — blessing by association, blessing by having a pivot and the fulfilment of client nation functions. We have freedom of speech with goes with freedom of the press, preaching from pulpits, all tied in together. We are free therefore to evangelise, to witness, to support missionaries and evangelists. In sending out missionaries we are fulfilling the primary function of the client nation to God.

We as believers have a peculiar responsibility to our country because whether our country survives or not depends upon the believer's attitude toward Bible doctrine. That is when Christians are tipping the balance in the direction of glorifying the Lord. But when believers become apostate and become involved in cosmic one, the interlocking systems of arrogance, and cosmic two, the interlocking systems of hatred (Satan's anti-Christian propaganda machine), then through the various categories of arrogance they lose out completely and become detrimental. This is the place of negative volition; the divine dynasphere is the place of positive volition toward God's plan.

As a result, when organised evil takes control of a government then there is persecution. Always when there is persecution a lot of believers get killed. This started in John's day when he was writing this. The believers were being persecuted, they were being tortured, imprisoned and executed. Whenever that happens believers die without seeing what happened. In their death they are sometimes discouraged, especially if they do not have the proper doctrine, because it looks as though their persecutors are going to get away with it. But that never, never happens. That is the principle found in the last half of verse six. No one ever gets away with criminal activity, with persecution of the believer. The martyrs always die before they see the results because God is perfect, God's timing is perfect, God's timing with regard to His administration of justice is perfect, and there is always punishment for those who are criminals. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap" applies as a divine law. So we have the punishment of the persecutors of believers in the Tribulation.

It begins with the conjunction kai which introduces a result from what precedes. It is translated "and so" or "therefore." With this we have the perfect active indicative of the verb didomi which means to give here, "Therefore you have given." The perfect tense is a dramatic perfect, it represents an existing state and describes vividly the expedition and ease with which God judges the religious crowd, the dictators, who are persecuting believers. The dramatic perfect emphasises the results of the action and emphasises the results of judgment from the third bowl which destroys the drinking water of the land mass on planet earth.

God took all of those religious people and they all have a computerised number, their card which they have to have to buy food or to have any privileges in the countries involved. Their number is 666 and is a part of computerised tyranny in the Tribulation, and it is also called the mark of the beast dictator. And God gives them another mark, a cancer under the second bowl judgment. So they have a mark of privilege, an ID card; now God gives them a warning. The second thing is that a lot of these people begin to shed the blood of the believers, so God gives them back blood. This time there is blood in the sea, blood in the fresh water, as we saw from the third bowl judgment. The first judgment was the cancer, the second and the third took care of water, both salt water and fresh water.

Note the principle. Before God administers any final justice He always gives the unbeliever an extra chance. They are still alive, they still have volition, they still have the opportunity of believing in the Lord Jesus Christ for eternal salvation, and we see God's grace even in judgements. So divine judgements through human history have a twofold concept. They are designed to preserve the human race and to perpetuate it to the end of history. Left to his own devices man by man's decisions would destroy himself, the human race would not survive. But the human race has survived and the human race will continue to survive because of divine judgment. That is a grace principle.

Then these judgements are administered in a very interesting way. There are warning judgements first. These first three judgements are warnings to unbelievers to bring them around to reality.

The active voice: God the Son produces the action of the verb, as so stated by the pur suitant messenger. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. The accusative singular direct object is a(ima, "blood." They shed blood; now they are drinking blood, "and so you have given them blood to drink." The word "them" is the dative plural indirect object from a)utoj. The aorist active infinitive from pinw is the verb for "drink." It is a dramatic aorist for a result which has just been accomplished or is on the point of being accomplished. Many of these people are going to die because they continue in negative volition. These are tremendous great warnings. Yes, they hurt; yes, they are uncomfortable, but they have tortured, they have killed, and they think nothing of it. Now they have a chance to think about it and to orient to the concept of the total depravity of man. They have chance to look at their lives and see their failures and do something about it, believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. They have heard the gospel time and time and time again, so it isn't that they lack knowledge of the issue; they understand that Christ is the issue. That is not their problem. Their problem is that arrogance divorces from reality. When they have an ulcer on their epidermis and the only thing they can drink is blood they begin to think a little bit! They hurt, they are uncomfortable, they don't like it. Inevitably they will then consider the gospel one more time, and that is the grace of God. God in His matchless grace has found a way to reach all kinds of people through punishment. The punishment is gradual but there never was a human being and there never will be a human being that didn't have every opportunity to be saved, "and so you have given them blood to drink," that is the dramatic aorist.

The second bowl judgment was against salt water of the seas and deprived the guilty of sea food by killing all life in the sea, plus destroying the cycle of evaporation of water and its precipitation to land mass. If the water is full of blood and the blood evaporates it is going to rain blood, and this would destroy crops and the food of the earth. The first water supply was hit with the third grenade, the third bowl judgment, and the fresh water supply in lakes and rivers and streams also turned to blood so that all the guilty have to drink is blood. They shed the blood of the innocent; now they drink blood instead of water. Divine justice always makes the punishment fit the crime and also gives those being punished a frame of reference so they can profit from their punishment. These are unbelievers we are discussing. We already know the blessings of being disciplined by God as believers. It is hard to realise that unbelievers in historical disaster or personal catastrophe are in a state of grace. God never punished anyone apart from His grace, and the only time that the state of grace is over is when the unbeliever dies.

The blood is a reminder that they have rejected the blood of Christ, the saving work of Christ on the cross. The blood is a reminder that they have reacted and have murdered Tribulational believers. The unprecedented violence in the Tribulation is punished and the imprecatory prayers of Tribulational martyrs are simultaneously answered.

So we have the justice of the third bowl judgment, and we find it in two words. The first is the present active indicative of e)imi, the verb to be, and with this we have the predicate nominative plural of a)cioj, "they are deserving." The progressive present tense is for linear aktionsart. God is punishing them, giving them what they deserve. Even though He is tempering it with grace they do deserve it. God never punishes anyone beyond what they deserve. The active voice: the unbelievers of the Tribulation, especially religious types, produce the action of the verb. This is the declarative indicative mood for reality. The predicate nominative means deserving. Literally, it is translated “they are deserving” but it is an idiom which should be translated, “as they deserve.” So the last phrase of verse six: “therefore you have given them blood to drink as they deserve.”

The entire verse: “Because they have shed the blood of the saints and the prophets, therefore you have given them blood to drink as they deserve.”

Under the principle that grace always precedes judgment these Tribulational unbelievers have every opportunity to respond to the gospel and be saved. This means that they have been evangelised by gospel teaching. They have also been evangelised by disaster, crisis evangelism occurs during a time of historical disaster. Time, of course, is just a drop in the bucket compared to eternity and this principle of crisis evangelism as it pertains to the Tribulational unbelievers is found in Mark 8:35-38:

Verse 35, “For whoever wishes to save his soul shall lose it,” referring to people like the scribes and the Pharisees who were working to save their souls — salvation by works — “and whoever loses his soul [life] for my sake and the gospel shall save it.” So there we have a perfect picture of the religious crowd and the Tribulational martyrs.

Verse 36, here is the issue of crisis evangelism: “What shall it profit a man to gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?” Unbelievers prosper, evil people prosper, but always if you can look far enough you will discover someone cracked the maturity barrier and they are being blessed by association.

Verse 37, “For what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?” Nothing can buy salvation, it was paid for by the blood of Christ on the cross.

Verse 38, “For whoever is ashamed of me and my doctrines in this adulterous,” adultery, by the way, is used for religion — “and sinful generation, the Son of Man will also be ashamed of him when he comes in the glory of his Father and with his holy angels.”

Crisis evangelism always occurs in times of historical disaster on the earth. Crisis evangelism takes the reality of catastrophe and relates it to the message of the gospel so that the unbeliever can focus his attention on that message which he has previously rejected. Under crisis evangelism many respond to the gospel, they become believers in Christ and, therefore, are snatched as brands from the burning. Others persist in their negative volition.

The Tribulational unbelievers thirsted for the blood of the saints and the prophets, and they martyred them. But God takes their thirst for blood one step farther and He gives them only blood to drink. Therefore, once again, God makes the punishment fit the crime in the administration of the third bowl judgment. Furthermore, these thirsty unbelievers also have a reminder from the splotch on their skin, the cancer of the epidermis. They chose the mark of the beast as a bad decision, therefore God gives them a mark from His good decision, His grace decision, something to make them hurt and bring them back to reality. This is the last call of evangelism for divine judgment is designed to bring the unbeliever to the end of his own resources and bring evangelistic reality into his thinking.

Verse 7 is more or less parenthetical and is designed to remind us of a principle. Not every one of us is in the firing line but everyone can enjoy when justice is accomplished in history. These angelic creatures, members of the nobility in the college of heralds, are the ones who are executing these judgements. The judgements come from God, the whole system of protocol filters out any injustice that might occur, they are perfect justice. Now we have a response from those who were the victims. The victims of these seven judgements are in the process of being judged and at the same time are also the recipients of crisis evangelism. There is an attitude in heaven on the part of the Tribulational martyrs which is expressed in this verse.

We note first of all that this passage begins with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated "Then," followed by the aorist active indicative of the verb akouo which means to hear or to listen. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the apostle John who is the human author of the book of Revelation produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the continuation of this vision.

The vision deals with the altar, the objective genitive of the Greek word qusiasthrion, meaning altar. This is the altar of Revelation chapters eight, fourteen, as well as 6:9-11. The first of them is in chapter six, in which passage we find our Lord Jesus Christ has broken the fifth seal and the apostle John sees under the altar the souls of those who have been murdered because of the Word of God and because of the testimony which they have maintained.

Qusiasthrion has to do with a special altar in heaven where those who have been martyred are permitted to come to offer imprecatory prayers. This altar therefore personifies these Tribulational martyrs. They have advanced through Bible doctrine, they have suffered martyrdom because of this and they are the victims of great injustice. These Tribulational martyrs are winners all the way. They have utilised the principles of the Word of God, they have utilised the second stage of the faith-rest drill, the essence of God rationale, the plan of God rationale, the logistical grace rationale, the imputation of God rationale — they have used all of these rationales in a very marvellous way. So they died as great heroes in the battlefield of the angelic conflict, and therefore they are claiming a promise in heaven to which they have a right. They cannot see the circumstances on earth. They are waiting for justice to be accomplished by our Lord Jesus Christ, and therefore the altar, therefore the imprecatory prayers, therefore this function of the faith-rest drill even in heaven.

The second passage is found in chapter 8:3-5. This angel, the king of arms, the highest-ranking seraph in the angelic college of heralds, took his place before the altar. He had an incense shovel made of gold and much incense was given to him that he might offer the prayers of the saints. These are the imprecatory prayers of the Tribulational martyrs and they were to be offered on the golden altar which is before the throne. And when the smoke of the incense, which are the prayers of the saints, went up before God from the hand of the king of arms, the king of arms took the incense shovel and filled it with fire from the altar. The significance is that there is no injustice in history that is not, sooner or later, punished by our Lord Jesus Christ. God's timing in punishment is perfect and no group or individual ever commits an injustice against someone else without punishment being involved.

The third passage is in chapter 14:18, the king of arms who has authority over fire came from the altar, and he shouted with a magnificent voice, and he said, Send in your sharp sickle. This is referring to the seven last plagues, the seven bowl judgements. The saturation of degeneracy and all that pertains to it has now reached a point where the judgment is exactly on time.

In our verse 7 of chapter 16 we have, "Then I heard from the altar." What was heard from the altar is stated next. We have the present active participle of the verb legw, and it should be translated "respond." The pictorial present in which the mind pictures the events in the process of occurrence. The active voice: the martyred Tribulational believers under the altar of incense produce the action.

The vocative from the altar follows. It is found in the form of an affirmative particle nai, and it actually means yes. Then the vocative singular from kurioj followed by qeoj, "Lord God." The word "Lord" is a reference to the unique person of Christ in hypostatic union, undiminished deity and true humanity in one person forever; the second vocative, qeoj, refers to the fact that He is God. The other one has to do with His great power. It is pantokratwr which is correctly translated "the Omnipotent One" or "the Almighty One," "yes, Lord God Almighty." The significance of pantokratwr is that the most powerful of all demons under the command of Satan are called kosmokratwr. The last world war in history at the end of the Tribulation is started by kosmokratwr. Pantokratwr has greater power than kosmokratwr. Jesus Christ is the Almighty One, the pantokratwr. So His name is used to identify Him as the one who controls history. And since the altar is the personification of the Tribulational martyrs it is they who are speaking and using this vocative.

The response from the altar then follows. We have the fact that judgment is in the process of occurring. We have a nominative plural subject krisij and with it the possessive genitive from the pronoun su, "your judgements." This is elliptical, the verb to be is applied, "your judgements are." Then we have two characteristics, a)lhqinoj and dikajoj, "true and just."

Translation: "Then I heard the altar respond, Yes, Lord God Almighty, your judgements are in accordance with doctrine and justice."

A)lhqinoj, our first word, as used of the Tribulational martyrs recognises that the seven last plagues or bowl judgements are consistent with the doctrinal teaching of the Word of God. The second word, dikajoj, is used of the Tribulational martyrs recognising that the seven last plagues are consistent with the perfect holiness or integrity of our Lord Jesus Christ. In other words, the Tribulational martyrs recognise that they are receiving an answer to their prayers and they also recognise the fact that even though they did not live to see

God's judgment on those who were their persecutors, those who perpetrated injustice against them, they now know that it has been accomplished and that everyone who had anything to do with killing these innocent people is now in the process of being judged for it. The principle is that God does not overlook any injustice to any believer by any member of the human race. In the application of the essence of God's rationale as well as the plan of God's rationale the believer must recognise the fact that every injustice in life will be rectified, but it is God's timing that counts.

There is a reason why God does not often give instant judgment for some injustice in life. This means that the function of the three stages of the faith-rest drill produce patience and peace of mind among believers even under the most unjust circumstances and the greatest of persecution and tyranny. Doctrine is the communication of the gospel under the circumstances of grace before judgment, and that is one of the ways in which it is used here and one of the reasons why the judgment is delayed. The judgment is delayed for several reasons. One has to do with the fact that many of these people who were their persecutors, had heard their testimony, had heard the gospel, and under the pressure of disaster they will make a decision to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.

There are two principles that are found here as far as the Tribulation is concerned. The greatest saturation of evangelism in all of human history occurs prior to the last bowl judgements, the greatest historical disasters of history. All of that is called normal evangelism and we have studied it under the principle of grace before judgment. Once these seven bowls are administered as judgements then we have a new category of evangelism: grace in judgment. Grace in judgment is one of the most powerful systems of evangelism, and now instead of normal evangelism we will be studying crisis evangelism. Often in the midst of great historical disaster when people begin to hurt the fact that they are hurting and miserable and being deprived of their normal pleasures in life will bring them back to reality. Locked-in arrogance of cosmic one has blinded them, they are suffering from scar-tissue of the soul, they are in the tragic situation of spiritual blindness; and when you combine all of these things together it takes great tragedy, catastrophe and disaster to bring them back to reality, to bring them back to the point of where they realise their need for the Lord Jesus Christ. In other words, to bring them to the end of their own circumstances in life where they can help themselves. God does not help those who help themselves. God helps the helpless, and this is dramatised by crisis evangelism.

So doctrine is the communication of the gospel under normal circumstances — normal evangelism. These unbelievers being judged in the Tribulation heard the gospel many times before divine judgment occurred. Justice is the function of divine judgment in crisis evangelism. This is grace in judgment. Many of the unbelievers who have been guilty of persecution and murdering believers in the Tribulation have heard the gospel many times and it is only when they are hurting under judgment that they will recall the gospel message which brought back to reality their situation and reminded them that they had come to the end of their own resources and they needed something beyond themselves.

Principle: the honourable purpose of divine judgment

1. Divine judgment is strictly a grace function from the holiness or the integrity of God. To appreciate this we go back to the imputation rationale. Human life is imputed by God in every case to the human soul. Man cannot create life; God has created life. That human life resides in the soul forever, not just during life but at dying, after death, and in eternity; and where that human soul resides in eternity depends upon attitude toward Jesus Christ. Human life is imputed at the point of birth and simultaneously Adam's original sin was imputed to the genetically-formed old sin nature so that we are born physically alive but spiritually dead. The wages of sin is (spiritual) death. That spiritual death occurs when we are born. This is the grace of God. Anyone who dies before reaching accountability automatically goes to heaven without believing in Christ. Accountability is the point at which a decision can be made. That is because the condemnation must precede justification.

What does that mean as far as our personal sins are concerned? All of the sins of human history, all of the sins that have ever been committed from the fall of Adam and the woman to the last sin of the Millennium have all been put into the computer of divine degrees, and they have stayed in the computer until our Lord Jesus Christ went to the cross. When He went to the cross every sin was imputed to Christ by God the Father and every one of those sins was judged.

What was the cause of all of this? God the Father loved God the Son with an eternal love, but God the Father had to set aside that love, it was superseded by the justice of God the Father. The justice of the Father took all of those sins, all of the sins of the human race that would ever be committed, and took them right out of the computer and imputed them to Christ and judged them. This caused our Lord to scream out, "My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me?" God the Father had to forsake the Son because He was made sin for us. God the Holy Spirit had to forsake the Son because He was bearing the sins of the world and God can have nothing to do with sin, God separated Himself from sin. Jesus Christ is the God-Man; it was His humanity that bore those sins. Even His deity could have nothing to do with them. So all of the sins were imputed to Christ on the cross and they were judged.

The source of salvation is the harshest divine judgment in history, the greatest judgment in history. The greatest disaster in history is the source of greatest blessing: our so great salvation, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." And this was in judgment, Christ was in judgment on the cross. In judgment the justice of God is the source of judgment; the justice of God is the source of blessing. In judgment the justice of God is functioning, the greatest disaster in history, and the source is the justice of God.

Now, we come to the cross and we believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. In the moment we believe God the Father takes the other half of His holiness and He imputes it to us. We now have the righteousness of God and the source in the justice of God, and all blessing comes to us down the grace pipeline from the justice of God — one half of divine holiness, to the righteousness of God which is the other half of divine holiness. God doesn't bless us because of anything we do, God blesses us because we have His righteousness; and the justice of God sends all blessing down the grace pipeline. Out of judgment comes the greatest of blessings.

We are faced with the fact that there are a lot of evil, cruel, vile, vicious people, religious people on the earth, and these religious people have persecuted and murdered the believers of the Tribulation. Therefore, this principle: the honourable purpose of divine judgment. Divine judgment is strictly a grace function from the holiness or the integrity of God, the same holiness or integrity of God that took our sins and imputed them to Christ on the cross.

2. This judgment is designed to protect the human race from self-destruction in the historical phase of the angelic conflict.

3. Man's free will apart from restraint is self-destructive.

4. Divine judgment protects mankind from destroying itself and thereby provides the basis for the perpetuation of the human race throughout human history. The human race would have destroyed itself thousands of years ago were it not for the fact that divine judgment is a backfire judgment to protect the human race from self-destruction.

5. Divine judgment, then, is the grace function of crisis evangelism. In addition to protecting the human race from self-destruction divine judgment is the grace function of crisis evangelism. In the most severe judgements from God there is grace.

6. Apart from the physical death of those being judged the purpose of catastrophe and disaster is to orient man to the reality of his need for salvation. People are divorced from reality through arrogance. Life in cosmic one is saturation of arrogance. Arrogance divorces from reality. Even the source of psychosis and neurosis is related to arrogance. So to bring people back to reality their arrogance has to be eliminated somehow, and the only way to eliminate the arrogance in those who live in the cosmic system is to make them hurt so badly that they are brought to a temporary state of humility. They are brought to the end of their own resources and there is nothing they can do. Consequently, apart from physical death, for those being judged the purpose of the catastrophe or the disaster is to orient them to reality, to give them a realisation that they need this salvation that they have been hearing about in normal evangelism.

7. Normal evangelism is that period of grace before judgment, but those involved in the cosmic system are so divorced from reality through arrogance and scar-tissue of the soul that they do not respond to the gospel in normal times. There has to be crisis evangelism.

8. As long as people are alive there is hope, therefore any divine judgment that does not kill the recipient means crisis evangelism. Notice that in the administration of the first three bowl judgements no one has really been killed yet. As long as the unbeliever is alive there is hope that he will accept Christ as saviour.

God speaks to the human race through the communication of doctrine. This is historical grace. God speaks through the communication of three categories of doctrine; category #1, the laws of divine establishment; category #2, the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; category #3, Bible doctrine. Each one of these three categories has a recipient. Category #1 doctrine, the laws of divine establishment, is for believer and unbeliever; category #2 is for unbelievers only; category #3, is for the believer only — doctrine is to orient the believer to the plan of God. So God speaks to the human race through the communication of Bible doctrine, this is historical grace. But God speaks through personal and historical disaster as well. If people will not listen to doctrine, if the unbeliever rejects the gospel, he can count on having some personal and historical disaster in his life which is crisis evangelism, crisis grace. Divine judgment is designed for evangelism just as certainly as gospel preaching or the believer witnessing to the unbeliever is designed to present information for his salvation.

So by way of summary, grace before judgment is the function of normal evangelism. Grace in judgment is the function of crisis evangelism. Judgment in historical disaster is designed to bring the unbeliever back to reality, to give him the opportunity to believe in Christ for until the unbeliever dies he can be saved at any time by personal faith in Jesus Christ. Therefore, as long as the unbeliever is alive he can be saved, only physical death terminates the opportunity for the unbeliever to have eternal salvation. Up until the moment of physical death one can always express positive volition to the gospel by personal faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. For negative persons living in the cosmic system the mind is only stimulated and only motivated to consider gospel information when one is under pressure of disaster. Not only is crisis evangelism a part of divine judgment but, again, it is the perpetuation of mankind in history which, of course, is the second reason for the grace function of divine judgment. Man left to his own devices would eventually destroy himself and the rest of the human race with him. But God interferes with backfire judgment which destroys one portion of the human race to preserve the rest of the human race and, therefore, divine judgment is preventative surgery, the one way to guarantee that man will continue to live on earth during the course of human history. Remember that the justice of God — one half of divine holiness — is the source of both blessing and judgment during the course of human history. Furthermore, the greatest judgment of all was the cross itself which gives us the pattern — the justice of God is the source of judgment; the justice of God is also the source of blessing.

In verses eight and nine we have the fourth bowl judgment. In verse 8 we begin with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated “Then.” Next we have the adjective numeral tetarōj which means “the fourth.” This is the fourth member of the execution squad, a pur sui vant messenger, and he pulls the pin on the grenade of the judgment which has been issued to him. The pulling of the pin is described in the aorist active indicative of the verb e)kxew, “the fourth angel poured out his bowl.” The aorist tense is a constative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the fourth member of the squad produces the action of the verb through obedience, therefore he has virtue. The indicative mood is declarative for the fact that we are now going to have another judgment, but a judgment that does not kill. Therefore we are dealing once again with the subject of crisis evangelism. We have the accusative singular direct object of the noun fialh, “bowl,” and it is said to be “his” bowl, a)utoj plus the genitive means that he possesses the responsibility for the administration of this judgment on the earth.

This is a fascinating judgment because we are going to note not only the obedience of this angel but its effect upon weather. The obedience of the fourth member of the execution squad emphasises the basic principle of virtue-first. The point is that no one is ever happy with freedom, no one even has the capacity for freedom, until he has the virtue of humility. Therefore, freedom cannot exist without authority and it is response to authority that changes everything.

The target is very important here. The target for this judgment is the sun, meaning that this plague or judgment will be used again in crisis evangelism. Solar energy penetrates the atmosphere in the approximate percentages: 35 per cent of solar radiation is reflected back into space by clouds, ice, and water; fifteen per cent is absorbed in the air by water vapour, ozone, clouds, dust, and air molecules; the remaining 50 per cent is absorbed at the surface and it becomes surface heating the earth and the atmosphere unequally. There is never any equal distribution. There is no equality in life and there is no equality in nature. Thereby it triggers global circulation of air and ocean currents and this, of course, has a great deal to do with weather.

So we notice the nature of the fourth grenade, or bowl judgment. It begins with the connective conjunction kai introducing a result from what precedes, “And so.” Next comes the aorist passive indicative of didomi. Ordinarily this word didomi means to give, here it means to delegate. Delegation of responsibility must go in the direction of virtue. Those who can properly qualify to properly fulfil delegated responsibility are virtuous. The members of this execution squad have perfect virtue, they are already in whatever is ultimate sanctification for the elect order of angels. The aorist tense is a dramatic aorist, it states a present reality from an eschatological event in the Tribulation. It is an idiom which is used for emphasis. The passive voice: the sun receives the action of the verb, and we have a declarative indicative mood for a dogmatic statement of eschatological doctrine. A very fascinating phenomena is going to occur at the end of the Tribulation prior to the greatest world war in history. So this is not a destroying judgment, the destruction comes in the last world war in history.

Next we have a dative neuter singular from the intensive pronoun a)utoj which is mistranslated in the King James version. The neuter is not translated “him,” it is translated “it,” and it refers to the sun. The corrected translation should read: “Then the fourth angel poured out his bowl on the sun; and to it [the sun]

Then we have the aorist active infinitive of kaumatizw which means to burn. The power is given here to burn,” but we are not talking here about sun-bathing, “the power to burn mankind.” And then we have the instrumental of two words, e)n plus the instrumental of pur which generally means fire but here means heat. This could mean, therefore, to scorch with heat, unbearable heat. The recipients of this divine judgment do not die immediately but have plenty of time to think about the gospel.

What do we have here? First of all, the atmosphere which protects the earth from the rays of the sun is divided into five categories, the troposphere, the stratosphere, the mesosphere, thermosphere, and exosphere. Held in place by gravity, the atmosphere filters a certain amount of heat. The electrically-charged upper atmosphere is called ionosphere, and in the ionosphere we have the Van-Allen radiation belts. They have magnetic fields which deflect charged particles of solar wind and reduce their speed from supersonic to subsonic velocity. In the thermosphere gas has absorbed some of the ultraviolet radiation from the sun. In the stratosphere the ozone layer absorbs more of the ultraviolet rays, as well as high-energy cosmic rays which bombard molecules, and they create showers of less energetic cosmic rays. In the troposphere we have most of the oxygen, nitrogen and carbon-dioxide that supports life and this is the buoy which supports the flight of birds. In other words, the earth's rotation on its axis causes the fluid outer core to act as a dynamo, and this produces a magnetic field which deflects solar wind and forms the magnetosphere, shielding the biosphere from hostile charged particles. This tremendous filtering of solar radiation is very important. Without it we would all burn up.

The fourth bowl judgment, then, obviously permits some of the gamma rays, the x-rays, the ultraviolet rays, and infrared to penetrate the ozone layer. Incoming solar radiation is balanced by heat radiating back into space from the earth. Water vapour and carbon-dioxide in the atmosphere intercepts some of this outflow, raising the temperature of the earth in what we call operation greenhouse. So we have, then, this sort of phenomenon occurring. God is going to allow a little more heat, the solar winds, to have a greater penetration at that time. It is not going to have any permanent damage because all the weapons for the Armageddon campaign will be operational shortly after this phenomenon occurs.

“Then the fourth angel [the pur sui vant messenger] poured out his bowl on the sun; and so there was delegated to it [the sun] the power to burn [or scorch] mankind with heat.”

Verse 9, the threefold results of this. We might call this weather disaster: the judgment of intense heat. We have another conjunction this time. It introduces some previous results and we translate it “Consequently.” With it we have the aorist passive indicative of verb kaumatizw which means to scorch, “Consequently they were scorched.” The culminative aorist tense views this judgment in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. We have studied those existing results under the principle of crisis evangelism. We see now that these people are hurting. They are suffering but they are not dying and they have the opportunity, therefore, to consider what Hell is going to be like without going there. Some people can only learn the hard way and until they hurt they don't care. In the passive voice the unbelievers in the Tribulation who have been evangelised under normal conditions are now evangelised again under crisis conditions. The only difference between normal and crisis evangelism is this: in normal evangelism there is always a clear presentation of the gospel — usually many times, but under crisis evangelism only little phrases come in, and one hurts so much that he is brought out of the cosmic system in the sense of coming back to the reality of those things that were declared about eternity. This demonstrates the fact that even divine judgment always has a grace side, and that is not only true for the unbeliever but it applies to us to. Some people even get back to Bible class when they hurt enough!

“Consequently mankind were scorched,” and they were scorched with scorching heat. The scorching heat results from the opening either of the Van Allen belts or the ozone layer, or probably both. The recipients of this judgment are unbelievers in the last half of the Tribulation, the time of the devil’s desperation. We will have to classify this grenade as the weather grenade. So we have what could be called a weather catastrophe.

The weather of the earth is determined by the interaction of many planetary activities. For example, ocean movement, temperatures, rainfall, humidity, atmospheric pressure, sunshine, winds, all have something to do with weather. Weather starts with the sun’s radiation streaming toward the earth. As this radiation is moving toward the earth about 65 per cent of it reaches the earth. Thirty-five percent of solar radiation is reflected or deflected by clouds, dust, air, polar rock, ice, and so on. This means that 65 per cent is absorbed, and it is absorbed in three ways. Three per cent is absorbed by the ozone layer, 15 per cent by cloud and moist air, and 47 per cent is absorbed by the earth’s surface. The 65 per cent absorbed by the earth heats the atmosphere — unequally. Weather comes from the fact that it heats it unequally. At the equator warm, light water and air begin to move toward the poles, and they are replaced by heavier water and air which being much colder moves beneath them. Because the earth rotates these north-south movements are shifted toward the east in the northern hemisphere and toward the west in the southern hemisphere, and by warming different regions unequally, for example, the tropics are more strongly heated than the polar zones. Solar energy stirs the atmosphere into motion in a vast planetary scale. The result is what we call the wind system. Air warmed in the tropics rises and moves toward the poles where it cools and descends, and the rotation of the earth deflects these air currents into what we call globe-girdling cells of moving air. These cells define air circulation patterns and the prevailing winds at the surface of the earth.

The wind has a great deal to do with the weather. Surface wind plus the erratic westerlies at 60,000 feet and the Krakatoa easterlies at 80,000 feet have a tremendous amount to do with our weather. The jet stream, formed where warm tropical air meets cold polar air, travels around the mid latitudes at as much as 300 miles per hour, and the undulations of the jet stream travelling at roughly 35,000 feet affect surface winds which in turn affect the currents of the sea. Then there is the polar vortex moving sometimes at 40,000 feet and sometimes at 200,000 feet. The very climates of the earth, both in rainfall and vegetation, are vitally affected by the surging patterns of air, wind, and water which spread the sun’s warmth over the earth unequally. Like a giant engine the global wind systems and the wind cells function at the endless task of trying to erase the contrasts of temperature between the tropics and the poles. In addition, climate is affected by solar radiation, the hydrological cycle — evaporation and precipitation, wind currents, cold air transported from the poles to the equator, and warm air from the equator to the poles. They are constantly moving over each other and under each other.

Divine judgment of the fourth plague was a weather catastrophe in the form of scorching heat. Heat is necessary for planet earth but this is too much of a good thing. It is amazing how many times God judges us with too much of a good thing. Too much of a good thing, of course, not only indicates lack of capacity for life but it also destroys that wonderful variation in life from which we extract the virtue uses that are related to a personal sense of responsibility. Weather disaster is a part of crisis evangelism and there are two negative results in the rest of this verse: blasphemy toward God and rejection of Christ or negative volition. This doesn't mean all people are this way but we simply have the fact that it is amazing that everyone doesn't accept Christ under these conditions. Even when the message is as lucid as it could be, and even though the circumstances are made as easy as possible to believe in Christ, there are always those who are going to reject it. That is the fascinating thing about the human soul.

Here is the grace of God offering this last call, this last chance to be saved, bringing them back to reality because they are in pain, knocking out for the moment the arrogance by which they have rejected the gospel under normal circumstances. And what do they do? Here is God doing them a favour and they malign Him, and that is human nature. It says in verse 9 "they blasphemed the person of God, who has authority over these plagues: and, furthermore, they did not change their minds to give him the glory." They turned against God completely.

The aorist active indicative of blasphemew comes first. People without capacity for life can never possess genuine gratitude. Genuine gratitude is a sign of great capacity for life. Blasphemew means abusive speech; abusive speech means abusive thought. Toward man blasphemew means to slander or to malign; toward God the word is transliterated and we simply use the word blasphemy. This is verbal antagonism toward God. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. They not only rejected the gospel but they maligned God, they judged God. This means that they had moved once more back into the place of scar-tissue of the soul. The terrible judgment brings them out for a moment, gives them reality, gives them the opportunity of being lucid and thinking about it, and they maligned God and that puts them right back into cosmic one. That maligning of God, that judging, comes from the cosmic system. Only an arrogant person has the nerve to be judging other people. They maligned the "person" of God, the accusative singular, the direct object, means the person of God, not the name of God. They maligned His person even though He was doing them a favour. He was bringing them back to the point where they had to consider the great issue.

With this we have the articular present active participle of e)wxw and it is translated "who has." This is maligning God who possesses the authority, the accusative singular direct object of e)cousia, God has the authority, God has the power over these plagues, "and they blasphemed [maligned, judged] the person of God who has the authority over these plagues." Blasphemy is only possible where truth or doctrine is known and rejected. Hence, the negative volition and the status quo of these Tribulational unbelievers. They refuse to take the responsibility for their own negative decisions and actions and therefore their divorcement from reality is simply arrogance, and arrogance is always human immaturity. These unbelievers blame God instead of their own volition for what is happening. They make wrong decisions and therefore have no control over their lives, no personal sense of destiny, and no capacity for happiness of any kind.

So far the first bowl judgements are not fatal. These unbelievers are getting four categories of judgment; none of them are taking any lives. So far these judgements are painful but they are not fatal, as illustrated by the fact that the recipients can not only speak but speak very forcefully in their blasphemy. They have the power of speech, they have the power of thought, "they did not change their mind about the gospel." These judgements, therefore, are a part of crisis evangelism and comparable to the believer's intensive discipline. Three categories of divine judgment follow the same picture: warning judgment, the seal judgements of chapter 6 and the trumpet judgements of chapters 8 & 9; intensive judgment, the seven last plagues; finally there will be dying judgment at the second advent, the baptism of fire.

In the crisis evangelistic situations they are deliberately being punished to the point of hurting so that they will give some consideration to the gospel. They have come to the end of their own resources, there is nothing they can do about the Van Allen belt, there is nothing they can do about the ozone layer, about bloody water, about cancer of the skin. So this is a good time to distinguish between the principles of discipline and judgment, and how they are related to grace.

Always, inevitably, all divine judgment is related to the grace of God. It comes from God's virtue. God is not vindictive, God is not implacable, God is not petty, God is not jealous, God is not arrogant. Such a thought is blasphemous and unthinkable. God is virtuous; He has perfect virtue. These judgements all emanate from His perfect virtue, His holiness, His integrity.

Crisis evangelism emphasises the power of both the blackout of the soul and scar-tissue of the soul. For crisis evangelism in time of historical disaster there are always those who are so hard-headed that they will consider and then blaspheme. One thing about those who become too involved in the cosmic system: they have no capacity for happiness or life and this is manifest by the fact that they have no gratitude. The scar-tissued unbeliever who is positive at God-consciousness will always respond sooner or later under the system of judgment which we have noted here. In the closing phrase of this verse, however, we see those who are still negative, "furthermore, they did not repent," the aorist active indicative of the verb metanoew. The word "repent" is no longer a valid word because it doesn't have any connotation that relates to the Greek. Metanoew means a complete change of mind, not to feel sorry for sin or to feel guilty. it has no emotional connotation, it means to change the mind. In this case it means to change the mind about the gospel, to change the mind about the Lord Jesus Christ.

"furthermore, they did not change their minds," the culminative aorist tense views their rejection of Christ in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. They refused. Many of them will die in the world war coming up, others will die at the baptism of fire, they will be judged, and they must take the responsibility for their own decisions, therefore the active voice: Tribulational unbelievers with blackout of the soul produce the action of the verb. While at the moment they are not taking the responsibility for this decision the time will come when they have to. Sooner or later we all take the responsibility, whether we want to or not, for bad decisions. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of their persistent rejection of the gospel under crisis evangelism.

Then we have the aorist active infinitive of didomi, “to give,” “to give him [God] the glory.” The Greek word doxa has to do with the grace of God of providing, even in judgment, this wonderful opportunity for salvation. How could they give God glory? By personal faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. The absence of the definite article emphasises the quality of the noun. Mankind shares in the strategic victory of the angelic conflict and when anyone believes in Christ he immediately becomes a strategic victor.

There are two categories of judgment from God. The first is judgment by death and the second is judgment by pain. Judgment by death is the function of God’s grace in the perpetuation of the human race during history. It is designed to protect the human race from the human race and thereby to protect the human race from self-destruction. Judgment by death, therefore, protects the human race from being destroyed by its own volition. Man’s free will apart from establishment restraints is self-destructive. When mankind is negative toward establishment authority, which occurs quite frequently in various parts of planet earth, man becomes degenerate under the principle of organised and disorganised evil. The killing of the citizens of Sodom, Gomorrah, and the other cities of the plain was a divine judgment to protect the human race on planet earth. If the cancer is permitted to continue the human race would be destroyed, so periodically and when necessary in any given generation God wipes out a segment of the human race.

The perpetuation of the human race throughout history until the end of the Millennium is one of God’s grace functions in judgment, and God in His wisdom destroys a segment of the human in order to preserve the rest of the human race. Until the end of the Millennium God has promised that mankind will continue to live on planet earth and therefore God uses judgment by death to protect the human race from too many bad decisions which might destroy mankind. Backfire judgment therefore destroys the cancer of the human race to preserve any healthy portion of the human race; self-destruction is imminent from time to time. Judgment by death, therefore, is classified as preventative surgery by which God uses death to remove the cancer in order that the normal tissue might have a chance — the cancer of arrogance, degeneracy, organised evil, disorganised evil, etc. Mankind, therefore, will continue to live on planet earth until the end of the Millennium because of this category of judgment by death.

The second judgment is the one we will study in verse 10, judgment by pain. Judgment by pain is the function of God’s grace in crisis evangelism. Grace before judgment is the function of normal evangelism while grace in judgment is the function of crisis evangelism. Normal evangelism is the communication of the gospel message under normal circumstances and even under prosperous circumstances of life. Under these conditions the unbeliever’s rejection of the gospel message means both cosmic involvement and blackout of the soul. Under cosmic involvement the unbeliever becomes disoriented to reality so that he is totally indifferent to normal evangelism no matter how great or how powerful the communication may be through an evangelist, through the witness of some individual, through the written page, or whatever is used. Therefore, to bring the unbeliever back to reality, to give him another chance to hear the gospel, pain is introduced in one form or another through either personal or historical disaster. Under personal suffering or historical disaster the unbeliever feels one or more of the categories of pain provided by God in His grace. This pain does not kill the unbeliever, instead it becomes another call, and sometimes the last call, to believe in Christ under the concept of crisis evangelism. Crisis evangelism, then, is the judgment of God bringing the unbeliever through pain to the end of his human resources, to bring him back to reality by means of temporary deliverance from the cosmic system. Pain often brings people out of the cosmic system. The preoccupation with pain often supersedes preoccupation with self and the opportunity to recall the gospel message which has previously been presented under normal evangelism is therefore provided. Pain becomes so intense in divine judgment that it actually distracts the unbeliever from the abnormal functions of the cosmic system, and it gives him an opportunity to orient to reality and to use his volition to make a decision for or against the Lord Jesus Christ. So any judgment or historical disaster which does not kill believer and unbeliever is, in the case of the unbeliever, crisis evangelism.

We have studied four bowl judgements in which relatively few people have been killed. In the first five bowl judgements the unbeliever population of the earth is alive and in the increasing categories of pain, so that when we come to the fifth bowl judgment in verse 10 the unbeliever is under a state of grace whereby he can believe in Christ for eternal salvation.

Judgment by death in previous generations has made it possible for all of us who are believers to be evangelised in this generation. Therefore, judgment by death to others means blessing in life for us — eternal salvation through faith in Christ. Judgment by death is grace blessing to the living, it provides opportunity for making another decision and making the decision for salvation. Judgment by death to some, then, is always blessing by grace to others who are living. Judgment by death removes the unbeliever where he is in a temporary fire waiting for the lake of fire, but those who are left behind are blessed by the death of those who were taken. The cancer is removed and the patient lives. The reason why we have all had that opportunity to believe in Christ is because in past generations God has judged large segments of the human race by physical death.

Judgment by pain is a grace blessing to the unbeliever, another chance to believe in Christ. The unbeliever is still among the living and as long as he is alive he can be saved, the door is not closed until he dies. Judgment by pain to the believer is another story which we call discipline. Judgment by pain for the believer is another chance to get back into the plan of God. If the believer is disillusioned, upset, unhappy in the social world, that is pain. The pain may be a reminder that he has lost his first priority which is the perception of Bible doctrine. Whenever doctrine is no longer the number one priority the believer is going to suffer pain. First of all, our pain is produced by our bad decisions. Then pain is produced under the principle of warning discipline and as the believer becomes aware of pain he is also brought back to reality.

Most believers become sloppy in their attendance at Bible class because their priorities are sloppy and they get involved in cosmic one. They become involved in arrogance and arrogance always divorces from reality. Arrogance always produces the wrong priorities in life.

Pain is crisis grace to bring us back into the plan of God; prosperity is normal grace from momentum in the plan of God. So when you're in suffering is always blessing; when you're out suffering is a pain. The pain is simply one of those grace goads from God to bring the believer back into His plan.

Verse 10 — the target of the fifth plague is given in the first phrase in the Greek, Kai o(pemptoj e)cxeen thn fialhn a)utou e)pi ton qronon tou qhriou. We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai translated "Then." We have the adjective numeral subject in the nominative case, pemptoj, translated "fifth." It is an adjective referring to the fifth member of the execution squad. It is an adjective numeral, it is the subject in the nominative case, and it refers to the pur sui vant messenger who will pull the pin on the fifth golden grenade, the fifth plague or judgment. The verb which goes with the subject is the aorist active indicative of e)kxew, our verb for pulling the pin. It means to pour out. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the fifth pur sui vant messenger demonstrates his virtue and his integrity, his orientation to the plan of God, his happiness, his capacity for life through implicit obedience to authority. This member of the squad is happy, he has an eternal happiness. He has perfect capacity for life and he has absolutely no freedom.

Freedom is not happiness, slavery isn't happiness. Happiness comes from capacity; capacity comes from authority. Authority is the basis for enforced humility, enforced humility is the beginning of virtue as well as the beginning of capacity for happiness and prosperity. Genuine humility is another step toward capacity for happiness, capacity for blessing, capacity for love, capacity for prosperity.

"And the fifth angel poured out his bowl," and inside of that bowl is darkness. We have had a progressive system of pain in each one of these grenades and there are apparently certain ones who were evangelised with the first grenade, other with the second, the third, and the fourth. Now there are a lot of holdouts and this is, as it were, a last call before God is going to start taking some of them in death in the sixth and seventh plagues.

And where did this angel pour the bowl? We have e)pi plus the accusative of qronoj plus the possessive genitive of qhrion, "on the throne of the beast dictator." The beast dictator is not only the political leader of the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation but he is also the religious ruler of ecumenical religion, the focal point of evil in the last half of the Tribulation. The target, then, is the great empire of the beast dictator of Revelation chapter thirteen, verses one through ten. The empire of darkness will receive darkness.

Each one of these judgements which keep people alive and in pain to bring them back to reality always fits the situation. The blood, for example: they had been shedding the blood of the martyrs, and so on; the difficulties with the heat: they had been putting the heat on others and now they were getting heat back.

The empire of darkness will receive a judgment called darkness. The intensification of evil causes evil initiators to suffer. Evil rewards evil with more pain and evil. The intensification of evil brings great pain and therefore to the perpetrators of evil. Those who sow in evil reap in evil, and even while they are reaping God is offering them another chance. The pain involved is to bring them back to reality. The greatest and most concentrated function of evil in all of human history occurs in the revived Roman empire in the Tribulation and it is brought about by evil, by the cosmic system, and by one function of cosmic two, religion.

The characteristics of the fifth plague follow in the next phrase. We have a sequential conjunction kai, “then,” and the nominative singular of basileia — “then his kingdom”, the kingdom of the beast. Basileia here could refer to an empire.

Next we have a periphrastic pluperfect passive composed of two verb forms, the aorist active indicative of ginomai and with it the perfect passive participle of the verb skwtow which means to be dark or to become dark. Translation so far: “Then the fifth angel poured out his bowl on the throne of the beast dictator and his empire was plunged into darkness.” This is literal darkness based on spiritual darkness. Spiritual darkness is cosmic involvement resulting in blackout of the soul and scar-tissue of the soul. Generally speaking, blackout of the soul occurs in cosmic one, whereas scar-tissue of the soul occurs in cosmic two. The two pretty well relate together and the spiritual darkness of degeneracy leads to the literal darkness of divine judgment. There is another form of darkness and that is religion. There is another form of darkness that goes with religion: not the religion of disorganised evil but the religion of organised evil. This is very similar to the ninth plague of Egypt in Exodus chapter ten, but it isn't the same and it shouldn't be related — except in one way. When that happened in Exodus 10:20 it says the Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart and he did not release the sons of Israel. Actually, the man hardened his own heart. But why does it say that the Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart? Pharaoh was living inside of the cosmic system. He chose of his own volition to get into the cosmic system, and that is brought out in the first part of those plagues in Egypt where it says that Pharaoh hardened his own heart. So it started out with his own negative volition. His own negative volition brought him pain and therefore he would repent — change his mind — and say that he would release the Jews from slavery. Then, of course, he would renege, and once he did there would again be more pain. The next plague would be more pain and the more pain is the hardening of Pharaoh's heart. Every time the Lord fired pain at Pharaoh he simply became stronger in his negative volition until the final plague which he couldn't stand and finally released the Jews from slavery. But he had to have more and more and more pain. He was in the cosmic system, he hardened his own heart. The Lord hardened his heart only by adding more pain giving him a greater opportunity to say no.

Exodus 10:21, “Then the Lord said to Moses, ‘Stretch out your hand toward the sky, that there may be darkness over the land of Egypt, even darkness which may be felt’.” More pain.

Verse 22, “So Moses stretched out his hand toward the sky, and there was a thick darkness in all the land of Egypt for three days.”

Verse 23, “They did not see one another, nor did anyone rise from his place for three days, but all the sons of Israel had light in their dwellings.”

The interesting thing about the darkness is that it also intensifies the pain. So, like the ninth plague of Egypt, we have a literal darkness covering the revived Roman empire, the kingdom of the beast dictator. It is the darkness of the blackout in the right lobe of Pharaoh that represents the degeneracy, the evil of the soul, that brings on this judgment. The darkness is literal and thick, light resistant, so that no form of humanly-devised system of light is workable. This darkness brings light to a standstill just as degeneracy and cosmic involvement also brings light to a standstill. The blackout judgment of the fifth plague here also delays troop movement so that the revived Roman empire cannot come to the rescue of the dictator of Israel — past of the Middle East campaign of that day, known as the Armageddon campaign, a campaign in the last world war of history. The Roman dictator cannot even honour a treaty which he made in Daniel 11:38 or Matthew 24:15. When the Jews are invaded by the king of the north and the kings of the east, part of the Armageddon campaign, there is darkness in his country and therefore he cannot mobilise or anything with regard to logistical troop movement.

This judgment in Revelation 16:10 refers to a literal darkness and certainly represents the spiritual concept of the spiritual darkness preceding it, the spiritual darkness brought on by the fact that organised evil had superseded disorganised evil and therefore persecuted and destroyed the believers wherever they could be found. In other words, God only sends darkness where darkness previously existed, or God judges spiritual darkness with literal darkness. Generally spiritual darkness refers to life and residence inside of Satan’s cosmic system, the cosmic dynasphere with its interlocking systems of arrogance, cosmic one, and cosmic two with its interlocking systems of anti-Christ hatred.

In Proverbs 2:10-14 we have one of those darkness passages, “For wisdom will enter your right lobe, and knowledge will be pleasant to your soul; discretion will guard you, understanding will watch over you,” comparable to the believer being in the divine dynasphere functioning at gate four, “to deliver you from the way of evil, from the man who speaks distorted things.”

The way of evil is organised evil; the man who speaks distorted things is disorganised evil. Often you have them coexisting, one not controlling the other. Once it gains the power organised evil persecutes disorganised evil, and that is why ecumenical religion in the Tribulation is so important. Ecumenical religion persecutes all of the religious systems of disorganised evil. Any cult, church or any organisation that calls itself religious and is disorganised will be persecuted. Crime will be persecuted. Organised evil wants all the power and once it gets the power and also persecutes the believers, that is where we get our Tribulational martyrs. It comes from this dictator and his system of organised evil.

Wisdom is not only the perception of doctrine but the ability to apply it. When you can use Bible doctrine and apply it it is a very pleasant thing, and furthermore, that knowledge gives you capacity for happiness, for life, for love, for blessing, and therefore your soul is in a state of happiness — because you have the capacity.

“Discretion will guard you.” In other words, you won’t make a jackass out of yourself running around trying to straighten out the world, you will be discreet. As you grow in grace you spend less time joining organisations to straighten out the country and more time with Bible doctrine. Therefore you straighten out the country through your advance to maturity, not by becoming involved in social action.

“Understanding will watch over you.” You finally understand what the plan of God is — it is to advance to maturity and thereby save the country.

Verse 13, “From those who leave the paths of virtue,” like leaving the divine dynasphere and getting into the cosmic system, “to walk in ways of darkness.” When you live in the cosmic system you are walking in the ways of darkness.

Verse 14, “Who delight in doing evil, and rejoice in the perversity of evil” — the organisational part of evil.

The importance of the accumulating treasure in heaven always refers to Bible doctrine in the soul. As doctrine comes in darkness goes out of the soul. In the context of Matthew 6:19-23 we have that statement where the body is full of darkness, and that refers to a person living in the cosmic system of Satan. “Where your treasure [your priorities] is there your right lobe will be also.” Illustration: “The lamp of the body is the eye”. The eye is used in the Bible for positive volition and constant perception of Bible doctrine, the function of gate four of the divine dynasphere. “Therefore if your eye is healthy,” momentum from perception and application of Bible doctrine in the divine dynasphere, “then your whole body is full of light,” the priorities of the plan of God are straight.

“But if your eye is bad your whole body will be full of darkness.” If you are not learning doctrine then your body is full of darkness. “If the light that is in you [the content of thought] is darkness, how great is that darkness,” the dynamics of cosmic thinking.

John 8:12, “I am the light of the world; he who follows me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of light [Bible doctrine].”

The unbeliever in the cosmic system is related to spiritual darkness forever, Romans 1:21, “... their foolish right lobe was darkened.” There is the darkness in the soul.

Being darkened in their understanding is what Ephesians 4:18 calls it, “Being darkened in their understanding, alienated from the life of God [the divine dynasphere], because of the ignorance that is in them,” the great enemy is ignorance, “because of the hardness of their right lobe.”

Colossians 1:13, “For he [Christ] delivered us [believers] from the kingdom of darkness [Satan’s cosmic system],” when we believed in Christ we were immediately delivered from the cosmic system and entered for the first time the divine dynasphere, “and transferred us to the kingdom of the Son of his love.” The kingdom of the Son of His love is the divine dynasphere.

Believers living in the cosmic system are described as living in darkness, 1 John 2:9, “The one who says he is in the light and yet hates his fellow believer is in the darkness [the cosmic system] until now.”

So darkness does have a spiritual as well as a literal connotation in the Bible. In Revelation 16:10 the spiritual darkness was judged with literal darkness and great pain. These unbelievers are in darkness spiritually through blackout of the soul and now God provides a physical blackout to intensify the pain. Tribulational unbelievers possess blackout of the soul because they have rejected normal evangelism; they are now in the process of crisis evangelism.

Disaster is a very strange thing. Disaster indicates who has it and who doesn't. You never know what you are under normal conditions, you have to be in abnormal conditions. All of us under the grace of God are going to have opportunities to face the pressures of historical disaster and that is exactly what we have been studying in this fifth bowl judgment.

The corrected translation of verse 10 — “Then the fifth angel [the pur sui vant messenger from the execution squad] poured out his bowl [the fifth plague] on the empire of the beast dictator; then his empire was plunged into darkness; and they kept biting their tongues because of the pain.”

There are two categories of divine judgment of unbelievers in contrast to the word discipline which we generally apply to believers. The first is called the judgment of pain and the second is called the judgment of death. There are two categories of evangelism: normal evangelism and crisis evangelism.

Judgment by pain

1. Judgment by pain is the function of God's grace in crisis evangelism.
2. Grace before judgment is the function of normal evangelism; grace in judgment is the function of crisis evangelism. Both are grace functions.
3. Normal evangelism is the presentation of the gospel in time of tranquillity and prosperity — normal times.
4. The administration of the first five bowl judgements in this context is historical disaster under the category of judgment by pain.
5. Normal evangelism occurs in the presentation of the gospel message through the evangelist.

6. In normal evangelism the unbeliever has the opportunity of considering the claims of Christ on his life objectively.

7. When the unbeliever rejects Christ as saviour in normal evangelism he enters gate two of cosmic one and/or gate two of cosmic two, both being negative volition gates. Cosmic one: the twelve gates of interlocking systems of arrogance. Negative volition at gate two of cosmic one originates from preoccupation with self. In cosmic two, gate two is also a negative volition gate but it is negative volition based on antagonism toward doctrine, toward truth, toward the gospel. In cosmic one the individual is occupied with self; in cosmic two the individual is anti-Christ, anti-God. They are two different categories therefore of negative volition.

8. Through cosmic involvement the unbeliever becomes disoriented to reality through the blackout of the soul, life in cosmic one, and through scar-tissue of the soul, life in cosmic two.

9. This condition insulates the unbeliever against the most powerful presentation of the gospel. Therefore he suffers from blackout of the soul and simultaneously he often suffers from scar-tissue of the soul.

Principle

1. God in His matchless grace gives the unbeliever another chance and another chance for salvation. As long as an unbeliever is alive there is hope. God gives the unbeliever another chance by the introduction of pain in one of its many categories.

2. Under personal suffering or historical disaster the pressure of one or more of many categories of pain forces the unbeliever in the cosmic system back to reality. Pain forces him to go from subjectivity to a very temporary objectivity. In that temporary objectivity he will have a few moments for retrospection to recall the phrases he has heard in the gospel appeal. Something will stand out in his mind in that very moment of lucidity which is enough to give him another chance to believe in Christ and have eternal salvation.

3. Being forced back to reality by pain the unbeliever is temporarily distracted from the influences of the cosmic system. For a few moments the cosmic system loses its influence so that he can once more objectively reconsider the message he has previously rejected.

4. Judgment by pain does not kill the unbeliever, as illustrated by the first five judgements in our context, Revelation 16:1-10.

5. Therefore, judgment by pain becomes the last call to personally accept Jesus Christ as saviour under the principle of crisis evangelism. Judgment by pain is crisis evangelism.

6. Crisis evangelism is the judgment of God bringing the unbeliever back to objective reality, and simultaneously to the end of his human resources. This temporary moment of reality is also a lucid moment with regard to being at the end of one's resources.

7. Pain becomes so intense in this category of divine judgment that it distracts the unbeliever from his cosmic involvement. It removes temporarily the blindness and until he decides once again what he will do about the gospel. 2 Corinthians 4:3-4, "And even if our gospel is veiled, it is veiled to those who are perishing, in whose situation the god of this world [Satan] has blinded the minds [the gospel must go to the mind, people must have facts] of the unbelieving, so that they might not see the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God."

Some unbelievers at this point believe in Christ and the scales fall from their eyes, as with Paul in Acts 9:18. Others, like the unbelievers in our context, again reject Christ as saviour, they do not repent or change their mind. Therefore, they return like the dog to his own vomit.

