Corrected translation: "And so you yourselves have forgotten the principle of doctrine which teaches you as sons, 'My son, do not make light of corrective discipline from the Lord, nor be fainting when you are reprov'd of him': for whom the Lord loves he disciplines and punishes [in time] ever son whom he welcomes home. Because of corrective discipline, endure [inside the divine dynasphere], as a result God deals with you as sons; for what one is a son whom the Father has not disciplined? But if you are without discipline, of which all believers have become participants, then you are bastards [unbelievers], and not sons. Another point: we have our human parents for corrective discipline, and we respected that: therefore to a greater degree you will become subordinate to the Father of spirits, and continue living in the divine dynasphere. For they [human parents] on the one hand discipline us for a short time [during childhood], and they did so according to what seemed best to them; but he [God] on the other hand, disciplines us for our profit in order that we might receive a share of his integrity [the blessing which comes from residence and function inside the divine dynasphere]. So on the one hand all discipline while in progress [in time] appears to be an occasion not for happiness, but for sorrow. On the other hand, afterwards [recovery from the cosmic system] it pays back with interest prosperous gain [resumption of momentum in the divine dynasphere] from virtue to those believers who are trained or taught by that discipline. Therefore restore to power [the divine dynasphere] the listless hands [analogy to life in the cosmic system: no energy, as it were], and disabled knees [analogy to function in the cosmic system]. Be making straight tracks by means of your feet [momentum from gate four to gate eight] in order that the cripple [the believer involved in the cosmic system] may not be put out of joint [through living in the cosmic system], but rather be healed [be restored to the divine dynasphere]. With all the royal family of God keep moving toward the objective [advance to maturity] which is the state of prosperity [from the supergrace blessings in six paragraphs]."

This, then, is the concept of suffering for discipline in time. But there is another category: no divine discipline during the interlude of blessing after death or after the Rapture. And whether you are a winner or a loser in time, whether you die under the principle of dying grace or whether you die under the principle of the sin unto death, this is an interlude of blessing in which you are in an interim body and recognisable. No distinction is made between winners and losers.

Then there is a third category for the cosmic believer in time. There is great embarrassment at the point of the Rapture of the Church which is followed by the judgment seat of Christ. At this point there is a great distinction made between losers and winners in time. The embarrassment of losers at the judgment seat of Christ is mentioned in 1 John 2:28. Winners, on the other hand, are described as those who will not be embarrassed at the judgment seat of Christ, Romans 5:5.

All wrong decisions, including carnality and reversionism, relate to cosmic involvement and cosmic function. We get into the cosmic system by our own decisions, we stay there by our own decisions and in the cosmic system we cannot make any good decisions except one, namely the rebound technique. All wrong decisions in life are connected with some form of arrogance which emphasises gate one, cosmic one as not only the motivating arrogance but as the system of applying the arrogance we have to life. Just as in the divine dynasphere we apply doctrine to experience through impersonal love so in the cosmic system we apply arrogance to life, and we do it through gate one. The difference between self-induced misery and divine discipline is definitely, then, the source. The source of divine discipline is God and His purpose is always to teach us something. But the source of the pain and the misery and the disasters that overtake us are our own personal decisions, our own human volition.

In learning doctrine in the divine dynasphere the whole realm of doctrine is open and the purpose of learning doctrine is spiritual momentum. But in the teaching of divine discipline the lesson is limited to one: motivation to rebound, motivation to use your royal priesthood in the cosmic system to get out. There is only one way you can get out — rebound.

There are two systems for learning in the Church Age. Man was designed from birth to learn in contrast to animals which function on instinct. It is true that man occasionally reverts to animalhood, and he does so when the emotions of his soul blot out the rationale, the thinking process of the soul. Emotion was designed to be subordinate to thought, not thought to emotion. The illustration, of course, is the holy-roller who becomes an animal and begins to function on his instincts when he says Hallelujah, Amen, and waves his hands in the air, froths at the mouth, rolls on the floor, etc. This is instinct and it is animalism. It eliminates thought and as soon as you eliminate thinking from Christianity you do not have the modus operandi of Christianity. All spiritual advance and all spiritual momentum is related to thinking.

The first system of learning is the obvious one, the communication of Bible doctrine from one's own pastor-teacher. This is an unlimited system of learning (limited only by the ignorance of the pastor). The second system is divine discipline from God, a limited system which teaches one lesson only: the use of the rebound technique. It is the only way you can get out of the cosmic system and service to Satan and get back into the divine dynasphere. Divine discipline, then, must be regarded as another form of blessing and a glorious opportunity to exercise one's options for the grace of God.

Learning the easy way requires three things. The first three gates of the divine dynasphere which must interlock for perception and application of doctrine at gate four. The first is the filling of the Spirit [spiritual IQ]; the second is impersonal love for objectivity and concentration on the doctrinal message rather than on the pastor who teaches it; the third is enforced and genuine humility without which the believer is unteachable. Divine discipline is always designed to bring about humility, and humility means recovery of the thinking rationale necessary to depart from the cosmic system. If you cannot learn from humility you can only learn from hurting, the limited lesson of motivation to rebound.

Inside the divine dynasphere logistical grace provides everything necessary for exploitation of the glory of God. In the divine dynasphere you glorify the Lord through advance to maturity and you utilise logistical grace. The cosmic believer, however, who doesn't learn has to learn another way — divine discipline.

The three things which happen when rebound occurs: the suffering from discipline is canceled and the believer enjoys relief for the moment in the divine dynasphere; or the suffering from discipline is diminished and its purpose is suffering designed now for blessing; or the suffering from discipline is perpetuated at the same level of intensity and the purpose of that suffering is testing for blessing. This is something of the concept in Job 5:17-18, "Behold, happy is the man whom God reproveth, therefore do not despise discipline from El Shaddai [God's title for logistical grace in the Old Testament]. For he inflicts pain [warning discipline], and he bandages the wound; he wounds [intensive discipline], and his hands heal."

And of course, the ultimate in this life is to advance to maturity after you have had a real session of installment discipline. If the believer rebounds when involved at the point of the sin unto death — you still have your volition and good decisions can still be made right up to the point of death. David made a good decision when he was very close to the sin unto death. His prolonged residence, however, in the cosmic system resulted in the principle of installment discipline, whereas warning discipline and intensive discipline do not usually bring about that kind of situation. When you are approaching the sin unto death and you finally decided to rebound then there is the problem of installment discipline. Installment discipline can only occur after rebound and recovery of residence in the divine dynasphere in this age. It is the alternative to the sin unto death and it means the punishment is spread out over a period of time. This is why Hezekiah who was under the sin unto death, when he finally rebounded lived fourteen more years. It took fourteen years to give him all of his installment discipline. An installment discipline is no longer punishment it is designed for blessing. That requires the proper use of one's volition.

There are three categories of divine discipline administered to the cosmic believe: warning discipline, intensive discipline, dying discipline. Certain passages of scripture help us to understand this issue. For example in 1 Corinthians 11:30, "weak" [warning discipline], "and sick" [intensive discipline], "and others sleep" [the sin unto death].

In the warning stage of divine discipline the believer has not been in the cosmic system long enough to have lost doctrinal content. Therefore recovery of residence in the divine dynasphere generally means continued momentum. He is a carnal believer and once the carnal believer rebounds the chances of moving on are very good. It is the one who prolongs his life in the cosmic system, as per the Laodiceans, who face the problem of intensive discipline. The intensive stage of divine discipline follows the warning stage and is much more intense as far as pain, hurt, disaster, than even self-induced misery. It is the first type of divine discipline administered that is actually stronger than self-induced misery, pain by your own decisions. The concept is found in Psalm 7:14, "Behold he [the cosmic believer] shall have labour pains [warning discipline] of vanity [involvement in gate one, cosmic one], Because he has become pregnant with frustration [unhappiness involved in the cosmic system], therefore he has given birth to a life of deceit [area of intensive discipline]." The final stage of divine discipline is dying discipline, Revelation 3:16.

The next concept in divine discipline is self-induced punishment and divine discipline set up in contrast so that you can rightly divide the Word of truth where pertinent passages occur. Example: Psalm 7:15,16, "He dug a grave [or shoveled out a grave]," bad decisions resulting in cosmic involvement, "and he explored it [the perpetuation of cosmic involvement], therefore he has fallen into the grave [the use of one's own volition to create pain in his own life and often in the lives of others] which he has constructed. His frustration shall then return to his own head, his violent oppression of others shall descend on the crown of his head." Basically this says that most human suffering comes not from God but from the volition of the individual making bad decisions. These bad decisions result in both sin and cosmic involvement. If the bad decision is not followed by the good decision of rebound the believer will remain in the cosmic system until warning discipline comes. Through negative volition toward doctrine and God's plan we often create our own punishment.

"Now hear this, I stand at the door," the door is closed but it is a door; it is rebound opportunity, the only decision a cosmic believer can make to start the road to recovery; "and I keep knocking," warning discipline, lower on the pain scale than what you have manufactured for yourself from the bad decisions that have resulted in prolonged life in the cosmic system. We have distinguished between the carnal believer and the reversionistic believer. The carnal believer is the person who sins, gets out of fellowship and therefore into the cosmic system, but rebounds rapidly and gets out. The reversionist is the believer who prolongs his stay in the cosmic system and does not rebound. So obviously this is addressed to the believer who is prolonging his stay in the cosmic system.

Next we have a conditional clause. We start out with the protasis of a third class condition in order to give us an analogy to the rebound function. All third class conditional sentences are introduced by the conjunction εἰάν. In the protasis it will be εἰάν plus the subjunctive. Remember a third class condition is a more probable future condition, a supposition from the viewpoint of reality. For some of you this may be your status, for others it is not your status. So in a teaching situation part of the Greek debater's technique is used. In this case no one is assuming that you are or you are not. The issue is, What is the principle? not whether you are or are not. Here we have a debater's technique used as a teaching principle. Why? Because this passage doesn't come along to us and say in the 20th century, "Look, you are all a bunch of cosmic bums! You are living in the cosmic system, now get out." It just says that in any given congregation there may be some believers in the cosmic system and some who are not. And it is not for anyone to judge, says the third class condition, let's just learn the principle. Then, when it does apply to you you use it. The third class condition gives us the opportunity of looking at a sticky subject academically.

So we have our first word, it is translated “if.” It is a supposition from the viewpoint of probability — this will probably happen to you at some time in your Christian experience. And to make it even more impersonal and to avoid any idea that you are personally being reprimanded we have the nominative singular subject from tij, and the Greeks had a marvelous word for it. This is an indefinite relative pronoun which means the substantive, and the substantive idea is simply going to be categorical. It simply represents a category of believer. So we translate it “anyone.” It doesn’t mean everyone, it means anyone.

Note: Principles of doctrine are far more important than our personal lives, and when you get touchy and edgy about your personal life then that means that you are neglecting doctrine and you have lost your objectivity.

This is really an academic concept so whether it applies to you or not isn’t really the issue.

Next we have the aorist active subjunctive of the verb a)kouw, “to hear.” This word is very important here. It doesn’t simply mean that you are listening to the sound of a voice, or you hear even what it says, it merely has to do with teachability. This verb means three things. It means gate one, the filling of the Spirit; it means gate two, the principle of impersonal love or objectivity in learning; it means gate three, teachability from enforced and genuine humility. This is approaching from the standpoint of principle, and even if you are in the cosmic system you can pick up this principle because it is the one principle you can learn without being in the divine dynasphere. You have to get out of the cosmic system and you have to know one principle to do it. You have to make a decision on that one principle. The principle is rebound, the decision is to do it. So you can get that much even inside the cosmic system. “If anyone hears” This is the ingressive aorist tense, which contemplates the action of the verb in its beginning. It denotes entrance into a state or condition, indicating your motivation, your action, your function. The active voice: the cosmic believer is the subject and he produces the action of the verb by responding to warning discipline or responding to intensive discipline. In this passage it is warning discipline, knocking on the door. The subjunctive mood is the potential subjunctive, it implies a future reference from the time of warning discipline and is qualified by the element of contingency — whether the believer actually rebounds or not. Again, there is a beautiful pattern to the Christian life. You have to live your own life as unto the Lord; you are your own priest. Every believer is his own priest and represents himself before God, and as such every believer must learn doctrine for himself, no one can learn it for him. Furthermore, every priest must make his own decisions, positive or negative, and must do it as unto the Lord. So the whole purpose of Bible class, the highest form of worship outside of the Lord’s table, is to give you the privilege and the opportunity of making your own decisions.

Next comes the objective genitive from the noun fwnh. Ordinarily it would be “my word,” logoj, but logoj is doctrine learned in class; fwnh is doctrine learned the hard way under pain, the administration of warning discipline. The word fwnh means voice in contrast to logoj which means word. Logoj is doctrine found in the Bible, fwnh is learning the hard way. So if you are in the divine dynasphere and consistently learning doctrine at gate four, that would be “if anyone hears my logoj.” But if you are in the cosmic system then logoj is gone, you are in a mine field, you have lost your perspective, you have no scale of values, and what you are learning is fwnh, you have to hear His voice. With that we have the possessive genitive of the pronoun e)gw and it is correctly translated “my,” “if anyone hears my voice,” a reference to warning discipline, for God speaks to the cosmic believer through the administration of divine punishment. It is not as great as the pain level you have achieved through your own use of volition. Now you know the purpose of warning discipline: it is to motivate, in one academic field, to use the rebound technique.

Then we have the connective use of the conjunction kai, translated “and,” followed by the aorist active subjunctive of the verb a)noigw which means to open. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the function of rebound in its entirety. You open the door, you make a decision which gives you recovery from the cosmic system. The active voice: the cosmic believer produces the action of the verb. He hasn’t lost his salvation, he is still a priest and he still has the opportunity to straighten out his life. He is still alive and still capable of making the one grace decision, the naming of his sins to the Lord whereby he recovers his fellowship with God. Again we have the potential subjunctive mood: it depends on the volition of the cosmic believer and how he responds to warning discipline whether he gets out of the cosmic system or not.

With this we have the accusative singular from the noun qura, generally used for opportunity, and it is correctly translated “door.” He opens the door. This is rebound function with emphasis on volition involving good the decision to recover residence in the divine dynasphere. This is the protasis of the third class condition. This emphasises probability, therefore the protasis emphasises supposition from the viewpoint of probability. As long as you are alive, living in the cosmic system, you can always get out. It is your move! The probability not only involves the use of your volition but emphasises the fact that as long as God keeps providing a day at a time in logistical grace you have the option of recovery. Believers are the products of their own decisions.

Then we have the rest of the sentence, the apodosis, and the analogy to life in the divine dynasphere. It begins with the future middle indicative of the verb e)iserxomai, e)ij means in or into, e)rxomai means to come, and we simply translate it, “I will enter,” The future tense is a gnomic future, it states an absolute fact of doctrine which follows the use of the rebound technique. The middle voice is the dynamic middle, it emphasises the part taken by the subject in the action of the verb. The subject is our Lord Jesus Christ who acts with a view to participating in the outcome of the believer’s reentry into the divine dynasphere. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of restored fellowship, the reality of recovery of life in the divine dynasphere. Life in the divine dynasphere is described by a prepositional phrase, proj plus the accusative singular of the intensive pronoun a)utoj. Proj plus the accusative means face to face with; a)utoj is an intensive pronoun in Attic Greek but it changed its meaning in Koine Greek. We translate “it face to face with him,” restored fellowship, reentry into the divine dynasphere at gate one, recovery from the cosmic system and the control of Satan, and it means once again you are in the sphere of fellowship with God. This is brought out by the next verb, the future active indicative of the verb deipnew, which means to dine. The predictive future anticipates the restoration to the divine dynasphere and a full-course dinner of doctrine. The active voice: God the Son produces the action of the verb through the logistical provision of Bible doctrine. Bible doctrine provided is the basis for fellowship with God in time and life in the divine dynasphere. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. Our Lord provides many courses in the dinner of Bible doctrine. We are dining with the Lord in the sense that we are learning His mind, Bible doctrine is the mind of Christ, 1 Corinthians 2:16. The preposition meta plus the genitive of that same intensive pronoun, a)utoj, “with him”; “and he with me,” meta plus e)gw.

Corrected translation: “Now hear this, I stand at the door [rebound opportunity] and I keep on knocking [warning discipline]; if anyone [the cosmic believer] hears my voice [rebound motivation from divine discipline], and he opens the door [rebound function with emphasis on volition], I will enter face to face with him [fellowship with the Lord through recovery of residence in the divine dynasphere], and I will dine with him [the provision of all the realm of doctrine], and he with me [perception of doctrine at gate four of the divine dynasphere].”

Here then is the principle of learning doctrine after recovery from warning discipline. There is only one lesson to learn from warning discipline and that is the importance of rebound when involved in the mine field, when involved in the cosmic system. Warning discipline, then, is a teaching aid. It is given from the justice of God not unfairly but in total fairness. Any pain we manufacture by our bad decisions has no teaching connotation. It is only the pain which comes from the justice of God in grace that has teaching connotation. So warning discipline teaches motivation for rebound. It motivates us to do the only thing we can do in the cosmic system. All the believer’s priestly functions are directed toward God from his residence inside the divine dynasphere. The one exception is the function of the priesthood in the cosmic system producing the rebound technique. Hence rebound is a private matter between the individual believer and God. When the Lord continues as the host and we continue as guests at His table — the table is spiritual food or Bible doctrine — we then parlay logistical grace into supergrace blessings which glorify the Lord. We dine daily with the Lord and this is a guarantee of advance to maturity and rectification of the situation. To dine daily with the Lord is a guarantee of advance to maturity and parlaying supergrace blessings into eternal rewards. That comes up in the first part of the next verse. Dining with the Lord can only occur inside the divine dynasphere at gate four. Inside the divine dynasphere the believer has momentum from perception of doctrine resulting in having a cup overflowing with blessing.

We are living in a time when believers are failing to achieve a status called winners, advance to maturity through the daily function of life inside the divine dynasphere. As goes the believer so goes the historical trend. All uptrends in history are related to the believer living in the divine dynasphere; all downtrends are related to the believer living in the cosmic system.

Verse 21, there is a special reward in history for those believers who are anonymous heroes of the Church Age, for those believers who advance from gate four to gate eight, those believers whose life in the divine dynasphere includes gate 1, the filling of the Spirit; gate 2, impersonal love, the beginning of integrity; gate three, enforced and genuine humility which is teachability. These three functions support perception and application of doctrine at gate four. This is the momentum of the spiritual life. The results are gate five, love of God parlayed into occupation with Christ; gate six, right man-right woman where pertinent; gate seven, the crystallisation of integrity in the life, the function of true friendship; and gate eight which is the ultimate gate, the advance to maturity, the construction of the edification complex in the soul, the glorification of the Lord Jesus Christ, the winner's gate.

We begin with the first two words of the sentence, the articular present active participle of the verb nikaw which means to win a victory, to be victorious. However this is a participle which can be translated either in the verbal form or as an adjective or a substantive. The articular present active participle is in the nominative case; it is the subject and when the participle is not accompanied by a noun it may function as a substantive, as here. Used as a noun the participle becomes a nominative absolute or an independent nominative. When an idea is conceived independent of any particular verbal relations the expression of it may be left standing alone in the nominative case and, of course, with some explanatory phrase added. Thus employed the nominative names an idea rather than an object. Here it is simply translated "the winner," the believer who advances to maturity.

Next comes the future active indicative of the verb didomi, a grace verb which means to give. The future tense is a gnomic future for a statement of fact which may be expected to occur at the judgment seat of Christ. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of a reward in a future period of history called the Millennium.

Then we have the dative singular direct object from a)utoj, the intensive pronoun in the Koine Greek for the third person. This is a dative indirect object indicating the one in whose interest the act is performed, "The winner, I will give to him." And there is a reward which belongs to the winner in history, not eternity. There are fantastic rewards for the believer in eternity but this is a reward in history.

Altogether the winner is stated seven times: Revelation 2:7, 11, 17, 26; 3:5, 12, 21. Both now in time and in eternity believers are classified in two ways. All believers arrive in eternity either as winners or losers, there is no in between. The winners are believers who live in the divine dynasphere, who learn Bible doctrine, who pass the eight momentum tests, advancing to maturity and fulfilling the plan of God. The losers are believers who live in the cosmic system. They are the slaves of Satan, they are constantly controlled by their old sin natures, they are involved in motivational and functional evil, they cannot be distinguished from unbelievers living in the cosmic system. Losers are believers who fail in time but do not lose their eternal salvation. However they do occupy an inferior place in heaven.

Freedom guarantees inequality. The only equality we have after salvation is equality of opportunity. All believers have the same opportunity to fulfill the plan of God. In heaven there will be winners and losers and it will be reflected in eternal rewards to the winners and lack of reward to the losers. All historical blessing and prosperity in the Church Age results from unknown and unnamed believers who are simply classified as "the winners." They live inside the divine dynasphere, they are constantly positive toward doctrine and they change the course of history when they form a large enough pivot. These mature believers who provide blessing by association also provide historical uptrends and yet they are not recorded in any textbook of world history. Hence they are unknown, they are anonymous, they are unsung heroes of history during the Church Age; but they have lived in the hidden manna provided by logistical grace, the teaching of Bible doctrine, and they have grown spiritually to fulfill the greatest of all objectives in the Church Age.

It says in Revelation 3:5 that the winner shall be clothed in white garments, the translucent uniform of light, the uniform of glory worn over the resurrection body by the holders of the morning star — “and I will never blot his new knighthood [which accompanies the order of the morning star] out of the book of life.” He will be registered in the book of life with all believers but he will be registered with his knighthood — “in fact I will acknowledge [presentation of the morning star winners in the court of heaven] his new knighthood in the presence of my Father, and before his angels.” The order of the morning star, then, includes the new knighthood, the order of chivalry for the royal family of God. The winners also are going to return with Christ. They will have special recognition at the judgment seat of Christ, they are presented in the court of heaven, then at the second advent they return with our Lord.

The authority of the morning star is really the subject of our particular passage. We should note that there are certain privileges related to the winner is eternity. He wears the decorations forever and ever. It is necessary for him to have the decorations because he is going to have certain privileges that do not belong to other believers. He has a coat of arms [Revelation 3:12] which will be recognisable as he approaches the gates of the super city of eternity, the new Jerusalem suspended above the Jerusalem on planet earth; a place of great happiness, of great pleasure, the location of the Paradise of God, the gazebo in the garden, and only winners have the opportunity of entering that city. It is closed to losers. The highest order of eternal chivalry is therefore given to the believer who is a winner forever and ever.

We have noted also in Revelation 3:12 the pillar in the temple, the historical record which exists forever. Biographies of famous people in ancient history were recorded on the pillars in temples and this will be true in eternity in the temple of heave, the record room of eternity. There will be the biography of every believer and it will be divided into two chapters. The first chapter will deal with his success in the Church Age as a mature believer, the anonymous hero. Then, when you get to the Millennium it will have a detailed record of how he was a king for a thousand years and how successfully he ruled during that time. It is the winner that we are about to study for the last time. We should have in mind always that God has special privileges for the winner.

So far we have noted a part of the translation of verse 21, “The winner, I will give to him [meaning to give reward and privilege] the reward and privilege of sitting with me on my throne.” We have the aorist active infinitive of the verb kaqizw, to sit. The culminative aorist views the reward which is given at the judgment seat of Christ in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. Our Lord Jesus Christ will rule the world during the Millennium, but as is always the plan of God it is accomplished through various groups we call nationalities. Nationalism or divine institution #4 is not even changed when our Lord rules the world. It is the protection of the freedom of individuals to be a part of a national entity rather than some form of international government. So it is regarded from the viewpoint of existing results. Those who reach maturity and win the order of the morning star, the uniform of glory, the new knighthood and the coat of arms are actually going to rule a nation during the last one thousand years of history. The active voice: the mature believer of the Church Age produces the action of the verb during the Millennium. He sits with Christ on His throne as it says here, which is simply a way of saying that our Lord has delegated the rulership of Gentile nations in the Millennium to those believers who achieve maturity in the Church Age. The anonymous heroes of today will become the famous people of tomorrow. Our Lord delegates authority for the rule of Gentile nations. The infinitive is the infinitive of intended result, and the result fulfills a deliberate objective, therefore the blending of purpose and result. With this we have a prepositional phrase, meta plus the genitive from the personal pronoun e)gw, "with me." This recalls the second advent of Christ, the coup de tat that removes Satan as the ruler of this world and how our Lord replaces him, the coronation, the wedding supper of the Lamb, the triumphal procession, the baptism of fire, the many things that are involved and the exciting events of the second advent. The second prepositional phrase indicates the authority is delegated from Christ as the ruler of the world. The preposition e)n plus the locative of qronoj plus the genitive of e)gw again and translated "in my throne or on my throne. The translation makes no difference since it is an idiom which simply indicates that we are under the delegated authority of our Lord and under His authority we will be a king or a queen, a ruler for one thousand years. The anonymous heroes of the Church Age become the most famous people of history and, in effect, they have the last say, the last function and the last action of human history. The reason why only believers from the Church Age are selected is a part of what we have studied as the mystery dispensation.

Continuing now with the principle that all reward at the judgment seat of Christ is based on the strategic victory of Christ in the first advent. This is introduced by the comparative particle in the Greek, o(j. This comparative particle always sets up an analogy. It introduces an analogy between the strategic victory of Christ at the first advent and His tactical victory and its relationship to the mature believer of the Church Age at the second advent. With this we have a particle and a pronoun, the conjunction kai which is the adjunctive use of the particle here, and with it, again, the pronoun e)gw. They combine to form a contraction but it is retaining its independent force by the phrase "I also." The first three words, then, "as I also." And here is the analogy, here is the basis for everything that makes life meaningful to us now and even more so in the future, the aorist active indicative of that same verb nikaw. The participle is translated by the substantive, "the winner."

"The winner, I will give to him the privilege of sitting with me on my throne, even as I also Have won."

The verb means to win and it has to do with the strategic victory of the first advent of Christ. The culminative aorist tense views the first advent of Christ in its entirety, it regards it from the viewpoint of its existing results, it adds up to strategic victory. The aorist tense is punctiliar. In the culminative aorist we have first of all the virgin birth of our Lord Jesus Christ, how He became true humanity. That leads to the hypostatic union, the God-Man, the unique person of the universe. That leads to His function in the prototype divine dynasphere. Then we have from that the results: the concept of kenosis, which is a part of His motivation for going to the cross, His absolute and total perfection which we have studied from time to time. And all of this adds up to qualification to bear our sins on the cross, to be judged for us, followed by His physical death, His burial, His resurrection, His ascension, His session at the right hand of the Father where He received His third royal patent. At the virgin birth He received His second royal patent, His first royal patent has to do with His being eternal God. The aorist tense then gathers this into one entirety. But this is a culminative aorist and it emphasises the existing results. This function of our Lord in the first advent has one great existing result. It is the strategic victory of our Lord, therefore the use of nikaw in the aorist tense, "as I also have won." This is the strategic victory of the first advent. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ produced the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of our Lord's strategic victory at the first advent or the incarnation.

To win that strategic victory our Lord Jesus Christ had to become a member of the human race for Satan had won the rulership of the world by defeating the first Adam in the Garden of Eden. Adam was true humanity, therefore our Lord had to become true humanity, going back to the point of defeat. That is why our Lord came not as the God-Angel but as the God-Man. He had to go back to where the defeat occurred. Now along comes the second Adam to defeat Satan strategically, providing the basis for the tactical victory of the second advent, for the second advent introduces a tactical victory which results from His strategic victory.

From our Lord's strategic victory of the first advent three tactical victories actually emerge. The first is the victory of the Church Age. Certain believers advance to maturity inside the divine dynasphere receiving those rewards and decorations at the judgment seat of Christ.

Then there is the victory of the tactical victory of the second advent. Jesus Christ returns to supersede Satan as the ruler of this world. Christ rules the world for one thousand years and He delegates authority to mature believers of the Church Age to share His tactical victory by actually ruling Gentile nations. Even the greatest believers of the Old Testament will rule nations in the Millennium. The rewards for Old Testament believers who advanced to maturity are described in terms of cities. Some will rule ten cities, some will rule five, some will rule none. But the rewards described related to believers of this dispensation is the rulership of nations. Gentile nations of the Millennium are under the authority of those who advance to maturity in this dispensation.

Then there is a third tactical victory which comes at the end of the Millennium, the victory of the Gog revolution. When Satan is released from jail after serving a thousand-year sentence he is able to foment rebellion against the perfect environment of the Millennium. But again the victory belongs to our Lord Jesus Christ even though a third of the population of the earth who have been living in the perfect environment of the Millennium rebel. Satan is put down at that time and the new heavens and the new earth and the eternal state are established.

Next we have a connective conjunction kai, translated “and,” followed by the aorist active indicative of kaqizw, and it is translated “and have sat down.” The constative aorist this time contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety and it is a reference to the session of our Lord Jesus Christ after His ascension of the first advent. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ produced the action, the resurrection, ascension and session. When He was seated at the right hand of the Father on Him was conferred the third royal patent.

The conferring of that royal patent by God the Father to our Lord Jesus Christ changes everything in history. Up until that time there had been a rather lengthy dispensation called the Age of Israel which came to a halt. The first obvious reason is the fact that when our Lord received His third royal patent He did not possess a royal family. In His first royal patent as eternal God His title is Son of God, His royal family God the Father and God the Holy Spirit. After the virgin birth He received a second royal patent: His title is Son of David, His royal family the Davidic dynasty. But on His ascension the royal patent that is related to His strategic victory in the angelic conflict His title is King of kings, Lord of lords, the bright morning star, but there is no royal family. Therefore the Age of Israel is brought to a halt and at that time the Church Age begins because the Church Age is the dispensation of the royal family. It is the calling out of the royal family; it is the forming of the royal family. This is why in this dispensation only at the point of salvation is there equality. Every believer receives 40 things and has by far the greatest plan and purpose for his life that has ever existed in all of human history. This is the only dispensation of no prophecy. Prophecy determines historical trends in all of the three dispensations of the Old Testament, it determines trends in the Tribulation which follows the Church Age, and then prophecy determines the historical trends of the Millennium. The Church Age is the dispensation therefore where all historical trends are determined by the daily decisions of believers in the Lord Jesus Christ. The royal family of God determines the uptrends or downtrends of history in this age.

So we are going to “sit down” in the future. That is simply an idiom for sharing the authority of our Lord Jesus Christ. “The winner, I will give him the reward and privilege of sitting with me on my throne [the delegation of authority to rule a nation], as I have won [the strategic victory of the first advent], and I have sat down [the ascension] with my Father.” Next we have meta plus the genitive of pater, and e)gw is in the genitive here, “my Father.” And then we have again one more time the preposition e)n plus qronoj, this time the possessive genitive a)utoj, “on his throne.”

We share His authority in the Millennium, that is, those who advance to maturity. And the basis for advancing to maturity is a passage which we have had again and again, and the exegesis never changes. It is still the same “He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith to the churches” — verse 22.

Notice a few things in closing out this chapter. Again we have the articular present active participle of the verb e)xw. The definite article is used as a personal pronoun, it refers to the believer with positive volition toward doctrine, the one who is going to advance to maturity, the one who is making right decisions. This is the only category of believer who utilises logistical grace the divine capital for glorifying our Lord in time. The static present tense emphasises the fact that every believer has the same opportunity to utilise logistical grace. The only equality in life is when we personally accept Christ as saviour: we all have equal opportunity to advance to maturity. But we also have freedom and we can make bad decisions and wind up under the systems of divine discipline, or make good decisions and advance to maturity. Just as every person possesses ears to hear so every believer possesses the means of perception of doctrine. The reduces the issue to either positive or negative volition toward the Word of God. All momentum from gate four of the divine dynasphere and going to gate eight can only be perpetuated through the daily perception of doctrine. Advancing to maturity, maintaining supergrace status, is the only way to be rewarded at the judgment seat of Christ.

Winners in eternity are going to wear the uniform of glory, that translucent uniform that will distinguish their resurrection bodies from all of the losers. The active voice: only positive believers living inside the divine dynasphere, living doctrine daily, are going to produce the action of the verb, the exploitation of logistical grace and parlaying logistical grace into supergrace blessing in time and phenomenal rewards for the last one thousand years of history and for the eternal state. The circumstantial participle is for the fact that life in the divine dynasphere and consistent perception of doctrine exploits logistical grace. It is making good decisions. "He who has an ear" means that we all have equal opportunity. Spiritual momentum and blessing, then, is related to positive volition toward Bible doctrine. God provides the opportunity for doctrine; you provide the volition. Only your volition is going to make a great deal of difference one way or the other.

We are starting chapter four which most people think is for Tribulational things and people living after the Church Age. Definitely not! It is all for us and there is a reason for every line in the book of Revelation. In the outline of the book of Revelation chapters four and five present the eight things in heaven: the beginning of prophetic historical trends.

The outline of the book of Revelation

The book of Revelation has nine major chapters or thoughts. They do not coincide with the chapters in the English Bible.

1. Jesus Christ is the key to history and prophecy — chapter 1.
2. The historical trends, or the Church on earth — chapters 2 and 3.
3. The Church in heaven, or when prophecy begins — chapters 4-5.

4. The Tribulation — chapters 6-18.
 - a. The panorama of the Tribulation — chapter 6.
 - b. Evangelism in the Tribulation — chapter 7.
 - c. The trumpet judgements of the Tribulation — chapters 8-10.
 - d. The two witnesses and the seventh trumpet — chapter 11.
 - e. The fall of Satan or Armageddon motivation — chapter 12.
 - f. The two dictators — chapter 13.
 - g. The principle of grace before judgment — chapter 14.
 - h. The vial judgements — chapters 15-16.
 - i. The rise and fall of ecumenical religion — chapters 17-18.
5. The second advent of Jesus Christ — chapter 19.
6. The Millennium and the last judgment — chapter 20.
7. The eternal state — chapter 21:1-8.
8. The eternal Jerusalem — chapters 21:9-22:5.
9. The termination of the canon of scripture — chapter 22:6-21.

We are about to launch into a study of eight things in heaven in chapters four and five. For example, we will see the Trinity in heaven, 4:2,3; we will see the 24 elders who are not elders at all, 4:4; we will see two signs of judgment, 4:5; we will see the Church at rest — 4:6. In chapter 5 we have in the KJV the four “beasts.” Not at all, they are the second highest angelic creatures in the college of heralds. We will see them in all of their glory as the fifth thing in heaven, 4:6-11; we will see in the Doomsday Book with its seven seals which are the historical trends of the Tribulation, 5:1-4; we will see the Judge of the earth or, better, the perpetuation of Jesus Christ controlling history, 5:5-7; will study finally a new hymn, the hymn of the divine plan, 5:8-14.

Before we begin the eight things in heaven we have one introductory verse which is chapter four, verse one, the Rapture or the open door of heaven. The chapter begins with a prepositional phrase, meta plus the accusative neuter plural from the demonstrative pronoun o(utoj, correctly translated “After these things.” The immediate demonstrative pronoun is for something which is relatively near in thought or next in the sequence of events. After the Rapture we have eight things in heaven. "These things." The demonstrative pronoun refers to the time in which we live because ο(utoj in contrast to ε)keinoj is a near demonstrative. Ε)keinoj is a distant demonstrative and not used. "After these things," after the Church Age and historical trends based on the believer's volition.

Next we have a verb, the aorist active indicative of the verb ο(raw, used for visions, used for prophetic utterances. We are now getting into eschatology and we find the apostle John looking beyond the Church Age. What occurs is after the Church Age terminates on earth. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the apostle John produces the action of the verb as the human writer of the book of Revelation. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of this vision dealing with the Church in heaven and what transpires, at least in part, at that time.

Next we have the intensive use of the conjunction kai, translated "in fact." So we will translate this way: "After these things [the Church Age and historical trends] I looked." John begins an investigation of prophetic history. History after the Rapture is all prophetic and all historical trends are based on prophecy. That is one sentence. There is another which begins with the intensive pronoun kai, and we begin, then, with the words "in fact." Next comes the demonstrative particle ι)dou from the aorist middle imperative of ο(raw. "Behold" is old English and anachronistic. We have already translated this, "Now hear this." So, "In fact now hear this," and that is the second sentence.

The third sentence begins with the nominative singular subject qura, for "door." The perfect passive participle of α)νοιγω follows, "a door has been opened."

Translation so far: "After these things [the Church Age and the historical trends] I looked. In fact, now hear this [a transitional sentence to remind us that we are going from the historical trends of the Church Age to the prophetic trends of the rest of human history]. A door has been opened."

The perfect tense of α)νοιγω is an intensive perfect, it emphasises the finished product or the existing results of the action. This is an emphatic method in the Greek of presenting the fact that the Rapture has now taken place. John does not cover the Rapture, the covering of the Rapture is left to others like the apostle Paul. The door is opened and the Church is now in a resurrection body in heaven. The passive voice: the door receives the action of the verb. This is a way of saying that the Rapture which terminates the Church Age has already occurred when John begins this series of visions dealing with the rest of human history. The subject changes to world history from the standpoint of its future. The participle is circumstantial for the Rapture of the Church.

The second sentence, "Now hear this," is a command, a mandate to all believers of the Church Age. We are the ones who must understand these things. The third sentence begins, "A door has been opened," and then the prepositional phrase ε)ν plus the locative of ο)υρανοj, "in heaven." The door in heaven has been opened to permit the royal family of God to be transferred from planet earth to heaven, thus ending the Church Age. Hence, this is an introductory verse to the eight things that we will see first of all in heaven. Before we go to the earth to see the rest of human history we have to have some concept of the structure of heaven, the angelic hierarchy, the fact that there is very definite organisation and authority in heaven, and under this organisation and authority there is not only great happiness, great appreciation of who and what God is, but phenomenal and fantastic worship.

There are two concepts of returning from the dead. The first is called resuscitation, there is a lot of it in the Bible. Resuscitation refers to people who have died and are brought back to life in their body of corruption, in their physical body, and therefore at some future time they will die again. There are many illustrations in the Old Testament. Elijah, for example, brought a young boy back to life, and then Elisha did the same thing. Lazarus was brought back to life by our Lord and then subsequently died. He just simply was resuscitated. The same thing is true of the apostle Paul who went to the third heaven and then was brought back to life. Resuscitation is not resurrection and this distinction must be learned because at this moment there is only one resurrection body in the universe and that body belongs to our Lord Jesus Christ. In resurrection the person dies or doesn't die but he is given a body of incorruption, a body that does not wear out. Resurrection is the beginning of eternity whereas resuscitation is just simply coming back in time, finishing out one's life and then subsequently dying.

Resurrection is one of the basic doctrines which all believers need to understand. It is an elementary doctrine according to Hebrews chapter six, verses one and two: "Therefore having graduated from the doctrines [the elementary doctrines of Christ] let us advance ourselves toward maturity, not laying again the foundation." And then the writer mentions six of the things that are in the foundation. A change of mind about dead works is the first thing. You have to change your mind about human good otherwise you will be distracted and never advance to maturity. The first thing that you have to do is to repent, which means to change your mind. The only production that counts is life inside the divine dynasphere and there is service which results from it which is legitimate. The second is faith toward God and that is the faith-rest drill in its three stages. The third basic doctrine is the doctrine of baptisms [plural] of which there are seven, four which are dry and three which are wet. "... and the laying on of hands," another system of identification, and we only have one case where it is used and that is in the ordination ceremony where you lay your hand and that makes a person recognised as a pastor. It came from the Old Testament and it was necessary. It is really not necessary today, we just do it without any authorisation. By this sign people usually recognise someone as being a minister. It did have great significance before the canon of scripture was completed and it had greater significance in the Old Testament where the priest put his hand on the head of the lamb and put his hand on your head, and that transferred your sins that you confessed to the lamb. That was the rebound technique as practised in Israel to teach the principle. Then the next one is the "resurrection from the source of deaths," resurrection from the dead, and that is a basic doctrine; "and of eternal judgment."

Resurrection is a part of the gospel. It is so stated in 1 Corinthians 15:1-4, "Now I make known to you brethren, the gospel [the good news] which I preached to you, which also you received, and in which also you stand; by which you are saved, you hold fast to the word of God which I preached to you, unless you have believed in vain.” In other words, we are talking about the gospel, “For I have delivered to you as of the first the importance of what I have also received, how that Christ died for our sins.” That is good news. When you are presenting the gospel you must always emphasise the good news or you are not preaching the gospel. Christ died for our sins, that is the good news. The fact that we are sinners and the wages of sin is death is the hopeless situation. But the fact that Jesus Christ was judged for our sins is good news, and the emphasis in witnessing, the emphasis in evangelism is the fact that on the cross Christ was judged for our sins. We were not judged for those sins, we were judged for Adam’s sin. When we were born Adam’s sin was imputed to us, “and that he was buried,” the fact that Jesus Christ died physically is also important. It isn’t important for salvation, the saving work of Christ was when our sins were imputed to Him on the cross and He started screaming, “My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me?” God the Father was judging those sins while He was alive on the cross, and it was only when He said, Tetelestai which is the perfect tense of telew. It is translated “It is finished” but it should be translated, “It has been finished in the past with the result that it stands finished forever.” Salvation was finished while Christ was alive otherwise He couldn’t have said it. Now, since His work was finished He could die physically and He dismissed His spirit. Christ died twice on the cross. The saving part was His spiritual death, bearing our sins, and while He was still alive He said “It is finished.” You can’t add anything to salvation. Then he dismissed His spirit and He died physically; “and that he was buried.” And why is that important? It has to do with the doctrine of resurrection. When Christ was in the grave for three days His body was in a state of corruption. Then He was given a resurrection body of incorruption. Our Lord in His resurrection body walked out of the grave before it was opened. The grave was opened in the morning to let the people in, not to let the Lord out. Furthermore, resurrection is important because it emphasises the difference between a theophany and a Christophany. A theophany is an appearance of our Lord prior to the incarnation; a Christophany is a technical term for the appearances of Christ in His resurrection body, of which there are nineteen.

The resurrection of Christ is also a part of the strategic victory of the angelic conflict, and this is stated in 1 Corinthians 15:20-25. “But now Christ has been raised from the dead, the firstfruits of those who are asleep.” There is only one person who has a resurrection body right now, our Lord Jesus Christ, “For since by man came death [Adam is the source of spiritual death, when he sinned he didn’t die physically immediately, he died spiritually], by man came also the resurrection from the dead [the second Adam]. For as in Adam all die, so also Christ shall be all made alive. But each one [notice the corrected translation] in his own battalion: Christ the firstfruits; after that those who are Christ’s at his coming.” The word battalion, or tacij, is a battalion review. There are two battalions, the first is made up of four companies. Alpha company, our Lord Jesus Christ, has already passed in review. Next comes Bravo company, the Church Age believers, this is the open door of Revelation four, time unknown. But once the Church passes in review then we begin chapter four and following of Revelation. Then next is Charlie company made up of Old Testament believers and Tribulational martyrs. Finally we have Delta company made up of Tribulational believers who go into the Millennium and the Millennial saints. That occurs at the end of the Millennium.

It is important to note briefly that the Rapture as such is not taught in the book of Revelation, it is simply mentioned in the “open door” only. It was the apostle Paul who emphasised this in Philippians 3:20-21; 1 Thessalonians 4:16-18; 1 John 3:1,2; 1 Peter 1:3; Ephesians 5:26,27. In our passage in Revelation the Rapture has already occurred, the termination of the Church Age.

The door is opened and that is where we are right now in the book of Revelation. “After these things [the Church Age and historical trends] I looked [John begins his investigation of prophetic history].” In fact, now hear this: a door has been opened in heaven [to permit the Rapture of the Church and John’s introduction to his prophetic discourse on the rest of human history].”

Because the Church Age is the dispensation of historical trends without prophecy there is no unfulfilled prophecy between Pentecost and the Rapture. Therefore the Rapture has been and continues to be imminent. And since the Church Age is the dispensation of no prophecy then the next prophecy has been imminent since Paul so mentioned it as such in his epistles. The fact that people say that this is the Rapture generation is not only speculation but it is emotion overcoming rationale, or it may just be ignorance of history because there have been other times in history which even looked more like the Rapture than it does now.

We start out now with the connective use of the conjunction kai, “and.” With this we have a subject composed of four words. It includes two definite articles, the nominative feminine singular, h((two of them). There is one before the nominative singular adjective prwth and the other one before the noun fwnh which is the word generally for voice. Translated, “and the first voice” or “and the first sound.” It isn’t a voice, it is a sound. Then we have the accusative feminine singular from the relative pronoun o(j, “the first sound which,” followed by the reference to our Lord Jesus Christ who was previously described in Revelation 1:10 in terms of the sound of a trumpet. You can translate it “voice” because it is our Lord’s voice, but it is also a sound of a trumpet; “and the first voice or sound which I heard.” The aorist active indicative of a)kouw, which means to hear. The constative aorist refers to a momentary action and contemplates that action in its entirety. The active voice: John, the human author, produces the action of the verb by making the transition from the historical trends of Revelation chapters one through three to the subject of eschatological history in the rest of the book of Revelation. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the continuation of world history, with one change: all historical trends in the future are determined by prophecy rather than by the individual volition of the believer. Only in the dispensation of the royal family of God does the individual volition become an historical trend. Your attitude toward doctrine determines the historical trends in this dispensation.

Because of ellipsis we insert the imperfect active indicative of e)jimi, John’s growing excitement at what he is seeing in heaven. The door is open and he sees. With this we have a comparative particle o(j which denotes a corresponding analogy. O(j has many uses. As we advance in the book we are going to see o(j used in entirely different ways. Here it is translated “like,” “a door has been opened in heaven and the first voice which I heard was like.” We now note the trumpet. Again we have ellipsis, again the growing excitement, so we would translate, “like the sound of a trumpet.”

The word for trumpet in the Greek is salpiggoj, “the sound of a trumpet.” So it sounds like this: “and the first voice which I heard was like the sound of a trumpet.” It is used here and in Revelation 1:10 preceding a verbal mandate of our Lord Jesus Christ and it indicates the fact that while in heaven there is a wonderful interlude of great blessing, on the earth there is a tremendous amount of confusion. Therefore there is a mandate given. Often the word “trumpet” is used for the analogy to indicate we are getting a command from our Lord.

The trumpet was an instrument which could be heard above the noise of battle. Hence John is involved in the battle of human history and receives at this time a battlefield command, as it were, by the trumpet. Our Lord’s voice is the voice of authority just as the sound of the trumpet is the voice of authority to those in battle at the time of writing.

We begin now with the present active participle of the verb lalew, which means when used of children to babble, when used of adults it means to speak with those with whom you are intimate; hence to speak, to express yourself. We will translate it “speaking.” It has been translated in other categories of Greek to gossip; here it simply means to speak. The pictorial present has the force of presenting to the mind a picture of events in the process of occurrence. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb and the participle is circumstantial. With this we have a prepositional phrase meta plus the genitive of the first person personal pronoun e)gw, “with me.”

“And the first voice which I heard was like the sound of a trumpet speaking with me.” We add because of ellipsis the verb “and.” We have a right to do this because a circumstantial participle can be translated like a finite verb and preceded by the conjunction “and.” Next comes the present active participle of the verb legw, which means to speak, we will translate it “saying.” The historical present is used when a past event is used with the vividness of a present occurrence. In this case we are anticipating some prophecy and a historical present is John’s sense of humour. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb, He communicates the truth plus a mandate to the apostle. The participle, again, is circumstantial, “speaking with me and saying.”

Then we have a command, a mandate which takes John to heaven in a vision. He is still alive, he goes to heaven to see eight things which we will be noting hereafter. The aorist active imperative of the verb a)nabainw, correctly translated “come up,” plus the adverb of place, w(de, which here is referring to heaven. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It can also be a dramatic aorist as a way of emphasis, a device for emphasis. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action by giving John a command: “Come up to heaven.” There are eight things that John is going to report to all generations hereafter. These eight things will prepare the way to understand the rest of human history, the rest of the book of Revelation. The imperative mood is the imperative of command, a mandate to the human writer of the book of Revelation.

Then comes the second verb, the future active indicative of the Greek verb deiknumi, which means to point out, to permit to see, to make known or to reveal to someone or to explain, "and I will point out [explain, permit you to see]." The gnomic future tense is for a statement of fact or performance anticipated in conjunction with John learning the facts about the rest of human history. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb as the teacher, the writer of the textbook of the rest of human history. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the fact that Jesus Christ as God knows the beginning and the end, and the end from the beginning, and therefore His omniscience comes into play as the one who actually puts into the computer of divine decrees all of history before man was created. Remember that omniscience is the second category of God's knowledge and it has two facts: omniscience knew every thought, every motive, every decision, every action of every person who ever lived and how it relates to the thoughts, actions motives, decisions of every other person. He also knows the alternatives, the things that could have happened and did not happen. The printout, of course, is foreknowledge. Foreknowledge cannot occur without the function of omniscience. The printout is given in the form of prophecy. Foreknowledge or the printout for all dispensations up to the Church Age, all historical trends, are based on prophecy. The only exception: after the death, burial, resurrection and ascension of our Lord, in the Church Age there is no prophecy, therefore all historical trends are based upon the volition of the individual believer with regard to the divine dynasphere versus the cosmic system. Then there is the Rapture and immediately we are going back now to see eight things in heaven and then we will begin to see the Tribulation. The Tribulation will have historical trends which we will see prophetically since the Tribulation has not occurred yet and they will be based on prophecy given in the Doomsday Book with its seven seals of chapter six.

Then we have the dative singular indirect object from su, "I will explain to you [point out to you]." In other words, now we are going to see the rest of human history. This is a dative of indirect object, it indicates the one in whose interest the act of revelation is performed, first to the apostle John and then, of course, to us. This is not only a deposition of future events but it is a text book of world history given to the royal family of God. While the Tribulational saints and Millennial believers will learn something from it in the future the rest of the book of Revelation is for the royal family of God. It is not only our Lord's deposition as to our future in history, as well as eternity, but at the same time the textbook of world history. So if John is to be the human author he must first master the eschatological events under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit and this must be done using his own vocabulary and literary style, his own personality. He will then put down these events in sequence. And they have survived for the last two thousand years of the Church Age and will for how much longer the Church Age exists, and then they will be fulfilled beginning with the Rapture of the Church. You will note again that there is no prophetic history until the Church is in heaven. Hence what will follow is the history of the world after the Church receives a permanent change of station, after the royal family of God is moved permanently to heaven. The transfer of the Bride of Christ, the royal family, to heaven precedes all prophetic events of the book of Revelation. While the Church or royal family remains on the earth there is no prophecy to be fulfilled, merely historical trends based upon your attitude toward logistical grace. That means that the divine dynasphere with its eight gates.

Then we begin with the accusative neuter plural from the relative pronoun $\omicron(j)$, which refers to historical trends. We translate it “what things,” the trends of history in the future after the Church Age, and these trends of history are based on eschatology [prophecy]. Then we have a present active indicative from an impersonal verb $\delta\epsilon\iota$, not exegeted because it simply is translated “must” and, of course, has to have a supporting infinitive. It is a reference here to the divine computer of history and/or the concept of divine decrees which we have studied. This is followed by the aorist active infinitive of the verb $\gamma\iota\omega\mu\alpha\iota$, translated here “to occur,” “what things occur [must come to pass].” The constative aorist is for a succession of events from the Rapture to the end of time. The active voice: the sequence of historical events produces the action of the verb. This is an infinitive of intended result from the standpoint of prophecy. It blends purpose with results. The actual result would be from the standpoint of fulfilment of prophecy, the intended result infinitive anticipates.

With this we have a prepositional phrase repeated for the second time: $\mu\epsilon\tau\alpha$ plus the accusative of the immediate demonstrative pronoun $\omicron(\tau\omicron\upsilon\omicron\eta)$, translated “after these things.” It refers to after the Church Age.

Now we have an entire verse and this is the way it sounds: “After these things [the Church Age and historical trends] ... ”

(We begin with the phrase “after these things,” we end the verse with “after these things.” The repetition of the preposition says this is merely an introductory verse, this is not a part of the general content of Revelation chapters four and five. Actually we are going to see eight things in heaven but they have not begun as yet)

“ ... I looked [John begins his investigation of prophetic history], in fact now hear this: a door has been opened in heaven [to permit the Rapture of the Church and John’s introduction to this prophetic discourse]: and the first voice which I heard was like the sound of a trumpet speaking with me; and saying, Come up here, and I will point out to you [explain to you] what things must occur [must come to pass] after these things [after the Church Age and the Rapture].”

Everything in the rest of the book is pertinent to this statement; everything applies to the Church Age believer.

Principle

1. From this point on the content of the book of Revelation is just as pertinent to the Church Age believer as the first three chapters.
2. Everything in Revelation, chapters four through twenty-two has meaning or application to the royal family of God though it deals with subjects other than the Church Age.

3. Everything taught in Revelation chapters 6-18 deals with the Tribulation but it is written for the benefit of royal family, believers in this dispensation. Therefore the symbolism, the visions, the prophecies, the hyperbole, the historical events future to the Church Age, all have spiritual application and are pertinent to us right now.

4. Undoubtedly positive believers of the Tribulation will derive blessing from the application of these things, but they will also derive just as much understanding and blessing from the book of Daniel, the book of Zechariah, as well as Revelation chapters 6-18. But the primary purpose, then, of the rest of the book of Revelation is to brief Church Age believers about future history: things to come, the rest of history. It is a textbook of human history from the time of John in AD 96 to the end of time.

5. We have profited from the historical trends mentioned briefly in the first three chapters of Revelation; we shall also profit from the study of prophetic history in Revelation chapters four through twenty-two.

6. But avoid the curiosity approach which produces sensationalism (Revelation is sensational but that is not what we are here for) and leads to a manifestation of negative volition known as itching ears.

7. The Word of God is designed for our spiritual benefit, not our emotional stimulation. All spiritual benefit comes by the mind and the thinking of the soul dominating the emotion of the soul. There are several legitimate exceptions such as mourning for someone you love and has departed to be with the Lord, and we sorrow not as others who have no hope, but we sorrow. But you must be very careful because if you are not using doctrine regarding the happy condition of your loved-one in heaven then your emotions will go astray. Emotions must always be subordinate to thinking.

8. Inevitably we respond emotionally to certain doctrines but emotion is not the criterion for the spiritual life.

9. Neither should we seek for only those passages which arouse us emotionally but we must consider, concentrate, understand and know the whole realm of doctrine, regardless of where our personal interests lie. The Bible wasn't written so that you could sort out just what you want to hear and forget the rest. The whole realm of doctrine is what you need.

10. The content of the rest of the book of Revelation, therefore, can either be a trap or a blessing. Therefore do not seek out the sensational but follow along, line upon line and precept upon precept. Concentrate on every verse as we study it.

There are eight things in heaven and the first is found in verses 2 and 3 of chapter four, the Trinity in heaven.

Verse 2, We are going to find that someone has added a great many words from time to time to the book of Revelation. They didn't heed the warning at the end of the book and they brought in words that are not justified. Occasionally one Greek word will require three or four English words, and occasionally there are certain laws of ellipsis whereby you have the right to put in words that are not there. For example, if you have a circumstantial participle following a verb you are supposed to, and you can, put in the conjunction "and"; and it is not adding to the Word of God, the Greek demands that you put it into proper English. Translation is always the problem but interpretation in the translation is something else. So we are going to find from time to time that we will have to correct the text for many words have been added that are not found in the original text. This verse does not begin with the word "and," it begins with the word "immediately," an adverb, ἐπιταχύνω. Then comes the aorist middle indicative of γίνομαι which is like the verb to be, it usually means to become, and it means to occur. Now we are going to translate it, "Immediately I was" or "Immediately I became," both are correct translations. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The middle voice is a dynamic middle, it emphasises the part taken by the subject in the action of the verb. John, as the human author of the book of Revelation, was filled with the Holy Spirit. He wrote under the doctrine of spirituality, hence he is inside the divine dynasphere while writing these things. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of John's status under the control of God the Holy Spirit, gate one. You cannot see the Son apart from the Spirit; you cannot understand doctrine apart from God the Holy Spirit. God the Holy Spirit not only indwelt John but He filled John and this is very important because of the accuracy problem on the original.

Then we have the prepositional phrase ἐν πνεύματι plus the locative of πνεύματι. And here is what is meant by a translational problem. What is missing? A definite article. Yet we translate it "in the Spirit," we throw a definite article in. Are we adding to the Word of God? No. The absence of the definite article in the Greek emphasises the quality of the noun and therefore for the quality of the noun when you bring it into the English you add the definite article. In other words, the absence of the definite article in the Greek does what the definite article is supposed to do in the English, emphasising the quality of the noun rather than the identity of the noun. So we add a word, "in the Spirit." It is not found in the original.

One thing that has not been defined very clearly in the time in which we live is the concept of spirituality. What is a spiritual Christian? How can a spiritual Christian be identified as spiritual? It is your business to identify only your own spirituality or lack of it, not someone else's. The long proboscis is definitely not spirituality, it is sticking your nose into someone else's business. Spirituality is the filling of the Spirit and, of course, it links salvation adjustment to the justice of God with maturity adjustment to the justice of God. In other words, all of the power to execute the Christian way of life is in the Holy Spirit and, therefore the filling of the Holy Spirit or spirituality is the means of living the Christian life, the means provided to every member of the royal family of God in contrast to all other dispensations.

Never before in any previous dispensation and only in one future dispensation, the Millennium, is any believer filled with the Spirit. The indwelling of the Spirit occurs, of course, at the moment of salvation. Out of the thirty-seven things we receive at the moment of salvation, five of them are related to God the Holy Spirit. One of them is indwelling. God the Holy Spirit indwells the body of the believer, it is the human body of frailty that needs the sustaining, needs the power. The spirituality is synonymous with gate one of the divine dynasphere and the filling of the Spirit or spirituality is God the Holy Spirit indwelling the body. The soul must be controlled by God the Holy Spirit for spirituality to exist. Obviously inside the divine dynasphere you are not only indwelt by the Holy Spirit but you are spiritual. You could be a spiritual baby, you could be a spiritual adolescent, you can be spiritual as a mature believer but spirituality is an absolute. Once you make a decision to go into the cosmic system you are still indwelt by God the Holy Spirit, you never lose the indwelling of the Holy Spirit but you are now in cosmic one and you are said to be grieving the Holy Spirit. In cosmic two you are said to be quenching the Holy Spirit but you are still indwelt. When you rebound and you get back in through gate one you are filled with the Spirit again and you are still indwelt by the Holy Spirit but now God the Holy Spirit controls your soul. Spirituality is defined as God the Holy Spirit controlling the soul. It is a temporary status and is changed by your decision to sin, the same decision which put you into Satan's cosmic system. When you are in the cosmic system for a short time the Bible calls you carnal; when you are in for a long time the Bible calls you apostate — or we prefer to call it reversionism.

At the moment of salvation God gives you 37 permanent things. Five of them, again, are related to God the Holy Spirit. The first is regeneration and is one of the things that God the Holy Spirit does for believers in every dispensation, not just in the Church Age. Regeneration means to be born again and to understand being born again you have to establish a fact that is very important: that you are born the first time! If you are not born the first time you can't be born the second time. Human life was imputed immediately after birth and it was imputed to the human soul. That human life resides in the human soul forever. Adam's original sin is simultaneously imputed to the genetically-formed old sin nature, we are born physically alive but spiritually dead because Adam's sin is imputed to us. Why? because a lot of people die before they reach accountability and the only way they could be saved is to first of all be condemned. You have to be condemned before you can be saved, or there is nothing to be saved from, for, or about. Therefore condemnation must precede salvation. The old sin nature exists from birth and Adam's original sin is imputed. Our personal sins are never imputed to us for judgment, they were reserved for the cross and were imputed to Christ on the cross and there they were judged.

Now, when we believe in Christ there are two imputations that occur. One half of God's holiness is imputed to us. God's holiness or integrity is composed of His justice and perfect, eternal, absolute righteousness. His righteousness is imputed to us and we have inside of us the righteousness of God establishing a pipeline between one half of God's integrity and the other half. And down that pipeline comes every facet of logistical grace and every facet of supergrace if you attain maturity. All divine blessing goes from the justice of God to the righteousness of God. Righteousness demands righteousness, justice demands justice. What the righteousness of God demands the justice of God executes.

There is a second imputation. Having the same righteousness that God has is one half of salvation. You can't live with God forever unless you are as good as He is and there is no way that we can be as good as He is and therefore He has to give us His perfect righteousness. You will have His righteousness forever and you will be qualified to live forever with Him. And you must add something else: you must have God's life. Therefore eternal life is imputed at salvation. But wait a minute, eternal life has no place to go. Human life is already in the soul, you can only have one life in the soul and that is human life. So where is it going to go? Well, God the Holy Spirit creates a human spirit. The last man to have a human spirit from the start from creation was Adam. Adam was trichotomous, he had body, soul and spirit. The human spirit is constructed by God the Holy Spirit. He actually creates a human spirit and then eternal life is imputed to that human spirit. That is regeneration, that is one of five things that God the Holy Spirit does for us at salvation.

God the Holy Spirit is the agent for the baptism of the Spirit. At the moment we believe God the Holy Spirit enters us into union with Christ. Christ is seated at the right hand of the Father; We are in union with Christ; we share His life [eternal life]; we share His righteousness; we share His sonship; we share His heirship; we share His destiny [predestination]; we share everything that Christ has and is. But we share it currently, that is current positional truth. We also are entered into union with Christ retroactively. Christ was judged for our sins but at the cross He rejected human good and evil. Therefore this becomes an issue in our lives: we must reject human good and evil; both are produced by the genius of Satan in the cosmic system. So we are in union with Christ in His death, burial and resurrection. The baptism of the Holy Spirit is God the Holy Spirit picking us up by the nape of the neck and entering us into union with Christ.

There is a third thing that God the Holy Spirit does — indwelling. That is permanent also.

The fourth thing He does is sealing, a guarantee that we are to be delivered into eternity.

The fifth thing He does is that He gives each one of us at least one spiritual gift. The exploitation of that spiritual gift depends upon your residence and function inside the divine dynasphere.

“Immediately [John says] I was in the Spirit.”

What is the concept of the spiritual life? For the Church Age there is a mandate which helps to clarify the issue: Ephesians 5:18 which begins with the concept of an imperative mood, the present passive imperative of the verb plhrow. The word means to be fully possessed, to be fully influenced. The first part of the passage says, “And stop becoming intoxicated with wine which is dissipation, but be fully influenced by the Spirit.” The Holy Spirit can only control the soul when the believer is in the divine dynasphere; that is the purpose of the filling of the Spirit. The iterative present tense describes what recurs at successive intervals when the believer is living in the divine dynasphere. The passive voice: the believer receives the action of the verb through the rebound technique. There can be no filling of the Spirit apart from rebound, recovery from the cosmic system. The imperative mood is a mandate for all believers to spirituality through living the spiritual life. The power of the spiritual life and its execution is strictly that of God the Holy Spirit. There is no human talent, no human ability, no human concept of sacrifice or morality that is a substitute for spirituality. The same concept is given in a little different way in Galatians 5:16 where we have the mandate, “Keep walking by means of the Spirit,” a present active imperative this time. We have the negative side in Ephesians 4:39, "Stop grieving the Holy Spirit," referring to life in cosmic one. Or in 1 Thessalonians 5:19, "Do not quench the Spirit," referring to life in cosmic two. Another way of describing spirituality is found in Ephesians 5:1, "Become imitators of God as beloved children." The only way this can be accomplished is through life in the divine dynasphere. It was God who first lived in the divine dynasphere in hypostatic union. The prototype divine dynasphere was the place where the humanity of Christ resided during the first advent.

The idea that there are degrees of spirituality is a delusion. Spirituality is an absolute. There are degrees of growth, but not in spirituality. Any sin, regardless of category, puts the believer in the cosmic system.

"Immediately I was in the Spirit," gate one of the divine dynasphere. Two members of the Trinity occupy the throne that is mentioned. We have the connective conjunction kai which in this case is translated "now," plus the demonstrative particle i)dou, "behold" which demands perception. We translate it, "now look at something new." It is an idiom. What is it? We have the nominative subject of qronoj, a "throne." With this is the imperfect middle indicative of the verb keimai which means to place, to stand, to recline, to appear, to occur. Here it is simply translated, "no look at something new, a throne is standing." The progressive imperfect tense denotes action in progress in past time. This is called the progressive imperfect of description. The middle voice is a direct middle describing the subject as participating in the action of the verb. The subject is a throne. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the fact that there is a throne in heaven, and immediately when there is a throne that means that there is a system of authority, there is a hierarchy, an organisation. Heaven is a perfect place, there is authority in heaven. This is in heaven, the preposition e)n plus the locative of o)uranoj, "in heaven." We have a definite article with o)uranoj. The generic use of the definite article denotes a category that does not have to be translated. "Immediately I was in the Spirit: now, look at something new, a throne was standing in heaven." Two members of the Trinity actually occupy that throne; one is invisible, the other is visible. God the Father is invisible as the occupant of the throne; God the Son is visible because of the hypostatic union. God the Father was present but invisible to John, as per John 1:18, "No man has seen God at any time"; John 6:46, "Not that any man has seen the Father except the one who is from God," the Lord Jesus Christ. Because of the hypostatic union our Lord Jesus Christ is visible.

That brings up the word "Trinity." The word is not found in the Bible, it is a coined theological word and is a legitimate one. It was coined in the fourth century and it is pertinent, of course, the persons of the Godhead. Essentially, the Trinity recognises God as being one in essence but three persons who possess every attribute of deity equally and perfectly. The Godhead has plurality of persons and unity of essence. This is brought out by the basic name for God in the Old Testament, which is Elohim. The suffix im is plural. The plural noun in the Hebrew implies more than one person in the Godhead, and when the persons are distinguished then we go to the tetragrammaton which always refers to one person. That is the word Jehovah. The Trinity is found in this passage. The Trinity is in heaven. There are many passages that prove the Trinity: Genesis 1:26; 3:22; Psalm 110:1; Isaiah 6:8 — "who shall go for us?" The distinction between the persons of the Godhead is often very clear, as in Psalm 2:7; Isaiah 48:16; 2 Corinthians 13:14; 1 Peter 1:2.

In dealing with the human race God the Father is always said to be the author of the plan. For example, the Father planned salvation, the Son executed it, the Holy Spirit reveals it. This generally is the pattern found in anything where God is dealing with man.

We finish verse two with the connective conjunction kai, followed by the present active participle from the verb kaqhmai which means to sit. Here it is translated, "and one sitting." The perfective present tense denotes the continuation of existing results from the ascension and session of our Lord Jesus Christ. It refers to a fact which has come to be in the past, our Lord's resurrection and ascension plus the award of His third royal patent. But these are emphasised now as a present reality. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ seated at the right hand of the Father, or sitting on the throne, produces the action. The participle is circumstantial. With this we have the prepositional phrase, e)pi plus the substantive in the accusative, qronoj, "on the throne." Translation: "and one sitting on the throne. The one sitting on the throne in this case is our Lord Jesus Christ, He is the visible member of the Godhead. Our Lord's visibility is based on the fact of the hypostatic union plus the resurrection of His humanity.

Verse 2, "Immediately I was I the Spirit: now look at something new, a throne was standing in heaven, and someone was sitting on that throne."

We are going to see later on in chapter five God the Father sitting on the throne, at least an anthropomorphism, His arm holding a very special book, the Doomsday Book. In the meantime and generally speaking most of the appearances either sitting on the throne or standing on the throne are references to the Lord Jesus Christ. A similar description of our Lord is found in 1 Timothy 6:13-16 which helps us to understand the concept of our Lord's session at the right hand of the Father.

"I order you before God, who preserves all things alive [logistical grace], and Christ Jesus who has testified an honourable deposition before Pontius Pilate, to keep this mandate unsullied [the mandate has to do with grieving not the Spirit or avoiding cosmic one], irreproachable [quench not the Spirit, avoidance of cosmic two], until the appearance of our Lord Jesus Christ [the Rapture of the Church], which He [our Lord] will bring about at the proper time. He is the one who blesses and only sovereign, the King of kings and Lord of lords; the only one having immortality [at the moment He is the only one with a resurrection body] dwelling in unapproachable light [the uniform of glory]; whom not one person of all mankind has seen [that is, His deity] nor is able to see [God is a spirit and, of course is invisible. His humanity is visible]. To whom belongs honour [the new order of chivalry] and eternal rule. Amen."

The deity of Christ, like the deity of God the Father, is invisible but the humanity of Christ is visible at the right hand of the Father or, in this case, sitting on the throne. Christ has been sitting on the throne since His resurrection, ascension and session. Like the Father

His deity is invisible, His humanity can be seen. Again, we will note an exception to this in Revelation chapter five, verse one.

Verse two anticipates the change of posture. Our Lord Jesus Christ is going to be pictured as standing in chapter five, verse six. Standing best fits the posture of our resurrected Christ when His death is mentioned. Actually, in Revelation 5:6 our Lord stands to take the Doomsday Book of historical trends of the Tribulation from the hand of God the Father, indicating once again that Jesus Christ controls history in all seven historical eras.

We move on then to verse three, the description of what is visible regarding our Lord in the throne room in heaven. Chapters four and five take place in heaven. From the eight things in heaven that we will see we are going to learn a great deal about the future as it relates to the present time. We start out with the connective use of the conjunction kai, used to introduce a result from what precedes, translated “Furthermore.” Then comes the articular present active participle of the same verb kaqhmai, which we have just noted, “sitting.” John never leaves anything to chance. Where you could omit repeating the verb, he repeats it. He doesn’t want anyone to misunderstand. Again, the definite article is used as a personal pronoun referring to our glorified Lord after His resurrection and ascension. It is a reference to the Lord Jesus Christ after He has received His third royal patent. The perfective present tense refers to a fact which has come to be in the past after the ascension and the award of His third royal patent. This is emphasised as a present reality. The whole Church Age with its no prophecy and its historical trends based upon the decisions of the royal family, either for the divine dynasphere or for the cosmic system, is a result of our Lord sitting in the throne room of heaven. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action, again a circumstantial participle. The ellipsis demands the use of the verb e)imi, to be, and with it we have a predicate nominative. The very fact of a predicate nominative demands the verb to be. The predicate nominative is from an adjective of comparison called o(moioj, “like.” We translate: “Furthermore he who was sitting on that throne [our Lord Jesus Christ] was like.”

What He was like is now mentioned very simply in a locative singular, o(rasij, which means “in appearance like.” Then we have the instrumental of association of liqoj, a precious stone here although it isn’t always that way, but in the associating instrumental it is. So: “in appearance like a precious stone.” Now why use three precious stones, especially when they are not very identifiable from the old English and taken from a text where stones were called by various things? All we know is that they were very valuable stones. So first of all we will try to identify the stones and then try to explain what they mean in this context.

The word that follows doesn’t help us very much. It is i)aspj, and as is evident someone got the bright idea of translating the iota as a “j,” so it appears as “jaspis” which is as close as they could get to jasper. I)aspj is actually a transparent, translucent stone. From ancient descriptions it only applies to one stone, a diamond. The second stone is described by a second instrumental of association, sardion, and that is a name that comes from where they were mined in Sardis. The sardion has been described for us by ancient manuscripts as deep red or brownish red, and in some passages it refers to a carnelian, used for engraving seals. It is also, used to describe a ruby as well. So it can be either a ruby or a carnelian and, of course, immediately we have the first and last stones on the breastplates of the high priests, according to Exodus 28:17-20; 39:10-13. Our purpose at the moment, however, is to identify without giving any special interpretation.

Why talk about diamonds and rubies? One obvious thing immediately occurs to us. Diamonds, rubies and emeralds all have intrinsic value. What is intrinsic value? Gold has intrinsic value. Paper money has no intrinsic value even though it has a number printed on it which says it is worth something. It simply represents value. So there are two concepts, then, of value: true value, which we call intrinsic value, and then there is representative value which merely represents something which does have value but has no value in itself, like paper money. Now gold has intrinsic value; wherever you find it, it has value. What we are dealing with in this passage are three precious gems, the diamond, the ruby, and the emerald, and we establish something immediately: they are of intrinsic value, they are of absolute value in themselves and when our Lord is being described in heaven intrinsic values are used. Furthermore, these stones are related to the high priesthood of the first covenant nation to God. Obviously these stones refer to Jesus Christ as our High Priest and it is a reference to our mission on earth as the royal family of God or a kingdom of priests. And that establishes our principle: our Lord Jesus Christ is intrinsic value as our High Priest in heaven; we are of relative value as a kingdom of priests on earth. Our relative value depends on whether we are in the divine dynasphere or in the cosmic system. We are of relative value. When we become arrogant we assign to ourselves intrinsic value instead of assigning intrinsic value to our Lord Jesus Christ. We merely represent Him and our value is determined in terms of following His plan in the representation or not doing so. Therefore we, as believers on this earth, fluctuate as we fail to represent or as we succeed to represent our great High Priest in heaven. Our royal priesthood can only function inside the divine dynasphere where it is directed toward intrinsic value. Related to the breastplate of the high priest and emphasising our royal priesthood is the first and most obvious analogy of these gems since all three of them are actually found in the breastplate of the high priest. The stones themselves even suggest analogies. For example, the diamond emphasises the greatest intrinsic value. So the believer functioning under his royal priesthood and inside the divine dynasphere places the highest value on our Lord Jesus Christ. Gate five of the divine dynasphere becomes occupation with the person of Christ and motivation virtue is always directed toward God. You and I as believers living on this earth have the privilege, no matter what the circumstances, of being related to absolute intrinsic value, our Lord Jesus Christ sitting on the throne. Furthermore, the diamond suggests that number one priority in our life must be Bible doctrine. Just as the diamond has top value so Bible doctrine must be assigned number one priority in the life.

The Sardius, so-called, is not devoid of meaning. As the carnelian the sardius is our Lord's seal related to His third patent of royalty. As the ruby, the sardius refers to the basis for our Lord's strategic victory on the cross. "Furthermore he who was sitting [on the throne] was in appearance like a precious stone, a diamond and a sardius."

Next we have an analogy to the integrity of Christ. We have the adjunctive use of kai, translated "also," followed by the nominative subject from the Greek noun i)rij, which means rainbow. The significance of the rainbow is first mentioned in Genesis 9:12-16. It is a manifestation of our Lord's integrity. When you relate something of intrinsic value to something of relative value there must be a link called integrity; and, what relates us to the intrinsic value of our Lord is integrity. "Iris" or the rainbow represents our Lord's integrity, the guarantee that the intrinsic value represented by the throne is brought into our lives as a relative value representing the intrinsic through the integrity of our Lord. No one ever saw a rainbow before the flood. For a few thousand years prior to the universal flood the earth was watered from underneath, there was no such thing as rain. The first time it rained it rained for forty days and forty nights and the entire earth was flooded. There was with it the destruction of the antediluvian civilisation which was necessary for the preservation of the human race and the perpetuation of the angelic conflict in human history. When it was all over God made a promise to Noah as the new representative of the human race, just as Adam had been the representative of the antediluvian human race. He promised Noah and his three sons, from whom we are all descended, that never again would rain destroy the earth, and the rainbow was the sign of God's integrity. The divine promise to the human race would be perpetuated on planet earth throughout human history is backed by a sign — the rainbow. This means that neither natural disaster nor man-made disaster, like nuclear weapons, can destroy the earth during human history. Nothing will interrupt human history. In fact the next time we have the unbelieving population removed it will be done by divine judgment — the baptism of fire at the end of the Tribulation when all unbelievers will be removed from the earth. That is artificial, He doesn't use natural resources in order to destroy the earth, and consequently the earth itself will never, never be destroyed again during the course of human history by either natural disaster or man-made disaster. It will be destroyed at the end of the Millennium.

From time to time God permits man-made disaster or provides some natural disaster to destroy some segments of the human race, a pruning out system which is extremely important to protect and perpetuate the angelic conflict. This is done not only to protect the human race from self-destruction but at the same time to guarantee the human race in existence until the end of human history.

The continuation of the angelic conflict demands the existence of the human race on planet earth. The spectrum or colour of the rainbow is caused by reflection of light from the rays of the sun on the mist or the drops of water. Hence, the formation of the rainbow indicates that the storm is abating or about to be discontinued, and this refraction of light from the rays of the sun becomes a marvellous token of the integrity of God based upon His divine essence. To the human eye a pure ray of light is white but actually it contains all of the colours and is in a harmonious blending of all possible combinations. The many colours of the rainbow are analogous to the many attributes of God which combine to form His integrity. One colour is emphasised in the rainbow, green, the colour of the emerald.

That brings us to the adverb of place, kukloqen, and it means to encircle. It is used here as an improper preposition with the genitive of qronoj again, translated "encircled the throne." The connotation of a complete circle emphasises eternity. Eternal God cannot lie; what He has promised He will do. The integrity of God transcends all the problems of life, man's failure, man's success, everything.

Again we have the predicate nominative of o(moioj, the adjective of comparison. This demands again the insertion of e)imi and with that, again, o(rosij, an exact repetition of the phraseology we had before, in order to bring into view one more precious gem. The instrumental of association from the Greek noun smaragdinoj, which is the word “emerald,” “also the rainbow which encircled the throne was like an emerald in appearance.” The emerald emphasises the integrity of our Lord Jesus Christ related to His guarantee that history will continue until the end of God’s plan. Furthermore the green of the emerald is a guarantee of eternal life beyond human history for all who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ in any dispensation, and a reminder that God has guaranteed the perpetuation of the human race through the entire course of human history. Which means that God will never permit the entire destruction of the human race through either natural disaster or sophisticated weaponry invented by man. The emerald simply says that history is going to go on, with you or without you. History will pass you by in this dispensation if you neglect doctrine but history is going to move on whether you advance or retrogress.

Corrected translation: “Furthermore he who was sitting on the throne [our Lord Jesus Christ] was like a precious stone in appearance, like a diamond and a sardius [ruby or a carnelian]: also the rainbow which encircled the throne was like an emerald in appearance.”

Concluding concept

1. Three of the most precious stones, the diamond, the ruby and the emerald, all with great significance far beyond earthly value, are presented in this verse. Each one is related to the principle of value, the key to this verse, intrinsic value, value that does not change as things change.
2. The fact that precious stones are used for the analogy becomes very important as far as believers in Christ are concerned. These stones represent the principle that if we are going to utilise the intrinsic values God has provided, the capital that God has provided, we must have faith-confidence in the integrity of God. We must have the scale of values which belongs to God, which transcends any human system of priorities.
3. The diamond emphasises the fact that the divine scale of values is important. We are often ambitious and often motivated to go for relative values, and our ambition sometimes distracts us from intrinsic values. The diamond is a reminder of this.
4. The believer cannot have the divine scale of values apart from the perception of Bible doctrine and residence in the divine dynasphere. You will never understand intrinsic values apart from life in the divine dynasphere.
5. In the cosmic system human priorities destroy divine priorities; relative values are substituted for intrinsic values, and the true happiness and blessing of life is destroyed.

6. The sardius, either the ruby of the carnelian, emphasises the divine integrity, the link between intrinsic and relative values, and therefore emphasises the fact that the victory in life has already been won by our Lord Jesus Christ and we are not to reinvent the wheel, we are merely to associate ourselves with the strategic victory of the first advent.

7. Therefore the sardius emphasises the doctrine that the cross precedes the crown and that the divine dynasphere precedes our place in the eternal order of chivalry.

8. The cross was our Lord's strategic victory of the angelic conflict, our advance to maturity is simply a recognition of intrinsic values and giving them first place in our lives. This is tantamount to a tactical victory of the royal family.

9. The carnelian was used for seals. The integrity of God possesses a new seal with His third royal patent. This seal guarantees the Millennial and eternal order of chivalry, or the greatest opportunity that God has ever given to individual believers. You live in the dispensation of opportunity, the opportunity of penetrating the facade of relative values in life and pseudo-priorities, breaking through that mesh of cosmic thinking, and establishing a relationship with intrinsic values. And the believer who fails is like a totally ugly, repulsive, gruesome woman wearing the most gaudy and beautiful gems.

10. The emerald guarantees the perpetuation of the human race, the continuation of history to its proper conclusion, plus the greater guarantees associated with eternal life to all who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.

The book of Revelation is the textbook of world history, beginning in AD 96 when John wrote on the Island of Patmos down to the end of time. The history is divided into two categories: the historical trends which occur during the Church Age totally apart from any prophetic concept; and then the rest of human history as given through prophecy. In the seven historical eras or dispensations from the viewpoint of God there is only one in which there is absolutely no prophecy. In all other dispensations historical trends are determined by means of prophecy. That includes four in the past time and two in the future. We are now at the end of the Church Age as far as our study is concerned and we have seen or are about to see the Church in heaven and eight things which occur in heaven. In the first chapter we noted that Jesus Christ controls history; in chapters two and three the historical trends of the Church Age. In chapters four and five eight things in heaven. In chapters six through eighteen we have the Tribulation described in great detail: first of all the panorama of the Tribulation in chapter six, evangelism in the Tribulation in chapter seven, the trumpet judgements of the Tribulation in chapters eight through ten, the two witnesses and the seventh trumpet in chapter eleven, the fall of Satan or the Armageddon motivation in chapter twelve, the two dictators of the Tribulation in chapter thirteen, the principle of grace before judgment in chapter fourteen, the bowl judgements in chapters fifteen and sixteen; in chapters seventeen and eighteen we have the rise and fall of ecumenical religion. In chapter twenty we have the study of the Millennium, preceded by chapter nineteen where we have the second advent of Christ and events related to it. In chapters twenty-one, verses 1-8, the eternal state, and in chapters twenty-one, verses 9 through chapter twenty-two verse five, the eternal Jerusalem. Finally, in verses 6-21 of the last chapter we have the termination of the canon of scripture.

We are in the process of studying eight things which occur in heaven after the resurrection of the Church. In verses two and three we have the Trinity in heaven and that is the basis of our present study. We will move on next to studying the angelic general staff in heaven in verse four, and then the administration of historical judgment in verse five, the Church at rest as a part of verse six, the angelic college of heralds in verses 6b through 11, and then another principle on how Jesus Christ controls history in verses five through seven. Finally, we will terminate chapter five, verses 8-14, with a new song in heaven, the great hymn of victory.

Verse three, "Furthermore, he who was sitting on the throne was in appearance like a precious stone, both a diamond and a sardius." This becomes very significant when we go back and look at the breastplate of the high priest in the Old Testament. Obviously these stones refer to our Lord Jesus Christ as High Priest because the diamond was the first stone in the breastplate and the sardius was the last stone in the breastplate. The two of them together represent the function of the high priest. In this dispensation our Lord Jesus Christ is the High Priest — this is the subject of the book of Hebrews — and as our High Priest He has certain functions in heaven related to us. This is an unusual time for believers in history because in this dispensation every believer is his own priest. A priest is a person who represents someone to God, and since the day of our Lord's resurrection and the beginning of the Church Age all believers constitute royal family of God. Each member of the royal family has two commissions. He is first of all given the commission of a priest. Every believer is a priest and therefore represents himself to God. The believer is also an ambassador and therefore represents God to the human race. So we have the function of the priesthood directed toward God inside the divine dynasphere; we have the function of the ambassadorship directed toward man and circumstances inside the divine dynasphere. We are emphasising here the fact that the first two stones find our Lord Jesus Christ functioning as the High Priest in the prototype divine dynasphere, and as such He paved the way for the modus operandi of Christianity in the time in which we live. You as a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ privately represent yourself before God and to become spiritually self-sustaining means that you must have certain values and you must understand certain things with regard to that representation. You not only represent yourself before God but that becomes motivation for all virtue. A motivating virtue, for example, is personal love for God based upon the perception of doctrine at gate four. There is a functional virtue which is the counterpart: impersonal love toward all members of the human race. The priesthood is the key to your life on this earth for all absolute values in your life must be related to who and what our Lord Jesus Christ is. So we have a royal priesthood and it can only function inside the divine dynasphere where it is directed toward God. The breastplate with the two stones, the first and the last, is a reminder, then, that the priesthood of the past has been superseded and there is a new priesthood in which every believer represents himself before God.

The stones themselves, of course, suggest many analogies. For example, the diamond emphasises the principle of intrinsic value. This is the major principle that we will be noting. The believer functioning under his royal priesthood inside of the divine dynasphere must learn what is intrinsic value. All intrinsic value, of course, is related to our Lord Jesus Christ who is the ultimate in this field. Gate five of the divine dynasphere becomes occupation with Christ and motivating virtue directed toward God. Furthermore, the diamond suggests that the number one priority in the life of the believer must be Bible doctrine. Since Bible doctrine is the mind of Christ it also has intrinsic value. And the principle that we will note is a very simple one: intrinsic value must precede relative value or relative value has no meaning in life. This is the story, then, of the diamond and the sardius.

In the rest of the passage we also tie in divine integrity before we begin our study of relative and absolute values. The intrinsic value of divine integrity is the subject of the last part of the verse, "also the rainbow which encircled the throne was like an emerald in appearance." God has great integrity when He says that the earth will never be destroyed again and, as a matter of fact, the earth will never be reduced to eight people ever again. We know this from our study of the book of Revelation where we have so many prophetic concepts. Our Lord Jesus Christ made it very clear that there would be wars and rumours of wars until He came. Man does not have the ability to stop wars, he does not even have the ability to control wars, and we are seeing right now a degenerate trend in our history where people are all upset about nuclear weapons. The book of Revelation makes it very clear that the most sophisticated weaponry that man can design will not destroy the population of the earth. The earth and the people on it cannot be destroyed until the end of history and this is based upon a very important principle: the rainbow, the integrity of God. There are many colours in the rainbow and they are analogous to the many attributes of God which combine to provide His wonderful integrity. In other words, no category of disaster, whether it is a natural disaster or whether it is a man-made disaster such as warfare, will ever destroy the entire population of the earth. From time to time God permits man-made disasters to provide a basis for clarifying issues in the human race and purifying issues in the human race. This is done actually to protect the human race from self-destruction, and therefore to perpetuate the human race under the principle of the angelic conflict. The continuation of the angelic conflict demands the existence of the human race on planet earth. The spectrum of colour in the rainbow is caused by the refraction of light from the rays of the sunlight on the mist or drops of water, and the formation of the rainbow indicates that the storm is abating and about to discontinue. This refraction of light from the rays of the sun becomes a token of the integrity of God and the precious stone related to it is called the emerald. So we have therefore three precious stones in this particular verse.

Three of the most precious stones, the diamond, the ruby or the sardius, and the emerald all have great significance far beyond even their earthly value. The fact that precious stones are used for the analogy as far as the function of believers in Christ and our faith-confidence in the integrity of God. Our scale of values must be based on not relative values but absolute values, values which are intrinsic. There is first of all the diamond which emphasises the divine scale of values. A diamond has intrinsic value, it always has value; and in our context it is important to remember that our subject is not diamonds, rubies and emeralds, it is intrinsic value and relative value. The diamond reminds us by way of application the importance of having a scale of values which is based on what is intrinsic in value, what is absolute in value; whereas the ruby emphasises the divine integrity of the one who won the strategic victory at the cross. The emerald guarantees the perpetuation of the human race and the perpetuation of history to its proper conclusion plus a greater guarantee of eternal life for all who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Principles

1. Everything related to our Lord Jesus Christ has intrinsic value rather than relative value. And notice: the intrinsic value is invisible. So since it is invisible to our eyes how do we understand intrinsic value? Our Lord sitting on the throne in His third royal patent is compared to a diamond, a ruby, and an emerald; all of these are stones with intrinsic value but they are visible to us. The greatest intrinsic value in life is invisible and immaterial, therefore it must be understood by analogy.

2. All real values in life are related to the only saviour and the one who controls history, the King of kings and Lord of lords, Jesus Christ.

3. Since the diamond and the sardius are the first and last stones in the breastplate of the high priest they speak of our Lord Jesus Christ as the High Priest of the royal family, and remind us that as members of the royal family of God each one of us is a priest. And if there is one thing that a priest must have clearly in his soul it is understanding of absolute and intrinsic values. Life is meaningless without intrinsic value.

4. Our priesthood has intrinsic value in life and the priesthood functions in the field of intrinsic values just as our ambassadorship functions in the field of relative values. But we bring through relative values the absolutes of integrity, honour, virtue from the production of the divine dynasphere. So our priesthood has intrinsic value in life and its function inside of the divine dynasphere relates our lives to the most important of all intrinsic values — thought, doctrine, truth.

5. For example, gold has intrinsic value while paper money only represents some form of intrinsic value. When paper money is related to gold you limit prosperity. There isn't enough gold in the world concentrated in one place to bring prosperity by relating paper to gold. You must relate paper money to that which is productive. Gold is not productive it is intrinsic value without production. Intrinsic value which has production must be related to thought, to concepts, to integrity, to courage. There are no intrinsic values unless you can think in terms of truth.

6. Bible doctrine has intrinsic value, while happiness and the pleasure of this life only has relative value. And there is no true happiness unless it is related to intrinsic things. That is why so many people are doing so many things they thought would make them happy but they are not happy at all because true happiness, like everything else, must be related to something intrinsic. When people have doctrine and capacity for life then they often have great happiness and blessing in whatever they are doing.

7. Relative values are only meaningful when related to intrinsic values. Life is only meaningful for the Christian when he relates it to the intrinsic values of Bible doctrine. We are sustained by an intrinsic valuable concept called logistical grace, not by gold and silver, not by diamonds, not by anything that is overt and visible and considered of intrinsic value. Bible doctrine is the mind of Christ and is the only thing of intrinsic value we can claim, own, use and apply for happiness and blessing in this life. The believer who lives in the divine dynasphere has a scale of values which is intrinsic while the believer who lives in the cosmic system has a scale of values which is relative. Relative values cannot bring happiness in this life. Values in the divine dynasphere are all intrinsic — thought, doctrine, truth. The values in the cosmic system are all relative and therefore detrimental. Relative values are meaningless without the backing of intrinsic values.

Values apply to people

1. Only people with virtue and integrity have intrinsic value, hence the believer in the cosmic system has only relative value and becomes disappointing to friends and lovers.

2. The relative value of people depends on their beauty or attractiveness. How many people have selected their friends, their wife, their husband, on the basis of overt beauty and attractiveness. But here is the problem with that: that is relative, it isn't intrinsic. It is what is in the soul that is intrinsic.

3. None of these relative values in people are the basis for permanent relationships of any kind. That is why some people never have any permanent friends. They have nothing in life but relative values and these relative values have no basis in intrinsic value.

4. Only intrinsic values in people are important in human relationships.

5. Therefore an enemy with integrity is far better than a friend with hypocrisy.

6. Integrity from doctrine and the divine dynasphere has intrinsic value in human relationships.

Values apply to things

1. Things with intrinsic value include gold, precious gems, manufacturing capabilities including the gross national product. In other words, things that you can see and things that you cannot see, principles which are invisible and real and things which are visible and real. Bonds, bank books, paper money, stock certificates, credit cards, letters of credit, have no intrinsic value, hence they are assigned to the category of relative values.

2. The relative value of things depends upon the intrinsic value represented on the scrap of paper, whether it is a stock certificate or a paper dollar.

3. Therefore relative values cannot exist legitimately without the backing of intrinsic value. The terrible economic collapse of France during the French Revolution came from this principle that there was nothing of value to back their paper currency.

4. Our economy is off the gold standard which means that paper money is not redeemable with gold and silver of intrinsic value. But it doesn't mean that it is valueless. As long as we have the functions of free enterprise economy and production and markets that currency is far better off than if it were backed by gold. This does not imply that we are devoid of economic intrinsic values, in other words. Our economic intrinsic value is based upon free enterprise manufacturing: in other words, factories, products, markets, profit. When you destroy profits you are violating the very concept of intrinsic value in category #1 of the laws of divine establishment.

Corporations should not be taxed for their profits. The incentive is gone and the ability to redo all of the factories, to refurbish, to bring them up-to-date, to compete with on world markets, demands that they have the freedom to use their own profits to improve their own status, otherwise you destroy intrinsic value. The gross national product represents intrinsic value in our economy and as long as these factories produce goods and these goods are sold at profit we have made the principle of intrinsic value. Free enterprise as the principle of intrinsic value is a doctrine from the Word of God — category #1 truth. Bible doctrine is a far greater principle of intrinsic value and free enterprise is advocated by the Word of God.

Values apply to thought

1. Intrinsic value is related to truth, John 8:32: "You shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

2. Truth is Bible doctrine in three categories and is the basis for freedom, free enterprise. Truth which makes us free is category #1, the laws of divine establishment, which also includes free enterprise economy; category #2, the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; category #3, Bible doctrine for the believer, the manufacturer of virtue and integrity inside of the divine dynasphere.

3. Therefore freedom has relative value and can only exist when based on an absolute value — truth. Freedom is meaningless without truth. Freedom without truth is some form of tyranny, obvious or subtle.

4. The existence and function of freedom depends on truth or Bible doctrine in its three categories.

5. Doctrine has intrinsic value; freedom only has relative value. Freedom is like the paper money in your pocket, it is no good unless it is based on intrinsic value — truth, doctrine.

6. The freedom of the French Revolution, again, illustrates the relative value of freedom for it was not based on truth and therefore it did not exist.

7. Relative values only exist when based on and backed by intrinsic values. So when you see the diamond, the ruby and the emerald in this passage you are merely looking at illustrations of a far greater system of intrinsic value.

The first thing we saw in heaven was the Trinity on verses two and three. Now we notice the second thing in heaven: the angelic general staff or the twenty-four elders. So we begin a study of the organisation of elect angels, a general staff which is going to teach us a great deal about life, even about our own personal lives.

In verse four we begin with the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai which means “also.” With this we have the adverb of place kukloqen, used as an improper preposition with the noun qronoj. Kukloqen plus the genitive of qronoj means “around the throne,” “Also around the throne.” The ellipsis demands the repetition of the verb o(raw, “I saw,” inserted. The direct object is composed of three words, all of which are the objects of o(raw, “Also around the throne I saw,” and then we have the indeclinable number e)ikosi which is correctly translated “twenty.” With it we have the accusative plural of tessarej, “four.” Since these two words go together, four plus twenty, and since four is in the accusative we have no problem in translating it “twenty-four additional thrones.” These thrones are reserved for the angelic general staff who have authority in the heavens during the period of the Church Age, the Tribulation and the Millennium. These thrones are occupied by angels who in the pristine angelic conflict have achieved great status. We might say angels who advanced to maturity. They became very mature, as it were, when there were no human beings.

One thing should be very clear. The person who is going to be happy in this life, the human being who is truly happy, has to be well organised. Being well organised means many things. It means being able to relate yourself properly to time and to the scale of values you possess, utilising therefore your scale of values and your time so that you do what you want to do and what you do the best and give it plenty of time without pressure. If you are well organised you avoid pressurising yourself. If you are smart enough not to make a lot of snap decisions about a lot of things you are even smarter yet. The first thing that we are going to learn about this angelic general staff is that they are well organised. Not only are their lives personally well organised but this frees them to do a job that has to be done in heaven even as it has to be done in any organisation on earth. That job is to collect correct information and relate it to any given situation.

“and around the throne I saw twenty-four thrones.” Then we have a connective kai, and e)pi plus the accusative of qronoj. E)pi means on or upon, “and on the thrones.” Then we have the present passive participle from kaqhmai, they were sitting.

The posture becomes very important when you understand that people who sit think. Action is only meaningful as it is backed by correct thought. It is the people who think in life who make it. The emphasis is on the body when you stand but when you are seated the emphasis is on the brain, and these twenty-four general staff officers are sitting. Sitting is the posture of thinking. There is no integrity in the body, it is all in the soul. The soul must direct the body.

So they were sitting. The perfect present tense denotes what has come to be in the past — the angelic reward before human history — but is emphasised as a present reality. The fact that they were sitting and the fact that these twenty-four angels out of millions of angels who could have been sitting there is very important. Twenty-four were sitting, not millions of the other elect angels. These 24 are higher in rank, they are smarter, they are doing a greater job, and they are obviously rewarded from something that happened long before man was created in a conflict that existed longer than time and Adam. In that pristine conflict there was the achievement of some over others and as a result of that achievement we now see promotion and eternal success. Twenty-four elect angels are given a higher rank than almost all the other angels. And what a privilege they have. They are allowed throughout all eternity to think, they have the privilege and the opportunity of being able to use their minds and to be able to make decisions throughout all human history.

We have already noted that when the judgment seat of Christ occurs some are going to have the order of the morning star, they are going to have the crown of life, the crown of glory, they are going to be presented in the court of heaven, they are going to have the translucent uniform of glory and all kinds of decorations. They are going to return with Christ and throughout the Millennium they are going to rule a nation for 1000 years. They will exert great authority, they will have great thought and tremendous opportunity.

Long before Adam and the woman there was the angelic conflict in which 24 angelic creatures advanced in spiritual momentum far beyond their contemporaries of elect angels. They were given a special reward: a general staff throughout all of human history from Adam to the end of the Millennium. The passive voice: the 24 staff angels receive the action of the verb and they received it before human history began. The participle is circumstantial. The indeclinable number, 20 plus four, now has something else added to it, the accusative plural of the verb presbuteroj. In Attic Greek the word meant an elder in the sense of someone who was a leader. It was occasionally used for a person who was older in age but it was generally in the sense of a leader, a ruler, someone who has authority. And so while presbuteroj does connote an older person it is used here in the sense of authority. Presbuteroj is used in a spiritual sense for the pastor's authority over the congregation. It always carries the connotation of authority, of leadership in both administrative and judicial functions. Hence, it means in actuality an office bearer, someone who is a ruler, an administrator with authority to make decisions and provide information for even a greater hierarchy. Since we have a council of twenty-four the term staff officer is used as approximating the meaning here, “and twenty-four staff officers were sitting on the thrones.” The rest of the sentence indicates that these 24 staff officers in the heavenly palace had received the second highest decoration for their part in the angelic conflict prior to the creation of man. This is given in part by the perfect passive participle from the verb periballw which means to be clothed, “having been clothed.” “Having been clothed” means, of course, and honour and a decoration coming up. The perfect tense is the intensive perfect imperfect, it emphasises the completed action in providing eternal reward and privilege for angelic winners. Born again angels are not called born again angels, the Bible calls them “elect.” So this is a special award for winners among elect angels. All elect angels do not have the same status quo. There is special attention on the award of the uniform of glory. The intensive perfect therefore emphasises the eternal results of the action. In other words, this is a strong way of saying a thing is in the Greek. Certain angels prior to human history were winners in that phase of the angelic conflict and were rewarded with the uniform of glory. They were therefore published on the honours list before the creation of Adam. The passive voice: elect angels who were winners in the previous conflict actually received the action of the verb — reward and decoration. The participle is circumstantial for the fact that something comparable to the judgment seat of Christ existed prior to the creation of man, prior to this phase of the angelic conflict.

What they were clothed in is now mentioned. The preposition e)n plus the instrumental of leukoj. Leukoj means white and it also means translucent or shining. With this i(mation means a robe, or simply clothing. The translation would then read: “having been clothed [honoured or decorated] with shining [or translucent] clothing [the uniform of glory].”

Now we can see a parallel. The angelic conflict which preceded the history of man ended up with certain angels receiving high awards and then human history began so that these awards could be exercised both in heaven and on earth, just as at the second advent of Christ believers of this dispensation in resurrection bodies are going to rule nations. They will have the order of the morning star, they will have certain crowns, they will have the uniform of glory, they will have a new knighthood, the new order of chivalry, a new coat of arms. And all of these things are related to the same concept. Angels not only are in eternity but their eternity includes certain supervision and certain activities of blessing for them in the human stage of history. The same thing will be true of human beings in the royal family; they will have certain privileges and honour at the end of human history, the last 1000 years.

Well, how do we know all of this? The Bible reveals the existence of a higher category of creatures which we simply call angels. The two categories of angelic creatures today are designated saved angels and unsaved angels. However, that isn't what the Bible calls them. In Mark 8:38 saved angels are called "holy"; in 1 Timothy 5:21 they are called "elect." In both cases we are talking about angels who have eternal life. But then we also have a large number of angels that are said to be unsaved. They are imprisoned because of Genesis 6:1-9, as related in 2 Peter 2:4 and Jude 6. There are also angels that are not imprisoned. Hades has a place called Tartarus which has millions of angels that are imprisoned from an early part of human history (Genesis 6) but there are still millions of fallen angels that are operative today and they are known as demons. They are covered in some passages in great detail, like Mark 5; 1 Corinthians 10:20,21; 1 Timothy 4:1 and other passages. So we have obviously then the results of a great conflict that existed over an undetermined period of time long before man was created.

During the course of human history the angelic conflict is under appeal. Satan is the chief of the unsaved angels although he is not the highest ranking of all angels. He is a brilliant genius, however, and he had a special job. He occupied the throne room where the four angelic heralds now occupy and he was the most beautiful and attractive and personable of all creatures that came from the hand of God, so much so that he became arrogant. As a result of his arrogance we have the first sin among creatures followed by the first revolution. During the course of time there was a final reckoning in which everyone made a decision. And when the decisions were all made Satan had taken one third of all angelic creatures. These are the unsaved angels, the fallen angels, the demons that operate at the present time, and they operate under his command. Then there came the courtroom scene and when it was all over Satan and all fallen angels were sentenced to the lake of fire, which at this moment doesn't even exist. Satan, being very smart, appealed his case on a principle: How can a loving God cast His own creatures, i.e. fallen angels, into the lake of fire? That was his appeal and human history results from it.

First of all God answered the objection by saying that Satan had every opportunity to have an eternal relationship with God, as did all fallen angels, and a new creation was necessary to reveal the principle by which these angels were condemned. Angels have super souls and the centre of that super soul is volition. From their own free will they chose for Satan rather than choosing for God. However, two thirds of the angelic creatures chose for God, Hebrews 2:2. The answer to the objection by Satan is found in the character of God, His essence box. He brought into existence creatures who could be self-determining. They could be independent of God or for God and by bringing self-determination into the issue He created man to prove the point of every part of the objection. This is the reason for human history, to resolve the angelic conflict, to resolve the objection of a courtroom case that took place before the creation of man.

The pattern of angelic negative volition is expressed in two ways. First of all in Isaiah 14:12-14 we have Satan's original sin of negative volition, very similar to Adam's in certain ways. Angelic rejection of the Lord is hinted in Hebrews 2:2. The creation of man then reveals the fact that the angelic conflict is resolved by the function of human free will. To resolve the angelic conflict an inferior creature is placed on planet earth possessing one thing in common with angels, free will, the bona fide function of self-determination within the environment of a magnificent soul. Human volition is tested exactly in the same pattern as angelic volition. Angels began in status quo innocence; mankind began in status quo innocence. Angels sinned — negative volition of Satan; mankind sinned — negative volition of Adam. God provided salvation for the angels (whatever it was); God provided salvation for mankind. In both cases salvation is acquired or attained by a non-meritorious function of volition. As a result angels are divided into two categories, according to Revelation 12:7, and today mankind is divided into two categories, according to John 3:18, 36.

Just as angels in eternity past were tested under two categories, innocence and sinfulness, so man is tested under two categories, innocence and sinfulness. Under perfect environment mankind was prohibited the use of one tree in the garden, just one. Everything was provided for his blessing, nothing was lacking. There was just one test. There has to be a test. There had to be one tree in the garden whereby man's free will can result in some form of self-determination and there had to be a prohibition with regard to that tree. No! And that is a test for volition. The only way that man could sin in the garden was simply to disobey one command from God. In status of innocence man can only sin by negative volition toward divine prohibition. Innocence means that morality was not an issue and in the garden. It is an issue in sinfulness but not in innocence. The only way that man could sin was negative volition toward the divine prohibition of Genesis 2:17. The penalty of sin, of course, is spiritual death, Romans 5:12ff. When man sinned through negative volition he died spiritually immediately, the wages of sin is death, and immediately Adam died spiritually. He was still alive physically because the wages of sin is not physical death, it is spiritual death. The issue, therefore, was changed from innocence to sinfulness. When man sinned through negative volition the first time he died spiritually immediately but he did not die physically until 930 years later. This proves that the wages of sin is not physical death, neither then nor at any time. Physical death is merely a result of certain factors of self-determination in the human race.

Sinfulness was another story. After the fall of man salvation is promised and offered to the human race in Genesis 3:15. Such salvation involves Christ dying twice on the cross. The fact that Christ died twice is the subject of Isaiah 53:9; 1 Peter 2; 2 Corinthians 5; Colossians 2, and many other passages. The issue is now positive volition, in the garden it was negative volition. Now it is positive volition toward God's provision of salvation and, furthermore, positive volition expressed in a non-meritorious manner compatible with grace. The pattern: "For by grace are you saved through faith; and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God; not of works, lest any man should boast."

Man's entrance into the plan of God through faith in Christ destroys the devil's appeal and resolves the angelic conflict. In all of human history only one person had to be saved but in human history apparently, when it is all over, there will be more people saved than in the angelic realm, thus demonstrating in a saturation situation over a period of unknown thousands of years that Satan's appeal was wrong. At the end of the Millennium and at the end of the Gog revolution there will be a phrase that will be the final declaration: Appeal denied!

Man's entrance into the plan of God through faith in Christ not only destroys the devil's appeal but it also brings up another issue to resolve the angelic conflict. Will man, inferior to angels but equipped with the same free will in his soul, choose for or against the plan of God? — beginning, of course, at salvation. The solution again: if even one member of the human race believes in the Lord Jesus Christ, accepts by faith (non-meritorious function) the plan of God, the angelic conflict is resolved. This is the subject of the first two chapters of the book of Hebrews and Colossians 2:14,15. And it is related to the greater subject, operation footstool, Psalm 110:1; 1 Corinthians 15:24,25; Hebrews 10:13 and other passages.

Because man was created to resolve the angelic conflict it means that we are in the arena and the stands are invisible but they are filled with millions of angels. This is the subject of angelic observation. We have elect angels observing us; we have fallen angels observing us. We have, as it were, a testimony to angels every moment that we draw a breath on this earth. Angels learn through the conversion of the sinner that the free will of man does not necessarily choose against God as Satan and the fallen angels did in pristine times. This explains the rejoicing if elect angels over one sinner who changes his mind in Luke 15:7, 10. And this means that the issue is resolved by faith in Christ.

We have studied before the plan of God for the believer. Phase one: salvation; phase two: the believer in time; phase three: the believer in eternity. Especially in phase one and phase two there is the resolving of the issue. In phase one regenerate mankind is positionally higher than angels in this dispensation. When you accept Jesus Christ as saviour you receive 37 things from God and the book of Hebrews points out that the royal family of God is right now positionally higher than angels. "To which of the angels did he say at any time, Sit down at my right hand?" He didn't, but He said it to the humanity of Christ after the ascension, and when He said it to the humanity of Christ — and we are in union with Christ — positionally we are now higher than angels. Otherwise, of course, on this earth we are inferior to them in so many ways.

In phase two, the believer in time, through the suffering as well as being the recipient of blessing mankind uses the pertinent doctrines that he has learned in the divine dynasphere, and through his right decisions in suffering and in prosperity he demonstrates to the entire angelic creation that making one decision for Christ, salvation, was not accidental but that it can result in making many, many other decisions in spite of the fact that Satan has invented the greatest trap of all time. The genius trap comes from the fact that Satan has been the ruler of this world since the fall of man, and his trap we have studied before in great detail — cosmic one with its 26 gates of interlocking systems of arrogance; cosmic two with its 9 gates of interlocking systems of hatred. This is the greatest trap of all time and to advance to maturity we have to go through nine different tests in order to reach maturity, each one requiring the application of doctrine which we have learned in the divine dynasphere.

Through the fall of man, then, Satan gained control of the world but not necessarily the control of mankind, for in eternity or phase three the believer will have a resurrection body which is physically superior to that of the angels. The freedom that we enjoy at the present time under the concept of human self-determination or free will makes us, therefore, free agents in the devil's world. Man can choose between the plan of God, operation grace, and the plan of Satan which is the cosmic system. The issue, salvation through faith in Christ, frees mankind from the control of the cosmic system, but only temporarily. We must make literally hundreds and even thousands of decisions to maintain that status quo and logistically we are given tremendous support to do so. The fact that Satan is the ruler of this world is well documented, 2 Corinthians 4:4; John 12:31; 14:30; 16:11; Ephesians 2:2 are just some of the passages. And the fact that angels are observing us also adds great credence to the concept. Angelic observance of the incarnate Christ is found in 1 Timothy 3:16. Elect angels observe and rejoice over the conversion of mankind, Luke 15:7. Fallen angels are organised under Satan's command to resist and oppose the believer, Job chapter one is a great illustration, Job 1:6; 2:1-3; Ephesians 6:12. Angelic creatures observe believers in phase two, 1 Corinthians 4:9; 6:3; 11:10; Ephesians 3:10; 1 Timothy 5:21; 1 Peter 1:12 and many other passages.

This also explains other questions that are generally not answered. Why does man exist on this earth? Inside of man's soul is volition. Linked with the work of the cross it resolves the angelic conflict. Why sin? Sin resolves the issue of phase one of the plan of God. Man's free will is the source of all sinfulness in the human race. Why suffering? Answered by the same principle. Why the Church? Why chaos on the earth? Why two kinds of spirituality, one for the Church Age and one for the Millennium? All of these and many other things are answered by the angelic conflict. But we are not dealing with the angelic conflict here, we only note its existence and its result, and its result is found in our passage, "Also around the throne I saw twenty-four additional thrones: and twenty-four angelic staff officers were sitting on the thrones, having been clothed [decorated] with shining clothing [the uniform of glory]; and golden crowns on their heads."

In the concept of the angelic general staff there is the concept of having the smartest and the wisest of all the angelic creatures, wise as far as their perception of doctrine. General staff is a term that is almost obscure, abstruse, meaningless in terms of civilian thinking and, above all, theological thinking. And yet here we are faced with the fact that we are going to have to study from time to time this angelic general staff called "twenty-four elders" and see what applications it has to the lives of each one of us. For starters, every believer is equipped with his own general staff. In effect it is the divine dynasphere and your volition related to the divine dynasphere. Also, as we have seen, no business, no social organisation or spiritual organisation, and no economic organisation can be effective without authority and without a constant feeding of good ideas and the provision of correct and accurate information to whomever is making decisions in a big organisation. Knowledge is power. We have to learn in Christianity that knowledge of doctrine is power and with it the believer has his own built-in general staff. But the general staff isn't working in the soul of most believers today. They are not organised, they can't think straight, they can't discern; yet, that is why they learn doctrine.

In verse 5 we notice the administration of historical judgment. We begin with the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, meaning "also," followed with the prepositional phrase e)k plus the ablative of source from qronoj, "Also from the throne," a reference to the throne occupied by God the Father who is invisible and God the Son who is visible. And this prepares the way for the principle that we have noted from time to time: Jesus Christ controls history.

Next is the present middle indicative of the verb $\epsilon\kappa\pi\omicron\upsilon\epsilon\upsilon\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$, and it means to proceed. The customary present tense denotes what habitually occurs when Jesus Christ controls history. The direct middle voice is one in which the subject participates in the outcome of the action. Jesus Christ participates in historical judgment. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of Jesus Christ controlling history through the administration of historical judgment where no pivot exists or the pivot is too small to have historical impact.

Crusading is one the great enemies of historical trends and prosperity. There are two kinds of crusading. First of all there is crusading in your periphery and then there is crusading on a national or international level out of your periphery. All this crusading comes from one source: arrogance. People who are crusaders within their periphery are generally gossips. They are self-righteous, they are gossips, they are maligners; and when they get out of their periphery and into international areas, whether they are liberals or conservatives, arrogance distorts their judgment so that their historical impact is adverse rather than being beneficial. In other words, crusading is a waste of time. The only solution to the problems of life is the formation and expansion of the pivot of mature believers. Crusading is definitely a manifestation of arrogance while the formation of a pivot leads to historical solution and blessing. It is the difference between confusion and the function of the general staff. And, again, you have a general staff in your soul.

“Also from the throne there proceeded.” As yet there is no subject but the subject now follows with three categories of divine judgment mentioned. These are all categories related to divine judgment through nature. Each one of them is in the nominative plural, each one of them is a part of the subject. First of all the nominative plural subject from the noun $\alpha\sigma\tau\upsilon\alpha$, and it means “lightnings” (plural). Lightning always indicates the approach of a storm. In this case lightning indicates the approach of historical disaster in the Tribulation. The tribulation is a period of spectacular historical disasters which culminate a whole section of history. They simply bring together without any restraint left since God the Holy Spirit and the Church have moved out and are in heaven, and therefore all of the bad decisions are brought together to cause great disaster. We are the products of our own decisions. Bad decisions produce disaster and the Lord wraps that disaster up in His own just and fair administration of punishment to the human race, a concentrated period of punishment such as the world has never before known. So lightning indicates the approach of that time of great disaster. There is a second noun, the nominative plural subject from the word $\phi\omega\eta$ referring to sounds here, the sounds of disaster, the sound of a tornado, a hurricane, a volcano or a typhoon. While lightning is a visual warning of disaster this is an audible warning of disaster.

And then a third, the nominative plural subject from $\beta\omicron\upsilon\theta\omicron\varsigma$, and it means crashes or peals of thunder. Crashes of thunder, again, the warning of a coming storm, hence it is used in the same connotation as the other parts of the subject, the warning of great historical disaster in the Tribulation. We will translate it this way: “also lightnings and loud noises and peals of thunder [the analogy between the warning of the coming storm and the actual storm] proceed from that throne.” These are only warnings. We are looking at eight things in heaven and this is number three, simply a warning of things to come. This is not the actual historical disaster, we will see that under prophetic historical trends, the Doomsday Book with its seven seals.

The principle behind all of that is that once the Church has been removed from the earth, the royal family has departed and with it concept pivot. There is no pivot as we have known it in the past in the Tribulation. The concept of a pivot of believers who have advanced to maturity is gone. There will be 144,000 Jews who are going to be evangelists; they are not a pivot. The largest pivot that will be seen in the Tribulation is when Moses and Elijah start broadcasting on TV from Jerusalem when they are resuscitated and brought back to the earth. So the concept of pivot is gone. There will be believers reaching maturity, very few of them, and with the fact that the Church has been removed all mature believers have gone to heaven.

We fail to realise that not only is the pivot the basis for prosperity and blessing in a given area but at the same time the pivot is a restrainer. There are two restrainers in history: the pivot of mature believers and God the Holy Spirit. With the Rapture of the Church whatever pivot that exists at the point of the Rapture is gone and with the departure of the pivot we also have the removal of the divine dynasphere, including gate one, God the Holy Spirit.

With the removal of the pivot of mature believers historical disaster becomes characteristic of the Tribulation. What is true in the Church Age is amplified in the Tribulation: no pivot means historical disaster. In the time in which we live a reduced pivot means some form of disaster. But all disaster in the Church Age, no matter how it affects you personally or how it affects others personally, has restraint. Unrestrained disaster does not exist in the Church Age. The restraint on historical disaster is the existence of the pivot of mature believers whose residence and function in the divine dynasphere becomes the means of historical blessing as well as restraint. The Tribulation, however, is characterised by a lack of historical prosperity. There is no historical blessing due to the absence of the pivot in heaven. The Tribulation is only a shortened seven years and there is hardly time for anyone who is really positive even to get to maturity. It can be done and at the end of the Tribulation there will be a small group of mature believers but there will be no pivot as we know it in this dispensation, or in previous dispensations. The pivot is being rewarded and decorated in heaven while unrestrained historical disaster occurs on earth during the Tribulation.

While the Tribulation is the greatest period of concentrated unrestrained historical disaster it is not the worst, it is not the intensified stage of the angelic conflict. That is the Church Age. We will note the difference later on. Even the greatest of historical disasters and judgements will not annihilate great portions of the population of the earth; that will occur in the Tribulation. There is no doomsday for the entire human race except for unbelievers at the great white throne judgment, and that comes at the end of history at the end of the Millennium. So not matter how bad things become historically the human race will never be totally destroyed. God has guaranteed the perpetuation of the human race on planet earth until the end of human history which is the end of the Millennium. Nevertheless, there will be times worse than others and the Tribulation being one of the titles for that historical era comes from the fact that there is unrestrained historical disaster. All historical disasters today have restraint.

The Church Age with its adverse trends in a given generation is still a doctrinal portrayal of the principle of grace before judgment. The Millennium with its perfect environment for 1000 years of our Lord's rule portrays the principle of grace before judgment. Grace before judgment and grace after judgment therefore become a part of the principle of historical trends. Before the Tribulation can occur there will be great opportunity for people to be saved and to avoid great historical disaster. After the Tribulation there will be perfect environment on the earth with our Lord's rule, so you have grace before judgment, grace after judgment. This means that there is a certain category of historical disaster as divine judgment which is concentrated in the Tribulation. In fact it is so concentrated that it requires a detailed development and Revelation 6-18 deals with that subject.

Judgment never strikes the earth or its human population without warning and without a chance for people to change their minds, called in the KJV "repentance." For those who repent grace also follows judgment. So we have grace before judgment: the Church Age; we have grace after judgment: the Millennium; we have judgment, a concentrated dose, in the Tribulation. And yet in that worst of all periods of unrestrained disaster, both human and natural, there will still be the preservation of believers. There will still be the potentiality for great happiness and blessing from the perception of Bible doctrine. In the worst of all dispensations from the standpoint of concentrated disaster there will still be among believers in their own souls a general staff so that they can have happiness and blessing, and in a time of great confusion and disorganisation believers with doctrine will still be organised in their souls. That is the principle.

Many of us have had the opportunity of studying the martyrs of the first century and their tremendous poise and courage and integrity as they went to their deaths. They died in many horrible ways and yet not for one moment were they upset or disturbed. The reason: they had a general staff in the soul. They were organised in their souls, they had doctrinal resources. In other words, they could think under pressure. That is exactly what courage is. The person who is a coward is disorganised in his thinking. He becomes emotional, he becomes upset, he panics. Panic means lack of thought. People get upset and disturbed and frightened by things they can't understand or explain — the hurricane, the volcano, the typhoon, violence, etc., but one of the great demonstrations we will study in the Tribulation is the fact that a general staff never panics. If you can't think now when things are quiet what do you think you are going to do in time of disaster?

Divine warning of judgment always gives time to utilise the grace of God in the three areas of divine truth — the laws or divine establishment, the gospel, Bible doctrine — and, as a result survive disaster. God never brings great historical disaster to any group of people without giving them time to learn what it takes to handle the disaster, to develop their own general staff in the soul. The survivors of historical disaster, then, have a grace period in which to fulfil the plan of God for their lives. Today in the Church Age historical trends are used as a doctrinal warning system of the coming storm, of historical disaster in the future. Therefore historical trends accomplish for believers collectively what personal divine discipline accomplishes for the believer individually. So the Millennium with its 1000 years of perfect environment of our Lord's rule portrays the principle of grace after judgment. The Church Age with its adverse trends in a given generation is still a doctrinal portrayal of the principle of grace before judgment. Grace before judgment and grace after judgment becomes therefore an historical trend in any period of history. Judgment never strikes the earth or its human population without warning and a chance to change your mind or repent, in other words. start making good decisions. Divine warning and judgment gives time to utilise the grace of God in the three areas of divine truth and survive the disaster.

The survivors of historical disaster, then, have a grace period in which they have the opportunity of making good decisions and fulfilling the plan of God for their lives. Today in the Church Age historical trends are used as doctrinal warning systems, warning of the coming storm or historical disaster. In this passage there are three different systems of warning; all people are not warned the same way, "lightnings" [visual]; "loud noises" [audio]; "peels of thunder" [intensified audio]. They are not all sensitive to the same warnings so different categories of warnings are given.

Historical trends accomplish for the believers collectively what personal divine discipline accomplishes for the believer individually. The grace warning gives the opportunity for the exploitation of grace and the fact that grace precedes judgment provides the opportunity for survival in any historical disaster in any era of human history.

Moving on in our verse we have "and," the connective use of the conjunction kai, followed by the indeclinable numeral e(pta and a noun lampaj, "seven torches." Then there is the descriptive genitive from the noun pur, "of fire" plus the present passive participle of kaiw, "burning." The descriptive present tense is for an event in the process of occurrence in the vision. The passive voice: the torches receive the action. The participle is circumstantial and with it we have the improper preposition e)nw pion plus the genitive of qronoj, "before the throne." The preposition is called improper not because it is immoral but simply because it is an adverb used as a preposition. The definite article can be used as a demonstrative pronoun and it can be translated "that throne," "and seven torches of fire were burning before the throne."

In Zechariah 12:6 the flaming torch is a symbol of great judgment or historical disaster: "In that day [the end of the Armageddon campaign] I will make the generals of Judah like a firepot among pieces of wood and a flaming torch among sheaves, so they will consume [annihilate] on the right hand and on the left the attacking people [besieging armies], while the inhabitants of Jerusalem will again live in their own homes in Jerusalem."

In our context there is a similar meaning of the flaming torch: historical disaster in the form of military judgements, religious judgements, economic judgements, social judgements, national or political judgements, natural judgements, disease judgements. Each torch represents a different judgment from the essence of God. At this moment they are burning before the throne, they have not been unleashed upon the population of the earth because there must be a time of grace before judgment.

There are seven flaming torches and they have not yet been thrown into the world. Number one: catastrophe from military judgment; number two: catastrophe from religious judgment; number three: catastrophe from economic judgment; number four: catastrophe from social judgment; number five: catastrophe from political judgment; number six: catastrophe from natural judgements; number seven: catastrophe from disease judgements. All of these seven categories of historical disaster are represented by the seven flaming torches and all of them will be found in the Tribulation. But right now they are in heaven, they are seven torches before the throne not as yet thrown to the earth. Obviously then the Tribulation is one of the most traumatic periods in history.

We have an explanation of the flaming torches in verse five in the phrase beginning with the nominative plural from the relative pronoun oo(j, "even flaming torches which." We have following a present active indicative of the verb e)imi, correctly translated "are." The static present tense is for a condition assumed as perpetually existing. The active voice: the seven torches produce the action and, again, the seven torches include military, religious, economic, social, national, natural and disease epidemic historical judgements. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the seven torches having an analogy to the seven spirits of God.

Next we have the indeclinable numeral e(pta, "seven." With this we have pneuma plus the genitive of qeoj, "which are the seven Spirits of God."

Translation: "Also lightnings and loud noises and peals of thunder [the analogy between the warning of the coming storm and the warning of comic historical disaster] proceed from that throne: and the seven torches of fire were burning before that throne, which are the seven Spirits of God."

The seven Spirits of God were first mentioned in the book of Revelation in 1:4, followed by 3:1 and 4:5. The final one is in chapter 5 verse 6. Already in 1:4 we have noted that the seven Spirits before the throne refer to God the Holy Spirit as the power system for both the prototype and the functional or operational divine dynasphere. The relationship between the two is very important and we had to study Isaiah chapter eleven to define each one those Spirits as an attribute of God the Holy Spirit in His special function during the Church Age. Then in Revelation 3:1 we again encountered the seven Spirits. The Lord Jesus Christ is said to be one who has the seven Spirits. And again this is a reference to the prototype divine dynasphere powered by God the Holy Spirit as the means of sustaining the humanity of Christ during His first advent and the strategic victory of the angelic conflict. Then we have the concept in both of these passages that the seven Spirits are merely attributes of one God the Holy Spirit. The seven Spirits are one Spirit, God the Holy Spirit, whose divine power not only sustained the humanity of Christ during the first advent but also believers during the Church Age. The great principle here is that the Holy Spirit has another ministry as well as gate one of the divine dynasphere. It is the restraining of the function of the seven torches, and that is the subject of the end of this passage. The seven torches remain in heaven until God the Holy Spirit is removed with the Church at the Rapture, after which the flaming torches will become part of the historical trends for the Tribulation. That is the principle found in this concept. In order to understand that we must realise that the ministry of God the Holy Spirit in the Tribulation is related to judgment whereas in this dispensation it is related to restraint. All disasters have restraint and that should be comforting because neither a nuclear holocaust nor a natural disaster can destroy the population of the earth.

There are two words which help us to understand the concept of the seven Spirits. The first is the word “sustaining.” God the Holy Spirit sustains the royal family as the power system of the divine dynasphere. Later on in chapter five we are going to see the word basileia which is generally translated “kingdom” but it has another meaning that is just as important, royal power, and we are going to see the divine dynasphere called basileia. It is the royal power for the royal family and that is a sustaining function which occurs only in the Church Age. Secondly, as long as the royal family is on earth until the Rapture and as long as the divine dynasphere is the modus operandi of the Christian way of life there is a restraining function, the restraining of the human race, and therefore limiting to some extent the various categories of historical disaster. For example, the flaming torches. They remain in heaven before the throne until the divine dynasphere is removed from the earth. The removal of the restraint of God the Holy Spirit and/or the seven Spirits is actually the subject of 2 Thessalonians chapter two verses three through twelve.

“Let no one in any way deceive you” — you are a deceived believer if two things are true: if you are in the cosmic system and if you are ignorant of Bible doctrine; “for it [the restraining function of the seven flaming torches before the throne] will not come unless the falling away from doctrine comes first, and the man of lawlessness [the anti-Christ] is revealed, the son of destruction [so-called because he makes decisions that bring destruction on himself and on certain portions of the population of the earth]; who opposes and exalts himself above every god [so-called] or object of worship [involvement in cosmic one in maximum arrogance]; so that he takes his seat in the temple of God [the Jewish temple of the Tribulation] displaying himself as being God” — he is the equivalent to the abomination of desolation and the statue of Antiochus as Zeus Olympius which we have noted in relationship to the Maccabaeen wars in the past. Once more there will be an abomination in the temple in the Tribulation — “Do you not remember that while I was still with you I was teaching you these things? [People do not remember doctrine because they limit their exposure to it. Inculcation is the real secret to momentum in the Christian life] And you know that what restrains him [the great dictator. What restrains him? The seven Spirits of God or God the Holy Spirit using His power inside the divine dynasphere resulting in a pivot of mature believers that restrains disaster] so that in his time [in the Tribulation] he may be revealed. For the mystery of lawlessness is already at work [there are military, economic, social, and national disasters, etc. in the Church Age, they are already at work]: only he [God the Holy Spirit] who now restrains them will do so until he is taken out of the way [the Rapture of the Church]. And then shall that Wicked [the lawless one, the anti-Christ, the great dictator] be revealed, whom the Lord will slay with the breath of his mouth [at the second advent], and will bring to an end by the appearance of his coming [the second advent]: that is, the one whose presence is in accord with the activity of Satan

[this dictator will be living in the cosmic system and he will be following the policy of Satan].” Restraint on the cosmic system exists therefore at the present time but the restraint on the cosmic system will be removed during the Tribulation, making way for the full impact of the seven flaming torches of historical disaster, “with all power and miracles and false wonders, and with every deception of evil.” Evil is always deception because evil functions on that which is false; “for those who perish; because they do not receive the love of doctrine so that they might be saved. And for this reason God will send on them a deluding influence [the activity of error], so that they might believe what is false [the total life of the believer or unbeliever in the cosmic system. This illustrates the fact that man is the product of his own decisions]: in order that they all might be judged who did not believe doctrine, but approved [or took pleasure in] evil.”

With the removal of the Church at the Rapture or resurrection there is no more pivot of mature believers, no client nations to act as a further restraint on historical disaster, and no God the Holy Spirit of the seven Spirits related to the divine dynasphere, and therefore the seven flaming torches function without restraint in the Tribulation. Therefore the Tribulation is a time of unrestrained historical disaster with emphasis on the seven categories of the flaming torches. The Tribulation is the most traumatic period of human history from the standpoint of historical disaster. Just as the Church Age is the intensified stage of the angelic conflict the Tribulation is the era of unrestrained disaster resulting from human decisions. Never will human decisions be allowed to follow to their own logical conclusions without restraint as in the Tribulation. Therefore the third thing seen in heaven is the anticipation of unrestrained historical disaster resulting from man’s bad decisions. Bad decisions means living in the cosmic system. The manner in which the seven historical catastrophes will be administered is reserved for our study of Revelation chapters six through eighteen.

While planet earth is the place of historical disaster and unprecedented judgment during the Tribulation the Church, having been removed by the Rapture, does not have any more disaster to face. The Church is going to be in heaven and the next half of the next verse will tell us about unprecedented blessing and tranquillity with regard to the Church. The next thing seen in heaven is the antithesis of the turmoil and catastrophe of unrestrained historical disaster during the Tribulation. So we anticipate the sea of glass in heaven which can never be disturbed again. While the Tribulation is occurring on the earth there is a sea of glass or crystal in heaven. This means fantastic tranquillity and blessing which cannot be experienced on earth due to Satan’s rulership.

We move, then, to number four out of the eight things seen in heaven: the Church in tranquillity, verse 6a. We have the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai and it should be translated “also.” Then the improper preposition e)npion plus the genitive of qronoj, “before the throne.” The definite article is used simply as a demonstrative pronoun. This is a reference to the throne of God in heaven and the ellipsis demands the use of e)imi, “there was.” Then the relative adverb o(j as an expanded translation, which is legitimate, “as it were.” This is followed by the predicate nominative from qalassa, referring to the sea. We have an anarthrous construction here which means no definite article. The absence of the definite article emphasises the qualitative aspect of the noun. This is no ordinary sea. While the seas of planet earth are unstable, disturbed by atmospheric pressure, wind, currents and temperature, there is no storm on this sea. With this we have the nominative feminine singular from the adjective u(alinoj and it refers to either glass or crystal. We translate is “sea of glass.” Then we have a particle of analogy, o(moioj, indicating what kind of glass, the best kind of glass, and it means “like,” plus the instrumental of association, krustalloj, “crystal.” The sea of glass is translucent and undisturbed, it symbolises a large group of people which in this case refers to the royal family of God in heaven and the analogy is obvious. The Church is in heaven, it cannot be disturbed by the storms of the Tribulation. It is undisturbable, it is in absolute tranquillity. This means that the resurrection body is enjoyed by everyone and it means also that there is no way that we can again be affected by disaster on the earth.

Number five is the angelic heralds of heaven. Heraldry is going to be one of our greater studies and in anticipation we move to the doctrine which we must have before we can interpret anything else in heaven.

The doctrine of angelic hierarchy

1. The angelic hierarchy is divided into two categories and two ranks.
2. The categories include the college of heralds and the army of elect angels.
3. Angels do not have wings but there are several exceptions: wings are used as insignia of rank.
4. Insignia of rank belong to the seraphim — “im” is a plural suffix and we would say “seraphs.” The seraphim are found in Isaiah 6:2 in the Old Testament and Revelation 4:8 in the New Testament. Seraphim simply means six wings. They possess the highest rank insignia. The second category of angels that have rank are called the cherubim (Hebrew) or cherubs (English), found first in Genesis 3:24. We will study them in Ezekiel chapter 10 and in note them in chapters 1 and 28:13ff. The cherub possesses four wings as rank insignia plus the uniform of wisdom.
5. The order of rank is found in both the college of heralds and the elect army of angels.

The order of rank in the college of heralds

1. Number one rank in the college of heralds is the king of arms or the officers of arms. They are special seraphs like the powerful angel, or as we have in the KJV, the strong angel of Revelation 5:2.

2. Number two in order of rank are the angelic heralds, Revelation 4:6, 8. They are seraphs with rank insignia of six wings.

3. The third order of rank are the pur sui vant, the angels without rank or insignia or wings. They are often called messengers; they appear in the form of man. The man clothed in linen in Ezekiel 10; the death angel of the Passover; the angelic messengers that destroyed Sodom in Genesis 19:13; the messenger pur sui vant who destroyed the sinful of Jerusalem in Ezekiel 9:1ff.

The order of rank in the angelic army

1. Adonai Sabaoth, "Lord of the armies." Our Lord Jesus Christ is the Commander-in-Chief of the many angelic armies.

2. The archangels who command armies of elect angels. For example, there is Michael, the "prince of Israel" of Daniel 10:21. He commands an angelic army that protects Israel and therefore he is also known as the great prince who stands in the time of conflict for "the children of thy people [Israel]," Daniel 12:1. He also defends Israel from the wrath of Satan, Revelation 12:7. It was Michael the archangel who disputed with Satan over the body of Moses after Moses died, Jude 9; 2 Peter 2:11. Another angel commanding angelic armies is Gabriel who also functions as the king of arms in the college of heralds. It was he who was sent to Daniel to explain the visions of Daniel 8:16 and 9:21. Gabriel is one of the kings of arms or officers of arms who was sent to announce the birth of John the Baptist in Luke 1:11, and the birth of Messiah to the virgin Mary in Luke 1:26. In the book of Enoch, which is an extra biblical book of history, four archangels are mentioned — Michael, Gabriel, Raphael, and Uriel.

3. The angelic general staff which we have previously studied as the twenty-four elders in verse four.

4. We have Sabaoth, the hosts of angelic armies.

In the middle of verse six we actually have number five scene in heaven, the angelic heralds of heaven, verses 6b-11. What we are going to see in verse 6b is the uniform of wisdom worn by four cherubs of the angelic heraldry. They are not "beasts" as in the KJV. A better translation would be "living creatures."

The sea of glass refers to the tranquillity of the Church in heaven during the Tribulation. In the middle of verse six we read in the KJV: "and in the midst of the throne, and round about the throne, were four beasts full of eyes before and behind." We note first the location of the angelic heralds. In the rest of verse six we have the uniform of wisdom worn by the four cherubs of angelic heraldry. From now on we should understand the word cherub and the word seraph. These are the insignias of rank. Angels do not have wings, with several exceptions. In the angelic order of battle and in the angelic hierarchy there are five and even six angels out of the billions of angels that were created that were higher than Satan always, but none of them apparently had the personality or the beauty, for Satan is described in great detail by Isaiah and Ezekiel in terms of tremendous beauty. He is said to be the sum total of beauty and have a magnificent personality and these attributes led to the original sin of any creature, which is arrogance, and from that his attempt to overthrow the entire order of God.

But long before we get to Satanology we are going to see a great deal of Christology where we are going to discover that the key to prophecy is the Lord Jesus Christ and that the subject of prophecy is the Lord Jesus Christ.

We resume now with the connective conjunction kai emphasizing a fact as surprising or unexpected, and therefore translated “furthermore.” Then the prepositional phrase e)n plus the locative of mesoj and the descriptive genitive of qronoj, “in the middle of the throne,” and then the connective conjunction kai, “and,” and the locative of place kukloj, which is used as an improper preposition, and finally the genitive of qronoj, “and around the throne.” Kukloj means “around” as a preposition. “Furthermore in the middle of the throne and around the throne” is simply giving the locale of the four angelic heralds. Their identification comes next with two words. The ellipsis demands the insertion of e)imi, “were,” then the predicate nominative from the numeral tessarej, implying that these four took the place of Satan after the fall of Satan. So they occupy a very high rank and place in the angelic hierarchy, and the predicate nominative from the noun zoiwn which is not “beast,” is a living, rational creature. The word has been used of animals but in such cases it is always preceded by an adjective a)loga, which means an unreasoning or non-reasoning creature. When used of man it also has an adjective logika, and when used with zoiwn it means a rational creature, and it is used only for man. Heretical teachers are described by a Greek phrase: a)loga zoia. This means unreasonable animals and is found in Jude 10 and 2 Peter 2:12. The whole cosmos is also called e)n pseuchoj, having a soul, and when it is so described it is called zoiwn, which merely shows why we are translating this way. People point out that “beast” is a good translation here because the word is used for beast. Yes, but always used with the adjective a)loga and never translated “beast” any other way. But here we don’t have a)loga, we have simply zoh plus yuxh which is called zoia and it refers to a living rational creature. It also means a superior rational creature which establishes it as an angel, not an animal. From the descriptions that follow we can tell exactly what type of an angel, an angelic herald.

The word “herald” doesn’t mean just an ordinary messenger. Remember that in the college of heralds you have three categories: the king of arms as the highest category, sometimes called officers of arms; the formal word “herald”; and, pur sui vant, the messenger type. The “living creatures” are the second category and are cherubs or seraphs, and the king of arms is a seraph, the highest possible rank that angelic creatures could have.

Translation: "Furthermore, in the middle of the throne and around that throne [of God in heaven] there were four angelic heralds [four living creatures]."

The heralds were the communicators for the king. A herald, for example, in medieval times held highest rank. He would be a prince or a duke representing the king. In this case the four angelic heralds are representatives in the angelic realm of our Lord Jesus Christ related to His third royal patent. As the messengers of the King they wore the coat of arms of the King as their badge of office. Even the Greek word for a herald was used by Homer for the most trusted person in the king's order of royalty, khruce, which meant a trusted retainer, the chief under the king, the king's chief of staff. In performing confidential services for the king the herald became the spokesman for the king and, therefore, the inviolable messenger between states in time of peace or in time of war. In mythology Hermes was the messenger or the herald of the gods. Paul was often mistaken for Hermes because he was eloquent. Even in the Latin the word carried a very high connotation. In the breach of international law by a neighbouring state Rome always sent to that state two heralds to declare the objection of SPQR and a warning to cease and desist on threat of punishment from Rome. The herald was both the representative of a king and the administrator of punishment from the king, and that is its use in this heavenly scene. The angelic heralds not only communicate the policy of our Lord Jesus Christ as the King of kings but they also carry out His plan for history and they lead in angelic worship.

They also have at this time special uniform of distinction, the uniform of wisdom. We have the nominative plural neuter, present active participle of the word gemw. Gemw means to be full, to be covered. The participle is used here, however, as a noun and we will simply translate it that way, "full." Then the descriptive genitive from o)fqalmoj which means "eyes," "full of eyes."

Matthew 6:22 begins to help us with the subject of eyes. What do eyes mean? Obviously these are not eyes working physiologically. It is not a literal eye here. "The lamp of the body is the eye." Immediately we understand something from that. The eye in the ancient world represented a literal physiological function, seeing, but it also represented something beyond seeing. The eye represented perception. "If therefore your eye is healthy," a reference to perception of doctrine; "your whole body is full of light," full of truth, full of doctrine.

We have a phrase that begins in Genesis 18:2 and is used constantly throughout the Old Testament, "to lift up the eyes." To lift up the eyes means to be inquisitive and therefore to seek information. It often is used for help. In Zechariah 5:5 it means maximum ability to understand truth; in Proverbs 17:24, to "cast the eyes about," to "cast the eyes to the end of the earth" is synonymous with silly curiosity of a fool, or inability to concentrate on one's subject and therefore to flitter from subject to subject.

The eyes are used, then, figuratively for doctrinal perception on Psalm 119:18, "Open my eyes, that I may behold wonderful things out of your law [Word]." This is not the Mosaic law but the Old Testament. The opening of the eyes has a perceptive connotation, it doesn't mean to literally, physically open your eyes.

In Ephesians 1:17,18 — “That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give you a spirit of wisdom [the uniform of wisdom worn by mature believers in time], even from the source of revelation by means of e)pignwsij [full knowledge] knowledge of him.” Why? “That the eyes of your right lobe [not the eyes physiologically], having been enlightened so that you may know [knowledge and perception] what is the hope of his election to privilege, what are the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints”. The darkening of the eye is construed as ignorance. Furthermore, the eye is the index of the mind, what you are thinking, what you are not thinking. Eyes also reveal virtue or lack of virtue. In Job 22:29 lowly eyes speak of the virtue of humility; in Psalm 18:27 lofty eyes speak of the greatest of all sins and motivating evil — arrogance; the “seven eyes of the Lamb” which we will study in Revelation 5:6 speak of our Lord’s omniscience. The eyes of the four angelic heralds refer to a special honour, the uniform of wisdom. These four angelic creatures were apparently below Satan at one time. Satan was up high under the title “Anointed Cherub,” but they persisted in the angelic conflict long before man was created. They plugged along and they learned doctrine, they learned doctrine, they were not embarrassed to come to Bible class every night! And when Satan in his arrogance went down they plugged along until they received the highest honour that can be received by an angelic creature for learning doctrine, the uniform of wisdom, a robe “full of eyes” representing consistency in perception of doctrine. In other words, they have replaced Satan as the anointed cherub, they now hold a higher rank. They arrived at that through their positive volition toward doctrine.