2 Peter 2:20, "For if after they have escaped the defilements of the cosmic system by knowledge of our Lord and saviour Jesus Christ," that's crisis evangelism. This means that under normal evangelism they heard the gospel and said no. So their minds were blinded. But they escaped through judgment by pain. The pain was greater than the concepts of the cosmic system and they were distracted from their arrogance, they were distracted from their anti-Christian concepts and modus operandi, "they are again entangled in them," they go back to cosmic one and two, "and are overcome [entrance into cosmic one, blindness of the soul; entrance into cosmic two, scar-tissue of the soul], the last state has become worse for them than the first" — they have become stronger in their negative volition after rejecting God's grace in crisis evangelism. They have locked themselves for a second time into negative volition.

Verse 21, "For it would be better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than having known it [during crisis evangelism], to turn away from the holy commandment delivered to them." They already knew it before, they had already said no before. When they say no under these circumstances God has exhausted His last grace function by which they could be saved. It would have been better if they had been in this crisis, this judgment by pain, without having known the gospel in the first place so that they would have a shot at the gospel in the second place. They have used up their options at this point.

Verse 22, Illustration: "It has happened to them according to the true proverb, 'A dog returns to his own vomit,' and 'A sow, after washing, returns to wallowing in the mud'."

Those in crisis evangelism who say no return to the cosmic system. Once the unbeliever has rejected Christ in crisis evangelism he has lost his greatest opportunity. Therefore he has rejected the strongest offer of grace and nothing is left for him but once to die and after that the judgment.

That brings us to the second category of judgment, judgment by death, which has an entirely different function. God's judgements all have grace functions. Judgment by pain is an evangelistic function of God's grace but judgment by death is God's grace function in the preservation of the human race throughout history. God has promised that the human race and planet earth will not be destroyed until the end of human history, i.e.. the end of the Millennium after the Gog revolution. The problem is that man keeps trying to destroy himself on planet earth through the folly of his bad decisions from a position of weakness. Mankind in arrogance is determined to destroy mankind through lust for power.

The principle is very simple. Man's freedom and function of his volition apart from virtue and establishment restraint is self-destructive. When mankind is negative toward establishment doctrine and the authority defined in it, and the responsibility developed from it, he becomes degenerate under one of two principles: organised or disorganised evil.

So judgment by death is designed by the grace of God to protect the human race from self-destruction. In other words, judgment by death is radical surgery to separate the infected part of the human race from the non-contaminated part of the human race, to remove, therefore, the contamination by death. The separation is permanent since God removes through physical death those who are contaminated giving the rest of the human race a grace opportunity to believe in Christ. The illustration is the killing of the citizens of Sodom and Gomorrah. The contaminated part of the human race in the valley was removed, thereby giving the progeny of Abraham breathing space to use their own volition to be a part of the angelic conflict. The perpetuation of the human race throughout history down to the last day of the Millennium is God's grace function in judgment by death. Hence, each category of divine judgment has a purpose.

We are dealing with unbelievers in the study of this doctrine but there is an application to us as believers.

Judgment by death: if it were not for judgment by death in previous generations of history we would not be here. We would not be believers on our way to heaven and eternal life after filling in our time on earth. The perpetuation of the human race is only possible through judgment by death. Judgment by death means the opportunity for evangelisation of the human race in future generations and the opportunity for born-again believers to advance to maturity and glorify our Lord Jesus Christ in future generations. Judgment by death means blessing to us therefore as Christians for we have used history's greatest opportunity given to us by the grace of God. In past generations God has judged and removed large segments of the human race under the principle of judgment by death, and that has freed other parts of the human race who survive to continue on planet earth, to procreate, to provide for future generations. We are the product of those future generations and we have availed ourselves of the opportunity to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore judgment by death is a grace blessing from God to the living in every generation.

Secondly, judgment by pain. We have previously noted that judgment by pain is a grace blessing to the unbeliever, giving him another chance for salvation through faith in Christ under the category of crisis evangelism. We now note the application to believers. Judgment by pain steers the wayward believer back into the plan of God and the purpose of God. Judgment by pain distracts him from the cosmic system; it gives him the opportunity of rebound and to move into the divine dynasphere. Judgment by pain, therefore, is the grace blessing extended to the cosmic believer to reorient him to the reality and the importance of fellowship with God in time — recovery of life in the divine dynasphere. Therefore when the believer loses his priorities and starts to neglect the daily or consistent perception of doctrine God in His grace sends judgment by pain, warning by intensive discipline, to bring him back into the plan of God.

When you become sloppy in your attendance at Bible class and have those airtight excuses that hold no water with God, when you begin to put other things ahead of doctrine in your life, when there is some pleasure, some social activity, something that is far more important to you than assembling with other believers in Bible class, and thereafter you begin to hurt in some way and you start to experience pain, there's always an overriding reason. We will call it discipline by pain, warning and intensive discipline, to bring you back to the point of rebound, to life and momentum inside the divine dynasphere, to bring back to your life capacity for life, love and happiness, to bring you back to the priorities of the plan of God, to steer you back on course in the plan of God and that momentum that leads to maturity and the glorification of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Verse 11 — the rejection of crisis evangelism in the administration of judgment by pain, or the negative reaction to the first five bowl judgements.

We note first of all the reaction toward God in time of crisis evangelism. We begin with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated “Then,” meaning after the first five judgements their reaction is recorded. The reaction is negative as noted by the aorist active indicative of the verb blasphemew. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it views the reaction in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. This slander or blasphemy of the character of God results from the fact that they have rejected the message of crisis evangelism.

Remember that under the concept of crisis evangelism we find the unbelievers in cosmic one, they have definitely functioned at gate two, negative volition through preoccupation with self; also at cosmic two, gate two, negative volition because of some antagonism toward the truth formed in their souls. In this situation they are in great subjectivity. Arrogance, of course, produces subjectivity; antagonism toward the truth in cosmic two produces subjectivity. This means that they are at the end of the line. There is no possible way to break out of that subjectivity which is called blackout of the soul in cosmic one; scar-tissue of the soul in cosmic two. The only possible way to distract from subjectivity and the false concepts in the cosmic system is to produce a distracter. God produces the distracter — pain: judgment by pain in the first five bowl judgements. This pain is gradually intensified until there is total distraction from subjectivity which mechanically you could say one of two things: it pulls them out of the cosmic system or it neutralises the temporary effectiveness of the cosmic system. Either way the judgment by pain destroys the subjectivity and produces a temporary objectivity. And this is the lucid moment where they now have the opportunity for objectivity. The function of this objectivity is recall. They recall things that they have heard in the presentation of the gospel under normal evangelism. Others once again say no. Basically, that is what is being accomplished at this particular point. Once they say no in crisis evangelism then they actually slander God. This is the strongest subjectivity. The blasphemy is comparable to re-entry into cosmic one.

The active voice: the negative citizens of the revived Roman empire, adherents to the ecumenical religious system, produce the action. The action which is described in negative volition because the passage will deal with those who are negative. There is positive volition but this passage is not going to follow through on that. There is a constant process of people accepting Christ as saviour, either from normal or crisis evangelism. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the eschatological reaction to the warning of the judgment by pain.

The accusative singular direct object is qeoj, referring to God — God whose grace has provided this opportunity and they turn right around and express now the strongest arrogance, the strongest subjectivity, the strongest possible negative volition. To make sure that we understand we have the descriptive genitive of o)uranoj, “the God of heaven.”

Remember that there are four things that we are to distinguish. First of all, the two categories of divine judgment of the unbeliever and their grace connotation. There is judgment by pain and there is judgment by death. There is also a grace aspect of judgment by death and that has to do with the fact of removing the cancer so that the patient lives — removing the evil and degenerate part of the population so that there can be the continuation of the population on earth. We have two categories of evangelism that go with then judgment: normal evangelism and crisis evangelism.

Eventually the negative part is removed but the first thing we note here is the fact that there is slander of God, indicating that eventually those who persist in the slander of God, the strongest possible negative volition, will be taken out by judgment by death. That explains why at the end of the Tribulation there will be a tremendous number of survivors, both believer and unbeliever. The unbelievers at that point all have to be removed, the baptism of fire; the believers go into the Millennium. Many of the believers have been saved out of crisis evangelism.

This brings us to the point of were we note in the next phrase their failure to take the responsibility for their own decisions, therefore their inability to relate their bad decisions to these five judgements; and they emphasise their problem rather than the fact that their own volition brought them to that point. In other words, they fail to take the responsibility for their own decisions. This is brought out in two prepositional phrases. In each case the preposition is the same, the preposition e)k. E)k takes the ablative case and we have e)k plus the ablative of means, an unusual use of the ablative. The ablative is not the regular case for the expression of means, the instrumental case is. However, the ablative expresses means when the means is accompanied by an implication of the origin or the source, and that is exactly what we have here. E)k plus the ablative of means is translated “because of.” In each case we have an object of the preposition, the ablative plural from the noun ponoj plus a)utoj, the intensive pronoun used as the third person personal pronoun because the third person personal pronoun was not translated from the Attic Greek to the Koine, “because of their pain.” And the second reason: the ablative plural of e)lkoj which refers to their ulcers, “and because of their ulcers.”

We go right back to a principle: Religious people never take the responsibility for their own decisions. It is impossible to become a responsible person in life and at the same time be religious. Religious people become so self-righteous that in their function of self-righteousness they will never take the responsibility for anything that goes wrong, and they will never take the responsibility, therefore, for their bad decisions. Therefore they have no true sense of responsibility. They say, “I’m not wrong, God is wrong.” Therefore, the ulcer was a reminder that they had made a decision to enter into the ecumenical religious system. The ulcers were administered in connection with the first bowl judgment and the pain was therefore increased, and the increasing pain brought them to the point of reality, the point of objectivity, but they again said no. In all of these the unbeliever fails therefore to relate his suffering, his pain, to his own negative volition, in this case, negative volition toward the gospel, one of the many bad decisions. The unbeliever involved in religion refuses to take the responsibility for his decisions. He is therefore irresponsible, and the haven for irresponsible people is a system of self-righteous morality.

“Then they blasphemed [maligned, slandered] the God of heaven because of their pain and because of their ulcers.”

Their own negative decisions, then, have brought them to the place of great pain. The pain started with their decisions; God then uses the intensification of it — judgment by pain — in order to bring them to the point of crisis evangelism: operation high noon, where the pursuit officers continue to announce the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ to these converts of Satan’s ecumenical religion. The constant recall of the gospel, the opportunity to accept Christ in time of this pain, represents the principle that as long as we are alive there is hope.

Reality, of course, for the believer is the necessity of rebound. When pain causes us to be distracted from whatever influences of the cosmic system may exist in our lives, that is our chance, our moment to begin recovery by making good decisions.

We note here their negative volition toward the gospel. The conjunction kai introduces a result from what precedes, “furthermore.” Next we have the aorist active indicative plus the verb metanoew, and this means to change the mind. Noew means “thinking”; meta means “change,” a change of thinking, a complete reversal of their thinking. Interestingly enough, this thinking has to be done under objectivity. Therefore we have the negative of objectivity, o)u. The negative of subjectivity is mh, which is not used here. This with the indicative indicates that they have a genuine opportunity. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it views negative volition in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results.

Those so involved are going to die, judgment by death. There are three ways in which it can occur. It can occur in the sixth bowl judgment which will be the last great world war of history. Many will die in the seventh bowl judgment, civilians who will die because of ecumenical religion. Many will survive to the second advent and the baptism of fire will get them.

The active voice: unbelievers of the revived Roman empire produce the action. The indicative mood is declarative representing the fact that judgment by pain brought them to a point of objectivity, and while they were still in objectivity they said no. Once again, they are taking the responsibility for their own decisions.

It says here that they couldn't get away from something, and that something has to do with religion. Religion is described next in the prepositional phrase, e)k plus the ablative of e)rgon, and with it the inevitable possessive genitive of a)utoj, "from their works."

The preposition e)k plus the ablative often denotes the direction from which something comes. Sometimes it gives a reason for why it comes, which is here presupposition for something. Hence, we are going to translate it "by reason of, or because of, or as a result of."

"Then they blasphemed [slandered, maligned] the God of heaven because of their pain and their ulcers; furthermore they did not change their minds because of their works."

They could never get away from the idea that they had to do something for eternal life, they could never get away from works. All religion is salvation by works and the manifestation of negative volition toward truth or doctrine. Being locked-in from their system of works derived from Satan's cosmic system they continued negative toward the gospel.

The panorama of negative volition

The principle of negative volition is found in John 8:43-45. "Why do you not understand my method of doctrinal teaching? It is because you cannot hear my doctrine."

Why couldn't they hear? First of all, you can't hear the Word when you get into gate one of cosmic one. That is the gate of motivational evil and it means you simply cannot hear the Word under these conditions. Then there is cosmic two where there is antagonism which throws up a negative barrage against the communication of truth or doctrine.

"You are from your father the devil." He was speaking to religious types, the scribes and the Pharisees. They were in the cosmic system; "and you desire to do [works] the lusts of your father. He was a murderer from the beginning," all murder is related to the lust of arrogance, "and does not stand in the doctrine, because there is no truth [doctrine] in him." Arrogance squeezes out truth. "Whenever he teaches the lie he teaches from his own cosmic system; for he is a liar, and is the father of it.” He is the originator of the cosmic system.

“But because I speak the truth, you do not believe me.” If Satan came along and gave them a lie they would believe it, but He speaks the truth, they are in the cosmic system and do not believe Him. Those involved in the cosmic system as unbelievers will not believe the truth of the gospel, but given enough pain, without killing them, and they will be distracted from the influence of the cosmic system long enough to possess objectivity and lucidity and face the issue of the gospel.

1 Timothy 4:1, this Satanic teaching of the lie is delegated to fallen angels, demons. “But that same Holy Spirit explicitly communicates that in latter periods of time [Church Age and Tribulation] some [believers] will become apostate from doctrine, concentrating on [paying attention] to deceitful spirits [teaching demons] and doctrines from demons.” The problem is solved for the unbeliever by crisis evangelism and for the believer by the principle of warning discipline followed by intensive discipline, divine discipline by pain.

1 John 2:15,16 gives us the principle: “Stop loving the cosmic system.” The cosmic system is composed of cosmic one, emphasising arrogance or preoccupation with self; cosmic two, emphasising hatred or antagonism toward the priorities of God. Cosmic one emphasises self in contrast to God and God’s plan; cosmic two emphasises human viewpoint in contrast to divine viewpoint. Cosmic one delineates the philosophy of Satan at the time of his prehistoric fall; cosmic two emphasises Satan’s philosophy at the time of man’s fall. Cosmic one is the prehistoric policy of Satan extended into human history; cosmic two is Satan’s policy in history as the ruler of this world. Before man was created Satan was preoccupied with himself — arrogance; now that he is the ruler of this world he is preoccupied with being anti-God and anti-Christ.

Through entrance into cosmic one the believer becomes inculcated with Satan’s thinking before the creation of man. Through entrance into cosmic two the believer becomes indoctrinated with the thinking of Satan during the course of human history. Cosmic one reflects the thinking of Satan as the ruler of fallen angels; cosmic two reflects the thinking of Satan as the ruler of planet earth.

So we have: “Stop loving the cosmic system, or anything in the cosmic system. If anyone keeps loving the cosmic system, the love for the Father is not in him.” The love for the Father is motivational virtue at gate five, personal love for God.

“Because all that is in the cosmic system, the lust of the flesh,” the attack of the old sin nature seeking to control the soul, “the lust of the eyes,” motivational evil, gate one, cosmic one, “and the arrogant pattern of life,” the functional evil of gates two through twelve of cosmic one, “is not from the Father, but is from the cosmic system.”

This is how negative volition gets going. The cosmic system, therefore, becomes a tactical trap for the enslavement of the human race to Satan, enslavement of the unbeliever and enslavement also of the believer. Consequently the cosmic system is the factory for the manufacturing of losers. Losers are defined as unbelievers who keep rejecting normal evangelism, and as believers living in the cosmic system. That is why we have the mandate of Romans 12:3.

Cosmic involvement is the principle of negative volition. Under the principle of judgment by pain the first five bowl judgements are designed for crisis evangelism, another chance, another grace opportunity to have a temporary state of objectivity, and in that temporary state of objectivity to escape the shackles of Satan by personal faith in Christ. Again, the judgements include cancer of the skin to accompany the mark of the beast, contamination of both salt and fresh water with blood to accompany the shedding of the blood of martyrs, the unbearable heat to provide a prophetic view of the heat of Hell, and physical darkness to accompany the spiritual darkness, their blackout of the soul.

Satan is the ruler of this world. The kingdom of Satan is therefore called the kingdom of darkness, Ephesians 5:11; Colossians 1:13. Since the domain of Satan is the kingdom of darkness those who believe who reside and function in the cosmic system are said to be walking in darkness. Crisis evangelism is therefore designed for those who are walking in darkness. 1 John 1:6 and John 12:35 both say the same thing: "He who walks in darkness does not know where he is going." 1 John 2:11 emphasises the fact that hatred or mental attitude sins of gate one, cosmic one, is walking in darkness and having the eyes blinded: "when anyone hates his fellow believer he walks in darkness [the cosmic system], furthermore he does not know where he is going because the darkness [the cosmic system] has blinded his eyes." The same thing is true for the unbeliever. The unbeliever has his eyes blinded by living inside the cosmic system.

The world war at the end of the Tribulation will be fought everywhere, and will involve most of the nations of the world. It is not the same as the Armageddon campaign. So in making our distinctions we notice the second one, the Middle East campaign which is a part of that world war and called the Armageddon campaign. The world war is not Armageddon.

A campaign is different from a war. A campaign is the manoeuvring of armies in a certain area in connection with that war. So there are three words to become acquainted with: war, campaign, and battle. They are all different and all three are used technically in Revelation chapters 16 and 19. At the end of the Tribulation there will be war all over the earth but the portion that the Bible studies is the one that deals with the Jews, because God has promised that the Jews will never be destroyed and when Christ returns there will be living Jews who will be delivered. God has to keep His promise and Satan has to try to keep Him from doing it, so there is a specific Middle East campaign to wipe out the Jews. Occasionally we will call it the Armageddon campaign because one of the major battles, but not the greatest, was in Armageddon. Then we will study the battle of Armageddon, but that is only one of several battles. There is the battle of Armageddon, the battle of Idumea, and the siege of Jerusalem which determines where Christ is going to return and shut down the whole world war, His feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives.

All three categories of warfare have a specific cause which will be mentioned in the context of Revelation 16:12-16. The order in which they occur is as follows: First there is the cause of the Middle East campaign, 16:12, the administration of the sixth bowl judgment; secondly, we will get the cause of the last world war in history, 16:13,14, the modus operandi of the war demons; the third is the cause of the actual battle of Armageddon in the Middle East campaign, 16:16, brought about by the fact that our Lord Jesus Christ controls history.

Armageddon needs a little summary. The cause of Armageddon is going to be given in chapter sixteen, verses 12-16. It will be related to war, to campaigns, to judgment by pain, judgment by death, and judgment for eternity. Then we will note the invasion of the Middle East, and that will take us to Daniel chapter eleven. Then we will go to the emergence of Jewish leadership for the crisis, Proverbs 24 and Zechariah 12. Then we will go to the siege of Jerusalem which is the major battle in the campaign in the last world war, and we will see the Jewish believers who do not participate legitimately, and why, in Matthew 24; and the Jewish believers who did legitimately participate, and why, in Zechariah 14. Then we will see the termination of the Armageddon campaign, the termination of the battles, and the termination of the entire world war.

In verses 12-16 we have phase one of the Armageddon or Middle East campaign. In verse 12 we have the cause of the invasion of the Middle East. Why do great armies suddenly invade the Middle East at the end of the Tribulation? The reason for it is the sixth bowl judgment. God is going to shift gears here and the last two bowl judgements are judgment by death. A lot of people are going to die.

In verse 12 we note first the target for the sixth bowl judgment. It begins with the sequential use of the conjunction kai translated "Then," followed by the nominative singular from the adjective numeral e(ktoj, "sixth." The sixth angel's judgment is not judgment by pain, his is judgment by death. He is going to start the killing. All orders for killing in this judgment and the next one come from heaven. Heaven orders death. And this is grace because a lot of people are going to survive to the second advent because of this grenade.

So the sixth angel pulls the pin on this grenade, aorist active indicative of e)kxew, "poured out." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the sixth pur sui vant messenger from the execution squad produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of eschatology. He has been issued as a part of the protocol of heaven his very own fialh, grenade. It was issued to him by one of the so-called four beasts in the King James version, or one of the four heralds and this sixth grenade begins judgment by death. So it is his very own weapon. We know that from the possessive genitive of a)utoj.

The target? We have the prepositional phrase e)pi plus the accusative of potamoj, "river." It is a large river. We know that from the accusative from the adjective megaj. And then the river is named, "Euphrates."

"Then the sixth angel poured out his bowl on the large river, the Euphrates," the 33rd largest river in the world. It is 1675 miles long. In the Millennium when the Palestinian covenant is fulfilled it will be one of the borders of the revived client nation to Israel. God has promised the Jews a piece of real estate they have never occupied and cannot occupy until the Millennium. The western border is the Nile river. It will be one of the largest nations in the world at that time. The Euphrates is mentioned not simply as a river but as a boundary, a marking line. It is mentioned therefore in a strict strategical sense as the barrier between east and west as far as the Middle East is concerned.

We have moved on to note the principle of judgment for eternity as the third category of judgment. Judgment for eternity deals with the great white throne judgment at the end of the Millennium, and we will study it at that time. For those who reject Christ as saviour under three categories of evangelism nothing is left for rejection by grace but the lake of fire forever and ever. There are three categories where a person has the opportunity either to believe or to reject.

The first category is really not gospel hearing but it is God-consciousness. That often determines the course of the individual. There is a point of God-consciousness, there is a point of normal evangelism, and there is a point of crisis evangelism. If under all of these three categories there is rejection of Jesus Christ as saviour then nothing is left but Hebrews 9:27, "It is appointed unto man once to die, but after this the judgment," that is the second death, the lake of fire. Only the person who has rejected Christ as saviour will occupy the lake of fire. The lake of fire, of course, is literal; it is eternal; it was prepared for the devil and his angels, Matthew 25:41. We are anticipating Revelation 19:20 where the first occupants of the lake of fire, the beast and the false prophet, will be a part of the unholy trinity and that will be studied at a later time.

How does all of this apply? There are actually two things that we must apply. The first has to do with an historical trend, the fifth cycle of discipline as it was administered to Israel in the time of the Jewish wars which began in 66 and really closed out in AD 73. In the function of normal evangelism the Jews had the opportunity of believing in Christ between 30 and 70 AD. They had a period of forty years of normal evangelism. During this time they first of all heard the message of our Lord Jesus Christ; after that they heard the message of the apostles. In order that they might focus their attention on the message they saw the miracles of our Lord; they saw miracles performed by the apostles. There was one other miracle that was used: the gift of tongues was given so that Jews would be warned historically, for the gift of tongues is evangelising Jews in Gentile languages. That was the warning that the time of the Gentiles was coming, it was a historical warning to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. So the gift of tongues was used in that period only, from 30-70 AD, and it was a part of normal evangelism. Normal evangelism gradually subsided. When the apostle Paul went to Jerusalem and his message was rejected there was a gradual subsidence of normal evangelism and eventually in AD 66 the Jewish wars began, so from 66-73 AD we have crisis evangelism in contrast to normal evangelism.

In 66 AD Nero sent Vespasian and his legions to put down a Jewish revolt, but the Jews were great fighters and the attempt didn't succeed. But this was actually the beginning of the Jewish war, and with the Jewish war and the pain to the unbelievers of Israel we now begin the second stage of evangelism, judgment by pain. During this time many Jews came back to the Lord. Between 66 and 70 the war was not going too well and finally in late 69 the Roman legions came to the wall of Jerusalem. When they arrived there Vespasian heard that Nero had now been assassinated and therefore he went home to become the next emperor of the Roman empire. He left everything to do with the war to his son, Titus. At this particular point, August of AD 70, the Romans broke through the walls of Jerusalem. They destroy the city and from there we go from crisis evangelism to judgment by death. Judgment by death eradicated all of those Jews who were now under the principle of disorganised or organised evil. Only 90,000 people survived and they would go through the same process again. They were taken and sold as slaves so that they still had a chance under crisis evangelism, judgment by pain, and then they would individually either die as believers and go to heaven or they would die as unbelievers and go to eternal Hell.

This principle is taught under the concept that God never condones internationalism until the second advent, and that the world is divided up into nations. First, nationalism began as a part of the fourth divine institution, human government, with the Jews. When the Jews became a client nation to God nationalism began, Deuteronomy 32:8. Then, add to that the fact that He said in verse 33, "The Lord's portion is his people." They were the first client nation to God.

In Acts 17:26 the times of the Gentiles is about to begin, 70 AD, and therefore we have a new rule about nationalism, "And he made from one people [the people of the world] to live on all the surface of the earth, having appointed their time [when their country began], and the boundaries of their habitation," all determined in eternity past. That is why Job 12:23 says, "He makes nations great, he destroys nations; he enlarges the nations, then leads them away [into slavery]." The rise and fall of nations depends upon their response to the laws of divine establishment with emphasis on the divine institutions.

During the first advent our Lord Jesus Christ predicted the fall of Israel under the category of judgment in time, judgment by pain and judgment by death. He also predicted the categories of evangelism that would go with it, normal evangelism and crisis evangelism. Some of these things are found in Luke 21:20-24. The times of the Gentiles began on that day in August when the temple was destroyed and since that time and to this moment no Jewish nation can be a client nation to God. In fact, there will be no Jewish client nation until the second advent of Christ. In the meantime SPQR became the first client nation and, bringing us up to date in this last half of the 20th century, the USA is a client nation today.

Note, then, the function of God's grace in history. Normal evangelism from 30-70 AD as far as Jerusalem was concerned; crisis evangelism began in AD 66 with the Jewish war, and for those who rejected crisis evangelism there was judgment by death in August of AD 70. For those who were either positive at God-consciousness or would eventually believe in the Lord Jesus Christ there was another phase of judgment by pain, the 90,000 Jews who survived to go into slavery. It is not God's will, therefore, for anyone to perish. This is illustrated by our Lord's attitude toward Jerusalem which is mentioned in Luke 13:34.

We also note an application from this. While there is in the Tribulation great confusion on the earth from these bowl judgements there is perfect happiness and tranquillity in heaven. In heaven there are three categories of mankind: the Church in resurrection bodies; the Old Testament saints who will have a resurrection body at the second advent; the Tribulational martyrs. And there is perfect happiness in heaven because of capacity, and that capacity comes from being organised under the principle of protocol. Right now in heaven during the Church Age we have Old Testament believers and Church Age believers all in their interim state. They have perfect happiness under the principle of protocol. On the earth there is a great deal of confusion and disaster today, a great deal of tragedy, but protocol comes right into the middle of it only through the divine dynasphere, and the secret to your happiness, blessing, and capacity for life, is life inside the divine dynasphere.

Next in verse 12 we are going to study the cause of the Middle East campaign, sometimes called the Armageddon campaign because that is one of the major battles. Then, in verse 13 and 14 we are going to see the causes for the world war, and in verse 16 we are going to see the cause of the battle of Armageddon which is not the most dramatic one, the most dramatic one is the siege of Jerusalem. Specifically the cause of the Middle east campaign is going to be the pulling of the pin of the sixth golden grenade, the administration of the sixth bowl judgment.

We have made the distinction between war, campaign, and battle. In the section we are now studying we now have the cause of a war, the cause of a campaign, and the cause of a battle. Each one of these has its own categorical problem. In connection with the war it becomes a matter of political problems, economy, preparedness, industry, many, many factors. In a campaign it becomes a matter of weather and many factors. In a battle, the same factors plus supporting troops, disposition of the enemy, and other factors. In other words, in order to solve problems you must first of all categorise them. Once this is done, then you can deal with solutions in that isolated category and then relate it to others.

So far in verse 12, "Then the sixth angel poured out his bowl on the great river Euphrates..." The result: "and its water was dried up," the aorist passive indicative of the verb zhrainaw, which means not only to dry up but it means the removal of a barrier. This is a dramatic aorist tense presenting reality with the certitude of a future event. It is also a constative aorist which contemplates the action in its entirety, a strategic barrier has been removed. The warfare, therefore, is apparently already in existence and it is simply a matter of how it comes to the Middle East. The passive voice: the Euphrates river, a strategic barrier protecting the Middle East from the east receives the action of the verb. We have noted that the Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written, and in the time in which this was written the Euphrates river was the boundary line between the Roman empire and the Parthian empire of the east. No barriers exist for an invasion from the east into the Middle East and the land of Israel once this occurs. Therefore this phrase anticipates the great invasion of the Middle East by Asiatic powers.

The purpose of the sixth bowl judgment is given with the conjunction i(na which introduces a purpose clause. It is translated "that," or "in order that." This is a final purpose clause which expresses the purpose conceived as the aim or the objective of the action expressed in the main verb. With this we have the nominative singular subject o(doj, ordinarily translated “way,” but having some latitude in translation. Here it means “invasion route.” Then the objective genitive plural from the noun basileuj which in the plural refers to a group of Asiatic rulers.

They are said to come from the east, which is the prepositional phrase a)po plus the ablative of the noun a)natoih plus e(lioj, “from the rising of the sun.” It is an idiom meaning “from the east.” With this we have an appositional genitive plural from the definite article used as a demonstrative pronoun and translated, “Then the sixth angel poured out his bowl on the great river Euphrates; and its water was dried up, in order that the invasion route for the kings, those from the east ...” Then one more verb, the aorist passive subjunctive from the verb e)toimazw, “might be prepared.” The culminative aorist tense views the invasion from the east in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the clash between east and west in the Middle East during the last half of the Tribulation. This, of course, will be a part of the Armageddon campaign in the last world war of history. The passive voice: the kings who invade from the east receive the action of the verb, that is, they receive a perfect invasion route. The subjunctive mood merely indicates that this is a purpose clause.

The problem with things like this is that the historical interpretation of Revelation is often a temptation to those who have the academic background for it. However, it is an erroneous interpretation: Revelation is prophecy after the third chapter. The temptation here is to interpret both Daniel and Revelation in terms of some past historical event which fits the case. There is always someone who thinks he is qualified to handle it from that standpoint. The true development is eschatological but there are very few pastors and theologians who know enough eschatology to really deal with it. This is often taught by good historians as the invasion of the kings from the east, and it is taught as a Kurdish invasion of Palestine which took place in AD 1191, in the middle ages. The kings of the east were considered to be Saladin and his Kurds who overran the Middle East. It makes a very nice story but it simply does not work out by historical interpretation, and it has nothing to do with eschatology. The kings of the east in our context could have been interpreted as Saladin while the king of the west, therefore, would have had to be Richard the Lion Hearted, Philip Augustus the king of France, and Frederick Barbarosa of Germany. Palestine would have been represented by the Latin kingdom of Jerusalem founded during the first crusade in 1099 when the holy city was conquered by Ramon, Count of Toulouse, and with him, Richard, Duke of Normandy and Godfrey who was also the Duke of lower Lorraine. Godfrey became the ruler of the first kingdom of Jerusalem under the title of Baron of the Holy Sepulcher. All this fits in certain ways, but there is no way you can take anything in the past when eschatology is intended and squeeze it in, there is always something sticking out. What is sticking out here is nothing other than Richard the Lion Hearted and, of course, the Jews were not in the land, it was a Gentile nation in the land. No matter how tempting we must stand fast with the eschatological interpretation of Revelation and not a historical one. In the future, after the Rapture of the Church and during the last half of the Tribulation, there will be this great world war.

The invasion which occurs in the future will be unprecedented. This invasion will actually pull all of the people who live on the earth at that time in the Asiatic and Pacific basin. They will form one great block and they will have a massive army of perhaps two or three million people invading the Middle East. Certain portions of this army will come into the state of Israel. The invasion is a part of, and the beginning of the great Armageddon campaign of which the battle of Armageddon is one of several battles. And what starts this invasion is the sixth bowl judgment, the function of the sixth angel on the execution squad.

Translation: "Then the sixth angel poured out his bowl on the great river Euphrates; and its water was dried up in order that the invasion route for the kings, those from the east, might be prepared."

Verse 12 simply gives us the cause for the Middle East campaign. It was the sixth bowl judgment. This is the first bowl judgment that is judgment by death in contrast to the first five which were judgements by pain. Judgment by pain is designed for crisis evangelism to orient to reality those who are in the cosmic system. Next, in verse 13, we will have the cause of the world war of which this campaign is a part, and we will see there demon activity. Finally, when we get to verse 16 we will see the cause of the actual battle of Armageddon in the Middle East campaign, and it will have to do with our Lord Jesus Christ controlling history.

This, then, is a great invasion. It is the invasion of a confederation of Asiatic powers at the end of the Tribulation; it is part of the last world war of history. It comes at the end of the Tribulation and is a reminder that warfare will still occur at that time. There will always be wars in history until the second advent, and there is no way to stop war for any period of time. The only way to have peace is to be well prepared, to have a strong military organisation. This will guarantee peace for often a generation.

When the sixth golden grenade [bowl judgment] was thrown immediately the barrier between the Middle East and Asia was removed, and with the removal of that barrier we have a phenomenal invasion.

Next we have the cause of the war. When this invasion took place and began a campaign a war was already in progress: the last world war of history. The cause of this war is given in verses 13 and 14, and in these passages we are going to see the kosmokratwr demons, the war demons.

In verse 13 we have the unholy trinity of the Tribulation. The passage begins with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, meaning "Then," followed by the aorist active indicative of the verb o(raw, "Then I saw." This is the beginning of another vision by the apostle John. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: John the apostle, the human author of the book of Revelation, produces the action of the verb in his vision of demon activity which leads to the Armageddon campaign of the Tribulation. But first there has to be a war. Wars come first, then campaigns, then battles, in that order.

Next we have to see how the war got started. Kosmokratwr demons have a great deal to do with warfare, small and great. Here we are looking at the start of a world war. So the active voice: John produces the action, and the declarative indicative mood is for the eschatological reality of the fact that historically in the past and in the future there is a war demon that starts the ball rolling. The principle is that there is a certain unreasonable and irrational factor in the cause of many wars; not all, but many of them. This, therefore, is related to the war demon. Under demon influence and demon possession man is determined to pursue a course of destruction which involves terror, warfare, violence, the expression of demon arrogance, vindictiveness, implacability and revenge motivation. It happens individually with people; it happens with groups. For the twentieth century illustration we have Adolf Hitler and Joe Stalin. Adolf Hitler's determination to go to war illustrates the existence of the influence of these demons. War demons delight in involving nations and empires in terrible wars.

That introduces, then, the trinity of evil. The first member of the evil trinity is mentioned next beginning with a prepositional phrase, e)k plus the ablative of stoma — "from the mouth" of the drakwn, "dragon."

"Then I saw three frog-like demons." So we have the frog-like demons mentioned first and these three demons are going to be the source of all the problems. The only problem is that that is the way it is in the King James version, it is not the word order in the Greek. First we have the trinity, then we have the frogs. This is the evil trinity which begins with Satan himself, "from the mouth of the dragon."

Thanks to the Septuagint we know that stoma has an equivalent in the Hebrew, peh, and that helps us to understand the meaning of stoma in this passage. It means "from the mouth of" literally, but it is an idiom. The idiom is derived from peh compared to stoma in the translation of the Septuagint and it should be translated "from the command of," or even better, "from the conspiracy of." So we have, "Then I saw three evil spirits from the conspiracy of the dragon." They don't pop out of his mouth, they come from the conspiracy. Therefore these demons are a part of Satan's conspiracy. In Revelation 12:9 we saw that the dragon is Satan.

Next we have the dictator once again. There are two other conspirators. Satan is an angel, the leader of all the fallen angels and the highest ranking of the fallen angels. He is conspirator number one. Two other conspirators are the dictator of the revived Roman empire and the dictator of Israel. The conspiracy starts with Satan but the conspiracy demands the use of people. All effective conspiracies involve evil people and this one is no exception. So we will study again the beast dictator and his second agitator. We have already seen certain things about this dictator who is called the beast. He is a military genius, he gains control of the revived Roman empire through warfare. He conquers ten nations. He is a political genius and a religious genius. He has the power of miracles which is given to him by Satan, 2 Thessalonians chapter two. He also has the dynamics of verbal communication: the word "mouth." He has the ability to communicate as one of the most important functions of life. Satan gives this dictator a supernatural power of speaking, of eloquence, and he uses it in the conspiracy. There is a time limit to this conspiracy, that is always one of God's great weapons — time. There is a time limit to its function but it does result in the last great world war of history. There is also evil power being frustrated by a sense of humour, and this beast dictator with all of his genius has no sense of humour.

People, of course, who have too much power generally do not have a sense of humour, they take themselves very seriously. Too much power is defined as power accompanied by arrogance. To the extent that arrogance infiltrates the power systems that you possess, to that extent it becomes too much power. Arrogance plus power cannot laugh at self or at anything that is humorous. Arrogant preoccupation with self always takes self too seriously. The beast dictator cannot laugh at himself and all he can do is slander those who do laugh at him or those who are beyond his power. In this case he will use this for conspiracy.

We have also noted that the beast dictator with all of the great power that he possesses is miserable, frustrated and, above all, he is insecure. Out of his frustration and out of his unhappiness comes conspiracy. And the second phrase of this verse, "out of the conspiracy of the beast dictator," becomes very significant. Here is a dictator who is totally miserable and unhappy because he has no capacity for life. He has great genius, great ability, is a very smart person in every sense of the word, he has succeeded militarily and socially in every possible way. He has everything going for him and yet he is a totally miserable person. This means that these things require the one thing that he lacks: capacity. Capacity is one thing that he will never have. Capacity comes from doctrine — from receiving Christ as saviour and, after that, through spiritual growth through Bible doctrine; or, as an unbeliever, capacity could come to him through the function of the laws of divine establishment. He could have capacity from establishment truth but he has rejected all establishment truth, he is a part of that system called organised evil. The beast dictator has a systematic or organised system of evil in his control of the revived Roman empire and therefore he is a persecutor of believers.

The problem with verse 13 in the Greek is that the frog-like demons are not found until the end of the verse. Correcting it in the English we would say, "Then I saw three frog-like demons from the mouth [representing conspiracy] of the dragon, from the mouth of the beast dictator, from the mouth of the false prophet." That is the way we have it in the English but the unholy trinity is presented first as far as the Greek is concerned.

The devil is the central antagonist in the angelic conflict, in the human history phase, Hebrews chapters 1 & 2, he has an organisation to defeat mankind, Ephesians 6:10-12. Since Satan means "enemy" he is the enemy of the Church, Revelation chapter 2; he is the enemy of Bible doctrine, Matthew 13:9, 39; he is the original murderer of the human race, John 8:44; he is the enemy of Israel, Revelation 12:4, 13, 15; he is the enemy of Christ, Revelation 12:4. The devil has the strategy to control nations, Revelation 12:9; 20:3; he also has strategy to control the human race in the development of the cosmic system, 2 Corinthians 2:11. Resisting the devil means life in the divine dynasphere, God's system for the believer. Since the devil doesn't personally attack us, and so on, we understand that resisting the devil has to do with his cosmic system, cosmic one with its twelve gates of interlocking systems of arrogance; cosmic two with its nine gates of interlocking systems of anti-God hatred. When it says in James 4:8, “Draw near to God,” it means momentum in the divine dynasphere.

The second member of the evil trinity is a member of the human race, “from the mouth of the beast dictator [the ruler of the revived Roman empire and the leader of ecumenical religion]...”

The third member of the evil trinity — “from the mouth of the false prophet.” The false prophet is a Jew; the beast dictator is a Gentile. The Gentile dictator rules the revived Roman empire; the false prophet rules the Jewish state in the Tribulation. He is in on the conspiracy too. His first alias is “Dan the serpent”. That is the way the false prophet was described prophetically in Genesis 49. He is a Jew from the tribe of Dan; he is the dictator of the state of Israel in the Tribulation. He is also called “the wilful king” in Daniel chapter eleven. He is called the Anti-Christ in the sense of the false Messiah in Revelation 13:11; he is called the false prophet in Revelation 16:13, our passage. He is called the beast from the land in Revelation 13:11-18. So he has many designations and we can learn a great deal about him by studying all of these passages.

The last phrase in the Greek is one that deals with the demons themselves, “I saw three frog-like demons.” The frog-like demons are said to be unclean. This is a reference to cultic impurity. We have the Greek word a)kaqartoj and it is a very key word in this thing because “unclean” is a word which is used for fornication, idolatry, any form of religion that involves the phallic cult; and these war demons are worshipped in the Tribulation through the medium of idolatry just as in Old Testament times. There is a special warning about getting in contact with war demons through religion and through idolatry in Leviticus 17:7, “They shall no longer sacrifice their offerings to the satyr demon with whom they play the harlot.” The satyr demon is the one who brings on the war demon. “This shall be a permanent law in every generation.” In Deuteronomy 32:17, “They sacrificed to demons, not to God, to those who they have not known, news things who came lately,” the demons who came because of religion. First religion comes then idolatry, then the demons come into that area.

These demons are said to be “like frogs,” batroxoj. Why frogs? Batroxoj is used many times for people under a grotesque connotation. The whole concept of frogs is that frogs are like people when people are evil, when people are arrogant, when people are out of line as far as life is concerned. God even taught this to Pharaoh in Exodus 8:14 when He sent the plague of frogs, and it says the frogs were piled up in heaps when they died and “the land had a bad odour.” When people are compared to frogs that means that people are degenerate and the land stinks. Frogs in this context represent people but there is another reason why the frogs are mentioned: because frogs are great public speakers. Talk is used for conspiracy, for destruction.

In the English it sounds like this: “Then I saw three frog-like demons from the mouth of the dragon, from the mouth of the beast dictator, and from the mouth of the false prophet.”

The word “mouth” in each case refers to conspiracy, and these demons are called kosmokratwr. Their organisation is copied after the elect angelic college of heralds. The kosmokratwr are the war demons, Satanic ambassadors who are involved in propaganda ministries to the rulers of this world. Actually, these three demons command a special battalion each of ambassadors or propaganda demons who are sent to the various capitals of the world to carry out Satanic policies of evil, e.g. Daniel 10:13ff.

One of the things that is always brought about by dictatorships is not only conspiracy but organised evil where before disorganised evil existed. The beast dictator has a systematic principle of organised evil. As the ruler of the revived Roman empire and as the leader of ecumenical religion he has developed a system whereby disorganised evil becomes non-existent and organised evil takes its place. When organised evil occurs then God must exercise His prerogative of justice: judgment by death rather than judgment by pain. In judgment by pain we have crisis evangelism but in judgment by death a part of the human race is eradicated in order that the rest of the human race might continue in history. In the martyrdom of mature believers we learn the principle that while doctrinal believers can coexist with degeneracy or disorganised evil they cannot exist in a society of organised and systematic evil. Organised or systematic evil always persecutes the truth, and what really brings about the whole thing is religion, just as Islamic people today have declared war on most of the non-Islamic world. So when you add religion to a dictator’s system you have the worst form of organised or systematic evil.

When a client nation has too much degeneracy, too much disorganised evil, and is therefore not controlled by the laws of divine establishment, some dictator rises up to suppress the disorganised evil of degeneracy. In so doing he often substitutes a systematic form of evil in which the government has one special characteristic: the union of religion and government. From this, of course, the government commits all of the crime and eliminates the general function of crime where crime is independent of the governmental system. The power of degeneracy or disorganised evil is crime and violence while the power of systematic evil is government using its authority and using religion as justification for destroying freedom, confiscating property, and murdering behind the facade of the greater good for the greater number. Systematic evil is characterised, therefore, by self-righteous arrogance; disorganised evil is characterised by criminal arrogance. The dictator eliminates private crime and substitutes public crime on a big scale.

The enlarged pivot of mature believers and the effective function of law and order, free enterprise, and military establishment hinders this type of function. It hinders the effectiveness of organised and systematic evil and prevents the rise of dictators such as the one we are studying in this passage.

Degeneracy or disorganised evil generally opens the way for the function of organised or systematic evil in a national entity. Degeneracy can coexist with doctrinal teaching and with the truth. The church evangelises degeneracy and degeneracy in its turn seeks to evangelise the church. The pattern of systematic evil replacing disorganised evil is seen quite frequently in history: in modern times the French revolution, the Russian revolution of 1917, the communist take-over of China, and rise of Adolf Hitler, just to mention a few.

It proves the point that self-righteous arrogance always has greater power than criminal arrogance. Self-righteous arrogance is morality without virtue, and therefore the importance of the priorities in the plan of God — virtue first, for Christianity produces a morality totally divorced from any form of legalism or self-righteousness. Morality minus virtue becomes self-righteous arrogance and leads to organised evil, the systematic evil by which dictators rise to power. In permitting evil to run its course in human history God demonstrates the power of doctrine resident in the mature believer. The mature believer always keeps his priorities straight, doctrine is more important than life itself, and therefore the explanation for the martyrdom during the Tribulation.

The dictator demands and gains respect from the people, the leader functions under the principle of mutual respect. This, therefore, means that dictatorships eliminate any true system of leadership whereby the leader functions under the principle of mutual respect. The dictator demands respect through the infusion of fear, therefore the dictator uses his power to gain respect rather than any leadership ability he may possess. The worship of power is the dictator's way of control of people in contrast to the leadership system. Leaders have ability and professionalism which inspires confidence and leads to the principle of mutual respect.

One of the great problems, and one we are facing today but is not nearly as great today as it will be in the Tribulation, is the fact that a dictator realises very early in his career that there is no power in public opinion. Public opinion caters to the viewpoint of the majority and the majority has no power or control in history. It is always the minority well organised that has the control. One hundred thousand Bolsheviks eventually took over the entire Russia. Sometimes it is a good minority like the pivot of mature believers in a client nation, but generally it is the very well organised system of evil, often working both through concepts of politics but more often through concepts of religion. Religion keeps people from thinking; religion is, of course, a form of emotionalism; religion is evil and Satanic in contrast to Christianity. The minority for evil often controls under historical trends. The communists were a minority, the Nazis were a minority. Organised minorities always produce dictators. Public opinion reacts to these minorities but public opinion has no organisation and no power. Public opinion is news today and gone tomorrow. It has no power against organised minorities and their depredations. Therefore public opinion can bully the weak and flatter the successful. Public opinion is all too often a system of arrogance (therefore weakness), a system of self-righteousness, a system of mass hysteria which assumes that their condemnation has influence for power — which it does not. We often operate on the false premise that public opinion has influence over evil. In reality evil cares absolutely nothing for public opinion except to mould it for its own devices.

The power of the dictator prevents him therefore from also thinking beyond the inventory of his ideas. But once a dictator becomes powerful then he seeks to make sure that the people that he controls never think beyond his inventory of ideas. All of this is what happens in this passage. Notice again that three times the word "mouth" is mentioned and each time it refers to conspiracy — well organised conspiracy. The dragon is Satan, the greatest creature genius of all history; the beast dictator is the most brilliant man of his day.

What we have in verses 13 and 14 at the start of the last world war in history is the beginning conspiracy. When we get to Revelation 19:19 we will see the last conspiracy in connection with that world war.

What is the answer to conspiracy? It can be very easily summarised by Hosea 4:1ff. This is an ancient problem, the kosmokratwr demons have been functioning throughout history.

Verse 1, “Hear the word of the Lord, you citizens of Israel.” Hosea addressed this to the northern kingdom which at this time was a client nation to God but was becoming very degenerate, very disorganised, very easily brainwashed, and therefore was in serious jeopardy; “because the Lord has a lawsuit against the inhabitants of the nation, because there is no doctrine being taught and nothing of grace being applied, and nothing of knowing God in the nation.” That is the three fold indictment. When nations fail these are the reasons: no doctrine, no grace, no knowledge of God.

Verse 2, “Instead there is lying, falsehood and deceiving, murdering and stealing, and they break in to commit rape. Therefore blood reaches out and touches blood,” an idiom in the Hebrew for violence. Violence starts with lying. When people start conspiracies inevitably conspiracy destroys individuals, first in the soul and then next in violence.

Verse 3, “For this cause the land shall mourn, therefore everyone who lives in it shall lose strength,” people become weak sisters — “along with the animals of the field, the birds in the sky, the fish in the lake; they shall be destroyed.” In other words the destruction of all categories of life through warfare.

Verse 4, “Only let no one [the believer in the cosmic system] try to destroy [or put down] the authority of someone who communicates doctrine; since your people [the northern kingdom] resemble those who try to destroy the authority of the priest,” the priest communicated Bible doctrine in that day.

Verse 5, “Therefore you have stumbled in the daylight, and even the prophet will stumble with you in night darkness; and I will destroy your mother [the nation].”

“Therefore you have stumbled” means they have entered into the cosmic system and they have done it in daylight in the presence of good doctrinal teaching. And even the prophet will stumble with you in night darkness” means apostasy in the clergy. “And I will destroy your mother” means the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline.

Now, why all of these things?

Verse 6, “My nation [the northern kingdom, at that time a client nation] is destroyed from lack of knowledge of doctrine. Because you have rejected the principle of knowing doctrine, therefore I will reject you from being a client nation [or priest nation] for me. Since you have neglected the doctrine of your God, I will neglect your citizens.” That is the end of the client nation.

In our passage we are going to see the Pantokratwr defeat and destroy the kosmokratwr. Also we note that the kosmokratwr are a demon system whereby the politics of the world result in a lot of wars. Kosmokratwr are therefore involved in the brainwashing techniques. The ultimate source in this life of distorted ideas and falsifications of history is the battalion of kosmokratwr demons, the war demons. Most antiwar movements come from war demons. The stronger the peace movement the sooner there will be a war. Peace movements, when they become popular and are taken seriously, inevitably lead to war because peace movements weaken the country in which they find themselves. The source of their erroneous concepts is always the same: the kosmokratwr demons. They have a knack of distorting things so that even born-again believers without doctrine believe the lie, as per 2 Thessalonians chapter two.

No one can have an inventory, then, of doctrinal principles and categories if he is constantly in his arrogance accepting false ideas. We can only accumulate an inventory of truth of doctrinal ideas by our daily positive volition toward doctrine properly taught. Believers who are short on doctrine are dupes to be used by evil political groups. They are even used by the kosmokratwr demons, for the kosmokratwr demons spread ideas. If doctrine, therefore, does not guide and control the life of the believer he has no control of his own life. He has no personal sense of destiny, no cognisance of the divine system, and he cannot make decisions from a position of strength, i.e.. the good decisions that relate to the plan of God. No one can have a maximum inventory of truth and at the same time reside in the cosmic system. Only the daily perception of doctrine provides the inventory of ideas with which to cope with personal and historical disaster. The daily decisions which accumulate the inventory of ideas, the personal control of one's life all become important in understanding historical trends as well as God's system, the Christian way of life.

1 John 2:15, "Stop loving the cosmic system, or anything in the cosmic system," is a mandate to all of us. Cosmic one emphasises arrogance, preoccupation with self; cosmic two emphasises hatred, antagonism toward the priorities of God.

No believer can think beyond the inventory of his own ideas, and if his own ideas are the accumulation of Bible doctrine then he can discern for himself and understand and appreciate some of the tremendous things that are being written today by certain members of the fourth estate. While cosmic one emphasises self in contrast to God, cosmic two emphasises human viewpoint in contrast to divine viewpoint. Most believers today are completely hamstrung by human viewpoint. That is because their inventory is limited.

The cosmic system, especially cosmic two, is the manner in which the kosmokratwr demons work. They are described as frog-like demons. What is meant by that has nothing to do with how frogs look, it has to do with using frogs as the personification of evil. 1 John 2:16, "Because all that is in the cosmic system, the lust of the flesh [the old sin nature's attempt to control the soul] and the lust of the eyes [motivational evil of cosmic one, gate one] and the arrogant pattern of life [the function of evil in the fragments of the grenade, like gate two: negative volition arrogance; gate three, authority arrogance; gate four, self-righteous arrogance], is not from the Father, but is from the cosmic system." The cosmic system, therefore, is used — especially the ideas generated in cosmic two — not only to capture unbelievers but to capture believers so that they will not understand the clear delineations of historical trends given in the Word of God.

At the end of the Tribulation there will be a unification of all of the various Asiatic powers in the Pacific basin. They will be united and will form a tremendous sphere of influence and a power bloc in the last half of the Tribulation. That is the explanation for the beginning of the Middle East campaign. And while that is the cause of the Middle East campaign it does not explain the cause of the war in which that campaign occurs, the last world war of history at the end of the Tribulation. "The mouth of the dragon [Satan]," the mouth is used to explain conspiracy. When the mind thinks evil the tongue forms conspiracy. The tongue forms various categories of evil such as maligning, gossiping and judging, destroying the privacy of individuals. etc. This is Satan's last conspiracy before the Millennium.

In verse 14 we have an explanation of the modus operandi of these three frog-like demons. We have had two world wars, World War 1 and World War 2. There have been world wars before but they were never called that. We do not know how long the Church Age will continue and if it lasts for any length of time there could be more world wars. We know that the Church Age is the calling out of a royal family for our Lord's third royal title; He needs a royal family to go with it. So this is the dispensation of the royal family of God. When the royal family is completed there will be a resurrection, the royal family is removed from the earth. At that time we go back to the completion of the Age of Israel called Daniel's seventieth week and the Tribulation, and in the Tribulation there will be a world war at its end. Here we have that last great world war in history and we are now going to study the cause of that last world war; it is strictly a demon activity. In that war there is a campaign and eventually there is a battle in that campaign called Armageddon, and we will see the cause of that battle. So this is really a passage of causes. At the second advent there will be the termination of that war, the campaign, and the battle.

Whenever a war is started there must be an appeal to the masses, not rationally but emotionally. People in a state of degeneracy or in a state of organised or disorganised evil are very vulnerable to having emotion dominate their thinking so that they cannot think rationally or with any ability at all. They cannot even use what inventory of ideas they possess. So we are going to note in the first part of this passage the emotional appeal to the general public. That is a major factor in every war and the kasmokratwr demons find some way to appeal to emotions. It is 100 per cent easier to appeal to someone's emotions than it is to appeal to someone's rationalism. Emotion has a place but it must always be subordinate to thinking and being rational.

So we find in right here in verse 14 the explanatory use of the post positive conjunction gar, "For," and we now find out what the war demons do. They are so smart that they get the advantage and start wars and trouble by appealing to emotion. By appealing to emotions they are able to keep people from thinking straight. We have the present active indicative e)imi, "For they are," a descriptive present tense. The active voice: the war demons produce the action. The indicative mood is declarative for an eschatological principle. With it we have a predicate nominative from the noun pneuma which is here used for demons, “spirits.” Then we have a descriptive genitive from daimonion, one of the Greek words for demons. “For these are the spirits of demons.”

What are these demons doing? The present active participle of poiew, they are “working”, and they are working with their minds. They are transferring thought that will start trouble, that is their whole concept of working. The perfective present tense refers to a fact which has come to be in the past and is emphasised as a present reality. These war demons have been operating since the fall of Adam and the rulership of Satan over the world, and they work with their brains. They are category genius in the demon realm and they transfer thought that starts trouble — conspiracy. The active voice: the war demons produce the action of the verb and they do it through deceiving. The primary system of deception is to be thinking while someone else is emoting even if they are smarter than you. Because they are emoting instead of thinking you can outthink them, and that is what the war demons do. The participle is circumstantial and with it the accusative plural direct object.

How are you going to appeal to emotions of all people? You have to do something special, and they do. They work miracles, shmeion, extra-natural acts. If you are going to get through with your propaganda work a miracle here and there, and that is exactly what they do. These are the spirits of demons performing miracles. They appeal to the emotions of the general public to bring them into the ecumenical religious system of Satan so that they can be propagandised for Satanic conspiracy. Don’t forget: it is religion that starts wars; furthermore, religious wars are the worst kind, they are the most brutal. The very intensity of religious wars indicates their relationship to demonism.