The application to us is very simple. It isn’t the smart Christian, the personable Christian, the enthusiastic Christian, the “Ra, Ra, Ra” type, who is going to make it. It is the plugger, the person who learns today, tomorrow, the next day, and the next day. He is the person who is often ridiculed as being an imbecile. The person who sticks with it is the person who is going to make it. This is very important because eternity is a long, long time, and there are going to be great distinctions of believers in eternity. Wisdom demands consistency of perception; wisdom is not “flash in the pan,” it is not instability; wisdom is having all the facts and having accumulated them over a period of time through consistent perceptive activity.

The uniform of glory is awarded to believers at the judgment seat of Christ; the uniform of wisdom was in eternity past a reward to those elect angels who advanced to spiritual maturity prior to human history. The system of advance is delineated by the nature of the award, the eyes, a robe with many, many, many eyes [perception]. The award was given before man was created to those angels whose maximum perception of doctrine and resultant wisdom resulted in the highest achievement in the spiritual life. All spiritual advance, then, whether angelic in the past [the angels are now in their eternal state] or man in human history is related to perception of Bible doctrine, persistent positive volition toward truth. Therefore their eyes represent wisdom, or what is comparable to us: gate four of the divine dynasphere, perception and application of Bible doctrine.

“Full of eyes” in our verse refers to the uniform of wisdom which means maximum perception of doctrine in eternity past, in the angelic conflict after they had gone through whatever was their salvation. They first of all became elect angels, they followed the plan of God in the perception of truth, they advanced to maturity, some more than others, and the highest achievement is found in this uniform of wisdom. At least four of the elect angels possess, therefore, the highest honour of angelic chivalry, the uniform of wisdom. The uniform of wisdom indicates the highest possible spiritual IQ at the time of their evaluation, or whatever their judgment seat was, came to pass, the highest possible IQ for all eternity. These four heralds replace Satan as the guardian of the throne room.

There is another principle that will come out of this as the passage develops: the smarter the creature — the elect creatures in the case of the angels — the more they love God and the more they are motivated by God. We are not talking about human IQ but perception of doctrine and its accumulation in the soul.

Please notice that man or other creatures are not even in the picture. The smarter the person spiritually the more they love God. Man isn't even in it at this point. All true honour and integrity must come from being motivated by God, not motivated by people. You see, most people in their human relationships are motivated by being attracted to someone. If someone is attractive they are motivated to be nice to them and that becomes the most fundamental motivation in human history, and it is a very false one. Human beauty and human attractiveness is a false motivation. It is a false motivation for a relationship and this is why relationships are unstable, why they never reach any fruition, why they fluctuate in every possible way. This is why people cannot maintain a friendship or love for the opposite sex, because they base everything on human attractiveness. By so doing they eliminate integrity and that is why society declines and moves into degeneracy because the basis for good human relationship is love for God — motivating virtue. These angels in eternity have reached the peak of that concept and they teach us a great lesson. They had during the time of angelic history before the time for eternity for angels began — divided into two parts: elect and fallen angels — they had through their perception of doctrine a greater love for God than any creature. At the point of Satan's fall through arrogance, "I will be like the most high God," was the start of the whole thing, and so angelic history began, the angelic conflict began. And Satan who is the most attractive of all creatures coming from the hand of God and who was elevated to the highest position, is out. Now truth is presented in at least two forms, what we call category two, the gospel, whatever it was, and category three for those who believed the gospel [those were the elect angels]. Truth took four angelic creatures even to a higher place than Satan ever occupied because when Satan occupied the highest place he was a cherub. That means he had four wings, the second highest rank. But these four go higher, they go to the seraph rank [six wings], and they did it through perception of truth for that truth gave them a love for God and motivation from God and, therefore, the highest form of virtue and integrity. The more they loved God, therefore, the more they worshipped God.

We often think of worship as genuflecting, as sitting in an uncomfortable chair called a pew, as singing a hymn or doing a couple of things like taking the communion elements. We are going to get an entirely new concept of worship that will come up very shortly.

The more these angels loved God the more they worshipped God but you must understand that this love and worship is the basis for fantastic relationship among creatures. If you put creature relationship above love for God you are going to be miserable all of your life. Your social life is going to be a mess; your spiritual life is going to be a mess. It works that way. Most people have a bad spiritual life because they have a bad social life, not vice versa. It is the social life that goes bad and then the spiritual life goes bad. People are influenced by people rather than being influenced by doctrine and because they are not influenced by doctrine they have a very bad spiritual life. But it only starts with the social life. People leave churches, people get disappointed, people get distracted by people, not by God. God doesn't distract them. Therefore a bad social life guarantees a bad spiritual life. You will never straighten out creature relationships until you have a genuine love for God. And you don't hang around singing hymns to work up a love for God, emotion is not love. At best emotion is one of the responders in true love. Expression for loving God comes in two forms: perception of doctrine is the way it is developed and then the response to that doctrine in your soul toward God is worship; and then your love for God in true worship — we haven't defined true worship yet but we will — comes to motivating love. If you truly love God you have motivating virtue, and if you have then your relationship with people is going to be wonderful. You will have friends who will love you dearly. You can have, if the Lord provides, a wonderful relationship with a member of the opposite sex and you will fulfil functional virtue by your attitude toward all humanity, those who hate you, those who despise you. You will not seek revenge, you will not malign, judge or fight back.

It takes wisdom, maximum doctrine to love God; it takes wisdom [Bible doctrine] to worship God; it takes wisdom from Bible doctrine to produce motivating virtue for this life and no believer can succeed in human relationships or produce virtue toward man and circumstances in this life without love of God, which is a motivating virtue. Motivating virtue is relationship with God through perception of doctrine. Life is meaningless and human relationship is disappointing apart from motivational virtue. Motivational virtue cannot exist even as the believers love of God is not real unless he possesses that maximum doctrine in his soul. And you don't get it all at once. It takes today, tomorrow, the next day, and so on.

The four angelic heralds are doctrinally the smartest elect angels, that is, in the eternal state. Satan, by his creation, was the super genius. His genius was manifest by his development of the cosmic system for the rulership of the world. But these four creatures are the smartest creatures, even though they were not originally, by attainment. To be smart naturally certainly brings no credit to yourself; to be smart by attainment certainly does. It is far, far better to be learning all of your life and to increase in wisdom than to have been born with great IQ and decline. So the four angelic heralds are doctrinally the smartest of all angelic creatures and they demonstrate their wisdom in several worship passages we will study. They will demonstrate at that time the function of the uniform of wisdom. We have only just begun this study.

Principle

1. The eyes (“full of eyes”) must be defined in terms of other scripture. When you have hyperbole, analogy and some form of setting up things that occasionally spiritualised you must have some justification from some other portion of the Word. Our justification begins at Matthew 6:22. What are these eyes? “The lamp of the body is the eye,” meaning perception. Obviously the eye is used here not in its literal sense but in its figurative sense. “If therefore your eye is healthy” — a reference to perception of doctrine — “then your whole body is full of light.” You have doctrine in your soul.

2. To “lift up the eyes” is a phrase used quite frequently, especially in the Old Testament. To lift up the eyes and to look up, or to lift up the eyes and look around means to seek for information and often for help. This is especially true of passages like Genesis 18:2 and Zechariah 5:5.

3. To “cast about the eyes” is also a phrase found in the Old Testament. To cast about the eyes so that they are at the ends of the earth doesn’t mean that your eyes jump out of your head and go to the ends of the earth obviously. In other words, we are talking about a figurative use of the eyes and Proverbs 17:24 says exactly that, and it is synonymous with silly curiosity. There is genuine interest and silly curiosity. This is the silly curiosity of the fool who is unable to concentrate.

4. The eyes are used figuratively for doctrinal perception in Psalm 119:18, “Open thou mine eyes that I might behold wonderful things out of thy law [the Old Testament].”

5. Ephesians 1:17,18, “That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give you a spirit of wisdom, even from the source of revelation [the Word of God] by means of e)pignwsij [full knowledge] knowledge: that they eyes of your right lobe having been enlightened,” the perceptive concept is again the connotation of eyes.

6. The darkening of the eyes can be construed as ignorance.

7. The eye is the index of the mind, what you are thinking or not thinking. Lowly eyes speak of humility in Job 22:29; lofty eyes speak of arrogance in Psalm 18:27.

We have been studying the concept of the uniform of wisdom and how it relates to worship, and what the true connotation of worship is from this passage. So we review the concept before moving on.

1. Like the uniform of glory awarded to believers at the judgment seat of Christ the “full of eyes in the front and in the back” is the uniform of wisdom and as such is an eternal reward to certain elect angels who advanced to spiritual maturity in angelic history.

2. The reward, the uniform of wisdom, was given to angelic creatures before man was created and it was given for maximum perception of whatever revelation God gave during the course of angelic history. Whatever form of revelation of doctrine they had there were those who accepted it and those who rejected it, and varying degrees, just as we have it among believers in the time in which we live. A lot of believers are even more anti-doctrinal than liberal unbelievers! And, of course, we have very positive volition, we have negative volition and we have everything in between. This was true in a previous creature history, the angelic conflict.

3. All spiritual advance, whether angels or mankind, is related to perception of doctrine, perception of truth, as it is presented to that phase of history whether it is angelic history before man existed or human history after the creation of man.

4. The eyes, therefore, represent wisdom in the angelic creation, exactly what gate four and its function in the divine dynasphere means to us, the royal family.

5. "Full of eyes" describes the uniform of wisdom which means maximum perception and application of doctrine or its equivalent, in angelic history, that is, pre-human history.

6. At least four saved or elect angels possess this highest honour of wearing the uniform of wisdom.

7. The uniform of wisdom indicates the attainment of the highest possible spiritual knowledge, and that is for all eternity. Therefore the principle out of which comes the concept of worship in this concept: the smarter they are the more they love God, and the smarter they are and the more they love God the more they are motivated by God. That is true for elect angels and it is also true for believers. Being smart here has to do with persistence in positive volition toward revealed truth resulting in the accumulation of information and, where necessary, its application for this is one of the parallel situations between angelic history of the past and human history of the present.

8. The more they love God the more they worship God (worship as a quality, not as a time) filling concept. The expression for loving God comes therefore in two forms which applies to us right now: the expression comes first in the form of worship and, secondly, in motivation — motivating virtue. It takes wisdom or maximum doctrine to love God and there is no love of God apart from cognisance of doctrine. It takes wisdom from Bible doctrine to worship God; it takes wisdom from Bible doctrine to produce virtuous, honourable motivation in life.

In other words, the principle: no believer can succeed in human relationships or produce virtue from self-righteousness. Self-righteousness is arrogance and it destroys virtue. In fact the most evil people are not the most obviously sinful people. The most evil people are the self-righteous, moral people who have the worst form of arrogance and who are constantly trying to change the lives and adjust the lives or malign the lives of other people, and who will not function under the great principle of live and let live. They even build whole systems of what they call Christianity, but it is really religion, on their purity, and they form the "purity circle": we don't do this, therefore we are better than everyone else. What they are saying is effect is: "We do not have an old sin nature." But what they are in reality is involved in Satan's cosmic system. Self-righteous arrogance inevitably leads to crusader arrogance, they want everyone to be as they are: self-righteous, arrogant, horribly evil people. They are not obviously carnal, they are subtly evil which is far worse. The arrogance factor, once it is linked with some form of self-righteousness, becomes a motivating system for evil. And these people inhabit all kinds of churches and they utter all kinds of pious phrases, and they are always looking down their nose at someone and maligning and judging someone. And yet, they themselves are the lowest form of Christian, and that is truly tragic because they are blinded by their arrogance to their own condition. They are too busy setting themselves up as an example.

One of the most overworked things in Christianity is the setting an example thing. In other words, setting an example in not Christianity. Setting an example is far from it The whole basis of Christianity is the integrity of the soul and all setting an example is is "monkey see, monkey do." That's all. It is superficial, it is overt, it is conforming to an overt mould and it is not Bible doctrine in the soul. It isn't integrity and, above all, it is not love of God. So no believer can succeed in relationship with people or produce virtue toward man and circumstances unless he is motivated by genuine love of God. And that means lots of doctrine. All of your self-righteousness comes from ignorance of doctrine.

Motivating virtue is relationship with God through perception of Bible doctrine. And that same perception that produces the motivation has a base called "love of God," category #1 love. It produces something in the soul in the individual believer called worship, and they always go together: love of God from perception of doctrine produces worship as the expression of that love toward God and motivation as the honourable function toward the human race. All of this is related to the eyes, the uniform of wisdom. In other words, life is meaningless and human relationship is disappointing apart from the true motivational virtue. The true motivational virtue is love of God. Motivational virtue cannot exist, even as the believer's love for God (Being a believer doesn't mean that you love God at all; most believers do not love God) can only be real and genuine and not a superficial, emotional statement when that believer has maximum perception of doctrine. Christianity demands one thing that this generation of believers has ignored: it demands love for God. How can you fulfil the principle of virtue in impersonal love and how can you have good relationships with people if you are a born-again believer and you have no love for God?

The wisdom of gate four of the divine dynasphere is comparable to the uniform of wisdom worn by these four angelic heralds. These four angelic heralds are doctrinally the smartest of elect angels in their eternity. When Satan said, "I will be like the most high God," he began the history of the angelic conflict. That lasted for an unknown length of time but there came a point of eternity. All of these angels were either what we call saved angels, i.e. elect angels, or they were fallen angels, and the judgment of the lake of fire (Matthew chapter 25) had already been pronounced. The lake of fire was created for the devil and his angels, not for human beings. So Satan made his appeal and in order to resolve that appeal in a totally just and fair manner compatible with the holiness of God, the righteousness and justice of God, then man was created and placed on planet earth so that every reference to angelic creatures in prophecy is where they are already in eternity. The angelic conflict continues but as far as these angels are concerned all of them are in eternity, it is not a question of any more evangelism among angels.

The fallen angels are divided into two categories: demons and those who are in Tartarus as a result of Genesis 6. So whatever their function in the angelic conflict their eternity has begun, just as those who win the order of the morning star and the uniform of glory and the new knighthood and the coat of arms, and all of the other things we have noted, when they return with Christ they return in resurrection bodies and they rule with Christ during the Millennium, but they are in eternity. The existence of their resurrection body means eternity. But there are a lot of believers, like the Tribulational believers who survive the Tribulation, who go into the Millennium under the baptism of fire. They are believers who become a cadre for the new population of the Millennium and they are still in physical bodies, they are still in time. But the believers who rule them will be in eternity. This is very important in interpretation; it is rightly dividing the Word of truth. You must distinguish where eternity begins for any form of rational creature who has a relationship with God or has rejected a relationship with God. That is why the first resurrection is an echelon resurrection, “every man in his own order [taci, battalion],” says 1 Corinthians 15. Right now there is only one form of humanity that has a resurrection body — Alpha company is the only company that has passed the reviewing stand, and that is the resurrection of Christ. Coming up somewhere along the line, whether today or tomorrow or a hundred years or a thousand years, we have Bravo company. That is the Church. Once the Church passes the reviewing stand that is eternity. The fact that people die during the Church Age and have an interim body and have great interim blessing is preliminary to eternity. It is the resurrection body, the final state of the body, that determines eternity. All angelic creatures are in their final state, they are in eternity and they are functioning in eternity. And then Charlie company will pass in review at the second advent. That is the Old Testament believers. You might point out that they died first so why don't they get the resurrection body first. The principle is: rank has its privileges. It will always be that way. The believers of this dispensation are royal family and royalty comes first. Then we get Moses and Elijah and the Old Testament saints and the Tribulational martyrs (including the believers who died in the Tribulation, they are not all martyrs). Then there is Delta company made up of the Millennial believers, the people who are evangelised during the Millennium. At the end of the Millennium they will receive their resurrection body without physical death, unless they are criminals because in the Millennium crime is going to be punished by death immediately.

So the principle then: the four angelic creatures are doctrinally the smartest of the elect angels in eternity. There are one or two possible exceptions we will note but they are only possible.

Principle

1. God is the most important person to know. If you don't know God, “you ain't nothin'.” But being acquainted with God is one of the most detrimental things in life — not in eternity, in life. It isn't knowing God that counts, it is loving God that counts. You are given time after salvation to love God. You don't fall in love with God instantly and have maximum love. Love, both in the human race and in any creature situation, is not an instant thing. That is emotion; that is response in ignorance. All true love must be cognisance. If you say you fell in love instantly what you are really are saying is that were attracted to an attractive person in ignorance. You don't know anything about them, you just liked the way they looked. True love comes from cognisance. The attraction is still there but you have to know the person.

2. The uniform of wisdom, "the eyes," emphasises knowing God through Bible doctrine and it refers to the angels during the course of their history before their eternity began. And these angels were the highest, so when you are talking about capacity for love you are looking at four great lovers, these four angelic heralds. We are going to see that each one of them bears one quarter of the arms of the King of kings. When our Lord Jesus Christ received His third royal patent He received a complete coat of arms but it is so great that not one herald can bear it. And when you see the eagle and the lion and all of these various symbols that you find in the King James Version we are talking about a total coat of arms, we are talking about the arms of the Lord Jesus Christ from His third royal patent. And one angel couldn't bear it, but the fact that these angels are bearing the coat of arms and millions and millions of other angels are not tells that they achieved something in their history that no other four angels achieved. They learned enough doctrine to have maximum love for God, the highest perceptive point. They are the smartest of all creatures in the angelic realm and angels, at this point at least, are infinitely smarter than human beings.

3. Furthermore, the uniform of wisdom is an angelic reward for elect angels who advance to the equivalent of spiritual maturity through their positive response to truth [doctrine] as it was presented in angelic history.

4. There are many subjects about which man is ignorant and no one can know everything about every subject, but the gaps of human ignorance is not really the issue in the human stage of the angelic conflict. The gaps of human ignorance comes from the fact that only what the Bible reveals about the prehistoric angelic conflict we can know. Only what we need to know at this time is revealed in the Bible. To have all of the distinctions among angels there had to be certain things that happened in their history. But we don't know all the things that happened. Only when it is necessary for us to know in order to establish certain things, in order to learn certain principles in order to apply those principles to our own experience. Therefore, inevitably it is the principle that counts.

5. The only way to compensate for human ignorance in the many areas of human knowledge is to know all about God, and God has put in His Word everything we need to know about Him.

6. Therefore Bible doctrine is the one field which the believer cannot afford to neglect.

7. Ignorance of Bible doctrine is disastrous to the Christian.

8. The uniform of wisdom is an eternal reward, a monument to the persistent positive volition toward doctrine on the part of certain elect angels. Their coat of arms is the coat of wisdom and with their coat of arms each one of them bears one quarter of the arms of our Lord's third royal patent. Understand that bearing arms is the same as carrying a coat of arms. You don't carry a coat of arms, you bear it.

We now have the two adverbs at the end of this verse, e)mprosqen which means "in front," and then o)pisqen which means "behind." Translation: "full of eyes both in front and in back" of that coat of arms.

Anticipating chapter six, these angelic heralds, each one bearing one quarter of the arms of our Lord's third royal patent, will be proclaiming the judgements of the Tribulation. That is, they will announce as heralds from the throne certain historical trends which will occur in the Tribulation. For example, the first herald, once our Lord breaks the seals, will make the announcement. He will announce the first historical trend of the Tribulation in Revelation 6:1. The second herald will announce the second historical trend, and so on. Secondary to the angelic heralds we will also see the pur sui vant [French for "the pursuers" or "the followers"]. The pur sui vant functions as a state messenger, as an officer who executes warrants under the heralds. There are actually four pur sui vant, that belong in the English college of heralds. There is the red cross, there is the blue mantle, the gate herald of the castle, and the red dragon. That is actually the four pur sui vant that function under anyone who is a herald. In other words, a herald is a high nobleman. Under him there may be a pur sui vant who is a commoner, he has no title at all. But he is learning the thing and some day he may be knighted. He may be, of course, the gate herald of the castle, but some day he may move up and become the red cross, the highest. The from there he may be knighted and then some day he will be a herald. This is the background for this concept we have here. These angels are actually heralds and this is the reason for using it. They actually announce policy of the King and issue mandates in the name of the King.

All of this helps us to distinguish between the various ranks of heralds because what they do in the book of Revelation depends on their rank. The higher in rank the more important things you do; the more you advance spiritually the more important your production for the Lord becomes.

Verse 7, the four heralds bear the arms of the King of kings and Lord of lords. The first herald: we start with the copulative conjunction kai, introducing him under the word "Now." Then we have the adjective of sequence in the nominative neuter singular from, prwtoj. Then we have that word that is so horribly translated in the KJV. We have the nominative singular neuter subject, zoiwn. The nominative neuter subject is translated "herald." It means a living creature. These living creatures are designated heralds because they bear the arms of the King [the Lord Jesus Christ] and because of their modus operandi in context through several chapters. The ellipsis demands the verb to be, "Now the first angelic herald was." Then we have a comparative adjective in order to give the portion of the King's arms which he is bearing. The instrumental of association of a noun plus a comparative adjective, o(moioj, which means "like." The noun is leon, "lion," "like a lion."

The lion is the first part of our Lord's escutcheon under His third royal title because it goes back to His second royal and relates the two titles He earned from His humanity.

Our Lord, up until the time of the virgin birth, was eternal God. That means He was coequal with God the Father, He had the same identical essence, He had the same sovereignty, the same eternal life, the same infinity, the same omniscience as the Father and the Holy Spirit. But at the point of the virgin birth, the hypostatic union with His deity now linked forever with His humanity, He was born a King. He was directly descended both from His real human mother [of His humanity, not the mother of God] from David and Bathsheba through their youngest son, Nathan, and through His not real father, Joseph he is descended directly from David and Bathsheba through Solomon. So we have two lines. The line of Joseph is traced back to Solomon and the line of Mary is traced through Nathan. So He was born a King and therefore out of this comes His second royal title; it was one into which He was born physically, He is the King of Israel. Immediately you can see where the lion comes in. He is the Lion of the tribe of Judah.

After His death, burial, resurrection and ascension He received His third royal patent but He had no royal family, and therefore the Age of Israel is halted and the Church Age begins so that He can call out a royal family which is formed by the baptism of the Spirit, or being entered into union with Christ at the point of salvation.

The lion, then, is that part of the coat of arms that recognises His relationship to Israel. It refers to Christ as the future ruler of Israel forever. This part of our Lord's coat of arms refers to His second royal patent and it results from the virgin birth. The title of the second royal patent is Son of David and the coat of arms bears the Lion of the tribe of Judah. This title, the Lion of the tribe of Judah, will be used in Revelation 5:5. As the Son of David, as the Lion of the tribe of Judah, our Lord will fulfil the unconditional covenants to Israel. The first herald bears the coat of arms related therefore to our Lord's second royal patent. This will be exercised at the second advent when He regathers Israel. Generally speaking, this part of our Lord's coat of arms is comparable to the content of the first gospel, the Gospel of Matthew. Each one of the quarters of the coat of arms will relate to one of the gospels in a general sense. Matthew is the gospel of the King; Matthew is the gospel of His second royal patent.

We have been noting order of battle in the angelic hierarchy, an extremely important principle as far as the interpretation of the book of Revelation is concerned. We have seen several categories of this hierarchy, first by badge of rank: the seraphim with their six wings. Angels do not have wings, only those who have unusually high rank, and the seraph is a six-winged badge indicating the highest rank in the angelic realm; the cherub with four wings in next in order of rank, with four wings; the rest have no wings at all.

There are two categories: the military category; the angelic hierarchy; and we have seen, for example, our Lord Jesus Christ who is described under His title of Adonai Sabaoth [Lord of the armies] and He is the Commander-in-Chief of the angelic hierarchy in the military category. Under Him we have the various categories such as the archangel and the 24 General Staff officers who are called in our passage "elders." These Staff Officers will play a very important part later on in the book of Revelation. It is the college of heralds that comes into focus at this time since this is the first category of doctrine with which we must deal in understanding the Tribulation and making the proper application to the Church Age.

In the college of heralds we first of all have the king of arms or officers of arms as the highest rank in the angelic creatures. Next we have the actual heralds, four of which we are now studying. Each one of these four heralds, called “beasts” in the KJV, and obviously poor translation that cannot even be blamed on anachronism, bears one quarter of our Lord’s arms, the coat of arms of our Lord Jesus Christ related to His human and humanity patents of royalty. This coat of arms is actually divided into four parts so that each one of these heralds bears a part of it. Then we have in chapter seven, especially verse two, the pur sui vant, the third order in the college of heralds. As we have noted, in the British system of heraldry there are four categories of pur sui vant. There is the red cross, the highest; the blue mantle, the second highest; the gate herald of the castle in ancient times but who now have different functions, the third highest; finally, there is the red dragon.

So pur sui vant has played a very important function wherever royalty has existed in the past, and royalty always means success. Royalty often fails in generations that follow but no one ever achieved any form of royalty without being successful, without being great, without having integrity, without having honour, and without having overcome a tremendous number of obstacles in life. So royalty stands for success in past history and, of course, in angelic history even more so because these are permanent and eternal rewards from infinite God whose wisdom and justice only gives reward on the basis of the execution of His perfect plan in the angelic conflict.

Now we must get back to a principle since we are dealing with the first angelic herald and we are dealing with one quarter of our Lord’s coat of arms. We are dealing with that part of the coat of arms which is related to Israel and His second royal patent. In order to understand this in detail we have to remember another principle, that the book of Revelation is union station for the Bible and many times the explanation for what we find very briefly stated in the book of Revelation is given in greater detail, or an explanation is given of the terms and the usage, in some other portion of the Word.

We have to begin somewhere and we must recognise the fact that all races were defined and classified from Noah and his three sons after the flood, Noah and his sons, Shem, Ham, and Japheth. All races come from these three sons. That is, all races except one. One race was invented, descending from Shem, the Semitic side, with the circumcision of Abraham. Abraham was Semitic but the circumcision of Abraham at age 99 was the beginning of a new race, the Jews. From this, of course, we have historical eras.

For example, historical era #1 was the age of positive volition plus perfect environment on the earth — from the creation of man until the fall of man.

Then the next age is the historical era of negative volition — dispensations are merely historical eras from the divine viewpoint — and that went from the fall of man to the Tower of Babel. Internationalism from the first United Nations (Babel) meant that there had to be a system of establishment to protect the human race from destroying itself.

So there is a third category, and that is the historical era of establishment. The laws of divine establishment were presented and nationalism became the order of the day to protect the human race. Number four is the one that is pertinent.

Historical era #4 has some overlaps but it is the first nation to God, Israel. But to become a client nation to God it became necessary to have a new race for from a new race comes a new culture. Establishment wasn't even working in the third historical era from the Tower of Babel to the times of the Gentiles.

The founding of Israel as a client nation began with a new race and so first of all we have the first era in the Age of Israel which is the new race era. That takes us from Abraham to Moses. Abraham is the father of the Jewish race. Then at the time of Moses and after 400 years of training in slavery, a very important part of Jewish history, they learned many things there that were to help them later on. Then from Moses to Christ we have the age of the nation, the first client nation to God. Israel was the first client nation and the only client nation to God until AD 70. So we have some overlap in these historical eras.

Number five is the era of the royal family of God, the Church Age, and included also is the times of the Gentiles, beginning in 70 AD, which means that today only Gentile nations are client nations to God.

Then there is era #6 which is the Tribulation, also known as Daniel's seventieth week. It is the era of unrestrained historical disaster, a very short period of history, seven years, and it is shortened because unrestrained disaster perpetuated for any length of time would eventually destroy the population of the world.

Number seven comes at the second advent, the Millennial reign of our Lord Jesus Christ where there is 1000 years of perfect environment.

Now the thing that is least understood is this period, the fourth era of human history, as the extension and perpetuation and conclusion of the angelic conflict. The first problem in understanding it is that we don't understand what a contract is. In the Old Testament the contract was called berith, and it is translated "covenant" but that may not be a very good translation. It is better than "testament" however, there is no such thing as an old testament and a new testament, it is really old covenant and new covenant. Testament is really an inferior translation because it destroys half of the meaning of the berith. When this came into the Greek in the New Testament berith was called diaqhkh, and it means a contract. It means that only once in history has there ever been a contract with individuals and groups totally apart from any other race or people, and that is with Israel.

So in order to understand the first part of our Lord's royal arms and His second royal patent it becomes necessary to go back and examine very briefly the contracts, the covenants of Israel. The contract simply was a system where God is party of the first part and He makes a favourable disposition toward party of the second part, client nation Israel which came out of the youngest race called Israel. In understanding this we have to go back to the fact that God as party of the first part guarantees the fulfilment of the contract whether party of the second part does their job or not. In other words, nothing depends on the human part of the contract. Eternal God has made a contract with Israel and in this contract He has recognised their failures, their successes. But their failures and their successes, while temporarily eliminating the client nation, cannot eliminate God keeping His promises to Israel in the future.

There are five contracts to Israel, generally classified as conditional and unconditional. Understanding the difference becomes, of course, very important. So let us very briefly, then, begin to look at some of these contracts so that we can appreciate what is meant here in this beautiful coat of arms of the herald. The first angelic herald was like a lion, and all that it means and all that it will mean as it comes up in the future is very important to us. By very definition a contract eliminates the concept of the testament, it doesn't depend on death, it depends upon the grace of God. It depends upon party of the first part having integrity. God has perfect integrity as indicated by our studies of His holiness, His righteousness and His justice. The primary issue is grace or favour, therefore conditional or unconditional is always a secondary consideration as these covenants are enumerated. The key to the contracts to Israel is Jewish client nation status which, again, eliminates categories conditional and unconditional. Once understood under the client nation connotation neither a conditional nor an unconditional covenant is a proper issue regarding the subject. The law was always called conditional and the others were called unconditional.

The actual contracts are five in number. First there is the Abrahamic contract. God made a contract with Abraham and it dealt with the race for the client nation. Secondly there was a land contract which is called the Palestinian covenant by theologians of orthodox persuasion. This is the land for the client nation to occupy in the future. The third is called the Mosaic law and it is a policy for the client nation, both spiritual and temporal. The fourth is the Davidic covenant or contract and it is the dynasty for the client nation forever. Then there is a fifth called the new covenant or new contract to Israel which deals with the restoration of the client nation Israel at the second advent and its Millennial modus operandi and permanent function as the client nation to God.

Each one of these covenants must be distinguished from other covenants or contracts which are found in the Bible. For example, there are also five contracts dealing with the Messianic line. The Adamic covenant of Genesis 2:15 or Genesis 3:15 talks about the seed of the woman, the woman being Eve, and the seed of the woman, the humanity of Christ or His coming in hypostatic union; in Genesis 6:18 and 8:21 through 9:17 there is a Noahic covenant, the contract to Noah in which the seed of the woman, the humanity of Christ, will descend through Seth the son of Noah; the third is the Abrahamic contract beginning in Genesis 12:1-3, and mentioned in 13, 15, 22; Exodus 6:2-8, in which the seed of the woman, the humanity of Christ, will descend from Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. This means that our Lord's humanity is by race Jewish. Then there is the Davidic covenant, the one that is pertinent to our passage in verse 7, found in 2 Samuel 7 and Psalm 89, in which the seed of the woman, the humanity of Christ, will descend from the tribe of Judah in Israel and specifically from the family of Jesse through his son David. Then, finally, there is the new covenant to Israel in Jeremiah 31; Romans 11:27; Galatians 4:4; Hebrews 8 and 10, in which the seed of the woman, the humanity of Christ, will return to the earth at the second advent to restore Israel from its present status. They are scattered and under the fifth cycle of discipline. This means that during the times of the Gentiles which began in AD 70: the Church Age began in 30 AD and the first 40 years of the Church Age, in part, was devoted to warning Israel of coming disaster, the fifth cycle of discipline. In fact that was the only purpose of the gift of tongues because, you see client nation Israel was responsible for the evangelism of the world as well as their own nation. They failed. So the big warning that Isaiah gave was, "Look along are going to come some people who are going to evangelise you in Gentile languages miraculously. You are Jews but you are going to hear the gospel given miraculously in Gentile languages and that is a warning that you are going to be cut off as a client nation and that throughout the Church Age the time will come, 70 AD, when we will have the times of the Gentiles when only a Gentile nation can function as a client nation to God."

Now a Gentile nation, the USA, is the prominent client nation to God. It is not a Jewish nation. It is true that we have a Jewish nation functioning in Palestine, and periodically throughout the Church Age this has been true and it will continue to be true. There will be Jewish nations and they will continue to come and go. In the Tribulation we will see a Jewish nation and number one target for Satan throughout the Church Age and the Tribulation is the Jewish nation. The reason for this will be dealt with in a detailed study of Revelation chapter twelve where anti-Semitism is covered in great detail, both historically and prophetically. But that isn't the issue at this time. But there is always one issue: Satan seeks to destroy the Jew wherever he can. While many Jews live in the cosmic system as his slaves it is still Satan's objective to destroy the Jew, because it is the only way that Satan could ever win that court case that was tried before man existed on the earth.

The court case had to do with the fact that eternity came for all angels and all fallen angels under Satan were sentenced to the lake of fire for all eternity. And Satan appealed the case and as a result man, an inferior creature, was created. He was created with one thing in common with angels: the soul and the volition. And in the creation of man the case is being won and will be won by God because during the course of human history if even one person believes in the Lord Jesus Christ the case is lost. Therefore Satan's only chance to keep the case from being won is to destroy every Jew on the face of the earth. That is because God has made a contract with Abraham, reiterated to Isaac and to Jacob. He has made a contract with regard to land in the Middle East, land that includes everything from Saudi Arabia to part of Persia. He has also made a contract with David and He also made a new contract to Israel scattered under the fifth cycle of discipline. But the major issue is the Lion of the tribe of Judah, the Lion that is found in Revelation 4:7, for if all Jews can be destroyed before the second advent then God is a liar, does not keep His word, has not kept His word, and He has in effect destroyed His case against Satan.

It all began with Abraham. God promised Abraham that throughout human history there would always be Jews and that if anyone turned against the Jews God would punish that individual or that nation. He also made it very clear that Israel would need punishment but it would come directly from God, and that He did not need any help — same concept that we have with regard to gossip. When people gossip about other people inevitably they are punished for it and they suffer for it. They manufacture their own pain. God doesn't need any help in handling believers even as God does not need any help in dealing with Israel, whether He is giving them blessing or whether He is punishing them. So we have, then, the concept and it all began with the contract with Abraham. It is called the Abrahamic covenant. This is a grace contract in which God as party of the first part has made a favourable disposition to Abraham. Up until Abraham was aged 99 he had been a Gentile, now he is made a Jew, the first Jew in history. As a Jew he would be the father of Jews, the entire Jewish race. It is a new race and a race which has a purpose as far as the plan of God is concerned. As a matter of fact it has an even more important purpose in heaven for when God established a new race called the Jews and when God gave that race certain promises all Satan has to do is to keep those promises from being fulfilled and in effect he has won his case. And God, as it were, to use an anthropomorphism, stuck His neck out all the way for the Jew. This has nothing to do with the individual personality of any Jew, this has nothing to do with Jews as individuals as Jews or any other factor. It has to do with God. God said he would punish Jews when necessary but He would not tolerate interference from other members of the human race in punishing the Jews. And so we have the Abrahamic covenant defining the Jewish race as the citizens of the first and last client nation to God.

Furthermore, He gave the Jewish race under the Mosaic law a system of culture, a system of spiritual life, and this emphasises the fact that no client nation to God, whether it is a Gentile client nation today or the Jewish client nation of the past, can survive with a multicultural system. One culture, always one culture, and the vigour of any nation historically is dependant upon a single culture. No nation has ever survived a multiplicity of cultures and all vigorous nations have one culture, many religions under freedom but one culture. When you have a multiculture nation you destroy any possibility of continuing as a client nation to God. Multiculture is the greatest attack on freedom.

You see, once you get away from the English language in the United States and go to any other you do not have the whole back ground of our history, our Constitution, our definition of freedom, our concepts of a republic, the responsibility of the voting franchise, all of the individual responsibilities we have as citizens and how these have been defined. These are the things that made us a vigorous nation. The whole concept of free enterprise, the whole concept of the sacredness of property and life, except in the case of criminals who violate those principles, the whole concept that freedom cannot exist without authority, and without establishment. All of these things are lost once you add even one to the culture that gave the vigour to the client nation.

The original presentation of the Abrahamic contract or covenant included both the race and the nation. The real estate promise and the boundaries were also first stated in the Abrahamic covenant. These boundaries, by the way, have never been achieved by Israel even at its greatest point under David and Solomon. It is a future fulfilment. In other words, Israel must have a future to fulfil the Palestinian covenant. The boundaries are first described in Genesis 13:14-16, then in 15:18-21. They include part of Egypt, all of Saudi Arabia, Lebanon, Syria, Iran, Iraq, a tremendous chunk of land that they have never possessed, indicating the eschatological implications of the divine contract with Israel. The covenant was confirmed to Jacob instead of Esau in Genesis 35:12. Esau was not a Jew under the sense that he was an unbeliever and the Jewish race was founded on regeneration. It took three generations for the Jewish race to crystallise and after that it became a matter of physical birth. But in the first three generations it was a matter of spiritual birth. Then, of course, the covenant was the basis for the divine deliverance of Israel from the slavery from Egypt in Exodus 6-8. The mechanics of the Abrahamic covenant demanded ultra-supergrace, it demanded sexual prosperity, Romans 4:16-21 as well as Genesis 17:1-7. The new race and the client nation was brought together in the Abrahamic covenant as stated in Genesis 17:8 and circumcision is the ritual of confirmation and acknowledgement, Genesis 17:9-14. This is both an individual imputation of blessing to a mature believer, Abraham, as well as by association, the development of the client nation Israel. So we have the Abrahamic covenant which had the basis for all future contracts between God and Israel.

The next covenant was a real estate contract. God as party of the first part made a favourable land grant to Israel as His client nation forever. The Palestinian covenant guarantees a Middle East land grant to the Jews forever. This grant has never been occupied, this covenant has never been fulfilled and will not be fulfilled until the second advent of Christ. Therefore, Israel as a nation today (not as a client nation) must fight to maintain its freedom, its national sovereignty, and the land that rightfully belongs to it from the 1920s until now, a land which will be given to them at the second advent.

This land grant was confirmed to Isaac in Genesis 26 and it was again confirmed to Jacob in Genesis 35. In Exodus 6 it was conformed again to Moses and therefore Moses described in great detail the geographical boundaries of this land grant which is an unconditional contract. Of course, it is a future fulfilment. It is described in Numbers 34:1-12; Deuteronomy 30:1-9. To encourage Joshua to conquer Canaan the land grant was again mentioned in Joshua 1:2-4. Both Jeremiah and Ezekiel confirmed the fact that this land grant will not be fulfilled until the second advent, until the Millennial reign of Christ, Jeremiah 32:36-44; Ezekiel 11:16-21; 36:21-38. And the boundaries are very important. For example, the western boundary is the Mediterranean and it includes western Turkey because of the phrase "the land of the Hittites." The southern border is the Nile, the Red Sea, Saudi Arabia. The eastern border is Trans-Jordania and Iraq. The northern border is the Euphrates river. This is a land grant that will not be given until the Millennium.

In addition to this a contract had to be made with the Jews to provide for them a culture, the greatest culture the world has ever known. It is the only culture that completely defines freedom in terms of truth. It defines freedom in terms of authority, freedom in terms of individual responsibility. It is called the Mosaic law or the Mosaic covenant. It is sometimes simply called "the law." The recipients of this covenant are the nation Israel, Exodus 19:3; Leviticus 26:46; Romans 3:19; 9:4. It was definitely not given to the Gentiles, Romans 2:12-14. And definitely it was not given to the Church, therefore we do not set aside Saturday, the seventh day of the week, as the Sabbath. All so-called Sabbath laws and Sunday blue laws are wrong — misapplication. Free enterprise is the order of the day and if people want to work seven days a week that is strictly their business and not a matter for legislation.

So party of the first part is Jesus Christ, the God of Israel, while party of the second part is every citizen of client nation Israel. And as the policy for the client nation to God the covenant of Moses was divided into three parts. Part one, the freedom code called the ten commandments: the decalogue defines freedom in terms of morality, privacy, property and authority. The basic heritage of the client nation is freedom, a necessity for self-determination, for evangelism, spiritual growth and missionary function; part two, the spiritual code known as the ordinances, the function of a client nation demands regeneration plus momentum in the plan of God. The spiritual heritage of Israel includes a complete Christology and soteriology taught through ritual and oral communication, but it also includes the structure of the tabernacle and the temple. But in addition to the spiritual heritage there was the third category, known as the judgements. Every principle related to freedom and prosperity is given in this area and this is the cultural side of Israel. For example, freedom, privacy, marriage, military policy, taxation, diet, health, sanitation, quarantine, criminal law procedures, when no nation in the world ever had anything remotely resembling it. In addition to that it included the function of free enterprise. Profit motivation is legitimate and honourable and it indicates that capitalism is the only true base for prosperity. It rejects socialism, the welfare state, revolution or any use of violence against establishment authority and it very definitely delineates the fact that problems cannot be solved by violence.

The Mosaic law establishes both policy and blessing for patterns in any client nation. It authorises the function of the Levitical priesthood, it authorised the function of the tabernacle and the temple, it authorised the blood of animals as shadow dedications in the field of Christology and soteriology. And it was set aside in two ways. One third of the Mosaic law was set aside when Christ went to the cross and received the judgment for our sins. It was set aside as the policy for the client nation when Israel sent out in 70 AD for the last time under the fifth cycle of discipline. And since the Mosaic law has no application to Israel during the times of the Gentiles the question arises: What is the purpose of the Mosaic law in the Church Age? The answer is very simple: a pattern for Gentile client nations because of the truth of establishment, category #1 truth.

Next is the covenant to David. That is the contract that is pertinent to our subject in Revelation 4:7, "Now the first angelic herald was like a lion," he had a coat of arms, one quarter of our Lord's coat of arms. He has the coat of arms of the second royal patent of our Lord as the ruler of Israel, the One who will personally fulfil each one of these contracts. In the covenant to David, party of the first part, God, makes a gracious disposition to party of the second part, king David. Part of David's supergrace blessing was the perpetuation of his dynasty in Israel forever, and while the Davidic line would continue for 400 years in Judah, from about 1000 BC to 586 BC, and 72 years in the southern kingdom, this is not the fulfilment of the Davidic covenant. In other words, the northern kingdom, when they split, only lasted for a few years, 72 years (998-926 BC), whereas the southern kingdom lasted from 1000 to 586 BC. That is not the fulfilment of the covenant.

The fulfilment of the covenant is given right here in Revelation 4:7 where part of our Lord's coat of arms is the Lion of the tribe of Judah. It is Jesus Christ future to the existence of Israel in the past who will actually fulfil this contract. The fulfilment of this contract and the statement of this contract is the subject of 2 Samuel 7:8-17; Psalm 89:20-37, and it is this contract that is so important. For example, in 2 Samuel 7:8, where God said to David: "Thus saith the Lord of hosts [Adonai Sabaoth, 'Jehovah of the armies,' the title of our Lord Jesus Christ as the Commander-in-Chief of the elect angelic armies]" — so it is the Lord Jesus Christ functioning as party of the first part, "I myself took you [David as an individual] from the pasture." It is interesting that the two greatest nations in all of history, one Jewish and one Gentile, both started in sheep pastures. The Romans started as a group of shepherds on seven hills; David started as a shepherd in the hills of Judea, "from behind the sheep to become the prince over my people, over Israel; and I have been with you wherever you have marched, and have destroyed all of your enemies from before you, and I have manufactured [out of grace, out of doctrine] for you a celebrityship, a name of greatness, like the fame of the great ones who have been on the earth [historically]. Also, I will appoint a place for my people, Israel, where I will plant him in order that he may sit under it in prosperity [the Millennium], and no longer be disturbed" — Israel will be restored as a client nation in the Millennium, "because the sons of apostasy will never again oppress him as formerly." Please notice that any oppressors of Israel are called sons of apostasy.

2 Samuel 7:11, "Even from the day when I ordered judges [dictators] to be over my people, Israel," there had to be law and order in Israel, "even to the time when I caused this peaceful interlude to you from all of your enemies. Therefore the Lord has made a formal proclamation to you that a dynasty will be yours," Jehovah will manufacture that dynasty for you, "And it shall come to pass when your days shall be fulfilled, and you shall lie down with your fathers, that which I cause to raise up your seed after you [those who follow you], I will cause to establish the kingdom with them."

Psalm 89:20, "I have found David, my servant; with my holy oil I have anointed him" — that is the beginning of the contract, "my hand shall be firm with him; my arm shall also make him strong. The enemy [Satan and the policy of evil] will not lead him astray, nor the son of wickedness [the attractive reversionist] control him. I will destroy his enemies before his face, and strike down those who hate him." But then He goes on to point out what is going to happen in future days. "My faithfulness and my grace will be with him; and in my name his horn [authority] will be exalted. I will establish his hand in the sea [the Mediterranean], his right hand on the rivers. He will call to me, My father, My God, My rock, My salvation ... Forever I will guard for him my grace, therefore my contract will be permanent to him [David]. Therefore I will appoint his seed [our Lord] forever."

David's seed is Jesus Christ coming in the flesh. He was born directly in the line of David. "If his sons forsake my law, and they do not walk in my judgements [laws of divine establishment], if they profane my ordinances [Codex #3 of the Mosaic law], and do not keep my commandments [the destruction of freedom — Codex #1 of the decalogue]; then I will punish their transgressions." This is not an avoidance of punishment for failure. "But with regard to him [the progeny of David, the son of David] I will never void my grace, and I will not violate my faithfulness. I will not violate my contract, I will not alter what proceeds from my lips. One thing I myself have sworn and by my righteousness and justice [by my integrity] I will not alter what proceeds. One thing I myself have sworn by my integrity, that I will not lie to David. His seed [Jesus Christ] shall be forever, and his throne as the sun before me [Millennial reign of Christ]. He [Jesus Christ the Son of David] will be established forever as the moon, and the witness in the sky is faithful. Selah [This is it].” This is what is going to happen in the future, therefore it must become a part of the Davidic coat of arms.

But now let us recognise the fact that in the line of David there were very evil kings. For example, there was Coniah. In Jeremiah 22:28, “This man Coniah is a shattered jar [He is a broken jug], an undesirable vessel [as an unbeliever]. Why has he and his descendants been cast out into a land they have not known [fifth cycle of discipline]? ... Thus saith the Lord, Write this down, this man will be childless.” In other words they recognised in every generation that between David and Bathsheba that would eventually bring Messiah. There would eventually be four sons to David and Bathsheba. Number one, who was the ruler, was Solomon; number four was Nathan. These two lines would intermingle from time to time but they would remain separate. The line of Solomon went down, for example, to Joseph; the line of Nathan went down to Mary.

Jeremiah 22:30 puts it this way: “Thus saith the Lord, Write down this man [Coniah] childless, a man who will not prosper in his days; for no man of his descendants will prosper, sitting on the throne of David or ever ruling again in Judah.” At point Coniah that line quit. Coniah had children but “childless” means that this line would not be the seed of David, that the literal seed would come through the virgin Mary and a virgin birth, and the humanity of our Lord Jesus Christ would be descended through this part of David’s line.

The second son of Josiah was Jehoiakim or Eliakim and who as king of Judah was made a vassal of Nebuchadnezzar after the battle of Carchemish. As a reversionist who not only rejected doctrine but destroyed scripture and ended up under the sin unto death he was disciplined, Jeremiah 36:29ff. He saw his son executed before his eyes and then his eyes were put out. He suffered a terrible thing. The son of Eliakim is Coniah who ruled from BC 597 for three months and ten days before Nebuchadnezzar came back and took him away prisoner. For 36 years Coniah was a prisoner of Nebuchadnezzar. This is called the curse of Coniah. While the line continued to have children — Joseph is directly descended from Solomon and Coniah — they are legal but not the real heirs to the throne. Joseph is the legal but not the real father of the humanity of Christ. The virgin birth fulfils this curse. Matthew traces the genealogy of Christ as a legal genealogy — David, Solomon, Coniah. Luke traces the genealogy of Christ through Mary who is descended from David and Bathsheba through Nathan. This is emphasised in 1 Chronicles 3:5 and is the conclusion of Luke 3:31.

The problem of the physical death of Christ still came into the picture here. Once our Lord Jesus Christ died physically — first of all He bore our sins on the cross then He had physical death — it was said at that point: “God can’t keep His word.” This was the great issue in heaven. But from three days later we have resurrection and ascension and the son of David actually appeared in heaven.

Now they have convocations where fallen angels assemble with elect angels. This was true in Job chapter one, for example, and Satan will never be thrown out of heaven until the middle of the Tribulation. But now when our Lord appeared as the Son of David, the Lion of the tribe of Judah in a resurrection body, He was given His third royal patent. At the virgin birth he received His second royal patent and the combination of the two guarantees the defeat of Satan in the angelic conflict, for God will keep His word. And to make sure that this was understood the highest and smartest of all angels, one of the four, was an angel who came forward as an angelic herald. He was wearing the uniform of wisdom, the mantle with the eyes in front and the eyes in the back, and as he stepped forward a coat of arms was given to him to bear, both then and forever, the great honour to show that God keeps His word and that when God promised David that he would have a son who would reign forever neither the curse of Coniah nor the problem of our Lord's physical death nor any other human problem can hinder the faithfulness of God. What appears to be a problem when God works it out. Therefore we have a fantastic memorial to the grace of God, the faithfulness of God, and the source of all blessing and solution to problems in life. Our Lord's faithfulness is depicted in the first angel who will bear forever this part of our Lord's arms.

The corrected translation as far as we have gone in verse 7 is: "Now the first living creature [angelic herald] was like a lion." We noted that this has to do with our Lord's second royal patent. The Lord Jesus Christ is the Son of David, the Lion of the tribe of Judah.

Before we continue with the other three parts of our Lord's coat of arms we need to review two doctrines that are pertinent to the other three heralds. Actually, the doctrines begin with one word found in the Old Testament in the Hebrew: neshimmah. This word explains why you are here and why you belong to the category human race. God imputes neshimmah to every person after birth. The fact that you were born is attested by the fact that you are here and at the moment that you were born God took neshimmah and imputed it to your human soul. That means of course that there is no neshimmah in the womb. Life belongs to God, life is the invention of God, life cannot be reproduced by anyone except God for the human race. And human life is imputed to every member of the human race immediately after birth. There is no human life in the womb and that means neither the embryo or the foetus contain human life, not until the foetus emerges from the mother's womb. At that moment, after birth, God imputes from His own integrity the spark of life.

The home or the target foe that spark of life is the human soul and human life then resides in that soul forever. The fact that you are now living in time simply means that human life residing in your soul is also residing in your human body. But when physical death occurs the human life residing in the soul moves from earth to heaven and therefore the believer is absent from the body and face to face with the Lord. In other words, human life is never separated from the human soul once God imputes it and that is true no matter whether the person is good or evil, saved or unsaved. Human life is never separated from the soul whether the person goes to heaven or to hell. Once God imputes human life, or the spark of life, neshimmah, to the soul that human life resides there forever. Nothing can separate life from the soul, even physical death. At physical death the soul leaves the body but the human body is still there as it moves to heaven. There is nothing that man can do to separate human life from the soul. This includes suicide. Furthermore, even God Himself cannot and will not separate human life from any soul and that means that by that imputation God has a plan for the human life of every human being. Whether the plan is accomplished depends upon the use of volition which is the extension of the angelic conflict.

Simultaneously with this imputation there is condemnation. The justice of God at the same time imputes Adam's original sin to the genetically-formed old sin nature. So we have human life being imputed by God to the human soul. We have Adam's original sin being imputed to the genetically-formed old sin nature. The old sin nature is formed genetically, it is passed down through Adam. This is because Adam deliberately sinned whereas the woman sinned in ignorance. So the justice of God imputes Adam's original sin to every member of the human race for condemnation and just as there is affinity between the spark of human life and the human soul, so there is affinity between Adam's original sin and the old sin nature. This is the wisest thing that God ever did and this is one of the things that demonstrates that God is wiser than any creature could ever hope to be. In fact, Adam's original sin is the origin of the old sin nature in the human race, according to Romans 5:12, as well as Genesis chapter three. So factor one, Adam's original sin, plus factor two, the old sin nature, is an affinity with antecedents dating back to the garden of Eden where Adam deliberately sinned. While the woman was just as guilty she did commit her transgression in ignorance, she was deceived. While the old sin nature originates from Adam's original sin it is now transmitted through 23 male chromosomes which fertilise the female ovum in copulation. And this imputation of Adam's original sin to the old sin nature is a facsimile of Adam at the time of his fall. Adam was condemned at the time of his fall and therefore we are born physically alive but simultaneously condemned.

This is, of course, a real imputation. It has two factors: Adam's original sin and the genetically-formed old sin nature. It demonstrates the wisdom of God for many reasons but included is the fact that condemnation must precede salvation. In fact there is no need for salvation unless there is first of all condemnation. Condemnation must precede salvation just as the cross precedes the crown, and therefore those who do not reach the point of responsibility or accountability are automatically saved because they are condemned at birth. Furthermore, they are not condemned by their own personal sins which follow, they are condemned by the imputation of Adam's original sin. This means those who die at childbirth are automatically saved. Those who die before reaching accountability are automatically saved. Those who never reach accountability, such as some with mental deficiency of the soul, are automatically saved no matter how long they live in this life. So there are many wonderful factors from that standpoint. But in addition to that it eliminates any possibility of linking your salvation and mine through faith in Christ to any norm of arrogance. All of us are condemned on the basis of the imputation of Adam's sin at birth. This becomes very important in understanding the coat of arms as we will study it in the rest of Revelation 4:7. No one is condemned on the basis of his personal sins. Condemnation occurs at birth and all the personal sins in the human race are never imputed to any member of the human race for condemnation. Instead, they were all imputed to Christ on the cross for condemnation. This is the basis of our so great salvation. Personal sin is not the basis of spiritual death. One of three manifestations of the possession of the old sin nature is personal sin, the others being human good and evil. Therefore we are born physically alive but at the same time we are born spiritually dead. This brings us to the coat of arms. The coat of arms have several implications. All of the coat of arms is related to the humanity of Christ and therefore it becomes necessary to understand: How can the humanity of Christ come into the world without being condemned, without having spiritual death? For if Adam's original sin is imputed to Christ at the same time that neshimmah, the spark of life, is imputed to our Lord Jesus Christ's human soul then there is no way that He is qualified to go to the cross and be judged for our sins. When He comes to the cross He has to be impeccable and that means freedom from imputed sin, freedom from the old sin nature or the inherent sin, and freedom from personal sin; for we, as members of the human race all have three strikes against us. First of all Adam's original sin is imputed; secondly, the genetically-formed old sin nature in our bodies when life is imputed; and thirdly, the fact that through our own function of free will, volition, self-determination, we sin personally.

This means, of course, that all the cells of the human race are contaminated by the old sin nature. There is only one exception and that is through meiosis and the function of polar body when 23 chromosomes are thrown off in the ovum leaving 23 uncontaminated chromosomes in the female ovum prior to fertilisation. Those 23 chromosomes thrown off through meiosis and the function of polar body are the basis for understanding the heraldry, the humanity of our Lord Jesus Christ. This phenomenon in the female is based on the fact that when the woman sinned from her own free will she was deceived in the transgression even though she committed a sin of ignorance. Ignorance, in other words, is no excuse. Ignorance does make a difference on who bears the embryo and, of course, it is the woman in the human race who has born the embryo by which the human race is eventually perpetuated. While both man and woman are carriers of the old sin nature only the man can transmit the old sin nature through fertilisation. The woman has in her ovum 23 chromosomes. Those 23 are totally free from the old sin nature. In fertilisation the man brings his 23 chromosomes to fertilise that ovum. These 23 are contaminated by the old sin nature, so we say theologically that the old sin nature is passed down through the man who in the original sin knew what he was doing. He looked at the first sinner and deliberately partook of the fruit, not from the tree but from her hand.

In copulation all people receive the old sin nature but it is passed down through the man. Mary, when she became pregnant according to Matthew 13:55 and Mark 6:3, had other children by Joseph. In other words, Joseph in copulation provided 23 chromosomes at least seven times. Mary was pregnant at least seven times after the virgin birth and in each case the children had the old sin nature as Mary herself had the old sin nature from her father.

Now the exception. If an ovum, like Mary's, can be fertilised with 23 chromosomes not contaminated by the old sin nature then it is possible to have a birth without a genetically-formed old sin nature. Minus a genetically-formed old sin nature means you cannot impute Adam's sin. Therefore the extreme importance of the doctrine of the virgin birth. More correctly, it is the doctrine of the virgin pregnancy. The virgin pregnancy was induced by God the Holy Spirit who fertilised the ovum of Mary with 23 perfect chromosomes. Therefore we have a virgin pregnancy which resulted in a virgin birth. But this birth was quite different. When God the Father took neshimmah and imputed it to the human soul of God the Son He did not impute simultaneously Adam's original sin because there was no old sin nature. The virgin pregnancy eliminated the possibility. At the same time, of course, there was in our Lord, since He did not have the imputation of Adam's sin, a human spirit. So our Lord was born as Adam was created, trichotomous. Adam was created with a body, a soul, and a spirit and without any sin nature. Adam's volition produced his negative volition directed toward the prohibition of God which produced the old sin nature and from then on it was genetically-formed through his chromosomes. The old sin nature resides in the cell structure of the body and moves to the soul when man from his own free will commits a sin. So we have, then, the one exception: the virgin pregnancy resulting in the virgin birth. And remember that while Mary was a virgin she was not perfect, she was not impeccable; only her Son, the humanity of our Lord Jesus Christ, was perfect. But in the case of our Lord Jesus Christ God the Father imputed human life to His soul but divine justice could not impute Adam's original sin. There was no target, no home, no antecedent, no system of affinity whereby this could occur due to the virgin pregnancy. Just as Adam was created perfect, so our Lord Jesus Christ was born perfect. And because of the virgin pregnancy, followed by the virgin birth, there was no genetic formation of the old sin nature. There was no sin nature and that meant no imputation of Adam's sin, and that means that our Lord had to use His volition in this world just as Adam used his volition in the garden. The only way that our Lord could sin was through negative volition and, of course, that did not happen.

That brings us around, then, to the fact that when the embryo of Jesus Christ came from the womb God the Father imputed life, and that was the beginning of the hypostatic union. In the person of the incarnate Christ are two natures which are inseparably united. They are without mixture or loss of separate identity; they are without loss or transfer of properties or attributes. The union is composed of His deity and His humanity, and the union is both personal and eternal as reflected by the coat of arms in Revelation 4:7. In other words, since the virgin birth Jesus Christ is both true humanity and undiminished deity in one person forever. Jesus Christ, then, is the God-Man. He is different from God in that He is true mankind; He is different from mankind in that He is God. He is therefore unique and He is the unique person of the universe. He is infinitely superior to man and angels as humanity he is now superior to all angels and human beings, so that whether you are looking at it from the standpoint of His deity or His humanity we are not only looking at the unique person but we are looking at the perfect person.

The pre-incarnate person of Christ was eternal God. Jesus Christ as God had all of the attributes of deity. In that sense He was coequal and co-eternal with the Father and with the Holy Spirit who had identical characteristics. God is said to be one because they all have the same sovereignty, the same holiness, the same eternal life, in the same amount, infinitely and eternally. But they are distinguished as persons and it is the second person of the Trinity who is unique because He now has, in addition to His deity coequal with the Father and the Spirit, perfect humanity. The issue of perfect humanity: it could have gone the other way if He had made a wrong decision during His thirty-three years of the incarnation, but He did not. He was therefore qualified to go to the cross and bear our sins in His own body on the tree, not in His deity. Because He is true humanity, because He has a physical body, soul and spirit, He is different from the Father and the Holy Spirit. He is coequal with them in His deity; He is different from humanity in that He is God. But He is superior to both man and angels being seated at the right hand of the Father where He received His third royal patent. So the pre-incarnate person of Christ has deity, coequal with the Father and the Spirit, and the post-incarnate person of Christ includes not only His undiminished deity but His true humanity in one person forever. And through the virgin birth Jesus Christ was born without the old sin nature, without the imputation of Adam's sin.

This is one of the issues that we have noted because at the moment of His birth He was, through the virgin Mary, descended from David and Bathsheba through Nathan. Joseph, who is the legal but not real father of our Lord, is descended from David and Bathsheba through Solomon. Each one of these lines is brought down to the cross. Joseph was cut off through the Coniah curse. At the moment that God the Father imputed life to His Son, Jesus Christ had His second royal patent. He was the Son of David. "Now the first angelic herald was like a lion." That is the coat of arms of our Lord's second royal patent as the ruler of Israel under the title Son of David, Lion of the tribe of Judah.

That brings us now to the concept that we must note in some detail. The hypostatic union is a major issue in Christology. Comparing John 1:1-3, describing the deity of Christ, with John 1:14 we have the principle: "the Word became flesh and tabernacled among us (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only-born one from the Father), full of grace and doctrine." "Only-born" refers to the fact that when God the Father imputed the spark of life, neshimmah, to our Lord Jesus Christ it was unique; He was the uniquely-born one.

In Romans 1:3-5 we have: "Concerning his Son, Jesus Christ our Lord, who was born of the seed of David," His second royal patent, "according to the flesh," at the moment of birth He was the Son of David and is qualified to rule Israel forever, "who has been demonstrated the Son of God by means of power," the demonstration of His deity is the subject of the gospel of John, "according to the Holy Spirit," the power according to the Holy Spirit was the prototype divine dynasphere in which His uniqueness was demonstrated, and then once more was demonstrated because of His resurrection from the dead, "by his resurrection from the dead; through whom we have received grace and apostleship."

Add to that Romans 9:5 where the subject is picked up again: "And from whom is the Christ, according to the flesh, who is over all, the God blessed forever." So His flesh and His deity are mentioned simultaneously in this verse.

The same thing is found in 1 Timothy 3:16, "And by consent of all great is the mystery with reference to godliness: the unique one [Jesus Christ in hypostatic union] became visible by means of the flesh [the moment of the virgin birth]. The same one [Christ in hypostatic union] was vindicated by means of the Holy Spirit [His function inside the prototype divine dynasphere], he was observed by angelic creatures [this was the major issue in the angelic conflict], he was proclaimed among the nations, he became the object of faith in the world, he was taken up into His place of glory [His third royal patent].”

Hebrews 2:14, “Since, therefore, the children share blood and flesh, he [Christ] also himself in the same manner took hold of the same blood and flesh [hypostatic union] in order that he through spiritual death might neutralise and destroy the one having the ruling power of spiritual death, that is, the devil.”

These are simply a few references to the importance of His hypostatic union. The incarnate Christ, therefore, is deity; Jesus Christ is eternal God. He is so-equal with the Father and the Holy Spirit, there never was a time when His deity did not exist, there never was a time when He was not coequal with the Father and the Spirit. We, therefore, call Him undiminished deity forever. The incarnate Christ, however, includes true humanity with a body, soul, and spirit [trichotomous]. Because of the virgin birth He was born without the old sin nature, without the imputation of Adam’s sin. Because He lived His entire life in His humanity inside the prototype divine dynasphere He lived a perfect life without any personal sin, and therefore was qualified to go to the cross and become our substitute. To be our substitute, to be judged for us, to bear our sins, absolutely required perfection. He had to be like the first Adam in the garden before sin. So at the point of birth we receive physical life, we receive spiritual death, and we receive the potential for eternal salvation because Christ became flesh.

In hypostatic union the two natures of Christ are united without any transfer of attributes. The attributes adhere to their corresponding natures. In other words, Jesus Christ is eternal God and He has certain attributes of deity that always adhere to His deity. He is also true humanity and He has certain attributes in His true humanity that always adhere to His true humanity. The essence of His deity cannot be changed — immutability. Jesus Christ is the same today, yesterday, and forever; the infinite cannot be transferred to the finite. To take from God even a single attribute of His deity would actually destroy His deity but in the hypostatic union His deity remains intact with all of the attributes of deity remaining intact with it. To take from the humanity of Jesus a single attribute of His humanity would destroy His true humanity and therefore would disqualify salvation. No attribute, therefore, is changed in His humanity. For example, Jesus was thirsty on the cross. He said: “I thirst.” That is an attribute of His humanity; His deity did not thirst. Therefore the attributes of each nature always adhered to the nature and they never crossed over to the other nature. That is why it was a legitimate test when the stones were placed in front of our Lord and Satan said to Him: “Turn these stones into bread.” He had the power to do it; He is God. To our Lord it was a genuine temptation because the attributes adhered to their corresponding natures.

In the fulfilling of the Father’s plan for the first advent certain attributes of His deity, however, were not used. He didn’t use His power to turn stones into bread. Instead He functioned in His humanity under hunger and did not in any way try to satisfy His hunger by creating any form of food. This does not imply that these attributes were surrendered or destroyed, that is what we call the false doctrine of Kenosis. In the true doctrine of Kenosis our Lord Jesus Christ from His own sovereignty voluntarily took on Himself the form of mankind in order to redeem man from sin, to reconcile man to God and, furthermore, to propitiate the Father. In completing this mission of the first advent Christ did not exercise His divine attributes for His own benefit or to provide for Himself or to glorify Himself. In other words, He did not use His divine attributes contrary to the plan of the Father. This is why the temptations recorded in Matthew chapter four are absolutely unique. They are above and beyond any temptation that would ever come our way because we do not have the corresponding deity with which to be tempted to solve the problems through our deity.

There is a branch of fundamentalism today that wants God to solve all of their problems. They make a lot of mistakes and they want God to come along and overrule them and bail them out. That is trying to solve a problem by the use of deity and our Lord Jesus Christ didn't so that. God will manufacture ten grand and dump it back in your lap! Or, Let's pray about it! Pray about what? Pray about your stupidity in losing your money in the first place? Stupidity cannot be corrected by prayer, stupidity can only be corrected by doctrine, and that takes time.

Our Lord faced this in those temptations in Matthew chapter four. Therefore the union of the divine attributes and the human nature of the incarnate Christ must be considered as hypostatic and personal. "Hypostatic" is a Greek word. It is derived from the Greek noun u(postasij, and it means standing under, it means substance, essence, taking a thing on one's self, or combining an essence with an essence without compromising either essence. Therefore Jesus Christ took upon Himself true humanity, as per Hebrews 1:3, "Who, being the radiance [flashing forth] of the glory [eternal God], and the exact image of his divine essence, also sustaining all things by the verbal expression of His power." When Jesus Christ was here on earth during His first advent he also held the universe together. But that is a function of His deity, He didn't switch it to His humanity or the first and second advents would have blurred into one function. Hypostatic refers to the whole person of our Lord Jesus Christ as distinguished from His two natures. So u(postasij means that when you put the true humanity and the deity together without compromising the essence of either you have an entire person. So hypostatic refers to the entire person of our Lord Jesus Christ from the virgin birth and forever, He is the God-Man. His true humanity in resurrected form will always exist, there never will be a time when the hypostatic union will be broken up, it is that way forever. That is the basis for His third royal patent.

So when we look at the hypostatic union we first of all look at the entire person. But then we have to recognise the personal aspect. From the unique person of Christ in hypostatic union we have His deity and His humanity. His deity is coequal and coeternal with the Father and the Spirit while His humanity is absolutely impeccable. The false interpretation of the hypostatic union came from gnosticism. Jesus Christ, then, is the God-Man and that is the only form of ritual given to the Church. All ritual of the Old Testament was wiped out. We have no ritual, we have no altar, we have no holy temple, we have no sanctuary, we have no animal sacrifices. All that was wiped out. The only ritual that even came over to the Church Age for a little while was water baptism, and it is wiped out. It was a part of Jewish ritual, as per John the Baptist. Now we only have one ritual and to put any other ritual, including water baptism in, is blasphemous. And what is that ritual? The hypostatic union is represented by the Eucharist. The only ritual given to the Church as the royal family of God is that which represents something that never occurred before in history and it will never occur again. Just once, one person in hypostatic union, Jesus Christ the God-Man. And we are to remember Him as the God-Man, therefore the importance of the hypostatic union, not only in the interpretation of the passage in which we are embarked, but in fulfilling the mandate of observing the Eucharist or the communion table. Jesus Christ is the God-Man forever. The attributes of His divine nature belong to the person of Christ. That means that all of the attributes of His humanity adhere to His humanity; all of the attributes of His deity adhere to His deity. They never cross over.

During the first advent Jesus Christ could be simultaneously omnipotent, because He is God, and weak, because he is a human being. This does not mean weak in the sense of being sinful, it means weak in the sense of physical exhaustion. He could be omniscient and at the same time ignorant. You see, attributes adhere to their proper place. When our Lord was born like a baby He in His humanity had to learn. He was omnipresent and yet located in one place at a time.

Why did Jesus Christ have to enter into hypostatic union? Why the humanity of Christ? There are four reasons for it.

First of all, the one who provides eternal salvation had to be true humanity. True humanity sinned; true humanity must bring it out. Adam went from perfection to sinfulness; our Lord went from perfection to bearing our sins. When He reached the cross He was absolutely perfect in His humanity. When He was on the cross it was His humanity that received the imputation of our sins and their judgment, though His deity was there and the hypostatic union was present at the cross. Therefore you never separate the humanity from the deity and there is no problem as long as you remember that the attributes of deity always adhere to deity and the attributes of humanity always adhere to humanity. He was perfect in His humanity, therefore He was qualified to bear our sins on His body [humanity] on the cross. Christ had to be true humanity to do that. As God He can have nothing to do with sin. As God He cannot solicit sin, He cannot bear sin, He cannot do anything except condemn sin. He had to be true humanity, Philippians 2:7,8; Hebrews 2:14,15.

Furthermore, Jesus Christ is said to be the mediator between God and man. There is one mediator between God and man, only one. Why? A mediator must be equal with both parties in the mediation — Jesus Christ in hypostatic union. Jesus Christ as eternal God is coequal with the Father and therefore qualified to mediate on that end. As true humanity He is on a par with man and therefore qualified to mediate on that end. As the God-Man He is the only one who could ever be mediator between God and man. This was taught first in Job 9: 2, 32, 33, and is the subject of 1 Timothy 2: 5,6. Then, of course, you must remember that a priest must be a human being representing human beings before God. The Levitical priest, for example, was from the tribe of Levi, the family of Aaron, and he represented the rest of the Jews before God in their Old Testament type worship. The fact that a priest must be a man to represent man to God is taught in Hebrews 7 and 10. Jesus Christ could not become our High Priest until He became true humanity. As true humanity

Jesus Christ is seated at the right hand of the Father representing us as High Priest. Only the high priest could go from the altar outside of the tabernacle into the holy place and then, once a year, into the holy of holies. The holy of holies represents heaven. Our Lord Jesus as our High Priest is in heaven on our behalf. We are on earth as a kingdom of priests. Each one of us as a believer represents himself to God but we do so as true humanity. Jesus Christ had to be true humanity to be our High Priest and He had to be true humanity to fulfil the Davidic contract.

Therefore these are the four reasons why Christ is unique and had to become a human being: to be our saviour, to be the mediator between God and man, to be our High Priest, and to fulfil the Davidic covenant under His second royal patent. Notice that in each case a royal patent is involved. We will not be surprised, then, to discover in Revelation 4:7 our Lord Jesus Christ as saviour, High Priest, King, mediator. Every verbal communication by Christ during the first advent, came, therefore, from one of three sources. First of all, certain things that our Lord said. Sometimes our Lord spoke from His deity. When He said in John chapter 8, "Before Abraham lived, I existed eternally," corrected translation of verse 58, that means simply this: our Lord was speaking from His deity. He always existed. There never was a time when His deity didn't exist and, remember, they picked up stones to stone Him. Sometimes He spoke from His humanity. For example, in John 19:28, "I thirst." That came from His humanity, His deity didn't thirst. Then sometimes He spoke from His hypostatic union, the entire person, as when He said in John 14:6, "I am the way, the truth and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me."

All of this is necessary to appreciate the coat of arms of our Lord Jesus Christ. Our Lord's marvellous coat of arms is so great that it cannot be born by one herald, it is born by four heralds.

We now move on to the second angelic herald. We have the connective conjunction kai, followed by an numerical adjective deuteroj, which means second. Then we have zoion, referring to a living rational creature, the highest of rational creatures, an angelic herald. The ellipsis again demands the use of e)jimi, "and the second angelic herald was." Then the comparative adjective o(moioj, "like." This is followed by the instrumental of association from the noun mosxoj, which means an ox or a young bull. The best translation is "young bull." It is a reference to our Lord's kenosis, the humility of the first advent. It includes such doctrines as the virgin birth, the hypostatic union, our Lord's humanity residing and functioning inside the prototype divine dynasphere, the resultant kenosis and impeccability which qualified Him to go to the cross and bear our sins under the greatest possible humility. Hence it includes the saving work of Christ on the cross and it is comparable to the Hebrew word par, and it is unfortunately translated in the Levitical offerings, "bullock," the bullock offering. But it is a "young bull" offering. It is similar to another word also translated "bullock," baqar. This takes us to the Levitical offerings.

Each one of the Levitical offerings had an expensive animal sacrifice and it went down to cheaper sacrifices, including a couple of young pigeons. The most expensive was what is called in the KJV, the bullock, the ox, or the young bull offering. Next comes the lamb offering, and so on. A young bull represents the victory of the first advent of Christ. It is a direct reference in His shield, His escutcheon, to the strategic victory of the angelic conflict. Anticipating the rest of our study in this verse and the context you will notice that four majestic symbols are on our Lord's escutcheon: the eagle, the greatest of the birds; the bull, the greatest of domestic animals for power; the lion, the greatest of wild animals; and the man, the highest of all living creatures visible today on the earth. While the first herald bears that part of our Lord's coat of arms dealing with His sovereignty and rulership over Israel the second herald bears that part dealing with the strategic victory of the first advent of Christ. In other words, just as the first herald bears that part of the coat of arms emphasising Matthew, the second herald bears that part of the coat of arms emphasised in the gospel of Mark.

"Now the first angelic herald was like a lion." This is the escutcheon of our Lord's second royal patent as the ruler of Israel, seed of David, Son of David, Lion of the tribe of Judah; "and the second herald was like a young bull," the coat of arms of our Lord's first advent emphasising His mission as the Servant of Jehovah to the plan of God the Father and the resultant victory from it.

One of the primary considerations in the study of the coat of arms of our Lord as worn by each one of the angelic heralds is to understand the principle of the hypostatic union. Remember that in this doctrine there is the deity of Christ and also the humanity of Christ united in one person forever. The attributes of deity always adhere to deity and never cross over to humanity. This issue was settled in Matthew chapter four. The attributes of humanity never cross over and merge with the attributes of deity. Each nature has attributes that correspond only to that nature: deity to deity; humanity to humanity. Therefore when our Lord was on the earth everything He said came either from His deity, His humanity, or His hypostatic union. Everything related to the first advent pertains to some facet in our Lord's heraldry. His escutcheon is divided into four parts and each one of the four angelic heralds carries one of the parts of His arms.

We now resume with the third herald bearing the third part of our Lord's escutcheon. We begin with the connective conjunction kai, translated "and," plus the adjective nominative neuter singular from tritoj, translated "third." With it is the nominative singular neuter from zoion, which is not an animal. It means a living rational being and it refers to angelic creatures, specifically angelic heralds, "and the third angelic herald." Then we have the present active participle from the verb e)wxw. The present tense is a historical present which views the past event with the vividness of a present occurrence. The active voice: the third angelic herald produces the action. The participle is circumstantial, and with it we have the accusative singular direct object from proswpon, which means "face," "and the third angelic herald had a face." And then the relative adverb o(j and the ablative of comparison, a)nqrwpoj, "like a man." The third angelic herald had a face like a man. That is, he is bearing arms of a man. The heraldry device here emphasises the hypostatic union as the basis for our Lord's third royal patent. The fact of the man represents the third royal patent of our Lord just as the lion represented His second royal patent. So pertinent to this part of our Lord's coat of arms is the humanity of Christ in His physical death because His work was finished, followed by His resurrection and session and receiving His third royal patent at the right hand of the Father. The emphasis on our Lord's third royal patent is the strategic victory of the angelic conflict which produced titles of that patent, including King of kings, Lord of lords, the bright morning star. The heraldry device is comparable to the cask and the plumes in heraldry. Furthermore, the cask faces to the side to indicate royalty. When the cask faces forward it refers to non-royalty. It is from this third royal title that the Age of Israel came to a halt and a new historical era or dispensation was inserted to call out the royal family of God, the body of Christ, the Church Age believer. And, of course, in this dispensation royalty is formed by the baptism of the Spirit at the point of salvation. The third part of the arms is comparable to the gospel of Luke which is often called the gospel of the Son of Man. This cannot be pressed in detail but we have already noted in the three synoptics that the first part of the arms is comparable to Matthew, the second part to Mark, and the third part to the gospel of Luke.

“Now the first angelic herald was like a lion.” This is comparable to Matthew where our Lord was presented as the King; “and the second angelic herald like a young bull” — the heraldry of our Lord’s first advent emphasising the servant of Jehovah which is the subject of the gospel of Mark; “and the third angelic herald had a face like a man,” the coat of arms of our Lord’s strategic victory of the first advent, the award of His third royal patent.

Then we move to the fourth. We have a connective kai, plus the numeral adjective tetaroj which means “fourth,” and with it again we have zoion for the herald. The ellipsis demands the verb to be, e)imi, and we have the adverb of analogy, o(moiój, “was like,” plus the instrumental of association from the noun a)etoj, which is the word for eagle. A)etoj means not only eagle but vulture as well. The bird here is the eagle and the translation in the KJV is correct. The instrumental of association from the present active participle petomai tells us the attitude of the eagle. Petomai means to be flying, “and the fourth angelic herald was like a flying eagle.” Petomai is a participle but it is used in the ascriptive sense and therefore becomes an adjective.

The first reference to the flying eagle in the Bible helps us to understand the meaning of this part of the escutcheon, Exodus 19:4, “You yourselves have seen what I did to the Egyptians, and how I carried you [the children of Israel] on eagles wings and brought you to myself.” The eagle is a part of the escutcheon of the original client nation. The client nation was formed by liberation from slavery and it was the Lord who did it all in grace. Therefore the eagle speaks of the client nation connotation. This part of our Lord’s coat of arms denotes two things. First of all He is the founder of the first client nation in history — Israel. Secondly, it denotes the fact that Jesus Christ controls history. There was no way that with Egypt at the peak of its power the Jews could have been delivered from slavery, but they were. The eagle represents the fact that they were weak, they were helpless, they were in a hopeless situation, with absolutely no way they could cope, and so the Lord delivered them. The flying eagle, then, emphasises how Jesus Christ controls history, how He controls it directly through client nations and through historical judgements. The flying eagle even emphasises the fact that he uses a pivot to control history and this is brought out in Psalm 103:5, “Who satisfies your desires with good things, so that your youth is renewed like the eagle’s.” This is not individual youth, this is the perpetuation of each generation of the client nation Israel.

They say, and it is a very true statement: “Every third generation, shirtsleeves to shirtsleeves,” meaning that you have one generation growing up. You have ability, you have hard work, and you have success. Then the next generation perpetuates the success. But the third generation becomes decadent and they are on their way down and out. This is generally true in history. The exception is the fact that when Israel first became a client nation for the first 400 years of its function as a client nation there was the perpetuation of those things that made it possible for Israel to fulfil the client nation function and preserve the human race as a part of the angelic conflict.

In controlling history our Lord often removes that wealth and prosperity on which we come to depend instead of Him. This is taught in Proverbs 23:5 in connection with eagles — “When you set your eyes on it,” once God provides prosperity for supergrace believers it includes material prosperity, physical prosperity, wealth, success. And so when you set your eyes on “it,” on the money you have made, the wealth you have accumulated, the success that has been recognised by others, when these things become your number one priority then the next phrase adds it is gone. When you set your eyes on “it,” the prosperity that the Lord gives you, and you begin to assume in arrogance that your prosperity is based upon the fact that you are great, that you have done something, that you are the source of it all, then your prosperity is gone. The money or the wealth or the success may still be around but the capacity is gone — “like an eagle that flies toward the heavens.” In other words, the eagle that brought it [our Lord Jesus Christ who controls history] also removes it. Prosperity is a very wonderful thing when it depends on the Lord because it is obviously there, provided your scale of values is correct, and your capacity is perpetuated. And the easiest thing in the world to do is to perpetuate capacity. That simply requires the daily intake of Bible doctrine.

The eagle is also a symbol of Christ controlling history and this is used for divine judgment regarding time. Job 9:25,26, “Now my days are swifter than a runner; they flee away, they see no good,” the rapid passing of time without blessing, “They slip by like reed boats [moving gently down the Nile], like an eagle that swoops on its prey,” an illustration of the principle that because man has an old sin nature and because he has a predilection for many forms of arrogance it becomes necessary to teach him the hard way rather than the easy way. The hard way is by suffering, by discipline, by hurting. The judgment of a client nation by military disaster is also compared to the flight of the eagle in Deuteronomy 28:49 — “The Lord will bring a nation against you from afar, from the end of the earth, as the eagle swoops down.” The eagle emphasises the fact that Jesus Christ controls history and that He uses any kind of a nation, usually a very evil nation, a very unjust nation, to punish and discipline under the third and fourth and even fifth cycles. The eagle emphasises also divine protection under the principle that Jesus Christ controls history in Deuteronomy 32:9-11, “For the Lord’s portion is his people [Israel as a client nation to God]; Jacob is the allotment of his inheritance.”

When the word “Jacob” is used it means the Jews are presented in all of their worst possible approach to life. In other words, an obnoxious Jew in the Old Testament is called Jacob; a great Jew is called Israel. Many times the vocative “Israel” is used in the Old Testament to indicate the Jews of that generation are honourable and have integrity. Then the word “Jacob” is used when they are obnoxious and evil. And everywhere you find these two vocatives, Israel and Jacob, it is always the Lord who handles the situation. He doesn’t need our help.

Verse 10, “He found them in a desert land,” helpless, in slavery, “and in the howling waste of the wilderness; he encircled them, he cared for them, he guarded them as the pupil of his eye.”

Verse 11, “Like an eagle that stirs up its nest, that hovers over its young, he spread his wings, and caught them, he carried them on his pinions.” This is what we have as a part of our Lord’s coat of arms. The very fact that in every generation of human history since the Jew was begun as a race there will always be Jews in spite of the fact that Satan does everything he can to destroy them. In the angelic conflict the major objective of Satan is to discredit and destroy the Jews. And here is a statement of our Lord’s faithfulness. And the very fact that in spite of every possible type of persecution in so many generations of history the Jew has not only survived but has prospered is indicative of the fourth part of our Lord’s coat of arms. He is the God of Israel; He is also the one who protects them. And Satan with all of his great power and ability the Jews continue to live on the face of the earth.

A description of our Lord’s blessing of the pivot makes reference to the eagle in Isaiah 40:31, “Yet those who have confidence in the Lord will gain new strength” — confidence in the Lord is the momentum of the believer in the Old Testament. “They shall mount up with wings like eagles,” this is not talking about believers in general, it is talking about believers specifically: positive believers, “they shall run and not get tired, they will walk and not become weary.” Interestingly enough the last three lines of Isaiah 40:31 actually deal with the tremendous production of energy, great nervous energy, to those who have spiritual momentum from doctrine resident in the soul.

The eagle device, then, in our Lord’s heraldry emphasises His control of history, not only from the standpoint of His faithfulness to the believer who is advancing but His faithfulness to believer and unbeliever in judgment, divine discipline. Hosea 8:1, “Put the trumpet to your lips! Like an eagle the enemy invades against the house of the Lord, because they have transgressed my covenant, they have rebelled against my doctrine.” So the eagle is reversed. The eagle on one side delivers Israel when there is integrity from doctrine. But then the eagle is reversed and is the basis for an army invading. And why does a military organisation destroy Israel? “Because they have transgressed my covenant, they have rebelled against my doctrine.” And who does the disciplining? The Lord, of course. So the eagle has two sides: one side says deliverance for Israel; the other side says punishment for Israel. And the reason that the eagle is on the coat of arms is because God does both without our help.

What happens to the people who try to help God? What happens to the people who say that the Jews are behind all the problems in life? What happens to the people who persecute the Jews? These people become the subjects of terrible divine discipline. None of us as believers in the Lord Jesus Christ can afford anti-Semitism. Describing the invasion of the Chaldeans to administer the fifth cycle of discipline, Habbakuk 1:8, “Their horses are swifter than leopards [the cavalry of the Chaldeans], more eager to attack than wolves of the evening.” The wolves, by the way, always attack the weak ones, the stragglers of the flock, implying that the weak ones of Israel would be destroyed by the Chaldean invasion. “Their steeds paw the ground,” they can’t wait to get at you; “Their horsemen come from afar, they fly like an eagle swooping down to devour.”

The eagle on our Lord’s escutcheon says, “Take your choice: blessing or discipline.” You have a choice as a believer and one way that you can get involved in terrible discipline and suffering is to be anti-Semitic. Verse 9 adds: “All of them come for violence.”

The entire college of heralds and the pur sui vant wear the arms of our Lord, as per Ezekiel 1:10 and Revelation 1:7. The highest ranking of the angels are the seraphim. They have six wings. Under them are the cherubs or cherubim. The cherub is an angel with four wings as rank insignia. All seraphs and cherubs possess the uniform of wisdom. The cherub is found first in Genesis 3:24. When God put a guard on the garden of Eden it had to be someone of equivalent rank to the one who got into the garden, indwelt the serpent and carried on a conversation with the woman, resulting in her fall. So the ones who guard the garden of Eden are cherubs and they possess four wings as their rank insignia, plus their uniform of wisdom. The order of rank, by the way, is found in the two categories of angels we will be studying in Revelation. We have the college of heralds and the hosts of heaven, the elect army.

The angelic order of battle includes two categories. First of all, the order of rank in the elect army of angels. Number one in that order of rank is the Lord Jesus Christ who as Commander-in-Chief has the title Adonai Sabaoth — “Lord of the armies.” Number two are the archangels. An archangel commands an angelic army, perhaps of millions. Two are mentioned in the Bible: Michael who commands an army of elect angels whose responsibility in every generation is to defend Israel. He is known as the prince of Israel in Daniel 10:21. In Daniel 12:1 the following translation helps to understand his duties:

“Now at that time Michael, the great prince who stands guard over the sons of your people [the Jews in every generation], will arise. And there will be a time of distress [reference to the Tribulation] such as never occurred since there was a client nation until that time; furthermore, at that time [the Tribulation] your people [the Jews], everyone who is found written in the book of life [saved Jews], will be rescued.” The implication is that Michael will have a great deal to do with that.

Michael as the prince of Israel defends the Jews in the Tribulation from the wrath of Satan, according to Revelation 12:7, and Michael in the past fought with Satan over the body of Moses, as per Jude 9 and 2 Peter 2:11.

The other army commander is Gabriel. He is not only an archangel but also an army commander who functions as one of the kings of arms in the college of heralds. He was sent to Daniel to explain his very important vision of Daniel 9. This is found both in Daniel 8:16 and 9:21. It was he who announced the birth of John the Baptist in Luke 1:11, and the birth of our Lord in Luke 1:26. This classifies Gabriel not only as an archangel but as a seraph.

Extrabiblical sources such as the book of Enoch add several more — Raphael and Uriel.

Number three in the order of rank is the angelic general staff composed of the 24 elders of Revelation 4:4,10; 5:11. Number five is the rank and file called “hosts.”

The order of rank in the college of heralds: #1 is again our Lord Jesus Christ under the title of Malak Adonai, the “Angel of the Lord” or “Angel of Jehovah.” It is a reference to our Lord Jesus Christ who is above the order of heralds.

There are four appearances of our Lord in history. First of all He appears as number one in the college of heralds. He appears in the theophany “the Lord of hosts.” The theophanies describe our Lord before the first advent. The incarnation is His second appearance where He appears in the hypostatic union. His third appearance is in the Christophanies, His post-resurrection appearances in hypostatic union. Finally, the second advent where He returns in hypostatic union to supersede Satan as the ruler of this world.

As the Angel of the Lord Jesus Christ is identified as God in Genesis 16:7-13; 22:11-18; 31:11-13; 48:15,16; Exodus 3:1ff compared with Acts 7:30-35; or Exodus 13:21; 14:19; Judges 6:11-23 or 13:9-20. All of these simply indicate that Jesus Christ is number one in the order of the college of heralds.

Number two are the seraphim. Two categories of seraphim exist in the college of heralds: the kings of arms or officers of arms, like the powerful angel of Revelation 5:2. Or, secondly, the angelic heralds or the four living creatures, Revelation 4:6-8. The insignia of rank are the six wings.

Number three in the order of the college of heralds are the cherubim, the angels with four wings as insignia of rank. These are actually officers of the pur sui vant, and just as there is rank among the pur sui vant in the English college of heralds so there is rank among the biblical college of heralds. The pur sui vant officers in the angelic college include those who guard the gates of the garden of Eden in Genesis 3:24, or the chariots of fire in Ezekiel 1 and 10. Satan or Lucifer the son of the morning is also in this category, or was, Ezekiel 28:14. He lost that status although he is now the ruler of the world.

Number four is the rank and file of the pur sui vant, the messengers. These are elect angels without wings, without rank. Most angels without wings who have anything to do with restraining or carrying messengers or stating policy are in this group. For example, the angelic messengers who destroyed Sodom after spending the night with Lot, Genesis 19:13, or the executioners of the city of Jerusalem in Ezekiel 9:1ff, or the man clothed in linen in Ezekiel 10:6 who acts as a messenger for the chariots of fire, or the four angels who hold back the four winds in Revelation 7:1, or the messenger from the east in Revelation 7:2.

We continue our study of the angelic college of heralds in verse eight. Before we finish this verse we will have to examine certain portions of two chapters in Ezekiel and a small section of one chapter in Isaiah. We begin now with description of the angelic heralds in the first part of Revelation 4:8. The usual beginning is the connective conjunction kai, translated “now,” with the nominative plural from tessarej, meaning “four,” plus the nominative plural subject of zoion which can be translated “living creatures,” and it actually refers to the four angelic heralds, “now the four angelic heralds.”

We have also a verb in the present active participle of the verb e)xbw, “had.” E)xbw is used here as a part of a three-word idiom beginning with the numeral e(n, meaning “one.” The preposition kata, again plus the numeral e(n, “each one of them” is the correct translation.

So we are off to some kind of a start in the verse. “Now each one of the four angelic heralds.” These are the highest rank as far as their insignia, they are seraphim which is the highest rank in the college of heralds, “each had.” The morphology of e)xbw includes the present tense which is a historical present viewing a past event with the vividness of a present occurrence; also a retroactive progressive present which denotes what has begun in the past and continues into the present time. The active voice: the angelic heralds produce the action. This is a circumstantial participle followed by the distributive use of a)na. A)na goes back to Homeric Greek for its meaning, it means “each” or “a piece.” And then the accusative plural direct object from the noun pteruc, and it refers to wings. We have noted that most angels do not have wings so when an angel has wings he is in a very special category. With this we know the exact number of wings from the indeclinable numeral e(c, and it means “six.” Remember that only seraphim and cherubim have wings as an insignia of rank. From this passage and the description in Isaiah 6:2 it is concluded that these angelic heralds are seraphs and therefore the highest possible ranking among the angels.

The word seraphim is a Hebrew word, a noun in the plural. The “im” is the plural suffix. We would simply translate it “seraphs.” It comes from the Hebrew word saraph, meaning to burn, and therefore these angelic heralds are messengers of divine judgment on planet earth. Saraph also means to be high and lofty. It is used for nobility, it is used for a prince in two forms: the form sar and then for more than one prince, seraphim. The angels with six wings, then, are seraphs in contrast to cherubs who only have four wings. Again, wings are the insignia of rank. As angelic heralds seraphim always are used to announce the greatness of our Lord Jesus Christ in worship, plus announcing the policies of our Lord with regard to His control of history. This means that they announce historical judgements. They do not carry them out, they announce them.

The six wings in our passage are amplified by Isaiah. He said that one pair shields the face, one pair conceals the feet, and the third pair is used for moving rapidly. Mobility is a necessary function for a herald. Therefore heralds lead in divine worship as well as proclaim divine policy. They announce divine punishment or any other expression of the integrity of God. The pair of wings that cover the face are analogous to their humility and equivalent to the function of gate three of the divine dynasphere. The pair of wings that cover the feet are analogous to their respect for authority and equivalent to the function of gate five of the divine dynasphere. The pair of wings with which they fly indicates their function as angelic heralds, the communicators of divine policy. It is very interesting that one of the words for a minister in the Church Age is the Greek word khruoc, and that is the word for a herald.

Isaiah 6:1-10, an Old Testament description of seraphim.

Verse 1, “In the year of King Uzziah’s death, I saw the Lord sitting on a throne, lofty and exalted, with the train of his robe filling the temple.” The throne room in the temple of Isaiah is exactly the same throne in the vision of John in chapters five and six.

Verse 2, “Seraphim stood above him, each having six wings; with two he covered his face, and with two he covered his feet, and with two he flew.”

Verse 3 — “And one [of them] called out to another [seraph] and said, ‘Holy, Holy, Holy, is the Lord of the armies [angelic armies], the fullness of the whole earth is his glory.’”

The word holy means integrity, the honour and the integrity of two divine attributes, divine justice and divine righteousness. The seraphs have the privilege of making this statement in the presence of God.

Verse 4, “Now the door sockets trembled at the sound of his [the seraph] voice who called out while the temple in heaven was filled with smoke.”

Verse 5, “Then I [Isaiah] said, ‘Woe is me, for I am ruined! Because I am a man of unclean lips, and I live among a people of unclean lips [unclean thoughts]’ ” In other words he recognises the fact of his own weakness, his own helplessness, and therefore he is number one candidate for grace in the time in which he lived, “ ‘My eyes have seen the King, the Lord of the armies’ .”

Verse 6, “Then one of the seraphim flew to me, with a burning coal in his hand which he had taken from the altar with tongs.”

Verse 7, “Then he touched my mouth with it and said, ‘Now hear this, this has touched your lips; therefore your iniquity is taken away, and your sin is forgiven’ .” That, by the way, was an actual case of where the forgiveness was actually proclaimed by the highest rank in the college of heralds, perhaps one of the same four heralds we are studying, indicating the importance of Isaiah. And notice the basis for his importance: it is in his humility. Humility is the key to happiness in life, blessing in life, and almost everything else that is wonderful in life.

Verse 8, “Then I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, ‘Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?’ Then I replied, ‘Here am I. Send me’ .”

Verse 9, “And he said, ‘Go and tell this people: You keep on listening, but you don’t learn anything; you keep on looking, but you don’t understand’ .”

Verse 10, "Make the right lobes of these people callused." How do you make people callused? By consistently teaching them the truth which they reject. They build their own hardness of heart. All Isaiah had to do was be consistent in teaching doctrine. "Make their ears dull." There is nothing duller than a person who rejects doctrine; "And close their eyes, otherwise they might see with their eyes, and hear with their ears," systems of perception at the time of Isaiah, "And understand with their right lobes, and turn around and be delivered," the deliverance of client nation Israel.

Each one of the four angelic heralds had six wings a piece. Next we are going to see the uniform of wisdom for the second time. It begins with two adverbs, the adverb kuklothen which means "all around," and e)swqen, "outside," "inside and outside." Then we have the third person plural present active indicative of the verb gemw, and it means to be full, "inside and outside they are full." The perfective present tense refers to a fact that has come to be in the past, wearing the uniform of wisdom which they received at whatever is comparable in the angelic conflict to the judgment seat of Christ. Remember that all angels are in their eternity.

The same thing is going to be true in human history at certain points. So far only our Lord Jesus Christ has received His resurrection body but at the Rapture of the Church, the terminating point of the Church Age, the royal family only will have a resurrection body. For them the point of the Rapture is the beginning of eternity. Certain ones who have the uniform of glory and who have received decorations like the order of the morning star, the crown of life, and so on, are going to come back and rule for one thousand years; but they are in their eternity, they are in resurrection bodies just as throughout all human history all angels are in whatever is their eternal and final form.

All this is background for what is described here. Inside and outside they are "full." The declarative indicative is for the reality of the great decoration, the great honour that has been bestowed upon them, the uniform of wisdom, one of the highest decorations awarded to elect angels. This uniform is described in terms of perception. The objective genitive plural from o)fqalmoj, meaning eyes. They are full of eyes [the uniform of wisdom] inside [perception of doctrine] and outside [application of doctrine]. The uniform of wisdom was awarded to angelic creatures, before man was created, for perception of doctrine and its application. All of the perception of doctrine is manifest in its application. To learn doctrine is not enough, it must be learned so that it can be applied. Therefore it must be e)pignwsij in the right lobe.

In the college of heralds in heaven we have the two ranks, the six and the four wings. Only these two rank groups have the uniform of wisdom. In other words, the highest rank in eternity among angels is determined by perception and application of doctrine, a reminder of the importance of doctrine to us at the present time. Eyes are used for perception of doctrine, as we have previously noted. Believers are warned about spiritual blindness, 1 John 2:11.

Comparing this verse to Ezekiel chapter one this system of rank based on wings is quite apparent. In Ezekiel we have a description of the cherubs as those who have rank in the third order of the college of heralds, the pur sui vant. Remember that the pur sui vant rank lowest. Number one is the Angel of the Lord, Jesus Christ, who heads the college of heralds. Number two in rank are the seraphs who have six wings. There are two categories: the kings of arms, sometimes called officers of arms; and the heralds. Both of these categories have six wings. The third category are the officers of pur sui vant, and finally we have the rank of pur sui vant. The officers of pur sui vant are cherubs, they have four wings. The function of the pur sui vant includes both warning and execution of divine judgment on any client nation to God.

Ezekiel 1:4, "And as I looked I saw a storm wind." The Hebrew really means a fire storm, the most dangerous and destructive of all fires; "coming out of the north," the Chaldean invasion of Israel to administer the fourth cycle of discipline. The year is BC 625, "a great cloud with fire flashing out continually [a divine warning of military disaster] and a bright light was around it. Furthermore, the centre of that fire was like glowing metal."

Verse 5, "And inside of the fire cloud were figures resembling four living creatures," the four angels we are studying, the four angelic heralds; "in appearance their form was like that of a man."

Verse 6, "Each one of them had four faces and four wings," so they are cherubs and not seraphs. The four faces, by the way, represent the four Gentile nations which God used as the fire storm to deal with client nation Israel from Ezekiel's time onwards from 625 BC -70 AD. The first face is the Chaldean empire which will administer the fifth cycle of discipline to the southern kingdom in 586 BC. The second face is the Persian empire which would restore client nation Israel, first through the edict of Cyrus the Great in BC 538, and then in the return of the remnant to build the temple in BC 536. The third face is the Hellenistic empires, the Syrians under the Seleucids, called by Daniel the king of the north, and Egypt under the Ptolemies known as the king of the south. The fourth face is the Roman empire which administers the fifth cycle of discipline in AD 70 introducing the times of the Gentiles.

So we have now four in the college of heralds, but these four are pur sui vant in contrast to the seraphs which are heralds. The four sings are their insignia of rank in the college of heralds.

Verse 7, "Their legs were straight and the soles of their feet were like those of a calf and gleamed like burnished bronze," the bronze speaks of judgment, the sole of the calf's foot means firmly planted, and therefore the fact that divine judgment of apostate client nations is a trend in history you can count on. No client nation ever gets away with a thing.

Verse 8, "Under their wings on their four sides they had hands of a man." Note that the pur sui vant are often described in analogies related to man. They appear as man, "all four of them had faces and wings," the hands of the pur sui vant indicates the temporal and historical security of mature believers in the midst of historical disaster. The hands also speak of grace before judgment. The hands of Christ began human history with creation. Psalm 19:1 tells us that the world was brought into being by the hands of our Lord. Psalm 122:25; John 1:3; Hebrews 1:10; Colossians 1:16 all tell us that Jesus Christ actually created the world. The hands of Christ which created the world are the hands of the saviour — Psalm 22:16. The hands of Christ are the hands of security, John 10:28. While these passages have eternal security in view they also remind us that the mature believer is protected in a special way in time of historical disaster to the client nation. The hands of this verse, Ezekiel 1:8, emphasise grace before judgment, a principle found in Isaiah 65:1,2. The hands of Christ also administer divine judgment, including the fifth cycle of discipline.

The hands, then, of the pur sui vant angels indicate our Lord's delegation of authority to angels for the actual administration of historical disaster. The last phrase of Ezekiel 1:8 emphasises both authority delegated from God to the administration of historical judgment and the badge of rank in the college of heralds to carry out His justice.

Verse 9, "Their wings [insignia of authority] touched one another; they did not turn as they went, they went each one in the direction of his face." The joining of the wings, according to verse 11, was limited to the upper pair so that each pur sui vant angel's top pair of wings was joined to the next one. This means simply that the angels never act on their own in the administration of divine punishment. In other words, the application of professionalism. Their function in the college of heralds is to carry out the policy of God. Of all of the areas of life where professionalism should exist it should exist with fundamentalist Christians. If ever there was an area where believers are absolutely idiotic and non-professional it is the "fundies." What is meant by professionalism? Good manners, thoughtfulness of others, integrity, honour, many things that "fundies" seem to be totally lacking in.

So divine punishment in historical disaster is the policy of God from His perfect integrity. The angelic heralds merely carry it out.

Verse 10 — "And the form of their faces was that of a man [one of the four sides], in addition on the right all four had the face of a lion," cf. Revelation 4:7, where they are seraphs, with six wings. The ones in Ezekiel chapter one are lower in the college of heralds, they have four wings. Now you begin to see why it is necessary in interpretation to understand the order of battle, the order of rank in the college of heralds, "and on the left all four had the face of a bull, and all four had an eagle's face." These are not the same angels, only a reminder one of the other. The seraph bear the coat of arms of our Lord Jesus Christ, four seraphs, each one carries one quarter of the escutcheon. The cherubs in Ezekiel one, each one has the coat of arms of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The "face of a man" we should remember refers to our Lord Jesus Christ, a part of His coat of arms dealing with His third royal patent celebrating His strategic victory. The face of a lion: our Lord's second royal patent, the Lion of the tribe of Judah. The face of a bull: our Lord's escutcheon dealing with His first advent in submitting to the plan of the Father bearing our sins on the cross. An eagle's face: the coat of arms which emphasises the fact that Jesus Christ controls history. There is, therefore, a parallel between the cherubs in Ezekiel 1:10 and the seraphs in Revelation 4:7. What they have in common is the escutcheon of our Lord Jesus Christ. All the heralds bear the arms of our Lord Jesus Christ in Ezekiel one but in Revelation four each herald simply bears one quarter of the escutcheon.

Verse 11, "And such were their faces. Their top set of wings spread out upward; each one had two top wings touching one another, and two wings covering their bodies."

Verse 12, "Furthermore, each one went in the direction of his face," that is, each one went straight ahead; "furthermore, wherever the wind would go they would go, without turning as they went," this emphasises concentration as well as professionalism. As pur sui vant in the college of angelic heraldry they did not function according to their own will independently of our Lord Jesus Christ in His administration of historical judgment. Historical trends are inevitably the result of human volition whether they are manifest through prophecy or not. This verse implies that as the highest form of angelic life they had volition but they did not use it independently of God in their modus operandi on their historical mission. It is interesting to note that the word "wind" in verse 12 is the Hebrew word ruach, the same noun as used for both wind and the Holy Spirit. Here it refers to wind as historical trends but in Ezekiel 1:20 it refers to God the Holy Spirit. So these angelic heralds follow historical trends to administer both divine warning and divine judgment. In other words, man is the product of his own decisions, and God always gives him plenty of time to reverse those decisions and start making good ones. Bad decisions create historical disaster and the pur sui vant angels first warn in time for that warning to sink in. Then, if it is not heeded, they administer divine judgment for perpetuation of negative volition. Man must therefore take the responsibility for his own decisions, whether good or bad, which includes of course all economic depression, the result of not one person but many people.

Verse 13, "And the appearance of the living creatures [the pur sui vant angels] was like burning coals of fire, like the appearance of flaming torches, and the pur sui vant angels went back and forth like bolts of lightning," and what are they doing? They are simply administering judgment brought on by the volition of the hoi poloi.

Ezekiel 1:15-28; 10:2, 5-10.

In verses 4 through 14 of Ezekiel chapter one we have a description of the officers of the pur sui vant. The pur sui vant angels have officers who are called cherubs. Pur sui vant have two ranks: the rank and file and then their officers.

The seraph is the highest angelic rank. Above the seraph is only the Angel of the Lord. The seraph bears the arms of our Lord, he has six wings. The cherub only has four wings but these cherubs in Ezekiel 1:5 are very special because they each bear the entire escutcheon, coat of arms, of our Lord, whereas each seraph only bears one quarter of our Lord's escutcheon, as per Revelation chapter four. The reason for that has to do with its placement. The cherubs are placed in Ezekiel, a prophecy pertinent to that day, whereas Revelation is for the Church and therefore has a different connotation.

In Ezekiel 1:15-28 we see the function of the officers of the pur sui vant category.

Verse 15, "Now as I looked out at the pur sui vant [living creatures, the cherubs], behold, there was one wheel," this wheel is called orphon, "on the ground beside each pur sui vant angel." We have a wheel of a chariot, an orphon, we have an officer, one of the four cherubs, and he also bears the entire arms of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The first question is, What is the orphon or the chariot wheel? For the exact meaning of the Hebrew we have to go back to Exodus 14:25 where the Egyptian chariots were going through the Red Sea and when suddenly the water moved back over them. The wheels of their chariots were called orphon. In Proverbs 20:26 the wheel of the chariot is used for capital punishment and administered to criminals, "A wise king weeds out the criminals in his kingdom, therefore he drives the orphon over them," talking about judgment. The chariots of fire represent judgment and the administration of this judgment is in the hands of the officers, the cherubs, the pur sui vant.

Keep this in mind. Seraphs have six wings. Two categories: the kings of arms and the heralds. That is what we have in Revelation four each bearing one quarter of the arms of our Lord Jesus Christ. But cherubs are lower than seraphs, they have only four wings, and they are related here to the chariots of fire in Ezekiel chapter one. They bear the arms of our Lord Jesus Christ.

In the vision of the Ancient of Days, meaning the eternal one in Daniel 7:9, we have a description of our Lord's throne mounted on chariot wheels: "I kept looking until the thrones were set up, and the Ancient of Days [the eternal God] took his seat; his robe was white as snow [like Revelation 1:13], and the hair of his head was pure as wool [like Revelation 1:14]. His throne was flames of fire, its wheels a burning fire." So in Daniel 7:9 we have the chariots of fire which carry the throne of our Lord Jesus Christ. These wheels are the wheels of the chariots of fire. In Ezekiel 1:15 these are again the wheels of the chariots of fire. These are the same wheels as are found in Ezekiel 10:2, "And he spoke to the man clothed in linen [pur sui vant] and said, 'Enter into the whirling wheels under the cherubs.' The cherubs are the chariots of fire administering judgment but they merely proclaim and indicate the divine policy. The man in linen carries it out, he is rank and file pur sui vant, or messenger. So the cherubs have under them messengers, 'and fill your hands with coals of fire from between the cherubs and scatter them over the city.' We are talking about the city of Jerusalem. This is the prophecy of the fall of Jerusalem in BC 586, the prophecy of the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline, and you will notice that the discipline came from the chariots of fire.

So on top of the chariots of fire is the throne. This is where our Lord Jesus Christ controls history. At the wheels of the chariot are the cherubs, each one a pur sui vant officer, each wheel of the chariot has a cherub. The man in linen here is simply a rank and file pur sui vant messenger. He goes into the wheels, picks up the coals, carries them to Jerusalem, a prophecy of the fall of Jerusalem in BC 586, the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline to the southern kingdom. So Ezekiel is prophesying from the standpoint of heaven. The whole point is that it comes from the integrity of our Lord Jesus Christ who controls history.

In this particular prophecy you will notice that the seraphs are not mentioned. Reason: the royal family is not involved. The seraphs that we are studying in Revelation deal with the royal family. In Revelation chapter four we are talking about the royal family in heaven, we are talking about the Tribulation where the highest ranking angels in the college of heralds come forward. Here in Ezekiel we are talking about Israel in the fifth cycle of discipline.

Notice that in Ezekiel 1:15 there were four wheels to the chariot of fire, and by each wheel is a cherub or the officer of the pur sui vant bearing our Lord's coat of arms. Always, anytime when you are dealing with historical disaster in any form of judgment there is always somewhere the coat of arms indicating exactly who is controlling history. Our Lord is controlling history. His coat of arms merely indicates the fact of His integrity and His right to administer any form of judgment and historical disaster to any group at any time in history.

In Ezekiel 10:5-10 we have exactly the same judgment scene from the chariot of fire. By the way, when Elijah was picked up he was picked up in a chariot of fire. Elijah did not die physically, he was taken to heaven without dying because his work isn't done. But he also had fouled up by running away from the revival. He will have another crack at it in the Tribulation but when he left the earth he left in a chariot of fire. Ezekiel 10:5, "Moreover, the sound of the wings [badge of rank] of the cherubs was heard as far as the outer court, like the voice of God [El Shaddai, actually] when he speaks.

Verse 6, "And it came to pass when he commanded the man in linen [a cherub], saying, 'Take fire from between the whirling wheels, from between the cherubs,' and he entered and stood between the wheels.

Verse 7, "Then the cherub stretched out his hand from between the cherubim to the fire [the judgment] which was between the cherubim, and took some and put it in the hands of the one clothed in linen [the rank and file messenger] who took it and went out."

Verse 8, "And the cherubs appeared to have the form of a man's hand under their wings."

Verse 9, "Then I looked, and behold, four wheels beside the cherubs, one wheel beside each cherub; and the appearance of the wheels was like the gleam of an emerald [representing God's promise to always protect the mature believer no matter how great the disaster]."

Verse 10, "And as for their appearance, the four of them [the pur sui vant officers] look alike, each as it one wheel were within the other wheel." In other words, they were exact duplications as far as their appearance.

Now back to Ezekiel chapter one.

Verse 15, "Now as I looked at the pur sui vant officer [cherub], behold, there was one wheel on the ground beside each pur sui vant angel [living creature] with their four faces" — the four faces are the devices of heraldry on our Lord's coat of arms.

Verse 16, "And the appearance of the wheels and their workmanship was like the flash of an emerald, and all four looked alike." The emerald represents the fact that no matter how great the judgment God always preserves the mature believer. God always protects the pivot and in our dispensation the wall of fire is for those inside the divine dynasphere; "their appearance and their workmanship was as if one wheel were within another," an idiom for exact duplication, the wheels were exactly the same.

Verse 17, "And as they moved they would go in any one of four directions the pur sui vant angels faced, the wheels did not turn as the pur sui vant moved."

Verse 18, "As for their rims they were high and awesome, and all four rims were full of eyes all around," maximum perception of doctrine, and this is again a representation of the fact that those who are the recipients of judgment always get a fair shake.

Verse 19, "And when the pur sui vant angels moved, the wheels beside them moved. And when the pur sui vant angels rose from the earth, the wheels rose also."

Verse 20, "Wherever the Spirit," now we have the Hebrew, ruach, again. This time it isn't wind, it is a reference to God the Holy Spirit, would go, they would go in that direction. And the wheels would rise with them, because the Spirit in the pur sui vant angels was also in the wheels." The wheels are an integral part of the angels. In other words, they are integrated with the chariot. The chariot wheels represent divine judgment during human history, the source being our Lord Jesus Christ. The function of judgment is delegated to the angelic college of heralds. The fact that the wheels have the uniform of wisdom in verse 18 and are filled with the Spirit in verse 20 indicates that the wheels are the judgment administration, and this administration is given to the cherubs who in turn delegate it to the rank and file under their command. The integrity of the divine justice as administered to the college of heralds is stated in Ezekiel 1:21.

Verse 21, "When the former [the cherubs] moved the latter [the wheels] moved also; and when the former stood still, the wheels also stood still." This indicates, of course, a system whereby motion or lack of motion depended upon the officers. "Furthermore, when the former raised themselves from the ground, the wheels raised themselves beside them; for the Spirit [God the Holy Spirit] in the pur sui vant angels was also in the wheels."

Verse 22, "Now over the heads of the pur sui vant angels here was something like an expanse, like the awesome gleam of crystal extended over their heads," which means there was no help from heaven in the administration of judgment. The cherubs or pur sui vant angels did not turn as they changed direction. They went straight forward, as we have noted, and the wheels moved with the cherubs; hence the cherubs are the moving force in the chariots of fire. The judgements in human history, apart from those which result in bad decisions, are mandated by the sovereignty of our Lord Jesus Christ and are carried out by the officers of the heraldry who delegate the actual detailed function to the rank and file.

Verse 23, “And under the expanse their wings were stretched out horizontally [straight], one toward the other; each one also had two sets of wings covering their bodies, one on the one side, one on the other,” four in all. These four wings are the badge of rank again.

Verse 24, “I also heard the sound of their wings like the roar of rushing waters.” The roar of rushing waters is used as an analogy for the armies invading Israel to administer either the fourth or the fifth cycles of discipline. And, of course, this applies to any client nation at any time; “like the voice of the Almighty, like the sound of an army in bivouac; when they stood still they lowered their wings.” Lowering of the wings means that the cherubs or the chariot of fire do not use their authority apart from the sovereignty of our Lord. While the angelic college of heralds have all kinds of agents for judgment the source of their agency function is always the same: Jesus Christ who controls history. In other words, they do not abuse their authority.

Verse 25, the source of the judgment is now stated. “And there came a voice from above the expanse that was over their heads; as they stood still with lowered wings.”

Verse 26, “Furthermore above the expanse that was over their heads there was something resembling a throne of sapphire; and high above that throne was the figure like that of a man” — our Lord Jesus Christ who controls history.

Verse 27, “Then I notice that from what appeared to be his waste up he looked like glowing metal as full of fire, and that from there down he looked like fire and a brilliant light surrounded him” — meaning that all judgment comes from integrity, is fair, is perfect, and it is never in any way discriminatory or unfair or unreasonable.

Remember once again that we must keep in mind the angelic order of battle. It is the basis for interpretation of numerous verses in the next eight chapters of the book of Revelation. Furthermore, we are going to learn a great deal from angels during our study of Revelation. One of the next things we are about to learn is how to worship. The fact that people do not know how to worship and often think they are worshipping when they are not is one of the great issues in the Word of God. Of course, once a believer in Jesus Christ knows how to worship his relationship with people should improve tremendously for worship is a major factor in category #1 love — occupation with the person of Christ and fulfillment of all the principles related to Him. All motivating virtue and worship is tied in together as far as the divine dynasphere is concerned.

In the angelic order of battle there are two classifications. First of all there is the angelic army, and secondly there is the college of heralds. Number one in both categories is our Lord Jesus Christ. Under the army His title as Commander-in-Chief is Lord of hosts, better translated Lord of the armies, Adonai Sabaoth. As number one in the college of heralds His title is Angel of the Lord, Malak Adonai. Number two in the army is the concept of army commanders. The title is archangels. There are two archangels mentioned in the Bible, Michael and Gabriel. Number two as far as the college of heralds is concerned is made up of a category which we call seraphs. A seraph is simply an angel with six wings. Wings simply denote the rank of angels: six wings, the seraphs; four wings, the cherubs. Most angels do not have wings.

In the college of heralds there are two categories of the seraph. The first is the king of arms or the officers of arms. The second category are the heralds.

Number three in the army is what we have studied as the “twenty-four elders,” and they are actually the general staff. Number three in the college of heralds are the pur sui vant officers. The officers are the ones that we have been noting in Ezekiel chapters 1 and 10. The pur sui vant officers are always cherubs. They are distinguished from the rank and file pur sui vant which are simply called messengers and have no wings.

In Revelation 4:8 the worship function of the angelic heralds is only summarised in the next phrase we will study. It is the same phrase given by Isaiah chapter six but it doesn't tell us anything about worship, except this: All true worship is based on knowing and understanding the integrity of God, not the love of God. In the rest of verse eight we have the object of worship mentioned but you cannot worship God as a born-again believer until you know those doctrines which pertain to integrity and those doctrines which pertain to Christology. And they are all merely mentioned briefly because it is assumed that by the time you get to the book of Revelation you understand the integrity of God. That is what we studied in the book of Romans.

We begin with the connective conjunction kai emphasising a noteworthy fact about the highest rank of elect angels in the college of heralds. The Lord Jesus Christ is not an angel, He commands the college of heralds. The highest ranking are the seraphs. The kai here, therefore, being used to indicate a noteworthy fact about this highest order in the college of heralds, is translated not “and” but “furthermore.” Then we have a verb that John uses constantly whenever he is describing any category of elect angels and their function, the present active indicative of the verb e)w, but with this we also have the negative o)k. In this case they do not have, literally. The descriptive present tense of e)w plus the negative, and the active voice: the four seraphs or angelic heralds produce a negative action. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of a perpetuation of a function in their life in heaven. With this we have the accusative singular direct object from a)napausij, which means a stopping or a rest, “Furthermore they do not have rest.” This is a Greek idiom meaning without ceasing. Then we have two genitives of time: h(mera for day; neuc for night, “day or night,” “saying,” the present active participle from legw. And what follows is simply a summary of their worship. There are six words that are exactly the same and then we have three words which are basic to the title of the object of worship. First of all we have a(gioj three times. It is translated in our Bibles as “holy” and that is all right if you understand its meaning. It is a very nebulous and abstruse word without assigning a meaning in modern English. It means integrity. A(gioj translated “holy” refers to the integrity, specifically of our Lord Jesus Christ but also the other members of the Trinity as well. The noun is repeated three times because each member of the Trinity has the same identical integrity called holiness, made up of two divine attributes, righteousness and justice.

Out of this comes the first of many principles we are going to learn from angels: all worship, which is respect for God expressed, plus all human love for God must begin with the divine attribute of integrity. The basis for worship is understanding and therefore having total respect for the integrity of God. This is where all worship must begin. Divine holiness or integrity is our first reality contact with God in worship. Now our first contact is when we believe in the Lord Jesus Christ; our first reality contact in worship is understanding the integrity of God.

The triple repetition, "Holy, holy, holy," is addressed to the Lord Jesus Christ. Each repetition is directed toward one category of His title. All three members of the Trinity have the same integrity but Jesus Christ is the manifest person of the Godhead. He is the saviour and, furthermore, all we know about God is what we know about Jesus Christ. So when they say, "Holy, holy, holy," they are not excluding the other members of the Trinity but in this particular passage what follows indicates that each one of these titles has the same identity, the same equality of integrity. The first title is kurioj, "Lord," and it refers to the deity of our Lord Jesus Christ. It is also a title of His third royal patent where He is called Lord of lords, and the absence of the definite article emphasises the quality of the noun. This would emphasise to us a number of things. Since kurioj is used here in the sense of Lord it refers specifically to His third royal patent. The hypostatic union comes into focus. It was at the conclusion, the resurrection, ascension and session of our Lord, of the first advent that the hypostatic union came to heaven and there received the third royal patent. And remember the key to the hypostatic union is the three factors: first of all Jesus Christ is eternal God; secondly, He is true humanity; thirdly, these are combined in one person forever.

The second title here is o(qeoj, the God. This emphasises the deity of Christ only, the fact that Jesus Christ is eternal God.

The third title is pantokrator, it means "all-powerful one" and is a reference to the total power of Christ over creatures as the God-Man, the uniqueness of His person in the universe. It emphasises His royal patents, all three of them.

"furthermore, day and night they never stopped saying, 'Holy, Holy, Holy', Lord God the Almighty one."

Now we have the rest of the phrase which is merely a summary of their worship and not a detailed expression. Our Lord in the past: we have the definite article used with the indicative mood which is Ionic Greek. It is used for both the personal pronoun and the relative pronoun both, which was Ionic rather than Attic. In the Attic Greek you would have the definite pronoun, like su, and then you would follow it by o(j. It would state both. The Ionic Greek doesn't go to all that trouble, it just uses the definite article. So we have the definite article here indicating both the personal and the relative pronoun, "he who was," the imperfect active indicative of e)imi, the verb to be. Since there was no imperfect participle the verb e)imi is used in the indicative. Therefore the imperfect indicative is used to denote eternity past plus human history up to the time of the incarnation.

Eternity past is divided into three categories: the time when only God existed [indefinite, eternity past]; the time of the angelic conflict; the time of human history. That is eternity past up until the time of the virgin birth, e)imi being used in the imperfect tense, in the indicative since there is no imperfect participle. The imperfect tense is a progressive imperfect of description representing linear aktionsart in past time — all phases of eternity past, up to the time of the virgin birth, when Jesus Christ was eternal God, coequal with the Father and the Holy Spirit. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ as eternal God produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of Bible doctrine: Jesus Christ is eternal God.

Next in the item of worship is our Lord at the present time. Again we have the Koine Greek, kai to connect it, the articular present active participle from e)imi. This time it is translated, “and he who is.” We switch from the Ionic to the Koine Greek which used primarily the articular participle. This time the definite article is used as the personal pronoun. The relative pronoun comes from the circumstantial participle. We have a static present tense representing a condition which is perpetually existing, it will go on forever. Our Lord will be unique forever, the God-Man. Jesus Christ at the right hand of the Father also possesses in His humanity two royal patents, one which He received at birth — He is the ruler of Israel in the line of David, and one He received after the ascension in which He became the King of kings and Lord of lords, minus a royal family. The active voice: the resurrected Christ in hypostatic union plus His glorified state of His third royal patent produces the action. The participle is circumstantial for the award of the third royal patent.

Finally, we have the articular present active participle of the verb e)rxomai, and it means “who is to come.” The definite article is used for the personal pronoun. The futuristic present tense denotes an event which has not yet occurred, the second advent of Christ and the tactical victory of the angelic conflict. But this is regarded as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as already coming to pass. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial, this is a reference to the second advent.

The principle: all prophecy after the conclusion of the Church Age with the Rapture focuses on the second advent of Christ. Therefore you will not be surprised to find in the book of Revelation that there will be a number of things on the second advent. There is no prophecy to be fulfilled in the Church Age, this is the dispensation of no prophecy. This is the only dispensation in which a royal family is being called out. All other dispensations have prophecy, in fact in all other dispensations prophecy is the basis for delineating historical trends. But in the Church Age historical trends are delineated by the volition of the royal family, our Lord’s special salute to believers of this age. Your attitude toward doctrine and whether you live in the divine dynasphere or the cosmic system is the determining factor of historical trends. In other words, the uptrend or the downtrend of history depends on the attitude of the believer.

The next prophecy in history is the Rapture of the Church which is and has been since the Church Age began and the Rapture became imminent. All prophetic history centres around the second advent. All prophetic history before the Church Age centred around the first advent of Christ; all prophetic history after the Rapture centres around the second advent of Christ. That is the concept “and who is to come.”

The basis for understanding many of the verses found in this section of the book of Revelation is dependant on our understanding of the angelic order of battle. The elect angels have a very specific order of battle and they are divided into two categories, the army of the elect angels and the college of heralds.

As we approach to subject of worship, for that is the subject of the next three chapters, we find the category seraphim or angelic heralds are going to lead in divine worship. So in our order of battle we are now looking at the heralds who are seraphs. They will be the leaders and on the army side the general staff will have a very prominent place in the worship in heaven. The next three verses deal with the subject of worship and we are going to learn a great deal about worship from these angels in heaven.

We begin verse 9 with the connective conjunction kai, “and,” followed by the temporal particle o(tan which is used with the future active indicative and it means “when,” and it introduces a temporal clause of definite time. Most temporal clauses have indefinite time; this is one of definite time. Definite time means that the time limit may be indicated as a specific point of time when this angelic worship occurs, hence the temporal particle o(tan refers to those periods of worship in the throne room of God which were specified in the previous verse. This doesn’t occur all of the time but it does occur at specific periods. The absence of the particle a)n precludes this from being an indefinite temporal clause and therefore a definite time for worship is specified by this particle, just as there is a definite time for worship among those of us who are believers in the Lord Jesus Christ in the dispensation of the royal family of God.

A specific time of worship is always set aside. That specific worship of course includes several concepts. We do not worship on the Sabbath, the Sabbath being Saturday — that went out with client nation Israel, but the first day of the week. And the very fact that it is the first day of the week means that if you start the week with a dedication of a certain portion of your day to worship then that is perpetuated throughout every day. In other words, it is a matter of your scale of values and it is a reminder to put first things first. While the first day of the week was the day of assembly worship for the local church even as early as the first generation of the Church Age it was never designed to be anything but a reminder to start your week right, to start it by putting first things first in worship which, of course, basically to us is the perception of Bible doctrine.

Next we have our nominative plural subject zwon, “living creatures,” which refers to the angelic college of heralds and specifically to the four seraphs, each one bearing one quarter of our Lord’s royal arms. Translation: “And when the angelic heralds.”

Then we have the future active indicative of the verb didomi which means to give, and it is translated “shall give.” The gnomic future tense is for a statement of fact or performance which may be rightly expected under normal conditions of angelic worship in the throne room of heaven. The active voice: the angelic heralds produce the action of the verb when worship is conducted in the throne room of God. Again the temporal conjunction o(tan does indicate that worship is not conducted perpetually, only that the angelic heralds have a perpetual function in whatever periods of worship are set aside. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of worship from the angelic heralds, the highest creatures in rank in all of creature activity.

The categories of worship are now expressed. We have actually three of them, each one is an accusative singular direct object from three nouns. There are three categories of worship and they are pertinent to us as they are pertinent to the elect angels. The angelic being are called doca, so the word "glory" is our first word for worship. Doca is translated "glory" and it is found in Jude 8 for angelic beings as well as 2 Peter 2:10. Therefore it becomes a very important concept.

In Jude 8, "Yet in the very same way [as fallen angels of Genesis 6 and the men of Sodom] these degenerate men by dreaming pollute the flesh, reject authority, and slander angelic majesties." However, the word "angelic majesties" is really doca in the plural and refers to elect angels and the equivalent of our resurrection bodies.

In 2 Peter 2:10 this is especially true of those [mankind in the cosmic system] who follow the old sin nature or "pursue the flesh in its corrupt or abnormal desires and despise authority. Bold and arrogant, these men are not afraid to slander angelic majesties." Again, the reference to whatever elect angels have for resurrection bodies, the word doca in the plural.

This is the word which is used first in our passage, "And when the angelic heralds shall give glory." This is category #1 worship and it is limited to the eternal state or resurrection body. So there are certain types of worship of which we are not capable as long as we are in the body of this flesh. This category of worship involves, therefore, the eternal state, and it simply indicates that these angels in their angelic conflict, long before history existed, made their right decision [whatever salvation was] and they have all received their resurrection bodies [doca, "glories"] and now are in heaven entering in to a form of worship which is limited to the resurrection body or its equivalent called "glory." They give glory, and this word "glory" simply means they give a form of worship in the eternal state, a form of worship which we will enter into when we have resurrection bodies. Therefore we learn from the first category that there is a limitation to our worship. God has provided everything necessary for us to worship, He has provided Bible doctrine, but there is still a limitation.

The same thing is true, then, of the believer in the royal family of God. At the point of the Rapture and the big genuflect in the sky, that will be the first time that he will be able to give that same category of worship.

Now the point is that category #1 worship, called glory, is the highest form of worship. It requires the possession of glory and/or the resurrection body for the believer to fulfil it. Elect angels are in their eternal state or glorified state and therefore they can execute this form of worship. Glory means face to face worship in the resurrection body. This form of worship will not exist for human beings until after the Rapture of the Church when believers of this dispensation will receive their resurrection and their resultant capacities for this form of worship.

The principle from this first phrase: capacity for worship must precede the function of worship. The body of corruption cannot give glory to God as the highest category of worship. Corruption must take on incorruption, we must have a resurrection body to fulfil this form of worship. Note also an additional principle: the fallen angels, including Satan, while waiting for the lake of fire, as per Matthew 25:41, are expressing the arrogance of gate one, cosmic one through jealousy and slander of these elect angels. That is the concept that we noted in both Jude and 2 Peter. Remember that Satan himself invented the cosmic system and that all motivating evil comes from cosmic one, gate one. Therefore the tremendous amount of slander that comes to the elect angels in resurrection bodies comes from Satan. It also adds a principle to us: arrogance, jealousy, bitterness, vindictiveness, implacability, self-pity, all forms of pride, absolutely preclude any possibility of true worship. So there is, then, category #1, glory, and it teaches us the principle that capacity for worship must precede the function of worship.

Next we have category #2 worship, another accusative singular direct object from the noun timh. It means honour, reverence, respect, a form of worship which must also demand capacity. All three meanings of timh are used in the concept of worship. The first meaning is respect, the second is reverence, the third is honour, and all three meanings teach us something about the second category of worship.

Let's start with the word "respect" as a meaning for timh. The believer can only respect our Lord Jesus Christ by knowing His thinking, which is Bible doctrine resident in the soul, for the object of our worship is the second person of the Trinity, the Lord Jesus Christ. Without doctrine resident in the soul the believer cannot worship God and therefore respect for doctrine precedes reception of doctrine as a future function of worship. Respect for doctrine precedes the reception of doctrine which is the prerequisite for worship. You will never learn doctrine unless you respect it; you will never learn doctrine unless it is number one in your scale of values. Add to this the filling of the Holy Spirit — gate one of the divine dynasphere — and you have a picture of this category of worship. John 4:24 expresses the principle: "God is a Spirit and those who worship Him must worship Him in Spirit [Gate one of the divine dynasphere] and in doctrine [Gate four of the divine dynasphere]".

Then timh also means reverence. This is a reference to motivating virtue which is classified as personal love for God inside the divine dynasphere. Remember that when you are living the Christian life there is only one place to live it: inside the divine dynasphere. You have, first of all the function of your royal priesthood which directs your Christian life toward God from inside the divine dynasphere. You have the function of your royal ambassadorship which directs your Christian life toward people and circumstances. All virtue directed toward God becomes motivating virtue. All function of your ambassadorship inside the divine dynasphere toward people and circumstances becomes functional virtue and motivating virtue must precede functional virtue. In this case the motivating virtue is personal love for God which results from the function perception of doctrine at gate four, and it results in that great functional virtue, impersonal love for all mankind directed toward the human race. Out of it comes the concept of timh as reverence. All reverence toward God is the motivating virtue of personal love for God. Personal love for God originates from Bible doctrine resident in your soul and there can be no expression of worship apart from knowledge of doctrine producing this personal love for God, the fifth gate of the divine dynasphere.

Then timh also means honour. To honour God in worship requires both residence and function inside the divine dynasphere plus the production of honour as functional virtue. This, therefore, gives us the three concepts from our second word.

1. Compliance with the royal family honour code and the production of functional virtue is necessary for the fulfilment of the worship principle.
2. The point is that all worship directed toward God must come from virtue, honour and integrity, the production of the divine dynasphere. Remember that in the cosmic system there is both morality and immorality. Satan works through two antithetical concepts, just as the communists do through peace movements and war. He invented the cosmic system as the administration of the rulership of this world, and in the cosmic system there is morality and immorality, he uses both systems. Most moral Christians today, because they are not living in the divine dynasphere where virtue, honour and integrity is produced, are the servants of Satan, their morality is nothing more than arrogance and self-righteousness. This, of course, is a great tragedy because these people have deluded themselves into thinking that because they are moral that somehow they are honouring God. In reality they are serving Satan in the cosmic system for they use their morality as a means of maligning, gossiping and judging, and they use their morality as a system of crusading. You are not worshipping God because you sit in a church and are moral. Genuine morality comes from the filling of the Holy Spirit, it cannot be reproduced by human ability.
3. The believer must possess honour to honour the Lord in worship.
4. Honour in the soul must precede the expression of honour in worship so that the principle emerges in point 5.
5. Only honourable believers can honour the Lord or give honour to the Lord. You cannot express worship by giving honour to the Lord if you have no honour to give. The only accumulation of honour to give to the Lord is the honour which you develop inside the divine dynasphere.
6. Therefore you cannot give in worship what you do not possess yourself.

7. To give God honour in worship you must possess honour. You cannot possess honour in the cosmic system. Most Christians live in the cosmic system. Worship, therefore, demands momentum inside the divine dynasphere, the function of perception and application of doctrine.

The third category of worship mentioned is the accusative singular direct object from the noun in the Greek, e)uxaristia. It means gratitude, thanksgiving, or the rendering of thanks. This category of worship is open to believers in time also. Category one is open only to the resurrection body, giving glory to God. The second category is honour and, of course, that is open now. The third category is thanksgiving and is open to believers in time also but there must be capacity for thanksgiving before gratitude can be expressed to God in worship. Believers in the cosmic system have no capacity for gratitude therefore they cannot fulfil this category of worship. In order to have genuine gratitude it must be backed by humility.

The principle: Arrogance is devoid of gratitude. No matter what you do for the arrogant believer he will never appreciate it. Obviously then the arrogant believer does not appreciate what God has done and is doing for him in logistical grace. In other words, people who are ungrateful to people are also ungrateful to God.

Believers involved in the cosmic system are arrogant. Arrogant believers never appreciate anything that is done for them. Arrogance destroys capacity for appreciation and consequently capacity for love, capacity for life, and obviously capacity for happiness. Arrogance either destroys worship or distorts worship into a system of ritual without reality.

We close out this verse by noting the object of the worship of the royal family of God, the articular present active participle from the Greek word kaqhmai, meaning to sit. Sometimes as a participle we will translate it "the rider." When we get to the four horsemen of the apocalypse in Revelation 6 we will translate it "rider." Here we have someone sitting on a throne. The definite article in the Greek is the dative singular direct object, it indicates that our Lord Jesus Christ is the object of this angelic worship in heaven. Furthermore, as a definite article it is used as per Koine Greek for a personal pronoun and is translated "to him." It refers to the Lord Jesus Christ. The static present tense represents a condition as perpetually existing. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb, He is seated at the right hand of the Father, He has received His third royal patent and, as it were, He is making intercession for us as our great High Priest. The participle is circumstantial.

With this we have a prepositional phrase, e)pi plus the locative of qronoj, meaning "on the throne." There are actually two members of the Trinity sitting on that throne, one is invisible [God the Father, the author of the plan], the other is periodically visible in order to delineate certain principles in the visions of John on the Island of Patmos. So we translate: "to him who sits on the throne," our Lord Jesus Christ. And then we repeat an articular present active participle from the verb zaw, and it means to live, "to him who lives." And again the dative singular indirect object from the definite article used again as a personal pronoun. The static present tense is for the perpetual existence of our Lord Jesus Christ in hypostatic union. As God He exists eternally; as true humanity in resurrected form He also exists eternally. The active voice: Jesus Christ in hypostatic union produces the action of the verb through His third royal patent. This is a circumstantial participle. With it we have an idiomatic prepositional phrase, e)ij plus two uses of a)iwñ. It is e)ij plus a)iwñ in the accusative plural and then plus the genitive plural. Literally, “unto the ages of ages,” but it is an idiom in the Greek that means “forever and ever.”

Verse 9, “And when the angelic heralds shall give glory [category one worship limited to the eternal state or the resurrection body] and honour [category two worship, only honourable believers in time can honour the Lord in worship] and thanksgiving [category three worship for believers in the divine dynasphere] to him who sits upon the throne [our Lord Jesus Christ], to him who lives forever and ever [the fact that our Lord Jesus Christ will be in hypostatic union forever].”

Principles

1. Since Christ is the manifest person of the Trinity worship of Christ is worship of God.
2. Since Christ is the victory in the angelic conflict worship of Christ is recognition of the function and the provision of all three members of the Godhead, all three persons in the divine Trinity.
3. However, without doctrine and the filling of the Spirit there can be no gratitude or capacity for thanksgiving. God has provided for the believer in this dispensation only gate one, the filling of the Spirit, the power for worship; gate two, objectivity in learning doctrine; gate three, enforced and genuine humility, teachability in learning doctrine; gate four, perception of doctrine which must precede worship. So there must be an interlock between gate one and gate four, and the result is gate five. First of all there will be love of God, that is the beginning of worship, but eventually there will be occupation with Christ, that is the maximum expression of worship in the human body of the believer.
4. Love must precede gratitude and the expression of thanksgiving in worship. This love of God comes from perception of Bible doctrine.
5. While capacity for gratitude can be expressed either to a stranger or someone we personally love all capacity for thanksgiving or expression of gratitude must come from impersonal love which is both capacity and the virtue.
6. Without impersonal love there is neither capacity for personal love nor capacity for thanksgiving, the expression of gratitude in worship.

7. Virtue must precede and motivate both personal love and the expression of thanksgiving.

8. When directed toward God thanksgiving is motivated by personal love for God, and personal love for God can only exist to the extent that you have taken in a maximum amount of Bible doctrine. When directed toward mankind gratitude and thanksgiving is motivated by impersonal love. In either case virtue is the basis for all true thanksgiving and all true gratitude, whether expressed toward someone in the human race or expressed toward God in worship.

Four heralds lead in the worship of our Lord Jesus Christ in the heavenly scene we are studying.

In verse 10 we have antiphonal worship of the angelic general staff. The angelic elect army now comes into the picture with its number two rank expressing the antiphonal part of the worship. In the King James version it is the "four and twenty elders" which is far off base. These are twenty-four angelic staff officers. We have noted before the indeclinable numeral with the nominative plural definite article to indicate the subject. We have noted the Greek word for twenty, i(ekosi, and the word for four, tessarej, and we have seen the nominative plural subject presbuteroj, a word for both the human race and four angelic creatures. We are now talking about angelic creatures and the second highest rank in the elect army of angels, and the future middle indicative indicates their attitude. It is the word piptw, translated "fall down," "And the twenty-four angelic staff officers will fall down." The future tense is a gnomic future for a statement of fact or performance which may be anticipated when throne-room worship is conducted by some of the highest orders of angelic creatures. We also noted that they are not constantly doing this, they have other duties, but it is mentioned first because if you start the day under the concept of worship, if you make worship a daily habit, then your priorities are straight. This is why the royal family does not meet on Saturday and this is why the Sabbath connotation is strictly legalism.

There is no specific worship day. The early church assembled on the first day of the week for a purpose. It was not the Sabbath day it was the first day of the week. They started their week properly and with the correct connotation. The principle is a very simple one: if your scale of values is right before the Lord and Bible doctrine has first place, then you start with worship and everything else falls into place. This is the connotation, of course, of the daily perception of Bible doctrine and it is also the concept of the gnomic future in this passage. The indirect middle emphasises the agent or the subject as producing the action rather than participating in its results. The action is produced by four of the highest-ranking angelic creatures. They are seraphs. The indicative mood is the reality of antiphonal worship of the general; staff. It is also the reality of their humility and their subordination as a prerequisite for heavenly worship of our Lord Jesus Christ. If heaven requires humility and subordination for worship the same must be true for worship of our Lord Jesus Christ on earth. Therefore the importance of gate three of the divine dynasphere, not only in the perception of doctrine but in the perception of doctrine as an expression of worship.

Next comes the improper preposition e)nw pion, which means “before,” and sometimes “face to face,” plus the genitive singular of the definite article tou, used as a personal pronoun and translated “before him.” Then the present active participle of the verb kaqhmai, which means to sit. It will simply be translated “fall down before him who sits.” The static present represents the permanent status of our Lord Jesus Christ honoured by God the Father in sharing His throne. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb, and He has since His ascension and the reception of His royal patent. This means that two out of the three members of the Trinity are actually depicted in heaven carrying out this particular function. God the Holy Spirit has other functions which separate Him from the throne but not as far as His coequality. This is a circumstantial participle followed by that prepositional phrase e)pi plus the genitive of qronoj.

The corrected translation as far as we have gone: “The twenty-four staff officers [angelic general staff] will fall down before him [our Lord Jesus Christ] who sits on the throne.”

We note now some of the principles related to the army worship. We have seen the college of heralds in their leadership expressing worship and we have learned some principles from them. Now we see the general staff. First of all we note one of the most important functions in worship is humility and subordination to our Lord’s authority. This is a principle expressed by the general staff.

1. God cannot be first in your life apart from enforced humility which is defined here as submission to divine authority as delegated through Bible doctrine. God cannot be first in your life apart from enforced humility and genuine humility. Genuine humility is the capacity for loving God from perception of doctrine. Note then that there are two concepts in worship: the first is submission to divine authority as delegated through the Word, and the second is capacity for loving God through perception of doctrine.
2. Love of God is a motivating virtue which comes from residence and function inside the divine dynasphere, persistence in the perception of Bible doctrine.
3. This gives us the result and prepares us for worship. Genuine humility is the result. It is the first issue in two factors: worship of God and happiness in life. Without genuine humility it is impossible to worship God and it is impossible to have happiness in life.
4. Genuine humility increases as perception of Bible doctrine parlays love of God into occupation with the person of Christ. In other words, the function of gate five of the divine dynasphere.
5. The same genuine humility provides capacity for life, for love, for happiness in human relationships.

6. The same genuine humility also provides the base for the function of impersonal love in the application of doctrine to human relationships. Now here is the shocker. There is a definite relationship between worship of God and human relationship. Worship is a successful relationship with God and it results in successful human relationships. Take God out of life and human relationship in a successful pattern cannot exist.

7. This means your ability to worship results in good human relationships. There is a definite relationship between worship of God and human interaction.

8. Without genuine humility and impersonal love the believer is incapable of happiness and blessing in human relationships just as he is incapable of worship in his relationship with God.

9. Both category #2 and category #3 personal love cannot be sustained or perpetuated without the stabilised foundation of impersonal love. Your personal love cannot exceed your humility and virtue.

But we learn a second principle as well from this first phrase of verse 10. We learn something of their efficacious worship. Worship is not worship unless it is efficacious, i.e., having the power to produce the intended effect. This comes up from the next phrase. So we have the connective kai, "and," followed by the future active indicative of the verb proskunew which means "worship," "and they will worship." Again we have the gnomic future for a statement of fact or performance which may be anticipated when the throne room worship is conducted by the angelic general staff. Notice, the heralds begin the worship. They are second only in rank to our Lord Jesus Christ and one or two angels who are kings of arms or officers of arms. The angelic general staff now forms the antiphony. The active voice: the angelic staff produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the highest form of worship from the second highest ranking angels in the elect army order of battle. The highest rank goes to our Lord Jesus Christ and He is not an angel.

Next comes the articular present active participle from zaw which is translated "to live." The dative singular indirect object from the definite article is used as a personal pronoun referring to our Lord Jesus Christ who is the object of all angelic worship in heaven, "to him." The present tense is a static present for the perpetual existence of our Lord Jesus Christ in His hypostatic union. It is His hypostatic union that is perpetuated, not His deity, the humanity part and therefore the person of Christ in hypostatic union. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ in hypostatic union produces the action of the verb after His ascension and reception of His third royal patent. The participle is circumstantial. Once again we have the repetition of the phrase e)ij plus a)iwv in the accusative plural and the genitive plural which is literally "to the ages of the ages" but is an idiom meaning "forever and ever."

Translation: “and they [the angelic general staff] will worship him [our Lord Jesus Christ] who lives forever and ever.”

The principle that comes out of this: Only one Man is ever worshipped by angels, that part of the hypostatic union which is the humanity of Christ.

1. The humanity of our Lord Jesus Christ in His glorified state is the object of angelic worship. Man was created lower than angels. In heaven there will be that remarkable phenomenon of angels worshipping the humanity of Christ.

2. The deity of Christ has always been glorified as eternal God with all the divine attributes.

3. The humanity of Christ from the virgin birth to the cross was in a state of perpetual humility, but after He humbled Himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross, then in resurrection, ascension, session and His third royal patent, the resurrected Christ receives a glorification that makes all elect angels worship Him.

4. That glorification includes and starts with His resurrection, ascension, session, the award of His third royal patent. With His third royal patent, though man is created lower than angels, the glorified humanity of Christ is the object of angelic worship.

5. In the state of glorification with kenosis set aside our Lord Jesus Christ is the object of the highest angelic worship. While during the first advent our Lord’s humanity was made lower than angels His same glorified humanity is now higher than angels forever. Therefore angels worship Him. The fact that angels are subordinate to Christ in hypostatic union is the subject of Hebrews chapter one.

The basis for all of this is threefold. The basis for angels worshipping our Lord’s glorified humanity began with the virgin birth, the hypostatic union, the function of the humanity of Christ in the prototype divine dynasphere, the doctrine of kenosis, the doctrine of impeccability. Then comes the saving work of our Lord in humility, His redemption, reconciliation, propitiation and imputation, the four categories of the saving work of Christ on the cross. Then in His glorified state, His resurrection, ascension, the reception of His royal title, and the fact that Jesus Christ controls history brings us now to Hebrews chapter one, the principle that is brought out in the angelic general staff entering into antiphonal worship.

Verse 1, “In the past God spoke to our forefathers through the prophets at many times and in various places.”

Verse 2, “However, in these last days [New Testament] He has spoken to us by His Son, whom He has appointed heir of all things, and through whom He has designed the dispensations [the ages, the historical eras].”

Verse 3, “Who being the radiance of His glory [flashing forth of His glory] and the exact image of His divine essence, also sustaining all things of creation by the word of His power, after He had provided purification for our sins He sat down on the right hand of the Majesty [God the Father] in the highest place [the third heaven].”

Verse 4, “By so much [His resurrection, ascension. session and third royal patent] He became superior to angels, as the royal patent He has inherited is superior to theirs.”

Verse 5, “For to which of the angels did He [God the Father] ever say, ‘You are my Son, This day I have given birth to you [the virgin birth]’? And again, ‘I will be to Him for a Father [not a human father], and He Himself shall be to me for a Son [Christ in hypostatic union]’?”

Verse 6, “But on the occasion when He [God the Father] again introduces His firstborn into the world [second advent], He says, ‘Let all God’s angels worship Him’.”

Verse 7, “And speaking of angels He says, ‘The one who makes His angels spirits and His angelic ministers a flame of fire’.” Cf Ezekiel chapter 1, the chariot of fire.

Verse 8, “But speaking of His Son He says, ‘Your throne, O God [Jesus Christ is God], is forever and ever, and the righteous sceptre is the sceptre of your kingdom’.”

Verse 9, “ ‘You have loved righteousness [our Lord’s humanity in the prototype divine dynasphere] and hated evil [He stayed out of the cosmic system]; therefore God [God the Father], your God, has anointed [or commissioned] you above your associates [the angels are associated with Christ in operation footstool] with the ceremonial oil of optimum happiness’.”

Verse 10, “And, ‘In the beginning, O Lord [Jesus Christ], you laid the foundations of the earth, and the heavens are the work of your hands;”

Verse 11, “ ‘They [the heavens] will perish [at the end of the Millennium], but you remain; and all they will become worn out like a garment [the old universe],”

Verse 12, “ ‘And you will roll them up like an old robe; like a garment they will be changed. But you remain the same, and your years will never come to an end’.”

Verse 13, “But to which of the angels has He [God the Father] ever said, ‘Sit down at my right hand until I make your enemies the footstool of your feet’?”

Verse 14, “Are not they [elect angels] all subordinate servants, spirits sent into action [cf. Ezekiel chapter 1] to render service to those [the royal family] who are about to inherit eternal salvation?”

So we have noted, then, the humility and subordination of the twenty-four angelic staff officers who will fall down before our Lord Jesus Christ who sits on the throne. We have also noted their efficacious worship, “and they will worship him who lives forever.”

Next we note the gift of their glory. They are qualified to give glory because these elect angels have it to give. Not all elect angels have it to give, just as in the future not all believers will have crowns or the order of the morning star or the uniform of glory or the other rewards and decorations.

In the first part of verse 10 in the antiphonal response of the twenty-four staff officers we noted their humility and subordination. The correct translation:

“The twenty-four staff officers [angelic general staff] will fall down before him [our glorified Lord Jesus Christ] who sits on the throne.” Next we noted that their work was efficacious, “and they [the angelic general staff] will worship him who lives forever and ever.”

We move on now to the third part of the general staff worship. We begin with the connective conjunction kai, followed by the future active indicative of the verb ballw, which generally means to throw. But it also means to place or to lay down, and that is the way we are going to translate it, “and they will lay down [or place].” No one does any throwing in the throne room! The future tense is a gnomic future for a fact of performance expected under the conditions of their expression of worship. The active voice: the angelic general staff produces the action of the verb in their antiphonal worship with the angelic heralds. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. And with this we have an accusative direct object composed of the word stefanoj. We have already seen that they are wearing crowns. With it we have the intensive pronoun in the possessive genitive used as a personal pronoun and translated “their crowns.” We have previously noted that these were golden crowns.

Then we have an improper preposition e)nw pion, and with it the object is qronoj from which we get our English word throne, “before the throne.” And then they said something. The present active indicative of the verb legw is the beginning of the recording of their verbal worship, “saying.” The present tense is a progressive present for an action in the state of persistence, when they worshipped. The active voice: the angelic general staff produces the action in the antiphonal part of the worship. The circumstantial participle expresses the attendant circumstances, an additional factor thought which is often best rendered in the English by translating the participle as a finite verb and preceding it with the conjunction “and,” “and say.”

Translation: “they [the angelic general staff] will lay down their crowns before the throne and say.”

This is an antiphonal form of worship without precedent as far as human worship in eternity is revealed in the Word of God. So the question arises: Why? What is the significance?

Principles

1. First we note that “casting crowns” is a bad translation. The Greek word ballw implies here placing. When you cast, that implies impulsive and emotional worship rather than rational and spiritual worship. All true worship is rational and spiritual.

2. Therefore the verb ballw is translated “lay down” or “place.”

So: Why this?

1. In placing their crowns at the foot of the throne the angelic general staff made their last and highest decision. This is an optimum expression of creature worship directed toward our Lord Jesus Christ.

2. At something similar to the judgment seat of Christ for elect angels in eternity past God provided those golden crowns as rewards or decorations for highest achievement in angelic history.

3. In angelic history God had provided what is comparable to logistical grace for all the elect angels who through multitudes of good decisions advanced to maturity during the course of prehistorical angelic conflict. The angelic conflict comes in two phases: angelic history prehistoric; human history historic.

4. Fallen angels under the leadership of Satan oppose elect angels. Therefore elect angels must make decisions in facing that opposition on their spiritual battlefield.

5. Elect angels through positive volition toward the communication of prehistoric doctrine made their thousands of good decisions in expressing positive volition towards God’s plan and God’s truth.

6. The result was decoration and reward such as the uniform of wisdom and the golden crowns.

7. These elect angels subordinated their volition to God in achieving those crowns. Now again they subordinate in worship by removing those crowns from their heads and placing them at the foot of the throne. The same good decisions, the same humility, the same subordination to the authority of God by which they won them is now used in one decision whereby they place them at the foot of the throne.

What is the principle behind this ultimate expression of worship?

1. Worship is the expression of both capacity and the appreciation for that divine policy known as the grace of God.
2. Worship is the expression of doctrinal orientation to the person and plan of God. The visible person in the Godhead is our Lord Jesus Christ and we have noted that worship of Christ is worship of the entire Godhead.
3. The capacity for this worship is found in both enforced and genuine humility.
4. Since God is the source of the golden crowns as an eternal reward and decoration placing those crowns at the foot of His throne is the optimum expression of their humility; therefore their capacity for worship. We can see that true worship in the Church can only exist inside the divine dynasphere.
5. The presenting of their crowns at the foot of the throne represents maximum doctrinal application and resultant subordination on the part of the angelic general staff to our Lord Jesus Christ.
6. Included in the ultimate expression of worship is also their personal love for God. God is invisible; God is unseen; and there is no love for God apart from maximum doctrine in the soul.
7. Personal love always expresses itself in giving. So they gave their most precious eternal possession to the Lord as an expression of their love and worship. The most important thing they have for all eternity: their golden crowns. And they set a pattern for worship, they establish a principle: no creature can worship God in giving what he does not possess.

When we worship, first of all we give our concentration. We give the mentality of our soul in concentration on the teaching of the Word of God. We give our attention. Concentration is a combination of thinking and subordination, thinking and humility. We give our time, we set aside time to go and listen to the teaching of the Word of God. We give what we have. You cannot give if you do not have and in the cosmic system we have nothing by which we can give, and therefore no worship.

8. What was more important to them was that they gave to our Lord to express their worship in terms of personal love. Their love was so perfect that they gave the most valuable thing that they had. In giving to our Lord their crowns the angelic general staff still had the source of that gift, they hadn't lost the Lord. All worship recognises the source.

9. In giving our Lord their crowns the angelic general staff still had the Lord, the source of their blessings forever and ever. In giving their crowns to Him they still have the Lord and, actually, still have their crowns. Under the highest principle of worship everything we have is His.

A second principle

1. Having the source of blessing means that we never lose the blessing of eternal reward even though we express our love and worship by parting with it. We never have anything of value which came from Him, which is given to Him in worship, which we have lost because we have not lost Him. And since our relationship with Him is secure anything that He gives us is secure, and the highest expression of love is given by taking the most valuable eternal possession and laying it at His throne.
2. Therefore the principle of worship: the source of blessing is more important than the blessing.
3. When we lose the blessing we still have the source.
4. Therefore worship is a matter of priorities. Doctrine resident in the soul brings us to the place of putting Christ first. Everything else is secondary.
5. With the first always first there are seconds and more seconds both in time and in eternity, and anything that is secondary that comes from Him is never as important as He is. In other words, it is not the gift, it is the giver.
6. When the source supersedes the prosperity then the prosperity can never be distorted, destroyed or lost.
7. Therefore this function of the 24 angelic staff officers gives the pattern for passing the prosperity test in time and relating it to worship. As long as the prosperity does not take precedence over the source of prosperity the prosperity will continue to be a blessing and a source of worship. Prosperity without the right priorities is a trap, a source of misery and unhappiness, and one of the major sources of cosmic involvement. The 24 angelic staff officers teach us an important lesson regarding both worship and the prosperity test.

Verse 11, the liturgical summary of this angelic worship. We begin with the vocative o(kurioj. It is used for deity and it is used here for Jesus Christ in hypostatic union. With this we have the present active indicative of the verb e)imi, "O Lord you are." The static present tense is for a condition which perpetually exists. The active voice: Jesus Christ, addressed as Lord, produces the action . The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of Bible doctrine in angelic worship of our Lord Jesus Christ. Next comes the predicate nominative a)cioj which originally meant bringing up the other beam of the scales, bringing into equilibrium. Then it came it mean deserving of praise, and finally had a connotation of merit. It comes to mean worthy, valuable, deserving, meritorious — "O Lord, you are worthy," worthy to be praised, worthy of ultimate worship. Jesus Christ is worthy in both categories of His hypostatic union. Jesus Christ is worthy as eternal God; He is worthy as impeccable humanity living inside the prototype divine dynasphere. Jesus Christ is worthy as the strategic victor of the angelic conflict. Jesus Christ is worthy in His three categories of royalty. "You, O Lord, are worthy [possessing the ultimate merit for optimum worship]." As the manifest person of the Godhead Jesus Christ, then, is the object of our worship. In worshipping Christ we are worshipping the Trinity, for God the Father is the author of the plan, God the Holy Spirit is the power for execution of the plan, and our Lord Jesus Christ is the unique person of the universe fulfilling that plan by becoming true humanity and our saviour. Of course to understand this we go back to the concept of the hypostatic union, Christ in His prototype divine dynasphere, the function of the doctrine of kenosis and the impeccability of Christ.

The angelic conflict, then, is resolved in the human race; it is resolved by one member of the human race, the humanity of Christ in the incarnation, living inside the prototype divine dynasphere, going to the cross, bearing our sins and taking our place. The creation of one man, Adam, and his fall plus the virgin birth of one Man, Jesus Christ, and His execution of the plan of God on the cross is the basis for resolving the angelic conflict which began with the fall of Lucifer, that cherub called the anointed one.

Three factors in worshipping Christ are now presented. We have an aorist active infinitive of the verb lambanw which means to receive. The gnomic aorist tense is for a fact or truth so fixed in its certainty, so axiomatic in character, that it is described in the aorist just as if it were an actual occurrence. For this idiom we commonly employ the present tense of the English in translation. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb as the recipient of the following three forms of worship. The infinitive is the infinitive of actual result. The actual result of our Lord's strategic victory of the first advent results in certain angels performing worship before the throne room in heaven. "You are worthy to receive," and then the accusative singular direct object from doxa, "glory." This introduces the first form of angelic worship in the throne room of God. We have with this the generic use of the definite article which sets up this form of worship apart as a special category, "You are worthy to receive glory." This category of worship is the highest form.

The principle of the first category of worship: glory

1. Glory is the highest form of worship. You cannot give in worship what you do not possess. At the present time we do not possess glory, i.e. a resurrection body, and therefore are not qualified to enter into this form of worship. The category of worship known as glory demands the eternal state. These angelic creatures are in their eternal state and therefore can give this category of worship.

2. Therefore since elect angels are in their eternal or glorified state they are the only ones at the present qualified to perform this category of worship.

3. The Lord can only receive glory in worship from those creatures who are in their eternal state — which in this context refers to the elect angels.

4. We can, however, learn from angels and we anticipate the time when in our resurrection bodies we will give glory to our saviour, Jesus Christ.
5. Elect angels are in their eternal and glorified state, they are qualified to perform this category of worship.
6. For us this category means face to face worship in our resurrection bodies, at which time we will receive glory from the Lord and will give glory in worship. This refers to the time of the big genuflect in the sky when this will occur for the first time in the royal family of God.
7. This form of worship does provide us with a general principle regarding the subject of worship. We can't enter into it but we can learn from it. The principle: Capacity for worship must precede that worship. The prerequisite for worship is the capacity for it.
8. The eternal state in the resurrection body provides maximum capacity for optimum worship. In this body of corruption believers do not have the necessary capacity to give glory to our Lord Jesus Christ. When we die and go to heaven we have an interim body but it is not the body of glory; it is not the resurrection body; and we still do not have that capacity.

The second category is also found in the accusative singular direct object of the verb, and this is our word timh, meaning honour. It introduces the second form of angelic worship and it is one in which we are qualified while in this body of corruption. While this context, of course, has in view angelic worship in heaven this category is pertinent to us today under certain conditions. Remember once again that time means three things: respect, reverence, and honour.

The believer can only respect the Lord Jesus Christ by knowing what He thinks. According to 1 Corinthians 2:16 the Bible is the mind [the thinking] of Christ. Worship is the application of doctrine directed toward God. You cannot apply what you do not know. To worship God or to give respect to our Lord Jesus Christ as believers we must know Bible doctrine. Knowledge of doctrine is the prerequisite to worship. There can be no respect in worship apart from perception of Bible doctrine inside the divine dynasphere. There can be no respect in worship apart from the application of doctrine inside the divine dynasphere — doctrine applied to the person and the work of our Lord Jesus Christ, like the communion table. Hence the importance of the interlocking gates in the divine dynasphere and the principle of John 4:24, "God is a Spirit and those who worship Him must worship Him in Spirit [Gate one, the filling of the Spirit] and doctrine [Gate four]."

The second connotation of time is reverence. Reverence is motivating virtue. This is classified as personal love for God. All love begins with respect and moves to reverence. Personal love for God originates with the perception of doctrine which gives respect for our Lord. Then it moves to reverence as it intensifies. The difference between respect and reverence takes us to gate five of the divine dynasphere. Gate five begins with love of God from perception of doctrine. That is respect. But as you continue to grow — the momentum, moving toward gate eight — that becomes occupation with the person of Christ, and that is reverence. Occupation with the person of Christ is reverence; love of God is respect. So there is an advance in the connotation of worship. There can be no reverence in worship apart from knowledge of doctrine.

Then there is the third aspect of time. To honour God in worship requires residence and function inside the divine dynasphere, the development of integrity and the fulfilment of the royal family honour code. Compliance with the royal family honour code and the production of both motivational and functional virtue is necessary for the fulfilment of worship.

All worship directed toward God must come from a person who has virtue, honour and integrity. You cannot give honour in worship unless you possess honour in your modus operandi; honour in the soul must precede the giving of honour in worship. You can't give God honour if you have none. Therefore the importance of the royal family honour code. Only the honourable believer can honour the Lord or give honour in worship. You cannot give in worship what you do not possess in life. To give honour to the Lord in worship you must possess honour in the soul. Hence the prerequisite to worship in both residence and function is the momentum of the divine dynasphere; there is no worship of our Lord while living in the cosmic system.

Then there is the accusative singular direct object, the third part of this worship concept. The word dunamij, meaning power, and it is a reference to the divine dynasphere for man's worship of God and the ministry of the Holy Spirit for angelic worship is involved there. All royal family worship must come from power, and that power is the divine dynasphere. We have the adjunctive use of kai with it, "also power."

Corrected translation: "You, O Lord, are worthy [possessing the ultimate merit for optimum worship] to receive glory [category #1 worship for the eternal state] and honour [category #2 worship based on residence in the divine dynasphere, maximum perception of doctrine], also the power [worship must be conducted inside the divine dynasphere]."

In the subject of worship there are many things that people associate with worship. For example, prayer, some form of singing, the Eucharist, concentration on the teaching of Bible doctrine, giving, etc. All of these, of course, are not worship unless they are related to the divine dynasphere. Worship, as we have noted, is an expression of love for God. All worship must be conducted inside the divine dynasphere. Worship cannot exist without the perception and application of Bible doctrine, John 4:24.

All of the results of worship are related to gate five. We start out loving God by persistence in residence in the divine dynasphere and as our motivation from gate four moves us toward gate eight that becomes occupation with the person of Christ. Gate seven is the concept of virtue and honour in worship. The ultimate is the ability of the mature believer in the function of worship.

The ultimate reason for that worship is given in a causal clause in verse 11b. It begins with the conjunction *o(t*i which is correctly translated here “because,” “because you,” the nominative singular personal pronoun su, “you” [the Lord Jesus Christ]. And then the aorist active indicative of the verb ktizw which means to create, “and because you have created.” This is a culminative aorist tense, it views the event in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. The existing results in this context include the believer’s worship of the Lord Jesus Christ. The culminative aorist is best translated by the English perfect tense which indicates that the worship is the result of something. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb, He is the one who has created. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of Bible doctrine. All creation is the function of the second person of the Trinity, our Lord Jesus Christ.

With this we have the accusative plural definite article ta. This is a generic use of the definite article representing a category. And the category: all created things whether the material or immaterial, creature or any other category. It is translated with the accusative plural direct object of the adjective paj, “all things,” “because you [the Lord Jesus Christ] have created all things.” Note that the generic definite article is rarely translated, it is not necessary to bring it into English since its use is a designated category not to be a translatable word.

The fact that our Lord Jesus Christ created the universe and all creatures in it is the subject of John 1:3, which says: “All things came into being through him, and apart from him nothing came into being that has come into being”. Or Colossians 1:16-17, “By means of him [the Lord Jesus Christ] all things were created, both in the heavens and on the earth, the invisible things and the invisible things, whether human governments or systems of authority or rulers or functional authorities, all things were created by him [our Lord Jesus Christ] and for him. And he has existed prior to all creation, and by means of him all things of creation are held together.”

Next comes the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, translated “also.” Then the prepositional phrase dia plus the accusative of the noun qelhma. Dia plus the genitive means “through,” but dia plus the accusative means “because.” We also have a possessive genitive from the personal pronoun su and it is translated, “because of your will [your purpose, your desire].” Qelhma is used here for the will of our Lord Jesus Christ as eternal and infinite God, the second person of the Trinity. It is followed by the imperfect active indicative of the verb to be which is e)imi. The imperfect tense is voluntative, used for the expression of divine sovereignty in eternity past. It is the sovereign decision of our Lord Jesus Christ to bring into existence creation. The active voice: both the material and immaterial are actually created by our Lord Jesus Christ. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of Bible doctrine.

The voluntative imperfect tense recognises the existence of creation before it occurred. Long before the universe or any creature, angelic, human or animal, existed or was invented they did exist in the mind of God. The potential existence of all things in God’s will and purpose in eternity past first was in His mind. The imperfect active indicative from e)imi looks at us, then, before we were created.

The next verb mentions the actual creation which followed in the aorist passive indicative of ktizw. The passive voice: “and they were created” is the translation. The constative aorist contemplates action of the verb in its entirety. The passive voice: all forms of creation receive the action of the verb, whether man or angel or animals. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of doctrine.

The principle: The universe and the creatures in it have purpose and design from the standpoint of the plan of God. The purpose and design of creation demands respect for the creator. That respect we have called worship. Any deviation from His perfect plan or design, or the expression of His sovereign will in the function of rational creatures using their free will independently of God is related to the angelic conflict. But every compliance is related to God’s plan and God’s purpose which, of course, centres and focuses on worship. Two categories of creatures were actually given free will and the environment of freedom to express their volition either for or against God. And while it is unthinkable would he ever act independently of the creator or His perfect plan the reality of the situation is that he has through his own arrogance and invention done so. The first creature to act in arrogance was a cherub by the name of Lucifer the son of the morning. That was what started the ball rolling. Recovery from angelic failure or the fall of man sets aside the perfect environment of creation and it substitutes the gracious provision of both creation and recreation, eternal salvation, where creature volition totally apart from human merit chooses for God’s plan apart from arrogance or works. This is illustrated by faith in Christ as the only way of salvation in the human race. There was also some form of salvation, unknown as far as the scripture is concerned to us, where angelic creatures in prehistorical times existed. Whatever the way of salvation for angels the entire angelic creation finally decided one way or the other and their eternity has begun except for the interlude of human history which vindicates the person, the plan, the decision, the sovereign will of God. These angelic creatures, of course, express this concept both in the worship of God in heaven and their observation of mankind on planet earth. While this is only a liturgical summary of angelic worship in verse 11 it does teach the believer in the human race principles of worship.

Translation of verse 11: “You, O Lord, are worthy, possessing the ultimate merit for optimum worship. You are worthy to receive glory [category #1 worship] and honour [category #2 worship], also the power [all worship must be conducted inside the divine dynasphere]: because you [the Lord Jesus Christ as eternal God] have created all things. Also, because of your sovereign will, they existed and they were created.”

This brings us to another problem with regard to worship, and that is that we should have a brief statement on the contrasting forms of worship. We live in the Church Age and the Church Age is quite different from the previous dispensation. For example, in Israel they had an entirely different form of worship than we have in the Church Age. Furthermore, when we get over to the Millennium at the second advent again there will be a different form of worship.

In the Old Testament dispensations mankind functioned under a specialised priesthood. For example, in Israel the tribe of Levi, the family of Aaron, became the priests of Israel.

They represented all mankind in their periphery to God. Because the canon of scripture was not completed and because Jesus Christ had not come in the flesh (the incarnation) their priestly function was related to the ritual of training aids, the Levitical offerings, the modus operandi of the holy days, the symbolism of the tabernacle and later on the temple, its furniture, its function, its compartments. But once the Church Age began two things contributed to a new form of worship. The first was the incarnation, the first advent of Christ and His strategic victory on the cross. The second was the fact of the universal priesthood of the believer. Every believer now represents himself and he represents himself in something God has provided, the divine dynasphere. So add to this the completion of the canon of scripture and that means that Church Age worship is entirely different from anything that has preceded. That means that the ritual is generally removed. We do not have animal sacrifices; we do not have a specialised priesthood; we do not have holy days, every day is to be lived as unto the Lord. We have, therefore, something entirely new and something entirely different.

The object of worship in the Church Age is the Lord Jesus Christ. He is the manifest person of the Trinity and therefore worship of Christ is worship of the Trinity. But Jesus Christ is not only eternal God, He is also true humanity. This is the result of the strategic victory on the cross. He is therefore no higher than angels. That is why we took a quick look at Hebrews chapter one in order to see the fact that these highest of angelic creatures in the angelic order of battle, whether they are on the side of the category of the elect army or the category of the college of heralds, actually worship a member of the human race.

We should also notice in concluding this particular chapter the ingredients of worship. They include, of course, personal love for God, humility, subordination to divine authority. God cannot be first in your life and the object of true worship apart from enforced humility. That is submission to the authority of Bible doctrine. All doctrine is not necessarily interesting to you but in subordination to the authority of the Word of God you must concentrate, understand, every subject as it comes up in a passage whether you are interested in it or not. Before you die you will have need of it. So genuine humility which follows enforced humility is not only the basis for perception of doctrine but it is also the basis for true worship of our Lord Jesus Christ. It is also the basis for capacity for life, capacity for love, and capacity for happiness. It is the basis for all wonderful human relationships. There cannot be true love in any category apart from genuine humility in the soul. The ingredients of worship actually include, then, the first four gates of the divine dynasphere. The result in worship is the function, the modus operandi, of gate five which is best described by 1 Peter 1:8, "Though you have not seen him [the Lord Jesus Christ] yet you love him, and even though you do not see him now, you believe in him and are filled with an inexpressible and glorious happiness." In worship you can give only what you have.

In Revelation 4:10 the 24 angelic staff officers laid down their crowns before the throne as the expression of their worship. The angelic general staff had these crowns because of their utilisation of God's grace in the prehistorical angelic conflict before eternity began for them. In prehistoric angelic history God had provided for these elect angels something very similar to logistical grace for us and through positive volition toward doctrine and the multitude of good decisions in expression of positive volition toward God and His plan these angelic creatures at the point of their eternity were rewarded and decorated. We have already seen their uniform of wisdom, their uniform of glory, and their golden crowns. These 24 angelic staff officers subordinated their volition to God in achieving these crowns, now they subordinate their volition in worship by removing these crowns from their heads and placing them at the foot of the throne. Worship, then, is the expression of their love, their reverence, their humility, their capacity and thanksgiving directed toward God. In their worship, then, these 24 angelic staff officers gave what they actually possessed and the principle is always true in genuine worship: you cannot give in true worship what you do not possess. If the believer has doctrine in his right lobe he can express worship commensurate with the capacity produced by doctrine; if he has love of the truth or doctrine, he can express worship in giving concentration. Those of you who are concentrating right now are actually engaged in worship; it is the highest form of worship, the concentration and perception of doctrine.

The other highest form is the application of doctrine at the communion table. If the believer can apply doctrines of soteriology and Christology he can participate in the communion service by linking the ritual in which he engages with the doctrine resident in his soul. If he has time he can give time to assemble for the study of the Word or listening to doctrine on a tape recorder. If he has money he can give money but only as God has prospered and only as he is motivated to give, never pressured. While the 24 general staff officers gave their crowns they still had and will always have the source of those crowns. In giving their crowns they still have the Lord, they still have the source. Therefore the final principle of worship: everything we have belongs to the Lord, therefore everything we have is secure. When we part with what we have in worship we express the fact that we haven't lost anything because we still have the source of that blessing. And because worship expresses our love for the Lord we still have, and always will have, the object of our love. Personal love for God expresses itself in worship which includes giving, our love, our thinking, our time, our energy, our honour, our total respect and devotion. If you do not have the filling of the Spirit and if you do not have Bible doctrine in your right lobe, if you do not have virtue, honour, integrity, you have nothing to offer and, as a matter of fact, you can't even worship God though you go through the motions. You are in effect Satan's slave.

The sixth thing in heaven that we note takes up the first four verses of chapter five: the Doomsday book of the Tribulation. In studying the Doomsday book in Heaven we will eventually see how it works out as far as earth is concerned for in the seven seals of the Doomsday book we have the historical trends and disasters of the Tribulation. We will study the four horsemen of the apocalypse as the first four seals or trends of the Tribulation.

In verse 1 we have the sequential use of the conjunction kai and it is translated “then.” Next is the aorist active indicative of the verb o(raw, translated “I saw.” “Then I saw.” The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, it gathers the vision of the Doomsday book of the Tribulation into one entirety. The active voice: the apostle John is the author of the book of Revelation and as such he produces the action of the verb in a series of visions dealing with the historical trends of the Tribulation, a future period of history which will be unique in that there will be no restraint from God the Holy Spirit and therefore Satan will have full sway. His objectives will be world peace, and yet there will be wars. His objectives will be trying to duplicate what will happen in the Millennium and he will not succeed, proving once again that even though he is a total genius and one of the greatest of all creatures ever to come from the hand of God he is totally and completely incapable with absolute power and authority to produce what he wants to produce — the perfect environment of the Millennium before the Millennium exists. No creature, no matter how great his power and his genius, can produce for you a better world. You are the only one who can produce through your right decisions, which means, of course, living in the divine dynasphere, the better world for yourself as far as your own environment is concerned. We call that better environment “happiness” and it is not available to anyone except the believer in the Lord Jesus Christ making proper daily decisions with regard to the divine dynasphere.

Next we have the prepositional phrase e)pi plus the adjective decioj, and it means “on the right” but it is an idiom meaning “in the right hand.” This is an anthropomorphism referring to God the Father. God the Father is invisible but the arm and the hand and the Doomsday book are visible to John in this vision. We note next in the English order the accusative neuter singular of the word biblion, meaning a manuscript or a book or a scroll. This is what he saw but it does not come up next in the Greek text sentence. We will translate it in modern English, “I saw a book.” The absence of the definite article emphasises the quality of the noun and we will translate it, “I saw a book in the right hand.”

Next is the articular present active participle of the verb kaqhmai which means to sit, “of him who sat.” With that we have e)pi plus qronoj, “on the throne.” The definite article of the participle is used for a personal pronoun referring to God the Father who during the Church Age holds the Doomsday book of the Tribulation. This is the dispensation of the seven Spirits of God. The Tribulation is the dispensation of the seven seals, and there is a tremendous difference. The Church Age is the most difficult period for the angelic conflict because all historical trends depend upon the volition of believers. Outside of this dispensation Historical trends depend on prophecy. This is the only exception and therefore this is the most concentrated, the most intense, period of the angelic conflict, but it is not the greatest concentration of simple historical disaster. That comes up from the Doomsday book, a book that cannot be opened until the Church, the royal family, is removed from this world. The perfective present tense of the participle refers to a fact which has come to be in the past but is emphasised as a present reality, God the Father sitting on the throne restrains the traumatic events of the Tribulation until the Church Age is concluded, until the transfer of the royal family to heaven by the Rapture. The active voice: God the Father produces the action of the verb. He does not release this book until the Church is in heaven. The participle is circumstantial.

So far we have a translation that sounds like this: “Then I saw in the right hand of him [God the Father] who was sitting on the throne a book [the Doomsday book of the Tribulation plus its seven seals for the historical trends of the Tribulation].”

Since Jesus Christ controls history we will see Him take the book from the hand of God the Father in chapter seven. In the meantime we have a very dramatic chapter before that occurs. As a result we will be able to pull together some of the concepts of the orderliness in the book of Revelation, for great portions of the book of Revelation all of the way to chapter eighteen is simply quoting from the Doomsday book. The Doomsday book is the story of Revelation from chapter six to chapter eighteen.

Principle

Historical trends are determined by prophecy in the Tribulation. They are all located in the Doomsday book.

1. The Church Age is the dispensation of no prophecy, hence it is the age of historical trends without prophecy. As such it is absolutely unique, it is the only historical era in history where prophecy does not determine historical trends. Prophecy is absolutely false and meaningless in this dispensation.

2. Only during the Church Age are historical trends related exclusively to your decisions as a believer, so that the royal family must take full responsibility for any peripheral disasters.

3. In other dispensations historical trends are determined by prophecy or the eschatology pertinent to that age.

4. This is why in the Church Age only: as goes the believer so goes the historical trends of any given generation.

5. Decisions of believers determine environment; environment does not determine decisions.

6. In other dispensations all human decisions were fed into the computer of divine decrees so that the historical trends were programmed and the printout was prophecy. This means that in the dispensation all of the printouts are in the form of prophecy. For example, in Leviticus 26: If you do such and such as a nation you will be hit with the cycles of discipline. It is all laid out prophetically. This was always was a group functional type of thing.

In this dispensation it is entirely different. Omniscience feeds into the computer of divine decrees what the believer decides — the volition of the believer: volition directed toward the divine dynasphere; volition directed toward the cosmic system. And in the printout historical trends always result from where the believers are living. That is why this is also the dispensation of the pivot: as goes the believer so goes the client nation. If there is a pivot there is blessing; if there is not a pivot there is not blessing. But there is no prophecy in this age.

7. Therefore prophecy determines historical trends in every dispensation except the Church Age.

8. This is the only dispensation where the divine dynasphere is the plan of God for the believer, and the believer's decisions regarding the divine dynasphere and perception of doctrine at gate four actually determine what is going to happen next historically.

9. Therefore only in the Church Age are historical trends related exclusively to decisions made by believers in any given generation without any reference to prophecy or the doctrine of eschatology. That is why the Rapture is imminent. It could happen tonight or a thousand years from tonight. In the Tribulation, however, historical trends are determined by the prophecies recorded in this sealed book, the Doom sday book.

The library of heaven

There are extensive books and records in heaven. In fact the library of heaven is the largest of all libraries of all time. There is the book of life which is a registry in time of every person who has ever lived. In eternity it is a registry of believers only. Blotted out of the book of life will be the names of all unbelievers on the point that they die without accepting Christ as saviour. Interestingly enough, the book of life not only has the names in eternity of all believers but the registry also adds the new knighthood and all of the honours lists of mature believers in eternity. There is a vast record that we have noted in the temple of God in heaven including pillars which record biographies of every mature believer in the Church Age. The biography covers the life of the Church Age from the standpoint of its heroes. There will be also other records of other people in other dispensations.

The library in heaven has another series of volumes that go into the millions. It would be classified as it is in Revelation 20:12,13 as the books of works. These books of works have a complete record of every good deed accomplished by every unbeliever in history. At the last judgment, the second resurrection, Hades, one of the four compartments of the underworld, will deliver up its dead and they will stand at the great white throne judgment. Their sins, however, will not be mentioned, they were all judged at the cross, but the fact that they rejected the so great salvation will be a major issue. Christ is the issue, not your sins. In the book of works there will be a page opened, if you are an unbeliever, and every good deed that you have accomplished in all of your life time will be recorded. They will all be there in that book. Then, next, they are tabulated and compared to the perfect righteousness of the one who sits on the throne, John chapter five tells us that all judgment is committed to our Lord Jesus Christ, and when they are added up a second time they come up to minus R (-R), and -R cannot have fellowship with +R, all of our righteousnesses are as filthy rags in God's sight. So the book of works is used as a basis for condemnation at the last judgment, along with the major issue which is rejection of the Lord Jesus Christ.

The library of heaven also includes other categories, including the Doomsday books. It appears to be one book when we start but eventually it is a series of volumes on the historical trends of the Tribulation. Prophetically quoted from them will be everything from Revelation chapter six to Revelation chapter eighteen. The Doomsday books give all of the historical judgements of the Tribulation. This is the volume found in the hand of God the Father in Revelation 5:1.

We note a few things about the Doomsday book: the perfect passive participle of the verb grafw, which means to write. It is translated "written," the perfect tense of existing state in which the past is practically dropped from the concept in thought and attention is focused on the existing state. This is the same as the intensive perfect which emphasises the results of the verb. Hence it is an emphatic method in the Greek of presenting a fact in a strong way. Usually it is translated by the English present. The passive voice: the book or scroll receives the action of the verb being, filled with writing. The participle is circumstantial. We have two adverbs connected by kai, e)swqen, which means "inside"; and then o)pisqen, which means "outside," translated "inside and on the outside [or backside]." It is an idiom that really means "on both sides."

Finally we are introduced to the sequence of historical judgements, the perfect passive participle katasfagizw, and this is the only place in which this word occurs — "having been sealed." The perfect tense is a dramatic perfect in which the rhetorical application of the intensive perfect is used. It describes the existing state of the book in a very vivid way. The book remains sealed until the Church Age is completed and the royal family has been removed from the earth, and with the royal family the restraining ministry of God the Holy Spirit. The reason that the Church Age is not more intensive when it comes to disasters is simply because of the presence of God the Holy Spirit, the divine dynasphere for this dispensation.

In the Church Age, again, historical trends depend on the individual volition of the believer, but in the Tribulation historical trends depend on prophecy. Prophecy is held up until the Church Age has been completed, until the royal family of God has been called out.

The passive voice: the Doomsday book of the Tribulation receives the action of the verb, sealed until the Church Age is terminated. The participle is circumstantial. We have with this the instrumental plural from sfragij, the word for seals, and with it the indeclinable numeral e(pta, "with seven seals."

Translation: "Then I saw in the right hand of him [God the Father] who was sitting on the throne a book [the Doomsday book of the Tribulation] written on both sides, having been sealed with seven seals."

The seals indicate the sequence of historical trends in the Tribulation. Again, note that these are prophecies. Prophecies denote historical trends in every dispensation except the Church Age. The content of each seal, numbers 1-6, are revealed in the next chapter, Revelation six. The content of the seventh seal begins at chapter eight, verse one, and continues for several chapters. Those will be the trumpet judgements and the three woes. In other words, all historical trends of the Tribulation are determined by prophecy, not by the personal volition of believers in that dispensation. The believer's historical impact through good decisions related to doctrine and the divine dynasphere is limited to the Church Age only. Never has there been a dispensation where so much depends on the individual believer's attitude toward Bible doctrine. It will never be that way again, in all other dispensations the historical trends are determined by prophecy, and the prophecies always relate to both man and angelic creatures. In the Tribulation many of the historical trends actually are dependant on angelic creatures — their volition — and we are going to see super demons which right now are in jail in a compartment of Tartarus. But they will be released.

This book of seven seals is the account of the historical trends of the Tribulation. As long as the Church is on earth not one seal will be broken. This book is sealed until the Rapture of the Church takes place.

Verse 2 — the conjunction kai which begins this verse is co-ordinating instead of subordinating and it denotes a temporal designation, a sequential designation. So we translate it "then." With this we have the aorist active indicative of the verb o(raw which means to see, and we will translate it "then I saw." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The human writer, John, produces the action of the verb in the vision. This is the declarative indicative for the reality of this vision which will further to help us to understand and appreciate the historical trends of the Tribulation coming up in the next chapter. The "strong angel" is important. We have the accusative direct object composed of two words. First of all the adjective i)sxuroj one of four Greek words used for strength and we will translate it powerful instead of strong because the word connotes endowed power. Endowed power indicates an angel of very high rank and we will note that this is in the order of the college of heralds, the top rank. This will be one of the kings of arms. Then we have the noun which goes with it, a)ggeloj indicating we are dealing with a higher creation. "Then I saw a powerful angel."

We have seen the angelic order of battle. At the top is Malak Adonai which is the Lord Jesus Christ as the angel of the Lord, it is referring to the Lord Jesus Christ in terms of theophany. Next in the order, number one in the angelic order, is the kings of arms. These are the highest ranking. Number two in the order are the heralds, and the kings of arms and the heralds are seraphs. Number three are cherubs and these are the pur sui vant officers. And then the rank and file pur sui vant are called messengers. This is the order of battle in the college of heralds.

We are now for the first time dealing with number one in the angelic order of battle. Up until now we have been seeing the heralds. All of this rank becomes very important. This angel is the highest angelic creature in the college of heralds. Above him is the Lord Jesus Christ. He is called the king of arms or officer of arms and, as such, he wears and bears the entire coat of arms of the King of kings. To injure or insult the king of arms, even in medieval times, was an affront to the coat of arms he wore but even more so in the angelic college of heralds. This angel is the herald who is the highest of all in rank. Therefore when the highest-ranking angel comes forward it is time for us to note, and we will take very careful notice of what he announces.

The word ixuroj refers to the highest rank. The angel is going to do something, he is going to act like a herald for that is exactly what the present active participle of khruww means, to function as an herald. There is also a noun that goes with it, khruw, the Greek word for herald. Khruww, by the way, is the command given to ministers; they are to function as God's heralds in the human race in the teaching of doctrine. So we translate: "Then I saw a powerful angel announcing [making a proclamation]". The futuristic present denotes an event which has not yet occurred but prophecy is regarded as so certain in thought that it may be contemplated as already occurring. The active voice: the highest ranking angelic herald makes the announcement. The participle is circumstantial. Furthermore he makes the announcement so that all can hear: the prepositional phrase, en plus the instrumental of the adjective megaj [loud] and the noun fwnh [voice], "with a great [or magnificent] voice." His announcement or proclamation comes in the form of a question mark, the interrogative pronoun tij, "who." With this we do not have a verb. Ellipsis is a part of the announcement. We can supply the verb ejimi. And then the predicate nominative ajcioj, "worthy." Next we have the aorist active infinitive of the verb ajnoigw, which means here to break open or simply to open. "Who is worthy to break open its seals" is the way it is translated. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, the point being that this book cannot be opened except by one person and that one person is the one who controls history.

"Then I saw a powerful angel announcing with a great voice, Who is worthy to break its seals and to open the book?"

Principle

1. Worthiness is the issue in who controls history. The worthiness issue was settled at the first advent of Christ. The only human being or creature who is worthy to control history is our Lord Jesus Christ — talking about His humanity [the hypostatic union]. In His first advent He went to the lowest point of humility. No one was ever tested in true humility as our Lord was. Finally He humbled Himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. So His worthiness is based on the fantastic enforced and genuine humility and the strategic victory of the angelic conflict. That occurred on the cross where He bore our sins and taking our place.

2. When our Lord became true humanity at the point of the virgin birth, continued to live inside the prototype divine dynasphere, resulting in His impeccability and the function of His kenosis, and then went to the cross and was judged for our sins when they were imputed to Him, He won the strategic victory of the angelic conflict. He broke Satan's back, in effect, on the cross as well as providing for us our so great salvation.

3. Therefore worthiness belongs to Christ in the hypostatic union, a worthiness expressed in Christ being awarded His third royal patent, i.e. King of kings, Lord of lords.

4. The third royal patent guarantees that Jesus Christ controls history. He controlled it before but the guarantee of His control was strengthened, re-established, by that strategic victory. In fact the true meaning of human history centres around the person of Christ and His victory of the first advent.

5. No one else in history is qualified to open the sealed Doomsday book of the Tribulation. The only qualified person is our Lord Jesus Christ.

6. Our Lord Jesus Christ received two royal patents related to His first advent, one at the beginning and one at the end. At the point of the virgin birth, His second royal patent, He became the ruler of Israel forever. At the end, He became the King of kings and Lord of Lords, the victory of the angelic conflict. Both of these royal patents qualify Him for ultimate worthiness. The first royal patent received at birth becomes an issue at verse 5 — the Lion of the tribe of Judah passage. The second royal patent was received at the point of our Lord's session after His resurrection and ascension. So that worthiness is the subject of the incarnation, it was achieved at that point.

And then in the order of the Greek, "and to break its seals" comes next. The word for "break" here is the aorist active indicative of luo which means to break. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: at this point an unknown person is being sought whose qualifications make it possible for the trends of the Tribulation to be presented. Then the accusative plural direct object, sfragij, "seals." The seals refer to the category of events in the Tribulation in terms of historical trends. The seals are called "seals" and the information is sealed in the Doomsday book because the Church Age is still going strong. The events of the Tribulation will not and cannot occur until the Rapture of the Church, until the Church is removed. Each seal represents a prophecy of Tribulational trends. However, as long as the Church is on earth the seals of the scroll of the book will never be broken. Once the royal family is removed by means of the resurrection the Age of Israel will continue and terminate under the title of the Tribulation — Daniel's seventieth week.

The first six seals of the book indicate historical trends without reference to chronology, things that will occur from time to time. The seventh seal is the source of both the trumpet and the goblet judgements which are chronologically arranged. Therefore the Doomsday book includes general historical trends throughout the Tribulation, seals one through six, then the historical judgements of the seventh seal which will include the vial or the goblet judgements and the trumpet judgements. So it should be noted that the first six seals of the book are historical trends very similar to the historical trends in the Church Age or any past dispensation. We will have to remember one thing, one great difference: God the Holy Spirit who restrains in this dispensation will not be present to restrain in the Tribulation. So the similarity ends with the source of historical trends. In the Church Age it is the volition of the believer; in the Tribulation it is the doctrine of eschatology or prophecy. The fact that certain trends in the Church Age coincide with historical trends in the Tribulation does not imply that the Tribulation is here, far from it, or that the Church goes through part of the Tribulation. That is heresy.

Verse 3, Again we have the connective conjunction kai, “and,” followed by the adjective used as a substantive, and the subject o)udeij, which is translated “no one.” O)udeijis used because neither an angel nor a human being could come forward and break the seals. No one can break the seals among members of the human race or angelic beings.

Next we have the imperfect middle indicative of the verb dunamai, and it means to have power or to be able. The imperfect of description, the middle voice: this is a deponent verb middle in form but active in meaning, it means that no creature of any category has the worthiness to open or to break the seals. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of absolute reality, absolutely no one. Then the verb demands an infinitive to complete the action so we skip to the aorist active infinitive of a)noigw, no one is able or qualified to break the seals. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. There never was and there never will be anyone in category homo sapien or in the angelic category who is qualified, only the Lord Jesus Christ, as we will see. This is the infinitive of intended result. That means it combines purpose and result. The failure of any rational creature, both angelic or human, is a deliberate divine objective. And time is given for anyone who thinks he is qualified to step forward, “and no one was able to open.” Then we have the accusative singular direct object from biblion which is translated “book” and is a reference to the Doomsday book, the history of the Tribulation.

Next we have three prepositional phrases. The first two are connected by o)udh o)udh, and it is translated “neither nor.” So the first prepositional phrase takes up the first category. No one in heaven was able to step forward, e)n plus the locative of o)uranoj, “in heaven,” no human being or angel in heaven. The Church will be in heaven in resurrection body at this time. The Old Testament saints were transferred at the resurrection of Christ, and while they are in interim bodies they are not qualified. So all of the great people in history will be there in category homo sapien in various stages, some in resurrection bodies and some are not.

The announcement is also made on earth. Next we have the preposition e)pi plus the genitive of the noun gh, the word for planet earth. It is translated “on earth.” On earth there are operational elect angels and there are operational fallen angels called demons. There are all kinds of human beings, believers and unbelievers. No one accepts the challenge of the king of arms on earth.

The third prepositional phrase requires a little more explanation because we have an adverb used as an improper preposition, u(pokatw. With it we have the object of the preposition of the genitive, gh again, and it is translated “under the earth.” Why under the earth? We will study it in great detail when we get to the next chapter. When our Lord was on the cross he said to one of the criminals with Him who believed in Him, “Today you will be with me in paradise.” When our Lord died physically His spirit went into the presence of the Father, His body went into the grave, and His soul went into paradise or Abraham’s bosom which is a part of what is called Sheol [Hebrew] or Hades [Greek]. When our Lord said, “Today shalt thou be with me in paradise” He established the fact that under the earth, in the core of the earth somewhere, there is Sheol or Hades. Paradise or Abraham’s bosom is where all the believers were located up until the resurrection when they were transferred to heaven where all of this is taking place. The other criminal went to a place called torments, the location of all unbelievers since the beginning of time and where they will remain until the last judgment. There is a great gulf fixed between the believer’s compartment and the unbeliever’s compartment in Hades.

There are two more compartments for fallen angels. The fallen angels of Genesis chapter six are in a place called Tartarus. The angels who have to be incarcerated, the demons since Genesis chapter six, are in a place which is called the Abyss. In the Tribulation it is the Abyss that will have some of the most powerful angels of all angelic creatures coming up. Under the earth refers to the unbelievers in torments, the angels incarcerated (in two categories), and there is no one under the earth in Sheol or Hades who can respond to this challenge.

Then it says, “nor to look on it,” the present active infinitive of the verb blepw. The futuristic present denotes an event which has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as already occurring. The active voice: no angelic or human creature in heaven, on earth, or in Sheol or Hades, steps forward or is qualified. The infinitive of intended result indicates the fulfilling of a deliberate objective and the blending of purpose and result. With this we have the accusative neuter singular direct object from the intensive pronoun a)utoj used as personal pronoun, third person neuter singular, and therefore a)utoj is translated “it” referring to the Doomsday book. Again, this emphasises and dramatises the fact that Jesus Christ controls history.

Principle: regardless of the dispensation this verse emphasises the fact that Jesus Christ controls history. This also means that Jesus Christ in hypostatic union controls history in the Church Age, it means that Jesus Christ in hypostatic union controls history in the Tribulation, it means that Jesus Christ in hypostatic union controls history in the Millennium, He rules the world in the Millennium. So it is a source of comfort to us as believers that the power of our Lord Jesus Christ is infinitely greater than the power of any man or any angel. And this means that the trends of history should be a comfort to us now matter how disastrous at any given moment, for our Lord Jesus Christ is in control, He knows exactly what He is doing. This is the application of doctrine every believer must make in times of personal or national disaster. There is no place for doubting our Lord. Furthermore, pain and disaster is of our own making, the sum total of our volition combined with others. And since man is the product of his own volition and not his environment all disaster merely reflects bad decisions and man’s infinite capacity to inflict pain on himself apart from good decisions related to the grace of God and to the plan of God.

We resume with the expletive use of the conjunction kai, translated “And so.” With this is the imperfect active indicative of the verb klaiw, which means to weep. There are all kinds of reasons why people weep. Many of them are good; many of them are bad. Many of them relate to capacity for life, and some of them relate to frustration and failure in life. Weeping, therefore, is quite a subject as far as the Word of God is concerned. Weeping is never thinking, it belongs to the realm of emotion as far as the function of the soul is concerned. If emotions are in their proper sequence of thought and capacity for life then weeping is a very honourable and wonderful thing, but if not then weeping is exactly the opposite. As far as the Christian life is concerned weeping which is related to the divine dynasphere it is a wonderful thing. If weeping is related to the frustrations and the functions of the cosmic system then it is very detrimental and, as a matter of fact, even evil.

When it says here “I wept” it is in the iterative imperfect tense. It describes the action as recurring at successive intervals in past time. It is part of an idiom with the adjective poluj which follows and is correctly translated “I wept and wept” or “I cried and I cried.” A natural reaction on the part of the apostle John but totally unnecessary as a rational act. Weeping is the sign of emotion, not the function of the mind and John is overcome emotionally so that he cannot think, and of course he cannot go on. Emotions are great when they respond to thought but they are detrimental when they supersede thought. The pressure of writing the book of Revelation perhaps even exceeds learning it and interpreting it for teaching it as a part of the function of worship. The very fact that he broke down at this point is indicative of the fact that no one ever gets into the realm of angelology as a biblical subject without facing tremendous and unusual pressures. In the chapters to come we are going to see John unfolding the whole realm of the angelic conflict and, more than that, the exposure of the whole Satanic system.

The Tribulation is the ultimate in the manifestation of the angelic conflict as far as angelology is concerned. While demonism is certainly a trend of history today, in the future it is going to be unrestrained demonism and even an invasion of demons from the Abyss which, of course, is going to change the whole course of history. The very fact that we as believers, inferior in power and structure to angels, are able to carry on and to function in the devil’s world again is indicative of the importance of the power of the Word. Nothing is more important than doctrine.

So when John says, “I wept and I wept” or “I cried and I cried” he is actually speaking of his own failure, his own weakness here. The important thing to remember is that no one is perfect. The point is that the failures of the communicator are never an issue in this communication. The book of Revelation would have terminated in chapter four verse five had that been true. John would not have written the book of Revelation. But the very fact that rebound had occurred and the fact that he went on is a reminder once again that in your spiritual life you are dependant on those who have the gift of pastor-teacher and who also study and teach. They are not perfect, they are not to be put on a pedestal, they are not in that sense any better than anyone else, they have an old sin nature. But the content of the message you cannot afford to miss, and when you get the person and the message mixed up your spiritual life is over and you will accept every cheap substitute that Satan has to offer, and he has many.

The omission of liquid from the tear ducts is not really weeping but it is used to express sorrow, lamentation, even emotional stimulation and happiness. There is also frustration and pain so in the Bible weeping is found to express all of these and you must remember that weeping is never an expression of rational thinking, it is an expression of emotion. It is both good and bad.

Weeping as an expression of reversionism in the cosmic system is found in Numbers 14:1,2, it is the most evil category of weeping, "Then all the congregation lifted up their voices and cried, and the people wept all night. And all the sons of Israel grumbled against Moses," they blamed Moses for their own failure. They had been frightened by the reconnaissance report made by the twelve princes of Israel who went into the land of Canaan and checked it out. When they came back and reported about the giants and all of the things in the land the people became frightened and they blamed their own negative volition on Moses. So we have weeping as an expression of negative volition toward doctrine, as a malfunction of the faith-rest drill which requires thinking. This is the thinking of the cosmic system or the weeping of the cosmic system and as a result they always blame someone else. First they wept, then they blamed Moses. Moses was not to blame in any sense of the word.

Weeping is also an expression against reversionism in Philippians 3:18,19. Here we find the great apostle Paul weeping. John and Paul, two of the greatest of the apostles, we find weeping, and also the weeping of Peter when he betrayed our Lord, "he went out and wept bitterly," says Matthew 26. So there is weeping with all of the great believers of the New Testament. "For many keep walking, concerning whom I have told you many times, and now even weeping." Here is an aberration, as it were, on the part of Paul, at least just for a moment. The very fact that he was weeping was not compassion for those who were in the cosmic system, it was frustration. He was frustrated by the fact that here were these people who had been exposed to all of this Bible doctrine and yet it did not take in any sense of the word. Instead they went into the cosmic system — "I tell you, they are the enemies of the cross of Christ." Believers in the cosmic system have eternal life through faith in Jesus Christ. They have eternal security which they cannot lose but they are the enemies of the Lord Jesus Christ during the time that they are in the cosmic system. Their end is described as the sin unto death — "whose end is destruction, whose god is his emotion, whose glory is his dishonour, and when they think at all they think about earthly things."

Weeping because of the practice of reverse process reversionism, therefore, is again a great evil. The believer in James 5:1 was trapped in the cosmic system, "Come now you rich ones, weep and howl for your miseries which are coming upon you." What a terrible thing to spend your whole life putting all of your scale of values on money and putting it above doctrine, and as a result coming down to this end. Weeping is a part of the punishment. Why are these believers miserable? Because to them money and wealth and success was far more important than Bible doctrine.

In Hebrews 12:17 we also have the weeping of the unbeliever under the same frustration. "For you know that afterwards, even when he [Esau] kept desiring to inherit the blessing, he was rejected, for he did not find an opportunity for repentance [he didn't change his mind and believe in Christ], though having sought this blessing with tears," he thought he could impress God by crying but he could only impress God by believing in Christ, and this he refused to do. Instead of believing the Lord he used weeping as a substitute. God is never impressed with emotion. Emotion is a blessing that comes from good thought or bad thought but God is never impressed with it. Emotion simply impresses people who cannot think.

Then, of course, the type of weeping that simply reflects the bad decisions we make in life, the weeping of regret. 2 Samuel 14:23,24, "So Joab arose and went to Geshur, and brought Absalom to Jerusalem. However, the king said, 'Let him return to his own house, and let him not see my face.' So Absalom returned to his own house and did not see the king's face."

Later on, of course, David wept but he had made a bad decision. He had made a decision that was not a grace decision. Absalom later killed his step brother Amnon for raping his sister Tamar. David was guilty of a half forgiveness. He did not fulfil the principle found in Colossians 3:13, "Bearing with one another, and forgiving each other, whoever has a complaint against anyone; just as the Lord forgave you, so you also should forgive them." David didn't do this. So in 2 Samuel 14:28, "Now Absalom lived two full years in Jerusalem, and did not see the king's face." Then when Absalom finally died as a result of his revolution which all began with David's half forgiveness, verse 33. When the king saw Absalom's body he was deeply moved and he went to the room over the gate and he wept and wept, and he cried, "O my son Absalom, my son, my son, I wish that I had died instead of you." Here is weeping mixed with irrational statements of thought. Of all of the people who should not die it is David, he is a great king. Of all of the people who would die sooner or later it was Absalom in his arrogance, in his vanity. Yet we find here the weeping of great regret for David made terrible mistakes with Absalom, not merely the one of the half forgiveness but many other mistakes. In this case, again, his weeping is a negative virtue because it is regret of making so many bad decisions with regard to that person.

There is also a weeping and disaster which is negative: "Then David and the troops who were with him lifted up their voices and wept until there was no strength in them," that is, when they came back to their encampment at Ziklag, and David then describes in Psalm 42 how he felt: "My tears have been my food day and night." The weeping here is a case of where he made a mistake and now they all go back and cry about it.

In the Sennacherib invasion of Isaiah 36 the Assyrian army kept shouting at the Jews: "Where is your God?" And they responded by crying. They were afraid of the Assyrians and they said, "My tears have been my food day and night," the same concept.

The weeping can also be involved in other factors, like rebound, reversion recovery, Psalm 30:5 where David says, "His anger [divine discipline] is but for a moment resulting in a lifetime of great benefit; weeping may last for the night, but celebration happiness comes in the morning". In other words, the weeping of the terrible divine discipline, the pain that came from it, both spiritual pain of the soul and physical pain, is now changed to happiness.

Psalm 30:11, "You have converted my weeping into dancing; you have torn off my sackcloth and clothed me with your happiness." So weeping also can stop, and when one rebounds it gets back to a rational function in life.

There is also weeping which is the most tragic of all. When believers are jealous of other believers and living, therefore, obviously in the cosmic system, there is the weeping of sour grapes. In Ezra 3:12, 13, "Yet many of the priests and Levites, the old men who had seen the first temple, wept with a loud voice when before their eyes the foundations of the second temple was laid. At the same time many others were shouting for happiness so that the people [who were on the outside ready to attack at a future time and were making a reconnaissance] could not distinguish the sound of the shouts for happiness from the sound of the weeping of the people, for the people shouted with a loud shout to drown out the weepers, and the sound was heard far away." Someone suddenly realised that they were being observed by their enemies, the reconnaissance patrols that were hiding out in the hills, and so they said, "You have to shout louder so that they will not think that we have given up because of these cry-babies."

There is also the crying drunk. The weeping of drunks in a national disaster is found in the Bible.

Joel 1:5,6, "Wake up you drunks, and start crying again; wail, all of you wine drinkers, on account of the sweet wine that is cut off from your mouth. For the nation has been invaded by a mighty army without number; it has the teeth of a lion, and has the jaw teeth of a lioness."

In other words, once the people are deprived of their pleasures, of the things which are related to prosperity that eventuated in their decadence [although it doesn't have to], then they start to weep and to wail. Sooner or later a nation such as ours which moves into social degeneracy and economic depression through its own bad decisions, through the shrinkage of the pivot, through indifference to the Word of God on the part of believers, eventually there is the weeping and the wailing of the loss of the pleasures, the loss of the fun, the loss of everything that is associated with prosperity. It is an historical trend that one generation makes prosperity through their virtue, their greatness, through Bible doctrine, through the truth of the laws of divine establishment, through free enterprise and government non-interference.

The weeping of patriots in national disaster is not unusual either. Isaiah 22:3,4 — "All your rulers have fled together, they have been captured by the threat of weaponry [they surrendered because they were afraid of the bow]; all of you who were found were taken captive together, though they had not fled away. Therefore I say, 'Turn your eyes away from me, let me weep bitterly, do not try to comfort me concerning the destruction of the citizens of this great nation.' In other words, Isaiah was weeping because they didn't even resist. They wouldn't fight, they were draft dodgers, they were cowards, and they could have stopped the enemy, but they didn't. They gave up out of fear. Fear is still the greatest weapon in warfare.

In Jeremiah 9:1, "O that my head were waters, and my eyes a fountain of tears, that I may weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people." Later on Jeremiah wept for those who fought, and this is a legitimate weeping, this is honouring the honourable dead, those who fight for freedom. Whatever they were in life, by giving their lives on the battlefield they have become honourable and they represent the honour of the nation.

Lamentations 1:16, "For these things I weep; my eyes run down with water; because the comforter is far from me, the one who restores my soul; my young people in the country are desolate because the enemy has prevailed." This is the weeping of patriotism; this is an honourable weeping for a country that had been great through Bible doctrine and now has lost that greatness through cosmic involvement.

The weeping of bitterness is found among women as well. In 1 Samuel 1:10, speaking of Hannah, "She, bitter of soul, prayed to the Lord and wept bitterly." She was the object of scorn and derision because she had not had any children. In the time in which this was written it was considered to be a great disgrace. But she reacted to all of these people who were maligning her and ridiculing her, and she wept bitterly. In other words, she allowed what people thought, their criticism, their maligning, to overcome her.

The weeping of grief and sorrow is mentioned in many passages. In John 11:33 the honourable weeping of our Lord Jesus Christ: "Therefore when Jesus saw her [the sister of Lazarus] weeping, and the Jews who came with her, also weeping, he was deeply moved in his spirit, and was troubled." This is legitimate weeping for someone you love who has departed from this life. This is mourning; this is a part of sorrow; and it is legitimate. The same thing is found in 1 Thessalonians 4:13.

There is a weeping of judgment. Matthew 8:12, "But the sons of the kingdom shall be cast into outer darkness. In that place there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." This is a reference to Jews, called the sons of the kingdom because theirs is the client nation, the greatest client nation in history. Yet the very purpose for the client nation is to present the gospel and to teach doctrine. And they have rejected the gospel and therefore they were a client nation with the greatest opportunity for salvation and they rejected Christ as saviour, and therefore there will be weeping and the gnashing of teeth.

Matthew 25:30, "And cast out the worthless slave into the outer darkness; in that place there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." The worthless slave is Israel. Israel having been a client nation for so many hundreds of years and having been custodians of the Word of God, and having had the opportunity of great blessing from category #1 doctrine, free enterprise, and having heard the gospel time and time again, and having lived in the best environment for becoming a believer, they rejected Christ and therefore the tragedy: their weeping and gnashing of teeth.

Luke 13:28, "There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth when you see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and the prophets in the kingdom of God," same concept again. Many Jews will accept Christ as saviour. For those who do not there will be the weeping of total frustration for lost opportunity.

The weeping of the Lord Jesus Christ is also a very fascinating subject since there are several passages in the Word of God that discuss it. At the tomb of Lazarus, the weeping of bereavement; over the city of Jerusalem, the weeping of patriotism in Luke 19:41; at the cross, Hebrews 5:7.

There is also the cessation of weeping, Isaiah 30:18-20, "Therefore the Lord waits that he may be gracious to you, consequently he will lift himself to have compassion for you. For the Lord is a God of justice; happiness to those who wait on him [trust him]. For a people shall dwell in Zion [Jerusalem], as for weeping you shall stop weeping," once the Jews are restored as a client nation to God they will never again weep, "As for grace, he will give you grace; at the sound of your cry, when he hears it he will answer you. Although the Lord has given you the bread of privation [Israel lost out as a client nation] and the water of oppression, Yet your Teacher will not hide himself any longer, for your eyes shall be looking on your Teacher."

Then, of course, in eternity when the believer is absent from the body and face to face with the Lord, Revelation 21:4, "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away." Two things will never exist for the believer in eternity: pain and crying. No believer will ever cry in the eternal state. There is regret, there is ashamedness, there is embarrassment at the judgment seat of Christ, but no more crying and no more tears.

Our passage, then, says: "And so I wept and I wept," and now he gives us the reason. The causal use of the conjunction o(ti, "because." Then the nominative singular subject, o)udeij, "no one." The verb is the aorist passive indicative of e(uriskw, no one "was found." The culminative aorist tense views the event in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. Neither angel nor human was found who has the right or the worthiness to open the book of historical trends of the Tribulation. The passive voice: the subject no one refers to man and angels, they receive the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the doctrine that Jesus Christ controls history and only our Lord, of course, can break it open. Now John knows this but he has forgotten it temporarily.

One of the greatest aberrations among believers is to forget a doctrine just when you need it. The reason for this is fear or something similar because fear destroys the ability to think. In fact fear is defined as lack of thinking. Once fear comes in then emotion takes over, and that is why John wept. He was weeping for all of the wrong reasons. His emotions were temporarily out of control. He was weeping because no one was found and yet he already knows that Jesus Christ controls history. The declarative indicative mood is for the reality of the doctrine that Jesus Christ controls history. The ellipsis demands the relative pronoun o(j and the imperfect of e)imi, "who was" is the way it is translated. Ellipsis is used here to reflect the emotional condition of the writer and therefore things are left out which are obvious and can be included. And then we have the predicate nominative from the adjective acioj, “worthy,” “who was worthy.”

Then the aorist active infinitive of the verb a)noigw which means to break open or to open the seals. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: neither angel nor human being could produce the action and this is a reminder of the fact that creatures inevitably do not control history. It is God who controls history and it is now the God-Man, the Lord Jesus Christ. The infinitive of intended result combines result and purpose into one concept — the failure of any creature, both angelic and human, fulfils a deliberate objective, the divine objective of the vision. Only Jesus Christ is qualified to break the seals.

We have finally the accusative singular direct object from the word biblion, “the book,” the Doomsday book. In contrast to the Church Age historical trends in the Tribulation are determined by prophecy. Behind each one of these seven seals is a prophecy regarding the trends of the Tribulation.

Then he says, “or to see it,” the present active infinitive of the verb blepw, meaning to see. No one was able to look at it, to see it. The futuristic present denotes an event which is eschatological, a vision which has not yet occurred in heaven because the Rapture or the termination of the Church Age has not yet occurred. But this prophecy is regarded as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as already occurring, therefore the futuristic present. Neither angelic creature nor homo sapien can produce the action, says the active voice, and that is because historical trends are determined by Jesus Christ. The infinitive: the intended result is when the result indicates the fulfilling of a deliberate objective on the part of God. Finally, the accusative neuter singular of autos which is correctly translated “it.”

Translation: “And so I wept and I wept, because no one was found [neither human nor angelic creature] who was worthy to open the book [the Doomsday book with its seven seals denoting prophetically historical trends in the Tribulation] or to see it [view its contents].”

There is another phrase in the King James version, “and to read the book,” which is not found in the original manuscript.

Once our Lord Jesus Christ breaks those seals in heaven and John through the ministry of God the Holy Spirit records the content in Revelation chapters six through eighteen, then there will be great accuracy and anyone will be able to exegete it who understands the eschatology of the Old Testament.

Man has within him not only the old sin nature but certain very self-destructive principles. In order to protect all of us from these self-destructive principles we have been given under the laws of divine establishment category #1 truth, the principle of the sacredness of life and privacy as the basis for human freedom for everyone. And then as believers we have been given a royal family honour code that adds many principles to this — the avoidance of gossip or maligning or judging, or anything that would be detrimental to the privacy of someone else. The reason for this is obvious: none of us are perfect; all of us have an old sin nature; all of us have manifestations of that sin nature. Therefore in the time in which we live, the Church Age, one of the most evil of all categories is not a demon category but a category of born-again believer who under the principle of arrogance and self-righteousness and the modus operandi of crusader arrogance are trying to reform and change everyone under the principle that they are perfect and that everyone should be like they are. This is the most evil system of morality. The worst evil of all time is the morality of the believer in the cosmic system because instead of being linked to the filling of the Spirit where it is a fantastic gracious function it is linked to the cosmic system and Satan where it becomes arrogance and a tremendous evil. With so many born-again believers entering into the cosmic system and taking their morality and their reform along with them, and adding to it their arrogance as a motivating factor, it provides the most awful kind of society.

In verses 5-7, in observing the seventh thing in heaven, we note that Jesus Christ controls history after His first advent and in His hypostatic union. As we resume we see the worthiness of our Lord Jesus Christ to continue to control history.

In verse 5 we start with the usual conjunction kai. This conjunction not only has eight very definite grammatical uses but possibly as many as ten other ones. The fact that it is constantly translated “and” sometimes detracts. Often there is a sequential kai, which we have here, and it perpetuates a sequence of events and we translate it “then.” Then we have the nominative numeral for “one” which is e(ij). This refers to one spokesman. Note that there are twenty-four general staff members in the angelic group but only one of them is the spokesman at this time. We do not know the exact reason for it we just simply know that this is the situation.

In going back for a moment to the order of rank of angels there are two categories and we need to perhaps add a few things in anticipation of what we will be studying. In the college of heralds the order of battle is: No 1, our Lord Jesus Christ who is not an angel but commands the college of heralds. He is Malak Adonai, the Angel of the Lord, and as such He is the head of the college of heralds.

There are four categories of our Lord’s appearances in history. There is the theophany which is the appearance of our Lord before the first advent. It includes the appearance as the messenger of God the Father and as number one in the college of heralds. His appearances during and after the incarnation or the first advent are simply called the incarnation. Our Lord appears at that time in hypostatic union, a unique personality composed of two natures and the characteristics of each nature never bleed over or overflow into the other, He is truly God and truly humanity in one person forever. After His resurrection there were appearances to human beings and that is called Christophany — post-resurrection appearances of our Lord in His hypostatic union. The second advent is the return of Christ in His hypostatic union to supersede Satan, the coup de tat that will make Him the ruler of this world.

Angel of the Lord [Jehovah] refers to our Lord Jesus Christ as an Old Testament theophany which ranks Him above everyone else in the college of heralds. As the Angel of the Lord He is also identified as God.

Number two in the college of heralds are called the seraphim. These are the highest of the angelic order, they have six wings as their insignia of rank. Most angels do not have wings. There are two categories of seraphs in the college of heralds. We have just noted one in Revelation 5:2, the powerful angel who ranks as a king or officer of arms. Under him are the angelic heralds who are also seraphim and they are the four living creatures of Revelation four, verses 6-8.

Number three are the pur sui vant officers who all have four wings and are called cherubs. They are famous for their four wings as their insignia of rank. Just as there are officers in the pur sui vant category in the English college of heralds, so in the angelic college of heralds. The pur sui vant officers in the angelic college include the cherubs who guard the gates of Eden, the four cherubs of the chariot of fire in Ezekiel 1 and 10; Satan or Lucifer son of the morning in Ezekiel 28:14; the messenger of judgment in 2 Samuel 22:11, mentioned also in Psalm 18:10. They are pur sui vant officers.

Number four in the angelic college are the pur sui vant messengers. They are elect angels in the college of heralds, without wings, therefore without rank, but they do have special classification. For example, the angelic messengers who, destroyed Sodom were pur sui vant.

Next in verse 5 we have r(iza David, “the Root of David.” Isaiah 11:1 gives us this first royal title. The root of David refers to our Lord Jesus Christ with His first royal patent. In eternity past our Lord had His first royal patent as the Root of David. As the Root of David, in the Greek text, r(iza, Jesus Christ is God. The Root of David is the title of our Lord Jesus Christ in His deity. At the point of the virgin birth He received His second royal patent, He is the Lion of the tribe of Judah or the Son of David. These two royal titles, of course, are connected with Israel. God’s plan for the human race and God’s plan to resolve the angelic conflict puts Israel in a major role. As a client nation to God, as the recipient of the unconditional covenants, as the Son of David — in the virgin birth our Lord Jesus Christ is descended from David and Bathsheba. So as the Root of David our Lord Jesus Christ has His first royal patent as Son of God; Son of David, His second royal patent. This is mentioned to indicate the hypostatic union which is the basis of fulfilling all unconditional covenants to Israel at the second advent.

This is the subject of Isaiah 11:1, “A root will come up from the stump of Jesse, from his roots [Christ as eternal God] a branch [Christ in hypostatic union] will bear fruit [second advent].”

Isaiah 11:10, “In that day [the second advent and the Millennium] the root of Jesse will stand as a banner for the nations, the nations will rally to him and his place of rest will be glorious.”

It is this particular chapter that gives us the basis for this particular phrase, “the root of David.” This is the title of our Lord Jesus Christ as eternal God and as eternal God Jesus Christ is the founder of the Jewish race. He is not only the founder of the Jewish race as eternal God and the God of Israel, but as the Son of David He will deliver the Jewish race at the second advent.

We now have to have a subject to go with the verb, which is nikaw, the aorist active indicative, and it means to be victorious, to win, to overcome, and we will translate it “has won the victory.”

“Look here, the Lion from the tribe of Judah [our Lord’s second patent], the Root of David [our Lord’s first royal patent as eternal God, the two together make the hypostatic union], has won the victory.” The culminative aorist tense views the strategic victory of the first advent of Christ in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. In this context Christ is qualified to open the Doomsday book to break to seven seals which denote the seven general characteristics and trends of the Tribulation. This emphasises, of course, the fact that Jesus Christ controls history. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb through His strategic victory of the first advent. The declarative indicative mood is for a dogmatic statement of Bible doctrine.

With this we have the aorist active infinitive of the verb a)noigw which means here to begin to open because of the ingressive aorist tense. It contemplates the action of the verb at its beginning. Jesus Christ, again, produces the action. This is an infinitive, the infinitive of intended result which blends purpose and result in one concept. In other words, a deliberate aim or object is being fulfilled. With this the accusative direct object from biblion, “he has won the victory and is qualified to begin opening the book”. And then a connective conjunction “and,” and the possessive genitive from the intensive pronoun a)utoj, “its.” Then we have the phrase “seven seals.”

Translation of verse 5 — “Then one of the angelic staff officers commanded me, Stop crying: look here, the Lion from the tribe of Judah [title of our Lord’s second royal patent], the Root of David [title of our Lord’s first royal patent], has won the victory and is qualified to begin opening the Doomsday book and break its seven seals.”

This, again, is a reference to the historical trends of the Tribulation which are based on prophecy. Only the Church Age, the dispensation of no prophecy, is the exception. All historical trends throughout history are developed through eschatology or prophecy, except in the Church Age. Jesus Christ is qualified therefore to open the Doomsday book and to break these seals as an emphasis on the principle that Jesus Christ controls history. The concept, of course, is the worthiness of our Lord to open the Doomsday book and to break the seals. As eternal God and founder of the Jewish race, as well as client nation Israel, Jesus Christ is the Root of David. As the God-Man in hypostatic union Christ received His second royal patent at the point of the virgin birth: the Lion of the tribe of Judah. Both royal patents combine to present our Lord as the one who perpetuates historical trends, He controls history as the God-Man. He is therefore qualified to open these seals. It is important for us to make the application that the one who controls history now will always control history. No matter how difficult things become circumstantially our Lord will take care of those who are inside the divine dynasphere which is the wall of fire.

It is only after the strategic victory was achieved at the cross and culminated in resurrection, ascension and session, that Jesus Christ received His third royal patent, the one which we have been studying in chapters two and three. When our Lord received His third royal patent it became necessary to insert a mystery dispensation, a dispensation with no prophecy, into history. That is exactly what we have in the concept of intercalation which came from the third royal patent. First royal patent: in eternity past Jesus Christ is eternal God; second royal patent: first advent, Jesus Christ is the Son of David; third royal patent: when Jesus Christ ascended, concluding, of course, the first advent, the incarnation. This was the first time our Lord was minus a royal family to go with that royal patent. The royal family under the first patent: God the Father, God the Holy Spirit; the royal family under the second is the dynasty of David; the royal family, He didn't have one. He was King of kings and Lord of lords, He was the bright morning star, but He had no royal family. Therefore instead of going right to the second advent and fulfilling the unconditional covenants to Israel there is first of all the insertion of an age to call out the royal family, the dispensation of the Church or the royal family. Then He owes one more period of seven years, called "Daniel's seventieth week," to Israel before the second advent. This, of course, is the Tribulation.

Intercalation, a word introduced into theology by Dr L.S. Chafer, is the key to understanding the mystery concept of the Church Age. It means insertion. The Jewish dispensation had seven years to run when our Lord received His third royal patent. It was interrupted by the strategic victory of Christ and the issuing of His third royal patent. So a new dispensation had to be inserted before time could continue for Israel. Intercalation also is the intensification of the angelic conflict. The Church Age is the dispensation of the mystery. This is taught in Romans 16:25,26; Ephesians 3:1-6; Colossians 1:25,26. Doctrines pertaining to the Church Age are never found in the Old Testament. In all of the Old Testament dispensations, there are four of them, historical trends are based on the same thing, prophecy. There was no prophecy of the Church Age because the Church Age could not have prophecy. The Church Age is the dispensation of historical trends based on the volition of the individual believer. It is the dispensation of intercalation; it is the dispensation of the mystery. There is no prophecy during the Church Age. The Church Age is terminated with a prophecy — the Rapture. The first mention that there would be an intercalation came from our Lord Jesus Christ when He said: "On this rock I will build my church," future active indicative of the verb ojikodomew, which means it was a future tense, it had not occurred as yet. The rock, of course, was the Lord Jesus Christ, not Peter. Peter is petroj, he is a little chip in the stone. Petra is the rock on which the Church is built, a large mountain, a large rock. The rock, of course, is the baptism of the Holy Spirit by which the royal family of God is formed. Christ is the rock, Christ is the petra on the which the Church, i.e. the royal family, is built. And it is a dispensation in which God changes His policy only once to allow the royal family to determine the historical trends in this dispensation.

So what happens in this dispensation is your decision, your decision to live in the divine dynasphere as over against your decision to live in the cosmic system. As goes the believer so goes this dispensation of no prophecy. It is the dispensation of intercalation; it is the dispensation of the mystery. The mystery is defined as a period of no prophecy to anticipate it, absolutely unknown to the Old Testament saints, according to Ephesians 3:1-6; Colossians 1:25,26. Doctrines pertinent to the Church are intercalated, they are inserted by the New Testament epistles. This means that every time there was a chronological prophecy or a prophecy that might include the Church Age there was a parenthesis between the verses that dealt with it. For example, the great parenthesis occurs between Daniel 2:40, 41. Daniel 2:40 takes us up to the break-off of the Jewish Age, the dispensation of Israel after the ascension. Then verse 41 resumes again in the Tribulation. The same thing is true in Daniel 7:23. It takes us right up to the point where the Church Age would begin; verse 24 jumps right over to the Tribulation. This is also true between Daniel 8:22 and 8:23. Daniel 11:35 takes us right up to the Church Age, and then the mystery; 11:36 starts right into the Tribulation. Hosea 3:4 takes us right up to the Church Age and stops, and then verse 5 starts in with the Tribulation. The same thing is true in Psalm 22 between verses 22 and 23. In one case, Isaiah 61, in the middle of verse 2 you come right up to the Church Age, nothing is mentioned about it, and in the rest of verse 2 you jump right over to the Tribulation. The Old Testament reveals doctrine up through the session of our Lord Jesus Christ. Our Lord's ascension and session are mentioned on the Old Testament prophecies. They take us right up to where He ascended and they tell us how He was seated at the right hand of the Father. Then, all of a sudden, it goes from there right into the Tribulation. So it skips over. There is no Church Age doctrine between the baptism of the Spirit and the Rapture revealed in the Old Testament. That is what mystery means.

Verse 6, the strategic victory by which Jesus Christ controls history. We begin by noting again the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated "Then." We continue with the aorist active indicative of the verb o(raw, "Then I saw." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. Everything that John sees in this particular passage will have a frame of reference somewhere in Old Testament prophecy, like the seven horns which we will note shortly. The active voice: the apostle John as the human writer produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the vision of the strategic victory of our Lord Jesus Christ in the first advent. The first and second advents were both prophesied in the Old Testament. The Old Testament talks about the first advent and anticipates it in detail. Also, the Old Testament anticipates the second advent. It also prophesies what happens on each side of the second advent, the Tribulation, the Millennial reign of Christ. The last part of the book of Isaiah has six chapters on the Millennial reign of our Lord Jesus Christ. The only thing that is not prophesied is the Church Age, the dispensation of no prophecy. So what John is seeing here has to do with the strategic victory that brought about that Church Age. So we have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, followed by the aorist active indicative o(raw, "then I saw." And that declarative indicative mood is very important for the reality of the vision of the strategic victory of Christ resulting in the fact that Jesus Christ controls history as a member of the human race, as the God-Man. That is a phenomenon because angels are created much greater than man and now a member of the human race is actually controlling all of history.

In His humanity He is recognised as above the angels. This broke Satan's back at the ascension.

The phrase "and lo" does not occur in the original. We move on then to the prepositional phrase e)n plus the locative of mesoj and qronoj, "in the middle of a throne." This is the throne room of heaven where God the Father and God the Son are seated. This is a large throne. "Then I saw in the middle of the throne." Next we have the four living creatures or the four angelic heralds. The connective kai adds a second description. We have the numeral tessarej, "four," and then zoion, "living creatures." Corrected translation: "I saw in the middle of the throne with the four angelic heralds [living creatures] and in the middle of the angelic staff officers." We have the repetition of mesoj [middle] and this time we have presbuteroj for the angelic staff officers. So once again the angelic order of battle comes into focus.

We don't even have an object yet of the verb "then I saw." All we know is where he saw. Once again remember the order of rank in the college of heralds. Number one: our Lord Jesus Christ as the Angel of the Lord [Jehovah]. This is a theophany and it ranks Christ above the college of heralds without being an angel Himself. Number two are the seraphim. There are two categories. We have seen in Revelation 5:2 the "powerful angel." We will see one other in this particular category and these rank as the kings of arms or officers of arms. Secondly there are the four angelic heralds who are mentioned as being in the middle of the throne. Number three are the cherubim. Satan was a cherub and was lower than at least six angels who outranked him in eternity past called seraphim or seraphs, and number three, then, are the pur sui vant officers. Their insignia of rank are four wings. They are comparable to the college of heralds in England where there are four officers. The pur sui vant officers, four of them, include the following: the cherubs who guard the gate of Eden in Genesis 3:24; the four cherubs, one at each of the four wheels of the chariot of fire in Ezekiel chapters one and ten; Satan or Lucifer son of the morning, mentioned in Ezekiel 28:14, who has been court-martialled and is not present any longer; and the messenger of the judgment, 2 Samuel 22:11; Psalm 18:10. Number four are the pur sui vant messengers and we will see a great many of them throughout the book of Revelation. They are classified, as most angels, without wings. There are very few angels that have wings, only high-ranking officers. The angelic messengers who destroyed Sodom are two of the pur sui vant, Genesis 19:13; the executioners of the evil people of Jerusalem in Ezekiel 9:1ff; the man clothed in linen in Ezekiel 10:6; the four angels who hold back the four winds in Revelation 7:1; and the messenger from the east in Revelation 7:1.

The order of battle in the army: Number one is the Lord of hosts [Lord of the armies], our Lord Jesus Christ; number two: the archangels or army commanders, two mentioned in the Bible: Michael and Gabriel; two mentioned in the book of Enoch: Raphiel and Uriel. Michael commands a special army, the army of angels that guards Israel. Israel is under constant protection, believer and unbeliever, because of the covenants. He is called the prince of Israel in Daniel 10:21. In the past Michael fought with Satan over the body of Moses, according to 2 Peter 2:11; he defends Israel in the Tribulation according to one Old Testament prophecy and one New Testament prophecy, Daniel 1:21. Gabriel is a most unusual angel in that he is an archangel, an army commander, but he is also an officer of arms in the college of heralds. We have noted in the past that he is a very special messenger to teach very special doctrine, as in Daniel 8:16 and 9:21. He was also sent to Zachariah to announce the birth of John the Baptist, he was sent to the virgin Mary to announce the birth of the Messiah, Luke 1:19,26, and in the book of Enoch, chapters 9, 20 and 40 Gabriel is said to be the chief of angels placed over all those who have power or authority. Number three is the one in our context, the angelic general staff, the 24 elders. Number four: the rank and file call "hosts." This would include guardian angels such as in Psalm 91:11, the river of fire battalions in Daniel 7:10, the angelic armies described in Psalm 103:21 and Psalm 148:2 who spend a great deal of time offering praise to the Lord in worship. When a pur sui vant angel announces to the shepherds the birth of our Lord Jesus Christ he is suddenly joined by heavenly armies praising God, Luke 2:13. The ministering spirits of Hebrews 1:14 are included as a part of the angelic army.

The problem here is that we have something missing. "Then I saw," it says in verse 6, "in the middle of the throne with the four angelic heralds, and in the middle of the angelic staff officers." The trouble is that in the Greek the words are in a different position than in an English sentence and it doesn't tell us what we saw until we get almost through the verse. Now we have the inserted accusative a)rnion e)sthkoj o(j e)sfagmenon. This is quite a lengthy accusative. The actual accusative singular direct object is from the noun a)rnion and immediately we have a problem with a)rnion because we have generations of idiots who stand in pulpits and do not know the Greek. A)rnion is the direct object of "I saw." A)rnion is considered and has been taught as being a diminutive of a)rnen, the word for sheep. It isn't true; it is not a diminutive. In the Koine Greek of the New Testament a)rnion is a male sheep, a ram. When John called Jesus the Lamb of God in John 1:29 he used a different word altogether, he used a)mnoj. The same in John 1:36. When he emphasises the saving work of Christ on the cross John always uses a)mnoj and this is true in consistency with the writer of the book of Acts, Acts 8:32; 1 Peter 1:19. Whenever the saving work of Christ is related to the cross it is "Behold the Lamb of God", or it talks about the Lamb of God. And while our Lord is the Lamb of God we have a different word here. It is still talking about the cross but with an entirely different emphasis. Here it is not the Lamb of God but the Ram of God, a)rnion, which emphasises our Lord's saving work on the cross but it adds something, namely the strategic victory of our Lord Jesus Christ or the fact that Jesus Christ now controls history. And how did our Lord come to control history? The same way that anyone with ability, anyone with talent, ever becomes successful, through humility. The same way that people become great in friendship, in love, in honour, in integrity. The secret is humility. The ram speaks of our Lord's humility in going to the cross and bearing our sins. He humbled Himself and became obedient unto death. So when John talks about the Lamb of God who takes away the sins of the world he uses a)mnoj, "became obedient unto death," says Philipians 2, but when he talks about the humility it took then he talks about a)rnion, and that is the word we have here. The same person, the apostle John who wrote the gospel of John, is the one who wrote a)rnion here instead of a)mnoj.

Our Lord is the most successful human being who ever came to this earth, and the reason is because humility precedes success. Humility is the basis of integrity, the capacity for love, for happiness, for blessing, for anything in life that is worthwhile. We happen to live in a time when the mode of the day is arrogance. People can't even learn doctrine because they are arrogant, they can't be consistent, they are preoccupied with self. Arrogance is the life of the average believer today and it is related to the various gates of interlocking systems of arrogance.

Translation: "Then I saw a ram [a)rnion, not a)mnoj]". The direct object a)rnion is used to emphasise our Lord's strategic victory of the cross, and the strategic victory of the cross has a base: humility. Even when our Lord did not want to go to the cross and did not want to bear our sins in His humanity He said: "Father, if be thy will let this cup pass from me. Nevertheless [enforced humility] not my will but thine be done." And then it was followed by genuine humility. He humbled Himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross.

Arrogance is still Satan's basic and greatest principle. He had a great personality but he wasn't the highest ranking of all angels. There were at least six angels who were higher in rank than he was. At one time there were five who were in the midst of the throne — angelic heralds. Note that there are only four now. Again, Satan has been court-martialled.

"Then I saw a ram standing in the middle of the throne with the four angelic heralds, and in the middle of the four angelic staff officers [the 24 elders, the third highest rank in the army of elect angels]." So, notice again, the angelic heralds and the elect army of angels are always represented. And our Lord is said to be with them as the ram. The Lamb of the cross who now, because of His strategic victory, we are going to see as the Ram of the seven horns. With His third royal patent and His strategic victory of the angelic conflict from His first advent our Lord Jesus Christ is worthy to break the seals of the Doomsday book and present in eschatological form the historical trends of the Tribulation. But we have to finish out everything that goes with that direct object. The Ram is said to be doing something, an ascriptive participle which is a present active participle from i(stemi, translated "standing." We are going to find the Ram standing in the middle of the throne but before we do we have some descriptive words that go with this Ram. The comparative particle o(j introduces a descriptive phrase which is important, and we have to understand it before we can get to the seven horns. "As" is the general way in which this is translated. It introduces a characteristic or quality of the unique person of the Lord Jesus Christ. When o(j is used with the participle it provides an explanation of a certain quality or characteristic. Here the characteristic is the strategic victory of the cross.

With this we have the perfect passive participle of the Attic verb sfattw. The trouble is that in the time in which this was written the Romans were no longer an aristocratic people, they had allowed all the scum to come in from everywhere and they couldn't even pronounce sfattw. So that is why we have the Koine Greek, why the magnificent Attic, Ionian and Aolic Greek, the three which formed Classical Greek. The Attic Greek was the Greek of Athens, the colonies across the way in western Turkey, Ionian, spoke an even higher class of Greek and then, north of them in what is now western Turkey was Aolia, and the three of them put together the greatest of all Greek. So the Romans couldn't speak that way, it was too much for them, so they have to change all this and get down to a gutter language, sqazw, which means to kill, to butcher, to slaughter as one who has been killed as a sacrifice. The perfect tense is a consummative perfect, it notes the completed action of eternal salvation provided at the cross but it emphasises, not redemption, reconciliation, and propitiation by which we have our so great salvation, but what they produce. That is why it is in the perfect tense. The perfect tense emphasises a completed action and the existing results, the fact that Jesus Christ controls history as the God-Man. Jesus Christ controlled history as eternal God, but what happened when he became true humanity? He continues to control history. The passive voice: Jesus Christ receives the action of the verb as the Lamb or the Ram of God. Jesus Christ was judged for our sins as the Lamb of God, now He is the Ram with seven horns, He has won the greatest victory of all time. The participle is circumstantial referring to the strategic victory of the cross and its relationship to the fact that Jesus Christ continues to control history and is worthy to open the Doomsday book.

Now we get to it: e)xwn kerata e(pta kai. Then it also adds the seven eyes, but first we have the horns, “and he had” a present active participle from e)xw but because it is a circumstantial participle it is translated like a finite verb preceded by “and,” “and he had.” The present tense of duration a descriptive present. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action and the participle is circumstantial which expresses attendant circumstances and additional fact or thought which is best rendered in the English by the conjunction “and” plus the finite translation of the verb. E(pta plus keraj, and we have now cleared the decks for action, “seven horns.” What do the horns mean? A ram has, at best, two horns in all the sheep we see. But here is a special one, e(pta, seven horns. Horns, of course, symbolise human power and authority. In Daniel 7:7 we have the ten horns which are the ten nations of the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation. In Daniel 8:20,21 we have a ram with two horns which is the Median-Persian empire [one horn represents the Medes, one horn represents the Persians]. They represent great power in history: power to control, power to handle people, power to provide for people. In Amos 6:13 arrogant Israel boasts of a conquest of all other nations which are called “horns.” In Jeremiah 48:25 the horn of Moab was the power of that nation to control the area in which they lived. In Revelation 13:1 we will study ten horns which are ten nations of the revived Roman empire. In Daniel 7 there is the little horn, the dictator that finally overcomes all of western Europe and controls it in the Tribulation. This is the dictator of the beast out of the sea which we will study in detail in Revelation 13. In Revelation 17:12 the ten horns there refer to the nations of the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation and, again, from them comes the little horn of Daniel 7. In Zechariah 1:18, 19 there are other horns, each one representing a tremendous power.

For example, the first one is the Assyrian empire which in BC 721 administered the 5th cycle of discipline to the northern kingdom of Israel.

The second horn in Zechariah 1:18, 19 is the Chaldean empire which administered both the 4th and the 5th cycles of discipline to the southern kingdom. In 606 BC, after the battle of Carchemish and the defeat of Pharaoh Necho, “Woe unto those who go down to Egypt for help,” the Chaldeans took Daniel and others into captivity, Daniel 1:1. So the second horn represents that great victory. Then in BC 598 Nebuchanezzar took more hostages, including Ezekiel, and that represents the function of the second horn. In BC 586

Nebuchadnezzar administered the 5th cycle of discipline to the Jews, the destruction of Jerusalem. The Medes and the Persians eventually restored them.

The third horn is the Hellenistic empire of the Seleucids, known as Syria, and the Ptolomies under Egypt.

The fourth horn is the Roman empire which administered the 5th cycle of discipline for the last time to Israel in AD 70, until of course, we come to the great period in the future when Israel will be revived again as a client nation.

All of these are horns. Horns describe nations as having great power. Horns are used for dictators. Horns represent the power of individuals and the power of groups but a power which can never exceed the power of our Lord Jesus Christ who humbled Himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross.

Ephesians 3:1-5 begins our explanation in Revelation chapter five. "For this reason I, Paul, the prisoner of Christ Jesus on behalf of you, the Gentiles — if you have heard of the dispensation of the grace of God which was given to me for your benefit; that by revelation [divine disclosure] the mystery [the historical trends of the Church Age] was revealed to me just as I have previously written in brief. Face to face with which doctrine of the mystery [historical trends of the Church Age] when you exegete [addressed to pastors], you ought to be able to understand by categorical knowledge into the mystery of the Christ [that is, Christ and the royal family of God], which in other dispensations was not revealed to men of other generations, so that now it has been revealed to his holy apostles and prophets by means of the Holy Spirit."

Colossians 1:25-29, "Of which dispensation of the Church I have become a minister [says Paul] according to this dispensation from God which was given to me for your benefit, that I might implement your deficiency of Bible doctrine, that is, the mystery which has been hidden from past ages and other generations; but has now been revealed to his saints [the royal family, Church Age believers], to whom God has decreed to make known what is the prosperity of the glory of the mystery among the Gentiles, which is Christ in you, the hope of glory [the third hope, the hope of eternal reward. Which we solemnly proclaim, warning every man and teaching every man in all wisdom, that we might present [at the judgment seat of Christ] every man a mature believer in Christ. For this purpose I also labour to the point of exhaustion, competing according to his [God's] game plan, which is effective in me inside the divine dynasphere."

Both of these passages take note of the fact that God has divided all human history into eras, and these historical eras are called dispensations or ages, periods of time divided according to the Word of God along the principles of trends. The first of these dispensations is the era of positive volition which began with the creation of mankind and takes us to his fall. In other words, the first dispensation involved two people in the perfect environment of the garden of Eden. Mankind was in perfect environment with only a volitional test as a part of the angelic conflict. He was forbidden to eat from one tree. Incidentally Satan attacked volition in the garden. This dispensation terminated with the fall of man. It was demonstrated at the very beginning of history that even perfect environment [ideal circumstances] is not the answer to man's problems and definitely not the contributing basis for happiness, and that man can be just as unhappy and just as dissatisfied and miserable in perfect environment as in any other environment.

The second dispensation is the era of negative volition. It starts with the fall of man and it goes to the tower of Babel. This might be called the dispensation of internationalism and it dramatises man's old sin nature. Internationalism is a total failure, it never has been successful and never will, and it was demonstrated as such in the second dispensation. Whether we are talking about the United Nations or the League of Nations or ecumenicalism, or a political or religious system of internationalism, none of them have ever been successful, none of them have ever been satisfactory and, above all, none of them have ever produced happiness. Internationalism is a total failure. In the case of the tower of Babel it meant one language, one race, one skin colour, and it did not solve man's problems. Of course the environment of internationalism never has and never will. No written canon of scripture existed at that time and God revealed Himself and the doctrine necessary. Salvation in every dispensation is always the same: faith in Christ. In the era of negative volition Satan attacked, as always, marriage and the family. This, of course, is Genesis six. The tower of Babel was the Satanic attack also against the anticipation of nationalism in the next dispensation, the story of Genesis 11:1-9. The next era, the third one, we call the era of divine establishment, the era or dispensation of nationalism. It began with the destruction of the tower of Babel around 5000 BC and it goes to the establishment of the first client nation in BC 1441. There is always in dispensations a certain amount of overlap. That is true in any historical era. But the key is to distinguish between Jews and Gentiles at this point. There were three basic races with many subdivisions in the dispensation of divine establishment. There were, of course, many languages forcing people to divide into tribes and into nations.

Number four is the era of the first client nation, the dispensation of Israel. It is divided into basically the two parts. The first part is the formation of the Jewish race, from Abraham to Moses, or from BC 2161 to BC 1441. Abraham was the father of the Jewish race. The second part is the function of the Jewish client nation and this goes from Moses to Christ, BC 1441 to AD 70. In this period the laws of divine establishment are defined by the Mosaic law — Codex #1 which is the freedom code, the ten commandments, and Codex #3 which gave the details of establishment modus operandi. There were three administrations of the fifth cycle of discipline to the first client nation. The first in BC 721 to the northern kingdom. It was administered by the Assyrians. The second was in BC 586 and was administered by the Chaldeans to the southern kingdom. And the last one was AD 70 which was administered by the Romans to the kingdom of Judea. Nevertheless, in spite of these three destructions of Israel as a client nation Israel still has a future guaranteed by the four unconditional covenants, the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic and New Covenants to Israel, which will all be fulfilled at the second advent and in the Millennium. Again, in this dispensation salvation was through faith in Jesus Christ, spirituality was the function of the faith-rest drill.

The fifth era is called the era of the royal family of God, the dispensation of the Church, or the times of the Gentiles. It is the dispensation of intercalation, meaning insertion. The strategic victory of Christ on the cross and the award of His third royal patent brought to a temporary halt the Age of Israel. It resulted in the insertion of the mystery age to provide a royal family for our Lord's third royal patent. In every case there must be a royal family which goes with the patent of royalty. The first royal patent: Jesus Christ is God — title, Son of God; royal family, the Father and the Spirit. The second royal patent: title, Son of David with the royal family, the dynasty of David. The third royal patent: title, King of kings and Lord of lords, bright morning star, but no royal family. Therefore the Age of Israel came to a halt. The Church, of course, is the calling out of the royal family of God. As the mystery age, according to Romans 16:25, 26 and the two passages we have just noted, the Church dispensation is an era of not prophecy. All historical trends are determined by the volition of the believer. It is therefore unique and different from all historical ages. Historical trends of prosperity result from good decisions on the part of believers to live, reside, function in the divine dynasphere. All bad decisions result in historical downtrends. Bad decisions are classified as any decision to spend time in the cosmic system.

The Church Age, then, as a mystery dispensation is the period of the great parenthesis. Throughout the Old Testament there are many places where the Church Age could have been prophesied but was not. No Church Age doctrine was revealed in the Old Testament or prophecy concerning historical trends of the Church Age. The Old Testament reveals all the details of the first advent or the incarnation, including our Lord's death, burial, resurrection, ascension and session, and then skips over to the Tribulation. This is the great parenthesis, there is no Church Age truth revealed in the Old testament. The Church Age is divided categorically in two ways. There is the concept of pre and post-canon periods of the Church Age. That is the first category. The pre-canon period starts in AD 30 and goes to AD 96. Then we have the post-canon period. The pre-canon period has certain things that the post-canon period does not. For example, water baptism was used in the pre-canon period but has no significance in the post-canon period. In the forty years of the pre-canon period we also have temporary spiritual gifts; after AD 96 when the canon is closed, permanent spiritual gifts.

The other categorical development is from the standpoint of the times of the Gentiles mentioned in Luke 21:24. We have from AD 32 to 40, a period of approximately forty years in which the Jews were warned that they were going out under the fifth cycle of discipline, and the warning came through the gift of tongues. The spiritual gift of tongues was a warning given from Isaiah warning that Jews that when they are miraculously evangelised in Gentile languages, the use of the gift of tongues, it is a warning that they are about to go out under the fifth cycle of discipline. Then, starting in AD 70 and going to the Rapture which terminates the Church Age, we have the times of the Gentiles when only Gentile client nations can function as such. There will be no Jewish client nation ever again until the second advent of Christ. There will be Jewish nations from time to time but no Jewish nation can be a client nation to God, this is the times of the Gentiles. These categories help to understand the difference between temporary and permanent spiritual gifts. It also helps us to understand the first 40 years of the Church Age, the concept of the overlap, for it was during this time that tongues and the interpretation of tongues was used; after AD 70, never again. The pre-canon period of the Church Age was the time of such temporary gifts as apostleship, prophecy, healing, miracles, the gift of faith, discerning spirits, tongues, etc. The post-canon period of the Church Age is the time for permanent gifts such as pastor-teacher, administration, evangelism, helps, government, etc.

The unique characteristics of the Church Age are very important. This is the most unusual dispensation and has more emphasis on the individual believer than any other dispensation. The dispensation of the royal family of God at salvation provides something that is never provided in any other historical era, the baptism of the Spirit which forms the royal family of God. This is the first and most unusual event. There is only one dispensation in which God the Holy Spirit takes every believer at the moment of salvation and enters him into union with Christ. Thus when you are born into this dispensation you are not family of God or a child of God, you are a royal son of God, you are royal family of God. Secondly, this is the dispensation of no prophecy. Historical trends are determined by the volition of believers related to the divine dynasphere versus the cosmic system. There is no prophecy in this dispensation.

The third unique concept is the universal priesthood of the believer. This is the only dispensation in which there is the principle of every believer being his own priest. In all other historical areas there is a specialised priesthood. In the first three dispensations the head of the family was the priest. In the Age of Israel there was the Levitical priesthood. But now for the first and only time every believer represents himself before God with privacy to live his life as unto the Lord.

The fourth unique factor is the royal ambassadorship of the believer with special challenges to the life that were never given to individual believers before and will never be given again, that is, directing your life toward man and circumstances under the principles of functional virtue, living inside the divine dynasphere. This is absolutely unique.

The fifth unique principle is the fact that only this dispensation provides a divine dynasphere as God's game plan for the believer. No other dispensation has anything like it. This is the age of the divine dynasphere, therefore this is the only dispensation in which every believer from the moment of salvation for all of his life is indwelt by God the Holy Spirit and, when in the divine dynasphere, filled with the Spirit.

In the sixth place, this is the only dispensation where the completed canon of scripture is the basis for eliminating all dreams, all visions, all trances, all communication directly from God. This is the only dispensation in all of history whereby every bit of communication from God is found in written form in the Bible. In the Tribulation they will have a complete canon of scripture but they will have other forms of communication of doctrine — dreams, visions, trances, things go along with the unusual circumstances of the Tribulation. The same thing will be true for the Millennium. This is the only dispensation that requires more from every believer. Whether you are smart or dumb it demands thought, the ability to think. So the completed canon of scripture, all divine revelation, all doctrine, is reduced to writing and contained in the canon. Therefore, no doctrine in this dispensation after AD 96 is taught through dreams, visions, trances, angels, or the voice of God.

The seventh unique factor: intensification of the angelic conflict which results from our Lord's strategic victory on the cross. As the Lamb of God He is our saviour; as the Ram of God He controls history. Both point to the strategic victory on the cross.

The eighth unique factor: only in this dispensation do we have the indwelling of the person of Christ for all believers at the point of salvation. This is the first dispensation also in which Christ controls history from His hypostatic union. Always before Jesus Christ controlled history as God, now He controls history as the God-Man. And, again, salvation in this dispensation, like all of them, is through faith in Christ. But spirituality is different, it is resident and function in the divine dynasphere, the filling of the Spirit.

Dispensation number six is the Doomsday era, the Tribulation. When we get to Revelation chapter six we will be noting the trends of history in the Tribulation and their application to us.

Number seven is the era of Christ's rulership of the world. This is the dispensation of a thousand years of perfect environment, beginning with the second advent of Christ and terminating with the Gog revolution and the great white throne judgment. In the dispensation of the Millennium salvation is through faith in Christ. Spirituality is related to the ministry of God the Holy Spirit but totally apart from the divine dynasphere.

The Millennium begins with believers only. Outside of the first dispensation [positive volition] this is the only one that actually begins with believers only. These are the believers who survive the Tribulation and through the baptism of fire they enter into the Millennium, according to Ezekiel 20 and Matthew 25:31-46. There will be a tremendous population explosion from the believer nucleus of the Millennium and out of this there will be children, grandchildren, great grandchildren, and great, great grandchildren who are unbelievers, who reject Christ under perfect environment.

Perfect environment, by the way, includes the incarceration of Satan, the removal of all demons, and the abolition of religion. Religion is Satan's ace trump. Christianity is not a religion but a relationship with God through Christ. There will be no cults and no religions through the Millennial reign of Christ. Also, again, it is a period of optimum spirituality from the filling of the Spirit, according to Isaiah 65: 24; Joel 2:28,29, which has nothing to do with the Church Age, it is a Millennial passage, "I will pour out my Spirit on all flesh", etc. Israel will be restored as a client nation and this will mean great prosperity for everyone during the Millennium. The fact of the restoration of Israel as a client nation is found in Isaiah mostly, 5:26-30; 10:19-23; 11:11-16; 65:19; Joel 2:16ff; Zechariah 8:20-23; 10:6-12. All of the unconditional covenants to Israel will be fulfilled at that time — Daniel 9:24.

Perfect environment includes many things in the Millennium. For example, it means universal peace, there will be no war for one thousand years of human history. This means Psalm 46:9; Isaiah 2:4; Hosea 2:18; Micah 4:3, and all these passages say essentially the same thing: "the swords will be turned into plow shares, the spears into pruning hooks, and man shall learn war no more." That is Millennial, it has nothing to do with this dispensation or the Tribulation. Our Lord said there will be wars and rumours of wars "until I come."

There will also be great prosperity. Everyone will be rich in the Millennium, there will be no poor people. Universal prosperity is the subject of Psalm 72:7, 16.

There will be perfect world government but it will be divided by nations. Our Lord Jesus Christ will rule the world, superseding Satan at the second advent, and there will be national rulership delegated to national believers who are decorated with the order of the morning star. This is found in Isaiah 11:1,2; Zechariah 14:9; 2 Timothy 2:12 and a host of passages in Revelation, 2:26-28; 3:21; 5:10; 20:4,6.

There will be on the part of everyone, believers and unbelievers, a universal knowledge of God, Isaiah 11:9. But a universal knowledge of God does not mean that everyone will accept Christ. At least one third of the great population of the earth will reject Christ as saviour, and this will come out in the God revolution.

There will also be tremendous longevity. According to Isaiah 65:20 people can live the entire thousand years. The only reason why people will die in the Millennium is because of capital punishment. Crime will be met instantly with capital punishment.

The Millennium is also a time of perfect environment in nature. Creation is going to be released from the bondage of man's sin, according to Romans 8:19,20. There will be no deserts — Isaiah 35:1-7. Animals are going to lose their ferocity — Isaiah 11:6-9; 65:25. The perfect environment of the Millennium is going to come to a sudden halt at the end of the thousand years — the Gog revolution. Man cannot simply stand perfect environment without capacity. Capacity comes from Bible doctrine. So Satan is released from jail after serving the longest prison sentence on record. He will serve one thousand years and then he will be released and will immediately come back to the earth and start talking it up. And he will start a great revolution. There will be tremendous discontent by at least one third of the people of the earth — Revelation 20:1-7. The lesson is obvious. Perfect environment or ideal environment is not the solution to man's problems and is not the source of man's happiness.

The Millennium

1. The Millennium is promised — 2 Samuel 7; Psalm 89, the Davidic covenant.
2. The Millennium is prophesied — Isaiah 2:11, 12, 35.
3. The Millennium is presented — the gospels where Christ presented Himself as King.
4. The Millennium is postponed — the insertion of the Church Age.
5. The Millennium is plagiarised — the Tribulation with the political and religious organisations of the beast and the false prophet.

6. The Millennium is proclaimed — by the angelic herald of Revelation 10 and a human herald of Revelation 11.

7. The Millennium is perfected — second advent of Christ — Revelation 11:15-19; chapter 19.

Revelation 5:6, “Then I saw a ram as one who had been killed as a sacrifice [reference to Christ, not only as the Lamb of God saviour but the ram who controls history] standing in the middle of the throne with the four angelic heralds, and in the middle of the angelic staff officers [the 24 elders], and he [our Lord Jesus Christ] had seven horns.”

Now we come to the seven horns of the ram. Our Lord Jesus Christ is the ram who has seven horns. The seven horns represent the fact that there are seven eras of human history and our Lord Jesus Christ controls each one of those dispensations or historical eras. In the first four eras Jesus Christ controls history as eternal God; in the last three eras He controls history in hypostatic union as the God-Man. Jesus Christ controls history in the era of positive volition. When perfect environment existed in the garden of Eden for the first parents Jesus Christ controlled history as the first horn and He didn't terminate history with the fall of man. Jesus Christ controlled history when man lived in the era of negative volition. That is the second horn of the ram. From the time of Adam's fall until the tower of Babel people continued to live in history. True humanity was not destroyed though an attempt was made by Satan in Genesis chapter six. The reason that true humanity survived is because Jesus Christ controlled history. That was the second horn that preserved true humanity. Jesus Christ controlled history when man lived in the era of divine establishment, the dispensation of nationalism or human government. All during that time our Lord protected the human race from self-destruction. Jesus Christ controlled history during the dispensation of Israel, the fourth horn of the ram. All of that time He preserved Israel when Satan tried to destroy them. The dispensation of Israel as the fourth horn is the Lord controlling history as God. But beginning with the fifth horn we have the fifth era of human history, the Church Age, and now, as we noted in Revelation chapter one, Jesus Christ controls history as the God-Man. That is significant because angels were created greater than man but the humanity of Christ is greater than angels. The sixth era of human history is the Tribulation, shortened to seven years between the Rapture and the second advent so that the human race can survive. Jesus Christ controls history and shortens it down. Then, when we get to the seventh horn, the Millennium, Jesus Christ not only controls history but He rules history. So we have, then, the seven horns on the ram.

We resume now with the Greek where we have a connective kai followed by the numeral e(pta and the accusative plural direct object for “eyes.” E(pta is the Greek word for seven and we have o)fqalmoj for eyes, “and seven eyes.” Then we are going to have an explanation as to what is meant by seven eyes so that we won't get a lot of wild interpretations. The nominative plural demonstrative pronoun o(j which follows refers to what the seven eyes will be, “seven eyes,” o(j, “which.” Then we have e)imi, “are.” The present tense is a descriptive present. The active voice: the seven eyes produce the action. The declarative indicative mood is for a simple statement of fact. Now we are getting down to what it is. The predicate nominative plural, e(pta again plus pneuma, “the seven spirits.” These seven spirits are sent, perfect passive participle from the verb a)postellw, “which have been sent out.” The dramatic perfect emphasises the results of the action. The passive voice: the seven spirits receive the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial. We have a prepositional phrase, e)ij plus the word for planet earth, gh, “to all the earth.”

“and seven eyes which are the seven spirits of God which have been sent out to all the world.”

We have finished the exegesis of verse six but we must ask the question: What are the seven spirits? They are explained by the context of Isaiah 11:1,2. The seven spirits are actually found in verse 2 but we get our clue from the context beginning in verse 1.

“Then a root that buds will spring from the stump of Jesse [reference to the first advent of Christ, the stump of Jesse is the Davidic dynasty and the root of David is our Lord Jesus Christ], and a branch from his roots [the second advent] will bear fruit [the Millennial rule of Christ on earth].”

During our Lord’s advent our Lord was sustained by the seven spirits of God. Actually the seven spirits refer to God the Holy Spirit in seven different aspects and it all begins in Isaiah 11:2. Remember that Revelation is union station for the Bible and almost every hyperbole and every form of analogy, everything that seems to be inscrutable or abstruse, actually is explained somewhere else in the Bible. There are several exceptions but generally that is the rule.

“And the Spirit of the Lord [the first of the seven spirits or the seven aspects of God the Holy Spirit. This is actually gate one of the prototype divine dynasphere by which our Lord Jesus Christ was sustained in His humanity during the incarnation] will rest on him [Christ at the first advent], the Spirit of wisdom [the second spirit],” the word for wisdom is the Hebrew word chakmah and it refers to the application of doctrine at gate four of the prototype divine dynasphere, “and understanding [the third spirit],” in the Hebrew that is the word binah and refers to gate four of the prototype divine dynasphere, perception of doctrine. In His humanity our Lord functioned at gate one interlocked with gate four in the perception and application of doctrine, “the Spirit of counsel.” The word for counsel is etsa and it means plan or purpose and is a reference to God’s game plan, first for the incarnation of Christ to be sustained by the prototype divine dynasphere, and it becomes God’s game plan for the royal family. The royal family have the same privileges as our Lord and are sustained in their humanity in exactly the same way. This is God’s game plan for the Church Age and there is no game plan apart from residence and function in the divine dynasphere, “and of virtue.” In the Hebrew this is geburah and it refers to the motivational and functional virtue of our Lord’s humanity during the incarnation. One of the ministries of God the Holy Spirit is the production of true virtue and morality in contrast to the false virtue and morality which is produced through arrogance in the cosmic system. There are many, many moral believers who are living in the cosmic system and whose morality is an expression of self-righteousness, crusader activity, and in effect becomes one of the more subtle forms of evil. All true virtue for this dispensation comes from geburah. Only God the Holy Spirit can produce true virtue, honour, integrity and morality — “the Spirit of knowledge,” da’ath in the Hebrew and it is the interpretation of historical trends from life inside of the divine dynasphere, “and fear of the Lord,” the function of gate five of the prototype divine dynasphere. In the Hebrew it is jare and means fear in the sense of respect. From respect comes love.

Therefore in Isaiah 11:1,2 we not only have a prophecy of our Lord’s first and second advents explaining the seven eyes in terms of the seven spirits but it actually explains that these are seven aspects of the sustaining ministry of God the Holy Spirit, first to the humanity of Christ, and then to believers [royal family] in the Church Age. God the Holy Spirit is the power system for both the prototype and the royal family divine dynasphere. These seven descriptions or aspects of God the Holy Spirit in Isaiah 11:2 explain the seven eyes. Hence the seven eyes or the seven spirits are really one person, God the Holy Spirit, but emphasising different aspects of His modus operandi in sustaining first the humanity of Christ and now believers when they live inside the divine dynasphere.

The seven eyes or the seven spirits of the Lord are:

1. God the Holy Spirit as the power system — gate one.
2. The Spirit of wisdom, application of doctrine — gate four.
3. The Spirit of understanding, perception of doctrine — gate four.
4. The Spirit of counsel, God’s game plan — residence and function inside the divine dynasphere.
5. The Spirit of virtue, motivational and functional virtue produced inside the divine dynasphere.
6. The Spirit of knowledge — from the Hebrew it means the interpretation of historical trends from inside the divine dynasphere.
7. The Spirit of the fear of the Lord — the production of love inside of the divine dynasphere.

So God the Holy Spirit is the power system for both the prototype and the royal family divine dynaspheres. These seven descriptions of God the Holy Spirit in Isaiah 11:2 are synonymous with the seven eyes. Notice it says “the seven eyes which are the seven spirits of God,” i.e. the Holy Spirit is the power system of the divine dynasphere, “which has been sent out to all the world [to all believers in this dispensation].” This is the heritage of the royal family during the Church Age. So the seven spirits refer to God the Holy Spirit in whatever context. It is first used to sustain the incarnate Christ resulting in His third royal patent, and now used to sustain the royal family being formed during the Church Age.

Note, then, that the seven spirits as possessed by our Lord — the prototype divine dynasphere was given to Him — has been sent to us, to all believers in the world. The prototype divine dynasphere resides right now in the throne room of heaven but the functional divine dynasphere resides throughout the earth wherever there are believers. The Holy Spirit is the power system of it.

Now let’s return to the perfect passive participle “sent out.” It is a)postellw. The perfect tense is the tense of completed action and since the beginning of the Church Age God the Father has given the divine dynasphere to the entire royal family. This is what we call a dramatic perfect tense, it represents the existing status quo of the royal family on earth. It is only sent out on earth, the prototype is in heaven. The result of the action of the perfect tense is the fact that the royal family has exactly the same power system and the same game plan given to our Lord Jesus Christ during His first advent. The passive voice: the divine dynasphere with its power system — God the Holy Spirit, the “seven spirits,” receives the action of the verb, “sent to the entire earth,” and, of course, the earth in contrast to heaven where the prototype remains forever as a memorial to the grace of God. This is a circumstantial participle for the fact that the power of God the Holy Spirit and the grace provision of the divine dynasphere is just as available to you now as it was to our Lord Jesus Christ throughout the incarnation.

The ram standing emphasises the fact of resurrection and the fact that our Lord is in heaven in hypostatic union, seated at the right hand of the Father, sometimes standing. Seated and standing, whatever the physical posture, always emphasises His humanity. Deity does not sit; deity does not stand.

In the Tribulation there will be no divine dynasphere and God the Holy Spirit will be removed with the divine dynasphere. The Rapture of the Church takes the entire divine dynasphere and the game plan to heaven, and with it the restraining ministry of God the Holy Spirit.

We have noted that this is the mystery dispensation. That is, it is the only historical era in all of human history where trends are determined by the volition of the individual believer rather than the eschatology of the Word of God. In the Tribulation historical trends are determined by prophecy. The book of Revelation was actually written to the Church to give believers the game plan for this dispensation and to remind them of the importance of their own royal priesthood and royal ambassadorship.

This brings us now to the concept stated briefly in verse 7, the perpetuation of our Lord’s control of history in the Tribulation era. The Church Age is the intensified stage of the angelic conflict but the Tribulation is the intensified stage of human disaster. In this dispensation the function of the Christian depends on thinking; in the next dispensation the protection and protection of the believer depends entirely on the power of God and it will be a time of seven years of the most concentrated disasters in history. But God has given us leeway in this dispensation only and we are in the greatest field of opportunity that God has ever given to anyone.

This becomes the dramatic moment in heaven when it says [in the King James version]: “And he came and took the book out of the right hand of him that sat upon the throne.” The connective conjunction kai is used in a sequential sense, translated “then.” The aorist active indicative of the verb erxomai is next. Remember that He came and took the book. In the midst of all of this no one has been able to come and take the Doomsday book out of the hand of God the Father. Then He came. The aorist tense is a constative aorist for a momentary action. The active voice: Jesus Christ as the God-Man who controls history in hypostatic union in this dispensation and the last two produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative viewing the action of the verb from the viewpoint of reality. “Then he came and”, the perfect active indicative of the verb lambanw, “took.” The perfect tense is a consummative perfect in which the completed process is presented. The consummative process is denoted, therefore it is translated like an imperfect tense. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ who controls history produces the action. This is a declarative indicative or a dogmatic statement of Bible doctrine. Jesus Christ in hypostatic union continues to control history. Add the word “it” for the Doomsday book, for in the excitement of the apostle he goes into ellipsis, very emotional in this dramatic moment. This is a legitimate emotion in contrast to his crying in the previous verses which was not. The King James version adds the word “book.” It is not in the original although it certainly is implied. “Then he [our Lord Jesus Christ who controls history] came and took it [the Doomsday book of the Tribulation].”

“from the right hand,” ek plus the ablative of the adjective deciwj. Deciwj is a word meaning “right” but used with ek it is an idiom for the right hand. Since God doesn’t have right hands or left hands. God the Father is involved here, He is invisible and this is simply what we call an anthropomorphism [ascribing to God a human part of the body which He does not actually possess, like the eyes of God, the ears of God, etc.]. The arm or hand is showing as an anthropomorphism to demonstrate the sovereignty of God turning all judgment and all control of human history over to our Lord Jesus Christ who as eternal God is coequal with the Father but as true humanity is different from the Father and from the Holy Spirit.

Then we have an additional phrase to indicate that it is God the Father, the articular present active participle of the verb kaqhmai, and it means to sit. With it, of course, we have the phrase “on the throne.” The definite article is in the objective genitive, it is used for a personal pronoun, and it refers to God the Father who up until now has been holding the Doomsday book which is all of the prophecies of historical trends in the Tribulation. All historical trends of all dispensations are given in the form of prophecy except for the Church Age, the mystery age. Our heavenly Father holds the book until the Rapture of the Church and the removal of the divine dynasphere and the seven eyes or the seven spirits of God [God the Holy Spirit], and this clears the path for the traumatic events prophesied in the Doomsday book with its seven seals. In other words, the seven spirits of God of the Church Age are replaced by the seven seals of the Doomsday book, and everything about the Tribulation right up to the end of chapter eighteen comes from this book. In chapter six we will see the opening of the first six seals and these give six general trends of the Tribulation. But from the seventh seal we will see first three trumpet judgements and then the drinking goblet judgements [literal translation], all of which come out of the seventh seal. The rest of the chapters [7-18] will reveal what is in the seventh seal. From this we will have a complete concept of every historical trend in the Tribulation. The present tense is a perfective present, it refers to a fact that has come to be in the past but is emphasised as a present reality. God the Father sitting on the throne actually holds back the traumatic events of history whereby unbelievers with help from demons will destroy themselves. He holds all of this back until the Rapture of the Church. The active voice: God the Father produces the action. These things that we are about to study will not and cannot occur until the Church is removed through resurrection. The participle is circumstantial. We have ε)πι plus qronoj to terminate the verse, “on the throne.”

Corrected translation: “Then he [our Lord Jesus Christ who controls history] came and took it [the Doomsday book of the Tribulation] from the right hand of him [God the Father] who sat on the throne.”

This means that starting at the Rapture and the judgment seat of Christ, but specifically going to the earth, God the Father has delegated all judgment to the Lord Jesus Christ as a result of His strategic victory of the cross, John 5:22-23,27, “in order that all may honour the Son.” The historical trends of the Tribulation are therefore primarily related to judgment for man in any dispensation is the product of his own decisions.

Verse 8, we are getting ready for chapter six and the beginning of the study of the historical trends of the Tribulation. In verses 8-14 we have the hymn of victory, a new song in heaven. In verse 8 we have the worship of the angelic heralds and the general staff in the order of battle in the angelic elect creatures.

We begin by noting the connective conjunction kai plus the temporal adverb ο)τε. It introduces a temporal clause, and it indicates the time sequence in which the new hymn was sung in heaven. With this we have the aorist active indicative of the verb λ)μβανω, which means here to take, “And when he had taken.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, a dramatic moment when our Lord took the Doomsday book out of the hand of God the Father. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb in taking the Doomsday book, and the indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality. With this we have the accusative neuter singular direct object from the noun β)ιβλιον, which is actually a scroll but book is a legitimate translation if it is understood that books in those days were scrolls. This is a reference, again, to the Doomsday book of the Tribulation. “And when he had taken the book” is a temporal clause and the function of the temporal clause is to limit the action of the verb in the principle clause by the introduction of a time relationship. This is both contemporaneous time plus the definite temporal idea as indicated in the indicative mood.

Now we have the subject and it is given to us in terms of the angelic order of battle. The angelic order of battle is divided into two categories. First of all we have the college of heralds and secondly we have the angelic army. All angels that serve God function under one of these two categories. At the top of each one of these orders we have the Lord Jesus Christ.

In the college of heralds He is the Angel of the Lord; in the army He is the Lord of hosts. Then we have angels. Number two in each one of these categories: for the heralds we have seraphim or seraphs, six-winged angels in two categories, the king of arms or officer of arms and the heralds. In the third category we have the pur sui vant: the pur sui vant officers come first. These are cherubs. Number four are the pur sui vant messengers.

On the army side, number two are the archangels. Number three: a general staff made up of twenty-four officers. Number four: the hosts, rank and file and various categories.

The elect army and the college of heralds are both represented in the subject. The subject is made up of tessarej plus zwon, the adjective plus the noun, both in the nominative plural. Tessarej is simply an adjective numeral for four; zwon means living creatures, living beings, and it is used for the angelic heralds who in order of rank are seraphs. Then, of course, we have the army represented by the general staff, the 24 presbuteroi, translated elders.

Next we have a verb, the aorist active indicative of the verb piptw and it means to fall down, to prostrate. We will translate it "fell down." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice is for the higher ranks among the two orders in the angelic order of battle, and the indicative mood represents the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality, it also expresses contemporaneous action in the temporal clause. Then it says "before the Ram," a prepositional phrase, e)nw pion and the word arnion which means in this case a ram, a male lamb.

Principle: The Ram is the one who took the book from God the Father, and the principle is one that we have noted before: the cross must come before the crown. Before our Lord had the authority in hypostatic union to continue the control of history, which He did in the first four dispensations or all of human history, He had to go to the cross. And when the strategic victory was accomplished on the cross — the work of salvation is that strategic victory, when He took our place on the cross — that is what made the difference. He became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. We have noted the principle that there is no true success or greatness in those who do not possess humility. The greatest illustration of humility: the cross comes before the crown. Our Lord's strategic victory of the first advent centres around His work on the cross, and because of His strategic victory of the first advent our Lord is qualified [worthy] to take the Doomsday book from the hand of God the Father and to break open those seven seals which actually contain the historical trends of the Tribulation. The worthiness of our Lord is noted by the fact that when Jesus Christ takes the Doomsday book from the hand of God the Father the hierarchy in the throne room all kneel down to worship. The highest ranks among elect angels are prostrated in worship.

All worship, of course, comes from elect angels or born-again believers and neither Satan's demons nor mankind as an unbeliever participates in this scene. Principle: Worship qualification demands regeneration. Only those who have eternal life are qualified to worship.

The qualifying clause to indicate what the angelic worshippers possess is given next. The qualifying clause does not modify the Lamb or the Ram of God but the angels who fall down to worship. We have the present active participle of the verb εἶχον which means to have, or to have and to hold. With this we have a subject, the nominative singular adjective ἐκάστος and it means "each one" individually has this. The word "and" is not found in the original text but is the legitimate translation of the circumstantial participle. The pictorial present tense presents to the mind a vision as a process of occurring in a presentation of eschatological information, obviously information we must have for some reason which we will work out once we get the exegesis correct in the translation. The active voice: the four angelic heralds and the twenty-four staff officers produce the action. This is a circumstantial participle expressing the attendant circumstances in which our Lord took the Doomsday book out of the hand of God the Father.

Question: Why do they have harps? Well, this isn't a harp in the first place, it is a lyre. In the Greek it is κίθαρα, it refers to a stringed instrument which could be described as a sound box from which rises two arms connected above by a cross bar from which the strings are suspended, very much like a modern guitar. Each one of the four angelic heralds, highest ranking angels (seraphs) and 24 angelic staff officers, next to the archangels the highest ranking in the order of battle of the elect army of angels. That is 28 high-ranking angels all carrying lyres.

No matter how high you go in life, no matter how low you sink, no matter what you do in life, everyone ought to have at least one hobby or interest apart from their profession or job. The four angelic heralds and the twenty-four high-ranking staff officers are not only way up there in rank out of the millions of angels but they have an outside interest. They were interested in music. The point is that they were really expert at what they did and they enjoyed it. These elect angels were not only great in their primary occupational speciality but they were also great in their hobby — music. Every believer needs a hobby. Often believers get too intense and they fall apart simply because they do not know to relax. They need a hobby, another interest — not one that will cut out doctrine, however! People without an outside interest or hobby have a tendency toward the worst form of arrogance — neurotic, arrogant self-righteousness. They become busybodies and gossips and in their preoccupation with self they become the losers in the Christian way of life. God has designed our minds and our bodies so that we can have outside interests for relaxation.

What we have so far: "And when he [our Lord Jesus Christ] had taken the book [the Doomsday book concerning the historical trends of the Tribulation], the four angelic heralds and the twenty-four angelic staff officers fell down before the Lamb, and each one had a lyre."

Then they had something else, the Attic Greek adjective xruseoj. It is also an accusative plural direct object and it means golden, or adorned with gold, or made with gold. So obviously it is only half of the object. The rest of the direct object is the noun fialh which is translated vials later on in the book of Revelation. But it isn't vials, it is a drinking cup, a goblet. In this case it is a rather shallow goblet. So we will call it a libation cup, "and they had libation cups made of gold", golden goblets but definitely not vials. However, they were not full of any beverage but they were full of something because we have a present active participle of gemw, and it is not translated like a participle, this is ascriptive and it is used as a noun, so we simply translate it "full." Then the genitive plural of description from qumiama, "incense," "libation cups made of gold, full of incense." Incense is a material used to produce perfume when burned. The burning of the spices or the gums produces a smoke which has a very pleasant scent or fragrance. Incense was used in the Levitical offerings to denote propitiation, the Father's satisfaction with the work of Christ on the cross. The explanatory phrase which ends this verse explains incense in terms of effective prayer being offered by believers in the Tribulation.

The explanation of the incense follows and it begins with the nominative feminine plural from the relative pronoun a(i), translated "which." The antecedent of the relative pronoun is the descriptive genitive again of qumiama, "which incense." And then the present active indicative of e)imi, "is." The present tense is a pictorial present, it brings to the mind a picture of the prayers of the believers in the Tribulation in the process of occurrence. The believers in the Tribulation learn quickly how to pray effectively and their prayers are a sweet odour, as it were, in the nose of God. The futuristic present denotes an event which has not yet occurred — the prayers of Tribulational believers — but it is regarded as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as already occurring. The active voice: the incense in the libation goblets made of gold produces the action. This is the declarative indicative for the future reality of the prayers of Tribulational believers.

With this we have a definite article, the nominative feminine plural definite article a(i), and it is the generic use of the definite article, it is used to set off in distinction from all others the prayers of people, many of whom are going to die in that seven year period, and many of whom are going to survive, but it will be a time of great prayer, powerful prayer, intense prayer. We have something they do not, the divine dynasphere. Since they do not have the divine dynasphere and God the Holy Spirit does not indwell them, except in certain cases going back to the Old Testament system of pneumatology, they must have something to take up the slack, and they will be far more serious about prayer than we are. The person who prays in prosperity is so rare that you almost can't find them.

With this we then have the predicate nominative plural from proseuxh, and it is translated "which are the prayers," and the possessive genitive plural or the ablative of source "from the saints" or "of the saints," a(gioj). This is a reference to the prayers of the Tribulational believers, it is a reference for prayers which have not been uttered but will be in the future. And it follows the pattern of Psalm 141:2, "May my prayers be counted as incense before you; the lifting up of my hands as the evening offering [or oblation]." The prayer principle in this context is found in Isaiah 65:24 — "It shall come to pass that before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear.” This links the principle of prayer to the doctrine of divine decrees.

The generic use of the definite article categorises the saints or believers as belonging to the Tribulation. These are prayers, again, that have not been offered by people who are probably not yet alive but the divine decrees prints out prophetically those believers who live in the Tribulation and who will offer prayers in a time of great disaster. The fact that they can concentrate under pressure in an unrestrained period of historical disaster indicates the spirituality of these people. Their spirituality is the faith-rest drill and they have a very strong faith-rest function in the Tribulation. That is the means by which they survive.

Verse 8 in corrected translation: “And when he [our Lord Jesus Christ] had taken the book [the Doomsday book of historical trends in the Tribulation], the four angelic heralds and the twenty-four angelic staff officers fell down before the Ram [or Lamb], and each one had a lyre, and libation cup made of gold, full of incense, which are the prayers of the saints.”

Verse 9, the song of the angelic hierarchy. We begin with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated here “then.” With this we have the present active indicative of the verb a)idw, which means to sing. The implication of a)idw is that they sing with magnificent voices, these are not amateurs. “Then they sang,” the futuristic present tense denotes an event which has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain that in thought it may be contemplated as already occurring. The active voice: the angelic hierarchy, composed of the four angelic heralds and the twenty-four angelic staff officers, produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of music as an expression of worship. The accusative singular direct object is composed of two words. First of all the adjective kainoj which means new in species. This song is absolutely new, it has never been sung yet in heaven and it will not be sung until the future. Then we have w)dh which is the Greek word for song. They sang a brand new song, one that had never been sung before and this, of course, means that it is very significant in relationship to what happens in the book of Revelation.

What follows is the present active participle of the verb legw, which means to say, to speak, to communicate, and many similar type meanings. Only the lyrics are presented to us, we do not hear the actual music. The “saying” of the King James version simply means “the lyrics are as follows.” We are not going to hear them sing it, we are merely going to be told from John what the lyrics of this future song happen to be. The participle is now accompanied by a noun, it may function as a substantive and that is exactly how it is translated here, “the lyrics are as follows.”

This scene in heaven during the Tribulation was anticipated by David in Psalm 144:9 when he said: “I will sing a new song to you, O God; upon a lyre of ten strings I will sing praises to you.”

We note our first principle in verse nine: only lyrics are given in the Word of God. The lyrics are far more important than the melody. Lyrics are addressed to the thinking of the soul; the melody speaks to the emotion of the soul. We have here the lyrics only, which means that when we are studying the Word of God our emotions must not get involved before our thinking. We must learn what is there and then respond to it emotionally for worship. Emotion must always be a responder in worship and perception of Bible doctrine is a form of worship, a most important form. Emotions are designed to respond to thought and never to supersede thought. In worship the melody is not to be ignored but the fact remains that lyrics speak to thought. Lyrics involve thinking; melody speaks to the emotions of the soul. All great hymns of worship balance out between doctrinal lyrics and great melody and harmony by the which the words of the hymn are imprinted in the mind. This is a song of victory, a hymn of our Lord's worthiness to open the Doomsday book. Therefore the emphasis on the lyrics, not the melody.

We begin by discovering what the lyrics are. The present active indicative of the verb $\epsilon\mu\iota$, the hymn is addressed to our Lord Jesus Christ, "you are," referring to Christ. The static present represents a condition which perpetually exists. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of doctrine, the worthiness of our Lord from the victory of His first advent, the great strategic victory. This strategic victory began with the hypostatic union, our Lord's residence and function in the prototype divine dynasphere after His virgin birth, His kenosis, His impeccability, His saving work on the cross, followed by His death, burial, resurrection ascension, session and the award of His third royal patent. As we have seen, the insertion of the Church Age was to provide a royal family for our Lord's third royal patent.

Next come the predicate nominative $\alpha\lambda\omega\iota\varsigma$, "you are worthy." The worthiness of our Lord was the subject of chapter one and periodically will be brought out in the middle part of the book of Revelation. Next we have the aorist active infinitive of the verb $\lambda\alpha\beta\alpha\omega$ which means to take or to seize. In this case it was taken — "to receive." The aorist tense is a constative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety, the few moments it took for our Lord to take from the hand of God the Father the Doomsday book of the Tribulation. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb. This is what we call an infinitive of actual result. As a result of our Lord's strategic victory on the cross during His first advent He is now worthy to take the book and to break open its seals. The breaking open of the seals indicates once again that Jesus Christ controls history. With this we have the accusative neuter singular of the word $\beta\iota\beta\lambda\iota\omega\sigma$ which meant a scroll or, in modern English we would say, a book, the Doomsday book containing the historical trends of the Tribulation presented prophetically.

Next we have a connective $\kappa\alpha\iota$ followed by the aorist active infinitive of $\alpha\lambda\omega\iota\omega$, which means here to break open, breaking the seals. The constative aorist: over the next five or six chapters we will see what happens in the breaking of the seals. In chapter six, six of the seals are broken. The rest of the Tribulation from chapter seven to eighteen is the seventh seal of the book. The accusative plural direct object from $\sigma\phi\alpha\gamma\iota\alpha$, which means seals, "and to break its seals." Each seal is a trend of the Tribulation which cannot be broken until after the Church is removed by the Rapture or resurrection. This emphasises the concept that prophecy determines historical trends in both the Tribulation and the Millennium.