The war demons have been functioning in the field of violence, terrorism, and warfare since the antediluvian age and the days of Hercules. The function of the general public in the beginning of a war is emotionalism. This was illustrated by the French people in 1870, the beginning of the Franco-Prussian war. They responded emotionally to the Ems telegram which Bismarck used to arouse the emotions of the German people. There was a reaction from the French and so there was the Franco-Prussian war.

Miracles always appeal to the general public. Such miracles are used by the war demons to motivate violence and terrorism among civilised people, “For these are the spirits of demons performing miracles.”

Principle: Emotion without truth or doctrine is irrational. Even if you have a good inventory of truth, even if you have a lot of good ideas, if emotion controls your soul and the next person’s and the next person’s, and it is very contagious, then you establish mass irrationality. Irrational people are impressed by what they cannot understand, including miracles. That is the key. It is not simply miracles themselves, it is what people cannot understand. Being impressed by what they cannot understand means that they immediately become emotional and irrational. Only doctrine can provide the relaxed mental attitude necessary to keep cool in historical emergency.

We call the next phrase in this verse the kosmokratwr conspiracy. It begins with the accusative neuter plural from the relative pronoun o(j). It is in the neuter because pneuma is, and pneuma is the antecedent, "spirits of demons who." And what do they do? The present middle indicative from e)kporeuomai. Xenophon first used e)kporeuomai to mean to march out. It means to march out or to move out, and it connotes advance. So we are going to translate: "For these are the spirits of demons performing miracles who advance." The pictorial present tense conveys to the mind a picture of this function as a procedure. The middle voice is a deponent verb: middle in form, active in meaning. The war demons produce the action and the indicative mood is declarative for an eschatological principle: the war demons advance to start the last world war in history.

Then we have a descriptive genitive singular with an accusative. The accusative is the word "kings," e)pi plus the accusative of basileia, "on the kings." They march on the kings of the entire world. The word for earth or world is o)jkoumenh which means populated earth.

Translation: "For these are the spirits of demons, performing miracles, who advance on the kings of the entire populated earth."

In other words, the war demons are in the process of starting a general world war in the last half of the Tribulation. The world is filled with disaster areas from the administration of the first five bowl judgements and devastation in disaster areas does not hinder world wars when the war demons go into action. So it is an emotional war right from the start and very few parts of the world can afford a war as we have noted from the first five judgements.

Chapter 16:14 via Daniel 10:13,20,21

We must notice now the modus operandi of the kosmokratwr or war demons.

In Daniel 10:13 Gabriel is speaking to Daniel, "But the prince of the kingdom of Persia," the prince of the kingdom of Persia is a kosmokratwr demon. He is Satan's ambassador, agitator, conspirator, in the court of Persia where he has a battalion of war demons under his command. Gabriel explains that he couldn't come immediately with Daniel's answer but was delayed 21 days, "opposed me for twenty-one days," the reason the kosmokratwr opposed him was because he was there to influence the Persian kings to hinder the remnant of Jews under Joshua the high priest and Zerrubabel the governor from returning to the land. Gabriel and Michael opposed the prince of Persia, which means that the kosmokratwr or war demon was a very high-ranking and very powerful fallen angel. The historical results are found in Ezra chapter four while the prophetic results of this spiritual battle are found in both the books of Haggai and Zechariah, "then behold, Michael [the archangel], one of the chief princes, came to help me, for I had been left there with the kings of Persia," this is from BC 516-323, and Gabriel would frustrate Satan's objective in the court of Persia. Gabriel as an archangel is more powerful than the kosmokratwr.

Verse 20, "Then he [Gabriel] said, 'Do you know why I came to you? And now I shall return to fight against the prince of Persia [kosmokratwr]; then I will be leaving [the court of Persia], for behold, the prince of Greece is about to come'. ” The prince of Greece is another kosmokratwr demon who is now working in the court of Macedonia, the court of Philip and his son who became Alexander the Great.

Verse 21, “ ‘However, before I go I will cause you to understand what is inscribed in the scripture of doctrine. Incidentally, there is no one who reinforces me against these [the kosmokratwr] except Michael your prince’.”

From this we conclude that Gabriel and Michael as archangels are in the angelic order of battle and that is because they have the highest power in that order. They oppose equally powerful demons known as war demons or kosmokratwr, and when Gabriel is away teaching Michael replaces him in the court of Persia. This means there is a tremendous invisible unseen battle in every capital of the world during every generation of human history, including the time in which we live as well as in the future in the Tribulation. Until we arrive in heaven we will never begin to appreciate the tremendous invisible battle which is constantly occurring in every capital and in every important city and strategical geographical area of the day. So Daniel 10 verses 13, 12, and 21 plus Ephesians 6:12 are very significant in the understanding of the nature of this invisible conflict, a conflict being fought on earth during the entire course of human history.

So Revelation 14:16 says, “For these are the spirits of demons, performing miracles [an emotional appeal to the general public], who advance on the rulers [or the kings] of the entire populated earth.”

The next phrase presents to us the cause of the great world war in the last half of the Tribulation. Part of that great world war in the time of the devil’s desperation includes the Armageddon campaign. There is only one history book in which you can find what is behind every war, and that is the Word of God. The Word of God is really not a text book of history but any time that it deals with history it is totally accurate, and it does explain why there are wars.

Remember the principle: Evil flourishes in war obviously, but evil flourishes in peace just as much as in war. But, again, virtue also flourishes in war or in peace, in prosperity or adversity. So the circumstances of history do not hinder the function of evil or the function of virtue.

In spite of man’s efforts for peace (man always wants peace. Obviously, peace is related to normality and in that sense it is a good idea) if you compromise any form of truth for peace you are inevitably going to start a war, and a war that you will lose. If you compromise any of the categories of truth — category #1 truth, the laws of divine establishment, or category #2 truth, the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, or category #3 truth, Bible doctrine for the believer; the result is war. In fact, one of the quickest ways to start a war is to have a lot of peace movements. In Matthew 24:6,7 our Lord makes it very clear that there will be wars throughout human history until He comes. Man will not accomplish in the dispensation of the Church or in the Tribulation what only Jesus Christ can accomplish in the Millennium. Therefore, warfare is a bona fide part of history.

Ecclesiastes 3:8 — “There is a time for war and there is a time for peace.” There has to be a war. Injustices can only be corrected by warfare and when things get out of hand among nations warfare becomes the answer. Being oriented to peace means that you live a normal life, you have wonderful opportunities, but it doesn’t mean that you would ever compromise the wonderful principles of freedom in order to avoid war. People who avoid fights are always bullied by bullies.

Numbers 21:14 has this to say about war: “It is written in the Book of the Wars of the Lord, ‘Waheb in Suphah [Jehovah takes in storm].’” The Lord therefore does have a book of wars and the Lord uses wars to take people by storm. The misnomer of warfare is found in Matthew 26:52. This is one of the most distorted verses in the Bible. People assume that this has to do with warfare but it has to do with crime, violence. “Perish by the sword” in this verse refers to capital punishment and has nothing whatever to do with military service. The sword always refers in these cases to capital punishment, as in Romans 13:4.

All national freedom comes from military victory and two factors are involved in the protection of national sovereignty and freedom. These factors are both found in Nehemiah chapter four and are virtue factors in warfare.

Verse 8, “And all of them together [Samaria under Sanballat, the Ammonites under Tobiah, the Arabs under Geshem, the Philistines of Ashdod: four powerful nations which had united to destroy the Jews who had just come back into the land] organised a conspiracy to invade, to fight against Jerusalem and to manufacture harm to it.”

Verse 9, “But we made intercession to our God, and we established a military security system against them day and night.” They called up the military and went on red alert day and night. They set up their instant reaction force.

There are two factors there. There is a spiritual factor: they prayed because most of these people were believers. That is why they came back to the land, they believed the promises of God, they believed that God would bless them in the land. So the first thing they did was a spiritual factor when the crisis came. The next thing they did was to put their mobilisation plan into operation. That is the beginning of the spiritual factor. But there is also an establishment factor.

Verse 13, “Therefore I garrisoned troops on the lower slopes behind the walls as a mobile reserve. On the higher places I stationed the troops according to their tribes with their swords, their spears, and bows.”

Verse 14, “And I inspected the defences and I stabilised the perimeter. Then I spoke to the generals, the commissioned officers, and the men in ranks: ‘Do not be afraid of them; remember the Lord, the hero warrior and respected one, therefore fight in battle for your brethren [fellow citizens: Divine institution #1], your sons and daughters [Divine institution #3, the family], your wives [Divine institution #2, marriage], and your houses.’” So you see the legitimacy of warfare here: fighting for your fellow citizens, for those whom you love, and for your family, “and your houses”: always there is the principle that legitimate warfare is fighting for your privacy and your property. The house represents property; it is your privacy. You have a right to property and to privacy.

Verse 15, “And it came to pass that when our enemies heard that it [their plan] was known to us, and that God had frustrated their plan [surprise attack], then all of us returned to the walls, each man to his service.”

Failure of the military in the battlefield indicates lack of training, lack of self-discipline, lack of respect for authority, lack of motivation, lack of courage, lack of teamwork, lack of spiritual incentive to resist and fight which is so basic to the perpetuation of freedom in the national entity. Failure of the military indicates a general lack of character, virtue, stability, among the citizens of a national entity. God uses the military in action to demonstrate one of two things: the virtue of a nation or the degeneracy and decline of a nation. Therefore the military is an index of national character. Armies defend freedom; armies destroy freedom. Armies that defend freedom are virtuous in general terms; armies that destroy freedom are evil in general terms. The issue of national sovereignty, integrity, and freedom always depends, then, on which army wins.

All of these passages indicate that there is validity in warfare under certain conditions. There is never any validity to terrorism, to using the power of the military for crime or to abuse people, but under the laws of divine establishment the military is the first line of defence of freedom.

1 Chronicles 5:19, “And they [Israel] made war against the Hagrites [an Arab tribe], Jetur, Naphish, and Nodab.”

Verse 20, “And they [the Jews] were helped against them, and the Hagrites and all who were with them were given into their hands [the Jews defeated them]; for they [the Jews] cried out to God in battle, and he was entreated,” the hiphil infinitive of the verb zaaq and it means really to be propitious, “because they trusted in him.” They went into battle as born-again believers offering their prayers to the Lord, and as they went in to battle they went in trusting the Lord, the function of the faith-rest drill, and that is why the Lord was propitiated, and that is why they won.

Verse 21, the result: “And they took away [as booty] their cattle: 50,000 camels, 250,000 sheep, 2000 mule, and 100,000 men.”

Verse 22, “Many fell slain, because the war was from God [the God of war].”

Obviously we can't say that war is evil. Evil things happen in war but evil things happen in peace time. We can't say that war is wrong. Many wars are wrong but that doesn't mean that war is always wrong. Here is a war that is right and is sponsored by God. And you have to remember no matter what the circumstances of life may be God's plan for your life goes on. People are afraid of warfare but if you are a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ and functioning under the faith-rest drill it doesn't make any difference.

Under the concept of leadership we should remember a principle that relates to our intake of Bible doctrine. Historical events produce a need, and leadership meets that need. If you are a prepared person through Bible doctrine historical events will produce a need and leadership always meets that need. Circumstances of life produce a market and leadership supplies that market. In other words, life is a market for leadership and crisis is often the stage for that leadership.

In Revelation 16:14 the next phrase we are studying presents to us the cause of the great world war in the last part of the Tribulation. Remember the principle: Evil flourishes in peace as well as in war. Evil things happen in war but evil things happen in peace. Also remember: Virtue flourishes in war as well as in peace. Therefore, war and peace is not the issue, the real issue is virtue versus evil. It doesn't matter if we are having a war or living in peace time the issue remains the same.

Next we have the aorist active infinitive of the verb sunagw. While it generally means to assemble, here it means to mobilise. There is a mobilisation plan in operation, "to mobilise them." The culminative aorist tense views the mobilisation of the world's armies in their entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of its existing results, the escalation into total world war at the end of the Tribulation. Notice that this war is caused by war demons. The active voice: the war demons produce the action of the verb influencing the rulers of the earth to go to war. The infinitive of intended result means simply it combines purpose and result. The result indicates a deliberate objective on the part of Satan to entangle the world in a war so that he can control. The evil part of war is that Satan often gains great control of large portions of the population of the earth. Satan tries to control the earth, he is the ruler of this earth, and he often has to use war to do it. He prefers to use peace and he has often gained great control in time of peace.

Next we have a prepositional phrase, e)ij plus the accusative from the noun polemoj, "war" [not battle], "to mobilise them for that war."

Then we have a very brief description of that war, a descriptive genitive from an adjective and a noun. The adjective is megaj; the noun is h(mera, "the great day." What is the great day? The second advent of Christ, the dramatic termination of that world war. It is a reference, therefore, to the time when Jesus Christ will execute that perfect tactical victory of the second advent.

Then we have a very astounding phrase in view of the fact that a synonym for these war demons is kosmokratwr. After the words "great day" we have an appositional genitive pantokratwr. Pantokratwr goes with kosmokratwr to show who is going to win. The pantokratwr is the Lord Jesus Christ. Pantokratwr means "Almighty," it refers to the omnipotence of the Lord Jesus Christ. Kosmokratwr indicates the phenomenal power of these demons who command war demons to start wars in this world, but the pantokratwr is going to overcome the kosmokratwr. What is much stronger than the most powerful of all demons? The Lord Jesus Christ Himself. "Greater is he who is in you than he who is in the world." So we have the termination of that great war and the defeat of these war demons. Jesus Christ at the second advent is the Almighty God, so it is called “the war of the great day of God the Almighty one [or the omnipotent one].”

All of this brings us to a point. When war comes along it brings abnormal circumstances. There are abnormal circumstances in peace time, crime being a good illustration, but the abnormal circumstances of war time seem to multiply. Families are torn apart, loved ones are separated, and there is a tremendous need for leadership, a tremendous market for leadership. Life, again, is a market for leadership. We have, therefore, in verse 15 a parenthesis, a very special application to born-again believers living at that time. Of course, it applies to us today as it does to them.

First of all the verse begins with an eschatological principle. The first word is very important, it is a demonstrative particle, Idou. Idou is taken from the aorist active imperative of the verb o(raw which means to look or to see. The demonstrative particle means not to behold but to be alert. This, therefore, reminds us of the fact that one of our responsibilities is to be alert with regard to historical circumstances.

We have studied the doctrine of historical trends which, as found in the Word of God, are designed to keep you alert with regard to history. You have to be alert for certain types of adversity when they come. You have to be ready to crank up that second stage of the faith-rest drill. You have to take in doctrine on a daily basis knowing that God is never going to test you beyond what you are able to handle with the doctrine you have learned. For those who are not able to handle it it simply means that they have failed to fulfil the plan of God for their lives.

And this principle also deals with what we have been studying lately: the protocol of heaven. We have seen that great temple which is also a barracks and a castle. We saw God the Father use one of the highest-ranking angels in the angelic college of heralds, an officer of arms, to send a mandate, a message, to the cloud where the Lord Jesus Christ sits as the controller of history. He sent the mandate to judge the earth. In the meantime in the barracks was the special execution squad. Also in that same barracks area we saw the pur sui vant officer who was to command the execution squad. Then we saw in chapter fourteen that golden altar of incense where the imprecatory prayers of the Tribulational martyrs had been offered, and from that the king of arms, the highest-ranking angel in the college of heralds who brought a confirming order. We saw how the pur sui vant officer received his command and how the herald issued each one a bowl of judgment to be poured upon the earth.

We have noted that the first five judgements were judgment by pain, and that was the last call, crisis evangelism, to give people under conditions of pain a temporary opportunity inside of the cosmic system so that they could personally respond to the gospel which they had heard time and time again and to believe in Christ and to trust Him.

Now we go from those unbelievers and judgment by pain followed by judgment by death, grace judgements, to the believers. What about the believers? Everything we have been studying in chapters 14-16 deals primarily with unbelievers. There are two categories of believers. The protocol of heaven told us that there is great happiness in heaven. There is capacity for happiness and that capacity is based on protocol. Now that protocol comes to the earth. Our alert system today is the divine dynasphere. Protocol in heaven was brought to earth on the first Christmas day when the humanity of Christ was born into the prototype divine dynasphere. Then, when the Lord Jesus Christ ascended and was seated at the right hand of the Father He gave to the royal family the operational divine dynasphere. We have the operational type; our Lord used the prototype during His life on earth. Only inside of that operational divine dynasphere is there any happiness or blessing or alertness.

Once the Church, the royal family, is resurrected and we get into the Tribulation we are going back to the Age of Israel, and therefore they do not have the same ministry of God the Holy Spirit that we have; it goes back to Old Testament times. But they do have a basis for alertness, so when we have in this phrase, "Be alert," it has to do with the fact that they have the same spiritual life that Abraham had based on the faith-rest drill. However, when we apply this we can apply it to the Church Age for our alertness is based on the very protocol of heaven, the use of the divine dynasphere. God has a plan for your life and therefore the first two words, translated from two Greek words, "Be alert," tells us that we have an application coming up even though we are dealing with eschatological doctrine. So the very fact that it says, "Be alert," reminds us once again of several things: God has a plan for your life and as long as you are alive that plan never changes. God's plan for your life takes the protocol right out of heaven and brings it to the earth so that you can have heaven on earth, so that you can have happiness, so that you can have blessing, so that your life can be very meaningful and very wonderful.

Believers by the thousands, and perhaps even the millions, are going to survive some of the worst disasters of history and they will survive by being alert. Alertness is always the issue. Alertness, of course, is just as much an issue to us even though we do not live in an eschatological dispensation. We have the doctrine of historical trends and we have something that no other dispensation possesses, the operational type of the prototype of the first Christmas present in all of history. Needless to say many millions of believers and unbelievers will survive the worst disasters of history. The worst of all is the second advent and they will be alive for that event as well. The first application that we need to make right now is that no weapon or disaster will destroy the entire population of the world at any time. God will never permit the destruction of the human race by man's bad decisions from a position of weakness, demon influence, or even divine judgment. In other words, the human race will continue until the Millennium, at which time the baptism of fire will take out all the unbelievers. By application, that means to us that there will never be any form of disaster that is not survivable.

Next we have the present active indicative of the verb erxomai, "I will come." This is a futuristic present tense, it denotes an eschatological event, the second advent, which has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain that in thought it is thought of as occurring now. That is the futuristic present tense. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ will produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of eschatological doctrine.

There has to be a comparative concept here. Whenever the second advent is mentioned there is usually something to accompany it. In this case it is going to be how we survive. This verse is a survival verse for believers in the Lord Jesus Christ. And how is that going to be declared? By an analogy, the comparative particle o(j which is translated “like.” The particle sets up an analogy between the modus operandi of a thief in the ancient world and how we are going to survive, not by the analogy to the thief but by the analogy to the victim of the thief. The independent nominative of klephtj introduces the analogy, “like a thief.”

The Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written. In the ancient world the thief did not operate on the basis of stealth. Today, burglaries are usually accomplished under the key word “stealth.” They come unobtrusively, quietly. In the ancient world they didn’t do that. The key word was “sudden invasion.” The thief in the ancient world invaded the home of the domicile suddenly, unexpectedly, surprising the occupants who were his victims. Since the Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written we must recognise that there has been some change in the method of the burglary. Hence, to come as a thief means to come suddenly, to come unexpectedly, rather than to come quietly and stealthily. The burglar came suddenly to surprise the household and to overpower them, and the second advent will come suddenly, surprisingly, and the world’s population will be very surprised even though it has been declared as occurring.

All of this means something very simple to us. It means that in order to be protected in the ancient world against burglary you had to be alert, you had to have a system of protection, some security system. The burglary may happen infrequently but the point is: they had to be ready for it and they had to have some system, some weapon. It was all pre-prepared so that when the attack occurred they were ready.

Basically, this is what this analogy is all about. You and I live in the devil’s world where there is all kinds of injustice. The devil is never fair, the whole system he has set up, the cosmic system, is not fair either. Consequently, we have to be prepared, we have to be alert, we have to have a system. That is our survival. If you have a system you will come off a winner, you will be what is called by the next word makarioj, translated “blessed” or “happy.” Actually, it is in the singular here and so it refers to the fact that if you are prepared for anything in life it is because you are in God’s system, you are in God’s plan. God has a plan for your life, you are a believer, God has a plan for the life of every believer. The fact that you may be a loser living in the cosmic system, God still has a plan for your life, rebound is how you get back into the system. If you are not going to be taken by surprise, if you are not going to be overpowered by the enemy you must be in the system. That is the key: being in the system. The system is God’s plan and if you are in the system you have a wall of fire for everything in life and you also have the means of coping with every problem in life. The system is the key.

The next word is the word “happy,” and it means that the only true happiness in life comes from the system. Now basically, how did this system come about? Jesus Christ as eternal God became true humanity on what we celebrate as Christmas. On that first Christmas God the Father gave a Christmas present to God the Son. The humanity of God the Son had to be protected so that it could go to the cross. The cross had to come before the crown. There had to be a system, some means of protecting the humanity of Christ so that He could go to the cross and bear our sins in His own body on the tree. The only way this could be done was to give Him something that had never existed before in history, a prototype divine dynasphere. That was the system by which our Lord Jesus Christ in His humanity would achieve His third royal title, King of kings and Lord of Lords. In that prototype Jesus Christ was filled with the Spirit. He was born filled with the Spirit, He remained in the prototype divine dynasphere, never got out, never sinned, never got into the cosmic system even once, and therefore of course He was filled with the Spirit throughout His entire life. Secondly, He had the basic modus operandi down perfectly before He lived very long, and as a result Jesus grew in wisdom — the second gate and the fourth gate. Wisdom: perception of doctrine, “and in favour with God and man.” God: that would be gate five, the humanity of Christ developing a personal love for God. As eternal God, of course, there always existed love between the Father and the Son, but as true humanity He developed the motivational virtue of personal love for God. “And with man”, was gate six, impersonal love toward all: functional virtue. He also developed humility, “He humbled Himself and became obedient to death, even the death of the cross.” He passed every test. Our Lord Jesus Christ at a very early stage reached the winner’s gate. So His humanity functioned inside the prototype divine dynasphere, and as a result our Lord Jesus Christ was qualified to go to the cross. Why? Because as a son of Adam He is the only member of the human race who from birth all of the way to the cross was absolutely sinless in His humanity. As deity He could not sin; as true humanity He was tempted and could sin but did not.

As God Jesus Christ could not be judged for our sins. We are all condemned at birth not on the basis of our personal sins. The wages of sin, one sin: Adam’s, is death, and Adam’s sin was imputed to each one of us so that our personal sins were never imputed to us for judgment. Instead they were imputed to Christ on the cross and Christ was qualified because of impeccability. As eternal God He was not able to sin; as true humanity living in the prototype divine dynasphere He was able not to sin. He was able not to sin as true humanity because the prototype divine dynasphere was the system that God the Father gave Him on the first Christmas. That was His birthday present and that birthday present carried Him to the cross. On the cross the justice of God the Father imputed all of our sins to Christ and they were judged. But remember that it was His humanity that bore our sins: He bore our sins in His own body on the tree. “He who knew no sin was made sin for us that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him.”

Now we have in our passage, “Be alert, I will come as a thief. Happy is the one who watches.” The word “happy” of course, in the time of the worst historical disaster at the end of the Tribulation, tells us that the believer in the system possesses perfect happiness. The system produces something that nothing else in the world can produce, and that is capacity for happiness, not only capacity for happiness but capacity for prosperity, capacity for blessing, capacity for promotion, capacity for life. The unbeliever can have capacity based upon the function of gate three, enforced and genuine humility related to the laws of divine establishment, but we are talking here now about happiness in the system. Being born-again gives us great potential. We have all the talent that is necessary. Once we accept Jesus Christ as saviour we have the talent but the talent will never be useable by God unless we learn the play book, and learning the play book is learning the system. God has a plan for your life and that plan is a system and that system is the first Christmas present ever given. It was given to our Lord Jesus Christ and it sustained His humanity throughout the thirty-three years of His mission in the first advent on earth. Once our Lord Jesus Christ was ascended and seated at the right hand of the Father we have the dispensation of the royal family introduced. And what did He do? He turned right around and gave us the operational type divine dynasphere. We have to live in that divine dynasphere and when we do there is a word used right here, "happy." But it is not happiness as such, it is the capacity for it as well, it is the capacity for anything. So in time of the worst historical disaster at the end of the Tribulation there is a plan for the believer at that time; there is a system, a momentum, and a priority concept in whatever God's plan is for the Tribulational believer. And, of course, the only way that people can be useable and survive, and have great happiness, in disaster periods of history is to be in the plan of God, to know the system and to function under it.

The suddenness and power of the second advent will completely surprise everyone except the believer who has been living in the system. The mature believer has a maximum knowledge of eschatological doctrine, he will understand the prophetic trends of the book of Revelation, they have been crystallised in his soul. He will be functioning in whatever is comparable to our divine dynasphere and the principle is: the believer who keeps his priorities straight will never be surprised or overcome by any form of historical disaster.

So we have the articular present active participle of the verb gregorew. The word means to watch but it really means to remain alert, "Happy is he who remains alert." The definite article is used as both the personal pronoun and the relative pronoun. It is a reference to the believer who is consistently positive toward Bible doctrine, the person who observes the priorities of the plan of God, the believer learns the play book, the believer who can interpret historical trends, the believer who understands the priority issue in the plan of God: In God's plan, mandates first; in God's system, virtue first; in God's purpose, Christ first; in God's policy, grace first; in God's objective, momentum first; in God's authority, doctrine first. These priorities always exist. This is the dispensation of the divine dynasphere and will not exist as such after the Rapture but the believers of the Tribulation have a system, a plan. God has a plan for your life just as he will have a plan for theirs. That plan includes certain characteristics: a purpose, for example. The purpose for the plan of God and the reason that we are sustained logistically on planet earth is to glorify the Lord Jesus Christ in time, therefore to achieve tactical victory through spiritual momentum in the divine dynasphere. God's plan also has an objective: to advance to spiritual maturity in the plan, therefore to be a winner while living on this earth. God's plan has a policy, and in the administration of the plan of God grace is the policy of God. Therefore, the importance of both logistical grace and supergrace. It must be remembered always that the point of reference for God's plan is the justice of God which is one half of divine integrity. The other half of divine integrity or holiness is God's perfect righteousness, and that is imputed to each one of us at the point of salvation. So a pipeline is established between the justice of God and the righteousness of God. The fact that we are alive right now, everything that we have, is courtesy of the justice of God. We might be a winner living in the plan of God or we might be a loser as a believer living in the cosmic system, but the justice of God sends us daily logistical support and it goes from divine justice to divine righteousness. This is grace. God doesn't bless us because we are good or nice or moral, etc., God blesses us because we possess His righteousness. In the pipeline the initiating point is justice, the receiving point is righteousness of God. Therefore, God isn't going to bless you because you do something, He blesses you because you have His righteousness. That becomes very important because grace is the function of the justice of God in imputing blessing to the indwelling righteousness of God. That is true of logistical grace and that is true of the six paragraphs of supergrace life.

God also has a system and the system of God calls for virtue-first. That is the way it was with our Lord in the prototype in the original Christmas present and the moment we accept Christ as saviour we receive that Christmas present. Virtue actually begins at gate three directed toward authority and that, of course, is basic virtue in life. Your attitude toward authority determines your integrity, your virtue in life. Then, of course, in gate we five we have motivational virtue directed toward God. At gate six, functional virtue directed toward man and circumstances. This is the issue in the plan of God: virtue-first, not service first, not straightening out your life first.

There are also results in the plan of God. Residence, function and momentum in the divine dynasphere, in the protocol. God has brought heaven down to earth and that protocol means happiness, and that protocol is brought down to the earth only inside the divine dynasphere. The first time we enter the divine dynasphere is the moment we believe in Christ, we are filled with the Spirit at that particular point. So protocol is the system and the system is protocol. The result is that good decisions, then, in the divine dynasphere give us strength for future options. Good decisions from a position of strength always keep the options open and it results in the believer having control of his life and it results in the believer having a personal sense of destiny whether living in historical prosperity or adversity.

We have also noted that the system has an enemy and that is the cosmic system of Satan. And the system has protocol in heaven through which Jesus Christ controls history, and people become the products of their own decisions; a protocol on earth which keeps the believer functioning on earth under the principle of virtue-first. It all adds up to the fact of watching, as per this passage.

So gregorew, therefore, has a meaning to us and in translation it reads: "Be alert, I will come like a thief [the surprise element of the second advent]. Happy is he who stays alert." The present tense is a retroactive progressive present, it denotes what has begun in the past with the perception of Bible doctrine and continues to the very moment of the second advent. For us it is the principle of alertness as of the moment we accept Christ as saviour and as long as we live on this earth. It is a phase two alertness. Once we die or the Rapture occurs, whichever happens first, we are absent from the body and face to face with the Lord, we move into another state. We leave behind the operational, the functional divine dynasphere; we no longer need it. Therefore, the alertness is always related to the operational divine dynasphere, God's system for our life. The active voice: believers produce the action of the verb by living in the system. The participle is circumstantial. In addition to this the action of the present participle is coterminous with the action of the main verb. The main verb here is the inserted e)imi, "happy is."

The principle: There is no happiness in life apart from reception and application of doctrine, the momentum of the plan of God in every dispensation of history. The only happiness comes from your own capacity, and capacity comes from Bible doctrine. Staying alert has to do with the plan of God.

The next phrase is a little more difficult because, again, we have to go back to the time in which the Bible was written. We have a connective kai and then a present active participle from terew, and terew is used in a lot of ways. Here we have the military use of it and it means to guard, to be on guard duty. The customary present is for what habitually occurs when the believer is positive toward doctrine. Alertness means to walk our post; Gate five, toward God; gate six, toward people; gate seven, toward circumstances, so that we can arrive at gate eight as a winner. The doctrinal believer actually produces the action of the verb. It is a circumstantial participle.

Next we have the accusative plural direct object from i(mation which means a tunic, and it refers to the uniform of the day, of walking a post, being on guard duty, "and guards his uniform equipment." Guarding his uniform equipment has to do with a custom in the ancient world. When a person walked his post and each guard peeled off at his post the sergeant of the guard would say, "Watch your tunic." It meant that at some time during the night he was going to come by with the officer of the day and they were going to inspect every sentry post and if the man at, say, number three was asleep they had a very quick court martial. The officer of the day nodded and the sergeant of the guard stepped up with his torch and put it to the guards tunic and he was burned alive right then and there. Sometimes the guard would wake up and look for snow or something to roll in to put the flame out. If he survived he would go back to the barracks naked and suffer the sarcasm of everyone else in the platoon. And that is about what we have here: "so that he may not march naked, and they [the garrison] see his shame [his disgrace]." This is a military idiom, then, for a sentry walking his post and it becomes an excellent analogy to the doctrinal believer who understands historical trends at the last half of the Tribulation. And the analogy to us as believers: If we do not live in the God's system we are going to get burned. Doctrinal alertness is absolutely necessary, not only for our survival historically but our blessing in all the categories of history. This alertness, then, is the function of the faith-rest drill which was spirituality in the dispensation of Israel and, of course, passed down to the dispensational part of the Tribulation.

In our study of this context beginning in Revelation 14:16 we began the study of the protocol of heaven. We saw how it related to the angelic college of heralds. On the first Christmas day the whole angelic host passed in review. That would include the angelic order of battle as well as the angelic college of heralds. These represent the aristocracy of the elect angels and, of course, they were very very interested then, as they are now, in everything that pertains to the first Christmas day; and to the first advent of our Lord Jesus Christ, the events which followed, and how we are going to utilise the greatest opportunity ever given to those who are believers in any dispensation of history. This means that Christmas has a great significance to us as members of the royal family of God, believers of the Church Age. Even Moses longed to see our day, and while he utilised the assets given to him more than any man in the Old Testament, nevertheless we have something far greater than Moses ever imagined and it is related to Christmas.

The angelic college of heralds is made up of seraph-type aristocrats plus cherub-type aristocrats plus a few pur sui vant messengers. We have seen how they are used in the protocol of heaven in chapters 14 and 15. We saw, for example, how the officer of arms, the second highest seraph in the angelic college of heralds takes the messages from the temple of heaven, from God the Father to the cloud where our Lord Jesus Christ sits as He controls history. Here is the second highest aristocrat in the angelic order and this aristocrat is one of the more famous of those who existed prior to the creation of man in the angelic phase of the angelic conflict. The privilege, therefore, of simply carrying that message was a fantastic thing to him. The mandate had to do with judgment on earth.

Simultaneously at the golden altar, the highest ranking angel, the king of arms, the angel who was the greatest of the prehistoric angelic conflict, brings a confirmatory mandate related to the imprecatory prayers of the Tribulational saints. Then, out of the temple comes our first cherub, a pur sui vant officer, and he goes on standby waiting to take his command. All of this is a part of the protocol of heaven. Since God the Father has committed all judgment to God the Son, according to John 5:22, 23, this protocol becomes very important.

Finally, the pur sui vant officer goes back and takes command of the execution squad made up of seven pur sui vant messengers. An angelic herald issues each one of them his golden bowl. So we have the protocol in heaven and that protocol means many things as we have noticed. It means capacity for happiness in heaven, capacity for blessing. The protocol of heaven means that there is perfect virtue among all creatures living in heaven at this time and that perfect virtue goes right back to the basic virtue of humility, humility directed toward authority. Humility is recognised in heaven and therefore freedom is related to capacity for happiness, capacity for blessing, all of the great capacities that make heaven a wonderful place. So the protocol of heaven is the basis of happiness.

Down here on earth, of course, we have great unhappiness because man is the product of his own decisions and man by man's efforts is self-destructive. Therefore, God has protected man from destroying himself and has promised to preserve the human race until the end of history. All of this is possible because, first of all, even though man is the product of his own decisions and loses control of his own life and produces his own misery by bad decisions, God has provided some grace judgements. These grace judgements we have noted in chapter sixteen in the first eleven verses: the first five bowl judgements. These judgements all perform one thing: pain. Normal evangelism occurs generally in normal times — in times of prosperity or in times of certain kinds of adversity such as economic adversity — but it is the presentation of the gospel under normal conditions. Thousands and millions of people, of course, say no; they reject the gospel under normal conditions. This is not the end of evangelisation for those persons for eventually there is a second category of evangelism which we call crisis evangelism. It is related to a system, a category, of divine judgment: judgment by pain. Judgment by pain means that God brings about certain categories of adversity to you and you are in a state of pain, of misery. Your soul is in a state of great unhappiness and the purpose for this judgment by pain is to evangelise. All divine judgment is related to the grace of God. God is not arbitrary in His judgements, and while they come from His justice they are always related to His love, for God is not willing that any should perish but that all should come to a change of attitude toward our Lord Jesus Christ. So crisis evangelism is designed with one thing in mind. Judgment by pain, one of the two categories of judgment of the unbeliever, is brought about in order to distract the unbeliever. The unbeliever lives in the cosmic system, he has rejected Christ as saviour, and so as he lives in there he is distracted from these things by the pain brought about through divine judgment. And the purpose is to give him objectivity in the cosmic system, to distract him from the trends of the cosmic system, and to give him a temporary objectivity so that he has another opportunity to accept Christ as saviour. So we have the principle of judgment by pain, the last call for those who would have the opportunity of believing in Christ.

Then in Revelation 16:12 we begin to see judgment by death. For those who reject the gospel under judgment by pain there is a second category of divine judgment, judgment by death. That would be the sixth and seventh bowl judgements. In the sixth bowl judgment, verse 12, we have the cause of the Middle East campaign at the end of the Tribulation. In the last part of the Tribulation we have the last world war of history, and in that world war we have three things: a war, and in that war a number of campaigns and in each campaign we have X number of battles. In verses 13-14 we have the cause of the final world war. In verse 16 we have the cause of the battle of Armageddon.

In the midst of this study of causes we have application. We have seen, for example, that life is a market for leadership and for those who are prepared God will always use them in the crisis. There will always be opportunity for many categories of leadership.

Before we go on to the cause of the battle of Armageddon we have application: "Be alert, I will come like a thief," the surprise element of the second advent. Of course, those who are taken by surprise are those who are not prepared by doctrinal teaching. Then we have the word "happy." For once it is in the singular. Generally in the plural it is translated "blessed." "Happy is he [the Tribulational believer, the one who has momentum in the plan of God] who stays alert [a reference to guard duty] and guards his uniform."

To us that means that there are believers who are alert because they are living under the protocol of heaven. God has a plan for the life of every believer but they are the ones who are utilising the protocol. They are the ones who find that every day is Christmas. And there are believers who have gone to sleep and they are living in the cosmic system. They are therefore distracted from God's plan and they are the ones who are the losers. So we have winners and losers.

There is no other way to explain it all except to recognise that God has found a way to bring the protocol of heaven to the earth. Prior to the virgin birth of our Lord Jesus Christ on the first Christmas this protocol was brought to the earth in a very limited way in the plan of God, but once the virgin birth occurred on that first Christmas day God the Father gave our Lord Jesus Christ a Christmas present. He gave Him the full protocol of heaven, He gave Him the prototype divine dynasphere, the basis for all happiness and blessing for those who are believers, the key to the plan of God. God the Father invented the divine dynasphere to sustain the humanity of Christ during the incarnation. This is the true meaning of Christmas. The original divine dynasphere, therefore, was a Christmas gift from God the Father to God the Son. It was to give God the Son, during His earthly ministry, the protocol of heaven, the great happiness and blessing that comes from virtue. Virtue is related basically to humility and therefore that is where it all begins. Because of the virgin pregnancy and the virgin birth when human life was imputed to the embryo-foetus of the humanity of our Lord Jesus Christ He was born without the imputation of Adam's sin.

When man is born into this world at the moment of birth human life is imputed to the human soul, and the soul is the residence for that human life. That human life will always reside in the soul. But simultaneously with us Adam's original sin is imputed to the genetically-formed old sin nature, and therefore we are born physically alive and spiritually dead. That is so if anyone dies before reaching accountability he automatically goes to heaven under the principle of condemnation must precede justification. Our personal sins are not imputed to us for judgment, they are reserved for the cross, but it was different with our Lord Jesus Christ.

The old sin nature is formed because the man wilfully sinned in the garden, but our Lord Jesus Christ did not have an old sin nature because of the virgin pregnancy and the virgin birth. Therefore, when He came into the world human life was imputed to the human soul and our Lord has human life in the human soul of His humanity forever. That is a part of the doctrine of the hypostatic union. But Adam's original sin was not imputed to Him and therefore into His human spirit there had to be something. Our Lord was born trichotomous as Adam was created trichotomous. Adam became dichotomous through sin. There had to be something, some present, for the first Christmas day, and that present was the prototype divine dynasphere. Our Lord was given that prototype divine dynasphere on that Christmas day. That has more to do with your happiness, your blessing, the meaning of your life, the significance of your life than anything else.

There is a Christmas message found in Hebrews 10:5-9, "Therefore, when he [the incarnate Christ] entered into the world, he spoke [Psalm 40:6-8]," here is the subordination to the Father's plan, here is the beginning of that great dynamic, humility, that great happiness, that great blessing that came to our Lord Jesus Christ in His humanity. " 'You [God the Father] do not desire sacrifice and offering.' Throughout the entire Old Testament salvation was taught through sacrifices and offerings. In the Age of Israel ritual was the means of teaching because they did not have a completed canon of scripture. There were two categories of people who taught: the prophet and the priest. The priest taught by ritual; the prophet taught by message. None of the sacrifices which were part of the ritual could propitiate God the Father, it took our Lord Jesus Christ and His ministry to accomplish that fact. Therefore we have the phrase that our Lord recognises. There is no efficacy in animal sacrifices, they are merely a teaching aid, the real efficacy is through the first Christmas when our Lord came to the earth ...

'but you have prepared for me a human body,' no human body is more important in history than the human body of our Lord Jesus Christ coming into the world on that first Christmas day, 'Behold, I have arrived,' Jesus Christ has come as the God-Man, the unique person of the universe, '(In the scroll of the scripture it is written concerning me) I have come to accomplish your plan, O God,' the plan of God the Father called for God the Son to become true humanity on that first Christmas day, and from that cradle to go to the cross, and from the cross to receive the crown at the second advent.

When He calls God the Father "O God" He is speaking from His humanity. Of course our Lord is eternal God Himself but He is talking to the Father. Our Lord Jesus Christ was born inside of the prototype divine dynasphere. He was in the plan of God right from the start, His humanity was protected and He expressed true humility, He subordinated Himself to the Father's plan. A plan always has authority, therefore He subordinated Himself to the Father's authority.

Just before our Lord went to the cross he expressed again this same concept in Matthew 26:36, "Jesus went with them to a place called Gethsemane, and he said to his disciples, 'Sit down here while I go over there and pray.' And he took with him Peter and the two sons of Zebedee [James and John], and he began to experience great distress."

Why? Because Jesus Christ is eternal God. As eternal God He can have nothing to do with sin. Jesus Christ is also true humanity. As true humanity, within 24-hours He must receive the imputation of the sins of the world and be judged for every sin that has ever been committed in the history of the human race. Therefore He began to think about this and He was in a point of great distress; this was a crisis in His life.

"Then he spoke with them [Peter, James and John]." Notice that these are three of the greatest men in the early church but they are no use to Him. They can't counsel Him, they can't help Him, they can pray but they can't be any good. He has to work it out for Himself. Ultimately you can be surrounded by the greatest advice in the world and the greatest believers and they cannot do anything for you, you have to do it yourself. God's plan is to make you spiritually self-sustaining, for you to take the responsibility for your own decisions, good or bad, and for you to make your decisions in relationship to the plan of God for your life

'My soul is overwhelmed with sorrow, to the point of death [He was about to die]; Stay here and concentrate [in prayer] with me.' "

"And when he had advanced a short distance, he fell on his face and prayed , saying, 'My Father [He is speaking from His humanity], if it is possible, let this cup be removed from me; however, not as I will, but as you will'."

What was that cup about to be administered? That cup had all the sins of the world in it. All of the sins of the world had been collected in the computer of divine decrees and filled the cup. So there is the cup and God the Father is about to pour the cup of His wrath from heaven upon God the Son. These sins are to be imputed to Christ on the cross.

Notice what our Lord said: “Not as I will, but as you will.” He was still inside the prototype divine dynasphere. He was still functioning at gate three, and here He brings genuine and enforced humility together demonstrating the power of virtue, for this is the most basic virtue of life. Not only is humility capacity for life, capacity for happiness, capacity for blessing, but it is the basis for all power in life. There is no power in arrogance; all of the power is in humility.

And when He came back and found His disciples sleeping he said to Peter, “So, you didn’t have the power to concentrate with me for one hour?” That is true. Peter did not have the power. Later on Peter would get the operational divine dynasphere but it would not be available until the day of Pentecost which would be ten days after our Lord’s ascension. Our Lord’s humanity was in the prototype divine dynasphere and He said, “Peter you do not have the power to concentrate.” The protocol of heaven has come to the earth and He tells Peter what his problem is now, “You have no power.” And what does He mean? The divine dynasphere: You have no dunamij.

Verse 42 — “Again, a second time he went away and he prayed, saying, ‘My Father, if this cannot pass away unless I drink it, Your will be done’.” There is the classical illustration of how in a magnificent way the divine dynasphere, the protocol of heaven works. It took the apostle Paul, the great genius of history, to describe our Lord’s function inside of the divine dynasphere — Philippians 2:5-8.

“Keep on thinking this within you which was also resident in Christ Jesus,” Our Lord Jesus Christ lived His life on earth in His humanity in the prototype. Now we have the operational type divine dynasphere. He kept thinking from gate four; we must keep thinking from gate four. He had the full realm of doctrine in His human soul. He learned the whole realm of doctrine, “who though he eternally existed in the essence of God, he did not think equality.” One of the most arrogant thoughts that ever comes into this world is that we are all equal. There is no such thing as equality and there never will be. We are not born equal; we do not live equal. Equality is the propaganda of Satan; “with God a profit to be seized and utilised,” He did not use His equality with God to gain anything. He had perfect happiness, perfect control, perfect capacity for life, “but he deprived himself of the proper function of deity.”

How did He do that? When Satan came to tempt Him Satan had already seen that He wasn’t going to sin in any ordinary way. So Satan in his great genius hit on a plan to get our Lord to act independently of the Father’s plan, to get our Lord outside of that divine dynasphere — Matthew chapter four. But our Lord did not use His deity to act independently of the Father’s plan. When you and I get into the cosmic system we are acting independently of the Father’s plan and we are less than no good; “when he had received the form of a servant [He became the Father’s servant], when he had been born in the likeness of mankind. In fact, although he was discovered in outward appearance as a man [true humanity], he humbled himself [the function of gate three] by becoming obedient to the point of death, that is the death of the cross.”

If you are a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ God has a very specific plan for your life. His plan for your life includes a purpose: glorifying the Lord Jesus Christ in time; an objective: advance to spiritual maturity utilising the operational divine dynasphere; a policy: grace as the policy in administering His plan for the Church Age believer; a system which calls for priorities — virtue-first; a point of reference: the integrity or holiness of God; an authority: the Word of God, Bible doctrine; a result: good decisions from a position of strength which result in having control of your life and a personal sense of destiny. There is an enemy, the cosmic system, and there is a protocol, the protocol of heaven.

When our Lord Jesus Christ ascended and was seated at the right hand of the Father He was given His third royal title. In that royalty He did not have a royal family. In His first title which is His title of deity He has a royal family, God the Father and God the Holy Spirit. His royal title: the Son of God. When He was born into the world He was born into a royal family. Joseph was descended from David through Solomon; Mary was descended from David through Solomon's younger brother Nathan. He was born into royalty. His royal family: the Davidic dynasty. And in addition to that He had a title: son of David and the Lion of the tribe of Judah. Our Lord Jesus Christ was minus a royal family when He received His third royal title, therefore He was given a royal family. The royal family was given as an additional Christmas gift by bringing to a halt the Age of Israel, and by introducing the Church Age, the dispensation of the royal family. The purpose of the Church Age was to interrupt the Age of Israel to call out a royal family. When the royal family is completed we have the Rapture or the resurrection of the Church and then the Age of Israel continues with the Tribulation. We are studying the Tribulation and the cause of the last world war in history in the last year or so of the Tribulation.

In the system of priorities for the plan of God in any dispensation, but especially ours, in God's plan the mandates are first. We have to learn the general order for the plan of God. In God's system it is virtue-first. Before we are qualified to do anything we must acquire at least the first category of virtue: gate three, the first and most basic of the virtues in the operational divine dynasphere, humility directed toward authority. There is no happiness until we have settled the matter that there will never be equality in this world and there will always be authority. Our relationship to authority produces the basic virtue of enforced and genuine humility.

Gate one, as we have noted is the filling of the Spirit; gate two: basic Christian modus operandi; gate four is the momentum gate for perception and application of doctrine. Gate five is virtue-first. Before you can ever produce anything that will glorify the Lord Jesus Christ in this life there must be motivational virtue. The only motivation for the spiritual life is found at gate five, confidence in God. If you do not have confidence in God, the function of motivational virtue at gate five, you will never function in production. You must have motivation for that is the key to life. It isn't what you do in life that counts, it is your motivation in doing it, and motivational virtue always begins at gate five. It has love for God and confidence in God. We have seen that motivational virtue that produces personal love for God also produces at gate six functional virtue, impersonal love toward the entire human race. But what is necessary for the future? Motivational virtue produces confidence in God and when you have motivational virtue, confidence in God, you have functional virtue, courage toward man and circumstances.

The real issue is whether you are prepared for whatever circumstances that may exist. Do you have capacity for happiness and blessing in every form of circumstances? God's plan goes on whether the weather is hot or cold, whether we are in a period of adversity or prosperity, whether there is war or peace. So the circumstances of history have nothing whatever to do with the plan of God.

God's plan demands virtue-first. That is the second priority. In God's purpose, Christ first; in God's policy, grace first; in God's objective, momentum first; in God's authority, doctrine is first. Therefore we have the system, and the system is protocol. God has brought heaven to earth through the protocol system, the divine dynasphere. God has a plan for the life of every believer and if the believer lives inside of the divine dynasphere then, of course, he will come up a winner. Living in the cosmic system means living one's Christian life on this earth as a loser. Being a loser doesn't mean you lose your salvation, it means that you lose all of the rewards and decorations. So don't sit on the bank waiting for the river to pass you by. Learn Bible doctrine today, tomorrow, and the next day and then you will get the priorities straight.

Without a system we have no standards, no co-ordination, no performance, and no effectiveness. In the divine system the ability resides in the essence of God; the compliability resides in the volition of the believer. Without the divine system the believer has no standards. He goes on his own standards, he develops his own self-righteousness and he develops self-righteous arrogance, lives in the cosmic system, and is a loser. So the standards must come from virtue-first. The believer has no co-ordination. The application of doctrine to the circumstances of life and becoming spiritually self-sustaining, fulfilling the system of virtue-first, demands co-ordination. That co-ordination comes from protocol. The only protocol in the world today that counts is the divine protocol of heaven, it all resides inside of the divine dynasphere, the first Christmas gift which God the Father gave to the humanity of God the Son at the virgin birth — the prototype. We now have, in this dispensation only, the operational type.

The believer also has no standards, no co-ordination, and no performance. The only performance that counts is momentum in the system, momentum in the principle of protocol. The believer has no effectiveness, neither the attainment of spiritual maturity nor the glorification of Jesus Christ nor any legitimate Christian service, unless it is the production of God's system. Therefore, it is important to understand the dynamics of the spiritual life, to understand the issue, and to understand that God has a system and that apart from that system we are in a very bad situation.

Going back now to our passage in Revelation 16:15, "Be alert." Our alertness, by way of application, depends upon our living inside the operational divine dynasphere, functioning at the various gates. Then we studied the analogy: "I come like a thief," which has to do with the surprise element of the second advent. "Happy is he," by interpretation this is the Tribulational believer who is positive toward doctrine, has momentum in the plan of God, and is a winner in his own particular dispensation.

Right now the application belongs to us. "I come like a thief" means that events are going to move rapidly, things are going to come suddenly. Anything that is bad news, anything that is tragedy always takes us by surprise. You have to, therefore, have preparation and the only preparation is in the system. You have to be able to handle the situation and resolve the situation. You have to be able to meet your own problems and solve them and not lean on someone else. You must become spiritually self-sustaining. All of that, of course, is the production of the system. And there is happiness in the system. Just as there is happiness in heaven for the protocol of heaven so there is happiness on earth because the protocol system has been brought to us as members of the royal family. "Happy is he who stays alert," and this is the word, as we saw, for staying alert on guard duty, "and guards his uniform equipment," which has to do with the general orders to the guards as they were posted. So the concept is alertness. We must be very alert with regard to life and its circumstances. Alertness is a part of the function inside of the divine dynasphere, and just as life is a market for leadership, so life is a challenge for alertness.

Now for the final purpose clause in verse 15. We begin with the conjunction i(na which introduces a purpose clause. And this is a negative purpose clause, i(na mh, and mh is simply the negative in the Greek used with the subjunctive in contrast to o)uk which is the negative used with the indicative mood. So the negative purpose clause could be translated "lest," or "in order that not."

With this we have a present active subjunctive from the verb peripatew which means to walk, but it also means to march and in the connotation where military terms are used in context here it means to march, "so that he might not march." The present tense is a futuristic present, it denotes an event which has not yet occurred: the disgrace of any individual believer because he is a loser. This occurs after death to find out if you have marched naked or not. This is also a pictorial present, it presents to the mind a process of failure, a process of becoming a loser, a process of the believer living inside of the cosmic system, living with negative believers in the last half of the Tribulation. The active voice: Tribulational believers who are losers produce the action of the verb, negative volition, and by application it applies to anyone in the Church Age who is a loser. The subjunctive mood simply forms the negative purpose clause. With it, instead of the usual accusative direct object which would ordinarily follow, we have an independent nominative from the noun gumnoj, which means naked, totally unclothed, totally out of uniform. The independent nominative is used when an idea is conceived of as independent of any particular verbal relationship. Therefore the expression of the idea is left alone in the nominative case. That is why we do not have an accusative direct object. This nominative case names an idea rather than the object. Translation: "in order that he may not march naked." The whole purpose here is to express an idea, not an object of the verb. That is why it is in the nominative case.

What is the idea? Just as sure as you are sitting here you are going to be a loser in life if as a born-again believer you miss the boat with regard to the plan of God, if you lose your alertness. Your alertness is positive volition toward Bible doctrine on a daily basis, your alertness is living in the divine system of protocol, living in the plan of God, the divine dynasphere. So we have the principle: “so that you may not march through life naked.”

From the analogy it is concluded that a certain number of Tribulational believers are going to be losers just as there are losers in the Church Age. Being a loser does not mean that you are going to lose your salvation. The analogy also implies maximum divine discipline for believers who fail. In the Tribulation many of them will die the sin unto death. Many sleeping sentries died at their post, they were burned to death before they could wake up. They went to sleep and they took the consequences of their own decision to fall asleep. Others, of course, were not burned to death but they were singed badly enough to learn, and therefore they were useable again for guard duty at a future time.

Then there is one more phrase we have here, a connective conjunction kai and a present active subjunctive from the verb blepw which means to see with the eye or to see quickly. It is translated, “and they see.” It is a pictorial present. The active voice: other members of the military organisation see in the garrison the shame you have brought on yourself, but by analogy it means other believers in heaven are going to see that you were a loser at the judgment seat of Christ and you are going to be ashamed. There will be no shame after physical death, “absent from the body, face to face with the Lord,” but once the judgment seat of Christ occurs that is where the losers are going to be ashamed.

The potential subjunctive mood here implies a future reference and is qualified by the element of contingency. The future reference has to do with the judgment seat of Christ; the element of contingency: you don't have to be a loser. Right now you might say to yourself, “I am a loser.” That can all change.

Now we have that accusative singular direct object from the noun a)sxhmosunh, the strongest word for shame. And with that the possessive genitive from a)utoj, “his shame [or disgrace].” The loser is going to have one bad moment in eternity and that is at the judgment seat of Christ. At that particular time, if he is pronounced a loser then there will be that moment of shame because he had the same opportunity to be a winner as any other believer. The pattern of the judgment seat of Christ for the Church Age is the same pattern of evaluation for the Tribulational believer at the second advent. The two categories of Tribulational believers found in this passage are the same as in the Church Age, winners or losers.

“Be alert, I will come like a thief [the surprise element of the second advent]. Happy is he [the believer] who stays alert [living in the plan of God], and guards his uniform, so that he may not march naked, and they [the garrison of believers] see his disgrace [of being a loser].”

That brings us to the challenge which has to do with one thing only: Are you a winner or a loser at this point?

The Armageddon campaign is a part of the world war at the end of the Tribulation. It is the sixth plague or bowl judgment and, of course, it is a part of a world war called in verse 14 “the war of the great day of God the omnipotent one.” The Middle East campaign of that final world war of history is called sometimes Armageddon. From this we derive the title of the whole study which is the Armageddon campaign. In addition to that we now have in this particular passage a battle, the origin of the battle of Armageddon. We have previously seen in verse 12 the cause of the campaign in the Middle East at the end of the Tribulation. We then went to verses 13 and 14 where we saw the cause of the last world war in history. Now we have the cause of the battle of Armageddon.

We begin verse 16 with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated “Then.” We are in sequence again. With this we have the aorist active indicative of the verb sunagw which means to assemble. Here it means concentration of forces. All of the Greek terms in this passage are military terms down through this verse and we have had to change the translation radically because of that. We have a culminative aorist tense contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety, the concentration of foreign armies in the Middle East, but we regard it from the viewpoint of existing results. There are at least four major battles, the battle of the valley of Jehoshaphat, the battle of Idumea, the battle of Armageddon, and the siege of Jerusalem, all of which are a part of that world war. The active voice: Jesus Christ who controls history produces the action of the verb.

While the last world war of history was started through demon activity it is our Lord Jesus Christ who assembles the armies of the world in the Middle East for their destruction at the second advent. No matter how war or any historical disaster is started it is our Lord Jesus Christ who either directly controls or permits the course of the catastrophe under the principle that man is the product of his own decisions. Evil is the principle by which man creates his own misery and his own historical disaster. Man being the product of his own decisions means simply this: When there is any catastrophe or disaster in a country it is always because there are too many negative decisions, because there are too many believers who are negative toward Bible doctrine. As goes the believer so goes the national entity. When believers are negative toward doctrine inevitably we have trouble. We have now come to the sixth bowl judgment where we have judgment by death rather than judgment by pain.

Our Lord Jesus Christ often starts a backfire judgment which controls the situation and perpetuates the human race in the historical extension of the angelic conflict. Again, the application: There is no sophisticated weaponry or anything else that will destroy the human race from the face of the earth. There will be wars and many more wars until the second advent of Christ but man will not be destroyed by war, the human race will continue to exist on planet earth as per the grace of God. Jesus Christ controls history through His own policy of blessing by association with the pivot of mature believers or by divine judgment. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the doctrine that Jesus Christ controls history.

“Then he [our Lord Jesus Christ who controls history] concentrated them.” The indicative mood is declarative for the fact that we have troop concentrations of all the power spheres of the Tribulation as an extension of the last world war in history.

The Middle East is always going to be a place of world war because strategically the Middle East is between two key geographical spots in history.

With this we have the accusative plural direct object from a)utoj, the intensive pronoun used as a personal pronoun. It covers the armies of the king of the north, the armies of the kings of the east, a group of Asiatic powers on the Pacific basin, the Arab armies of the king of the south, the king of the west. We are not going to be dealing with the world war in general, we are going to limit it to the Middle East and the campaign of the Middle East because the Word of God always has a spiritual lesson to teach us. Therefore, in order to understand the spiritual lesson it becomes necessary for us to concentrate and focus on that part of the last world war in history that pertains.

A prepositional phrase follows: e)ij plus the accusative of topo)j, “in a place,” battles have to take place on terrain, on the sea, in the air. Battles are always fought in a place, but before you have battles you have campaigns and before you have campaigns you have wars; “which was called,” the present passive participle from the verb kalew. This means that everything for a war had to be organised and these people were organised. There are always countries that are organised for a war, there are always countries that are looking for someone to pick on. To fight a war it takes a whole people with the right mental attitude. The present tense is a descriptive present of the participle kalew. The passive voice: the locale receives the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial. It is “called in the Hebrew language,” the adverb E(braisti means in the Hebrew language. In the Greek we simply transliterate it Armagidw, the valley of Megiddo. Armageddon is the valley of Megiddo. We can translate it literally, “the mountains of Megiddo” because a(r refers to the mountains that go around it. The Megiddo range of mountains overlooks the valley of Esdraelon where Napoleon, after seeing it and its plains from one of the hills, exclaimed, “All the armies of the world can manoeuvre here.” To the west of the Megiddo range is the valley of Megiddo, to the north lies the valley of Esdraelon. It is a beautiful plain for a battlefield and it will form one of the great future battlefields of history. We simply call it from the Greek “Armageddon”; it is a transliteration from the Hebrew. Remember, however, that Armageddon is only one of several battles which is going to be fought in the Middle East during this world war.

Translation: “Then he [our Lord Jesus Christ] deployed them in a place which is called in the Hebrew language Armageddon.”

The cause of the world war in the last half of the Tribulation is the modus operandi of the kosmokratwr, the war demons, who take their orders from the unholy trinity. The cause of the Middle East campaign of that world war is the administration of the sixth bowl judgment. In beginning our study of Armageddon we note the deployment of troops from the army of the kings of the east in the valley of Esdraelon. They have invaded and have crossed the Euphrates. The king of the north has concentrated his armies at this time in North Africa, they have already been through the Middle East. We have prophecies regarding this in Joel, Ezekiel, and Isaiah.

One of the first things we note about warfare is that many nations are never prepared for it because they have been under the influence of peace movements. When people start thinking in terms of peace they are never prepared for war. Therefore, they cannot defend themselves and they are often enslaved. In Jeremiah 6:13,14 peace propaganda is used as a weapon for war. Whenever a nation starts screaming for peace it generally means that in a very short time they will be attacked. The doves are a part of organised evil in a nation. You have to have common sense, you have to be able to orient to reality. If you are in a state of arrogance you can't orient to reality in either your personal life or the life of the nation in which you live. But if you as a believer are oriented to reality through the protocol of the divine dynasphere then you can recognise that when too many people start screaming for peace at any price you are in for war, you are going to be attacked. The enemy is going to take advantage of you at every possible turn. The peace movements are an announcement to the enemy that we are weak and they are looking for places to start attacking us, taking advantage of us.

Jeremiah 6:13,14, "For from the least of them even to the greatest of them, every one is greedy for gain, and from the prophet even to the priest every one manufactures lies. And they have healed the wound of my people superficially" — they have passed out propaganda saying, 'This is the answer,' "saying, 'Peace, peace,' but there is no peace."

Jeremiah 8:11, "And they heal the brokenness of the daughter of my people superficially by saying, 'Peace, peace'; but there is no peace."

When people start peace movements and they gain momentum you can guarantee that there is war just around the corner.

For the mature believer, no matter how bad things get and no matter how bad a shape the military may be he can look from his spiritual life to the principle of Hebrews 11:34, "... become courageous in battle, put to flight invading armies." That is the winner believer, the mature believer, the believer who has advanced in the protocol of the plan of God, the divine dynasphere. Maximum doctrine resident in the soul gives the mature believer battle courage, moral courage to make the tactical decisions under combat pressure. This is how heroes are born.

The testimony of mature David is given in Psalm 27:3, "Though an army surrounds me, my heart will not be afraid; though wars rise against me, in spite of this I keep having my confidence [in God]." The mature believer, the winner, is protected in combat, according to Job 5:20, "In war he will redeem me from the power of the sword." Even in military disaster, Hebrews 11:34, "escaping from the mouth of the sword."

Warfare demands concentration, courage in combat. Deuteronomy 20 is one of those passages that gives us an extrapolation of the army regulations of the Jews. The Jewish nation as a client nation to God had a strong military establishment and they had a lot of army regulations. Some of them have been incorporated by God the Holy Spirit into the Word, and it shows you all at once certain principles: the importance of your spiritual life, the importance of being prepared for life in general which prepares you for war specifically, and any other crisis.

Deuteronomy 20:1, "When you go out to battle against your enemies and see [in reconnaissance] horses, chariots, and infantry more numerous than you, do not be afraid..."

Don't be afraid! But that doesn't come suddenly. You can't tell people on the battlefield not to be afraid. The people who can obey that mandate are the people who live in the protocol system of God, the people who are prepared spiritually, the people who are positive toward Bible doctrine every day.

Remember the principle that is involved here: Historical events produce a need, and leadership meets that need; circumstances of life produce a market, and leadership supplies that market. Life is a market for leadership; crisis is the stage for that leadership. So when the mandate is given, "Do not be afraid of them," that is for those who can obey it. Remember that courage is the ability to think under pressure and those who can think under pressure are those who have been thinking under pressures in life long before the battle — those who can use the essence of God rationale, those who can think in terms of the plan of God rationale, those who can think in terms of the logistical grace rationale, those who can think in terms of the imputation rationale. If you can think in terms of rationales then you can think under pressure. Remember that the circumstances of life produce a market, and with your ability to think under pressure you are going to provide the leadership for that market.

"... do not be afraid of them; for the Lord your God," that is it right there. Those who are best prepared for any crisis in life are those who can know the Lord as their God, those who have personally believed in the Lord Jesus Christ, those who have not only believed in Christ but have recognised the principle of protocol. Protocol is order, and the reason that some will never get with doctrine is because there is no order in their life. It is the same reason that they can't even hang up their clothes, the same reason that they are not neat in any sense of the word. They are not categorical, they are not neat, they can't think, they are not ready to learn doctrine because they won't learn the vocabulary because they are lazy in their mind. Yet, God's whole plan is a plan of categories, a plan of protocol. It is heaven on earth, and He supplies through grace, the filling of the Spirit at gate one, the faith-rest drill at gate two, enforced and genuine humility at gate three. Freedom does not prepare people for a crisis; authority prepares people for a crisis. That is why the profession of arms always leads an abnormal life in normal peace time, because in the profession of arms you can't live a normal life; you are preparing for the abnormal, you are preparing for the battlefield, you are preparing for pressure. And in the same sense, when you walk into Bible class, you are preparing yourself for life, for the future. You are preparing yourself to market yourself as a leader in the future. Protocol has authority and authority is something some believers can't take.

“... who brought you up from the land of Egypt is with you.” He has already demonstrated His faithfulness. He was faithful under more difficult circumstances, He will be faithful again.

Verse 2, “Now it shall come to pass that when you are advancing into battle, the priest shall come near and speak to the army,” spiritual preparation for what is to come. It takes spiritual preparation to fight professionally.

Verse 3, “Then he shall say to them, ‘Hear, O Israel, you are advancing into battle against your enemies today. Do not faint in your right lobe.’ Right lobes minus doctrine faint every time. “Do not be afraid.” Who is going to be afraid? Those who have not lived under the protocol system of God’s plan. God’s plan doesn’t spell out freedom for you, God’s plan says stand fast in the freedom, and stand fast is a military word for being under authority. It is the authority of the plan of God that makes your freedom meaningful.

(“Stand fast, therefore, in the freedom wherewith Christ has made you free.” Christ has made you free in the sense that it gives you the option day by day to take in doctrine and to grow in grace. When you turn down that option you are a loser)

“... or panic before them.” You cannot handle your weapons if you are trembling, and they had been trained to use their weapons and to use them professionally.

Verse 4, “for the Lord your God is the one who goes with you, to fight for you against your enemies, to deliver you,” to be winners.

Verse 5, “The officers will speak to the troops, saying, ‘Who is the soldier who has constructed a new house and has not dedicated it? Let him go on leave and return to his home, lest he die in battle and a civilian dedicate it.’” There are some experiences he should have first to give meaning to his professional function.

Verse 6, “Furthermore, who is the soldier who has planted a vineyard and has not yet begun to enjoy it? [He hasn’t had a chance to sample the wine] Let him take a furlough and return to his home, lest he die in battle and a civilian enjoy his wines.”

Verse 7, “Furthermore, who is the soldier that is engaged to a woman and has not married her? Let him take a furlough and return to his home lest he die in battle and a civilian marries her.”

Verse 8, Why all of this? These are the people who do not go into battle single minded. They cannot concentrate on their job. When they get some orders they will not be able to obey them because they are distracted. The distractions of life are always a test. Is Bible doctrine more important to you than some lovely, beautiful woman, some magnificent home, a good bottle of wine? What is more important?

“Then the officers will speak additional words to the troops, and they shall say, ‘Who is the soldier that is afraid and fainting in his right lobe?’ ”

You may say that the beginning of courage is to admit it. No, it is to admit it for the sake of the whole outfit.

“‘Let him take a furlough and return to his home, so that he might not cause other soldiers’ right lobes to melt like his right lobe’.”

Fear is contagious, therefore eliminate it. That is exactly what God is going to do when the crisis comes. There is going to be a place for leadership but you don’t develop leaders by snapping your fingers, you develop leadership today, tomorrow, and the next day, the next day. So this excerpt from the Jewish army regulations emphasises not only moral and battle courage but indicates the importance of protocol, concentration on the profession of arms during the battle. To be effective in combat the soldier must concentrate on his job of killing, he must destroy the enemy in a totally objective and professional manner. This cannot be accomplished apart from courage in battle. Courage is the ability to think under pressure and therefore the combat soldier must avoid all emotion. So the combat soldier must avoid emotion and concentrate, he can’t be emotional and concentrate at the same time. He must concentrate on his function in battle, the operation of his weapons, the manoeuvres involved, and so on. The soldier cannot be distracted by his new home he has not completed, the business deal that is not completed, or the woman he hasn’t married. His memories must be pleasant but not distracting. The soldier who is distracted in combat is a casualty, he will lose his life, he will jeopardise the success of that combat arm, and therefore the army regulations were printed in the Word of God which lives and abides forever because it has spiritual significance to all of us.

In Daniel 11:36 we have the Jewish dictator of the state of Israel in the last half of the Tribulation. He has the problem of arrogance as all dictators do. There are three concepts that relate to the function of arrogance at gate one of cosmic one.

The first has to do with flaws. People have flaws, and flaws in people are divided into two categories: real flaws which result from lack of virtue or life in the cosmic system, and pseudo-flaws in which a person’s flair of scintillating personality is mistaken for either arrogance or a flaw. Pseudo-flaws are simply personality expressions and have nothing whatever to do with cosmic involvement. You do not determine the spiritual life on the basis of a person’s personality.

The second concept has to do with hang-ups. A hang-up is an obstacle in the normal function of life related to involvement in gate one of cosmic one which is motivational evil. People who are arrogant and living at gate one of cosmic one become snags in some form of subjectivity or abnormality. Only arrogant people have hang-ups which is, of course, the cosmic manifestation of their cosmic involvement. A principle we will note is the fact that when people are arrogant they cannot handle the pressures of life.

There are two kinds of hang-ups: blind hang-ups from blind arrogance, the expression of arrogance without identity; known hang-ups from known pride or arrogance. If a believer has power or authority the challenge of that power or authority results in abnormal behaviour. Hence, the explanation of the second beast of Revelation 13:11-18 and/or the false prophet, and/or the king of Daniel 11:36.

The third is concept syndrome. The symptoms of arrogant hang-ups are called syndrome. Syndromes are symptoms typical of a condition, and the condition is arrogance, involvement in cosmic one, involvement in the interlocking systems of arrogance.

The great enemy of momentum in the divine dynasphere and the fulfilment of the plan of God for your life is arrogance at gate one. That is the gate of motivating evil. Note that gate two of cosmic one where arrogance rejects the authority of the Bible teacher, the authority of the boss, the various categories of authority under establishment, means loss of consistency in the protocol system of God, and that is the plan of God for your life. Therefore, we have developing, of course, a lot of syndromes. The most common ones that we have studied in the past: the legalistic syndrome where people are always trying to run your business and not giving you your privacy of your priesthood and the opportunity to make your own mistakes from your own volition, and to relate it to your volition; the guilt syndrome, which explains why a lot of people do a lot of things, the right things in wrong ways; the emotional syndrome; the cowardice syndrome; the inadequacy syndrome; the socialist syndrome; the liberal syndrome; the antiestablishment syndrome; the anti-Semitism syndrome. These are the ones that have rejected the protocol of the plan of God.

The Tribulation is a time when many believers are trapped in the cosmic system, especially troubled by the antiestablishment syndrome, or what we might call the hippie syndrome. Matthew 24:12 mentions it specifically related to the Tribulation, "also because lawlessness [antiestablishment syndrome] shall increase the love of many [Tribulation believers] will be extinguished [in cosmic involvement, arrogance as a motivational evil, gate one]."

There are two kinds of arrogance related to authority. There is the arrogance which rejects authority over it and the arrogance which uses authority in terms of tyranny. On the one hand tyranny is arrogance, but on the other hand someone's rejection of authority is also arrogance. That is why some of the most arrogant people in the world are scum. Scum are always arrogant; aristocrats are sometimes arrogant. The worst arrogance of all is with scum. Inevitably they are whiners and complainers and rejecters of authority and arrogant. Arrogance cannot stand social, economic, political or spiritual pressure. So we have the principle as to why we have these dictators in the Tribulation. It relates to a concept: arrogance cannot stand pressure.

When arrogance is challenged abnormal behaviour and emotional reaction begins. This is why gate one of cosmic one is the arrogance gate. Under pressure it triggers jealousy, hatred, vindictiveness, implacability, self-pity, revenge motivation. Since arrogance is an unrealistic and expanded opinion of self it resides in the soul under normal circumstances in a state of contentment with the expanded image it has created. But normal circumstances always give way to pressure and arrogance cannot stand pressure. To the extent that you entertain arrogance in your life, or live in the cosmic system, to that extent you will never be able to apply one bit of doctrine you have learned and you will never be able to stand pressure, you will always crack one way or another under pressure. If you put arrogance under pressure it contracts, forcing the pressure to increase, and eventually it detonates. Anything which compresses arrogance creates a pressure which must explode. The pressure on arrogance at gate one produces compression which detonates the grenade and produces the fragments of the grenade, the other gates in cosmic one. For example, gate two, negative volition arrogance. When you are preoccupied with yourself in arrogance obviously you are not going to listen to the Word of God objectively, you are not even going to expose yourself to it. Negative volition is preoccupation with self and is that state whereby you say, 'Yes, I like doctrine, I'm just not going to go every night, I'm not going to become a fanatic.' That is negative volition arrogance. Or there is authority arrogance. Authority arrogance means there is no virtue in the life. If you don't have basic virtue you don't have any of the other virtues. You don't have love for God as a motivational virtue and you don't have impersonal love for all mankind as a functional virtue.

Another fragment of the grenade is self-righteous arrogance which includes pseudo-morality as well as crusader arrogance. There is at gate seven, psychotic arrogance, which is always the drive toward unreality. At gate eight there is another fragment: the arrogance of unhappiness which comes from subjective preoccupation with self. Gate nine: iconoclastic arrogance, subjective preoccupation with others. There is rational or irrational arrogance, the arrogance of emotion, the arrogance of ignorance, the arrogance of a brilliant intellect. People with a high IQ have a strong tendency to be arrogant and their arrogance destroys them. They are always surpassed in life by people who are not as smart but who are well regulated under the principle of basic virtue in life, enforced and genuine humility. The plucker gets there first. There is the arrogance of Christian service which explains why so many believers today are "hustling for God," they are "doing the right thing," etc. But what is wrong with the "right thing" is the fact that they are doing it in the cosmic system and it is wood, hay, and stubble. There is client nation arrogance which is what we have today in Christian activism, civil disobedience among believers.

Arrogance creates a maximum hypersensitive situation, hypersensitive spots on the soul. These are actually hang-ups which produce syndrome. A hang-up, again, is an obstacle to normal living and objectivity. It relates to the function at gate one, cosmic one. A hang-up is becoming snagged in some form of subjectivity or abnormality of the soul, therefore hang-ups are highly sensitive barriers which are vulnerable to injured pride. It is very easy to have pride injured because arrogance or pride simply cannot stand pressure. People just can't take it. You say something in jest and in humour and they fall in a dozen directions, get upset, take it seriously, take it personally. Syndromes are symptoms of these hang-ups in cosmic one.

Many believers possess an arrogance to which they are blinded and unaware of its existence until pressure comes to that area and they are crossed or frustrated. Sooner or later doctrine will offend the arrogance of such a believer and the pressure on arrogance pulls the pin out of the grenade and the fragments scatter. They bring misery to self and anyone else in the periphery of the pulled pin. Arrogance creates vulnerability in areas of hypersensitivity which when attacked produce functional evil in the cosmic system: pressure like jealousy or bitterness, vindictiveness, implacability, self-pity, guilt complex, revenge motivation, like the trigger releasing the firing pin to strike the primer to fire the cartridge of functional evil. Even legitimate Christian service inside the cosmic system becomes wood, hay, and stubble, Philippians 1:15. This explains abnormal behaviour. Note: All dictators have abnormal behaviour.

The basic principles of warfare

1. Objective: The purpose of a military operation is the attainment of the objective assigned to a designated force. From the largest military group of armies down to the smallest platoon or squad there is always the principle of objective, and this objective constitutes the guide for the interpretation of orders, the formulation of decisions, and the deployment of the force. The nation, its military forces, and each part of the military organisation have their specific objectives. The selection of national objectives we call strategy; it depends upon political, military, and economic conditions which are variable.

The first objective must always be the neutralisation or the destruction of the power of the opposing military forces to fight. This means, of, course, decisive defeat and destruction of the opposing army — always a first consideration. The second objective is to possess localities which contribute to the national objective.

2. Offensive: Offensive is the only action by which a decision is gained. Offensive brings victory while defensive can only avoid defeat. The only effective way to wage war is to act on the offensive — destroy the enemy armies. The offensive increases the effectiveness of the force adopting it, it raises morale, it permits concentration of effort, it allows freedom of action. The defensive should be used to assist the offensive action elsewhere to gain time, to utilise good terrain or to compensate for weaknesses. Some time the defence is used in the offence as a pivot of the envelopment. The offensive should be used when there is any reasonable chance for success.

3. Mass: This is a military term meaning combat power, a concentration of combat power at a point of maximum effectiveness. Mass or combat power includes numbers of troops, weapons, tactical skill, discipline, fighting ability, resolution, morale, leadership. Success in warfare is attained by the proper employment of mass in a main effort attack at the proper time and place for the accomplishment of a definite objective.

4. Economy of force: This is the means by which mass is employed in the main effort. The time and place of the main effort having been determined, men and means are conserved by reducing their employment in other directions, i.e. in other directions to the minimum consistency with safety.

5. Movement: Movement means the manoeuvre of combat elements. In the offensive this principle is used to bring mass into close grips with the enemy in order to secure decisive results. Movement is designed to place mass in the best place for attack. Movement is most effective when concealed. In many cases movement is only possible by the effective employment of fire power.

6. Surprise: To obtain maximum effect with minimum loss surprise must be employed. It may take the form of time, place, direction, force, tactics, or weapons but there must be an element of surprise in two or more of those principles: e.g. surprise as to the place where you show and the direction of your force. The main factors of surprise are preparation, secrecy, and rapidity.

7. Security: (Don't take the press!) Security embraces all measures taken to guard against observation and surprise, to ensure against hostile interference with operations, to gain and maintain the power and momentum of free action.

8. Simplicity: Military plans should be simple so as not to sponsor complicated movements. Orders should not be ambiguous but direct and free from contingencies. Frequent changes in plans should be avoided. Unity of command must always be observed.

9. Co-operation: Teamwork demands that all military units and persons involved in a mission work together to accomplish the mission. To do this co-ordination must be secured and there must be virtue and honour in all military organisations involved, the setting aside of all prejudices toward other services.

Daniel 11:36: We start out with a Hebrew word, ha melek. It is correctly translated "the king," but in view of all of the eschatological doctrine we would call it "the dictator." It refers to the second beast of Revelation 13:11-18, the dictator of the Jewish state in the Tribulation. We have seen his many names, false prophet, Antichrist, and so on. "And the dictator shall do keep doing," the qal perfect of asah. Dictators have to hustle, if they ever stop doing things they are dead. This one is going to lose out because he relates everything that he does to his own arrogance. No one can take a position of leadership and do very well in a state of arrogance because inevitably he relates everything to his own arrogance, "according to his own will." The word for "will" is ratson. That means that arrogance has crept in and it is in the form of a syndrome. He has a hang-up and the hang-up has resulted in a syndrome. What does this mean? This means that this dictator was a brilliant man but he started to think that he was God in his arrogance. Therefore he emphasised his decisions rather than on information on which good decisions are made. He didn't have the facts, all of the information. "According to his own will" emphasises his volition, not thought. Good decisions come from facts; facts require thinking to synthesise them and make the right decision.

Obviously he has failed because the next phrase says, "and he shall exalt himself," the hithpael imperfect from the verb rum. The hithpael stem is reflexive, it means to lift one's self up in total arrogance. The dictator is living in cosmic one, he is filled with his own self-importance, and because of this he assumes that he can't make a bad decision and that any decision he makes is the sovereignty as God as far as he is concerned. Therefore, another hithpael imperfect from the verb gadal which means to glorify self, "above every god." The dictator is trying to pass himself off as the Jewish Messiah, he is a Jew, "therefore he shall speak," the piel stem of dabar, he makes a lot of speeches. And he doesn't say "marvellous things," the Hebrew says "blasphemous things," and he will speak blasphemous things "against the God of gods," our Lord Jesus Christ, "and he will be successful." Here is an interesting thing. Why is he successful? At this moment his arrogance is not destroying his success. Therefore, we have to look at this as pseudo-success. Here is the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ. He is going to permit this man to lie about Him. Why? God has perfect confidence; God is God. Application: Do you keep your mouth shut when people lie about you?

So he shall have success, but his success is not going to last, he is no winner. He is temporarily on top, "and he will be successful until the Tribulation [not the indignation] has been completed," qal perfect of kalah, completed.

Then the last phrase is not "what is determined shall be done." It should be translated, "for what has been decreed shall be accomplished." It was entered into the computer of divine decrees by the omniscience of God. He knew all about this man, every deed, every action, every motive, and at the right time in the last half of the Tribulation we get the printout in human history.

Translation: "Then the king [Jewish dictator in the Tribulation] will do according to his own will, he will both exalt and glorify himself above every god; furthermore he will speak blasphemous things against the God of gods [Jesus Christ, the God of Israel]; he will be successful until the Tribulation has been completed, for what has been decreed [in eternity past] will be accomplished in time."

That is the beginning of the Armageddon campaign and there is a very simple principle here: Jesus Christ controls history and all the Satanic opposition has not changed one iota of historical fulfilment of the divine decrees.

Verse 37 starts out in the King James version, "Neither shall he regard." That is not correct. We have a negative lo followed by the verb bin (pronounced been), and it means to understand, "He will not understand." There are a lot of reasons for that which we have studied in relationship to arrogance and all the principles involved with arrogance, the hang-ups, the syndromes, the flaws. If there is anything that makes life miserable for human beings it is the inability to understand the absolute eternal truth, and the one who presents it to us, God Himself. Ignorance is one of the greatest sources of unhappiness when it is related to arrogance. Arrogance plus ignorance means no capacity for life, no capacity for happiness, no capacity for blessing.

Ignorance has nothing to do with IQ; ignorance has to do with volition. Any believer can understand the Word of God, he has the equipment to do so, all provided by logistical grace. So you can be dumb or smart, have a low IQ or a high IQ and you can still be ignorant because the major issue is your attitude toward doctrine and your volition. Like everyone else, this Jew in the Tribulation has heard the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. This man is still an unbeliever and he has made his decisions although he will have other opportunities because he isn't dead yet. He will be one of the two people who will be cast into the lake of fire alive before anyone else occupies the lake of fire. They will precede the devil and his fallen angels and all unbelievers into the lake of fire by 1000 years. This indicates something of the tremendous build-up of the evil in these two dictators. This is the Jewish dictator; we have studied the Gentile dictator, the ruler of the revived Roman empire.

So it says, "He will not understand." Here is the greatest tragedy in life. People are always trying to understand people, they are always trying to understand what makes others tick. Some people are so subjective they are trying to find out what makes themselves tick and why they are the way they are. This man, it says, "will not understand the God of his fathers." The fathers go back to Abraham. This man is a Jew and the God of his fathers is the Lord Jesus Christ. So he has rejected truth, and in rejecting truth he has moved into cosmic one where he suffers from blackout of the soul, and cosmic two where he suffers from scar-tissue of the soul. He is also the subject of a prophecy in Genesis chapter 49. Genesis 49 gives us the prophecy of each of the twelve tribes of Israel. Three verses of that prophecy, verses 16-18, give us the prophecy regarding this dictator. We know the tribe from which he came. It was one of the first tribes to go into apostasy in the past history of Israel. It is also the one tribe that did not have any evangelists in the Tribulation out of the 144,000.

Genesis 49:16-17, "Dan shall rule his people [prophecy of the Jewish people at the end of the Tribulation], as one of the tribes of Israel. Dan shall be a snake in the road [he is no good to anyone who comes into contact with him], a cobra in the path, which bites the horses heel, so that the rider [Israel] falls backward." Israel's greatest period of apostasy will come at the end of the Tribulation under this dictator.

Verse 18, the prayer for mature believers living in Israel in the last half of the Tribulation is noted. This is a prayer that will be uttered many times by Jews who have momentum through doctrine: "O Lord, I wait for your deliverance."

This dictator is organised, except in one area. It says in Daniel 11:37, "nor the desire of women" in the King James version. We have the noun chemadah which is used for sexual desire and conjugal love. In this case the man is a man and he doesn't have any sexual desire for women, which means he is a homosexual. In other words, the dictator of the Jewish state is a homosexual, and the principle is very simple: when rulers are degenerate for any reason their rule becomes a total disaster. No matter what ability a person may have, if for any reason he is a degenerate ruler the rule becomes a disaster. This means that his administration is, of course, free from harem rule, like Anthony and Cleopatra, but it has a much more evil influence.

The Bible has a few things to say about homosexuality. Like any other form of fornication it is a sin, but there are certain sins that are degenerate and there are certain sins that are sins but not degenerate. The tendency may be there but it must be remembered that temptation is not a sin, it is when one succumbs to the temptation that it is sin. The succumbing to the temptation, as implied by this noun, indicates no integrity, degeneracy, total inability to rule, and inevitably great judgment must come from God to straighten out the situation. The fact that homosexuals have held high office and high positions shouldn't be surprising, it happens periodically in history, and it always reflects the degeneracy of that particular state. Here we are looking at the state of Israel in the last half of the Tribulation.

Then to add degeneracy to degeneracy we have the phrase, "nor regard any god." which is the qal imperfect of bin again, and it means "nor does he recognise any god." This indicates the fact that the Jewish dictator of the Tribulation is an atheist even though he is the head of the Jewish religion, Judaism in the Tribulation. There are two great religious systems in the Tribulation that are mentioned eschatologically. The first is the international religion of the revived Roman empire and it has converts all over the world. Then in Israel there is Judaism, a very apostate type of religion. Both of these are religions that worship some kind of a person or a supreme being, but this ruler in Jerusalem is an atheist which means, once again, that he merely uses religion as a means of maintaining his power. Personally he doesn't believe any God exists, he is a totally arrogant person, and because of this he is simply, therefore, a politician. The difference between a politician and a statesman is the fact that a politician uses anything and everything in order to gain power, whereas a statesman has some principles and adheres to some system of principle related to the function of authority. A politician is all things to all men to the enth degree.

This Jewish dictator has the total combination of megalomania, "for he shall magnify himself," the hithpael imperfect of the verb gadal. The hithpael stem is reflexive and it means "he shall glorify himself above everyone else."

Translation: "he will not understand the God of his fathers [Jesus Christ] nor have desire for women [he is a homosexual], nor does he recognise any god [he is atheistic]; for he will glorify himself above all."

This man combines his genius with the phenomenal system of genius that Satan has developed in the human race and exploits it to the maximum, and he becomes the number one man in the state of Israel during the last half of the Tribulation.

In verse 38, as a prelude to the Middle East war, he also has a foreign policy for his land will be very shortly be invaded by many armies. The verse begins, "But instead he will honour a god of fortresses." That Hebrew phrase should be translated, "Nevertheless in his status quo [as a dictator] he will give honour to the god of fortified cities." Giving honour is simply an idiom for making a treaty with someone, and that someone is called "the god of fortified cities."

The old Roman empire was a vast domain of fortified cities all the way from the Atlantic to the Rhine, along the southern part of the Danube, the Euphrates, from the North Sea to North Africa. It was sometimes called the area of fortified cities. Furthermore, the rulers of the Roman empire always took the title of Kurioj, "Lord," to indicate their deity. So the god of the fortified cities merely links the old Roman empire of the Church Age with the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation and provides another title for the dictator whom we have studied as the beast of Revelation 13:1-10, the feet of the image, the little horn of Daniel 7, the prince who shall come in Daniel 9, the man of sin, the Antichrist.

It also says, “a god whom his fathers did not know.” This is the same dictator whom we have studied as the beast dictator of the revived Roman empire. And, “he will give honour [he will make a treaty]”, the piel imperfect of the verb kadad. The piel is the intensified stem and in the piel this can be used to designate a treaty.

So we translate: “Nevertheless [in his status quo as dictator] he will give honour [treaty recognition] to the god of fortified cities [the beast dictator of the revived Roman empire], even to a god whom his fathers did not know [a reference to a system of worship: the international ecumenical religious system of the Tribulation]...”

The rest of the verse says, “he will honour [make a treaty],” and then we have some of the factors involved, “with gold, silver, precious stones, and other valuable commodities.” We do not need to know the details except that he is buying protection. He recognises that he is in a jamb as far as foreign policy is concerned. The Middle East is a bridge between three continents and it has all kinds of strategic importance. This dictator has to make a decision. There are four great power blocs within his vicinity: the pan-Arabic bloc [the king of the south]; the king of the north [which today would be the Russian communist empire]; the kings of the east [in the future that will be all of the Asiatic powers, “kings”, plural]; the king of the west [western European culture, the united state of western Europe, the revived Roman empire]. The dictator of Israel will make a deal with the king of the west, he needs his protection, there is no way that he can cope with power blocs. Spheres of influence are impossible and they will destroy him.

So he makes an alliance, but when you make a deal with the king of the west you must remember that religion in the world reaches its peak in the Tribulation. Once the Church is resurrected and the Tribulation begins you have the greatest period of religion the world will ever know. Today religion is under restraint because we are in the Church Age and all it requires is that there be five people in a pivot in some area and there is a restraint on religion. There is no blessing but there is restraint. The restrainer is removed at the Rapture. God the Holy Spirit of the divine dynasphere, the operational type, goes to heaven. Religion, therefore, has its greatest day — no restraint on religion of any kind. Therefore religion is going to reach its peak and you cannot make a treaty without religion being a part of it. So Israel makes a treaty with the revived Roman empire but has to accept the international religion of the revived Roman empire.

So the alliance will be made and in forming this alliance Jews must pay heavily. First of all they must set aside Judaism, or combine it, and they must accept the religion of the west. There will be financial and commercial considerations as well as religious. The Jews are forced to accept this ecumenical system which we will study in chapters 17 & 18. Like the statues of Jupiter, representing Antiochus Epiphanes in the past which was erected in the holy of holies, so another statue of another dictator is going to be put in the holy of holies of the Tribulational temple. This is called the abomination of desolation.

The domestic policy is given in verse 39, "This shall he do in the most strongholds [King James version]" is not correct. "Consequently he will construct a system of defence fortification" is the correct translation, "with the help of this foreign god [the dictator of the revived Roman empire]." Then we add one more thing: "to those who acknowledge him he will enrich with great wealth." And when it says, "he shall cause them to rule," that is the hiphil stem of the verb mashal, and that is a correct translation. The hiphil stem is causative active voice: "he shall cause them to rule over many [over many Jews]." As the false Messiah he divides up the land. "he will distribute the land for a price" is the corrected translation.

Translation: "Furthermore, he will construct a system of defence fortifications with the help of a foreign god; he will enrich with great wealth those who acknowledge him, and he will cause them to rule over many Jews, and he will distribute the land on the basis of monetary consideration."

We know that when the Lord returns the land will be distributed by tribes, so immediately we know that we are dealing with a false doctrine and an evil dictator. All dictators, by the way, are not evil. It is very difficult for a dictator not to be evil because of the arrogance problem.

Now, all of this domestic policy is a very definite way to start wars. Wars aren't started with foreign policies alone, they are started with domestic policies. The Russians recognised that in order to keep communism alive they had to get into wars. Stalin realised he was losing his power in the late 1930s and he had some conspiracies with which to deal. He had already killed a couple of million people in one year but he wasn't keeping control, so his domestic policy was to regain control of the army. The best way to do this was to put them in a shooting war and he attacked Finland. The Finns clobbered his army so he pulled back all of his high-ranking generals, executed them, and replaced them with young colonels who became the general officers in world war two. But, you see, domestic policy influences foreign policy in many ways.

All of this means that there is a relationship and this dictator is going to be in the middle of that great world war of the future. It will be fought in the Pacific, it will be fought in Europe, it will be fought everywhere until the very end when all of the armies are going to unite to stop the Lord.

Verse 40 — the cause of the world war in the Tribulation. We have already seen the cause related to kosmokratwr demons. Now we have a double invasion of the Middle East. The kosmokratwr demons have done their job well and now there is motivation to invade the Middle East. The first invasion of the Middle East, however, was not designed to get the Middle East as such but to get a bridge to Africa. When we see the first invasion from the king of the north he is going to come across this bridge because his objective is to conquer all of Africa. He is going to get as far as Egypt and set up a base going toward Libya and going south toward Ethiopia. His objective was to conquer all of Africa because this dictator realised that the natural resources of Africa had never been tapped and anyone who wants to rule the world must have those resources. Africa will always be easy to conquer because Africa has had only two stabilised nations outside of Egypt and they were in the south, South Africa and Rhodesia. Egypt is also a stabilised nation so the king of the north decides to cross the bridge and conquer Africa.

The reason why it is precipitated: “Now at the time of the end [end of the Tribulation] the king of the south [the Arab league of the Tribulation] shall make war with him [the dictator of the Jewish state], therefore the king of the north shall launch a blitzkrieg attack.” Here is the first cause, then of the invasion of the Middle East. Here is the beginning of what will eventually be the Armageddon campaign and it will be provoked by Arab aggression to wipe out the Jews. The king of the north has plans to conquer Africa and the Arabs have spoiled his plans, therefore he must launch his attack. Notice, it says “and shall come against him,” the hithpael imperfect shaar should be translated to launch a lightning attack, a speedy attack. A blitzkrieg follows the principle of protecting your forces from heavy casualties. The faster you move the fewer casualties you have. If you stop and slow down or sit down then you are going to take a real pasting. That is why all decisions in warfare are made by being aggressive. The offensive brings victory; the defensive never will do it.

The king of the north immediately sees the problem. As soon as the Arabs start attacking the Jews on the bridge the only way to clear the bridge is to attack. So he launches the attack and he is going to come right through the land, hit a few places but not stop, and he is going to go down to Egypt. From there he is going to launch his plan to conquer Africa. But something is going to happen, Jesus Christ controls history.

In Revelation chapter sixteen we saw that the cause of the last world war of history is the komsokratwr demons, the war demons. The war demons obviously had a great deal of influence on the Arab countries and therefore in Daniel 11:40 we see a double engagement of the Jewish state in the Tribulation.

We have noted at the beginning of the verse, “Now at the time of the end [the end of the Tribulation] the king of the south [the Arab bloc in the Tribulation] shall make war with him [the dictator of the Jewish state in the Tribulation], therefore the king of the north [comparable today to the Russian communist empire] shall launch a blitzkrieg attack against him [the Jewish dictator] with both armoured forces and mechanised infantry, also with many ships; and he [the king of the north] shall go through many countries.”

There are two invasion routes to cross the bridge between Asia and Africa. The bridge is the Middle East. To the north of the bridge is the Bosphorus, the south west of the bridge is the Suez Canal. How to cross this bridge from the communist Russian empire: there are two possible ways to go. Plan A: There is a very definite system of roads that go right to the border of the USSR today. Those roads stop just at the border of eastern Turkey where they could very easily connect up with some fair roads that go through eastern Turkey down through Kurdistan and Syria. Once in Syria you are on the bridge. This plan A would be the ideal way, and seems to be the way. By coming through the Bosphorus and around Turkey, coming into the eastern Mediterranean, they can support their army by water as well as by land, a double logistical opportunity. That is why we have, “and with many ships,” at the end of this verse.

Plan B: This is a possibility. They move south into Iran, cross the upper Tigris and Euphrates into Syria, and then follow the same general route. The problem with moving into Iran is that you also have the Iran- Iraq problem. Both plans, however, converge on the state of Israel. Plan B might be rejected for the simple reason that we studied in Revelation 16:12 that the Euphrates river is dried up as any kind of a barrier against an invasion, and since this is the route that the kings of the east will take it is obvious that plan A is the way that they are going to come. However this passage follows the blitzkrieg attack of the king of the north and not the attack of the kings of the east who will later on cut off his supply route.

At the end of verse 40 we have the qal perfect of the verb shataph and is translated “overflow” in the King James version but should be translated “overwhelmed,” complete, successful, rapid movement, overwhelming movement, establishing along the way a perfect supply route. So we translate it: “and he will overwhelm and pass through.” This is the beginning of the Middle East campaign. The first move: the Arabs attack the state of Israel. That will upset the logistical bridge. Therefore, to stabilise the situation the king of the north launches his tremendous armies.

The deliverance of mature believers is the next item. Obviously many armies in this world war are going to converge on the Middle East, and the first obvious question is: What happens to all of those Jews who accepted Christ at this time?

Verse 41, “Also he [the king of the north] will invade the land of beauty [Israel], and many [Jewish believers who have failed to execute the plan of God. These are the ones who reject doctrine and ignore the warnings of Matthew 25:15ff] will fall [the sin unto death for believers]; but these [there are always believers who are in the plan of God and who have their priorities straight] ...”

There is one verb that is used to describe their deliverance, the piel imperfect of the verb malat, and it means “they shall escape.” The qal stem is never used in this verb in the Bible; it means to be smooth or slippery. The piel stem means to escape from danger by thought, by using your ingenuity, by applying doctrine. So the time comes when all the doctrine that people have learned who are believers they get to apply in escape. That is what malat means. Strangely enough, in the hiphil stem the same verb means to give birth to a child. However, in the piel stem we are giving birth to an idea — thought. You manufacture thought under pressure to escape. That is another definition for courage, the ability to think under pressure.

The king of the north and his great invading army is on its way to Egypt. Therefore, they are not stopping to conquer these countries but merely to secure a logistical route for supply to the base in Egypt. Egypt is going to be the base for the conquest of Africa. The mature believers are going to be able to escape, there is a lot of escape area where these invading armies will not go. Those who obey implicitly the instructions of Matthew 24:16ff are definitely going to escape, and that is what comes up next.

The rest of verse 41, “but these shall escape danger from his [the king of the north] hand: Edom, Moab and the foremost cities of the sons of Ammon.” Edom, Moab and Ammon are geographical locations, areas where there is a lot of high mountains and high desert country. They are all Arab areas today but this does not imply that the Arabs escape the king of the north on his way to Egypt. It does mean that their lands provide haven. Of course, the mountains of these areas are going to be the refuge for those who are winners. They are going to stay there and wait for the second advent, at which time they will begin another phase of the plan of God — the repopulation of the earth. The Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written. Today Edom is the land of Trans-Jordania and Saudi Arabia, Moab is the land of Trans-Jordania, Ammon is the country of the United Arab Republic or Syria. The mountains of these areas are excellent refuge country and that is exactly where they are going to hole up, as per the instructions of Matthew 24.

Verses 42, the king of the north reaches his first objective. “Then he [the king of the north] will stretch out his hand [has to do with conquest] against other countries, and the land of Egypt will not have deliverance.”

Why will he go into Egypt? The reason is given in verse 43, “But he shall have power,” King James version. That is incorrect. It is literally, “He shall rule.” We have the qal perfect of the verb mashal and it means to rule, “Consequently he will rule over the treasures of silver and gold, and over the valuable commodities of Egypt,” valuable commodities of Egypt can refer energy-type things like oil, similar types of wealth from the 20th century. The next phrase becomes very important because this tells us exactly what the king of the north had in mind in this great world war. His ambition is to conquer all of Africa. Apparently Africa is going to remain in a state of great confusion where there are a lot of small countries and none of them are very strong and able to resist a really well-developed modern army. That is exactly what we have coming up next, “the Libyans and the Cushites are in his line of march” is the correct translation.

The Libyans means that once he hits Egypt he has one idea in mind. There are two things that are absolutely necessary to conquer Africa: you must control north Africa to control the Mediterranean; you must go down east Africa, and Ethiopia would be the first stop. That is the objective of the king of the north. Egypt is the base. He now has a supply line, the bridge which is the Middle East, and also has his navy and a large merchant marine in the eastern Mediterranean. This means that the king of the north at this point controls the Mediterranean, a very important factor.

Verse 44, “But tidings out of the east” should be, “But intelligence information from the east and from the north will disturb him.” The king of the north has now set up his invasion base in Egypt. “From the east” refers to the kings of the east invading the Middle East. That threatens the supply line in the Middle East. The intelligence information from the north means that there is some navy of the king of the north, perhaps the revived Roman empire navy. The king of the north is disturbed because he is now defeated by logistics. He is going to lose both of his logistical lines, the one to the north in the Mediterranean and the one through the Middle East. So what can he do? All he can do is bring back his armies, set up holding forces, turn around and go back and open up his land route; “therefore he shall advance with great anger [into the state of Israel] to cause destruction and to annihilate many [Jews].”

What happens to people in an invasion? This is what happens to unbelievers and Jewish believers who are losers. This is what it is like to have this army turn back in great fury. He is not only trying to reopen his logistical supply line but he is also going to take it out on the people of Israel. There, again, you see the influence of one of those battalions of war demons.

Isaiah 3:16, “Moreover, the Lord said, ‘Because the daughters of Zion are proud [arrogance],’ this is not punishment by pain, that was punishment coming down. This is punishment by death. They have failed to respond to the wonderful crisis evangelism and judgment by pain, “and walk with their heads held high and seductive eyes, and walk with short sexy steps.” The Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written: the short steps are to make the ankle bells ring, “and tinkle the bangles on their feet, Verse 17, “therefore the Lord will afflict the scalp of the daughters of Zion with scabs, and the Lord will make their foreheads bald.” That is judgment by pain, crisis evangelism.

Verse 18, “In that day [of disaster] the Lord will take away the beauty of their anklets, their hats, crescent ornaments [jewellery], Verse 19, “dangling earrings, bracelets, veils,

Verse 20, “headdresses, ankle chains, sashes, perfume boxes, amulets, Verse 21, “finger rings, nose rings,

Verse 22, “dress robes, jackets, coats, money purses, Verse 23, “hand mirrors, undergarments, turbans, and veils.

Verse 24, “Then it will come to pass that instead of sweet perfume there will be a terrible stench; instead of a belt, a rope.” In the ancient world when men were carrying off women as part of the booty of war they put a rope around their waste and hauled them off. From then on the women were the slaves of whomever held the other end of the rope; “instead of well-set hair, pulled out hair; instead of fine clothes, the wearing of sackcloth; instead of beauty, branding [they are slaves].”

Why is this going to happen to the women?

Verse 25, “Because your men [the Jewish army of that dictator is a professional army and no good] will fall by the sword, and your heroes will die in battle.

Verse 26, “Therefore her door [the door that they break down to come and take her] will scream and mourn; and deserted she will sit on the ground [in great humility].”

Why all of this?

Jeremiah 6:22, “Thus says the Lord, ‘Behold, an army is invading from the north [the king of the north], even a great nation will be aroused from the remote parts of the earth.’”

Verse 23, “They seize bow and spear [they are armed]; they are cruel and have no mercy; their voices roar like the sea, they ride on horses [mechanised infantry], armoured as a man for battle against you, O daughter of Zion!’ ”

That explains why women are abused in mass: because there is no military establishment to keep out the enemy. Once the king of the north goes through that is a very light thing, but when he comes back it is going to be judgment by death.

Daniel 11:45, the verse that brings us back into focus with regard to this Middle East campaign, “Consequently he [the king of the north] shall establish his command post between the seas [between the Mediterranean and the Dead Seas] toward the glorious Holy Mountain [Mount Zion],” that means the command post will be just east of Jerusalem, “where he shall come to the end of his career, and there is not anyone who will help him.” That introduces the principle that Jesus Christ controls history.

The conclusion of the matter as far as we are concerned: there is a great protection against this factor. The first protection is in the laws of divine establishment: freedom through military victory.

Psalms 33 is where we put it all together with regard to this type of disaster.

Verse 1, “Sing with happiness to the Lord, you winners [mature believers who have integrity]; a psalm fitting for those who have integrity.”

Verse 2, “Be motivated to praise the Lord with the lyre; sing to him with the harp of ten strings.”

Verse 3, “Sing to him a new song; play skilfully with loud strumming.”

Verse 4, “For the word of the Lord [Bible doctrine] is integrity; and all his provision is in faithfulness.”

Verse 5, “He loves integrity [righteousness] and justice [the two aspects of the holiness of God]; therefore the earth is full of grace of the Lord.”

Verse 6, “By the word of the Lord [Bible doctrine] the heavens were made, and by the breath of his mouth all of their stars.”

verse 7, "He accumulates in a mass the waters of the sea; he stores in warehouses the roaring deeps."

Verse 8, "Let all the earth respect the Lord; let all the people of the world be his guests."

Verse 9, "For he spoke, and it came to be; he commanded and it stood fast."

Verse 10, "The Lord frustrates the plans of nations [Jesus Christ controls history]; he neutralises the conspiracies of peoples."

We do not have the ability to ferret out conspiracies against our person individually, and against groups or against nations. The Lord does. If you are a winner you don't have to worry about it.

Verse 11, "The plan of God stands forever, the thoughts of his right lobe [Bible doctrine is the mind or the thinking of Christ] are for all generations." We are studying the Tribulation, yet these things are for us.

Verse 12, "Happiness to that nation whose God is the Lord [client nation to God], and the people he elected for his inheritance." This verse describes a client nation. It doesn't say they are all believers but it does say that God uses that nation to fulfil the principles of client nation activity, i.e. evangelism, the teaching of Bible doctrine, missionary activity, and to set up a system of establishment compatible with category #1 truth.

Verse 13, "From the heavens the Lord has looked; he has seen all mankind [Jesus Christ controls history];

Verse 14, "From the place of his throne he looked on all the inhabitants of the earth,

Verse 15, "he who forms the right lobes of all the human race, he who perceives all their works [the omniscience of God]."

Verse 16, "No king is delivered by a great army;" that is the story of the king of the north, "a strong man is not delivered by his great strength." If you are depending on muscle you will never make it. What you need is not definition of your muscles on your body, you need definition of your thoughts in your mind. There is where it counts. The real power is not in muscular development of the body but in discerning thinking of the soul.

Verse 17, "The war horse [the armoured forces] is a strong delusion for victory; therefore by his strength he cannot deliver," that is the king of the north.

Verse 18, "Behold, the eye of the Lord is on those who respect him [protocol], to those who trust in his grace."

Verse 19, "To rescue their souls from death, and to keep them alive in economic depression."

Verse 20, “Our soul waits in confidence for the Lord;” confidence is gate five, a motivational virtue directed toward God, “he is our help and our defence.”

Verse 21, “For our right lobes will rejoice in him, because we have trusted in his holy name,” the three stages of the faith-rest drill.

Verse 22, “O Lord, let your grace be upon us, according as we have trusted you under this pressure.”

There is the key to the deliverance of thousands and thousands of civilians, and a scratch army of believers who have followed the plan of God to the high ground and will defend in a magnificent way, because of spiritual factors as well as motivation, Jerusalem in its most awful day of siege.

Chapter 16: background — Proverbs chapter 24

We have noticed that the Jewish national army under the dictator, the false prophet, has failed. It was, of course, an apostate army and inevitably it had to be judged. But there is still a lot of military talent in Israel and all of this military talent is about to be brought together under two great leaders. Two general officers of the Jewish army are going to rise and stand in the crisis. By the time we meet them in Proverbs 24 and Zechariah 12 they will be general officers.

We begin, therefore, by learning a few things about the subject of leadership. First of all the premise of leadership. While the emphasis in our passage is on military leadership these concepts do not exclude leadership in every realm, even leadership in ladies as well as in men. The premise of leadership is based upon three very simple principles:

1. Historical events produce a need and leadership meets that need.
2. Circumstances produce a market and leadership supplies that market.
3. Life is a market for leadership; crisis sets the stage for that leadership.

Under this premise there are two concepts with which we should be familiar: God uses prepared people and, if God doesn't promote you you are not promoted. The time has come in the crisis of the Middle East campaign for God to promote some prepared people.

The second principle of leadership, and a very important one and one that should be kept in mind as a part of rightly dividing the Word of truth, is that leadership must be distinguished from management. While leaders are always managers, managers are not leaders. Leadership motivates people; management regulates people. Leadership necessitates the establishment of authority; management is the bureaucratic enforcement of regulations without ability, without integrity. Management bullies, requires no honour or integrity; while leadership motivates even the dullest routine of garrison and training. Leadership delegates authority; management abuses authority by doing to do all the work one's self and take all of the credit for it. Therefore, leadership delegates authority; management abuses authority. Leadership cannot function without honour and integrity; management produces hypocrisy, inordinate ambition and, quite often, dishonesty. Management loses a status quo; leadership produces maximum results. If you as a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ are faithful in the protocol plan of God inside of the operational divine dynasphere you will be a leader and you will avoid the pitfalls of management.

The third concept we should know by way of introduction to our passage has to do with the attributes of leadership. While they apply always to the military they apply to every realm of life. Leadership is not confined to the military profession but should extend into every facet of life.

First of all, then, a leader must be organised in his own personal life; he must be organised in his thinking; he must be organised in relationship to his time; he must establish routines so that the priorities of life can receive his full attention and never be neglected. Disorganised people do not make good leaders. It is almost impossible for a disorganised person to be a leader. Leaders must understand both self and group discipline and the significance of organisation. Therefore, to be a leader one must have great self-discipline and relating that to the routine of life. To the extent to which you are a disorganised person in life to that extent you have eliminated yourself from any form of leadership. A leader must have respect for authority, the basic virtue of humility, and know how to use both authority and humility so that he does not abuse anyone under his command. He does not abuse the authority given to him in any given situation or organisation.

Subjective and arrogant people do not qualify for being leaders. As a born again believer in the Lord Jesus Christ you have the leadership training course provided for you by God. The protocol of heaven is brought to the earth. Unless doctrine is first in your life you will never be a leader, you will be a loser in every possible way. It is the day by day perception of Bible doctrine that organises everything in your life and makes you a prepared person so that at the right time God can promote you. There will always be a market for leadership, for those who have set up a routine in their lives whereby doctrine is first. It makes no difference where you are or what excuse you may have given to yourself, and possibly others who stuck their nose in your business. There is no system in life whereby you cannot put doctrine first. Gate five will result — motivational leadership — but you must have the spiritual factor: motivational virtue. That includes personal love for God, confidence in God, occupation with the person of Jesus Christ. Gate six: functional virtue directed toward man and circumstances. All manifestations of leadership are directed toward people and toward the circumstances of life. Gate seven: the testing. No leader is worth his salt unless he can pass tests, and every leadership test is found at gate seven. Gate eight is where you become a winner, where you become a prepared person, and God uses a prepared person.

So our first attribute of leadership is the fact that a leader must be organised in his own personal life. Being organised in his own personal life means that he must have right priorities, and whatever the priorities are after doctrine, doctrine must be first in order to fulfil God's priority which is virtue-first.

The second attribute of leadership. A leader must possess personal integrity. This means to us as believers, virtue-first. Leadership demands a relaxed mental attitude in life. A relaxed mental attitude can only come from humility — enforced humility and genuine humility. Humility is the key to objectivity in life and no one succeeds as a leader without objectivity. Leadership must have that relaxed mental attitude, and that means total freedom from the arrogance complex, freedom from motivational evil at gate one, cosmic one.

The third attribute of leadership. A leader must avoid personality moulds, personality types. Most people think they are a leader if they can act like general Patton. "Macho" does not mean leadership; "macho" means arrogance and stupidity. You must always function within the framework of your own personality. You may admire people who have a different personality but if you are ever going to be a leader it must be done through your personality. Your personality doesn't make you a leader; neither does the personality of George Patton make him a leader. What is going to make you as a believer a leader is the Bible doctrine resident in your soul, being spiritually prepared, for God uses prepared people and God promotes prepared people. Avoid imitation of someone else's personality. If you ever want to emerge as a leader you must have your own foundation, your own personality, backed by your own humility.

The fourth attribute of leadership. Leadership demands knowledge: knowledge of doctrine, knowledge of your profession, knowledge of your business, knowledge of whatever you do in life. You cannot emerge as a leader and take people out. You have to know more than they know; you have to understand the issues in business, in profession, in organisations, in the modus operandi of life.