There is a reason for this and the reason is given. We start with the causal conjunction $\epsilon\tau\iota$ and it is correctly translated “because.” Then we have the aorist passive indicative of an Attic Greek verb $\sigma\phi\alpha\tau\omega$, a high-class word from Athens and also Ionia. But at the time of John’s writing we have the Koine Greek and they couldn’t pronounce $\sigma\phi\alpha\tau\omega$ in that day, so they had to change it to $\sigma\phi\alpha\zeta\omega$. Almost every lexicon today fails to recognise the greatness of this word and how it was corrupted, “because you were sacrificed,” sacrificed to the point of death. This is a word for animal sacrifices and, in the case of our Lord, bearing our sins in His own body on the tree. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It takes the three hours when our Lord was bearing our sins on the cross and gathers them up into one entirety.

Remember that human life is imputed by God to each person in the human race immediately after birth — to the human soul. That human life remains in that soul forever. The soul is in the body and, of course, physical death is when the soul leaves the body and when it does it takes human life with it. Human life is indestructible, it resides in the soul forever. At the same time that God imputes immediately after birth human life to each one of us He simultaneously imputes Adam’s original sin to the genetically-formed old sin nature. Adam’s original sin, which was the source of the old sin nature, immediately is imputed to it. That means at the point of physical life we have spiritual death. We are dead spiritually so that if anyone dies before reaching accountability he automatically goes to heaven. This solves the problem of children who die. This, of course, is the grace of God and the wisdom of God. But there was another reason for it apart from the accountability principle and it has to do with the fact that arrogance creeps in so many ways. Personal sins were never imputed to any of us. Our personal sins are real, we committed them, they are from our own volition related to the old sin nature. The old sin nature is the source of temptation, the volition is the source of sin. We committed sins and they are real sins, but they have never been imputed to us for judgment. Our spiritual death came from the imputation of Adam’s sin and this means that all of our personal sins, past, present and future, were all imputed to Christ on the cross and judged. That is why we rebound by simply naming our sins, we are naming a case that has already gone to court, our sins were judged on the cross.

It took three hours on the cross for our Lord Jesus Christ to receive the imputation of the sins of the entire world and to be judged for them. The darkness covered the land at that time, no one saw the terrible humiliation of our perfect Lord bearing our sins. But they could hear the screams: “Eloi, Eloi, Lama Sabachthani (My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me?)” God the Father forsook God the Son because He was made sin for us. God the Holy Spirit forsook God the Son because He was bearing our sins and was judged for us. And so during those three hours they are gathered up into one entirety in this constative aorist of $\sigma\phi\alpha\zeta\omega$. The passive voice: Christ received the action of the verb on the cross, He received the imputation of our sins, as per $\sigma\phi\alpha\tau\omega$, and was judged for them by God the Father. Note the importance of the passive voice which emphasises the fact that Christ received the judgment of our sins on the cross. Therefore He became our substitute and as our substitute the only saviour, “Neither is there salvation in any other; there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved,” Acts 4:12.

Then the passage goes on with a connective kai, “and,” and then the aorist active indicative of the verb a)gorazw, which means to purchase. It is actually the word for redemption, it means to purchase from the slave market of sin, “and you have purchased.” The word “us” is not found in the original. The ellipsis is because of the emotional state of John at this moment. Obviously it refers to anyone who has believed in Christ. It refers to the entire world but only those who believe in Christ understand and appreciate its significance, “and you have purchased [redeemed] mankind.” The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it views the saving work of Christ on the cross in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, namely the salvation of all members of the human race who personally believe in Jesus Christ. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb when He was on the cross, bearing our sins, being judged for them, and this is the strategic victory of the angelic conflict. So the declarative indicative mood is for a dogmatic statement of doctrine in the field of soteriology. With this we have a dative of possession from the noun qeoj which, of course, refers to God and is translated “for God,” “and you have redeemed mankind for God.” The dative of possession is a Greek idiom (The ordinary case for possession is the genitive) for which we have no exact equivalent in the English. It is actually what is called personal interest particularised to the point of ownership. The dative of possession is an extension of the dative of indirect object to the point of ownership and now that Christ has purchased us on the cross we belong to God forever from the moment that we believe in Christ. There is nothing we can do to lose our so great salvation.

“you redeemed human beings for God,” and the means of doing so is given in a prepositional phrase e)n plus the instrumental of a(ima, “blood.” We have previously seen that blood is used for literal blood, but in the case of our Lord’s work on the cross the blood has to do with redemption, reconciliation, propitiation, His work in bearing our sins. Redemption directed toward sin, propitiation directed toward God, and reconciliation directed toward man as the presentation of the gospel. So we have e)n plus the instrumental of a(ima plus the genitive of su, the personal pronoun, “by means of your blood.” The blood of Christ refers to His entire saving work. It is not just literal blood which was shed, it is His work in bearing our sins.

The categories of human beings who are redeemed follows at the end of this verse. It starts with a prepositional phrase that carries throughout the rest of the verse, e)k plus the ablative of paj, “all,” and fulh, meaning tribes, “from every tribe.” This reverts, of course, to the nation Israel. Salvation is first offered to Israel since they are the original client nation. It refers to every tribe of Israel, hence Jews are constantly believing in the Lord Jesus Christ for eternal salvation. The scattering of Israel does not hinder their evangelism, their positive volition at God-consciousness, or their response to the gospel when they hear it.

The connective conjunction kai continues the concept, Fulh refers only to Israel, “and from every people.” Then we have the word “language,” glossa, indicating that people had to be divided in the languages. By everyone speaking the same language originally they became very self-destructive, they entered into a form of internationalism which would have destroyed the human race, and that would negate the purpose that God had in creating man to resolve the angelic conflict. So it simply refers to the fact that people will not divide nationally the way that God wants them to in order to protect their freedom and therefore they are given many ways of expressing that others do not understand so that barriers will be created whereby they can be administered in small enough groups to enjoy the benefits of freedom which are presented in the laws of divine establishment, “and from every language.” Then we have a connective kai, “and people.” The word “people” is laoj, referring to people living in undeveloped countries, aborigines, and it indicates the fact that no matter how primitive the living conditions people can find Jesus Christ as saviour if they are positive at God consciousness.

Next comes kai with e)qnoj, “from every nation.” Ethnic is used in the English for race but here it refers to national entities. A national entity can be made up of one race, like the Jews, or it can be made up of many races. When it is made up of many races the only way it can survive is to have one culture. When it says, “and from every nation”, we are talking about civilised nations, nations that have establishment. We are talking about the concept of establishment principles functioning in a nation, and when they do the culture is derived from establishment so that freedom, privacy, the sacredness of property and life all come from the establishment. And this becomes the basis of culture.

The Romans had no culture, they borrowed from the Greeks. But they eventually, by their very system of law as a republic, developed a culture. And that culture with its establishment background became the basis for the most fantastic evangelism in the first century of Christianity.

In the first part of Revelation chapter four, verse six, we noted the tranquillity of the Church in heaven. Tranquillity means many things — happiness, prosperity, blessing — but something the Church will never have on earth, and which is contrary to any concept of historical trend, is unity. There will never be a unification of the body of Christ on earth. The existence of God’s game plan, the divine dynasphere, and the existence of Satan’s game plan, the cosmic system, inevitably attracts believers one way or the other. The fact that there are many churches, many denominations, many opinions, many different concepts, many antagonisms, is based on the fact that the historical trend of living in the devil’s world makes it impossible for any unity among believers. Believers often talk about unity in terms of idealism, that somehow we all ought to love each other because the Bible says so, without even defining the love or understanding the concept, or developing the command as given by our Lord in any given context. So there will be different churches, different denominations, those who are ecumenical and those who are anti-ecumenical. It is the same old story. Everyone has an old sin nature, everyone has a soul, everyone has an opinion, everyone has an idea, and all this makes for disunity in the Church Age. There will never exist on this earth a unified Church. But they will be unified in heaven under conditions provided by our Lord, a resurrection body, minus the old sin nature, minus the cosmic system. And so the first part of chapter four verse six talks about a remarkable phenomenon, something that could never occur on earth, something that demands everything from a resurrection body to the removal of the old sin nature and life in heaven before it can happen. Therefore don’t be shocked when your friends “split,” when they go in different directions, when they disagree. They didn’t agree as unbelievers, they won’t agree as believers. It is the way it should be. Just as to protect the human race in the devil's world God has ordained nationalism to split people up into groups called nations or tribes so it is necessary with believers. There could not be unity of believers unless Satan was the "archbishop" and running the whole show.

Now we have come to the end of the eight things in heaven, the new song, the hymn of victory, and we resume with verse 10 where we have the present opportunity and the future reward of the royal family. The verse in the King James version does not follow the best manuscripts in the Greek text. All of the suffixes of this verse are mistranslated. The verse is not in the first person plural but in the third person plural, referring to the royal family of God.

We begin by noting the present opportunity of the royal family of God, the intensive use of the conjunction kai is translated "in fact." Next comes the aorist active indicative and the verb form is second person singular of the verb poiew. Poiew means to do, to make, to produce, to manufacture, to bring about, to accomplish, and it even means, as here, to appoint. It should be translated, "In fact you have appointed" or "you have made." The culminative aorist tense views the appointment of all believers of the Church Age to the royal power of the divine dynasphere, the royal priesthood in its entirety, and it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the rewards at the judgment seat of Christ to winners, mature believers, believers who advance from gate four to gate eight in the royal game plan for this dispensation.

The fact that you and I after salvation are left with our volition intact, the fact that God's game plan does not call for any coercion of your volition, should give you your first understanding of the fact that legalism is never the order of the day. People make wrong decisions with regard to doctrine. People make wrong decisions with regard to hearing it, with regard to applying it, and it is the misapplication which becomes a distortion. The distortions result in morality, arrogance and self-righteousness producing a system which comes from Satan's cosmic modus operandi: cosmic one with its 26 gates of interlocking systems of arrogance; cosmic two with its 9 gates of interlocking systems of hatred. Many Christians, very moral and self-righteous Christians, live in the cosmic system and their morality is evil. The only legitimate morality is the morality produced in God's game plan, morality produced inside of the divine dynasphere which we call integrity to distinguish it from the legalism of the cosmic system.

God has taken each one of us at salvation and commissioned us. He has given us two commissions, two appointments, and they are mentioned by the culminative aorist, "you have appointed." The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb by providing a royal power called basileia which is used here as a synonym for the divine dynasphere, "in fact you have appointed them a royal power." The Lord Jesus Christ first tested the prototype divine dynasphere during His incarnation. He gave it approval for the royal family as the game plan for this dispensation. But one thing about it: this divine dynasphere is strictly a matter of the believer's own free will. He has provided the means of operating it. He has given a licence for operating it — priest and ambassador. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of doctrine. The Church Age is the only historical era or dispensation in which every believer at the moment of salvation becomes royalty by regeneration. And with that royalty is given two commissions whereby he can function and make his own decisions either to glorify the Lord or not to glorify the Lord, to contribute to the uptrend of history or the downtrend of history.

Next in verse 10 we have a rare triple accusative. The triple accusative direct object of one personal and two impersonal objects. The accusative of personal object is in the plural, it is the intensive pronoun αὐτοῖς used for the personal pronoun third person in the Koine Greek, translated “them” — royal family. This, of course, is an impersonal way of stating the doctrine but a personal way of reminding you that at the moment you believed in Christ you personally became royal family, and at the same time you became a priest. You are your own priest.

Then we have the accusative singular of impersonal object, basileia. The word means “kingdom” or “royal power.” Here it means royal power and it is a synonym for the divine dynasphere. “In fact you have appointed them [Church Age believers] a royal power.” And then the third part of the direct object, the accusative plural of impersonal object ἱερεῦσι, and it is the word for priest. It is in the plural and it is translated “priests.”

The next phrase is “to our God,” “you have appointed them priests to our God,” dative of advantage. The future reward of the believer is given next, “and they,” connective καί. Next we have the future active indicative of winners, basileuwsin, which means to rule. Today it is basileia, the divine dynasphere, and if you stay with it then tomorrow it is basileuwsin, you will be ruler. Today you have royal power to choose for or against. If you choose for the royal power you will be a ruler in the future; if you choose against the royal power you will be a loser now and a loser at the judgment seat of Christ. So we have basileuwsin in the future active indicative, “and they shall rule.” This is a predictive future anticipating the fact that winners, believers who are decorated with the order of the morning star, will rule under the authority of Jesus Christ in the Millennium. The active voice: the mature believer of the Church Age, the one who makes the good decisions and becomes the anonymous hero of this dispensation will come back into history once again. Out of history — Rapture of the Church or death, whichever occurs first; back into history — second advent. Today the believer who makes the right decisions with regard to God’s game plan is a winner. This is manifest by the supergrace blessings in six categories but when he comes back he is going to be a ruler; a winner today, a ruler during the Millennium.

There are going to be believers during the Church Age who are going to be winners. And at the judgment seat of Christ when they are decorated with the order of the morning star and receive the uniform of glory and receive a royal title which goes into the book of life with their name and all of the blessings that go with it, when all of these things are received then you will see above all things in life, not the power of politics, not the power of muscle or physical strength, not the power of personality, but you will see the power of decision. No greater power exists than to have knowledge of God and to make decisions related to Him. This is the greatest system of power in the world and any other attempt to develop a system of power is always disappointing.

When it says, “they shall rule,” the active voice of basileuō refers to mature believers, male and female. In the Millennium with perfect environment women are going to rule nations, and do it successfully. There will be men and women as rulers of nations. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of future fact. Every mature believer, male and female, will be a ruler in the Millennium. And then we have the prepositional phrase ἐπι plus the genitive of γῆ, “on the earth” — “they shall rule on the earth,” a reference to the Millennium.

Translation of verse 10 — “In fact you have appointed them [Church Age believers, royal family of God] a royal power [the divine dynasphere] and priests to our God: and they shall rule on the earth.”

According to what we have studied in Revelation 4:10 there are three categories of worship.

The worship function of gate five begins with the love of God through perception of doctrine and as the momentum of the Christian life continues it eventuates in the highest form of worship which is occupation with the person of Christ. All worship demands that we give to God what we possess — what we have we give. Worship is essentially giving something special to God.

Category #1 of worship is the giving of glory to God. The word which is used in the Greek is δοξάζω. In giving glory to God we have the highest expression of worship. This is the form of worship we are studying in chapters four and five. This is the worship of the four angelic heralds, the twenty-four general staff officers, and the entire hosts of angelic creatures. As the highest form of worship it is only operational in the eternal state. Before we can give glory to God we must possess glory and there is no possibility of us possessing glory until after the Rapture of the Church and receiving the resurrection body. The glory we give to God has to be related to something we receive at the judgment seat of Christ: the crown of life, the crown of glory, the order of the morning star, the many decorations, the uniform of glory. The angelic heralds, for example, give glory to God because they possess glory. In worship you cannot give what you do not possess. For the royal family of God, the Church Age believer, this is impossible until after the Rapture of the Church when we receive our resurrection body.

In category #2 we are looking at something that we can give to God, τιμή, which is generally translated “honour,” though it has three connotations in the Greek and each one is related to worship. The giving of τιμή means first of all respect. Τιμή means respect and the believer can only respect our Lord Jesus Christ through understanding His thinking, which is another way of saying that you must reside and function inside the divine dynasphere, especially at gate four. Apart from positive volition toward doctrine and life in the divine dynasphere it is impossible to give respect to God.

There are three categories of believers in growth after salvation. There is the baby, the adolescent and the mature believer. The baby can give respect to our Lord Jesus Christ as he resides and functions inside the divine dynasphere and as he continues to take in doctrine. So timh is something that every believer can give. It is based, of course, by his life inside the divine dynasphere and his understanding of doctrine.

The adolescent believer takes one step further. Timh also means reverence. The adolescent believer is growing, advancing, and therefore he is capable of giving reverence under the concept of category #2 worship. Reverence follows respect. Respect is the worship of the baby believer; reverence is the worship of the adolescent believer. Reverence and respect are simply an extension of each other, both are the function of the believer's royal priesthood inside the divine dynasphere.

The highest form of category #2 worship, also included in the word timh, is the concept of occupation with the person of Christ. Timh means honour and that is the function of the mature believer. The mature believer can actually give honour to our Lord Jesus Christ. So category #2 is as high as we can go in this life and to give honour to our Lord you must possess honour, and the possession of honour means advance to maturity, the erection of the edification complex of the soul and everything related to it. Category #3 worship is the giving of thanks. Thanksgiving is a most basic form of priestly function on the part of the royal family. The capacity for this worship is gratitude for the plan of God and for the grace of God. Capacity for thanksgiving comes from perception of doctrine and as one's perception increases so does his capacity. The arrogant believer lives in the cosmic system and whatever thanksgiving he may show is merely superficial. There is something we may learn from this also: People who have no capacity for thanksgiving have no capacity for love. The words are no stronger than the honour, the integrity of the individual.

So we have contrasting forms of worship. We have in the Old Testament dispensation mankind functioning under a specialised priesthood. For example, the tribe of Levi, the family of Aaron became priests to Israel. In the Old Testament you had to go to a priest who represented you before God but now in the New testament the contrast is here: you are your own priest, you represent yourself before God. Two things changed the form of worship in the Church Age: the first advent of Christ, His strategic victory on the cross and, secondly, the universal priesthood of the believer in the royal family of God. Add to this the completion of the canon of scripture and you have the elimination of all ritual worship, except in one area, the Lord's table. Even baptism has not been extended to this part of the Church Age. So we have the completed canon of scripture and we have thought as the basis of worship, i.e. Bible doctrine. Therefore, all ritual except the Lord's table has been set aside. The object of worship in the Church Age is our Lord Jesus Christ. The Church Age is the first dispensation to follow His incarnation and hypostatic union. We worship Jesus Christ as eternal God; we worship Jesus Christ as true humanity. As God He united with His humanity, as Man He functioned in the prototype divine dynasphere and demonstrated the principle of impeccability which qualified Him to go to the cross. As God He is not able to sin; as true humanity living in the prototype divine dynasphere for 33 years He was able not to sin. His impeccability led Him to the cross where He bore our sins in His own human body [as deity He could not have anything to do with sin]. It is the humanity of Christ that actually achieved the strategic victory of the angelic conflict and therefore made a new strategic situation in many ways. Man was created lower than angels but the Man Christ Jesus is now superior to angels and therefore we worship the God-Man.

The ingredients of worship, therefore, must be related to who and what Jesus Christ is. It is impossible for any believer to worship Jesus Christ unless he knows something about Him. So, once again, the Eucharist is a test. When we come to the Lord's table our ability to concentrate on the person of Christ and His work on the cross is always an examination; it is a way of telling us that we are either failing or succeeding in our spiritual life.

If the believer has doctrine in his right lobe he can express worship commensurate with capacity derived from that doctrine. If he has love of truth or doctrine he can express it in worship, giving concentration to doctrinal teaching. If the believer can apply doctrine, like soteriology and Christology, he can participate in the communion service because he is able to relate the ritual of the bread and the cup with the pertinent doctrine in the Word of God. If the believer has time he can give time to the Lord by his assembly in the local church for Bible class which is, of course, worship. If he has money he can give money but only as God has prospered him.

While the 24 angelic general staff officers gave their crowns they would always have the crowns because they had the source of the gifts. So in giving their crowns they still have the Lord and they still have the source. Therefore another principle of worship is very important: Everything that we have belongs to the Lord. For that reason everything that we have is secure. The Lord is eternal, He cannot in any way be destroyed, whatever He gives us is eternal. And when we give it back to Him in respect and reverence we are expressing therefore the highest form of worship.

The fifth chapter of Revelation deals with worship and we have come down now to the song. They are now singing this great song. The chorus of the elect angels is mentioned in verses 11 and 12.

When it says "I both saw," the personnel of the angelic chorus described in this verse, "and heard," this is the song of the angelic chorus. We note the correct translation of verse eleven. "I heard the voice of many angels around the throne plus the voice of the angelic heralds and the angelic general staff: and their number was beyond counting [an infinite number of angels]." Myriads of myriads and thousands of thousands merely expresses billions, an infinite number of angels.

Verse 12, we notice immediately that we have a present active participle from the verb legw, and legw means to say or to speak, but not here. Here it refers to singing. It says that they sang, the instrumental of manner for the adjective of megaj from fonh. Megaj is the adjective and fwnh is the noun, translated generally "with a great voice" or "with a loud voice."

What they sang is now given. The music with its harmony must have been magnificent beyond description but all we have are the lyrics. The lyrics are the doctrine which closes out this chapter. The lyrics appeal to the mentality of the soul while the melody and the harmony appeal to the emotion of the soul. This, again, emphasises the importance of the mentality of the soul. Only the lyrics are given in the Word of God.

This is what they sang: "The Lamb who has been sacrificed is worthy to receive power." This is not the way you find it in the King James version. The Lamb, of course, refers to our Lord Jesus Christ and the fact that He is worthy is the basis for the rest of the book of Revelation. He is going to give us the history of the world from the time of the Rapture to the end of the world, and He is going to give it to us by opening the history book, the book of the seven seals. Someone has to be worthy to open it. History cannot go on unless there is worthiness somewhere. You remember this in time of historical disaster and difficulty. History always continues because somewhere someone is worthy, some believer who has advanced to maturity as an anonymous hero in the Church Age. So when it says that the Lamb is worthy this is the subject of angelic singing, of angelic worship. The perfect passive participle of the verb sfatw is beautiful Greek. It was changed in the New Testament to the Koine, sfazw, a slur of sfatw. It means in the original writing of the New Testament, so that you could understand, and since understanding doctrine is the objective, to avoid any abstruse system of mystery we have the common language [Koine], and almost anyone can understand a common or gutter language. We have sfazw, meaning to sacrifice, to give one's life, and it is a reference to the cross. The dramatic perfect emphasises the results of the action, the saving work of Christ on the cross, the basis of all worship for it is our Lord Jesus Christ who provided eternal salvation, who defeated Satan in the angelic conflict, and who makes our life meaningful at the present time. We are here for a purpose. There never was and there never will be a group of believers in any period of history who have a more meaningful life than we have. The whole outcome of history in our generation depends upon our decisions with regard to Bible doctrine, and therefore with regard to the principle of perception of doctrine.

It says then, "worthy to receive." The word to "receive" is lambanw and the aorist tense is a gnomic aorist. The aorist tense, being a gnomic aorist, is for doctrine. It is an axiomatic concept to receive honour and this must come from doctrine, the gnomic aorist for a doctrine which is axiomatic. The active voice: our glorified Lord produces the action of the verb through His strategic victory on the cross. This is the infinitive of actual result.

Next comes the seven descriptions of our Lord's third royal patent. These are all, by the way, in the accusative singular. These are seven direct objects of the verb. The first one is the accusative singular of the noun dunamij and it is correctly translated "power." In fact, our Lord Jesus Christ received two categories of power which are related to His two advents. In the first advent Christ received power which is the prototype divine dynasphere with its eight gates making it possible for our Lord to be qualified to go to the cross and bear our sins. In the second advent Christ receives another category of power based on the success of the first advent, and that is the power to rule the world. That is the tactical victory over Satan. Satan is superseded at the second advent. In the first advent Christ received the power to sustain His humanity and win; in the second advent Christ receives the power to rule and to win. Notice that in each case dunamij relates to being a winner.

The second description of our Lord's third royal patent is the accusative singular direct object of the noun ploutoj and this comes from power. It means wealth and abundance, wealth in the sense of money, in the sense of security, that which enriches one, hence prosperity. This is a reference to the prosperity of the Millennium. Our Lord's rulership of the world will be characterised by prosperity. All temporal and eternal prosperity is related to who and what Christ is.

“wisdom,” this is number three, sofia, which is not only the Bible, the mind of Christ, but all application of doctrine is related to it. It belongs to Christ. Wisdom is the application of doctrine to history. Our Lord’s Millennial reign will be characterised by the greatest wisdom ever known to man. To possess wisdom one must have all the facts. Our Lord will have all the facts about every circumstance in His Millennial reign and He will deal sagaciously with those facts, therefore sound the judgment and discretion of our Lord’s rule, but by application these all belong to us. If they belong to Him because of His wonderful strategic victory these things by application belong to us.

Number four is the accusative singular direct object of the noun i)xsuj. It is another word for power but it is a different kind of power. This is endowed power, ability. With the third royal patent goes the ability to rule in time and eternity. Some of you are never going to reach your potential or your ability without truth. The possession of truth, the possession of Bible doctrine is the basis for exploitation of ability and without it you will never reach your potential in time, and certainly you will never be one of the anonymous heroes so necessary for the perpetuation of our nations history and prosperity. Of course, each one of these descriptive words refers to the humanity of Christ and, again, relates to His third royal patent. His resurrection, ascension and session is His ability, His strength, His energy plus His ability. That is the real key: to have energy plus ability. Many people have energy but no ability. The ability means acquired ability and they have never directed their energy to channels whereby their ability can be acquired. If energy is directed in the wrong channels it is because people have a wrong scale of values and they do not realise what is important in life. They never learn to concentrate so that their energy can be properly directed. The strength to rule combines energy plus ability to rule, to lead, to control. Energy is absolutely no good without ability. That is the great key in this principle.

Number five is timh again, “honour.” The highest honour ever given is given to the humanity of Christ after the ascension. This honour centres around His third royal patent awarded to Him as a result of His strategic victory of the cross.

Next comes glory. Just as honour was given to Christ as a result of His victory of the first advent glory will be given to Christ at the second advent. That will be fulfilled by those who succeed as anonymous heroes in this dispensation.

Finally, our last word is the accusative singular direct object from e)ulogia, which means the act of blessing. It refers to the fact that all temporal and eternal blessing comes from the glorified Lord Jesus Christ. Several categories of blessing are involved. First of all blessings for the royal family in time. We have studied this under the doctrine of logistical grace and the doctrine of supergrace blessing. Secondly, blessing for the royal family in eternity. We have studied this under the profile of the winner, the doctrine of the crowns, the doctrine of the judgment seat of Christ. All blessing for you and for me as Christians, members of the royal family of God both in time and in eternity, is based upon our Lord’s strategic victory at the cross. Hence, all blessing, either temporal or eternal originates from our Lord Jesus Christ and apart from Christ there is no blessing in time. You can have success but success without blessing will make you miserable and disturbed, so simply being successful is meaningless. When it is a blessing then you have the capacity for happiness.

Translation of verse 12: “And they sang loudly, The Lamb who has been sacrificed [the spiritual death of Christ bearing our sins] is worthy to receive power [reference to the prototype divine dynasphere at the first advent and the power to rule at the second advent], and wealth [the prosperity of our Lord’s third royal patent], and wisdom [the sagacity of our Lord’s Millennial reign], and strength [energy and ability to rule the world during the Millennium], and honour [from the strategic victory of the first advent], and glory [from the tactical victory of the second advent], and blessing [both temporal and eternal blessing from the royal family originates from our Lord Jesus Christ].”

We need to emphasise the word ixuj, translated “strength.” It is a word that includes both energy and ability. Energy without ability is misdirected arrogance as in self-righteousness, as in self-righteous crusading. Ability without energy is lack of motivation, lack of self-discipline, and therefore becomes the arrogance of laziness. The energy of hard work produces ability, and ability channels hard work into fields of productive success. Energy plus ability equals the true drive in life. Both energy and ability must be related to doctrine and wisdom, in other words, truth, otherwise a pseudo-drive is created. Our Lord’s wisdom coupled with His energy and ability sets in motion the greatest rule in all of human history.

That brings us to the chorus of regenerate mankind singing to the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ. The corrected translation of verse thirteen: “Then I heard every creature who is in heaven.” Now who is in heaven at that time in the future? Believers of the Church Age, the royal family of God. Then we find creatures on earth, living believers at the time of the Rapture, “and on the earth, and under the earth,” dead believers at the Rapture, “also on the sea,” living believers at the Rapture, “and everyone who is in them [who died at sea during the Church Age], singing to him who sits on the throne [God the Father], and to the Lamb [God the Son who executed the Father’s plan].” So at this point believers in heaven join the chorus.

When it says “in heaven” in the first prepositional phrase we are talking about all believers of the Church Age. They are there as the sea of glass which we have studied in Revelation chapter four, verse 6. “On earth” simply indicates the resurrection of living believers at the Rapture. “Under the earth” is the second category which indicates that the people who die before the Rapture are also there. But the thing that is interesting here has to do with the sea. It says in the middle of verse 13 — “and everyone who is in them,” i.e., every believer who died at sea. Why make the sea a separate category? It is a reference again to believers indicating the fact that because about two thirds or more of the earth is covered with water, and since man is quite often found on the sea, the same thing is true for them as on land. The personnel of the chorus in heaven is composed of all Church Age believers, the only members of the human race at that time who will have their resurrection body. They are resurrected from both the land masses and the seas of planet earth. The point here is that all have resurrection bodies.

Both God the Father, the author of the plan, and God the Son, the executor of the plan are honoured in this song. At this point the work of the Father and the Son is accomplished but the work of God the Holy Spirit continues on earth, but it should be noted that any praise and worship to the Father is also praise and worship to the Holy Spirit. His work is not finished until the end of the Millennium but this does not mean that He is left out of the worship.

“and power,” ruling power, kratoj, the sovereignty, the ruling power of eternity belongs to the members of the Trinity.

“belongs to them forever and ever” means that eternity will once and for all eliminate all creature arrogance. The thing that destroys mankind is creature arrogance. There will be no doubt either among elect angels or regenerate mankind regarding the source of victory in the angelic conflict, nor the source of blessing or the one who gets the credit forever and ever. Without arrogance and evil competition it produces heaven in the presence of God and it will be a great blessing for all. It staggers the imagination. There is no human genius which can penetrate into eternity and begin to realise the total concept of love, appreciation, worship, glory, which regenerate creatures will be capable of having once they are in the eternal state. It stands at the moment as a principle of prophecy but in the resurrection body it will be a reality of total worship of our Lord. No one has yet to see the tremendous capacity or the total ability of believers in the resurrection body to worship God.

So there is a final response from the angelic hierarchy to what is sung by the Church in verse 13. “Then the four angelic creatures kept saying, Amen [I believe it].” They kept saying this because we have the imperfect active indicative of the verb legw. This is the angelic response to what the Church says. And why are angels responding? Because Jesus Christ as a Man is higher than angels — His third royal patent. We are royalty and in resurrection bodies we are higher than angels, and therefore, at last in eternity angels will be responding to what we sing.

“Then the angelic general staff fell down and worshipped.” This is the silent worship of thinking doctrine previously learned and now applied. It is fitting that angelic creatures who wear the uniform of wisdom should declare the antiphonal response from their maximum knowledge of doctrine. The uniform of wisdom emphasises to us the importance of knowing God from maximum perception of doctrine.

These four angelic heralds are the smartest of elect angels and they demonstrate a principle when they say, “Amen.” The smarter you are the more you can come to appreciate who and what God is. As far as we are concerned, the principle: it is smart to believe doctrine. Believing doctrine is the difference between academic perception and the inculcation of e)pignwsij. The e)pignwsij doctrine will result in spiritual growth and produce the wisdom that one needs to glorify the Lord now and forever. The uniform of wisdom is the eternal decoration given to these four angelic heralds as an eternal reward and a monument to the persistence of their positive volition toward doctrine during prehistory. Their occupation with Christ through maximum doctrine in their souls gives them the privilege of winding up this chapter with the antiphonal response to the hymn of victory in heaven. This is in contrast to the shouting or the shrieking of Amen during sermons in a church, which is superficial, disruptive, meaningless, and even arrogant. For “Amen” belongs to those with wisdom as a part of their eternal worship or as a part of their appropriate congregational response in liturgy.

The physical attitude or posture of the angelic general staff is one of total humility, emphasizing the importance of humility in our relationship to the Lord, in our relationship to worship of Him, and in relationship to orienting to life. Note that these are the second highest rank in the order of battle in the army of elect angels and the posture of humility is not hypocrisy here because it is accompanied by thought and the thought is expressed in the posture. The posture without the thought is hypocrisy, it is ritual without reality. Remember that worship is thinking doctrine. Emotion is only legitimate in worship when responding to thought, and these angels are responding to thought.

The last phrase, “that liveth forever and ever,” does not occur again in verse 14.

via Daniel 9:24-27

We will never see the unrestrained disaster which is coming to planet earth after the Rapture of the Church. We now move into chapter six where we begin to see this concept developed. One of the concepts that we have noted briefly is the concept of energy and ability. We noted it in relationship to worship.

The principle

1. Energy without ability is misdirected arrogance. Energy without ability produces mental attitude arrogance or inordinate ambition. When people have energy and no ability they become trouble makers, they cause trouble.
2. Energy without ability results in self-righteous arrogance, crusader arrogance. Crusader and self-righteous arrogance always combine to form the person who sticks his nose into someone else's business, intrudes on their privacy, becomes a gossip, a maligner, the person who tries to run your life, the person who tries to control your life, tries to intimidate you.

3. Energy without ability produces conspiracy arrogance, sexual arrogance, iconoclastic arrogance, morality arrogance, the arrogance of Christian service, all too often. People who have energy but no ability to serve the Lord are always using their energy in pseudo systems of Christian production.

4. Ability without energy is lack of motivation and lack of self-discipline. In other words, the arrogance of laziness.

5. The controlled energy of hard work produces ability, and the ability channels hard work into fields of productive success. Ability is not inherent, it is acquired through hard work, through dedication, through plugging.

6. Energy plus ability equals the true drive in life.

7. Energy is basically created in the body but ability is created in the soul, and ability is created in the motivation of the soul, not the IQ in the soul.

8. Motivation in the soul produces the decisions to take in doctrine consistently, every day if necessary, regardless of circumstances, regardless of discouragement.

9. Both energy and ability are harnessed through perception and application of Bible doctrine.

10. Therefore, both energy and ability must be related to doctrine and wisdom, otherwise a pseudo drive is created. All pseudo drives terminate in the cosmic system.

Our Lord's wisdom and ability during His first advent was derived from His residence and function in the prototype divine dynasphere and it resulted in the greatest of all victories in human history, the strategic victory of the cross. Our Lord's wisdom coupled with His energy and ability at the second advent sets in motion the greatest reign in all of human history, the tactical victory of the second advent. In the meantime our Lord has provided the divine dynasphere for the royal family so that believers in the Church Age can face and overcome every disaster in life. Our Lord has seen fit through the vehicle of eschatology to give to us an account of the greatest period of historical disaster, duplicated often in our lives and in our lifetime but with a difference. We have the means of meeting any disaster, any tragedy in life and overcoming the situation.

We are now moving away from the concept of historical trends in this dispensation to the concept of historical trends based on prophecy. Historical trends of the Tribulation are determined by prophecy. Therefore we note an introductory principle to Revelation chapters six through eighteen.

1. Historical trends in the Tribulation are determined by prophecy. The Church Age is the dispensation of no prophecy. Hence, as an era of historical trends without prophecy they are determined by some means other than prophecy.
2. In other words, during the Church Age historical trends are determined by the decisions, the scale of values, the volition of the royal family of God [Church Age believers].
3. In the Church Age, as goes the believer so goes the historical trends. The dispensation of the Church is the only historical era in which the divine dynasphere is provided for the believers as the means of executing God's plan.
4. Positive decisions to live in the divine dynasphere produce the historical uptrend.
5. Negative volition and decisions to live in the cosmic system produce the historical downtrend.
6. Decisions determine environment in this age, not environment decisions.
7. In all other dispensations or historical eras human decisions and actions were fed into the computer of divine decrees so that historical trends were programmed and revealed through prophecy.

Before we get into chapter six we need to note something about Israel's time clock after the Babylonian captivity. This is given in Daniel 9:24-27. The Babylonian captivity was the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline to the southern kingdom by Nebuchanezzar and the Chaldean empire in the year BC 586. It lasted for 70 years. The temple was completed under the ministry of Haggai the priest and Zechariah the prophet in BC 516. The Persians sent back groups of people before this time but the time is measured from the time between the fifth cycle of discipline in 586 and the completion of the second temple in Jerusalem in 516. So we have after this period a new prophecy by which Israel's historical trends are declared, beginning in 516 BC. This prophecy which would follow is called the prophecy of the seventy weeks. But that isn't the correct translation, that is the one you get in the King James version. It is actually the seventy times seven, as the correct Hebrew says. So we have a period of 490 years in which one prophecy gives the whole story of the historical trends in Israel.

These historical trends are divided into three increments in the prophecy. The first is called seven weeks or forty-nine years. In that first increment we have the first 49 years of historical trends to client nation Israel. In this period the king of Persia issued a decree in April of 445 BC to restore Jerusalem, to rebuild it. This is the story of the book of Nehemiah and especially Nehemiah chapter two. Forty-nine years after that decree the walls and the streets of the holy city were completed. That is the first 49 years.

The second increment is a period of sixty-two weeks or 434 years. That period, the second increment which follows without interruption, bring us down to AD 32 when Christ was crucified. Between Daniel 9:26 and 27 we have the third increment. These first two increments together bring us down to Daniel 9:26. Then there is a gap, and we have already studied the doctrine of intercalation, so that the third increment of Israel's historical trends is one week of seven years, and that is the Tribulation. The seven-sealed Doomsday book deals with this same subject. The third increment, the period of the Tribulation, or Daniel's seventieth week is the subject of this chapter.

As we observe Daniel 9:24-27 remember that there are three increments, two in the Old Testament down to the time of our Lord's crucifixion [the seven weeks and the 434 years], Daniel 9:24-26, but when we get down to verse 27 we are going to skip the Church Age and verse 27 will be Daniel's seventieth week.

Verse 24 — "Seventy times seven [490 years] has been decreed for your people [the Jews] and your holy city [Jerusalem], to finish the transgression [in other words, to serve out your sentence under the 5th cycle of discipline. It will begin again in AD 70 and it is finished at the second advent of Christ], to make an end of sin [the baptism of fire at the second advent], to make reconciliation for iniquity [the regathering of Israel at the second advent, their restoration as a client nation to God in the Millennium], to bring in everlasting righteousness [the resurrection of the Old Testament saints at the second advent], to seal up the vision and the prophecy [the second advent will terminate the Jewish Age with the Jews and their 490 years], to anoint the holy of holies [the new temple of the Millennium]." Note that all six of these items will be fulfilled by the second advent of Christ.

Verses 25 and 26, the prophecy of the first two increments.

Verse 25, "Therefore you are to understand and apply this prophecy [because it is the historical trends for Israel from the time of their coming back in 516 BC into the land to around 30-32 AD] from the issuing of the decree to restore and rebuild Jerusalem to Messiah the Prince [AD 30] there will be seven weeks [or seven times seven, 49 years] and sixty-two times seven [434 years]; it [the walls of Jerusalem] will be built again, with the streets and the moat, even in times of distress [the opposition of Sanballat and Tobiah]."

Verse 26, "Then after sixty-two weeks [after the second increment] Messiah will be cut off and have no one [for Himself, referring to Christ being judged for our sins]. Then the people [Roman people] of the prince who is to come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary [the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline in AD 70]. And its end [the end of Jerusalem] with a flood [the Roman army overran the city]; furthermore, to the end [of the fifth cycle of discipline, the times of the Gentiles] wars and desolations are decreed." The Jews will always have wars during that time.

Between verses 26 and 27 we have the dispensation of intercalation, the Church Age.

Verse 27, “And he [the prince that shall come, the dictator of the revived Roman empire] will make a peace treaty with the many [Jews] for one week [a seven-year peace treaty], but in the middle of the week [Tribulation] he will put a stop to the sacrifice and food offering; and cause the protection of the abomination of desolation [statue of himself], even to the end of the Tribulation. Consequently what is determined by prophecy will be poured out on the desolater [the Roman dictator will be judged].”

Daniel merely gives us an outline and as we move into our passage we are going to get the details not given in Daniel. This outline of Daniel takes us down to AD 30 and then skips over the Church Age for the last seven years. When the Rapture occurs time has stopped for Israel as far as God’s plan for them as a nation is concerned, and time will not resume until the Church is removed. Then they are given seven more years, the seven years of Daniel 9:27.

The outline of Revelation chapter six is as follows:

Verses 1-13, the historical trends of the Tribulation [general, not specific].

Verses 14-16, the nuclear activity of the Tribulation.

Verse 17, the anticipation of the baptism of fire.

The first seal: verse one gives us the seal, verse two gives us the characteristics of the seal.

Verse 1, we have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated “next.” We have the aorist active indicative of the verb o(rai which has to do with seeing, “And next I saw.” The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It takes the factor action of these historical trends extended over the period of the Tribulation and gathers them into a single whole. In the first six seals we are going to see things that happen throughout the Tribulation. In the seventh seal we are going to see things that happen at a specific time in the Tribulation. The active voice: the apostle John is the author of the book of Revelation, the one who produces the action in seeing this vision. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality. We are going to learn a great deal about what is happening now by what is going to happen in the future. People talk about learning from the past; we are going to learn from the future.

Next comes a temporal conjunction o(te which introduces a temporal clause and is translated “when,” “Next I watched when.” And then we have the nominative neuter singular subject a)ρνιον, translated “the Lamb.” It is a reference to the Lord Jesus Christ and His strategic victory at the first advent, His victory at the cross. As the victory in the angelic conflict our Lord is worthy and qualified to open the seals which portray the historical trends of the Tribulation. The seals represent the prophecy of historical trends which is the pattern for all historical trends or dispensations except the Church Age. The Church Age is the mystery dispensation and its trends are determined by individual decisions rather than prophetic dissertation; it is the dispensation of the divine dynasphere, the dispensation of the royal family. In all other dispensations the impact of human volition is the printout of the divine decrees expressing the foreknowledge of God. That is exactly what we are going to see in the Doomsday book: an expression of the divine decrees for the Tribulation, an expression of the foreknowledge of God. Just as the omniscience of God programs the computer of divine decrees with regard to our thoughts, our motives, our decisions, our actions, so the foreknowledge of God takes certain printouts and reduces them to eschatological anticipation. So the foreknowledge of God provides in prophecy seven fat cows and seven lean cows. The seven fat cows are going to be seven years of prosperity; the seven lean cows are going to be seven years of disaster. And they are all going to be merged into one. Now, these seven years of prosperity and disaster in the Tribulation [there are not fourteen years in the Tribulation] are seven years of prosperity and seven of disaster all at the same time, depending on your attitude to doctrine. In time of great disaster you can have great prosperity but in time of great prosperity you can have great disaster.

Genesis 39:1-23: The principle of inequality

Most people think that inequality is a bad thing and some people think that inequality is a good thing, depending on which end of the spectrum they find themselves. But actually inequality is an historical trend, an inevitable historical trend. At the end of chapter six we are going to find in the Tribulation seven categories of society and they are all unequal. There is inequality in the Tribulation, there is inequality in the Millennium, there is inequality now in the Church Age, and there has been inequality in the past.

The first thing that we note is that society always exists in a state of inequality. There never has been and there never will be a time in history when equality can be or will be achieved. There are two reasons for this fact. First of all the devil is the ruler of this world and gives preferential treatment to his own cosmic slaves. Secondly, the sovereignty of God has made free will or volition the issue in the angelic conflict, which means the impossibility of equality in the human race. It is impossible. There will always be inequality because free will is the issue in the angelic conflict. That means that for volition to be the issue there must be freedom, and freedom guarantees inequality. Hence, there are two sources of inequality: the evil of Satan's system and the freedom issue in the divine policy of the laws of divine establishment. A third concept can be added: there is inequality at birth combined with the concept of equality of opportunity to fail or succeed. We are born unequal but we are also born with opportunity. The very fact that God gives us life after birth means that we do have opportunity, opportunity of course to fail or succeed in life. However, inequality continues to exist whether you fail or succeed since we do not succeed or fail even to the same degree. Inequality in itself is not a bad thing, only the arrogance which resents that inequality or the self-pity which fails to adjust to that inequality.

Note further that from the seven categories of humanity which we will find at the end of this chapter that inequality exists in both time of prosperity and time of adversity. The Tribulation is a time of terrible adversity but there will still be inequality. In time of great prosperity there is still inequality. In fact you can't have prosperity without inequality. If you are going to have prosperity you have to have someone who takes the responsibility, someone who invests, for example. That immediately separates from the ones who are the recipients of their pay.

There is a good and a bad state of inequality. Good inequality exists in the environment of freedom; bad inequality exists in the environment of freedom.

So whether historical prosperity or historical adversity, freedom or tyranny, inequality is inescapable and an unsolvable fact of history. Those who want to solve the problem of inequality, generally the liberals and the arrogant crusaders, always create new inequalities, as illustrated by the French revolution. Equality was the password of the French revolution and by sticking with that password they actually developed new inequalities. The real solution to inequality is not equality but happiness and the pursuit of happiness. There will always be inequality. The point is: the inevitable need within equality is happiness, happiness in all states of inequality. That means the freedom to pursue happiness. Happiness can and does exist in every category of society: some poor people are happy; some rich people are happy. Some failures are happy and some people who are successful are happy. Happiness exists among those who are unequal. We all have the same shot at happiness. Happiness or unhappiness depends on the believer's attitude toward Bible doctrine.

We are going to look at Joseph. Joseph was high on the inequality scale. He was what we might call top dog in his family. Being one of the younger sons was very bad because there is always a group of people who can't think straight and say that time and grades should be the issue, not ability; promotion on the basis of, How long have you been here?

What happens when some people are aware that in some way they are on the lower end of the totem pole is that they get into cosmic one, and they get jealous, bitter, vindictive and involved in self-pity. Self-pity is one of the most subtle and one of the worst types of arrogance, because then you start screaming equality from arrogance and you are very unhappy, and unhappy people become troublemakers. All unhappy people have the potential for becoming great troublemakers. The issue is: Are you adjusted to life? Do you have happiness where you are?

Jacob's favourite son was Joseph, therefore ten of the brothers envied him. The ten brothers say, We are older, we have time and grade, therefore we should be running the thing. But Joseph became their leader. He had integrity, he had honour, he was by far the most honourable. Only eleven were in the picture at the time, Benjamin was too young. So there are eleven brothers and the one at the bottom is promoted over all of them and given his insignia of rank, a coat of many colours. His father gave him a tartan jacket and made him the chief over his brothers. And he reported their failures faithfully! So obviously there was envy and they plotted to kill Joseph. They were going to use murder to solve their problem but Reuben, the oldest brother, had enough sense to intervene and save Joseph's life. But Joseph goes from the top to being a slave. Joseph has to go to school and school for him is slavery. Being a slave is not necessarily demeaning. It can be but that isn't really the issue. Joseph is going to be a slave for quite a few years but that is a part of his education. The Jews were slaves for four generations and they stayed slaves for four generations, there was nothing they could do to break out of slavery, and yet there was great happiness in those four generations among certain believers, even though they were slaves and obviously unequal. And it was never changed until Moses came into the picture.

So Joseph goes to Egypt as a slave and that looks the end of the line — life is over, it is all through! All of this happened so that Joseph might realise the importance of our Lord, occupation with Christ, as per 1 Peter 1:7,8, and to prepare Joseph, to educate Joseph to be the greatest man in his generation in history, to be the Prime Minister of the most powerful empire that existed in that generation. To do so means to pass a lot of inequality tests. He starts at the bottom, "down there." There is nothing demeaning "down there," he is a believer "down there." He worked hard "down there," he had tremendous leadership ability and was a leader "down there"; he will be a leader at the top. And the Lord was with Joseph and gave him success in whatever he did.

This is the background for historical trends. It all took place in prison. As a result of being in prison Joseph became the greatest man of his day. Not only that, he became one of the greatest believers of all time. By the standards of human success he was the most successful. God provided the opportunity on the basis of the doctrine of historical trends. He will interpret historical trends. A dream is a prophecy; all historical trends are based on prophecy. He will be able to predict fourteen years of historical trends and do it in the area of the economy. The entire world was about to face a great depression, but always before a great depression there is a period of great prosperity which hides and disguises the coming of the depression. Greatest periods of prosperity in history have inevitably resulted in a depression. Great prosperity is often the calm before the storm and when the storm breaks the world will be caught off guard, but not Egypt, because one man is able to interpret historical trends from the Word of God as it existed in that prison and as it was presented to him through the dreams of three people.

The first few words of Genesis 40:1, "after these things" certainly covers a multitude of injustices. A lot of people can say "I was unjustly treated" and they really weren't, but Joseph really was, so he doesn't say anything — yet. After being hated and persecuted by his brothers and after being tossed in a pit, and after being sold into slavery and shackled to a caravan, after being sold into slavery in Egypt, after being falsely accused by a frustrated woman and being cast into prison, he certainly shows a remarkable application of doctrine. No bitterness. One thing that none of us can ever afford, even for one second, is to be bitter about anything that has happened to us that has been unfair. Most of us will have realised by now that the ruler of this world simply cannot administer any kind of perfect environment, and sooner or later you are going to receive some unfair treatment. Unfair treatment is always a test to see if you will go in for one of the perhaps more subtle forms of arrogance: bitterness. No person who is a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ is ever going to advance as long as he is bitter. Joseph certainly had an opportunity for bitterness, more than most people, and he certainly was not bitter at this point. So he passed the prosperity test, he passed the persecution test, he passed the success test, he passed the bitterness test.

The cupbearer is the man who always stands at the right hand of the king and makes all presentations to him. The baker is in charge of all of the food in the palace and is a prince. One of these two noblemen decided to poison the Pharaoh. Which one is it? That is the problem that the Pharaoh was facing. So like a smart Pharaoh he put them both in jail until he could find out who was guilty.

Verse 4 now shows us the pettiness of Potiphar. Once a mistake is made like Potiphar did, unjust treatment of someone, and there is no rectification of it, obviously then, he is on his way down. He has now become a very petty person. He probably suspected that his wife was lying and now all of his lands and his castle are falling apart because the only one who could administer them properly is in jail. By a series of events, prosperous and adverse, God is leading Joseph to the place of world leadership, as per Romans 8:28. Potiphar has demoted Joseph from rulership in his castle to being a servant in his prison. So Joseph is now the servant of his two rivals in jail. Potiphar, of course, thought that he was hurting Joseph by doing this. Potiphar didn't realise it but he was hurting himself, he was pushing Joseph closer to becoming the greatest man of his age. As high court officials the two noblemen were permitted a servant and the pettiness on the part of Potiphar serves to further the plan of God, though it wasn't intended that way. Later on Joseph would say to his ten brothers: "You meant it for evil; God meant it for blessing," another way of saying "all things work together for good."

As a believer it is almost inevitable that somewhere along the line when you are doing well spiritually you are going to become the recipient of some form of injustice, some act of pettiness. When these things come along they can be very distracting unless you apply the doctrine you have learned. If you fail then you go down in your spiritual life, temporarily or maybe even permanently. Pettiness is intolerable to people who have become oriented to grace and that makes it all the more of a test. Every act of pettiness, while it is designed to hurt you, actually will promote you if you handle it by the application of Bible doctrine. And if God doesn't promote you, you are not promoted. So here is the pettiness test that Joseph passed with flying colours. All great men, all men who are going to be great, all men who are going to reach the peak of success in any field, must as a part of their leadership profile have the ability to overlook pettiness by the application of impersonal love to the situation. Petty and mean people are small people and inevitably, if you succeed in something, you are going to encounter them.

And also, if you are on the other side of the fence, remember that pettiness is a boomerang. You hurt yourself, not the object of your pettiness. While given a very menial task Joseph is faithful, he is uncomplaining. God makes the most demeaning and small tasks in life a source of happiness and blessing. Joseph is now low on the totem pole again. He is a servant, he is a slave, but he is very happy. The two noblemen in the cell are very unhappy. Potiphar who has the castle nearby is also very unhappy. So being successful doesn't mean being happy. God will provide prosperity to the soul that seeks Him but if you think that you are going to have prosperity without a testing or two you are wrong. Your prosperity will never bring you happiness unless you pass the tests that go with it. The wonderful thing about Joseph is his phenomenal humility, a humility which does not consider any job demeaning. In a place of humility and gross injustice obviously Joseph is keeping his eyes on the Lord.

Verse 5, Eventually the two men, the cupbearer and the baker, had a dream the same night and each dream had a meaning of its own. This is the turning point because the dream is Bible doctrine, before the completion of the canon of scripture. A dream was one way to receive doctrine. The only trouble is that these men are not capable of understanding what they dream because they have no frame of reference from Bible doctrine.

Verse 6, Notice that when Joseph came to them in the morning he was a very happy person. He is in a very difficult situation, yet he has great blessing and happiness. He saw that they were dejected. Note: Humility produces objectivity. Objectivity shows concern for others. In other words, Joseph isn't standing around complaining about his life.

The two men are very quick to tell Joseph their problem because they are preoccupied with themselves. If Joseph had been bitter or cynical as a result of his circumstances he would have ignored the depressed state of the two noblemen, or he would have ridiculed their situation. So to be great in the adverse circumstances of life there must be the principle of application which comes from impersonal love. That is exactly what Joseph does.

Joseph interprets the dream of the cupbearer but in verse 14 is the first time we have seen a weakness in Joseph. He just couldn't resist the temptation. Who is the one who is going to make Joseph great in his day? The Lord, the only one who can. When you start to lean on people as Joseph does here you just simply postpone God's plan for your life. Joseph knows exactly what is going to happen, in three days this man is going to be back standing beside Pharaoh. And what does Joseph do? He was doing so well when he came in that morning and saw them dejected and asked the question. So he says: "When all goes well with you, remember me [put in a good word for me], mention me to Pharaoh and get me out of this prison." There is only one person who can get Joseph out of prison and that is the Lord Jesus Christ. Joseph is talking to the wrong person.

After passing the test day after day he now flunks the same test. "For I was forcibly carried off from the land of the Hebrews, and even here I have done nothing to deserve being put in prison." True, but it is just as if he is ignoring the fact that the Lord knows it too. The Lord knew billions of years ago that he was innocent. The Lord will get him out in the Lord's time.

In life, timing is everything. Better to sit down in a demeaning situation until the Lord decides to move you up. But if you say: "I'm tired of being in a demeaning situation, I'm going to move myself up," you have just moved yourself down. Joseph, as we will see, lost two years by this little phraseology right here: "I've done nothing wrong, get me out of here."

In verse 16 we have to deal with another dream. Joseph told the chief baker what his dream meant. Notice that Joseph was honest. You have to realise the importance of integrity and one of the principles of integrity is to level with people. This does not mean sticking the nose into someone else's business. This man asked a question. There comes a time when you will be asked for an opinion and then you have to decide that this is the time for honesty. Joseph is communicating doctrine here. Pharaoh was going to not going to lift the chief baker's head up, he was going to lift it off, "and hang you on a tree."

Verse 23, The chief cupbearer has the best memory in the land, he doesn't forget anything. So notice how he uses his memory: "The chief cupbearer, however, did not remember Joseph, but forgot him." The chief cupbearer is not the kind of a person who would forget, but the Lord shut down his memory. Why? Because Joseph still has one lesson to learn and he will meditate on it for two years in jail. He will remember that it is the Lord who gets him out of jail, not some influential nobleman. Remember Jeremiah 17, "Cursed is the man who puts his trust in man and makes flesh his arm." So Joseph failed on this occasion, he went to influence peddling. But it is not accident that a man with a perfect memory forgot Joseph. This was divine discipline, a lesson that Joseph had to learn. Because Joseph relied on the memory of a human being instead of the memory of the Lord the Lord caused the memory of the man to fail. Joseph had to learn the lesson of utter dependence on the Lord before he could be promoted to the palace of Pharaoh. The administration of Joseph's was the greatest that Egypt ever had outside of the one Moses had for a short time and it was free from influence peddling. In the years to come Joseph must not depend on Pharaoh, Pharaoh will depend on Joseph. It took Joseph two more years to learn this lesson. God's grace is sufficient for every situation.

Chapter 41 opens two years later. Again, you can fill in the interim very simply: Joseph was learning a great lesson. Now it is time for Pharaoh to have a dream. It is time to advance Joseph again because he has learned his lesson. He had been prepared for all of this by the demands of the faith-rest drill, by the tremendous pressures he had faced.

There are four ways of receiving doctrine in the Old Testament. First of all there are dreams, as we have here. Secondly, visions; third, trances. Visions and trances belong to prophets. Anyone could dream a dream. God spoke to many people before the completion of the canon of scripture, believers and unbelievers, but not now, the canon of scripture is closed. Dreams will open up in the Tribulation but right now it is a closed issue. Trances and visions belong to prophets only and in the time of Joseph the spoken word from God belonged to either a prophet or a priest.

In chapter 41:1-4 Pharaoh received from God a fourteen-year historical trend in the economy of the world, not just Egypt. Then the dream was repeated so that the dullest mind could grasp it. Pharaoh isn't stupid but he certainly has two perfect illustrations and he could remember them. People often do not remember dreams but these dreams must be remembered, for the most obvious reason in the world: these are not ordinary dreams, this is the Word of God dealing with the subject of historical trends. The problem is that he knew what the dream was but couldn't understand what it meant. "In the morning his mind was disturbed." And no one could interpret them. The reason they couldn't is because it is the Word of God as it existed at that moment. No matter how smart a person is as an unbeliever or a negative believer he simply cannot interpret the Word of God.

Now Joseph demonstrates sheer common sense, brilliant application of doctrine. The Egyptians were also sticklers for cleanliness. Joseph made the people who came to get him slow down so that he could come into the presence of Pharaoh as he should, acceptable, the right type of appearance for the situation.

Verse 16, "God will give Pharaoh the answer he desires." Joseph has tremendous humility. All truly great people have an unshakeable humility. It would have been easy to get proud and put a price on the interpretation. You never bargain with the truth. Note verse 25: "God has told Pharaoh what he is about to do." Joseph has just said that this is a prophecy. We live in the dispensation of no prophecy. No historical trends are determined by prophecy in this dispensation. We do not have dreams and the interpretation of dreams, we have doctrine and truth. But this was back in part of the Age of Israel and prophecy determines historical trends. What we are about to study in Revelation chapter six are historical trends based on prophecy, just as Joseph is now going to reveal historical trends based on prophecy. The whole future history of the world is going to unfold before us in the book of Revelation and it will do so through prophecy. In other words, outside of our own dispensation, the Church Age, all historical trends are determined by prophecy.

So Joseph explains the dreams and the difference between them to Pharaoh. There will first be great prosperity. Remember the principle: All historical economic depressions always come suddenly. There are signs that they are coming but they come suddenly out of great prosperity. In a period of great prosperity people over extend and build up credit beyond what credit can stand. So there were seven years of great prosperity and then seven years of economic depression. One person understands the doctrine and the person who understands doctrine is the only person who can make the application of doctrine.

Principle: You have to understand doctrine before you can apply it. If you don't you are going to distort doctrine and you are going to be shocked when things do not turn out the way you think they should. Learn doctrine before you apply doctrine.

Here we have Joseph now making the correct application but he does not ask for the job. This is advice, this is application. All good advice obviously is application of doctrine and he says in verse 33, "And let Pharaoh look for a man who is discerning and wise, and let Pharaoh appoint a commission over the land ..."

Verse 40 — Joseph is promoted and there is the beginning of the greatest man of his day. Joseph had learned his lesson very well.

The principle from all of this: Just as the omniscience of God programs the computer of divine decrees with every thought, motive, decision and action of every person in history, so the foreknowledge of God takes those printouts and reduces them to eschatology (prophecy). Eschatological anticipation of historical trends is necessary for right decisions on the part of the believer. Here our illustration deals with economic decisions. For example, the foreknowledge of God provided the prophecy of the seven fat cows and the seven lean cows. The omniscience of God fed it into the computer; the foreknowledge of God took the printout and reduced it to prophecy. The prophecy was revealed to the pertinent person in a dream.

When Joseph interpreted Pharaoh's dream — the prophecy of prosperity and depression — he outlined with it in application the policy which resulted in Joseph becoming Prime Minister of Egypt. The dream of Genesis 41 came to Pharaoh as an expression of divine foreknowledge, a prophecy of historical trends for fourteen years. But only Joseph could actually interpret this dream.

The application for us is going to be going to Revelation chapter six, looking at the people of the Tribulation. The Tribulation is a period of seven years, Daniel's seventieth week. In that seven years there are going to be two categories of people. This is a period of concentrated historical disaster and we will see in chapter six that in the most disastrous period of history from the standpoint of its trends you can have great prosperity and blessing or you can have great cursing and discipline, and that your attitude as a believer toward doctrine determines whether it is going to be prosperity in the midst of adversity and historical disaster or cursing and discipline in the midst of historical disaster. In other words, for us looking at Revelation six Joseph's fourteen years are compressed into seven. No matter how bad things get economically you can prosper in a time of historical disaster. But you cannot do it apart from doctrine. That is the application. For the positive believer there is prosperity in historical disaster but for the negative believer there is disaster in time of prosperity.

Revelation 6:1 — "Next I watched when the Lamb [the title of Christ in the first advent, referring to both salvation and the strategic victory of the cross]." So we have a subject so far in our verse. Then we come to the verb, the aorist active indicative of anoigw. It means ordinarily to open but here it means to break open. The constative aorist refers to the momentary action of breaking that seal, the first seal, and we will meet in verse 2 the first horseman. The active voice: Jesus Christ in breaking the seal not only produces the action of the verb but it is indicative of the fact the He continues to control history. The indicative mood is declarative for a simple statement of fact that our Lord Jesus Christ broke open the first seal of the Doomsday book of the Tribulation revealing the first historical trend. And in anticipation of that the first historical trend is dictatorship. Dictatorship comes when in any republic people lean on government to solve their problems. People ask for special privileges from government, people want government to help them when they are out of work, people demand from government what government was not designed to do in order to take up the slack for bad decisions, poor mental attitudes, and a host of other things that result in economic and historical disaster. In other words, the welfare state, the redistribution of wealth, and all assorted forms of communism which are evil, Satanic, and totally contrary to the issue of freedom. You cannot be free in the true and correct sense of the word in a welfare state or any form of socialism. It denies you the right of using your own free will in the environment of privacy of your soul to make decisions whereby you succeed or fail. The welfare state tries to deny the existence of failure and is therefore a great evil. In times of prosperity the welfare state goes toward democracy and democracy is the worst part of the majority destroying the government. In time adversity it goes toward dictatorship which is the inevitable result of misuse of government, i.e. the government denying the rights that God gave you.

God gave you as a member of the human race certain rights. We have noted them under the laws of divine establishment: the right of privacy, the right of freedom, the right to possess property and the sacredness of that property, the right to live, and all of these things are taken away under the first horseman — dictatorship. This always means that people in the land are weak so that a small group of people can control them, whether it is a junta in South America or a small oligarchy in some eastern European country. This is the tragedy of the time in which we live because all governments have gone in that direction.

The accusative singular direct object from e(ij indicates which seal it is that is opened, the first of the seven seals. With this is e)k plus the numeral e(pta plus sfragij, seven seals. “Next I watched when the Lamb broke open the first of the seven seals,” and this anticipates the first historical trend of the Tribulation presented in the form of prophecy.

With that we move into the concept which is behind all of this. So it says, “then I heard the first of the four angelic heralds speaking as with the voice of thunder.” The hearing is the aorist active indicative of the verb a)kouw. He gets a command from one of the angelic heralds. He is an apostle and therefore an angelic herald deals with him specifically on this subject. In other words, a high echelon person in the human race gets VIP treatment from heaven.

“then I heard,” the constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. John the human author produces the action in hearing the angelic herald. The indicative mood is declarative emphasizing the fact that we use the ear gate in concentration just as with eye gate. And then we hear the first of the four angelic heralds “saying,” the pictorial present tense from legw. The first angelic herald bears the arms of our Lord’s second royal patent, the Lion of the tribe of Judah. He announces the first historical trend of the Tribulation: pseudo rulership in the form of dictatorship in contrast to our Lord’s rule in the Millennium.

Then we have the analogy, o(j introduces it, “speaking as with a voice of thunder,” bronth, and thunder is a warning of coming judgment. The rise of dictatorships in the Tribulation is like the foreboding of thunder, the prophetic anticipation of an historical downtrend. With this the verse ends with a command to go to school to learn about the first horseman. The mandate is the present middle imperative of the verb e)rxomai, and the command is simply “come.” The direct middle describes the subject, the apostle John, as participating in the result of the action. He is going to learn and then teach. You cannot teach what you do not know and John must learn before he can teach it. This is the imperative of command, and the phrase “and see” is not only not found in the original manuscript but in each one of these verses introducing the first six seals you will find in the King James version the words “and see.” They are not in the original. So this is a mandate which gives John a front row seat to observe historical trends of the Doomsday book in the Tribulation.

Verse 2, Now we meet the first of the four horsemen. We look first at the conjunction kai which introduces the verse. It is sequential, translated “then.” “Then I looked,” the aorist active indicative of o(raw. He is all attention. When John goes to school he concentrates. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, it takes the entire vision of the first horseman, the white horse, and uses concentration in learning what it means. The active voice: John as the human author produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. Then we have the demonstrative particle i)dou, derived from the aorist middle imperative of o(raw, it means behold, it means “now hear this.” Then we have a nominative of exclamation which receives great emphasis by standing alone. This is a most unusual use of the nominative case, called the nominative of exclamation, and it is made up of two words: leukoj which means “white,” and i(ppoj which means “horse.”

The Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written. To the Romans a white horse depicted victory and conquest. The horse of Roman generals in a triumphal procession was as white as they could get it, a good grey, in other words. The rulers of the Persian empire rode white horses at all times as a badge of rank to be seen from a distance. The white horse to the Romans stood for dictatorship, it had the connotation of maximum authority. The white horse in the Bible is a symbol of several things: victory, leadership, rulership, but in our context it refers to dictatorship in the Tribulation as an historical trend.

There have been many dictators in history but the Roman dictator we now face is going to be the last, the greatest, and he will also have the biggest concentration of evil. The white horse represents victory, conquest and dictatorship. The rider comes up next. We have an articular present active participle from the verb kaqhmai which will be used in many ways by John, it was one of his favourite verbs. We have already seen it used for our Lord sitting at the right hand of the Father, “sitting on the throne.” Here it doesn’t mean to sit on a throne, it means to be mounted. The definite article used with the participle is used as a personal pronoun to identify this dictator, the dictator of the revived Roman empire during the Tribulation. There will be many dictators in the Tribulation. The futuristic present tense denotes a famous dictator who has not yet come into existence but his rise in the Tribulation is so certain that in thought he may be contemplated as already existing as a prophecy of a historical trend in the Tribulation. The active voice: the dictator of the revived Roman empire produces the action of the verb.

Now at this time there is no Roman empire, we are living in the Church Age and the last Roman empire has been gone for almost 2000 years. So what is this revived Roman empire? Western Europe, the old Roman empire, will have ten nations carved out of it that are in existence now and will be in existence in the Tribulation. These ten nations will form a confederation and then there will be a struggle in that confederation of united states of western Europe. Out of that struggle will come a dictator who will deceive further nations and the rest will then succumb and we will have a dictator. He is the beast that comes out of the sea, but right now we are noticing him as a trend. Historically there will always be weak people who in the interests of their own selfishness and arrogance will submit to a form of dictatorship. So dictatorship is a permanent trend of history.

“and he who was mounted” is the way we will translate it. The active voice: the dictator of the revived Roman empire produces the action. The participle is circumstantial for a historical trend in the Tribulation: the rise of this dictator. And we have a prepositional phrase, e)pi plus the accusative of a)utoj and it refers to the white horse.

“and the rider,” the reason we are going to translate it “the rider” is because whenever you have a participle it can be translated as a verb or an adjective or a substantive, and here it is translated as a substantive. So while it says literally, “he who sat on it,” we are going to translate it “and the rider,” the dictator of the revived Roman empire in the Tribulation.

The rider

1. The rider is identified as the great dictator among dictators of the Tribulation. He is the dictator of the revived Roman empire and is given five different names in the Bible, all of which are related to eschatological passages. He is called the beast out of the sea in Revelation 13:1-10; he is called the little horn in Daniel 7; he is called the prince that shall come in Daniel 9:25; he is called the scarlet coloured beast of Revelation 17:3ff; he is called the wicked one (literally, the evil one) in 2 Thessalonians 2:7ff. So he is the subject of a number of scriptures and therefore worth a study.

2. In the meantime we note the fact that the Tribulation will be characterised by dictators. We find in our country a lot of people who are crusaders and who want everyone to be a democracy, but there is no way that they are going to do anything but contribute to dictatorship. Dictatorship is not only a historical trend but it is going to intensify. In the next dispensation there will be more dictators than at any time in history, which means the people are generally weak. When people are weak they are inevitably destroyed by their weakness.

3. The historical trend of many dictators means the historical trend of many spheres of influence. Dictators have a hard time, they always come into power because the economy is bad. And when the economy is bad and they come into power, how do they manage to survive? They take a chance and declare war on someone else. Dictators must have something to occupy the minds of the people because they are not on a solid economic footing.

4. The decline of society throughout the world. The removal of the pivot of mature believers at the Rapture, the disappearance of client nations, the removal of God the Holy Spirit as the restrainer, the inevitable results of the rise of dictatorships, and the four great power influences or spheres of power, all result in dictatorships. The principle that applies today applies then: the greater number of dictators in any generation of history means the increase of economic disaster, world-wide depression, social degeneration, and military disaster.

5. All power spheres of the Tribulation will be under some form of dictatorship which is destructive to human freedom.

6. All of these dictators of the Tribulation are the direct result of many evil decisions on the part of many evil people. But remember that the evil factor in this world today is up and this is illustrated by the fact that the USA as a client nation to God has failed to fulfil its function as a client nation in the maintenance of internal freedom, lack of evangelism at home, failure of missionary activity abroad, and the failure to communicate Bible doctrine to believers. In other words, the failure to form a large enough pivot to offset the trends toward disaster.

Next in the exegesis of verse two is the present active participle of the verb εἶπεν, correctly translated with the conjunction kai, "and he had." The progressive present tense signifies action in the state of persistence, therefore present linear aktionsart. The Roman dictator of the revived Roman empire in the Tribulation produces the action. This is a circumstantial participle which presents an additional fact which is often best rendered in to English by the conjunction "and" with the participle. Therefore we translate "and he had." Then the accusative singular direct object from the noun τόξον, translated "a bow." Ordinarily the sword or the spear or the chariot is used to represent the conventional function of combat arms in the Bible.

The bow, therefore, requires a little careful scrutiny since we do not find the dictator holding a sword nor a spear nor riding in a chariot, he is riding on a white horse of conquest. The bow in the Bible speaks specifically of the infantry. The bow was an infantry weapon used by the Egyptians, the Assyrians and the Jews. The battle bow is what is meant here and, again, τόξον refers to the battle bow of the infantry. The bow as an infantry weapon in the hands of a dictator must have some meaning for us. It represents here the concept of unconventional warfare in contrast to the sword or the spear which emphasise conventional warfare. So the unconventional warfare would mean guerrilla warfare or terrorism. The dictator comes to power mainly by the use of unconventional warfare.

The revived Roman empire of the Tribulation is composed of ten nations which are all part of the old Roman empire. It does not include the United States of America. There will be a jockeying for power as they combine to form a power block and there will be in one of these nations the dictator, but he isn't known as that yet., and he conquers three nations before all of them finally come into line and form a power block under his dictatorship. When he does he becomes the little horn of Daniel chapter seven. The means by which he conquers three nations and brings all of the others in line is first of all the battle bow.

From time to time in history there is great emphasis on unconventional warfare and in certain generations of history unconventional warfare is the most successful means of conquest. The reason that guerrilla warfare is always successful is because the country that is fighting conventionally against a guerrilla type organisation and it has a lot of cowards at home In such a situation it is inevitable that the guerrilla warfare will be successful. That is what we have under the principle of social degeneration. Guerrilla warfare is successful in a degenerate society and combat arms, conventional warfare, is unsuccessful when it represents a degenerate society. The bow is going to be very prominent in the Tribulation, the sword will be too — the Armageddon campaign — but the bow does not imply that there will be no conventional warfare in the Tribulation, far from it. In verse four we are going to see the red horse and the use of sophisticated weaponry, and we are even going to get into the field of nuclear function in the Tribulation when we get to verses 14-16.

The implication of the battle bow, then, is obvious. This dictator of the revived Roman empire in the Tribulation will become the ruler of a ten nation confederation by the use of terrorism to gain ascendancy over those nations. Terrorism is always effective where you have a degenerate society. A degenerate society is intimidated by crime and terrorism. That is the principle of the bow.

In the last phrase in this verse we have the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai which is translated "also." Then we have the nominative singular subject of stefanoj, "crown," used here to indicate his success. This is a symbol of the dictator. The aorist passive indicative of didomi which means to give indicates that he rides to power on a historical trend. It doesn't say God gave him the crown, it says a crown was given. The culminative aorist tense views the success, the crowning of the dictator of the revived Roman empire, in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. He will be a dictator for those seven years of the Tribulation. The passive voice: the weakness of society, and the weakness of society includes bureaucracy. Bureaucracy is not good administration, it stifles those who have great potential. Weak bureaucracy, weak leadership, a degenerate society in those ten nations of the revived Roman empire receive the action of the verb, "a crown was given," the subject is the crown and leadership was given because of their weakness. The indicative mood represents the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality, therefore declarative presenting a dogmatic statement not only of eschatology but also it is a statement of principle that is always true historically: there will always be times when a weak society acts as a vacuum to create a dictatorship. The society can be weak for different reasons. It can be economically weak. It was an economically weak society that brought Adolf Hitler to power in Germany. It was a degenerate society that brought to power the communists in Russia. Wherever you have these terrible things happening there is a weak society which creates it. When you have this type of dictatorship and this type of problem in history it is the society itself that creates it, not God. And therefore the crown was given. God didn't give it; weak society, in effect, gives it.

The success of the dictator is given with the intensive conjunction kai, "indeed," and the aorist active indicative from e)cerxomai, "indeed he appeared." The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, the rise of the Roman dictator in the Tribulation and his career of conquest. The active voice: the dictator of the revived Roman empire in the Tribulation produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of his success during the Tribulation, a success brought to a sudden halt by the second advent of Christ.

We have something missing, an analogy. It comes next in our passage, i(na plus nikaw. I(na introduces a purpose clause, "so that." Then the present active participle from the verb nikaw, "indeed he appeared as a conqueror" or "so that he might conquer." We will translate it: "Indeed as a conqueror he appeared." This means to appear on the scene of history during the Tribulational era.

Now we must remember the facts again. Why all of these dictators? The Rapture of the Church removes all pivots from all parts of the earth, all believers, in fact. It also removes the restraining power of God the Holy Spirit as administered through the divine dynasphere and other means. With all of those things removed you have nothing left but a weak society. There will be great evangelism and out of this weak society people will find Christ as saviour. Some will be martyred; some will live to become the basis for the population of the Millennium. But the weak society will create vacuums and into them walk the dictators.

"Indeed as a conqueror he appeared." Then we have i(na, "in order that," and once more the aorist active subjunctive of that same verb nikaw, "that he might conquer." The constative aorist refers to a fact or action extended over a period of time: the Tribulation. The active voice: the dictator of the revived Roman empire produces the action of the verb. I(na plus the subjunctive mood, a purpose clause: the purpose of Satan who empowers this special dictator.

Corrected translation of verse two: "Then I looked, and behold a white horse: and the rider had a battle bow [the weapon of terrorism and guerrilla warfare]; and a crown [the dictatorship of the revived Roman empire] was given to him: in fact, as a conqueror he appeared on the scene of history so that he might conquer."

Principle

1. While the rider of the white horse specifically represents the dictator of the revived Roman empire he also personifies all dictators of the Tribulation and, by application, all dictators of history.

2. One of the trends of the Tribulation is universal loss of freedom because of dictatorships.

3. In this passage we are not only looking at one dictator but we are looking at dictators in general inspired by Satan, influenced by the cosmic system, entering into a vacuum created by social degeneracy.

4. There is another factor. This means arrogant dictatorship. Occasionally in history there is dictator of great genius and humility who comes along and does something inspiring that last for a hundred years or so. For example, Julius Caesar. But here we are talking about the arrogance of the typical dictator. Principle: Arrogance seeks to dominate its environment whether it is a self-righteous, arrogant Christian in a local church or an arrogant self-righteous dictator in the Tribulation.

5. Arrogance seek to dominate its environment, and being frustrated in such domination becomes a troublemaker for that environment. In other words, arrogance is motivating evil resulting in many functional evils.

6. Arrogance motivates the function of the self-righteous believer in his crusading activity which violates the privacy of any individual and takes away the freedom of many.

7. The arrogant dictator in the Tribulation assumes that he knows what is best for everyone. This justifies his use of violence and therefore creates evil. Therefore he destroys their freedom; he substitutes his volition for everyone under the concept "Big Brother knows best." He substitutes his own arrogant volition, therefore, for the function of millions of free wills.

8. In the trend of the Tribulation the white horse represents political dictatorship, but in every era of history there are arrogant people who seek dictatorships in other areas: social life, business life, professional life, even spiritual life, as well as political life where dictators flourish.

We are studying in the book of Revelation the historical trends which are presented prophetically. In all dispensations in the past historical trends were also presented prophetically. Prophecy is used to delineate historical trends, except for the Church Age. In this dispensation, the Church Age, all historical trends depend upon the volition of the individual believer. This means, of course, that your decisions as a believer are a determining factor in the survival of our country and it all relates to the fact of the divine dynasphere which is God's game plan for this dispensation. Along with this is Satan's counter attack in the cosmic system. The cosmic system is the system for Satan's administration of the rulership of this world. It is composed of cosmic one which has twenty-six gates of interlocking systems of arrogance and cosmic two with its nine gates of interlocking systems of hatred. All believers make decisions every day which cause them to either reside in the cosmic system or in the divine dynasphere.

There is a time coming when the dispensation of the Church will terminate with the resurrection called the Rapture of the Church, 1 Thessalonians 4:13-17. This removes entirely the pivot, the client nation concept, from the earth and that leads to Daniel's seventieth week or the Tribulation, the seven years which precede the second advent of Christ and His Millennial rule on earth. Therefore we are studying now the historical trends of this period.

We resume with the second seal which is presented to us in verses three and four. We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated "and." We have the introduction of the temporal clause with the temporal conjunction o(t) and is correctly translated "when." Then we have the aorist active indicative of the verb a)noigw used for breaking open the seals. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it refers to a momentary action, the right of our Lord Jesus Christ as the God-Man, the unique person of the universe, the only saviour, to break open the seals. As the God-Man He continues to control history. The active voice indicates this principle: Jesus Christ who controls history produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a simple statement of fact: our Lord Jesus Christ broke open the second seal of the Doomsday book of the Tribulation revealing a second historical trend. We anticipate verse four, the second historical trend is warfare.

The corrected translation: "And when he had broken the second seal, I heard the second angelic herald saying, Come." "And see" is not found in the original, in fact this is the present active imperative of e)rxomai and is correctly translated "come." This is the aoristic present tense, punctiliar action in present time. This is actually a direct middle voice in which the subject acts with a view toward participating in the results of the action. He will see the vision, he will record the vision and it will become a permanent part of the canon of scripture. This is an imperative of command. Always in the perception of Bible doctrine, always in spiritual growth there is the concept of authority, the authority of God delegating that authority in this dispensation through the Word of God, and then everything that is recognised as authority through that delegation, whether it is authority in civil life, whether it is authority in spiritual life, we have studied the concepts of the laws of divine establishment. Authority is absolutely necessary for humility. Humility is the basis for capacity for love, capacity for happiness, and capacity for blessing.

Verse 4, we see our second trend of the Tribulation. Also we meet the second rider of the apocalypse. We have, again, the sequential kai, and we have the aorist active indicative following of the verb e)cerxomai. The word means to go out, to come out, but here it means to make an appearance, an appearance on the scene of history, "Then appeared on the scene of history." This is, of course, prophetic and is dealing with the Tribulation. The aorist tense is a constative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety, the extension of warfare from this age to the Tribulation. The active voice: the wars of the Tribulation actually produce the action of the verb. The declarative mood is for the reality of the second historical trend, a trend that will never be discontinued until our Lord returns. You cannot stop war, you cannot prevent war, except through following the laws of divine establishment, but there never will be any period in history where there will be freedom from war until the second advent of Christ and then the swords will be turned into plowshares and the spears into pruning hooks and man shall learn war no more. In the meantime warfare is a normal part of life. Man does not have the power to prevent them except by being militarily prepared.

This horse is called “red” in the King James version. Actually it is a part of the anarthrous nominative of apposition. What we have for a subject is one word, the nominative singular of a)lloj, a very strange subject. A)lloj in the Greek simply means “another,” and we translate “Then another.” Then comes the anarthrous nominative of apposition made up of two words, the adjective purroj meaning a flame coloured horse, and with it i(ppoj for the horse. Translation: “Then another, a fiery red horse, appeared on the scene of history.” Then we meet the rider, the articular present active participle from the deponent verb kaqhmai, meaning to sit, “the one who sat on it.” This is the personification of unrestrained warfare during the entire course of the Tribulation.

“to him was given,” the verb here means to be given authority or power, the aorist passive indicative of the verb didomi which means to give. Sometimes it is stated, sometimes it is not. In this context because of ellipsis it is not stated but the implication is that power is given or authority is given, “and to him was given authority [or power].” The culminative aorist tense views the concept of warfare in human history in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. In the Tribulation unrestrained warfare, conventional warfare, guerrilla warfare, nuclear warfare. The passive voice: warfare receives the action of the verb, the authority to function on the earth without restraint. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of unrestrained warfare during the Tribulation as the second historical trend prophesied. Power is given “to take,” the constative aorist of the verb lambanw which means to take, sometimes to receive. Here it means to take. The constative aorist is used for the fact that warfare is extended over the entire Tribulation. The active voice: warfare produces the action of the verb. This is the infinitive of intended result. That is, the intended result of human decisions and volition without the restraint of the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. When God the Holy Spirit is removed as the restrainer at the Rapture of the Church this means unrestrained warfare. The intended result is always a blending of purpose and result, the fulfilment of a deliberate objective for the Tribulation. Warfare is not always all that bad. Warfare has evils that accompany it but so does peace. People are victimised as much by peace as they are by war. It is only the liberal who somehow thinks that if you can get rid of war you could improve the environment and solve everyone’s problems. Far from it.

“to him was given the power to take peace from the earth,” the accusative singular direct object from the noun e)irhnh, “peace.” This implies, therefore, that there was or will be a period of peace just either just before the Rapture of the Church or immediately after the Rapture of the Church. There will just be a short period of time when there is peace throughout the earth but once the red horse comes on the scene of history there will be no peace until the second advent of Christ. In the formation of the power spheres of the Tribulation there will be a tremendous amount of warfare. We will note later that the Tribulation is composed of four great power spheres. They include the king of the west, the revived Roman empire; the king of the north which today would be comparable to the Russian communist bloc, the king of the south is the pan-Arabic bloc, and the king of the east is an Asiatic bloc. In the rise of dictators, as we noted in the previous two verses, there is always violence, terrorism and warfare. Satan's attempt to provide a pseudo Millennium prior to the second advent is going to be a total failure. Satan will not be able to control history in any possible way and there will be tremendous unrestrained warfare. The Tribulation, then, will be a time of both local and world wars, a concentration of battles, campaigns and wars which can only be terminated by the second advent of Christ and His assumption of the rulership of this world. Before there could be any form, then, of permanent peace Satan must be superseded as the ruler of this world. That will occur, of course, at the second advent. This will never happen until the second advent and in the meantime our Lord has given us a prophecy in Matthew chapter 24:4-13.

Next in verse four we have references to the slaughter. The connective conjunction kai is used to introduce what precedes and is translated "and so" or "so that." We have an idiom here, kai plus i(na, translated "so that" because the connective kai introduces a result and is generally translated "and so." The future active indicative of the verb sfazw follows, "so that they might slaughter." The gnomic future tense is for a statement of a historical trend in the Tribulation which may be rightfully expected under the circumstances of unrestrained warfare. The active voice: the population of the Tribulation would produce the action of the verb and the indicative mood is a potential indicative of circumstances, plus a potential indicative of impulse with the removal of the restraining ministry of the Holy Spirit after the Rapture.

Then we have the accusative plural direct object from the reciprocal pronoun a)llhlwn, and as a reciprocal pronoun it is presented as effected by an interchange of actions signified in the verb. Therefore we call it "slaughter each other." The passage goes on to say, "so that they might slaughter each other: in fact a great sword was given to him." Notice that in contrast to the bow by which dictator came to power on the previous horse we have now a great sword. This time we have maxaira, and this emphasises a tremendous amount of conventional warfare.

Corrected translation: "Then another, a fiery red horse appeared on the scene of history: and to the rider, to him the power was given to take peace from the earth, so that they might slaughter each other: in fact, a great sword was given to him."

There will be warfare in the southern part of the Middle East during the Tribulation and the slaughter is described in Isaiah 63:6, "In my anger I will trample their armies, and in my fury I make them drunk [intoxicated], and I will cause their life blood to pour out on the land."

Isaiah 34:5,6, "For my sword is satiated in heaven, it shall descend from heaven for the judgment of Edom, furthermore the people [the invading army] I have dedicated to annihilation on the battlefield. The sword of the Lord is saturated with blood, a great slaughter in the land."

This anticipates two passages we will study later on in Revelation. Revelation 14:20, "They were trampled in the winepress outside the city, and their blood gushed out of the press as high as the horses' bridle for a distance of two hundred miles." Revelation 19:15, "And a sharp broadsword proceeded from his mouth [second advent of Christ] in order that with it he might strike and kill the armies of the invading nations.”

The invasion of the king of the north into the land of Israel is described in Joel 2:20, and again we see the tremendous unrestrained slaughter, “I will remove the northern army far from you, in fact I will drive it into a desert area and its vanguard into the eastern sea [the Dead Sea], its rearguard into the western sea [Mediterranean]. Consequently its stench will go up and the smell will rise heavenward.”

Ezekiel 39:2-5, “Now I will turn you around, motivate you to push on, concentrate you from the remote areas of the north, and bring you against the mountains of Israel. I will strike your bow from your left hand, and make your arrows drop from your right hand [decimation of infantry]. And the mountains of Israel will fall, you with all your troops and allies; I will give you as food to all kinds of vultures and predatory animals. You will fall in open field; and I have decreed it, declares the Lord God.”

We are studying the four horsemen of the apocalypse as the first four seals of the Doomsday book of the Tribulation. The Tribulation has special historical trends noted for their lack of restraint. God the Holy Spirit does not restrain during the seven years of that very short dispensation. We can begin to categorise the four horsemen very simply. The first horseman riding the white horse is the great dictator of the revived Roman empire. Therefore he represents political power and the trends related to it during the Tribulation. The rider of the red horse represents warfare. Coming up is the third horse and it is connected with economic disaster or economic depression. There is a relationship between the three. When things become bad politically, when politicians are at their lowest ebb, lacking integrity, and are full of arrogance and more interested in their own inordinate ambition than they are in the good of the country, then it is inevitable that you become entangled in other types of disasters. Warfare has a definite relationship to economy and always has since the industrial revolution began.

We have already noted the red horse and some of the principles related to warfare. We must continue this before we leave it entirely so we will now notice a few more things about warfare. We will note the principles of warfare and see how they relate to the next horseman which is economic disaster — the black horse. In warfare there are certain principles which have always been true and which have been established from ancient times by great commanders such as Julius Caesar, Hannibal, Gustavus Adolphus, Frederick the Great, Napoleon, to mention a few. They have always followed these principles and these principles are true in life as well as having pertinence to the concept of the profession of arms.

The first principle is called the principle of objective. Many businesses are going to fail in this time of economic disaster because they have not had a clearly defined objective and because they have not remained within the concept of that objective. Many businesses expand too rapidly and as a result they go out of bounds as far as their objective is concerned. In the military, for example, the purpose of a military operation is to attain the objective assigned or designated by whoever is in command. The objective constitutes the guide for the interpretation of orders, the formulation of decisions, and the deployment of troops. The selection of national objectives is called strategy and strategy depends on political, military and economic conditions which are variable. Under the principle of the objective this means that military is always and inevitably subordinate to the political as well as to the economic conditions. The first objective must always be the neutralisation or the destruction of the power of the opposing military forces to fight. This means decisive defeat and destruction of enemy armies. The second objective is to possess localities which contribute to the national objective. The mission assigned to a military force must be compatible with national objectives. So the principle of objective is very important and just as it is important with our first horseman, the political era must define the objectives, therefore it has repercussion with the second horseman, warfare. But where it really hurts the most is when a great nation has no clear cut foreign and domestic policy — and you can't have one and have a welfare state — it means very definitely that you cannot have economic prosperity. Lack of national policy inevitably means that the government interferes with business, with the function of the military, and with everything in the hope of coming up with a lucky combination.

The second principle in warfare is called the principle of offensive. It is a very simple one: the offence is the only action by which a decision is gained. Offensive brings victory; defence can only avoid defeat. So it is imperative that all thinking, whether it is strategical or tactical, be geared to offensive concepts, not defensive. The only effective way to wage war is to act on the offensive, destroying the enemy armies. The offensive increases the effectiveness of the force adopting it, it raises morale, it permits concentration of effort, it allows freedom of action. This is what makes nation great. The defensive should be used to assist the offensive action elsewhere, to gain time, to utilise good terrain, to compensate for weaknesses. The offensive should be used where there is any reasonable chance of success.

Now, change to the word “marketing” and you have exactly the same concept. A company obviously has to go on the defensive from time to time to compensate for its weaknesses but the offensive is the whole concept of marketing.

The third great doctrine in military history is the principle of mass. Mass is a military term for combat power. Furthermore it means concentration of combat power at the point of maximum effectiveness. Mass or combat power includes numbers, weapons, tactical skills, discipline, fighting ability, resolution, morale, leadership. Success in warfare is attained by the proper employment of mass in a main effort to attack at the proper time and place for the accomplishment of a definite purpose.

What does mass mean economically? Good management. Not good labour, good management. It means courage, honour, integrity among those who invest money. You cannot have economic prosperity without good management. In all of the history of the world the demands of labour in the last three decades have been the highest. When a bricklayer makes twice as much as a college professor there is something wrong, there is no premium on brains and everything gets out of kilter. That is the principle of mass.

The fourth principle of warfare which can never be ignored is the principle of economy of force. Economy of force is the means by which the mass is employed in the main effort. And, again, remember that mass is combat power and includes, numbers, weapons, tactical skills, discipline, fighting ability, resolution, morale and leadership. The time and place of the main effort having been determined men and means are conserved by reducing their employment in other directions to the minimum consistent with safety. This is a principle which can be brought over to the economic very quickly. There has been a tremendous amount of wastage, a digression from the concept of economy of force because the political nature of our country. The demand for a welfare state and its function is opposed to the economy of force principle and the welfare state always tries to make people equal by guaranteed incomes. We have already seen that equality will never exist. It will only exist as a destructive force. So the economy of force is the means by which one successfully co-ordinates the various units in a military organisation for victory, and there must be the successful co-ordination in economy as well.

Number five is the principle of movement. Movement means the manoeuvre of combat elements. In the offensive this principle is used to bring mass into close grips with the enemy in order to secure decisive results. Movement is designed to place mass in the best place for attack. Movement is most effective when concealed. In many cases movement is only possible by the effective employment of fire power. The same thing is true in economy.

The principle of surprise is number six. To obtain maximum effectiveness with minimum loss of life surprise must be employed. It may take the form of time, place, direction, force or tactical weapons. The main factors of surprise are threefold: preparation, secrecy, rapidity. They also can be used effectively in marketing principles.

Number seven is the principle of security. Security embraces all the measures taken to guard against observation and surprise, to ensure against hostile interference with operations, to gain and maintain the power and momentum of free action.

Number eight is the principle of simplicity, simplicity, of course, being a relative term. Military plans should be simple so as not to sponsor complicated movements. Orders should not be ambiguous but direct and free from contingencies. Frequent changes of plans should be avoided. Unity of command must be observed.

Number nine is the principle of co-operation. Teamwork demands that all military units and persons involved in a mission work together to accomplish the mission. To do this co-ordination must be secure.

We now move into verse five: "And when he [our Lord Jesus Christ] had broken the third seal I heard the third angelic herald say, Come." We now see what happens: the sequential conjunction kai and the aorist active indicative of the o(raw, meaning "I looked" or "I watched." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, the vision of the black horse, the third trend of the Tribulation. The active voice: the apostle John as the human author of the Tribulation produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for a simple statement of fact which precedes the actual vision of the black horse. We have a connective kai and then the demonstrative particle i)dou which is translated, "and behold." Then we see what is third, the nominative of exclamation which by standing alone has great emphasis, a nominative of exclamation made up of an adjective and a noun. The adjective is melaj which means "black", and the noun is i(ppoj, "horse," "then I looked and behold a black horse." Black means economic depression which is called in the Bible by the word "famine." Jeremiah 4:28 explains the word "black," what it means in the Bible. "Therefore the land will mourn, and the heavens will become black [economic depression], because I have spoken and will not change my mind, I have decided and will not turn my back."

Now how do we know that black means economic disaster, Lamentations 4:6-10: "For the punishment of my people [Israel as a client nation to God] is greater than that of Sodom which was destroyed in a moment without a hand turning to help them. Their princes were purer than snow and whiter than milk; their bodies more healthy in appearance than rubies, their appearance like sapphire. But now their appearance is blacker than soot, they are not recognised in the streets; their skin is shrivelled on their bones, it has become dry as a stick. Those killed in battle are better off than those who die of famine [economic depression]; racked with hunger they waste away from lack of food from the ground. With their own hands compassionate women have cooked their own children who became their food when my people Israel were destroyed by economic depression."

Why were the appearances of people blacker than soot? Because they were dying of famine. The personification of economic depression follows and there is a tremendous dissertation on the whole story of economic depression and all of the problems related to it.

The doctrine of economic depression (or famine)

Jesus prophesied that during the course of human history there would always be three things in history and they would not be eradicated until the second advent: wars famines and natural disasters. And since the Bible advocates free enterprise under the laws of divine establishment any violation of this law inevitably results in recession and depression. When man tampers with the natural laws of supply and demand, when political powers tamper with the concept of capitalism there is inevitably economic decline. Man does not have the power to adjust economy. Since the Bible advocates free enterprise it is inevitable that when anyone tries to tamper with free enterprise they are going to destroy or distort the economy. In the natural course of life, then, economic disaster occurs periodically in history. For example, what should the believer do in time of economic disaster? Well, it isn't what he should do, it is what God does for him. The mature believer will be delivered in time of economic depression, Job 5:20; Psalm 33:18,19. During the economic disaster of the northern kingdom in the days of king Ahab God provided for Elijah through logistical grace, first by the ravens, 1 Kings 17:6, and then through the widow of Zerephath, 1 Kings 17:9-16. Cf Psalm 37:18,19.

There are two kinds of people who try to tamper with God's laws as far as economy is concerned : politicians and preachers [false teachers obviously], Jeremiah 5:12, speaking of politicians and preachers: "They have lied about the Lord, they said, 'He is not; misfortune will not come on us; consequently we will never see military disaster or economic depression'."

Jeremiah 14:13, "But I said, 'O Lord, O God, behold the prophets are telling them that they will not see military disaster nor will they have economic depression, but I will give you permanent peace in this place, they promise'." Here is Jeremiah quoting the prophets and the politicians.

Famine is used to test believers with regard to doctrine and the provision of logistical grace, Genesis 12:10; 26:1.

Famine is used as a divine judgment and a punishment of nations who violate the laws of divine establishment with regard to economics, Isaiah 51:17,19. Cf. Jeremiah 14:15,16; 15:1,2; 29:17; Ezekiel 5:16.

The inevitable results of energy without ability is what we are studying in the four horsemen of the apocalypse. The white horse: political incompetence or political arrogance, or both. Political disaster always has two categorical results. First we have the man riding the white horse — incompetence in government. Regardless of the type of government incompetence exists: in the foreign policy, the red horse or warfare without victory, therefore military disaster; in the domestic policy, the black horse or the government destruction of free enterprise through its interference, regulation, socialism, the welfare state, redistribution of wealth, all of which are disastrous.

The white horse of political disaster, then, results in the red horse of military disaster plus the black horse of economic disaster. Military disaster always represents failure in foreign policy; economic disaster always represents failure in domestic policy. The two are always linked to the white horse, failure in political function. The white horse of political arrogance and incompetence obviously then reflects social degeneration among the citizens of any national entity. Therefore social degeneration becomes the cause of both economic depression and military disaster, and these result in the fourth horse which we have not yet studied: the ashen horse representing disease and death. Death always is the grim reaper, it reaps the harvest of the first three horses: political decline or the white horse, military disaster or the red horse, economic depression or the black horse. Therefore the first four seals, the four horsemen of the apocalypse, ride in every dispensation but are more devastating in the Tribulation because God the Holy Spirit is not functioning in His restraining ministry. Therefore what we are studying is far worse than anything which we face today.

Translation of verse 5 so far: “And when he [our Lord Jesus Christ] had broken the third seal, I heard the third angelic herald say, Come. Then I looked, and behold a black horse [economic disaster].”

The next phrase has to do with the concept of economic disaster. We notice again that these three seals are all related. Remember the principle: political disaster or poor national leadership results in two related disasters, warfare and economic depression. Hence, the order of the horses is important. Political disaster, the white horse, means two bad policies — domestic: economic depression; foreign: military disaster.

Now we have the personification of economic depression as it will occur in the Tribulation. The connective conjunction kai is followed by the articular present active participle from the verb kaqhmai, to sit. The definite article is used as indefinite pronoun to define a category, economic depression personified. The futuristic present tense denotes the personification of economic disaster as the historical trend of the Tribulation. The active voice: the personification of economic depression produces the action of the verb, the Tribulation is going to be a terrible time of economic depression. The participle is circumstantial for the third horseman of the apocalypse. With this is the prepositional phrase e)pi plus the accusative singular of the intensive pronoun a)utoj, “on it.” All of this is simply the literal translation and the idiom should be translated “and the rider.” The participle is translated as a substantive and the rider, that is, the one who sat on it, is the personification of economic disaster in the Tribulation.

With this subject, the rider, we now have the verb, the present active participle of e)xw, “and the rider has.” The present tense is a customary present and denotes what reasonably may be expected to occur in the Tribulation because of the white horse, dictatorship or government; and the red horse, military disaster. In other words, poor leadership in a national entity, corrupt or degenerate leadership resulting from a degenerate society results in warfare. Warfare creates special markets and superficial prosperity which results in economic collapse, like France in the reign of Louis the XIV or Germany in 1918. The active voice: the personification of economic depression, the rider of the black horse, produces the action. The circumstantial participle is translated like a finite verb. We have the object of the participle, the accusative singular direct object from zugoij meaning a yoke, a lever of balance or pair of scales. And then the next prepositional phrase, “in his hands.”

Corrected translation: “And when he [our Lord Jesus Christ] had broken the third seal, I heard the third angelic herald say, Come. Then I looked, and behold a black horse [economic depression]; and the rider had a pair of scales in his hand.”

The pair of scales indicates the scarcity of food. It also anticipates the next verse, inflation, for scarcity of food and inflation always travel together in economic collapse. Inflation is the enemy of economic recovery and the hypocrisy of economic prosperity, the deceiver of people and the road which poor government rides to power. The poor government in the case of our passage, the white horse, is a dictator but it could be just as easily our government.

What does inflation mean? First of all, under an incompetent government like the rider of the white horse it means high taxes, and either no profits or false profits. Inflation is the dream world of those economic standards related to the laws of divine establishment, inflation is a dream. True economic standards must be related to free enterprise and capitalism. Credit must be based on some standard. The standard can be gold or property or the gross national product. It has to be something of intrinsic economic value. When credit is based on inflation minus a standard of intrinsic value and the market place is saturated to the point of destroying supply and demand then paper currency is no longer a promise of a prosperous GNP, it no longer reflects a gold standard or any other concept similar. It is simply hope as a medium of exchange.

The second trend of warfare throughout the Tribulation results in economic depression with its famine, inflation, starvation, millions dying of hunger, and unmentionable suffering. And, of course, not unjust suffering but suffering resulting from the wrong decisions of millions of people. We are the products of our own decisions. Man is still the product of his own decisions during the Tribulation.

Verse 6, we begin again with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, “then,” followed by the aorist active indicative of a)kouw, “then I heard.” The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the apostle John produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for a simple statement of fact related to the vision. With this we have a comparative particle w(j which introduces the characteristic quality of our Lord’s voice speaking from the middle of the throne. It is translated, “as it were a voice.”

“Then I heard as it were a voice in the centre of the four angelic heralds saying,” the present active participle of the verb legw. Our Lord Jesus Christ now describes in terms in which the Bible was written, inflation. The pictorial present tense presents to the mind a picture of inflation in the process of occurrence. The active voice: Jesus Christ in the centre of the throne, as in Ezekiel chapters one and ten, produces the action. This is a statement of judgment as well as the third historical trend of the Tribulation. Now we have the statement, the nominative singular subject xoinic. Xoinic is a dry measure of that time. It is roughly equivalent to a quart. A xoinic of grain was the daily ration for one person. In other words, it was just enough to keep one person alive for one day. And here we have a xoinic of sitoj which means wheat. Then we have the genitive of description or the genitive of price from the monetary noun denarion, which is the Latin denariuj, translated: “a quart of wheat for a denarius.” But that doesn’t tell us what a denarius is. It was actually at this time a Roman silver coin which would be worth about eighteen cents in our concept but that isn’t even the meaning of it. It means a day’s wages. This is taught in Matthew 18:28; 20:2, 9; 22:19; Mark 6:37; 12:15; Luke 7:41; 10:35; 20:24. In other words all you can buy for a day’s wages is just enough to buy enough food to keep you alive for one day. Therefore we are looking at famine prices — inflation. This is tantamount to starvation prices.

Next we have in corrected translation: “and three quarts of barley for a day’s wages.” Barley was the basic food of the poor and it took much more to sustain life. Three quarts of barley could only do what one quart of grain could do. Those who had families had to live on barley and obviously a family of more than two would starve to death in a very short period of time. Again, the barley represents starvation wages. The denarius is just enough to buy a little food and nothing else; no other necessities except a little food which would result in malnutrition, loss of energy, ill health, death from either disease or starvation or both. Even if you worked very, very hard you could not make enough money to live, and inflation is the name of the game here.

Remember the principle: the Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written. At the time of writing in Revelation a denarius or a day's wages would ordinarily buy 16 to 20 quarts of wheat. Obviously in normal times one day's wages or a denarius would buy food, shelter, clothing, and a lot more. But in time of economic depression the denarius or a day's wages can only buy just enough to stay alive, but not for too long. So we are talking about disastrous inflation, 200 per cent inflation.

Now we have the connective kai used to introduce a result from what precedes and therefore this time kai is translated "furthermore." With this we have the negative mh, "furthermore do not." Then we have the verb a)dikew with the negative mh, "do not damage." The constative aorist is for a negative action extended over a period of time. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: those who have some form of liquidity, some cash flow, or wealth of intrinsic value produce the action in the sense of prohibiting the destruction of luxury items. Those who produce the luxuries receive a mandate. It is always true, even in the greatest of economic disasters, that there are some who are prepared for it one way or another. There are some who have the ability to handle it and their demand is not just to stay alive but they are looking for luxury items. True luxury items are mentioned in this passage. The subjunctive mood plus the negative mh is known as a subjunctive of prohibition, therefore it is a mandate, a mandate for luxury items on the part of a few.

The double accusative gives us the two luxury items. They may not sound like luxury to us but they very definitely were at the time of writing. The first is e)laion which means olive oil. In other words, energy fuel. Olive oil can be construed as both an energy as well as a luxury food. Olive oil was used in preparing foods and in lamps for lights and other energy ways. We also have a luxury beverage, o)inoj, wine. This is another way of saying that in time of economic depression or famine those who have liquidity or those who have capital get richer. The rich get richer always in a time of economic depression. They have the means of supporting or capitalising or gaining at the best possible price those things that would increase their wealth. That the wealthy maintain their way of life is illustrated by luxury food, by energy, and luxury beverage, good wine. There has never been an economic disaster in history without having those who are prepared for it by the possession of capital, and they always survive. They survive under a principle of the laws of divine establishment. Those who have acquired capital and liquidity always survive (apart from those who are evil) because they were prepared for it, and this is a part of category #1 truth, the laws of divine establishment. Wealth is not evil, it is the basis of economy and there is no true economy without someone possessing wealth and therefore investing.

Therefore it is inevitable that in time of economic depression there are those who have liquidity and capital who will survive and succeed.

In all economic disasters there are survivors. You as a believer should be a survivor. There is no excuse for not surviving. All you have to do is go back and apply the principle of logistical grace. If you are daily in the Word, if you have been growing in grace, the principle is a very simple one: "This I recall to my mind, therefore I have hope [confidence]. It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed because his compassions fail not. They are new every morning; Great is thy faithfulness. 'The Lord is my portion', says my soul, 'Therefore I will have confidence in him.' The Lord is good unto them that wait for him, to the soul that seeks him." There is your capital and your liquidity for time of economic disaster.

We came into this world by physical birth and we have life because after we came out of our mother's womb God imputed life, and imputed life means that God has a purpose for each one of us. In other words, it is God's desire that each one of us believes in Christ and therefore have eternal life since Jesus Christ suffered for us on the cross, bearing our sins, taking our place. But one thing is certain: we are all going to die, and there comes a time when death gives us our most lucid moments about life. To see things in the light of eternity is one of the principles by which we should live. We should live every day as unto the Lord, every day in the light of eternity, every day in relationship to those around us in a way that expresses the integrity, the love, the honour, and all of the assets of the divine dynasphere. Death is one of the great realities of life. Probably some people never wake up and realise what life is all about until they are dying, and then it is too late. And there is no question about it, with whatever thought pattern is left life does pass before you because the person who is dying does more concentrating, apart from certain diseases where it is impossible, than they ever did in living. So what we need, just once in a while, is just a little bit of the smell of death to really face what life is all about and to appreciate people — loved ones, friends, and to appreciate what doctrine has done, and above all to appreciate the invisible, eternal God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit.

Death means one of two things for every Christian at the point of dying. The point of death means the greatest of blessings, dying grace, or it means the greatest punishment, the sin unto death. There is no in-between. Either you go out under the sin unto death or you go out under dying grace. And there is really only one thing that prepares you for dying and therefore prepares you for living. That is the principle. Whatever prepares you for death prepares you for life. Whatever in dying gives you a true scale of values becomes the means for providing an appreciation for life. The fact that God provides in death is the subject of Amos 5:8, and the fact that death is a promotion for the believer is Philippians 1:21, and the fact that women, because they are responders, have a much more difficult time facing the death of loved ones is taught in Jeremiah 9:20-25, and the fact that the sin unto death does not bring glory to God is taught in Isaiah 38:18, and the fact death is always a matter of the sovereignty of God (God's decision is based on prior knowledge of all the facts) — Psalm 68:19,20. It is always a good idea to have a relationship with the one who decides that you are going to die. We have seen how God delivers from death, Job 5:20; Psalm 33:19; 56:13; 116:8, and we have seen that there are things that are stronger than death, Song Of Solomon 8:6, "Love is stronger than death." The fact that God can prolong life has been noted in Psalm 102:19,20, 23,24; 118:18; Proverbs 14:27.

What is even more important is what happens after death. For the believer, we are absent from the body and face to face with the Lord, "no more sorrows, no more tears, no more pain, no more death, the old things are passed away," the interim body, the time of great happiness.

There is a principle to be noted which is found in Job 5:19ff, "In six [categories of] troubles he will deliver you." The word for "deliver" is the Hebrew word natsal and it means to rescue or to deliver when you are in a place where you can't do much for yourself; in other words, a hopeless situation. It emphasises the divine function of logistical grace which in our dispensation is the wall of fire and/or the divine dynasphere. Then the word "seven" means seven categories of trouble, "in seven categories of trouble evil [the function of Satan administered through the cosmic system] will not touch you," the qal imperfect of naga and it means to meddle. Meddling is irritating. It means not touching in the sense of not meddling with you, irritating you. It doesn't mean you won't be there, it means it won't irritate you.

Beginning in verse 20 we have that logistical grace wall of fire parlayed into deliverance of the believer who cracks the maturity barrier. Out of the six categories of trouble four are mentioned to show us what is meant. The first one is the black horse, "In famine [economic depression] he will preserve you from death." While people are dying [the ashen horse] you are not going to die, you are going to be preserved. And then there is the red horse, warfare, "and in war from the power of the sword" And that is not just a promise to those who are in the military, it is a promise to civilians.

Verse 21, there is also social degeneration, and social degeneration comes from maligning, judging, society ridiculing and making life miserable for you. "You will be hidden" is the niphe perfect from the Hebrew chabah. The niphe stem is passive voice, which means you can't yourself ever justify yourself to society. When people malign you and judge you you can't justify yourself. The niphe stem is passive and it means God will provide your protection. There comes a time when what people think of you is not nearly as important as what God thinks of you, and this is when you face some form of social disaster, social ostracism, and especially when we have social degeneracy which is a part of the first horse, the white horse; "neither will you be afraid," the qal imperfect of jare, meaning a perpetuation of courage; "of destruction," the Hebrew word is shod and refers to death, violent death in many cases; "when it comes." You may be a pariah to society but if you have Bible doctrine you will receive protection from God.

This is the fourth horseman. In the four categories we have out of the six that are mentioned there are six disasters from which we will be rescued. Furthermore, in seven no evil will touch you. The four that are mentioned are the same as the four horsemen of Revelation chapter six.

Verse 22, “You will laugh at death.” In other words, you will be very relaxed in economic depression, and you will also laugh at the wild animals of the earth. You have nothing to fear from them says this verse. The fascinating thing is that we are going to see those same wild animals and study them very shortly in our context. What do wild animals mean? It means at certain times in history animals destroy a great deal of life. The animals can also refer to nuclear weapons, conventional weapons, cars, and a lot of other things. But the believer who is in doctrine is preserved from all of these things.

Verse 23, “For your contract will be with the stones [the weapons] of the battlefield; and the wild animals will be at peace with you,” none of the instruments of death can remove the mature believer from this life until God permits. Only the integrity of God can transfer the believer from time to eternity. No believer can be removed until the Lord is ready to take him home to heaven but once the Lord calls the believer home nothing can retain him on this earth. The believer cannot die until the Lord decides. The exception of course is suicide and that does not mean loss of salvation but it cancels out any possibility of any reward in heaven.

Verse 24, “Therefore you will know that your tent [human body] is in a state of prosperity [dying grace], for you will visit your home [heaven] and you will not forfeit blessing or reward.”

Verse 25, “You will know that your seed will be numerous,” an idiom for prosperity of the loved ones left behind. Not only is there dying grace for you but blessing by association for the next generation. Whoever is related to you in any way who is still alive will have blessing by association; “and your descendants like the grass of the earth,” you will have an impact even beyond your death.

Verse 26, “You will come to the grave in a full age, like a shock of corn it is season,” the illustration is of timing and is taken from agriculture. There is a right and a wrong time to pick corn. God will decide when it is time for you to depart.

Verse 27, “Behold this doctrine, we have investigated it, this is the gist of it; hear it and apply it to yourself.”

Revelation 6:7, we have noted before the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated “then” or “and when,” along with the temporal conjunction o(ti introducing a temporal clause, the aorist active indicative of the verb a)noigw. These things occur and recur in each of the verses which introduce one of the four horsemen, one of the first four seals. The constative aorist refers to a momentary action of breaking the fourth seal. The active voice: Jesus Christ who controls history breaks open that seal. The indicative mood is declarative for a simple statement of fact: our Lord Jesus Christ, the one who controls history breaks open the fourth seal of the Doomsday book of the Tribulation revealing the fourth historical trend — death in the Tribulation. Then we have the accusative singular direct object made up of an adjective for the substantive sfragij, meaning seal, and we have the beginning of our corrected translation: “And when he [our Lord Jesus Christ who controls history] had broken open the fourth seal of the Doomsday book.”

Once again we have the repetition of the aorist active indicative of the verb akouo, meaning to hear. John once again records what he has heard, "I heard the fourth angelic herald." The objective genitive following akouo made up of the adjective numeral for four plus again that substantive zōon, and it doesn't mean a beast, it refers to an angelic herald. The word "come" is a mandate. The aorist of the present middle imperative gives the order, "Come." The present tense is a aoristic present for punctiliar action in present time. John will see in a point of time the vision of the fourth horseman. The direct middle describes the subject, the apostle John, as participating in the results of the action of the verb. He will give us a development of the fourth horseman which is death. The imperative mood of command means this is a mandate and obviously in the order of rank the angelic herald ranks the apostle.

Translation: "And when he [our Lord Jesus Christ] had broken the fourth seal [of the Doomsday book] I heard the fourth angelic herald say, Come."

Verse 8, Now we begin the pale horse, the ashen horse. We begin with the sequential use of the conjunction kai translated "then." The aorist active indicative of the verb ōraō follows, and it means to look or to see. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, the vision of the pale or ashen horse, the fourth historical trend of the Tribulation. The active voice: the apostle John, the human author, having obeyed the angelic herald now produces the action of observing the vision, recording it as the fourth general historical trend of the Tribulation; "and behold," the nominative of exclamation which by standing alone receives great emphasis and has two words which follow. The adjective is chloros, an adjective meaning yellowish green. It is a perfect description of someone who is suffering from sea sickness and the phrase that we use in the English, "green around the gills," pale or ashen. It means death pallor. With this we have the noun hippos, "horse," "Then I looked, and behold, an ashen horse." We anticipate this horse as death and therefore we take time to consider the classification of death.

Death — there are seven different categories of death found in the Bible

1. Physical death, defined as the separation of the soul from the body so that the person involved no longer lives on planet earth. Death cannot separate the believer from God, Romans 8:38,39. Physical death is a matter of the sovereign decision of God based on His perfect knowledge of all the facts in each case, Psalm 68:19,20. God can and does prolong life on earth, Psalm 102:19, 20, 23,24; 118:18. God also delivers the believer from death, Job 5:20; psalm 33:19; 56:13; 116:8. The believer who attains maturity departs from life under the principle of dying grace, Psalm 23:4; 116:15. Resurrection is the victory over death, 1 Corinthians 15:54-57. Physical death is also defined in terms of no appointment with judgment (for the believer), Hebrews 9:27. Death means the end of pain as far as planet earth is concerned, Revelation 21:4. Death means an eternal inheritance, 1 Peter 1:4,5. Death means a new home, John 14:1-6. It means the realisation of eternal life, it means waiting for the resurrection in the interim body. For the believer whose momentum carries him to gate eight of the divine dynasphere death is profit forever and ever,

Philippians 1:20,21. For the believer who spends his life in the cosmic system death is a horrible experience. However, better an end with horror, the sin unto death, than to have horror in eternity, hell or the second death. The believer living in the cosmic system dies under the discipline known as the sin unto death.

2. Spiritual death of the human race. That begins at the moment of life.

3. There is a positional death of the believer, identification with Christ in His death and all of its significance — retroactive positional truth, positional death. Identification with Christ in His death means where He was judged for our sins He also rejected human good and evil, the policy of Satan. Therefore we are in union with Him in His death and we must reject the policy of Satan, we have been given the opportunity of doing so.

4. Cosmic death of the believer which is synonymous with being out of fellowship.

5. The productive mortality of the believer — dead works. This comes from the believer who is most zealous for the Lord but is living in the cosmic system and suffers, of course, from arrogance. The production of Christian service must be totally free from the cosmic system.

6. Sexual death, described in two passages related to one man, Abraham. It explains the origin of the Jewish race actually. It is found in Romans 4:17-21; Hebrews 11:11,12.

7. The second death, which is the eternal lake of fire for the unbeliever.

8. The sin unto death for the believer.

Before us, of course, is physical death as an historical trend, the inevitable result of the first three horsemen. The rider on the white horse is dictatorship, the personification of bad government as a recognition [result] of social degeneration in a given nation. There is the red horse, warfare. There is the black horse, economic depression.

Now we have come to the fourth horse. “Then I looked, and behold, an ashen horse.” Next comes the connective kai and the articular present active participle from the verb kaqhmai, to sit. The definite article is used as an indefinite pronoun to define a category, the personification of physical death. The present tense is a futuristic present, it denotes the rider as the personification of death in the Tribulation. The active voice: the personification of death in the Tribulation produces the action. The participle is circumstantial but the participle is used as a substantive, therefore we translate it, “the rider.” Or it can be translated: “Then I looked, and behold, an ashen horse: and the rider [the one who sat on it, literally],” the personification of death in the Tribulation. “On it” is simply a prepositional phrase made up of an adverb, e)panw. It is used as an improper preposition with a)utoj in the genitive, and that is the intensive pronoun used as the personal pronoun and it is simply translated, “sat on it” or “the rider,” being a simpler translation. Whenever possible simple translations are better because simple phrases are for everyone.

The next four words in the Greek are an idiom of possession and they form what is called an anacoluthon, “and the name to him the death” is the way it is translated literally, the nominative singular of the noun o)noma, “the name.” With this we have the dative of possession from a)utoj again, the intensive pronoun used as the personal pronoun, third person singular, referring to the rider on the horse. Then we have the predicate nominative from the noun qanatoj, “death.” And while it is literally translated “a name to him the death” it is an idiom and is correctly translated into the English, “his name was death.” Death occurs in all dispensations but death is a very special trend in the Tribulation due to warfare, famine, disease, terrorism, violence on an unprecedented scale for those seven years. As a matter of fact in this passage we will see that one quarter of the population of the earth will be taken by death during the Tribulation. Hence, a trend of history becomes an intensified trend of history during the Tribulation. Furthermore, death from natural causes seems to disappear while the mortality rate goes higher and higher.

It is very similar to what we had in medieval times in the middle ages. Life expectancy in the middle ages was very low and at one point went all the way down to the teens. That is exactly what is going to happen in the Tribulation, the shortening of life expectancy due to all of the things we have studied.

We are then introduced to where they are all going to go if they are unbelievers. We have the connective kai introducing a result from what precedes, translated either “furthermore” or “in fact,” “his name was Death, in fact.” Now we come to the problem, the nominative singular subject from a(dhj, called “Hades.” Unfortunately, in the King James version it is translated “Hell” and Hell is not a transliteration of anything. It is not a translation and it is not a transliteration. The translators have taken this word “Hell” and have used it for four Hebrew words and several Greek words, and all of these words in the Hebrew and in the Greek have different meanings — four different places and only two of them are actually synonyms for each other. So we have a problem. First of all we will get the exegesis out of the way and then tackle the problem of Hell. Hades is the word here, and the subject. The final Hell does not yet exist. It has been prepared for the devil and his angels and its existence will come into being and we will see it at the end of Revelation. Hades was the place for all departed dead prior to the resurrection of Christ.

We note first the imperfect active indicative of the verb a)kolouqew. The word generally means to follow, it also means to accompany, to go along with, but here we have its military terminology. It also means in the military to march along with, to keep step with, and we will translate it that way, “his name was Death, in fact Hades was keeping step [marching along with] with him,” the prepositional phrase meta plus the genitive of a)utoj, translated “with him.” The intensive pronoun a)utoj refers to death.

Our problem is to deal with the doctrine of Hades. The Hebrew word is sheol; the Greek word is a(dhj. It all began when our Lord Jesus Christ said to one of the dying thieves: “Today shalt thou be with me in Paradise.” Paradise is also called “Abraham’s bosom.”

Until the resurrection of Christ all born again believers of the Old Testament went to Paradise/Abraham's bosom in the heart of the earth. They did not go to heaven as such. This compartment of Sheol or Hades, of course, has all the benefits of heaven. Then, after the resurrection of Christ, this compartment of Hades called Sheol or Abraham's bosom was moved to the third heaven so that all of the Old Testament saints had a permanent change of station as of the resurrection of Christ. When our Lord ascended He was, in effect, the first human being to ever be in heaven. Then, of course, the transfer of the Old Testament saints in their interim bodies, they have no resurrection bodies yet. All of these Old Testament saints are going to return with Christ, and that is when they will get their resurrection bodies. Then they will be involved in the Millennial reign of Christ. The believer of the Church Age gets his resurrection body at the end of the Church Age. The Millennial saints receive their resurrection bodies at the end of the Millennium.

Next, below the compartment called Paradise or Abraham's bosom there is what is called "a great gulf fixed," and then the second compartment of Hades is called "torments." Torments is where all of the unbelievers go after death. It is in the heart of the earth. And so when we get to Revelation chapter twenty and we are studying the great white throne and it says, "death and Hades delivered up their dead [the unbelievers]," then you know it is the second resurrection and we have the resurrection of all unbelievers since the beginning of time for the great white throne judgment. That is called "Hades" in Revelation chapter twenty, but it is only one compartment of Hades.

These are the two compartments related to the human race. Now we have two more related to angels. The next two compartments are prisons for angels.

The first of these is called Tartarus. Jesus, when His soul was in Abraham's bosom, His spirit was in the presence of the Father, His body was in the grave. His spirit went to Tartarus and He made an announcement to the angels in Tartarus. There is a certain band of fallen angels in Tartarus. In Genesis chapter six there is a category of fallen angels that tried to hinder the true humanity of Christ and the strategic victory of the first advent. So these who were involved are imprisoned in Tartarus.

Then there is another prison called the Abyss and certain demons who are worse than most of the demons, and have caused certain troubles, are actually in the Abyss. The demons in the Abyss are going to get out of jail in the Tribulation and they are going to cause some very special trouble. And, next to Satan, the toughest of all demons is their leader down there whose name is Abaddon. With Satan and Abaddon both loose on the earth you have the full meaning of the word "tribulation." It will be the worst period in all of history. Demon possession and demonism, and demons using the bodies of certain categories of animals, like scorpions, are going to attack the human race. It is right out of science fiction but it is not fiction. All of this is going to happen in the future.

At the great white throne judgment all the unbelievers are going to be brought up and judged. Then they are going to be cast into the lake of fire. But the Bible doesn't call it Hell, it is called the lake of fire. That is the final Hell. But it is also called in the Hebrew, Tophet and Gehenna, so we have the final Hell called Tophet, Gehenna and lake of fire. "Hell" is the word used for all of these places in the King James version and it is total incompetence. It destroys these tremendous distinctions that are very important in the interpretation of the Word of God.

The doctrine of Hades

The Hebrew word for Hades is sheol, and it refers to a vast subterranean area of the departed dead of the human race and certain categories of angelic creatures. It is estimated to be in the heart of the earth but that is not necessarily it. Several passages imply this but the location is really unknown. The implication comes when Abaddon, the most incorrigible of the demons, is released from the Abyss and there is an opening there and they come right up out of the earth. That is where we decide that it must be in the heart of the earth. The dying are said to go to sheol in Numbers 16:30; Ezekiel 31:15,17. Those who are believers of the Old Testament were said to be delivered into the power of sheol, Hosea 13:14; Psalm 49:16. In the Septuagint, the Greek translation, Hades is used for the Hebrew sheol. Prior to the resurrection of Christ all human dead went to Hades where two compartments were designed to receive them, namely Paradise and Abraham's bosom. Between the two there was a great gulf fixed. All unbelievers are still in torments until the great white throne judgment. In addition there are two compartments in Hades for fallen angels, and they are separate compartments — Tartarus and the Abyss. Tartarus is reserved for the fallen angels involved in the infiltration and cohabitation of Genesis chapter six. They are called "sons of God," beni-ha-Elohim. The Abyss is a special prison for certain demons whose restraint is necessary for the continuation and perpetuation of human history. They had to be removed from the scene in order for the angelic conflict to continue.

Hades: the first compartment. Nomenclature: Paradise/Abraham's bosom. It is defined as the place where all the Old Testament believers went after physical death. Illustration: Luke 23:39-43, "And one of the criminals who was hanging there hurled insults at him [at Christ], saying, 'Are you not the Messiah? Deliver yourself and us!' But the other criminal answered, and rebuked him, saying, 'Do you not have respect for God, since you are under the same sentence of condemnation? In fact, we indeed justly, for we are receiving what we deserve for our deeds; but he [our Lord] has done nothing wrong.' And he kept repeating, 'Jesus, remember me when you come into your kingdom!' And he [Jesus] replied to him, 'Truly I say to you, today you will be with me in Paradise'." Paradise is the residence, then, of the Old Testament believers who died up until the Church Age.

Our second passage on Paradise is found in Ephesians 4:8-10, "For this reason the scripture says [according to Psalm 68:18], 'When he [Christ] had ascended up on high, he led captives [Old Testament believers] in a triumphal procession from their state of captivity [Paradise],' hence they were transferred from Paradise to the third heaven. [This is also taught in Matthew 27:52-53] (Not this doctrine only, that he ascended, what does it imply except that he [Christ] also descended into the lower parts of the earth? The one who has descended is the same person also who ascended far above all the heavens),” the third heaven, the new Paradise.

The prophecy is given in Psalm 16:10, “For you will not abandon my soul in Sheol; neither will you allow your Holy One [Jesus Christ] to undergo decay [reference to His resurrection].” His soul came out of Hades, not Hell, for the resurrection, Acts 2:27,31, the fulfillment.

The second compartment is called Torments. This is the residence of all unbelievers until the end of the Millennium. In the great white throne judgment, Revelation 20:11-15, “Hades emptied its dead,” the second resurrection for judgment in the lake of fire. There are only unbelievers in the second resurrection. In Luke 16:19-31 we have the details of Torments and the great gulf fixed. In the description of the last judgment in Revelation 20:13 Hades “gave up the dead which were in it.” Verse 14 says, “Both death and Hades were thrown into the lake of fire. This [the lake of fire] is the second death.”

The third compartment is Tartarus.

Genesis 6:1-6

Tartarus is the residence of a group of fallen angels. They are called in Genesis chapter six, beni-ha-Elohim, translated “sons of God,” a slight misnomer. The concept: Satan has two major attacks on the Lord Jesus Christ. The first one was an attempt to frustrate the incarnation, to keep our Lord from becoming true humanity; and, after becoming true humanity through the virgin birth, to keep Him from going to the cross and being judged for our sins. This attack was first on Adam’s seed. The “seed of Adam” is a title of our Lord Jesus Christ and in the fourth chapter of Genesis Cain murdered Able because Abel was in the line of the seed of Christ. He was motivated by Satan to commit that first murder in the human race; he was motivated to cut off the incarnation and to keep our Lord Jesus Christ from being true humanity.

The second attempt is in our passage — Genesis chapter six. When Satan discovered that the Lord Jesus Christ was going to come in the flesh, not only through the seed of Adam but through Abraham’s seed, there were several attacks at that point. The first attack was when Sarah was in the harem of the Egyptian king in Genesis 12:10-20. The second attack came when Pharaoh commanded to kill all the male line of Israel in Exodus 1:10,15,16. Another attack came when Pharaoh attempted to destroy all Israel in Exodus 14:13-19. Then it was discovered that Abraham’s seed was now boiled down to the seed of David. Therefore Satan made a renewed attack upon the line of David. There was the case of Jehoshaphat’s son. Jehoshaphat was a very famous king who arranged a marriage between his son Jehoram and Athalia, the daughter of Jezebel, 2 Chronicles 18:1. Then Jehoram killed his brothers to hang on to the throne, 2 Chronicles 21:4. Then the Arabians killed all the sons of Jehoram except the son by Azariah called Jehoahaz. Then in 2 Chronicles 21:16ff we have the fact that Athalia, the mother of Jehoahaz, killed all the royal seed in an attempt to destroy any possibility of our Lord coming in the flesh as the seed of David, to head off that promise. One of them survived called Joash, 2 Chronicles 23:3. In the case of Hezekiah, Hezekiah was in the line and he was childless when he was attacked by the king of Assyria, Isaiah 36,38,39. He was preserved until he had a son and an heir.

The next attack is found in the book of Esther, Haman's plot to annihilate all the Jews. By this time the seed of David had become so widespread from the four sons of David and Bathsheba that this was an attempt to destroy all of the line by destroying all the Jews. The attack also on Joseph's seed is also a part of the problem: the dilemma of Joseph when he discovered that Mary was pregnant — Matthew 1:18-20. The procedure in those days was to take her out and have her stoned. When he realised that it was the fulfilment of the virgin birth passage in Isaiah chapter seven he understood the issue and did no such thing. Then, after the birth of our Lord, a great attempt was Herod's command to kill all the children who were born at that time, Matthew 2:13-18.

All of this was an attempt to destroy the line between Adam and our Lord Jesus Christ. There were other attacks as well. So in the Old Testament we summarise by saying that Satan's main attack was against the Lord Jesus Christ, to keep Him from becoming true humanity and undiminished deity in one person forever — frustrating, in other words, the hypostatic union. Before the cross Satan attacked the line of Christ and the incarnate person of Christ; since the cross Satan's attack is against the written Word. So Satan attacked, first of all, the living Word in the Old Testament; in the New Testament times his attack is against the written Word. Therefore Satan attacks the royal family of Christ which are the believers of this age, in various ways and through various ministries.

Now in our context we see one of the most dramatic attempts, a conspiracy on the part of Satan to destroy any possibility of our Lord Jesus Christ being the last Adam. In the Old Testament times Satan was constantly trying to find ways to hinder the incarnation. We see Satan's great attempt to frustrate the virgin birth, the incarnation, the cross, the resurrection, the ascension, the session of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the reception of His third royal patent (the most critical one). The angelic infiltration of this chapter was an attempt to destroy "the seed of the woman," the incarnation, and what better way to do it than to destroy true humanity on the earth by intermarriage with angelic creatures. The resultant progeny would not be true humanity and Christ could not come into the world except through true humanity. A secondary principle is the fact that in this context we have a complete explanation of classical Greek, the culture, the art, the music, the science, the sex of the ancient Greeks and how they put it all together to finally come to the fifth century BC, the age of Pericles in Athens. It also explains why most of the human race was destroyed.

Genesis 6:1, "Now is came to pass, when mankind had become numerous on the fact of planet earth" — that is when Satan had his idea, "and that beautiful women were born to them." This verse indicates the tremendous population explosion of the antediluvian civilisation. There have only been four civilisations. Seven dispensations; four dispensations. The first one is called the antediluvian civilisation, from the creation of man to the flood. Then there is the post-diluvian civilisation, from the flood to the beginning of the Millennium. The third is the Millennial civilisation and the fourth is the eternal civilisation. We are looking at the antediluvian civilisation.

The increase of the population, of course, means the increase of sin natures. More sin natures means more evil, more adherence to the cosmic system. More evil means more lawlessness, more violence on the earth as a result of man living in the cosmic system. Also, by the tenth generation from Adam there is no reference to the Sethites and the Cainites as separate families and tribes. In other words, by the tenth generation the line of Seth and the line of Cain had amalgamated. The marriage of Ham and his wife is an illustration. The separation of the two lines was no longer there. The Cainite line was filled with disillusion from a study of science, from their culture, from their urban society, and they, of course, rejected the solution to life and the happiness and blessing God has designed for them, by rejecting Christ as saviour. They entered into intellectual pursuits, they had a very scintillating society saturated with hedonistic pleasure; all of this in the line of Cain which eventually amalgamated with the line of Seth. The antediluvian population was generally unregenerate, reversionistic, lots of saturation in the field of cosmic involvement and, suddenly in one generation a tremendous excess of beautiful women.

The family of Noah, eight people who were the only believers among the millions of people on the earth at that time. There were originally nine on the earth at that time actually. The first believer was Methuselah, whose grandson was Noah. Methuselah died the day the flood came. The antediluvian civilisation had no rain — perfect weather. So there were nine people out of millions who were actually born again at this time when the plot was hatched by Satan.

Verse 2, “Then the sons of Elohim.” This is a technical word, beni-ha-Elohim, and it is unfortunate that it is translated “sons of God” because in Galatians 3:26 you discover that we are the sons of God by faith in Christ Jesus, but here we are talking in the Hebrew about a very technical word used for angels only. It is used for angels in Job 1:6; 2¹; 38:7, and it is used once in the Chaldean of Daniel 3:25 also for angels. It is never used for human beings, it is only used for angelic creatures, the incarcerated fallen angels of 2 Peter 2:4 and Jude 6. When the word “Son of God” in the singular is used it is used for our Lord Jesus Christ; it is one of His titles. When it is used in the plural, “sons of God” in the New Testament it is used for believers, but here in the Old Testament this is a highly technical Hebrew word.

“Then the sons of God,” qal imperfect of the verb raah. The qal imperfect means linear aktionsart, they “kept seeing, [they kept watching] these daughters of men [mankind].”

As a result of these fallen angelic creatures cohabiting with women there were literally thousands of people on the earth who were half human and half angelic, therefore not true humanity, a super race half way between angels and human beings. You can begin to see why the flood. You cannot have a crossing the line between the angelic race and the human race and bring our Lord Jesus Christ to the cross. This was the big issue. “and they took for themselves women from all whom they observed.” In other words, the qal perfect from bachar means that they seduced them.

Verse 3, “Then Jehovah [God the Father] said, “My Spirit [God the Holy Spirit who was restraining mankind as well as using His power in evangelism] shall not convince man forever, in his going astray [his reversionism] he [man] is also flesh; nevertheless his days will be one hundred and twenty years.”

When this statement was made man had one hundred and twenty years to be converted before the flood. That was nothing in that time because people lived almost a thousand years. So “he also is flesh,” that is, man was still true humanity on the earth before the flood. We know of nine, there were others. But the infiltration kept going simply because negative toward the truth, toward the gospel, toward establishment, and toward doctrine. By the end of the 120 years there were only nine members of the human race who were still true humanity.

Verse three is significant because it gives us a principle which we will study in the book of Revelation: grace always precedes judgment.

Verse 4, here is where we are going to meet ha Nephalim. It is mistranslated in the King James version, we will transliterate it.

“The Nephalim [the fallen ones: half human, half angel, the super race] were on the earth in those days [the 120 years before the flood], consequently, when the sons of Elohim [the demons, fallen angels] copulated with the women of mankind, and the women gave birth to these Nephalim, the same were heroes which from ancient times were famous men.”

— ancient times, meaning antediluvian times. Who were some of these Nephalim? Orpheus, Persius, Hercules, Minos, Theseus, Jason, Castor and Pollux, and so on. They were violent and they were lawless. These are the old Greek heroes in contrast to the later Greek heroes of the Trojan war. So we have the Nephalim and they are said to be heroes. This explains why Tartarus became necessary.

The trend of simultaneous progress and degeneracy are a part of this picture. There is a famous author by the name of G.H. Pember who wrote a book called “Earth’s Earliest Ages.” He said on page 214: —

“And hence there sprang up a thick crop of frauds and assassinations, of open quarrels and violence, until the whole earth was filled with corruption and bloodshed”. He made an analysis of this area. He went on to say, “And yet all this seems to have existed side by side with the greatest of luxuries, a refined culture, a love of art and music. Such minglings of things apparently incongruous have not been infrequent in the post-diluvian times. The profligacy, immorality, and sensuous intellectuality of Athens are an example. A parallel also might be sought in the descriptions given by Tacitus, Juvenile and others in the times of the Caesars. For then the whole body of society was corrupted and even the streets of Rome were accustomed to constant violence. And yet the worst of vices, the most absolute immorality, the most profligate gluttony, the most wanton cruelty prevailed in company with splendid magnificence. A high appreciation of music, sculpture and art generally, and a taste for literature, and especially for poetry, so great that recitations and readings were a common amusement.”

So having a high culture in society does not prevent violence and evil. Satan has never been able to work out that particular problem. This passage, then, confirms the fact that behind Greek mythology is the factual skeleton of the Nephilim. If the flood occurred in 2245 BC, which is one of the more acceptable dates, then the angelic infiltration and the age of the older heroes would be 120 years prior to that date. Therefore the age of the Nephilim or the older heroes is roughly around 2500 BC.

Verse 5, “Then the Lord observed that the evil of mankind was great on the earth, and every frame of reference for the thoughts of his right lobe was not only evil but malignant evil all the day.”

The cosmic system reached a saturation point for the older heroes of Greek mythology. Murders, rapes, tyranny, dictatorships, plots, schemes to control power, wide travel for plunder, great robbery and piracy, more saturation of reversionism than the earth had ever known, the presence of the super race, not true humanity. The saturation of evil reached the point where the human race was in the process of destroying itself, and therefore the grace judgment of our Lord in bringing about the universal flood.

Verse 6, “Therefore Jehovah himself repented [He changed His mind] with regard to man that he had made man on planet earth, and was grieved in his right lobe”. These are anthropopathisms. An anthropopathism ascribes to God a human characteristic which God does not really possess, but in order to cause man to understand some divine policy human attributes and functions are used. God doesn’t change His mind, this is simply an anthropopathism.

This prepares the way to understand Tartarus from the strategic victory of our Lord Jesus Christ.

1 Peter 3:18-22

We begin by noticing the corrected translation of Jude 6, “And the angels [the sons of God of Genesis chapter six, verse two, beni-ha-Elohim] who did not guard their own beginning [their own status quo, they did not remain within the angelic realm], but who deserted their own habitation [their proper dwelling place in the first and second heavens], he has incarcerated them in everlasting chains under thick darkness for the judgment of the great day [the judgment of all fallen angels who will be cast into the lake of fire at the end of human history, Matthew 25:41]

2 Peter 2:4, “For if God did not spare the angels that sinned [a reference to the infiltration of Genesis 6:2], but incarcerated them in Tartarus with chains of thick darkness, he delivered them to punishment [judgment] constantly being guarded.”

This prepares the way for understanding 1 Peter 3:18-22, the most detailed passage in the Word of God on the compartment called Tartarus. It explains that while our Lord’s body was in the grave for three days and three nights his soul was in Paradise. He made a trip down to the third compartment called Tartarus to make His victorious proclamation which is recorded in the second chapter of Hebrews.

1 Peter 3:18, “Because Christ also once and for all has died on behalf of sins.”

The word “suffered” in the King James version is incorrect. It is the aorist active indicative of the verb ἀποθνήσκω, and it means to die, not to suffer. And it has to do with the spiritual death of Christ on the cross at that point when He provided salvation. The culminative aorist tense views the event of our Lord’s spiritual death on the cross in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. The existing results include our so great salvation. The active voice: Christ produces the action of the verb with the result of the strategical victory of the angelic conflict, the strategic victory which is celebrated in Colossians 2:14, 15 and Hebrews 2:14, 15. The declarative indicative mood represents the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality. This is the mood of certainty and unqualified assertion.

So we begin by noting our Lord’s strategic victory in 1 Peter 3:18, for His strategic victory during the first advent is the basis for His proclamation to the fallen angels in Tartarus. He went down there because these angels are in prison because they were a part of Satan’s great plan to frustrate the coming of the humanity of Christ. Satan realised in the antediluvian civilisation that the only possible way to keep our Lord Jesus Christ from that great strategic victory (in other words, to keep Him from becoming true humanity for only as true humanity could He be judged for our sins. As eternal God He cannot sin, He cannot be judged for sin, He cannot have contact with sin, He cannot tempt, He is absolute total and infinite perfection) was to attack the humanity of Christ to attempt to prevent Him going to the cross and bearing our sins. Once the virgin birth occurred the attacks changed from against Christ to against the Word of God. The original attacks in the Old testament were against the living Word, Jesus Christ; now they are against the written Word, the canon of scripture and Bible doctrine.