The fifth attribute of leadership. As a result of understanding the principle of authority, which includes the principle of self-discipline and the table of organisation in which he functions, the leader must possess both objectivity and loyalty to higher echelons of command and to those who are under his command. He has directional loyalty. If you do not have directional loyalty you will never make a leader. Some people fail as a leader because they are only loyal to those under their command. That is the only direction in which they go. Some fail because their loyalty is only directed toward their superiors. You cannot freeze up and be directional, you must go in every direction. You must understand that loyalty demands flexibility and you have to be able to think and to balance out the directions of your loyalty.

Objectivity resolves personality conflicts. Loyalty produces good command function which takes cognisance of the objective while not losing track of the good of those in one's command. A leader never uses his command to advance himself. Therefore the leader exercises fairness and objectivity toward those in his command, looking out for their best interests in the accomplishment of the assigned objective or the departmental profile.

The sixth attribute of leadership. A leader must have common sense. Sooner or later it must be developed. It is impossible to have common sense if you are a subjective [living in the cosmic system] person. Objectivity is absolutely necessary in the thinking of leadership and if you are a subjective person you will never make a leader. From objectivity you learn common sense in your profession. You learn from common sense flexibility as well as the understanding of people, and you recognise that no one is perfect, yet you manage to train and bring into a system of discipline or organisation the talents of these people, not their perfection. The leader who is looking for perfection is through. There is no such thing as perfection. The leader must be fair to all of those under his command and be free from prejudice because of personality conflicts with superior officers.

The seventh attribute. The leader must develop and acquire executive ability. He must learn to analyse, to organise, to categorise, to systematise, to synthesise, and he must learn to communicate. Leaders cannot be leaders unless they can teach. All leadership must have the ability to teach, to train those under one's command. That is why parents fail: they do not communicate; they are not leaders. Leadership requires good public speaking, the ability to train, and good public speaking requires poise. You cannot be a leader without poise. If you fall apart every time something goes wrong you will never make it.

The eighth attribute. A leader must have good health, presence, motivation, endurance, and nervous stability. By being well organised this energy is directed in the best interests of his command and organisation. Add to this his confidence, his dress, his carriage, his poise, his good manners, his thoughtfulness and, in some cases, even flair, but flair is not necessary for leadership. If flair does not match your personality, avoid it. Flair is not leadership.

Leadership must be related to the profession. For example, a pastor's leadership must be related to his communication of doctrine. A pastor is not a leader unless he communicates doctrine. A pastor should never be seen running around calling on people and wasting his time. A soldier's leadership must be related to his ability to train troops, you cannot lead untrained troops and be successful in battle. All great leaders have understanding of logistics, how they are supported, and terrain, and appreciate the importance of intelligence regarding the enemy, be vitally interested in tactical timing, and have the ability to think and make decisions under pressure. Business leadership must be related to marketing ability, for no matter how good the service or product may be you cannot be successful in business and make money unless you can sell the service or market the product. Political leadership must be related to establishment principles and the communication of these principles to the general public. A politician may have good ideas and solutions to national or local problems but these ideas are no good unless he can sell them to the general public. Good leadership in politicians results in being a statesman. Good leadership in a labour union must include the highest form of integrity, the ability to have the interests of the union in balance with the state of the economy. Union leadership cannot provide for the union what the economy will not bear. All categories of leadership must relate to their objective, to the status quo of the national entity, so that they are not in conflict with the laws of divine establishment and then abuse their leadership status to avoid ever solving problems by violence or revolution. No leader ever gets involved in violence or revolution as the solution to a problem. Good leadership in any field always balances the objectives of its organisation with the public welfare.

The crisis in any nation is always the market for leadership and God uses prepared people. The Middle East invasion of the Armageddon provides one of the great crises in history by which leadership rises to the top. In Proverbs 24 we have the basis for crisis leadership.

Verse 1 — the piel imperfect of chanah is the command for “Be not envious,” and it refers to jealousy, one of the functions of gate one, cosmic one or motivational evil. Jealousy is one of the basic reasons why people of great potential never realise it. Everything that is great in a person is destroyed by jealousy. Jealousy squeezes the greatness out of anyone, it is the destroyer of capacity for life, and a person who has any kind of a jealousy problem will never have any happiness or capacity for happiness. Whatever jealousy achieves jealousy loses immediately. Jealous people are miserable people; jealous people become the villains of life because jealousy is one of the strongest areas of motivational evil. So when it says literally, “Do not be jealous of evil men” it merely indicates that jealousy puts the individual involved on a par with evil. When you become jealous of jealous people you have reached the bottom. Jealousy is the destroyer of leadership. Whatever potential you have and whatever you have attained is neutralised by jealousy. So jealousy is more than a sin. Jealousy is a sin, a mental attitude sin, but jealousy is far greater than that, it is the basis of most of the motivational evil in life.

Next we have with jealousy, desire. Jealous people always have unfulfilled desires. “And do not desire to associate with them.” Jealousy gravitates to jealousy; jealousy produces the desire of association with jealousy. Evil associating with evil can only produce evil, therefore jealousy is a self-destroyer. The desire to associate with evil comes from being evil. Being evil here is being jealous. Jealousy may appear to you to be innocuous but jealousy is always the beginning of an evil life. An evil life cannot fulfil the plan of God, cannot function under the principle of leadership, and an evil life is a wasted life. Evil does not destroy your salvation but you will arrive in heaven with minuses for life and resurrection body minus the order of the morning star, minus the uniform of glory, minus the various crowns of decorations, minus the honours list and the new knighthood for eternity, minus about everything that would make your life significant. Your options and your opportunity is in time; jealousy destroys all options. A jealous person is a dried up prune.

Verse 2 — describes how evil inevitably associates with evil and how the wrong company diverts the believer from his primary objective — Bible doctrine, fulfilling the plan of God. There is nothing in this life to associate with evil [living in the cosmic system] without being tainted by evil. “For their right lobes study violence.” The word “study” is an incorrect translation, it is the word hagah in the Hebrew, and in the qal imperfect it means to murmur, to plot, and to meditate. Here the translation should be, “Their right lobe meditates violence and tyranny.”

Jealous people have nothing to restrain violence in their soul. They meditate on oppression, on violence, on tyranny. Tyranny knocks out leadership; tyranny is the abuse of power and authority completely neutralising any leadership. No one can truly be a leader until he has learned to discipline himself and has learned the value of authority in life. Leadership is not interested primarily in freedom: leadership fights for freedom, leadership centres and focuses on orientation to authority. Tyranny is the distortion of power and authority, lack of self-discipline. All of it is related to gate one, cosmic one, the arrogance gate, motivating evil.

Next we have communication. “Also their lips talk slander.” Jealous people try to satisfy their frustrations by slandering others, by making others appear smaller or less than they are. The first two verses, then, emphasise cosmic involvement, and specific cosmic involvement that hinders leadership. Verse 1 emphasises the importance of the association with evil, but verse 2 emphasises how this evil goes into action. You are not better than someone else because you can malign them or slander them or run them down. It does not make you superior, it make you simply evil.

Verse 3 — “By means of wisdom.” the Hebrew word for wisdom is chakmah. This is the function to us of gate four of the divine dynasphere, the function of the royal priesthood in the perception of doctrine, the perception of the royal ambassadorship in the application of doctrine. You can get perception even in the cosmic system but you will never have it for application or growth because it never transfers to the right lobe. Wisdom is both the perception and the application of doctrine, the fuller function of GAP

“a house is constructed.” The construction of a house is the edification complex of the soul which is only completed when the believer attains gate eight of the divine dynasphere. The construction of your life, the organisation of your life, all of this is meant by the building of a house. This house is constructed in the soul, this house in the soul is the building up of your leadership attributes, the building up of the plan of God in your life, the thing that makes you aware in the protocol system. Protocol in the divine system is heaven on earth.

“By means of understanding doctrine” is the next phrase. Next we have the hithpael imperfect of the verb kum, and the hithpael stem is the reflexive stem in the Hebrew. In the qal stem the verb kum means to stand upright, in the hiphil stem it means to appoint or to confirm, in the hophal stem it means to be confirmed, in the niphal stem it means to rise up, but in the hithpael stem it means something entirely different not even suggested by the King James translation which simply says, “it is established.” It means to prepare one’s self. “By means of understanding [doctrine] one prepares himself,” for life, for blessing, for leadership, for all of the things that God has ordained in His plan for winners. The winner is the believer who advances to gate eight, the one who therefore glorifies the Lord by maximum doctrine resident in his soul. The winner has achieved the tactical victory of the angelic conflict, he has maximum doctrine not only in his soul but in his system of priorities. The winner is an organised person, it is inevitable that he will organise himself as he advances in the plan of God. He is spiritually self-sustaining, he has the ability to handle his own problems, he does not use crutches, he doesn't have to run to someone else and lean on them. He is therefore already a leader and only a crisis will bring out the greatness of this individual. God often provides crises to introduce His prepared person, His leader for a given situation. Positive volition toward doctrine, the daily function of GAP in the divine dynasphere, supersedes all other mandates for the life, and all that it takes to be a winner is constructed on the perception of doctrine.

Verse 4 — we begin to see that principle that we noted, the principle that has to do with organising the life. You must be an organised person. “And by [means of] knowledge,” the act of knowing doctrine, the function of GAP. Next we have the word “chambers” which would really be compartments. “And by means of knowledge the compartments [of the life] will be filled,” the compartments have to do with your capacity for life. As you construct in your soul a vast structure the greater that structure is the greater your capacity for life will be, the greater your capacity for life the greater your blessing. Your blessings are going to be given to you on the basis of capacity. God blesses for two reasons: to spank you and to give you the opportunity of expressing your capacity for happiness. God will often give you something that you want just to show you that your priorities are wrong. You will have something in your life that you associate with happiness and you will be miserable with it. Without capacity the misery is unbelievable. Some of the most miserable and disillusioned people in the world are people who are promoted beyond their capacity, something that never happens to believers who advance in the plan of God.

So God can give you the accoutrements of happiness but He cannot give you happiness. God cannot make you happy, and if God cannot make you happy people cannot make you happy, pleasant circumstances cannot make you happy. Only you have the ability to make yourself happy and that ability comes from doctrine first. Capacity must precede happiness. The chambers here are the compartments of capacity for life, happiness and blessing. “By means of the act of learning doctrine the compartments [of the life] will be filled with all wealth” — wealth is capacity in the soul, not money. Money can come and go but those who have capacity from Bible doctrine have something they cannot lose.

Then we have an explanation of all of this wealth, “precious and pleasant.” The word “precious” means something of value, and the word “pleasant” means something stimulating. “All wealth” is something of value and something stimulating. There is as close as we come in this passage to defining capacity for life.

Verses five and six deal with the soldier, the leader. It explains two men.

Verse 5 — “A wise man” is incorrect. The first word in this verse refers to a soldier, to someone who is skilled or knowledgeable. As the context goes on it is dealing with the military profession. It can be someone who is skilled in any profession but the rest of the passage indicates which profession. So we translate: “A wise soldier,” an intelligent soldier, a wise soldier. By way of application it refers to the believer who is a winner, “is strong.” What does it mean that he is strong? Well, it doesn't even say that he is strong. It is a prepositional phrase which means something else entirely. The word is ba oz and it means

“in power.” “A wise soldier lives in power.” That has an application to us. Remembering that as believers we are all in the angelic conflict, and therefore soldiers. Oz refers to the divine dynasphere. We live in the system, the protocol system provided by God, and only when we function in that system are we winners. You cannot live in power unless you choose for power, and you do not choose for power unless Bible doctrine is first in your life.

“And a man of knowledge strengthens his professional ability.” That becomes very important. All of this, therefore, becomes the basis for understanding the rise of great leadership in the crisis. God uses the crisis to introduce His leaders. God’s leaders and man’s leaders are not always the same. “A wise man lives in the power of Bible doctrine, and a man of knowledge strengthens his professional ability.”

Proverbs 20:18 should be included at this point: “War plans are formed by wisdom and planning [professional military leadership], and by means of wisdom they make war.” Military leadership is defined in terms of rank, a table of organisation. The Roman centurion was a high ranking officer in Israel. He came to the Lord one day and made a statement that demonstrated that it was no accident that he was a high ranking officer. He was a believer with maximum doctrine in his soul and demonstrated it in a very dramatic way.

Matthew 8:5 — the centurion has a very sick son. He has come to Capernaum. “And when Jesus entered Capernaum, a centurion came to him, entreating him, Verse 6 — “and saying, ‘Lord [Romans only used the word “Lord” for the Caesar. This centurion is a believer and uses the word in relationship to Jesus Christ] , my son is lying paralysed in his quarters, suffering great pain.’

Verse 7 — “And he [Jesus] said to him, ‘I will come and heal him.’ ” In eternity past our Lord knew the situation and He was going to test this man in an unusual way. This centurion is a great leader, he can think clearly, he is not silly.

Verse 8 — “But the centurion answered and said, ‘Lord, I am not qualified for you to come into my quarters, but speak with a word, and my son will be healed.’ ”

Verse 9 — “ ‘For I, too, am a man under authority, with soldiers under me; and I say to this one, ‘Go!’ and he goes, and to another, ‘Come!’ and he comes, and to my slave, ‘Do this!’ and he does it’.”

Verse 10 — “Now when Jesus heard this, he marvelled, and he remarked to those who were following, ‘In truth I say to you, I have not found such great faith, not even among the Jews’.”

Here was a Gentile, a believer, a person with doctrine. No one knew that he had all of this doctrine but a personal crisis came along and he went to the Lord, approached Him on the basis that He could do something about it, and He understood that. He didn’t have to come ten or fifteen miles to his quarters. He could speak the word where He was and the distance meant nothing. Mature people, winners, are free from silliness.

Verse 13 — “And Jesus said to the centurion, ‘Let it be done as you have believed.’ And the boy was healed in that very hour.”

When the centurion goes back he knows that he is going to find the boy well. What did this man have in the light of what we have? At gate five he was occupied with the person of the Lord Jesus Christ. That is motivational virtue. He was motivated to go to the Lord with this problem of his son’s serious illness. Because he was occupied with the person of Christ, in his motivational virtue he had confidence in the Lord. He never wavers. What you don’t get in this passage is what he did in his profession. He has the comparable functional virtue — courage toward man and circumstances, courage in life. Confidence in the Lord means courage in life. The fact that the boy was healed is incidental. What really counts is not the healing at all, the issue is: he had total confidence in God. Confidence comes from day by day by day decisions to take in doctrine.

Proverbs 24:6 — this verse is the one that will explain the leadership that came to the front when the king of the north invaded Palestine.

“For by wise counsel thou shalt make war,” is not what the Hebrew says at all. We have a prepositional phrase and it should be translated, “Because by the art of leadership thou shalt make war.”

“Therefore,” says the last phrase, “victory resides in the one who commands” — the one who has learned the art of leadership, the one who has developed the art of leadership, the one who understands the art of leadership. There is your victory.

God designed a plan for your life. In designing that plan you are supposed to be a winner but you have to make decisions and you have to initiate the action and you have to organise your life to be a winner, to take in doctrine today and tomorrow and the next day, to pass the many tests that will come your way. You are not going to make it by making resolutions, there must be order in your life and in your thinking. God uses prepared people. If the crisis came to morrow the question arises: Would you be prepared?

Zechariah 12:1-6

Three times in history Jerusalem has been under very special siege. Each time it has something to do with the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline, except for the last one. The first two are historical; the last one is prophetic. In 586 BC the Chaldean army besieged Jerusalem and eventually destroyed it. This was the first administration of the fifth cycle of discipline to client nation Israel. The second time, in AD 70, the siege lasted for many months but the Romans under Vespasian, and later Titus, took the city and the Jews went out under the fifth cycle of discipline. The third is a prophetic siege which occurs in the last world war of history at the end of the Tribulation. At that time the city will be almost destroyed and then the Lord Jesus Christ will come to deliver it, and it will be the beginning of client nation Israel for the last one thousand years of history. The prophetic study of the siege of Jerusalem occurs in two passages: Zechariah 12:1-6; 14:1-4. We begin now to note the siege of Jerusalem from the standpoint of leadership. Later we will note it from the standpoint of the deliverance of the second advent.

In Zechariah 12:1 our first word is "The burden" for Israel. The Hebrew word for burden, masha, has a special prophetic meaning. What the King James version calls "burden" means a prophecy or an oracle, "The prophecy of the word of the Lord concerning Israel" is the corrected translation. The prophecy is a part of the Armageddon campaign in the Middle East.

Then we have a description of our Lord, for it says that He is the one "who stretches forth." Actually, it should be translated "the one who extends [or measures out] the heavens." The same Lord who created the universe is the Lord who is now giving us this prophecy, and that is the second person of the Trinity because the scripture says, "By him are all things created that are in heaven, that are in earth, visible or invisible, whether they be thrones or dominions or principalities or powers; all things were created by him and for him."

Corrected translation of verse 1: "The prophecy of the word of the Lord concerning Israel. A declaration of the Lord, the one who measures out the heavens, and the one who decrees the earth, and forms the life of man within him."

That last phrase is extremely important as far as doctrine is concerned because it emphasizes a fact which has been the subject of controversy in the time in which we live. Where does life originate? The lie is to state that life begins in the womb. There is no life in the womb; no woman has ever carried life. All life is formed by the Lord Himself. Life is imputed after birth "and forms the life of man within him," after we are born.

This is an obvious reference to the Lord Jesus Christ. John 1:3 says, "all things came into being through Him and apart from Him nothing came into being that has come into being." So, it is the Lord Jesus Christ Himself who imputes life after birth. The eternal God, Jesus Christ, is the creator of the universe, and He now speaks of His return to the earth to be the ruler of the world under operation footstool.

In verse 2 we begin the prophecy. The prophecy begins in the last world war in history, in the last campaign of that war, and there will be several battles. One of them is the siege of Jerusalem, and it is so stated in verse 2, "Behold I have appointed Jerusalem a drinking cup of staggering [of intoxication]," not a cup of trembling as in the King James version. This means the divine judgment involved. In this case the ones drinking from the goblet of divine judgment are those invading armies we studied in Daniel chapter eleven. The same language is found in Isaiah 51:17 regarding the fifth cycle of discipline administered to the Jews in 586 BC, "Rouse yourself! Get up, O Jerusalem, those of you who have drunk from the Lord's hand the goblet of his anger; the drinking goblet of staggering intoxication you have drained to the dregs." So drinking from the cup always denotes judgment.

There is another cup that denotes judgment. When our Lord Jesus Christ approached the cross He said, "Father if it be thy will, let this cup pass from me." The cup had to do with the sins of the world. On the cross our Lord Jesus Christ received the imputation of our sins for He drank from the goblet the entire sins of the world. That means, again, judgment.

So whenever drinking from the goblet is mentioned as having to do with staggering or intoxication it is always a form of divine judgment. As we have seen there are two categories of divine judgment. First of all, there is judgment by pain; secondly there is judgment by death. Each one has a grace purpose. Judgment by pain is crisis evangelism. Judgment by death always has a purpose, a grace purpose, and that is to eliminate from the human race those areas which would eventually destroy the human race. Judgment by death is God's way of guaranteeing that there will always be people on planet earth. At the second advent there will be millions of people who will have lived through the Tribulation and at the end of the Millennium there will, again, be millions of people.

Jerusalem is going to come under heavy judgment at the end of the Tribulation, "and also to Judah shall it be in the siege of Jerusalem." In other words, Judah will also suffer. The Arab army known as the king of the south will be occupying parts of the state of Israel. They will be destroyed at the second advent, Isaiah 63:1-6. The army of the king of the north will invade, and after reaching north Africa will have to come back and besiege Jerusalem. The army of the king of the west will be present as representing the revived Roman empire. Also the armies of the kings of the east will be invading at the same time and will in a great battle in the valley of Esdraelon. All of these things mean the conversions of several millions of men representing various armies in the world at that time, and so we have the siege of Jerusalem introduced.

We have already noted very briefly that the Jewish regular army is going to be destroyed. It will be destroyed before this siege takes place. And so we read in verse 3, "And it shall come to pass in that day that I will appoint Jerusalem a stone, a burden too heavy to lift." In other words, the attack upon Jerusalem is a guarantee of the destruction of that army, just the antithesis of the two previous sieges, one by the Chaldean Nebuchadnezzar, and one by the Romans under Titus. So here is the principle that Jesus Christ controls history and anyone who attacks the state of Israel in the end of the Tribulation will be destroyed. That means the army of the king of the north, the armies of the kings of the east, the Arab army, the army of the revived Roman empire, as well as the apostate army of the state of Israel. That means that with all of these armies invading with the potential to completely destroy the Jew and wipe him out that Israel is in a very serious jamb, and there are many thousands of born-again Jews living in Israel at that time. So the Lord Jesus Christ is going to protect them and he does it directly through His divine power. He does it indirectly through the laws of divine establishment, He does it permissively through allowing the trends of evil to come to their terrible conclusion, having run their course.

No one has ever been able to solve the Jewish problem in the Middle East because it is the focal point of the angelic conflict. Many attempts have been made to solve the Jewish problem throughout the thousands of years of history. Since BC 1440 when the Jews finally occupied the land no one has been able to solve the problem of Israel in the Middle East.

Israel is a stone too heavy to lift, and anyone who attacks Israel is judged under the principle of paragraph three of the Abrahamic covenant. Only Jesus Christ can resolve the problem of the Jews in the Middle East and only Jesus Christ will lift the heavy stone at the second advent. In the meantime the Jews will be under very heavy pressure in the Middle East. Their friends will turn against them, their enemies will constantly be putting pressure on them, and should the Church Age last for another 100, 200, or even 300 years this will be true all of that time. Jews in the Middle East are a thorn in the flesh of the Arabs and a problem for all the nations of the world. In that day, in the context when the king of the north will seek to lift that stone, he will find that the stone will be too heavy to lift. Many nations have been crushed by anti-Semitism which is a one-way street to destruction. For anyone who tries to lift the stone the stone will fall down on them and destroy them.

“for all the peoples; in fact all the ones trying to lift her [destroy Israel] shall be completely crushed. And all the nations of the earth will be gathered together against her.”

The Arab armies are going to be slaughtered in the Armageddon campaign, they are the first to attack the Jews in that world war. In Isaiah 34:5,6, “For my sword is satiated in heaven, Behold it shall descend for judgment on Edom, and upon the people I have devoted to destruction [not only will the Arabs be destroyed in those days but also the other nations as well]. The sword of the Lord is filled with blood, it is made fat, with the blood of lambs and goats [analogy to slaughter], with the fat of the kidneys of rams. For the Lord has slaughtered in Bozrah [the Arab country called Edom], a great slaughter in the land of Edom.”

Ezekiel chapters 38 and 39 describe the invasion of the king of the north. And what happens to him when he tries to lift the stone? Ezekiel 39:11, “And it shall come to pass in that day that I will give Gog [the king of the north] a burial ground in Israel, the valley of those who pass by east of the sea, and it will block-off those who pass by, so that they will have to bury Gog there [before the roads will be opened], therefore I will call it the valley of Hamon-gog [the multitudes of the army of the king of the north].” Verse 12 tells us that it will take seven months for the house of Israel to bury that army.

Joel 2:20, “I will remove the northern army [the king of the north] far from you, consequently I will drive it into the parched and desolate land, its vanguard into the eastern sea [the Dead Sea], its rear guard will be on the western sea [the Mediterranean]. Its stench will rise up and a foul smell will cover the land...”

So it will be a great slaughter for those who attempt to destroy Israel. God can deal with His people in judgment, He has not given the prerogative to anyone else.

So Zechariah 12:3 concludes, “and all the nations of the earth will be gathered together against her.” These verses provide the background for that great act of leadership, crisis leadership. Historical crisis is God’s way of promoting prepared people. If God doesn’t promote you, you are not promoted, and in time of crisis God does promote prepared people. Preparation for disaster means maximum doctrine resident in the soul, living under the plan of God.

In verse 4 we actually begin to see what is going to happen. God is going to strike down the enemy. "Thus says the Lord, 'In that day [that these armies will invade the land] I will strike every horse with consternation, and his rider [the dictators, the politicians] with madness. Therefore, in the house of Judah [the Jewish state in the Tribulation] I will open my eyes [exercise divine power], I will strike every horse [the invading armies] with blindness'."

So we have the fact that the Lord will again eventually intervene, but there is going to be an interim before the Lord intervenes, before the Lord can come and strike. Before that time we are going to see crisis leadership.

The horses represent mechanised infantry in modern terminology but mechanised infantry usually moves rapidly behind armour. Here there is no such thing. There are ten passages that explain this verse. They have to do with supernatural darkness. Just before the small scratch army in Israel, the new army, is destroyed supernatural darkness occurs on that day, Isaiah 5:30, "He shall roar over it [Jerusalem] in that day, as one looks toward the land, behold, there is great darkness." The land is covered with a darkness that is so thick that light will not penetrate it, the same darkness that covered Jerusalem at the crucifixion of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Isaiah 13:9,10, "Behold, the day of the Lord is coming, cruel with fury and burning anger, to make the land desolate; and he will exterminate its sinners from it. For the stars of heaven and their constellations will not flash forth their light; the sun will be dark when it rises, and the moon will not reflect its light.

Isaiah 60:2, "For behold, darkness will cover the earth, the deep darkness over the armies; however the Lord will rise upon you, and his glory will appear to you."

But before that point is reached something has to happen, and something does happen. In Zechariah 12:5, "Then the governors" is incorrect. We have the Hebrew word aluph, and it means general officer, "of Judah." So the translation is: "Then the generals of Judah." These are not the generals who served in the apostate army of the dictator of the state of Israel, these are men who are prepared men and have suddenly come into focus. They are prepared spiritually and professionally. It is a reference to believers who are winners in the plan of God. At this crisis point these two officers come to the front. The crisis is designed to introduce God's men for the crisis, and God promotes them at this point.

"Then the generals of Judah will think in their right lobes, 'My encouragement [or strength, is the mature believers who] are the citizens of Jerusalem," in Jerusalem there are a large number of believers who have matured in the last half of the Tribulation. They have followed the plan of God and so they are going to make an army out of these citizens, "through Jehovah of the armies, their God and ours." "My strength [i.e. my troops, the only ones who will resist] is the citizens of Jerusalem through the Lord of the armies, their God and ours." "Their God and ours" means that this is an army of believers. It is made up of citizens, they are qualified to resist and fight, not because they are professional soldiers but because they will not surrender, they will not give in to the enemy.

Verse 6, “In that day I will make the generals of Judah like a pan of fire in kindling and a flaming torch among dry leaves, therefore they will consume on the right and on the left all the besieging troops. Consequently, the citizens of Jerusalem will live again in their own place in Jerusalem.” In other words, they will bring about peace.

Verse 6 is a very important verse. It describes generals pulling together a scratch army of the citizens of Jerusalem. Who are the citizens who have survived so far? These are the winners, the citizens who are believers, the great ones who are going to do the job. When it says in the King James version, “they shall devour”, it means to consume, and in this case it means to annihilate. They will consume or annihilate on the right hand or the left. They will put up a phenomenal fight to the end, resisting the invading armies. They will not be destroyed, they will actually deliver Jerusalem. Eventually, of course, they would have been overpowered by the sheer numbers against them. These generals did not give up, they knew that “if God be for us, who can be against us?” This was the attitude they took and in that day they stand in the crisis. Why will they stand in the crisis?

Historical events produce a need and leadership meets that need. In the case of Zechariah chapter 12 the need was for some type of military leadership to stand in the gap, to come forward and say, We will not give up, we will fight. That is what the need always is. Secondly, circumstances produce a market. In this case the circumstances produced a market for military leadership. The Jews were besieged by great armies and were in the process of being destroyed. In this desperate situation circumstances produced a market and leadership always supplies the market. This is not talking about natural leadership, this is about God using prepared men. Crisis sets the stage for that leadership. This leadership inspires people and the reason the citizens did so well is because the leadership is so great.

Matthew 24:15-28

We are going to pause long enough to see the two categories of survivors in the siege of Jerusalem: Category #1, civilians; category #2, military types. The interesting thing is that the Tribulation is divided into two parts. In the first three and a half years survival mandates all relate to obeying God’s Word, and survival is important because God has told us exactly how these people will survive. In the first half of the Tribulation believers in Israel are to flee. They are to run away; they are to move; they are not to stay in Jerusalem because they will be destroyed if they do. That is the mandate. But in the last half of the Tribulation the mandate from God is the antithesis: don’t move, stay and fight. The great overall lesson is the principle of flexibility. Timing is everything. You have to know that there is a time to fight and a time for peace, there is a time to run and there is a time to stand fast. Timing is very important in life and many believers cannot figure out timing and will never have time on their side, simply because they do not know enough about the Word of God to follow the timing of Bible doctrine.

There is, therefore, a principle which is absolutely necessary if we are going to glorify the Lord Jesus Christ. It is the principle of flexibility. Bible doctrine is totally inflexible as far as its content is concerned. Anything that comes from God is an absolute and all the principles and categories of Bible doctrine form into and crystallise into absolutes. But the application of these doctrines is something else. It requires an antithetical movement. You must be absolutely dogmatic about doctrine but you must be absolutely flexible in the application of doctrine.

We must learn to distinguish between the two categories of Jewish believers in the Tribulation. In the first half we have the command to flee to the high desert country — Edom, Moab and Ammon. In the last half of the Tribulation we have the command to fight. The interesting thing about the dispensation of the Church Age is that we do not have the same guide lines as they have in the Tribulation. The reason for that is because we are in the dispensation of the royal family of God, the Church Age, and God's plan for our life is the operational divine dynasphere. Therefore, we must function inside of the divine dynasphere. Our flexibility is not in the divine dynasphere, it is the application of doctrine from the divine dynasphere. When we apply doctrine to experience and to the circumstances of life we use different doctrines for different situations. By learning doctrine we make flexible applications, we do not have the same doctrine for every situation. We must have application from many circumstances of life and therefore we are not given specific mandates telling us when it is time to take a trip and when it is time to stay and fight. We are not given that type of information because we have the greatest system that God has ever decreed and ordained for believers of any dispensation, i.e.. the operational divine dynasphere. Therefore we are expected to learn doctrine at gate four, to develop momentum. From that momentum we are expected to use the many many applications and options that are open to us as circumstances in life vary.

We have been emphasising that God uses prepared people, and there is no preparation apart from perception and application of Bible doctrine. So we have noted the principle that you must have first in your scale of values Bible doctrine. The number one priority of your life must be doctrine and if it isn't you will always make the wrong decision. That is inevitable. If anything is more important to you than Bible doctrine then you've had it and you will never come up with the right application, you will always make the wrong application, and you will go into discipline by pain, and you will always wonder why, and you will always find an excuse, and you will learn to rationalise. Those who make wrong decisions rationalise the problems that come to them because of their bad decisions.

Matthew 24:15 — “Therefore when you see the abomination of desolation.” Literally, “the detestable idol of destruction.” It is an image that will be put up in the Jewish temple in the Tribulation. It is a facsimile of the beast dictator of the revived Roman empire, “which has been communicated through Daniel the prophet, set up in the holy place (let those who have doctrine make the application)” — what application?

There will be toward the middle of the Tribulation a very strange thing. Jews who are unbelievers will be worshipping under the religion of Judaism when all of a sudden the dictator of the Jewish state will forbid any further Judaism and compel the worship of an image and to become a part of international religion, the religion of the revived Roman empire. This is all part of the treaty between Israel and the united states of western Europe at that time. This treaty includes the acceptance of the religious system of the revived Roman empire. An idol will be put up in the temple and there will be all sorts of activity with regard to the new international religion. Once this happens and once an idol is placed inside the temple that is a very clearly-defined action which calls for believers to make an application: get out of Jerusalem. To stay in Jerusalem means to die and God has a plan for these believers who were saved in the first half of the Tribulation. It calls for them to be preserved during the last half of the Tribulation because they are going to be a cadre for the repopulation of the earth during the Millennium.

Verse 16, "then those same ones in Judea flee to the mountains [high desert country]," the high desert country is clearly defined in Daniel 11:41.

Verse 17, "let him who is on the roof not come down to pack needed things that are in his house," in other words, just get out.

Verse 18, "also let him who is working in the field not return to get his coat." Don't go home to get a coat, get out now. A quick decision must be made. This is the signal to get out now. Make your decisions ahead of time so all that you have to do is grab your rucksack and go.

Verse 19, "But woe to those who are pregnant," a historical crisis is very hard on pregnant women, "and to those who are nursing babies in those days!"

Verse 20, "Furthermore, pray that your flight does not occur during inclement weather, or on the Sabbath day."

This simply means that we have a mandate, and it is a very clearly-defined mandate, a mandate that explains in very simple detail for very simple people what they are to do. This ought to tell you something. Does it suddenly dawn on you that you are not a simple person, and that you live in a dispensation where nothing is very simple, and that you are not ever given such simple commands as this? Most of the decisions you have to make are very complicated and the principle on which they are based is very important: you and I as believers in this dispensation are required to put doctrine first. We are required to understand the Word of God. Our failure to understand the Word of God means that we make bad decisions, and our own bad decisions mean that we produce in ourselves terrible misery and unhappiness. It is our own fault, we are the products of our own bad decisions. The way of life for us is much more subtle and requires that we keep our priorities straight. The Word of God gives people in the future, Tribulational believers who are going to live under most unusual conditions, a much shorter version and a very clear version. They do not have the divine dynasphere, it goes to heaven at the Rapture, therefore they must have some very specific commands.

Verse 21, "For at that time [the last half of the Tribulation] there will be such great oppression [tribulation] such as has not occurred since the beginning of the kosmoj [human history: not the creation of the world, but the fall of man] until the present time, nor ever will occur again.”

Verse 22, “And unless those days [the last half of the Tribulation] had been cut short no human life would have been delivered,” Jesus Christ controls history and the fact that there will be millions of people alive at the second advent indicates the fact that not only does He control history but He gives very specific controls and mandates whereby people will survive, “but for the sake of those who are elected to privilege [born-again Jews living in Palestine who must be alive at the second advent and will be there for the fulfilment of the unconditional covenants to Israel] those days will be cut short.”

Verse 23, “At that time [after believing Jews have reached the high desert country].” The Jews who get up in that high desert country are now safe. God has a wall of fire around those Jewish believers. They have followed instructions implicitly. They move, as it were, into their own divine dynasphere; they are in a place of safety. These are civilians, they will not be doing any fighting during the Tribulation. However, after a great spiritual victory there is often great failure because a great spiritual victory tends to arrogance. Arrogance puts us into the cosmic system where we are vulnerable to defeat. Therefore some additional advice has to be given. Satan is going to set up a propaganda system designed to get people out of the high desert country, to leave the place that God has provided for them. They are only safe in that place. God does not provide safety for them anywhere else.

“At that time if anyone will say to you, ‘Here is the Messiah,’ or ‘There is the Messiah,’ do not believe that person.” One of the important things in life is not to be a sucker for false doctrine. Never allow culture to become your doctrine, get your doctrine from the Word. All the doctrine that we have comes from an entirely different culture. Many times people allow their culture to become their doctrine and therefore they get into false doctrine. These people are looking for the Messiah, they know they are supposed to stay there in the high desert country until He returns, they are safe where they are. But the propagandists can crank out sound, and they say, “Messiah has come, come on out of the mountains now, all is clear.” The command is: “Don’t you believe that person.”

The faith-rest drill is negative as well as positive. There are certain things you must believe vigorously, there are other things that you must reject vigorously. When the propaganda starts you have to reject it.

Verse 24, “For many false Messiahs, also false prophets, will appear on the scene,” there is always a real slick operator with a nice personality and a beautiful turn of words who will come along with his messages and try to persuade that the Lord has returned. In order that you “know” that they are from God they are going to perform miracles, “and will show great miracles and wonders, to deceive even believers, even those elected to privilege.” The issue of miracles is gone. The last legitimate miracle occurred when the canon of scripture was completed. Nothing is ever attested by miracles. Satan is in the miracle business and he uses miracles to deceive believers. God does not permit His messengers to perform miracles.

Verse 25, “Behold, I have told you in advance.” They have already been told these things; they already know these things. These are things they will have understood.

Verse 26, “Consequently, if they shall say to you, ‘Behold, he [Christ] is out in the desert,’ do not go out [do not leave the place of refuge], or, ‘Behold, he is in one of the inner rooms,’ do not believe that propaganda.” In other words there are going to be all kinds of persuasive devices just as everything is being done to persuade us as believers to get out of the divine dynasphere. God does not intend for any of us to live outside of the divine dynasphere. That is our mandate, our place of refuge.

Verse 27, “For just as lightning comes from the east, and flashes toward the west, so the coming of the Son of Man will be.” Just as lightning can be observed by all so the second advent will be observed by all. We have noted the fact that the entire earth is going to be covered with darkness. That darkness is to preserve those who are fighting, obeying their mandate, in the second half of the Tribulation. When Christ returns it is the only light that can penetrate that darkness, and so every one on the earth will see Christ returning, Revelation 1:7.

Verse 28, “Wherever there is a corpse the vultures will be gathered.” The “banquet of the vultures” will be the closing part of the Armageddon campaign. One way the believers can tell when the Lord has returned is that there will suddenly be vultures. We will be noting this later. Just as anyone can see lightning in the sky during a storm so anyone can see the second advent, and those who have fled into the high desert country are going to see millions of vultures feasting on carrion and human bodies. There is no problem to read the signs.

But it is not so simple for us. The question is: Can you read the signs? Do you have any flexibility of application? There is no flexibility in perception of doctrine, doctrine is dogmatic; but from a dogmatic base you have many options and many flexible attitudes which must be developed. You must learn flexibility. This is impossible unless you put virtue first. Virtue-first means humility. Without enforced and genuine humility you are never going to make it in the spiritual life. While some of these people will fail you also are going to have egg on your face unless you learn daily the doctrine of the Word of God.

Zechariah 14:1-9

The battles of the Armageddon campaign are going to be terminated dramatically by the second advent of our Lord Jesus Christ. We are now looking at the siege of Jerusalem and how it terminates with the second advent. Everything comes together at the second advent of Christ. The prophetic time designation is given in Zechariah 14:1 — “Behold, a day [the second advent of Christ] has come for the Lord.” The day of the Lord includes three spheres of eschatological doctrine. The Tribulation in the broader view is a part of the day of the Lord. The 24-hour day of the Lord is the second advent. Then, in the broader view, again, the Millennium is a part of the day of the Lord. So that sometimes, as in Joel, the day of the Lord includes all three of these. Sometimes it is just one day, the second advent, sometimes it is a part of the Tribulation, and sometimes it is a reference to the Millennium, and sometimes all three. The day of the Lord is to be distinguished from the day of Christ which is the Rapture of the Church and is not a 24-hour day, it takes a few seconds.

The next phrase in the King James version, “and thy spoil,” etc. should be translated “and your profit shall be distributed among you.” This is not talking about spoil, which has a battlefield connotation, but it is talking about blessing, the temporal blessings of mature believers. “Shall be distributed” means the judgment seat of Christ for Tribulational believers and Old Testament saints. It is the pual perfect of the verb chalaq. Chalaq in the qal stem means to be smooth or to divide, in the niph'al it means to be distributed, in the hithpa'el it means to divide among yourselves, in the piel it means to distribute. The pual is the passive of the piel and it should be translated “be distributed [or divided] among you.”

“Behold, a day has come and your profit shall be distributed among you,” a reference to winners in the Tribulation. At the end of the Tribulation they are winners.

Verse 2, “For I will assemble all nations against Jerusalem.” Note that, first of all, in verse one the subject is the second advent. The second advent divides believers into two categories, winners and losers. Before the second advent and during the adversities of the Tribulation winners in the Middle East receive certain blessings because God’s plan for the believer goes on in time of adversity.

We may be living in a time of no prosperity. It makes no difference, there is still prosperity for you as an individual. Occupation with Christ becomes the motivational factor, and having the capacity for love, the capacity for happiness, the capacity for blessing, there is fantastic blessing for believers. The wealth, riches, promotion, success, prosperity, are just as real in time of adversity as they are in time of prosperity.

The prophetic time designation for all of this is the second advent of Christ. In verse 2, therefore, what happens just before the second advent? What are winners and losers doing? “I [Jesus Christ who controls history] will assemble all nations against Jerusalem for warfare.” Jesus Christ controls history in three ways: direct control through the function of His divine essence; indirect control through the laws of divine establishment; permissive control which means permitting the angelic conflict to run its course in human history and permitting people to see the consequences of their own bad decisions. The presence of all nations in the Middle East at the end of the Tribulation is a combination of the first and the last principles of how Jesus Christ controls history. The Jews have an unusual opportunity. They have made very bad decisions at the end of the Tribulation and the consequences of those tribulations are obvious to them. They have the opportunity of seeing them. It is always, therefore, a wonderful thing to learn of your own bad decisions. The Middle East is always going to be a hot spot and, once again, the Jews in the middle of the Tribulation under their very bad leadership, the dictator of the Jewish stage of Israel, made very bad decisions which resulted in armies massing in their country.

When it says, "I will assemble all nations against Jerusalem for warfare" it is referring to four power spheres: the king of the south, the king of the north, the kings of the east, the king of the west. They all have troops in the Middle East.

The situation is described in Joel 3:9-12.

Verse 9, "Proclaim this among the nations: Prepare for war; mobilise the mighty men! Let the soldiers assemble, let them invade!

Verse 10, Israel is told to prepare for war but they didn't do so. They were listening to the prophets saying, 'Peace, peace,' but the Word of God says, 'There is no peace.' They couldn't see the war coming. So: "Beat your ploughshares into swords," they should have been building up their military. This is a mandate from the Word of God, "And your pruning hooks into spears; let the weak say, 'I will enlist'."

Verse 11, "Lend aid and come, all you surrounding nations, and gather there. Bring down, O Lord, the mighty ones." Only the Lord could help them. They had made so many mistakes they attracted every army into the world into their area.

Verse 12, "Let all the nations be aroused and come unto the valley of Jehoshaphat, for there I will sit to judge all surrounding nations." A lot of nations made a decision to invade the state of Israel and the Lord will judge them for it.

Continuing in Zechariah 14:2, "therefore the city will be captured," the city would be captured when the king of the north comes down for the first time on his way to Africa, but later when he comes back part of it will be captured again. What happens when a nation is exposed to invading armies? "their homes will be plundered," there is no respect for privacy or property, and there is no freedom, "and their women raped, and half of the city will depart into slavery, but," and after that conjunction we have the believers that we studied in Zechariah chapter twelve, "the remnant of the people [believers who are in Jerusalem] will not be cut off from the city."

When it says "half of the city will depart into slavery" it is referring to the losers. Even though losers stay alive they stay alive for one reason only: to be miserable. There will be born again believers among those slaves. Losers always live miserable lives, yet there is no excuse for it, for every believer as of the moment of personal faith in Jesus Christ was designed to be a winner. So we have in verse 2 plunder, rape, violence, and slavery. This is what happens to the losers. This is why the laws of divine establishment emphasise the military as the guardians of human freedom. All freedom in a nation is purchased on the battlefield, never at the conference table. Politicians cause wars; soldiers bring peace; that is the principle of Bible doctrine.

"but the remnant of the people," these are the believers who grew in grace in a very short time and are living in the Middle East at the end of the Tribulation. They have less than three years to advance to maturity, and they make it. They have their priorities straight. They are almost fanatical about Bible doctrine and you have to be that way at times. There are two kinds of fanatics: people who are arrogantly fanatic; those who are fanatical about having a right scale of values and refusing to depart from it; a grace fanaticism that is necessary when the pressure becomes great.

At some time or another people are going to do everything they can to diminish your attitude toward Bible doctrine. At that point you just have to stand up in your own “nasty” personality, be a fanatic and say no, I’m going to stick with doctrine.

This is the reason why they have the command to fight in the last half of the Tribulation. In each segment of the Tribulation we have seen that survival depends on obeying the mandates of that section. In the first half of the Tribulation it was “flee”; in the last half of the Tribulation it was “fight.” All the Tribulational martyrs in the Middle East are not necessarily reversionistic. Some took a stand for doctrine, were fanatical, and that is why they died. And they died honourably. A lot of believers are losers, so you always have to distinguish this fact because winners and losers are dying at the same time.

So, “the remnant of the people will not be cut off from the city.” They will stand fast; they will obey the command.

Zechariah chapter 13 tells us in two verses just what this is all about, verses 8,9: “And it shall come to pass in all the land ... that two thirds of it will be cut off and perish; one third will be left behind. And I will bring the one third [believers who are winners] through the fire [the siege of Jerusalem, the Armageddon campaign], refine them as silver is refined, and test them as gold is tested.” And how will they pass the test? “They will call on my name, and I will answer them; I will say, ‘They are my people,’ and they will say, ‘The Lord is my God.’ ” They are delivered, and that is exactly what it is saying at the end of chapter fourteen, verse two.

Verse 3, “Then the Lord will go forth [advance] and fight against those nations,” were it not for the intervention of the Lord none of them would have survived. But they all survive, same principle as Isaiah 63:1-6, “Like his fighting on the day of battle.” This verse refers to direct intervention in history. Jesus Christ will personally slaughter all of the enemy and that explains the vulture banquet at the end of Revelation chapter nineteen.

Verse 4, “Consequently on that day [the second advent] his feet shall stand on the Mount of Olives,” the Mount of Olives is the place for the second advent, “which lies in front of Jerusalem on the east; and the Mount of Olives will split in its middle from east to west forming a great valley, therefore half of the mountain will recede toward the north and the other half toward the south.” So there is an east-west valley which becomes important because it is the means of establishing Jerusalem as a sea port.

The path of this valley is reminiscent of the Red Sea. In the Red Sea the Lord Jesus Christ provided a path through the water; in this case He provides a path through the mountain and apparently the Jews are backed up against the east and are holding out there, and this valley gives them their avenue of escape so the Lord can deal with those nations. Just as Jesus Christ, then, parted the Red Sea making an escape from Pharaoh’s chariot army, so He will split the Mount of Olives with the result that another escape hatch is provided. The result is the formation of the great east-west valley similar to the path of the Red Sea running in the same direction from west to east.

Up until this time the Jewish believers in the siege of Jerusalem have been fighting. Now they are commanded to retire in verse 5, "And you will flee," the qal perfect from the verb nus. Nus has a number of related meanings: to flee, to run, to retreat or to retire. Here it should be translated, "And you shall retreat [or retire]." It is going to be done in an orderly manner, "with the result that you will escape through the valley of the mountain."

The escape of the believers clears the deck for the annihilation of the armies besieging Jerusalem. When the Lord Jesus Christ comes back something is going to happen. The armies of the kings of the east are in the valley of Esdraelon. The king of the north with his great army is invading Jerusalem, moving in from the west and south west. The Arabs are in the Negev and in Edom. All of these troops which have come to take this prize in the Middle east are going to be rapidly organised by Satan and they will all turn to try to fight the Lord and the army that comes with Him. That is Satan's last gasp in the last world war in history.

The next phrase: "for the valley of the mountain will reach unto Azel," in the time of Zechariah Azel was a well known town near Jerusalem. The only trouble is that Azel didn't survive; Jerusalem did. It was on the eastern side of the Mount of Olives and that is all we know about it. This passage again explains the Millennial passages that talk about Jerusalem being a sea port in the Millennium. Such a valley would create a low place east of Jerusalem and that would cause the Dead Sea and the Mediterranean to meet forming a body of water flowing into the old Jordan river bed and then into the Red Sea.

"you will escape just as you have escaped before [in the face of] the earthquake in the days of Uzziah king of Judah," the greatest earthquake apparently the Jews ever had was in the days of Uzziah and they escaped then because a valley was formed. Cf. Amos 1:1.

Revelation 11:13, "And in that hour there was a great earthquake." That earthquake had to do with the killing of the two witnesses, Moses and Elijah. Seven thousand people were killed in the earthquake. That is judgment by death. They had already had their crisis evangelism.

No sooner has the shock of the earthquake concluded but the armies of the king of the north appear. We have two earthquakes then. When the king of the north is approaching Jerusalem he is slowed down by an earthquake. That earthquake is to destroy the east side so that it makes good field fortifications. The believers use the rubble for fortifying that part of Jerusalem and they resist. The army of the king of the north comes in and takes two thirds of the city. Then, when the Lord comes and part of the Mount of Olives goes north and part goes south, there is this valley and this is the way that they will retire from the scene leaving the battle to the Lord to annihilate the enemy.

“Then the Lord God [Jesus Christ] will come [second advent], and all the saints with him.” Who are all the saints? They form two categories. Group A: believers in resurrection bodies. During the Tribulation these who are winners have been receiving their decorations, they have been presented in the court of heaven. The losers are with them. Group B: Old Testament saints. They have just received their resurrection bodies; the Church Age believers have had theirs for seven years. These come back with our Lord Jesus Christ.

Verse 6, this is the day of darkness which preserved the lives of the believers. “And it will come to pass in that day that there will be no light; the beautiful light from the stars will be shut down.” The darkness is so thick that light cannot penetrate it.

Verse 7, “But it will be a unique day, the same day will be known to the Lord, not day, not night;” because the earth is locked in with this darkness, “now it shall come to pass at the time of evening that suddenly it will be light,” the second advent.

Verse 8, “Then it shall come to pass in that day [the Millennium] that the living waters will flow out from Jerusalem, half of them toward the eastern sea [Dead Sea] and the other half toward the western sea [Mediterranean]; in summer and in winter it shall be.” There will always be a port there in summer and in winter. Ezekiel 47:1 talks about this when it says in the middle of the verse, “and water was flowing down from under the right side of the temple, from south of the altar.” Joel 3:18 also describes it.

The great supply of water in the desert in the Middle East is also something that will occur at this time. Psalm 46:

Verse 1, “God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.” When is God a help? Now!

Verse 2, “Therefore we will not fear, though the earth should change, and though mountains slip into the middle of the sea;”

Verse 3, “though its waters roar and foam, though mountains quake at its swelling pride.”

Verse 4, “There is a river whose streams make glad the city of God [Jerusalem], the holy dwelling places of the most high.” Jerusalem, capital of the world in the Millennium.

Verse 5, “God is in the midst of her, she will not be moved; God will help her when the morning dawns [second advent].”

Verse 6, “The nations made an uproar [the last world war of history], the kingdoms tottered; he raised his voice, the earth melted.”

Verse 7, “The Lord of the armies is with us [second advent]; The God of Jacob is our fortification.”

Verse 8, "Come, behold the works of the Lord, who has wrought desolation upon the earth."

Verse 9, What is He going to do? He is going to terminate all wars at the second advent. This is the second advent passage. "He makes wars to cease to the end of the earth; he breaks the bow and cuts the spear in two; he burns the chariots with fire."

Verse 10, What is the application? "Relax, and know that I am God; I will be exalted among the nations, I will be exalted in the earth." That isn't the Church Age, that is the second advent.

Zechariah 14:9, "Then the Lord [Jesus Christ] will become king over the entire earth; in that day [the Millennium] the Lord will be unique, because his title is unique." Our Lord has a unique title, that is why the Church Age is a unique age and why in this dispensation believers are royal family of God.

Isaiah 63:1-9

In this last world war of history there are three outstanding things according to the eschatological doctrines that we have studied. There is a great deal of demon activity, there is a tremendous amount of human activity, and there is divine activity which terminates the entire war.

Isaiah 63:1-9 is another view of terminating this world war. It begins literally, "Who is this one coming from Edom, with clothes stained bright red with blood from Bozrah ..." The question indicates the fact that the Arabs were also involved in this Middle East campaign. In fact, they started the ball rolling, according to Daniel 11:40. They actually attacked Israel.

We do not know when the Tribulation is going to occur. Before the Tribulation can occur there must be the resurrection of the Church which terminates the Church Age. However, the Arabs will never change their attitude toward the Jews and right down to the second advent they will be antagonistic against Israel. In the area of the southern part of the state of Israel there will be a great battle, the battle of Idoumea in which the Arabs and the Jewish army are fighting it out. The Lord Jesus Christ comes to deliver that Jewish army. In doing so He takes a stand once again. Jesus Christ is the God of Israel.

Edom is the homeland of two Arab groups, the Edomites and the Nabataeans. Today modern Edom belongs to Saudi Arabia and Jordan primarily, but it is Arab country. The Arabs, of course, always take advantage of historical unrest and they have since there have been Arabs in the Middle East. The Edomite Arabs began their antagonism toward Israel when they refused to permit the Jews of the Exodus generation to pass through their land on their way to their own land, Numbers 20:18ff. The Edomite Arabs were in a great war with King Saul, 1 Samuel 14:47. David defeated the Edomite Arabs and annihilated most the male population at that time, 1 Kings 11:15,16. In BC 875 the Arabs of Edom formed a league with Ammon and Moab who are also Arab peoples and they invaded Judah in the time of Jehoshaphat. The invaders were miraculously destroyed in the valley of Berachah, 2 Chronicles 20:22. The Edomite Arabs were successful in revolting against Judah under King Jehoram and maintained their independence for half a century, 2 Chronicles 21:8. While Amaziah carried out successful campaigns against the Edomite Arabs, 2 Chronicles 25, the Jews were never able to subjugate them after that, and when Nebuchadnezzar administered the fifth cycle of discipline in BC 586 the Edomite army followed the Chaldeans and slaughtered every Jew they could find. This slaughter of the Jews is mentioned specifically in Psalm 137:7, "Remember, O Lord, against the sons of Edom, the day of Jerusalem, who said, 'Destroy it, destroy it, to its very foundation.'" "Because of this Arab treachery Edomite Arabs were denounced by several of the prophets: Jeremiah in chapter 49:17 and Lamentations 4:21; by Ezekiel in chapter 25:13,14; by Amos and by Obadiah. As a reward for helping the Chaldeans against Judah Nebuchadnezzar gave the Edomite Arabs all the land between Judah and Egypt. Their reward didn't last long because another tribe of Arabs descended from Ishmael, the Nabataeans, came in and destroyed or intermarried with them. For 400 years the Edomite Arabs continued until the Maccabaeans finally subdued them. John Hircanus conquered the Edomite Arabs. He was the grandson of one of the Maccabaeans, Matthias. However, the conquest would give rise to an Edomite Arab whose progeny would play a leading role in the political scene of the Levant for two centuries. His name was Antipater and he was the father of Herod the Great. Herod the Great was an Edomite Arab and he exterminated the Hasmonaean dynasty of the Jews and under Roman sponsorship took over the kingdom of the Jews.

There will never be a cessation between Israel and the Arabs. Bozrah was the capital of Edom in the time of the writing of Isaiah and, therefore, the capital of the Edomite Arabs. The question in Isaiah 63:1 is a reference to the Lord Jesus Christ who has just slaughtered the Edomite Arabs. In Revelation 19:13, "And he was clothed with a robe dipped in blood: and his name is called The Word of God," a reference to the Lord Jesus Christ. In verses 15 and 21 of chapter nineteen we have a detailed description of that great slaughter. Isaiah also anticipates it in Isaiah 34:5,6.

The next phrase in Isaiah 63:1 is "the one who is royal in his dress," the Lord Jesus Christ is being described, "marching in the greatness of his power? 'It is I who speak in righteousness, I am the one mighty to cause deliverance'." This is the Lord Jesus Christ identifying Himself prophetically. The principle is that He slaughters these Arabs from the standpoint of His perfect virtue. As eternal God He has perfect virtue; as true humanity he has perfect virtue. Note that virtue is related with the slaughter of the enemy.

Verse 2, "Why is your clothing red, and your royal garments as one treading the winepress?" It is a rhetorical question as far as Isaiah is concerned but it becomes necessary to understand that the first function of our Lord Jesus Christ at the second advent is the destruction of many evil armies, and He breaks all records in the slaughter of these armies.