So we begin: “Because Christ also has died on behalf of sins, the righteous one on behalf of the unrighteous” —

He was righteous because He lived in the prototype divine dynasphere. Jesus Christ in His hypostatic union is eternal God. As eternal God He has perfect righteousness and cannot sin. But His humanity lived in the prototype divine dynasphere and resisted all temptation though he was tempted far beyond anything we have ever known. So as eternal God in the hypostatic union He is not able to sin; as true humanity living in the prototype divine dynasphere He was able not to sin. This is the true doctrine of impeccability. Our Lord would not have been true humanity in the prototype divine dynasphere if the angelic infiltration of Genesis six had succeeded,

“in order that he might bring all of you [believers] face to face with the God, on the one hand having received death in the flesh, but on the other hand having received life by means of the Spirit.”

God the Holy Spirit had a definite part in the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ. Both the Father and the Spirit were involved in the resurrection of Christ.

Verse 19, we have the victorious proclamation mentioned. “By means of which [Holy Spirit. In other words, the means by which the soul of our Lord in Paradise made the trip to Tartarus for the victorious proclamation and whose ministry was to sustain our Lord during the incarnation] also he [Christ] having received transportation,” the aorist passive participle of the verb poreuomai. The word means to go from one place to another and in the passive voice it means to be transported or receive transportation. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, it takes this occurrence regardless of its extent or duration and gathers it up into one entirety. In other words, our Lord’s soul was in Paradise and by means of the Spirit He was transported to Tartarus, the great prison of darkness. The passive voice: Christ received the action of the verb, He was transported by means of the ministry of the Holy Spirit. This is a circumstantial participle and it has antecedent action as an aorist participle. In other words, the action of the aorist participle precedes the action of the main verb and the main verb was mistranslated in the King James version which has the word “preached.” It is the aorist active indicative of the verb khruww, and it means to make a proclamation, to make an announcement of policy as a herald. As a matter of fact the human heralds are called by the noun khruw. Khruww is cognate and simply means to make a public proclamation as a herald, to announce a policy. This is a constative aorist gathering up into one entirety the proclamation of our Lord. The active voice: Christ announced His strategic victory at the cross to those who came closest to frustrating it and destroying true humanity in Genesis chapter six. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic and absolute assertion of doctrine. Our Lord succeeded in the strategic victory of the angelic conflict at the cross. He bore our sins in His own body on the tree. This announcement is dative of indirect object, it is made to pneuma [in the plural] “spirits.” Angels are often called spirits. They are said to be “in prison,” e)n plus the locative of the noun fulakh, “prison,” “made a public proclamation of victory to the spirits in prison.” Tartarus is a prison for certain demons.

The spirits in prison are identified in verse 20. We have the enclitic particle pote, and pote means “once.” There is now “which” here. We will translate it with the aorist active participle of a)peiqew. Peiqew means to obey; a)poqeiw means to disobey, “having disobeyed.” The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, it gathers up into one action the angelic infiltration of Genesis chapter six. The active voice: these spirits in prison, the “sons of God” of Genesis 6:2, perform the action. This is a temporal participle having also antecedent action. The action of this aorist participle precedes the action of the main verb, therefore in corrected translation we begin verse 20, "Having disobeyed once upon a time when the patience of God himself kept waiting in the days of Noah."

The patience of God which kept waiting is the imperfect middle indicative of the verb apekdexomai, which means to patiently wait, to wait from the ultimate source of one's own perfect character. Our Lord waited from His holiness and He waited for 120 years for the antediluvian population to respond to the grace message. For 120 years there was a grace period, and they ignored the grace period. Therefore, the flood came and destroyed all but the believers.

In the Tribulation there is a grace period we will be studying in the next chapter where 144,000 evangelists are going to present the gospel in the same intensity by which it was given for 120 years before the flood. When this grace period is over then Satan is permitted to open the door of the Abyss and his number two demon, Abaddon, will come out with a tremendous demon army and they will attack these people who are negative toward Bible doctrine in the Tribulation.

"while the ark was being constructed." We have here a temporal participle. The ark itself was a part of Noah's ministry of evangelism, "in which [ark] a few, that is, eight souls, were brought to safety through water." Being "brought to safety" is the aorist passive indicative of the verb diasozw, to be brought to safety. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist which views the events in the process of occurrence but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, 40 days and 40 nights of rain, and water covered earth. The ark floated with eight souls, called "souls" because they had made a decision for Christ, they were aboard the ark for that reason. They were the only believers alive on the earth when the judgment came. That means that all of the unbelievers, the super race, were under the water. The believers were brought to safety "through water," the same water that destroyed or baptised the unbelievers.

Verse 21, "which also corresponds to the baptism that now saves us ... "

What baptism now saves us? Spirit baptism. At the moment you believe in Christ one of the 36 things that happen to you is God the Holy Spirit entered you into union with Christ. That is the baptism of the Spirit. Water baptism doesn't save you. Peter makes it very clear that this is not water baptism. Remember that Peter personally heard the prophecy of the baptism of the Spirit in Acts 1:5. Peter declared that the prophecy of the baptism of the Spirit was then fulfilled, Acts 11:15-17.

"not the removal of human dirt as in a bath," in other words, this is not water baptism. The word rupoj means dirt, "but the pledge of a good conscience toward God." A good conscience simply refers to the fact that at the moment God the Holy Spirit enters us into union with Christ one of the things that happens is that our sins are removed. We start with an intrinsically good conscience because at the moment of salvation He has blotted out as a thick cloud our transgressions, He has removed them as sins.

The final phrase then adds: “through the resurrection of Jesus Christ.” Again, Spirit baptism is the pledge of a good conscience toward God for all members of the royal family. The possession of an old sin nature makes the pledge of a good conscience toward God impossible. We still have the old sin nature after salvation. But the baptism of the Holy Spirit, which produces both retroactive and current positional truth, not only links us with the strategic victory of the angelic conflict at the cross but provides the basis of a good conscience of a good conscience toward God. For we are identified with Christ in His resurrection and that means the good conscience toward God. That is current positional truth. No one is acceptable to God on the basis of his works but on the basis of God’s work: one of them is the baptism of the Spirit identifying us with Christ in His resurrection. Therefore dia plus the genitive of a)nastasij, “through the resurrection of Jesus Christ.”

Then we have that wonderful statement of the completion of the strategic victory of our Lord, the basis of His third royal patent —

“who is on the right hand of God, having gone to heaven, angels and authorities and powers having been subordinated to him.”

This is just briefly the concept we find in this passage. Angels have been subordinated to Him. Our Lord went to Tartarus to make an announcement of His strategic victory to those who did the most to frustrate it and are imprisoned because of it [Genesis 6].

Corrected translation of 1 Peter 3:18-22, “Because Christ also once and for all died on behalf of sins, a righteous one on behalf of unrighteous ones, in order that he might bring all of you face to face with God, on the one hand having received death in the flesh, but on the other hand having received life by means of the Spirit; by means of which Holy Spirit also he [Christ] having received transportation [to Tartarus] made a public proclamation of victory to the spirits in prison, who having disobeyed once upon a time, when the patience of God himself kept waiting in the days of Noah [120 years] when the ark was being constructed, in which [ark] a few, that is, eight souls, were brought to safety through water, water which also corresponds to the baptism that now saves [Spirit baptism] — not the removal of human dirt as in a bath, but the pledge of a good conscience toward God — through the resurrection of Jesus Christ, who is on the right hand of God, having gone to heaven, angels and authorities and powers having been subordinated to him.”

Hebrews 2:9-16 is a passage which tells us what our Lord said in Tartarus.

Verse 9, “But we see Jesus who was made a little lower than angels [the humanity of Christ], now crowned with glory and honour because he suffered death [the strategic victory of the cross], so that by the grace of God he might taste death for everyone.

Verse 10, the result, “For in bringing many sons to glory it was fitting that God [the Father], for whom and through whom everything exists, to bring to the objective through suffering the author of their salvation,” this is what our Lord taught them in Tartarus.

Verse 11, “For both he who sanctifies [Jesus Christ through the baptism of the Spirit] and those who are being sanctified [the royal family of God] are all from one source [God the Father is the author of the plan]; for which reason he is not ashamed to call them [royal family] brethren, Verse 12, “saying [quoting from Psalm 22:22],

‘I will declare your person to my brothers [Christ to the royal family],

[Antiphonal response] In the middle of the Church I will sing your praises.’

Verse 13, “And again [quoting Isaiah 8:17],

‘I [the royal family] will put my trust in him.’

And again [quoting Isaiah 8:18],

‘Behold, I [our Lord Jesus Christ] and the children [royal family of the Church Age] whom God the Father has given to me.’

Verse 14, “Since therefore the children share in common blood and flesh, he also himself in the same manner shared their humanity [in carnation of Christ], in order that through death [the work of Christ on the cross] he might render powerless [neutralise, destroy] him who had the power of death, the devil;

Verse 15, “and release [or free or liberate] from Satan’s cosmic system who through fear of death was subjected to slavery all of their lives,” the strategic victory of Christ frees people from the cosmic system.

Verse 16, “For obviously he [Christ] in the first advent did not assume the nature of angels, but he did take on the seed of Abraham.” (He didn’t assume the nature of angels, that was cut off in Genesis six. But He did take on the seed of Abraham, that was the true humanity which came from the line of Shem)

Now this briefly is the victorious proclamation, the message given by our Lord Jesus Christ to the “sons of God” or the fallen angels imprisoned in Tartarus, the third compartment of Hades. The infiltration of these “sons of God” in Genesis 6:2 did not frustrate the incarnation or the first advent of Christ. In fact, several factors preserved the human race as true humanity and frustrated the genius conspiracy of Satan to destroy the human race with angelic genes.

First there was the flood which destroyed the progeny of the beni-ha-Elohim, through their human volition gave them the same opportunity for salvation and deliverance that Noah had. The second way in which Satan’s plan was frustrated was when our Lord incarcerated all the fallen angels involved in the sexual infiltration with the women of the human race and the removal of the ability of any angelic creature to procreate so that Genesis six could never be repeated.

The Abyss is the fourth compartment of Hades. It is defined as the jail for a certain category of demons who for one reason or another are incorrigible and had been incarcerated after Genesis chapter six. Tartarus is for the demon infiltration of Genesis six only. After Genesis six certain demons have gone to jail. The word in the Greek for abyss is abussos. It is found under such names as “the deep,” Luke 8:31; Romans 10:7 in the King James version. It is called the bottomless pit in Revelation chapter nine, as well as in 7:17 and chapter 20. The fact that the Abyss is a part of Sheol is documented from Romans 10:7 which is quoted from Amos 9:2 which mentions Sheol, the Hebrew equivalent of Hades.

When our Lord Jesus Christ was dealing with the demon-possessed man of Gadarene across from Galilee, in the dialogue, Luke 8:30,31, the demons had this to say: “And Jesus asked him, ‘What is your name?’ And he said, ‘Legion’; for many demons had entered this man. And they [the demons] begged him repeatedly not to order them into the abyss.” So it is concluded from this passage that demons who violate certain rules of the angelic conflict extended into human history are banished into the Abyss.

In the Tribulation these demons will be released from their prison, the Abyss, to be a part of the administration of punishment of unbelievers. When Moses and Elijah finish their great television ministry of the Tribulation they will be killed by the demon Abaddon who is the king of all the demons in the Abyss. He is mentioned in Revelation 9:11. This demon king is called in the Hebrew Abaddon and in the Greek Apollyon.

Revelation 9:11, “They [the demons] have a king over them, the angel of the abyss; his name in the Hebrew is Abaddon [meaning destroyer], and in the Greek his name is Apollyon.”

Revelation 11:7, “And when they [the resuscitated Moses and Elijah] have finished their testimony, the supernatural monster that comes up from the abyss [Abaddon] will make war with them, and overpower and kill them.” In other words, the angel demon of the abyss indwells and empowers the dictator of the revived Roman empire. This is taught in the ecumenical religious passage of Revelation 17:8. What happens to ecumenical religion? It will be judged at the end of the Tribulation.

Revelation 17:8, “The beast that you saw [the dictator of the revived Roman empire who is possessed by the demon of the abyss] was [the Roman empire in the time of John] and is not [the fall of the Roman empire in 476 AD], and will come out of the abyss.” What makes this dictator so great? He is indwelt by the super demon who is next to Satan, “and he goes to his destruction.” The abyss, by the way, will be the Millennial jail for Satan where he will serve out a 1000-year sentence while Christ rules on the earth.

Revelation 20:1, “And I saw an angel coming down from heaven, having the key to the abyss and a great chain in his hand.

Verse 2, “And he seized the dragon, the serpent of old, who is the devil and Satan, and bound him [chained him] for a thousand years.

Verse 3, “Then he threw him into the abyss, he both shut and sealed it over him, so that he should not deceive the nations any longer, until the thousand years were completed; after these things [the Millennium] he must be released for a short time [that has to do with the Gog revolution].”

Revelation 6:8 8, “Then I looked, and behold an ashen horse: and the rider, his name was Death; in fact Hades was marching in step with him.”

Now we have one more sentence in verse eight. It is a complete sentence and it begins with the conjunction kai, “and.” This is a connective conjunction introducing a result from what precedes, so we translate it “furthermore.” Then we have our subject: the nominative subject of the noun e)cousia and it means freedom of choice, right, authority, warrant, absolute power. Here it is the ability to do something, “and authority was given,” the aorist passive indicative of the verb didomi. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The passive voice: both death and Hades receive the action of the verb, matching in step with each other. The declarative indicative is for the reality of this historical trend in the Tribulation. With this is the dative plural indirect object from a)utoj, the intensive pronoun used as a personal pronoun, “to them,” “authority was given to them,” i.e. to death and to Hades marching in step, “over,” the preposition e)pi plus the accusative of tetaros, an adjective numeral. And with it the genitive of gh, the noun for planet earth, “and authority was given to them over a fourth of the earth.” “Of the earth” is a partitive genitive, and a noun may be defined by indicating in the genitive the whole of which something is a part. So one quarter of the population of the earth are going to be taken out by death and Hades.

The purpose for that is expressed next in the aorist active infinitive of the verb a)pokteinw, and it means to kill. The constative aorist refers to an action extending over the entire period of the Tribulation. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: Death and Hades, the fourth horseman, produce the action of the verb marching in step. This is an infinitive of actual result. What follows are four prepositional phrases describing the areas in which this power or authority is given to death to kill one quarter of the earth’s population in less than seven years. The greatest killers in the Church Age have been such things as the flea and the mosquito, but in the Tribulation four different categories produce the devastation of the human population of planet earth. The killer will come under the category of the four prepositional phrases, the first of which has to do with war and crime.

The sword is the first one, e)n plus the instrumental of r(omfaia, and it refers to the heavy Thracian broadsword. The sword includes all categories of warfare here. Ordinarily when the word sword is used just for conventional warfare we get maxaira. The Tribulation will be characterised by unrestrained crime, terrorism, violence, warfare, so that people [mostly unbelievers] will die by the millions from this source. Note that a quarter of the population being killed from this trend refers to unbelievers only. A lot of believers are going to die in the Tribulation but we will study them in the next chapter. Note also that since Hades marches in step with death, and since Hades is now the residence of dead unbelievers — only since the resurrection of Christ — it follows that only dead unbelievers are involved in this trend.

So all of Satan's forces are now in three areas of life. First of all we have planet earth, and around planet earth the first heaven. We call those that are operating under Satan's command as the ruler of this world, demons. But there are two other categories. In the heart of the earth we have already studied Tartarus which deals with the Genesis chapter six crowd. Then there is the Abyss where the toughest of all the demons are, and they have a king, as we have noted — Abaddon or Apollyon.

It is no accident that one fourth of the population of unbelievers on the earth shall die under horrible circumstances depicted by these four prepositional phrases since they are the products of their own decisions. People are the products of their own decisions in time; people are the products of their own decisions in eternity. It is a matter of decision. There are people who are going to spend eternity in the lake of fire because they made decisions — negative volition at God-consciousness, negative volition at the point of gospel hearing. These four prepositional phrases indicate what happens to the degenerate society of the Tribulation and how they are the products of their own decisions.

There is a second prepositional phrase, and this one refers to economic depression, e)n plus the instrumental of the noun limoj, referring to economic depression or famine, "and with famine." It means hunger, famine, death caused by economic circumstances. The tremendous and widespread wars of the Tribulation inevitably are going to result in economic disaster. The production of food and its packaging is going to break down in the Tribulation. Logistics will monopolise the food supply of the military and its capability in that field and the removal of one fourth of the earth's population means death to millions of people from economic depression, malnutrition, starvation. But this judgment from the Lord is a fantastic manifestation of His honour, His integrity, and His faithfulness to the Word. Demon possession at that time is going to reach an all-time high, as we will study in Revelation chapter nine. By their own decisions unbelievers will be demon possessed. They will suffer from demonism as never before in history. In fact, the greatest period of demonism is not in the past but in the future, and the detriment to freedom, life and civilisation, the perpetuation of the angelic conflict to the end of human history, all of these things are involved. Therefore the disastrous results of so many demon-possessed unbelievers will neutralise by millions, and destroy by millions; by war, economic depression, disease and violence.

The third prepositional phrase is a little misleading. Again we have e)n plus the instrumental, this time from the noun qanatoj which is often correctly translated "death." Qanatoj means death; it also means terminal illness. Hence it has a connotation of disease. We translate here: "and with disease" or "and with deadly diseases," i.e. terminal illness. Disease will destroy millions during the Tribulation. And you will note that demons and Satan cannot protect unbelievers from loss of health and consequently many are going to die of various diseases.

This brings us to the fourth prepositional phrase: we have the preposition u(po plus the ablative of qhron. This is the ultimate source connotation in the ablative and while it is translated “and by wild animals of the earth,” it means the wild animals are a direct source. In other words, there is a principle that comes out of this:

1. The retraction of civilisation [civilisation is going to be withdrawn during the seven years of the Tribulation] results in the increase of wild animal life that will prey on human beings.
2. The Tribulation will be a time, for example, of man-eaters in the animal kingdom.
3. In the Tribulation there will be a sudden and dramatic increase of death from wild animals of all categories.
4. Add to this the fact of demon possession of animals, changing their ordinary and shy behaviour into aggression toward man, and you have a tremendous loss of life to wild animals on planet earth; something we have not experienced for centuries in human history.
5. The fact of demon possession of both man and animals is the fact of this phenomenon.

Summary of the four horsemen

1. Death or the ashen horse is the grim reaper, the inevitable result of the unrestrained function of the first three horsemen of the apocalypse. God the Holy Spirit no longer restrains history after the Rapture of the Church.
2. Political decline, the white horse, meaning also social degeneration, has two categorical results: foreign policy disaster — the red horse, military disaster; domestic policy disaster — the black horse, government destruction of free enterprise, government regulation and interference with free enterprise, socialism, the welfare state, redistribution of wealth, unjust and discriminatory taxation.
3. Therefore the white horse of political arrogance and incompetence reflects the social degeneration of the people of a nation.
4. Social degeneration produces an incompetent form of government and political disaster which in turn results in military and economic disaster.
5. The result is the function of the fourth horseman, death, who reaps the results of the other categories in this adverse historical trend.

Terrorism

Terrorism is simply a play put on for the purpose of attracting an audience with the objective of changing government, or forcing a government policy or philosophy to change. The best place to recruit terrorists and specialists for terrorist activity is in the prisons. Another pertinent remark was that the terrorists strive to create the image of the mass; that is, the terrorist attempt to create in the mind of the government that they are stronger and more powerful than they really are. By using the media and through their violence they begin to obtain the support of the masses which previously was only a mirage. The terrorists also attempt to get the government to react and then to overreact. When the government does overreact then more and more the populace will turn against what they see as a repressive government and side with the terrorists.

Reasons presented for terrorism.

1. Bringing into an awareness any act of violence to attract attention.
2. To alter the public beliefs concerning terrorists to promote the power of the terrorists.
3. To destroy the enemy — which would be government, the military, the police, any form of establishment authority.
4. To exhaust the opponent through anxiety — the up tight mode, Where will they strike next? — leading to overreaction.
5. Live training drills and preparation for all-out revolution. The masses and the people will not fight unless they have been exposed to it.
6. To provoke fighting and tension among their opponents.
7. To force their opponents to divert their resources.
8. To get each of us to overreact.
9. Personal self-interest.
10. Revenge.

We are through now with the study of the four horsemen of the apocalypse and move to verses 9-11, the fifth seal. In this particular seal we are going to study the Tribulational martyrs. The very fact that there is unrestrained historical disaster inevitably means that there will be some martyrdom among believers.

Verse 9, we note the Tribulational martyrs. We begin with the connective conjunction kai plus the temporal conjunction o(te, which means we are going to have a temporal clause. Kai o(te, “and when.” The aorist active indicative of the verb a)noigw indicates the breaking open of the fifth seal, "And when he had broken open." The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it refers to a momentary action, the breaking open of the fifth seal of the Doomsday book. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb, the declarative indicative for a simple statement of fact. Our Lord Jesus Christ broke the fifth seal of the Doomsday book revealing the fifth historical trend, the martyrdom of certain believers during the Tribulation.

Next is the aorist active indicative of ω (raw, "and I saw." The observation indicates a vision. The constative aorist, again, contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, the historical trend of believers dying during the Tribulation. The active voice: the apostle John, writer of the book of Revelation, produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for a simple statement of historical fact: there are many born again believers who will not survive the Tribulation. They are said to be "under the altar," the adverb υ (pokatw is used as a prepositional phrase. This is used simply to dramatise the fact that when Tribulational believers die they do go to the third heaven, they are in a place called the altar. The noun refers first to the altar of burnt offering or the altar of blood sacrifices. It is the brass altar in the forecourt of the tabernacle or temple when it was on the earth. Here, of course, it has a slightly different meaning related to martyrdom. The direct object of the verb is the word $\gamma\upsilon\chi$ and it is correctly translated "souls." While the soul is invisible the reason that John can see them is because when any believer dies he receives an interim body in heaven, and they are visible because they occupy an interim body waiting for their resurrection [of the Tribulational martyrs at the second advent]. So they have a relatively short time in heaven. This is the time of great interim blessing for these believers of the Tribulation who give their lives for Bible doctrine and evangelism in the Tribulation. The interim body pattern applies, of course, to all believers who die before they receive their resurrection bodies.

With this we have the articular perfect passive participle from the Attic Greek verb $\sigma\alpha\tau\tau\omega$, and it has been corrupted into the Koine to be $\sigma\alpha\zeta\omega$. It means to be butchered, or to be murdered in this case. The definite article used as a relative pronoun refers to the believers of the Tribulation who are martyred. Also, of course, this is used as a demonstrative pronoun. And with this the intensive perfect tense represents the completion of the martyrdom and emphasises the existing results, they are located in heaven. This is actually an emphatic method in the Greek of presenting a fact or a condition, hence a very strong way of saying that a thing is. The passive voice: the believers of the Tribulation receive the action, and it is a circumstantial participle.

The corrected translation: "When he [our Lord Jesus Christ] had broken the fifth seal, I saw under the altar [of burnt offering] the souls of those who had been murdered [or butchered]."

While many of these believers have not been saved very long their sacrifice for Bible doctrine apparently counts as maturity. Remember that you have a very short span of time for the Tribulation. While many of these believers have not been saved very long to advance to maturity they still have a profile in heaven that will be rewardable or not rewardable. They will still fall into the same category that we have today: winners or losers.

In the meantime, for the short period of time that they are in heaven as martyrs and they enjoy the great interim happiness in the interim body. The fact that they are seen under the altar of burnt sacrifices, that is, the brass altar representing the cross, emphasises their fantastic virtue of impersonal love developed through intensive perception of doctrine during the short span of their spiritual life on this earth. Remember that all believers of the world go up in the Rapture terminating the Church Age and the Tribulation begins with no believers on the earth. Therefore the longest anyone could possibly be a believer in the Tribulation is seven years.

These Tribulational believers fulfil the principle enucleated by our Lord in Matthew 16:24,25 — “Then Jesus said to his disciples, ‘If anyone wishes to come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. For whoever wishes to deliver his soul shall lose it; but whoever loses his soul [or life] for my sake shall find it’.”

The perception of doctrine in the Tribulation will have to be concentrated and intense. It will demand, therefore, probably some unprecedented self-denial because of the shortage of time. The taking up of the cross is the motivational virtue of personal love for God and the functional virtue of impersonal love for man. Remember that the Christian way of life in our dispensation is best summarised by words like dunamij or ajgaph, the love complex or the divine dynasphere. God has given us two commissions: priesthood and ambassadorship. All of this is accomplished in this dispensation inside of the divine dynasphere. This concept is represented for the Tribulational believers under this principle: “If anyone wishes to come after me, let him deny himself.”

Self-denial is really not self-denial. This is one thing that is a little misleading. Self-denial is simply personal love for God, and the only way we can have personal love for God is through perception of Bible doctrine. It is the doctrine we do not apply to mankind and to experience; it is the doctrine we learn that we apply to invisible God. Many of the doctrines we learn in the field of soteriology and Christology are only applied to God who is invisible, and we develop through the perception of these doctrines a personal love for God. This personal love becomes the motivating factor. It is true that in the Tribulation there is no divine dynasphere but the same principle and the same pattern of life for the believer applies. They will have the opportunity for personal love for God as the means of motivation in life, personal love for Him who is invisible. Denying self is the principle for these Tribulational believers. In denying self all they really do is demonstrate from the doctrine that they learn a tremendous personal love for God. The way they take up their cross is their impersonal love directed toward mankind, an impersonal love which results in many cases of martyrdom in the Tribulation. Then, of course, the concept of taking up the cross is simply a functional virtue toward man. Our Lord Jesus Christ, when He picked up His cross, was despised and hated, and yet it did not change His impersonal love for mankind. When He went to the cross He was ridiculed by people standing around. Yet He died for their sins. That is impersonal love. And that will be the pattern in the Tribulation as well.

So there is an intense concentration on doctrinal teaching for these people after salvation. And “following the Lord” is the martyrdom of those Tribulational believers who place Bible doctrine above their personal safety and who place love of God above any personal consideration, including loss of life; losing their life on earth but finding a far greater life in heaven. For in Matthew 16:25, again, it says: "For whoever wishes to save his life shall lose it; but whoever loses his life for my sake shall find it." And they find it in being absent from the body and face to face with the Lord under the altar which is described in this passage. The deliverance of their souls into heaven means loss of life on earth but loss of life on earth means finding a far greater life in heaven, the interim body.

There are two reasons for martyrdom in the Tribulation. The first one is given in the next phrase of verse 9, the preposition phrase dia plus the accusative of logoj. With that is the possessive genitive of qeoj, "because of the Word of God." That means, of course, Bible doctrine. The spiritual growth of positive Tribulational believers through a concentrated effort in learning doctrine is a challenge to the devil as the ruler of the world, and it is a challenge to his cosmic system operating without restraint during the Tribulation. The principle is applicable to any dispensation: the Word of God always has been the greatest opposition to Satan's cosmic system.

God permits the slaughter of certain believers who have great momentum in the Tribulation but their death does not stop Bible doctrine. No matter how great the believer is who dies with Bible doctrine he is removed because of his positive attitude toward doctrine, but Satan can't stop doctrine. Bible doctrine is never hindered; Bible doctrine never slows down. Doctrine keeps advancing with or without the believer there to learn it. Nothing can stop the power of doctrine, it is greater than any creature or any system of human power and, what is far more important, any system of Satanic power.

The second reason is also given in the next prepositional phrase. They had a testimony or a deposition of doctrine. Specifically they had a deposition of category two doctrine, the gospel, plus their own personal integrity. This is all brought out by the connective conjunction kai plus dia and the accusative singular of marturia, a deposition or a testimony, and we translate that, "because of the Word of God and because of the testimony [the deposition]," "which they had maintained," the accusative singular from the relative pronoun o(j whose antecedent is marturia, and the imperfect active indicative of the verb e)xw. This is the imperfect of duration and that is why it is translated "maintained" instead of "had." The active voice: Tribulational believers produce the action. These are ones who are martyred. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of historical reality.

Principle

1. These positive believers in the Tribulation are not only consistent in the perception of doctrine, the use of their time in that direction, but they are also consistent in the production of virtue. Their lives are dramatically changed at the point of salvation, they get right into doctrine and there is the production of virtue. With the production of virtue comes the function of true evangelism. Virtue should precede evangelism. [E.g. soup kitchens and rescue missions: feed them before the message, which is optional. The whole process should be a grace process. Whether they want to hear a message or not should be a matter of their own volition]

2. These Tribulational believers are not the evangelists of the Tribulation, however, but they are dynamic first in their life and then in their message. By dynamic is meant grace modus operandi.

3. So important was doctrine in their scale of values that they would not compromise the Word to save their own lives.

4. Life was not as dear or happiness as sweet to compromise them by the rejection or the renouncing of our Lord Jesus Christ, the living Word, or Bible doctrine, the written Word.

5. Doctrine was more important than life; integrity was more important than happiness. So these magnificent believers of the Tribulation sacrificed their lives to the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Corrected translation of verse 9: “And when he [our Lord Jesus Christ] had broken the fifth seal, I saw under the altar [of burnt offerings] the souls [the lives] of those who had been murdered [butchered] because of the Word of God [Bible doctrine], and because of the testimony which they had maintained.”

No matter what the dispensation the Word of God is the key to everything. To be positive toward the Word after salvation is the only basis for spiritual momentum and integrity, the only basis for glorification of our Lord Jesus Christ. There is no substitute for the perception of doctrine; there is no basis for coping with blessings and disasters of life, and the changes that often occur in our lives between blessing and disaster, apart from perception and application of Bible doctrine.

Verse 10, one of the most misunderstood concepts in the Word of God: imprecatory prayers. In this verse we come face to face with the imprecatory prayers of the Tribulational saints. Is there a place for avenging yourself on someone through prayer? In other words, is there a place for the imprecatory prayer?

We start out with the connective conjunction kai, translated this time since it introduces a result from what precedes, “furthermore.” Then we have the aorist active indicative of the verb krazw which means to scream, to shriek, to cry out, and it also means to call out and that is how it is used here. It is used as a part of an idiom actually meaning to shout. They shout from under the altar. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: Tribulational believers, martyrs, believers with great rejected integrity, produce the action of the verb. The declarative mood represents the action of the verb from the viewpoint of reality in heaven.

We have the rest of the idiom, the instrumental singular of manner from an adjective and a noun. The adjective is megas and the noun is fonh, "with a loud voice." So we translate it literally: "Furthermore they called out with a loud voice," but when you put megaj, fwnh and krazw together it means simply to shout. So we will translate it its correct idiom: "Furthermore they shouted." They are not screaming, they are not crying, they are just merely making themselves heard.

Then the present active participle of legw, used merely to indicate the content of what they shouted, it means to say or to speak. In the present tense it is a pictorial present, it presents to the mind a picture of the event in the process of occurrence, prophetically. The active voice: the Tribulational martyrs in heaven in the future will produce this action. Because the participle is circumstantial it is best rendered in the English by the use of the conjunction "and" with a finite construction of the verb. Therefore we translate, "and said," "and they shouted and said."

Then they asked their question by using a temporal conjunction e(wj plus pote, correctly translated "How long." When they come to the vocative they do not use the word that is used for our Lord in the Church Age, but they are actually in the process of offering an imprecatory prayer. Instead of addressing Him as Lord, kurioj, they used the word despothj, from which we get our English word despot. Despothj is a Classical Greek word. It was used by Pindar to connote an owner or a possessor of slaves. The noun connotes unlimited authority and power. It means absolute ruler, the unlimited possibility for the exercise of power, and they chose the word wisely. When used by the Tribulational martyrs now residing in heaven it emphasises God's power, God's authority, and their recognition of the fact that Jesus Christ controls history. And even though they have been martyred they recognise their martyrdom as being a part of God's plan for the Tribulation, which immediately excludes any bitterness in their attitude. Their attitude is free from anything that would possibly hinder a prayer.

In the New Testament, then, despothj has both a secular use, where it occurs ten times, and it is used for Jesus Christ as the God-Man who controls history. Then question is how to translate it. The best way would be either "mighty Lord" or "sovereign Lord," "furthermore they shouted and said, O sovereign Lord," referring to Jesus Christ as the God-Man, Jesus Christ in hypostatic union, the one who controls history.

With this we have the nominative masculine singular definite article, and this is the generic use of the definite article o(. The generic use of the definite article emphasises the uniqueness of the person of our Lord Jesus Christ, and that is why it is not translated. The generic definite article does not have to be translated, "How long, O sovereign Lord." Then follows the adjective a(gioj, used to describe the integrity of the deity of Christ: His righteousness and justice, the two attributes of divine holiness or integrity. Next we have the adjective a)lhqinoj, and that describes the integrity of the humanity of Christ. So "holy and true" does not really give the whole story. Then we put the question: "How long." And e(oj pote means "How long will it be?"

Then we have the rest of the question: “before you judge and avenge our blood on the population of the earth.” This is a double appeal to our Lord Jesus Christ. When they say, “O sovereign Lord, holy and true,” it has a double appeal, and they appeal to the integrity of Christ as God by using the word “holy,” the appeal to the integrity of Christ as true humanity by using the word “true.” The Tribulational saints certainly understood the doctrine of the hypostatic union and the knew how to apply it to disasters that existed in that period. Again, note the fantastic ability of these Tribulational ability to apply doctrine to a disastrous situation. Instead of addressing Jesus Christ as kurioj they appeal to Him as despotj which emphasises His hypostatic union. They understand how the Lord has entered into the feeling of our infirmities in the hypostatic union — Hebrews 4:15. The appeal to the hypostatic union in imprecatory prayers is compatible with their emphasis on the justice of our Lord Jesus Christ as the one who controls history, the justice of our Lord to rectify the terrible injustices which were done to them by demon-possessed men and demon-possessed governments. While an imprecatory prayer is generally defined as a prayer for vengeance it is used here as an appeal to the justice of God as a part of His divine integrity. And since God the Father has delegated all judgment to God the Son — John 5:22, it is an appeal to the integrity and justice of both the humanity of Christ and His deity in hypostatic union. That means that the adjectives mentioned in the vocative address, a(gioj and a)lhqinoj, emphasise the justice of our Lord’s deity and the justice of our Lord’s humanity with a total emphasis on the integrity of Jesus Christ to deal with this matter. They are not dealing with it, they are asking Him to deal with it, and therefore they are expressing an imprecatory prayer.

Verse 10b, the important phrase in this passage is the word “avenge.” If there is one thing we have learned as believers it is the simple fact that “Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord.” We do not have the right to take revenge, to get even, to “show” someone. As a part of Christian integrity revenge is out, it is one of the concepts of evil which is developed in cosmic one and cosmic two. Yet here we find believers in the next historical era, the next dispensation, talking about revenge, “How long, O Lord, before you will judge and avenge our blood on the population of the earth?” This introduces the subject of imprecatory prayers.

An imprecatory prayer is generally defined as a prayer which is offered to God in which justice is demanded for some form of persecution, for some form of antagonism and hostility directed toward the one involved. The imprecatory prayer of the Tribulational martyrs was foreshadowed by imprecatory prayers which are the subjects of many of the Psalms. So we go to the Psalms to define, to categorise and to understand the meaning of imprecatory prayer, and to try to answer a question for each one of us: Do you and I as believers have the right to go to God in prayer and demand the execution, the destruction, the ruin of some person, believer or unbeliever?

So we begin by looking at Psalm 13, where in the first four verses we have one of the milder imprecatory prayers. In verse 1 we need only the first two words: “How long?” And then we go to the end of verse 2: “How long will my enemy triumph over me?” Then in verse 3, the beginning: “Look on me and answer, O Lord, my God.” Then verse 4 says: “My enemy will say, ‘I have overcome him, and my foes will rejoice when I fall’.”

The purpose for this is merely to show that we as members of the human race can get very impatient when we are subjected to injustice. Injustice is always a test. If injustice comes from a person it is people testing; if it comes from a system of an organisation it is system testing; if it comes from some form of relationship between man and woman then it is just normal for the time in which we live.

The question is, when you start talking to God in prayer about your problems and about your relationship with other people, do you have the right to pray: "Ruin them, destroy them, kill them, hurt them"? The first thing we note is the frame of mind of such a prayer. Psalm 13:4 gives us our key. At this point it appears the Psalmist is more disturbed about his image than he is about his relationship with the Lord, and therefore obviously that kind of imprecatory prayer is not going to be answered, because he says: "My enemy will say, 'I have defeated him', and my foes will be very happy." The issue there is that this imprecatory prayer is wrong. It is out of line for the most obvious reason: when you are more concerned about what people think of you than the Lord then spiritually you are in trouble. Here it is a case of arrogance speaking: "This is what my enemies will say, they have defeated me." In other words, this is the prayer of arrogance. Arrogance is hypersensitive. It may just be that the arrogant person here, when he says, "my enemy" and "my foes," has simply produced these enemies and these foes by his own involvement in cosmic one, the interlocking systems of arrogance.

In Psalm 13 the prayer is not answered. The person who is offering the prayer is in self-induced misery. He has made these enemies; he is hypersensitive; he is wrong. "If I regard iniquity in my heart the Lord will not hear me." The prayer isn't answered.

Psalm 54, we have a different category of imprecatory prayer. In the first verse and the first word we have the key. This is really a prayer for deliverance.

"Deliver me, O God, by your person, vindicate me by your power." The prayer for deliverance. It is not so much imprecatory at first though it is included by the time we get to verse 5. But the key here is deliverance and vindication, and the basis for vindication is divine power.

Verse 2, "Hear my prayer, O God; listen to the words of my mouth."

Verse 3, "Strangers are attacking me, and men of violence seek my life; men who have no regard for God."

Verse 4, "Behold, God is my helper; the Lord is the sustainer of my soul."

With that background there is a legitimacy to what is brought in in verse five.

Verse 5, "Let the evil return to those who slander me," that is a legitimate imprecatory prayer. This follows the principle of doctrine that when you are slandered and you are maligned, and you do not try to defend yourself but leave it in the Lord's hands, then the Lord will answer this prayer. The evil will return to the slanderer.

“In your faithfulness, destroy them.” Now notice carefully: the victim here who is offering the prayer does not seek to destroy them himself; he does not retaliate himself. In effect, this imprecatory prayer puts the whole matter in God’s hands. He goes to court and in effect says, “Let the evil return to those who slander me; in your faithfulness destroy them”. In other words, he does not try to take the option from God. All vengeance on your part against someone else is blasphemous in that they take the option from the sovereignty of God and put it in your hands. Therefore one of the worst areas of sinning is retaliation. You may have a just cause when you start but the moment you retaliate you have lost your just cause.

The entire Psalm 143 is an imprecatory Psalm, but the last two verses are especially pertinent and help to get the feel of an imprecatory prayer.

Verse 11, “for your name’s sake [for the sake of your person], O Lord, preserve my life.” This is a desperate imprecatory prayer because life is in danger.

“In your righteousness [integrity] bring my life out of trouble.” So here is an imprecatory prayer that depends entirely on the integrity of God.

Verse 12, “In your grace silence my enemies, ruin [destroy] all who afflict my soul; for I am your servant.”

This could be classified as a very bold imprecatory prayer, it is not the kind you want to try when you are new to Christianity. This is really a mature believer. Because, you see, if you are wrong in this prayer then the whole thing falls on you.

Another imprecatory Psalm is Psalm 35.

Verse 4, “May those who seek my life be disgraced and put to shame; may those who plot my ruin be turned back and humiliated.” This is no imprecatory prayer to kill someone, to destroy them. Notice the words: “be disgraced,” “put to shame,” “humiliated,” “turned back.” Those words means the frustration of whatever they are doing that is unjust. The injustice is brought out by the fact: “May those who seek my life be disgraced.” He doesn’t ask for their death. To pray for the humiliation of someone is beneficial. This is obviously a mature believer because he is praying for humiliation. Humiliation leads to humility; humility leads to true orientation to life. Virtue begins with humility. Humiliation is enforced humility.

Verse 8, “May ruin overtake them by surprise; may the net [they’d tried to trap him] which they hid to trap me entangle them; may they fall into the pit [that they have dug].”

Verse 15, “But when I stumbled they gathered around and laughed in glee; attackers gathered against me when I was unaware, they slandered me without ceasing.”

Verse 26, “May all who gloat over my distress be put to shame and humiliated; may all who exalt themselves over me be clothed with shame and disgrace.”

Obviously, in this imprecatory prayer in Psalm 35 he is dealing with arrogance on the part of others — injustice, unfairness — and therefore the various phrases are in line with the Word of God. Everything, however, is left to the integrity of God. The case is stated; God is the judge. Therefore it is legitimate.

Psalm 69 gives us another imprecatory prayer.

Verse 4, “Those who hate me without a cause.” This obviously is a case of where there is unjustifiable antagonism, “are more than the hairs of my head; those who would destroy me are powerful.”

Verse 22, “May their table set before them become a snare; and when they are in prosperity, may it become a trap,” they are trying to prosper at his expense. The table set before them is prosperity, an idiom. For those who are unjustly and unrighteously prosperous their prosperity is a snare. That lines up with doctrine. That is exactly what happens to people whose prosperity comes through sin, evil, injustice, lack of integrity.

Verse 23, “May their eyes grow dim so that they cannot see, and may they suffer from terrible nervousness.

Verse 24, “Pour out your wrath on them, let your fierce anger overtake them.

Verse 25, “May their camp be desolate; may none dwell in their tents.

Verse 26, “For they have persecuted him [David] whom you yourself has disciplined, and they gloat over the pain of him [David] whom you have wounded.” The Lord rightfully disciplined David but the Lord doesn’t need help. Therefore the legitimate use of the imprecatory prayer. When one has sinned and been under discipline from God is to pray these things under the concept that, You have already spanked me, I don’t need it from them.

The most powerful of all of David’s imprecatory prayers is found in Psalm 109; it emphasises the legitimacy of this function.

Verse 1, “O God whom I praise, do not remain silent!

Verse 2, “For they have opened their wicked and deceitful mouths against me; they have maligned me with a lying tongue.

Verse 3, “With words of hatred they surround me, they attack me without a cause.

Verse 4, “In return for my friendship [love] they act as my accusers; but I am in prayer [about this].

Verse 5, “They repaid me evil for good, and hatred for my love.”

Verse 6, “Appoint an evil man to oppose him; and let Satan [this is exactly what the Hebrew says] stand at his right hand” — that means to let Satan do the punishing of this slanderer.

Verse 7, “And when he is tried, let him be found guilty; and let his prayers become sin [another way of saying, Don’t let his prayers be answered].

Verse 8, “Let his days be few; let another take his office.

Verse 9, “Let his children be orphaned, and may his wife be a widow.

Verse 10, “May his children be wandering beggars; may they seek alms far from their ruined homes.

Verse 11, “Let creditors seize all that he owns; may strangers plunder the production of his labour.

Verse 12, “May no one extend kindness to him or take pity on his orphaned children.

Verse 13, “May his posterity be cut off; let their names be blotted out of the next generation.

Verse 16, “For he never thought to show kindness, but he hounded me to death, he persecuted the needy, the broken-hearted, he put to death the despondent of soul.

Verse 20, “May this be the Lord’s payment to my accusers, and to those who speak evil against my soul.”

Imprecatory prayers were legitimate in the Old Testament. The legitimacy of imprecatory prayers in the Church Age is doubtful. It is far better to put the matter in the Lord’s hands is far better than to bring down disaster on someone else. However, in the Tribulation, which is the end of the Jewish Age [Daniel’s seventieth week] as well as a dispensation in its own right, the Tribulational martyrs will offer imprecatory prayers in heaven, and they are legitimate.

To pray for someone’s death, to pray that the Lord will turn Satan loose on them, that the next generation will be beggars and then die, is incompatible with being a member of the royal family of God, even though it is just. In our dispensation the command is to cast your cares on Him who careth for you. Put the matter in the hands of the justice of God. Imprecatory prayers are not recommended.

Remember that in the Tribulation these prayers are legitimate, and when they are legitimate they always follow doctrine. They always appeal to the integrity of God, they always recognise that the sovereignty of God must make the decision. The application of the doctrine of impersonal love precludes offering an imprecatory prayer in this dispensation. We are commanded to love our enemies, not pray them out of existence!

The corrected translation of Revelation 6:10 — “Furthermore they shouted, and said, O sovereign Lord [our Lord Jesus Christ in hypostatic union], holy [the integrity of Christ as God] and true [the integrity of Christ as true humanity], How long will it be before you will judge and avenge our blood on the population of the earth?”

The interim state of these martyrs: they are offering a strong imprecatory prayer, or they are asking the question which is imprecatory. Why did they say, How long? Not because they are miserable.

Verse 11, We have the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, translated “also.” Then the nominative feminine singular subject is composed of two words, leukoj and stolh, “white robes.” I(mation is the usual word for robes but here we have stole which is a long flowing robe. I(mation was used in Revelation 3:5 for the uniform of glory worn over the resurrection body. I(mation is used for clothing in general as well as the translucent uniform of glory, but stolh, used here, has a different connotation. The pur sui vant angel sitting on the empty tomb of our Lord after He was resurrected, Mark 16:5, was said to be wearing a stolh, not i(mation. And by comparing leukh stolh in Revelation 7:9, which is the other passage on these martyrs, with our context it is concluded that the white robes here are the interim body of the Tribulational martyrs. This is not unreasonable since the interim body of believers who die during the Church Age is described as face to face with the Lord. They are said to be face to face with the Lord here and wearing white robes.

“Also a white robe” is in the singular. Note that the white robe is anarthrous, there is no definite article with it. The absence of the definite article emphasises the quality of the noun and the adjective. This is not the uniform of glory awarded to the royal family who hold the order of the morning star, also called white robes, but it is a different white robe and refers to the interim body of these people. If they have an interim body, as they do, and as it Revelation 7:9, 13 these same Tribulation martyrs are described once again as wearing this white robe or interim body, it indicates great happiness, for the interim body is reserved for great happiness and blessing in heaven while waiting for the resurrection body of eternity.

The pertinent resurrection for these Tribulational saints will be the at second advent of Christ, so they do not have long to wait. There is, however, a split in the born-again people of the Tribulation. Some of the believers in the Tribulation are going to stay alive until the second advent. Some, like the ones we are studying are going to be martyred. They are going to die physically and they will have an interim body and great happiness. So those who die during the Tribulation will receive their resurrection bodies with the Old Testament saints at the second advent. But those who survive the Tribulation become the nucleus for the Millennial population after the baptism of fire and, therefore, will not receive their resurrection bodies until the end of the Millennium.

“Also a white robe [the interim body] was given,” the aorist passive indicative of the verb didomi which means to give. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it views the presentation of the interim body or the white robe to each Tribulational martyr in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, namely the great blessing and happiness of living in heaven in an interim body. This is to establish the fact that the imprecatory prayers are not uttered from subjectivity. All imprecatory prayers must be objective and the greatest possible objectivity exists in heaven in an interim body or, later on, in a resurrection body. The passive voice: the interim body receives the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the interim body of the believer who dies during the Tribulation.

Next we have a dative singular indirect object from the adjective e(kastoj, used as a substantive and translated “each one.” “Also a white robe was given to each one.” The dative of indirect object indicates the ones in whose interest the interim body is given. It is given to Tribulational martyrs so that they can all have maximum blessing whether they failed or succeeded in life.

We also have a dative plural of advantage, a)utoj the intensive pronoun used as a personal pronoun, third person, translated “of them” — “each one of them.” Then the aorist passive indicative of the verb femi, sometimes a synonym with legw, only it means to tell, to narrate, “each one of them were told.” Literally, it says “it was told to them,” meaning they were informed. The aorist tense is a constative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety. The passive voice: Tribulational martyrs in their interim body receive the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a simple statement of fact.

Verse 11 — “they were informed.” Our next word is “that,” i(na. This is the use of i(na introducing a final clause to denote a purpose, aim, goal, objective. And then we have the verb, the aorist middle subjunctive of a)napaw which means to rest or refresh. The aorist is a constative aorist for a fact or action extended over the rest of the Tribulation from the time of their death. In other words, in their interim bodies they are going to have a period of great refreshment, a period of great happiness. A)napaw is actually a synonym for happiness. The middle voice describes the subject as participating in the results of the action of the verb. This is what is called a direct middle reflexive. The subjunctive mood goes with i(na to express the purpose clause. The translation: “that they should refresh themselves.”

Refreshment is one of the great subjects of the Word of God. It is a subject that deals with both time and eternity. It has the connotation of great happiness. It is the happiness of the soul, it places emphasis on tremendous inner happiness.

Proverbs 25:13, Refreshment is described as “Like the cold of snow in the time of harvest.” The time of harvest here was in the heat of the summer. The cold of snow was the only way they could get ice and they would go up on Mount Hermon and have runners haul down buckets of snow. By the time they were down it would melt but the water would be cool. The idea is refreshment, “is a faithful messenger to those who send for him.” The faithful messenger is the one carrying the water and providing the refreshment, “for he refreshes the soul of the harvesters.”

Refreshment in the Bible always refers to the soul. Hence this is an analogy between the water boy carrying cold water to those who are very hot from working in the harvest, and it refers to the communicator of doctrine providing spiritual refreshment to the soul through Bible teaching. The cold water is analogous to Bible doctrine. Bible doctrine is the refreshment of the soul. Refreshment comes not from interaction with people but perception of Bible doctrine. That is the key.

The response to the Word of God is always consistently called refreshment. Romans 15:32 — “So that I may come to you in happiness by the will of God, even that I may enjoy refreshment with you.” A responding congregation is a refreshment to the pastor.

This same concept is found in the ministry of Titus to the Corinthians. Their response to his teaching of doctrine was refreshing to Titus. 2 Corinthians 7:13, “For this reason we have been comforted. And beside our comfort, we rejoiced even much more with the happiness of Titus, because his spirit has been refreshed by all of you.”

Mature believers have some form of ministry of refreshment. E.g. certain Corinthian believers in 1 Corinthians 16:17,18, “And I rejoice over the coming of Stephanos and Fortunatus and Achaicus; because they have supplied what was lacking on your part. They have refreshed my spirit and yours [says Paul]. Therefore acknowledge such men.”

Philemon 7, “For I have come to have much happiness and encouragement by your love, because the deep and tender affections of the saints have been refreshed through you, brother.”

Philemon 20, “Very well, brother, let me have benefit from you because of the Lord; refresh my deep affections in Christ.”

2 Timothy 1:16, “The Lord give mercy to the family of Onesiphorus because many times he has refreshed me, and he was not ashamed of my imprisonment.”

So we have it in our passage in Revelation 6:11, “that they should refresh themselves.” And then we have in the next three words an idiom of time, time which has not yet come: the adverb e)ti, the accusative of the extent of time, xronoj, and the adjective mikroj. When you put these three words together, e)ti means “yet”; xronoj means time; mikroj means little; literally it means “still a little time.” But the idiom should be translated “for a little while longer.” They weren’t to worry about how long their blood was avenged, they were to be concerned about just having a good time for a little while longer, until the end of the Tribulation.

Next we have the main verb first in the Greek. We start out with the temporal conjunction e(wj, translated correctly “until.” It denotes the end of an era, the end of a period of time. E(wj is often remembered as the end of a wonderful era in the famous Scottish song, Auld Lang Syne. That is the concept here, there is the end of an era coming up. So enjoy yourselves until it is over. In this case it is the Tribulation, the end of a very bad era.

We have next the third person plural aorist passive subjunctive of the verb plhrow. It does occur after e(oj in the order of the Greek sentence, “until the ... should be completed” is the way we translate it. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, the completion of the complement of believers martyred in the Tribulation. In other words, a full brigade is going to be formed. It isn't all formed yet. Until it is enjoy yourselves, is what our Lord is saying. The passive voice: the Tribulational martyrs receive the action of the verb by the forming of a large corps of personnel. The subjunctive mood is a potential subjunctive implying a future reference qualified by the element of contingency. The explicative use of the conjunction kai is translated "that is," "until Tribulation martyrs shall be completed."

Next comes the dual subject. The first subject describes the function of Tribulational martyrs while they on the earth: the nominative plural of the definite article o(i. It is the generic use of it to set aside the future generation of Tribulational martyrs as a special category. Then we have the nominative plural subject sundouloj. Sun means "with"; douloj means "slaves." It is translated here "fellow servants." Also we have the possessive genitive of the intensive pronoun a)utoj used as a third person plural pronoun and translated "their," "that is, until their fellow servants." That is their function on earth: service to the Lord before they die. Then we have the conjunction kai, translated "even," and the second subject describes their relationship in heaven. Again the nominative plural definite article, the generic use of it, to set aside future Tribulational martyrs as a special category, the nominative plural subject a)delfoj, "even their brethren."

Next come the nominative plural definite article, again o(i, used as a personal pronoun, translated "those," followed by two verbs: the present active participle of the verb mellw, which means to be about to be, "those who are destined," or "those who are about to be killed." The customary present tense of mellw is for what may be reasonably expected to occur during the Tribulation. The inevitable printout of the divine decrees for that period calls for an unusual number of martyrs in that short seven years. The active voice: it refers, of course, to the Tribulational believers who have not yet been martyred but will be before the Tribulation is over. When this announcement is made in heaven they are still on earth. The participle is circumstantial.

Then we have the present passive infinitive of the Attic verb a)pokteinw, and it means to kill or slaughter. The present tense is a futuristic present, it denotes an event which has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain that in thought it is regarded as already occurring. The passive voice" Tribulational believers receive the action of the verb. This is the infinitive of actual result, "even their brethren, those who are destined to be killed." And then the rest is very simple: "even as they."

Translation of verse 11: "Also a white robe [reference to the interim body of the martyrs] was given to each one of them; and they were informed that they should refresh themselves for a little while longer, until they [the brigade of Tribulational martyrs], that is, until their fellow servants, even their brethren, those who are destined to be killed, even as they have been killed, should be completed."

Until the full number of Tribulational martyrs is completed those already in heaven are given a command: "Refresh yourselves, enjoy yourselves in your interim body." This implies the greatest possible happiness and fellowship while they are waiting for the end of the Tribulation and for their resurrection bodies.

Verse 12, the sixth seal. We have a connective kai translated “and,” then the aorist active indicative of o(raw again. This is repetition: o(raw means “I looked.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The apostle John now has a new vision: the sixth seal. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the vision of this historical trend. There will be a tremendous number of volcanoes and earthquakes, which means also tidal waves in the Tribulation. We have so far: “Then I looked.” The word behold in the King James version is not found in the original. Then we have the connective kai, “and,” and the aorist active indicative of ginomai which means to become, “And there occurred.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety; the active voice: a great earthquake is the subject and it will produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of natural disasters, one of the great historical disasters of the Tribulation.

Now for the subject. We have the adjective megaj, which means great, plus the noun seismoj from which we get the word “seismic” in the English. Seismoj here means not only a shaking of the earth but the volcanic eruptions as well.

Many of these descriptions include what happens next. So far this verse only mentions a tremendous earthquake. Now the rest of the verse describes the earthquake in terms of volcanic action. Earthquakes and volcanoes always go together. Volcanic ash in the air produces what we see in the rest of this. The sun is blotted out and the moon turns red at night, that is what volcanic ash does. So we conclude from this that we have a Krakatoa type earthquake related to the volcanic action, rather than what could be termed a San Francisco type earthquake in which there was fire and some road disturbance but no volcanic action.

We start out with the conjunction kai which introduces a result from what precedes. We translate it “And then.” We actually have a result of both the earthquake and the volcanic action. The subject is the nominative singular of e(lioj which is the Greek word for “sun,” “and then the sun.” Then the aorist active indicative of the verb ginomai which means to become. What we actually have here is an idiom and would be better translated “with the result that the sun became.” The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it covers the action extended over a period of time without specifying the actual duration. In other words, with volcanic ash in the air this is the phenomenon that will be noted in the Tribulation. The active voice: the sun produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. And then the predicate nominative is melaj, the adjective used as a noun, “the sun became black.”

An analogy follows from the conjunction w(j, “as sackcloth made of goat’s hair.” The blackout of the sun is caused in the daytime by the volcanic eruption linked with the earthquake.

Next we have “and the moon.” This would be what happens at night. The word for moon is a feminine word, selhnh. The moon is said to have become like blood. In other words, the volcanic ash did this.

The corrected translation: “Then I looked when he [our Lord Jesus Christ who controls history] opened the sixth seal, and a tremendous earthquake [plus a volcano] occurred with the result that the sun became black like sackcloth made of goat’s hair, and the entire moon became red like blood.”

Verse 13, the connective conjunction kai is followed by the nominative plural subject a)sthr, and it means “star.” A meteor is a part of a star or a transient celestial body that enters the earth’s atmosphere with great velocity. The incandescence with the heat generated by the resistance of the air produces a very luminous and beautiful phenomena. In view of the context the best translation should be as follows: “And the meteors from the sky,” the ablative of source from o)uranoj which means heaven as well as sky. With this we have the aorist active indicative of the verb piptw which means to fall. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: meteors produce the action of the verb. The declarative indicative for a simple statement of fact, one of the natural phenomenon of the Tribulation. The prepositional phrase “to the earth,” e)ij plus gh.

Corrected translation: “And meteors from the sky fell on earth.”

Then we have an analogy, and from the analogy we have some spiritual concepts. We have the comparative particle o(j, which introduces the sentence of analogy, translated “like.” Then we have the nominative subject sukh, “like a fig tree” and the present active indicative of ballw, “like a fig tree drops its unripe figs when it is being shaken.”

Corrected translation: “And the meteors from the sky fell on earth like a fig tree drops its unripe figs when being shaken by a great wind.”

The first principle taught by the analogy is the fact that bad decisions destroy opportunities for mankind to live a full life. That is the first principle from the figs dropping from the tree. Life is often cut very short because of so many bad decisions under the historical trend that man is the product of his own decisions. Decisions create environment, not environment decisions. Bad decisions create bad environment which cuts short one’s life on this earth. That is exactly what is going to happen in the Tribulation. The great wind is the analogy to the historical disaster brought on by the accumulated bad decisions resulting from the rejection of the Word of God, Bible doctrine. The great wind of historical disaster causes the unripe figs to fall to the ground, an analogy to death. The unripe figs are both believers and unbelievers who have rejected pertinent categories of truth: for the unbeliever the rejection of the laws of divine establishment and the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; for the believer, the whole realm of Bible doctrine.

Principle

1. While the divine dynasphere is only pertinent to the Church Age the cosmic system has been operational since Satan became the ruler of this world, i.e. since the fall of man and his expulsion from the garden.
2. Therefore all bad decisions in all dispensations related to believers or unbelievers becoming involved in the cosmic system means historical downtrend. People are the products of their own decisions. Decisions related to the cosmic system inevitably produce historical downtrend.
3. Unbelievers are protected from the cosmic system by category one truth, the laws of divine establishment. This means that unbelievers can have happiness, they can have great relationships and friendships, they can have great happiness in category two love, they can have great blessings in life, because of establishment truth and because of the enforced and genuine humility it produces. On the other hand born again believers can be miserable by cosmic involvement, as can the unbeliever also.
4. The believer in every dispensation is protected from the cosmic system, then, by category two truth — Bible doctrine revealed in that historical era.
5. The unripe figs who fall to the ground under the strong wind of historical disaster in the Tribulation have the complete canon of scripture available plus some very good preachers — Moses, Elijah, 144,000 Jewish evangelists, certain angels in the college of heralds, and so on.
6. Furthermore, in Isaiah 34:3-5 and in Jeremiah 8:13 the falling of the figs from the fig tree is used as an analogy for any nation which has become evil being judged with the fifth cycle of discipline.

Isaiah 34:2-4, “The Lord’s judgment is against all [evil] nations, and his wrath is against all their armies; he will utterly destroy them, he has delivered them to the slaughter. So their dead will be thrown out [no burial, just lined up in rows], and their corpses unburied will give off their stench. Consequently their mountains will be drenched with blood.” This is a statement of historical trend. “All the stars of the heavens will be dissolved [meteorites], and the sky rolled up like a scroll; all their armies will fall like withered leaves from the vine, like shrivelled figs falling from the fig tree.”

Jeremiah 8:13, “So decrees the Lord: I will take away their harvest [economic depression], there will be no grapes on the vine, there will be no figs on the fig tree, and their leaves will wither; furthermore, what I have given them in prosperity will also pass away.”

No figs on the fig tree means no pivot of mature believers to carry the nation. The dropping of the figs means cosmic involvement or unripe figs. Furthermore no figs on the tree means leaves only, and the fig leaves are associated with the first act of cosmic morality, the function of human adjustment without doctrine.

When our parents originally sinned and discovered that they were naked, they sewed fig leaves together to cover themselves; a representation of works and self-righteousness, the principle being that if I can adjust to my fellow man in sin then I can adjust to God — a nice piece of arrogance. The only legitimate morality is found in relationship to the Word of God, Bible doctrine. In the Church Age it has to do with residence and function in the divine dynasphere.

God permits disaster in this world in order to cleanse the population of a national entity.

In Matthew 21:19 the failure of Israel to produce a pivot of mature believers guaranteed that they would be destroyed in AD 70, just as the fig tree withered: “When he [our Lord Jesus Christ] saw a lone fig tree by the road [analogous to client nation Israel as it existed at that time], he came to it, and found nothing on it except leaves only [arrogance, self-righteousness, legalism, human works]; and he said to it [to the fig tree], ‘No longer shall there ever be any production from you’.” That was the end of Israel as a client nation to God. Maybe right now God is saying the same thing to our nation as a client nation, “Then at once the fig tree withered,” analogous to the fifth cycle of discipline.

In the prophecy of our Lord’s second advent given in Matthew 24:30,31, He illustrates by teaching the parable of the fig tree in verse 32, “Now learn the parable of the fig tree: when its branch has already become tender, and its leaves come out [the evangelism of the 144,000 Jews coming up in Revelation chapter seven], you know that summer [the second advent and the Millennium] is near; even so you too, when you see all of these judgements, you know that he [our Lord Jesus Christ is near] is close to the door [second advent].”

It is obvious then that in Revelation 6:13 unripe figs refer to historical judgment of those who make bad decisions and who live in the cosmic system.

In the parable of the two baskets of figs in Jeremiah chapter 24 the basket of the good figs represents believers who have attained maturity through maximum doctrine resident in the soul, while the basket of evil figs represents believers who live in the cosmic system and therefore contribute either to the temporary or permanent destruction of the client nation.

Part of the sixth seal is the nuclear activity of the Tribulation. We have already noted by way of application that even though there is going to be a tremendous amount of sophisticated weaponry developed in this dispensation that weaponry is not capable of destroying all the people of the earth. Part of the sixth seal is the nuclear activity of Revelation 6:14-16.

Verse 14, this is the prophecy of thermonuclear reaction in the Tribulation. We begin with the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, translated “also.” The nominative singular subject o)uranoj is next, “the heaven,” the atmosphere. The Bible speaks of three different heavens. The first heaven is the atmosphere which is a band around the earth. The second heaven is the realm of angelic activity. It is found in Acts 7:42 and is called the stellar universe. The third heaven is the one we have studied in Revelation four and five; it is the throne room of God beyond stellar space, mentioned in 2 Corinthians 12:2.

Our subject here deals with the first heaven, the band of atmosphere around planet earth. It is said in the aorist passive indicative of the verb apoxwrizw, to separate, to part asunder, "Also the atmosphere was split apart." The constative aorist refers to a momentary action when chain reaction from some thermonuclear explosion occurs. The passive voice: the atmosphere around planet earth receives the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of nuclear activity during the Tribulation. The analogy is given next, and in the analogy we see the fact that no matter how great the nuclear activity people will survive by the millions.

The comparison here is very simple: "like a scroll when it is being rolled up." Because of this analogy we have fusion instead of fission. Affected by nuclear activity would be the band of the atmosphere around the earth approximately 14-16 miles high, characterised by a high ozone content. Ozone is a blue gas until it reaches 112 degrees centigrade at which point it condenses into deep blue magnetic liquids that occur in minute amounts in the air near the surface of the earth, and in large amounts in the atmosphere about seven miles up.

There are going to be changes in the Tribulation, so much so that people without Bible doctrine are going to seek to destroy themselves. They are going to be totally miserable as is always the case in adverse circumstances of life. Believers without doctrine are always miserable. There is no way that you can compensate for the historical disasters which occur apart from Bible doctrine. This is a reminder to us of the importance of the Word of God, the importance of the integrity of God, how important it is to realise His faithfulness to us.

We have now come in our study to the reaction of people in the Tribulation to the earthquakes, volcanoes and tidal waves. Before we can begin a detailed study of verses 15 and 16 where we are going to see six categories of human society who are going to react, we need to study the principle of one of the great trends in life, the principle of inequality. Once we understand this we will understand that people in every category of society can have great happiness or great misery and which ever they have depend upon the decisions they make. We have studied in great detail the principle that we are all the products of our own decisions, not our environment. The six categories mentioned in verse 15 represent different environments but they are not the products of their environment, they are the products of their decisions.

The first thing that we note about the categories in this particular situation is that they are unequal. The "kings of the earth" are, of course, the highest class. Then we have the nobility, followed by the highest military ranks, then the rich, then those with ability plus every slave and free person, the working classes. Obviously they represent different categories.

Principle

1. In every historical era, in every dispensation of human history, society exists in a state of inequality. That means immediately that inequality has nothing to do with happiness or misery, except as people make something out of it. Lower classes can be just as happy as upper classes and vice versa, and there is honour and integrity in every category of society and there is great evil in every category. So being in a certain category of privilege doesn't mean happiness just as being in a category of non-privilege doesn't mean misery. Inequality is no deterrent to happiness or blessing in life.

2. There are two reasons for inequality among human beings. The first is that the devil is the ruler of this world and as such he gives preferential treatment to those believers and unbelievers who live in the cosmic system. The devil gives preferential treatment especially to believers who live in the cosmic system. Therefore there is a system of pseudo prosperity provided by Satan, a system of pseudo prosperity that ends up with people fleeing to the mountains and screaming for the rocks to fall on them with the intense desire for suicide. Secondly, the sovereignty of God has made man's free will or volition of the soul the issue in the angelic conflict, which means the impossibility of equality in the human race. Because man has volition and because he can make decisions good or bad inequality will exist in the human race.

3. For volition to be the issue there must be the environment of human freedom, and the greater the freedom the greater the inequalities of society.

4. Therefore there are two sources of inequality in the human race: the evil of Satan's cosmic system and the principle of establishment freedom as a divine policy stated in category one truth: the laws of divine establishment.

5. The third reason is related to the doctrine of imputation. Inequality exists at the point of human birth and the imputation of human life. We are born unequal physically. We all start over when we are born again and each one has opportunities but the inequality that exists at birth cannot in any way be blamed on the individual. The inequalities that exist at the second birth are directly related to your own decisions in life.

6. Inequality also exists because of degree or failure or success in the use of freedom. People do not succeed or fail to the same degree, therefore degrees of failure or degrees of success guarantee inequalities in life.

7. This means inequality in itself is not a bad thing, only the various categories of arrogance which resent inequality — envy, jealousy, bitterness, implacability, vindictiveness, self-pity, self-righteousness, and so on. In other words, arrogance fails to adjust to life, therefore arrogance fails to adjust to the inequalities of life. This is how arrogance becomes the source of communism, socialism, the welfare state, the redistribution of wealth.

We note from the six categories of humanity we are about to study in Revelation 6:15 that inequality exists in both a time of historical adversity and in a time of historical prosperity as well. So prosperity or adversity makes no difference, there are inequalities both ways and the various circumstances of history do not change this.

All of this adds up to a principle: environment is not the solution to man's life. Given a better environment some believers would be no better off than they are now. Given a better environment and giving you everything you want isn't going to make you happy. In the Tribulation, as in the Church Age, inequality exists in a time of historical adversity; in the Millennium inequality exists in a time of perfect environment on the earth.

The thing we need to understand is the good and bad state of inequality. There is a good state and there is a bad state of inequality. Good inequality exists in the environment of freedom; bad inequality exists in the environment of tyranny. So while historical environment may change from freedom to tyranny inequality doesn't change. You have inequality under conditions of tyranny, you have inequality under conditions of freedom. So whether historical prosperity or adversity, freedom or tyranny, inequality is an inescapable and unsolvable fact of history. This is not to imply that inequalities in society means unhappiness. Poor people can be happy or unhappy; rich people can be happy or unhappy. Your status in life with regard to inequality is not the issue; your status in life with regard to our Lord and Bible doctrine is the issue. So whether historical prosperity or adversity exists, whether freedom or tyranny exists, inequality is an inescapable fact of history.

Happiness or unhappiness depends on the believer's attitude toward Bible doctrine. Again, Lamentations chapter three gives us help here, beginning in verse 20: "My soul [historical disaster of the fifth cycle of discipline is the background] still has this in remembrance and is humbled within me. This I recall to my mind, therefore I have hope. It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed, because his compassions fail not. They are new every morning; great is thy faithfulness. 'The Lord is my portion', says my soul," so that the issue is not the inequalities of life but the fact that the Lord is his portion, "Therefore I have confidence in him." The issue is not the inequalities of life but the confidence one has in the Lord. And then he adds in verse 25: "The Lord is good to them who wait for him [the full use of the faith-rest drill], to the soul that seeks him." In other words, equality or inequality isn't the issue here, it says "to the soul who seeks him."

This was written by Jeremiah under the tremendous stress of the fifth cycle of discipline in BC 586 when even fervent prayers of believers in fellowship were not heard regarding the client nation. In that same context Lamentations 3:44 tells us that there is a certain prayer that cannot be answered: "Thou hast covered thyself with a cloud so that our prayers should not pass through." When the fifth cycle of discipline is being administered no prayer for the preservation of the nation breaks through even from the greatest prayer warrior. And even though there were believers in every walk of life praying for the Lord to deliver the nation the Lord did not do so.

We are going to meet six categories of inequality. These six categories exist now and they will exist in the Tribulation. We will note that all six categories of inequality in this case are miserable. We will note that rank and achievement does not mean happiness, success does not mean happiness. For the believer the pursuit of happiness means Hebrews 13:5, "Be content with such things as you have, for he has said, 'I will never leave you nor forsake you'." So regardless of inequalities in life contentment and happiness from doctrine belongs to all believers in the royal family of God. So it is necessary in the structure of the inequality of society to find great contentment and happiness in every walk of life. In this way there is the demonstration of the importance of Bible doctrine, the importance of our relationship to God through the Word of God. So regardless of inequalities in life contentment or happiness from Bible doctrine belongs to the believer of the royal family of God regardless of his status. Philippians 4:11, "I have learned in whatever state I am to be content."

The six categories are going to include rulers of nations, those with maximum power, military leaders, the wealthy, those who have ability, the working man; and we are going to see that all of these people have their own special brands of misery. So that whatever your status in society it is not the secret to your happiness. The secret to your happiness is Bible doctrine.

We are now ready for the prophecy of the human reaction to all of the things that have preceded. The subject is composed of six categories of human society in the Tribulation. The first thing we note about the six-category subjects is the fact that in the Tribulation, as now in the Church Age and as before in previous dispensations, there is a state of inequality. In every dispensation society exists in a state of inequality. There are two reasons for this: the devil is the ruler of this world and as such he gives preferential treatment to those believers and unbelievers who live in the cosmic system. Secondly, the sovereignty of God has made man's volition in the soul the issue in the angelic conflict, which means that all of us make decisions every day which guarantee inequality. We make good decisions or bad decisions. We are unequal in ability but that is not really the issue, the issue is the fact that we make decisions with our unequal ability. Volition is the issue and therefore there must be an environment in which volition can function, and the environment is human freedom. Human freedom guarantees inequality. The fact that we are free to succeed or free to fail is the issue, not the fact that some of us have abilities and others have abilities and there are great inequalities among abilities.

Inequality in itself is not even a bad thing. Inequality in history has been the basis of challenging people to become great when they otherwise would not have become great. All of the ruling families in Europe at the turn of this century came from former peasant stock and had there not been inequalities their ancestors would not have been motivated to succeed. If we were all equal there would be no decisions to make and no improvement. The real problem with inequality is not inequality itself, it is arrogance and its manifestations. Arrogance has among its manifestations self-pity, people feel sorry for themselves in a lower status of inequality. There is the matter of guilt complex which belongs to the higher status of inequality in life. Of people whose parents in the past, or whose grandparents have succeeded, who have a guilt complex. But there are people who start out low and reach great heights. Why? They are challenged by inequality. Inequality is the greatest challenge in life. It simply boils down to this: arrogance fails to adjust to life and therefore arrogance fails to adjust to equality. Inequality is no problem in life at all, it doesn't even demand legislation. It should demand personal motivation. The jealousy of those who have succeeded where you haven't, bitterness, vindictiveness, implacability, hatred, self-centredness, preoccupation with self, obviously are attitudes which allow you to be defeated by inequality. Inequality is a fact of life, it is inevitable when there is freedom and it is inevitable when there is tyranny. All we ever had in history was either one or the other. Only arrogance makes an issue of inequality.

Verse 15, we start with the first category and we have the nominative plural subject, basileuj, correctly translated "kings." With it we have the descriptive genitive singular from the noun gh which means planet earth. "And the kings of the earth," our first category. Rulers and national leaders are not protected from historical disasters by their exalted rank, from the administration of divine judgment through historical trends. It is also a great leveller, it ferrets out people who have the highest rank and shouldn't have it. In time of historical disaster neither God nor man is a respecter of persons. Holding the highest rank or achieving the highest authority does not provide happiness. By the way, many of these kings in the Tribulation are dictators, they are not kings in the sense of the ancient world they are people who are ruling a country. There is no happiness in being a king or a ruler or a dictator apart from capacity for happiness which comes through Bible doctrine. Achievement and success in itself does not provide happiness. Incidentally, there is no security in being top rank in any country.

Next to the kings of the earth we have the nominative plural of megistan, i.e. megistanej, and this category refers to those who have maximum political power apart from being a top ruler. We would translate this in the old days, "the princes or nobility," those who have maximum influence and political power. The possession of political power and influence does not guarantee happiness or security. Furthermore, there is no protection against historical disaster because one possesses great power and influence.

Number three category are called xiliarxoj, which means the commander of a thousand or in some cases the commander of thousands. It would probably be better for us to recognise the category of military leaders and translate it "general officers." Being a high-ranking officer in the army does not provide either happiness or security. Generals are not excluded from divine justice or disaster.

Next we have wealth, the rich man. The nominative plural from plousioj. Being rich does not mean happiness or security.

Number five is kai o(i i) sxouroi, and the nominative plural of i) sxouroj is the issue here. It does not mean strong although it can be translated that way, it means ability. Those who have ability takes us into the academic realm, those with a high IQ, those who have talent. They are not protected from historical disaster, they are not provided with happiness and security because they have genius in the academic realm. The thinking of human genius or the muscle of human strength and violence will not prevent the historical trends of the Tribulation.

Number six is kai paj douloj, the first one in the singular, the nominative singular of douloj. It can be translated either one of two ways, either a slave or a servant, "furthermore every slave." In the time of the Roman empire this noun referred to slaves. Today it has the connotation of labour, those who are working under the category of labour. No matter how powerful the labour unions they cannot protect the work force from historical disaster. Like all other categories in this list they are the products of their own decisions. There is no security in being in the work force. There is no security in being involved in conspiracy, violence, revolution. The continuation of this category is called e)leuqeroj, also in the singular, and that means "free," "plus every slave and free person." The two together make the working classes of the labour category of the Tribulation. Both categories will seek security, happiness and better conditions in the Tribulation through some vehicle of political power, which means unions will be stronger in the Tribulation than they are in the Church Age. But no matter how strong the labour unions are, no matter how much solidarity that exists, not matter how much power they accumulate politically, they will not protect the working force from the consequences of historical trends in the Tribulation. Only Bible doctrine resident in the soul can protect the work force and accomplish deliverance, security and happiness in time of historical disaster, whether it is the Church Age or the Tribulation.

Every category of society in the Tribulation has some means of protection or security but none of these systems will provide the necessary deliverance in historical disaster. All deliverance comes through salvation and positive volition toward Bible doctrine. All classes of society in time of historical disaster seek the high places, the mountainous areas for their last stand of security and safety. But these people as unbelievers in the Tribulation are seeking the wrong high ground. The only high ground that will protect them is the high ground of salvation and Bible doctrine, and they have rejected that high ground. Therefore we are going to see them running to the high ground. We are going to see all six categories as refugees, each one having the same opportunity to accept Christ and be free from this terrible situation. We are going to learn that it makes no difference what your race, what your status, how high you have gone, how low you have sunk, the only answer to life is not in success and achievement but in the Word of God, Bible doctrine.

Verse 15, "Both the kings of the earth and their nobility [those with maximum political power], both the highest military ranks and the rich, also those who have ability, plus every slave and free person ... " And that is as far as we have gone.

Next comes the aorist active indicative of the verb kruptw, which means to hide, with the accusative plural direct object from the reflexive pronoun h(a)uton. The reflexive pronoun is very simple to define when the action expressed by the verb is referred back to its own subject it is reflexive, and we will translate it simply, "hid themselves." Every category from the highest to the lowest, all they could do is hide. No system of security held up for them, no happiness was there, there was no doctrine to sustain them. These are all unbelievers in the Tribulation in time of historical catastrophe and there was nothing that could help them. Apart from Bible doctrine there is no security, protection, or blessing, or even true happiness in this life.

So they hid themselves. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: six categories of society in a state of inequality, some higher, some lower, produce the action of the verb. It is assumed from verses 16 and 17 that the subjects were all unbelievers. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality.

Then a prepositional phrase. Where did they go to hide? Not the high ground of Bible doctrine but the high ground literally. They went first of all into caves. That would mean mountains, high ground, e)ij plus the accusative plural of sphlaion, and it is translated, "in the caves." No system devised for their happiness, their security or their blessing worked. That is the point. And what do they have left in time of historical disaster? Altogether they had one thing in common: nothing in their system worked. Therefore they hid themselves. But they are not through hiding, it is just the first manifestation of the first phobia, arrogance and psychosis.

Note: all six categories here are arrogant. They are unbelievers, they have rejected doctrine, they have adopted a system in which arrogance plays a major part. They depend for happiness on arrogance, being recognised; they depend for security by preoccupation with their own group. The working man is preoccupied with the working man, the political man is preoccupied with the political man, the rich man is preoccupied with the rich man. All of these six categories indicate total preoccupation within the sphere of the category. There is great inequality here and in great inequality people often seek a system of security.

Then we have the second preposition, e)ij plus the accusative plural of petra. Petra can also be a big rock like a mountain so it still has a connotation of high ground. Then we do have with the word "rocks" to make sure we understand these are big rocks, the descriptive genitive plural of o)roj, which means mountains, "hid themselves in the caves and in the rocks of the mountains."

This is what they did; we go on to see what they are thinking. Remember that we have rulers thinking this, we have people with political influence thinking this in the next verse. We have rich men, we have working men, we have high-ranking officers in the military, and they have one thing in common: they have the total attitude of arrogance, therefore total insecurity and unhappiness.

Principle

1. All classes of society in time of great historical disaster seek the literal high place for security, but they have the opportunity of seeking the spiritual high place, the only real security. You are safe any place in the world if you have found the high ground of Bible doctrine and the advance to maturity. That is true safety and security.

2. These people that are being described here are unbelievers and they are seeking the wrong high ground.

3. The only high ground for historical disaster is regeneration plus Bible doctrine resident in the soul of that believer.

4. Bible doctrine is no help to the unbeliever any more than the cave or the rocks of the mountains is going to be help or security. They will even admit this by taking their own lives.

5. For the unbeliever, regardless of his success or his system of security within the framework of his status, regardless of wealth, influence, authority, or some exalted status in life, or some humble status in life, there is no security, there is no happiness, there is no blessing in the historical pressure of the Tribulation.

6. All of these unbelievers seeking refuge on the high ground of planet earth are the recipients of a principle which never changes: grace precedes judgment. They had a chance to be saved, they had a chance to learn doctrine, they had a chance to accept God's security package, and these people have all turned it down with the tragic result that we will notice in the next verse. In the next chapter, Revelation chapter 7, we have the lucid account of evangelism in the Tribulation. That is grace before judgment.

7. All of these six categories of refugees had every opportunity to believe in Christ, to learn enough doctrine to be delivered from historical disaster — deliverance with happiness, with blessing, with contentment, with everything that is important as a by-product of perception of doctrine.

8. Analogy: Just as there were 120 years of evangelism before the flood, and just as Jonah evangelised the Assyrians before their judgment, so all the people of the Tribulation will hear the gospel many times, and just as many times they will reject it. They are the products of their own decisions.

Verse 16, We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, the present active indicative of legw, "and they said." The pictorial present tense of legw brings to mind the picture of these future events from the process of their occurrence, hence a dramatic offshoot of the futuristic present. The active voice: the six categories of society, unbelievers in the Tribulation, produce the action. The indicative mood is declarative for a statement of future historical fact for our edification, for our understanding, for our application; because we live in the Church Age and just as there will be great historical disasters in the Tribulation so there are great historical disasters in the Church Age, a little more spread out but the same principle. Man is the product of his own decisions.

The expression that follows dramatises the point of doctrine: the unbeliever at the point of maximum pressure does not lose consciousness. We are going to see these unbelievers die, we are going to see some of them survive. Those who survive are going to be judged at the baptism of fire and removed from the earth, and as they are moved into eternity there is a principle: no loss of consciousness. You have to live with yourself in eternity, that is for the unbeliever. The unbeliever not only experiences the maximum pain of the lake of fire but he experiences a soul pain, a sharp eternal pain of the missed opportunities, the failure to use his volition to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. That is going to be a part of the judgment. These six categories who are now conscious of their insecurity and begging the caves and the rocks to fall on them would like to be buried in oblivion rather than be conscious and face God's judgment. So when they ask for the rocks to fall on them, when they ask for caves to collapse and bury them they are asking for oblivion. And notice: they demand oblivion by praying to rock, not to God. But there is no such thing as oblivion. This means the torture of being an unbeliever and the soul of the unbeliever is as great as the physical pain he will suffer in the lake of fire.

"and they said to the mountains and to the rocks," the aorist active imperative. They are praying to rocks. These are kings praying to rocks, these are people with political influence praying to rocks, these are rich people praying to rocks, these are people with ability, people with high IQ, praying to rocks. And why do they pray to the rocks? Because they see in the rocks a chance to be crushed, to have their life crushed and, hopefully, with the crushing out of their life, oblivion. No such luck! That is not the way it is going to go.

We have the culminative aorist tense of the verb piptw, "fall on us." The culminative aorist views the event in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the desire for oblivion. The pressure is so great that they want to lose consciousness, they want the rocks to fall on them and deliver them from a pressure they cannot stand, a pressure they are not equipped to stand; even though they are rulers of nations, even though they have political influence, great ability, great wealth, even though they hold the highest rank in military organisations, etc., they all want this same thing in common. They are all unequal in social structure but they have one thing in common: they have a mad passionate desire for oblivion. Those who face divine judgment desire and demand oblivion. For the unbeliever of the Tribulation nothing is more desirable than the non-existence of consciousness. However, even if the mountains do fall on them they would have crushed their bodies but the soul would be absent from the body of the unbeliever and continue to possess life after death and a very painful life in the status of consciousness and judgment. Death does not mean oblivion for anyone, believer or unbeliever.

The active voice: the rocks and the mountains are commanded to dissolve them into a nonentity. They recognise at this point that having been the ruler of a nation, having great political power, being a great general, having great wealth does not give them any great happiness. They desire to lose that status, they want to be a nonentity in oblivion, they want to be without consciousness, hence a command given to mountainous terrain to destroy them. They have forgotten of course, Hebrews 9:27, not that they ever knew it: "It is appointed to a man once to die, but after this the judgment." The judgment is given in a total state of consciousness.

Next we have some prepositional phrases, “fall on us,” e)pi plus the accusative plural of e)gw. They are aware of who and what they are, and they all desire the removal of who and what they are. They want oblivion, “fall on us.” Then the connective kai, and then once again the aorist active imperative of kruptw, “and hide.” The constative aorist for an urgent momentary action, “hide us now.” The active voice: the rocks and mountains are requested to produce the action of the verb, the imperative of entreaty for urgency and request. And again we have the accusative plural, this time as a direct object from e)gw, “they said to the mountains and to the rocks, ‘Fall on us and hide us’.” The urgent demand for oblivion will be denied. In their desire for oblivion they know from what they must run away. They want to escape from the Lamb [Jesus Christ] and they want to escape from the one who sits on the throne. So we have two desires for oblivion expressed in terms of their understanding, their gnwsij understanding, of doctrine. First their oblivion from God the Father, “from the presence of him [God the Father] who sits on the throne.” And then the desire for oblivion from God the Son, “and from the wrath of the Lamb.” So they understand salvation, “the wrath of the Lamb”; they understand truth, “him that sitteth on the throne,” and they want oblivion from the very thing that could have delivered them and they are acutely aware of the fact that they have rejected it. They have rejected the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world, they have rejected the plan of God the Father, they have rejected the doctrine related to these things. They are running away from what they previously could have accepted, and their desire for oblivion, to be smashed by the rocks and to be blotted out of existence is because they are acutely aware of the presence of God in divine disasters. But it is an awareness of God which is absolutely useless because it drives them to distraction. It drives them to the point of insanity, the desire for oblivion.

Historical disaster is a challenge to apply doctrine for us. Historical disaster is the end of the road and the desire for oblivion. They want to be crushed out of existence, they want to be buried under rocks and forgotten. Those unbelievers in the Tribulation who actually survive all of this will be judged by the baptism of fire, while those who die during the Tribulation will die horribly and then go to Hades and the fire of Hades. Either way they are the recipients of the wrath of the Lamb, our Lord Jesus Christ, while they have rejected the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world.

We now come to the anticipation of the second advent. The seventh seal of the Doomsday book is opened in chapter eight verse one and when it is we are going to see many developments and historical trends in the Tribulation. In the meantime we have one verse which anticipates the second advent of Christ and the judgment of the baptism of fire. By way of introduction to this verse which is a chapter in itself we should notice a principle or two.

1. Up until now in this chapter we have observed the first six seals, the general historical trends and judgements of the Tribulation presented, of course, prophetically. All historical trends are presented prophetically except the Church Age.
2. With the exception, then, of the Church Age all historical trends are presented through the vehicle of eschatology [prophecy].

3. Now we are going to observe the unbelievers of the Tribulation in terms of anticipating the baptism of fire, the great judgment which terminates the Tribulation.

4. In this context it will be called the great day of their wrath.

5. This part of the famous day of the Lord is also prophesied in other Old Testament passages. Two of them are pertinent to our study: Joel 2:11,31, "And the Lord utters his voice before his army; indeed his bivouac is very great, for powerful is he who carries out his word. The day of the Lord is indeed great and very awesome, therefore who can endure it?"

["Who can endure it?" refers not only to the Armageddon campaign but to the baptism of fire which follows]

Verse 31, "The sun will be turned into darkness, the moon into blood, before the great and awesome day of the Lord comes. And it shall come to pass that whoever calls on the name of the Lord will be delivered."

This is the first of several passages which anticipate our verse. The second one is found in Zephaniah 1:14-18, "Near is the great day of the Lord, near and coming very quickly; Listen carefully, you can hear it! The cry of the day of the Lord will be bitter, the shouting of the warrior will be there. That day will be a day of wrath, a day of distress and anguish, a day of trouble and ruin, a day of darkness and gloom, a day of clouds and blackness, a day of the trumpet, the battle cry against fortified cities and against castled towns. Furthermore I will bring distress on all the people, and they will walk like blind men because they have sinned against the Lord; their blood will be poured out in the dust, and their entrails will be like dung. Neither their silver nor their gold will be able to deliver them on the day of the Lord's wrath; in the fire [reference to the baptism of fire] of his zeal the entire world will be consumed with it, for he will make a sudden end of all unbelievers who live on the earth."

Also in Malachi 3:2, "Who can endure the day of his coming? And who can stand up when he appears [reference to the second advent]?"

These passages deal with historical trends at the very end of the Tribulation at the point of the second advent, and they emphasise the one judgment which is first mentioned in our passage, verse 17. It emphasises the baptism of fire judgment which is administered to all unbelievers who are alive at the second advent. These unbelievers will stand before the judgment throne of God. There are many Old Testament passages that deal with this subject and they all anticipate our passage, Revelation 6:17. This anticipates one of the greatest judgements of all time.

We might do well for the moment to review the major judgements that begin with the cross. When our Lord Jesus Christ was hanging on the cross this was the first of seven major judgements. Our Lord was being judged for our sins, therefore they were imputed to Him and all judged on the cross. The sins of the entire world were judged when our Lord was hanging between heaven and earth. And when it says that Christ died for our sins it isn't referring to His physical death, it is referring to His spiritual death, for after He had finished bearing the sins of the world, after the saving work of Christ was completed, He uttered one word in the Greek: tetelestai, "it is finished," it has been finished in the past with the result that it stands finished forever, a dramatic perfect tense. Now he was still speaking when He said "finished." If He was dead physically He couldn't speak. Our Lord died twice on the cross. First of all, and most important, all of the sins of the world were imputed to Him and judged. He bore our sins in His own body on the tree, and that was the judgment. He died physically because His work was finished. He said it was finished and He died physically because of that fact. So the first great judgment in history was the judgment of Christ on the cross for our sins. He became our substitute.

That set up the second great judgment, a judgment which occurs in the Church Age: the royal family are given a right and a prerogative to judge their own sins, and they do so by simply naming them. Since the sins were judged on the cross each believer is his own priest, therefore he has the privacy and the right to go directly to God and deal with God on the matter of sins. And while it is translated in 1 John 1:9 "if we confess our sins," it means to name, to cite our sins, o(mologew is the Greek verb. We simply cite a sin which has already been judged, "and he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." This is the means of recovering the filling of the Spirit, the means of recovering residence in the divine dynasphere. Rebound is the second great judgment.

The third great judgment occurs at the termination of the Church Age. It is the judgment seat of Christ which we have studied extensively in Revelation chapters 2 and 3.

Then, of course, comes the Tribulation and at the end of the Tribulation the terminating event is the second advent of Christ, and when our Lord returns one of the events is the judgment called the baptism of fire. It is divided into two parts. There are unbelievers on the earth and they are divided into two categories: Jews and Gentiles. The unbelieving Jews are removed, that is judgment number four. The unbelieving Gentiles are removed and they are put into fire [judgment number five], so that when the Millennium begins — the one thousand years of our Lord's reign under perfect environment — it begins exactly the same way that man began on the earth: believers only. That is like Noah and his family after the great flood wiped out all unbelievers. So the fire removes all unbelievers and you start out with believers only.

Then at the end of the Millennium and the Gog revolution we have the judgment of all unbelievers in history, the second resurrection and then their judgment, and they are cast into the lake of fire. That is number six.

Number seven is the judgment of all fallen angels. They too are put into the lake of fire which was prepared for them before the foundation of the earth.

We are studying a very critical area of judgment in this particular passage. The verse itself is very short and appears almost to be innocuous, "For the great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand." This is one of the many prophecies of the baptism of fire.

The causal conjunction $\text{o}(\text{ti}$ is can be translated "because," because it is, of course, a causal conjunction. That is one of many meanings. Here it is translated "For" as in the King James version. Then we have our subject. The nominative feminine singular subject includes two words: the adjective megaj and with that the noun $\text{h}(\text{mera}$, "the great day." Then with this we have a descriptive genitive of the noun $\text{o}(\text{rgh}$, meaning wrath, "the great day of his wrath." The possessive genitive from the intensive pronoun $\text{a}(\text{utoj}$ is "wrath." Actually it is translated, "the great day of their wrath" refers to the judgment of the baptism of fire. It "is coming," aorist active indicative of the verb $\text{e}(\text{rxomai}$. It is translated "has come." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The entire administration of the baptism of fire. The active voice: the baptism of fire produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of doctrine, "for the great day of their wrath has come."

Then there is a question. The question will be answered by the entire seventh chapter. The conjunction kai connects the two phrases. The nominative singular interrogative pronoun tij , "and who." We should translate it "and so" because the conjunction kai introduces a result from what precedes, "and so who." Then the present passive indicative of the verb dunamai which means to be able, "and so who is able." The static present tense assumes the perpetually existing state of salvation and only those who have eternal salvation through faith in Christ are able to stand. The ability to stand in this judgment belongs to those who believe in Christ during the Tribulation. The passive voice: the Tribulation believers receive the action of the verb. This is an interrogative indicative which assumes that there is an actual fact which may be stated in answer to the question, and the actual fact is the presentation of salvation under the most concentrated system of evangelism the world has ever known. And with this the aorist passive infinitive of the verb $\text{i}(\text{stemi}$ which means here to stand. The culminative aorist views the judgment of the baptism of fire in its entirety but emphasises it from the viewpoint of existing results. Believers will be able to stand, they will go into the Millennium. The passive voice: the Tribulation believers receive the action of the verb, and this is an infinitive of actual result.

Corrected translation: "For the great day of their [the Father and the Son] wrath has come [the judgment of the baptism of fire]; and so who is able to stand?"

The baptism of fire

1. The etymology of the word baptism. Prior to the Koine Greek the various words baptw , baptizw , baptizmoj , were used briefly in Homeric and then in Classical Greek. In Homer's Odyssey, the ninth book, he makes a reference to Cyclops. They were trapped in a cave with Cyclops, the one-eyed giant. They finally found a way to heat up a rather large stick and shove it into his eye. When they did it made a hissing sound. The hissing of the burning eye of Cyclops is compared to the sound of water when a smith baptises or dips a piece of iron into it to temper it. Bapitizw and baptw are used in that context. The Spartans baptised their spears by putting them into a bowl of blood to make them a warrior's spear. In other words, they were issued a spear but that was a soldier's spear, not a warrior's spear. They weren't warriors until they had gone into combat, and in order to make sure that the weapon was ready for combat they identified it with blood. The identification of the spear with the pig's blood which was offered in sacrifice made it a warrior's spear. The concept being from the Classical Greek that baptise meant to identify one thing with another thing so that the characteristic of the original thing was changed into another characteristic by what was identified with it.

Euripides tells us the whole story when a ship sank and the ship was baptised by sinking and going under water. Therefore it was no longer a ship that sailed it was a ship that lurked around Davey Jones' locker.

So the concept was always there before it came into the Koine Greek. In the Koine Greek we have several words. We have the word baptw which means to die or to dip. The other verb is baptizw which means to dip or to immerse. Then there is a noun bapτισμοj which means to clean, to wash, the washing of dishes in Mark 7:4. It is also used in a very significant way in Hebrews 6:2 where we find it in the plural. One thing that all new believers should understand is the doctrine of baptisms — plural. There is a similar noun, bapτισμα, used for the concept of identification. The basic concept of the word "baptism" is found in the Bible. Baptism doesn't mean baptism because baptism is just a transliteration, and therefore has no meaning. Transliterations only have meanings if meanings are assigned to them. Bapτισμα means identification. It means ritual identification in Matthew 3:7; it means actual identification in Romans 6:4, used for the baptism of the Holy Spirit. It is also used as a figure for martyrdom in Mark 10:38 and Luke 12:50. Then there is bapτιστηj which refers to one who performs the ritual of baptism, Matthew 3:1; 11:11; 6:25. That is where we get John the Baptist.

2. The categories of baptism. There are two. The first is real baptisms because they are actual identifications. For example, in 1 Corinthians 10:2 [verse 1 is telling about passing through the red sea], these are the Jews during the exodus and they all passed through the sea. You have to remember that not one Jew in passing through the Red Sea got wet. The only people who got wet and were subsequently immersed were the forces of Pharaoh, and they weren't even said to be baptised. So one thing we know immediately: "and all were baptised into Moses in the cloud and in the sea." Here is "baptise" and "sea" all in one sentence. The ones that were baptised into the sea were dry! Not a drop of water. So it should occur to someone along the way that the word "baptise" must refer to something besides getting wet. And it does. The key to interpretation of the word is identification. The Jews were identified with Moses in passing through the sea. It is because they were identified with Moses that they were able to get through in what the King James version calls "dry shod." The Jews were identified with the founder of the Jewish nation, Moses.

There is a second dry baptism, the baptism of the cross, Matthew 20:22, “But Jesus answered and said, ‘You do not understand what you are asking for. Are you able to drink the cup that I am about to drink?’” We should be familiar with that cup, it contains all of the sins of the world and drinking the cup is our Lord’s receiving of the imputation of our sins and their judgment. And then He adds: “and to be baptised with the baptism with which I am baptised.” He is talking about the cross. The cup gives us the key. The sins of the world were identified with Christ on the cross and God the Father judged those sins on the cross — past, present and future. That is the baptism of the cross, it is a dry baptism.

Number three of the dry or real baptisms is the baptism of God the Holy Spirit, one of the 36 things that happens to us when we believe in Christ. God the Holy Spirit takes each one of us and enters us into union with Christ. We share His life, eternal life, we share His righteousness, we share His Sonship, His heirship, His election, His destiny, everything that He has. We are in union with Christ, that is the way the royal family is formed in the Church Age. So it is used for the formation of the royal family of God and at the moment of salvation, in the Church Age only, God the Holy Spirit takes each one of us and enters us in to union with Christ. We are identified with Christ in His death. In His death He bore our sins but He rejected human good and evil. So we are identified with Christ in His death, says Romans chapter six, therefore we too have rejected human good and evil. And the only way that we can reject them experientially is to stay out of the cosmic system, which means rebound when we sin to get back into the divine dynasphere. We are identified with Christ as He is seated at the right hand of the Father; we are royal family of God through this baptism. Each believer is identified with Christ in His death, hence he is identified with Him in His resurrection, and this is the meaning of the baptism of the Spirit. Furthermore, each believer is identified with Christ in His resurrection, the formation of current positional truth. This concept is found in Acts 1:5; 1 Corinthians 12:13; Galatians 3:26-28; Ephesians 4:5 where it says, “one baptism,” and the one baptism is Spirit baptism.

That brings us to our subject, the fourth real baptism, and that is the baptism of fire. It is mentioned first in Matthew 3:11; Luke 3:16.

The second category are the ritual baptisms. In ritual baptism water represents something — three things:

First of all in the baptism of our Lord Jesus Christ in Matthew 3:13-17 our Lord went under the water. The water represented the plan of God the Father for the first advent. By submitting to baptism our Lord was saying at the beginning of His earthly ministry: “I am willing to go to the cross; I am willing to execute the plan of God the Father.”

Then there was the baptism of John — Matthew 3:1-10; John 1:25-33. Water in this case represented the kingdom of God, and it was presented through the message of John. He was the herald: “The King is here, the kingdom of God is at hand”. Converts who believed in Christ gave ritual testimony to the first advent and the hypostatic union, their faith in the work of Christ on the cross before it actually occurred historically by being baptised. The water, again, represented the kingdom.

Then there was Christian baptism in the book of Acts — Acts 2:38; 8:36-38; 16:15; 16:33, all of these passages in which before the canon of scripture was completed, as a training aid to explain what happened at salvation. The candidate for baptism goes down into the water, the water represents identification with Christ in His death. It is a ritual. It isn't the baptism of the Spirit, it teaches the baptism of the Spirit. And as the candidate comes up out of the water he is identified with the air, and that is analogous the principle of identification with Christ in His resurrection. And it means that he recognises that he is a member of the royal family.

All of this comes from Hebrews 6:2, the doctrine of baptisms.

3. The baptism of fire which occurs at the second advent of Christ. It is actual identification with fire in Hades, in the place we have studied recently, a place called torments — Matthew 3:11-12.

“As for me [John the Baptist speaking on baptism], I baptise you with water because you changed your mind [about Christ], but he [our Lord Jesus Christ] who is coming after me is mightier than I, and I am not even fit to unlace his sandals; he himself will baptise you with the Holy Spirit [anticipation of the Church Age. The baptism of the Spirit forms the royal family of God in the Church Age] and with fire.” The baptism of the Church is characteristic of the Church Age; fire takes place at the end of the Tribulation [second advent].

The baptism of fire is a little more obscure, so verse 12 explains it, “And his grain shovel [literally, his winnowing fork] is in his hand; furthermore, he will clean his threshing floor [the world being cleansed for the Millennium].” We anticipate here the dividing of believers and unbelievers in this judgment. When our Lord uses His grain shovel at the second advent unbelievers will be taken off the earth and they will go into torments in Hades. Believers will be left on the earth and the Millennium will begin with believers only. As “chaff” [verse 12] the unbelievers will be removed from the world. The baptism of fire is the antithesis of the Rapture. At the Rapture believers are taken off the earth and unbelievers are left behind; at the second advent unbelievers are taken off the earth and believers are left behind — Matthew 24 speaks of the baptism of fire, not the Rapture.

4. The time of the baptism of fire. This judgment occurs immediately after the second advent. It is so mentioned in 2 Thessalonians 1:7-9 — “and to give relief to you who are afflicted along with us [says Paul], when our Lord Jesus Christ shall be revealed from heaven [second advent] with his mighty angels in a blazing fire, dealing out judgment to those who do not know God, even to those who do not obey the gospel of our Lord Jesus. Furthermore, these [unbelievers who survive the Tribulation] will pay the penalty of eternal destruction away from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power,” they are excluded from the Millennium. They are in fire in Hades until they are removed.

5. There are three parables which are very pertinent to this judgment. The parable of the wheat and the tares in Matthew 13; the parable of the good and the bad fish in Matthew 13; the parable of the ten virgins in Matthew 25:1-13.

6. The punishment area of the baptism of fire. We have studied this recently in the doctrine of Hades. The location is the compartment of Sheol or Hades known as torments, a place where all unbelievers wait in fire for the administration of the last judgment.

7. The analogy to the baptism of fire is found in Matthew chapter 24:36-41. There is an exact parallel between the days of Noah and the second advent of Christ. When Christ returns to the earth it will be exactly like the days of Noah. In the days of Noah unbelievers were removed from the earth, they were immersed in water; in the day of Christ unbelievers will be removed from the earth, they will be immersed in fire.

There are some very technical passages on the baptism of fire for Jewish unbelievers. They are found in Isaiah 1:25-27; Ezekiel 20:34-38; Malachi 3:1-16; 4:1,2.

There is also a technical passage on the baptism of fire for Gentile unbelievers found in Matthew 25:31-46.

The role of the baptism of fire in the motivation of Jews in the Church Age is found in Hebrews 12:27-29, "And this [referring to Haggai 2:6], 'Yet once more,' denotes the removal of those things which are shaken [unbelievers of the Tribulation are shaken by the judgment of the baptism of fire], like the removal of a discarded thing [they are discarded from the earth] in order that ones not being shaken [believers who survive the Tribulation] might remain [for the Millennium]. Therefore, because we have received to ourselves an unshakeable kingdom [royal family in the Church Age] let us hang on to grace [the logistical grace provision of the divine dynasphere], through which we might render acceptable service to God with reverence and respect," only in the divine dynasphere, "for our God is a consuming fire [reference to the baptism of fire]."

The applications of the baptism of fire: the importance of believing in Christ, the vindication of the integrity of our Lord Jesus Christ as in revelation 19:11, " ... Faithful and True; furthermore, in justice he executes judgment and makes war," the execution of judgment is the baptism of fire. The baptism of fire is necessary for the beginning of a new civilisation. A civilisation is the divine protection of the human race in its perpetuation during the human phase of the angelic conflict. Regarding termini the civilisation begins with the believers only and terminates with a saturation of unbelievers and great cataclysmic judgment. In the terminating historical judgment God destroys the entire human race except for the believers on the earth. Furthermore, each civilisation in human history has its own climate, its own environment and variations within the species but never transmutation of species. In each civilisation man has a different life span, and animals vary within their species. That is, a horse remains a horse and does not become a horse-cow or a horse with wings like Pegasus.

There are four civilisations in human history: the antediluvian, the post-diluvian, the Millennial and the eternal. The antediluvian began with Adam plus Eve, two believers; the post-diluvian civilisation began with believers only, Noah plus his family. In the Millennial civilisation begins with believers only. The eternal civilisation there are believers only.

We are now going to introduce chapter seven because when it asks, “who is able to stand?” in the last phrase in chapter six, the answer is found in the greatest period of evangelism the world will ever know and which will occur in the seven years of the Tribulation. So great is that period of evangelism that there will be angels evangelising toward the end of it.

We have already studied Hades and how Apollyon, second only to Satan, will make a great invasion from the abyss, and therefore the tremendous necessity in all of the concentrated demonism of the Tribulation for a clear presentation of the gospel. So we now note the concepts related to the subject at hand which is: “Who is able to stand?” The Tribulation will be a time of great harvesting of souls, many millions of people will actually believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. Of course, in every dispensation and in every period of history in every area, there must be evangelism; it is of utmost necessity.

There are three categories of evangelism that have occurred since the beginning of man’s sinfulness and the need for evangelism. First of all there is personal evangelism which is conducted by all of those who are believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, or should be. Secondly, there is evangelism through spiritual gift which is the function of the gift of evangelism, especially in this dispensation where it is a very necessary function. Thirdly, there is national evangelism through the client nation, which is missionary activity.

Personal evangelism in the scripture is often categorised as witnessing. It is the function of the individuals in the royal family in communicating the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ to those who have not accepted Christ as saviour. It is the one field of evangelism open to all believers. Witnessing is personal evangelism, it is the function apart from the gift of evangelism and from missionary activity or client nation evangelism. The threefold characteristics of witnessing are found in 1 Thessalonians 1:4-5, "Knowing, brethren beloved by God, for our gospel did not come to you in word only [the verbal presentation of the gospel, person to person, individual to individual], but also in the power of the Holy Spirit," there is no presentation of the gospel unless the believer involved is residing and functioning inside of the divine dynasphere, God's game for the Church Age and the Christian way of life. So there must be the filling of the Spirit for personal evangelism. There must be an understanding of the subject, therefore perception and application of doctrine, momentum in the spiritual life. The more effective the spiritual growth the more effective the witnessing for Christ in personal evangelism, the more effective the function of the gift of evangelism, and the more effective the function of missionary activity or client nation evangelism. All motivation for evangelism must come from gate five of the divine dynasphere which, of course, is occupation with the person of Jesus Christ at its peak but begins as love of God.

"and full conviction," that is the Holy Spirit as the sovereign executive of witnessing, "just as you know what kind of men we became among you for your sake." There is the witness of the Spirit, there is the verbal witness of the individual person who is evangelising, and there is the witness of the life. The three are all mentioned in verse 5.

The Holy Spirit is the sovereign executive of all forms of evangelism. Whether personal evangelism or the evangelism of the spiritual gift or the evangelism of a client nation, it is the ministry of God the Holy Spirit which is most important. The unbeliever is minus a human spirit, therefore he has no frame of reference for the gospel. The gospel is spiritual phenomenon. The unbeliever has a human soul and that soul is located inside of the human body. Therefore the unbeliever is said to be dichotomous, but there is no way that a human soul with its two frontal lobes can comprehend the information of the gospel. Therefore, God the Holy Spirit acts as a human spirit when the gospel is presented to the unbeliever.

In John 16:8-11 we have the basic areas in which God the Holy Spirit makes clear the issue of the gospel, "And he [the Holy Spirit], when he comes, will convince the world concerning [three things] sin, righteousness, and judgement [the three aspects by which the gospel is presented in all three categories]."

Immediately when you say "sin" you think of personal sin, and you think the evangelist should stand up there and keep talking about personal sins. Not at all. The only sin which is the issue in evangelism is not the fact that we have personally sinned. That is not an issue in personal evangelism, that is an issue in condemnation. We are sinners; we are sinners by imputation; we are sinners by personal action; we are sinners by the function of the old sin nature. But that isn't the issue because that was solved on the cross when Christ took our place and was judged for our sins. There is only one sin which God the Holy Spirit uses as an issue in evangelism: "concerning sin because they believe not in me."

Ultimately, the only sin which condemns man is rejection of the Lord Jesus Christ. This is, of course, dramatised by the last judgement when personal sins are not even mentioned. The reason that personal sins are never mentioned at the last judgement is because all personal sins were imputed to Christ on the cross and judged. And it is only when there is rejection of Christ, negative volition toward the gospel or at God-consciousness, that results in the second resurrection, the great white throne judgement, and being cast into the lake of fire. Sins are never mentioned at the last judgement, only human good as a demonstration of the fact that none of us have a righteousness acceptable to God. The only righteousness that is acceptable is what is imputed to us at the moment we believe in Christ.

“Concerning righteousness because I go to my Father and you no longer see me.” While Jesus Christ is ascended and is seated at the right hand of the Father where He received His third royal patent, and we no longer see Him, we do receive at the moment of salvation the imputed righteousness of God the Father, one half of His holiness, the other half being His justice, so that at the moment of salvation a grace pipeline is established between the righteousness of God and the justice of God. At the same time, as we have noted, every one of us who have believed in this dispensation, are entered into union with Christ through the baptism of the Spirit, and therefore we have the righteousness of Christ. As royal family we have a double portion: the imputation of God the Father’s righteousness to us the moment we believe, and we share the righteousness of Christ since we are entered into union with Him at the moment of eternal salvation. The issue in salvation is that if we are going to live with God forever we must be as good as God is. That is impossible, and therefore imputed to us at the moment we believe in Christ is the righteousness of God.

“Concerning judgement because the ruler of this world has been judged.” When Christ bore our sins in His own body on the tree it was not only our so great salvation but it was the strategic victory of the angelic conflict.

In 1 Corinthians 2:14 evangelism is in focus: “But the foolish man [the unbeliever] does not accept the things of the Spirit of God because they are foolishness to him, for he is not able to obtain knowledge of the gospel because they are discerned from the source of the human spirit,” and since the unbeliever has no human spirit he cannot understand the gospel.

The third category is client nation evangelism, one of the only effective world-wide systems of evangelism, for it is the function of the missionary going to the various countries of the world, and not only the presentation of the gospel but the entire modus operandi of indigenous missionary activity.

The principle behind all of this: whether it is the one with the gift of evangelism, whether it is personal witnessing, whether it is a missionary, there must be the total reliance upon the ministry of the Holy Spirit, therefore a clear presentation of the gospel is required. Pertinent Bible doctrine or the gospel is the weapon of witnessing. The gospel of the power of God to salvation, Romans 1:16, not our personalities, not our human dynamics, not even the cleverness or the ability with which we present it; it is the gospel which is the power of God with reference to salvation, “to everyone who believes.” First of all “to the Jew” because he was the client nation of the past, “and also to the Gentile” because at the present time this is the “times of the Gentiles” and only Gentile nations are client nations to God. 1 Corinthians 1:18 adds: “For the word of the cross is to them that perish foolishness, but to us who are saved it is the power of God.” So the power is in the Word; the power is in the gospel. The Bible is the absolute norm for truth according to 2 Peter 1:12-21; the Bible is the source of the gospel, Luke 16:28-31; 1 Corinthians 15:3,4; the Bible is the mind of Christ, 1 Corinthians 2:16; the Bible is divine power, Hebrews 4:12; the Bible never returns void, Isaiah 55:1; the Bible endures forever, Luke 21:33; 1 Peter 1:25.

The believer priest is the agent in witnessing under category one, and witnessing is the responsibility, therefore, of every member of the royal family under the power of the Spirit. There is the witness of the life, 2 Corinthians 3:3; 6:3; there is the witness of the lips in 2 Corinthians 5:14-21.

Regardless of the category it is the knowledge of pertinent doctrine which is necessary for the effective communication of the Word, because the believer must witness in the power of the Spirit, he must make the issue clear, he must exclude every system of human persuasiveness and salesmanship so as not to create distraction and false issues. The believer must understand both Christology and soteriology, especially redemption, reconciliation, propitiation, imputation, justification, atonement; these are all pertinent to the saving work of Christ on the cross. The believer’s ability to witness depends on his emphasis on the gospel, especially the doctrine of reconciliation as presented in Ephesians 2:14-17. The correct and accurate information from Bible doctrine is always the power involved in the presentation, and regardless of the category, whether it is an individual believer witnessing, whether it is an evangelist using his spiritual gift before a group, or whether it is a missionary in some foreign country the point is that all of us have this responsibility, Romans 1:14-16. Believers must have assurance with regard to eternal security for the stability of this presentation. Therefore not to be excluded is the doctrine of eternal security so that when you witness as an individual, when the evangelist stands before a group of people and speaks, or when the missionary communicates the gospel in some foreign country, they all realise that what they are presenting can never be changed; and that those who are their listeners, if they believe in Christ they have eternal salvation and they cannot lose that salvation through any failure on their part on any failure on the part of anyone else. Eternal security is a major issue in the presentation of the gospel and the confidence and the motivation that comes from telling people about Christ is the confidence that when they believe in Christ, when they personally receive Him as saviour, there is nothing that can cancel it, there is no way that they can lose their salvation.

Witnessing, therefore, is the function of the royal ambassadorship because, first of all the motivation comes from our royal priesthood. Everyone of us as believers is a priest; everyone of us is an ambassador. The function of our royal priesthood is directed toward God; the function of our royal ambassadorship is directed toward man. We are motivated by love of God to communicate the gospel as individual believers, as evangelists, as missionaries. All of us have the responsibility. This is emphasised in 2 Corinthians 5:18-20.

The ministry of reconciliation belongs to these three categories: witnessing, the evangelist, the missionary.

It is our responsibility to provide the gospel information but to leave the results in the hands of God the Holy Spirit. Therefore we must avoid gimmicks which confuse the issue such as emotional begging, public invitations, raising hands, walking aisles, jumping through psychological hoops. They are all disastrous in the long run because they give a concept of legalism which when people do believe in Christ they never shed the legalism, they must be doing something rather than God doing something for us.

Common grace is God the Holy Spirit acting as a human spirit to make the information of the gospel lucid and perspicuous. Efficacious grace is the ministry of God the Holy Spirit in the exhale of faith in Jesus Christ.

A prerequisite, then, for the presentation of the gospel is knowledge of the pertinent doctrine. Effectiveness of this depends on the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. The responsibility for communication is in three categories as noted. The dynamics of communication depends upon motivation, mental attitude; in other words, life inside the divine dynasphere. Clarity of communication depends on the believer's accurate understanding of the two deaths of Christ on the cross plus the fact that there was a judgement. Christ did not die physically for our sins. It does say that Christ died for our sins, and that is the imputation of all personal sins to Christ on the cross. That is why at the moment of physical birth, the first time we were born, there was imputed to us the sin of Adam. Adam's original sin was imputed to our genetically-formed old sin nature and we were born spiritually dead. In the second birth, when we are born again, there is imputed to us eternal life; there is imputed to us the righteousness of God. If we are going to live with God forever and ever we must have exactly the same righteousness He has. We must have His life — eternal life. So there are two imputations: eternal life and the righteousness of God. These imputations leave one thing out: personal sin. Our personal sins are never imputed to us for judgement, our personal sins instead were imputed to Christ on the cross. They were judged at that point and that is a spiritual death, a spiritual death which culminated with our Lord speaking: "It is finished."

There are some postulates we should note with regard to evangelism. These things will be observed in the Tribulation as well.

First we must always avoid argumentation in the presentation of the gospel. We are not trying to win a debate, we are trying to present Jesus Christ for every soul's salvation. The responsibility, whether and individual believer, an evangelist or a missionary is to disseminate information, not to argue over its validity.

Secondly we should never be side-tracked by false issues: Is the Bible the Word of God? What about people who have never heard the gospel? These are examples of things that are not an issue in the presentation of the gospel.

Thirdly, we should deal in personal witnessing with the individual alone where possible, recognising his privacy. The evangelist must deal with the individual under the principle of privacy and therefore avoid those gimmicks like trying to get some public confirmation by the raising of hands. That becomes a false issue and produces embarrassment as an issue rather than Christ.

Fourthly, in any presentation of the gospel on the part of an individual believer, on the part of an evangelist, on the part of a missionary, there is always the danger of getting into a rut: using the single approach every time because it worked once before. Different approaches in the presentation of the gospel are necessary for different people and flexibility is one of the greatest issues in evangelism.

Fifth, there should be the avoidance of any false concept that you must speak to a certain number of people every day about Christ in personal witnessing, or that the evangelist must have a large audience, or that the missionary must “beat the bushes” constantly for converts. There is the need to train indigenous people in missionary work among their own people.

Motivation for evangelism must come from spiritual growth, from doctrine resident in the soul, from residence in the divine dynasphere; not human pressure, not spiritual bullying, and not approbation lust. Avoid, therefore, anything in the field of arrogance. Arrogance is the greatest enemy of Christianity but it is especially the greatest enemy of all of us. And we must also avoid judging other believers for their apparent failure to witness. This is a matter between the individual and the Lord, and such judging and maligning brings divine discipline upon yourself and it does not effect any way the evangelism of others.

The outline of chapter seven

In the first eight verses we are going to see the evangelists and missionaries of the Tribulation.

In verses nine through fourteen we are going to see the results of their evangelism.

In verses fifteen through seventeen we are going to see what happens to these people who are martyred. Many of the converts are going to be martyred for the faith.

The evangelists of the Tribulation — verses 1-8.

The results of Tribulational evangelism — verses 9-14.

The interim blessing of Tribulational martyrs — verses 15-17.

The judgement of the pur sui vant messengers is mentioned in verse one. We do not start with evangelism, we start with historical trends; for all evangelism, all missionary activity depends upon the historical trend of the time in which the events occur. Historical trends have a great influence on missionary activity, on evangelism, and on personal witnessing.

Verse 1, we begin with the simple prepositional phrase meta plus the accusative neuter from the immediate demonstrative o(utoj, “after these things.” The opening of the seventh seal of the Doomsday book is postponed. We have the first six seals only in chapter six and we will not get the seventh seal of historical trends until chapter eight, verse one, in order to answer the question which was given at the end of Revelation 6:17, “who is able to stand?”

Chapter seven answers the question. The answer, of course, is obvious. Only the believer can stand. But there is a problem there. At the moment of the Rapture of the Church which terminates the Church Age and begins the Tribulational age, at that moment there are no believers on the earth for all believers went up with the resurrection of the Church, 1 Thessalonians 4:13-17. So there are no believers on the earth the moment after the Rapture of the Church. So the question is: from where is the origin of believers in the Tribulation. If only a believer can stand, where are the believers in the Tribulation? Hence, the necessity of explaining how people came to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ during the Tribulation.

Evangelism in all three categories continues and thrives in time of historical disaster, and that is one of the first principles we will, learn in this chapter. Historical disaster is opportunity. Most people regard historical disaster with great trepidation but it is a time of opportunity for personal witnessing, it is a time of great opportunity for evangelism, it is a time of great opportunity for missionary activity. Our story in chapter seven is the story of evangelism in one of the most disruptive periods of history, one of the eras of history of unrestrained historical disaster. Therefore, the seventh chapter of Revelation is a parenthesis between the breaking of the sixth seal and the seventh seal in the Doomsday book. The purpose of the parenthesis, then, is to answer the question about who is able to stand. Only believers in Christ are able to stand in time of great historical disasters.

With this, “After these things [the breaking of the first six seals].” We have a verb, the aorist active indicative of o(raw meaning that John is now going to get a good glimpse of history. This is future history; this is the Tribulation. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It refers to evangelism as a fact or action extended over the entire period of the Tribulation. Furthermore, we have all three categories of evangelism used. The active voice of o(raw: John produces the action of the verb by observing the pattern of evangelism in the Tribulation. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of evangelism during the entire course of the Tribulation. “After these things I saw four angels.” What these angels are doing, what their responsibility is, how they function, will be answered in the phrases that follow.

Anyone who is a herald is in the field of nobility as far as the elect angels are concerned. "I saw four angels." These are pur sui vant messengers who have charge of certain natural forces used by God to judge segments of the human race with historical disaster. Therefore we find next their function in the perfect active participle of the verb i(stemi, and here it means to stand ready or to be on standby alert. In its transitive sense it means to put, to place, to set, to establish, to confirm, to make valid. In the intransitive use of the verb to stand still, to stop, to stand firm, to hold one's ground, to be alert, to be ready. So we translate: "After these things [the breaking open of the first six seals of the Doomsday book] I saw four [pur sui vant] angels standing ready." Actually, they are on what we would call red alert to administer divine judgement.

With this we have where they are going to do it. Where are they standing ready? They are called "the four corners of the earth." This is a prepositional phrase e)pi plus the accusative of the adjective numeral tessarej, plus the genitive of gh, and then one other word, gwnia for "corners." This is correctly translated "at the four corners of the earth." And what are they doing? They are said under the present active participle of the verb krates to be restraining. They are on red alert to release but they are restraining the winds at this moment. So we have krates, in the present tense, a descriptive present, to indicate what is now going on. The active voice: these pur sui vant angels produce the action of the verb in the restraint of divine judgement until ordered to administer that category of judgement but through the chain of command, through the cherub who acts as the pur sui vant officer.

With this we find out where they are on red alert. They are at the four corners of the earth and under the accusative plural direct object we have again the word "four" and this time we have the noun a)nemoj, and this is fascinating because this is one of three great weather makers on planet earth, "restraining the four winds of the earth." Then we have i(na introducing a purpose clause, "in order that." There is a purpose for this. Then we have our subject, the nominative singular subject a)nemoj again and with it the negative mh, and it is translated "in order that no wind." Then the present active subjunctive of the verb pneu, "might blow," "in order that no wind might blow." The present tense is a tendential present for an action which might occur but at the moment is not taking place. The active voice: the subject is wind — hurricane, typhoon, tornado and other disastrous winds which produce bad weather and historical disaster. The subjunctive mood is a potential subjunctive implying a future reference qualified by the element of contingency, and the element of contingency means that it must come from what we have previously studied, the chariot of fire in which our Lord presides over the administration of these judgements. The rest of it is very simple: "blowing over land or sea or tree."

Corrected translation: "After these things I saw four [pur sui vant] angels standing on red alert at the four corners of the earth, restraining the four winds [wind cells] of the earth in order that no wind should blow on the land, or on the sea, or against any tree."

The angelic restraint of the weather machine

1. Revelation 7:1 introduces a point of doctrine which explains certain natural disasters on planet earth in terms of divine judgement.
2. It also introduces the concept of certain elect angels from the college of heralds, officers and messengers, as the restrainers of natural disasters from turbulent weather.
3. Angelic restraint cannot be understood here apart from a summary of how the world's weather machine operates.

The sun is the ultimate source of the energy which powers the earth. Solar energy warms our planet and atmosphere. The sun not only warms the atmosphere and the planet but it also evaporates ocean water, heating it into vapour, and moving it somewhere else where precipitation occurs. Because the sun warms the earth unequally, i.e. the tropics more than the polar zones, solar energy stirs the atmosphere into motion producing a giant weather machine. The warning system is called radiation. Incoming solar radiation penetrates the atmosphere after being filtered and some thirty per cent is reflected back to space by clouds, by ice, and by water. Another twenty per cent is absorbed by air, by water, by vapour, ozone, clouds, dust, air molecules. The remaining fifty per cent is absorbed at the earth's surface, heating the earth and the atmosphere unequally, and therefore triggering global circulation of air and ocean currents. There is where we get weather. The grace of God to humanity is noted in the fact that the incoming radiation from the sun is balanced by heat radiating back into space from the earth. Water vapour and carbon dioxide in the atmosphere intercepts some of this heat outflow, raising the temperature of the earth and the lower atmosphere of the first heavens.

Air warmed in the tropics rises and moves toward the poles where it cools off and descends because of unequal temperatures. The rotation of the earth deflects these air currents in the cells of moving air. Three of these globe-girdling cells are found in each one of our hemispheres. There are actually twelve wind cells, three in each hemisphere or, as our passage says it, "each corner of the earth." The corners of the earth refer to the hemispheres. In this sense the earth has four hemispheres and in each one there are three wind cells, and there is one pur sui vant angelic messenger in charge of each hemisphere — northern, southern, eastern, and western. The Biblical phrase, the, the "four corners of the earth" is taken from the four hemispheres of the earth. One pur sui vant angel guards a hemisphere to restrain that area from destructive weather forces until so ordered from the chariot of fire which we studied in Ezekiel chapters one and ten.

- a. With each circuit of the earth rivers of air pass ultimately over oceans and continents where they climb mountain ranges, sink into flat land, and cross lakes.
- b. The moving atmosphere adjusts, creating contrasting weather along each leg of the journey of the circulating air.
- c. The repetition of this process forms diverse climates in various regions of the earth.

d. Just as the winds shift from day to day bringing spells of good weather and then bad, so they provide the variations in climate year after year in this stage of the angelic conflict known as human history.

Weather has always been a factor since the flood. The reason for it is that the earth is tilted. It was not tilted before the flood. The tilt since the flood causes seasons in certain parts of the earth. For example, in the western hemisphere in June the north pole tilts toward the sun, and we have summer in the northern hemisphere and winter envelops the southern latitudes below the equator. The barometer measures the atmospheric pressure. We have isobars which trace the movements of these circulating winds. Remember there are three systems in each hemisphere and weather forecasting could be classified as the empirical observation of changes on the earth's surface caused by atmospheric conditions.

There is a definite connecting relationship between the function of the weather machine and history. In fact, history is one of the historical trends and, as a matter of fact, this is what our verse is saying. Right now weather is being restrained by angelic creatures and when this weather machine goes out of kilter then you have terrible disaster. When the pur sui vant angels are not administering divine judgement they are restraining weather and making it possible for normal weather to exist.

The "four winds" of verse 1 are wind cells, three to each of the four hemispheres, twelve wind cells in all in planet earth, "in order that no judgement [disciplinary wind] should blow on the land or on the sea, or against every tree."

Verse 2, "Then I saw another angel." No we find that there is an order, and that there is a system of authority, and these four angelic creatures who are in the nobility class called the college of heralds have an authority and rank over them.

We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated "then." We have the aorist active indicative of the verb o(raw, "Then I saw." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the apostle John produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. Then we have the one in authority over those four angelic creatures with tremendous responsibility. They are restraining and therefore moving the wind cells in their proper circuits so that we get only normal weather, but we get abnormal weather by a simple flick of the wrist, they are always on alert. When they get a mandate from heaven from our Lord Jesus Christ all of that can change. There are no accidents in the Christian life, there are no accidents in history, every disaster that occurs in history has a very lucid explanation. It must be remembered that this is a divine decision, a fair decision, and that people are the products of their own decisions resulting in a divine decision.

"Then I saw another angel," the pur sui vant officer of cherub rank in the college of heralds. Before they can do anything about natural disasters in the Tribulation there must first of all be a period for evangelism. There must be a principle, and the principle is always there:

God is fair, always before judgement there is a grace period. Grace before judgement is the concept in this particular passage. The reason we do not go immediately to the sealing of the 144,000 evangelists is simply because there must be first of all an explanation. The explanation is a very simple one: no one has ever been overtaken by a natural disaster without a chance to change their mind, to believe in Christ, to get back to Bible doctrine. Whatever the cause of the disciplinary action from heaven, from the chariot of fire with its four wheels and ...

These pur sui vant messengers in our passage are a part of the college of heralds, and while they are the lowest in the college of heralds in order of rank they are still officers compared to rank and file in the order of battle in the elect angelic army.

Verse 2 — “Then I saw another angel [pur sui vant officer, cherub by rank] coming up from the east.” Remember that all weather has to be related some way to the angels. What is not known, apart from the Word of God, is the function of the pur sui vant messengers. They control the weather machine.

Now we have our first relative clause, a present active participle from the verb e)wxw, and it means to have, or to have and to hold, “who had.” The present tense of duration denotes what was begun in the past and continues into the present time, hence translated by the English perfect, “had.” The active voice: the pur sui vant officer commanding the weather machine produces the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial, it is followed by the accusative singular direct object from the noun sfragij, “seal.” With it is the possessive genitive of qeoj, “the seal of God.” Then there is a present active participle of zaw, used here in the acsriptive sense of a participle, “the seal of the living God.” The relative clause belongs after the subject of the verse. Translation: “Then I saw another angel who had the seal of the living God.”

The seal is comparable to the wall of fire which protects believers during the historical disasters of the Tribulation. Certain believers are protected by the wall of fire and live to the end of the Tribulation. Others are permitted to have glorious testimony and then go into martyrdom, and from there into a tremendous interim happiness in heaven during the rest of the Tribulation. The seal also represents the spiritual gift of evangelism which functions under the principle of grace before judgement in the Tribulation.

Then we have the exercise of his command. He is in charge of the weather machine and there are four operators, one for each hemisphere, and he gives them a command. A connective conjunction kai introduces the command, “and,” plus the aorist active indicative of the word krazw which means here to shout, “and he shouted.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the pur sui vant officer in command of the weather machine produces the action. The declarative indicative mood, a simple statement of fact. It was also given in a great voice or a loud voice, the instrumental singular of fwnh plus the instrumental singular of the adjective megaj. And we also note to whom it was given: the dative plural indirect object composed with three words, the generic use of the definite article toij, and with it we have tessarej, the adjective numeral “four,” and the noun a)ggeloj.

With this we have a dative plural from the relative pronoun o(j) , “to whom was given,” the aorist passive indicative of the verb didomi . The culminative aorist tense views the authority of the pur sui vant messenger in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the administration of divine judgement to the human race as a command function. God gives the overall policy and it is a command function in the college of heralds. The passive voice: the four pur sui vant messengers receive the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative.

Then we have an ellipsis, it demands a subject for the infinitive, “to whom was given authority to damage [injure],” the aorist active infinitive of a)dikew which means to injure or to damage, “the land and the sea.” The culminative aorist views the power or authority of these angelic creatures [elect angels] in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. They run the weather machine, they have the power to do great damage to the earth through the wind cells. The active voice: the pur sui vant messengers with this authority or power produce the action and this is the infinitive of intended result which fulfills a deliberate objective, hence a blending of purpose and result. It means to damage.

Translation of verse two: “Then I saw another angel [the pur sui vant officer] who had the seal of the living God coming up from the east: and shouting a command with a loud voice to the four pur sui vant angels, to those who were given authority or power to damage the land and the sea.”

We have previously noted that the angelic college of heralds is used for the administration of divine judgement of the human race. This is the primary function of the category of pur sui vant angels. We have also noted their functions and how they operate from the chariot of fire, the headquarters for judgement. In the Tribulation divine judgement is postponed only for a short time and that is for world-wide evangelism under the principle that grace always precedes judgement. There has never been a nation, a group of people, living in any geographical area of the world who did not have an opportunity of grace before judgement.

Verse 3, we have the restraining order. It is a mandate. “And he said” is present active participle from legw . Notice how it is translated, not as a participle. There is a reason for that found in the Greek syntax of the Koine. The circumstantial participle is an idiom first rendered into the English by the conjunction “and” and the finite verb, “And he said.”

Here is the command: the aorist active subjunctive of a)dikew which means to damage. But with it, what makes it a command is not the subjunctive as such but the negative mh plus the subjunctive mood. Mh plus the subjunctive is a strong negative command. This is an ingressive aorist tense contemplating the action of the verb at the beginning. It is used to denote the entrance into a state or condition but the active voice plus the negative means the pur sui vant messengers are not to produce the action of the verb but are on red alert to destroy certain parts of the earth through the function of the wind machine. They are to, in effect, stand down for a certain period of time. The subjunctive mood plus the negative is the subjunctive of prohibition which in this case is tantamount to a negative command from higher authority. The cherub who commands the weather machine and all those who operate it is the one who gave the command.

Then we have a time limit which is introduced by a temporal conjunction $\alpha\chi\rho\iota$, "until," and the aorist active subjunctive of the verb $\sigma\phi\rho\alpha\gamma\iota\zeta\omega$ which means to seal. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the pur sui vant officer produces the action, he is in command of the weather machine and he is also going to seal some evangelists for the Tribulation. Therefore the weather machine is to stand down from red alert and not enter into any function that would be detrimental until everyone has had a chance to hear the gospel. There is no such thing as a member of the human race at any time who did not have a chance to be saved.

"until we have sealed the servants of our God on their foreheads." There are three connotations to sealing in this verse.

The first one is protection: 144,000 Jewish evangelists in the Tribulation will be protected from every devastating and sensational phenomenon that we are going to study. Even when Abaddon comes out of the Abyss with the super demons to attack, they will be protected. They are protected from the unrestrained disasters of the Tribulation.

God's function in every dispensation is for believers who are living (in our dispensation) in the divine dynasphere. The only wall of fire is in the divine dynasphere and if you live habitually in the cosmic system there is no wall of fire for you as a believer. You have eternal security and that is all you are going to get, and a lot of judgement before you die.

The second concept is preservation: These evangelists will survive all of the historical disasters of the Tribulation. Note that there are three categories of survival in the Tribulation: the over-survivors (conservatives) who cache ammo and food in different places, etc. ; the liberals under-survive, as illustrated by their crusades for nuclear disarmament, their peace movements, their play into the hands of the communists, their soft attitude toward criminals; the wisdom survival crowd, the third category, includes both the application of doctrine and the flexibility under the direction of our Lord Jesus Christ and the ministry of the Holy Spirit. If there is a cache of food around they will find it; if there is a weapon handy they won't need it or they will use it, but if there isn't they are still going to survive. This is the wisdom crowd.

We have a third concept of sealing and that is validity. This emphasises the message of the 144,000 Jewish evangelists of the Tribulation. Everyone has a chance to hear the gospel, many will respond by faith in Christ. Of course, millions will not respond and will die horribly and enter into the torments of Hades.

So this verse illustrates the principle of grace before judgement. Prior to any divine judgement there is a grace period for repentance, changing your mind about Christ [which means faith in Christ]. Not an issue at this moment is rebound. The issue with unbelievers is salvation. Every person who dies will have had a fantastic opportunity to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ under the principle of grace before judgement.

There is probably nothing where such a contrast exists than with a client nation. The first client nation in history began in BC 1440 when the Jews were delivered from their terrible bondage in Egypt, the slavery of some 400 years. When they became a client nation immediately you have the contrast. Many, many nations in the past have not demonstrated the tremendous contrasts that any client nation will demonstrate for a client nation has a major issue which is not faced: What is truth? And those who respond to truth become magnificent and those who fail have all of the obvious failures and evil influence of their failures indelibly printed on the human race. So it was with Israel. There never was a time when a Jew could not say, What is truth? because even in their worship they always repeated these words: "Shama Yisrael, Hear O Israel; Adonai Elohenu, Jehovah [the Lord Jesus Christ] is our God; Adonai Echad, The Lord is unique [one in the sense of unique]." So here we have Jesus Christ as God, Jesus Christ in hypostatic union as the God-Man. That was the basis of the establishment of the first client nation.

Three times this client nation was removed by divine discipline, the fifth cycle, and each time there was a recovery until AD 70. After AD 70 there is no client nation Israel. Right down to this moment Israel is not a client nation and will never be one again until the second advent.

We see the beginning of evangelism in the Tribulation through 144,000 men who will be alive on the earth at that time and who will accept Christ as saviour after the Rapture. These 144,000 all have one thing in common: by race they are Jews, not by nationality but by race, and they will be used in a special system of evangelism.

Verse 4, we do have literally 144,000 people involved in this passage. We begin with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated "the," followed by the aorist active indicative of the verb a)kuw, and it has to do with concentration. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, concentration under the ministry of the Holy Spirit. The active voice: the apostle John produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for a simple statement of fact. With this we have the accusative singular direct object from the noun a)riqmoj, from which we get "arithmetic." It is translated, "Then I heard the number which had been sealed," the articular perfect passive participle of the verb sfragizw, which means to be sealed. The definite article in the genitive plural is used as a demonstrative pronoun, "those." The perfect tense of existing state in which the past is dropped from the thought and the attention is focused on the status quo. The evangelism of the Tribulation begins with 144,000 Jewish evangelists. The passive voice: the 144,000 evangelists receive the action of the verb. The participle is a complementary participle, it completes the idea of the action expressed in the main verb. The concept is very simple: before they could be sealed they had to believe in Christ. They believed in Christ by being alert to the transition of historical trends between the Church Age and the Tribulation.

The resurrection of the Church terminates the Church Age. At that point there are no believers on the earth, and at that point they become aware of what has happened, that people have departed from the earth and at that point they become very alert, very interested, and they personally believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. 144,000 of that first wave of people who respond to the unusual event of the resurrection and all that pertains to it are Jews, and these 144,000 Jews live throughout the world. They will respond, they will be sealed and they will function before these historical disasters, the four horsemen of the apocalypse, occurs on the earth.

We have next the source of these people, 144,000 what? What kind of people? Who are they? And next we have again a perfect passive participle, they were sealed from every tribe of the sons of Israel, e)k plus the ablative of fulh, “from every tribe.” “Tribe” is technical. Not from every nationality, not from every race. this is a technical word for Israel. This is obvious because we have a descriptive genitive plural and a genitive of relationship, “of the sons of Israel.” And since the Tribulation is not only an era of history but the continuation of the dispensation of Israel, i.e. Daniel’s seventieth week, it is fitting that the evangelists should be taken from the client nation which was operating during that dispensation. These are all Jews by race.

Principle

1. The Jews who were scattered over the world during the Tribulation — in fact they are scattered today — are better able to appreciate from their own background and culture the significance of the importance of evangelism in the Tribulation.

2. They are conscious of the fact that they have been a client nation in the past, therefore they have client nation consciousness. Today under apostasy they seek to spread their culture, which is a great culture, and they place emphasis on it; but it demands regeneration, it demands positive volition toward the laws of divine establishment, and it demands what is being ignored today, that Jesus Christ is the God of Israel as well as the only saviour. So while there is no Jewish client nation in the Tribulation there will be a Jewish nation in Palestine.

3. These 144,000 Jewish evangelists must not be confused with the nation Israel at any time. The nation Israel is under the control of the Jewish dictator from the tribe of Dan during the Tribulation. This is the reason why there is no evangelistic representation from the tribe of Dan. As we progress into this passage we will see that twelve tribes are represented. Each one of these twelve tribes have 12,000 evangelists sealed from that tribe. But there are thirteen tribes in Israel due to the fact that when Reuben, who was the firstborn of Israel, lost the privileges of primogeniture, he lost three things: the rulership which went to David and therefore to the tribe of Judah, the family priesthood which went to Levi, the double portion which went to Joseph. Joseph has two sons: Manasseh and Ephraim, and these are included. So there are thirteen tribes in Israel. Only twelve are represented here; Dan is not. Dan appears to be the source of the false prophet, the second beast of Revelation thirteen. This explains, therefore, the famous tribal prophecy of Genesis 49:17 — “Dan will be a poisonous snake by the side of the road, a viper or a puff adder in the path that strikes the horse’s heel, so that the rider falls backward.” The horse is Israel and the rider is the Jewish believers of the Tribulation. The poisonous snake is the dictator. The profile of Dan explains why this tribe is omitted from the 144,000.

Profile of Dan

1. Dan brought up the rear of Israel, Numbers 10:25, which means dragging the feet and negative volition toward Bible doctrine.
2. Dan was the first tribe to become so involved in the cosmic system that it became idolatrous — Leviticus 24:11; Judges 18:2, 30,31.
3. It is noted from 1 Kings 11:26 and 12:28-30 that it was Dan who set up the golden calf in Israel when Moses was absent during the exodus.
4. Dan was the last tribe to receive the inheritance in the land, Joshua 19:47-49.
5. In the listing of the tribes Dan is always mentioned last as illustrated by 1 Chronicles 27:16-22.
6. Dan was also omitted from the genealogies which are found in Chronicles, 1 Chronicles chapters two through ten.
7. In this context, Revelation chapter seven, Dan is not mentioned — no evangelists from the tribe of Dan.

This, of course, indicates a principle: any form of apostasy inevitably eliminates one from functioning in the plan of God.

We now begin the roster in verses 5-8. There will be no translation of these things because they are well translated and are very simply put. What we have is, first of all, Reuben. He is mentioned first because he is the first-born.

Verse 5, “From the tribe of Judah twelve thousand were sealed. From the tribe of Reuben twelve thousand. From the tribe of Gad twelve thousand.”

Reuben should be mentioned first. Reuben is the first-born; Judah is not. All of a sudden we see immediately that there is a precedence and that this precedence recognises what happened in the formation of the nation Israel. Reuben is the first-born of Jacob. He should receive the entitlements of primogeniture. He lost out because of his sin in seducing Bilhah who was a part of Jacob’s harem and the mother of Dan and Naphthali. He was guilty of incest. It isn’t the incest itself that eliminated him but the mental attitude, the motivation, all that was involved in his spiritual failure and his lack of honour and integrity. Therefore Reuben was guilty of incest, Genesis 35:22-23. But that is not the real reason, incest was merely the result. The reason is stated that Reuben was unstable as water — Genesis 49.

Since he was unstable as water it meant that he vacillated between the cosmic system and the spiritual life as a patriarch. Reuben therefore lost the right of primogeniture.

One of the greatest problems and distractions in life is instability, people who vacillate. One moment they are gung ho for doctrine, the next moment they are distracted by something else. They never get their scale of values straight. They can never seem to put first what is most important. As a result they have vacillating, unstable lives, they are constantly seeking happiness, seeking blessing but they never find it. Reuben had the blessing of rulership but he lost it to Judah. Judah is mentioned first therefore as the ruler of Israel in this verse. This emphasises the importance of the dynasty of David. Jesus Christ was born a Son of David and He will rule Israel forever under that title.

The principle is obvious: The advantage of birth [Reuben] becomes a disadvantage in life when one is involved in the cosmic system, not only with its sin and evil but with its human good as well.

We are born, of course, unequal. We live in a society always where there is inequality, where there is unfairness. There are two reasons for this. First, the devil is the ruler of this world and he gives preferential treatment to his own cosmic slaves. Secondly, the sovereignty of God has made free will or volition the issue in the angelic conflict, which means the impossibility of equality in the human race. Volition is the issue and for volition to function there must be freedom. Where freedom does not exist there is still inequality due to tyranny. Hence, there are two sources of inequality: tyranny sponsored by Satan's cosmic system, and freedom sponsored by the laws of divine establishment.

The third concept is that there is inequality at birth combined with the quality of opportunity, which means that you fail or succeed on the basis of your own volition. However, inequality continues to exist because people who are born with handicaps plug along and succeed, whereas people like Reuben who are born with greatest opportunity fail.

Reuben, therefore, had every advantage at birth. These advantages became disadvantages simply because he was not willing to plug. He was not willing after his salvation to learn doctrine today, tomorrow, the next day. He was not willing to live his life out as unto the Lord and his instability meant loss of his great rank and opportunity. When one is involved in the cosmic system — and that includes its sin and its human good, and inevitably its evil — then that becomes a disadvantage, a handicap. The disadvantages of birth in the case of Judah, Levi and Joseph became advantages through spiritual momentum from doctrine after salvation.

While Judah is the royal tribe and Reuben is the first-born the question arises as to why Gad is mentioned third, even though he is the seventh son of Jacob. Gad means fortune and prosperity. From Genesis 49:19 it is concluded that Gad recovered quickly from defeat and he was never discouraged by temporary setbacks in his life. He regarded every adversity in life as a challenge and never became discouraged and felt sorry for himself. And since Gad means good fortune, good fortune comes to those who regard the adversities of life, not as a basis for complaining, not as a basis for operation cry-baby, not as a basis for indulging in self-pity, but as a challenge to trust the Lord, to apply doctrine and to learn even more doctrine to meet more challenges.

Genesis 49:19, “Gad will be attacked by a company of raiders, he will counterattack at their heels.”

That is the prophecy of Gad. Gad was going to be defeated in an attack by a company of raiders but he had the tremendous flexibility, even though he was down not to give up, and he reorganised and counterattacked at their heels. This is analogous the grace provision of rebound for the believer. There can be no spiritual prosperity apart from the rebound technique. Gad is probably mentioned third in this passage because of the importance of rebound, the importance of flexibility, the importance of understanding the principles of recovery. For us as believers the application is obvious: the Christian way of life, gate one, the filling of the Spirit; gate two, basic impersonal love, the beginning of virtue, honour and integrity; gate three, enforced and genuine humility, teachability in life. These three gates become the support for gate four, perception and application of doctrine; gate five is the principle of love of God; gate six, right man-right woman where pertinent; gate seven, the crystallisation of honour and integrity plus category three love friendship; gate eight is the construction of the edification complex of the soul and spiritual maturity. For us, this is the playing field; this is God’s game plan for the Church Age. We must live and reside and function inside of the divine dynasphere.

So in the very first verse of our roster we meet the first three tribes. “From the tribe of Judah, twelve thousand.” Judah is mentioned first as the ruling tribe. Judah illustrates the principle of being a plugger and therefore — the one who should have been the ruler was Reuben, yet Reuben was too unstable and failed — Judah became the ruler, and it was through integrity and honour and plugging, and the absence of motivating evil such as jealousy, arrogance, bitterness, self-righteousness, guilt complex, etc. All of these things hinder people in life. All of these things have application even to unbelievers as well as to those who have personally trusted in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Then we have Reuben, set aside, put in second place because of instability. You cannot regard the adversities of life in terms of self-pity [which is arrogance, preoccupation with self], in terms of complaining and whining, you cannot feel sorry for yourself and ever have any blessing or happiness in life.

Gad is mentioned third in verse five because Gad represents the true concept of prosperity. The concept is one of continuing to be flexible, to counter attack, to never allow a disastrous situation of any kind to destroy your life but to be completely above these things.

Principle: Every believer who is going to succeed in life must be a spiritual counter-puncher. To be a counter puncher you always punch from a stable position. The secret to punching is the stability of your feet. You have to have your feet on the ground. It requires stability. Reuben was as unstable as water; Gad was stable. You will never be a counter-puncher without the stability of maximum doctrine resident in your soul. You have to counter-punch every time you are in adversity and the Lord has to be more real to you than the personality conflicts of adversity and the circumstances of adversity. So obviously, then, Gad represents the person who utilises the grace of God in perception of doctrine. As long as God gives you life on this earth you must function under the principle of never quitting. Rebound and keep moving fulfils the concept of logistical grace found in Lamentations 3:19-25.

Gad means fortune or prosperity, but that fortune or prosperity comes through grace. Grace gives the opportunity for capacity for prosperity and fortune because grace is always accompanied by humility. Gad was a counter-puncher, he was under pressure but he never allowed the pressures of life to in any way inhibit his application of doctrine. It is the arrogance of the cosmic system which destroys all capacity for blessing. In the Tribulation there will be blessing and prosperity in spite of historical adversity. Furthermore, that blessing and prosperity to positive believers will include capacity for blessing in the midst of great historical adversity.

In verse 5 we have the first three tribes and we learn something about evangelism from them. Judah was the plugger and one thing with the gift of evangelism must recognise because they are tempted not to is to keep studying the Word of God. If there is any criticism of those who have the gift of evangelism today it is, generally speaking, that they have stopped studying. They are ignorant of doctrine.

Then there are those like the tribe of Reuben who have a great personality, the first-born, the ruler, the hotshot. These are not the ones who make it. There is great blessing for those who have the gift of evangelism but they must follow the pattern of Judah and keep plugging.

Verse 6, “And from the tribe of Asher, twelve thousand. From the tribe of Naphthali, twelve thousand. From the tribe of Manasseh, twelve thousand.”

Note that the tribes are not listed according the order of birth as the sons of Jacob. For example, Judah was the fourth son of Jacob. Reuben is the first-born. Gad is Jacob’s seventh son. Asher was the eighth son of Jacob but he appears number four in the order here. Naphthali is the sixth son of Jacob. Manasseh is the eldest son of Joseph and he is mentioned third here in this passage. Joseph was the eldest son of Jacob and Rachel. He was the eleventh born to Jacob.

The 144,000 evangelists never gave up and throughout the entire time of the Tribulation — seven years of every kind of disaster and danger. They refused to surrender, continued to give the gospel, and won thousands and thousands of people to the Lord. Every one of these evangelists survived to the end of the Tribulation under incredible circumstances.

We have noted that the disadvantages of birth belonged to Judah, Levi, and Joseph, but they became advantages through spiritual momentum from the consistent perception of Bible doctrine. While Judah is the royal tribe Reuben is the first-born and therefore he is mentioned secondly in verse 5.

Gad is mentioned third even though he is the seventh son of David. He never gave up no matter how difficult things became. He represents the concept of plugging under grace provision to serve the Lord in spite of failure, in spite of cosmic involvement. Every believer must be a good spiritual counter-puncher. As long as God gives us life, never surrender, never give up. Gad means fortune or prosperity from never giving up. Grace gives the opportunity for capacity for prosperity and fortune because grace is always accompanied by humility. It is the arrogance of the cosmic system which destroys all capacity for blessing and causes people to surrender and to give up in life.

We have to stop and note that Jacob had a harem of two wives and two mistresses. From these four came all of the twelve patriarchs. First of all there was Leah and Zilpa her maid. Then there was Rachel and Bilhah, her maid. Leah had six sons: Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, were the first four. Then two more came a little later. In between was born Issachar and Zebulun. Zilpa had Gad and Asher. Rachel had Joseph and Benjamin. Bilhah also had two, Dan and Naphthali, and if ever there were a couple of real problems these were they.

Since the order in verse 6 is not chronological it is has something to do with the unrestrained historical adversities of the Tribulation. In spite of the historical disasters there will be members of the human race who will believe in Christ, who will have positive volition toward doctrine, resulting in great spiritual momentum. Spiritual momentum or lack of it on the part of Tribulational believers seems to be linked to the order or sequence in which the Tribes are presented here. For example, Judah in verse 5 was first. This implies promotion, high office or success during time of historical disaster. Judah was a plugger and because he was consistent in his perception of doctrine, no matter how great the adversity, he had phenomenal promotion and success.

Here is the principle: No matter how great the adversities may be God honours believers who are faithful in doctrine and He promotes them in time of great adversity. Furthermore, remember that if God doesn't promote you then you are not promoted. Man may promote you but it doesn't mean a thing. For man to promote you when God doesn't means great suffering, pain, a miserable and even a ruined life. In other words, certain positive believers would be promoted in the midst of great adversity and unrest, and the twelve thousand from Judah are illustrations of those who are faithful, of those who learn doctrine as evangelists, and God promoted them.

There will also be many Reubens, believers who have all the advantages of life but after salvation through faith in Christ they were unstable, easily distracted, having a wrong scale of values, negative toward doctrine, living in the cosmic system, preoccupied with self, full of self-pity, pettiness, arrogance, etc.

There will also be some believers who follow the pattern of Gad, whose failures will not hinder their spiritual life. They will be counter-punchers, you can't keep them down. Because of rebound and the utilisation of logistical grace they will recover and keep advancing in the spiritual life. That brings us to verse 6 and Asher. In this verse and in genesis 49:20 Asher depicts the prosperity of positive believers during the Tribulation. In other words, adverse historical circumstances do not hinder the prosperity of mature believers.

According to the prophecy of Genesis 49:21 Naphthali represents the Tribulational believer freed from the trap of sin after the Rapture by believing in Christ. Actually, in Genesis 49 Gad, Asher, and Naphthali all describe the remnant of believers in the Tribulation. Naphthali means “my wrestling” and reminds us of the tremendous spiritual conflict which will exist in the Tribulation, a time of unrestrained adversity and historical disaster. Nevertheless, in spite of that there is great blessing.

Asher means happiness and reminds us of the fact that no matter how horrible the circumstances of life may become we can have the same happiness that we would have in a time of historical prosperity. Manasseh was one of the weakest tribes of Israel, a reminder that helplessness and humility are ingredients for honouring and serving the Lord. Manasseh is the eldest son of Joseph by his Egyptian wife, and since Manasseh and his younger brother Ephraim were adopted by Jacob on his death bed, and both became tribes of Israel, giving to Joseph the double portion lost by Reuben they depict the concept of blessing by association with those who have strength. Joseph had great strength. They were his sons, they were blessed by association. It teaches us the great principle we have studied before in 2 Corinthians chapter 12: Out of weakness comes strength.

Verse 7, “And from the tribe of Simeon, twelve thousand. From the tribe of Levi, twelve thousand. From the tribe of Issachar, twelve thousand.”

Simeon was the second son of Jacob by Leah. He was cruel, Genesis 34:25; he was deceitful and conspiratorial, Genesis 49:6. He was arrogant, he was hot-tempered, he was devoid of mercy, he was full of his own self-importance. Jacob was shocked by the evil performed by Simeon and Levi, and because of the weakness of this tribe it was scattered throughout the land of Israel. The fact that twelve thousand were saved and sealed out of Simeon emphasises the principle of grace throughout human history .

Levi was everything his brother was, arrogant, jealous, vindictive, full of self-importance on the one hand and self-pity on the other, he was cruel and conspiratorial. He was just like his brother but cursing was turned to blessing for Levi because Levi rebounded. From Levi came Moses, Aaron and the priesthood. Levi was appointed to the priesthood, Numbers 18:20-21. The rebound of Levi with his cursing turned to blessing is documented in such passages as Exodus 32:25-29; Deuteronomy 33:8-11; Numbers 8:5-18; 3:5-9.

Here are two brothers, both evil, both cruel, both vile in every possible way. Yet one of them came to the point of blessing; one went out under terrible discipline. The grace of God extended to Levi in Moses plus the Levitical priesthood is extended into the future where 12,000 believers of the tribe of Levi are sealed as Tribulational evangelists.

Issachar means in the Hebrew, “He will bring reward.” This emphasises the fact that God will reward in eternity those believers, whether in the Tribulation or in this dispensation, who are faithful, who are consistent, who remain in a state of humility, who are never bothered by the problems of gate one, cosmic one. What is clearly stated for us as believers in Christ in the Church Age is also implied through Issachar for believers in the Tribulation. Advancing to maturity will be intensified, they will have less time to do it but they will have great opportunity. However, it will require intense concentration, they can't do what believers in the Church Age do now and then — miss Bible class. They will not be able to miss at all. They will advance to maturity even though it is a very short and horrible time in history.

Verse 8, Zebulun was the tenth son of Jacob and the last one by Leah. His name means dwelling or habitation. In the prophecy of Genesis 49:13 Zebulun is described as a haven for ships.” This has a messianic connotation since Galilee was where Joseph and Mary found haven after their return from Egypt. During the Tribulation some of the evangelists will actually have places where people can come after salvation, hear doctrine, grow in grace, without being disturbed by the terrible historical events of that age. In the Tribulation 12,000 evangelists of Zebulun will be a haven for many disaster victims of the Tribulation.

Next is the tribe of Joseph. It is actually a reference to the tribe of Ephraim. However, Ephraim is omitted because he was the tribe which led the revolution against the dynasty of David and the tribe of Judah as the ruling tribe of Israel. Jeroboam, the first king of the northern kingdom of the ten tribes. was from the tribe of Ephraim, 1 Kings 11:26. But using Joseph's name instead of that of Ephraim is very significant because Joseph was a man who never tried to promote himself. Only once in his lifetime did he seek self-advancement and as we have noted it kept him in jail for two extra years. Joseph was a man whose faith in the Lord was so strong, whose application of doctrine was so great, whose personal love for the Lord Jesus Christ was so fantastic that he never got ahead of the Lord, except once. He was a man, therefore, who was laid back, low profile, not pushy, not out in front looking for ways and means to get ahead; not playing the game by normal standards but playing the game by God's standards. In the Tribulation there will be great leaders: the man for the crisis just as Joseph was the man for the crisis in Egypt. In times of historical disaster the solution lies not with the hotshots, the front runners, the loudmouths, but with those who have a steady intake of divine power. Remember: the Word of God is alive and powerful.

Benjamin is the full brother of Joseph, the last son of Jacob. Benjamin means “son of the right hand” which was an obvious messianic reference, a reminder that the Tribulation will terminate with the second advent of our Lord Jesus Christ. And just as Benjamin was faithful to Judah in the great revolution which split the nation so Benjamin will be faithful in the dissemination of the gospel during the Tribulation. Benjamin emphasises the importance of faithfulness and one of the greatest manifestations of integrity, capacity for love.

Again, note that Dan is omitted because of the Tribulational dictatorship coming from the tribe of Dan. Because Dan was easily distracted, because the tribe of Dan was the first one to go into idolatry, because Dan was sincere but never had clear, strong concepts of value, he had an erroneous scale of values and could easily be led astray by anyone or anything.

It should be noted that this passage is also the basis for false teaching from the so-called Jehovah's witnesses, a blasphemous cult which distorts the Word of God.

The passage closes out with a perfect passive participle from the verb sfragizw, "having been sealed." It is translated like an imperfect tense or a past tense.

Verse 9, then comes the phrase meta tauta. That is the preposition meta plus the accusative neuter plural of the immediate demonstrative pronoun o(utoj, "After these things," after the vision of sealing the 144,000 Jewish evangelists for the Tribulation. Since the Tribulation is Daniel's seventieth week and the end of the Jewish Age it is fitting that the evangelists are Jewish, even though there is no Jewish client nation to God until the second advent. This prepositional phrase begins the second section of Revelation 7, the result of Tribulational evangelism.

There is other Tribulational evangelism given in chapter eleven. Moses and Elijah are brought back. Then in chapter fourteen even angels are going to evangelise. But in this passage we have the results of the ministry of the 144,000 Jewish evangelists scattered all over the world. So we have the results of the Tribulational evangelism in verses 9-14. The description of the Tribulational martyrs is the first description of result.

In verse 9 we have a description of the Tribulational martyrs. We have noted briefly the prepositional phrase which begins this passage, meta plus the accusative neuter plural from the immediate demonstrative pronoun o(utoj, correctly translated "After these things." It refers to the vision of the sealing of the 144,000 Jewish evangelists. Since the Tribulation is Daniel's seventieth week, as well as the end of the Jewish Age, it is fitting that the evangelists are Jewish although there is no Jewish client nation to God until the second advent.

We have noted the aorist active indicative of the verb o(raw, translated "I looked." With this we have the connective kai plus the demonstrative particle i)dou, "I looked and behold." With this we have the adjective poluj, meaning large or great, plus o)xloj, "a large crowd." These are the believers martyred during the Tribulation. Add to that the phrase "which no man could number."

The removal of national prejudice in communicating the gospel

That brings us to the categorical removal of barriers to evangelism in the Tribulation. We begin our prepositional phrase. One prepositional phrase encompasses all four categories, e)k plus the ablative of the four categories connected by the conjunction kai. There are four objects of the preposition e)k, each represents a barrier to evangelism; and in this case each represents a barrier of evangelism removed. So we anticipate the removal of national barriers to evangelism, the removal of racial barriers to evangelism, the removal of social barriers to evangelism, and the removal of linguistics barriers.

There is a principle of anticipation broken down into three concepts.

1. In evangelism there must be no national prejudice in the presentation of the gospel.
2. There must be no racial prejudice in the presentation of the gospel.
3. There must be no social prejudice in the presentation of the gospel.

Arrogance plus these three areas of prejudice destroy the effective presentation of the gospel in the three categories: personal witnessing, the evangelistic ministry of those who have the spiritual gift, and national evangelism or missionary activity.

So we begin the removal of national barriers, e)k plus the ablative singular of paj plus e)qnoj, “from all nations.” It is a reference to Gentile nations. E)qnoj is sometimes translated “Gentiles” and sometimes it is translated “nations,” both are legitimate — Gentile nations, therefore a national barrier to evangelism. The principle is that national barriers do not hinder Tribulational evangelism.

The concept

a. The removal of national prejudice in communicating the gospel.

1. From BC 14440 to AD 70, over 1500 years of history, client nation Israel had the responsibility of evangelising Gentile nations.
2. The failure of evangelism and missionary activity was one of the reasons for the three administrations of the fifth cycle of discipline to Israel.
3. It is obvious then that the responsibility of client nation Israel was the evangelism of Gentiles and Gentile nations.
4. While there is no client nation Israel in the Tribulation mass evangelism will be carried out by Jewish evangelists who will present the gospel to Gentiles and Gentile nations.
5. The principle behind this: There must be no national prejudice in the presentation of the gospel. Why did the Jews fail in the past? They became arrogant about their culture and therefore they became involved in cosmic one and cosmic two. As a result they could not evangelise.
6. When Christ was on the cross He was judged for the sins of the entire world, therefore there must be no national prejudice in presenting the gospel.

7. In spite of the fact that anti-Semitism reaches its peak in the Tribulation [Revelation chapter 12] these Jewish evangelists reach thousands and millions of Gentiles in Gentile nations. These Jewish evangelists will be evangelising under the greatest period of anti-Semitism the world will ever know.

8. Furthermore, Jewish evangelists of the Tribulation perform their evangelistic responsibilities without the support of a client nation. National barriers do not hinder evangelism in the Tribulation. National barriers will be up because of extensive warfare during the Tribulation.

The reason that large crowd was one which no man could count or number is because national prejudice was removed from the thinking of the evangelists.

b. The second is the removal of racial barriers.

This is in the next two words, kai plus the ablative plural of fulh, referring to Jewish tribes and therefore to the racial barrier, "and tribes." The Jewish tribes represent racial barriers. Racial barriers do not hinder Tribulational evangelism. In other words, effective and honourable evangelism in the Tribulation is conducted without any racial prejudice. The application should be obvious for our dispensation. Effective and honourable evangelism [speaking of those who have the gift of evangelism and then about the individual as a witness for Christ] demands the removal of any racial prejudice.

c. The third is the removal of social barriers.

Continuing the preposition e)k, and this time the ablative plural of laoj referring to people in contrast to their leaders. Hence, it connotes the common people and it should be translated "the masses." In other words, the concept of social barriers. Principle: Social prejudice is a hindrance to evangelism in any dispensation. Our Lord Jesus Christ had no social prejudice when He was hanging on the cross. He was judged for all classes of society. When it comes to the gospel there is no upper class, there is not lower class, there is no middle class; social barriers are excluded.

d. The removal of linguistic barriers.

This time we have the implied e)k as given by the conjunction kai, and the ablative plural of glossa, "tongues." It refers to foreign languages, "and languages." There is the removal of foreign language barriers in Tribulational evangelism. Since the administration of the 5th cycle of discipline to Israel in AD 70 and the beginning of the times of the Gentiles the Jews have been scattered throughout the world. They live in many nations and in many places. Their cursing is turned to blessing through the mastery of the languages where they live. So these 144,000 Jewish evangelists are capable of communicating in all of the world at that time.

“After these things [the sealing of the 144,000 Jewish evangelists of the Tribulation] I looked, and behold a large crowd which no one could count, from all [Gentile] nations, and [Jewish] tribes, and the masses [the common people], and foreign languages ... ”

Notice the location of these particular Tribulational converts. They are said to be standing, the perfect active participle of verb istemi which means “standing.” The perfect tense here is an intensive perfect in which special emphasis is placed on the results of the action, therefore the existing status quo is intensified. This is an emphatic method in the Greek language for presenting the fact of Tribulational martyrs residing in heaven in their interim bodies. They are there because of these 144,000 evangelists. It is translated like an English present tense but it presents the existing fact far more forcibly. There are two perfect tenses in the participial form which are translated different from the perfect. In the English we translate the perfect by the word “had.” But there are two perfect tenses, one is translated in the present tense, the intensive perfect, and one is translated in the imperfect or past tense. So it is very important to note that the perfect tense has several translations that do not seem to jibe with our English language. The active voice: believers of the Tribulation who are martyred for their faith produce the action. The participle is circumstantial.

With this we have a prepositional phrase, the improper preposition enw pion plus qronoj, “before the throne.” Then we have a connective kai and, once again, the prepositional phrase enw pion plus anion which means, “and before the Lamb.” The throne is mentioned for God the Father because He is invisible; the Lamb is visible to them as the only saviour.

The principle about the Father being invisible but the Son is visible because of His hypostatic union: this concept is found in John 1:18 where Jesus said: “No man has seen God at any time; but God the only Son, the unique Son, who is at the Father’s side, he has made him known.” Cf.. John 6:46; 1 John 4:12. It is only because of the hypostatic union that God the Son is visible. So the invisible member of the Godhead who is seated on the throne is God the Father, and the visible member of the holy Trinity, the Lamb, is visible thanks to the fact that He is in hypostatic union. Therefore the use of the word “Lamb,” not only to emphasise the so great salvation which took place on the cross but also to emphasise the strategic victory and the fact that He is now different from God the Father and God the Holy Spirit. He is coequal and coeternal with them in His deity but in His humanity He is unique, He is different from them.

At this point we have the interim life of the Tribulational martyrs, a subject which occurs frequently in this part of the book of Revelation. These martyrs have a fantastic interim life just as today there is interim life for all those who have died as believers in the Church Age. Interim life is defined as the life of all born-again believers who have died. They have gone to heaven, they are in an interim body, they are recognisable, there is no unhappiness or misery, Revelation 21:4. And, remember, the interim life happiness is for all believers who die; winners and losers are not distinguished in the interim life.

In the remainder of verse seven we have the perfect passive participle from the verb periballw which means to be clothed, “they were wearing.” The intensive perfect dramatised is what we have in this particular case, hence the dramatic perfect tense which emphasises the existing state of the Tribulational martyrs. They are living the interim life. For the person who dies there are three lives. First there is temporal life, the believer on earth. Then when he dies, interim life, the believer in heaven waiting for his pertinent resurrection. Then there is resurrection life. All three of these categories belong to the title “eternal life.” We have eternal life the moment we believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. Note that these categories emphasise the body. We have a physical body in temporal life; we have an interim body in interim life; we have a resurrection body in resurrection life.

The passive voice of the participle indicates the fact that the Tribulational martyrs receive the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial, expressing the attendant circumstances of their martyrdom, an additional fact or thought which is best rendered in the English by the conjunction “and” plus the finite verb, “and they were wearing.” Then there is the accusative plural of two words giving us our direct object, the adjective leukoj, “white,” and then the noun stolh, “robes.” The two words together refer to the interim body. White robes do not always refer to the interim body but they certainly do here. The use of stole rather than imatio emphasises the interim body in heaven prior to receiving the resurrection body. The interim body for the Church Age believer who dies before the Rapture we have noted before in 2 Corinthians 5:8, “absent from the body, face to face with the Lord.” Then we have a connective kai for an additional piece of information. We can translate it either “plus” or “and.” Then the nominative plural subject from the noun foinic, which means a date palm or the branches of a palm tree. We translate it “and palm branches.” And then the prepositional phrase en plus the locative from the noun xeir. And with this we have autoj, the possessive genitive — “in their hands.”

Translation of verse 9: “After these things I looked, and behold, a large crowd which no one could count, from all the [Gentile] nations, and [Jewish] tribes, and the masses, and foreign languages, standing before the throne, and before the Lamb; and they were wearing white robes, and palm branches were in their hands”.

Why do they have palm branches in their hands? We see something of the historical outlook for Israel from their schedule of feasts. There are seven feasts which the Jews celebrated as a client nation to God. They are divided into two sections. There were the feasts regarding the first advent, four of them, and we have the feasts of the second advent, three of them. The Passover represents the work of our Lord Jesus Christ on the cross. It was generally celebrated around 14 April. Next came the feast of unleavened bread which was a seven-day feast and it represents rebound and the advance to maturity. It was in the week 15-21 April.

During that time there was the feast of the firstfruits, the first Sunday after the Passover, and it portrays the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ, the importance of eternal relationship with God in resurrection. The integrity of God provides great reward after resurrection. Then there was the feast of Pentecost which is fifty days after the Passover.

That means it was approximately the first week of June. It represents the setting aside of Israel as a client nation to God through the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline. Then came a great gap between the first set of feasts and the second. There were no feasts between June and October and this represents the time when the Church Age, the dispensation of the royal family of God, is inserted. Then came the feasts of the second advent, three of them: the trumpets is the termination of the fifth cycle of discipline, the restoration of Israel as a priest nation, and it is related to the second advent; the feast of the atonement, Yom Kippur, which is the fulfilment of the unconditional covenants to Israel [the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic and New Covenants], and this is what pre-millennialism is all about; the feast of the tabernacles which depicts the Millennial reign of Christ.

The feast of the tabernacles has a great deal to do with the fact that these people, these Tribulational martyrs, are holding palm branches in their hands. In Psalm 118 the real key is in verses 14-26. In the Psalm 118 we have what might be called the ancient national anthem of Israel because it was the anthem of the two advents of Christ and it recognised Jesus Christ as eternal God. On verses 14-26 we will see the national anthem as it pertains to the palm branches in their hands.

Verse 1, "Give thanks" is the first phrase, or "Be thankful," or "Have a thankful mental attitude." It is the hiphil perfect of the verb jadah. The hiphil stem is the causative active voice. You have to be motivated to be thankful, you have to be caused to be thankful, and the motivation or the cause comes from Bible doctrine resident in the soul. The key, then, to presenting the ancient national anthem of Israel is Bible doctrine resident in the soul of the believer. There is a relationship between advancing to maturity and the blessing of the client nation. It was true of Israel; it is true of us. For advancing to maturity forms the pivot and all blessing of the nation is blessing by association, therefore the necessity of the believer advancing to maturity. Thanksgiving is one of the principles that signifies capacity for life, capacity for love, capacity for happiness. Ungrateful people are never happy. Lack of gratitude indicates arrogance, whereas humility and gratitude go together.

"to the Lord, for he is good" refers to His divine integrity, for the word tob in the Hebrew is absolute good; "For his grace [chesed] is eternal."

Verse 2, "O let Israel say, His grace is eternal," a reference to the attitude of the mature believer. Recognising the eternity of grace he makes the application from eternity back into time. One of the greatest applications in time of disaster is to go from your knowledge of eternity back into time. The application of doctrines pertaining to eternity are brought into time so that you conclude under the faith-rest drill the principle that is found in Romans 8:28, that all things work together for good because God is good, God has perfect integrity. Your life is in God's hands in time and therefore no matter what happens to you, whether disaster or great prosperity, there is no place for being depressed, for giving up, for being disturbed. The only people who can recover from the disastrous consequences of their bad decisions are believers with doctrine resident in the soul, doctrine in the form of its rationales.

Verse 4, "O let those who are in awe of the Lord say," those who respect the Lord, and in this dispensation those who respect the Lord function at gate five of the divine dynasphere, respect for the Lord. All true love begins with awe or respect. It is maintained by respect converted into awe, "His grace is eternal."

Verse 8, "It is better to take refuge in the Lord than to trust in man." Inevitably in our lifetime we are going to have conflict between the human viewpoint presented by some friend or loved one and the divine viewpoint which is presented by the Word of God. This is a test we all face when we learn something from the Word and then someone we love or respect comes up with some human viewpoint concept that is contrary to that divine viewpoint. So there the conflict is on and the conflict has to be resolved by going with divine viewpoint as you see it, the three stages of the faith-rest drill, the function of impersonal love, and you come to this conclusion: "it is better to take refuge in the Lord than to trust in man." Only God can solve our problems and we can enter into the solution by advancing to maturity.

Verse 9, "It is better to take refuge in the Lord than to trust in politicians."

In verses 14-18 we start getting our explanation of that word "the palm."

Verse 14, the recognition of Israel's future. Remember that the nation Israel today has no future, it is not a client nation. There is a nation Israel when the Jews are regathered at the second advent and it has an eternal future.

"The Lord is my power and my song," we are noting the words of the national anthem. We do not have the tune here we have the lyrics, "because he has become my salvation [or deliverance]."

Now the two advents, and strangely enough, because the Jews confuse the two issues, in this Psalm the first time we see the two advents the second advent is mentioned first.

Verse 15, the second advent. "The sound of joyful shouting, therefore deliverance is in the tents of the righteous." The "tents of the righteous" is a reference to the feast of the tabernacles, the feast that denotes the second advent and the Millennial reign of Jesus Christ. The righteous are those who have God's righteousness. In other words, those who are believers at the second advent will fulfil the feast of the tabernacles.

Now we go immediately to the first advent. The first advent will come before the second advent or the cross must come before the crown. "The right hand of the Lord [title for Jesus Christ] has accomplished integrity."

Verse 16, “The right hand of the Lord is exalted.” The exaltation began with the resurrection, ascension and session of Christ, “the right hand of the Lord has accomplished integrity.”

Verse 17, this refers to three subjects: to David, who is the human writer in reversion recovery; to the nation Israel, anticipating their restoration from historical disaster of the fifth cycle of discipline; and Jesus Christ in resurrection. “I shall not die, but live.” David was under the sin unto death but he is going to live. For the Lord Jesus Christ it is a reference to His resurrection. It is also a reference to the nation of Israel as a client nation to God. They are dead right now. There is a Jewish nation but it is not a client nation and cannot be, we are in the times of the Gentiles; but it is a reference to the fact that in 70 AD when Israel died as a client nation to God it will live again as a client nation — second advent. It must be remembered that the Jews are very enthusiastic about these things, so enthusiastic that they are going to have palm branches in their hands.

— “therefore I will narrate the works of the Lord,” because of these wonderful things which are going to take place.

Verse 18, “The Lord has disciplined me severely,” a reference to David in reversionism, a reference to Israel under the fifth cycle of discipline, a reference to Christ on the cross — He was disciplined in the sense that God the Father first of all imputed all of our sins to Him and then judged them — “but he has not given me over to death,” the restoration of Israel in the Millennium. At this point the Jews sang this much of the national anthem on the feast of the tabernacles, and then they approached the temple. As they entered the temple they sang verses 19-21. Again, remember that this is a hymn that was sung both at the Passover and at the feast of the tabernacles. As a matter of fact this hymn, Psalm 118, was sung at the last Passover in the upper room by the disciples, after the Eucharist. The hymn was also sung at the dedication of the second temple. It was sung at all ceremonies involving any kind of parade to the temple, Isaiah 51:11.

Verse 19,20, entering the temple. “Open to me the gates of righteousness; I shall enter through them, I shall give thanks to Jah [Lord]; this is the gate of the Lord,” they are entering the temple, “the righteous [imputed righteousness] enter through it.”

Verse 21, “I shall give thanks to you, for you have answered me; because you have become my salvation [and my deliverance].” That was sung as they entered the temple.

In verses 22-23 we have the first advent of Christ; in verses 24-26 we have the second advent of Christ, and it is here that we have the palm branches beginning to shape up.

Verse 22, the first advent. “The stone [Christ] which the builders [client nation Israel] rejected has become the head of the corner.” The head of the corner is the place where the two walls come together. Israel was the client nation and all of a sudden they come to a dead end, they come to the corner. Now the Church Age has client nations. Christ is the head of both Israel and the Church. That is what it means to be the head of the corner. The two walls are Israel and the Church; Christ is the ruler of Israel and the head of the Church. This passage is quoted three times in the New Testament — Acts 4:11,12; 1 Peter 2:4; Mark 12:10.

Verse 23, “This is from God,” from the integrity of God the Father, from the resurrection of Christ: God the Father resurrected the humanity of Christ, “It is marvellous in our eyes.”

Verse 24, then they skip to the second advent: “This is the day the Lord has made,” reference to the fulfilment of the integrity of God to Israel at the second advent. The day of the second advent is the day that the Lord has made; it is a reference to the day of the Lord, the time when Jesus Christ will regather Israel and will fulfil the unconditional covenants, “We will rejoice and be glad in it.”

Verse 25 will be sung by the Jews on the day of the Lord, but it was sung prophetically every time they had the feast of tabernacles. “Ah now Jehovah, save [deliver] us now please.” That is the corrected translation, but unfortunately verse 25 has a problem. It is mistranslated in Mark 11:9 where they gave us the Hebrew, the hiphil imperative and they transliterated it, hoshiana, by the word Hosanna. And that is the mistake, they never should have translated it “Hosanna.”

Psalm 118; Mark 11:12

Psalm 118:25, the psalm sung by the Jews at the second advent continues: “Ah now Jehovah, save us now please.” We have seen that hoshiana is transliterated in the King James version of Mark

11:9 as Hosanna. Hoshiana means “save please.” “Ah now, Jehovah, send us prosperity please.”

It should be noted that on the first Palm Sunday the second line of verse 25 was omitted. They were afraid to sing this line so they just simply cut it out. They were afraid that the Romans would take it the wrong way.

Verse 26, “Blessed is he who enters in the name of the Lord; we have blessed you from the house of the Lord.” Again, on that first Palm Sunday they omitted the second line of this verse: “we have blessed you from the house of the Lord.” It will be demonstrated from two other passages that the Jews tampered with this hymn, this great national anthem. This hymn was distorted by arrogance, by self-righteousness, by emphasising the political instead of the spiritual. These Jews wanted the crown without the cross; they wanted the second advent without the significance of the first advent. Of course, God always demands the cross before the crown. The maladjustment to the integrity of God was the problem with these people. In other words, they wanted political reform without eternal salvation — the political before the spiritual. Without the integrity of God political reform is meaningless. Freedom and prosperity in a nation can only be meaningful and permanent when related to the integrity of God and a pivot of mature believers. There is no historical blessing for Israel in the generation of our Lord Jesus Christ in His first advent.

Mark 11:1-9, the first Palm Sunday

First of all the Jews put verses 25 and 26 of Psalm 118 first, and they left out the first advent which we saw in verses 23 and 24. It was the Passover and therefore time to sing the national anthem. Jesus left Jericho and arrived in Bethany on Friday evening after sunset. From Friday evening after sunset to Saturday evening after sunset we have the Jews' Sabbath. Jesus spent a very quiet Sabbath in Bethany. That evening He had supper in the house of Simon the leper, Matthew 26:6. Other guests included Lazarus, Martha and Mary his sisters, and also present were the twelve disciples. It was at this dinner that Mary anointed the feet of our Lord for His burial, John 12:3. On that same Sabbath afternoon many people had come out from Jerusalem because everyone was talking about our Lord Jesus Christ. Since the resuscitation of Lazarus from the dead people wanted to see Jesus and they wanted to see Lazarus, and word had passed through Jerusalem that they were together in Bethany, John 12:9. This caused envy on the part of the chief priests, the religious leaders of Israel, who held a conference to plot the death of our Lord, John 12:10-11. This crowd from Jerusalem formed the nucleus of the crowd that followed Jesus from Bethany toward Jerusalem on that first Palm Sunday.

The next day was Sunday, the Jewish first day of the week, Palm Sunday. That is where we pick up in Mark 11:1-9.

In verses 8-10 we have the reaction of two crowds. In verse 8 we have homage to the King in the terms of two phrases: "Many spread their garments in the road." That was one thing they always did on the feast of the tabernacles. Now this is approaching the Passover; this is the week before the Passover; this is not the feast of the tabernacles. Then there was the recognition of the King; "while others spread palm branches in the road which they had cut in the fields." The reason for this is instead of celebrating the Passover, they didn't want the Passover, they wanted the feast of the tabernacles. They didn't want the first advent, they wanted the second advent. So they were doing a very strange thing, they were trying to put the tabernacles out of place and put it in with the Passover. This is April, not October. They want to by-pass the cross because they want the crown. So they got into the Palm branch business because of all of the great prophecies regarding Christ the Branch. Christ is the God of Israel; Christ is the Son of David; Jesus Christ is the Branch who will come out of the stump of Jesse, Isaiah 11:1; Jeremiah 23:5,6; Zechariah 3:8; 6:12,13.

Also they did another very strange thing. They sang from their national anthem, verse 9, "and those who went before [the crowd coming from Jerusalem to meet Jesus], and those who followed after [the crowd from Bethany], were shouting, "Save us now!" not Hossana. In other words, "Ah Jehovah, save us now please." And then they skipped "blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord.” Notice: Hosanna means “save now,” what they wanted was deliverance, not salvation. They don’t want the cross. They are not saying “We want salvation,” they are saying “We want deliverance from the Roman empire.” The religious crowd wanted to control without interference from the Romans and so they immediately skip everything and go to the phrase, Psalm 118:25, the second advent phrase: “Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord.” And then they added: “Blessed is the coming kingdom of our father David.” That isn’t found in Psalm 118. They had been told to add that so that Christ would get rid of the Romans for them.

So the crowd distorted the scripture, they omitted two lines of the anthem. First of all they omitted the last line of Psalm 118:25, “O Lord, send us prosperity now.” This was what the Jews wanted but were afraid to mention it since there were Roman patrols on the road. They wanted historical prosperity, including freedom from the Roman government and administration. They wanted political and government reform apart from adjustment to the justice of God through salvation. They wanted everything without God’s plan, first advent and second advent. They wanted political reform but they didn’t want it in the plan of God.

There was a second phrase which they omitted. In Psalm 118:26, the second line, “We have blessed you from the house of the Lord.” This line is not quoted because it requires adjustment to the justice of God through salvation. How can you bless from the house of the Lord unless you are born again? is the point. The crowd had not accepted Christ as saviour, they had rejected Him as saviour. They wanted Him as the ruler of Israel, the Son of David. They wanted Him as a political figure, not as the source of eternal salvation. By the omission of these two lines Israel was saying they wanted the Millennium without the cross. The apostate Jews automatically rejected the first advent, they wanted religion rather than salvation. Religion always teams up with politics to destroy the issue. Political reform without spiritual adjustment is meaningless, useless, hopeless, a dead end.

Satan tried to tempt our Lord Jesus Christ to put the crown before the cross in Matthew chapter four, the unique temptation. Every temptation offered to our Lord in Matthew four was unique. They were temptations we will never have to face. Satan tried to keep our Lord from going to the cross in that chapter; the crowd on the first Palm Sunday tried the same thing, with Palm branches. In other words, these were palm branches out of place, that is why it is called Palm Sunday; it is religious Sunday.

So the issue is made clear: the cross must come before the crown. Man must adjust to God’s plan by faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. That is where it started. Naturally, our Lord did not appreciate what the crowd did and He went into the temple. What did He say? He gave a message, Mark 12:1-11. Verse 1, “He began to speak to them in parables.” Parables are the result of apostasy. As a result of the apostasy of Palm Sunday Jesus now appears to believers because a parable gives an outward literal sense of a matter but requires doctrine in the soul to make a proper application. Only the believers could understand this.

“A man” refers to God, the integrity of God, the plan of God, “planted a vineyard [Israel as a client nation to God, Isaiah 5:1-7], and put a wall around the vineyard [the divine protection of the client nation], and dug a vat under the wine press [the anticipation of production from the client nation, evangelisation in the nation, the spiritual growth of the believers in the nation, missionary activity from the nation], and built a tower [freedom through military victory], and rented it out to tenant farmers [the Jews of Israel] and went on a journey.”

Verse 2, “And at the harvest season he sent a servant [the Old Testament prophets] to the tenant farmers, that he might receive some production of the vineyard from these tenant farmers [the Jews of the client nation].”

Verse 3, Israel’s rejection of salvation meant their rejection of doctrine, which meant that generally there was a very small pivot. “And they took him, and beat him, and sent him away empty -handed”.

Verse 4, “And again he sent another servant [prophet or communicator of doctrine], and they wounded him in the head, and dishonoured him.”

Verse 5, “And he sent another, and that one they killed; and so many others, beating some, killing others,” the history of Israel down to the time of our Lord. One of the last to be killed was John the Baptist.

Verse 6, and then the first advent: “He had one more, a beloved son [Jesus Christ, first advent]; he sent him last of all, saying, ‘They will respect my son’.”

Verse 7, “But the tenant farmers [Jewish client nation] said to one another, ‘This is the heir; come, let us kill him, and the inheritance will be ours’.”

Verse 8, “And they seized him, and killed him, and threw him out of the vineyard.”

Our Lord is telling them what is going to happen next week! A week from the time our Lord uttered this message in the temple He would be resurrected.

Verse 9, “And what will the Lord of the vineyard do [to Israel as a client nation]? He will come and destroy [fifth cycle of discipline] the tenant farmers [Israel in AD 70], and will give the vineyard [client nation Israel] to others [Gentile nations].”

All of that is a parable, and now He says to them that this is the wrong time to be holding palm branches. “You are a little mixed up, you want the second advent without the first advent.” This is not the time for the palm branches, this is the time for the cross, for salvation.

Verse 10, then He says to them: “Have you not read this scripture [Psalm 118:22,23]:

‘The stone which the builders [Israel] rejected, this became the chief corner stone;

This came from the source of the Lord, and it is marvellous in our eyes’?”

In other words, He said that the first advent had to come first, this is not a time for palm branches, there can be no Millennial kingdom, there can be no future for Israel unless He went to the cross. Therefore Psalm 118:22,23 must precede what the crowd had been shouting while they held the palm branches in their hands. They reversed the order because they had rejected Christ as saviour, they had ignored the real issue. This is the difference between the true and the false Jew. The true Jew believes in Christ, receives Him as his personal saviour. The false Jew does not. The false Jew is manifest by holding a palm branch in his hand the week before Christ went to the cross.

The true Jew is that Tribulational martyr in Revelation 7:9. Many of these Tribulational martyrs were Jews, and how do we know? They had palm branches in their hands, they knew what was coming up next. They were on schedule, they could read correctly historical trends. The Jews of our Lord's day could not because they did not accept Christ as saviour. The Jews of the Tribulation who believed in Christ are not only in their interim state but they're in their interim state holding palm branches in their hands, indicating that they knew the schedule, that they were not confused like the Jews of Palm Sunday.

So now we can go back to our passage in Revelation chapter seven, understanding the last phrase of verse nine. These people are believers and they are able to understand the historical trend. They know that the next time that they will be on earth they will be there at the second advent. They are going to come to the wedding supper of the Lamb as the friends of the groom. They are holding palm branches in their interim body because they will be present in their resurrection body the next time they set foot on the earth with our Lord. Therefore the palm branches at the end of verse nine have great significance, and they have great application to us. We cannot read historical trends in the time in which we live unless we are first born again and, secondly, faithful to the Word of God.

There is one other thing before we leave verse 9, and that is the three categories of eternal life.

The doctrine of the three categories of eternal life

1. John 3:36 — "He that believeth on the Son hath eternal life; but he who does not believe on the Son shall not see [eternal] life, but the wrath of God abides in him". Attitude toward Christ determines whether we have eternal life or not. To believe in Christ is eternal life. "Believeth [pisteuw]" is in the present tense. You have eternal life at the very moment that you believe in Christ.

2. Obviously then the believer has eternal life the very moment he puts his trust in the Lord Jesus Christ.

3. For the believer who experiences physical death, the person who dies physically in time, prior to resurrection, there are three categories of eternal life.

- a. The believer has eternal life while living on the earth — temporal life-eternal life.

b. The believer has eternal life after death while living in heaven and waiting for his pertinent resurrection — interim life-eternal life.

c. The believer continues to have eternal life forever and ever in a resurrection body — resurrection body-eternal life.

4. For the believer who does not experience physical death but comes under the category of the mortal taking on immortality there are two categories of eternal life: category #1, temporal life-eternal life during the time that he lives on this earth; category #3, resurrection life-eternal life. This is because he doesn't die physically. That would be the Rapture generation.

5. For each stage of eternal life there is a body. Category #1, temporal life-eternal life: the believer occupies the physical body of corruption with the old sin nature. Category #2, the interim life-eternal life: the believer has an interim body, a body which is perfect; no old sin nature, not subject to ailments, residing in heaven, in perfect happiness, and waiting for his resurrection body. Category #3, the resurrection life-eternal life. The believer occupies a resurrection body forever and ever.

6. Therefore eternal life exists in two or more categories of life. For the person who doesn't die, two; for the person who dies, three.

7. Eternal life can only be possessed while the person lives on earth in temporal life. You cannot receive eternal life once you die. If you die an unbeliever, that is the last chance you have of getting eternal life. The only opportunity for salvation exists now, therefore eternal life always begins in time.

8. Therefore these categories do not apply to unbelievers, to the person who rejects Christ as saviour, John 3:18.

9. Eternal life belongs to the believer only and is never without a body.

10. Each category of eternal life reveals a new aspect of God's perfect integrity and God's perfect plan.

11. Only the interim life-eternal life, category #2, makes no distinction between winners and losers in the Christian life, and provides sublime happiness for every category of believer involved. In other words, there is no excuse for offering anything but the greatest of comfort to loved ones at a funeral.

Verse 10, the expression of their worship. We begin the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated "then." With this we have the present active indicative of the verb krazw which can mean to cry, to cry out, to shout. Here it means they shouted. "They shouted and said" is the idiomatic translation, but when krazw is used with is used with the instrumental adjective megaj and the noun fwnh, literally it means that they cried out with a loud voice. But the idiom simply means they shouted.

Then follows the circumstantial present active participle of the verb legw, translated “and said.” The expression of their worship was vocal. The voice expresses the thoughts of the frontal lobes, and since they are dead the fact that they can shout indicates that they have an interim body. The interim body definitely has vocal cords. The fact that their shout has content indicates that the soul resides in the interim body in the third heaven.

The content of their worship is now expressed. It begins with the generic use of the definite article h(. It is used with a noun which is regarded as a specific category of theology known as soteriology. It regards salvation as a category distinct from all other categories. The generic definite article may or may not be used in the translation. Here we do not translate it in the English. The generic definite article represents the whole realm of soteriology, but since soteriology becomes pertinent a little later on we will simply note in passing that this includes the doctrine of reconciliation which is that part of salvation which emphasises man. Man is reconciled to God through the work of Christ on the cross; or the doctrine of propitiation which is directed toward God. God the Father is propitiated by the work of Christ on the cross; or the doctrine of redemption which regards us as being in the slave market of sin and our freedom was purchased at the cross, and the coin of the realm is called the blood of Christ. Therefore, by faith we simply walk out of the slave market of sin; or the doctrine of atonement which regards salvation also from the standpoint of our sins being judged on the cross.

With this we have a dative of possession from qeoj and, of course, the dative of possession is a Greek idiom. The general possession connotation comes in the genitive. As a Greek idiom it has no equivalent in the English. The dative of possession is the dative of personal interest and it is particularised to the point of ownership. So we say: “to our God,” the possessive genitive of e)gw. In other words, this is an idiom and it should be correctly translated into the English, “salvation belongs to our God.” That is a reference to God the Father. God the Father is the author of the divine plan; God the Father is the author of salvation. It also emphasises that part of salvation known as propitiation. God the Father is propitiated or satisfied with the work of Christ on the cross. And inasmuch as He is satisfied with the work of Christ on the cross there is no work that we can add to salvation. When people seek to use some form of human works to gain salvation they become religious and religion is the devil’s ace trump. Christianity is not a religion. In religion man by man’s efforts seek to gain the approbation of God, but in Christianity it is the antithesis. God does the work of salvation and we enter into salvation by the expression of our positive volition in a non-meritorious way.

Next comes the articular present active participle from the verb kaqhmai which means to sit. It is translated, along with the prepositional phrase e)pi plus qronoj, “to him who sits on the throne.” “Salvation belongs to our God [God the Father] who sits on the throne.” This indicates the fact that Jesus Christ is visible as the God-Man but God the Father is invisible.

Then comes the dative of possession from a)rnion, correctly translated “Lamb.” The Lamb has a dual connotation: not only the saving work on the cross but an emphasis on His strategic victory of the angelic conflict. The dative of possession means that salvation belongs to Jesus Christ, the Lamb, as well. God the Father planned salvation but God the Son, the Lamb, executed the work of salvation on the cross. God the Holy Spirit reveals salvation to the human soul which is otherwise incapable of understanding spiritual phenomena as an unbeliever.

Corrected translation: “Then they shouted and said, Salvation belongs to our God [God the Father who planned it] who sits on the throne, and to the Lamb [God the Son who executed it in hypostatic union on the cross].”

One important fact about these Tribulational martyrs: they understand all the doctrines pertaining to salvation. They were not only saved by faith in Christ but they were exposed to very accurate evangelism. They were evangelised with Biblical facts, not with emotional nonsense. They not only understood the issues of salvation but they responded with personal decisions, faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. The message of salvation must be accurate if the ministry of God the Holy Spirit is to be accomplished. There must be accurate information that God the Holy Spirit can use.

The principle behind all of this is the principle of the book of Revelation. The book of Revelation is not designed to tell you what the stock market will do next Thursday. The purpose of the book of Revelation is to demonstrate not only what happens in history, an accurate historical text book from the closing of the canon of scripture, but it is the final testimony of our Lord Jesus Christ, Revelation 19:10. And it is a reminder to us not to be carried away with morbid curiosity but to relate them all to our Lord Jesus Christ, for the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy.

Verse 11, the worship of the elect angels which accompanies this cry given by the Tribulational martyrs. Here we have the classification of the worshippers.

We have a sequential conjunction again and it introduces an additional thought so we translate in “Furthermore.” With this we have the nominative masculine plural from paj, “Furthermore, all.” And then we have a parenthetical nominative plural from a)ggeloj, and with it the generic use of the definite article to comprehend a category. These are elect angels. “Furthermore, all the elect angels.” Then we have a pluperfect active indicative from the verb i(stemi, and the pluperfect is generally translated like the imperfect so we translate it, “Furthermore, all the elect angels were standing.” This is the intensive use of the pluperfect, it presents the reality of a fact which enables it to be presented with more force than the aorist would do but it is translated in the English by the imperfect. The active voice: elect angels produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the presence of elect angels in the throne room of the third heaven.

Then we have a dative singular from kukloj which is used as both an adverb and an improper preposition and it means “around.” With this we have qronoj again. Then we have another kai and we have a selection of elect angels who are going to be mentioned, “and around the angelic staff officers.” Those are the 24 “elders,” the presbuteroj. Then we have zwwn for the four angelic heralds.

Then we have the phrase, “they fell on their faces and worshipped God.” The aorist active indicative of piptw which means to fall, “falling on their faces.” The culminative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results — the worship which will be studied in the next verse. The active voice: the elect angels in the throne room of the third heaven produce the action.

Note that the mental attitude of worship in any type of creature so involved, humility, gratitude, capacity for love, capacity for life and happiness, appreciation which comes from maximum knowledge of Bible doctrine. In other words, worship is fun if you know what it is all about. These attitudes are developed through the ministry of God the Holy Spirit, the perception of doctrine. In other words, residence and function inside of the divine dynasphere.

Principle

1. Every action of God, every grace policy of God, results in worship in heaven. [Not on earth because believers are ignorant of doctrine].
2. The elect angels worship in heaven when the 144,000 Jewish evangelists are sealed. They worship when the martyrs arrive. In other words, the importance of worship on earth because obviously anything that is done in heaven and can be done on earth gives great importance to that which can be accomplished on the earth. In other words, angels in heaven are worshipping right now, therefore if angels are worshipping and we are commanded to worship and we are told how to worship then obviously worship ought to be a part of our lives on this earth. And the fact that God has given us the privilege that angels do not have: when angels are operating on this earth they are passing our judgement, they are protecting you, they are functioning as your guardians, they have a lot of jobs but it doesn't include worship. The only ones who can worship on earth in this phase of the angelic conflict are human beings.
3. The result in heaven is the worship of Tribulational martyrs because they are the beneficiaries of the great evangelistic thrust of the 144,000 Jewish evangelists. There is now a tremendous response to their ministry and we find Tribulational martyrs worshipping God along with elect angels.
4. The worship expressed by the converts of the 144,000 Jewish evangelists was the subject of the previous paragraph, verses 9-10. Added to the worship of these converts who have been martyred for their faith is the worship now expressed by elect angels of the throne room of God. In other words, the angels are going to show us. We are going to learn now from the prophecy how the angels worship in heaven.

5. The importance and classification of angelic worship has been previously noted, Revelation 5:11-14, preceded by the worship of the 24 angelic staff officers and the four angelic heralds, Revelation 5:8-10. Worship, therefore, is the normal expression on the part of born again creatures. It is the normal expression of personal love for God on the part of regenerate and elect creatures. Regenerate creatures refers to mankind; elect creatures refers to the saved angels. Needless to say, then, worship is the expression of creature personal love for God. The prerequisite for worship is salvation, after that the things that accompany salvation: the filling of the Holy Spirit, knowledge of Bible doctrine, positive volition toward the plan and the purpose of God, the experience of divine blessing as a believer [including divine deliverance], cognisance of divine faithfulness. After death, the possession of an interim body for blessing in heaven while waiting for the resurrection body. The real challenge to worship is while we are still living in the devil's world.

The challenge to worship while living in the devil's world [while we are still physically alive].

1. God has provided for all believers the necessary factors for worshipping God in time.
2. These include (in the Church Age) the commission of the royal priesthood — every believer is his own priest, the divine dynasphere with emphasis on gate one, the filling of the Spirit; gate three, genuine humility; gate four, perception and application of doctrine; gate five, love of God eventually parlayed into occupation with Christ (if you are positive); gate eight, the ultimate expression of worship in time. It is not emotional, it is rational.
3. Furthermore, worship takes time and the time for worship demands both the proper scale of values, both motivational and volitional.
4. Certain things are declared worship which are not generally recognised and accepted by orthodox Christianity. For example, concentration is a form of worship when you are concentrating on the teaching of the Word of God, perception of doctrine under the filling of the Spirit, submission to the teaching ministry of some pastor for learning the content of the Word.
5. In other words, worship is learning before loving God.
6. All expressions of worship are based on the application of Bible doctrine, whether the Eucharist or singing a hymn now and then, testifying or witnessing, giving.
7. The Eucharist has no meaning apart from understanding Christology and soteriology. In other words, ritual without reality is meaningless. The same holds true for any phase of worship.

That is why it says at the end of verse 11 “they fell down on their faces.” This indicates something very interesting: they had faces in heaven, e)pi plus the accusative plural of proswpon. Notice where the face is when you worship in heaven. It is not looking up, it is down. And then it says that they worshipped, the aorist active indicative of proskunew. The aorist tense is constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the elect angels in the throne room of God, including the 24 general staff officers and the four angelic heralds, produced the action. The declarative indicative is for reality. The dative singular indirect object of qeoj, they worshipped God.

Translation: “Furthermore all the elect angels were standing around the throne, and around the angelic staff officers [the 24 elders], and around the four angelic heralds. Then they fell on their faces before the throne and they worshipped God.”

The Christian way of life is the unique system in the plan of God throughout all the ages of human history for never in any other dispensation was the population of the world left without prophecy. The Church Age is the dispensation of no prophecy, all historical trends are determined by the attitude of the individual believer toward Bible doctrine. In all previous dispensations prophecy was used to express historical trends. After the Church Age is terminated with the Rapture or the resurrection of the Church never again will this type of life exist. This is the only dispensation in which the believer at the moment of salvation receives 36 things, the only dispensation in which the believer holds two commissions from God as of the moment of his salvation, the first being his priesthood and the second being his ambassadorship. The priesthood of the believer gives each one of us the opportunity of representing himself before the Lord, of living his own life as unto the Lord, whereas the ambassadorship gives each one of us the privilege as members of the royal family of God of representing our Lord Jesus Christ on this earth.

We continue from verse eleven by noting that human worship is the expression of the believer’s personal love for God. How can you personally love the invisible God? Through Bible doctrine. We see Him who is invisible through our understanding of Bible doctrine. As such it can only be expressed, then, inside of the divine dynasphere. And as the function of the royal priesthood inside of the divine dynasphere demands perception of Bible doctrine as a prerequisite it is impossible for anyone who is born again to truly worship God unless he resides in the divine dynasphere — that means the filling of the Spirit — and he has learned enough doctrine to actually personally love God. Personal love is only a virtue directed toward God.

While worship is the priestly function of the believer it is not a true function apart from the interlock of the first four gates of the divine dynasphere. Worship function, then, is personal love for God at gate five.

There is a principle behind worship. God is a spirit, which means He is invisible to us, and “those who worship Him must worship Him in Spirit,” i.e., in the power of God the Holy Spirit, gate one of the divine dynasphere, “and in doctrine,” gate four of the divine dynasphere. This combination gives us a personal love for God so that we can fulfil the principle, “having not seen we love.” Capacity for worship must precede the function of worship. You can only give what you have. If you as a believer have doctrine in your right lobe you can express worship commensurate with what you know about doctrine. If you have personal love for God from Bible doctrine you can express that in the various forms of worship, the most important form being concentration. If the believer can apply the doctrine of soteriology and Christology he can participate in the communion service linking the bread and the cup to the Lord's first advent. If you have time — and all of us have time — you can give time in the assembly of the local church, in the listening to Bible doctrine, and even functioning in the various administrative and teaching aspects of the local church. If you have money you can give money but never give money unless motivated from doctrine.

Another principle of worship: everything we have belongs to the Lord and therefore everything we have is secure. When we part with what we have in worship, whether it is our energy in concentration under the ministry of the Spirit, or whether it is money, or some function in the local church, of whatever it is, these expressions of worship are recognised in heaven. And because worship simply expresses our love for the Lord we still have, and always will have, the object of our love. Personal love for God expresses itself in worship. If you do not have the filling of the Spirit, of course, it is all meaningless; the filling of the Spirit is as simple as your rebound.

In verse 11 the angels fell down and worshipped. There is a principle involved here. Every action of God, every grace policy of God results in some form of worship in heaven where they are so aware of these things. The point is that worship in heaven as described in the book of Revelation should be a challenge to our worship in time since we are given so much opportunity to do so. Therefore, of course, if worship in heaven is doing this then why not worship on earth? The elect angels worship in heaven when the 144,000 Jewish evangelists are sealed, and as a result there is great evangelism in the Tribulation. The result in heaven is the worship on the part of the Tribulational martyrs who were the beneficiaries of this great evangelistic thrust. The importance therefore of understanding worship in heaven and relating it to worship on earth presents a real challenge to us to utilise time in the devil's world to fulfil the function of worship. The challenge to worship while living in the devil's world is the central application of verse eleven. God has provided for all believers the necessary factors for worshipping God in time, and these include the commission of a royal priesthood — every believer is his own priest; the provision of the divine dynasphere with its gates.

Certain things are declared in worship which are generally recognised and accepted by all orthodox Christians: concentration and perception of doctrine under the filling of the Spirit, submission, therefore, to the teaching ministry of the pastor and the extrapolation of systematic theology from his messages. In other words, worship is learning before loving — learning doctrine before loving God. All expressions of worship are based upon the application of doctrine, whether in the Eucharist or singing or testifying, or giving, or any other form of legitimate worship.

Verse 12, we have the content of worship. The first thing we note about this verse is that we have the word "Amen" twice, the ritual of worship. But not just ritual in itself because the word means to believe. "Amen" is used in liturgy of worship but it is also for the purpose of a solemn declaration.

So we begin by noting the present active participle of the verb legw, and with it we have the Greek a)mhn, taken from the Hebrew amen. It means that now that we have brought together some of the concepts of worship that we have noted in other chapters as well as in verse 11 we are now ready to see the ultimate expression of worship in heaven. And what we see is something we can apply and we can use provided, of course, we understand. This is a futuristic present tense in the participle, it denotes a worship event which has not yet occurred in the third heaven but is regarded as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as already occurring. The active voice: the elect angels perform this worship in conjunction with the Tribulational martyrs and they do so for our benefit. Here is a future worship that hasn't occurred yet but we are going to benefit from studying it. This is a circumstantial participle best rendered into English with the conjunction plus the finite verb.

Verse 12, the first phrase we have translated: "And they said, Amen." While worship includes emotional response it emphasises doctrinal thinking. Therefore it is necessary to know what you are saying or expressing in worship. The content of worship is thought, and not only thought but doctrinal thinking. This thought, of course, is related to our love for God. All bona fide worship is based on cognisance of Bible doctrine and its expression in the power and the filling of the Spirit. The key to worship, then, is personal love for the invisible God. There is no personal love for God apart from perception of doctrine and neither born again believer of the human race nor elect angel can enter into the true meaning of worship apart from knowledge of God which is knowledge of Bible doctrine. Again, cognisance of Bible doctrine, the revelation of God is necessary for the function of true worship. The expression of personal love of God in worship simply cannot exist apart from the ministry of God the Holy Spirit, John 4:24. While this worship is expressed in the throne room of the third heaven, as we have noted, the real issue in the angelic conflict is the expression of worship on earth. The true expression of worship glorifies God and therefore the function of worship in heaven becomes the pattern for worship on earth. This is the eschatological implication of the expression of worship which follows.

What follows in verse 12 are the seven characteristics which are ascribed to God as an expression of worship in heaven, and therefore to be used in that sense as far as we are concerned, with one exception.

"And they said, Amen," and then we begin a new phrase, and in this new sentence we have seven characteristics of worship. The first is found in the Greek word e)logia which means praise, noble speech, and while blessing is rarely the meaning in Classical Greek it does find that meaning in the Koine Greek. The best translation would be either praise or blessing, blessing and praise belong to God. Note that in each case there is a definite article but the definite article is generic and therefore not translated since it simply declares a category of worship. In giving to God praise you have to have the ability to do so, you have something about which to praise Him. Praise means understanding God.

The next word, doxa, “and glory,” is the second category of worship. This is the category which is impossible for us to give, it belongs to the angelic creatures and those who are in heaven. People in heaven can fulfil this; people on earth cannot. This is a category that the angelic creatures in heaven can give because of their eternal relationship with God. They have glory, therefore they can give glory to God.

The third category is described in the word sofia, correctly translated “wisdom.” However, when you get to wisdom you have to understand that this wisdom is related to God. This is not human wisdom, this is wisdom which belongs to God. In order to fulfil this aspect of worship today we have to understand the divine attribute of God’s knowledge. Worship centres around the wisdom of God. Our lives depend upon God’s wisdom; we are here because God is wise. We are blessed in times of adversity because God is wise.

It all begins with the fact that there are three aspects to divine knowledge. First of all there is God’s self-knowledge. Since God is eternal this means that His knowledge is eternal. Since God is sovereign it means that in His sovereignty, related to His knowledge, He is infinitely superior to any wise person who has ever lived. That includes the angelic realm as well as the human. The difficult thing for us to understand is the fact that time has absolutely nothing whatever to do with God’s wisdom. Our understanding and whatever wisdom we may accumulate simply is related to time. The future is as perspicuous as the past to God. In fact the past and the future were known to God before they existed. Since God is a person He possesses both self-consciousness and self-determination in relationship to His self-knowledge. Therefore God as a person acts rationally and in compatibility with His absolute will and perfection. In other words, God is Himself and He knows Himself to be beyond comparison with any human being or any creature of any kind. Because God is infinite His knowledge has neither boundary nor limitation. Everything that will ever be knowable in human history and everything that is knowable in angelic history was known to God billions of years ago. And what does this mean? If God’s knowledge is perfect it becomes important for us to be related to it in our daily lives. The wisdom of God has been reduced to writing for us, something that other generations in the past have not had. Because God is infinite His knowledge is without boundary or limitation. Therefore God’s knowledge is never complicated with ignorance, absurdities, stupidities, or emotional reaction.

In worship the wisdom of God becomes simply an expression of your understanding of how God has laid out the plan for you and for me for blessing, for great happiness, for a meaningful life. The only blessing we can have in life is what we can extrapolate from His perfect knowledge through perception of Bible doctrine. The issue in worship is omniscience, God’s knowledge of everything that has ever happened or ever will.

“And they said, Amen.” This is a liturgical Amen and it follows a definite pattern. E)ulogia is the first, praise belongs to God. You cannot praise someone whom you do not understand, therefore the understanding of God is the most basic concept of worship. Secondly, there is glory. You can’t give glory to God until you are in that category for doing so which we have previously noted. Then there is wisdom. We can worship Him on the basis of understanding something of His wisdom. The wisdom which belongs to God is the total sum of His knowledge, the knowledge of God is manifest in the doctrine of divine decrees.

The next category of worship comes under the word e)uxaristia which means gratitude or thankfulness. When people are not grateful in life you can count on it that they are not grateful to God. The thing that destroys gratitude and therefore capacity for life is arrogance. People who are preoccupied with themselves have no capacity to appreciate others. For the new believer thanksgiving or gratitude begins with God's faithfulness in logistical grace provision. One of the first things we must understand as new believers is logistical grace and the logistical grace rationale. The application of the logistical grace rationale toward man is obvious — the faith-rest drill. The application of the logistical grace rationale toward God is the worship of thanksgiving. For the mature believer thanksgiving or gratitude continues with God's faithfulness in the provision of supergrace blessing. Capacity for gratitude increases with perception of Bible doctrine.

Next is timh, "honour." Then comes dunamij, correctly translated "power." In this dispensation dunamij refers to the divine dynasphere, God's game plan for the believer. In the Tribulation it refers to other sources of power available to the believer under the circumstances of historical disaster. Dunamij always means God has provided a plan for your life and choosing that plan inevitably leads to fantastic blessing in a place where blessing should technically not occur, in the devil's world in time.

The next is i)sxuj, another synonym for power. It means strength, might, power, ability. When used in a doxology, as here, it emphasises the eternal being and the attributes of God.

"And they said, Amen: Praise, and glory, and wisdom, and gratitude [thanksgiving], and honour, and power, and ability [divine attributes]..."

And then we have the final phrase. It is an idiom all the way, none of it can be translated literally, to qeo h(mon e)ij touj a)iwnej ton a)iwnon. A)mhn. If it was translated literally it would be "to our God, to the ages of the ages. Amen." And that isn't what it means at all. It is simply an idiom which means "to our God forever and ever. Amen." The idiom has the dative of possession and we translate it, "belongs to our God forever and ever. Amen."

Corrected translation of verse 12, "And they said, Amen: Praise, and glory, and wisdom, and gratitude [thanksgiving], and honour, and power, and ability [divine attributes], belong to our God forever and ever. Amen. "

The fact that angels were uttering this worship does not in any way detract from the fact that we can derive great information from it.

That brings us to a new paragraph in verses 13 and 14 where we have the identification of the Tribulational martyrs. This becomes very important because in chapter eight we are going to see the answer to their imprecatory prayers. Verse 13 provides the question; verse 14 will provide the answer.

Verse 13, we have the adjective numeral e(ij, meaning “one.” With this we have the partitive genitive from the noun presbuteroj which refers to a category of angels. There are 24 of them and they are a part of the angelic general staff. Translation: “Then one of the angelic staff officers” — “answered,” the aorist passive indicative of the verb a)pokrinomai which means to answer, to reply, and even to respond. It is not necessarily preceded by a question expressed but is a reply to a reaction in the context. You will note that while this is translated “answered” or “responded” there was no question, therefore this is simply a reaction to the content of worship. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The passive voice: this is a deponent verb, passive in form, active in meaning, one of the angelic staff officers who already knows the answer is the one who is given answer. This is a part of wisdom itself: when you know the answer but listen to the answer again you are a wise creature. The indicative mood is declarative for a simple statement of fact.

With this we have a present active participle of legw, a circumstantial participle translated “and said.” Then we have the dative singular indirect object from e)gw which brings us back to the human writer of Revelation, John. It is correctly translated, “and said to me.” The dative indirect object indicates the one, the apostle John, as the human writer of the book of Revelation, and it is in his interest that the question is asked.

Then we have the answer. Instead of finding the question we have first of all the answer. The nominative plural is of the immediate demonstrative o(utoj, “these.” He wants to know who these human creatures are. “These” he starts out. He doesn’t start out with a question, Who are these? He starts out in the Greek saying, “These who are wearing white robes,” the articular perfect passive participle of the verb periballw, correctly translated “wearing.” The perfect tense is an intensive perfect, it dramatises what has been said here, hence the dramatic perfect tense which emphasises the existing state. These angels who have been worshipping God for a long time are amazed to see in their presence now those who are not angels but members of the human race. Furthermore, they are not yet in their resurrection bodies, they are in the interim bodies. The dramatic perfect emphasises the results of the action, therefore the results of their martyrdom is the perfect happiness enjoyed at this time. Who are these happy people? The interim body, described in verse 9 as “white robes, is a body of great happiness, there is no distinction between winner and loser.

Therefore the dramatic perfect which emphasises the results of the action and as a result of their martyrdom they now have perfect happiness in heaven. The passive voice: the Tribulational martyrs receive the action of the verb, an interim body in heaven while waiting for their resurrection bodies. The participle is circumstantial expressing the attendant circumstances of their martyrdom, the possession of an interim body and great happiness after their death. The interim body is described by the accusative plural direct object composed of two words, the adjective leukoj, “white,” and the noun stolh, “robe.” So they are wearing white robes, the interim body.

Now we have the actual question: the nominative masculine plural from the interrogative pronoun tij, who,” “these who are wearing white robes, who are they?” With it we have the present active indicative of the verb $\epsilon\lambda\theta\eta\mu\iota$. This is the pictorial present tense, here are all of the human beings in heaven and, who are they? “and from where have they come?” is the last phrase in verse 13.

Translation: “Then one of the angelic staff officers responded, and said to me [he knows the answers, he is simply doing this for our sake], These who are wearing the white robes, who are they? and from where have they come?”

$\text{Po}\eta\eta\eta$ is the interrogative adverb, “from where,” plus the aorist active indicative of $\epsilon\lambda\theta\eta\mu\iota$, “have they come.” The aorist tense is a constative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety, referring to a fact or action extended over the period of the Tribulation. The active voice: the question is about Tribulational martyrs, and this is an interrogative indicative which assumes that there is an answer to the actual question.

The plan of God for the believer in the Lord Jesus Christ is basically the same in every dispensation. The only exception is the Church Age where God has provided a more detailed opportunity in the power plant of the divine dynasphere. Rank has its privileges and one of the privileges of the royal family of God is to live in a time when it is easier than any other time in history to live the spiritual life, the plan of God for time.

The doctrine of imputation

— the function of the justice of God toward mankind and related to the plan of God for mankind. Imputation functions as an act of condemnation or blessing.

There are two kinds of imputations: a real imputation and a judicial imputation. In a real imputation the justice of God imputes under the principle of antecedents or affinity. In other words, in a real imputation there are two factors. Factor one: what is imputed to factor two with which it has affinity. Factor one: what is imputed from the justice of God; factor two: the home or the target for the imputation. In other words, there is an affinity between the two factors.

In a judicial imputation the justice of God imputes what is not antecedently one’s own. In other words, in a judicial imputation you have factor X imputed without affinity, there is no real affinity, there is no home or target for the imputation. Therefore there is only one factor which is in existence, that which is being imputed. Consequently great emphasis is placed on the source of judicial imputation which is always the integrity of God.

The seven imputations in the plan of God are primarily related to the Church Age. They also have application to believers in the Tribulation. But you never start with the believer. The first imputation in history is the imputation of human life immediately after birth to its target which is the human soul. This is a real imputation, it has two factors: factor one is human life. We receive human life, it was given to us at birth or, you might say, after birth. There is no human life in the womb. God imputed human life in each case. The fact that God imputes human life to its home or the target, the soul, after birth implies that God has a plan for every member of the human race. Whether that plan is realised or not depends entirely upon the volition of the individual.

The life that is imputed to the human soul resides there forever. There is no cessation of life in the human soul. That is true in time as well as in eternity. Human life is in the soul. At physical death the soul leaves the body and goes to its designated place, heaven or Hades. In other words, when God imputes human life and it resides in the soul forever it is indestructible. There is nothing man can do to separate the life from the soul and that includes suicide. Furthermore, even God Himself cannot and will not separate human life from the soul. God made the imputation. The fact that you and I have life is a gift from God.

Conclusion from the first imputation: God has a plan for your life; God has a plan for every person, and only negative volition at the point of God-consciousness and gospel hearing can hinder the fulfilment of that plan. Simultaneously there is a second imputation that occurs. Imputation number one: human life is imputed to the human soul, therefore human life resides in the soul forever. Imputation number two: Adam's original sin is imputed to its home, its target, the genetically-formed old sin nature. There is affinity between human life and the soul; there is affinity between Adam's sin and the old sin nature since Adam's original sin is the origin of the old sin nature. The justice of God takes Adam's original sin and imputes it directly to that to which it has affinity, the genetically-formed old sin nature. Just as there is affinity between life and the soul so there is affinity between Adam's original sin and the old sin nature. Romans 5:12 gives us the fact that Adam's original sin is the original old sin nature. Adam's original sin is the origin, it created, as it were, the old sin nature. Therefore there is an affinity with antecedents dating back to the original sin of the Garden of Eden.

While the woman was just as guilty she was deceived in the transgression and therefore her sin is not the basis for that imputation, it is Adam's sin. The old sin nature originated, then, from Adam's sin because Adam knew exactly what he was doing and it is now transmitted to 23 male chromosomes which fertilise the female ovum at the point of copulation. The female ovum has 23 perfect chromosomes; the male has 23 sinful, imperfect chromosomes. The imputation of Adam's original sin to the old sin nature is a facsimile of Adam at the time of his fall. This is a real imputation because it has two factors. Factor one: Adam's original sin; factor two the old sin nature which is genetically-formed from the 23 male chromosomes. Therefore, human birth or the beginning of human life consists of two simultaneous imputations from the justice of God. This is the wisdom of God for condemnation must precede salvation, and because of that anyone who doesn't have the opportunity of personally believing in Christ — they die too soon, they do not reach accountability — is already condemned. They were condemned at birth and that condemnation of Adam's original sin, being imputed to the genetically-formed old sin nature, guarantees that if they die before reaching accountability they automatically go to heaven because condemnation must precede salvation. There is no need for salvation apart from condemnation.

So the imputation of Adam's sin at birth is the basis also for spiritual death — Romans 5:12-21. No one is condemned on the basis of his personal sins, and that becomes a very important factor. In Romans 6:23 it says. "The wages of sin is death." That means that at the moment of birth Adam's original sin was imputed to the genetically-formed old sin nature. Notice: Personal sins are not the basis for the wages of sin. Personal sin is a reality but the thing that condemns us is the imputation of Adam's sin.

The wisdom of God is quite obvious here because those who die after child birth are automatically saved. Those who die before accountability are automatically saved and those who never reach accountability because of some mental deficiency are automatically saved. That is because they were condemned before any of these factors became a reality.

The imputation of Adam's sin at birth is the basis of spiritual death. No one is condemned on the basis of his personal sins and that means that all personal sins are not judged by God when they occur because they were all judged at one time, at the cross. They were reserved for the cross. All personal sins were imputed to Christ on the cross and that is when God judged them. That is the basis for the saving work of Christ on the cross, and that is a spiritual death, not a physical death. Christ died physically because His work of spiritual death was completed. So the non-imputation of personal sins to the individual reserved them for the cross. Therefore personal sins is not the basis for spiritual death, it is simply one of three manifestations of the old sin nature. Hence, we are born physically alive [the imputation of human life] and spiritually dead [the imputation of Adam's sin]. These are the two imputations at birth.

There is one exception to this, the birth of the humanity of Christ. All the cells of the human race are contaminated by the old sin nature. There is only one exception and that exists through meiosis and the function of polar body. Through the function of meiosis and the function of polar body there are 23 chromosomes which are thrown off in the ovum leaving 23 uncontaminated chromosomes in the female ovum prior to fertilisation. These 23 uncontaminated chromosomes are free from the cell contamination of the old sin nature. This phenomenon in the female is based on the fact that the woman was deceived in the first transgression — but was still guilty. While both the man and the woman are carriers of the old sin nature only the man can transmit the old sin nature through fertilisation of the female ovum. But should the woman receive 23 uncontaminated chromosomes, i.e., virgin pregnancy, then the one who is born is born with the imputation of human life to the soul, but minus the imputation of Adam's sin because there is no genetically-formed old sin nature. The old sin nature is formed genetically through the 23 male chromosomes.

Mary was a virgin when she became pregnant but she still had an old sin nature. She was not sinless. The virgin pregnancy was induced by God the Holy Spirit who fertilised the ovum of Mary with 23 perfect chromosomes. If that had not occurred then there would be no salvation. Jesus Christ had to come into the world without sin, He cannot bear the sins of the world if He has any sin of His own. If Adam's original sin had been imputed to Christ at birth it would have to be imputed to the genetically-formed old sin nature. But a virgin pregnancy knocked out the genetically-formed old sin nature. The 23 chromosomes came from God the Holy Spirit. He produced them and fertilised the ovum. In the meiosis and polar body there were 23 uncontaminated chromosomes there, so the virgin pregnancy resulted.

At the moment of birth our Lord entered into the prototype divine dynasphere, designed for His protection but not to keep His volition from normal function. By living for 33 years inside the prototype divine dynasphere He was able not to sin, and because He was God He was not able to sin. Jesus Christ was tempted far beyond any human being who ever lived. He resisted so that He could go to the cross and bear our personal sins and be judged for them.

There is a third imputation. All the sins of the world were judged at the cross, the ones of the past and the ones of the future. They were all imputed and judged. But there wouldn't be any Lord to believe in had He committed one sin, which He did not.

Men and women both have an old sin nature but the reason women have one is because they have a human father. The old sin nature is received through the man. Jesus Christ is the exception because of the virgin pregnancy.

Human good and evil could have been imputed as well since they are manifestations of the old sin nature but this did not happen. They were rejected at the cross so that human good and evil can continue to be an issue in history. Only sin was judged at the cross.

The second judicial imputation is the one which is described in 2 Corinthians 5:21 — “For he [the Father] made him [Christ] who knew no sin to be sin on our behalf, that we might become the righteousness of God in him.” All blessing that comes to the believer in any dispensation comes because of judicial imputation number two. In judicial imputation number two there is no antecedence, just as in number one. In judicial imputation number one our sins are imputed to Christ on the cross and judged. In judicial imputation number two God takes one half of His holiness or integrity [composed of His justice and righteousness] that is, His perfect righteousness, and at the moment that we believed in Christ He imputed that righteousness to us. By imputing that righteousness to us He set up the great pipeline. The justice of God is on one end and the righteousness of God is on the other end, the righteousness of God now indwelling us. All blessing of any category is imputed to us, not because we have lovely personalities, not because we live a good clean life, not because we give money to the church, not because we do any form of good deed, but because we have His righteousness. All blessing comes down this pipeline from the justice of God to the righteousness of God, and the blessings increase as we go from ignorance of doctrine to cognisance of doctrine because cognisance of doctrine increases our capacity and, therefore, because of an increased capacity God can bless us without destroying us. If God gave us everything we wanted right now it would destroy us. We would self-destruct without capacity.

This imputation makes possible the believer becoming the recipient of tremendous blessings from God. It also makes it possible for God to love the believer. That is because God loves His own righteousness. We possess His righteousness, God loves us. Grace, then, is the policy of the justice of God in imputing blessing to the righteousness of God. The principle is always the same: righteousness demands righteousness, justice demands justice; what the righteousness of God demands the justice of God executes. All of this is based on the fact that we have received at the moment of salvation this fantastic imputation.

The imputation of divine righteousness, the second judicial imputation, is also true in the Tribulation. This imputation of divine righteousness which sets up logistical grace blessing and supergrace blessing is the subject in the middle of Revelation 7:14.

Verse 14, the whiteness of the robe is the interim body for these believers of the Tribulation are martyrs and in heaven; the washing of the robe is +R.

We start with the connective conjunction kai which introduces a consequence of what precedes, "Consequently." Then we have the perfect active indicative from legw, "I said," followed by the dative singular indirect object from a)utoj, "to him." The vocative follows, the vocative singular of kurioj. Kurioj can be translated "lord" when deity is involved; when humanity is involved "sir" is better, "Consequently I said to him, Sir [or My Lord]," and with it we have the genitive from mou, "My lord," the one that belongs to me. Then we have the perfect o)ida used as a present active indicative and it is translated "you know." The pronoun "you," su , refers to someone on the angelic general staff. There are 24 elders or staff officers in the angelic order of battle. Obviously the question was not asked for his benefit because the angelic general staff know the answer. The question is inserted by the angelic staff officers to John for the purpose of amplification and clarification. The point is, we must know. It should be noted that the vocative of curio, the genitive from e)gw, "My lord," is a term of respect and recognition of his authority for this staff officer is teaching John this part of the book of Revelation. John as a human being recognises the order of rank in the army of elect angels. The angelic staff officer, one of 24 elders, is obviously a keen observer of human history and in his wisdom he anticipates the need for clarification. Therefore he asks the question of John, not for his sake but for your sake and for mine, the generation of believers who would live during the Church Age and require an expanded answer. After all, the book of Revelation was written for us as royal family of God, not for the believers of the Tribulation, not for Millennial believers. This is what is said in Revelation 22:16, "I Jesus, have sent my angels to testify to you these things [the content of Revelation] for the churches. I am the root and offspring of David, the bright morning star." Note that this is addressed to the churches. Cf.. Revelation 19:10.

We are studying a lost battalion of people in the future, people whose lives are very significant, people who are going to have maximum impact in a short period of time between their personal faith in Jesus Christ and the day they are martyred by one of the many trends of the Tribulation. They only have a short time to glorify the Lord and they succeed. They also have a tremendous prayer life, they pray that God will bring vengeance on those who destroy them, and God will, chapter eight. They have a very short spiritual life on earth and a relatively short interim life before they receive their resurrection bodies. But the point is: it isn't how long you live or it isn't how short you live that is the issue, it is how much happiness and blessing and dynamic impact you have during that time. When you live too long and stretch it out day after day, month after month, year after year, unless you are really with doctrine you are going to have wide emotional swings between success on the one hand, boredom on the other, and you are going to be looking for your capacity for life. Some of you may have already had success and yet your success is meaningless because you are really not happy.

We are studying a rather phenomenal group of people, the first converts of the evangelism of the Tribulation. We have already noted in chapter six under the fifth seal where they offered their imprecatory prayers, now we are studying them under other conditions. These people are the victims of historical disaster in the Tribulation but since there are no accidents in the life of any believer they are recorded in a very significant way. The dynamics of their dying is only exceeded by the dynamics of their imprecatory prayers and the fantastic time they have in heaven in their interim bodies. So they are standing before the throne and before the Lamb, and they are wearing white robes — the interim body in heaven after death — and palm branches in their hands. The palm branches signify their anticipation of their resurrection bodies and the Millennial reign of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Verse 14, the verse where all of these things come together. “ ... These are they [the martyrs] who have come out of the great Tribulation, furthermore they have washed their robes...”

This is where we pick it up: the present active indicative of e)imi, “these are,” these people exist, these people have purpose. There never has been a person in the human race for whom God didn’t have a purpose. Human life is imputed by God the Father and therefore life has purpose, meaning and definition. If this becomes obscure then it is because of negative volition.

With this we have articular present middle participle from the verb e)rxomai, “these are they who have come.” The retroactive progressive present denotes what has happened in the past and continues into the present [i.e. the present of the Tribulation]. It is translated by the English perfect tense, and the fact that it is retroactive progressive present means it has application to us even as it is an historical fact of the future, therefore a prophecy. The middle voice: the subject acts with a view toward participating in the results of the action, hence the direct middle. This is what is called the participle of simultaneous action with the main verb e)imi and therefore translated: “these [martyrs] are they which have come out.” Then we have the great Tribulation, e)k plus the ablative of megaj and qliyij. Qliyij means tribulation and can apply to any period of disaster in history but with megaj it refers to a dispensation, Daniel’s seventieth week which occurs after the Rapture of the Church and terminates with the second advent of Christ. Coming out means they died, and even though they died violent deaths they died without any pain. E)rxomai indicates that.

At this point three factors are found in the last phrase of this verse. Factor one: the imputed divine righteousness in time. At the moment we believe in Christ God’s righteousness is imputed. Second factor: the interim body of eternity after death. The third factor: the saving work of Christ at the first advent. These three things are designed to make life in time liveable and, in fact, extremely happy regardless of circumstances. Add to that the fact that as soon as we die we have an interim body and great happiness, and all of this because of the saving work of Christ. These three are brought together in the last phrase.

The first of the factors: the blessing of imputed righteousness in time, the connective kai provides additional information and is translated “furthermore.” Then we have the aorist active indicative of the verb plunw which means to wash, “furthermore they have washed.” The culminative aorist tense views the Tribulational believer’s salvation through faith in Christ in its entirety. In other words, it gathers it up into one entirety the moment that these people believed in the Lord Jesus Christ, but it regards it from the viewpoint of its existing results. Therefore the culminative aorist emphasises this part of the entity. In other words, the result is the imputation of divine righteousness. To every believer in the Tribulation, as to us in this dispensation, as to all believers in the past, e.g. Abraham believed in the Lord and it was imputed to him for righteousness.” It is therefore the existing results of the imputation of divine righteousness and, of course, the resultant justification at that moment. At that moment we are justified because when we receive the imputation of God’s righteousness, we also receive the imputation of eternal life and we are justified or vindicated in God’s sight.

The second factor is the fact that the justice of God is one half of divine integrity, His perfect righteousness is the other half, and that imputation sets up the pipeline for all blessing in time. There are two categories of blessing here: one is the logistical grace blessing, the other is supergrace blessing. So the justice of God imputes to these Tribulational saints through divine righteousness all of these blessings whether they earned it, deserve it, or not they receive it. That is logistical grace. The active voice: the Tribulational believer produces the action of the verb: through the imputation of divine righteousness at the moment of salvation he is “washed.” The washing is the imputation of divine righteousness and its implication. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of doctrine, in fact a dogmatic statement of several doctrines. What is washed is said to be the robes, the accusative plural direct object from stolh. With it is the possessive genitive of the intensive pronoun a)utoj, the intensive pronoun used as the third person pronoun and translated “their,” “furthermore, they washed their robes,” the imputation of divine righteousness at the moment of salvation. This means imputation and, therefore, justification, the imputation of divine righteousness; it also sets up the system for logistical grace blessing. The principle of logistical grace support is the imputation of provision from the justice of God to the righteousness of God. Hence, the imputation of divine righteousness not only means salvation but it means grace provision, everything that they will need to handle the situation in the Tribulation. The washing of the robes refers to the imputation of God’s righteousness at the moment they believe in Christ. Hence, this phrase emphasises salvation in time plus God’s faithfulness to each one of these believers in time.

The second category is the blessing of the interim body in eternity. They were “washed” at salvation; they now have a white robe, the aorist active indicative of leukainw, which means to make white, “and they have made them white.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, it takes the fact of the interim body extended over the portion of time from their death to their resurrection. The active voice:

the Tribulational martyrs produce the action of the verb in their interim body. The white robe or the interim body is previously noted in Revelation 6:11. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the interim body after their martyrdom. The fifth seal of the Doomsday book of the Tribulation, Revelation 6:9-11, describes this same interim status.

With this we have the accusative plural direct object of a)utoj, again it is the intensive pronoun and it refers to the interim body, it is translated “them,” “they have made them white.” This is the interim body after death.

Finally we have the saving work of Christ on the cross. This is mentioned in one prepositional phrase at the end of verse fourteen, e)n [by] plus the instrumental from the noun a(ima [blood], “by means of the blood.” Then we have a descriptive genitive from the noun a)rnion, correctly translated “of the Lamb,” “by means of the blood of the Lamb.” This emphasises the sacrifice of Christ on the cross. When instead of explaining detail propitiation or reconciliation or redemption or imputation, you want to cover salvation very briefly, the word “blood” is used.

Corrected translation of verse 14: “Consequently I said to him, My Lord [the teaching angel], you know. Then he said to me, These are they who have come out of the great Tribulation, furthermore they have washed their robes [the moment of faith in Christ], and they [the Tribulational martyrs] have made them white by means of the blood of the Lamb [the saving work of Christ on the cross].”

The word “blood” is one of the more misunderstood words in the Bible. Sometimes blood is literal, sometimes it is figurative, and therefore the literal and the figurative use of blood becomes a very important subject.

There are three figurative uses of water in the Bible and there is one figurative use of blood. For example, in the use of water salvation is used in Isaiah 55:1; Revelation 22:7. Water is used for the Holy Spirit in John 7:37-39; water is used for the Word of God in Ephesians 5:26 and 1 John 5:8. So when we come to passages such as 1 John 5 and also where it says they pierced our Lord’s side with a spear and out came blood and water, both the water and the blood have literal significance there. There is one figurative use of blood and that is a reference to the spiritual death of Christ on the cross, but our Lord also physically bled on the cross and that is literal blood. So the literal blood of Christ refers to His physical or his somatic death on the cross — 1 John 5:6. Blood here is literal and it refers to blood in the human body after death, and it is a reference to our Lord’s somatic death on the cross. John 19:34, one of the soldiers pierced His chest cavity [the Greek word pleura, the word from which we get pleurisy, means chest cavity not His side]. This is important because this indicates that our Lord died physically.

In John 19:30 our Lord did not bow His head as it says in the King James version, He pushed His head forward, and that was so the Roman spear would penetrate His chest cavity and not just His diaphragm. This was demonstration of the fact that our Lord died physically. This is literal blood, not the blood we have at the end of verse 14 where it says “by means of blood our Lord saved us”. That isn’t talking about the blood and serum that came out after the Roman soldier penetrated His chest cavity with a spear. In John 19:30, "When Jesus, therefore, had received the wine he said, 'It is finished' [salvation was completed while He was alive]," and that is where the spiritual blood of Christ comes in.

In John 19:33-34, "but coming to Jesus, when they saw that he was already dead they did not break his legs; but one of the soldiers pierced his chest cavity with a spear, and immediately there gushed out blood clots and serum." This demonstrated that the true humanity of Christ was dead and that He did not bleed to death on the cross. When a person dies from excessive loss of blood these blood clots and serum do not form. So there was and is the literal blood of Christ but it has no direct relationship to His saving work on the cross. Therefore the blood clots and serum is not only a witness to the true humanity of Christ in hypostatic union but at the same time medical proof that our Lord did not bleed to death. But it must be remembered that He did bleed from His hands and feet before the blood coagulated and this means that the literal blood of Christ is always associated with His physical death on the cross which we simply call His somatic death. His literal blood was still in His corpse and gushed out when the chest cavity was pierced from the Roman spear.

The blood that we have in our passage in revelation 7:14 refers to the spiritual blood of Christ, the saving work of Christ on the cross. It relates back to the animal sacrifices where the literal blood of an animal was used to portray the saving work of Christ on the cross.

The death which is involved in verse 14 when it says "by means of the blood of the Lamb" refers to our Lord's spiritual death on the cross. This death is related to the figurative blood of Christ which refers to His saving work on the cross. Just as sins were imputed to the animal on the altar in the Old Testament so all the sins of the human race were imputed to Christ on the cross and judged by God the Father. Cf.. 1 John 1:7 which is a reference to rebound and a reference to the figurative blood of Christ, a reference to His spiritual death on the cross, because the work of Christ on the cross bearing our sins and being judged for them has a dual connotation. It is the basis of eternal salvation and afterward it is the basis for all rebound. When we name our sins or cite our sins, which is what "confess" [o(mologew)] means, "he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleans us from all unrighteousness" because we are citing or naming to God a sin which has already been judged. That is the basis of rebound. So the judgement of our sins on the cross is the basis of our so great salvation and it is also the basis for recovery of fellowship, recovery of the divine dynasphere, the rebound technique. And the judgement of our sins on the cross is described under the term "the blood of Christ" or, as we saw it in the Greek, ai(ma).

When redemption is discussed as a doctrine it is also related to blood: "in whom we have redemption through his blood", says Ephesians 1:7. This is figurative blood referring to Christ's spiritual death on the cross. Cf. Revelation 1:5; 1 Peter 1:18. The figurative blood of Christ refers to His saving work on the cross, His spiritual death. The literal blood of Christ refers to His physical or somatic death on the cross because His work of the first advent was finished. Hence, the blood describes both the spiritual and the physical deaths of Christ on the cross. The passages we have noted are describing His saving work. The Greek brings this out because a(ima has both a figurative and a literal connotation. When someone bleeds, that is literal. When our Lord bled on the cross that was literal. The reason that blood is used in a figurative way to express the saving work of Christ on the cross is to relate it to the Levitical sacrifices, 1 Peter 1:18,19. Romans 5:8,9 describes the figurative blood of Christ or the saving work on the cross when it says, "But God demonstrated his love toward us in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us." When Christ died physically He didn't die for us. The physical death was because His work was finished. He died for us when our sins were imputed to Him on the cross and judged. That is spiritual death.

Literal animal blood was used in the Old Testament sacrifices to portray the spiritual or figurative blood of Christ on the cross. The blood was the figurative blood which links the Old Testament ritual of the Levitical sacrifices with the historical fulfilment of the work of Christ on the cross, i.e. the saving work. The blood was used for a representative analogy in which the physical death of the animal on the altar represents the spiritual death of Christ on the cross.

The reason literal blood is used in the Old Testament, the animal blood, is because blood is the seat of animal life, Leviticus 17:10-14. In that passage it is very clear that when you cut the throat of an animal his breathing causes him to push the blood out through the throat and he dies in that way. "Any citizen from the house of Israel, or any alien who lives among them, who eats any blood, I will judge that person who eats blood, I will cut him off from the people." They were not to eat blood. "For the life of the creature is in his blood." This is animals, not human beings. Our life is in our soul, "and I have given it to you on the altar [the animal sacrifice] to make atonement for your souls; for it is the blood which makes an atonement for one's life." The blood of the animal contains the soul of the animal. This is not true in human beings, just in the animals. Hence, the animal life resides in that blood. So when the priest cut the throat of that animal it bled to death. Its soul is in that blood, that is the way it dies. The life of a human being, however, is in the soul, not in the blood. Human life resides in the human soul as an imputation at birth, and since animal life resides in animal blood God uses animal blood for a representative analogy for the propitiatory work of Christ on the cross. That is the difference between literal and figurative blood. In other words, the literal blood of the animal is analogous not to the literal blood of Christ on the cross when He bled from His hands and His feet for a few minutes, nor after His death the blood which came out of His chest cavity, but it is analogous to the figurative blood of Christ on the cross, His spiritual death, not His physical death. The physical death of the animal is analogous to the spiritual death of Christ. We call that a representative analogy. If the literal blood of the animal was related to the literal blood of Christ that would be called a literal analogy. This is not a literal or real analogy.

In the last three verses of this chapter we have the interim blessing of Tribulational martyrs. In verse 15 we have the interim state of the Tribulational martyrs which in effect is no different from our interim state except that it deals with a different dispensation and that it deals with imprecatory prayers.

Verse 15, we start out with a Greek idiom, dia plus the accusative neuter singular from the demonstrative pronoun o(utoj, “Because of this.” It is an idiom meaning “therefore,” but not here because they have believed in Christ, because they have received the imputation of divine righteousness at salvation, because they lived a wonderful life faith, grown rapidly, and have been martyred for their faith. They are now residing in an interim body in heaven and in the perfect circumstances of heaven.

With this we have the present active indicative of the verb e)imi, the verb “to be,” and it is translated “for this reason they are.” Then the present tense here is a descriptive present for what is now going on related, of course, in some way to the futuristic present which denotes an event which has not yet occurred but in thought it is so certain that it may be contemplated as already occurring. The active voice: in this case Tribulational martyrs produce the action of the verb. The declarative indicative is for a statement of doctrine. And with this we have a prepositional phrase, the improper preposition e)nw pion and the object of the preposition is qronoj, “before the throne,” and the descriptive genitive of “God.” Translation: “For this reason they are before the throne of God.” This describes very briefly the interim life.

The second phrase begins with the emphatic use of the conjunction kai, translated “in fact.” With it is the present active indicative of the verb latreuw. It is translated “serve,” and that is legitimate. It means to serve in the sense of worship. Originally in the Attic Greek it meant to serve for remuneration or reward. That is not the meaning in the Koine. It is derived from a Greek noun latron which means wages or reward. But when it came into the Koine Greek of the New Testament it refers to spiritual service and it really means worship. It isn’t serving like you are doing something — witnessing, helping people, and so on — it really is used here as a synonym for worship. The verb is used for praise, prayer, or any other form of worship, “in fact they worshipped.” Then comes the dative singular indirect object from a)utoj, generally used as the personal pronoun third person. Occasionally it is used as an intensive pronoun. This refers to God the Father, “in fact they worshipped him.” The progressive present tense signifies a state of persistence, hence present linear aktionsart. They are doing this a lot and they are enjoying it. They are having a very happy and wonderful time in heaven and a great deal of that time is related to worship and they are very enthusiastic. The active voice: the Tribulational martyrs produce the action. The indicative mood represents the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. Then we have the genitive singular of time used twice: once for h(mera, which means “day,” and then once nuc meaning “night.”

Translation: “For this reason they are before the throne of God, in fact they worship him by day and by night.”

The genitive of time is a distinction of time rather than a point of time.

Principle

1. The interim body does not need sleep.
2. The interim body is in a state also of great happiness, great blessing, tranquillity — active happiness [enthusiasm] and passive happiness [tranquillity].
3. Because of all of this happiness and because they need no sleep these Tribulational martyrs are motivated to worship. Their motivation comes from their personal love for God related to their fantastic happiness.
4. Service does not apply to them any longer because they are in heaven, but their service on earth included their witness of life, their honour, their integrity, faithfulness to God, faithfulness to the Word, refusal to renounce Jesus Christ or to reject the Word under pressure. Also they had the message of the gospel in their witness. They were willing to die for their faith. That was their service on earth, that is not their service in heaven.
5. Their service in heaven in the interim body is concentrated in the field of worship — their praise, their adoration, their expression of personal love for God.
6. God the Father is invisible, sitting on the throne. He is worshipped. God the Son is visible, sitting on the throne [or standing in the midst, He is pictured both ways], and He is worshipped.
7. Because of the disastrous and pernicious circumstances of the Tribulation these believers who are martyrs have relatively little opportunity for assembly worship while they are on earth. They obviously took in Bible doctrine. Consequently heaven is a wonderful change in more ways than one. They can worship God every day and every night.
8. We never appreciate the value of our assembly worship and perception of doctrine until we have lost the privilege. God in His grace and faithfulness provides the opportunity in time to learn doctrine. While it is available people rarely seem to appreciate the opportunity. Believers can be so easily distracted by any form of entertainment, social life, business life, any kind of life, any kind of activity. It becomes more meaningful and more important than taking in doctrine, that is just the way people are. But there are those who live in life and discover the secret that when the Lord is first — this includes scale of values, worship function, the perception of doctrine — they have a phenomenal capacity and they have no regrets. And that is important.
9. Happiness produces energy. This carries over to the interim body after death. Happy people are energetic people.

Next we have the prepositional phrase en plus the locative of naw, and with it we have a)utoj in the genitive, “in the temple.” The temple is located in the third heaven and seems to house the throne room of God. Note that the verb latreuw is used for priestly service in the temple and the implication is obvious: while there is no universal priesthood of the believer in the Tribulation we note that every Tribulational martyr functions as his own priest and, therefore, the interim life means that every person in his interim body after death represents himself before God. Principle: Worship is service to God, just as much as any form of spiritual production [witnessing, giving, teaching, praying, etc.] Furthermore, true worship is predicated on personal love for God through perception of Bible doctrine. Therefore, the expression of personal love for God is not only a motivating virtue but it is a function of happiness. When you love someone you are happy to be in their presence. When you have learned doctrine and you assemble you are happy to hear about the Lord. In other words, the negative side of this principle: worship is never a drudge, it is not a good-luck charm, it is never a necessity imposed for hopeful blessing. Worship is the expression of maximum virtue and integrity in personal love for God. Everyone who is normal finds great happiness in the demonstration and expression of love. True worship is the expression of personal love for God. On earth God is invisible to us but in heaven He is visible to the believer in the interim body and the resurrection body. To enter the temple of God in the third heaven and to express personal love in worship is the quintessence of human happiness.

Principle

The problem with truth, Bible doctrine, is not the biblical statement of that truth in the canon of scripture but the interpretation of that truth in the many languages in which it is communicated. In other words, the statement of truth is the formation of the canon of scripture, as God the Holy Spirit so directed the human writers, like the apostle John. But the interpretation of that truth is the preaching, teaching, expository communication of any given passage compatible with exegesis, etymology, historical background of that passage, plus its consistency with orthodox or systematic theology.

Preaching and teaching

- a. Preaching is lazy teaching.
- b. Preaching is pleasing to man; teaching is pleasing to God.
- c. For the first category of eternal life — that is, eternity in time, the believer needs teaching, he needs the inculcation of Bible doctrine.
- d. Therefore preaching appeals to the emotion while teaching appeals to the intellect. It is the intellect that must be aroused to love, not the emotion. There is no love in emotion, all love is in the intellect. The emotion of the normal person responds to the intellect.
- e. Preaching provides entertainment; teaching demands concentration.

f. Preaching demands the power of persuasion but teaching demands the power of the Holy Spirit.

g. Preaching caters to people; teaching challenges people.

Systematic theology has been constructed through the teaching of great men in every generation of the Church Age. So the greatest of worship comes from systematic theology. The inevitable result is a spiritual momentum in the plan of God in every generation, the establishment of a pivot of mature believers for blessing by association and historical uptrend, the manifestations of strategic victory of Christ in the angelic conflict. When Christians are insecure in their doctrinal beliefs they tend to emphasise the apologetical approach, the defence of their faith, rather than the content. When Christians are secure in their perception of doctrine they tend to become aggressive in communication, and delineating rather than defending what they believe. Those who understand doctrine never feel threatened by false doctrine. Hence, they are not pressured to rethink a doctrine or change their beliefs. From the stability of the orthodox system of systematic theology they become very stable. That great stability is the context for stability in happiness, and the stability in happiness factor expresses itself in true worship.

This happiness in worship is carried over into the eternal state. The believer in the interim body waiting for the resurrection body is a very happy person for this reason: they are before the throne of God, in fact they worship Him by day and by night in His temple. And what is the inevitable result of this? It is found in the articular present active participle of the verb kaqhmai, preceded by the conjunction kai, "and he who sits." The definite article is used for the relative pronoun. The present tense is a static present, it represents a condition which is perpetually existing, it is taken for granted as a fact. The active voice: God the Father in this verse produces the action of the verb, although God the Son is to be included. The participle is circumstantial. With it is the prepositional phrase e)pi plus the genitive of qronoj, "and he who sits on the throne."

The next verb is mistranslated in the King James version. It is the future active indicative of the verb skenow and it means to pitch a tent over or to bivouac, "and he who sits on the throne bivouacs." The predictive future tense, or preferably a gnomic future, states a fact which may be rightfully expected under the circumstances of the interim life. God bivouacs with those in their interim body. God the Father and God the Son produce the action. The indicative mood is for a simple statement of fact.

And we have a final prepositional phrase, e)pi plus the accusative from a)utoj, the intensive pronoun translated "over them." God will pitch a tent over them or bivouac with them. A bivouac implies a temporary arrangement and emphasises the interim life of the believer in heaven who is waiting for his resurrection. The relationship with God is one of maximum blessing. There is no unhappiness in the interim life in heaven whether for the believer who has died in the Church Age or the believer who has died in the Tribulation. In this case the context refers to the Tribulational martyrs but it applies to anyone who dies and goes to heaven. Therefore it requires faith in Jesus Christ to enter that part of the interim life.

Verse 16, a deliverance from their discomfort and persecutions which occurred in the Tribulation.

We begin with a future active indicative of the verb peinaw plus the negative o)u, “They will never again be hungry.” The gnomic future tense is for a statement of fact anticipated in the interim state. There is no hunger in the interim state. The active voice: the Tribulational martyrs produce the action of the verb. The declarative indicative mood is the for the historical reality of the interim life. The adverb e)pi is where we get “no longer.” This implies that they suffered some hunger and many of them were martyred in that way. The implication is that Tribulational believers are persecuted by being deprived of food and other necessities of life and that many of them apparently starved to death. Under the principle of logistical grace God provides for the believer the necessities of life in ordinary times, but the Tribulation is not an ordinary time. Here the very lack of provision indicates the nature of their testimony. In spite of the fact that they were deprived of food — they could have had food if they had renounced Christ — God permits this in the Tribulation for certain reasons which have to do with the fact that Bible doctrine is more important than any necessity in life, any pleasure in life, anything that is real to you in life and associated with happiness. Bible doctrine is far more important, therefore these people are now having great happiness, great blessing, because they have passed one of the most wonderful tests in life — Bible doctrine must be more important than anything else in life: than people you love, than people whom you despise. Bible doctrine is more important than anything else in life, any fame, any success, any necessity of life. Bible doctrine is more important than food, and love of God is more important than life itself.

The reality of their testimony was in the reality of their state of being deprived of food. Hence, they demonstrated the principle that love of God is far more important than love of life and they entered into a far greater life. They have gone into something that is so much greater than anything in this life.

Added to this is a second negative, the negative conjunction o)ude which means “neither” or “never again,” “neither will they thirst any longer,” the future active indicative of the verb dipsaw. Again, this implies that the Tribulational believers were persecuted by being deprived of water so that some of them died of thirst.

The other categories of problem here, the exposure, is mentioned, the negative o)ude again plus the negative mh, plus the nominative subject e(lioj, a misuse of the sun by the cruelty of man, “never shall the sun beat down,” the aorist active subjunctive of the verb piptw which means here to beat down. The aorist tense of piptw is a culminative aorist, it views the event in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results: no more persecution, no more privation or suffering on this earth. The active voice: the Tribulational martyrs produce the action of the verb, plus the negative o)ude plus the negative mh becomes a subjunctive of prohibition, translated “never.” They were exposed to torture by sunlight.

“nor any heat,” debilitating heat, a reference to lack of clothing, exposure to very bad weather. While God does and can provide food, shelter and clothing for believers under the principle of logistical grace this becomes that rare exception to demonstrate a principle that we are learning academically but the Tribulational believers will learn it from a practical standpoint. They will understand when they are martyred that life is not nearly as important as Bible doctrine. Bible doctrine goes on forever, temporal life is just a short period of time on planet earth. So the exception is based on circumstances as well. That is why chapter six comes before chapter seven, the four horsemen of the apocalypse help us to understand that principle. The exception, then, is based on the circumstances of the Tribulation where believers demonstrate that motivation from Bible doctrine and personal love for God is far greater than the necessities of life or the pleasures of life, and obviously then, life itself.

Verse 17, by way of contrast, the blessings of the eternal state. “Interim,” again, is defined as the life of the believer after physical death but prior to receiving a resurrection body. The interim life is described in 2 Corinthians 5:8 in connection with the body, “absent from the body, face to face with the Lord”; it is further described in Revelation 21:4, “And he shall wipe away all tears from their eyes ...”

We see the interim life of the Tribulational martyrs from two viewpoints. First of all they have blessings which come from God the Father and, secondly, they have blessings which come from God the Son.

The verse opens with the causal use of the conjunction *o(t*i, correctly translated “because.” The nominative singular of what follows, a)rnion, refers to the Lord Jesus Christ as the Lamb of God, “Because the Lamb.”

“who is in the middle of the throne.” There are two definite articles here. One is translated like a definite article, one is not. The first, to, is generic, it emphasises the uniqueness of Christ in His hypostatic union. The word “Lamb” emphasises the saving work of Christ. So the first definite article goes with a)rnion and refers to the uniqueness of Christ in His hypostatic union, eternal God and true humanity in one person forever; different from God in that he is man, different from man in that He is God. The second definite article is used for both a personal pronoun and a relative pronoun. With this we have an ellipsis, the omission of the verb “to be,” e)imi, and we have to insert it. Then the prepositional phrase, a)na plus the adverb meson which means “in the middle of.” “A)na” has a number of meanings. Sometimes it means “again” but here it means “in.” The object of the preposition is qronoj, “in the middle of the throne.” We have seen that the middle of the throne merely indicates that He is visible, sometimes seated and sometimes standing.

With this we have the future active indicative of the verb poimainw which means to shepherd. The future tense is primarily the tense of the indicative mood, therefore the element of time is very pronounced in this future tense. However, it does signify the character of the verbal idea but instead of presenting it in progress or linear aktionsart as the leading idea — the present or the imperfect — the general connotation is indefinite. Therefore it is very similar to the aorist tense. As a matter of fact the aorist tense is built on the future. This is because all future events have some connotation of uncertainty. While the aorist indicative narrates the event in past time the future indicative expresses anticipation of an event in future time. Therefore this is the gnomic future presenting the interim life after death as that which may be rightfully anticipated. Death is entry into a far greater system of blessing than anything time has to offer. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb here, i.e. shepherding the people, and the indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of fact.

“Because the Lamb who is in the middle of the throne shall be their shepherd.”

Our Lord Jesus Christ is presented three ways as the shepherd. In John chapter 10, verses 10-11, Jesus Christ is called “the good shepherd.” Our Lord’s title as the good shepherd has to do with His saving work on the cross, the judicial imputation of our sins to Christ, their judgement when our Lord was on the cross.

But then in Hebrews 13:20,21 Christ is called the great shepherd. This title refers to a fortiori blessing, divine blessing to mature believers. The judicial imputation for divine blessing comes at maturity. The blessings that we receive in time come from the great shepherd.

In 1 Peter 5:4 Jesus Christ is the chief shepherd, “And when the chief Shepherd appears you will receive the unfading crown of glory.” The unfading crown of glory which belongs to the chief Shepherd is the eternal state. The chief Shepherd is also a title for our Lord Jesus Christ as we face Him after death in the interim body, “absent from the body, face to face with the Lord.” Face to face implies the interim body itself.

The Lord Jesus Christ as the shepherd in time is of utmost importance to us since we are living in time. There are seven areas in which our Lord provides for us as believers.

First of all the believer, like a sheep, is helpless. A sheep cannot guide himself, he must be guided by the shepherd. That is our status quo right now, we are unable to guide ourselves. Our destiny does not depend on us, it depends on our Lord and our positive volition toward His plan. We cannot guide ourselves we need Bible doctrine so our shepherd has provided for us Bible doctrine.

A sheep, by the way, cannot even clean himself, he must be cleaned by the shepherd. This reminds us of our Lord’s provision as our shepherd of the rebound technique.

A sheep is helpless when injured. As we are injured in life by the various problems of life only our Lord can provide the therapy necessary.

A sheep is also defenceless and therefore depends on the shepherd — just as we must do.

A sheep cannot even find food or water for himself. He must depend on the shepherd to lead him to water. Unless our shepherd would provide for us we would be in the same status quo.

A sheep is easily frightened or panicked. Psalm 23 deals with this subject. A shepherd calms the sheep with his voice or a musical instrument. God has provided for us doctrine in the soul called “songs in the night.”

When the sheep produces wool it doesn't really belong to him, it belongs to the shepherd or the one who owns the flock. This is a part of the concept of the angelic conflict and all of this is in view here when it says in verse 17: “Because the Lamb who is in the middle of the throne shall be their shepherd”. He is their shepherd in heaven as He was their shepherd during their life on this earth during the Tribulation.

Then it adds another phrase: “furthermore he will lead them,” the future active indicative of the verb o(dhgew which means to lead or to guide, “furthermore he will lead them [or guide them].” They are now totally under His protection in heaven. This is a predictive future anticipating the activity of the interim life, the great blessings that come at that time. The active voice: the Lord Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb, He produces an environment of maximum happiness. There are no distinctions between winners and losers.

Next we have the direction in which He will lead them. We have the preposition e)pi which is always a confusing preposition to Greek students until they learn the secret. The problem with this preposition is that it takes three different cases and therefore has three different meanings. E)pi, for example, often has its object in the genitive case. That emphasises contact. E)pi has as its object the locative case emphasising position. E)pi has as its object the accusative case emphasising motion or direction.

Here we have e)pi plus the accusative case of phgh referring to springs, “Furthermore he will lead them to the springs.” These springs are not on earth, they are in heaven. They are called the “springs of the waters of life,” the descriptive genitive plural from u(dor, the word from which we get our word “water.” In the ancient world water was considered to have great value. Water was greater than coinage and often greater than almost anything else. The most valuable thing of all here is the concept that in heaven there will be great blessing, a very exciting life for those who are in the interim state. The descriptive genitive singular of “life” emphasises this. “The “springs of the water of life” not only refer to eternal life but the tremendous blessings that accompany eternal life.

Interim blessing is also said to come from God the Father in the last phrase of this passage. It begins with a connective kai, the subject is o(qeoj, the generic use of the article is not translated and we simply translate it, “And God.” It is a reference to God the Father who is the God of all comfort. In 2 Corinthians 1:3,4, “Blessed be the God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies and the God of all comfort.” “Father of mercies” has to do with life on this earth, temporal life; “God of all comfort” has to do with the interim life and the eternal state. “Who comforts us in all of our pressures so that we may be able to comfort those who are in adversity [pressure], with the comfort by which we ourselves are comforted by God.” God the Father has a special ministry of comfort and this is the ministry of comfort which is mentioned here. It is a ministry that belongs to us in time; it also belongs in the eternal state, as says this particular phrase.

We have the future active indicative of ε)χ)αλεϊφω which means to comfort but it is a specific type of comfort. It is what is called graphic comfort, the wiping away of a tear, the erasing of a tear. It is translated “wipe away” but it means erase. Wiping away a tear is a physical function but it represents a function of God on our behalf and the function is comfort. The gnomic future tense is or interim blessing from God the Father anticipating the resurrection. The active voice: God the Father, the God of all comfort, produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of great blessing and comfort in the interim life. The comfort that God provides for believers in time is extended to the interim life.

The final phrase: “all tears from their eyes.” We have an accusative made up of two words, πα) plus δ)κρουον, “all tears” or “every tear.” These are in the singular and should be translated “every tear,” “from their eyes,” ε)κ plus ο)φ)αλμο) plus α)υτο)ι).

Corrected translation: “Because the Lamb who is in the middle of the throne shall be their shepherd, furthermore he will lead them to the springs of the waters of life; and God [the Father] will wipe away every tear from their eyes.”

In salvation the soul of the believer is saved. Animal souls are creature conscious but they are not God-conscious. Man’s soul is God-conscious, therefore the possibility of salvation.

Lev. 17:12 adds, “Therefore I communicate a mandate to every Jewish citizen, ‘None of you may eat the blood [of animals], nor any alien living among you, he must not eat blood.’” Animal blood was prohibited for food but not animal meat. Animal blood must be related to the altar, to the holy of holies, the mercy seat, not to the stomach. The eating of animal meat is a picture of faith in Christ as illustrated on the day of atonement when the eating of blood was prohibited but they ate part of the animal sacrifice. The blood of the animal contains the soul of the animal, the loss of his blood means the loss of his life. Hence, the representative analogy must relate to the living resurrected Christ. So in representative analogy the blood is never eaten or digested. Blood is death to the animal but Christ is life for the believer forever and ever. A representative analogy only goes as far as the spiritual death of Christ and takes cognisance of His somatic death and physical resurrection. The altar is more important than the stomach is what Leviticus 17 is saying; salvation is more important than temporal life.

Verse 13, “Any Jewish citizen, or any alien living among you who hunts any animal or bird which may be eaten [that was permissible and encouraged], must first drain out its blood and cover it [the blood] with earth.” You don’t bury the carcass, you eat it. You bury the blood.

Verse 14, “Because the life of every animal is in its blood. That is why I commanded the Jews, ‘You must not eat the blood of any animal, because the life of every animal is in its blood; anyone who eats it will be cut off'." The animal blood is a shadow, a training aid, an analogy pointing to the cross and the work of salvation. It is an analogy to the spiritual death of Christ on the cross. Christ died twice on the cross so that we could be born twice. Spiritual death is the imputation of the sins of the entire world to our Lord, and then God the Father judged them. No sin was ever judged except on the cross. God the Father judged God the Son as our substitute, the judgement was made against His perfect humanity.

The challenge: Hebrews 13:12, "Therefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people through his own blood, suffered outside the gate" — literally, outside the gate of Jerusalem.

Hebrews 9:12, "and not through the blood of goats and young bulls [literal blood], but by means of his own blood [figurative blood] he [the Lord Jesus Christ] entered into the holy of holies once and for all, having procured eternal redemption for us."

So that: Hebrews 9:14, "how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through his eternal spirit [divine essence] has offered himself without blemish [the impeccability of His humanity] to the God [He offered Himself to the Father]." The Father saw the Son on the cross, perfect, and all of the sins of the world, past, present and future, were imputed to Him, and at that time they were judged.

It is interesting that the book of Revelation which is a prophetic book keeps going back to the work of our Lord on the cross. This is the third time so far that we have had "the blood of Christ" in the book of Revelation.

There are two doctrines of salvation considered to be extremely important in giving a fuller meaning of the blood of Christ. The first is the doctrine of propitiation, the other is the doctrine of reconciliation. The work of Christ is so great that one doctrine cannot cover it, and so we have many doctrines and many categories. For example, the doctrine of redemption is directed towards sin. We were pictured as being in the slave market of sin. Christ paid for our freedom on the cross and when we believe in Christ we walk out, we are redeemed. Redemption means purchasing our freedom. Then, of course, there is the doctrine of propitiation. That is directed toward God. God the Father is satisfied with the work of God the Son. And there is the doctrine of reconciliation — directed toward man. Man is reconciled to God by the work of Christ.

Propitiation, then, is the Godward side of salvation. Propitiation means satisfaction. Propitiation deals with the integrity of God, His righteousness and His justice, as related to our salvation. Propitiation connotes divine satisfaction with the work of Christ on the cross. This forms the basis for reconciliation between man and God.

In the concept of propitiation we have the sins of the human race imputed to Christ on the cross, 2 Corinthians 5:21; 1 Peter 2:24, and then judged by the justice of God the Father. This satisfies His righteousness. Remember that God is holy [that is the integrity of God]. His holiness is composed of His justice and His perfect righteousness. When the justice of God judged our sins on the cross the righteousness of God was satisfied. Because the righteousness of God is satisfied God can impute His righteousness to us when we believe in Christ.

There are three paragraphs in this chapter. First of all there is the transition from the seals to the trumpets, verses 1-2. Secondly, there is that tremendous sense of destiny on the part of the Tribulational martyrs: the answer to the imprecatory prayers, verses 3-6. Finally, the chapter closes out with the four trumpet judgements, verses 7-13.

We begin, then, with the transition from the seals of the Doomsday book to the trumpet judgements of the Doomsday book, verses 1 and 2 of our chapter. We note in verse 1 the opening of the seventh seal which will contain the seven trumpets. This is a very unusual thing because silence is not the way in which most of the drama and disasters of the Tribulation is expressed. It is generally expressed through noise of one kind or another. But so great are the trumpet judgements and so fantastic their implications with regard to personal or national sense of destiny that when the seventh seal is opened by our Lord Jesus Christ there is great silence in heaven. Silence always has a dual connotation. Silence first of all connotes great respect for someone who is not present but in your memory. Secondly, silence denotes shock. Both connotations are found in this verse.

The seventh seal is the amplification of the various historical trends of the Tribulation, including Satan, demon invasion, dictatorship and the evil function of religion. Out of the seventh seal there are two categories of historical trends yet to be studied: the trumpet judgements of Revelations chapters 8-14 and the drinking goblet judgements of chapters 15:7 to chapter 18.

The silence here is a reference to the shock of the supernatural nature of the trumpet judgements. This one half-hour of silence has to be classified, therefore, as dramatic silence. Up to this point we have noted a tremendous amount of noise in heaven. This half hour changes everything, it is classified by silence. The trumpet judgements are supernatural in character, they are the result of bad decisions, but they have gone beyond bad decisions to a locked-in system of supernatural judgements which bring into conflict the two historical conflicts of history. First of all there is the angelic conflict which existed from before man was created. Then the angelic conflict has now overflowed into human history and the two are brought together for the first time in detail in the Tribulation.

There has always been demonism and demon activity. There has always been supernatural activity on the part of Satan as the ruler of this world, but primarily he administers his rulership through cosmic one with its 26 gates of interlocking systems of arrogance, and cosmic two with its nine gates of interlocking systems of hatred. Cosmic one is grieving the Holy Spirit in this dispensation; involvement in cosmic two is quenching the Holy Spirit. This is the way that he operates primarily, he does not have to resort to supernatural activity because of the arrogance of those in the cosmic system. The arrogance produces an evil greater even in many ways than supernatural evil. Nevertheless, in every dispensation there is a certain amount of demon activity but nothing compared to the Tribulation, and for the first time in the Tribulation the armies of heaven will be released against the armies of Satan and there will be angelic fighting in the first heaven [the atmosphere] and on the surface of the earth, along with all of these supernatural judgements against man. It is this that brings about this tremendous silence, the silence of awe, the silence of shock, the silence of respect, the silence where you have nothing now to say. Everyone in heaven is going to be absolutely silent at the awe of these trumpet judgements. They are so great that all are shocked into silence. In fact there would be nothing that could be added to what our Lord is doing. It is fair, it is just, and the silence recognises the fact that the human race without the restraint of God the Holy Spirit in the Tribulation has finally brought itself into a disaster situation of its own making by its own decisions, and therefore the shock of what the human race has done to destroy itself and to bring about these supernatural judgements is almost beyond comprehension. Therefore, silence. So terrifying are all of these judgements that all heaven is silent.

There is also here the silence of worship. Here is a side of the Lord that has been obvious from some types of discipline — His integrity, His holiness, His righteousness — but never has it been seen in such concentration. The silence of shock therefore becomes the silence of worship, as illustrated by certain passages where all worship is related to silence on the part of the congregation, Habakkuk 2:20; Zechariah 2:13. This silence also connotes a recognition of God's authority, as found in 1 Timothy 2:11,12.

Two things are absolutely necessary for learning. One is silence, concentration on what whoever is teaching says, and the other is submissiveness which is genuine humility. To remain in silence has the connotation of learning and all heaven is going to learn something new about God that has never been revealed before. In a short period of seven years there will be a concentrated system of judgment such as the world has never known. So this silence in heaven is not only a learning process it is a function of worship. It is also a manifestation of subordination to the authority of God and the tremendous happiness in heaven as a result. So this is both learning silence and application silence. All heaven is silent for learning; all heaven is silent for making application at this point in the Tribulation when the trumpet judgements are administered. Lamentations 3:28 gives us another concept of it: "Let him sit alone and be silent" is applied to these who are under pressure in the context. Lamentations 3:26, "It is good that he wait silently for the deliverance of the Lord." So silence not only indicates worship, respect and honour to the Lord but it indicates the fantastic function of the faith-rest drill.

"Then when he had opened the seventh seal, there was silence in heaven for about half an hour."

Note the contrast of the seals and sealing. In Revelation 7:3 we have the sealing for blessing of 144,000 evangelists of the Tribulation. This sealing is designed for the blessing of mankind through the presentation of the gospel. Now, by way of contrast, in Revelation 8:1 we have the breaking of a seal of judgment from which comes the seven trumpet judgements. Hence, a seal of cursing in. In Revelation seven 144,000 men were sealed to become evangelists, a seal of blessing; these are seals of cursing and judgment. There is a principle here and the relationship between Revelation chapter seven and chapter eight brings out this particular concept: grace precedes judgment. God provides the seal of blessing before He provides the seal of cursing.

As we get into the various trumpet judgements we are going to note that they are supernatural in character; they are not normal things that happen. Our Lord not only created the universe but He sustains it, and in sustaining the universe, therefore, He eliminates a lot of supernatural and extra natural phenomena that would be destructive. The continuation of the universe and its creatures depends, therefore, on who and what Jesus Christ is. The omnipotence of Christ is the means of handling these things. The immutability of Christ is also involved. He is the secret, therefore, to scientific law. There is no such thing really as a scientific law. There is scientific phenomena but scientific phenomena simply do not exist; these are divine laws rather than scientific. Scientific laws are simply the manifestation of God's faithfulness. These divine laws — rather than scientific — simply say science has no way of enforcing these laws. Science cannot guarantee that they will continue from day to day and operate in exactly the same way. It is the faithfulness of God that provides this. So-called scientific laws are based upon the statistical assumption that the universe which operates according to a fixed norm will continue to do so, yet science can observe but science cannot guarantee any law. In the meantime, so-called scientific laws are often set aside — in the Tribulation only — and supernatural judgements result. Known scientific laws depend entirely, then, on the faithfulness of God which is omnipotence plus immutability plus the veracity of our Lord Jesus Christ. Every text and every discovery of the pattern of the universe is therefore a treatise on the faithfulness of our Lord Jesus Christ. By the Word of His power Jesus Christ holds the universe together, Hebrews 1:3. The reason for doing so is to resolve the angelic conflict in human history and “bring many sons into glory,” as per Hebrews 2:10.

To allow grace to run its full course our Lord Jesus Christ is holding the universe together. The laws of the universe belong to God, they demonstrate His faithfulness, His perfect character, His integrity. These laws can be changed or overruled by the sovereignty of God. Therefore scientific laws are simply a dissertation on the faithfulness, the integrity of our Lord Jesus Christ in holding the universe together, and at the same time holding back eternity so that the human race will have the opportunity to appropriate salvation and enter into an eternal relationship with Him.

Verse 2, the seven trumpets originate from the seventh seal, says this verse. The sequential use of the conjunction kai is translated “then.” Next comes the aorist active indicative of the verb o(rew, which means to see, “Then I saw.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It is a reference to the trumpet judgements and their relationship to the imprecatory prayers of the Tribulation martyrs.

The active voice: the apostle John produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the trumpet judgements.

With this we have an object of the verb. The accusative plural direct object is formed from three Greek words. First of all the definite article tois, the generic use of the definite article, it defines a category. The indeclinable numeral hepta for "seven," and then finally the noun aggeloi, "Then I saw the seven angels." These seven angels are pur sui vant messengers in the college of heralds.

The doctrine of the angelic college of heralds

1. The Commander-in-Chief, the "Angel of the Lord," a reference to the ruler of the college of heralds, the Lord Jesus Christ. This is a theophany. The elect angels are always under the command of Christ and this would imply that the elect angels had a similar salvation to what we have today. It is related, at least, to the second person of the Trinity.

2. The seraphim heralds. The seraph is distinguished from all other angels as the highest-ranking because of his six wings, Isaiah 6:2. Angels do not have wings, with two exceptions: seraphs and cherubs. Wings are simply an insignia of rank. There are two categories of seraphs. There are the four angelic heralds and there is the king of arms. The king of arms is the highest, the "powerful angel" of Revelation 5:2.

3. The cherubim heralds, pur sui vant officers. The cherub has four wings. There are six categories of cherubs:

a. The cherubs who guard the gate of the Garden of Eden, Genesis 3:24.

b. The four cherubs, one at each wheel of the chariot of fire, Ezekiel chapters 1 and 10.

c. Lucifer the son of the morning, Ezekiel 28:14, who now bears the title Satan or devil and is the ruler of this world.

d. The pur sui vant officer who commands the weather machine, Revelation 7:2.

e. The angel with the golden incense shovel, Revelation 8:3.

f. The administrator of historical disaster, 2 Samuel 22:11; Psalm 18:10.

4. The wingless messengers of judgment, pur sui vant messengers. They include seven categories:

a. The angelic messengers who spent the night with Lot in Sodom, Genesis 19:13ff.

b. The destroying angel of 2 Samuel 24:16.

- c. The destroying angels of Psalm 78:49.
- d. The executioners of the city of Jerusalem, Ezekiel 9:1ff.
- e. The man clothed in Linen who acts as the messenger of the chariot of fire, Ezekiel 10:6.
- f. The four angels each having a hemisphere who restrained the wind cells of the weather machine — Revelation 7:1.
- g. The angels with the seven trumpets, Revelation 8:6. (Also there are seven angels bearing the wine goblets of the wrath of God)

Moving on with the exegesis of verse two we have the nominative plural relative pronoun o(j, translated “who.” Then the perfect active indicative of the verb i(stemi which means to stand, “who stand,” the perfect tense of existing state in which the past is dropped from the thought and attention is focused on the status quo. It is like the intensive perfect, it is translated usually with the English present tense. The active voice: seven pur sui vant angels produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is for a simple statement of fact. Then the improper preposition e)nw pion, and with it its object qeoj in the genitive, “before God.” “Then I saw the seven angels who stand before God.” There is a definite article in the Greek but it is not translated because it is generic. So here are the seven pur sui vant messengers, they are now on red alert before the throne of God for the purpose of administering the unique judgements, four of which are found in this chapter. These four are against nature and they are supernatural in character.

Added to this are the seven trumpets which are given to them, “and seven trumpets were given,” the aorist passive indicative of the verb didomi which means to give. Notice that in each of the three sequences of judgements that something is used that is familiar in the ancient world. We have studied the seal judgements which are in the Doomsday book and noted their significance. Now we go to trumpets, a musical instrument but not a musical instrument in the ancient world. The trumpet was used rather as a system for giving commands. It was an alert system, an alert for something unusual which we have anticipated by the silence in heaven for half an hour. Verbal commands were often impossible, they did not have systems of communication such as we have today whereby voice commands could be given to thousands of troops. Then we are going to look at next the vial judgements which are really not vials at all but drinking goblets. The fact that these angels have different categories of instruments which were used in the ancient world also is significant. So terrible are the trumpet judgements that the trumpet is used because of the din, the confusion, the unusual noises of nature and human beings combined in great agony.

The aorist tense of didomi is the culminative aorist, it views the giving of the trumpets in their entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the answer to the imprecatory prayers of the Tribulational martyrs. The passive voice: the seven trumpets receive the action of the verb. That is, they were given to the pur sui vant messengers for the administration of seven unusual judgements. With this we have a dative plural indirect object from the intensive pronoun a)utoj which is generally, but not always, used as the personal pronoun third person. Here it is used as the personal pronoun in the plural referring to the pur sui vant messengers, "and seven trumpets were given to them."

Translation of verse two: "Then I saw the seven angels [seven pur sui vant messengers from the angelic college of heralds] who stand before God: and seven trumpets were given to them."

To understand these seven trumpets we need to go back to chapter six, verse 9 and note again the Tribulational martyrs, for it is these martyrs who are responsible for the seven trumpets. These most unusual judgements in history, supernatural judgements in fact, are the result of a category of prayer we call imprecatory.

"And when he [our Lord Jesus Christ] had broken the fifth seal, I saw under the altar [of burnt offerings] the souls [lives] of those who had been murdered [butchered]."

While many of these believers have not been saved very long before their martyrdom they have advanced to maturity very rapidly and they have made the ultimate sacrifice. They have given their lives for Bible doctrine, for their faith. In the meantime they are enjoying great interim happiness in their interim bodies in heaven, and the fact that they are seen under the altar of burnt sacrifice emphasises their fantastic virtue. They have given their lives under principles that they had virtue that could not be destroyed by any form of torture. They had perception of doctrine that would not crack under the greatest pressures of life. In short, they had everything that was worthwhile from the Word of God. Remember that all believers of the world go up at the Rapture and that means no believers when the Tribulation begins, and remembering the shortness of the Tribulation, a shortened seven years, you can begin to see the intensity of living in that period. The longest any believer can live would be a little short of seven years and in perhaps one or two years these people take in doctrine in such an intense way that they are able to advance to maturity.

These believers fulfil a principle that is enucleated in Matthew 16:24,25. Self-denial is usually regarded by people with any lust for life as a pain in the neck and it certainly doesn't fit the average person's idea of what fun should be. But if you have Bible doctrine, and if you have strong motivation and therefore from this great entrenched happiness in the soul, and if you have learned to entertain yourself, which very few people seem to have done in the time in which we live, you can utilise your time properly. In other words, you are able to have a disciplined system of time, to get organised. Unhappy people never get organised and that contributes to their self-induced misery. This is what Jesus is saying here. He is not saying that you are going to have to grit your teeth and it is going to be miserable, far from it. "Let him deny himself" simply means organise yourself. To take up the cross means to go through life with impersonal love, the highest form of virtue. It means that no matter how antagonistic people may be toward you, no matter how much they hate you, no matter how much they make life miserable, you treat them exactly the same way that you treat everyone, the function of impersonal love. For that you have to have integrity.

Once you get organised you have a chance to take in Bible doctrine and then you have a chance to develop integrity. Once you have integrity you are carrying your cross and it is not miserable at all, it is very happy. "Follow me" means fulfil His plan.

The human security system concept is what we have in verse 25 of Matthew 16, "Whoever wishes to deliver his soul [life] will lose it." That is the person who is not well organised, who has no common sense, who is divorced from reality and who is a product of his own decisions and dies miserably, the sin unto death for the believer. But, "whoever loses his life for my sake shall find it." In other words, the believer who loses his life for the sake of the Lord dies under dying grace, he has great happiness in time, he moves on into the interim life, as will the Tribulational saints. In an intensified way the Tribulational martyrs advance to maturity, they are well organised, they learn Bible doctrine, they have great common sense and great integrity, and they gave their lives refusing to renounce Christ. They died, it says, because of Bible doctrine, "because of the Word of God [6:9]." The spiritual growth of positive Tribulational believers: through a concentrated effort they were organised, they had a sense of personal destiny, they related their scale of values to number one, Bible doctrine — the Word of God has always been the greatest opposition to the cosmic system —, they loved the Word and Satan was permitted to remove them from the earth through martyrdom. But their death does not stop Bible doctrine. No matter how many believers die Bible doctrine goes on forever. Bible doctrine is never hindered or slowed down and there is no way that Satan by the administration of death can destroy them. Nothing can stop the power of the Word of God.

The second reason for their martyrdom, verse 9, is "because of the testimony they maintained." This is their deposition with regard to the gospel. These positive believers of the future are not only consistent in the perception of doctrine but they are consistent in the production of virtue, the function of evangelism, their personal testimony. These believers are not the evangelists of the Tribulation but they are dynamic believers living in the Tribulation, and they stand out because the Tribulation is a time of historical disaster and they have fantastic happiness. They don't die with a grim face, they are happy and relaxed, they are organised people and people with great capacity for life. So the Tribulational martyrs of the future teach us a great lesson.

In Revelation 6:10 we have again the subject of imprecatory prayers. We are now going to relate it to our passage for all of the trumpet judgements are related to the imprecatory prayers which were uttered by these people, "and they said, 'How long O sovereign Lord'..." Sovereign Lord refers to the integrity of Jesus Christ as God: His righteousness and His perfect justice. Because God is righteous, because God is justice, therefore because God is holy, He must do something about the injustices under which they were martyred. They have the courage and the boldness to speak up, they have learned a great deal of doctrine, they know when to speak and when not to, they know that they have a point and they make their point at this time for our benefit. They also add to the word "holy," the integrity of Jesus Christ as God, but they add the word "true" which also means dependable. "How long O sovereign Lord, holy [the integrity of Christ as God] and true [the integrity of Christ in His hypostatic union]." This is a double appeal. It is an appeal to Jesus Christ as God, it is an appeal to Jesus Christ as their great high priest. They recognise that He has the key to the situation.

The appeal to the hypostatic union in the imprecatory prayers is compatible with emphasis on the justice of our Lord Jesus Christ to rectify the terrible injustices done to these believers by a demon- possessed government and demon-possessed people at that time. While imprecatory prayers are generally defined as prayers for vengeance it is used here as an appeal to the justice of God, to the integrity of God, to the holiness of God. And, of course, the prayers are offered in the same way that we offer prayers, through our Lord Jesus Christ.

In the past this was a legitimate prayer offered by great believers such as King David, who said in Psalm 13:1, "How long?" the same words used by these Tribulational martyrs. And then in verse 2, "How long will my enemies triumph over me?" He prayed these prayers under great pressure from his enemies. He said in verse 3, "Look on me and answer, O Lord, my God," and added in verse 4, "My enemy will say, 'I have overcome him,' and my foes will rejoice with glee when I fall." Cf. Psalms 54; 143; 35; 59, imprecatory prayers.