Verse 3, in the answer given, our Lord speaks: “ ‘I have treaded down the winepress alone’,” our Lord is followed by three great armies, an army of angelic creatures who have thrown out of heaven in the middle of the Tribulation Satan’s great army, the believers of this dispensation who are royal family of God in resurrection bodies, and then the Old Testament saints and Tribulational martyrs in their resurrection bodies. And all of these armies follow our Lord (Revelation 19) but none of them fight. And so the word “alone” is the key to understanding grace. God’s policy in His plan for our lives is grace, and note who does the work. He does it alone, He does it without help. Three passages summarise the slaughter of the Arabs and the other invaders of the future: Revelation 14:19,20; 19:13,15; Isaiah 34:2-6. — “consequently, from the people who accompany me there is no one doing the fighting with me. I have treaded them down in my anger, I have trampled them in my wrath; so that their blood has been splashed on my clothes, therefore I have stained all of my clothes with their blood.”

These first three verses indicate the principle that the Arabs here, like all of the invading armies, are criminals. Evil always expresses itself through violence. The principle is: God meets violence with violence. You cannot stop crime and warfare by disarmament. To disarm a nation invites disaster and in the devil’s world peace is maintained by a strong military establishment. These verses describe the great slaughter of the Arab Armageddon and in this way the Arab problem is finally resolved by our Lord Jesus Christ who controls history now and who controls history then. This is not a brief for us to hate the Arabs; we are not to hate anyone.

Verse 4, “ ‘For the day of retribution was in my right lobe’,” the third paragraph of the Abrahamic covenant says that anyone who enters into any form of anti-Semitism is going to die for it, and this is the justice being administered here. The Arabs invade under the principle of anti-Semitism, “ ‘and the year of my redemption [of Israel] has come’.” Israel will be redeemed in the sense of once again being restored as a client nation. This is historical restoration. Not only does Jesus Christ control history but at the second advent He is going to rectify the evils and injustices of history resulting from Satan’s rulership of this world. One of these injustices filled with evil is the Arab persecution and antagonism toward Israel. Remember that while both Arab and Jew are Semitic; the word “anti-Semitism” means hostility toward the Jew. History must run its course under cosmos diabolicus while the royal family is being formed during the Church Age and the Age of Israel is being completed in the Tribulation. Therefore the day of restitution cannot occur until the Church Age is completed by the Rapture and the Age of Israel is completed by the Tribulation. That is the day of restitution in the heart of our Lord. The second advent of Christ is the time of reckoning, the time of judgment on the Arab nations; it is the time of the Arabs Armageddon. Israel will be delivered from all her enemies at the second advent. This is the purpose of Armageddon and of the baptism of fire which follows. The Millennial reign of Jesus Christ will terminate all anti-Semitism in history and the Jew will then become again a blessing to all.

Verse 5, “ ‘So I looked around for assistance but there was no one helping me, consequently I was shocked, however my arm [Jesus Christ] has delivered me’,” those Jewish believers fighting in that south eastern corner of the state of Israel were helped by the Lord, “ ‘and my righteous indignation [virtue] sustained me’ .”

Verse 6, “ ‘Therefore in my anger I will trample their armies [the Arab army of Edom] and in my fury I will make them drunk and I will cause their life blood to pour out on the land’ .” That is deliverance.

Verse 7, the response of the believers to this statement of our Lord. “I will be caused to remember.” This is the Hebrew word zakar. In the qal stem it simply means to remember, in the niphal stem it means to be remembered, but in the hiphil stem it is causative: I will be motivated to remember. Question: Do you remember the Lord? Who is first in your thoughts? You will never be motivated to remember until you understand doctrine. If you do not know doctrine you cannot remember the Lord. These people were motivated to remember the Lord in their deliverance. They were delivered from a disastrous military situation. Had the Lord not intervened they would have been wiped out. They were motivated to remember by the grace activity of the Lord — “the grace of the Lord, according to all which he has benefited us, even the abundance of good to the house of Israel, with which he has benefited them according to the riches of his grace.”

Verse 8, “Consequently, he [Jesus Christ] said, ‘Truly, they are my people [Jews who are born-again], sons who will not prove false’ . Therefore he became their deliverer.”

Verse 9, “In all their affliction [anti-Semitism] he was afflicted, therefore the angel of his presence delivered them; in his love and in his grace he sustained them; and helped them throughout history.”

The subjective person in life is full of questions about why he is there, why his circumstances, what is the origin of everything? Why have the human race on the earth? If God knew ahead of time everything that was going to happen, why did he let it happen? This is subjectivity, and subjectivity to the point of disorientation to one’s circumstances. The objective person in life recognises he is in a set of circumstances and takes it from there. He doesn’t question why, he learns how the plan of God operates in his circumstances. This is why subjective people are inevitably arrogant. They emphasise themselves above the circumstances of life and anything else that might be a source of inquiry to them. Consequently the arrogance of subjectivity has a great deal of difficulty in learning God’s plan and God’s system. But even for those who are subjective, as well as those who are objective in the Christian life, occasionally we do get an explanation as to the whys and wherefores of life.

We have found such an explanation in the past few chapters we have been studying in the book of Revelation. In one word the explanation is protocol. The protocol of heaven is a system of divine order which guarantees happiness and blessing forever for the believer who is a winner. The protocol of heaven belongs to every elect angel; it also belongs to every saved person of the human race who resides in heaven. The protocol of heaven is a source of both divine blessing and, at the same time, divine judgment on earth during the course of human history. The protocol of heaven as the source of divine blessing and happiness comes from the order and system of God's plan for the believer in Jesus Christ. Therefore, the protocol of heaven as the source of divine judgment originates from the interaction of elect angels functioning under divine mandates. All divine mandates originate from the justice of God, one half of divine holiness — the other half, of course, being God's perfect righteousness.

Protocol is defined as a rigid long-established code prescribing complete deference to superior rank and strict adherence to due order of precedence and precisely correct procedure. Protocol, therefore, recognises the principle of authority under the laws of divine establishment. Protocol recognises and obeys authority, consequently protocol requires virtue for its existence. Therefore we go back once more to the premise: the fact that the objective person is a virtuous person because of his humility, his teachability; whereas the subjective person always wants to know what causes this and what causes that, and is always disoriented to his own circumstances or very dissatisfied with them. Protocol is related to basic virtue in life: enforced and genuine humility. Basic virtue demands recognition of authority and orientation to whatever circumstances may exist. Protocol is related to motivational virtue through the principle of the believer's worship of God; and protocol is related to functional virtue through the modus operandi of virtue morality rather than morality by arrogance or self-righteousness. Self-righteous people are subjective, they emphasise their own personal modus operandi about everything else in life, and they consider themselves totally superior because they are not like others. They are the Pharisees of the 20th century.

The fact that protocol is a part of God's plan, God's policy, and God's system for believers on earth, emphasises the conclusion that protocol exists in heaven. God has also established a system of protocol in heaven for all creatures. Power cannot compete with divine power. Man's power, angelic power, will never compete with heaven. There is no competition of power in heaven, heaven is a place of perfect happiness. The perfect happiness of the elect angels and the perfect happiness of believers who have died and gone to heaven is a happiness based upon order, protocol, authority, humility. The basis for our study of protocol in heaven was the fourteenth chapter of Revelation, beginning in verse fifteen, so that we have now become familiar with the general concept of protocol.

We have learned from all of this that protocol without virtue is ritual without reality, for there are a number of forms of protocol on earth which are related to arrogance, related to ritual, and have no meaning as far as divine truth is concerned. The categories of angelic aristocracy emphasise to us the fact that one of the reasons for perfect future happiness in heaven is the fact that everyone is related to the reality of heaven through protocol. Protocol and God's plan for the believer, therefore, must become a reality on earth for God has found a way to bring heaven to earth for believers who are positive to doctrine. Protocol, therefore, is the key to the plan of God, God's system. Protocol is related to the priorities of the plan of God. Protocol is found in God's plan under the principle of mandates first; they are found in God's system under the principle of virtue first; it is found in God's purpose under the principle of Christ first; and it is found in God's policy under the principle of grace first; it is found in God's objective: momentum first — becoming a winner; it is found in God's authority under the principle of doctrine first. God's plan for the believer in time has protocol. Protocol functions in three categories of virtue, and therefore the system of virtue-first. Unless you and I as believers possess virtue from the divine system we will be troubled and unhappy all of our lives as Christians on this earth because we are minus protocol. There is no protocol apart from virtue and there is no virtue in the Christian life apart from gate three of the divine dynasphere. Without humility you will never orient to the circumstances of life; without enforced and genuine humility you will always be saying, Why? why? why? Yet eventually positive volition persistence always gets the answers as to why. But the little smart person always wants to know all of the whys at one time.

No one can be objective and oriented to his circumstances, be they humble circumstances or exalted, without virtue. Virtue has as its object authority. Without recognition and submission to authority it is impossible to be oriented to any set of circumstances in life, and therefore it is impossible to be happy. Happiness comes with virtue; virtue comes with humility; humility orients to the authority of your circumstances. Children in the home have the authority of parents, the wife has the authority of the husband, all of us have the authority of establishment in government. So it is with God's plan for your life. God has a plan for your life and that plan only guarantees you happiness and blessing if you follow the protocol of the plan. The protocol of the plan is the system in the plan, and the system in the plan demands daily adherence to Bible doctrine, demands the humility enforced and genuine. Without enforced and genuine humility there is no recognition of the protocol of life.

In the fall of Satan, the first sin among creatures, Lucifer the son of the morning was the highest ranking cherub. He was the greatest of all creatures, he had the greatest beauty, the greatest personality. Satan's sin was based on his failure to recognise protocol: he did not recognise the protocol of heaven. In his arrogance he rejected the protocol of heaven and Satan became the first sinner when he said, "I will be like the most high God". So following the pattern of arrogance — Satan's pattern, Satan's subjectivity — it is fascinating to note that the most beautiful creature that ever lived was Lucifer the son of the morning. He was very subjective and he was very arrogant about it all. He didn't ask the origin of things; he knew that, and knowing the origin of his own existence he defied that origin, he rejected that authority. In heaven he by-passed protocol and in so doing he destroyed himself and at least one third of all the angelic creatures. In the angelic conflict that followed he learned that he could not overcome the protocol of heaven. Satan never has a happy day even though he has the greatest power of any creature on this earth. He is a totally miserable person.

God's plan functions on protocol, protocol in three categories of virtue in the divine dynasphere. For the reason that believers are ignorant of protocol they have failed in the spiritual life. The system of authority for protocol in heaven is a very simple one. God the Father is the authority for protocol in heaven; God the Father is the author of the divine plan for the angelic creatures and for the human race. God the Son is the winner in that plan for the human race, He is the saviour of the world. God the Holy Spirit is both the revealer and the power of that plan.

Certain elect angels are involved in the administration of God's plan. Certain members of the human race have received from the grace of God gifts, authority and responsibility in that plan. The chain of command, therefore, is very important. And when any believer in his circumstances in life loses his objectivity, ignores and violates the chain of command of protocol, he is a disoriented person and very unhappy. There is no happiness in life apart from protocol; there is no happiness in heaven apart from protocol. The protocol of heaven has been attacked but that attack lost out in the prehistoric angelic conflict. Protocol on earth is now under attack and we are a part of the warfare, the extension of the angelic conflict to human history.

Remember, therefore, that in the prehistoric angelic conflict protocol in heaven was the object of attack. Now that that has been settled protocol on earth is the object of attack. Therefore we read every days of certain things that have happened, certain criticisms of the government made by the press, which it is free to do, but certain criticisms violate the protocol of government. When the protocol of government is violated then there is misery for everyone in the national entity. So protocol becomes a major issue in life.

We are studying the seven last judgements in history at the end of the Tribulation. These judgements come from the protocol of heaven and they are designed to bring happiness to the human race through the policy of grace. Even judgment has that purpose. The protocol of heaven in the administration of these seven last judgements of the Tribulation has been noted. We have noted in Revelation 14:15 that God the Father delegated these judgements to God the Son, under the principle of John 5:22ff, all judgment has been delegated to the Son since His resurrection and ascension. So we find God the Father in the heavenly temple sending the mandate for the delegation for the seven last plagues, and we find Him using one of the highest ranking angels out of the angelic conflict. He uses as a messenger an officer of arms. God the Son as the judge exercises the mandate of God the Father. Then we saw a chain of command in protocol by which it is handled. We saw, for example, that the protocol results in seven last plagues of the Tribulation. We see a judgment squad emerging, it is made up of wingless aristocracy in the angelic college of heralds, the pur sui vant messengers. In Revelation 14:17 we saw a pur sui vant officer, a cherub-ranked angel who took command of the execution squad. We saw the pur sui vant officer commanding this squad in chapter fifteen. In the meantime the phrase "another angel" in 14:18 is used for the highest-ranking angelic creature in the college of heralds. The king of arms comes from the altar of imprecatory prayers with a confirmatory order of execution. The confirmatory order of execution in 14:18 relates imprecatory prayers of the Tribulation martyrs to the divine order sent through the chain of command. Next comes one of the angelic heralds called "living creatures" in 15:7. He is the one who issues the bowl judgements to each one of the execution squad. Then the pur sui vant officer who went on standby in verse 17 takes command of that squad in 14:19. The execution or judgment squad of seven pur sui vant messengers goes into action in chapter sixteen.

Chapter 16:17 — we find the execution once more of judgment coming from the protocol of heaven. That means that these judgements have a purpose, and that purpose is happiness. The protocol in the angelic college of heralds leads us to the conclusion that while each one of these judgements increases in severity each one of the judgements has a grace purpose from God. So blessing from God has a purpose; judgment from God has a purpose. Blessing from God comes from the protocol of heaven; judgment from God comes from the protocol of heaven. In connection with that we have two categories of judgment which are pertinent in this passage. First we have judgment by pain, and secondly we have judgment by death. There is also eternal judgment but that is really not pertinent here at the moment though it certainly plays a part later on.

The judgment of verse 17 will be the last of the Tribulational judgements. The seventh pur sui vant messenger involved is also going to become a great Bible teacher in chapter seventeen. We begin verse 17 with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, "Then." With this we have the nominative singular subject from the numeral e(bdomoj, "the seventh." It refers to the seventh member of the execution squad, the pur sui vant messenger from the angelic college of heralds, "Then the seventh [angel]."

Then we have the aorist active indicative from the verb e)kqew, "pour out." This is a judgment by death and it will be the death of all religion on the earth. The aorist tense is a constative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety. It gathers up into one entirety a succession of divine judgements which occur just before the second advent. It includes natural disasters, personal judgements against the ecumenical religion, and an unparalleled upheaval of land mass on planet earth. This is a combination of judgment by pain and judgment by death. All of it is designed to judge, to destroy, to discredit all of the world religions. The active voice: the seventh pur sui vant messenger is the one who produces the action of the verb as a member of the execution squad. He is the angel in chapter 17:1ff who will be teaching John about world religion, international religion of the Tribulation. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of eschatological reality at the end of the Tribulation.

Once again, we have the accusative singular direct object from the noun fialh and it refers here to the seventh bowl judgment which is a combination of grenade fragments, all of which are designed to judge international religion. This grenade is said to be poured out in the air, the preposition e)pi plus the accusative of the noun a)er, referring to the atmospheric band around the earth. In Ephesians 2:2 Satan is called the ruler of the kingdom of air, and it is the same noun. In other words, the seventh bowl judgment is directed at Satan's kingdom throughout planet earth, especially religion.

Translation: "Then the seventh angel poured out his bowl on the air [on the kingdom of Satan]."

This is the final category of intensive judgment administered prior to the second advent of Jesus Christ. It includes numerous judgements throughout the world which are contemporaneous with the last great world war of history. They are generally directed toward ecumenical religion throughout the world and include great natural disturbances. The natural disturbances include judgment by pain as a part of crisis evangelism as well as judgment by death to remove the influence of religion from the earth. The divine declaration regarding this is given, starting with the word kai, "and," followed by megaj which means here “magnificent” and the noun phrase meaning voice, “and a magnificent voice.” It is the voice of God the Father, author of the divine plan.

Next we have a verb, the aorist active indicative of exerxomai, and it means to come out of the temple. It was the voice of God the Father from the temple who sent the mandate to God the Son in chapter 14:15. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the voice of God the Father from the temple produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for eschatological reality. Then we have ek plus naoj, “from the temple,” followed by a second preposition, apo plus qronoj, “from the throne,” and then the present active participle of legw, all of which is translated, “Then the seventh pur sui vant messenger poured out his bowl [the seventh plague] on the air; and a magnificent voice came out of the temple from the throne and said...” The descriptive present tense of legw means that this is a very dramatic thing which is going to be said. What is said is one word, the perfect active indicative of the verb ginomai. It means to become, to be, and we translate it here, “it is done.” It has been accomplished. The perfect tense is the intensive perfect emphasising a finished product. When special attention is directed toward the result of the completed action stress on the existent fact is intensified. This is the Greek way of emphasising the fact that a thing is, therefore the idiom is translated best by the English present, “it is done, completed.” The active voice: the seventh last plague or bowl judgment of the last half of the Tribulation produces the action, the completion of God’s judgment of the earth at the end of the Tribulation. The declarative indicative mood is for a statement of future fact at the end of the Tribulation.

Note that the first heaven or atmosphere is related to the earth, and Satan rules the earth, including the atmospheric band around the earth, according to Ephesians 2:2. He is the prince of the atmospheric band around the earth.

Both warning and administrative judgements have been administered to the people of the earth, warning judgements: the seven seals, the seven trumpets; intensive judgements: the seven last plagues. There is nothing left but the principle of one more time with evangelism, one more opportunity for everyone to accept Christ as saviour and avoid the terrible eternal judgment of the lake of fire.

This phrase in a very different form is given at the cross. At the cross our Lord Jesus Christ used the verb telew. He used the same perfect tense: it has been completed in the past with the result that it stands completed forever. The Lord Jesus Christ completed everything at the cross that will ever be needed for salvation. What this means is that the omniscience of God the Father put into the computer of divine decrees every personal sin ever committed in the human race, so that in the fullness of time our Lord Jesus Christ went to the cross and was judged for those sins. When that judgment was all finished our Lord said, Tetelestai, it has been finished in the past with the result that it stands finished forever. Now, in our verse, for judgment we have a different verb. We have the same morphology, the same perfect tense, “it has been accomplished, it is done.” All the judgements of the Tribulation are completed with the seventh bowl judgment.

Verse 18 — the third and final grace warning. The aorist middle indicative of the verb ginomai begins the verse, “Then there were.” The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety and indicates that this fulfills the concept of grace before judgment. No one has ever been judged as an individual, no one has ever been judged collectively until first of all there was some kind of a warning from God. The declarative indicative represents the verbal action from the viewpoint of its eschatological reality. This continues into the Tribulation and right down to the second advent.

We have studied before the previous warnings, the phrases, “flashings of lightning.” The word “noises” which should be “sounds,” and “thunders.” So the corrected translation is: “Then there were flashes of lightnings and sounds and thunders; also there was a great earthquake, such as had not been since mankind came to be on planet earth, so great and so powerful.”

Apart from the concept of warning of the final judgment of the seventh bowl before the second advent this is a statement with great doctrinal implications. The greatness of this earthquake is compared with all other earthquakes in history as being much greater. It will undoubtedly take a lot of lives, indicating the fact that this is also judgment by death as well as judgment by pain. Not only is it judgment by pain whereby those who survive — and there will be many unbelievers who survive to blaspheme and to reject Christ as saviour in some cases; in other cases to believe in Christ — but there will also be those who are taken, and those who are taken by death are simply being removed as a part of the cancer so that man can continue to live in the last days of the Tribulation before the second advent. When our Lord returns to the earth there will be many millions of people, both believers and unbelievers, who have survived it all. The instability of the earth’s surface is a reminder of the instability of mankind at the end of the Tribulation.

In verse 19 we have the judgment of cities and of religion. The passage actually begins by pointing out to us that certain cities are going to be removed from the earth as far as their construction is concerned, not their general location. The first city that is mentioned is Jerusalem. “Then the great city [Jerusalem] was split,” but that isn’t what the Greek says. The Greek uses the aorist active indicative of ginomai again. Ginomai is one of the verbs to be and generally translated “to become.” It means to be split or literally, to come to be split in three parts. It was because of this that many of the believers were able to hold out in Jerusalem, it formed a natural fortification. “Then the great city [Jerusalem] came to be split in three parts.” Zechariah 14:4,5 mentions a similar earthquake which occurs at the second advent. Earthquakes are always related to divine judgment on mankind, as per Isaiah 29:6. They are therefore very prominent during the time of the Tribulation, according to Luke 21:11. We also note that many other cities throughout the world collapse, “also the cities of the Gentiles collapse.”

In the last half of verse 19 we have a reference to a system which is Satan’s ecumenical religious system of the Tribulation. It is called Babylon, “furthermore Babylon the great was remembered before God to give her the cup of wine full of the wrath of his anger.” This is the seventh bowl judgment, it is an attack on and a destruction of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation. Babylon is identified as Rome, the capital of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation. The reasons why it is called Babylon we will study in the next chapter which is a detailed account of Babylon as a religious system. The fact that it is remembered is a little different from what we have been having. There is a switch from the verb ginomai to the aorist passive indicative of the verb mimnhskw which does mean to remember. This time it is the memory of God, it is the computer of God, it is the function of His justice, it is the function of protocol in heaven. The aorist tense here is a culminative aorist, contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety but regarding it from the viewpoint of existing results, namely the judgment of ecumenical religion, the greatest enemy to the human race.

This seventh bowl judgment is amplified in the next two chapters. In chapter 17: the judgment of ecumenical religion controlling the state, the union of church and state; in chapter 18 we will see how many businesses in the Tribulation depended on ecumenical religion and how they all went down with that religion. The aorist tense merely states the case but the next two chapters give the details. Actually, Babylon is a city but not the ancient city of Babylon where the religious system of Satan was crystallised. It is a reference to Rome as the capital of ecumenical religion as well as the revived Roman empire. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of eschatological reality to be amplified in chapters 17 & 18.

Next we have an improper preposition e)nw pion, "in the presence of," plus the genitive of qeoj, "in the presence of God," and then we have "to give to her." We will study in chapter 17 why religion is called a woman, "the woman [whore] riding on the scarlet beast." This is not a reference to Christianity or orthodoxy from the Word of God, it is a reference to the Satanic system. The feminine gender matches the mother of prostitutes in chapter 17 verse 5 which is the interpreting verse for this phrase.

The aorist tense of the verb didomi, to give, is a constative aorist, it contemplates the judgements of the next two chapters in their entirety, the judgements of international or ecumenical religion in the Tribulation and the judgment of all of the things related to it. The active voice: God produces the action of the verb. Fascinatingly enough, when this passage opens up, and other passages like it, there is a union of church and state in the revived Roman empire. The revived Roman empire is made up of ten nations of the old Roman empire. Rome will be the capital of the prophetic empire. It is a great political empire and in union with it is a religious system, one of the greatest and worst religious systems of all time, a Satanic system such as the world has never seen. Interestingly enough, while the king of the west or the revived Roman empire begins with the union of religion and state, which always is tyranny and always destroys freedom, eventually the political comes to despise the religious and God uses the political to destroy the religious at the end of the Tribulation. A part of the judgment on the ecumenical religious system is the fact that the political organisation turns against it and destroys it. There can only be temporarily, then, this type of tyranny. Eventually this type of tyranny breaks apart as it has so many times in the past.

Since verse 19 is primarily devoted to the judgment of cities complete details are not given. There are three categories of cities, however, which are mentioned. Jerusalem as the capital of the state of Israel. The reason for it was to provide fortifications for mature believers to fight and to resist the enemy at the siege of Jerusalem. Secondly, we notice Gentile cities throughout the world where degeneracy has reached a saturation point, like Sodom and Gomorra of old, and like Babylon of ancient history. Then we notice that the word "Babylon" itself is a reference to a system whose headquarters is in Rome. While only Rome is implied in this verse the judgment of Babylon the great is the judgment of that ecumenical religious system throughout the entire world at that time. The cities of the Gentiles would include prominent cities in the various empires involved in the world war at the end of the Tribulation where degeneration has reached a saturation point. Degeneration inevitably invites very violent and vicious warfare.

Then there are topographical judgements, as noted in verse 20. "Then every island [probably volcanic] vanished and mountain ranges could no longer be found." The precedent for islands blowing up is found in past history. There will be great loss of life in the disappearance of these islands. These volcanic islands disappearing prepare the way for the great topographical changes in the earth which will occur in the Millennial reign of Christ. We also note that mountain ranges are going to disappear. Here the mountains probably refer to volcanic mountains located on islands, and on continents as well. The topographical changes in mountains is related to the second advent and this fact is found in Isaiah 40:4,5 "Let every valley be lifted up, and every mountain and hill be made low; and let the rough ground become a plain, and the rugged terrain a broad valley; in order that the glory of the Lord will be revealed, and all mankind will see it together; for the mouth of the Lord has spoken." Then in Isaiah 42:13, "The Lord will go forth like a warrior, he will arouse motivation like a man of war. He will utter a command, yes, he will lift up a war cry. He will prevail against his enemies." And in verse 15 of the same chapter: "I will lay waste the mountains and hills." In Isaiah 49:11, "I will make all my mountains a road." In Isaiah 54:10, " 'For the mountains will be removed and the hills will quake, but my grace will not be removed from you, and my covenant of peace will not be shaken', says the Lord who protects you." In Isaiah 64:1, "That thou would split the heavens and come down [second advent], mountains therefore will shake at your presence."

In verse 21 we have the great hail storm. We have in this passage the record hail storm in history. The corrected translation of this verse is: "And large hail stones weighing about 100 pounds each came down from the atmosphere on mankind," this would be hitting the unbelievers of the human race. In this case the bombardment of the 100 pound hailstones is divine judgment from heaven . The destructive force of such a bombardment staggers the imagination. It would kill mankind and property, of course. Such hail in an atmospheric discharge of tension of the physical extremes of heat and cold and their conflict certainly reflects the conflict between the sovereignty of God and the negative volition of mankind who have rejected Christ under the crisis evangelism of the previous judgements. When man's volition comes into conflict with the will and plan of God judgment disaster is inevitable, just as when extreme heat and cold meet in the atmosphere's thunder storms to form hail. The plague of hail in Egypt in Exodus 9:22ff indicates the connotation of the divine judgment on both mankind and nations who refuse to execute the will of God and the plan of God. In Joshua's defeat of the five kings of the Amorites in the battle of Gibeon part of the pursuit and exploitation of the victory came from God Himself who killed more of the enemy with hail stones than were slaughtered by the pursuing troops of Joshua — Joshua 10:11. The same type of hail storm is mentioned in Ezekiel 38:22 — “I shall enter into judgment with the king of the north; I shall rain in him, and on his troops, and on the many people who accompany him, and overflowing rain with hail stones, fire, and brimstone.” And what is the human reaction to all of this? “Then the survivors blasphemed God [negative volition at the point of crisis evangelism or judgment by pain] because of the plague of hail; because its plague was extremely severe.”

So they missed the grace principle found in this judgment. The plague was general throughout the earth and killed X number of unbelievers, probably the armies that we have been studying in the last great world war. The unbelievers who survive still have a chance for eternal salvation under the principle of crisis evangelism, and many of these survivors, of course, reject the opportunity. These judgements of the seven bowls are the last call of evangelism, the final manifestation of the grace of God. Divine judgment always has an evangelistic appeal and rejection of Christ under these circumstances emphasises the power of human volition in this historical stage of the angelic conflict.

Protocol:2 Peter 1:2-9

In Revelation chapters 14 and 15 we have studied the concept of protocol. We understood the protocol of heaven and how it guarantees perfect happiness for all who go to heaven. We understood protocol as it related to virtue in heaven and some of that is very fundamental in the doctrines of Christianity. For example, Jesus Christ is God. As God He has all of the attributes of the Godhead. He has identical essence with God the Father and God the Holy Spirit. The characteristics of our Lord's deity made it absolutely impossible for Him to go to the cross. As eternal God and having perfect integrity there is no way that he could receive the imputation of the sins of the world and be judged for them. Therefore He had to become the God-Man. In becoming the God-Man our Lord Jesus Christ resolved the problem of eternal salvation. Our Lord received the imputation of our sins from the justice of God the Father and every sin in the history of the human race was judged by God the Father. In order to arrive at that point our Lord had to have perfect virtue in His humanity. As deity His perfect virtue was in His holiness, justice, and righteousness. He arrived in that state for the prototype divine dynasphere produces perfect virtue, it is a protocol system, it is the protocol of heaven brought to the earth. Therefore He was qualified to go to the cross, and even at the last moment He said, “Father, if it be thy will let this cup pass from me, nevertheless not my will but thine be done.” In other words, he was willing to go to the cross and be judged for our sins.

The point of reference is the justice of God which is one half of divine integrity imputed our sins to Christ on the cross and He was judged for them. Therefore we have the principle, “Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved.” When we do the justice of God makes a second imputation: our sins were imputed to Christ on the cross and one half of divine integrity/divine holiness, God's righteousness, is imputed to every one of us at the moment we believe in Christ. The justice of God is still the frame of reference and still our point of contact, and He imputes to each one of us the righteousness of God.

We as believers therefore possess perfect divine virtue. The justice of God imputes all blessing to the believer, winners or losers, down through the grace pipeline to the indwelling righteousness of God. We therefore possess a unique virtue, a virtue which came from the protocol of heaven, and therefore we are required as a part of the Christian way of life to develop this virtue. It is impossible for any of us to develop and manifest the virtue that we possess at salvation, therefore an operational type divine dynasphere was given to us and this operational type divine dynasphere is the protocol of heaven. Gate one is the filling of the Spirit; gate two is basic Christian modus operandi, rebound and the faith-rest drill; gate three is enforced and genuine humility; gate four is the momentum gate, perception and application of Bible doctrine; Gate five is motivational virtue directed toward God, the function of our royal priesthood; gate six is functional virtue directed toward man and circumstances, the function of our royal ambassadorship; gate seven is momentum testing; gate eight is the winners gate. All virtue is developed inside of this system.

In Revelation chapters 17 & 18 we are going to study the cosmic system, Satan's system, and we are going to see what he develops by way of a counterfeit. His counterfeits are called religion. Christianity is not a religion. In Christianity God seeks man through the work of Christ on the cross; in religion man seeks God through his own works and through his own function. Therefore we are reminded of the protocol of heaven. This protocol is great happiness, great blessing, beyond our imagination, and the point is that in this dispensation we have heaven on earth in the form of the divine dynasphere, a protocol system.

We begin a consideration of protocol with the concept that the person who controls your life controls your happiness, or lack of it. Generally, if someone else controls your life you are a miserable person. In personal love the object of your love controls your life and happiness; in impersonal love you control your life and happiness because of virtue developed in the protocol system. In impersonal love which is the only virtue-love directed toward humanity you control your own life and your own happiness. You do so because of virtue developed in this protocol system. In both personal love and personal hatred you surrender control of your life to someone else. When you love someone else very dearly they have an influence on your life; when you hate someone very much they are influencing your life in a very negative way. In other words, you turn over your happiness and its control to someone else unless you have this virtue provided by God in the protocol system. Therefore the importance of both protocol and virtue in God's plan. This is the divine system which He has ordained for every believer in this dispensation, the Church Age, the dispensation of the royal family of God.

Personal love only has virtue when it is directed toward God. Personal love directed toward mankind has no virtue, therefore neither happiness nor a spiritual connotation. Impersonal love not only has virtue when directed toward mankind but impersonal love is the only way in which you maintain control of your own life through good decisions from a position of strength, and continue to have a personal sense of destiny. Through impersonal love for all mankind, therefore, you control your own happiness. It doesn't depend on the attitude of anyone else whether their attitude is favourable or unfavourable. Through protocol and virtue God has found a way to control your life and to bring into your life perfect happiness, regardless of the circumstances of life. Every time you get mad or jealous or bitter or vindictive or implacable you surrender your happiness to someone else. In other words, this goes back to Satan's cosmic one, Satan's philosophy in the prehistoric angelic conflict. At gate one we have motivational evil: arrogance, jealousy, bitterness, vindictiveness, implacability, hatred, self-pity, revenge motivation, and so on. At the other gates we have the fragments of the grenade and functional evil — self-righteous morality which is not morality at all, and crusader arrogance. This is what happens when you do not have control of your life.

The function of your royal priesthood and the function of your royal ambassadorship under the divine plan, the system of protocol and virtue, is the only way of happiness and blessing in your life. God has found a way to bring heaven on earth through this system. Every believer, of course, has two royal commissions. Every believer is a priest. This means that in the system as a believer priest he has a life directed toward God. Every believer is also commissioned as an ambassador. As such he has a life of virtue toward mankind. Therefore the life of the believer is divided into these two categories related to these two commissions — the priesthood directed toward God; ambassadorship directed toward man. They only function inside the protocol system. Not only do they function in the protocol system but they operate on virtue only. The protocol system provides the virtue, therefore we must understand protocol and we must be inculcated with virtue before we can fulfil the perception and application of God's plan to our lives. As a royal priest the believer's virtue gravitates toward perfect virtue.

The very fact that you and I possess the righteousness of God, one of the 40 things that we receive at salvation, demands that there be a system whereby virtue can be manifest to the entire human race. Personal love for God is the only category of personal love that has any virtue and, as we have noted in the past, personal love toward mankind has no virtue. When we say to a member of the human race, "I love you," that means they are attractive, that we have rapport with them, that they the object possesses something that is attractive to us. That is personal love. Personal love, of course, is directed toward a few with whom one has rapport, but personal love has no virtue. Once you introduce virtue into the situation, once the subject has virtue, it not only extends in great capacity for love for a few but it extends to all the human race, those who hate you, those who despise you, those who are antagonistic toward you, those who are attractive. So impersonal love is the virtue which we need in our relationships with the human race. This interaction is impossible unless we possess virtue, and that virtue must be in the system. Therefore Christianity is separated from all that might be classified as religion because in religion there is some system, some organisation, some way in which an expression of self-sacrifice may be made, an expression of ecstasies, some function whereby man is making some sacrifice in order to gain divine approbation or the approbation of someone in life. Personal love for God, then, is the only category of virtue. When a believer in the protocol system at gate five has personal love for God that personal love has its own virtue.

That virtue, of course, comes from perception and application of doctrine at gate four. Therefore virtue becomes the major issue in the Christian life. Christianity isn't running around doing things for God; Christianity is the development of virtue. Virtue-first is always the principle. Personal love for God means that we make God the source of our happiness and our blessing. We have personal love for Him and therefore God influences us through Bible doctrine. Personal love for God is impossible apart from life in the divine dynasphere, God's protocol system, therefore personal love for God is motivational virtue, gate five of the protocol system. Impersonal love for all mankind protects this personal love for God, it keeps the believer from having his happiness depend on someone else. Therefore it is compatible with protocol for impersonal love is the only virtue-love directed toward mankind, and so impersonal love toward all mankind is the function of the believer's royal ambassadorship. In the protocol system of God gate five is the motivational virtue and gate six is the functional virtue.

We have studied in the past the protocol of heaven and noted that it is a system of divine order which guarantees maximum happiness and blessing forever. We have noted that the protocol of heaven belongs to every elect angel and every person who is saved in the human race and residing now in heaven. When we die we are said to be absent from the body and face to face with the Lord; we enter into a perfect protocol system. The protocol of heaven is the source of both divine blessing and divine judgment on earth during the course of human history, for the protocol of heaven as the source of divine blessing and happiness comes from the order and system in God's plan for the believer in Christ so that the protocol of heaven as the source of divine judgment originates from the interaction of the angels functioning under the divine mandate. In revelation chapter 14 we studied the three orders of elect angels involved and we saw coming from the throne room a mandate for judgment to our Lord Jesus Christ carried by the officer of arms. We saw the king of arms coming from the altar of imprecatory prayers conforming the mandate. We saw the pur sui vant officer step out and go on standby to take command. We saw the formation of an execution squad in chapter 15. This squad is commanded by the pur sui vant officer and each member of the squad is also a member of the lower status of aristocracy called pur sui vant messengers. We saw them go into action in chapter 16, so that in Revelation 14, 15, and 16 we have seen the whole concept of the protocol of heaven and how it relates to judgment. We have also seen that there is grace in judgment. For example, in the first five bowl judgements of chapter 16 we noted the principle of protocol once again under the concept of judgment by pain. Under the concept of judgment by pain the world was filled with millions of unbelievers who had been exposed to the gospel and this was their opportunity for recall under the principle of crisis evangelism. Under judgment by death we noted that certain segments of the human race were removed in order that the rest of the human race might be perpetuated. Also noted is the eschatological principle that the human race will continue to exist on the earth and that any system of sophisticated weaponry of any kind, any enemy of mankind (like the flea or the virus), or all of man's attempts to destroy himself and destroy others, all of these will come to nil because the protocol of heaven guarantees that certain divine judgements will eliminate from the human race those who are bent on destruction of the human race. The protocol of heaven is therefore the interpretation of chapters 14, 15, and 16 of the book of Revelation.

We have previously defined protocol and we will now study the definition of protocol as it relates to the plan of God. One of the things today on which Christianity may be criticised is that they have lost the concept of precisely correct procedure and have instead given way to the cosmic system with its very sloppy procedures. Christianity and its modus operandi is very clearly defined. Protocol, therefore, recognises the principle of authority under the laws of divine establishment; it recognises and obeys authority and consequently requires virtue for its very existence. Protocol is related to virtue in God's plan for believers, the operational divine dynasphere. At gate three is enforced and genuine humility, the beginning of teachability. Humility is always directed toward authority and without humility there is no capacity for life, capacity for happiness, capacity for blessing, capacity for success or promotion. Therefore this is basic virtue in life. Then at gate five there is motivational virtue directed toward God; gate six functional virtue directed toward man and circumstances. The entire concept of Christianity, therefore, is always virtue-first, and virtue is directly related to protocol. Without the two there is no Christian way of life. The fact that protocol, then, is a part of God's plan and God's policy, and God's system for believers on earth emphasises the conclusion that protocol also exists in heaven and that God has established a system of protocol in heaven, for creature power cannot compete with divine power in heaven or on earth.

We have also noted that protocol is the basis for great happiness because protocol means that everyone is organised. Again, we note that protocol is based on respect for authority, not fear of authority. The function of protocol is based on virtue, not on superiority; protocol orientation to man's confidence so that no one is disturbed by greater authority or power in another. Protocol without virtue, then, is like ritual without reality. In heaven protocol is the function of aristocracy, those elect angels who were winners in the prehistoric angelic conflict. This protocol in the angelic college of heralds leads us to the conclusion that in the previous historic angelic conflict God's plan for elect angels included the principle of virtue-first.

Protocol is one of the great objectives of the Christian life. When you fall in love with someone you generally find something in them which is attractive to you. You are stimulated by them, there is a rapport established, and at the same time you do not see the flaws of that individual. But when you love someone from the standpoint of virtue or impersonal love you love them from the standpoint of the entire person and you accept them with their flaws as well as the points to which you have been directed by way of interest and rapport. Therefore virtue-love is never disillusioned, never disappointed, and there is no adjustment to be made in the virtue of impersonal love because it complies with the entire system of protocol. Impersonal love has no prejudice, therefore it makes no adjustments. By way of contrast, personal love is filled with blindness and prejudice, emphasising rapport with the object rather than the virtue of the subject. Our study of protocol in heaven is compatible with virtue-love's dynamics on earth. Protocol in heaven comes to earth in the divine dynasphere, the love complex, and it is this which turns Christianity into something entirely different from any system of religion that has ever existed. Virtue is the major issue. God has a plan for your life and that plan demands capacity before anything else. That capacity demands that you be in the protocol system. It also demands that you have virtue-first in your life.

And this is not unusual. At the time of the writing of the New Testament the Roman empire was very much in function and the Romans were very interested in virtue, at least one segment of them, those who were in a very special philosophical system. Virtue became not only a philosophical subject but the man on the street had many ideas about it. Stoicism was the philosophical system in which the Romans tried to explain virtue, but all they could really do was to end up explaining ethics. Empiricism has sought to penetrate the various barriers and go back to the absolute and has failed. So always philosophical concepts have to come back to something that is relative, and so it was with the idea of trying to explain virtue in terms of philosophical thought. It was impossible. Virtue can only be explained by the protocol of heaven.

There is a Greek word which was used by everyone, Roman and Christian alike, aretē. Everyone was trying to explain it and define it. The apostle Peter himself had a great deal to say about it and he used this word which is also found in stoic philosophy. In 1 Peter 2:9 Peter used the word but unfortunately the King James version translated it "praises," a word it does not mean, "You are a chosen race," referring to the impact of Christianity on the client nation. Once Israel went out in AD 70 under the fifth cycle of discipline the times of the Gentiles began and it continues until the Rapture. There are no client nations to God in the Tribulation. As goes the believer in that client nation, the pivot, so goes the nation. In the dispensation of the Church we only have Gentile client nations to God and therefore believers play a very important part. There is no such thing as a Christian nation but there is such a thing as a client nation to God and it is influenced by the pivot of mature believers. If the pivot is large through the function of the protocol system there is blessing to the nation; if the pivot shrinks from life in the cosmic system then the nation undergoes the five cycles of discipline. "You are a royal priesthood," this is the only dispensation in which every believer is his own priest representing himself to God. The reason for this is that we are royal family of God and we live in a protocol system. We are "a holy nation," referring to a client nation to God, "a people for God's own possession," the royal family of God. And why are we these things? In the middle of verse 9, using the conjunction ina to introduce a purpose clause, "that you may proclaim the virtues [not the praises] of him who has called you out of darkness into his marvellous light," the point being that before we accepted Christ our life was darkness. We didn't have the key, the protocol of heaven, but once we believed in Christ we were called into light. We are even commanded in 1 John 2 to walk in the light. The light is simply the divine dynasphere, the protocol system. God has brought heaven to earth in this protocol system designed for us. So we have left darkness, we have moved into light and that means virtue-first.

In 1 Peter 1:2 we notice some of this principle stated by the apostle Peter: "Grace and peace be multiplied to you in the knowledge of God and of Jesus our Lord." Grace is the modus operandi of the plan of God and also the policy of God in the protocol system. Peace really means prosperity and it is multiplied in knowledge. That brings us back to the protocol system. If it is multiplied in knowledge then the importance of gate four, the momentum gate, the perception and the application of doctrine. It is supported by gate one, the filling of the Spirit; gate two, the faith-rest drill which produces objectivity; gate three, enforced and genuine humility which produces teachability; and these gate support gate four, the basis for the multiplication of grace and prosperity in the life.

Verse 3, “seeing that his divine power [the divine dynasphere],” God provides everything necessary inside the protocol system which calls for God to work on our behalf; we do not work on His behalf. If there is legitimate Christian production that production must come from the momentum of gate four, “has given to us everything pertaining to life and godliness,” life here means capacity for life; godliness means fulfilling God’s plan for your life, “through the true knowledge of him [the function of gate four] who called us to his own glory,” we were called to His glory, He produced glory in the prototype divine dynasphere, the result was doca [glory]. We are in the operational type and are to produce that same doca or glory and it is related to the fact that only virtue can function in the protocol system of God, “and virtue.” We are called to virtue and virtue can only be manufactured in one place, the divine dynasphere.

Verse 4, “Through which things [the divine dynasphere and it is the manufacture of virtue] he has given to us his precious and magnificent promises,” these promises are eventually brought together in the second stage of the faith-rest drill under the concept of the doctrinal rationales, “that by them you might become partakers of the divine nature,” through residence, function and momentum in the divine dynasphere you are able to produce the same virtue that the humanity of Christ produced in facing life. You cannot have perfection, no one is perfect in this life, none of us ever will be, but we can produce virtue, “having escaped the corruption that is in the cosmic system by lust.”

Verse 5, “Now for this reason also, applying all diligence, in your doctrine supply virtue,” doctrine produces virtue, “and in your virtue, knowledge [application of doctrine];”

Verse 6, “and in your knowledge, self-discipline,” to the extent that you and I as believers are disorganised in our personal lives we are unhappy people. Self-discipline is the beginning of virtue; self-discipline is related to humility: enforced humility, and from enforced humility comes genuine humility, and from genuine humility come capacity for life. So there are all sorts of things to make us unhappy. A disorganised person has disorganised thinking; disorganised thinking cannot straighten out priorities, therefore he has made himself unhappy by the use of his own volition in his disorganised state, no protocol in his life, no organisation.

Other people can make you unhappy by the things that they do because you are disorganised, you have no protocol, you have no virtue, you have no capacity for happiness, and the lack of virtue or impersonal love toward all means that they can make you happy or unhappy. You no longer control your own happiness or unhappiness, the other person controls it. You say that you love them and that is fine, but you have now surrendered your control to them because that is personal love. You could love that person and have a great life of happiness with them in either friendship or marriage. You could have a great relationship with them if you had virtue because virtue means that inside of you is impersonal love directed toward all. Because you have this virtue toward all you take the tolerance, you take everything that expresses impersonal love and apply it to this person with the flaws, and now you control your own life and still love them. But what does it for you? Impersonal love, not personal love.

The same thing is true in hatred. If someone hates you and that bothers you, they are rude, they do something that bothers you. To the extent that that bothers you you have no virtue, but to the extent that you have impersonal love for all then you have control of your life. Otherwise tomorrow in traffic the first person who is rude to you and makes you mad controls your life, they control your happiness — they cut in front of you and you are mad at them, etc. You must have control of your own life and the only way you can do it is by protocol plus virtue.

“and in your self discipline, perseverance,” one thing God’s plan does for you is organise you, it gives you a system of priorities. Your number one priority is at gate four: Bible doctrine. Everything else in you life is built around that and that gives you your momentum, that gives you your motivation in life toward God, that gives you your virtue directed toward man and circumstances, “and in your perseverance, godliness [spiritual maturity at gate eight, you become a winner]”

Verse 7, “and in your godliness, capacity for love [brotherly rapport], and in your capacity for love, the virtue of impersonal love.”

Verse 8, “For if these virtues are yours and increasing,” the momentum from residence and function in the divine dynasphere, “they render you neither useless nor unproductive in the true knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.”

Verse 9, “For he who lacks these virtues is blind, short-sighted, having forgotten purification from his former sins [having forgotten even the very principles of eternal salvation].”

The great issue that we must face in order to understand the great difference between Christianity and religion is the issue of protocol and virtue.

Chapter 17

Introduction to religion

It is very important to understand that religion is the greatest source of unhappiness that you will ever have to face. It is a Satanic system and the only person who ever has any fun with religion is Satan himself. The reason is because all religious organizations, and this is not referring to Christianity, have devised a system whereby you surrender the custodianship of your happiness and the control of your life to human beings in some form of a hierarchy. Those human beings will exact from you challenges of one type or another, whether they relate to asceticism on the one hand or many of the world's religions "self-sacrifice" on the other; but the hue and cry in the sacrifice game, the asceticism game, is total unhappiness, total lack of capacity for life, and total disorientation to life. On the other hand Satan doesn't intend to trap everyone through self-righteousness, through asceticism, self-sacrifice or pseudo-morality, he intends to trap a lot of people through lasciviousness. Therefore we are introducing religion in Revelation chapter 17, religion in the Tribulation, by reviewing some of the very pertinent principles related to Christianity since Christianity is not a religion. Christianity is a relationship with God, a protocol system whereby you are motivated by person love for God and whereby you have control of your own life and you become the custodian of your own happiness.

Protocol and virtue demand that you focus your individual responsibility to God and to mankind, that you organise your life and your priorities. In fact you cannot organise your life unless your priorities line up with the doctrine of the Word of God, and that you study and apply doctrine, and that you do not become involved in everything that is going on in the world around you. What is going on in the world is not nearly as important as what you as a believer are doing in the protocol system to manufacture virtue. The people that you contact every day are really depending on you for blessing by association or any form of happiness that may come their way. So you have to be motivated by God, you have to have control of your own life, and you definitely should be the custodian of your own happiness. Yet every day you are going to have challenges. Strangers can suddenly be the custodians of your happiness; they take it away from you.

Not every one in Satan's system is religious but every one in Satan's system has surrendered control of his life to someone outside of himself and, therefore, no person, believer or unbeliever, can live in the cosmic system and have control of his own life and solve his own problems. It is impossible for a believer to resolve the problems of his life — and we all have problems — if he is living in the cosmic system. We were designed under the principle of protocol and virtue to be spiritually self-sustaining, and you will have great impact on the world around you if you concentrate on your own life inside the divine dynasphere rather than concentrating on what is going on around you. So we have noticed a principle in this introduction to Revelation chapter 17: the person who controls your life controls your happiness. The very first thing in the Christian life is virtue and until we have achieved virtue we aren't even stabilised in our momentum. If you are not stabilised in your momentum you are in trouble. So God has organised His system of protocol and He demands, therefore, that you organise your life. You cannot have virtue without living in His protocol system and you must establish your priorities, then your daily routine around those priorities, so that you are first of all organised. Until you organise your life it is impossible to be a winner.

This is only true of Christianity. Religion is just the opposite: religion or Satan says he will organise your life, whichever way you want to go. You may not even be religious but he still organises everything for you.

The protocol of heaven is a system of divine order and precedence which guarantees happiness and blessing in time and, obviously, maximum and eternal blessing in heaven. The whole structure of heaven is protocol and it is a place of wonderful happiness and blessing.

We don't start out by having virtue, there is no such thing as instant virtue, so we start out with mandates first. Mandates first brings us around to strict adherence to due order of precedence and therefore we have to have mandates to obey or disobey. But how can you obey mandates until you understand them. That is the key. You can throw a lot of mandates at a believer but at first he doesn't understand them, so one of the biggest problems is to understand what is precisely meant by a mandate. For example, how can you precisely execute loving everyone when there is no way that any human being can do it if he is normal. The point is that we have to understand how. Impersonal love means directed toward people if you have virtue, it means you have virtue toward all. This means that you are in control of your own life and are the custodian of your own happiness. Protocol is not personal. Impersonal means that you have virtue directed toward people, personal means that you have standards — that's all. Personal love is directed toward a few and means that you have standards by which rapport is established.

Impersonal love is gate six, and when you have arrived there you have already learned two other things in virtue. You have achieved them, you have developed them. You have developed enforced and genuine humility, you have become motivated by God so that when you see people who violate your standards, who are different from your standards, you don't react. Virtue never makes any racial distinctions, social distinctions, or personal distinctions, only personal love does that. Whether we have good standards or bad standards we all have flaws and we can't solve our personal relationships and our personal rapport with others — the interrelationship, the interaction — unless we have virtue. So the protocol system in the plan of God calls for virtue-first.

In order to get virtue we have to start with humility, we don't start by loving God. No believer, when he is born-again, loves God. We are incapable of personal love for God because it is the one category of personal love where you have to have the norms. You have to know something about God. How can you love someone you don't know? God the Father is a stranger to us when we are born-again. We have just heard that God the Son is our saviour, we believed, and that is all that we had to do. We don't know anything about the Lord, or very little. We know nothing about the Holy Spirit, and "holy rollers" never find out anything, they're blasphemous about the Holy Spirit. Personal love means that you have you have norms and standards to set up a rapport system. In order to set up norms and standards you have to know God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit; and before you can know them you have to be teachable — and that takes you right back to humility. So gate three is where we become teachable; gate four is where we get to know Him; gate five is where we have as the motivation for our life personal love for God. Personal love is in the object and God only becomes attractive to us when we learn to know Him.

So to get back to the believer and all people out there. The only possible way to love all people out there as per mandated in the Word of God is to have virtue, and virtue means impersonal love toward people. The virtue in loving God means you have norms and standards that reach out and have a rapport. God loves us because He has virtue, but we can't love Him unless we have virtue. The only personal love that has virtue in it is love for God. So we must have virtue and virtue starts with being teachable. If you are not teachable you will never love God and never love all people. So the Christian way of life really has to start with orders — mandates. Mandates demand obedience; mandates are the guidelines for obedience. Obedience is necessary for the development of humility. Humility is the foundation for all virtue because humility is teachability. The divine system of protocol demands virtue-first. Virtue-first is impossible apart from residence, function, and momentum, inside the divine dynasphere, God's protocol system for the believer. We are born-again to obey divine mandates. A little baby is born absolutely stupid, not because there is no potential there, but because the baby is minus vocabulary. You have to have vocabulary to think, so a baby has to start out and learn words. Once vocabulary is learned, what comes next? Mandates! "No," or "Do it," or "Wash behind your ears." The Bible is filled with mandates.

There is another principle: Routine demands motivation and the right scale of values. God's priorities must become our priorities. Acceptance of God's priorities necessitates organising our lives. Disorganised people are losers in life in general; disorganised Christians are losers in life in general and spiritually. God has given us a protocol system in which to organise our lives, the divine dynasphere. Virtue in an organised life becomes the dynamic of the Christian way of life. Consistent residence in the divine dynasphere means that we will fulfill the priorities. All the priorities start with mandates: in God's plan, mandates first. You have to learn the orders and then you have to know how to execute them mechanically. In God's system: virtue-first. In God's purpose: Christ first. So notice: Christ first is the third priority. Christ can't be first until mandates are first, and until mandates are first virtue cannot be first, and until virtue is first Christ cannot be first — gate five. In God's policy: grace first. Notice that grace is the number four priority. We are not ready for grace when we start. Grace is not first in our lives until we have reached gate five. The fifth priority in God's objective: momentum first. Momentum begins when you start taking in the Word. Momentum reaches a certain point so that the third priority comes into focus: Christ first, so that the fourth priority comes into focus: grace first. Grace has to be understood from the start but grace is not first in our lives until it becomes number four priority, then we understand it in full. Once we understand grace we must continue momentum. A lot of people, when they finally understand grace, lose their momentum because they use grace as an excuse, a problem-solving vehicle when grace is the policy of God toward us and eventually our policy toward people. But grace as a policy toward people is no good unless we have virtue, and too many Christians are using grace in name only without having virtue.

We have been studying the subject of protocol and virtue. Protocol and virtue demand that we as believers focus our individual responsibility to God and to mankind on the protocol system which God has provided. The purpose: that you organise your life and your priorities, that you study and apply doctrine and not become involved in everything going on in the world around you. What is going on in the world around you in this world is not nearly as important as what you as a believer are doing with regard to the protocol system, its priorities and its mandates. You will have great impact on the world around you if you concentrate on your life inside the protocol system.

We have learned from all this that the person who controls your life controls your happiness. In personal love or hatred the object of your love or hatred actually controls your life. For example, in personal love the object of your love not only controls your life but becomes the custodian of your happiness. In personal hatred the same thing is true. So when you become upset with a stranger in traffic that person has immediate custody of your happiness and control of your life. Therefore the importance of the priorities and the mandate virtue-first. When you are jealous or vindictive toward someone you surrender the control of your life to that person. In other words, you turn your happiness and its control over to the object of motivation evil in cosmic one, gate one. This is precisely what happens in religion. So if you surrender the control of your happiness to someone else you are going to blame them for your bad decisions, and if you surrender the happiness which you now possess to someone else then you will blame them every time you are in a state of unhappiness.

We have spent time on this in order to set up a contrast with religion and to make it very clear that Christianity and religion are antithetical. Christianity is not a religion. Religion is Satan's policy and Satan's system for siphoning off worship to himself instead of worship of God. Religion is the Satanic counterfeit for worship of God and a major part of the angelic conflict in history. One of the greatest areas where people surrender the control of their lives and the custodianship of their happiness is through some form of religion. Religion, therefore, is the devil's major strategy; it is the devil's ace trump in distracting mankind from truth in its three categories: category #1, the laws of divine establishment. Religion seeks to become the state. The union of religion and state is one of the principles we will note. The union of religious and political activities is a major attack against human freedom; category #2 truth, the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. Religion distorts salvation by grace into many diverse systems of salvation by works; category #3 truth, Bible doctrine for the believer. Religion sets up a system of distraction so that the believer never learns the protocol system, never understands everything related to the concept of virtue-first that we have been studying.