The seven trumpet judgements are the answer to the imprecatory prayers of Tribulational believers. Even the martyrs said from under the altar, "How long before these prayers are answered?" They were prayed in confidence. So great were these Tribulational believers, so advanced spiritually, that when they prayed that their persecutors would be ruined and dealt with by the justice of God they were absolutely confident that their prayers would be answered. And their confidence is reflected in these seven trumpet judgements. While these trumpet judgements are horrible don't feel sorry for the recipients, they had it coming.

These judgements are divided into two categories. Four of them are found in chapter eight, the other three are found in other chapters and they are called "Woes." The first four judgements are all related to nature. Supernatural things in nature are brought against mankind. These four trumpet judgements are presented in verses 7-13 as a part of the answer to the imprecatory prayers of Tribulational believers. The last three trumpet judgements are directed against mankind. All of these judgements are going to combine to make life horrible for those who persecuted believers in the Tribulation.

The first trumpet is found in Revelation 8:7. It is a judgment against vegetation where one third of the topsoil, vegetation, rain forest, is removed from the earth. We will see what happens under those conditions and how this becomes a fantastic judgment.

The second trumpet is found in 8:8,9. It is a judgment against salt water.

The third trumpet is found in 8:10,11. It is a judgment against fresh water.

The fourth trumpet judgment in 8:12 is going to bring great darkness to the earth and there will be no help for that for a certain time.

The fifth trumpet judgment is called the first woe, 9:1-12. It is a judgment involving a demon invasion from the Abyss, and where we meet the number two fallen angel, Abaddon or Apollyon.

The sixth trumpet is found in 9:13-21. It is a demon invasion from under the Euphrates river.

The seventh trumpet or third woe is found in 11:15-12:17, another woe on demon activity, the demon attack against Israel, the greatest movement of anti-Semitism in all of human history.

In answer to the imprecatory prayers it is interesting to note one principle. In the first four trumpets God does some supernatural things with nature, supernatural because they are very destructive, but the world survives. These are exceptions to scientific laws. But in the last three we have demon attacks. And who do the demons attack? They do not attack believers, they attack unbelievers who are serving Satan. That could be called "confusion in the ranks" for in answer to imprecatory prayers God turns the fiercest of demons into attacks upon people. The imprecatory prayers have tremendous power in their proper setting of the Tribulation for God is going to answer them by turning Satan's greatest demon armies on Satan's greatest human servants. And Satan can do nothing to stop it. Now you know where the power is! The power is with God for these three great demon invasions are going to be against unbelievers and servants of Satan only. Again, it is a reminder of the power of prayer.

We are studying the seven trumpet judgements which are in answer to the imprecatory prayers of Tribulational believers. We will see the first trumpet in verse seven, a judgment against vegetation. The second judgment in verses eight and nine is against salt water. Verses ten and eleven: judgment against fresh water. In verse twelve a very unusual celestial judgment. All of these have to do with supernatural activities in nature. Then follows in chapter nine two of the last three of the trumpet judgements and they are called woes. The first woe is the demon invasion from the Abyss in chapter nine verses one through twelve. The sixth trumpet is a demon invasion from the Euphrates in chapter nine verses thirteen through twenty one. Then we have to skip over the Revelation chapter eleven verses fifteen through chapter twelve verse seventeen for the third woe or the seventh trumpet which is Satan's famous attack on Israel, the last and most intensified function of anti-Semitism.

In the paragraph here in verses three through six we note the answer to the imprecatory prayers of the Tribulational believers.

In verse 3 we begin by noting the conjunction kai, translated "and, followed by the adjective a)lloj which refers to someone different, an angel but a different one in that category. It is translated "another. With it is the nominative singular subject a)ggeloj, a pur sui vant officer of cherub rank in the college of heralds. Next comes the aorist active indicative of the verb e)rxomai, "another angel came." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The per sui vant officer produces the action of the verb in the active voice.

The declarative mood is for a simple statement of fact, but more than that, it demonstrates the fact that these angels have entered into their status quo of eternity. They fought a good fight in the prehistoric conflict between the fallen angels and the elect angels. They have a very definite confidence about them, a confidence that means that while they were in their struggle, long before man was created, they had a tremendous sense of destiny. This is one of the higher categories of angels with that sense of destiny.

Never in the history of the human race has one dispensation had such a fantastic opportunity under the same concept of sense of destiny as the Church Age. You and I as believers in the Lord Jesus Christ are royal family of God. As members of the royal family of God and a kingdom of priests we should have a very great sense of destiny. Our sense of destiny has to do first of all with God's plan. God has given us as the royal family the same divine dynasphere used by our Lord Jesus Christ in His humanity during the first advent. He had the prototype; we now have the operational type.

Long before we existed there were those elect angels who had a very clear sense of their own personal destiny and they related it properly to whatever form of Bible doctrine was given to them before human history began. Because they had this and because through every type of disaster and difficulty they were faithful to the Word of God they now have entered into their eternity and certain angels, like the one in our verse and other angels, is a unique person; he is very high among the officers and the nobility among the elect angels. And so when it says, "And another angel," that is the story of a person, a creature quite superior to mankind in its present form, but an angelic creature who through all of that conflict was faithful to Bible doctrine.

It pays to have a one-tracked mind until you come to a point where you must have flexibility through the application of doctrine. To be single-minded about your scale of values and to be flexible in your application of doctrine makes a devastating combination. This particular angel has his own biography which is absolutely fantastic and very helpful to us. No matter what the historical climate happened to be at any given time in the past in the angelic conflict before man was created, whether it was historical adversity or historical prosperity, this is one of those successful above millions and millions of angels. For many of the elect angels, like many believers today, had their own status quo carnality, had their own failures, and did not even fulfil the objectives under the plan of God assigned to them in their generation of angelic history.

And so it is today. You have a greater responsibility for what happens in this country and this generation than anyone else. When things go bad we cannot turn around and say it was the fault of anyone else.

And it says, regarding the angel, "he took his place, the aorist passive indicative of the verb i(stemi, and it means that he took his place or he stood or he took a stand. The ingressive aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb at its beginning. He is going to be quite active now in heaven. He has the privilege of being in charge of the administration by which all of the imprecatory prayers of the believers of the Tribulation will be answered, and will be answered from the justice of God. The passive voice: the subject, his pur sui vant officer, this cherub receives the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a simple statement of fact and this is said to be “he takes his stand” or “he takes his place” at the altar. This is e)pi plus the genitive of a very long word. E)pi takes the genitive. When it takes the ablative it means something else. When it takes the accusative it means something else. Here, e)pi plus the genitive emphasises contact, location. The noun is quisiathrion, and it refers to a very special altar, not the brazen altar but the golden altar of incense. It is first mentioned in Exodus chapter thirty, verses one through ten. It was associated with the Tabernacle and it was the altar which was associated with the ark of the covenant in the holy of holies, according to Hebrews 9:4. This particular altar is constructed of acacia wood and is plated with gold. Hence, it depicts our Lord Jesus Christ in hypostatic union, eternal God and true humanity in one person forever. Therefore being in hypostatic union our Lord Jesus Christ is our high priest. All prayers are processed through Him. And that is not only true for us but as indicated here it is true for the Tribulational believers. The gold represents the deity of Christ, the wood His true humanity. Around the top of the altar was a crown of gold, emphasising our Lord’s third royal patent, and according to Leviticus 16:18 the altar of incense was placed just in front of the second veil. The second veil was the one that separated the holy place from the holy of holies in the tabernacle and, later on, the temple. This is where the angel stands. This is the heavenly original from which the tabernacle and the temple was patterned.

With this we have a present active participle from the verb e)xw, “and he had.” The retroactive progressive present denotes what was begun in the past but continues into the present and even into future time. It is rendered into English by the perfect or past tense. The active voice: the pur sui vant officer, this cherub with his very high rank in the college of heralds, produces the action. The circumstantial participle expresses attendant circumstances and therefore is translated into the English by a conjunction and the finite verb. Even though it is a participle it is translated this way.

Next we have the accusative singular direct object composed of two words. First of all the word xrousouj, and it means “made of gold.” With it we have a very controversial word in the Greek, libanwtouj. This word means several things. It means frankincense; it means a shovel; it means something in which frankincense is burned which we might call simply an incense shovel, and that is the way we will translate it. The controversy comes from what this shovel was like. This is a golden incense shovel.

Here we have a high-ranking angel and he is carrying around an incense shovel made of gold. And it goes on to say, “consequently,” the conjunction kai, something was given to him. And next we have “much incense was given to him.” The verb to give here which comes first in the Greek is the aorist passive indicative of the verb didomi, and it is correctly translated “to give.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The passive voice: the subject is “much incense” and it receives the action of the verb. It is passed over to the shovel and to the cherub who holds the shovel. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical reality of this future event in heaven.

The subject is now composed of two words. First we have an adjective poluj, and whatever it is it came in a large quantity and it took a strong angel to hold it up, and the cherub apparently had great strength. The incense is called qumiama.

What is this incense that was given to him? And why is qumiama such an important word? Qumiama, the incense, is made up of four different things. These four elements are mentioned in Exodus 30.

First of all there is stacti [Hebrew], which means to drop or distil and it refers to myrrh. Frankincense and myrrh were used by the wise men from Persia who came to pay their respects to our Lord Jesus Christ. Myrrh was used for a perfume but it wasn't used for a perfume by ladies to attract men. It was used for embalming. It was an ingredient also used for anointing oil. It was one of the gifts of the Magi and it was used by them to anticipate the death of Christ on the cross, bearing the sins of the entire world. Also it was used to represent strategic victory. This particular myrrh was used two ways: to embalm the dead and to make an appointment, to anoint, which means to commission. The death has to do with the cross. When our Lord Jesus Christ was on the cross the sins of the entire world were imputed to Him on the cross. He was judged on the cross and that is its connotation in embalming. That is why it is used in this shovel that the angel has. It was also used for anointing, and that indicates the strategic victory of Christ in His death, burial, resurrection, ascension, and receiving His third royal patent.

The second ingredient was onycha [Hebrew], and according to Exodus 30:34 it was an ingredient of incense used for the ritual in the tabernacle. It is derived from scale or shell, the shell, for example, of a shellfish. Onycha also refers to our Lord's death on the cross. It emphasises the relationship between propitiation and prayer. When Jesus Christ was hanging on the cross God the Father judged our sins and, afterward, He was satisfied [or propitiated] with what had happened. This was why it was used on that golden altar in front of the holy of holies.

In the holy of holies was a box called the ark of the covenant. Inside that box were those things that represent sin. The box was made of acacia wood and gold, speaking of Christ in hypostatic union. Over the top of that box was a throne which was called the mercy seat, and on each end of the throne was a golden cherub, in each case speaking of the holiness of God, composed of His perfect righteousness and His justice. Once a year, on the day of atonement, the high priest came in and sprinkled the blood of the sacrifice over the top of the mercy seat. The righteousness of God looked down and was satisfied because it represented Christ bearing our sins, and He was perfect as He hung upon the cross — doctrine of impeccability. The justice of God looked down — the other half of divine integrity — and was satisfied because our sins had been judged on the cross. The concept is called propitiation. So when the mercy seat is brought in to, say, the book of Romans the word for mercy seat is propitiation. Christ became the propitiation [mercy seat] for us.

This must relate also to prayer. When you believe in the Lord Jesus Christ you are then commanded to pray. And there are various mandates about prayer. Since God the Father is propitiated or satisfied with the work of Christ on the cross, and since when we are in the divine dynasphere and we offer prayer we offer it through Christ, and God is satisfied with Christ and His work on the cross. And He is now seated at the right hand of the Father as the stamp of propitiation. Any prayer that comes through Christ if we are in the divine dynasphere is going to be answered. That is why onycha was burned as a part of this incense; that is why it burned in the golden shovel in our context.

Then there is a third ingredient called galbanum [Hebrew]. This is a gum resin which has a very pungent odour. When mixed with a fragrant substance it has the effect of increasing and prolonging the sweet odour of the incense. It emphasises the power of prayer from believers in fellowship, believers who have a sense of destiny and are executing the plan of God. It emphasises the power of prevailing prayer from believers in the Tribulation who are under much persecution.

Finally, number four is frankincense. In Matthew 2:11 frankincense was offered by the Magi to our Lord Jesus Christ. The white gum is derived from certain trees. It was used by the Magi to portray the impeccability of Christ inside the prototype divine dynasphere and to emphasise the fact that prayer can only be answered when believers are in fellowship with God [inside the divine dynasphere] and offer those prayers through our Lord Jesus Christ. All prayer must be related to the person of Christ and the filling of the Holy Spirit.

The documentation for these four ingredients: Exodus 30:34,35.

Translation of verse 3 so far: "Then another angel came and took his place before the altar, and he had an incense shovel made of gold; consequently much incense was given to him ..."

Next we have the purpose: the conjunction i(na introduces a sub-final purpose clause. There are two kinds of purpose clauses, final and sub-final. Here we have a sub-final purpose clause in which the action of the main verb is directed toward a given result, which result is anticipated. So it is translated, "in order that." Then we have the future active indicative of didomi, but here it does not mean to give. It has a similar connotation. We translate this correctly, "in order that he might offer it." The future tense expresses the anticipation of a future event, hence a predictive future. The active voice: this particular angel, one of the highest-ranking in the angelic order of battle, is actually going to do this thing in heaven. He is going to produce the action of the verb by making the offering. The indicative mood is declarative for an unqualified statement of fact as to the subject, as to the function, and as to its meaning. The word "it" is added, it refers to the incense, hence the incense indicates the fact that the imprecatory prayers of Tribulational believers are acceptable to God like the sweet odour of the incense. God is propitiated by these prayers and therefore they will be answered.

Then we have what it is being offered with — the instrumental of manner, plural, from the noun proseuxh. Since the incense is associated with the prayers of the Tribulational believers we have the instrumental of manner, also the instrumental of association. With this we have the possessive genitive plural from a(gioj, "saints," indicating that these prayers come from believers. We have an adjective in the genitive plural, paj, “of all the saints.”

Then we have the repetition of that prepositional phrase “upon the altar.” The word for “altar” is the altar of golden incense. With this we have an accusative neuter singular definite article, to, but the definite article is used as a relative pronoun translated “which.” Add the verb to be, e)imi, “which is.”

Then, finally, the prepositional phrase, the improper preposition from the adverb e)nw pion, plus the noun qronoj, “before the throne.”

Translation of verse three: “Then another angel [a pur sui vant officer, cherub rank in the college of heralds] came and took his place before the altar, and he had an incense shovel made of gold; consequently much incense was given to him in order that he might offer the prayers of all the saints [Tribulational believers] on the golden altar which was before the throne.”

The doctrine of prayer

Prayer is a weapon and, like any weapon, you have to know how to use it. How does it function? Prayer is the effective function of petition and entreaty to God on the part of the believer in Christ who resides in the divine dynasphere. It is a weapon, it must be treated as a weapon, it must be understood as a weapon, it must be used as a weapon.

God the Father is the recipient of all prayer; God the Son is the means of approach. Each member of the Trinity has certain designated functions according to the Word of God and these functions must be understood to be effective as a believer. Don't offer prayer to the Lord Jesus Christ, don't offer prayer to God the Holy Spirit. Prayer is offered to God the Father and Jesus Christ adhered to this rule in His humanity during the period of the first advent.

God the Father receives prayer from three different sources: from believers, Hebrews 4:16; God the Son offers prayer in hypostatic union, Hebrews 7:25; God the Holy Spirit, Roman 8:26, 27.

There is also a prayer that the believer cannot pray because of the intensity of pressure, disaster, shock, and that is why the Holy Spirit prays for us with groanings which cannot be uttered in Romans 8:26,27.

In verse four we are introduced once again for the third time to the imprecatory prayers of Tribulational saints. The connective conjunction kai is sequential and translated “then.” With this we have the nominative singular subject from the noun kapnoj, translated “smoke.” It is the smoke of burnt incense. And with it we have the genitive plural from qumiama, “the smoke of the incense.” The plural refers to the four categories which are involved in that incense and their significance as related to our Lord's first advent and His strategic victory at the cross. Then comes the verb, the aorist active indicative of the verb a)nabainw which means to ascend, to go up, "Then the smoke of the incense went up." This is a constative aorist tense contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety.

These prayers are answered. The dynamics of prayer in the Tribulation is one of the great spiritual phenomenons of that time. The active voice: the smoke of the incense produces the action of the verb. The declarative is the for the historical reality of this future event. There is here the associative instrumental plural from the noun proseuxh, a Greek word for prayer, and with it the genitive of a(gioj meaning saints.

Translation: "Then the smoke of the incense, along with [the associated instrumental] the [imprecatory] prayers of the saints, went up before God from the hand of the angel."

Just as the smoke of burning incense is used to portray propitiation, so it is also used in the Bible for the concept of answered prayer. The incense indicates that the imprecatory prayers of the Tribulational believers are being answered by the seven trumpet judgements. And just as the pur sui vant officer of cherub rank commanded the four angels, the pur sui vant messengers who controlled the wind cell. So the pur sui vant cherub commands the seven angels who will sound the trumpets to administer this judgment. Anticipating the next verse, the answer to the imprecatory prayers call for great judgements and great historical disasters on earth, they are, in effect, supernatural judgements. This brings us back to the chariot of fire which we have noticed in Ezekiel chapters one and ten.

Verse 5, the function of the pur sui vant officer in the answer to these imprecatory prayers. Again we have the sequential kai, "then," and the nominative singular from the subject, a)ggeloj, and the perfect active indicative of lambanw. He stood at the altar until he was given the command, "Then he took." The perfect tense is a dramatic perfect, it describes vividly the ease with which one does a thing. When you are serving the Lord the ease with which things are accomplished is an amazing thing. He is about to something that is about to turn the world upside down with supernatural judgements. The dramatic perfect, then, emphasises the results of the action. The active voice: the pur sui vant officer produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for a future statement of fact in the field of eschatology. What is angel took is the accusative singular direct object from libanwtoj which refers to the golden shovel. It is translated in the King James version "censer." It is a golden shovel in which incense is burned. He took the incense shovel and he filled it with the fire from the altar. So it has a place for coals on it, it heats up and begins the process of the incense being manufactured.

And he threw it. We have the aorist active indicative from ballw which means sometimes to hurl. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist which views the events in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the judgements of the inhabitants of the earth, unbelievers, in answer to imprecatory prayers of the Tribulational believers. The active voice: the pur sui vant officer produces this action in heaven. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the act which is tantamount to a command from the pur sui vant officer, a command which has been relayed from God Himself, to the pur sui vant messengers who have the seven trumpets and who are on red alert for sounding off. Then we have a preposition, “to the earth,” e)ij plus gh. The imprecatory prayers of believers are collected in heaven and then at the exact moment they are approved, resulting in the answer, the judgment of the seven trumpets. Such historical judgment generally originates from the chariot of fire but in this case the judgment originates from the altar because they involve answers to the imprecatory prayers of the Tribulational saints, chapter 6:9-10. The answer to question, How long? is found in the administration of the trumpet judgements. These same Tribulational martyrs who had offered the imprecatory prayers are described in more detail on chapter 7:9-17.

Now we have the warning of coming judgements. We have the predicate nominative bronth which means crashes or peels of thunder, a warning of the coming storm. Hence, a warning of the coming trumpet judgements to the people of the earth. This is the principle of grace before judgment, there is still time for people to repent and avoid these judgements. No one has ever been judged by God without more than adequate warning. The problems we bring on ourselves and call divine discipline are really not divine discipline at all. We are the products of our own decisions and when we make bad decisions we simply manufacture our own misery. The only warning we get from that is the function of our own soul, but when God does judge, and these judgements originate from God, there is always a tremendous warning system.

The second predicate nominative is fwnh which means voices, sounds or noises. This is the audible warning system, like a tornado, a hurricane, etc. to give people the opportunity of changing their mind.

The third is a)straph and it means flashes of lightning. So we have the warning: “and he hurled it to the earth and there followed peels of thunder, loud noises and flashings of lightnings.” These are all warnings of coming judgment. The flashings of lightning would be the visual rather than the audio approach, it indicates the coming of great historical disaster in the Tribulation.

These first three subjects are connected by the conjunction kai used in its connective sense. Then we have kai one more time and it is used as an adjunctive kai, “also.” But before we get to that we should have “there followed,” the aorist middle participle of the verb ginomai, which means to be, to become, here it means to follow. It is because of this state-of-being verb that we can actually have predicate nominatives here instead of accusative. The constative aorist tense of the verb contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. These signs or warnings of coming judgment allow people to change their mind and avoid the judgment. This is a period of grace before judgment to allow the recipients of the judgment another chance. The middle voice is the indirect middle emphasizing the subject, the warning of judgment as producing the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial.

Then comes the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, and then a word in the singular, seisnoj, for earthquake. One of the great and terrible earthquakes will occur at this point.

Verse 6, the function of the pur sui vant messengers in answer to the imprecatory prayers. God the Father processed those imprecatory prayers. The Son then put everything into action. From the Son they went to the pur sui vant officer and then to the pur sui vant messengers. Then we will have the seven trumpets. This whole system is to allow time for repentance or change of attitude.

“Then the seven angels [the pur sui vant messengers] who had the seven trumpets,” the articular present active participle of the verb e)χw, “who had.” Then the nominative plural definite article used as a relative pronoun, “who.” The perfective present tense refers to what has come to be in the past but is emphasised as a present reality. These pur sui vant messengers had this category of judgment but it is now emphasised as the reality of the Tribulation. The active voice: the pur sui vant messengers are going to be the administrators. The participle denotes a future purpose for the seven trumpets.

Then we have the accusative direct object of the participle composed of two words: a very simple accusative plural definite article paj, “the”; the adjective numeral e(pta, “seven”; and the noun salpigc for “trumpets.” And “they have prepared themselves,” the aorist active indicative of e)toimazw.

Everyone has to prepare before he can be used by God. No matter how high you are in God’s plan or no matter how low you are, you can’t be anything without preparation. You can’t run off half-cocked. God uses prepared men. The active voice: the seven pur sui vant messengers produce the action and while the preparation modus operandi is not given it does emphasise a principle: preparation is necessary for any function involving the decisions of eternal God. Both elect angels and regenerate mankind must constantly prepare themselves and be prepared to carry out God’s plan for history. Your preparation as a believer is in perception of Bible doctrine. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of preparation necessary to execute the will of God.

And this is a very rare use of a)utoj. Every now and then this word is used in its original connotation of the Classical Greek which is an intensive pronoun. Here it is used as an intensive pronoun, the accusative plural direct object. The function of the intensive pronoun is to emphasise identity, therefore it is demonstrative force intensified. This is the predicate use of the intensive pronoun and that is why it is translated “themselves,” “they prepared themselves.” Their purpose is given in the final phrase, a final purpose clause from the conjunction i(na, “they prepared themselves that.” The semi-final purpose clause is one which denotes the direction or the action of the main verb toward a given result. The result anticipated is the answer to the imprecatory prayers of the Tribulation believers, “that they might give the signal with the trumpets,” the aorist active subjunctive of the verb salpizw, and it means to give an order with a trumpet, to produce a blast on a trumpet, to sound off. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it views the sounding of the trumpet call or signal in its entirety but it emphasises the existing result, the answer to the prayers of the Tribulation believers and the administration of terrible judgment. The active voice: each pur sui vant messenger produces the action of the verb in sequence, not simultaneously. The subjunctive mood is a potential subjunctive used to form or construct a semi-final purpose clause.

The first four trumpet signals are directed against nature while the last three trumpets signals are the three woes directed against mankind in a very dramatic way. The drama comes from the fact that demons are allowed to attack people.

As the seven angels prepare to sound it reminds us several facts that we can anticipate. These trumpets judgements are supernatural rather than natural judgements. They are the consequence of man's erroneous decisions. Man is the product of his own decisions; man is the product of his own adversity through making bad decisions. The natural result of bad decisions is first of all self-induced, self-imposed misery — the concept of we reap what we sow. But these trumpet judgements are much more than that, they are natural consequences of man's reversionism, his apostasy, his degeneration, but they are supernatural in character. Many believers will survive all of the historical disasters of the Tribulation but they will survive because they have a personal sense of destiny, a fantastic humility and flexibility. The believer in the Church Age living in a client nation to God has a dual destiny they do not have. We have a personal sense of destiny related to the plan of God for our lives and, of course, that means living in the divine dynasphere. But we also have a national sense of destiny related to the advance to maturity, forming the pivot, and that brings us to the point of prosperity for the nation. As goes the believer in this dispensation, so goes the client nation. Only the first category is open to these Tribulational believers, they only have available to them the personal sense of destiny related to the plan of God. There are no client nations in the Tribulation. To survive the cataclysms of the Tribulation the believer must have a personal sense of destiny related to his perception and application of Bible doctrine. (We have far more than that today, we even have a greater challenge) With a personal sense of destiny from Bible doctrine the believer's confidence is related to his humility which produces fantastic application and flexibility, and there will be many survivors.

We now note the four trumpets of judgment in this passage, verses 7-13. They will be quite different from the final trumpets which are demon invasions and will give us the chance to study the whole realm of demonology.

The first of these trumpet judgements is found in verse 7. The connective conjunction kai introduces a result from what precedes and is translated, "And then." The adjective prwtōj is a nominative singular and with the generic use of the definite article identifies the category of trumpeters, pur sui vant messengers in the college of heralds. The noun aggelōj is the subject and the first of the trumpeters, but we do not have aggelōj here in the original although it does occur later on in verse eight. So we will translate it correctly here: "Then the first one [the first angel, a pur sui vant messenger in the college of herald]." This is the first one, aggelōj does not occur in the original. It has been included in the King James version.

Then we have the aorist active indicative of salpizw which means to sound a trumpet, to give a signal with a trumpet, and we translate it, "sounded his trumpet." We will see this verb in this form seven times before we are through, all of the way from this chapter to chapter eleven. "Then the first one sounded [gave a signal on] his trumpet," for the administration of the first judgment. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It takes up everything we will note with regard to the first judgment and gathers it into one concept. The active voice: the first pur sui vant messenger actually produces the action. The declarative indicative mood is for a simple statement of fact in the field of eschatology.

Now we see a terrible storm in the phrases that follow. It is introduced with the aorist middle indicative of the verb ginomai. The verb means to be, to become, but here it is translated correctly, "and there followed." It is giving a sequential result from the sounding of the trumpet. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, again contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety. It takes up the first judgment against the world's vegetation in its entirety. This is a middle voice but being a deponent verb, middle in form, active in meaning, and again the action is produced by a terrible storm. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical reality of divine judgment. This is a judgment which does not come from man's bad decisions, it comes from God as a result of the imprecatory prayers. What follows then rescinds the mandate of Revelation 7:2,3. With this order rescinded the first four trumpet judgements are against vegetation on land. The second is against the salt water of the seas and the third is against the fresh water such as lakes and rivers. Finally there is the fourth trumpet which has to do with judgment against the atmosphere. Each category produces a tremendous amount of suffering to the unbelievers of the earth during the Tribulation. This, again, is in answer to the imprecatory prayers.

"Then the first one sounded his trumpet, and there followed ..." The predicate nominative is made up of several words. First of all xalaz, used generally for hail, and then we have another, pur for fire, translated "hail and fire." The word "fire" is possibly lightning but there is another Greek word for lightning. In Exodus 9:24 one of the great plagues was a terrible thunderstorm and it was described in similar words. It was the worst storm in the land of Egypt since it had become a nation. Now we have another one of those supernatural thunderstorms directly from heaven. The first plague of Egypt is very similar except that this judgment is intensified.

With this we have the perfect passive participle from mignumi, and it means to mix, "which had been mixed." The perfect is a tense of completed action, therefore the action is viewed as a finished product. The perfect tense implies the process of mixing blood with an intensified tropical thunderstorm, but a process consummated and existing in a finished state. So when the storm hits you have everything we have today but you have blood mixed in with it. This is the intensive perfect in which special attention is directed to the results of the action and the existing fact is intensified. The passive voice: the terrible thunderstorm receives the action of the verb, it is mixed with blood. The participle is circumstantial and this is followed by a prepositional phrase e)n plus the instrumental of manner from a(ima, correctly translated, "which had been mixed with blood." The instrumental of manner indicates that we have here literal blood, not like the blood of Christ which we have studied in terms of redemption, reconciliation, etc., the saving work of Christ on the cross. This blood was first mentioned in Revelation 6:10 which records the imprecatory prayers in summary of the Tribulational martyrs and this same blood is now mixed with this supernatural and therefore unusual thunderstorm. "How long will it be fore you avenge our blood on the population of the earth." The blood of the Tribulational martyrs is mixed with that tropical storm and then it hits a certain part of the earth. What this really is is wind shear, a down-burst in which a strong wind is actually smashed against the surface of the earth. And it is not only wind shear and its manifestation in a down-burst but it is one that is mixed with blood. In other words, all of the blood that these people shed is going to cover them when this storm hits them. The storm does not destroy people as much as it does vegetation.

How do we know it is wind shear? The aorist passive indicative of the verb ballw, a word that means to throw but it also means to hurl, and we will translate it, "and it was hurled." This is a down-burst. The passive voice: the thunderstorm, the hail, the fire mixed with blood, receives the action of the verb in a tremendous down-burst. Then we have the prepositional phrase e)ij plus the accusative of gh, "to the earth." This is how we know that it is a down-burst. Wind shear has only been recently discovered and distinguished from tornadoes.

Corrected translation: "Then the first one [the angel or the pur sui vant officer in the college of heralds] sounded his trumpet [gave the signal] and there followed a terrible thunder storm, hail and fire which had been mixed with blood [of the Tribulational martyrs, Revelation 6:9,10], and it [the supernatural thunderstorm] was hurled to the earth [the phenomenon known as wind shear or down-burst]."

Next we have to notice that there are some results from this activity. All of the results occur in the area of burning. Three times in the result column we have the aorist passive indicative of the verb katakainw. Katakainw means to burn up, to consume, to destroy by fire. The culminative aorist tense views the down-burst of the supernatural thunderstorm in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of its existing results. The fire or lightning in the thunderstorm has great destructive effect, it destroys one third of the land surface, one third of the trees and one third of the green grass. Later on we will discuss the problem of what third. The passive voice: one third of the land surface, one third of the trees, one third of the grass, receives the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of these results. We translate: "and with the result that one third of the land surface was destroyed by fire; one third of the trees were burned up plus one third of the green grass".

By green grass is meant agricultural grains, like hay. Both natural vegetation and cultivated plant life is included. Along with the tress all plant life provides oxygen on the surface of the earth, so this is a matter of general health of humanity from both food and atmosphere. The cultivated part of the land surface is called gh, while the natural plant life is derived from the noun xortoj which is translated "grass" but also includes grain. A destruction of the great rain forests like those in Central and South America, or those in the Congo basin, or the Indo-Malayan rain forests, would be very detrimental to mankind on the earth. The terrestrial vegetation of the world may be classified into three categories of plant life: grassland, desert, and forest. Desert here is not a reference to sand but to the high desert areas and other places where grazing exists. Grasslands of the world actually cover 13,000,000 square miles of valuable grazing land. Of this area three and a half million square miles are suitable for the production of cold weather crops, grass like wheat, rye, oats. Six million eight hundred thousand square miles are suitable for warm weather crops, cotton, etc. Two million seven hundred thousand square miles are suitable for grazing only. That is what the grasslands produce and the grasslands are caught in this judgment so that one third of that is destroyed. A tremendous impact on mankind is therefore provided in the first third of this trumpet judgment.

What about the desert grazing land? The deserts cover some 17,000,000 square miles of good grazing land, good for either grazing or irrigation in farming. The fact that the entire world contains approximately 26,000,000 square miles suitable for grazing, 12,800,000 square miles good for producing warm weather crops, and about eleven and a half million square miles capable of producing cold weather crops, it can be seen immediately that when the desert is hit as well then you are destroying a great portion of the world's food supply. The natural forests of the world cover an area of approximately 22,000,000 square miles. About 14,000,000 square miles are capable of being converted into crop-producing land. The tremendous devastation of this supernatural storm can be pictured which destroys one third of the high grass savannahs, the tall grass savannahs, the desert grass savannahs, marsh grass, short grass, desert shrubbery, rain forest, etc. The devastation of this judgment staggers the imagination.

The adverse affects on weather, food supply, and many other factors would be devastating to mankind on earth during the Tribulation.

Translation of verse seven: "Then the first one [the angel or the pur sui vant officer in the college of heralds] sounded his trumpet [gave the signal] and there followed a terrible thunder storm, hail and fire which had been mixed with blood [of the Tribulational martyrs — Revelation 6:9,10], and it [the supernatural thunderstorm] was hurled to the earth [the phenomenon known as wind shear or down-burst]: with the result that one third of the land surface was destroyed by fire, both a third of the trees was burned up plus all the green grasses."

A similar prophecy is found in Joel 1:15-20, "What a dreadful day! [the day of the Tribulation] for the day of the Lord is near [second advent], and it will come as destruction from the Almighty." Has not food been cut off from before our eyes, yes, joy and gladness from the house of our God? And the seeds shrivel under their clods, the storehouses for food are desolate, barns are torn down; for grain has dried up. How the cattle groan! the herds mill about, because there is no pasture; yes, even the flocks of sheep are suffering. To you, O Lord, I call: for fire has devoured the open pastures, and the flame has burned up all the trees of the forests. Even the wild animals of the field pant for you: for the watering holes have dried up, and fire has devoured the open grazing land." This is an amplification of the first trumpet judgment.

The judgements which we have noted in Revelation up to the time of the trumpet judgements are the result of man's bad decisions. Bad decisions result in judgment. But we have now come to a point where God directly judges mankind and the first four trumpet judgements are judgements related to nature. We now move on to verses eight and nine where we see the judgements of the second trumpet.

Verse 8, we have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated “then,” and we have the adjective numeral deuteroj which means “second.” With it, again, the same subject as always a)ggeloi, “the second angel,” and it refers to one of the members of the college of heralds, the fourth category, the pur sui vant messenger. Then follows the verb, the aorist active indicative of the verb salpizw, and it means to sound a trumpet. We translate: “Then the second angel [the pur sui vant messenger from the college of heralds] sounded his trumpet.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, this is the second trumpet judgment against nature. The active voice: the pur sui vant messenger produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a simple statement of fact. This is a judgment from heaven. This signal on the trumpet begins the second judgment given in direct answer to the imprecatory prayers of Tribulational believers: a judgment against the seas of the world, specifically salt water areas.

The seas of the world with their salt water form ninety-eight per cent of the world’s water supply which means that two per cent of all the water available on the earth’s surface is fresh water. This would be more than adequate were it not that the world’s greatest reserves are locked inaccessibly in our ice caps. The problem therefore is to provide fresh water when and where it is needed and to ensure that it is not used faster than it can be replaced. The oceans of the world are nature’s reservoirs for this. Water evaporates from them to fall as rain and snow over land. So we actually get our fresh water from evaporation of salt water and from the land it returns mostly through rivers to the sea. Therefore the maximum amount of fresh water available depends on precipitation which depends on evaporation from the seas. This judgment is an attack on the salt water seas; the next trumpet judgment will be an attack upon fresh water, lakes, and rivers.

So we have a great mountain of burning fire which is suddenly used at this point, the aorist active indicative gives us our next verb, ballw, which actually means here to hurl. A great mountain of burning fire is hurled into the sea; “and became,” the aorist middle indicative of ginomai, which means to come, to follow, here it means to become; “and a third of the seas became blood.” This is a similar judgment found in Exodus 17:20, also mentioned in Psalm 105:29. It describes the first plague in Egypt and Psalm 105:29 puts it this way: “He [Aaron, serving Moses] turned their waters into blood, and caused their fish to die.” Of course, this came from God through Aaron and Moses. This was a local judgment against the Pharaoh of Egypt but here in Revelation this is a universal judgment against the seas and oceans of the earth.

Translation: “Then the second angel sounded his trumpet, and a great mountain of burning fire it was hurled into the sea: and a third of the seas became blood.”

The significance of the blood here is twofold. First of all it is a reminder to the unbelievers of the Tribulation that they have rejected the only way of salvation which has been given to them through evangelism and personal witnessing under the title: “The blood of Christ, God’s Son cleanses from all sin,” redemption, reconciliation and propitiation. The second reason is that the blood acts as a pollution, a salt water pollution. The importance of oceans and seas in sustaining the natural balance cannot be overestimated. Pollution on the ocean therefore becomes a very serious matter. The great mountain of burning fire will pollute oceans and seas up to one third by turning them in to blood. The Tribulational results of the second trumpet will be noted in verse nine.

Verse 9, When it says that a third of the creatures which were in the sea died, we have the aorist active indicative of the verb $\alpha\pi\omicron\upsilon\eta\sigma\kappa\omega$. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: creatures of the sea produce the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of this judgment. Fish and other sea food offer valuable protein in the diet of mankind. Many of the countries of the world depend on sea foods for their very existence. Again, this is reference to the four horsemen of the apocalypse where hunger is one of the great causes for death in the Tribulation.

There is also an effect on shipping, for it says at the end of this verse, “a third of the shipping was destroyed,” the aorist passive indicative of $\delta\iota\alpha\phi\epsilon\iota\rho\omega$, and it does mean to destroy in the very same sense as death. This is the death to shipping. The passive voice means the subject receives the action of the verb and the shipping itself was destroyed. The economic wealth of many nations depends on their shipping and their trade.

It will be noticed that in verses eight and nine we have a general attack on all salt water, the oceans and the seas, and the shipping. Translation: “Then a third of the creatures in the sea, having life, died; also a third of the shipping was destroyed.”

The largest ocean in the world is the Pacific which covers 63,855,000 square miles, with a maximum depth of 36,198 feet. It is deeper than the highest height, Mount Everest. Next is the Atlantic which has 31,744,000 square miles. When you add these up plus all of the many other seas of the world it can be seen how devastating this second trumpet judgment will be.

That brings us, then, to another body of water, fresh water, in verses 10-11, the judgment of the third trumpet.

Verse 10, We have a word in the Greek which is used at least three different ways, $\alpha\sigma\tau\epsilon\rho$. It is correctly translated “star.” Sometimes it refers to a celestial body, sometimes it refers to a planet, and sometimes it refers to angelic creatures. In the Old Testament “star” is even used for achievement.

“Then the third angel [the pur sui vant messenger] sounded his trumpet, and a great star, burning like a torch, fell from heaven.” The word “great” which is used with it, $\mu\epsilon\gamma\alpha\lambda\omicron\varsigma$, also is significant. It means “great.” Actually, this time it is not a star. This is a giant meteor, a transient celestial body that enters the earth’s atmosphere with great velocity. It has incandescence with heat. It is luminous and shiny with the heat generated by the resistance of the air. We will translate this then: “ a giant meteor, incandescent like a lamp, fell from the sky.”

“and it fell on a third of the rivers and lakes.” The words “springs of waters” actually means lakes. This contamination is from a giant meteor and it affects one third of the fresh water supply of planet earth, specifically the rivers and the lakes. All of the lakes of the world add up to a considerable body of water, one third of which will be contaminated.

Translation of verse 10: "Then the third angel sounded his trumpet, a giant meteor, incandescent, fell from the sky, and it fell on the third of the rivers and the lakes."

At this point we stop to notice a principle of interpretation. All three of these first judgements talk about a third being affected. The judgements are literal, they are local, they are lucid, and they are locked in. And these are the three principles that we should note.

First of all the judgements we are studying are literal, they are not to be taken symbolically. These judgements come from heaven, they are related to natural phenomena but they are administered in a supernatural way by the angelic college of heralds.

Secondly we note that these judgements are local. That is, a third of the earth or a third of the seas and oceans, or a third of the lakes and rivers, are affected. It is the local area where the hail and the fire and the giant meteor hits that is the area affected. So when these areas are affected it is wherever the judgment hits and from there it moves out locally to one third of planet earth.

The third thing we note is that these judgements are lucid. No question as to what is affected in the four trumpet judgements.

Finally, we note that these judgements are locked in. The certainty of these future judgements as a part of historical trends of the Tribulation is as certain as the Word of God which lives forever and ever. And by way of application to us in the Church Age, just as certainly as these things will occur so we as believers in this dispensation can anticipate some great historical disaster, which we are now experiencing.

The recipients of these judgements are the unbelievers of the Tribulation. No believers are destroyed by these judgements from God. To the contrary, these trumpet judgements are the results of the imprecatory prayers of Tribulational believers. Two categories of Tribulational believers exist at this time, those who have been martyred, and they are treated as Old Testament saints, and those who survive the Tribulation to the point of the second advent, they are treated as Millennial believers. The Tribulation then becomes what we would have to classify as a transitional dispensation that marks the dividing line between two categories of believers. And since the Tribulation is the extension of and termination of the dispensation of Israel, i.e. Daniel's seventieth week, those believers who are martyred are going to be classified with the Old Testament saints. They will receive their resurrection bodies with the rest of the Old Testament believers at the second advent.

In other words, remember the doctrine of resurrection. The resurrection takes place under the Greek word tacij which in 1 Corinthians 15 means battalion, "every man in his own battalion." In resurrection there are two battalions. The first battalion is made up of believers only, the second battalion is made up of unbelievers only. The second battalion is the resurrection which takes place at the end of time, the great white throne judgment where the unbelievers are cast into the lake of fire. But the first battalion is broken down into four companies and is pictured as a battalion review. Alpha Company moves out first and has already passed the reviewing stand. That is our Lord Jesus Christ. Next comes Bravo Company, the Rapture of the Church. Then Charlie company, the Old Testament saints at the second advent. Delta Company follows last, and that would be the resurrection body given to Millennial saints at the end of the Millennium. So you have four different companies involved in the resurrection and they take place at different times. Since the Tribulation, then, is a separate dispensation preceding the Millennium these believers who survive the Tribulation will become the cadre for the Millennial believers.

Here is the point of application. At the beginning of the Millennium there are believers only because that is the beginning of a civilisation. All the unbelievers of the Millennium will be the children of believing parents or grandparents. Since life is extended in the Millennium that means that all unbelievers have parents and grandparents who are believers. The principle is one that you must never forget and it must never become a source of unhappiness to you. How your children turn out may or may not be your responsibility. In most cases it is not. In the time in which we live because of drugs and because of the evil society in which we live, in which drugs are tolerated, in which you are ostracised through social groups if you

Principles from what we have done in Revelation

1. The third world is a perfect example of negative volition toward Bible doctrine, rejection of establishment, and the function of the cosmic system.
2. All life is not valuable, criminals must be executed, the enemy killed, the lazy and the degenerate destroyed, as a part of divine discipline.
3. Impersonal love is designed to benefit the human race; personal love is optional, designed for interaction of a few.
4. Virtue is developed through divine laws of establishment — believers and unbelievers, and the divine dynasphere where virtue is developed for believers only.
5. Impersonal love is a problem-solver. Christ solved the sin problem through impersonal love. Personal love is not a problem-solver but often a distraction. Or, personal love is often a distraction to relationship with God; impersonal love is the result of relationship with God.

The principle of energy

Energy minus ability, energy without ability, is misdirected arrogance. Energy without ability produces mental attitude arrogance or inordinate ambition. When people have energy and no ability they become troublemakers. They are a source of dissension in any organisation.

Energy without ability results in self-righteous arrogance, crusader arrogance. Crusader and self-righteous arrogance always combine to form a person who sticks his nose into everyone else's business, intrudes into the privacy of others, becomes a gossip or maligner, tries to run your life and control your life, or the person who tries to intimidate you.

Energy without ability produces conspiracy arrogance, sexual arrogance, iconoclastic arrogance, morality arrogance, the arrogance of Christian service. People who have energy but no ability to serve the Lord are always using their energy in pseudo systems of Christian production.

Ability without energy is lack of motivation, lack of self-discipline. This, of course, is the other side of the story. Ability without energy, lack of motivation, and lack of self-discipline is what we might call the arrogance of laziness.

The controlled energy of hard work, on the other hand, produces ability and ability channels hard work into fields of productive success. This is simply saying that ability is acquired through hard work, through dedication, through plugging. Energy plus ability is the true drive in life. Energy is basically created in the body but ability is created in the attitudes of the soul. The ability is created in the motivational function of the soul, not the IQ of the soul, not the emotion of the soul, not even the self-consciousness of the soul. Motivation in the soul produces the decisions to take in doctrine on a daily basis regardless of circumstances, distractions, or discouragement. Both energy and ability are harnessed through perception and application of doctrine. Therefore, energy plus ability must be related to doctrine and wisdom otherwise a pseudo drive is created and all pseudo drives terminate in the modus operandi of the cosmic system.

Our Lord's energy and wisdom, His ability during His first advent, was derived from His residence and function in the prototype divine dynasphere and it resulted in the greatest of all victories in human history, the strategic victory of the cross. Our Lord's wisdom, coupled with His energy and ability at the second advent will set in motion the greatest reign in all of human history. Jesus Christ will rule the world. In the meantime, of course, our Lord has provided for us the divine dynasphere so that we can face and overcome every disaster in life. Our Lord has seen fit through the vehicle of eschatology to give us an account of the greatest period of historical disaster, the Tribulation, duplicated often in our lives and in our lifetime but with a difference: we have the means of meeting any disaster, any tragedy, any situation in life, and overcoming it.

Verse 11, the result of what happened when the meteor struck the fresh water supply. We begin by noting the name of the meteor. We have discussed the word asth which can be a star, it can be an angel, it can refer to a human being who achieves, it also refers to a meteor. "And the name of the meteor is called," the present passive indicative of legw, translated here “to call.” The perfective present tense refers to a fact which has come to be in the past but is emphasised as a present reality. The passive voice: the name or designation of the meteor is going to receive the action of the verb in this verse. The indicative mood is declarative for a simple statement of fact, and with that comes the fact, the predicate nominative of the Greek word apsinqoj, transliterated “absinthe,” a very famous wine in France and made more famous by what the French Legionnaires did when they had too much of it. Today the name absinthe is the name of a green alcoholic liqueur containing oil of wormwood and annis. It was famous in the French Foreign Legion by causing nervous derangements and wild hallucinations. But it is translated in our verse “wormwood” and that is a possible translation, the only problem being that wormwood is not a deadly poison and we are dealing with a pollution where fresh water is concerned. Whatever apsinqoj was it killed many people. Absinthe or wine prepared with wormwood was well-known in the ancient world. Wormwood is a plant. The oil from the plant has a very strong bitter taste. The oil was also used to destroy intestinal worms in the ancient world and was considered a great cure. It was also used to manufacture absinthe in the ancient world as well and since the noun is used for wormwood perhaps a few scriptures will give us an idea as to exactly what the Bible has in mind by calling this meteor “Wormwood.”

Proverbs 5:3,4 — here wormwood is used for hooking up with the wrong doll! “For the lips of an adulterous woman drip honey, and her palate is smoother than oil of frankincense. But in the end she is as bitter as wormwood.” Wormwood here is a frustrated relationship with a member of the opposite sex. A bitter experience is what it connotes here.

The word for wormwood in the Hebrew is not the same as the Greek, it is laanah, and it is exactly the same as absinthe in the Greek. Wormwood is identified generally in the Bible with some form of discipline: to an individual has made some kind of a mistake in a relationship with a member of the opposite sex, or for a nation which has failed as a client nation. The latter is the meaning that Jeremiah assigns to it in Jeremiah 9:15, “Therefore thus saith the Lord of the armies, the God of Israel [our Lord Jesus Chris]; Behold, I will feed this people [referring to Israel about to be punished with the fifth cycle of discipline] with wormwood [wormwood is the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline to the client nation Israel], I will give them poisoned water to drink.”

The explanation in Jeremiah 9:16 follows: “I will scatter them among the nations [that’s wormwood], whom neither they nor their fathers have known [the Chaldeans in 586 BC; the Romans in 70 AD]: I will send the sword after them until I have annihilated them.” This is what wormwood means.

Now we have a giant meteor called Wormwood because it is the vehicle for the administration of God’s justice on unbelievers of the Tribulation. Wormwood connotes divine judgment and the giant meteor is the means of administering that judgment under the fifth trumpet. We must remember that Wormwood is the name of the meteor and not what pollutes the water. So the giant meteor, incandescent, burning like a lamp or a torch, is a symbol of divine judgment on fresh water upon planet earth. The judgment is literal.

We will stay with the translation of the name of the meteor, Wormwood, because it always connotes some form of divine judgment.

“Therefore, thus saith the Lord of the armies, ‘Behold I am going to feed them wormwood, and make them drink poisonous water: for from the prophets in Jerusalem pollution has gone out throughout the entire land’.”

The real pollution in that passage is false teaching from the prophets and this real pollution is the basis for divine judgment, or wormwood. Wormwood depicts the anti-pivot in a client nation, and specifies idolatry in Israel as the gathering point for those who reject Bible doctrine.

Deuteronomy 29:18, “Lest there be among you any man, or woman, or family, or tribe, whose right lobe turns away today from the Lord our God, to go and serve the gods of those Gentile nations; lest there shall be among you a root bearing poison fruit and wormwood.” Only believers who are positive toward doctrine ever survive wormwood type judgment.

This is the subject of Lamentations chapter three, beginning at verse 15. In verses 15-19 we see the wormwood judgment, “He has filled me with bitterness, he has made me drunk with wormwood.” Now the wormwood is described as a literal judgment. “He has broken my teeth with gravel, he has caused me to cower in the dust. My life has been deprived of its prosperity: I have forgotten the good [I have forgotten what blessing is]. So I think my strength is gone and so has my hope from the Lord: I remember my adversity and my straying, I remember the wormwood, the bitterness [the meaning of wormwood].”

Deliverance by logistical grace from wormwood judgment is mentioned in verses 20-26, a passage which should remind us that no wormwood judgment ever touches the advancing or the mature believer. This becomes important in the interpretation of the next chapter because wormwood judgements are going to include demon invasions, and demon invasions are going to first torture and then destroy unbelievers in the cosmic system, and believers in the cosmic system; believers and unbelievers who are serving Satan. But no believer who is positive toward doctrine and advancing will ever be disturbed by a wormwood judgment.

“Definitely my soul remembers, and is humbled within me. This I recall to mind, therefore I have hope [confidence]. It is of then Lord’s mercies that we are not consumed, because his compassions fail not. They are new every morning: great is thy faithfulness [great is logistical grace]. The Lord is my portion, thinks my soul; therefore I have confidence in him. The Lord is good to those who wait for him, to the person who seeks him. It is good to wait silently or quietly for the deliverance of the Lord.”

And so while the wormwood judgment was being administered as the fifth cycle of discipline to Israel, the subject of Lamentations, it was not true where believers had Bible doctrine and were advancing. And just as Jeremiah was delivered from the wormwood judgment of the fifth cycle of discipline in BC 586 so Tribulational believers will be delivered from the wormwood judgment of the third trumpet.

“And the name of the giant meteor is called Wormwood.” Then we have a description of the wormwood judgment in the Tribulation, “Now one third of the waters [fresh waters: lakes, rivers] became,” the aorist active indicative of the verb ginomai, which means to follow, to be, to become. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It takes the third trumpet and gathers it into a single whole, the pollution of one third of the fresh water supply of the earth. The active voice: the fresh water supply, two per cent of all water on the earth, produces the action of the verb.

The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the pollution of one third of the world’s fresh water supply.

The importance of water for sustaining life cannot be overestimated. Here is an ellipsis generally not recognised, therefore the word “polluted” is inserted between the verb ginomai and the preposition e)ij, plus the accusative of wormwood [e)ij plus a)psinqoj], and it is translated like this: “and the name of the giant meteor is called Wormwood: now one third of the [fresh] waters became polluted [poisoned] because of the meteor called Wormwood; in fact many of the human race [unbelievers] died,” the aorist active indicative of a)poqnhskw, meaning to die. The culminative aorist tense views the death of many people in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. The verb denotes the end of judgment for many people in the world. The waters were polluted by some form of poison or disease-bearing germs, many unbelievers drank it and died. The active voice: the Tribulational unbeliever produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the results of water pollution, the judgment of many Tribulational unbelievers. Then we have e)k plus the ablative of u(dor, “from the waters,” and then the causal conjunction o(ti, “because,” the aorist passive indicative from the verb pikrainw, meaning to be made bitter or polluted. It not only means to make bitter, it also means hostility, to become hostile, it also means to be polluted, and that is exactly the way we will translate it: “because they were polluted [they were made hostile or bitter].”

Many diseases are communicated by means of water. Even metallic poisoning, especially lead poisoning, can be transmitted through the water supply. Between 1920 and 1936, a period of seventeen years, there were 412 reported water-born epidemics of disease in the United States of America. This affected 115,000 people and caused 955 deaths. These are just normal functions, not divine judgment.

Pollution of fresh water falls into three categories: a microbe such as virus and bacteria, natural pollution from human or animal waste, environmental pollution such as industrial chemicals and toxic waste, acid rain from polluted air. Streams, rivers, lakes, and small reservoirs should not be used as a direct source of home water supply because of the potential danger from pollution. Modern systems for the purification of water are generally excellent but not foolproof. However, this judgment of the third trumpet far exceeds any problem or any danger hitherto known to man or anything that is related to fresh water problems. This pollution of water is supernatural and will claim the lives of hundreds of thousands and perhaps millions of unbelievers in the Tribulation.

The fourth trumpet is the most difficult of all. This is the one that is going to affect the atmosphere.

Verse 12, “And the fourth angel [the pur sui vant messenger] sounded his trumpet, then a third of the sun, a third of the moon, and a third of the stars were struck,” the aorist passive indicative of the word plessw which means to strike, to hit. Figuratively, when used of celestial bodies it means to lose, at least temporarily, at least one third of their radiation. So we are talking about loss of light. The stars here refer to the planets in the solar system only. They were struck, meaning loss of light, loss of radiation at its source. The culminative aorist tense views the event in its entirety — the striking of the moon, the sun and the planets — but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results: loss of radiation. The passive voice: the sun, the moon, and the planets [stars] receive the action of the verb, they were struck so that their light was lost up to one third. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of this divine judgment in relationship to the solar system to celestial bodies.

The gravitational attraction of the sun controls the orbits of the planets. The sun is a rotating nuclear furnace composed mostly of hydrogen and helium which constantly emit energy. Periodically magnetic fields develop on the surface areas of the sun called sunspots. They are darker in appearance simply because they are slightly cooler. Associated with these disturbances which last for weeks are streams of gas which are called prominences. Such activity affects the earth’s magnetic fields as well as its atmosphere and weather. Maximum sunspot activity occurs during eleven-year cycles. From the sun comes the gamma rays, the X-rays, the ultra violet rays, visible light, infra red, and radio waves. These waves are called the sun’s electromagnetic radiation. Only some of the longer waves penetrate the atmosphere and reach the earth’s surface. The atmosphere therefore acts as a filter and it filters these rays. In the final layer around the earth, known as the troposphere, we have nitrogen, oxygen, carbon dioxide, which supports life and becomes the abode of circulating air and water which creates our climate. So it can be seen that to knock out the normal function of these things would be a very disastrous thing.

In our passage, when this fourth pur sui vant messenger blows his trumpet, light, solar winds, and radiation is cut down by one third at the source. The same is true of the moon and the planets in the solar system, and that is what the first part of verse 12 is actually saying.

The actual result begins with the conjunction i(na. It is translated, “so that,” “a third of them,” and then we have the aorist subjunctive from the verb skotizw, “were darkened.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: star or planets of the solar system produce the action. The subjunctive mood is for the purpose clause.

“and the day might not shine for a third of it,” the aorist active subjunctive of fainw plus the negative mh continues the purpose clause, “might not give light [or might not shine].” The culminative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the blackout of one third of each day. The active voice: both the day and the night produce the action of the verb. The subjunctive mood is used as a part of the purpose clause. And then it adds in corrected translation, kai nuc o(moioj, “and the night likewise [in the same way].”

Verse 13, the message of the eagle herald. We begin by noting the aorist active indicative of o(raw plus the aorist active indicative of a)kouw. This is the beginning of the transition to the demon invasions in chapter nine. “I observed and I heard.” The aorist tense in each case is a constative aorist, it gathers the observation into one entirety. The active voice of each verb: John the apostle produces the action. The indicative mood is for the reality of what he now observes and hears.

We have the objective genitive composed of two words, the numeral e(ij which should be translated “one” and it will be noticed that there is no word for the numeral in the King James version. Then a)etoj is for an eagle, “I saw one eagle.” A problem arises immediately. Is this an eagle or an angel? The Greek says eagle but this is an angel. However, that is an interpretation rather than a translation. The Greek word favours “eagle” but the eagle in reality is the angelic herald of Revelation 4:7 who, it will be remembered, is in the highest echelon of the college of heralds. He is a herald, “the fourth angelic herald [says Revelation 4:7] was like a flying eagle.” So the fourth angelic herald who bears the eagle escutcheon is the one who proclaims the coming of the three woes of the last two trumpet judgements. So what we have is: “Then I observed and heard one flying eagle,” the fourth herald of Revelation 4:7.

Next follows the ascriptive use of the present active participle petomai which means “flying,” and here the present active participle is a complementary participle used to complete the action of the verb. It is said to be flying in mid heaven, referring to the second heaven which is the realm of angelic activity, according to Acts 7:42. Remember, we have three heavens in the Bible. The first is the troposphere plus the stratosphere etc. The second heaven the realm of angelic activity where the fourth herald proclaims these three woes which are synonymous with trumpets five, six, and seven. The third heaven is the throne of God, as we noted in Revelation 4:5.

The angels proclamation follows with the present active participle legw, which means to say, to speak, and many similar things. It means here to make a proclamation. The futuristic present tense denotes an event which has not but is regarded as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as already occurring. The active voice: the fourth angelic herald, the eagle flying, produces the action. The participle is circumstantial, and a circumstantial participle can be translated like a finite verb with the conjunction “and,” “and he said [or proclaimed].”

Next we have the instrumental of manner from two words, the adjective megaj and the noun fwnh, “with a loud voice.” Then we have three interjections: o)uai, o)uai, o)uai, which is comparable to our “woe.” The first woe, the first use of the interjection here, refers to the fifth trumpet, Revelation 9:1-12. This woe refers to the invasion of the earth by the first demon assault army, an assault army which at the present time is in jail in the abyss. It will be led by Abaddon or Apollyon who is second only to Satan in rank among the fallen angels.

The second woe mentioned here is the sixth trumpet of Revelation 9:13-21. This is the invasion of the second demon assault army. The difference between these two armies: the first demon assault army will torture men on the earth for five months, the second one is a killer army which will be initiated from under the Euphrates river. Both the fifth and sixth trumpets of the first two woes are demon invasions of planet earth by hard-core armies that are not operational at the present time in the Church Age.

The third woe refers to the seventh trumpet of Revelation 11:15-12:17. This is Satan’s greatest anti-Semitism offensive. Satan himself leads a third demon army in an attempt to destroy all Israel so that the second advent cannot occur because there will be no Jews to fulfil the unconditional promises to.

“Then I observed and heard one eagle [the fourth herald of Revelation 4:7] flying in mid heaven, and he said in a loud voice, Woe, Woe, Woe [trumpets five, six, and seven].”

Then we have “to the inhabitants of the earth”. These are Tribulational unbelievers and Tribulational believers living in the cosmic system. The present active participle is in the accusative case and it is from the noun katoikew, used here as a noun with the generic use of the definite article to describe a special category. The category refers to people who live in the cosmic system and it will include believers and unbelievers. Later on in the next chapter we will make the distinction for believers will be delivered during the Tribulation. They will have their own special wall of fire of positive volition toward doctrine resulting in learning doctrine. But there will also be a tremendous amount of negative volition among some believers and they are also going to be the victims of these demon attacks.

Next we have a very strange prepositional phrase because of the way it is translated, e)k plus the ablative of source or the ablative of origin, sometimes called the ablative of effective cause. It is not translated like most prepositions, e)k. E)k plus the ablative is ordinarily “from,” but when it is e)k plus the ablative of effective cause then it means “because.” Hence it denotes the origin of the reason. This is a presupposition of the last three trumpet judgements and it is correctly translated “because.” And then we have the ablative of loipoj, meaning the remaining, and the word fwnh which here means “blasts,” “because of the remaining blasts of the three angels who are about to sound off.”

Translation: “Then I observed and heard one eagle flying in mid heaven [the second heaven], and he said with a loud voice, Woe [reference to the fifth trumpet], Woe [sixth trumpet], Woe [seventh trumpet], to the inhabitants of the earth because of the remaining blasts of the trumpet from the three angels who are about to sound off!”

We note, then, that Satan has three attack armies composed of hard-core demons. None of them are operational at the present time based on the fact that today they would be wasting their time due to the fact that the Holy Spirit acts as a special restrainer in this particular dispensation, the Church Age. Also, because for the only time in history God the Holy Spirit actually indwells every believer so that demon possession is impossible. Demon influence is possible. Demon possession, of course is the invasion of the body by one or more demons; demon influence is the invasion of the personality and that is possible through residence in the cosmic system. But the believer cannot be demon possessed. Unbelievers can be demon possessed but not believers. Both believers and unbelievers can be under demon influence, the invasion of the personality through residence in the cosmic system. But in the future there will be a new wrinkle added: demon attack — literal, physical attack. It is not possible now because God the Holy Spirit acts as a restrainer.

So Satan has three hard-core attack armies and their mission will be to actually, literally, physically, overtly attack people. This will be noted in passages coming up. The fascinating thing about all of this, however, is that these demon armies, one commanded by Satan [the third assault army], one commanded by his chief of staff, Apollyon or Abaddon [the first assault army], and the Euphrates army commanded by four demons are going to attack in the Tribulation, overtly and literally assault, people living in the cosmic system. That means servants of Satan, for believers and unbelievers in any dispensation living in the cosmic system are the servants of Satan. Although Satan is a fantastic genius he is actually going to turn his hard-core assault armies loose against his own human servants, unbelievers and believers who reside in the cosmic system. Note: Satan seems to be a little ungrateful!

While the power of Satan, then, is very great and his genius is even greater than that he is unable to control or co-ordinate his very own kingdom of darkness which in the last half of the Tribulation will be out of hand and uncontrollable due to the fact that Satan is no longer in heaven and no longer controls his armies from heaven. Demon armies attack and destroy Satan's human servants. And while it does not make sense and it appears incompatible with Satan's genius a study of the cosmic system will aid us to understand this interpretive principle, for the interpretive principle at this point is a very important one and one that will come up several times in the next chapter. Arrogance has no loyalty to arrogance. This principle will be expanded in many ways.

1. Loyalty, which is a great facet of leadership, demands integrity, and arrogance has no integrity.
2. Those human beings who live and reside in the cosmic system do not possess integrity. In fact, many people have integrity before they enter the cosmic system but once they enter the cosmic system that cancels their integrity, their honour. Arrogance neutralises integrity.

3. Therefore, anticipating the next chapter, hard-core demon armies attack Satan's human servants, which implies that Satan has lost control of his demon assault armies. The loss of control is that there is no honour among those who are arrogant.

4. There is no respect for authority where arrogance has the ascendancy. Smart arrogance will pretend to respect authority to gain some objective for all operational arrogance is hypocritical, whether among people or fallen angels versus people.

5. Even Satan himself becomes inconsistent at the end of the Tribulation. he will attack, he will search and destroy on a mad search and destroy mission against all unbelieving Jews who live in the cosmic system in his attempt to destroy all Jews. That means he will attack his own servants who are Jews as well as believers who are Jews.

6. At least Satan's great attack leading the third assault army against the Jews [the seventh trumpet] has reason behind it.

7. Satan is seeking to destroy all Jews before the second advent of Christ so that God's promises to Israel are abrogated. The unconditional covenants to Israel demand living Jews at the second advent.

8. This emphasises to us a great principle. Even though the unbelievers have served Satan well in the cosmic system and even though cosmic believers have served Satan well, when Satan is through using them he discards them.

9. This is the modus operandi used by all arrogant human beings. All arrogant human beings live in the cosmic system which intensifies their arrogance, moves it in many directions. Therefore, human beings living in the cosmic system have neither loyalty, gratitude or the integrity to appreciate loyal service from subordinates.

10. Many Christians have been shocked by executives whose promotion and success depended on their hard and faithful service, yet, when they were no longer useful or because of some pressure became a source of embarrassment they were discarded without any consideration.

11. Arrogant leadership or executive function knows no loyalty to faithful subordinates and has no appreciation for past services rendered.

12. So even service in the cosmic system of the devil is no protection from the devil or his hard-core demon assault armies who at this moment are incarcerated in the abyss of Hades, under the water of the Euphrates.

The last three trumpets, also known as the three woes, have to do with three demon invasions of the earth. We have demons on the earth, invisible of course. There are demons who actually indwell unbelievers [demon possession] and we also have what is known as demon influence whereby the demon cannot indwell the body of the believer because it is the temple of the Holy Spirit, but he can, of course, invade the personality. Demon influence is personality invasion; demon possession is body invasion. These are the general functions of demons in relationship to mankind at the present time. Back in Genesis chapter six demons were visible, very handsome, and there was a sexual infiltration which led to the whole system of mythology as we have it today, mythology not being mythology but based on truth. There is in the future, however, in the middle of the Tribulation something that has never occurred before. Three great demon armies are going to invade the earth when Satan is cast down from heaven, never again to be in heaven. So Satan is going to be cast down, at which time he is going to be permitted to release his three hard-core demon armies. They attack human beings physically.

First of all there will be the first demon assault army which we will meet in the first thirteen verses of chapter nine. It is led by the second ranking demon of all time called Apollyon or Abaddon. The attack is going to be made over a period of five months against man. There is only one restriction on the target: only those in the cosmic system can be attacked. Those who are outside the cosmic system, believers, are protected by a wall of fire. These demons will attack and torture for five months. The result is that people will want to die who are being tortured but they will not be permitted to die.

The second hard-core demon assault army comes from the vicinity of under the Euphrates. It is led by four demon general officers and they will kill one third of the people of the earth.

The third demon assault army is the last trumpet [the 7th], the third woe. It occurs at the end of chapter eleven and goes into chapter twelve. It is an attack upon all Jews and it is the greatest wave of anti-Semitism the world has ever known.

The demon attack upon the human race will be unprecedented. There has never been anything like it. There is demon possession today, there is demon influence, in the past there has been demon sexual infiltration, but none of these can in any way compare with what will happen in the last part of the Tribulation.

Chapter nine of Revelation is entitled "Demon Invasions." There are two of them: the first woe, the same as the fifth trumpet, the invasion from the abyss by the first demon assault army, verses 1-12; the second woe, the same as the sixth trumpet, the invasion from the Euphrates of the second assault army, verses 13-21.

We begin by noting that Satan is the ruler of this world, he is the highest of all fallen angels. There are certain angelic creatures who passed him during the angelic conflict. In his original state from creation Satan was the highest of all angelic creatures. The highest creatures at creation were cherubs and Satan was the anointed cherub, but he lost out along the way and there are at least nine angels out of the millions of angels who have passed him in achievement.

Principle: It isn't the person who is spectacular who makes a sudden rise, it isn't the person who has obvious talents; the person who really makes it is the plugger, the one who plugs with Bible doctrine.

Satan was the highest of all angels by creation but he lost his high estate and seraphs are all angels who in the prehistoric angelic conflict thought more of Bible doctrine, doctrine was more real to them, they were persistent and consistent in the perception of doctrine. They were the highest achievers of all time in the realm of Bible doctrine. The only people in the human race to come close to them are people like Moses, Isaiah, Jeremiah, the apostle Paul, the apostle John, and even Peter might be included.

Arrogance inevitably leads to inordinate ambition and there is no greater ambition than the ambition of Satan. He was the highest of all angelic creatures. He is the ruler of fallen angels, according to Matthew 8:28; 9:34; 12:26; Luke 11:18, and many other passages. Therefore we have to recognize Satan as the prehistoric super creature. Embodied in this one creature is all of the beauty and attractiveness and brilliance. Isaiah 14 and Ezekiel 28 describe him. In his hard-core second assault army, as well as in his first assault army, we will see some of these characteristics. There are a tremendous number of demons operating in the atmosphere and around planet earth but these of his assault armies are so tough, so hard-core, that they are actually kept out of the picture until the end of the Tribulation until the sovereignty of God permits them to become functional. That is exactly what we are going to be studying, the great Satanic offensive against mankind; mankind whom he rules, believers who live in the cosmic system and unbelievers living in the cosmic system. Satan is going to turn against his own human servants, people who are living in the cosmic system.

Satan has three falls. One of them is mentioned in the first part of chapter nine; Satan has two advents, first in Genesis three where he found man in perfect environment and he destroyed that perfect environment through being very persuasive, very attractive as a personality; secondly in Revelation 20 at the end of the Millennium. Every time Satan has an advent it is always under conditions of perfect environment. Perfect environment in the garden: he came and destroyed it; perfect environment in the Millennial reign of Christ: he will come back and destroy it through the Gog revolution. So he is the central antagonist of the angelic conflict, he is a great organiser and administrator, but his administration will fall apart at the ruler of this world in chapter nine.

He is a murderer from the beginning, according to John 8:44; he is the opponent of Bible doctrine, according to Matthew 13:9,39; he is the enemy of the Church and the royal family of God, as we have seen in Revelation 2; 9,13,24. But always remember, he is the ruler of this world and has been since the fall of man, and will be until the second advent of Christ, according to Luke 4:5-9; John 12:31; 14:30; 16:11; 2 Corinthians 4:4; Ephesians 2:2.

He has a strategy regarding nations; he has a strategy regarding unbelievers in the world to blind them lest they believe in Christ.

“Next to the lie itself, the greatest delusion Satan imposes — reaching to all unsaved and to a large portion of Christians — is the supposition that only such things as society considers evil could originate with the devil — if, indeed, there be any devil to originate anything. It is not the reason of man, but the revelation of God, which points out that governments, morals, education, art, commercialism, vast enterprises and organisations, and much of religious activity are included in the cosmos diabolicus. That is, the system which Satan has constructed includes all the good which he can incorporate into it and be consistent with the thing he aims to accomplish. A serious question arises whether the presence of gross evil in the world is due to Satan’s intention to have it so, or whether it indicates Satan’s inability to execute all he has designed. The probability is great that Satan’s ambition has led him to undertake more than any creature could ever administer. Revelation declares that the whole cosmos-system must be annihilated — not its evil alone, but all that is in it, both good and bad. God will incorporate nothing of Satan’s failure into that kingdom which He will set up in the earth ...

“... Since in pursuing his determination to exalt himself above God Satan must oppose the divine undertakings, his opposition naturally will be exerted where God is acting at a given time. Since God has no present program which He is following along the lines of reformation, education or civilisation (and any record that such undertakings are in God’s present purpose will be sought in vain), there is no conflict or satanic resistance in those spheres. The present relation of God to the cosmos, beyond His sovereign permission and restraint of it, is to save out of it an elect people for His heavenly glory. On the other hand, Satan's twofold objective — to exalt self, and to oppose God — is the key by which much may be known that otherwise would be unknown. It is still further disclosed that the enmity of Satan is not only toward the Person of God from whom he has everything to fear, but also toward every true child of God. Too much emphasis cannot be placed on this fact. Satan has no controversy or warfare with his own, unregenerate people, but there is abundant scripture to prove that he makes unceasing effort to mar the life and service of the Christian ...”

“Since the blood redemption of the cross is the central truth and value of the true faith, it being the ‘power of God unto salvation’ (Rom. 1:16; 1 Corinthians 1:23-24), any counterfeit system of doctrine which would omit this essential, must force some secondary truth into the place of prominence. Any of the great scriptural subjects which are of universal interest to humanity, such as physical health, life after death, morality, unfulfilled prophecy, or religious forms, may be substituted in the false systems for that which is vital. And while those subjects are all found in their proper relations and importance in the true faith, the fact that people are universally inclined to give attention to them furnishes Satan an opportunity to make a strong appeal to humanity through them, using these subjects as central truths in his false and counterfeit systems. Many are easily led to fix their attention upon the secondary things, and to neglect wholly the one primary thing. Especially this is true since the secondary things are tangible and seen, while the one essential thing is spiritual and unseen; and Satan has blinded their eyes toward that which is of eternal value...”

“... The idea that man will stand on the basis of personal worthiness has been the chief heresy, opposing the central doctrine of grace, from the time of Christ's death to the present hour. It so permeates the church that few who preach are able to exclude it from their attempts at gospel preaching. It is safe to say that wherever the element of human merit is allowed to intrude into the presentation of the plan of salvation, the message is Satanic to that extent.”

— Lewis Sperry Chafer, “Systematic Theology”, vol. 2, pp 100-101, 108, 110.

Satan has a strategy with regard to us as believers, the royal family of God. It is so stated in 2 Corinthians 2:11. In many ways this strategy keeps him in heaven for part of the time, for there is where he goes to accuse believers, according to Job 1:6-11; Zechariah 3:1-2; Revelation 12:9-10. He also sponsors various forms of reversionism and tries to get the believer distracted from making Bible doctrine number one in his scale of values. This is taught in 1 Corinthians 10:19-21; 2 Corinthians 11:3; 11:13-15. He seeks to frustrate the will of God in the life of the believer in three categories: mentally, Ephesians 4:14; geographically, 1 Thessalonians 2:18; operationally, James 4:7,8. He seeks to neutralise doctrinal application, especially through worry and anxiety, 1 Peter 5:7-9. He seeks to destroy the believer's focus in life, getting the believer to get his eyes on people, as per Jeremiah 17:5, or eyes on self, 1 Kings 19:10, or eyes on things, Hebrews 13:5,6. He seeks to get the believer involved in improvement of the devil's world, hence the reversionistic believer becomes humanistic, occupied with temporal solutions to man's problems, advocating systems to improve man's environment; and, of course, this means social action, social gospel, welfare state, etc. Also the inculcation of fear regarding physical death.

Religion plays a great part in the devil's strategy. Basically, religion has been created by the devil to counterfeit the plan of God. Christianity is not a religion, it is a relationship with God through faith in Christ. Religion is a system of works whereby man seeks to gain the approbation of God. In religion Satan has counterfeited almost everything that is true. There is a counterfeit gospel in 2 Corinthians 4:3,4; there are counterfeit ministers in 2 Corinthians 11:13-15; there is a counterfeit doctrine in 2 Timothy 4:1; there is a counterfeit communion table in 2 Corinthians 10:19-21; there is a counterfeit system of spirituality based on self-righteousness and competitiveness, inordinate competition in Galatians 3:2-3; there is a counterfeit righteousness in Matthew 19:16-28; there is a counterfeit power and dynamics in 2 Thessalonians 2:8-10 (which includes the tongues movement); there are counterfeit gods in 2 Thessalonians 2:3,4.

So, of course, this means that Satan has false teachers. False teachers have a phoney and hypocritical facade, says Matthew 7:15; Romans 16:18. False teachers use human public relations systems and legalistic flirtation to court believers, according to Galatians 4:17,18; 2 Timothy 5:3-7. False teachers appeal to human ego and human pride, 2 Corinthians 10:12. They promote idolatry as a part of the devil's communion table, Habakkuk 2:18,19. False teachers promote legalism, self-righteousness, 1 Timothy 1:7,8. And false teachers always encourage people to gossip and malign others, and therefore ignore the principle of privacy.

Satan has a policy which we have studied under the principle of evil as it relates to the cosmic system.

In Revelation chapter nine we note first of all the first woe. The first woe is the first invasion of the demon assault army, it is the same as the fifth trumpet, verses 1-12.

Verse 1, the fifth angel is one of the pur sui vant messengers in the college of heralds. The aorist active indicative of the verb salpizw is the word "sounding." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, the signal for the first woe. The active voice: the fifth pur sui vant messenger produces the action of the verb, and this is a declarative indicative mood for a statement of fact. This is the beginning of the first woe. Then we have the phrase, "I saw a star fall from heaven." The star here is a person, Satan, and it says he had fallen to the earth. We have the perfect active indicative of the verb piptw, and it is correctly translated "to fall." The perfect tense is a dramatic perfect, it emphasises the results of the action. In the middle of the Tribulation Satan is confined to the earth. The active voice: Satan produces the action of the verb and the participle is circumstantial presenting that attendant circumstances of Satan being confined to the earth, whereas at the present time he has access to heaven and the universe at large. The direct object is in the accusative case, it is the noun astēr in the Greek. It refers not to a, literal star but to Satan being cast out of heaven.

The documentation for this is found first in Isaiah 14:12, “How you have fallen from heaven, O star,” speaking of Satan in the context of Isaiah 14, “of the morning [son of the dawn]” — The Lord Jesus Christ is called the morning star, as we have seen prophetically. Satan was called the star of the morning, the son of the dawn, “you have been cut down to the earth, you have weakened the nations!”

Satan went from a position of great strength and power — he was the greatest of all creatures — to a position of great weakness, and he made this transition through arrogance, the greatest enemy of man at the present time. With arrogance you can never be in a position of strength, no matter how strong your position may be it is a house of cards and it could very easily crumble unless you have what is necessary to accompany it, and that is humility.

Satan weakened the nations by becoming the ruler of this world; God provided something to protect the nations: the laws of divine establishment. This same fall is mentioned in Ezekiel 28:16, “By you widespread [social] intercourse [or trade] which is the spread of discontent and revolution,” leading to the prehistoric angelic conflict, “you were filled with violence and you sinned,” the violence and the sin has to do with arrogance, “therefore I drove you out of the mountain of God in disgrace: and I have destroyed you, O guardian cherub, from the midst of the stones of fire,” the stones of fire was the highest spot in heaven, the highest position occupied by an angelic creature or any creature. Now he has been excluded from that.

Luke 10:18, “And he [our Lord Jesus Christ] said unto them, I saw Satan as lightning fall from heaven.” Then later on in Revelation 12:7-9 we will see once again this star being cast out of heaven.

So “a star from heaven,” astēr ek ouranou plus the ablative from the noun ouranos, and this means that he went from the highest position to the lowest. Principle: You cannot maintain a position of strength as a creature apart from humility. Arrogance immediately puts you into a position of great weakness. No one can survive the damage done by arrogance.

The fact that Satan is called a cherub in Ezekiel 28:16 indicates his place in both the angelic college of heralds and his prominence in heaven. Satan is now the ruler of this earth, he has succeeded in becoming the ruler of planet earth, but in so doing he lost out. He went for the earth. To him the most glamorous thing in the world was to rule planet earth and that is exactly what he did. His inordinate ambition, his desire, was to be the ruler of the earth and he succeeded. He is not happy, he is miserable. There are now seven other angels whose desire was not in the field of ambition. Because of humility their desire was the perception of doctrine, and their perception of doctrine gave them a greater personal love for God than any creature among the angels. Therefore, they had the greatest relationship with other angels, impersonal love directed toward all. This is how the angelic college of heralds was started.

Above them all was the star, but the star fell down from heaven. The star is no longer in top position. The application should be quite obvious to anyone: inordinate ambition is simply a part of arrogance and inordinate ambition always gives people a desire to achieve, to be admired, to be attractive to a maximum number of people. But we are talking about people, and anyone who knows anything about people knows that the worst thing that can happen to you is to have the entire mob, all people, be attracted to you. Tomorrow it will be someone else and then someone else because one thing that characterises people is their fickleness. To seek to gain the approbation of people is the quintessence of human arrogance as well as stupidity. Many smart people are arrogant and as a result they become stupid because they go for people as if somehow if the majority of people like you then God must like you, is their attitude in the spiritual life. If the majority of the people like you then you are right, no matter what you have done, and you are never wrong. So you can rationalise through arrogance just about anything in the world and make yourself miserable for life. Therefore the only answer to this is humility. Satan is the ruler of this earth but he lives in heaven. He commutes to the earth for the administration of his dictatorship. As a part of the angelic conflict certain angels in prehistoric times became higher than Satan through maximum perception of Bible doctrine, the major factor in spiritual growth. These angels are called seraphs, they are the highest-ranking angelic creatures in the college of heralds.

Next we have where Satan was hurled, e)ij plus the accusative of the noun gh, “to the earth.” This takes place in the middle of the Tribulation and onward in human history. Satan will never again be permitted to be in heaven. he is kicked out permanently so that his range of operation for the last half of the Tribulation is his own kingdom that he wanted more than anything in the world. He wanted it so badly that he tried to upstage God and as a result he is going to spend the last three years of his rulership of this earth in his own kingdom. And he can't get out. With his fallen angels Satan is limited to planet earth and its atmosphere, hence the time is fixed for these demon invasions in the last half of the Tribulation. The three woes or trumpets five, six, and seven occur in the last half of the Tribulation.

Other passages indicate that stars are used to designate angels, like Job 38:7, “When all the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God [angelic creatures] shouted for joy.” Well, Satan is a fallen star in the most literal sense of the word.

The divine dynasphere is where we live as believers when we are fulfilling the plan of God. Inside of something similar to the divine dynasphere we have the seraphs. The seraphs, because of maximum perception of doctrine have a tremendous personal love for God. That is thanksgiving, that is worship. The greater your genuine love for God [personal love is only a virtue when directed toward God] the greater your thanksgiving to God. All true thanksgiving must come from personal love for God. There can be no thanksgiving unless you personally love God. Today we live in a time when the average Christian doesn't personally love God. He can't personally love God because that calls for maximum perception of Bible doctrine. You can't even be grateful to God or even begin to express thanksgiving unless you have a personal love for God. If you have in worship personal love for God you will have that greatest asset, impersonal toward man. And the result is those who are the beneficiaries of your virtue, your honour, your integrity from that impersonal love will also be grateful to God in a secondary way because of who and what you are. There is thanksgiving right there.

Thanksgiving is the order of the day for believers living in the divine dynasphere. If you are arrogant, if you are living in the cosmic system — and only you know that — there is no way that you can fulfil the principle of thanksgiving today, tomorrow or any day because thanksgiving is related to the filling of the Holy Spirit, to virtue in your life, to humility. Without humility there is no way. The seraphs will have a great thanksgiving because they have more doctrine than any of the angels. They also have more humility, more virtue, and therefore they have a perpetual happiness. You will never understand the true meaning of thanksgiving until you recognise that every day is thanksgiving. But there is no way that you can truly have gratitude in your soul unless you are learning doctrine, unless you are consistent in living and residing inside the divine dynasphere, and unless you have a genuine personal love for God.

Satan now understands the meaning of thanksgiving and he certainly will do everything to make sure that you don't, for it was Satan who learned the hard way that even though he wanted to be like the most high God because he had the approbation of literally millions of angels it didn't work out that way. But there is someone who even understands it better than Satan. His name is Apollyon or Abaddon, the most ruthless, the most powerful of all the fallen angels. He is second in rank only to Satan himself in the kingdom of demons and he understands what thanksgiving means. And when his turn comes to get out of jail and leads a great demon army he is going to make as many people as he can, millions of people, pay for his frustration; for you can't get away from arrogance, you can't get away from yourself, no one can. Therefore you can very easily determine the true meaning of thanksgiving in your life by your own status quo. So the angels which taught us how to worship in chapters four and five now teach us another lesson: arrogance doesn't pay, never has, never will.

God has given us just so much life on this earth, so many heartbeats, so many seconds, so many minutes, so many hours, so many days, so many years. And we by our own arrogance actually blot out and destroy those wonderful things in life that we could enjoy and have such a great time with. We do it by living in the cosmic system. Every moment we spend in the cosmic system we have just blotted out another heartbeat, your happiness, your blessing, your heritage as a member of the royal family of God.

We learn from the elect angels a great deal about worship. We are now learning from the fallen angels a great deal about arrogance.

The corrected translation of chapter four verse nine: "And when the angelic heralds," the living creatures who through great faithfulness to the Word of God in the prehistoric angelic conflict learned more doctrine than any other group of creatures in history, and as a result were promoted to a new life that apparently did not exist at the beginning of angelic creation: they were promoted to seraph rank in the college of heralds. Therefore, more than anyone else, because of their perception of doctrine, they know more about worship, they have a greater understanding and appreciation of worship than anyone else. We learn from them a great deal about worship.

“shall give glory,” the beginning of the expression of their worship. You cannot give in worship what you do not possess. When these angelic heralds gave glory it is because they possessed glory, just as in the future many believers who have been faithful in the perception of doctrine and who have grown in grace, who have attained maturity, who have fulfilled the plan of God for their life, are going to receive glory at the judgment seat of Christ. These angelic heralds, members of the college of heralds, have already received their glory, therefore they can give in worship what they possess.

“They shall give glory,” category one worship limited, of course, to the eternal state and the resurrection body, “and honour,” category two worship. Only honourable believers in time can give honour to the Lord in worship. The highest thing you can give to the Lord in worship is honour but you have to have honour to give honour in worship, “and thanksgiving,” category three worship.

Cosmic believers are arrogant and have no capacity for thanksgiving and therefore capacity for gratitude must precede the expression of thanksgiving in worship. You cannot give thanksgiving unless you possess the necessary ingredients to do so. You cannot give in worship what you do not possess. To have gratitude demands residence and function in the divine dynasphere, the filling of the Spirit, honour and integrity, humility, everything that it takes to have capacity for thanksgiving.

Next we notice in verse 10 that we switch from the angelic college of heralds to the angelic order of battle. Second in the angelic order of battle are the 24 staff officers who will fall down before Him who sits on the throne [our Lord Jesus Christ]. And they, the angelic staff, will “worship him who lives forever and ever.” You cannot give in worship what you do not have. They also possess glory, honour and gratitude, and therefore they give in worship the same as the angelic heralds, glory, honour and thanksgiving, “and lay down their crowns before the throne.” In other words, they have crowns, they have decorations which they earned in the prehistoric angelic conflict. Not only have they earned these but they give them back to our Lord as the highest expression of thanksgiving in worship.

Verse 11, “You, O Lord, are worthy [possess the ultimate merit for optimum worship], to receive glory [category one worship in the eternal state] and honour [category two worship based on residence in the divine dynasphere and maximum perception of Bible doctrine] also the power [all worship must be conducted inside the divine dynasphere, the power. That is, of course, the filling of the Spirit]: because you [the Lord Jesus Christ as eternal God] have created all things, also because of your sovereign will [purpose, desire] they existed and they were created”.

Category three worship is open to any believer in the Lord Jesus Christ every day of his life throughout phase two of the plan of God, the believer in time. Thanksgiving is the act of rendering thanks or gratitude to God. Hence, it is a mental attitude, it is humility, it is doctrine, it is the filling of the Spirit, it is the function inside the divine dynasphere. In Ephesians 5:20 we are told to be always thankful for all things in the sphere of the person of our Lord Jesus Christ, even the Father. Thanksgiving begins therefore when one believes in the Lord Jesus Christ and begins to learn Bible doctrine. In 1 Thessalonians 5:18, "In everything give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." To give thanks to God for everything, both the blessings of life and the adversities, both prosperity and disaster. To be able to do this and worship you must have gratitude, you must have humility, you must have the filling of the Spirit, you must have everything contained inside the divine dynasphere. The expression of thanksgiving as worship, of course, again goes back to the principle: You cannot give in worship what you do not possess. You cannot have gratitude to express thanksgiving if you are living in the cosmic system, if you are arrogant or vain or petty or vindictive or implacable or full of self-importance and self righteousness or feeling sorry for yourself. Thanksgiving can only be given in worship if you have gratitude. You cannot give to God in worship what you do not possess.

Psalms 110:3-5, "Know that the Lord himself is God: it is he who made us, and not we ourselves; we are his people and the sheep of his pasture".

Too many times believers get into the cosmic system. We are studying believers in the cosmic system who are about to become the target for the demon assault armies. The first demon assault army of the first half of Revelation chapter nine is commanded by the second highest ranking demon, next to Satan himself, a cherub like Lucifer the son of the morning in the prehistoric angelic conflict. Yet this demon general will lead an assault army which for five months in the Tribulation will torture many many believers as well as unbelievers, those who live in the cosmic system. Those believers who live in the cosmic system have no capability for worship, for the principle of worship, you cannot give to God in worship what you do not possess, and because of arrogance there is no way that you can have gratitude, and if they do not have gratitude, capacity for life, capacity for blessing, capacity for happiness, they are unable to clearly express thanksgiving. It is easy to open your mouth and to enunciate the words, "Thank you Father," but to actually fulfil the principle of worship requires a great deal more than simply the overt expression of those words.

"Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise," this was the courts of the temple; "give thanks to him, honour his name."

There it is, category three worship: "Give thanks to him"; category two worship: "honour his name." You cannot give in worship what you do not possess. If you do not have honour and integrity you cannot give it in worship. If you do not have gratitude you cannot express thanksgiving.

"For the Lord is good; his grace is everlasting; his faithfulness belongs to all generations."

Psalms 116:17 tells us that thanksgiving is a priestly sacrifice. We live in the Church Age, the dispensation of the royal family of God and therefore, as believer priests we have the privilege of expressing thanksgiving on a daily, even hourly, basis to our Lord. But you cannot give in worship what you do not possess. Without humility, without gratitude there is no way that you can express thanksgiving.

“To thee shall I offer the sacrifice of thanksgiving, and call upon the name of the Lord”

Psalms 107:22, “And let them also offer the sacrifices of thanksgiving, and tell of his works with joyful singing.”

Amos 4:5, “And offer up also a thanksgiving offering from that which is leavened, and proclaim free will offerings [make them known]: for, saith the Lord, so you express personal love for God.”

Hebrews 13:15, “Through the same one [Jesus Christ] let us be constantly offering up a sacrifice of praise, that is, the fruit of the lips acknowledging his integrity.”

You cannot give to God as a believer priest what you do not possess. If you do not have the humility of gate three of the divine dynasphere there is no way that you can enter into thanksgiving. “In every thing give thanks, for this is the will of God concerning you” — 1 Thessalonians 5:18.

Colossians 3:15, “And the blessing and prosperity from our Lord, may it be caused to live in your right lobes, into which you also have been elected to privilege in one body; therefore keep on becoming thankful ones.”

If you are fulfilling God’s plan for your life by residence and function in the divine dynasphere, this day is meaningful to you, you have capacity for gratitude, you have personal love for God, you have great integrity from life and residence in the divine dynasphere. Therefore thanksgiving is a meaningful word.

2 Corinthians 4:15, “For all things are for your sakes, that the grace which is being multiplied to more and more people may cause the giving of thanks to abound to the glory of God.”

Logistical grace is the basis for the royal possessing a perfect plan from God. God is perfect, His plan is perfect. He has provided a perfect vehicle for the function of His plan. That perfect vehicle is the divine dynasphere and it depends on our volition. Thanksgiving can only abound to the glory of God if you are living in the divine dynasphere, if you are taking in Bible doctrine, if you are growing in grace, if the perception of doctrine has resulted in that great capacity for life and love and happiness.

2 Corinthians 9:10,11, “Now he who supplies seed to the sower and bread for food, will supply and multiply your seed for sowing [material blessing], and increase the harvest of your righteousness; you will then be enriched in everything for all liberality, which through us is producing thanksgiving to God.” Here is the relationship between thanksgiving, prosperity, and the true basis of it, the harvest of your integrity, your honour, inside of the divine dynasphere. Personal testimonies from mature believers indicate the same thing.

You cannot give in worship what you do not possess. If you do not possess gratitude from humility you cannot express it in category three worship which is thanksgiving.

Daniel 2:23, "To you, O God of my fathers, I give thanks and praise, for you have given me wisdom [application of doctrine] and power [the ministry of the Spirit]."

John 11:41, "And so they removed the stone ... Now Jesus raised his eyes, and said, Father, I thank you that you have heard me." Our Lord Jesus Christ, at the resuscitation of Lazarus, knew that He was about to bring Lazarus out of the grave and He possessed that magnificent humility which is a part of honour and integrity. And from a base of this indwelling humility, total freedom from arrogance and the cosmic system, He offered thanks to God the Father.

Thanksgiving is motivated by Bible doctrine, Colossians 2:7, "Having been rooted, and constantly edified in him [constantly been stabilised by means of doctrine in the soul], in the manner in which you have been taught, overflowing in thanksgiving."

1 Thessalonians 2:9, "For what thanksgiving can we offer to God for you in return for all the happiness with which we rejoice before our God on account of you." A basis for thanksgiving is happiness. Happiness comes from Bible doctrine resident in the soul.

Philippians 4:6, "Stop worrying about anything; but in everything by prayer and supplication after thanksgiving let the thing sought be revealed in the presence of God." The capacity for thanksgiving in worship is not there unless you have that doctrine, that humility, that gratitude, that personal love for God which is the basis for all true worship. Thanksgiving is category three worship.

2 Corinthians 9:15, "Thanks be to God for his unspeakable gift."

Revelation 7:12, "Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, belong to our Lord forever." Worship therefore is the great issue in thanksgiving.

Category two worship is honour. We can give honour to God. Honour comes from love which is developed inside the divine dynasphere. Again, we as believers are royal family of God and we are commanded by mandate to live in the divine dynasphere. We have two commissions from God to do so. Every believer is a priest, every believer is an ambassador. The priesthood must function toward God, the ambassadorship toward man and circumstances. The ultimate in the function of our priesthood is the virtue of personal love directed toward God. That is motivational virtue as well as worship. Also there is impersonal love directed toward man as the highest virtue in that direction.

The personal love directed toward God begins with honour. We can give honour to God. That means love, gate five of the divine dynasphere. All true love begins with respect and the Greek word for honour in this passage is timh and it means first of all respect. And the question should be asked: Do you have respect for God? Respect is impossible apart from the perception of Bible doctrine for you neither know nor understand God, nor have any respect for Him or His plan.

The second meaning of timh or honour is reverence. The concept of personal love for Christ in worship begins with respect but it continues with reverence. Respect is the worship of the immature believer; reverence is the worship of the mature believer in the divine dynasphere. Respect and reverence are therefore possible for the believer in time. Respect and reverence are the function of the believer's royal priesthood, his motivational virtue and worship. All motivating virtue must express itself in the function of worship for all motivating virtue is directed toward God and demands personal love.

Timh therefore means in the third place, honour. It is so translated in Revelation 4:9. To honour God in worship requires virtue, integrity manufactured inside the divine dynasphere through the daily perception of Bible doctrine. Only honourable believers can glorify the Lord and give honour to the Lord in worship. You cannot give in worship what you do not possess. If you do not have honour you cannot give honour in worship.

Category three: the giving of thanks. Thanksgiving is the most basic form of priestly worship in the royal family of God. The capacity for this worship is gratitude, gratitude for the plan of God, gratitude for the provision of God. Everything is provided on the basis of grace. We do not earn it, we do not deserve it, we do not attain it through any possible system of human merit, it is a gift. The divine dynasphere is a gift, the various categories of gates is a gift, doctrine is a gift, everything is a gift. The logistical grace to be alive, to be healthy enough to be able enough to hear Bible doctrine, to have a sound mind and therefore volition in the sound mind to make decisions for doctrine. The capacity for this worship is gratitude for the grace of God, the plan of God, the person of God, the provision of God. Capacity for thanksgiving comes, then, from perception of doctrine while gratitude is the expression of that worship toward God.

The believers in the cosmic system we will study in chapter nine who are living in the cosmic system are going to be attacked by a demon assault army. They are then going to be attacked by a second assault army. Many of them who are Jews will then be attacked a third time by the third demon assault army. They will be tortured for five months, many of them will die; but they will not die to glorify the Lord, they will die the sin unto death, they will die under divine discipline because they have failed to utilise the plan and provision of God and therefore they have failed in the realm of humility. Arrogance is the total absence of thanksgiving. Arrogance, therefore, is devoid of gratitude no matter what is done for the arrogant person, and that means the arrogant believer, either by God or by man. It is never appreciated. The arrogant believer does not appreciate what God has and is doing for him through logistical grace, he has no appreciation for the integrity of God, he doesn't even understand it. All that he understands is that he is saved by faith in Christ and he has not advanced beyond that point. Therefore believers who are arrogant, who are ungrateful to man, are also ungrateful to God. Arrogance destroys capacity for life, capacity for love, capacity for happiness, capacity for worship and, therefore, capacity for thanksgiving. And all this is a terrible double-edged sword, for the person who is arrogant, who has no gratitude in his soul, is neither a good lover, a good friend, or a good human being. He is the source of all of his own misery and he makes those around him miserable as well. He has nothing to give the Lord in worship and that includes thanksgiving.

The ingredients of worship which include thanksgiving must include personal love for God, humility, subordination to divine authority. God cannot be first in the life and the object of true worship apart from enforced humility. That is, the enforced humility of submission to divine authority as delegated in Bible doctrine. Genuine humility, gate three of the divine dynasphere, is teachability, the teachability of the believer resulting in perception of doctrine, inculcation of the Word of God and love for God resulting in genuine worship. Genuine humility, then is not only the basis for all true worship of our Lord Jesus Christ but it is capacity for love, for life, for happiness, for blessing in human relationships. There cannot be true love in any category apart from genuine humility of the soul. The ingredients of worship, then, include the filling of the Spirit, gate one, the objectivity of impersonal love, gate two, the enforced and genuine humility of gate three, and then, of course, the perception and application of Bible doctrine at gate four. This results in the worship of God at gate five of the divine dynasphere which begins with personal love for God, but under momentum from perception of doctrine results in occupation with the person of Jesus Christ. "Though you have not seen him, you love him; and even though you do not see him now, you believe in him and are filled with inexpressible and glorious happiness". Therefore, of course, true worship is fulfilled. In worship you can only give to God what you have.

The angelic staff officers of Revelation 4:10 gave their crowns before the throne as an expression of their worship. The angelic general staff had these crowns because of their tremendous advance in the prehistoric angelic conflict. In prehistoric angelic history God provided for these elect angels just as He has provided for us as believers. And through positive volition toward doctrine and the multitudes of good decisions in expressing positive volition toward God's plan in the prehistoric period they were rewarded and decorated with these golden crowns. These 24 angelic staff officers subordinated their volition to God in achieving these crowns, they could not give to God in worship what they did not possess. They possessed crowns; they gave those crowns to Him in worship. Worship, therefore, to them was the expression of their love, their reverence, their humility, their capacity, their thanksgiving directed toward God. And in their worship the angelic staff officers gave what they had. They had golden crowns, they gave them to God.

That is true of the believer as well. The believer has doctrine in his right lobe, he can express that doctrine in worship. The capacity for worship is based upon the amount of doctrine resident in his soul. If he has love of truth or doctrine he can express it in worship giving concentration to Bible teaching. If the believer can apply the doctrine of soteriology and Christology he can participate in the communion service.

We cannot give to God what we do not have, and everything we have belongs to God, He is the source. Worship must recognise the source. If you recognise God as the source of your blessings, if you recognise God as the source of your life, both the physical life which He imputed to you at the moment of birth and the spiritual life which He gave to you at the moment of salvation, if you recognise that you are alive today and that everything that you have and everything that you will be is because of who and what the Lord is, then you have the basis for true thanksgiving. When we part with what we have in worship we express the fact that we still have the Lord, and because worship expresses our love for the Lord we still have, and always will have, the object of our love. Personal love for God expresses itself in worship, which means giving what we have to Him — our love, our thinking, our concentration, our time, our energy, our money (if we have it), our honour, our total respect and devotion. If you do not have the filling of the Spirit, if you do not have Bible doctrine in the right lobe, if you do not have virtue, honour, integrity from residence and function in the divine dynasphere you have nothing to offer God today.

There have been four demon attacks upon the human race. There was the genetic attack in Genesis chapter six; secondly, demon possession; thirdly, demon influence which is a demon penetration of thought and personality. Hence, demon influence on the soul of anyone who resides and functions in the cosmic system. When people live in the cosmic system there is, of course, demon influence. Only unbelievers can be demon-possessed. Believers can be under demon influence. Demon possession affects the body but demon influence affects the soul. Both, of course, can affect the personality. Those who are demon-possessed and demon-influenced live and reside inside the cosmic system and to get there they must use their own volition. Therefore the principle: involuntary demon-possession does not exist, it is a myth. When anyone is demon-possessed it is through the function of their own bad decisions.

Our subject does not deal with the genetic attack which only occurred once and will never occur again. We are dealing here with the fourth attack, the physical attack of demons against mankind. This phenomenon of violence is reserved for the last half of the Tribulation and it involves three demon assault armies.

The first demon assault army will torture residents of the cosmic system for five months. The second demon assault army is actually an army group composed of 200,000,000 demons. It is divided into four armies, forming an army group. It will be released with the sounding of the sixth trumpet to kill one third of the people living at that time on the earth. There is, of course, a previous destruction of people on the earth: one quarter of the people on the earth will be killed by the fourth horseman of the apocalypse. This attack of an army group, the second demon assault army, is described in detail in Revelation 9:13-21. The third assault army is commanded by Satan himself.

The second assault army comes out of the river Euphrates and there is a reason for that.

The third will attack on the sound of the seventh trumpet [which is also the third woe] — Revelation 11:15-12:17. It will be involved in warfare in heaven and will be defeated by the army of elect angels under the command of Michael — 12:7-8. The result of this defeat of warfare in heaven at around the middle of the Tribulation, the defeat of the third demon assault army, will cause the expulsion of Satan and the retreat of that army. They will then be hurled to the earth and there they will be confined to planet earth, according to Revelation 12:9. The third demon assault army then attacks all the Jews of the earth, according to Revelation 12:12-17. Demon torture and killing of men is an historical trend reserved for the last half of the Tribulation. This does not exist and will not exist before that time. Demon attacks on man are limited at this present time to demon possession of unbelievers and demon influence of both believer and unbeliever who reside in the cosmic system. Arrogance, of course, is the key to such vulnerability.

Verse 2, "Then he [Satan] unlocked the shaft of the abyss." That brings us to the connective conjunction kai which is really a result conjunction here. Kai can be used in about five different ways in the Greek and this is a very rare use. Kai is simply used to connect the two phrases and to show a result relationship, "with the result that." Then we have the phrase, "smoke went up [ascended] from the shaft like the smoke of a giant furnace." This smoke explains several verses related to the demon prisons in Hades. Remember that in Hades there are two areas where demons are imprisoned. The first is Tartarus, and there is smoke in Tartarus. The second is called the abyss, and there is smoke in the abyss. The description of this is in 2 Peter 2:4, "For if God himself did not spare the angels who sinned [the sons of god in Genesis chapter six], but he incarcerated them in Tartarus with chains of darkness, keeping them for judgment." Please note: "chains of darkness." This is the explanation of the smoke. Jude 6, "And the angels [fallen angels] who did not keep their status quo, but forsook their proper dwelling place, he has incarcerated them in eternal chains under thick darkness for the judgment of the great day." Notice again the phrase, "darkness." They were chained with darkness.

With the release of this demon army there is the release of smoke coming out of the shaft of the abyss. The effect of this smoke is described in terms of darkness in the next phrase, "and," we have a connective conjunction (in fact two of them to set up an alternative) kai, "both and," "both the sun and the atmosphere became darkened." The word for sun is e(lioj, and the word for atmosphere is a)er. Both the sun and the atmosphere are darkened, the aorist passive indicative of the verb skotow which means here to become dark. The ingressive aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb at its beginning. Once that shaft was opened smoke came out and, with the smoke, darkness began to spread in a certain locale of planet earth. The passive voice: light from the sun and the atmosphere receives the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the future reality of this phenomenon resulting from the opening of the abyss. With this we have a prepositional phrase, e)k plus the ablative of kapnoj [smoke], and frear which refers to the shaft, "because of the smoke from the shaft."

The smoke from the shaft affects probably the troposphere which is the first six miles up, and the stratosphere which is up to twenty-eight miles. This cuts off radiation from the sun and immerses planet earth in a blackout, very thick smoke and temporary darkness. Of course the demons are used to the darkness, they brought it with them as a barrage to hide their advance and their attack. The darkness becomes the environment and the context for the attack of the first demon army which has been imprisoned in the dungeon called the abyss.

Translation of verse two: "Then he [Satan] unlocked the entrance of the shaft of the abyss, with the result that the smoke like the thick smoke of a giant furnace ascended from that shaft; both the sun and the atmosphere became dark because of the smoke from the shaft of the abyss.”

Verse 3, the description and the weapons of the demon army are described. We are going to note two analogies. They are not scorpions and they are not locusts; these are analogous. The function and the modus operandi of the locusts on the one hand and the function of the scorpion on the other hand are the best ways in which, in the ancient world, it was possible to describe the function of the first demon assault army.

We have the nominative plural a)krij, the Greek word for locust. “And from the smoke locusts [the first demon army] invaded the earth.” The destruction of Nineveh, by the way, in the book of Nahum is described in terms of a locust plague. So using a locust plague as an analogy for an overrunning army is used several times and therefore becomes a basis for helping us to understand the passage.

Nahum 3:15,16, “There [Nineveh] the fire will consume you; the sword will cut you down, it will consume you like the locust does ... You have increased your trade more than the stars of the heaven: and the creeping locust strips you and flies away.” Even though they were having great business prosperity they were going to be overrun by an army and destroyed.

The use of the word “locust” has a principle behind it. It always refers to invading armies when used as an analogy. Locusts invade the land and destroy crops, therefore they are analogous here to the demon army which invades planet earth from the abyss. Locust is a term which applies to insects which function in swarms and are very destructive.

These demons are incarcerated in the abyss and they are solitary, but as soon as Satan opens that shaft they form up in status gregarious [they will be in ranks]. There is one difference between the literal locust and the demon locust army. The literal locust is described in Proverbs 30:27 — “The locusts have no king, yet all of them go in ranks.” This locust army has a king but they still function in ranks. In the solitary stage no one leads them but in the gregarious stage they march in ranks. When locusts travel they convert day into night. Whenever they form up and go into the air their wings make an awesome sound and they literally darken the sky around them. Nothing can stop the locusts. In other words, they provide an excellent analogy for this invading demon army. Nothing is going to stop this demon army at the time of their invasion.

Then we have the invading verb, the aorist active indicative of the verb e)xerxomai, which means to go out, here it connotes invasion, “and from the smoke they went out against the earth.” The constative aorist tense contemplates the locust invasion of the demon army in its entirety. The invasion of the first demon assault army from the abyss is gathered up into one entirety. The active voice: the first demon army from the abyss produces the action of the verb, they invade planet earth. They are not permitted to do so until the middle of the Tribulation. At the present time Satan does not have that key and he not have that key until he is cast out of heaven in the middle of the Tribulation. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of historical trend, a new trend without precedent in history.

We then have the scorpion analogy. The nominative singular subject from the noun e)xousia means either authority or power. Here it means power, “and power was given,” the aorist passive indicative of didomi. And with this we have the intensive pronoun a)utoj in the plural used as the third person personal pronoun and translated here, “to them” — “and power was given to them.” We are talking about that demon army, the personnel of that first demon assault army.

Then we have the comparative particle setting up the analogy, o(j, “like,” and then the second part explains the analogy, the function of this demon army, the nominative plural subject skorpioj, “scorpions,” “and power was given to them like the scorpions have,” the present active indicative of e)xw. The present tense is a perfective present, it denotes a fact which has come to be in the past but is emphasised as a present reality. Scorpions have a certain kind of power. The active voice: scorpions produce the action. The declarative indicative mood is for a real analogy, “like the scorpions have power,” and then the accusative direct object with the genitive of place gh, “on the earth.”

The scorpion belongs to the spider family. They are five or six inches long. The venom apparatus of the scorpion is located in the tip of the tail. There is a single sharp stinger at the end of two very small orifices in the tail. Two relatively large venom glands feed those two openings. The scorpion sting is a very painful sting and is used in the analogy to torture here.

Translation: “And from that smoke [behind the barrage] locusts [the first demon assault army] invaded the earth: and power was given to them, like the scorpions have power on the earth.”

In verses 4 and 5 we do have a diving restriction placed on the demon invasion. The target is going to be made up of people, those who live in the cosmic system. And it is going to be made up of believers and unbelievers of the Tribulation who live in the cosmic system. We have the target restriction in two areas. We have a mandate regarding vegetation and a mandate regarding people in verse four.

Verse 4, the aorist passive indicative of the verb legw introduces the mandate. The aorist tense is a constative aorist contemplating the instructions in the entirety. The passive voice: the first demon army receives the action of the verb, a mandate of restriction. This first demon army is restricted; the second demon army is not restricted, though there are people who are protected from it. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of target restriction. The dative plural indirect object of a)utoj, the intensive pronoun, is used as a personal pronoun referring to the demon army. The idiom says: “They were instructed [commanded].” The conjunction i(na introduces a semi-final purpose clause and it is translated “that”, with the future active indicative of the verb a)dikew and, strangely enough, with the indicative, the negative mh. The negative for the indicative mood is o)u or o)uk, but here we have the negative mh. This is not a declarative indicative but a potential indicative, “that they should not injure.” The gnomic future tense is for a fact or performance which may be rightfully expected under the mandate from God. This is a semi-final or sub-final purpose clause, it denotes the direction of the action in the main verb toward a given result which is anticipated by divine mandate. Translated, that means to you and to me that this first demon army is going to have certain restraints. It is going to torture people and, in fact, torture people so badly that they will try to commit suicide. But there is an alternative to trying to commit suicide and that is to accept Christ as personal saviour or, in the case of believers, to rebound and get out of the cosmic system. And five months of torture ought to be motivation enough for anyone. The active voice: the first demon army is prohibited from destroying vegetation. In addition to that they are not permitted to kill their targets, torture only. The reason they are given the mandate is because a demon can kill a human being very easily.

So we have the active voice of a)dikew, the first demon army is prohibited by mandate from destroying vegetation and, later on, killing people. They can torture but not kill. This is the potential indicative of obligation, they are obligated to observe this mandate, which they do. And so we translate: "And they were instructed that they should not injure the grass of the earth, nor any green thing, nor any tree." This is the function of the first trumpet judgment and the first trumpet judgment is not to be repeated by the demon assault.

This mandate also keeps demons from interfering with nature and the natural cycles ordained of God. Furthermore, this mandate indicates that demons cannot argue and disobey the power of God. Therefore these restrictions on the first demon assault army stand without contest or even a hint of disobedience. Furthermore, only God who invented the cycles of nature and the weather machine can interfere with them to administer discipline or judgment to the human race. God does not trust demons to tamper with the cycles of nature. And just as God Himself judges man through the destruction of nature in the first trumpet judgment so He will continue the process Himself in the plagues of the wine goblets in Revelation chapter sixteen. When we get to wine goblet number two, number three, number four and number five we will see that God will again use nature as a vehicle of judgment. While demons can perform extra natural and supernatural acts in the environment of planet earth they cannot control anything in planet earth apart from divine permission. And divine permission is only given where it involves the perpetuation of the angelic conflict in human history.

Then we have the elliptical use of two particles e)j mh, an Attic Greek idiom, used to describe the exception to the mandate. Certain people can be attacked, this is an exception to the previous mandate and, therefore e)j de mh in the Attic Greek is translated "otherwise," just e)j mh, "except." We must find a translation which connotes the exception, "except the men who do not have the seal of God in their foreheads." Now they can attack man but there is one limitation. We have seen from Revelation 7:3ff that this refers to the Tribulational evangelists, but it also applies to Tribulational believers who will survive the Tribulation with all of its horrors and historical adversities. These certain Tribulational believers are fulfilling certain principles of spiritual advance that keep them out of the cosmic system. Remember the target is believer and unbeliever in the cosmic system, but there is no permission to attack believers. Today you cannot be attacked if you are inside the divine dynasphere. The divine dynasphere is God's game plan for the Church Age. Inside the divine dynasphere there is a wall of fire; in the cosmic system there is no wall of fire for the believer. There is no divine dynasphere in the Tribulation but there is the equivalent and the main objective of believers in the Tribulation in growing in grace is to stay out of the cosmic system because demons are going to be permitted to do things in the Tribulation that they have never been permitted to do before in all of human history. To avoid being mugged by a demon you have to stay out of the cosmic system in the Tribulation. So it is not simply those who have the sealing in the forehead who are protected but there are a tremendous number of believers in the Tribulation who will not be attacked, who will be protected, who will be under the principle of the wall of fire. However, we should note that many believers are going to be tortured and, later on, killed by demons simply because they live in the cosmic system.

Translation of verse 4: “They were instructed that they should not injure the grass of the earth, nor any green thing, nor any tree; except the men who do not have the seal of God in their foreheads.”

They can attack any human being who is not protected by that seal, the 144,000 and believers who are growing in grace, who put Bible doctrine first, and who are utilising that doctrine to stray out of the cosmic system.

Never before in history and up to this time and to the middle of the Tribulation have demons ever given direct violence to people, demons attacking people directly. The demons attack only by possessing someone else and then they use that person as the vehicle for their violence. We do know that there are certain categories of demon possession that are extremely violent. In the middle of the Tribulation there is going to be a dramatic change when Satan is cast to the earth. There are three demon armies that are going to be especially involved in this type of activity.

The target for these demon assault armies is very important to understand because the target includes some believers as well as unbelievers, but they are all involved in the cosmic system. Perhaps this is one of the more dramatic passages in the Word of God warning people to avoid life in the cosmic system. The repercussions, of course, are absolutely horrible.

There is a principle that we should be aware of and one which has to do with the Tribulation as well. The fact that there are believers in the cosmic system in the Tribulation and the fact that there are believers in the cosmic system right now is the principle of cosmic evangelism. Cosmic evangelism is conducted by cosmic believers who are under the control of Satan and his power system. It isn't some demon who is going to grab you by the ears and haul you into the cosmic system. In fact, no one can put you in the cosmic system but yourself; you have to make the decision to get into the cosmic system — cosmic one with its interlocking systems of arrogance and cosmic two with its interlocking systems of hatred. The cosmic evangelistic appeal is from friends who are Christians; it is conducted generally, but not entirely, by believers; people in your periphery, people with whom you are friendly. It is accomplished through the facade of flattery or intellectuality or affection or passion or something by which you relate to another member of the human race. The objective is to lead you into a state of arrogance in the cosmic system.

Arrogance is very easily influenced by evil because arrogance is the source of all evil. That is why 1 Corinthians 15:33 says, "Be not deceived: evil friends corrupt good morals," i.e. the virtue and integrity which we derive as royal family from the divine dynasphere.

When the mature believer in the divine dynasphere is led astray by his love for the cosmic believer the resultant arrogance means loss of discernment. His cosmic friends may be moral or immoral but the result is always the same: the moral cosmic believer is affectionate without being passionate and with his affection he lures the believer living in the divine dynasphere into the cosmic system. On the other hand the immoral cosmic believer is also an excellent evangelist. He is passionate without being affectionate and with passion lures the believer in the divine dynasphere into the cosmic system. In the first case of the moral cosmic believer friendship means more to the believer than doctrine. In the second case, to the immoral cosmic believer sex becomes more important than doctrine. Affection comes from the soul and is very meaningful and wonderful when it includes virtue, integrity, honour and capacity for love. Passion comes from the body and is meaningful only as an expression of category two love where virtue, honour, integrity pre-exist it. Where love, honour, integrity and virtue is developed in the divine dynasphere it can be very quickly destroyed by the cosmic system.

It is very hard for believers to realise that they are constantly undergoing change, for the better or for the worse, and that none of us stand still in the Christian life. We are moving in one direction or the other and therefore the importance of the daily intake of Bible doctrine, and far more important is the application of it and the discernment that must be developed. For all of us have met people to whom we were attracted and who were able to lead us astray through the evangelistic system of arrogance. The objective of cosmic evangelism is to get the believer today, who is living in the divine dynasphere, into the cosmic system. The objective doesn't change. The only thing that changes in the Tribulation is that there is no divine dynasphere; but there is, of course, an equivalent. Arrogance cannot discern, of course, between passion and affection nor relate them to love, honour and integrity and virtue. Therefore arrogance assumes that a show of affection from the opposite sex is an invitation to passion. Arrogance assumes that a show of passion from the opposite sex is a sign of affection or love. Therefore arrogance cannot distinguish and once the believer is hooked, entering gate one, cosmic one, from then on it is all down hill. He is led astray. Most people who are led astray spiritually are led astray by someone they admire, someone they respect, someone they love or someone for whom they have a strong attachment or affection.

Of course you cannot blame the cosmic evangelist, you must assume the blame yourself because you make the decisions in your life. You call the shots in your own life and therefore you have no right ever to blame someone else who leads you astray. You have to assume the responsibility for your own decisions. It is true now, and even more so in the Tribulation, that people are going to find someone else to blame for their failures.

This is the target for these demon assault armies in the Tribulation. Protected from these attacks are going to be those believers who have doctrine and who remain in the plan of God through the daily perception of doctrine. There will be accelerated spiritual growth for positive believers in the Tribulation and they will have their wall of fire protecting them from demons just as we have a wall of fire in the divine dynasphere.

Verse 5, the target limitation regarding people is amplified. They are not permitted at this time to kill any target, they are only permitted five months of torture. The adjunctive use of the conjunction kai is translated “also,” and with this we have the aorist passive indicative of the verb didomi which means to give, “Also he was given.” With this the dative plural indirect object of the intensive pronoun a)utoj, however it is not used as an intensive pronoun in the Koine Greek, except rarely. It is used for the personal pronoun, third person. There is no Koine personal pronoun, third person and as a result a)utoj is used instead. The Koine, therefore, is a sloppy language of communication compared to the Attic or Classical Greek. The dative plural indirect object of the intensive pronoun, used as a personal pronoun, then refers to the first demon assault army.

Next come the introduction of a purpose clause, i(na, and i(na mh following becomes an idiom, “also they were not permitted.” So we are not taking the literal translation because you cannot correctly translate from one language to another unless you recognise idiom when you find it. Then we have the present active subjunctive of the verb a)pokteinw which not only means to kill but it implies very definite violence, “also they were not permitted to kill them,” i.e. mankind living in the cosmic system. Remember the target is the believer and unbeliever in the last half of the Tribulation who is living inside of the cosmic system. It must be remembered that killing will occur later on in this passage, as it has before. The fourth horseman of the Doomsday book was permitted to kill one quarter of the population in the first half of the Tribulation. In the last half of the Tribulation, among the surviving population, the believer and unbeliever living in the cosmic system is first of all going to be tortured by the first demon assault army and then an army group made up of four armies, the second demon assault army group, will do the killing. But the first wave of attack is a torture wave; the second wave of attack will be a killing wave.

Now we have the conjunction i(na plus the negative mh which introduces a negative semi-final purpose clause which directs the action of the main verb toward a given result. First of all it is a negative result. The first demon assault army is restricted regarding their target, they cannot kill, only torture. Then we have the present active subjunctive of a)pokteinw, “that they should not kill.” The present tense is a static present representing a mandate taken for granted as a fact. If they are going to be tortured they cannot be killed. When they die the torture is all over, and they must be tortured for five months. This includes a lot of people who are born-again believers and they are tortured by permission from God, by a negative mandate from God. They are tortured because of their failure to fulfil the divine plan and it is a case of turning them over to Satan for punishment. The active voice plus the negative mh prohibits the first demon army from killing and the subjunctive mood with i(na introduces the negative purpose clause. Also this is a potential subjunctive implying a future reference and qualified by the element of contingency. They must first be released from their present incarceration in the abyss.

Then comes the accusative plural direct object from that same intensive pronoun a)utoj, again used as the personal pronoun, third person, referring to the target of the first demon assault army, the believers and unbelievers who are living in the cosmic system. So their target includes only those people who actually reside in the cosmic system.

The cosmic system is the most dangerous and horrible place in the world. The Tribulational evangelists are protected by the seal in their foreheads while the believers who are advancing under the plan of God through the perception of doctrine are protected by the wall of fire, they are not the target of these demon assault armies. There is no wall of fire for believers, however, in the cosmic system. It will be noted that Satan's target for the first demon assault army is mankind, man in the cosmic system serving Satan. We have already noted the principle that arrogance has no integrity and owes no allegiance to those who serve faithfully the ruler of this world. Satan is arrogant; Satan invented the cosmic system from arrogance, and there is definitely no loyalty on the part of Satan to his own servants.

Literally, the sub-final purpose clause is translated: "that they [the first demon army] should not kill them [man in the cosmic system]." However, the purpose clause must be translated in its idiom: "also they [the first demon assault army] were not permitted to kill them [mankind in the cosmic system]."

Then we have a positive part to the purpose clause. It begins with the adversative conjunction a)lla. This indicates a contrast with what precedes. What is this demon assault army permitted to do? And with this we have a conjunction to show that there is a mandate on the positive side, i(na. They are allowed to do something, the future passive indicative of the verb basanizw which not only means torture but it means intense torture; it means the object receives genuine pain in every sense of the word: "but that they might be tortured." The future tense is a gnomic future for a fact or performance that may be expected from this mandate. The passive voice: believers and unbelievers in the cosmic system receive the action of the verb for five months.

When Satan is through with his human servants he has no compunction about making them miserable and eventually destroying them. The wages of serving Satan is torture and misery from his own hand. Arrogance has no integrity, no sense of responsibility toward subordinates. Therefore the arrogant leader is ruthless, using people to establish his position, to provide him promotion, and then discarding them. Therefore, you as a believer should never be shocked or surprised after doing a good job under supervision or command or leadership of someone else to have that person turn on you. It should not even surprise you a little bit. Learn from the Tribulation, learn from the assault of the first demon army that people who are arrogant are not good leaders. They lack the greatest thing in leadership and that is integrity. Integrity takes cognisance of subordinates and is loyal to those who have done a good job.

The subjunctive mood with i(na indicates a purpose clause: "but that they might be tortured for five months."

Principle

1. Satan possesses the optimum of arrogance, therefore he can be classified under arrogant leadership. All arrogant leadership in history in any category follows the same pattern.
2. Arrogant leadership is preoccupied with self and motivated by inordinate ambition.
3. The arrogant person is constantly competing with everyone else around him, including his subordinates in business and his contemporaries in social life.
4. As long as the subordinates are useful or helpful to the business executive, the commanding officer, the department head, he is tolerated or used. This is why we as believers must always do our job as unto the Lord. Even when we are being used we are not doing our job to please someone else.
5. The person who is doing a good job and is tolerated is not the object of integrity or gratitude.
6. The moment something goes wrong the arrogant leadership will turn on you, fire you, make your life miserable, force you out. In other words, the antithesis of gratitude.
7. Many of the people of the Tribulation living in Satan's cosmic system were serving him even during the last days of the Church Age.
8. But now that Satan's defeat is near in the middle of the Tribulation he turns on them by permitting his first two demon assault armies to first torture for five months and then to kill.
9. Arrogance in leadership is parlayed into evil by means of outside pressure. Satan's outside pressure: he is cast out of heaven. It is inevitable that those who are arrogant and under pressure will pass their pressures on to their subordinates. Their subordinates will often absorb those pressures without a murmur and do a good job until, of course, they are discarded.

Before the second advent comes Satan turns on his own kingdom. Remember that he is the ruler of this world and he destroys his own kingdom before the second advent of Christ. Satan is going to terminate his own rulership by his own decision before the second advent. When Christ returns to the earth the world is a shambles. Satan's whole system is going to collapse under his very nose by his own arrogant decisions.

Translation of verse 5: "Also they [the first demon assault army] will not be permitted to kill them [mankind living in the cosmic system], but to torture them for five months: and their torture is like the torture of a scorpion when it strikes a man."

The question arises: How can people in the Tribulation avoid being the target for these demon assault armies?

The question arises as to how people in the Tribulation avoid the demon attacks. There are two categories of people who could avoid the attacks: unbelievers through adherence to the laws of divine establishment and believers in their modus operandi within the plan of God as it exists in the Tribulation. About the only thing that is different is the absence of the divine dynasphere which belongs to the Church Age believer only. God the Holy Spirit is removed as a restrainer during the Tribulation and that makes a change in the way of life for believers in the Tribulation. It should be understood that the 144,000 Jewish evangelists who are sealed in their foreheads will not be attacked at all under any circumstance; but there are others who will be attacked who are believers, and that is the problem. Why are certain believers going to be attacked? The problem there is cosmic involvement.

Now the question. Under what conditions do believers in the Tribulation avoid demon attack? The first issue is the old sin nature. You have to know how to handle the old sin nature, Satan's inside agent for temptation. The old sin nature resides in the cell structure of the human body and because of this fact we are ageing in the human race as well as this being an inside source of temptation. All ageing is the result of man having the old sin nature. Adam and the woman did not age in the garden at all, they could have lived indefinitely in perpetual youth. The primary consideration of the old sin nature residing in the cell structure of the body is temptation. That is the issue.

Guarding the gate of the soul is human volition. When temptation comes your way it is one of two categories: you know it is a temptation therefore it is a temptation of cognisance; you do not know it is a temptation therefore it is a temptation of ignorance. The question is not whether you know it is a temptation or not, the question is, Do you want to do it or not? You never have any problem with demons or sin or anything else apart from your own volition. Volition is the issue.

Suppose it is a temptation of ignorance and you don't really know it is a sin. You wanted to do it so you passed it into the soul. This is how the old sin nature gains control of the soul — through sin, and this is how we as members of the human race enter the cosmic system and thereby become vulnerable to whatever demon activity, whatever Satanic modus operandi, may be extant in that dispensation of history. So the old sin nature throws up the temptation. It can be cut off at the pass, all you have to do is say no, and that is as far as it goes. If, however, you let it pass through then it becomes sin. Sin originates from man's volition, not from the old sin nature. The old sin nature can only tempt, it can only make a suggestion. You can accept or reject the suggestion. You may not know that the suggestion is sin but that is all beside the point. You are still responsible because you wanted to do it and you are just as responsible for your sins of ignorance as your sins of cognisance. So whether it is a sin of cognisance or a sin of ignorance it puts you instantly inside the cosmic system. As a matter of fact you can get into two areas of the cosmic system: cosmic one and cosmic two.

In the Tribulation this is vulnerability to demon assault. Any arrogance, any bitterness, any vindictiveness, any implacability, any hatred or self-pity, any guilt modus operandi, any maligning, any gossip or revenge motivation any function, make's that person instantly vulnerable to the cosmic system. But it will be much worse in the Tribulation. We are going to see later in this chapter that even though the people involved were under attack from the demon assault army they did not repent of the number of things mentioned there. In verse 20 it has to do with idolatry which is a means of demon possession. In verse 21 it has the sins related to the phallic cult. And this is why people are vulnerable to demon assault in the Tribulation. It can be a believer or an unbeliever. Today we have the divine dynasphere. Believers in the Tribulation will not have the divine dynasphere but they will have fellowship with God. The minute any believer sins he loses fellowship with God and enters into the cosmic system. The Tribulation has the same option we have: rebound and get out of the cosmic system. Whenever the demon assault armies attack whatever believers are in the cosmic system are instantly vulnerable. To avoid being attacked in the Tribulation the believers will either have to say no to the temptation in the first place or instantly rebound in the second place.

There is another way in which Tribulational believers will become vulnerable to attack, and that is through people. They will make friends. People can only become a distraction where you permit it, it is a matter of your scale of values. If doctrine is first in your scale of values generally you can avoid this thing, but social life, sexual life, business life involve people and often people take precedence over doctrine. Therefore, people become inadvertently or deliberately the agents of the cosmic system. Once in the cosmic system the believer in the Tribulation will, in effect, be subject to demon attack.

People, then, are always a source of problems or a source of blessing. Whether they are a source of blessing or a problem has nothing to do with your environment or with their deception; it is your responsibility, you still have your own free will. In the Tribulation the same thing is true: people will be a source of cosmic evangelism and as a result of this cosmic evangelism many believers will be caught in the cosmic system when the demon assault armies make their attack. Once they are in the cosmic system they will suffer everything that the unbeliever suffers in the cosmic system. And there is only one possible way for them to recover, the same way we do: the rebound technique.

There is one other factor in the Tribulation. Strangely enough there will be prosperity. There never has been a period of world-wide historical disaster that did not bring prosperity to someone. Prosperity is perpetuated just as disaster is perpetuated and in the history of the world, in times of the greatest adversity, there is always someone who prospers for one reason or another, so that prosperity may not always be evident but it is just as perpetuating in history as is adversity. It is inevitable that any believer who gets a good start in Bible doctrine and has a good scale of values is eventually going to have prosperity, even in times of terrible adversity. Believers have their prosperity in perception of doctrine, and that principle goes right on even in time of great historical adversity. The Tribulation is a time of great historical adversity, a time when there will be disaster piled upon disaster. But in the midst of it all there will be prosperity. Some believers are going to become very prosperous in the historical adversity of the Tribulation. Then they face the greatest test of all. Prosperity testing is one of the most difficult of all problems: individual prosperity testing in which some form of success challenges with regard to priorities; collective prosperity where one belongs to a group who is prosperous, a nation, a city, individuals formed into some business group, etc. where you become very prosperous and therefore in sharing that prosperity there is also the possibility of distraction. So prosperity is probably one of the most subtle and most dangerous attacks against the soul of the believer. Prosperity can only be enjoyed by continuing to put doctrine first. The perception of doctrine gives capacity for that prosperity. But where that prosperity becomes a source of arrogance, a source of loss as far as your scale of values is concerned, then you become a victim of the cosmic system by your own decisions. You associate that prosperity with you rather than the grace of God. You become arrogant about that prosperity and you begin to look down your nose at other people. You find yourself in the cosmic system.

This is going to happen in the Tribulation. There will be a category of believers who will never grow up. Once they accept Christ as saviour one category will always be babies and will go into the cosmic system. Then there will be those who reach adolescence and then go into the cosmic system. Then there will be those who go beyond adolescence to maturity and these face the prosperity test. If they flunk the prosperity test then they are just as vulnerable to demon attacks as the babies and adolescent believers who went into the cosmic system. The Bible does not tell us but perhaps the majority of believers in the Tribulation are going to fail. They are going to be just as much the target for these demon attacks as unbelievers are. As a matter of fact unbelievers can even escape demon attack through the laws of divine establishment, and perhaps there will be a rare few who do so.

If you have prosperity without capacity for happiness the prosperity always is going to cause difficulty. Capacity must precede the actual prosperity and that will be true in the Tribulation just as it is true now.

So basically, then, the answer to the question as to how Tribulational believers avoid these things is very simple: rebound when necessary, have the same attitude toward doctrine that you have as a believer in the divine dynasphere, the scale of values which will not be changed, and the avoidance of any form or system of arrogance.

We have been studying the demon assault armies in the Middle of the Tribulation, that which is without precedent as far as demonology is concerned. It is the only time in history when demons are permitted to make an attack upon members of the human race and to use violence directly against them. It is interesting to note that the function of these three great demon armies is very much like the concept of modern tactics on the battlefield, the concept of war in general. The first demon assault army commanded by Abaddon is the torture army. The second demon assault army is an army group made up of four demon armies from the Euphrates. The third demon assault army comes from heaven when Satan is cast out and it makes a special attack against Israel. Each one of these demon armies is related to one of the three woes.

The Bible has a great deal to say about warfare. Our Lord Jesus Christ made it very clear that there would be wars and rumours of wars until He comes. Until the second advent there will always be warfare. There is no way to hinder war, there is only a way to protect one's self against war. That is why we have a book of Numbers in the Bible. It is not a book of numbers at all, it is the mobilisation plan of client nation Israel. All of the details of the book of Numbers deal with that subject. In the laws of divine establishment the only way to maintain national freedom is to be well prepared for war.

Numbers 21:14 tells us that "in the book of the wars of the Lord, Jehovah takes in the storm [takes by storm]". If they would follow the laws of divine establishment found in the book of Numbers they would never have any problem. One of the first things you find in the book of numbers is a draft and all men at age twenty were to spend a certain amount of time in military service. Whenever the Jews were lax in fulfilling the mandates of the book of Numbers they found themselves in very serious trouble, as in Nehemiah 4:8,9ff where they were finally able to pull together a scratch army and save Israel.

What is noticeable in Revelation chapter nine is that the demon armies are assault armies, armies on the offensive. There is not one word about defence in all of Revelation chapter nine and the second great principle of warfare is the principle of the offensive. The offensive is the only action by which a decision is gained in warfare. Offensive brings victory; the defensive can only avoid defeat. The only offensive way to wage war is to act on the offensive, destroying the enemy armies. Offensiveness increases the effectiveness of the force which adopts it, it raises morale, it permits concentration of effort, it allows freedom of action. The defensive should be used to assist the offensive action elsewhere, to gain time, to utilise good terrain or to compensate for weaknesses. The offensive should be used when there is any reasonable chance of success. In the two demon assault armies which we are studying they are always on the offensive. There is not one reference to the defence. They also follow the third great principle of warfare which is the principle of mass. Mass in military terms means combat power. Furthermore it means concentration of combat power at the point of maximum effectiveness. Mass combat power includes numbers, weapons, tactical skill, discipline, fighting and, of course, the resolution, morale and leadership that are so involved. Success in warfare is attained by the proper employment of mass in a main effort, that is, to attack at the proper time at the proper place for the accomplishment of a definite objective. We are going to see that these demon armies are always using the principle of mass.

There is also a principle known as the economy of force, the means by which mass is employed in the main effort, the time and place of the main effort having been determined means that troops are conserved by reducing their employment in other directions to a minimum consistent with safety. That is what we are going to see, especially with the second assault army.

Then there is the principle of movement. Movement means manoeuvre of combat elements. In the offensive this principle is used to bring mass in closer grips with the enemy to secure decisive results. Movement is designed to place mass in the best place for an attack. Movement is most effective when concealed. In many cases movement is only possible by the effective employment of fire power.

There is also the principle of surprise. To obtain maximum effect with minimum loss surprise must be employed. It may take the form of time, place, direction, force, tactics or weapons. The main factors of surprise are preparation, secrecy, and rapidity. The smoke coming from the shaft of the abyss provides a perfect barrage by which surprise is achieved in Revelation chapter nine.

There is also the principle of security which embraces all measures taken to guard against observation and surprise to ensure against hostile interference with operations to gain and maintain power and momentum of free action. This has already been fulfilled by the fact that all of these demon armies have their own security system until they are ready to launch their attack.

One of the greatest and most ignored of all principles of warfare is the principle of simplicity. Military plans should be simple so as not to sponsor complicated movements. Orders should not be ambiguous but direct and free from contingencies. Frequent changes of plans should be avoided. Unity of command must be observed. All of these are fulfilled by these demon assault armies.

There is also the principle of co-operation. There is a tremendous amount of teamwork involved between the first two demon assault armies. So we learn from the principle of warfare that they have not exactly been ignored by Satan in this great co-ordinated attack against the human race in the last half of the Tribulation.

Verse 6, the torture of the cosmic residents. The fact that this army makes its successful assault is brought out in the fact that they are able to torture for five months without hindrance certain categories in the target. They are able to torture those who are in the cosmic system, believers and unbelievers. The result of this is now found in verse six. After five months of being tortured born-again believers and unbelievers living in the cosmic system follow this principle: "And in those days shall men seek death, and not find it: and shall desire to die, and death shall flee from them."

Normal people, people who are free from arrogance, have a very healthy respect for death. They understand as believers the principle of death. Dying means to be absent from the body and face to face with the Lord. Death means to move into an interim state in an interim body, and therefore a place of great blessing. But once believers become involved in the cosmic system then their attitude toward death changes to one of great fear. And that is exactly what happens to the believers involved in verse six. Their fear is so great with regard to the attacking armies that their attitude toward death becomes abnormal, an abnormality brought on by arrogance from living in the cosmic system. Instead of resisting or doing anything about it they simply seek to die.

The corrected translation will bring out a few differences. We begin verse 6 with the connective conjunction kai, translated here "consequently," as a result of the attack of the first demon assault army. This introduces a result from what precedes. The assault of the first demon army on those who reside in the cosmic system brings out this result. We have next a nominative plural subject from a)nrwpoj, used for men. With it we have the generic use of the definite article which sets up a category of man: just those believers and unbelievers who are living in the cosmic system. The believers in the Tribulation will not have a divine dynasphere but they will have doctrine under logistical grace and they will have the opportunity of accomplishing what we do in the divine dynasphere; they will accomplish it through sheer perception of and application of Bible doctrine. But many of them will become involved in the cosmic system and once they do their attitude changes completely. Only when a believer is in fellowship, only when the believer is learning Bible doctrine and using it by way of application, only when he is executing the plan of God and fulfilling the mandates for the Word of God does he have any way of coping with adversity. Here are literally millions of believers living in the Tribulation who cannot cope with this adversity and who do not have the good sense to start reversing their bad decisions. Good decisions result in great blessing and prosperity; bad decisions result in great adversity. And, of course, man is the product of his own decisions and his decisions determine which way he is going in life, something that is true especially in a dramatic way in the Tribulation for the only target for these demon assault armies will be believers and unbelievers living in the cosmic system. As a result of living in the cosmic system they will seek as the only solution to their problems the one solution that is not a solution but a total admission of defeat: they will seek suicide. They will not find it, however, it is not God's intention to let them avoid the issue. After five months of terrible torture that drives them to the point of suicide they still do not understand the issue. They are alive because they have volition, they could begin to reverse their terrible course of bad decisions, they could begin by making one good decision — rebound, recovery from the cosmic system, the only defence against that demon assault army which is attacking and torturing. And because they have five months we have a very clear principle involved from the Word of God: God always provides grace before judgment; God always provides solutions for the problem. We have never had a problem for which there was not first of all an answer provided. If we have rejected the answer through the perception of Bible doctrine then obviously nothing is left but to endure the adversity. In the Tribulation believers in the cosmic system have five months to rebound; the unbelievers in the cosmic system under attack have five months to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, but they do not do so.

We have the generic use of the definite article with a) nqrwpoj indicating believers and unbelievers locked into the cosmic system. It individualises a group rather than a single object and points out that the group is identified by certain characteristics — bad decisions. We are all the products of our own decisions, not our environment. These certain characteristics relate to involvement in the cosmic system. The generic definite article may or may not be translated, and here it is not translated, “Consequently men,” believers and unbelievers.

Next we have a prepositional phrase, e)n plus the locative of the remote demonstrative e)keinoj, and with it the Greek word h(mera, “Consequently men in those days.” That is a very important prepositional phrase because it refers to the last half of the Tribulation and it has absolutely nothing to do with the present time. You cannot be attacked by a demon. You can be attacked by a demon-possessed person but demons today can offer you no violence. The hard-core demon armies are locked up and out of the way until the time of their attack comes, and that will not be until Satan is cast out of heaven and no longer has access to heaven. In the meantime the only two categories of demon phenomenon we have now are demon possession and demon influence. Our greatest danger from demons is our residence in the cosmic system under the category of reversionism. Believers and unbelievers living in the cosmic system “in those days.”

Then we have the future active indicative of the verb zhtew, translated “will seek.” The future tense is a predictive future, it anticipates an event expected to occur in future time in the Tribulation. The intense pain from torture resulting in the desire for death, even though death means Hades and greater torture, plus the eternal lake of fire and perpetual torture, is involved here. That is the unbeliever, the believer simply seeks a way out through death. The active voice: believers and unbelievers who have been living in the cosmic system produce the action of the verb. They seek as their only solution physical death, not the use of their volition to rebound in the case of believers or to accept Christ as saviour in the case of unbelievers. Nothing is more defeated than the person who is alive and wants to die. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of future reality and, of course, present application.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object from the noun qanatoj, the Greek word for death. It is a reference to physical death to escape the five months torture from the assault of the first demon army. Believers and unbelievers living in the cosmic system are totally preoccupied with self, they have locked-in arrogance, they have locked out all of the good solutions. Arrogance cannot endure torture for arrogance is a state of tenseness, increasing vulnerability to pain. The same humility that provides capacity for life in time of blessing and prosperity also provides the ability to withstand pain in time of adversity. But this humility is the monopoly of life inside of the divine dynasphere or, in the Tribulation, believers positive toward doctrine. Its equivalent in the Tribulation becomes very important, it is the only protection against the demon assault armies. The desire for death is abnormal and results from various categories of arrogance such as self-pity, psychopathic arrogance, emotional arrogance, the arrogance of discouragement and others.