We are ready to study religion because we have studied the concepts of divine judgment. We have seen how divine judgment is a grace function from God and divine judgment toward the unbeliever always has a dual connotation. If it is the first category, judgment by pain, the objective of that judgment is crisis evangelism. It is to give the unbeliever another opportunity to consider the gospel under more stringent circumstances. Then there is judgment by physical death which is a grace function in that it removes the cancer from human society — those who are leading the way to self-destruction. God has perpetuated the human race and will continue to do so under the concept of judgment by death. There is a third category: judgment for eternity for those who continue negative as far as the gospel is concerned. For those who reject Jesus Christ as saviour there is eternal condemnation. Therefore we have noted the divine judgment factor, we have noted the protocol factor, we have noted that divine judgment for those who reject crisis evangelism are always those who are involved in some form of religion. We have also studied the two categories of evangelism: normal evangelism which is conducted under normal situations where objectivity exists; crisis evangelism which is the concept of hearing the gospel under terrible judgment. The reason for it is because their minds are blinded. Their minds are blinded because they are living in the cosmic system. Because they are living in the cosmic system they are totally distracted by religion from the truth of the gospel and crisis evangelism uses judgment by pain. The pain becomes a distraction from the subjectivity of the cosmic system and gives a temporary objectivity to recall the gospel one more time.

Religion emphasises Satan's policy of evil. Christianity, therefore, is not a religion. In fact, Christianity and religion are antithetical, they are mutually exclusive. Christianity is truth from God; religion is the lie from Satan. Each has its own system. The protocol system is for the development of the truth in our lives, and Satan's cosmic system is for the religious distractions to our lives. In religion man by man's efforts seeks an establishment with God or seeks to impress God, while in Christianity God seeks and finds mankind through the work of Christ on the cross. Christianity is a relationship with God which begins at regeneration, while religion is a relationship with Satan that begins with cosmic involvement.

It is necessary, therefore, to understand that billions of years ago God knew all of these things and the omniscience of God put into the computer of divine decrees every thought, every decision, every action of every person. This is not all that is programmed into the computer. Also put into the computer of divine decrees we have every person in the history of the human race in connection with every sin they would ever commit, so that all personal sins were put into the computer of divine decrees. Long before any man committed any sin in the human race every one of them was in the computer. These sins in the computer make it impossible for mankind, outside of Adam, to be condemned by personal sin. When human life was first imputed to Adam's human soul, at the same time for us Adam's original sin was imputed to the genetically-formed old sin nature and this is the basis of our condemnation at birth. But all of our personal sins, along with the millions of personal sins that have not yet been committed, were all entered in eternity past by the omniscience of God into the computer of divine decrees. It was not until Jesus Christ went to the cross that all of the personal sins of the human race, including ones that had not been committed yet, were all brought out of the computer and imputed to Christ on the cross, and God the Father then judged those sins. It is the judgment of sin that is the basis of eternal salvation. It is the judgment of sin in this Church Age that leads to Christianity. The work was accomplished by God. In the first advent when God the Son, Jesus Christ, was hanging on the cross as the God-Man, He alone accomplished salvation. The Lord Jesus Christ did not say, "We have finished it," He said, "It is finished"; He finished it alone. And we will see in Revelation chapter nineteen that when Jesus Christ returns He returns with three great armies — Group A, the elect angels; Group B, all believers of the Church Age, royal family in resurrection bodies; Group C, Old Testament saints and Tribulational martyrs, all in resurrection bodies, He alone does all the fighting. The principle, of course, is grace. The Lord accomplishes it all.

Religion on the other hand represents the evil genius of Satan from the standpoint of its many counterfeits. For example, there is a counterfeit gospel which is developed by Satan and it is related to the cosmic system, as per 2 Corinthians 4:3,4, "If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost, in whom the god of this world [Satan] has blinded the minds of those who believe not." Rejection of Jesus Christ as saviour causes the unbeliever to enter into gate two of cosmic one, and there he has blackout of the soul. If he continues to reject the gospel he will enter gate two of cosmic two and there he will have scar tissue of the soul. Only crisis evangelism will reach in at this stage and save the brands from the burning. There is also a system of counterfeit ministry. Satan has his counterfeit ministers who are described in very lucid detail in 2 Corinthians 11:13-15. There is also a counterfeit doctrine which relates to the various gates of the cosmic system. There is a counterfeit communion table. It is the counterfeit communion table which is the direct system of Satanic religion. It is found in 2 Corinthians 10:19-21. There is a system of counterfeit spirituality, which most fundamentalists are using today. True spirituality cannot be understood apart from the protocol system. This counterfeit spirituality is dramatised in Galatians 3:2,3. There is a counterfeit system of righteousness, self-righteousness related to arrogance, Matthew 19:16-28. There are counterfeit gods, a system of demonisation, 2 Corinthians 2:3,4. There are counterfeit dynamics, 2 Thessalonians 2:8-10. So to understand religion one must understand Satan's policy as administered through his cosmic system. Later on the cosmic system will become very pertinent in our context. The study of this chapter, then, is the study of religion from the standpoint of Tribulational judgments administered in relationship to the seventh bowl judgment.

There is another concept that we should understand. The word Babylon occurs quite frequently in chapter seventeen. The Biblical concept of Babylon is twofold: literal and figurative. In the Bible Babylon is a literal city, and then it becomes a literal city state. From this literal city state come many nations such as Babylonia-Chaldea. It all began in Genesis chapter ten, verses eight through ten. Nimrod, who is the founder of the original Babylon, means "we will revolt." This anticipates the mystery doctrine of Babylon in the New Testament. The first united nations organisation was founded at Babylon and anticipates the use of this noun in context as Genesis 11:1-8 directly relates to it. The literal city and city state of Babylon is the subject, then, of many Old Testament passages. However, reference to Babylon in our context is not literal but is figurative. It refers to a religious system, an international religious system of Satan in the Tribulation. The figurative meaning of Babylon refers to international organisations, both political and religious, sponsored by Satan throughout human history. Previous reference to Babylon as Satan's system of internationalism has already been noted in Revelation 13:4-8, 11-17; 14:8-11: 16:19. Babylon in our passage does not refer to the city or to a state or to an empire of the past, it refers to ecumenical religion related to international politics, a system to distract mankind from the truth of Bible doctrine.

The outline of our passage is twofold. In the first six verses we study the vision of the "great whore," as the King James version calls it. The last half of the chapter, verses 7-18, is simply the interpretation for the vision. Babylon, therefore, becomes a code word for Satan's system of internationalism, both political and religious. Every time we see Babylon in our passage it will be referring to that international system, the system of ecumenicalism.

We begin, then, with the study of the vision of the great whore in verse 1-6. The seventh pur sui vant angel becomes a teaching angel in this verse. We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, "Then." With this we have the nominative singular from the adjective numeral e(ij, and it refers to one of the execution squad. The execution squad of the previous chapter is the way that we finally discovered protocol as the major system on God's plan. In the execution squad we saw the protocol in heaven. "Then one," we are referring to an angelic creature. We know this from the prepositional phrase that follows, e)k plus the ablative of the indeclinable adjective numeral e(pta, "seven." Then we have a)ggejoj, "angels," one of the seven in the execution squad.

Next is the articular present active participle from the verb e)jw, which means to have. We are going to understand that this one that is mentioned here is number seven in the squad, the one who administered the seventh bowl judgment, "who had." The definite article is used as a relative pronoun referring to the seventh member of the execution squad, the one who administered the seventh bowl judgment in chapter sixteen, verse seventeen. The present tense is a perfective present denoting what has come to be in the past and emphasised as a present reality. The active voice: the seventh pur sui vant messenger from the execution squad produces the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial.

Why do we have a member of the execution squad suddenly becoming a teacher of Bible doctrine? That is exactly what he is going to do. These seven members of the execution squad are under the command of a pur sui vant officer, as we noted from chapters fourteen and fifteen. The squad, made up of seven pur sui vant messengers, went into action in chapters sixteen. Number seven in the squad is the pur sui vant messenger who is now going to become a teacher of Bible doctrine. The question arises: How does this one out of a group of special aristocrats of the elect angels suddenly become a teacher of doctrine? He is obviously very good in his job of judgment. How can a judging angel suddenly become a teaching angel? The answer to that question is found in our study of crisis evangelism. In reality every member of that squad, when he administered his particular judgment, could take up the slack and communicate doctrine. If doctrine had not been communicated to some pocket where the judgment was administered then the angelic creatures did it. There is a precedent for that which we studied in operation high noon.

Next we have the aorist active indicative of $\epsilon\rho\chi\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$, the verb to come, "Then one of the seven angels who had the seven bowl judgments came." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. An angel used for executing the human race also communicates to the human race. By profession this angelic creature is an aristocrat in the elect angel army. There is a very important point here. This angel has been responsible for the death of millions of people. You can be responsible for death on the one hand as a professional soldier, or as a law enforcement officer or judge on the bench on the one hand and on the other hand being responsible for providing information leading to eternal life for others. The two go together. There is no conflict between the communication of the gospel and doctrine and killing people as a member of a military organisation representing your country. This angel is going to teach truth just as effectively as he was responsible for the administration of a great judgment on the human race.

The one who is going to be learning in this case is the apostle John, for his continuation in understanding of all of these things and how they relate to each other regarding the subject of religion it is necessary to understand what this angel teaches in chapters seventeen and eighteen. The active voice: the seventh pur sui vant messenger from the execution squad produces the action of the verb now as a teacher of truth. Before we saw him as an executioner; now the executioner becomes a communicator of truth. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the fact that having delivered his judgment bowl he is now ready to explain the significance of judgment by death as it relates to the human race.

Every day when we pick up the papers someone is dying somewhere. Someone is the victim of violence, someone is dying of starvation, people are dying for many reasons. Often when we look into the areas where these people are dying we note that there is a tremendous area of historical negative volition, and that if this negative volition which is self-destructive spreads throughout the entire world there will then, of course, be world destruction instead of local geographical destruction.

We are getting ready for this. We are more influenced by compassion for the third world than we are for doctrine found in the Word of God, and the influence of our lives comes from our compassion for the tragedies that we see in other parts of the world. Why do these tragedies exist? Because in those parts of the world there has been strong negative volition at God-consciousness, there has been strong negative volition at the point of gospel hearing. Many of these areas have had over a century of very clear presentation of the gospel and they have rejected it time and time again. Therefore they have gone into the vacuum of Satan's cosmic system and they have developed their whole system of culture from Satan's cosmic system. They have developed a religion. Where they heard the truth and rejected it religion always sprouts and grows. When people reject the truth, whether it is the laws of divine establishment, whether it is the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, whether it is the believer rejecting Bible doctrine, they go into a system of slow death. They go into Satan's cosmic system. Some of them turn up as religious types and we have religion all over the world. Religion has taken over all over the world in one form or another. Since there are many categories of religion there are many different forms of distraction. There is something that can be appealing to anyone and Satan's counter-evangelism is very appealing. He can come at you through the phallic cult, through the mystique type of activity where you don't think but everything seems to be very mysterious and therefore impressive, or he can come at you with false doctrine. He has many approaches to the human race. He has been very successful today, especially among born-again believers, because they have failed to understand that in the protocol system the concept of protocol becomes very important.

The angel has been an executioner; now he becomes a communicator. No one ever has to be ashamed of killing people in battle as a member of the armed forces. No one has to be ashamed of having served. The indicative mood of e)rxomai is declarative for the reality of the fact that having executed people through the seventh bowl judgment this same pur sui vant messenger will now teach John the information that he uses in chapters seventeen and eighteen.

Then we have the connective use of the conjunction kai followed by the aorist active indicative of the verb lalew which means to communicate. Here it means to teach eschatological doctrine. The aorist tense of lalew is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The killer angel now becomes a teaching angel. There is no inconsistency because this is all accomplished through the principles of protocol and virtue which destroy the apparent inconsistencies in one's life. There is no inconsistency in being a member of the execution squad on the one hand and now being a communicator of eschatology on the other hand. In one angelic creature both of these functions exist without any complications of any kind. The content of the angel's message is chapters seventeen and eighteen. Notice that he got in touch with the apostle John. He has been in touch with the human race as a killer, now he is in touch with John as a teacher of doctrine. This is taught in the preposition meta plus the genitive from e)gw, "with me"; "he came and spoke with me." The apostle John is the object of the preposition. He is a brilliant doctrinal teacher but this killer is going to teach him something about eschatology.

This, therefore, is a transitional verse which explains that the seventh pur sui vant messenger of the execution squad is also a Bible teacher. In fact, each one of the seven members of the execution squad is also a doctrinal teacher and can give a detailed explanation as to why his specific judgment was administered. The principle then: The members of the execution squad know what they are doing. Executioners must have a complete sense of justice and total freedom from arrogance. Only the highest aristocracy in heaven, therefore, are involved in the administration of the seven judgments. This explains the influence of the protocol of heaven on the grace policy of divine judgment on planet earth and its human inhabitants. The highest form of angelic aristocracy from the college of heralds is used for the execution of this judgment.

This brings up another principle. Always historically you have an achieving aristocracy which is separate from all those around it. An achieving aristocracy always knows what they are doing, this is how aristocracy is formed. People emerge in history who know what they are doing. Truth in the soul makes it possible for you to know what you are doing. All divine judgment stems from the justice of God and has a very definite grace function. Judgment on earth has two sources: the volition of mankind and the justice of God. What we often assume is judgment from God is really the failure to make good decisions. The major source of our unhappiness in life is our own volition. We make the wrong decisions, we think the wrong things, we therefore provide our own misery. Divine judgment comes when we spend too much time in the cosmic system. It comes in the form of warning judgment, followed by intensive judgment, and eventually by dying judgment. So the volition of mankind is responsible for his own misery and is spread to others. The check on man's self-induced misery and destruction originates from the justice of God. God has to keep us from destroying ourselves, and God has promised that there will always be people on this earth and that there never will be a time when the human race does not exist during human history. Nuclear weapons cannot destroy humanity; neither can any other danger to mankind.

"Then one of the seven angels who had the seventh bowl judgments came and spoke with me." All of this review of doctrine explains the genius of Satan in the invention of religion to distract mankind from the grace of God and the plan of God for the human race. All of this explains the invention of the two cosmic dynaspheres by Satan to control mankind and to keep him from utilising the grace of God. All of this explains the divine judgment on the religious system of the Tribulation as God's answer to Satanic devices and strategies to woo mankind away from the grace of God and from the plan of God.

The next word in the Greek is the present active participle of the verb legw which is one of the communication verbs, "saying." The aoristic present tense sets forth the event as now occurring, therefore punctiliar action in present time. The active voice: the seventh pur sui vant messenger from the execution squad produces the action of the verb as the doctrinal teacher of the apostle John. The content of his teaching is amplified in the seventh bowl judgment mention in chapter 16, verses seventeen through twenty-one, and what he teaches is now is chapters seventeen and eighteen. We have a complimentary participle expressing the completion of an idea expressed by two main verbs.

Next we have an adverb of place which is translated "Come here," deurw. The present tense, again, indicates that the adverb which follows will have the connotation of an imperative. Note, therefore, from this adverb used in the imperative sense, "Come here," that John's volition must be involved in wanting to understand the explanation and the amplification of the seventh bowl judgment. This, of course, deals with the divine punishment of ecumenical religion as a system, and therefore everything related to international religion of the Tribulation. While the teaching angel comes to the geographical location of John, John must come to the presence of the angel from his own positive volition. He must be motivated to want to learn, to desire the information. His motivation is very strong because the information he receives is the next two chapters of Revelation.

Out of this comes a principle. Doctrinal teaching is mandated by God but the believer must be motivated to receive it. Doctrinal teaching runs the gamut from the most sublime information about the essence of God to the most shocking information about the modus operandi of man. Some people are interested in parts of it but not necessarily all of it. It takes a very strong motivation to want to know the whole realm of doctrine. God provides the opportunity for all of us to learn Bible doctrine. First of all, we learn doctrine and it becomes a motivation for momentum in the plan of God. While God provides the doctrine and the protocol system in which to learn it the believer must use his own volition with regard to learning doctrine. You can bring a horse to water but you can't make him drink. You can bring people to church but that doesn't imply that they are going to learn anything or that they want to learn anything. The reasons why people come to church are varied, but to come to church to want to learn doctrine is a rarity in the time in which we live. And, of course, under the principle of freedom God does not force us to learn doctrine as the key to His plan, but instead He challenges our volition to go for it. The plan of God is optional to the believer. The option is expressed in the mandate regarding the divine dynasphere, the protocol system which we have been studying.

Now we have the subject of the teaching ministry of this angel who up to this point has been a professional soldier in the elect angel order of battle as well as the college of heralds and is now going to become a teacher of doctrine. We have the verb first, the future active indicative of deiknumi which means to make very lucid or clear, to make perspicuous, to point out, to show, to teach, to make known. We will translate it simply, "I will make known." The future tense is for a fact or performance which may be rightfully expected under normal conditions in this context. The active voice: the seventh pur sui vant messenger of the execution squad who administered the seventh bowl judgment in chapter 16:12 produces the action of the verb as a teaching angel. The indicative mood is declarative for a statement of fact. The dative singular of advantage follows and it is in the personal pronoun su. It is to your advantage to have the information. While God makes it advantageous He does not force it upon you. You are not forced ever to learn doctrine by divine mandate, the motivation must come from your own soul. So it is translated, "I will make known to you." It is a dative singular indirect object as well as a dative of advantage. The indirect object merely indicates that the object has the advantage of hearing it.

Next we have the accusative singular direct object from the noun krima, and it means in this case a judgment or punishment, "I will make known to you the judgment." Then we have the judgment described in terms of an analogy. The ecumenical religious system of the Tribulation is described in terms of the objective genitive singular from the noun pornh, and with it an adjective megaj which means "great" but has many similar meanings. Probably, in this case, "infamous" would be better than the "great whore" as translated by the King James version.

There are two things that we should note in the analogy. Firstly, in the analogy with prostitute is that it is a female word so we are talking about a woman. Secondly, she was not only a woman but she is described by the Greek adjective megaj which means a great woman. Why use prostitution as the analogy for religion? First of all we notice that a prostitute makes her living from the lust of others, and in this sense it becomes an excellent analogy to religion because religion gains power and wealth from many categories of lust: lust for human security, lust for blessing in life, lust for recognition in life, lust for some assurance about the future after death. There are many categories of lust in addition to lasciviousness. Under the principle of the phallic cult religion does embrace the lust content of lasciviousness as well. Just as a prostitute receives money for her services so religion, cults, make money off of the superstition and false doctrines that people believe. So there is a great area for analogy. Furthermore, the fact that a prostitute has customers indicates that the fact that the customers do not have control of their lives, they are not the custodians of their happiness, and they are disorganised. So three things should be said about the customers: negative control, negative happiness, and obviously disorganised.

We have discussed how believers who reject Bible doctrine, who reject the protocol system, surrender the control of their lives to others and their happiness to others, are disorganised people. Disorganised people are losers in life. You have to be organised and you have to start with your own mentality. You have to have the right system of priorities. All organisation must come around truth and therefore the truth of Bible doctrine has to be your number one priority. So the analogy between religion and the prostitute is a very good one because the adherence to religion, as we will see in this chapter and the next, are all disorganised people. They do not have control of their lives and they are not the custodians of their own happiness. There are many analogies that we could make but unhappy people always have to pay for their pleasures, and religion attracts unhappy people. Religion caters to unhappy people and charges them for their pleasures. Religion is international and religious internationalism in the Tribulation is called a prostitute because it seduces mankind into Satan's cosmic system. But there is another reason why the woman is used and why we have the feminine gender. It goes back to the third chapter of Genesis where we have distinguished between the original sin of the man and the original sin of the woman. It was the woman who sinned first, and the reason that she sinned first was that she was the point of contact. Satan attacked the woman first because if he had attacked the man — the man was the authority at that time — the man could have simply ordered the woman to partake of the forbidden fruit and she would have done so but she would have had a legitimate excuse. She was under the authority of the man and therefore her volition was not her own. Satan always works this way, he always works toward the one who has no authority. All revolutions in human history were started by people who had neither authority nor power, and they lusted for it. Religions do the same thing. The woman was not the authority, all of the authority resided in the man. Therefore Satan attacked the woman. He always goes for the one who does not have the authority or the power in order to overthrow the system of establishment which God has ordained.

There is another reason. People who do not have power or authority are susceptible to a different type of arrogance than people who do. The most arrogant people in life are the scum; the most arrogant people in life can be found in the areas of poverty. Poverty has the most vicious arrogance of all. Poverty is not caused by the failure of government or the irresponsibility of others, poverty is caused by the people who have it. The source of poverty is the volition of the poor. Jesus discussed the poor and poverty and He made it very clear that no matter what you do to alleviate poverty, no matter how great that you are in trying to help the poor, you cannot stop poverty. Poverty is a disease of human volition, not a status quo of "have not." Neither a government nor independent organisations can stem the tide of poverty ever: "The poor you will have with you always." And the reason we will always have the poor is because people make decisions to be poor. There is nothing wrong with being poor in any given time. Decisions can be made to change that status. Poverty is the status of negative volition in life. That means that just as Satan appealed to the have not — the woman who had not but was very happy with her have not — and the temptation was channeled through her, so Satan is constantly in the business of destroying establishment authority, and he does it through the have-nots. Socialism is such an attack, as is communism. Guilty conscience is another attack. Sometimes wealthy people are made to feel ashamed because they have wealth, as if they should be ashamed of it, the very fact that people are made to feel ashamed and therefore trying to do something about helping people. Helping the helpless is one thing but once the government starts giving out money to the alleged poor and the real poor, the lazy and the scum, they destroy all motivation in life and they create a great evil. These very people are the very people out of whom revolution is manufactured. They are the malcontent, they have lost all motivation for life. They are not motivated to scrub floors because they are not hungry enough to accept any job, and they lose out completely.

Who captures these if revolution does not? Religion. The Satanic system does. And how does Satan convert these people to whatever religion is going in a geographical area? He does it very simply: an appeal to arrogance. Always the same thing. What did Satan say to the woman? he said, "Do you know why God forbids you to eat from this tree? It is the tree of knowledge. God is afraid that if you eat from that tree you will be as smart as He is, and he wouldn't like that." And that is all it took to set the woman off. The woman had a great curiosity and she wanted to see if she would be as smart as God. When she took from the forbidden tree she discovered not how smart she was but how smart God was and how she could never attain divine wisdom. She was on the wrong track. Then she came to the man on the basis of their marvelous relationship in order to undermine his authority and the man did not even have to walk to the tree to partake of the forbidden fruit, it was there offered to him. Consequently, the analogy: Religion always offers you what appears to be a perfect package, the solution to all of your problems. Therefore religion becomes very popular.

So it is not without reason that the female prostitute is used for the analogy to religion and, of course, the prostitute is doing something else: attacking establishment, for fornication is an attack on establishment order, upon marriage and the home. Religion is an attack upon establishment and religion always attacks establishment by seeking to become the state, the combination of religion with the political. Religion likes to be the state and wherever in the last several centuries religion has been the state there has been nothing but disaster. The people in those states cannot distinguish between establishment separated from the state and therefore they inevitably go for communism because to them the church is the state. They are antiestablishment and anti-state and the only anti is communism, therefore they are revolutionaries in their approach.

Next we find a verb, the articular present active participle of kaqhmai which means to sit, but it means more than sitting, it means domination, just as a horse rider dominates the horse. The woman is said to be sitting and because she is sitting she dominates. “I will make known to you the judgment of the infamous call girl.” This is a real slick religion, “who sits.” It is used as a relative pronoun referring to the infamous prostitute and/or ecumenical religion of the Tribulation. The present tense is a pictorial present tense. The active voice: the prostitute or ecumenical religion of the Tribulation produces the action. It is a circumstantial participle implying religion dominating people. Later on we will see religion dominating the state. But how do you get to the state? Through people. So religion works through people. It gets a mass of people and then religion will sit on the state. So sitting here means domination. Ecumenical religion has three sittings or domination in this context in the first nine verses. Each one is presented by the same preposition, e)pi, and each time it is different. We have e)pi plus the genitive, e)pi plus the locative, e)pi plus the accusative. For example, at the end of verse 1 we have the preposition e)pi plus the locative plural from the adjective poluj plus u(dor, “many waters.” E)pi plus the locative emphasises position. If religion is going to dominate it must have good position, it must have good position over the waters. Waters represent the multitude of the peoples throughout the world who are converts to ecumenical religion. In verse 3 we are going to see e)pi once more, this time plus the accusative. This time we will see it with an adjective and a noun called “the scarlet beast dictator.” E)pi plus the accusative emphasises motion or direction, and that scarlet beast of verse 3 is the revived Roman empire. The revived Roman empire of the Tribulation is going places, so the woman starts with people but from the people gains control of a great political system, the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation. That is brought out by the accusative case. Then, finally, in verse 9 we have the preposition e)pi plus the genitive from a)utoj. The genitive case emphasises contact. The religion has contact with the seven mountains of verse 9 and the seven mountains refer to the great empires of the past. So the fact that in the Tribulation the woman gains control of the great empire, the revived Roman empire, emphasises the fact that in the past it has been traditional, and it always happens, that great empires of the past have been subverted by religion. They have lost their power and their ability, they have been destroyed. When religion controls the state freedom is lost. Freedom must have system of authority and the state is the authority — Romans chapter 13. Freedom and authority go together. Freedom without authority is anarchy; authority without freedom is tyranny. They must go together and that is the principle involved here.

Corrected translation of verse 1: “Then one of the seven angels [the seventh pur sui vant messenger of the execution squad] who had the seven bowl judgments, came and spoke with me [the apostle John], saying, Come here; I will make known to you the judgment of the infamous prostitute [the famous system of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation] who sits on many waters [the people of the world who are converts to the ecumenical religious system].”

The base for success of international religion, of course, is Satan’s cosmic system. The subject of this chapter, then, is the amplification of the seventh bowl judgment which was stated in chapter 16:19, “Furthermore, Babylon the great [international religion at the end of the Tribulation] was remembered before God, to give her the cup of wine full of the wrath of his anger.”

In verse 2 we have “With whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication.

Fornication is mentioned twice. Neither time is it a literal reference but in the analogy you have to understand something about literal fornication to understand the figurative use of it in this passage which is the spiritual fornication of kings.

We begin with the preposition meta plus the genitive singular of the relative pronoun o(j, “With whom.” The relative pronoun refers to the prostitute or the international religion of the Tribulation. Then comes our subject, the nominative plural subject from basileuj. It does refer to world rulers at that time but that doesn’t mean they are kings. The Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written and in the time of writing the book of Revelation most of the rulers of the world were classified as kings. But they can be dictators, they can be presidents, they can have all kinds of names. The point is that there will be a very strong political influence on the part of this international religious system. There will be a union of religion and state which, of course, is very destructive to human freedom and a great evil. The descriptive genitive from the noun gh refers to planet earth, so this is a general trend.

Then comes the verb, the aorist active indicative of the verb porneuw. It is used two ways in the Bible: for literal fornication, which is a sexual sin, and for spiritual fornication, which is a system of apostasy. So we have, “with whom the kings of the earth have fornicated.” The culminative aorist tense means the conversion to ecumenical religion or, at least a superficial adherence to ecumenical religion, in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of its existing results such as the last world war in history, such as the destruction of freedom by the union of religion and state. The active voice: various rulers of the earth produce the action of the verb by joining the international religious organisation sponsored by Satan and led by the beast dictator of the revived Roman empire. The indicative mood is a potential indicative of impulse, it emphasises the fact that these world rulers use their own free will to enter into the system of international religion.

Hence, we have with the verb porneuw the concept, therefore, of conversion. How are these people converted? In the same way that people become interested in fornicating. First of all there is the thought, secondly there is a lust, then there is the action. This pretty well describes the pattern of spiritual fornication. The Bible describes spiritual fornication or apostasy not only in the book of Hosea but extensively in Ezekiel chapters 16 and 23. In all these cases we have spiritual fornication between client nation Israel and the religions of Satan at that time.

The spiritual fornication of the people follows. We have the connective kai translated “furthermore.” It adds to the concept. Then we have the nominative plural subject which is a present active participle of the verb katoikew, “the inhabitants.” The participle is often used as a substantive and this is the case here. The inhabitants of the earth here are said to be intoxicated, the aorist passive indicative of the verb mequw, which means to become intoxicated. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The passive voice: those who are brought under the sphere of Satan's ecumenical religion receive the action of the verb, therefore this indicates a tremendous amount of emotionalism. Intoxication is often used for sheer emotionalism without thought. When emotionalism takes over the control of the soul you have the degeneracy of the human soul leading to the degenerate modus operandi of the individual. The converts to Satan's system receive the action of the verb. This is spiritual intoxication going with spiritual fornication. The indicative mood is declarative for the future reality of the success of Satan's international religious system. They are said to be intoxicated with the wine of her fornication. This means the conversion of these people and involvement in the system of activity which is primarily emotionalism like the tongues movement today.

The question arises: How does this work out from the standpoint of the actual function. How can we explain all of this mechanically? Here we have the effectiveness of Satanic religion in the last half of the Tribulation. Mechanically it has to do with two things. First of all, the entrance into Satan's cosmic system. The conversion takes place in cosmic one where these people are said to be grieving the Holy Spirit of God. Function inside of cosmic two is the development of the religion which is comparable to quenching the Holy Spirit with regard to believers. In other words, the whole conversion system is a matter of being preoccupied with self. When a maximum number of people in the human race have inordinate preoccupation with self that is where religion gets its start, that is where emotionalism gets cranked up, that is where every false system has its beginning. Just as Satan, who is the greatest creature genius who ever lived, actually sinned for the first time through preoccupation with self in inordinate fashion known as arrogance, so the same pattern is found in the human race. It all begins with motivational evil, gate one, cosmic one. This is how these first two verses of chapter seventeen are fulfilled at the end of the Tribulation.

It all starts with motivational evil. Motivational evil is arrogance. Arrogance has many sides and many facets. For example, jealousy is arrogance or preoccupation with self. To the extent that people are jealous to that extent they become vulnerable to this type of activity. It doesn't mean that every jealous person is going to be a convert to Satanic religion but it means that that is a start, and there is, by the way, psychologically a very close relationship between jealousy and emotionalism. Jealousy and emotionalism stifle thinking. Jealous people are never able to think rationally and once you lose the ability to think rationally then you fall back on emotion, and emotion has a very bad twist. So we have jealousy, and from the jealousy there is always the frustration and the frustration factor further destroys the ability to think and therefore there is bitterness. Once you are trapped in cosmic one you lose the ability to think in terms of doctrine, in terms of virtue, in terms of things that are rational as far as the Word of God is concerned. Various types of flaws or motivational evil bring this about, such as jealousy, bitterness, vindictiveness, implacability, hatred, self-pity, the guilt syndrome, operation over-think, revenge motivation, whatever it happens to be. And these same thoughts, many of them antithetical but all under the category of motivational evil, also makes the individual an instant convert into Satan's system. These are the ways in which religion expresses itself. Religion expresses itself in violence, in hatred, in all of the various facets of arrogance and jealousy. All of these things are a part of religion. Therefore, once you lose the ability to think rationally you now have the ability to over extend your emotions beyond your thoughts. At this particular point you destroy something, one of the greatest principles in your life and something you have been storing up: your inventory of doctrinal ideas. Once your inventory of ideas is destroyed you are now open for new thoughts, and these thoughts come in many forms in the second cosmic system. There are many different gates there, many ways in which Satan keeps people because they have different personalities, different IQs, different standards.

Arrogant persons inevitably have to be satisfied with themselves. They must find, as it were, a new identity. They get into cosmic one in the first place because they have lost their identity, as it were, through arrogance, through motivational evil. Jealousy becomes the preoccupation of the life, or bitterness, or vindictiveness or hatred or antagonism, etc. One of the big systems for evangelisation into religion is self-pity. Our culture is now lending itself to self-pity. You are encouraged to feel sorry for yourself, you are encouraged to be preoccupied with yourself. This is one of the major steps, by the way, of degeneracy. This is what happens in the Tribulation and it is an old old story which goes a way back into history, but in the meantime it is a story that exists for believers as well as unbelievers and no matter how many times in the past that people have failed this way and how cognisant one is of the situation it doesn't keep you from getting into self-pity, getting into jealousy or bitterness or frustration or hatred, or one of these things which become so destructive. This is how rulers become converted to this Satanic system, and this is how the "many waters," different people from different areas of life, also become involved. And from this immediately the establishing of the new identity in cosmic one and in cosmic two means that you are now a convert of Satan. You may go the religion round, you may go the rationalism round, you may go the philosophical way, but if your arrogance is academic and if you are preoccupied with your high IQ then you will take one road, whereas if you are kind of stupid and emotional you will wind up in the tongues movement. But there is always something for everyone, even the phallic cult for those who want to turn spiritual fornication into literal fornication. That is why Proverbs 16:18 says, "Pride precedes destruction," because in discovering your new identity it is a relationship. All identities that you discover in your own life always have a relationship, and to establish your identity, as it were, you are going to discover that the new identity relates to Satan's system in which you are trapped. Once you discover that new identity you eventually get down to two identities, and we call that a psychosis. From then on you are identityless and this is the normal function of those who get involved in cosmic one.

"Pride precedes destruction, and before a fall there is arrogance of life." No one ever becomes involved in the Satanic trap until he becomes preoccupied with himself. Psalm 25:8-9, "Good and honourable is the Lord; therefore he instructs sinners in the way." God has a plan for each one of us, He has a system of doctrine which protects us from this. He doesn't always instruct about sin but in the way they should go and in the protection against the Satanic system: "In justice [divine integrity] he guides the humble, consequently he teaches the humble his way."

Once you establish your identity in the Satanic system through some form of arrogance and motivational evil you then become the enemy of God, even as a born-again believer. Being an enemy of God as a believer doesn't mean that you have lost your salvation, it just means that you are now going to make your decisions from a position of weakness, you are going to lose control of your life, and you are going to be miserable until either you recover or the Lord takes you home through the sin unto death.

In 1 Peter 5:5, "In the same way comparative novices under the command and authority of the pastor; all of you in the congregation, fasten yourselves to each other with grace thinking." One of the great distractions in any congregation is the reaction to others for real or alleged offences against yourself, the interaction of hatred, antagonism, bitterness, frustration, inordinate ambition, all of the things that bring about arrogance. That is why it says, "fasten yourselves to each other with grace thinking, because God makes war against the arrogant, but he gives grace to the humble. Therefore become grace oriented under the authority of the ruling hand of God, that he may promote you at the proper time." From that we understand that if God doesn't promote you, you are not promoted. This does not imply that you cannot succeed in the cosmic system but your success is a dead end.

Hence, the problem of arrogance in achievement. Arrogance belongs, of course, to the Satanic system; achievement belongs to God. Happiness belongs to the believer under that principle, but the principle is only true when we are living in the protocol system. Therefore, the concept here in this particular passage in Revelation chapter seventeen, mechanically, is that motivational evil is the basis for becoming religious or something else related to Satan's system. When the believer makes decisions in the cosmic system he takes on arrogance from gate one of cosmic one. He becomes preoccupied with some achievement or success and consequently he is often bitten by a bug called inordinate ambition. Instead of occupation with Christ from the divine dynasphere, the protocol system, he is much more concerned about the opinions of his contemporaries and often becomes very susceptible to the flattery of others. Arrogance, therefore, becomes motivation. This is the tragic flaw; this is the destructive drama of life. Arrogance motivates the individual to strive, to compete, to excel, to surpass under the wrong motivation. The new creature who has emerged is therefore ripe for, among other things, religion. That is why in the Tribulation the kings, the rulers of nations, successful people, are going to adopt this ecumenical religious system. The Biblical concept of daily happiness based on a personal sense of destiny from life in the protocol system is gone. The provision of logistical grace becomes meaningless to believers. Believers are supported and sustained by logistical grace, the faithfulness of God. The believer's arrogant lust for ascendancy and his desire for success destroys the right priorities. This is why believers become religious and how some believers become psychotic, and why some believers become involved in the tongues movement or some other emotional activities, and why believers get into very strange things. The believer is extremely vulnerable to these things. While we are studying them from the standpoint of eschatology they also have a direct relationship to our own lives today. In effect we are going to make application and learn something from the future.

So the desire to outdo one's contemporaries always destroys a personal sense of destiny. When you are in the business of trying to show people, or show up people, or upstage people, gain attention to yourself by some form of success, you actually wipe out any possibility of that personal sense of destiny that belongs to the protocol system. The arrogant desire to achieve and attain greater success than one's contemporaries becomes a disastrous road. There is such a thing as normal ambition, of course, but when arrogance is introduced and arrogance is in the saddle and in control of your life, then of course all of your priorities and the tremendous accumulation of doctrine that you have is lost, it has no advantage to you, either by application or by momentum in your life. Arrogant ambition means not only neglect of the protocol system but the very destruction of virtue. With virtue ambition is normal; without virtue ambition becomes evil. With virtue achievement is normal; without virtue achievement becomes a system of evil. So there is the struggle always between humility of the protocol system and arrogance in the cosmic system.

Proverbs 11:2, "When arrogance comes, then comes dishonour, but with the humble is wisdom." Wisdom means the application of doctrine. One of the great problems that believers often face is the inability to apply what they have learned. Of course, when you are starting out in your spiritual life it is impossible to apply, but gradually you learn to apply doctrine. You learn to think in terms of doctrinal concepts and doctrinal categories but you have to put it together in your soul and that requires a lot of listening, a lot of hearing. It often requires making a lot of mistakes and a lot of failures, but we can also learn from our failures, especially when doctrine is prevalent in the soul. Why is it that people cannot apply doctrine? Because of arrogance, because of prejudice, because of jealousy. First of all, too many people get the doctrine, they understand it academically as gnwsij in the left lobe, but they never understand it and cannot apply it until it becomes e)pignwsij in the right lobe. To understand it academically and never have it in the right lobe, you can't apply it. You cannot convert it if you have arrogance. So the same thing that converts all of these people in the future to ecumenical religion is the very thing that keeps us from on the one hand learning doctrine and on the other hand applying doctrine.

Proverbs 29:23, "A person's arrogance will bring him low, but a spirit of humility will attain honour." All believers, Old Testament and New, are all called to honour and integrity. Honour and integrity is not where you start, however, it starts with basic virtue, humility. Humility is not only teachability but humility gives the ability to apply, so you learn and apply by the same system, humility. Humility means you do not make an issue of yourself. Humility gives you sensitivity. The believer in the cosmic system is both hypersensitive and insensitive; the believer in the protocol system is sensitive, which is another way of saying thoughtfulness for others, understanding others, not doing anything to offend or hurt other people deliberately. Hypersensitivity is where you make an issue out of self. In being insensitive you are still making an issue out of self. Insensitive people are so preoccupied with themselves that they aren't even aware of others around them, except to be offensive. Sensitivity is a part of virtue; insensitivity and hypersensitivity are part of evil.

Job 33:16-17, a message to Job from Elihu: "Then he opens the ears of men, and he seals their instruction." People listen to doctrine and they learn the doctrine, so that is called the "sealing of instruction," gnwsij converted to e)pignwsij through positive faith perception, "that he may turn aside from his discipline, and protect us from arrogance." We must be protected from arrogance. Arrogance is the greatest enemy we have, it is the original sin of man.

Isaiah 13:11, "I will punish the world for its evil, and the wicked for their iniquity; I will put an end to the arrogance of the proud," everything stems from the arrogance of the proud. Who are the proud? Anyone involved in the cosmic system, believer or unbeliever, "I will humble the pride of the tyrant." The tyrants in our passage, Revelation 17:2, the rulers of planet earth, are involved.

1 Timothy 6:3,4, "If anyone teaches a different doctrine [religion does that], and does not concur with sound doctrine [religion does that], those doctrines from our Lord Jesus Christ, even doctrine pertaining to godliness [residence, function, momentum in the protocol system], he has received arrogance." Who has received arrogance? Believers with a high IQ, believers who have learned some doctrine, believers who have learned a lot of doctrine, believers who possess doctrine as gnwsij in the left lobe, some who possess e)pignwsij in the right lobe. And what are the next two words? They are so important because once arrogance becomes a part of our lives, even for a short time, we are, "understanding nothing." Why is it that believers can be under Bible teaching for a long time and appear to make no progress? Because arrogance means they understand nothing, and if you understand nothing you cannot apply nothing to something and have something. The application of nothing is nothing.

It has to be understood that none of us are free from these aberrations into cosmic one but the more doctrine you learn the sooner you recognise the problem and the sooner you get out. While we may have learned a great deal of doctrine, that doctrine in any situation doesn't come up and can't be applied because arrogance neutralises all the doctrine we have learned for its application to a given situation.

— "furthermore he has a morbid obsession about controversies [operation over-think]." We are constantly finding little hobby horses to ride and if people don't agree with your hobby horse then you become very insulted. Your hobby horse doesn't have one thing in the world to do with the teaching of the Word of God, "and verbal conflicts from which originate conflicts." What really counts is what you think about doctrine.

We begin verse 3 with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, "Then," plus the aorist active indicative of the verb a)pofew which means to bring someone from one place to another place. That is exactly what the teaching angel did to the apostle John, "Then he brought me." The constative aorist is for a momentary action, what we might call a prophetic aorist. The active voice: the seventh pur sui vant messenger of the execution squad who is now the teaching angel produces the action. The declarative indicative represents the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. This was accomplished by means of God the Holy Spirit, the preposition e)n plus the locative of pneuma, a reference to the third person of the Trinity. The absence of the definite article emphasises the qualitative aspect of the noun and that means. of course, in English we have to put in the definite article, "in the Spirit." Then there is one more prepositional phrase which means "to a desolate place," e)ij plus the accusative of e)remoj. E)remoj means a place of desolation.

A desolate place could be a desert or a forest or a mountain or any place. The stage for religion is, of course, a desolate place. Religion is desolate and that is exactly what is meant by this passage, "Then he [the seventh pur sui vant messenger] brought me in the Spirit to a desolate place." Religion is desolate and this is brought out by Isaiah 21: 1,2,9, "The prophecy concerning a desolate place of the sea [of people]. As wind storms in the south country [Arabian] sweep on, it comes from a desolate place, from a terrifying land. A harsh victim has been shown to me; the treacherous one still deals treacherously, and the destroyer still destroys ... behold, here comes a troop of riders, horsemen in column of two. Then one answered and said, "Fallen, fallen is Babylon; in fact all the images of her gods are shattered to the ground."

In other words, Isaiah actually describes the same passage we are studying under the title of Babylon. Babylon is used for the international religious system of Satan in the Tribulation. The city of Babylon was once the centre of idolatry and religion, now in the Tribulation Babylon is used for the last system of Satanic ecumenical religion. Therefore, the subject of the vision is the fall of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation and all the evil produced by it. Religion produces evil.

The prostitute is now brought into the picture once again. In this passage we have the union of religion and state. We find the political hierarchy of the revived Roman empire being controlled by religion which is the worst thing that can happen to any government at any time. To be influenced by Christianity and still retain your freedom is one thing, but to be controlled by religion is a great disaster.

"Then I saw a woman," the accusative singular direct object of the verb o(raw, which means to see, and what John saw, gunh, a woman. The woman represents religion because of the role of the woman in the fall of mankind. When the woman faced the issue of the garden the first thing she did in talking to Satan was to reject the authority of God, and that is the first thing that religion does. Secondly, religion twists God and uses God to its own convenience. Satan asked the woman in the garden, "Are you allowed to eat of the tree of good and evil?" And she said, "No." She said, "Well God says that if you eat it or touch it you will die." Now, God said nothing about touching it and that is because religion cannot really be spiritual. Religion thinks of death lying in the property of the tree rather than in the act of disobedience. So religion, like the woman in the original sin was negative toward the authority of God (and also her husband). She misinterpreted the fact that God said that the wages of sin is death. That would, again, be negative volition toward God's mandate but she thought that you could reach out, go up to the tree and touch it and you would die which, of course, is a distortion. Religion distorts truth. The major reason that religion is compared to the woman is because in the course of a conversation with Satan, Satan implied that God was unfair to the woman, that she didn't have equal rights, and that because God was unfair to her and didn't give her equal rights with Adam that he was trying to deliberately suppress her. Religion follows this exact same pattern.

It is always the same situation. When the woman ate of the forbidden fruit the first thing that she discovered was not that she was like God but she discovered what God was like. The equality thing was ridiculous. People always think of happiness in terms of equality until they have it and the most miserable people are those who suddenly realise they are equal with everything else — the most boring situation in the world. Happiness doesn't depend upon your relationship to other people as far as equality, inferiority, or superiority. None of those are factors in any type of a relationship or interaction between people, or relationship with God, but religion always picks out someone and says, "You are being pushed around, you are the downtrodden, you are not getting your rights, you are unequal." This is religion and this is what religion has always done, this is Satan's way of distracting believers from the truth of the Word of God.

A prostitute always wants money for her services and, of course, religion demands money for its services. The begging for money is one of the big things in religion. Religion is always out to get your money, your property, or whatever it is. That is the concept of religion in the analogy to the prostitute, in the analogy to fornication as apostasy, and all of the other reasons for this.

But it always goes back to the beginning. Religion is always the upsetter of people. People are going along fine and then along comes some religion and upsets them. Religion comes along and says you are not getting what you should. Religion, therefore, spawns revolution and just as the woman who was, by the way, the first revolutionist, revolted against God and her husband's authority in the original sin; so religion has always spawned revolution. Religion has always come to people and made them dissatisfied. Therefore, religion is antiestablishment and anti-authority. Religion is always running around talking about how they are going to stop wars; it is anti-military, antipolice; it is everything that is disastrous to society. All of these things are brought in by the analogy because in the original sin the woman was truly deceived. She was deceived by the very concepts of religion that Satan later developed in his system. The man in his sin knew exactly what he was doing. First of all he didn't go to the tree and take the fruit. He didn't have to, the woman was standing there offering it to him. Religion always offers to people the concept of disobedience to government, disobedience to anything that God provides in God's plan. Therefore, when you find born-again believers who become involved in civil disobedience and social action and all of the things that are an attack upon government and establishment they have become involved in religion.

But our passage is not talking about the attacks of religion today, it is talking about religion as it will exist in the future. So the woman represents religion because of the role of the woman in the fall of mankind. We find religion dominating, the present middle participle of the verb kaqhmai which means to sit. The word here means to dominate. Therefore, it is a descriptive present, a deponent verb, middle in form, active in meaning. The ecumenical religious system of the Tribulation represented by the woman in the vision produces the action, and it is circumstantial. So we have the word "sitting" and whatever the woman is sitting on she is dominating, the preposition e)pi plus the accusative of an adjective and a noun. Kokkinoj is the adjective and it means "scarlet," and it is that colour of the Romans when they became conquerors. They wore scarlet tunics called Kokkinoj. Scarlet was the colour of the Roman army in the past just as red is often adopted by conquering or successful armies. Here she is mounted on a scarlet beast and, therefore, the woman representing ecumenical religion is actually controlling the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation. Note that the woman is not the beast dictator but at the moment is in control of the beast dictator. The woman as religion and the beast as political government of the revived Roman empire are two separate entities, but for the moment they are united to use their power together and the religion is in control. That gives us a very clear picture, then, as to how the revived Roman empire will run. It will be a slave state; everyone will be a slave to the government, and that is because of the union of religion and state. You must have a separation of church and state today, a separation of religion and state, if there is to be freedom.

The last world war of history is not going to be an industrial revolution type of war, an economic war, a racial war, it is going to be the worst kind: a religious war. One of the most devastating wars of all history was the thirty years war in central Europe. It started in 1618 and ended in 1648. It destroyed Germany for 100 years. So religion is fanatical and it is cruel and whenever it is expressed in any form of violence it is the worst kind.

Here we have a case of the union of religion and state which destroys the freedom of the people while giving great power to those who rule. At this moment the beast carries the religious internationalism of the Tribulation. Later on, of course, the political will turn against the religious; God will punish in that way. So to gain absolute and dictatorial power the beast dictator must supplement his political power with the religious power of the woman, the prostitute of the ecumenical religious system. Generally the rider controls the horse but eventually in this case the horse will control the rider. Freedom and authority must coexist under the laws of divine establishment. That is why when you have freedom without authority you have anarchy, and anarchy means great violence. Authority without freedom is tyranny, and tyranny means great violence. So there must be a balance between freedom and authority and the only way to have this is to have it in the political form. Therefore, one thing that must always exist is a total separation of church and state, and the church must not influence the state. The only influence that the church has is when the citizens of the state are converted and grow in grace in the protocol system. The influence must come from the protocol system so that churches do not cause violence and oppression and loss of freedom in the state.

The job of the state is to get criminals behind bars because criminals have no civil rights. The purpose of the state is to protect your personal privacy or property. The criminal comes along and says, "I want you property and I will therefore violate your privacy to get it." That is stealing. So we have to have a government, we have to have local government, we have to have national government, to protect our privacy. Without our privacy we have no freedom. Therefore, government protects freedom; government protects us from criminals; government prosecutes criminals. Then there are criminals in other countries who want everyone's property, so we have military establishment.

Religion, then, is both anti-God and anti-Bible doctrine. Therefore, religion has many false doctrines, it is well organised philosophically to attract the unbeliever and to distract the believer from making Bible doctrine his number one priority. Religion also leads to self-righteousness. Religious people are not only self-righteous but self-righteousness becomes the basis for their terrible legalism, their evil, their fanaticism. Self-righteous arrogance, of course, becomes motivation for crusader arrogance. Crusader arrogance leads to activism, civil disobedience, and religion controlling political leadership.

Next we have the historical influence of religion. This is given in a phrase we have seen before, “having seven heads and ten horns”. The seven heads are seven empires of the past where religion has become fanatical and not only controlled its own state but has been disastrous in its relationship to Israel. They have administered either the fifth or the fourth cycle of discipline to the Jews. The seven empires whose religion distracted or dominated Israel include Egypt, Assyria, Babylonia-Chaldea, Media-Persia, Graeco-Macedonia, the historical Roman empire, and the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation. So those are the seven heads. Later on we will see that five are gone, one is [the historical Roman empire at the time of John], and one is yet to come [the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation]. The ten horns are the ten nations that will be a part of the revived Roman empire. Each one of those nations are under the beast dictator.

Corrected translation: “Then he [the seventh pur sui vant messenger of the execution squad now acting as a teaching angel] brought me in the Spirit [God the Holy Spirit] to a desolate place [religion is a desolate place]; and I saw a woman [ecumenical religion of the Tribulation] sitting on a scarlet beast [the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation], full of blasphemous categories [false doctrines of cosmic two], having seven heads [seven empires whose religion influenced Israel] and ten horns [the ten nation confederation of the revived Roman empire].”

Satan’s last religious system is the most glamorous of all. The superficial glamour of ecumenical religion of the Tribulation is the subject of verse 4.

We begin with the connective kai and translate it “Now” because we are going from part to the whole. Then the nominative singular subject of gunh, “woman,” “Now the woman. The woman represents religious internationalism as a part of Satan’s system in the Tribulation. The headquarters for this ecumenical religious system is Rome, the capital of the revived Roman empire in the Tribulation, and it will be the capital for the greatest religious system ever devised by Satan. This religious system will at first be controlling the ten-nation confederation. However, we are going to discover that you have to be careful what you control. Today you control it; tomorrow it might destroy you, and that is exactly what is going to happen to this beautiful woman. This religious system is a very glamorous class-type analogy and the woman is so described here.

We have a periphrastic to describe here clothing, the pluperfect periphrastic indicative made up of the imperfect active indicative of the verb e)imi, the verb to be. The rest of any periphrastic is the participle, the perfect passive participle of periballw which means to clothe. When you put the two together we simply translate it “was clothed. It must be understood that the periphrastic is a very strong statement indicating the pluperfect periphrastic has the force of an intensive perfect and it indicates that there never was a time when this prostitute was low class. This is no street prostitute, this is a very high class prostitute and it must be remembered that a prostitute with class is the analogy to religion. This is a high class operation and at that time in history it will attract low class people as well as high class people. It is the most successful religion ever developed by Satan. He is the greatest creature genius of all time but it has taken him several thousands of years to come up with something that will catch everyone. Low class religions are for low class people and that is generally why the tongues movement attracts the proletariat. And, by the way, tongues is a religion; it is an apostasy; it is an evil, not Christianity any more. Of course, any time that you have a low class deal where everyone starts to emote together "holy roller disco style" then you are only going to attract holy roller disco types; but when you get something that is really high class then it is going to attract everyone, the high class and the low class. Whenever you attract everyone throughout the world then you have a great ecumenical religious system, and the strongest religious system of all time will exist in the Tribulation. This is absolutely unique.

Note that the periphrastic is very strong. This prostitute didn't start out as a prostitute. "Now the woman was clothed, and this is the way she was always clothed, says the periphrastic. She didn't start out low down and work up. We are talking about religion here, spiritual fornication.

Two colours are mentioned and they are very significant. First we have the accusative singular direct object from porfura, "purple, the royal colour. It refers to political hierarchy. Next we have the accusative singular direct object from kokkinoj, "scarlet, the colour of rulership in the political realm. Purple is the colour in the ecclesiastical realm. So we have purple for the religious leadership and scarlet for the political hierarchy; and the fact that both are mentioned after a periphrastic indicates the union of religion and state. This religion is so high class, so impressive, that the state comes under its control. Purple and scarlet in the dress code of this woman indicates once again that just as she is riding the scarlet beast, so she [religion] is controlling the political hierarchy of the revived Roman empire. Eventually in the Tribulation the state will turn against religion but before that happens there is the union of religion and the state and the destruction of freedom in the revived Roman empire.

Next we have the perfect passive participle of the verb xrusow, and it means to be gilded with gold, to be plated with gold, to be adorned with gold. Obviously, if you are wearing a lot of gold and the light strikes you it glitters. So the translation: "The woman was clothed with purple and scarlet, and was glittering [which means glamorous]." The intensive perfect tense with completed action and intensified results emphasises in the Greek the status quo of this religion from start to finish. She always glittered with gold, she always wore a lot of gold. There is no exact equivalent in the English for the intensive perfect. The closest approximation is the English present tense. This is why we translate it "was glittering." The passive voice: the woman as the personification of international religion in the Tribulation receives the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial. So we have a translation of the beginning of this verse: "Now the woman was clothed with purple and scarlet [the union of religion and state] and was glittering with gold." "With gold" is the instrumental singular of xrusion. Glittering with gold is simply a way of describing wealth. This is a very wealthy organisation. Great wealth from religion means that they have a tremendous system for marketing their product which is religion.

Next we have a connective kai plus the instrumental singular, used in a collective sense, of two words: an adjective timioj, and a noun liqoj. Both are in the singular but the collective concept here would be a strong plural in the English. Timioj means precious, costly, valuable; liqoj means stone. We translate it, "and precious stones." This refers to the fact that this religion has a culture and a system of artifacts with the religion. While gold represents the wealth of this international religious system the precious stones represent both the culture and the artifacts related to the religion. A religion has to have a culture as a substitute for doctrine and, of course, culture is a way of thinking. So it has a culture and it has a system of artifacts, and that follows the ancient religions at the time that John wrote, and ancient religions also which existed before Moses. Satan's premise from artifacts is this: Satan contends that idolatry is older than either Judaism or Christianity, so in his international religious system he is going to go back to the principle of chronology. He is going to say that idolatry existed before Judaism, idolatry existed before Christianity, therefore it is the only true religion. There will be a system of artifacts that will be worshipped under the principle of idolatry. Of course, we know that the true connotation of idolatry is contact with demons, it is the devil's communion table. So this rejects the eternity of God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit and substitutes creature worship which is always the objective of Satan.

Then there is the instrumental plural of margarithj which means pearls. The pearls represent the glamour of Satan's eclectic religious system of the Tribulation. Pearls are very apt because pearls represent style in dress, and the point is: this religion has class. The pearls represent not only class but glamour in the eclectic religious system. Glamour always attracts the superficial person but class attracts all kinds of people. The glamour of this religion will attract many adherents, many converts, to it.

Then we have the present active participle of the verb e)wxw which indicates another of her possessions. E)wxw means to have, to possess, to have and to hold. With this we have an accusative singular direct object from an adjective and a noun: the adjective xruseoj, meaning golden; the noun pothrion means a drinking goblet, "a golden drinking cup." Our Lord's cup was a cup of judgment for it contained all the sins of the world. The cup is often used to portray the saving work of our Lord Jesus Christ. The drinking of that cup is actually the analogy to the imputation of every sin committed by every person in the entire history of the human race, including millions of sins not yet committed. But there is a false cup and the false cup is called "the cup of demons." It is a part of the devil's communion table, 1 Corinthians 10:20,21. This passage actually refers to the cup of demons which is the function of religion as the devil's system of distraction from Bible doctrine. Demonism is a part of the devil's communion table. Two cups, then, are in total contrast: the cup of our Lord in which He was judged for the sins of the world; the cup of the devil's communion table which is a system of religion and a system of antichrist in the function of cosmic two. The golden cup, therefore, is the pseudo holy grail and with it we have the fact that it was in the hand of the woman. Religion uses the system. We have e)n plus the locative of xeir, "hand, "in the hand. It is the hand of the woman as the ecumenical religious system of the future, so we have the possessive genitive of a)utoj, "in her hand." It is said to be a filled cup. The cup of our Lord was filled with our sins, only this time we have the present active participle of the accusative singular of the verb gemw, "full," and it is used this time as a substantive. With it we have the content of the cup, bdelugma, which means abomination, something detestable. It refers to the entire function of the phallic cult.

Next we have the explanation of this in the connective kai plus the accusative plural direct object of akaqartoj which means unclean activities, impurity, the general connotation is lasciviousness. With this is a descriptive genitive plural, the impurities of fornication, porneia, "her fornication," the possessive genitive singular from a)utoj. Translation: "having a golden cup in her hand filled with the abominations and impurities of her fornication." Once again we have a reference to fornication, once again it is a reference to religion by analogy, and here we get into the literal fornication on the part of the phallic cult.

The cup of evil in the phallic cult as the devil's communion table is mentioned first in Habakkuk 2:15,16. Habakkuk actually develops the entire concept of the devil's communion table and how it operated in Israel long before it was mentioned in 1 Corinthians chapter ten.

"Woe to him," the individual who is looking for happiness by combining religion with pleasure. This, of course, is what the phallic cult does: a frantic search for happiness in sex and religion combined, "who causes his lover to drink the cup [of fornication in religion], Woe to the one pouring from sexual desire and passion to make her drunk, so that he can look with sexual pleasure on her nakedness!" This is a reference to the priestess in the temple, and the Jews had become operational in the phallic cult. "You have become saturated with shame instead of virtue. Drink also from the cup and expose your foreskin [the religious procedure]. The cup in the Lord's right hand [judgment] will get around to you, and the vomiting of shame will destroy your integrity."

Psalm 11:6 also has something to say about the devil's communion table: "He shall cause live coals to rain on the wicked ones; fire and brimstone and burning wind is the portion of their cup."

So from God's viewpoint this cup of lasciviousness, this cup of fornication in the name of religion, is a cup of burning coals, burning wind, a cup of fire and brimstone. In other words, it is a cup of judgment. While religion emphasises the drinking of it God emphasises the hangover from it. Religion combines the cup of demons of 1 Corinthians 10:21 with the doctrine of demons in 1 Timothy 4:1, and that is exactly why we have it all put together in these analogies in verse four. The content of this cup, then, is religion combined with idolatry in the phallic cult, and it results in drinking the cup of divine judgment.

This religion of the Tribulation is an international religion and it has four factors. Power is the first factor. It has great international power with the combination of purple and scarlet clothing. It controls nations. It is a religion not only being the nation but controlling nations. Secondly, it has great wealth and glamour. Thirdly, it is a system of lascivious pleasure, literal fornication combined with idolatry forming demonism, human sacrifice, everything involved in the devil's communion table of 1 Corinthians 10:20,21. Fourthly, it is a very high class type of religion. All of these things seem to be contradictory but they are combined in a very clever package which represents the great genius of Satan.

The identification of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation is now given in verse 5. Why is the title on her forehead? This is in keeping with the analogies we have previously noted. Prostitutes in the time of the Roman empire had to have a label pasted on their forehead, and it had a name on it which identified the individual as a Roman whore. First of all it had the fact that she was a prostitute and then it had her name, and it was always pasted on the forehead. This was the way in which they were identified. This is why in the analogy we have the name on the forehead. It was quite in keeping with the custom of the time. You really can't interpret the Bible unless you know about the time in which it was written.

"And upon her forehead was a name written." The connective conjunction kai is used to provide more information, therefore we translate it "Furthermore." Then we have the prepositional phrase, e)pi plus the accusative of metwpon, and with it the genitive of a)utoj, "her" forehead. This is in keeping, then, with the label pasted on the forehead of the Roman prostitutes. The Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written. One other thing they often had on the label was the part of the world from which they had come.

The word "has been written" is the perfect passive participle from grafw which means to write. It means written in the past with the result that it stands written forever. The next word is a part of the label. The label begins with the Greek word in the nominative of apposition, musthrion. Musthrion is used in a technical sense in the New Testament. "Furthermore, a name [label] has been written on her forehead." The word musthrion was originally used in Attic Greek and Ionic Greek to denote the secrets and the doctrines of the Greek fraternities in the ancient world. The noun is derived from the Ionic noun musthj, not found in the New Testament. When a person had been initiated into one of these fraternities he also was also said to be instructed in the secrets of that fraternity. The verb that was used was u)eom. He was learning the doctrines and the secrets of that fraternity and in doing so it was never to be known to outsiders. They actually worshipped the god Dionysus and went through a system of worship, demon worship actually. That was called musthrion and was the original meaning: the secrets by which the various fraternities were religions worshipping the gods of Mount Olympus, and how they actually managed to become demon-possessed. They were secret systems for demon contact.

In the New Testament it is not used in this sense, only in this passage. It is used in other passages to indicate a whole system of Bible doctrine that was never known to the Old Testament people and never known to Israel as a client nation. They were never known in the Old Testament scriptures but now, in the New Testament scriptures, they are revealed. They are revealed to the royal family of God, the Church Age believers. That is the technical meaning of the word "mystery" as used in the New Testament, except for our passage in Revelation chapter seventeen. Generally speaking the word "mystery" refers to Church Age doctrine.

Satan's ecumenical religion of the Tribulation is part of mystery doctrine but not Church Age mystery doctrine. In this case it is the mystery of an international religious system, an ecumenical system of religion that has never yet existed. There have been religious systems that have been semi-ecumenical historically but they have never penetrated into every part of the world and there never has been a totally ecumenical religious system, one that completely controlled the people of the world. Therefore, a true ecumenical system of international religion as Satan's system is still a future doctrine at this time to be fulfilled in the Tribulation itself.

The next words in our study are the words "Babylon the Great." This is not the city of Babylon, not the empire, but the religious system of Satan in the Tribulation. This system of international religion was sponsored by the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation, and the description of this religion as the devil's communion table follows in the next phrase which is the explanation of the prostitute label. It begins with the nominative of apposition from the noun mhthr, the word for mother in the Greek. With this is the genitive plural of relationship from the noun pornh, the Greek word for prostitute, plus the connective kai and the genitive plural of relationship from bdelugma which means generally "abomination", and the possessive genitive referring to planet earth.

So we have the title which has been written on her forehead: "Mystery, Babylon the Great [ecumenical religion of the Tribulation], the mother of prostitutes [the origin of all world religions since Satan became the ruler of this world] and the abominations of planet earth [the various evils of the phallic cult: demonism, idolatry, fornication, human sacrifice]."

The evil of religion comes from the motivation of arrogance. Satan is the father of religion; he is also the father of arrogance. The roots of the Babylonian religion lie far back in prehistoric time. All Babylonian religion was related to idolatry which is the basis of demon contact. In fact, idolatry is the devil's communion table. The reason why the title is called "Babylon the Great" is because every form of idolatry, every form of religion, has its origin in the pantheon at Babylon. We are not referring here to the city of Babylon or to any of the Babylonian empires, we are actually referring here to the origin of idolatry as a system of demon contact. For example, the chief god of the Babylonians was Marduk, sometimes called Bel. Marduk or Bel is the chief god comparable to the Greek Zeus, or the Phoenician Baal, or the Roman Jupiter, or the Jewish Merodach. But the origin of all of these pantheons with their chief god all started with Marduk or Bel. Even though the names are changed the concept is the same. The worship of Zeus was the same as the worship of Marduk; the worship of Baal in Israel and in Phoenicia, the same. The Greeks and the Romans had a comparable deity with a comparable system of religious worship. The god of the sky was called Anu and all of the ancients had some system for worshipping the sky. One of the worst was when Anu, the god of the sky, was converted into Molech for the sacrifice of children in burning. There is also the sun god of Babylon, called Nergal. Probably the most famous of all was the Babylonian Ishtar, the goddess of love, the goddess of fertility, and so on. This became the Phoenician goddess Ashtarte, the Greek goddess Aphrodite, the Roman goddess Venus, and all were comparable in the function of the phallic cult and the idolatrous worship. So the roots of Babylonian religion lie a way back in the prehistorical past but nevertheless were reflected in the pantheons of most of the ancient people.

The analogy to the prostitute we have noted should also be covered in some detail since obviously when the Bible makes an analogy we are to learn something from it. The prostitute is never emotionally involved with her customer and religion has neither virtue nor interest in its adherents. The mass poisoning of the Jones cult is a good illustration of why religion has as its analogy prostitution. The prostitute arouses lust in her customer; religion appeals to natural lusts related to both arrogance and sensualism. The prostitute makes money from the use of her body; religion makes money through its system of worship, demanding money for blessing. The prostitute represents an evil system — a pimp, a gangster syndicate; religion represents the greatest evil system of all, Satan and his demon organisation. The prostitute lures mankind into sin for fornication. In the same manner religion lures the believer away from Bible doctrine into the evilness and the sinfulness of the cosmic system. Fornication is both literal in the Bible and is used as an analogy to the modus operandi of religion. Fornication or spiritual adultery is also used to describe cosmic involvement, reversionism, and apostasy. Fornication is used as an analogy to religion extensively in this context.

Fornication is a sexual sin. It is sexual activity outside of the divine institution of marriage. Sex was designed to be an expression of love between a man and a woman in marriage. As an expression of category #2 love sex is not only legitimate and beautiful but it expresses the coalescence of body and soul of the two involved. Fornication, on the other hand, is categorised as seduction of a member of the opposite sex, or incest, homosexuality, lesbianism, bestiality, the molestation of children, indecent exposure, etc. A married woman is the property of one man. Fornication or adultery is simply stealing someone else's property, which is criminal activity. So under the laws given by Moses, the laws of divine establishment, fornication or adultery is forbidden. The prohibition is not confined to the Old Testament: 1 Corinthians 6:18, "Flee fornication."

Adultery and fornication are often used in the spiritual sense to describe religion, reversion, apostasy, cosmic involvement. In Revelation chapters 17, 18 and 19 we have references to fornication, none of which are literal, all have to do with religion. So we are dealing here with the analogy, not literal fornication.

We are now ready to note the policy of ecumenical religion toward the believers of the Tribulation, verse 6: "And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of saints." Just as fornication leads to criminality and degeneration so religion also leads to criminality and degeneration, "and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus: and when I saw her, I wondered with great admiration."

The passage is not entirely correctly translated in the King James version. We begin with the sequential use of the conjunction kai which is translated "Then," followed by the accusative singular direct object of the word gunh, "woman." Sometimes she is also called pornh which simply means prostitute. Remember that we are talking about religion, not Bible Christianity. Bible Christianity is not a religion. We have the aorist active indicative of o(raw, "Then I saw," and then the accusative singular, "the woman." This time she is said to be inebriated, the accusative singular, present active participle from the verb mequw. Why is drunkenness or inebriation used as an analogy? Because drunkenness also represents certain concepts. To drink is not sinful in itself; drunkenness is definitely a sin. But here we are dealing with the analogy which is to religion. What is there in drunkenness that is analogous to religion? Well, we can approach it from any standpoint. First of all, in drinking too much the blood stream is saturated and the ability to think is gone. Religion destroys the believer's ability to think in terms of Bible doctrine and unless you can think in terms of Bible doctrine you cannot apply doctrine to your experience. Anyone with a legalistic background cannot apply doctrine. The legalism has to go. Secondly, inebriation means you're close to death because when you breathe and cannot get oxygen into the blood stream the potential for death is there. But inebriation has other ideas here and the concept is that inebriation removes your restraints. Furthermore, it emphasises what you feel rather than what you think, therefore emotion comes into play. And so because religious people are worked up emotionally they are often, therefore, inspired by a religious leader to kill those who have the truth. Inebriation is an illustration of being emotionally worked up and losing the ability to think or apply, and that means moving toward criminality. When religion begins to have an effect upon people then immediately you move toward criminality.

So the woman becomes inebriated, and then there is a new kind of lust, blood lust. The phallic cult always starts out with all kinds of sexual activity. Any kind of sexual activity is approved and this is a form of lust that eventually leads to another lust, and that is the killer lust. That is why at the end of all phallic cult activity in religion they always have human sacrifice. Human sacrifice is a part of this ecumenical religious system and the victims are believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, those who will not renounce Christ as saviour, "inebriated with the blood of the saints" is an idiom for the destruction of believers in the Tribulation.

Next it says, "and the blood of the witnesses for Jesus." Of all of the systems in the world which lack virtue and are motivated by evil to demonstrate cruelty the worst form is religion. Religion has great great cruelty, evil and criminality related to it and the worst religion of all is one in the future, the truly international religious system which Satan will devise and will utilise the revived Roman empire to develop. Religion is always evil; religion is always cruel. Any sign of humanitarianism in religion is merely a superficial facade to create the impression rather than to express doctrine or truth from the Word of God. Religion persecutes the truth for religion is Satan's lie seeking to supersede the truth, seeking to destroy doctrine. This explains the Tribulation martyrs which we have studied in chapter 6:9-11; 7:13,14; 8:1-4; 14:13. By very nature, by very definition religion demands the destruction of believers who adhere to Bible doctrine and fulfill God's plan for their lives.

Religion has been invented by Satan to counterfeit the plan of God and to fulfill the objective of Satan to be like the Most High God. Christianity and religion are not the same. In Christianity man seeks and finds God through personal faith in Jesus Christ, which is tantamount, of course, to God seeking man. In religion man seeks to gain the approbation of God or some higher power through his own works and activity. Christianity is not a religion, it is a relationship with God through faith in Christ. In religion man seeks the approbation of God through his works, his human merit, and his systems. Religion emphasises the evil genius of Satan while Christianity represents the perfect integrity of God. In Christianity counterfeits are not there. Counterfeits are only in Satan's system of religion.

The ecumenical religious system in the Tribulation will have its own false teachers and its own system of cosmic evangelism. These teachers always practice hypocrisy and they often have a phony facade of piety, Romans 16:18. False teachers function under human public relations modus operandi and often use their legalism to court victims, such as in Galatians 4:17,18. False teachers appeal to human arrogance and pride and they suck their victims into gate one of cosmic one, 2 Corinthians 10:12. They promote idolatry, as per Habakkuk 2:18,19, and they also promote arrogant self-righteousness and all forms of legalism, according to 1 Timothy 1:6,7. False teachers not only exist in every generation of the Church Age but they will dominate in the Tribulation.

Idolatry is one of the areas in which religion functions, especially the ecumenical religion we are studying related to the Tribulation. Idolatry is the subject of the first two commandments of the decalogue. The first commandment prohibits mental or soulish idolatry, according to Deuteronomy 5:6,7, whereas the second commandment prohibits overt idolatry, Deuteronomy 5:8-10. Obviously, then, idolatry begins in the soul and proceeds to an overt system of practice. Mental idolatry always precedes overt idolatry and this is found as a principle in Ezekiel 14:7. Scar-tissue of the soul in cosmic involvement always precedes the modus operandi of idolatry. Idolatry is simply a manifestation of being in the cosmic system, according to Romans 1:18-25. For this reason idolatry is often called spiritual fornication because it involves unfaithfulness to the Lord. Idolatry is also the basis for contacting demons, demon possession, and demon influence, Deuteronomy 32:17; Psalm 106:36,37. The believer can only be under demon influence through false doctrine while the unbeliever can experience actual demon possession. So when the believer is involved in the cosmic system he is under demon influence. The unbeliever is under demon possession as well as demon influence.

Another reason for the references to fornication in our passage is that the phallic cult includes literal fornication, although that is not the kind of fornication we find in our passage. The phallic cult includes all kinds of immorality, Leviticus 18, demonism and demon influence, Leviticus 20:6, and human sacrifice, Leviticus 20:1-5.

We now move into the apostolic astonishment in Revelation 17:6. By this time very few things seem to astonish John and he has been in areas of life of degeneracy of the Claudio Julian Caesars. He has seen plenty of that which would be shocking. He is now inured to that type of thing. Nevertheless, seeing religion in the future causes him great shock. We begin with the connective use of the conjunction kai, "and," followed by the aorist active participle of the verb o(raw which is simply referring to the vision of the great prostitute. This is a temporal participle, Furthermore, the action of the aorist participle precedes the action of the main verb. It is a constative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety. The apostle John as the human author produces the action. So we translate it, "and when I saw."

Then we have the aorist active indicative of the verb qaumazw which means amazement or shock, "and when I saw her I was shocked." The culminative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, it regards what John has just seen with regard to religion and he is astonished at the cruelty of religion and the depravity of man in this function of the religion. The active voice: John produces the action. The indicative mood indicates the main verb plus the fact that it indicates John's true feelings in seeing the vision of religion as we have seen it in the first five verses. John was shocked by the fact that religion can have such a beautiful front and have such a tremendous system of concentrated evil. With this we have the accusative feminine singular of the intensive pronoun a)utoj used as a personal pronoun, and it is translated, "I was shocked at her." Then, to make sure that we understand it, we have what is called the cognate accusative made up of an adjective and a noun. The adjective is megaj and the noun is qauma, "great amazement [greatly shocked]." The shock came from all of the vileness and all of the degeneracy and the front which is so beautiful and attractive. The contrast between the two causes John to be shocked.

Translation of verse 6: "Then I saw the woman intoxicated with the blood of the saints, and the blood of the witnesses for Jesus: now when I saw her I was greatly shocked."

The reason for all of this is twofold. He is shocked that religion could exist under the greatest system of evangelism the world has ever known. The stronger the field of evangelism in any given generation the stronger the religious counterattack. Strong religious activity always accompanies great evangelism. What is always shocking is that the stronger the presentation of truth the stronger the reaction to truth. Reaction always causes a strong system not simply of antagonism but of false doctrine as well. So whenever truth is presented with strength there is always a great reaction to it. The principle: The evil of religion comes from the motivational arrogance and from the rejection of the truth.

In the Tribulation there is a tremendous concentration of normal followed by crisis evangelism. This is true of the first half of the Tribulation, it is true of the last half of the Tribulation. In the first half of the Tribulation the crisis evangelism is found in the seals; in the last half of the Tribulation it will be found in the bowl judgments. In between we have some tremendous crisis evangelism in that transition from the first to the last half. In this crisis evangelism we have divine judgment which distracts those who are in the cosmic system from the cosmic system so that they can have objectivity long enough to make a decision. All of this brings about a tremendous counterattack from Satan. Satan concentrates and focuses all of his genius in order to counterattack this system.

In the first six verses of this chapter we have now completed the vision and now we have an interpretation of the vision in verses 7-18 by the seventh pur sui vant messenger.

In verse 7 we start out with an interrogative introduction. The angelic Bible teacher here starts with a question: Why are you so shocked? What is the source of amazement here? These things are always going on, the total depravity of man is just as true as the magnificent virtue that is produced in the protocol system. You have man at his best in God's plan, man at his worst in Satan's plan. What is so shocking about that? The contrasts of life are always there. The only time you do not see the contrasts in life is when no one is thinking the truth, speaking the truth, or presenting the truth to the public. Then, of course, there is no contrast and therefore no basis for shock.

We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated “Then.” The subject is the nominative singular from a)ggeloi, “Then the angel,” and the aorist active indicative from legw, “Then the angel said,” followed by the dative singular indirect object, “to me,” e)gw.

The question comes in a prepositional phrase, dia plus the accusative singular of the interrogative pronoun tij, “because why” is the literal translation. When a prepositional phrase is used to introduce a question it means either pretended shock at the reaction or genuine shock. Here it is merely used as a means of introducing a new subject. Used in a direct question you do not translate the preposition, merely the object of the preposition. You do not say, “because why”, the literal translation, but the idiom is simply “Why?”

Then the aorist active indicative of the verb qaumazw follows. It means to be shocked, “Why are you shocked?” The dramatic aorist tense states a present reality with the certitude of a past event. The idiom is a device for emphasis, hence a dramatic aorist used to state what has just been realised. All of this from the vision finally comes into focus for John.

A principle must be developed at this point. You cannot ever learn beyond the point at which you are shocked, and when people become shocked at hearing the truth, no matter what form the truth may take, at that point they cease to learn because by being shocked they go into arrogant subjectivity. John went into a state of shock and before he can learn all of the details he must first get back into a state of objectivity. The active voice represents the state expressed by the verbal idea, the fact that the apostle went into shock. This is an interrogative indicative tense assuming that there is an actual fact that may be stated in answer to the question. There is a viewpoint which will be rapidly changed from subjectivity to objectivity.

Principle: If you are going to learn the whole realm of Bible doctrine you must never allow your subjectivity to hang out. Subjectivity must be changed instantly into objectivity. The only way that you can function under GAP at gate four of the divine dynasphere is to remain in a state of objectivity, and one of the great attacks on objectivity is to be shocked at the true language of the Word of God. When you find yourself being shocked at anything that happens in life you have immediately gone to subjectivity. You have to be very careful because subjectivity provides predilection for arrogance and before you know it you have entered gate one of cosmic one and therefore have intensified any possible negative volition that comes from preoccupation with self.

“Why are you shocked?” Religion tends to be “holy,” it always has a facade of pseudo-spirituality. It is a very superficial thing, it often includes some forms of self-righteousness and it always includes a demand for self-sacrifice. When people are entering into self-sacrifice it becomes one of the most subtle forms of potential arrogance. Most people involved in any type of sacrificial living usually have a very subtle and very evil form of arrogance. And it is always a shock to see religion, behind its facade of self-righteousness and its facade of holiness, producing so much evil and degeneracy. The facade of religion is not the true nature of religion and the believer must be able to discern and to penetrate the hypocrisy of religion to avoid any shock as the reaction to its evil deeds. Evil is the system that Satan has instilled and inculcated into his religious system. The evil of religion originates from motivational arrogance. Satan is the father of religion; he is also the originator, the author, the father, of arrogance as the motivation of evil.

“Then the angel said to me, Why are you so shocked? I will communicate to you the mystery of the woman.” When he says, “I will communicate to you” he combines the present tense of legw with the future of another verb which comes out the aorist e)ipon, which means he is going to bring it all into one neat package, the rest of the chapter. Sometimes there is a slightly different part used here and since this is all in the future he uses something that comes very close, e)irw, and that makes it future active indicative. It is a progressive future, he is going to explain the interpretation in the context. The active voice: the pur sui vant messenger will explain it and then will give way to even a greater teacher, the king of arms. The declarative indicative represents the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. He will now make a detailed explanation giving John a chance to recover his poise and to get it all down.

“I will communicate to you,” the dative singular indirect object as well as the dative of advantage from the pronoun su. And he doesn’t call it simply “the woman,” it is “the mystery of the woman.” We have already seen that this is not a literal woman but this is an analogy between the woman in the garden and the development of the system of religion. So we have a descriptive genitive singular of gunh, the accusative singular direct object of musthriwn, and it is translated “the mystery of the woman.” Therefore, he is going to explain in a little more detail international religion of the Tribulation.

With this also we have a connective kai. He is going to explain the religious system and then he is going to explain the seven heads. So he says, “I will communicate to you the mystery of the woman, the one who has the seven heads.” That means he is going to teach the whole thing and he is also going to teach about the beast dictator, “and the beast dictator who carries her.” The beast dictator, of course, refers to the revived Roman empire.

Translation: “Then the angel said to me, Why are you so shocked? I will communicate to you the mystery of the woman, and the beast dictator who carries her, and the one who has the seven heads and the ten horns.”

This means he is going to explain the woman as the religious system, the revived Roman empire, the seven heads, the ten horns, and he is going to throw in the waters of verse one. The outline for the rest of the chapter is: The interpretation of the beast, verse 8; the interpretation of the seven heads, verses 9-10; the interpretation of the beast concluded, verse 11; the interpretation of the ten horns, verses 12,13; the interpretation of the waters, verse 15; the interpretation of the ten horns is continued and concluded, verses 16,17; the interpretation of the woman herself, verse 18. Notice that he begins the explanation of an interpretation and then must insert some information and then go back to it.

In verse 7 we noticed that the seventh pur sui vant messenger continued his dissertation on the vision: “Then the angel said to me, Why are you so shocked? I will communicate to you the mystery of the woman, and the beast who carries her, the one who has the seven heads and the ten horns.” Then the rest of the chapter becomes interpretation.

In verse 8 we have the beginning of the interpretation of the beast; in verses 9-10 we have the interpretation of the seven heads; in verse 11 the interpretation of the beast is continued and concluded; in verses 12-13 is the interpretation of the ten horns; in verse 15 is the interpretation of the waters; in verses 16-17 the interpretation of the ten horns is continued and concluded; in verse 18 is the interpretation of the woman.

We begin by noting in verse 8 that the subject is in the nominative singular. It is the noun qhrion, translated “beast dictator” inasmuch as it refers to the dictator of the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation. Immediately following we have a qualifying phrase introduced with the nominative neuter singular of the relative pronoun o(j, translated “that.” Then we have the aorist active indicative of the verb o(raw inasmuch as John is looking at this picture through a vision. John has seen the vision; now this angel is interpreting the vision, he records the interpretation in order that we might understand the eschatological implication of this passage and the next chapter dealing with religion in future. This is followed by the imperfect active indicative of the verb e)jimi, the verb to be, “The beast that you saw was.”

“That you saw” is a reference to John’s vision in chapter 13:1-10. The verb “was” is in the imperfect tense and is linear aktionsart in past time. This is a reference to the Roman empire at the time that John wrote in AD 96 when the empire was about to take a turn for the better. The active voice: the historical Roman empire in the year AD 96 produces the action. The declarative indicative is for the historical reality of the existence of the Roman empire at the time that John wrote.

Next we have a connective conjunction kai and the negative o)uk plus the present active indicative of e)jimi. E)jimi this time in the present tense with o)uk, the negative which goes with the indicative mood, added. It is translated correctly, “and is not.” This is a pictorial present tense, it brings to mind a picture of the Roman empire in AD 476 when the Roman empire was terminated officially. The active voice: the Roman empire produces the action of the verb by ceasing to exist. The indicative mood is declarative for a statement of historical fulfillment and the future as far as John is concerned, therefore eschatological to John, historical to us. “The beast that you saw,” the vision of Revelation 13:1-10, “was,” the empire at the time of John AD 96, “and is not,” the Roman empire in 476 AD, the year it ceased to exist.

Then we have another connective conjunction kai, and we have two verbs to describe the next phrase. We have the present active indicative of the verb mellw which means about to be, and is generally translated “about to.” With this is the present active infinitive of the verb a)nabainw which means to ascend, to go up, to come up. We are going to translate it, “and is about to come up”. It is a reference to the dictatorship of the revived Roman empire in the Tribulation. Then we have a prepositional phrase, e)k plus the ablative of a)bussoj, transliterated “the abyss,” referring to the fourth compartment of Hades where Abaddon and the first demon assault army were quartered. The abyss indicates that Satan gives the power to the revived Roman empire. There would be no revived Roman empire apart from Satanic power. It is about to come up from the abyss and that is the rise of the dictator of the revived Roman empire, and it refers to the last half of the Tribulation.

We have connective conjunction kai once more plus the present active indicative of u(pagw, one of the words which means to go, “and he will go.” The present tense is a futuristic present denoting an event which has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as already coming to pass. The active voice: the dictator of the revived Roman empire will produce the action in his judgment, a judgment we are now in the process of studying. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the judgment of the revived Roman empire in the Tribulation plus the judgment of the ecumenical system which came into power through it.

We have one more prepositional phrase, the prepositional e)ij plus the accusative singular of a)poleia, “to destruction.” In this case “destruction” or a)poleia refers to the lake of fire, Revelation 19:20.

The next sentence indicates that as far as unbelievers are concerned, and probably a lot of believers too, this Roman empire is going to have good press. The admiration of unbelievers is mentioned next. We have the emphatic use of the conjunction kai, translated “in fact.” It is followed by the articular present active participle of the verb katoikew, but this is the participle not used as a verb but used as a substantive. It means simply “inhabitants,” “in fact the inhabitants of the earth,” the prepositional e)pi plus the genitive of gh. It refers to those who live on planet earth during the Tribulation but they must be qualified and the category of mankind is given after the verb. The future passive indicative of qaumazw means, this time, not to be shocked but to be amazed. It refers her to admiration. It has the connotation of shock and admiration, and it can be translated “in fact the inhabitants of the earth will marvel,” but perhaps a better translation would be “stand in admiration.” The gnomic future tense is for a statement of fact that may be expected with the rise of the beast dictator and the manifestation of Satan’s power through him. Man apart from the knowledge of truth and the knowledge of doctrine is always amazed and in admiration of Satanic power. The passive voice: this is a deponent verb, passive in form, active in meaning. The unbelievers of the Tribulation, especially the press, will give great admiration to this empire. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the admiration of the fourth estate and the people of the world at that time.

The category of admirers is given in a relative clause. The relative clause begins with a relative pronoun in the genitive case, o(j, this time translated “who.” We have a nominative singular subject in the noun o)noma which has numerous meanings. It can mean anything from names to personality but in this case “name” is a very good translation, and we translate it “whose name.” The relative pronoun now comes into focus and then the negative o)u plus the verb grafw, and the verb is in the perfect passive indicative, “whose names have not been written in the book of life.” The book of life has been noted before, it is the book in which the names of all the people of the world are written. However, when people die not having accepted Christ as saviour their name is blotted out of the book of life so that by the time we reach eternity the book of life has the names of believers only plus the titles of royal family that have been earned during life in phase two of the Church Age. But here in our passage we have people who are not in the book of life as it will be finalised.

It says that this book of life is “from the foundation of the world,” a)po plus the ablative of katabolh, “from the foundation,” plus the descriptive genitive of kosmoj, “in fact the inhabitants of the earth whose name had not been written in the book of life from the foundation of the world.” These are the ones who will marvel or stand in admiration.

Translation: “The beast [the dictator of the revived Roman empire] that you saw [John’s vision] was [the Roman empire at the time of John], and is not [the fall of the Roman empire in 476 AD], and is about to come up out from the abyss [the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation], and then he will go to destruction [the lake of fire, the judgment of the beast]: in fact, the inhabitants of the earth whose name [the singular for the fact that each one has a chance] has not been written in the book of life [unbelievers of the Tribulation] from the foundation of the world, will stand in admiration when they see the beast dictator that was, and is not, and yet he will exist [the rise of the Roman empire in the future].”

Then we note that because of Satan’s sponsorship the existence of this revived Roman empire of the Tribulation as the vehicle for the expression of the dictator’s power becomes a source of admiration to the unbelievers of the Tribulation.

We have noted three things about what religion really lacks. First of all we have noted from John chapter three that religion needs regeneration. Jesus explained what religion needed when He dealt with the religion of Judaism which must be distinguished from those who are believers in Israel in the Old Testament. He said, “You must be born again.” Religion could not cope with this doctrine of regeneration. In Matthew chapter 23 we learned what religion lacks. It lacks the function of virtue and the wonderful principles of grace and it has, therefore, the self-righteous arrogance which always goes with religion. In Revelation chapters 17 & 18 we learn how religion peaks out in the Tribulation and is destroyed. We also should note the system of punishment involved here. In Revelation chapter 17 religion made its own bad decisions, bad decisions from a position of weakness when it lusted for political power. The ecumenical religious system of the Tribulation will have phenomenal political power, more than any religious system that has ever existed. This bad decision results in the eventual downfall of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation from its own policy, but we are going to see in the first eight verses of chapter eighteen more of the administration of divine judgment by death. We are going to learn from this passage that before the administration of this judgment from God religion had destroyed itself by becoming a political power. When we get to the next chapter we are going to see a great principle: Neither religion nor Christianity should ever lust for political power. The impact and dynamics of Christianity are always within the function of the client nation and believers must advance to maturity in the protocol system rather than become involved in social action or in any form of civil disobedience. Reform of any kind is not the answer. What is the position of the believer with regard to the state? It is to support its establishment principles, law enforcement: the judge on the bench; the military establishment; a free enterprise economy. Beyond that our responsibility is to have everything to do with the protocol system. It is our advance to maturity that turns things around in the client nation. We cannot change anything by social action, we only make it worse. We can have dynamic influence spiritually through momentum inside the divine dynasphere. This will be a major thrust in the first part of the next chapter.

The one phrase we must look at is the prepositional phrase in verse 8, "from the foundation of the world." We have been talking about prophecy but we are not talking about prophecy that is predicted in time, we are talking about prophecy that was predicted in eternity past before man existed. But it is a little more than that. It is the concept that perfect God is the source of divine good. Perfect God is never responsible for bad decisions; we are responsible for our own bad decisions and we make our own misery by bad decisions. Perfect God is not responsible for sin, for human good, for the evil of the cosmic system; all of that is the responsibility of the individual. Of course, sin, human good, and evil originates from the free will of man, the self-determination motivated by the cosmic system on the one hand or the old sin nature on the other hand, or both. Because the omniscience of God knew how free will would operate in every situation He fed all of these facts into the computer of divine decrees. God is therefore responsible for election, for ordination, but man is responsible for reprobation, for the total depravity which exists. To God belongs the glory of salvation of believers but to mankind belongs the responsibility for the ruin that we find in this world. This is the devil's world but we make decisions that contribute to its ruin. Man's responsibility meets God's glory in the doctrine of divine decrees. It is the doctrine of divine decrees that explains the phrase "from the foundation of the world." Essentially, the omniscience of God feeds the facts into the computer of divine decrees and the computer prints out the facts about believers, unbelievers, about every person who ever lived or ever will live. Therefore, "from the foundation of the world" demands that we examine the significance of this phrase in the light of the doctrine of divine decrees.

The best theological definition of the divine decrees is that the decree of God is His eternal, holy, wise, and sovereign purpose comprehending at once all things that ever were or will be in their causes, conditions, successions and relations, and determining their certain futuration. That is theological, and every part of that definition is technical and important. The several contents of this one eternal purpose of God are, because of the limitations of our faculties, necessarily conceived by us in partial aspects and logical relations. Therefore, we call it decrees; we can't take it all in at once. The decrees of God are His eternal and immutable will regarding the future existence of events which will happen in time and the precise manner by which they will occur. Furthermore, the order of their occurrence is in the decrees, so that we might say that the decrees of God are His eternal and sovereign will related to time, and the events of time will happen in a precise manner and order of their occurrence. By the decree, then, is meant the eternal plan by which God has rendered certain all events. That is what the decrees actually means. God has rendered certain all the events of the universe: the events of the past, the present, and the future. How He has done this we will have to note because there is no conflict between the sovereignty of God and the free will of man, except in the function of man's negative volition. The decrees of God are the chosen and the adopted plan of all His works; they are His eternal purpose, according to the counsels of His own will whereby for His own glory he has foreordained whatever comes to pass. The decrees of God, then, are pictured as a giant computer. The omniscience of God feeds facts into the computer. In fact, fed facts in eternity past “before the foundation of the world.” The omniscience of God feeds the computer of divine decrees.

The omniscience of God is one of three categories of divine knowledge. The computer of divine decrees, of course, prints out facts about everything that has ever been thought, every motive that has ever existed, every free will decision ever made. So God knew billions and billions of years ago everything that everyone would ever think long before it happened. The decrees of God, then, are the sum total of God’s plan designed in eternity past before the foundation of the world, in our passage: “from the foundation of the world,” and relating to all events of every classification collected into one single all-comprehensive whole through the omniscience of God. The omniscience of God is the key.

The first of the three categories of divine knowledge is the divine knowledge of self. God the Father knows Himself perfectly in all of His attributes and how they function. He knows the coequal attributes, the eternal and infinite attributes of the Son and the Spirit and, of course, vice versa. God’s knowledge of self deals with God and therefore is not the subject of divine decrees. We are going to see that there is a third category of divine knowledge called foreknowledge but it is not in the picture as yet because, foreknowledge cannot occur until the decrees are set. So foreknowledge is a technical way of explaining the mechanics of all prophecy. Foreknowledge is not synonymous with omniscience; omniscience is not synonymous with God’s knowledge of self. Billions of years ago God knew Himself perfectly, there never was a time when the members of the Godhead did not know themselves and the other members perfectly. Omniscience has to do with creatures and history and time. Entered into the divine decrees is every thought, every motive, every decision, every action of every person in history, and how they all relate at any given point at any given time. God didn’t coerce in any way man’s volition but God knew from His omniscience every decision that man would ever make. Omniscience also knows the probables, the things that didn’t happen but could have happened, but they are not entered into the computer. Only in the computer of divine decrees is what did happen, what was thought, what decisions were made, and what actions took place. The probables were never entered, the person you could have married and didn’t, the school you could have attended and didn’t, the decision to live somewhere else but you did not; and the results of that down to the last generation of the Millennium are known to the omniscience of God but they are never decreed. They are probables, therefore they are not decreed.

So we have to start with the omniscience of God since that is the key, then we will get to the computer. God knows perfectly and simultaneously all that is knowable. Note the word “simultaneously”. This is in eternity past but He knows the actual; He knows the possible; He knows the real; He knows the probable. Such perception and sagacity is totally compatible with His divine essence. God is eternal; His knowledge is eternal. God is sovereign; His knowledge is superior, not related to any angelic or human limitations. His knowledge is infinitely superior to creature knowledge or to creature intellect. Every minute detail of both the angelic and human creation is completely and perfectly in His mind at all times, there never was a time when it wasn’t in His mind. Therefore, omniscience perceives the free as free, the necessary as necessary, together with all their causes, conditions and relations, as one indivisible system of things, every link of which is essential to the integrity of the whole, the integrity of the whole we will call the divine decrees.

Illustration: the doctrine of unlimited atonement. When Jesus Christ went to the cross all the personal sins in the history of the human race were collected in the computer, they were not imputed to individuals. When it says “the wages of sin is death” it means we are born spiritually dead. Adam’s original sin is imputed to the genetically-formed old sin nature. Our personal sins are never imputed to us for judgment, they are in the divine decrees. The omniscience of God before the foundation of the world knew every person who would ever exist, every sin they would ever commit. So programmed into the computer is one area called sin — the sins of the entire world, even sins that haven’t been committed yet. People have often asked: How could Jesus Christ hanging on the cross die for sins that hadn’t been committed yet. The answer is in the doctrine of divine decrees, they were in the computer of divine decrees and there was simply a printout at the cross. All the sins that had ever been committed were programmed into the computer before man existed.

Time has nothing to do with God’s knowledge, the future is as perspicuous as the past. The omniscience of God also knows the alternatives to history, the probables as well as the actual. God knows all that would have been involved in every case where man’s decisions might have been different from what it was. Notice that God in knowing these things did not coerce man’s volition in eternity past before the foundation of the world, and He doesn’t do it now. God is a gentleman, He does not interfere with the function of our volition.

With three categories of divine knowledge only one is pertinent to programming the computer. Self-knowledge includes divine essence, the Trinity, and all things. Omniscience: all things in creation, actual or possible. Foreknowledge: knowledge of what is in the computer related to believers only, hence it is a printout for believers only. The omniscience of God knows every thought, every action, every decision of history and how they relate at any given time at any given point in history, who was there, how they react, what the relationships are, the whole thing plus what the alternatives would have been. The foreknowledge of God makes nothing certain, it merely acknowledges what is certain, what is in the decrees regarding the believer. So when we go back to the computer again the foreknowledge of God is simply a printout, therefore definitely not the same as omniscience of God. The omniscience of God programs the computer; foreknowledge is a printout of the computer. In other words, foreknowledge means that as far as believers are concerned there are numerous printouts from the computer of divine decrees — three that have very special interest to us: foreknowledge, election, and predestination. Foreknowledge: nothing can be known unless it is first decreed, therefore God foreknows all events as certainly future because He has decreed them. This includes every free will decision. God’s foreknowledge and God’s omniscience has nothing whatever to do with the function of your free will. God knows how you are going to function and He does not coerce your free will in eternity past any more than He does in time. God allows you to be the result of your own decisions. Man is the result of his own thoughts. God’s decrees relate equally to all future events of every kind, to the free actions of moral agents as well as the actions of necessary agents, to sin to evil, to human good, as well as to moral, divine good, honour and even virtue developed and achieved inside the protocol system. Foreordination or predestination alone establishes certainty because foreordination or predestination is the printout of the decrees. Hence, foreordination is an act of the infinitely intelligent and wise God in determining the certain futuration of all events. The omniscience of God decreed everything simultaneously, not by stages.

The omniscience of God fed only facts to the computer of divine decrees. This was accomplished in eternity past before the universe existed. The omniscience of God decreed everything simultaneously. The decrees have become the complete and consummated right of the sovereignty of God determining the certain futuration of all events, including human history. No event, however, is directly effected or caused by the decrees. The fact that information is fed into the computer doesn't mean that the computer causes these things but the decree itself provides in every case that the event shall be effected by causes acting in a manner consistent with the nature of the events in question. Therefore, in the case of every free will act of a moral agent the decree itself provides at the same time the following things: a. that the agent shall be a free agent, the computer isn't the cause of anything; b. that his antecedents and all the antecedents of every act in question shall be what they shall be. In other words, the chain of events started by a bad decision is started by a bad decision and not by the computer; c. that all present conditions of the act shall be what they are. Again, they are what they are not because of the computer and not because of the sovereignty of God, but because the omniscience of God knew these things; d. that the act shall be perfectly spontaneous and free on the part of the agent; e. that it shall be certainly future. That is why we have in our phrase, "whose name has not been written in the book of life from the foundation of the world". Hence, the decrees vested solely with the will of God what His creation should be because God cannot contradict His own nature, His own being, His own essence and His own attributes. Therefore the attributes of God necessitated His willing the highest and best for mankind.

It is the omniscience of God that feeds the computer of divine decrees. The sovereignty of God wants the best for you but the sovereignty of God cannot go against your volition. God put into the computer how your volition would function. It is not the way that your volition functions when you make a bad decision and that becomes a printout of history. That is not the fault of the decrees, it is not the fault of the omniscience of God, nor is it the sovereignty of God. God only wills the best for you. When you make a bad decision you will for yourself the worst for yourself.

God is not willing that any should perish but that all should come to a change of attitude toward Christ. If God's sovereign will was universally accepted on this earth every person would be a believer. The sovereignty of God would make everyone a believer. But He doesn't do that. A creature with a free will, called a free moral agent technically, is simply the way in which the angelic conflict is being resolved. So this becomes a very important principle in the concept of divine decrees.

The decrees express the eternal plan and will of God by which God has rendered certain all events in history. Therefore, the decrees are the eternal and simultaneous knowledge of the omniscience of God expressing the will of God, sometimes His permissive will, sometimes (when good decisions are made) His sovereign will, His absolute will, but they are all in the computer and they all result in His glory. No matter how many times wrong decisions are made and become the printout of human history God in His glory will triumph no matter how far man goes in the wrong direction, no matter how far angelic creatures have gone in the wrong direction. This is a part of the principle that Jesus Christ controls history.

What are the characteristics, then, of the decrees? The decrees include all the facts fed into the computer. There is one all-inclusive will and purpose of God concerning all that ever was or will be, and in that all-inclusive purpose he allows for man to reject Christ as saviour, even though it is His will that no man should perish; He allows for man to go negative; He allows for man to reject the truth; he allows man to take the consequences for his own decisions, all as a part in the decrees, everything that actually happens, not the probable, not the possible. The will and purpose originates wholly within Himself, therefore God alone has designed it all for His own satisfaction and is compatible with His own essence, and it is related to His eternal glory. God will inevitably be glorified through it all, the worst decisions and the best decisions. Time and space are a battlefield and the details reach all the way down to the minutia, the minor details of the falling of a sparrow.

How the members of the Trinity function in the decrees, like the Father sending the Son, the Father and the Son sending the Spirit, is imminent, intrinsic and known to them from eternity past. How the Godhead supports and sustains the believer is extrinsic, transient, and very objective as stated in the principles of Bible doctrine. The decrees, therefore, are efficacious in that they certainly determine all that ever was or ever will be. The decrees guarantee certainty; the decrees guarantee reality. The foreknowledge of God makes nothing certain, it merely perceives what is already certain in the decrees. Remember that the omniscience of God feeds the facts into the computer of divine decrees while the foreknowledge of God is simply the printout, the reading. The decrees of God are all comprehensive, not the slightest uncertainty could exist in one of the smallest events without confusion to all events. Therefore, all events are interwoven and interdependent. The decrees of God are also eternal. God is not gaining in knowledge, God always knew that there never was a time when He didn't know. What God has known at any time He has always known. This means that the decrees are decreed simultaneously in eternity past, resulting sometimes in phrases like in Ephesians, "from before the foundation of the world", resulting here in our passage, "from the foundation of the world." The decrees of God are perfect where God's plan is in operation. God is perfect, therefore God's plan is perfect. God's plan includes all imperfect persons but maintains its perfection and its integrity through the protocol system, through the policy of grace, through the priorities of the plan of God. The decrees of God are unchangeable and certain, nothing can arise to necessitate change. Everything was known, decreed, made certain, entered into the computer in eternity past. God is not bound to follow a necessary pattern or a course by having decreed, God is bound by His infinite faithfulness and His incorruptible integrity plus His immutable truth to complete what He has begun. God has decreed ends as well as means, causes as well as effects, conditions and instrumentalities as well as events that depend upon them. All of them went into the divine decrees, the computer is loaded with this information.

Some things God has decreed to do Himself, creation, salvation, control history. Other things God accomplishes through the action of secondary causes. Other things God has decreed to promote or to permit free agents to do in the exercise of their own volition, free from their own personal self-determination. However, one category of events decreed is rendered by the decree of God just as certainly future as any of the other categories. In other words, all of it is in the computer. So there is one all-inclusive will and purpose of God concerning all that ever was or ever will be from the beginning of human history until its termination in the last days of the Millennium. This will and purpose of God which we call the computer of divine decrees originates from within Himself, His own omniscience, long before any creature or creation existed. This means that the will of God and the purpose of God related to the decrees is designed for His glory, His pleasure, and His satisfaction. Ultimately, everything is going to be for His glory. All creatures have been placed in space and in time. Furthermore, all events related to space and time were simultaneously decreed resulting in divine action within two categories, within the Godhead, the action of the members of the Trinity being imminent, intrinsic, and subjective (in a good sense); related to creation the actions of God are extrinsic demanding cognisance, transient demanding chronological function in human history, and objective. The objectivity comes from the perception of doctrine in the protocol system. God did not decree Himself to exist. God eternally existed before and outside the computer of divine decrees so that the divine decrees do not act upon God, God acts upon the decrees. God's decrees are efficacious, they determine everything that ever was or ever will be, including directive, permissive, and the overruling will of God. All things depend on what God has put into the decrees because all things that ever occurred were pre known by His omniscience. Nothing is certain apart from the omniscience of God. Remember that God's decrees originate from His omniscience in eternity past, separating fact from fiction. Therefore distinction must be made between the omniscience of God and the foreknowledge of God.

God desires His perfect will and sovereignty but both angelic and human creatures use their God-given free will and self-determination to violate the will and sovereignty of God. God does not desire to cast creatures into the lake of fire forever but it is so decreed under the printout of retribution for all who express negative volition toward the salvation God has provided. God does not desire discipline of the believer but it is decreed for involvement in the cosmic system. Distinction should be made between the decrees of God in eternity past and God's actions in time. The actions of God in time is the execution of the decrees of eternity past. The execution is not the decree but logically follows the decree. Distinction should be made between God's decrees and God's laws. Decrees are the plan and action entering into the computer all that is historical, while the laws regulate human function and human action. The laws of God are completely revealed in the scriptures; the decrees of God are partially revealed.

In verses 9 and 10 we have the interpretation of the seven heads. In verse 9 we have the historical and prophetic continuity of empires and religion. We do not have the word "and" in the context of the Greek. We actually begin with an adverb of place, w(de, which means in the Greek that we are having a change completely. With this we have an ellipsis, "Here is," and then the predicate nominative of the noun nouj, which has many related meanings from mind to the faculty of thinking. We will translate it simply, "Here is the mind," or "Here is the faculty of thinking.” Then the faculty of thinking is described. We have the articular present active participle of the verb e)χw, which means to have, and with it is the accusative direct object from sofia which is wisdom. So it begins: “Here is the mind which has wisdom.” Wisdom is the application of doctrine. The definite article is used as a relative pronoun. The progressive present tense is for an action in a state of persistence. And the believer who can apply doctrine produces the action. The participle is circumstantial. The faculty of thinking is designed for wisdom.

Prophecy has interpretation and the interpretation begins immediately after the word “wisdom,” for there must be interpretation before there can be application. We have the phrase, “The seven heads are seven mountains.” The present active indicative of e)imi is the verb to be here, it is a static present taken for granted as a historical and eschatological principle of doctrine. The active voice: the seven empires of the past controlled by religion produce the action, and the indicative mood is declarative for an accurate statement of eschatological interpretation. The seven heads are said to be seven mountains. The only trouble is, what does the word o)roj mean? Obviously mountains are set up as an analogy. Mountains are sometimes used for nations or empires in the scripture. In anticipation of the rest of the passage the seven mountains are used to designate seven empires in the past where religion had dominated the state and at the same time had a deleterious effect upon the nation of Israel. These nations are Egypt, Assyria, Babylonia-Chaldea, Media-Persia, Graeco-Macedonia, the historical Roman empire at the time that John writes. Number seven is the prophetic Roman empire of the Tribulation. Mountains used for nations is not unusual since Mount Zion is often used to represent the nation Israel.

Then we have the rest of it. “The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sits.” The woman, again, is the nominative singular from gunh, and where the woman sits is the present active indicative of the verb kaqhmai which means to sit in the sense of dominate. The static present means that she continues to control. The active voice: religion dominates these empires. The indicative mood is declarative for a clarification of the interpretation. The interpretation is this: whenever religion dominates an empire or a nation that empire or nation degenerates because of the religious control.

“Here is the faculty of thinking which has wisdom [the application of doctrine]. The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sits.” The woman is Satanic, a form of a Satanic religious system which becomes the ruler of the political.

Verse 10, the next phrase belongs with verse 9 rather than verse 10. We have, “Furthermore they are seven kings.” Now we know exactly what they are. Again we have the Greek verb e)imi, and with it a predicate nominative of basileuj, and with it the indeclinable e)pta, the adjective numeral, “seven kings.” The mountains represent kings or dictators, or dictator-type empires actually. The perfective present tense of e)imi denotes the continuation of existing results. The active voice: the seven heads produce the action. The indicative mood is for a dogmatic statement of eschatological interpretation. “Furthermore they are seven kings [or dictatorships].” They are seven empires run by dictators.

Several erroneous interpretations are rather intriguing with regard to this particular passage. The reason is because they emphasise the numeral adjective e(pta [seven] rather than basileuj [kings]. For example, one of the interpretations assumes that the seven mountains called o)roj, which could also be seven hills, are the seven hills on which Rome was founded. It is a fascinating interpretation. The trouble is it emphasises seven, the adjective, rather than the noun. Others take the view that the seven Roman rulers are in view here. In Roman history they had seven forms of rulers. That is intriguing except all of these deal strictly with Rome and they always emphasise the adjective rather than the noun. The problem is that the last phrase of these interpretations says that they are seven kings. You can't stop at the seven mountains.

It is quite obvious that each mountain is a separate empire, dictatorship type. It is a separate empire with separate rulers. These are seven individual type kings or dictators, they are not one empire with one emporator. The woman, who is religion, rides on these empires. It means that the woman is on the roll, she's been on the roll ever since Egypt was dominated by a religion. These empires come into view sequentially and the woman as religion dominates each one of them. This means that she influences them in the same way that the fornicating female has influence in the ancient world. Often the ancient prostitute was related to the religion and the phallic cult in the practice of her profession. The Bible must again be interpreted in the time in which it was written and temple prostitution and the priestess of the phallic cult had tremendous influence in the ancient world. Therefore the reason for the analogy.

The seven mountains, then, are seven empires. The intriguing explanation emphasises the seven kings as Roman emperors in the time of John. John was fulfilling his ministry from Ephesus from which he wrote the gospel of John, 1,2, and 3 John, and also Revelation on Patmos, all between 90 and 96 AD. While John was carrying on his ministry in Ephesus there were actually seven Roman emperors. The first one was Galba, 69 AD. When Nero was assassinated Galba immediately marched from Spain to Rome, backed by the "Spanish" legions, the Roman legions stationed in Spain. He was proclaimed emperor but Otho in the same year bribed the Praetorian Guard. So they set aside Galba and Otho became number two in that same year, backed by the Praetorian Guard. In the meantime Vitellius had marched with the army of the Rhine to Rome and by the time he had arrived there he outnumbered everyone so he became the third emperor. Then, in the meantime Vespasian, backed by the Syrian legions, including the three legions that were besieging Jerusalem, became the fourth emperor in AD 70. When Vespasian died in 79 he was replaced by Titus, his son, who ruled from 79-81 when he died. Then the younger brother, Domitian, was the emperor from 81-96. It was Domitian, the son of Vespasian who actually sent John to the Isle of Patmos. When he was assassinated in 96 Nerva, the brilliant old man, became the first of the Antonine Caesars from 96-98. What makes this fascinating is the fact that in verse 10 John says, "five are fallen, one is, and one is to come." Well, five had fallen in John's time, Galba, Otho, Vitellius, Vespasian, Titus. Then, "one is," and that was Domitian. He was soon to go and then there will come another, Nerva. So it just works out perfectly. The only trouble is that the actual exegesis will not really stand it. It is just one of those nice interpretations that fits but doesn't work. It violates the contents of the exegesis because in the exegesis you will notice even from the translation that "the seven heads are seven mountains who are seven kings.” In other words, they are separate empires, not just one empire.

So we have the status quo of the seven heads in verse 10. We start out with the indeclinable numeral pente, “five,” are fallen. These are five empires and instead of referring to those emperors they refer to five mountain empires. The first is Egypt, then Assyria, Babylonia, the Medes and the Persians, Graeco-Macedonia. Rome becomes the one that is, the historical empire at the time of John in AD 96. AD 96 is one of the most important dates in Roman history for this reason: it brought an end to the Flavian emperors represented by the evil Domitian. And just as the Julio-Claudians by the evil Nero, so the evil Domitian ended what was otherwise a very good line of emperors. He was the one that sent John to the Island of Patmos and when he died one of the things that Nerva did was to bring John back to Ephesus. By going back to Ephesus John again set up face-to-face in Ephesus and in the other six churches in what we now call Turkey John’s ministry was where the major pivot of the Roman empire was. Once the pivot switched from Syria where it had been, then into Europe and then to Turkey, the pivot which developed in Turkey became the basis for the greatest one hundred years of history, the period of the Antonine Caesars. This period also ended with Commodus. There were three emperors who ended a line: Nero, who died by violence; Domitian, died by violence; Commodus, died by violence.

It is always darkest before the dawn and when John was sent to the Island of Patmos that was the darkest moment for Christianity. But the dawn came with the death of Domitian and bringing to the throne Nerva, a very old and wise man, and John was about to have his greatest ministry though at this time he must have been in his late sixties or early seventies.