Demons, the fallen angels under the command of Satan, are capable of two categories of violence: indirect violence and direct violence. Direct violence is that in which the demon must use another human being as the vehicle for the expression of his violence. This is the attack of man against man. That means a demon-possessed or demon influenced person attacks another person or persons in the human race. This category is operational today. All terrorism, criminal activity, the function of religious cults, the function of such organisations as KGB, are the result of either demon influence or demon possession. In the case of idolatry and certain religious activities there is demon possession, but much more common than demon possession is demon influence. Demon influence from the cosmic system is the source of most violence at the present time in history. This would include any act of hatred, anger, any form of arrogance. There are exceptions. When the violence involved is the function of the military establishment in the defence of the freedom of a nation there is no demon activity related to it. The support of third-world terrorism by the World Council of Churches is a case of demon influence in the function of the cosmic system. Believers and unbelievers, apart from the perception of doctrine and fellowship with God in the divine dynasphere are vulnerable to cosmic involvement and therefore demon influence.

The second category is direct violence from demons. This is a phenomenon reserved for the last half of the Tribulation. This category uses visible demon armies in a direct attack upon mankind who are living in the cosmic system. The demon attacking force includes three assault armies which do not function on planet earth at the present time.

So far in verse 6, "Consequently in those days men will seek death." And where does this all begin? Why do believers, for example, get into such a jamb? Romans 12:3 — "For I say, through the grace which has been given to me, to every man which is among you, stop thinking of self in terms of arrogance," that is entrance into cosmic one, equivalent to grieving the Holy Spirit in this dispensation, "beyond what you ought to think;" that in entrance into cosmic two, equivalent to day to quenching the Holy Spirit, "but think in terms of sanity," modus operandi of the divine dynasphere, the divine viewpoint of life, "for the purpose of being rational without illusion, as God has assigned to each one a standard of thinking from doctrine."

1 Peter 5:5, "In the same way, comparative novices, be under the command and authority of pastor-commanders. All of you in the congregation, fasten yourselves to each other with grace thinking: because God makes war against the arrogant, but he gives grace to the humble."

That is the order of the day for the Church Age and that same principle is transferred to the last three trumpet judgements which are also the three woes. God is going to actually permit and use as a vehicle of divine discipline these three great demon armies which at the present time are non-operational. God makes war against the arrogant but He gives grace to the humble. The arrogant believer is the enemy of the cross, he lives in the cosmic system, and God makes war against arrogance in believers and unbelievers. That is why believers in the last half of the Tribulation, living in the cosmic system, are just as much the targets of these demon assault armies as unbelievers.

1 Peter 5:6, "Therefore become grace oriented under the authority of the ruling hand of God, [living in the divine dynasphere] that he may promote you at the proper time."

Luke 14:11, "Everyone who exalts himself [cosmic one function] shall be humbled; but he who humbles himself [residence in the divine dynasphere] shall be exalted."

1 Timothy 6:3,4, "If anyone teaches a different doctrine, and does concur with sound doctrine, those doctrines of our Lord Jesus Christ, even doctrine pertaining to godliness; he has received arrogance [entrance into cosmic one], understanding nothing; furthermore he has a morbid obsession about controversies and verbal conflicts from which originate jealousy, discourse, and evil speculations."

All of that is a description of cosmic two and arrogant believers involved in social action, who are trying to straighten out this or that thing, who become hypersensitive about some organisation with which they are associated, are all involved in this. This is why the masses of believers, as well as unbelievers, are today under demon influence which is not the same as demon possession. But under certain circumstances demon influence is just as violent, just as antagonistic, just as hateful, and just as evil as demon possession. Usually the differences in demon influence is the rational approach to killing, to destroying in terrorism and guerrilla warfare, whereas the demon possession is more violent, more irrational in its modus operandi. But that refers to the function of the dispensation in which we live. In the future God is going to permit these demon assault armies to attack members of the human race but, strangely enough, only those members of the human race who are Satan's servant in the cosmic system. Satan has many servants today, he is the ruler of this world, but he is incapable of handling the rulership of this world in a way that will bring about the Millennium before Christ returns. He is seeking to do so but he is incapable of doing so, even though he is the greatest creature genius that has ever lived on the face of the earth. In the last half of the Tribulation as a result of a kingdom of darkness divided against itself demon armies literally, physically, violently, are attacking human beings who are the servants of Satan, the world will be in a shambles at the second advent of Jesus Christ. Christ returns to find that Satan has totally failed even before He arrives.

Even believers in the cosmic system will try to commit suicide. All believers living in the cosmic system are under the influence of arrogance, therefore they become the enemies of God and the servants of Satan. When Paul was addressing these people in the third chapter of Philippians he called them the enemies of the cross. Even though they are believers and cannot lose their salvation and will spend eternity in the presence of God, at the present time they are under cosmic influence. This distorts and destroys their perspective of life. Arrogance plus pain or pressure produces the motivation for suicide.

It should be noted that all forms of arrogance do not result in suicide or the motivation for taking one's life. Some forms of arrogance result in obsession and the desire for destroying others. But in this context five months of torture by the first demon assault army results in the insane desire for suicide. The unbelievers inconsistency should be noted for unbelievers have already heard from the evangelists of the Tribulation that there is a second appointment that awaits them. For the believer death is a source of great blessing and what happiness afterward is even greater. Death is to be absent from the body and face to face with the Lord. It is the place of no more tears, no more pain, no more death, the old things have passed away. The believer has an interim body and great happiness awaiting the resurrection body. Death, therefore, is a great thing as far as the believer is concerned. But for the unbeliever who had heard the message of the Tribulational evangelist, the witness of other believers, who has been exposed and saturated with the gospel, and they know that death means even greater torture than what they are suffering. But arrogance becomes irrational. When a genius becomes arrogant he is no longer rational, he can no longer think straight, and that is exactly what happens to these people, both believer and unbeliever. The influence of the cosmic system is greater than the influence of rational thinking and the truth.

The next three words in the Greek are kai ου μη and are very important. This kai acts like an adversative conjunction because it has a very strong double negative of prohibition following, the emphatic double negative. A double negative in the English is a positive; a double negative in the Greek is a strong and emphatic adversative. Then we have a future active indicative in the verb e(uriskw which with the negatives is “but they will not find,” the accusative singular direct object from the intensive pronoun a)utoj, “it,” referring to death. The gnomic future tense is for a statement of fact anticipated under these conditions. The active voice: the targets of the first demon army, believers and unbelievers living in the cosmic system, produce the action of the verb. They try to commit suicide but they will not find it. The indicative mood is declarative for an unqualified assertion of fact, unprecedented like the demons’ attack. Part of their punishment for cosmic involvement is to remain alive and suffer the results of serving Satan in the cosmic system. Life in the cosmic system never pays and the prolongation of their torture proves this. Furthermore, those living in the cosmic system have lost the power of decision, they are not making decisions from a position of strength, they are now making decisions from a position of weakness. In reality they are too weak to make the right decisions.

Many times in life we make bad decisions and bad decisions put us in a place of weakness. When we start to make decisions from a position of weakness we are in real trouble and this applies to many things in life. If you are fired off a job or you say, “I quit,” your decision is from a position of weakness. If you leave a job with high recommendations and regrets on the part of a firm or business or organisation, then you leave from a position of strength, and decisions that you make thereafter are made from a position of strength. If you have some form of illness and you go to a doctor who gives you some kind of medication you are making decisions in life from a position of strength. That medication was designed to keep you living and functioning in a normal way. But if you refuse to go to the doctor and you allow the disease to take over in your life you are then making decisions from a position of weakness. When you start to make decisions from a position of weakness then your whole life becomes weak, you are on the wrong course. To make decisions from a position of weakness is disastrous. The tragedy of believers living in the cosmic system is that they make their decisions from a position of weakness. That means to be under demon influence.

So in this difficult situation in the Tribulation we have believers who could make a decision from a position of strength; there are unbelievers in this difficult situation in the Tribulation and they could make a decision from a position of strength, and yet we go on to read in verse six, a connective conjunction kai followed by the future active indicative of the verb e)pikumew which means to have an intense desire, “and they will have an intense desire to die,” the aorist active infinitive of a)poqnhskw.

But first we look at e)pikumew. The gnomic future tense anticipates the attitude of those under torture from the first demon assault army. The active voice: man in the cosmic system produces the action of the verb, believers and unbelievers living in the cosmic system. The indicative mood is declarative for a simple statement of fact. What is their decision? To die: the aorist active infinitive of a)poqnhskw. The culminative aorist tense views the desire to die in its entirety but it emphasises it from the viewpoint of existing results, the frustration of intense desire. The idiom is translated by the English perfect tense, hence the insertion of the word “have” in the future, “and they will have an intense desire to die,” the infinitive of purpose. That is their purpose, that is their decision from a position of weakness.

This is followed by the adversative use of kai, “but,” and then the nominative singular subject qanatoj, “but death.” It is followed by the verb feugw which means to elude or to flee, and it is in the present active indicative, “but death will flee from them,” an idiom meaning “but death will elude them.” The futuristic present tense denotes an event which has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain that in thought it may be contemplated as already occurring. The active voice: death produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of fact.

Translation of verse six: “Consequently, men [both believer and unbeliever living in the cosmic system during the Tribulation] in those days [the last half of the Tribulation] will seek death, but they will not find it: they will have an intense desire to die but death will elude them.”

The torture of body and soul, the intense pain of the cosmic servants of Satan functioning from a position of weakness in the use of their volition simply adds to the pain. Once decisions from free will are made to live in the cosmic system the person involved loses the ability to make good decisions from a position of strength. Bad decisions are made from a position of weakness; good decisions are made from a position of strength. Free will loses its power in the cosmic system. All decisions made under the influence of arrogance and evil in the cosmic system, then, are made from a position of weakness; all decisions from the divine dynasphere or from application of Bible doctrine are decisions made from a position of strength. Decisions from a position of strength require the filling of the Spirit, objectivity from impersonal love, the flexibility of humility. The only good decisions which can be made from a position of strength in the cosmic system is for the unbeliever to make the one decision: to believe in Christ for eternal life; and the believer to make the one decision: rebound. This would clear each category from the cosmic system and give them a position of strength in the grace of eternal salvation or in the grace of recovery of fellowship with God. All other decisions in the cosmic system are made from a position of weakness, therefore the inevitability of disaster and torture from those decisions.

The principle: the believer living in the divine dynasphere is designed to make decisions from a position of strength; the believer living in the cosmic system is designed to make decisions from a position of weakness. While the Tribulation believer does not have the divine dynasphere he possesses its equivalent under logistical grace provision of Bible doctrine and its application to experience.

The angelic conflict has extended into human history and man was created to resolve the angelic conflict. This means that the millions and millions of fallen angels under the command of Satan seek to frustrate the plan of God in this regard. As a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ you are aware of the fact that God has a purpose for your life, and that life not only has purpose but meaning and definition and that the perfect plan of God is far greater than anything that Satan can throw against you.

There are four great attacks upon mankind. The first one was in the antediluvian civilisation and will never be repeated. It is the story of Genesis six and 2 Peter chapter two, of Jude six and 1 Peter 3:18ff. It is the story of the sexual infiltration of the human race, the attempt to destroy true humanity before the flood, the attempt to hinder the first advent of Christ, the incarnation and the hypostatic union; all of which was necessary for the accomplishment of our so great salvation.

The second and third attacks are in process today and have been during the entire course of the post-diluvian civilisation. These two attacks involve demon possession and demon influence. Demon possession, of course, is the demons penetrating the body of the unbeliever. The believer cannot be demon-possessed, his body is the temple of the Holy Spirit. The greatest of all attacks throughout all history until the middle of the Tribulation, however, is demon influence, the function of Satan's fallen angels in the penetration of the soul and the personality of both the believer and unbeliever in the cosmic system.

There is a fourth category which will not exist until the middle of the Tribulation. That is, demons directly and physically attacking members of the human race. At that point demons will be visible in their attack and they will do great violence both through torture and killing members of the human race.

Demon influence, being the demon penetration of the human soul and personality, is very definitely a problem for believers. Both demon possession and demon influence are impossible apart from human consent and the function of man's free will related to the cosmic system. Demon possession is a phenomenon, then, related to the unbeliever only in the cosmic system; demon influence is a phenomenon involving both believer and unbeliever in the cosmic system. At the end of the Tribulation mankind in the cosmic system will become the target for the greatest demon attack in history, an attack without precedent. Demons are capable of two categories of violence. One category exists today, the other category is reserved for the passage we are studying. The first is indirect violence. Indirect violence is that in which a demon must use another human being as a vehicle for the expression of his violence. This is the attack of man against man. This is a demon-possessed person or a person under demon influence attacking or doing violence to another member of the human race. This category is operational today and has been observed historically many times — like terrorism, criminal activity, the function of many religious cults, the function of such organisations as the KGB, all of which are the result of either demon influence or demon possession.

Believer and unbeliever, apart from perception of doctrine and fellowship with God in the divine dynasphere, are vulnerable to cosmic involvement and, therefore, demon influence. The direct form of violence does not exist today but we are in the process of studying it in Revelation chapter nine. Direct violence from demons is a phenomenon reserved for the end of the Tribulation. This category of violence used is visible demon armies in direct attack against mankind.

We have been studying decisions from a position of weakness that result in demon influence. The origin of position of weakness is fourfold. Primarily it is the cosmic system with its two cosmic dynaspheres: cosmic one which is grieving the Spirit; cosmic two which is quenching the Holy Spirit. There is also a by-product from the cosmic system and a second origin of making decisions from a position of weakness: arrogance plus ignorance. If you are in the cosmic system and therefore have any degree of arrogance (which you would) then ignorance becomes the basis for making decisions from a position of weakness. Then there is thirdly the lust pattern of mankind, a modus operandi related to the old sin nature. Finally, there are the pressures of life which cause people to make decisions from a position of weakness.

The concept of decision from a position of weakness is relatively simple. All decisions made in the cosmic system are decisions made from a position of weakness rather than a position of strength. All decisions to enter the cosmic system are decisions made from a position of weakness. Only two decisions can be made in the cosmic system from a position of strength. The first is the decision of the unbeliever to receive Jesus Christ as his personal saviour. The second is the decision of the believer in the cosmic system to rebound, to get out of the cosmic system, to recover his fellowship with God. Decisions made in the divine dynasphere are decisions made from a position of strength; decisions made from the cosmic system are decisions made from a position of weakness. Since man is the product of his own decisions it is imperative that he makes good decisions rather than bad decisions.

The target for attack from demon assault armies at the end of the Tribulation is the personnel living in the cosmic system. Two categories of mankind live in the cosmic system: believers and unbelievers. They are the victims of violence from demon assault armies because they have made many decisions from a position of weakness. Therefore they suffer and die from demon assaults of the first and second demon assault armies because they have made their decisions in that way from a position of weakness.

The rationale of Satan in destroying his own servants in the cosmic system is fairly obvious. He is cast out of heaven in the middle of the Tribulation and he is confined to the earth which he rules. Once he is cast out of heaven and is confined only to the earth he makes a shambles out of the earth before the second advent of Christ. Satan cannot use losers once he becomes a loser himself, and since he cannot use losers who have made decisions from a position of weakness he then discards them in the very violent manner we are studying. Satan is losing and that will become obvious to him in the Tribulation and he will not carry losers in his organisation. Satan is arrogant and therefore destroys his own servants.

There is an application to us in contemporary history. Every day many thousands of believers are making hundreds of thousands of decisions from a position of weakness. This makes them vulnerable to demon influence. Many political decisions, in fact most of them, are made from a position of weakness. Like people who decided for a nuclear freeze. That is a decision made from a position of weakness. Antigon legislation is a decision made from a position of weakness. The abolition of capital punishment is a political decision made from a position of weakness. Taxing industry out of existence is a political decision made from a position of weakness. Any government decision which destroy free enterprise or permits bureaucratic interference is a decision from a position of weakness. Through cosmic arrogance and ignorance labour unions make decisions from a position of weakness. They make decisions to strike in time of depression and economic recession.

These contemporary illustrations fall into the same pattern as for residents of the cosmic system in the Tribulation. Both believers and unbelievers make decisions to live in the cosmic system and to remain there. These decisions are made from a position of weakness and they result in one of the most horrible experiences of history, violent attack by demon assault armies resulting in both torture and death. Revelation 9:6 describes how they feel about it.

It is very difficult for people to understand all that is involved in demon influence because so many Christians, in their thinking, are under demon influence today. Perhaps a reminder of some of the gates of cosmic two of the cosmic system will help us to appreciate the situation. Cosmic one are the twenty-six gates of interlocking systems of arrogance. Cosmic two are the nine gates of interlocking systems of hatred. Perhaps more than anything else, apart from arrogance, cosmic two helps us to understand demon influence and decisions made from a position of weakness.

Gate one of cosmic two is negative volition. All negative volition places the believer in a position of weakness. God consciousness is the point at which becomes an issue in the life of any individual. It is the point at which the individual becomes aware of the existence of God and therefore becomes accountable for his relationship with God, since he has free will, since he has two frontal lobes, he has an awareness through this function of God's existence. The unbeliever enters gate one of cosmic two by negative volition at either God consciousness or gospel hearing, or both, or the truth in between which is the laws of divine establishment, the principle by which he has freedom to be evangelised. Therefore the decision made from a position of weakness — I don't want to know God — results in rejection of establishment principles and the authority that God has ordained in them. It brings the person to gospel hearing with that same negative volition.

The object of the attack in the Tribulation, the victims of the demon assault army, are people who follow this pattern. They have entered gate one of cosmic two, they are in the cosmic system and are therefore under demon influence. Demons have penetrated their soul and personality with the result that their thought pattern has changed. They have used their own free will to go negative at God consciousness; they have used their own free will to go negative toward the various systems of authority in the laws of divine establishment; and when they hear the gospel as they will many times in the Tribulation they remain negative and their own decision produces demon influence or demon possession. With believers it can only be demon influence. This negative volition which results in demon influence is mentioned in Romans 1:18-25, " ... they exchanged the truth of God for a lie," and that is a definition of demon influence, exchanging divine truth for a lie. That is the way in which one enters gate one of cosmic two. For the believer it quenches the Holy Spirit; for the unbeliever it is rejection of the gospel. " ... they both worship and serve the creature [Satan] rather than the creator [our Lord Jesus Christ], who is blessed forever.” This is the beginning of demon influence.

A description of them is found in 1 Corinthians 1:18, “For the word of the cross [teaching of the gospel] is to those who perish foolishness [that is demon influence]; to those who are saved, however, it is the power of God.”

2 Corinthians 4:3,4, “But if our gospel is veiled, it is veiled to those who perish: in whom the god of this world [Satan] has blinded the minds of those who do not believe [demon influence], that they might not see the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God.”

2 Peter 2:20-22 — “For if after having escaped the defilement of the cosmic system by the knowledge of our Lord and saviour Jesus Christ, they are again entangled in them [cosmic one and cosmic two], and are overcome [demon influence], the latter stage becomes worse than the first,” the latter stage was demon influence; the first stage was God consciousness, “for it would have been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, having known it, to turn away from the holy mandate [to believe in Christ]. It has happened therefore to them according to the true proverb [Proverbs 26:1], The dog returns to his own vomit [a description of demon influence].”

The believer’s rejection of Bible doctrine would also be another way of someone entering cosmic two.

2 Corinthians 6:11,12, “O Corinthians, our mouth is open to you [teaching of doctrine], our right lobe is enlarged [you have to know doctrine to teach it]. You are not hindered from learning doctrine by us [Pastors like Paul], but you are hindered by your own emotions.” Cf. Romans 16:17,18; Philippians 3:18,19.

Gate one is one of the two ways which one enters cosmic two. Gate two is simply the result of it all, and that would be called cosmic degeneration. This is demon influence being parlayed into degeneration such as in Romans 1:24-27. In other words, here is the beginning of making decisions from a position of weakness. Gate one is simply the source of the function of gate two and the degeneration of society is a manifestation of the fact that a maximum number of people in society, believers and unbelievers, are under demon influence.

Gate three then leads to the problem that causes it all. This is that interim principle, the principle between God consciousness and gospel hearing. They reject the laws of divine establishment designed for the freedom and the perpetuation of the human race. Therefore gate three of cosmic two is the antiestablishment gate and every decision directed toward antiestablishment is a decision from a position of weakness. For example, 2 Timothy 3:2-7 — “For men will be lovers of self [involvement in cosmic one], lovers of money, braggarts, arrogant, slanderous, disobedient to parents” — sociology is still trying to explain what has happened these last few generations: the disregard for parents which is the most basic authority in life and the only system of authority that can launch one into life under the principle of humility and capacity for life, “ungrateful,” antiestablishment persons. All degeneracy in society, all antagonism toward the basic systems of authority in society become a part of demon influence. There must be a breakdown of the laws of divine establishment before Satan can have his way with man on planet earth.

Verse 3-5 says: “no capacity for love, implacable, malicious gossips, without self-discipline, brutal, haters of good, treacherous, thoughtless, having become conceited, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God; having a form of godliness [often religious], although they have denied its power [the power is the divine dynasphere]; also avoid such men as these [because they are cosmic evangelists].”

Verse 6, “For among them they who creep into homes [local churches] and captivate silly women weighed down with sins, led on by various categories of lusts.” Anytime anyone makes a decision from a position of lust they have made a decision from a position of weakness; “always learning [false doctrine, demon influence] and so they are never able to come to a true knowledge of [e)pignwsij] doctrine.” Therefore, gate three is hatred of establishment. This is brought out in Romans 1:28-32. They hate the police officer, they are antiestablishment. They have rejected the authority of parents, they have rejected the authority of law and order, they reject the authority of the police officer, they reject every form of human authority. The “depraved mind” in Romans chapter one is referring to demon influence.

“And just as they did not see fit have God in their knowledge any longer, God delivered them over to a depraved mind,” demon influence, “to do those things which are not proper.” What do those believers and unbelievers in cosmic two do? They are “filled with unrighteousness, evil, greed, malice; full of jealousy, murder, dissension, strife, discord, deceit, evil motivation; and from that they have become gossips, slanderers, haters of God, insolent [rejection of authority], arrogant [involved in cosmic one], boastful inventors of evil, disobedient to parents, ignorant ones, without understanding, lacking honour and integrity, unloving, implacable; and although they know the ordinance of God [the laws of divine establishment], that those who practice such things are worthy of death, not only are they doing the same things, but they give hearty approval to others who practice them.”

Gate four then shows the other side of demon influence. Not only is there degeneracy in society but there is also the concept of arrogance related to cosmic panaceas. Arrogant self-righteous people are always trying to improve everyone in their periphery. This is seeking the solutions to life apart from divine truth in its three categories. This gate rejects the laws of divine establishment with the result that there is a substitution of human viewpoint solutions to life. Hence, the Satanic administration of planet earth. Instead of freedom they demand equality, but equality can only be achieved by the destruction of freedom. Equality means slavery; inequality is a sign of freedom. Equality demands the full mobilisation of the envy and jealousy of those under demon influence. Hence, to promote equality, taxation of the successful, confiscation of property, nationalisation of industry, and therefore demon influence always advocates the destruction of the economic results of the laws of divine establishment. The identity of the human being must be characterised by sameness, says demon influence. They must all be the same. No one must appear better than anyone else, no one must appear superior to everyone else, there must be a standardisation of life.

Cosmic panaceas lean toward big government and little people. The citizen is the slave of the state instead of the state being the servant of the people. Hence, to be different becomes a crime in the eyes of the state. That is demon influence in thinking. The government must not permit autonomous developments, therefore there must be the regulation and destruction of private enterprise, the confiscation of private property, the redistribution of wealth.

This gate includes utopianism, the arrogance of recreating and refashioning all forms of human existence. The cosmic panaceas lead to violence, terrorism, revolution under the principle of social engineering. Therefore always demon influence justifies violence in the name of social engineering, the application of what is false to life. The state must train the children to be oriented to the dictates of the state rather than the authority of their parents. In other words, a total rejection of freedom and authority in the function of the laws of divine establishment. They ignore the fact that without freedom you cannot have a destiny and without authority you cannot have freedom, and therefore cosmic panaceas attack both freedom and authority in the laws of divine establishment. That is a brief idea of what demon influence is in that category.

Gate five is the religious gate. Religion is Satan's counterfeit of the plan of God for believer and unbeliever. Religion is a part of Satan's policy of evil. Again, we must always note that Christianity is not a religion, for in religion man by man's efforts seeks to gain the approbation of God or what he has set up as God. In Christianity man is related to God through faith in Christ and therefore God provides the blessing. Hence, in religion man seeks God through his personal merit and works; in Christianity God seeks man totally apart from works in grace.

Paul describes religious leaders in that fashion in 2 Corinthians 11:13-15, "Such men are false apostles, deceitful workers, disguising themselves as apostles for Christ. And no wonder, for even Satan disguises himself as an angel of light. Therefore it is not surprising if his servants also disguise themselves as servants of righteousness; whose end shall be according to their deeds." Cf.. 2 Timothy 3:7-9.

Gate six is actually the demonism gate. This is the function of fallen angels under the command of Satan. In the case of unbelievers to penetrate the body; in the case of believers to influence the thinking, the penetration of the frontal lobes of the soul, the penetration of the personality. Cf.. 1 Timothy 4:1.

In 1 Corinthians 10:20,21 we actually have the sacrifice to demons mentioned, things which Gentiles sacrifice to demons and not to God, "I do not want you to become a sharer in demons," i.e. participate in their viewpoint. The believer who is under demon influence in the cosmic system is partaking of the devil's communion table, he is influenced in his thinking by the Satanic viewpoint. To drink the cup of the Lord you have to be in the divine dynasphere; to drink the cup of demons you have to be in the cosmic system.

Gate seven is the area for those who are suffering from academic arrogance: anthropocentric academic speculation. It is described in 2 John 9 — “Everyone who advances in knowledge out of bounds and does not remain in the field of play.” The field of play is the divine dynasphere; out of bounds is the cosmic system; “by means of the doctrine of Christ, does not have a relationship with God; he who remains with doctrine [inside the divine dynasphere], this one has a close relationship with both the Father and the Son.” So in the field of academic speculation there is the whole concept of all of the philosophical attitudes, psychological attitudes, of human viewpoint.

Gate eight is the attack of the old sin nature.

Gate nine is the evil policy of Satan.

When believers are trapped in the cosmic system they are under demon influence.

That brings us to Revelation 9, verse seven. In verses 7-9 we have the locust description of the first demon assault army.

The corrected translation of verse seven: “Now the appearance of the locust demons was like cavalry horses which had been prepared for warfare; and on their heads , as it were, crowns like gold, and their faces like the faces of men.”

Two factors are found in this verse. First, for battle the locust demons of the first assault army are described in terms of cavalry. That means they have mobility, fire power, and shock. They will be able to cover the entire world with their torture of five months. Secondly, they have a military insignia like a gold crown. It isn't a gold crown, it is a comparative word, “like,” the Greek word o(j. They have a patch which has a gold crown on it. It implies that they think they are a victorious army.

The third thing that we have in this passage is the appearance of the demon. They have faces of men, indicating the fact that demons do appear as men and have greater intelligence and adaptability. The last time that demons appeared as men was in the sixth chapter of Genesis, and from that time until the middle of the Tribulation there is no such appearance. These demon armies which will appear in the future are now incarcerated. The significance of the patch is victory and this first demon assault army comes out of the abyss shouting victory. However, for this demon army it is a false victory since the only combat victory is against those members of the human race who, during the Tribulation, reside in the cosmic system of Satan's minions. To win a victory over believers and unbelievers who have a profile of making bad decisions, and decisions from a position of weakness, isn't really much of a victory. Hence, their only victory is against Satan's human servants.

According to the next verse these men are very handsome. They are attractive as the demons in Genesis six were attractive.

There is no such thing as legitimate exorcism. The exorcist, the one who alleges to cast out demons, is a faker and a liar and therefore to be avoided at all costs. The problem is the same always where there is a person who alleges to speak in tongues or a person who alleges to be a divine healer or whether he is an exorcist. They all fall into the same pattern. The issue in the angelic conflict is volition, the function of man's free will, and all of these things blur that distinction.

There are two kinds of demon activity today: demon possession and demon influence. Both of them are involvement in the cosmic system. Demon possession is for unbelievers only; demon influence for believer and unbeliever. Any believer or unbeliever in the cosmic system is under demon influence, for demon influence is the invasion of the personality, the thought pattern, the soul of either a believer or an unbeliever. Demon possession is demon invasion of the body. The demons who can do this are invisible; they are disembodied spirits; but all demons are not disembodied spirits. We are studying visible demons who are not operational on the earth today. Visible demons were operational in the antediluvian period of history and visible demons will be operational at the end of the Tribulation.

When people are demon possessed they often have been put in contact with an "exorcist". There is no such thing as an exorcist. Only one person ever cast out demons legitimately and that was our Lord Jesus Christ during His first advent. And He did not even cast out demons in the power of His own deity, He used His humanity in the prototype divine dynasphere. He said in Matthew: "If I by the Spirit of God cast out demons [first class condition: and I do]." No one else has that power and that ability. Our Lord delegated that power to the apostles as a spiritual gift but whether it is our Lord Jesus Christ or the apostles whom He had delegated authority, only for their ministry and no one else's, neither could cast out a demon apart from the function of positive volition on the part of the patient, the victim. Every time our Lord cast out a demon or demons the person always came to Him for help, so that volition was the issue. When they came to the apostles the same thing was true: they had positive volition and they wanted "out," and they came to the one who could help.

In the Tribulation we are going to see something new in demonism: demon assault armies which are visible just as demons were visible in the antediluvian civilisation. We are going to see these demon armies in operation. The victims, the target for these demon armies, are believers and unbelievers in the cosmic system. In other words, believers and unbelievers under demon influence. We are also going to see those who are under demon possession. In the Tribulation the demon army we are now studying tortures for five months. That is grace before judgment, and opportunity to recover, and people can only recover from demon possession or demon influence by their own positive volition. For the unbeliever under demon possession that positive volition must express itself by faith in Christ; for the believer under demon influence that positive volition must express itself by rebound. Volition is still the issue. The major system of demon possession is idolatry; the major system for demon influence is arrogance. When arrogance invades the personality and the thinking of the soul, the decisions of the soul are made from arrogance and the emotion of the soul is related to arrogance, then you have the first form of demon influence. While only unbelievers can be demon possessed both believers and unbelievers in the cosmic system can be under demon influence unless they get out by rebound.

Verse 8, "Furthermore," taken from the conjunction kai, "they had hair like the hair of women, and their teeth were like the teeth of lions." The Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written and always in every period of history there are certain buzz words that mean certain things. Long hair on women meant beauty in the time in which this was written. So this is a buzz word for beauty; the woman's hair depicts beauty and attractiveness. Note the description of Satan, for example, in Ezekiel 28:12. The beauty of demons, of course, is a trap for those who are attracted; a facade to lure victims. The teeth of the lion indicate that behind the facade of beauty is the ruthless desire to destroy. So we have a case here of where beauty attracts the victim. Beauty destroys, and the connotation of attraction is the long hair of the woman; the connotation of destruction, the teeth of the lion. That is the concept of the passage. Beauty can be a source of appreciation or distraction, the key is to know what is behind the beauty. With demons, of course, there is neither integrity, honour, sensitivity, nor capacity for love behind the facade of great beauty. Instead, when contact is made there are the teeth of the lion, hence the formula for torture. Behind the facade of great beauty are the teeth of the lion representing power, cruelty, arrogance, and torture.

Next, in verse 9, we have their battle equipment. "Also they have breastplates like breastplates of iron; and the sound of their wings was like the noise of chariots plus many cavalry horses running into battle."

The breastplate is defensive equipment. They are on the offensive and the breastplate is merely a picture of them in relationship to their army. The breastplate of iron is mentioned because in the Roman world it was considered the best piece of defensive equipment. It emphasises the fact that demons are not vulnerable to human attack and therefore human beings have no protection against these demon armies unless they are behind the wall of fire. In fact believers do not have power to cope with demons but they are protected by using logistical grace. Again, remember the body is the temple of the Holy Spirit, demons cannot possess the body of the believer; but you can come under demon influence which means thought control through the inculcation of cosmic doctrines, culture, philosophy, related to personal arrogance. The only defence against demons, then, is from your fellowship with the Lord. This means for the believer in the Church Age residence and function in the divine dynasphere. That is our wall of fire. What it means for the believers in the Tribulation is walking in fellowship with the Lord.

The breastplate emphasises that demons are not vulnerable to human attack, which means that believers must rely on Bible doctrine, the plan of God, the provision of logistical grace, the wall of fire, the function of God the Holy Spirit. In past eras of history God had to give certain believers, like prophets or apostles, the ability, the delegated power, to cast out demons; but that gift never functioned apart from the volition of the victim. That gift and that authority has not been extended into the Church Age, therefore we must leave this to God and avoid the arrogance of assuming power that we do not possess. Victory over the power of evil includes both the cosmic system and the attack of demons which, of course, cannot be attained by human works or by any self-effort. Positional truth resulting from the baptism of the Spirit at salvation, residence and function in the divine dynasphere: that is our protection. Remember that unbelievers are only potential victims of demon possession, while believers and unbelievers are only potential victims of demon influence. The system for resistance becomes very important.

Demon influence results in distortion of doctrine, becoming involved in the cults, getting involved in the tongues movement, getting hooked up with so-called divine healers, getting involved with exorcism, in ritual without reality. This is the arrogance of human viewpoint, this is pseudo-intellectualism, this is self-righteousness, crusader arrogance that seeks to whitewash the devil's world.

The demon assault armies do have specified objectives. The objective constitutes the guide for the interpretation of orders, the formulation of decisions, and the deployment. This principle is true with regard to these angelic assault armies. Their orders are related to the type of objective they face. The principle of objective always deals with the decisive defeat of the opposing armies and the principle of offensive is the principle that these angelic armies use. Offensive is the only action by which a decision is gained in the military. That is not only true in the military but it is true of almost everything else in life. Offensive brings victory; all the defensive can do is avoid defeat.

We have noted that the breastplates of iron in verse nine are defensive equipment, but the breastplate of iron is mentioned for only one reason: because they are invulnerable to any counter attack, and as far as their victims are concerned. Any defence against these demon armies must come from other than counter violence or counter attack in any type of a military consideration. The defence comes from an entirely different realm.

In fact believers do not have the power to cope with demons today but they are protected by logistical grace. The only defence against demons is not to counter attack them but to rely upon the power of God. This means for believers of the Church Age residence and function inside of the divine dynasphere which sets up our wall of fire. The divine dynasphere will not be operational for believers in the Tribulation and therefore they will have other means related to the same principles of perception and application of Bible doctrine. One problem which we have today and which will be amplified in the Tribulation is that believers who do not take in doctrine on a daily basis and cannot apply it to their experience are going to lose a personal sense of destiny. The first great wave of attack from the demon assault army panics the believer in the cosmic system and he loses all sense of personal destiny. The real problem is when these demon waves start their assault throughout the world, especially the second demon assault army, because believers are going to lose a personal sense of destiny. As a result of that they are going to fail to make the right decisions to break out of the cosmic system. The right decisions relate to one thing: the rebound technique.

Principle

1. The breastplate emphasises the fact that these demon assault armies are not vulnerable to counter attack. This means that believers must rely in the Tribulation, as now, on the daily perception of Bible doctrine, the plan of God as it is revealed for any given dispensation, the logistical grace modus operandi from heaven which is operational in every dispensation, the divine provision of the wall of fire.

2. In past dispensations or eras of history God has given to certain believers like prophets or apostles, the authority, the power, the ability to cast out demons, but very few. No one has the power to cast out demons today. Demons are removed from people under two conditions: when demons are commanded by Beelzebub to get out when there is someone around to whom Satan wants to give credibility with the human race; a false teacher usually. When that demon gets out then the credit goes to the false teacher; and, secondly, the power of God. But the power of God does not counteract human volition. Therefore human volition can make decisions that will separate one from demon possession.

3. Therefore avoid the exorcist syndrome. Some pastors have acquired this and destroyed their ministry.

4. The breastplate of iron therefore reminds us as believers that we have no power or authority to deal with demons in the post canon period of the Church Age. We are protected from them in the divine dynasphere, we have no power to deal with them, the victim himself must deal with the problem by making a right decision from a position of power. The only position of power is grace, God's grace provision. The only two decisions that will release people from any form of demonism are decisions made from a position of strength.

5. Therefore we must leave the problems of demonism to God and avoid the arrogance of assuming a power which we do not possess.

6. Victory over the power of evil, including both the cosmic system and the attack of demons, cannot be attained by human works or self-effort, by magic formulas or incantations of a pious nature.

7. The whole basis for the believer's protection today begins at salvation with the baptism of the Holy Spirit, that moment when God the Holy Spirit picks us up and enters us into union with Christ.

8. Remember that unbelievers are potential victims of demon possession and demon influence. Believers can only be under demon influence.

9. In the case of demon possession the human body is invaded, whereas in the case of demon influence the human soul and personality is invaded by cosmic thought. Demon influence results in the distortion of doctrine, in getting involved in some cult. It is ritual without reality; it is the arrogance of human viewpoint; it is pseudo-intellectualism.

It says at the end of verse 9, “and the sound of their wings was like the noise of chariots of many horses running into battle.” These are not the wings of the demons. These demons do not have wings. These are the wings by analogy, the wings of the locusts.

Principle

1. The locust in flight is never alone. There are hundreds of thousands of locusts in a swarm and the sound they make is awesome. In other words, by analogy the noise going into battle is awesome. The first thing we note about the attack is that before they hit they have already paralysed their victims with fear. One of the great principles of living in the cosmic system is vulnerability to fear. When a person becomes frightened he stops thinking and switches to emotion. Emotion cannot think; it has no common sense; it cannot apply doctrine or truth to any situation or experience. Therefore all fear is related to emotion. The principle is that their sound is intimidating as they take the offensive against believers and unbelievers in the Tribulation living in the cosmic system.
2. Up to this point in the Tribulation all cases of demon possession and demon influence are preceded by the function of human free will to reach that state. The victims of the attack are there because they made bad decisions from a position of weakness.
3. Bad decisions regarding the cosmic system or false doctrine result in unbeliever demon possession. In believers it results in coming under demon influence. No one gets into the cosmic system apart from his own consent.
4. The attack of the first demon assault army in the Tribulation occurs in a literal, visible and audible sense for those who have reached the zenith of bad decisions made from a position of weakness. It is amazing to realise that the greatest power that you carry in your soul is a greater power than the attack of demons — your volition. Your free will is the key to your life because God gave us free will in order to resolve the angelic conflict.
5. Only those living in the cosmic system will be the recipients of torture, a torture which continues for five months.
6. For the unbeliever demon possession is the decision and the responsibility of the one who is possessed. For the believer demon influence is the decision and the responsibility of the one who lives in the cosmic system.
7. Remember that while exorcism does not exist today as a legitimate function our Lord cast out demons on numerous occasions, but only when He was approached by positive volition. He was recognised as Lord, His power was recognised, His saviourhood was recognised, and furthermore Jesus demonstrated the principle of His messiahship, Matthew 12:28.

In the Tribulation the removal of the restraint of God the Holy Spirit is one of the characteristics and therefore demons are permitted under certain circumstances to physically and violently attack and, in this case, torture human beings. This is not permitted today, God the Holy Spirit is the restrainer. When He is removed as the restrainer (2 Thessalonians 2) then certain things will come to pass and at the end of the Tribulation those who are in the cosmic system are vulnerable to something that has never occurred before in all of history. Demons have been seen in the antediluvian civilisation but no one has ever had physical violence from a demon. In demon possession they motivate another human being to attack a human being but they haven't done it themselves. In other words, before these people are tortured for five months they have made many bad decisions leading to that torture. Note that the two demon assault armies in this chapter are not released until the middle of the Tribulation, until Satan is confined to planet earth.

Today in the Church Age the attack against believers is the doctrine of demons, 1 Timothy 4:1. It is not physical violence but the worst kind, spiritual violence: false doctrine, legalism, antinomianism, asceticism, rationalism, humanism, communism, socialism, welfare statism. These are demon attacks today.

In the middle of the Tribulation that attacks will be visible, horrible, and tactful. So effective will be these demon attacks in the future that Satan's kingdom will be in a shambles as a result of it. Satan will have destroyed his own rule of the earth through arrogance before our Lord returns. The second advent finds Satan's kingdom destroyed by the arrogance of Satan. Satan, then, as the ruler of this world is a total failure.

Verse 10, the scorpion description of the first demon army. We have seen the locust description, that is the audible attack, the noise that intimidates. Now we see the torture part, the scorpion description of the first demon assault army.

"Also they had tails and stings like scorpions, and in their tails was their power to torment, to hurt, to injure those men five months."

Their limitation comes in the word exousia which is delegated authority. Their power and authority originates from God. God never permits this to happen until the end of the Tribulation and the five months of torture without death is one of the greatest illustrations of the justice of God and the grace of God in giving them five months in which they could repent. The demons can do nothing apart from the sovereign will of God, they are limited to torture and their time limit is five months. The aorist active infinitive of diokō is the verb involved here. It means to hurt, to injure. Obviously it is a synonym for the word in verse 5 which we have already studied, basanizō, which means to torture. The aorist tense is a constative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety, an action extended over a period of five months. The active voice: the first demon assault army produces the action, This is an infinitive of actual results. It is followed by the accusative plural of the definite article hoi. The definite article is used as a demonstrative pronoun, therefore it is translated "those." Then there is the accusative plural direct object from the noun anthropoi, used here for mankind, man as a category. It refers to a specific category of mankind living in the cosmic system, believers and unbelievers who through their own decisions from a position of weakness have entered the cosmic system.

Then it goes on to say, “and in their tails is their power [authority] to torment [to hurt, to injure] those men [living in the cosmic system] five months.”

Now we come to a brief profile of one of Satan’s commanding generals. Satan, by the way, has princes. One of them is Beelzebub who is in charge of manoeuvring disembodied spirits, called demons, in and out of people to give credibility to Satan’s human servants, e.g. so-called divine healing. “We do not war against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against princes of darkness in high places” — Ephesians 6:12, and one of those great princes is the general commanding the first demon assault army.

Verse 11, we have the present active indicative of the verb ε)χ)ω, correctly translated “they have,” rather than “they had.” The perfective present tense refers to a fact which has come to be in the past but is emphasised as a present reality. This demon prince has been commanding the first demon assault army based in the bivouac in the abyss for a long time. He is now identified as the commander. The active voice: the first demon assault army produces the action of the verb. Abaddon or Apollyon is the commander of this army. There are four unnamed angels in verse 14 who command the second demon assault army group. The third assault army is commanded by the great red dragon, Satan himself, Revelation 12:3,4. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of a demon general commanding this army. Furthermore, he is a prince in Satan’s realm. The fact that he is called a prince is in the accusative singular direct object from the noun βασιλε)υ)ς: it means a king, but it is used here for one possessing the highest power.

Then there is the prepositional phrase which indicates he is in command, ε)π)ι plus the genitive plural of the intensive pronoun α)υ)τ)ο)ι)ς, used in the Koine Greek for the third person personal pronoun, and it is in the plural and translated “over them.” Then we have an appositional accusative from α)γγ)ε)λ)ο)ι)ς, the Greek word for angels. With that is a descriptive genitive from the noun α)β)υ)σ)σ)ο)ς, “the abyss.” “They had a king [commanding general] over them, the angels of the abyss.”

The fact that this leader is described as an angel means again a fallen angel or a demon. There are basically two categories of fallen angels: visible or invisible. Visible demons possess a body which is observable by a member of the human race; an invisible demon is a disembodied spirit and therefore not seen by the human race. At the present time the human race is often under attack from the disembodied type of demon under two categories: demon possession and demon influence. Before this leader’s fall he was undoubtedly like Satan, a cherub, the highest rank of angels before the fall. There is now a higher rank called the seraphs. The abyss is one of the compartments of Hades where fallen angels are incarcerated.

This is the hard core first demon assault army. The identification of this commanding general is given, “whose name in the Hebrew language is Abaddon, while in the Greek he is called Apollyon.” In the Hebrew his name is Abaddon, and it is transliterated into the Greek as Abaddon. Abaddon is a word that occurs quite often in the Old Testament. It occurs as a synonym for Sheol or Hades. In Job 26:6 Abaddon is a synonym for Hades, “Naked in Sheol before him, and Abaddon has no covering.” Abaddon means place of destruction. In Job 28:22 Abaddon is personified. The question in the context deals with wisdom. The answer begins in verse 20, “Where then does wisdom originate? and where is the place of true understanding? Thus it is hidden from the eyes of all living, and concealed from the birds of the sky. Destruction [Abaddon] and death say, With our ears we have heard a report.” Abaddon is personified in this passage.

Proverbs 15:10,11, “Stern discipline is for him who forsakes the way: he who hates reproof shall die. Sheol and destruction [Abaddon] are unveiled before the Lord: how much more the frontal lobes of men?” Again, Abaddon is a synonym for Hades.

Psalms 88 — we have a prayer for deliverance from the sin unto death. Verse 10, “Will you perform wonders for the dead? will departed spirits rise and praise you? Will your grace be declared in the grave? Will your faithfulness be known in destruction [Abaddon, here a synonym for Hades and it means place of destruction]?” Hence, Abaddon means place of destruction and is a synonym for Hades. But Abaddon is also the name of a demon prince, the commanding general of the first demon assault army, which is at the present time incarcerated in that section of Hades known as the abyss and will remain there ready to attack, but not able to attack, until released by Satan himself in the last half of the Tribulation.

When Jesus Christ was on earth He cast out demons and He sent them to the abyss, according to Luke 8:31. In Proverbs 27:19,20 we see again Abaddon linked with Hades, “As in water face reflects face [like a mirror], so in the right lobe of man he reflects man,” you know what you are like by what you think, is what this proverb is saying, “Sheol and destruction [Abaddon] are never satisfied; nor are the eyes of man ever satisfied.”

From the name Abaddon, used for Hades, and the meaning of it in the Hebrew [place of destruction], comes the name, then, of this demon prince who commands this first demon army. His name means destruction. His name in the Greek also has a similar meaning, A)polluon, and it can be seen that it is very close to the Greek word for Apollo. Apollo, next to Zeus, was one of the top demons involved in the attack on the human race in Genesis chapter six, beni ha Elohim, which means sons of God, a technical word used only for angels. A)ppolluon is very close to that, it is taken from the verb a)pollumi which means to destroy. So his name in the Greek means destruction or, even a better translation, exterminator. In that case Apollyon, as we call it in the English, is simply a participle meaning the exterminator. In the Hebrew he is called destruction; in the Greek he is called the exterminator. Next to Satan he is the highest-ranking demon out of millions of demons who followed Satan in the prehistoric angelic conflict.

Translation of verse 11, “They have a king [commanding general] over them, the angel of the abyss; his name in the Hebrew is Abaddon [destruction], while his name in the Greek is called Apollyon [exterminator].”

Verse 12, we have the woe count. "One woe is past; and, behold, there come two woes more hereafter."

We start out with the ordinal mia, translated "one." The ordinal is also dealing with succession, "One woe [o)uaij]". With it we have the aorist active indicative of the verb a)perxomai which means "is past," "Behold, one woe is past," the attack of the first demon assault army, "behold two woes are still coming after these things." We have the present active indicative this time of e)rxomai, translated "are coming," and then, "after these things."

Principle

1. By way of anticipation there are two demon assault armies who are to attack at the end of the Tribulation; three altogether but three in this context.
2. The attack of the second demon army is synonymous with the sixth trumpet judgment, the second woe. The attack of the third demon assault army is the third woe, the seventh trumpet.
3. While the first demon assault army under the command of Abaddon is limited in its target function to torture, the second demon assault army group under the command of four demon generals, verse 15, is a killer army.
4. The third woe, which is the seventh trumpet judgment, is mentioned first in Revelation 11:15 but the actual attack does not occur until 12:17.
5. The third demon assault army is led by Satan himself. It is the elite guard army and the target is all the Jews of the world.
6. The bivouac of each demon army is also noted. For example, the first demon assault army is bivouacked in the abyss and are not allowed on planet earth yet. The second demon assault army is under the Euphrates river and the third is located in the second heaven and will be forced out of heaven by an army of elect angels under the command of Michael.
7. Satan's attack does not terminate with these woes or demon army offensives. This is merely the account of demon army attacks.
8. Next, Satan uses people to attack Tribulational believers, like the two great dictators of Revelation chapter thirteen, but the Lord counterattacks in Revelation chapter fourteen.
9. Then comes the judgment of the seven plagues or the seven drinking goblets of chapters fifteen and sixteen.

10. After this comes Satan's final attack against the human race, the attack from ecumenical religion, chapters seventeen and eighteen. Then comes the second advent of Christ in chapter nineteen.

There is a parenthesis in Revelation 10:1 through 11:14. Then there is the third woe from 11:15 through 12:17. This is followed by the great attack of Satan from the two great dictators of chapter thirteen. The Lord's counterattack is in chapter 14 followed by the drinking goblet judgements in chapters 15 and 16. Satan's trump card, his final great attack, is the attack of ecumenical religion in chapters 17 and 18. Then comes the second advent in chapter 19. Therefore the Satanic attacks upon mankind during the Tribulation are varied: three demon assault armies, two human dictators. But our Lord counter attacks by the resuscitated Moses and Elijah in chapter 11:1-14, plus the intensification of evangelism in chapter 14, plus the judgements of chapters 15 and 16. But the greatest of all of Satan's attacks does not come from direct demon assault, it comes from demon inspired religion, chapters 17 and 18.

Principle

1. The real problem with the first two woes of this chapter is the fact that Satan uses his demon assault armies to destroy his own servants in the human race, believers and unbelievers living in the cosmic system.
2. While it does not make sense to us and appears incompatible with the genius of Satan a study of the cosmic system helps us to understand the principle involved.
3. Here is the first principle involved, one that applies to you and to me right now: arrogance has no loyalty to arrogance. Believers and unbelievers in the cosmic system are arrogant. Satan, the inventor of the cosmic system, is arrogant. Therefore, sooner or later, arrogant people having no capacity for love and no integrity seek to destroy those in their periphery.
4. Loyalty demands integrity and arrogance is devoid of integrity.
5. Those who live and reside in the cosmic system either lose in the first place, or they do not possess in the second place, integrity. Hence, the arrogance of the cosmic system cancels integrity, honour, virtue, capacity for love, capacity for friendship, capacity to command.
6. In the first two woes Satan launches two hard-core demon assault armies against his own servants. Once Satan is confined to this earth and no longer has access to heaven and the presence of God, which he has at the present time, he demonstrates with all of his genius and great ability the principle of no capacity to command, no capacity to rule, no executive ability. He is going to leave his kingdom, the earth, in shambles before Christ returns.

7. The first demon assault army is commanded by Abaddon, the second is commanded by four angels. In the third woe Satan leads his own imperial guard, the third demon assault army, his last reserve. It will be against Jews, and many of those Jews are his own servants.

Principle

1. Even though unbelievers and believers alike may serve Satan well through residence and function in the cosmic system, when Satan no longer has any use for them they will not only be discarded, they will be destroyed.

2. Human beings who live in the cosmic system use exactly the same pattern. Those living in the cosmic system, believer or unbeliever who have positions of authority and possess at the same time arrogance, means lack of virtue, lack of honour, lack of capacity for love or loyalty, and it also means ruthlessness. Therefore, such leadership lacks sensitivity, a sense of responsibility for those under their command or supervision or responsibility.

3. Lacking integrity and virtue they possess neither loyalty nor gratitude, and under pressure they either ignore or fail to appreciate loyal service from their subordinates.

4. Many Christians have been utterly shocked by executives, senior officers, supervisors, whose promotion and success resulted from their own hard work and faithful service, are discarded.

5. Yet, when they were no longer useful or a source of some petty pressure or appeared to jeopardise their own exalted position, then they turned on faithful subordinates and persecuted them out of the organisation.

6. This happens in business, professional organisations, political organisations, social, religious and cultural organisations, wherever any arrogant leadership exists.

7. Arrogant leadership knows no loyalty to faithful subordinates, has little appreciation for past service. Consequently, service to Satan in the cosmic system is not protection from Satan's pettiness and vindictiveness, as illustrated at the end of the Tribulation by the violent assault of these demon armies.

The second woe is synonymous with the sixth trumpet. It is the invasion from under the Euphrates river, Revelation 9:13-21. We are now going to meet the second demon assault army group. It is not an army but an army group.

Translation of verse 13: "Then the sixth angel [a pur sui vant messenger from the angelic college of heralds] sounded his trumpet, and I heard one voice from the horns of the golden altar which is before God."

The golden altar is analogous to the golden altar of incense which was in the tabernacle and the temple, and it represents the imprecatory prayers of the Tribulational saints which we studied in chapter 6:9-12. It reminds us one again that all trumpet judgements are administered in answer to the imprecatory prayers of Tribulational believers. This explains the dilemma of how Satan's demon assault armies attack, torture and destroy Satan's human servants who have been carrying out his will faithfully in the cosmic system during the Tribulation. These servants, of course, are both believer and unbeliever. The four horns of the golden altar reminds us that all answers to prayer, including imprecatory prayers, are related to the sacrifice of our Lord Jesus Christ on the cross. No animal sacrifice is ever tied to the golden altar, only to the brass altar. But each one of those horns is there to demonstrate the fact that all prayer is answered because Christ went to the cross and took our place. We have entered into a relationship with God through faith in Christ which gives us the privilege and the opportunity of answered prayer. So no animal sacrifices are going to be tied down there. The point is that the Lamb of God has already gone to the cross and that is the basis for answered prayer in the Church Age as well as in the Tribulation.

"and I heard one voice," this is the voice of the pur sui vant officer of Revelation 8:3. He has cherub rank in the college of heralds. He answers from the four horns of the golden altar which is before God. The one voice, then, belongs to cherub-ranked angel who commands the trumpeters. The trumpeters are pur sui vant messengers but the one who commands them is a pur sui vant officer. Note that the divine administration follows the chain of command. It goes from God to the flying eagle, he herald of Revelation 8:13, the fourth herald of 4:7 who is the seraph in the college of heralds, he is in charge of the three woes. From the herald the command is relayed to the altar and the officer who commands the pur sui vant messengers.

It is a reminder by way of application to us of a verse of scripture found in 1 Corinthians 14, "Let all things be done decently and in order." Administratively there is no excuse for being sloppy in the administering of spiritual affairs of the local church and everything related to it. God uses good administration and He follows a chain of command in the administration of these judgements.

Verse 14, the order to release the commanders of the second demon assault army group. The recipient of the order is the pur sui vant messenger. He is the lowest rank in the college of heralds. The present active participle is the basis for communicating the order, and legw is the participle form, "And he gave the order," rather than "And he said." The descriptive present tense indicates what is now going on at that moment. The active voice: the pur sui vant officer commanding the seven pur sui vant messengers who have the seven trumpets produces the action. Ordinarily legw means to say, to speak, to communicate, but in this context it connotes giving an order. The circumstantial participle is translated like a finite verb with the conjunction "and." "And he gave the order to the sixth angel who had the trumpet."

We have the aorist active imperative of the verb luw which means release. It is the command to release demon princes, a command which has been restrained up until now and will be until the middle of the Tribulation. The command is restrained because the only demons who are allowed to operate on planet earth at the present time are disembodied spirits who cannot do violence to the human race. Physical violence directly will not occur until the end of the Tribulation. This command is a mandate to do violence, starting with the four demon generals, each of whom commands a great demon assault army, "Release the four angels." The ingressive aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb at its beginning. Once you release them they will know what to do. They will attack the human race. The active voice: the pur sui vant messenger in charge of the administration of the sixth trumpet judgment produces the action. This is the imperative mood of command. With it we have an articular present passive participle from the verb dew which means to bind, to put in prison, to incarcerate, to imprison. It is translated "who have been incarcerated." These demon armies all have bodies, they have weapons systems, they have armour, they have uniforms and patches; they have a full military organisation. They are not permitted on planet earth at this time. The definite article in the participle is used for a relative pronoun whose antecedent is the four demon general officers who command each one a demon army in the army group. The perfect tense is intensive for a completed action of incarceration with emphasis on the existing state intensified. They are held back, there is no way they can counter the power of God. Their prison is locked and there is no way they can come out until God permits it. These four demon generals have been in prison for a very long time, during the entire course of human history. Obviously, they were imprisoned for something which happened in the prehistoric angelic conflict before man was created. The passive voice: the four demon general officers receive the action of the verb in prehistoric angelic conflict. The incarceration of these high-ranking demons is not without precedent since Satan himself will serve a prison sentence of a thousand years between the second advent of Christ and the Gog and Magog revolution. This is a complementary participle, it completes the idea of action expressed in the main verb.

With this we have a prepositional phrase, e)pi plus a number of words. With e)pi we have the accusative case which emphasises position. Here we have e)pi plus the definite article de, and then we have potamoj, the word for river. The entire phrase says "at the great river Euphrates."

So the entire translation would be: "And he [the pur sui vant officer of cherub rank] gave the order to the sixth angel [the pur sui vant messenger in the angelic college of heralds] who had the sixth trumpet, Release the four angels [the demon army commanders] who have been incarcerated at the great Euphrates river."

The Euphrates river is 1700 miles long. In the ancient world it was the boundary between the land of Israel, which is given in the Palestinian covenant, and Gentile nations. The boundary was stated in Genesis 15:18 and Joshua 1:4. It is also the boundary between the Roman empire and the Parthian or Persian empire at the time of writing the book of Revelation. The preposition e)pi does not infer where along the river they were incarcerated or whether it is along the entire 1700 miles of the river below the surface. In keeping with the context of Hades below the surface of the earth it is assumed that their prison is underneath the Euphrates and the 1700 miles of river would also be long enough to provide a barracks for 200-million demons. These are demons with bodies. In essence, the 1700-mile length of the Euphrates is a landmark for many things, including the barracks where this army group is presently stationed. Note that the first order from the pur sui vant officer of cherub rank to the pur sui vant messenger holding the sixth trumpet is to release the general officers. It is not to release the army, they will do that. So fierce was this army group that it was imprisoned in a separate place from the demons who are in Tartarus. This is a very hard-core search and destroy army group. The river Euphrates is one of the four rivers which flowed from the garden of Eden, hence a river of great significance.

Verse 15, the time and the objective of the second demon assault army. We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai which we translate “then,” “then the four angels [the demon army commanders] were released,” the aorist passive indicative of that same verb luo. The culminative aorist tense views the release of the four demon generals in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the formation of the second demon assault army group. The passive voice: the four demon generals receive the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the formation of the second demon assault army group and the release of the four demon generals is the planning stage of their campaign. Their objective is stated at the end of the verse. They are released first in order that they might put into operation their plan and issue the necessary orders for the assault on that part of the human race which at that time will live in the cosmic system. There will only be one exception: certain demon-possessed unbelievers will be exempted from their attack. The reason is because they are going to make the final attack in the Tribulation against God’s plan. That final attack will be religion.

Next we have D-day, the time of the attack. This is a relative clause to be inserted after the subject, the four angels. The relative clause is formed from the articular present passive participle of the verb etoimazw which means to prepare, “and the four angels who have been prepared.” They have kept in a state of readiness, they have a plan which can go into operation immediately. The definite article is used for a relative pronoun whose antecedent is the four demon generals. The perfect tense is the intensive perfect indicating a past completed action with a state of readiness or red alert intensified. The passive voice: the demon generals receive the action of the verb for they have been prepared by God in the prehistoric angelic conflict for the hour of their attack. The participle is complimentary, it completes the action expressed in the main verb.

Notice the prepositional phrase, e)ij plus the accusative of o(ra for a specific time, right down to the second, “for this hour,” the hour of the attack. This hour is permitted by God and it falls on exactly the right day, month and year. Hence we have the ascensive use of kai and we translate it “even the day.”

So we have so far: “Then the four angels [the demon generals] who had been kept in a state of readiness for this hour, and day, and month, and year, were released.”

That brings us to the end of the verse where we have a purpose clause, the purpose of the attack, i(na plus the subjunctive mood, “in order that.” Then the present active subjunctive of the verb apokteinw which means to kill, "in order that they might kill." The futuristic present tense denotes an event which has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain that in thought it may be contemplated as already occurring. The active voice: the second demon assault army produces the action of the verb under the command of these four demon generals. The subjunctive mood is used to form the purpose clause with i(na). The potential subjunctive also implies a future reference qualified by the element of contingency. Contingency is confined to a year, a month, a day, and hour in the Tribulation when the attack is launched. The subjunctive means we are in the Church Age, it cannot happen now. We in the Church Age will never face a demon in a body. It is sometime after the middle of the Tribulation at a specific time that God permits this to occur and it is all related, of course, to imprecatory prayers, the nature of the Tribulation, the entire situation. A point to remember is that nothing can happen in history apart from divine consent; nothing can happen to you apart from divine consent. The bad things that generally happen to you have nothing to do, however, with divine consent, they have to do with your own volition. We make our own misery by the use of our own volition in the cosmic system and under the principle of demon influence.

"that they might kill a third of mankind." Those killed by these four demon armies in one army group are only those who reside in the cosmic system, believers and unbelievers. There is one exception as far as God is concerned: believers who are positive toward doctrine have the wall of fire and they are protected. The one exception in the demon attack plan as far as Satan is concerned is the demon-possessed persons mentioned in the last two verses of this chapter.

Corrected translation: "Then the four angels [demon generals] who had been kept in a state of readiness for this hour, and day, and month, and year, were released in order that they might kill one third of mankind."

Principle

1. While demons in past human history have attacked the human race the only visible attack occurred in the antediluvian civilisation. It was a genetic attack; it was a demon invasion through sex.
2. There is in the future the direct assault on the human race by demon armies with bodies. They will be visible. They will not be operational until after the middle of the Tribulation, after Satan is cast out of heaven.
3. Once Satan is confined to the earth and no longer has access to heaven he has no need for the majority of those human servants who serve him in the cosmic system, believers and unbelievers. Therefore Satan uses this second assault army group to destroy his own human servants.

It should be pointed out that when it says that they are going to kill one third of mankind, that is the one third in existence in the last half of the Tribulation. We have already studied the fourth horseman of the apocalypse called death, and we have seen that he is going to wipe out one quarter of the population in the first half of the Tribulation. The population in the second half of the Tribulation, is what is left after one quarter of the world's population is wiped out in the first half of the Tribulation.

4. Certain demon-possessed unbelievers will survive this attack but they do not change their attitude toward demon possession. They had a warning in the first demon assault army. For five months torture gives everyone a chance to make the right decision. We have already seen how that under that torture they could break out and get away from that five months of demon torture. This is grace before judgment, God's grace opportunity. But no one makes a decision, in fact they go the opposite way with their decision.

This brings us to a point: Once you get away from doctrine, once you become involved in the cosmic system, once you are tainted with that arrogance brush, you are incapable of making good decisions. The decisions we make can destroy us so quickly and we do it ourselves to ourselves. Bad decisions build scar tissue on the soul and when you get so much scar tissue on the soul you lose the motivation, the desire, to reverse the course. Too many negative decisions made from your own free will cannot be reversed even in the face of awful judgment.

One of the great principles of military warfare is the ability to move troops by different routes to a designated spot and concentrate them so that when they make the attack in the tactical situation on the battlefield they have the most troops present. This is a very old principle and one that has determined success and failure in many campaigns of history. Concentration of troops becomes a very important principle in modern warfare and with the use of armoured forces concentration is even more of an issue. The speed with which modern armies move makes that possible. This is exactly the problem that Satan faces today in the angelic conflict; his forces are scattered. They are scattered in heaven because Satan still has access to heaven; they are scattered throughout planet earth and called demons; they are also bivouacked in the heart of the earth in Hades, under the Euphrates and other places that we have noted in this book of Revelation. So today the full fury of demonic attack is not apparent to us. Nevertheless by demon possession and demon influence we certainly, even in this 20th century, have seen a great deal of tragedy in many many difficulties. The last half of the Tribulation is a time of great concentration of demon armies and with that concentration comes the greatest of all demon attacks.

Verse 16 — we have the nominative singular subject of a)riqmoj, "number." With this we have a sequential and intensive conjunction kai, translated "in fact," "In fact the number." Then to show that we are talking about the army group rather than one army we have the possessive genitive plural from strateuma, which means "army." The corrected translation would read: "In fact the number of the armies of cavalry." The word for cavalry is a genitive of description from i(ppikoj, and it means cavalry because at the time in which the Bible was written that was the mobile force in armies. Today it would be comparable to our armoured forces. Be we will stay with the translation “cavalry,” remembering that this means mobility, firepower and shock, and would be comparable to armoured forces today.

“In fact the number of the armies of cavalry is,” and then literally from the Greek it says, “twenty thousand times ten thousand.” That is 200,000,000 and is the way we will translate it, “two hundred million.” Then he adds the aorist active indicative from the verb a)kouw. This is a constative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the apostle John produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the fact that while he could not see 200,000,000 at one time, he could hear them and he was so instructed as to their number, “I heard their number.” The apostle John could not and did not count them, the number was furnished for him. Because of the verbal plenary inspiration of the scripture the number is accurate. The size of the army group is fantastic. Four demon generals imply four demon armies in the army group. If the armies are divided equally among the four demon generals that means that each one had 50,000,000 demons assigned to him. These are shock troops, not invisible demons such as we have in the world today which are disembodied spirits and invisible. These are very visible and they possess bodies.

Verse 17, the description of the second demon assault army group is given. The book of Revelation is literal, not spiritual. The only time that you can take anything from a spiritual standpoint is when analogies are set up. The word often for setting up analogies is the Greek word o(j, translated “like” or “similar to.” Therefore the analogy helps with the interpretation. But apart from analogies everything is literal. This is a literal army group of 200,000,000. “Greater is He that is in you that he that is in the word” is always a source of encouragement to us when we are studying these things.

We begin by noting, then, the connective use of the conjunction kai plus the adverb o(utoj, and kai plus o(utoj means “like this,” “and so.” “And so” means, “Look, you are now going to have some analogies.” You can’t take the analogy literally, it means something; it stands for something. “And so I saw in the vision the horses and their riders.” In other words, from the previous verse he didn’t see all of the 200,000,000 but he saw enough of them pass in review and he knows exactly what they are like. This is a literal army, an army that will attack in the future.

He does spend a good deal of time on the breastplates, “each having,” present active participle of e)vw, indicating the fact that one is issued to each; “breastplates,” the accusative plural direct object from the noun qorac. This is the old word for breastplate and it is used even in medicine today. With this we have the accusative plural adjective purinoj, which actually means “red,” it is the colour of fire. Also another word is brought in, u(akinqoj. This reference to the flower “hyacinth” originated from the blood of Hyacinthus a young Spartan who was accidentally killed by Apollo. The blood which flowed to the ground and stained the herbage was converted into the flower of that name. So it comes to mean “blue.” Apollo is not a god but a demon, so there is a demon connotation in hyacinth, but here it is only the colour that is important. The colour of the breastplate is red, blue, and then the next word is the accusative plural qeiwdhj which means sulphurous, but here it refers to the colour of yellow.

It is fascinating that we have three colours on the breastplate. Instead of having a military patch as did the first demon army, this demon army group has three colours on their breastplates. In the time in which the Bible was written that meant a distinguishing insignia for a military organisation. The three colours on the breastplates of the second demon assault army group is significant to us, it means combat arms. Certainly that is the connotation here. Undoubtedly these colours go far beyond any relationship with modern combat arms, except that the fact remain the same: this is the killing army group and combat arms is extremely important in it. This is an army strictly of combat arms and the three colours of the breastplate indicates simply the distinctive insignia of this army group. Furthermore they combine in their attack features of combat arms. We will see four weapons systems used by this great army group.

We begin now with the heads of the horses, “like the heads of lions.” It is the comparative particle which tells us that this is not a literal lion’s head on a horse. W(j simply indicates an analogy, and the analogy is to the fact that a lion has tremendous teeth. But that isn’t even important, it is the jaw muscle that is important. The lion has a phenomenal jaw muscle. This is a comparative connotation and it has the idea of power. The whole point is that the lion’s head is always in front of the lion, and when he attacks he never backs into his victims! When that is understood it is understood that this is an assault group that attacks straight ahead with great success, with great power, and with great shock. You have mobility, power and shock altogether.

Next, from this, we have also the present middle indicative of the verb e)kporeuomai, the word that means to go out, to issue. It would be used of firing a weapons system and whatever comes out of the weapons system, whatever hits. The pictorial present tense presents to the mind a picture of the emission from the mouths of the horses as a process of occurrence in attack. The middle voice views the subject as participating in the outcome or the action of the verb. The active voice would emphasise the action; the middle voice emphasises the subject or the agent producing the action. In other words, the middle voice in the Greek relates the action more intimately to the subject. This is an indirect middle in which emphasis is placed on the agent as producing the action and therefore great emphasis on the attack of this demon assault army group. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality.

Three things are emitted from the mouth of the horses whose heads are like lions. The first is called pur, “fire.” The second one is called kapnoj, “smoke.” The third is qeion, “sulphur.” So fire, smoke and sulphur are emitted from their mouths.

Corrected translation: “And so I saw in the vision the horses and their [demon] riders, each having breastplates the colour of fire, hyacinth [blue], and sulphur [yellow]: and the heads of the horses resembled the heads of lions; and fire plus smoke and sulphur came out of their mouths.”

It is tempting to relate sulphur to gun powder, hence, weaponry designed to kill. The fire is quite obvious. In modern warfare it would be comparable to flame-throwers, napalm. The smoke certainly connotes chemical warfare. These are killing agents because they are called plagues in the next verse, the word plhgh means a killer. The tendency in modern warfare is toward armoured forces and mechanised infantry. By way of anticipation, the demon assault army group takes no prisoners. The casualty list in the next verse is one third of the world's population in the last half of the Tribulation. The casualty list includes only those members of the human race who are living in the cosmic system.

Verse 18, we have the weaponry of the second demon assault army. This is found on both verses 18 and 19. The human casualties are mentioned in the first part of verse eighteen. Notice we have the words "fire" and "smoke," and then the word "brimstone" is used in the King James version. The word "brimstone" is the Greek word for sulphur.

The human casualties are called tritoj, which means a third, one third of the human race in the last half of the Tribulation. And it is called the human race, the descriptive genitive of the noun a)nqrwpoj which means mankind. It is the generic word for mankind. They "were killed," the aorist passive indicative of the verb a)pokteinw. It is an interesting principle because most people today don't go out and kill someone when they cannot get their own way. Under the laws of divine establishment life is sacred and life must continue until the Lord takes people out through physical death. The sacredness of human life and property and the sacredness of your privacy are the very foundation stones for the function of human volition in the angelic conflict. You will note that it is Satan who does not regard the laws of divine establishment and this demon assault army group will simply and completely ignore those principles. This demon army has one objective and that is to kill everyone and everything which is a target in the cosmic system. A)pokteinw in the aorist tense is a constative aorist which contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. Hence, this was the total casualty list from this one army only. The passive voice: one third of the human race in the cosmic system receives the action of the verb, killed by the attack of the second demon assault army group. The declarative indicative represents the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality, future reality at the end of the Tribulation. Again, this killing of one third of the population of the world is not to be confused with the fourth horseman of the apocalypse. He functioned in the first half of the Tribulation; this army functions in the last half. This attack is strictly from the second demon assault army group and the casualties result from the weaponry which they use. There are no prisoners on the casualty list because the dead are already prisoners or the servants of Satan through their residence and function in the cosmic system. All casualties are killed in action.

Protected from this demon army group are those believers who are positive toward Bible doctrine and who have gained spiritual maturity through maximum doctrine resident in the soul. They are protected by the wall of fire, that same wall of fire which protects us when we live in the divine dynasphere. But these believers and unbelievers living in the cosmic system are victims, they are already the prisoners of Satan. Satan kills his prisoners. This is not, again, one third of people in the cosmic system who are slaughtered but one third of the population, indicating the tremendous number of people who are in the cosmic system.

Notice the final prepositional phrase in this part, a)po plus treij plus plhgh. This is correctly translated, "from these three plagues [or weapons systems]," a)po plus the ablative of means. Ordinarily the instrumental case in the Greek is used to express means, but when the means is accompanied by the impact of origin then the ablative is used. Then we have the three weapons systems mentioned again: fire, connoting flame throwers and napalm; smoke, connoting chemical warfare attacks; sulphur connoting the use of conventional weapons.

Verse 19, the fourth weapons system is given. The King James version translation is incorrect. The correct translation is: "For the power of the horses is in their mouths and their tails." The power of the horses 'is,' the present active indicative of e)imi, "keeps on being." These weapons systems remain constant. The present tense is a progressive present denoting action in a state of persistence, hence linear aktionsart. The active voice: this is the power or the authority to kill. The indicative is a declarative for a statement of fact. Altogether there are four weapons systems, three of which we have noted. Now "in their tails." You do not come up behind these "tanks," they are also operational in the rear.

So we have: "for their tails were like snakes, having heads." Notice the word "like." This is not a tail with a snake having heads. This language is all to convey information; "and with them they cause pain," the present active indicative of the verb a)dikew, which means to do harm but also to cause pain. The word for a snake's head here refers to a poisonous snake head. To be struck by a poisonous snake is a very painful thing and that is the idea in mind here. This is not a literal snake it is simply a weapons system.

In anticipation of the next verse there are some cases of demon possession, unbelievers who are protected from the attack of this army group. Hence, some cases of demon possession do provide immunity and the last two verse in this chapter will provide information on this principle. The reason why these are immune is because they will be involved in the greatest of all attacks. They will be involved in the last Satanic attack in history, human beings against human beings, the attack of religion. Satan's greatest power isn't even in demonology as such, it is in religion; religion is the devil's ace trump.

We now begin to note the results of the attacks from the demon assault armies: the arrogance of the cosmic survivors. The survivors of this attack, as far as the cosmic system is concerned, are certain demon-possessed people. These people have been reserved for a special operation just before the second advent. That operation has to do with religion; it is still Satan's greatest attack, greater than demon activity, greater than anything else, it is the attack of man on man.

In verse 20 we have the nominative plural definite article, followed by the aorist passive indicative. The definite article is simply used as the relative pronoun, o(i. With this we have the aorist passive indicative of a)pokeinw which means to kill. It is translated, "And the rest of mankind who were not killed." The culminative aorist tense views the attack of the second demon army group in its entirety. That means all of the four weapons systems we have noted, all of the various concepts with regard to that attack. But it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. Certain demon-possessed unbelievers were definitely not killed. The passive voice: the demon possessed survivors receive the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality. The reality is that Satan deliberately spares some of his own servants, certain ones who are demon-possessed and who are going to form a special human attack against man in the form of religion. This would imply, then, that residents under demon possession in the cosmic system will be the chief targets for this attack.

“And the rest of mankind [certain demon-possessed unbelievers living in the cosmic system] who were not killed in these plagues,” and again we have $\epsilon\eta\lambda\theta\iota\varsigma$ plus the instrumental of $\pi\lambda\eta\gamma\eta$, and it should be translated “by these plagues.”

Certain types of demon possession were made immune to the attack of the second demon assault army group, and this was by mandate from Satan. Certain types of demon possession were necessary for Satan’s human attack on the human race just before the second advent. While millions of believers and unbelievers under demon influence were slaughtered by the weapons systems of the second demon assault army group, there were those who were spared and these are hard-core demon-possessed people whose modus operandi includes idolatry, religion, the phallic cult. This is the reason why they were spared.

The attitude of the demon-possessed survivors is expressed in the negative conjunction $\kappa\alpha\iota$, translated “did not even.” With that we have the aorist active indicative of the verb $\mu\epsilon\tau\alpha\epsilon\theta\iota\varsigma$ which means a change of mind. The old English translates it “repent,” but it means a change of mind, change of thinking, a reversal of a decision. We will translate it: “also they did not change their minds.” The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The inconsistency of Satan and the power of God did not even phase these demon-possessed types, and having made hundreds of wrong decisions they now have locked-in negative volition, a locked-in negative attitude toward any divine appeal, either through grace and doctrine communicated to them or maximum divine discipline which is administered in their direction. This aorist tense gathers up the entire process by which these people became hard-core religionists. The active voice: certain demon-possessed unbelievers, very hard-core, produce the action of the verb. The declarative indicative mood represents the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality. Man can make so many bad decisions from a position of weakness, he can lose all concept of any personal sense of destiny, and having lost all of these things he finally makes decision after decision which produces scar tissue of the soul. The scar tissue of the soul becomes locked-in negative volition.

Then we have the preposition $\epsilon\kappa$ plus the ablative of $\epsilon\gamma\chi\epsilon\iota\varsigma$, “about the works of their hands” or “because of the works of their hands.”

“And the rest of mankind who were not killed by these plagues, they did not even change their minds about the works of their hands.”

The works of their hands is the manufacturing of idols and the modus operandi of the phallic cult which includes human sacrifice. Then we have a purpose clause indicating that idolatry is the worship of demons. And it is a negative purpose clause, it is introduced with the conjunction $\mu\eta$ plus the negative $\mu\eta$. And with it we have the future active indicative of the verb proskunew which means to worship, “so that they did not stop worshipping.” The word “stop” comes from the negative mh. The future tense is a progressive future, plus the negative mh, or better, the imperative future plus the negative mh which indicates that they did not stop what they had been doing. They had been making decisions from a position of weakness, they had lost all personal sense of destiny, and therefore they had this continued. The active voice is going to take some explaining. The active voice always means the subject produces the action of the verb.

1. Demon-possessed unbelievers of the Tribulation who survive the attack of the second demon assault army group produce the action of the verb by refusing to be delivered through faith in Christ. Any one of these people whom Satan had spared to be used at the end of the Tribulation could have changed his mind and believed in Christ. They are living in the cosmic system.

2. Bona fide exorcism does not exist, except in the case of our Lord’s ministry during His first advent, and that was because demon-possessed people used their volition to come to our Lord Jesus Christ or He spotted in the temple their volition. He didn’t cast out all the demons, only where there was positive volition, a desire for the solution. He gave the disciples and several of the apostles the power to exorcise demons. The true gift of exorcism does not exist today.

3. There is no exorcism apart from positive volition on the part of the one who is demon-possessed. Today, in all cases, where the demon-possessed person loses the demons it is through making one decision, the decision to believe in Jesus Christ. That decision removes the demon from that person and never again can that person be demon-possessed, that person’s body is now the temple of the Holy Spirit. Exorcism is not necessary, only the decision to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.

4. From their own free will the demon-possessed came to Jesus Christ and recognised His power to deliver them, as illustrated by Mark 1:24, 34; 5:7.

5. When it says that Jesus cast out demons with a word, as it does in Matthew 8:16, it was a word of His authority not some ritualistic incantation or magical formula.

6. The Pharisees implied that Jesus cast out demons through the power of Beelzebub the prince of demons, the one in command of all demon undercover operations — Matthew 12:24.

7. This was the popular theory, that the way to cast out demons was to have some magical formula or ritualistic incantation by which one entered into an alliance with Beelzebub.

8. But Jesus corrected this myth by pointing out that demons were evil, and control over demons cannot come by compromising with evil but by opposing evil by the power of God. The power of God for deliverance from demons is twofold in this dispensation of the completed canon of scripture, the Church Age: to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, for the unbeliever; when out of fellowship, to rebound. Any prolonged stay inside the cosmic system will inevitably produce demon influence among believers.

9. Our Lord did not even cast out demons through His own divine power but inside the prototype divine dynasphere He used the power of God the Holy Spirit at gate one. This is taught in Matthew 12:28, "But if I cast out demons by the Spirit of God [and I do, 1st class condition] then the kingdom of God has come to you." He therefore made it clear He did not even use His own divine power to cast out demons, a power He could have used. But the fact that He did this in His humanity in the filling of the Spirit, inside the prototype divine dynasphere, was the great issue.

10. Jewish exorcists alleged to cast out demons through spells and incantations. However, exorcism does not occur except in two cases in any time of recent history, and that is the ministry of our Lord and the apostles in opposition to evil. Exorcism does occur in the evil function of operation mole in which Beelzebub withdraws demons to establish the credentials of false prophets, Satanic evangelists, and even Satanic pastors.

A second principle: "they did not stop worshipping"

1. Our Lord Jesus Christ and the apostles had the power to cast out demons, but only if the subject was positive. No one has ever been able to cast out demons where the subject was negative.

2. Today deliverance from demon possession or demon influence can only occur where the subject of his own free will departs from the cosmic system.

3. For the believer to depart from the cosmic system he must make the positive decision to rebound. Such rebound is the believer's repentance.

4. For the unbeliever to depart from the cosmic system he must make the positive decision to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, receiving Him as his personal saviour.

5. The only hope for Tribulational persons in the cosmic system is the same positive volition. The unbeliever can be delivered by trusting in Christ. The subject of our two verses is the unbeliever. These are unbelievers who did not repent (receive Christ as their saviour).

Finally, we have the declarative indicative mood for the reality of demon possession — possessed unbelievers involved in a religious activity called idolatry, involved by their own positive volition toward these things and toward the cosmic system. This is the declarative indicative for the reality that unbelievers have developed so much scar tissue of the soul that they have locked-in negative volition.

Next we have the accusative plural direct object from the noun daimonion, one of several Greek words for demons. It refers to fallen angels and that is why it is transliterated "demons". It also refers to divinities or gods, like the gods of Mount Olympus, the gods of the Canaanites, which were always demons. The other Greek noun which is very similar is daimwn. Both daimonion and daimwn were Greek words used to denote the gods of polytheistic idolatrous worship. Disembodied demons were called in Classical Greek "shades." They were the ones who had gone to Hades or the underworld. While daimon covers all categories of demons the word we have in this passage is daimonion, it refers to a category or specific group within the field of demons. Daimwn can refer to either disembodied spirits which are invisible or visible demons such as the ones in Genesis chapter six, beni ha Elohim, translated "sons of God," but that is not a good translation, it should be translated "the sons of the gods." The sons of the gods are a technical group of people, the descendants of the Titans of which there are thirteen.

Here we have the word daimonion which only refers to a specific category, and with the genetic use of the definite article, ta, it refers to invisible demons, disembodied spirits of fallen angels which seek to invade the body of idolaters. Idolatry is giving positive volition to demon possession. The demons worshipped by idolaters are, again, a certain category of disembodied spirits. They once had bodies in antediluvian times, now they are disembodied spirits. So they did not stop worshipping the demons; and then a connective kai, and then the accusative plural direct object from the eidwlon, translated "idols."

So far we have: "And the rest of mankind who were not killed by these plagues, they did not even change their minds about the works of their hands [the manufacture of idols, the modus operandi of the phallic cult, the function of human sacrifice], so that they did not stop worshipping demons, and the idols of gold, and of silver, and of bronze, and of stone, and of wood: idols which are not able to see, or hear, or walk."

While these idols cannot see, hear, or walk they are the place for establishing demon possession. The worship of an idol of the positive volition for demon possession. Demons cluster around idols and invade the bodies of the worshippers in idolatry. Idolatry, therefore, means demonism. In fact, idolatry for the unbeliever is the quickest road to demon possession.

Leviticus 17:7 — "And they shall no longer offer their sacrifices to the goat demon [or saters] to whom the prostitute themselves [the function of the phallic cult]; Deuteronomy 32:16,17, "They angered him with their detestable idols. They sacrificed to demons who are not God; to gods [demons] they have not known, gods who recently appeared"; Psalm 106:34-39, "They did not destroy the peoples [during the invasion of Canaan] as the Lord had commanded them: but they mingled with the nations, they adopted their customs. They worshipped their idols which became a snare to them. They sacrificed their sons and daughters to demons, they spilled innocent blood, the blood of their sons and their daughters, whom they sacrificed to the idols of Canaan: and the land was polluted with their blood [human sacrifice, one of the great characteristics of demon possession]. They defiled themselves by what they did, by their deeds they played the whore."

Idolatry is a basic contact with demons for idolatry gives human volition an opportunity to allow demons to order the bodies of the ones involved, that is, if they are unbelievers. Of course, this is all that demons can do today. The demons once invaded to bodies of women sexually. That was the genetic attack of the antediluvian civilisation. Now they invade bodies as disembodied spirits, and this is in many ways a greater attack outside of the concept of the true humanity of Christ. Demonism is always related to idols and to false doctrine — 1 Corinthians 10:14-21; 1 Timothy 4:1,2. Doctrines of demons are all found in the gates of cosmic two.

Volition, then, is still the issue in the angelic conflict. When human volition makes bad decisions resulting in demon influence or demon possession in the cosmic system only that same human volition can make the decision to get out of the cosmic system, which means deliverance from demon influence or demon possession.

The subject we are studying is a very technical one: the demon attacks upon the human race during the last half of the Tribulation. In each case of demon attack in human history God has provided a grace protection, He has provided whatever is necessary to avoid these things. No demon attack of any kind ever occurs apart from human consent. The key in getting involved is volition; the key in deliverance is volition.

“And the rest of mankind [certain demon-possessed unbelievers in idolatry/religion] who were not killed by these weapons systems did not even change their minds about the works of their hands [the manufacture of idols, the modus operandi of the phallic cult, great emphasis on the human sacrifices], so that they did not stop worshipping demons.”

We have spent time with the future active indicative of the verb proskunew, which means to worship. With the negative mh it means that they did not stop worshipping. This is an imperative future plus the negative, indicating that they did not stop what they were doing even though they had had every opportunity to stop. All they had to do to be delivered from their demon possession and their demon problems was simply to believe in Christ. One decision, but they wouldn't change their minds.

Paul laid it on the line when he said in 1 Corinthians 10:14, “Therefore, my beloved, flee from idolatry.” Why? “I speak to wise men; judge for yourselves what I say. The cup of blessing which we bless [the cup of the communion table], is this not the fellowship with God from the blood of Christ? [Of course it is] The bread which we break, is it not the fellowship from the source of the body of Christ? [Absolutely, yes] Because there is one loaf, we who are many are one body for we all share that one loaf. Look at client nation Israel: are not they who eat the sacrifices sharers of the altar? [Yes, they are] Therefore, what am I saying to you? that which is sacrificed to idols, is anything? [No] Is the idol anything? [No] But the sacrifices which pagans offer, they sacrifice to demons, and not to God: therefore I do not want you to become a sharer with demons. [That would be a believer under demon influence] You cannot drink the cup of the Lord [in the divine dynasphere], and the cup of demons [in the cosmic system]: you cannot partake of the table of the Lord, and the table of demons.” So believers have a choice. Either live in the divine dynasphere, and therefore the Eucharist will be meaningful, or live in the cosmic system and have communion with Satan himself.

Demon influence is related to false doctrine: 1 Timothy 4:1-2, "God the Holy Spirit explicitly communicates that in latter periods of time [between the first and second advents of Christ] some believers will [become apostate] revolt against doctrine, paying attention [concentrating on] to deceitful spirits, and the doctrines of demons; by means of hypocrisy from the source of human liars."

Human volition is the issue in the angelic conflict. When human volition makes bad decisions resulting in demon influence or demon possession in the cosmic system only that same human volition can make decisions to get out of the cosmic system, which means deliverance from demon influence or demon possession. There are, again, no bona fide exorcists today. Only God has the power to cast out demons; only Satan has the power to withdraw demons. Even our Lord during the first advent did not cast out demons in the power of His deity, but He did through the power of the Spirit inside the prototype divine dynasphere. Alleged exorcists appear to have occasional success because Beelzebub withdraws the demon to give credibility to one of Satan's servants. Every demon-possessed person who came to Christ had positive volition and the Lord cast out the demon, but there were literally thousands and hundreds of thousands of people living on the earth during our Lord's ministry and the demons were not cast out; only those who came with positive volition.

Verse 21, the last verse in our passage begins with the connective conjunction kai, translated "furthermore." Then comes the aorist active indicative of the verb metanoew plus the negative o)u, "Furthermore, they did not change their minds." The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. Over the entire period of the attacks by the two demon assault armies, a period of two woes or the fifth and sixth trumpets, they did not make one positive decision to break out of the cosmic system, they wallowed in the phallic cult. The active voice: cosmic residents of the Tribulation produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for statement of future historical trend. They did not change their minds. Then the preposition e)k plus the ablative, which usually means from, or out from, or away from. Here it means "about." With this we have the ablative or genitive of reference from fonoj which refers to human sacrifice, it means murders. They did not change their minds about their murders. This would be both human sacrifice and homicide since criminal activity is always related to religion as well as well as acts of fanatical violence.

Demon influence and demon possession is the cause of all violence in the human race. You have to be in the cosmic system to get violence. This concept includes the function of the old sin nature as the source of temptation, but the old sin nature cannot do anything reprehensible apart from human volition and human consent. Human volition is the source of all sin; the old sin nature is only the source of temptation. Once the decision is made to sin the person enters the cosmic system. He enters cosmic one through gate one. The believer living in the cosmic system is under demon influence. Every act of demon influence or demon possession involves the consent or volition of the individual involved. Both murder and human sacrifice occur in the phallic cult, both now and in the Tribulation.

Then the passage goes on to say, “nor about their sorceries.” This is occult activity, black magic, witchcraft, necromancy, all related to the drug addiction. The Greek word here is farmakeia. Many people get into demon possession as unbelievers or demon influence as believers through using their volition toward something where they make a decision from a position of weakness which eventually gets them into demon possession. One such decision, and the most common outside of idolatry and the phallic cult, is drug addiction. Drug addiction is related to demonism in every possible way. Next, “nor about their fornication,” the operation of the phallic cult, “nor about their thefts,” a demon-inspired criminality, a reference to stealing as a part of demonism. In other words, crime motivated by either demon possession or demon influence. Theft is an attack on the sacredness of property as the principle of freedom in resolving the angelic conflict, therefore related to demonism. Murder is an attack upon the sacredness of life as a principle of resolving the angelic conflict. Idolatry is antiestablishment, anti-gospel, anti-doctrinal, and therefore is often the key for many forms of demon worship.

Corrected translation of verse 21: “Furthermore, they did not change their minds about their murders [human sacrifice and homicide], nor about their sorceries [the occult activities], nor about their fornication [phallic cult], nor about their thefts [demon-inspired criminality].”

The Tribulation, then, illustrates man’s negative volition under demonism plus the extreme pressure of divine judgment. It started with demonism, it ends up with divine judgment, but neither pressure causes any change of attitude. The Millennium illustrates man’s negative volition under perfect environment and the blessing of prosperity from God. So we have a contrast. Man doesn’t change his mind under demon pressure; man doesn’t change his mind when God adds judgment to that demon pressure. In the Millennium man’s negative volition is related to perfect environment and the blessings and prosperity that come from God.

One decision to believe in Christ would deliver any of the unbelievers involved in verses 20 and 21, for these are unbelievers involved here. This is definitely demon possession. They are being reserved for the great attack of religion which comes just a few days before the second advent. But we have 2 Corinthians 4:3,4 to explain why they refuse, “And even if our gospel is veiled [obscure], it is veiled to those who are perishing [unbelievers in the cosmic system]: in whose case the god of this world [Satan] has blinded the minds of the unbelievers, that they might not see the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God.”

One decision of Tribulational believers to rebound would deliver them from Satan’s cosmic system, as illustrated by Ephesians 6:10-17, “Finally [in the future], my brethren, keep on becoming strong in the Lord, even by means of the rule of his endowed power [the divine dynasphere]. Put on the full armour from God, that you may be able to hold your ground against the tactics of the devil [the cosmic system]. Because our combat [spiritual warfare] is not against blood and flesh [human beings], but against rulers [like Abaddon, Beelzebub, the demon generals], against authorities [demon commissioned officers], against world rulers of this darkness [evangelists for the cosmic system], against spirit forces of evil in the heavenlies. Therefore put on the whole armour from God in order that you may be able to resist in the evil day [the attack of Satan or demon influence in the cosmic system], even after we have done everything to stand [residence and function in the divine dynasphere]. Therefore stand fast, after you have buckled on your combat gear around your waist by means of doctrine [the function of gate four, divine dynasphere], also having put on the breastplate of righteousness [motivational and functional virtue]; also having put on combat boots, put them on your feet by means of the alertness of the gospel of peace [the doctrine of reconciliation]; in addition to all this, take up the shield of faith [the function of the faith-rest drill] with which you will be able to extinguish all the flaming missiles from the evil one. Also take the helmet of salvation [reference to the divine dynasphere which was initially received at the moment of salvation], and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God [the perception of Bible doctrine].”

We have studied the doctrine of worship and we have noted several things. The principle that should be emphasised is the fact that you cannot give to God in worship what you do not possess. For example, we cannot give glory to God in worship because we do not possess glory. And even after the judgment seat of Christ when we have a resurrection body only those who are rewarded will have glory to give. There is a category of worship in which today we can function. We can give to God, as we noted before, timh, which means honour; but it has three meanings actually. First of all it means respect, then it means reverence, and then it means honour. From that one word we have the threefold connotation.

This we can give in worship. We can respect our Lord Jesus Christ through understanding His thinking, another way of saying perception of Bible doctrine, and apart from positive volition toward Bible doctrine inside the divine dynasphere it would be impossible to respect our Lord. So respect is the system of worship for those who are new believers, or believers who have been saved for a long time but still babies. Secondly, it means reverence, and the concept of personal love of Christ through worship begins with respect [love of God in gate 5] and continues into reverence which is occupation with the person of Christ. The respect is the worship of the immature believer who is positive; reverence is the worship of the mature believer living in the divine dynasphere. Both worship and reverence are possible for believers in time. If you have respect you can give it in worship; if you have reverence for God you can give reverence in worship. But the highest category is honour. To honour God in worship requires virtue and integrity manufactured inside the divine dynasphere through the daily perception of Bible doctrine. Only honourable believers can give honour to the Lord in worship. You cannot give in worship what you do not possess.

There is also another category, the giving of thanks. Thanksgiving is the most basic form of priestly worship on the part of the royal family. The capacity for this worship is gratitude which comes from perception of doctrine. Gratitude comes from capacity, capacity for life, capacity for love, capacity for happiness, capacity for thanksgiving. All of it, of course, means perception of doctrine.

The believer in the cosmic system has no capacity for gratitude and therefore he cannot fulfil this worship. You cannot give to God what you do not have. If you do not have gratitude and appreciation for logistical grace you cannot give thanksgiving in worship. The arrogant believer does not appreciate what God has done for him and is doing for him through logistical grace, he has no appreciation for the integrity of God and therefore he cannot give in worship what he does not have — thanksgiving. This, of course, has application in many fields — you cannot give love to God in worship unless you love God, and this comes from doctrine; you have to have humility to submit to divine authority delegated through Bible doctrine to even begin to worship. Genuine humility is not only the basis for true worship of the Lord but capacity for life, love and happiness and blessing. Of course, this means function inside the divine dynasphere.

The believer can give certain things to God. He has a right lobe and through the ministry of God the Holy Spirit he can concentrate. If he has any ability to think he has the ability to concentrate, and therefore can give concentration to the Word of God, and this is the expression of your worship. But if he is stupid and has no brains and can't concentrate, he can't worship. The most basic form of concentration is perception of Bible doctrine. If the believer has time he can give time in worship. You cannot give to the Lord in worship what you do not have.

Now, the principle applies to false worship as well.

Principle

1. Under the principle of true worship you can only give to God what you actually possess; you cannot give to God what you do not possess.
2. Certain angels, like the 24 elders, possess glory. They gave glory to God in worship.
3. Certain positive and mature believers give honour to the Lord because they possess honour; they give integrity to the Lord because they possess integrity, i.e. in worship; they give reverence and respect to the Lord because they possess reverence and personal respect; they give personal love for the Lord to the Lord because through perception of doctrine they have personal love for the Lord.
4. Under the principle of true worship you cannot give what you do not possess.
5. Under the principle of true worship when you give what you have in worship you still have the Source.
6. Personal love for God expresses itself in giving time, energy, honour, concentration on doctrine, money, whatever it is.

7. Religion has a system of false worship. Religion demands that you give what you do not have. In the function of some religions, like idolatry, you give to demons what you do not possess — human sacrifice, the operation which violates the sacredness of human life; you give to demons someone else's virtue in the fornication of the phallic cult, a violation of both privacy and human virtue. Demon religionism takes someone else's money, which violates the sacredness of human property and gives it to the religion. Hence, false worship demands that you give to demons what you do not have.

These two verses are very significant because we have just concluded in our study of the two great demon attacks on the human race at the end of the Tribulation. They are without precedent because they involve demons in bodies physically doing violence to members of the human race. The members of the human race who are the target of these demon attacks are those who are the servants of Satan in the cosmic system: demon-possessed unbelievers, and believers and unbelievers under demon influence, in the cosmic system.

Therefore, since this is without precedent it brings into focus the subject of the demon attacks on the human race since the beginning of history. There are five major demon attacks throughout all of history: the genetic attack of the antediluvian civilisation, Genesis 6:1-13; the attack of demon possession which the attack on the post-diluvian world; the attack of demon influence; the physical attack of the demon armies at the end of the Tribulation; the Gog and Magog revolution at the end of the Millennium, Revelation 20:7-10.

The antediluvian civilisation began with the creation of man and terminated with the flood. The flood destroyed the entire population of the earth except for eight believers, Noah plus his family. Each civilisation begins with believers only and terminates with great divine judgements and self-induced human judgements, all of which are the result of the failure of that civilisation. Each civilisation has its own climate on planet earth, it has its own environment, and has characteristics of creatures involved within the species only. Man has a different life-span in each one of these civilisation. The earth rotated on its axis as it does now but from a different degree and angle, almost straight up instead of tilted. Each species of animal life have differences but there are no transmutations of species, i.e.. a horse may vary in each civilisation but a horse is still a horse.

We have three civilisations in which demon activity is different. The first is the antediluvian civilisation. Antediluvian is simply a technical term for before the flood. This is the period of human history in which demons are involved in a genetic and sexual invasion, and is recorded in Genesis 6:1-13; Jude 6; 2 Peter 2:4,5; 1 Peter 3:18-22. We call this a genetic attack upon the human race because it was Satan's greatest effort to destroy the human race for mankind and, therefore, to win the angelic conflict. The major thrust of the attack was to destroy true humanity on the earth. The post-diluvian civilisation begins at the termination of the flood with Noah and his family. It concludes at the second advent of Christ. In the post-diluvian civilisation there are three demon attacks: the attack of demon possession, the demon invasion of the human body of the unbeliever; the attack of demon influence which applies to believer and unbeliever in the cosmic system; the physical attacks by demon armies in the Tribulation on believers and unbelievers living in the cosmic system.

Whenever a person is demon-possessed there are various battalions of demons. There are demons that produce illness, that produce violence, once they possess the body of an unbeliever. There are three reasons why anyone is ill. One of them is physiological, the second is psychosomatic, and the third is demon possession. When a person is demon-possessed and has demon-induced illness along comes this faker, this liar, Satan's very own man, believer or unbeliever, who tries to exorcise demons. When this happens, often, since this is Satan's man, Satan tries to give credibility to this knuckle head who is being used by him. So Beelzebub gives a command to the demons: "Get out." And they go out, and there is instant miraculous healing, the source has been removed. This person then gets the credit. So his false doctrine, his lies, his imbecility, his stupidity is quickly in the Satanic camp and he is being used of Satan. Satan has given him credibility. This explain so-called divine healers.

There is one battalion of demons called e)ggostramuqoj, and they take control of the vocal cords and they speak in tongues. Of course, all tongues is either demon possession or demon influence. No one has legitimately spoken in tongues since 70 AD when Jerusalem finally fell. All of this is a part of the demon attack upon believers today. Any born-again believer involved in the tongues movement is under demon influence; any unbeliever is under demon-possession. And there is no such thing as a divine healer, no one has that power but God Himself and He has not delegated it since the completion of the canon of scripture.

Then in the Millennial civilisation, which begins at the second advent, at the end of 1000 years of perfect environment on the earth under our Lord's rule, Satan will be released from prison and this attack will be studied as the God revolution in Revelation chapter 20.

It should also be noted, by way of introduction to our subject, that the antediluvian attack and the Tribulational attacks involve visible demons. Demon activity today includes demon possession, demon influence, but the demons are invisible to the human eye, they cannot be picked up by the process of empiricism due to the fact that they are disembodied spirits. All demon activity today is related to involvement in the cosmic system, it will not exist in the Millennial civilisation until the thousand years of perfect environment are completed. There is also a subject called ethnic demonology which is related to the polytheism of the Greeks and later the Romans who copied from the Greeks; the demonology of the Germanic Indo-European group, as well as the ethnic demonology of the Phoenician Canaanitish mythology. All of this includes human sacrifice, the function of the phallic cult, the modus operandi of idolatry, great violence, great criminal organisations.

Demons, then, appear to fall into two categories: visible demons possessing bodies of some sort; invisible demons or disembodied spirits which are the only category permitted to operate on planet earth today. There will be no visible demons on the earth until the middle and end of the Tribulation. When demons invade the body of an unbeliever today they produce great violence. In fact, all violence in history is directly related to demonism — either demon influence or demon possession.

There are two factors that Satan understood, even as Moses understood it. First of all there must be from Adam plus Eve a line that would go all of the way to Christ, and that line must be true humanity. When Satan saw this in the antediluvian civilisation he made his first great assault on the human race. He made a genetic attack.

Under the doctrine of the hypostatic union, which is the doctrine of the uniqueness of Christ, Jesus Christ in His incarnation, from the moment of His virgin birth and on forever in His person, has two natures: divine and human. They are inseparably united, there is no mixture or loss of separate identity, there is no transfer of properties or attributes. The union of eternal God with true humanity is personal and eternal. In other words, Jesus Christ is true humanity and undiminished deity in one person forever. Jesus Christ is the God-Man, different from God in that He is mankind; different from mankind in that he is God. Jesus Christ is unique in the universe. As God He is infinitely superior to man and angels; as humanity He is now superior to all angels — the subject of Hebrews chapters one and two. The pre-incarnate person of Christ is eternal God, coequal with the Father and the Spirit. The post-incarnate person of Christ includes His undiminished deity combined with His true humanity in one person forever. But in the combination of His deity and humanity there is no transfer of attributes from one to the other. Through the virgin birth Jesus Christ was born without a sin nature, without the imputation of Adam's sin, and in His humanity, therefore, He was born as Adam was created: trichotomous. We are born with a body and a soul and only acquire a spirit through regeneration.

In John chapter one verses 1-3 we have that wonderful statement about the hypostatic union: E) n a) rxh h) n o(logoj has to do with the deity of Christ: "In a beginning which was not a beginning [eternity past] there always existed the word [o(logoj]". Jesus Christ always existed, there never was a time when He didn't exist, that is John 1:1. "In the beginning" [which was not a beginning]," e) n a) rxh. There is no definite article there in the Greek, the absence of the definite article emphasises the importance of the noun. It is a way of referring to eternity. There never was a time when Jesus Christ did not exist as eternal God.

But in John 1:14 that same Word became flesh, "And the Word became flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory [His glory inside the prototype divine dynasphere], as the uniquely-born one from the Father, full of grace and doctrine." Our Lord, by the time He was twelve had advanced to maturity.

Romans 1:3-5, "Concerning his Son, who was born the seed of David according to the flesh," and the very fact that the seed of David is found in Romans 1:3 means that Satan's great genetic attack on the human race did not succeed, "who has been demonstrated the Son of God by means of power [the power of the divine dynasphere] according to the Holy Spirit because of the resurrection from the dead. Jesus Christ our Lord through whom we have received grace and apostleship, and from whom is Christ according to the flesh who is over all God, blessed forever."

1 Timothy 3:16, “For consent of all great is the mystery of doctrine [with reference to our Lord Jesus Christ]: the unique one [Christ as eternal God] became visible by means of the flesh [His humanity]. This same one was vindicated by means of the Holy Spirit [prototype divine dynasphere], He was observed by angels, He was proclaimed among the nations, He became the object of faith in the world, He was taken up into His place of glory.”

Many passages tell us about the hypostatic union. He never made an issue out of the fact that He was equal with the Father and the Spirit. In other words, true humility inside the prototype divine dynasphere. Only arrogance makes an issue out of such things. Only arrogance makes an issue out of one’s race, only arrogance makes an issue out of one’s background or standing as being superior to someone else — or inferior.

The necessity for all of this becomes apparent: Jesus Christ had to be true humanity. He had to be true humanity to be our saviour. As God he could have nothing to do with sin, it was His humanity that bore our sins in His own body on the tree. He is also said to be the mediator between God and man. In order to be a mediator it means that you must be equal with both parties in the mediation. God is party of the first part; humanity is party of the second part. Jesus Christ is the only mediator because He is God, therefore equal with God; He is true humanity, and superior humanity, therefore equal with humanity. He therefore becomes the mediator. There is one mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus.

Then, of course, Jesus Christ cannot be a priest unless He is true humanity, for a priest by definition is a man who represents man to God. The universal priesthood belongs to the royal family of God, but we have to have a high priest and for Jesus Christ to be our high priest He had to be true humanity Hebrews chapters seven and ten.

Jesus Christ had to be a King, and He had to be true humanity in order to be a King, 2 Samuel 7:8-16; Psalm 89:20-37, the promise of our Lord Jesus Christ to Israel that David would have a son who would reign forever. This is why in Romans 1 He is called the seed of David, for Jesus Christ is directly descended from David and Bathsheba.

Therefore it was the objective of Satan to make it impossible for Jesus Christ to come in the flesh, to make the incarnation and hypostatic union an absolute impossibility. And Satan came up with a plan. The only way to do it was to intermarry human beings with angelic creatures, for in the antediluvian civilisation all demons had bodies. All demons had reproductive organs and therefore if there could be an intermarriage between angelic and human races it would destroy true humanity and frustrate the cross.

via Genesis 6:1-4

We have completed the study of the ninth chapter of the book of Revelation. We have seen in this chapter two unprecedented attacks in all of human history. Demons today fall into two categories: those who have bodies and those who are disembodied spirits. The attacks that we have studied are from demons who have bodies. Today demons with bodies do not operate on this earth. They are either under the earth in barracks or they are in the second heaven. In the future, as we have noted, there will be an attack from demons with bodies. The target is only the believer and unbeliever inside the cosmic system.

We have noted that there are five great demon attacks on the human race. First of all there is the genetic attack in the antediluvian civilisation, an attack by demons with bodies. The second attack is demon possession, the third is demon influence which belongs to believer and unbeliever who live in the cosmic system.

In the field of arrogance in the cosmic system there is the arrogance of achievement. Achievement belongs to God; happiness belongs to the believer. When the believer makes the decision to live in the cosmic system he becomes preoccupied with success, he is bitten by that bug called inordinate ambition and inordinate competition. Instead of being occupied with Christ he is more concerned about the opinions of his contemporaries. Arrogance motivates him to strive for success, to outdo his contemporaries, and hence all decisions are made from a position of weakness. The idea of a day-by-day happiness based on the faithfulness of God, the provision of logistical grace, is exchanged for decisions to compromise in order to get ahead. His arrogant desire for success destroys his true scale of values, obliterates his sense of destiny from perception of doctrine and, as a matter of fact, his perception of doctrine evaporates. The retention area of the perception of doctrine is gone. The arrogant desire to achieve and attain greater success than his contemporaries takes him down the bumpy road to fame and great unhappiness. Doctrine is neglected, virtue is ignored, ambition is in the saddle and driven by arrogance. Yet, through the function of humility inside the divine dynasphere and doing one's job as unto the Lord the believer not only possesses great happiness on a basis of the perception of doctrine, he has great happiness on a daily basis and leaves achievement in the hands of the Lord. Achievement often comes his way under the principle that God has promoted him. As a matter of fact, if God doesn't promote you, you are not promoted.

The fourth attack is the physical attack in the middle and end of the Tribulation, the physical attack of demon armies. There will be in Revelation chapter twelve, verses seven through seventeen, the story of the third attack, the third demon assault army led personally by Satan.

Satan's greatest attack in all of history was against our Lord Jesus Christ — against His incarnation, His true humanity. This antediluvian attack and the Tribulational attacks involve demons who are visible, who have bodies.

We begin in Genesis chapter six with the genetic attack in the antediluvian civilisation. The object of this demon attack was to frustrate the incarnation of our Lord Jesus Christ, to prevent His true humanity from coming to the earth in hypostatic union and to hinder His going to the cross to become our saviour. Satan tried many times to destroy the line of Christ and therefore the true humanity of Christ. In addition to the attack we note here that he made many attacks of a different nature on people after the flood. The great dividing line is the flood which divides the antediluvian civilisation from the post-diluvian civilisation. The genetic attack occurred in the antediluvian civilisation, it was an attack made by demons with bodies. The many attacks after the flood were made by demons who are disembodied spirits, so the attacks therefore are different in nature.

We note the passage in Genesis 6:1-3. "Now it came to pass, when mankind had begun to become numerous on the surface of planet earth, that daughters were born to them," it was the ladies again who attracted Satan in a great thrust against the incarnation.

Verse 2 — "Now the sons of God." This particular translation is challenged for several reasons. Notice the word in the Hebrew: beni ha Elohim — "beni ha" means "sons of the"; Elohim is generally used for God when more than one person of the Trinity is involved, but it can also be used for the polytheistic expression of many gods, false gods. That is the way we will translate Elohim here. The "im" is plural in the Hebrew. It should be translated "the sons of the gods." This is a very unique expression which is only found in this passage and in three verses in Job [1:6; 2:1; 38:7], and once in Daniel 3:25. In all of these passages it only refers to angels, it does not refer to human beings. The Son of God refers to our Lord in hypostatic union; children of God, or "you become the sons of God by faith in Christ Jesus" in Galatians 3, refers to believers. But this is a Hebrew word and it only occurs a few times and always it refers to angels.

Who are the sons of the gods? The answer is demons, demons which would include the Titans of mythology plus the progeny of the Titans.

Genesis 3:15, "I will put hostility [the hostility of the angelic conflict] between you [Adam or Satan] and the woman [the woman is the true humanity and the source of Christ], between your seed [Satan and his demons] and her seed [Christ in hypostatic union]; He will crush your head [the defeat of Satan at the second advent], and you [Satan] shall crush His heel [the bearing of our sins at the cross]."

The sons of the gods are the sons of the Titans and, as such, they are a special core of demons that have the ability to reproduce.

Now in Genesis 6:2, "the sons of the gods [demons with bodies] saw the daughters of mankind, that they were beautiful; so they took to themselves women whomever they selected."

Verse 3, "Then Jehovah said, 'My spirit [referring to God the Holy Spirit in the function of common grace, revealing the gospel to the unbeliever] will not contend with man forever in his going astray [his fornication with the demons]; he is flesh [true humanity], therefore his days will be one hundred and twenty years.'" From the time this was said there would be 120 years to the flood and the destruction of the human race. By that time the human race was half human and half angelic and called the super race. They would all be destroyed and then again we would start with a new civilisation, Noah and his family. From Noah and his family all of us are descended today. So the time would come when the Lord would shut down the human race and destroy the opportunity for the exercise of volition.

Verse 4, The corrupted humanity is described in verse 4 by one Hebrew word, ha [definite article] Nephilim. Nephilim means the fallen ones literally, hence it is a reference to fallen angels, the demons involved in the genetic attack on the human race. They are easy to describe since we have so much tradition from mythology. Mythology is not false information; mythology is merely the traditions on which ethnic organisations are developed. "Fallen ones" is a perfect description for all demons; they fell with Satan, they made their choice. Hence, they were not disembodied spirits like demons today.

"The Nephilim [fallen angels, demons] were on the earth in those days [in the antediluvian civilisation], therefore also afterward, when the sons of the gods went in [had sex, the demonic sexual invasion of the human race] with the daughters of men [females of the human race], and had children by them [sons were born to them, literally]. These [children] were heroes who from ancient history were famous men."

If corrupted humanity had reached the entire human race there would be no cross because there would be no Christ in the flesh. Without Christ coming in the flesh there is no way that salvation can exist. He bore our sins in His own body on the tree, and this is the reason for the attack of Satan.

That brings us now to verse five which says: "Then the Lord observed that the evil of mankind was great on the earth, and every motive of the thoughts of his right lobe was only evil all the time." As a result of demons operating on the earth in bodies, as a result of the genetic invasion, as a result of the destruction of true humanity, except in one family, the civilisation was brought to an end, only one family was preserved. From Noah came our Lord Jesus Christ through his son, Shem. From Shem came the entire line of Christ and, therefore, our Christmas and everything related to it.

Genesis 6:5-13. We are dealing with the development of a very technical concept: demon attacks on the human race. We are in the process of studying the genetic attack of the antediluvian civilisation.

By way of definition, we should be very careful about this in view of what we are studying at the present time:

"A Fable," according to Dr Charles Mills Galey, formerly the Professor of English at the university of California, "is a story, like the Fox and the Grapes, in which the characters and the plot neither pretend reality nor demand credence. They are fabrications used as a vehicle of a moral or a didactic instruction. Myths, on the other hand, are stories of anonymous origin of some ethnic events prevalent among primitive peoples, and by them accepted as truth. They usually give the origin of some ethnic group, like the Romans or the Greeks or the Norse or the Germanic peoples. They concern supernatural beings and events, or natural beings and events being influenced by supernatural agencies.”

We have seen in Genesis 6:2 that the translation “sons of God” is incorrect. It should be “sons of the gods.” In the Hebrew it is beni ha Elohim, and beni refers not to any human being. In fact there isn’t a passage in the Word of God where it does. This is a Hebrew word, it is a technical word, and this refers to the sons and the grandsons of the Titans and those that preceded their sons. This has to do with demonology and it has to do with the Greek explanation of demonology. The Titans here are the gods and these are the sons and the grandsons of the Titans which is the basis for all English and western European culture. It is all based on the story of the Titans and the children of the Titans, the gods of Mount Olympus. This is all the basis for explaining many of the things of the ancient world. In fact, it is the human extra-biblical explanation for Genesis chapter six.

Verse 5, human sacrifice was one of the things that resulted from this demon invasion. Human sacrifice and the function of the phallic cult produced international degeneration. One other factor must be added to it because this one factor is the basis for a great deal of demon influence and demon possession — drug addiction. The genetic destruction of true humanity was highly contagious and was spreading throughout the entire world. The half-angelic, half-human creatures possessed super intellect, super strength, so that violence and arrogance were unrestrained — high IQs in strong bodies. The story of the gods of Mount Olympus or the gods of the Canaanites and Phoenicians are filled with every category of evil and this is only a small picture of what is meant by this verse. Not only was true humanity jeopardised by this demon invasion but the saturation of evil on the earth was self-destructive to the human race. Both evil and genetics were destroying the very purpose for which God created the human race.

Verse 7, “Then the Lord decreed, ‘I will blot out mankind whom I have created from the face of the land [the surface of the earth], from man to animals, to reptiles, to birds of the sky; for I have changed my mind that I have made them.’”

Verse 8, “But Noah acquired grace in the eyes of the Lord,” which means that Noah was born again and Noah was still true humanity.

Verse 9, “Noah was a justified man,” a believer and had received the imputation of divine righteousness. The next phrase is very important as far as our salvation is concerned. Christ had to come as true humanity into the world: “[Noah was] uncontaminated in his genealogy.” From Adam to Noah, through Seth, there was a line of true humanity uncontaminated by the genetic attack of demons. Furthermore, “Noah walked with God,” a positive believer advancing to maturity through perception of doctrine as it was given to him in those days. The importance of the perpetuation of the line of true humanity in the post-diluvian civilisation is something we have noted.

Verse 10, “Noah sired three sons: Shem, Ham, and Japheth.”

Verse 11, "Now the earth was corrupt in the sight of God [the effect of the demon genetic attack], furthermore the earth was saturated with violence."

Matthew 24:37-41 gives us a story of the same thing. The same antediluvian civilisation and what happened when this infiltration occurred, but it gives it from a slightly different standpoint, the standpoint of culture.

Verse 37, "For the coming of the Son of Man [the second advent of Christ] will be like the days of Noah." The genetic attack in the time of Noah is compared to the violent assaults of the three demon armies at the end of the Tribulation.

Verse 38, "For in those days which were before the flood they were eating and drinking," normal functions. The next phrase says, "they were marrying and giving in marriage." There is nothing wrong with getting married but here that isn't the point. The demons were marrying and being given in marriage to the women of the human race, "until the day that Noah entered the ark." This passage can only be understood in the light of Genesis chapter six. It is the social life with the demons that is involved at this point. It was the social life of the demons which had to be cut off by the universal flood which destroyed the entire population of the world, minus eight believers.

Verse 39, "And they did not understand until the flood came and took them all away," they didn't understand the jeopardy in which the human race was involved, "and so shall it be in the coming of the Son of Man." It will be exactly the same way at the end of the Tribulation, as we have noted from Revelation chapter nine. It will be noted that there was no effective client nation to God in the time of Noah, therefore the absence of the laws of divine establishment meant unrestrained demon activity. The social life with demons inevitably led to sexual life. It is always and interesting thing that except in the case of criminality, all fornication, all sex of any kind, always begins on a social basis. The social basis is the concept of human consent. In the days of Noah there was no client nation to restrain demon activity.

Verse 40, "Two men shall be in the field [before the second advent]; one shall be taken, one shall be left." The one who is taken is the unbeliever destroyed by the baptism of fire at the second advent.

Verse 41, "Two women shall be grinding at the mill; one shall be taken, one shall be left." This is the antithesis of the Rapture. The people who stay on the earth go into the Millennium; the people who are taken off are judged in exactly the same way as the super race of Nephilim were judged at the time of the flood.

Genesis 6:12, "Consequently God looked at the earth, and behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted their way on the earth." This is the effectiveness of the genetic attack by demons on the antediluvian civilisation. True humanity was almost extinct. If true humanity had been totally destroyed then Satan would have won the angelic conflict, there would have been no salvation; Jesus Christ would have not gone to the cross and been judged for the sins of the world, there would have been no way that He could come into the world as true humanity. The line of Christ must be true humanity all the way back to Adam. Hence, the necessity of destroying the hybrid race, the half-human, half-angelic creatures.

Verse 13, "Then God said to Noah, 'The end of all flesh has come before me [meaning: I'm thinking about destroying the whole human race]; for the earth has become saturated with violence because of their presence [because of the demon sexual infiltration and evil function of their progeny]; and behold, I am about to destroy them [corrupt humanity] with planet earth.'" Corrupted humanity from fallen angels were to be removed from planet earth: the corrupted humanity to torments in Hades waiting for the great white throne judgment; the demon Nephilim were to be incarcerated in Tartarus.

In 2 Peter 2:4 we have a reference to this judgment of the demons, the fallen angels involved in the infiltration, the genetic attack on the human race: "For if God did not spare the angels [demons called sons of the gods] when they sinned, but incarcerated them in pits of darkness, and delivered them to be constantly guarded for future judgment." This is just a brief explanation but used as an analogy, which means that in explanation of Genesis chapter six there is no question about the fact that the angels made the infiltration. Jude 6 is another passage making a brief reference to Genesis chapter six: "And the angels [demons] who had not kept their status quo, but abandoned their proper residence [angels socialising with angels], he has guarded them in eternal chains under thick darkness for the judgment of the great day."

By way of summary of this genetic attack, the demons involved in that attack are now imprisoned in Tartarus of Hades until the judgment of fallen angels at the end of the Millennium. The corrupted part of the human race was destroyed by the flood [those who were alive]. They are in torments of Hades waiting for their trial and the judgment of the great white throne. The demons who at present function on planet earth under Satan's command have no bodies. No demons are permitted to function on planet earth with bodies any longer. The genetic attack is over, there is no way that a demon as a disembodied spirit can have sex with anyone of the human race or can physically attack anyone in the human race. He has to possess another member of the human race or he has to influence another member of the human race to do that. Demons who at present, then, function on planet earth under Satan's command are disembodied spirits, which means their sexual capabilities, their ability for violence, has been taken from them. Furthermore, they are now invisible to mankind. Disembodied demons seek to invade the soul of mankind through demon influence and the body of mankind through demon possession. Present day invasions of demons do not include either sex with the human race or any personal attacks of violence. Hence never again, until the end of the Tribulation, will the human race be genetically attacked or physically attacked by demons with bodies. All demon sex must be accomplished either through demon possession [the phallic cult] or demon influence where a believer or unbeliever is involved in this religious activity of Satanism and they use the body of someone else. Demons no longer and never again will have sexual contact with the human race. Demons will, at the end of the Tribulation, attack the human race with physical violence. However, demons do get into the sexual act by de on-possessing the body of an unbeliever involved in the phallic cult. When they do, the result is fornication, which looks quite normal compared to the acts of bestiality, homosexuality, pederasty, and other things that are involved. The genetic attack on the human race has been defeated and will never again be repeated. This means, of course, the inevitable and eternal victory of our Lord Jesus Christ in coming through the virgin pregnancy and birth, and then the fact that he went to the cross.

The inevitable victory of the cross is described very briefly in 1 Peter 2:24, "Christ bore our sins in his own body on the tree." When our Lord Jesus Christ died physically on the cross His spirit went into the presence of the Father; His body went into the tomb; His soul went to Hades [Paradise]; but while He was there He went down from Paradise, through torments to Tartarus to tell the fallen angels that they had not succeeded in the genetic attack, 1 Peter 3:18-22. The humanity of Jesus Christ is now at the right hand of the Father. The content of His message to the fallen angels in Tartarus is found in Hebrews 2:9-16. The genetic attack did not succeed. It was the first and most dramatic and unusual attack ever made by fallen angels on the human race. As a result of it there were some changes in the rules for the post-diluvian civilisation. You can't see demons in the first place because those who operate on the earth are disembodied spirits. Nevertheless their attacks are much more insidious because they are invisible. Furthermore, no demon can attack a member of the human race as a disembodied spirit apart from human consent. You have something in your soul called volition; it is a fantastic power. You can say no to the cosmic system and that stops the whole thing.

We now move on to the second demon attack. The first attack was made by demons with bodies. There are two kinds of demons, those who still possess bodies and those who do not. We now consider the attack of demon possession. Demon possession is defined as the demon invasion of the body of an unbeliever. The believer cannot be demon-possessed, his body is the temple of the Holy Spirit. It is contrasted with demon influence which is demon invasion of the soul and the personality of those who are in the cosmic system. All demon activity, then, is related to man's free will, human consent. Most of that human consent comes from a position of weakness to enter the cosmic system. All demons are fallen angels under the command of Satan. All demons recognised our Lord's authority during the incarnation, and that takes us to Luke 4:32ff.

Verse 32, "And they were continually amazed at his teaching, for his doctrine carried authority." This is the people who listened to our Lord in and about the area of Palestine.

Verse 33, "And there was a person in the synagogue." The very fact that he was in the synagogue indicates that he had positive volition to be released from this terrible condition; "possessed by the spirit of an unclean demon [fallen angel], and he screamed out with a very loud voice."

Verse 34, and what came out of the vocal cords was either Ho or Ha. And what came next? "What do we have to do with you [a Greek idiom for, What do you want with us?], Jesus of Nazareth?" It is obvious that the demon-possessed man was not doing any talking. He is throwing up positive signals but his vocal cords were controlled by the demons. "Have you come to destroy us? [Not the man who is demon-possessed, but the demons]. In other words, they had a question: Is the first advent when the demons are going to be destroyed? Of course, the answer to that is no. "I know who you are [says one of the leaders who is possessing the body of this man], the Holy One of God!"

Verse 35, Our Lord doesn't do any explaining. He doesn't teach demons, He doesn't teach negative volition. These are locked-in negative volition types whose eternity has already begun. They had made their decisions in eternity past in the prehistoric angelic conflict. "And Jesus reprimanded him, saying, 'Be quiet and come out of him!' And when the demon had thrown him down in their presence [the demon left in a pout!], he came out without injuring him."

Verse 36, "And all the people were amazed, and began discussing the incident with each other, saying, 'What is this doctrine?' They heard the dialogue between demons and our Lord and they were trying to figure out what the doctrine was, 'For with authority and power he gives orders to demons [evil spirits], and they come out'."

Our question is: What is this doctrine? Demons are found in the Old Testament. There is a noun in the Hebrew "shed." In the plural shedim is used for demons, Deuteronomy 32:17; Psalm 106:37. There is another noun called sair, which means hairy, shaggy, rough, and is used for both a goat and for a certain category of demon called "sater," Leviticus 17:7. This particular category was definitely a category that had been disembodied. In the destruction of Babylon prophesied by Isaiah there is a desolation passage, Isaiah 13:21, "And Sater demons will frolic there." The same concept is found in Isaiah 34:14.

In the Greek we have four words. We have the word daimwn from which we get demon. it refers to a disembodied spirit almost always, as in Matthew 8:31; Mark 5:12; Luke 8:29; Revelation 16:14. There is also the word daimonion referring to a specific category of demons as opposed to all other demons and in the context always tells us what the category is. Then there is an adjective, daimoniwdhj, and that means demonic, as in James 3:15. Then there is a verb for being demonised, daimonizw, and it generally means to be demon-possessed but it can also be translated to "be tormented" by demons.

This is merely to establish the fact that we are dealing with a biblical subject. The distinction between demon possession and demon influence is very important. We note some of the means by which demon-possession is accomplished. How does an unbeliever get to have demons indwelling his body? Some of the demons carry disease, some of the demons control the vocal cords, they do weird things. Abnormal strength comes to the body with demons. How does this happen? First of all, anything that gets an unbeliever in the cosmic system, any decision that a person makes to get in the cosmic system. All sin puts the individual inside the cosmic system and therefore vulnerable to demon possession. Once in the cosmic system there are many approaches, like the Satan mass which is designed to use your volition to worship Satan in the same way that believers use their volition at the communion table to worship the Lord.

There is a Greek word, farmakeia, which means drug addiction. If a person of his own free will gets involved with drugs of any kind it is inevitable, if he is a believer, that he will come under demon influence; and if an unbeliever he will become demon possessed. If he is anti-authoritarian, antiestablishment, like the hippies of California, he may well become demon possessed and become involved in human sacrifice and live on drugs. Even men having long hair like women is a part of giving tacit consent to allow demons to have control or have possession of the faculties. Any dabbling in the occult, sensitivity to mediums, the function of necromancy, Isaiah 8:19, and the function of the phallic cult. There are certain total abandoned concepts of sex which eventually involve demon influence for believers and demon possession for unbelievers, Luke 8:2. The function of the phallic cult, the emotional revolt of the soul in which emotion blocks out thought and self-determination, and abandons itself to outside forces. For this reason sacrifices to demons were prohibited in Leviticus 17:17, "They shall no longer sacrifice their sacrifices to the goat demon with which they play the harlot [the function of the phallic cult]." Deuteronomy 32:17, "They sacrificed to demons, not to God; to those they have not known from doctrine, new things, demons who come lately, whom your ancestors did not know [or fear]." Psalm 96:5, "For all the gods of the people are idols [or demons]: but the Lord made the heavens."

Demon possession was the basis for capital punishment in Israel, Leviticus 20:27. "A man or a woman who is demon-possessed, a medium, a spiritist among them, emphatically they shall be put to death." This indicates the fact that once demon possession starts in a certain place it spreads through the numerous systems of either cosmic involvement, the Satan mass, the involvement with drugs, the phallic cult; any of these things will do it; "they will be stoned with stones: their guilt will be upon themselves." No one ever gets involved with demons apart from his own consent.

The firstborn judgment against Egypt at the time of Moses and the exodus included a judgment against demons, Exodus 12:12, "I will go through the land of Egypt in the night, and I will strike down all the firstborn of the land of Egypt, both man and beast; also against the demons of Egypt I will execute judgment: I am the Lord." Here is a fascinating thing. One of the things that was keeping Israel in slavery was demonism, and in all of the demonology involved in the slavery of the Jews these demons were to be judged.

It is fascinating to note that in Isaiah 19:3 that demons are powerless to change the course of history. We have noted in the past that certain human beings, like Adolf Hitler, were demon possessed, yet they could not change the course of history. "Then the demons of Egypt will become demoralised within them [i.e. indwelling the Egyptians]; and to the mediums and the spiritists [demon-possessed counsellors]." Even though they resorted to every form of demonism they simply could not stop the course of history or change it.

It is obvious then that demonism is one of the reasons that client nations are judged. Deuteronomy 18:9-12, "When you enter the land which the Lord your God has given you, you shall learn to avoid [not to imitate] the abominable practices [demonism] of the nations who were before you. There shall not be found among you anyone who makes his son or daughter pass through the fire [a demon sacrifice], nor anyone who uses divination [practised by demon-possessed persons], nor anyone who practices witchcraft, nor anyone who interprets omens, nor any sorcerer, nor anyone who casts a spell, nor a medium, nor a spiritist, nor anyone who calls up the dead [necromancy]. For whoever does these things is detestable to the Lord: furthermore because of these things the Lord your God will drive them out before you.”

The practice of necromancy was the basis for the judgment of Saul and his death. He died as a believer the sin unto death, 1 Chronicles 10:13,14. Saul rejected doctrine and that, of course, put him into the cosmic system; not under demon possession but under demon influence.

In the reign of King Manasseh evil is associated with demonism in 2 Kings 21:2-16. Demonism helped to bring about the fifth cycle of discipline in Isaiah 29:4. Satan and demons are often used by God in the administration of the sin unto death, as in 1 Corinthians 5:5; 1 Timothy 1:19,20. Satan is used as a warning for discipline in 1 Timothy 3:6,7, “Do not be an immature believer lest having received blind arrogance you might fall into condemnation of the devil. he must also be having an honourable reputation from those outside the local church in order that he might not fall into the disgrace [under the influence of evil] and the snare of the devil [the cosmic system where all demonism exists].”

Satan, as the ruler of all demons, has certain powers. he can blind people through religion. He can shorten life, according to Psalm 109:8. He can also remove people from authority under certain conditions, says Psalm 109:8. Verse 9 says he can kill; he can persecute children, verse 10; he can remove wealth, verse 11; he can turn everyone against you, verse 12; he can cut off posterity to the second generation, verse 13. These are all under certain conditions where cosmic involvement exists. Satan as a killer has the power of death, 1 John 3:8; Hebrews 2:14,15. Satan killed the children of Job, Job 1:12,18,19. He motivated Cain to murder Abel, John 8:44; 1 John 3:12. He is given opportunity to execute believers under the sin unto death principle, therefore. Satan produced illness in Job, according to Job 2:6-8. Satan used demons to produce disease in human beings as, for example, in Matthew 12:22; Luke 13:16; Acts 10:38. Certain types of diagnosed diseases are not physiologically induced, they are not even psychosomatic, they are simply cases of demon-induced illness, the dumbness in Mark 9:17 or Luke 11:14 was caused by demon possession, dumbness and deafness in Mark 9:25, dumbness and blindness in Matthew 12:22, epilepsy in Mark 1:26; 9:20; Luke 4:35. Satan is also the source of abnormal behaviour through demon possession: convulsions, Mark 1:26; abnormal violence, Matthew 8:28; abnormal strength, Mark 5:4; self-mutilation, Mark 5:5; foaming at the mouth, Mark 9:20; sometimes take off their clothes in a public place, Luke 8:27; they live among corpses, Mark 5:3; a certain type of grinding of the teeth, Mark 9:18; occasionally attempt suicide, Matthew 17:15.

1. Demon possession never occurs apart from some form of human consent.
2. Some form of decision made from a position of weakness [bad decision] which results from demon invasion of the human body of the unbeliever.

3. These decisions are related to cosmic involvement. First of all the decision to get into the cosmic system, then the decisions once made, you are in the cosmic system: decisions which relate to idolatry, certain categories of religious activity, dabbling in the occult, consulting mediums, the function of necromancy, drug addiction.
4. The phallic cult which uses both human sacrifice and idolatry and unrestrained sexual lust, as in Luke 8:2 where Mary Magdalene had been released from seven demons of this category.
5. Idolatry is a basic system for demon possession, Luke 17:7; Deuteronomy 32:17; Psalm 96:5 in the Hebrew; Psalm 106:37-39.
6. Passive submission to demons is accomplished through, therefore, drug addiction, idolatry, the function of the phallic cult, and the deliberate development of emotional revolt of the soul. Also, the Satanic mass and any prolonged involvement in the cosmic system.
7. Active submission to demon possession can be both violent and painful — Luke 13:11-16.

Because demon possession involves human sacrifice, which is murder, it was the basis for capital punishment under the laws of divine establishment, Leviticus 20:27. In control of the historical trends of history our Lord Jesus Christ often judges demon activity as we noted in Exodus 12:13 where He judged the demons of Egypt. Demons are powerless, therefore, to control history, Isaiah 19:9. Demon activity, both demon possession and demon influence, results in the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline. The great Canaanitish nation was destroyed because of demonism. Deuteronomy 18:9-12 tells us that story. Demons are often used by God for the administration of the sin unto death and, furthermore, demonisation of a nation results in the destruction of that nation, Isaiah chapter 47; Jeremiah 27:6-10.

Ministers who faithfully teach the Word of God are targets for demon influence, 1 Timothy 3:6,7, “the condemnation of the devil” is demon influence. Demon-possessed illness, of course, leads to an abnormal form of behaviour. All is related to the demon controlling the body. Satan uses certain demons to produce disease, Matthew 12:22; Luke 13:16; Acts 10:23. Certain types of diagnosed diseases are neither psychological nor psychosomatic.

Operation mole

Let's take the illustration of so-called divine healing, a miraculous case of healing. There was a gift of healing given to the apostles to establish the credibility. The gift of healing was a temporary spiritual gift. Once the apostles' authority was established it was removed immediately. it was not to alleviate suffering, it was to establish the credibility of the apostle. This spiritual gift has not been perpetuated into the post-canon Church Age; no one has the power or the gift of healing. There is a legitimate practice of medicine and that, of course, is not instant healing.

A pseudo gift has been devised under the sponsorship of one of the princes of demons, Beelzebub. The apostle Paul, for example, had the spiritual gift of healing to give credibility to his ministry. This was demonstrated in Acts 19:11,12, but once Paul was recognised as an apostle the gift was withdrawn so that Paul could not heal his closest friends, Epaphroditus in Philippians 2:27; Trophimus in 2 Timothy 4:20. All Paul could do was pray for them, he could not heal them. Occasionally God will perform a sovereign act of healing, but not generally.

Since certain demons have the power of disease when they invade the body of a person they produce disease in that person. When Beelzebub gives the order to leave the victim he is instantly healed. And there is always someone standing around with hocus pocus who pronounces his incantations, Beelzebub commands the demon to get out, the person is instantly "healed" because the source is removed, and it looks like a case of divine healing, but it is not. It is a pseudo act of healing. The demon enters for the purpose of setting up the illness; the demon leaves in order that credit might be given to some false teacher. The victim is instantly healed and this gimmick is used to give credibility to Satan's human servants who allege to be healers. Through demon possession the gift of healing, then, is counterfeited, as it was in Matthew 24:24; 2 Thessalonians 2:9; Revelation 16:14.

Demon possession is also a source of both extra natural and supernatural power. It explains certain cases, not only of miraculous healing and speaking in tongues, but also contact with the dead. Occult phenomena includes demon possession as well as, in some cases, demon influence. The rise of certain world leaders like Hitler and Stalin are directly related to demon possession. Anti-Semitism is motivated either by demon possession or demon influence.

The Doctrine of Cosmic One

We are in the process of studying the demon attacks on the human race and are now ready for the third attack on the human race: the concept of the attack of demon influence. By way of anticipation and introduction demon influence is related to individual involvement in the cosmic system of Satan. The cosmic system is composed of two dynaspheres and is the means by which Satan administers the rulership of this world as well as providing thought transference. Not all demon influence is thought transference, however. Some of demon influence is non-thought transference in the form of emotional activity. For example, emotional revolt of the soul.

In our study of demon influence we will have to review the doctrine of the cosmic system. Cosmic one is composed of twelve interlocking gates of arrogance.

1. Attitude arrogance.
2. The arrogance of negative volition (results from preoccupation with self).
3. Authority arrogance.
4. Self-righteous arrogance.
5. Sexual arrogance.
6. Criminal arrogance.
7. Psychopathic arrogance.
8. The arrogance of unhappiness (preoccupation with self).
9. Iconoclastic arrogance (preoccupation with others).
10. Rational and irrational arrogance.
11. The arrogance of achievement.
12. Client nation arrogance.

We will also note in cosmic two which is Satan's interlocking system of antagonism toward God that it is composed of nine gates.

1. The old sin nature gate.
2. The negative volition gate (direct antagonism toward doctrine).
3. The cosmic degeneration gate.
4. The antiestablishment gate.
5. The demonism gate.
6. The gate of cosmic panaceas.
7. Religion.

8. The anthropocentric and academic speculation gate.

9. The gate of evil.

The four are four mandates from the Word of God directed to the Church Age believer, members of the royal family of God. These four mandates are related to the third person of the Trinity, God the Holy Spirit. Two of the mandates are positive and refer to God's game plan for the Church Age, God's plan for your life and mine. They are related to the divine dynasphere.

The first relates to gate one. The command is very simple: "Be filled with the Spirit." That, of course, is entrance into the divine dynasphere.

There are seven other gates involved in the divine dynasphere and are covered by the mandate of Galatians 5:16 — "Walk by means of the Spirit." That is the second mandate.

The third mandate has to do with cosmic one and its twelve gates of interlocking systems of arrogance. It is the command, "Grieve not the Spirit" — Ephesians 4:30. In other words, the believer in cosmic one is grieving the Holy Spirit.

The fourth and final mandate is related to cosmic two with its nine gates of interlocking systems of antagonism: "Quench not the Spirit" — 1 Thessalonians 5:19. The believer who is residing in cosmic two is quenching the Spirit.

This immediately divides all born-again believers. The believer who has entered the divine dynasphere at the point of salvation [faith in Christ] or at the point of rebound [he has recovered to the divine dynasphere] is again filled with the Spirit. The believer under the filling of the Spirit who functions at the other seven gates, or any of the other seven gates, is walking in the Spirit. Walking in the Spirit is relative. An immature believer walking in the Spirit does not have the same function at these gates as a mature believer walking in the Spirit. Nevertheless, he is fulfilling this mandate up to his capacity.

Then there is, of course, the believer living in cosmic one who is grieving the Holy Spirit. God the Holy Spirit still indwells his body, which means that he cannot be demon-possessed, but there are certain conditions of demon influence that are even worse than demon-possession. So he is grieving the Holy Spirit and in cosmic two he is quenching the Holy Spirit. The one who is quenching the Holy Spirit and grieving the Holy Spirit is under demon influence as a believer.

This doesn't cover the unbeliever. The unbeliever can be in the divine dynasphere on a limited basis related to the laws of divine establishment, especially gate three which is the gate of humility, and gate six which is the gate of right man-right woman. However, the unbeliever who gets into cosmic one or cosmic two is immediately vulnerable to either demon-possession or demon influence, or both. Generally it starts with demon influence in cosmic one which is related to arrogant thinking and all of the facets of arrogant thinking. On the other hand, the unbeliever getting into cosmic two is definitely under demon-possession.

Staying out of the cosmic system involves using your volition: using your volition to resist temptation; using your volition in connection with what you know. Your volition is no good to you unless you have some cognisance of life. The more you understand life the better you can use your volition. You have greater options through knowledge. To that extent, then, knowledge is power. And, of course, knowledge of Bible doctrine is great power because it opens up the tremendous options in the use of your volition. Probably the most powerful instrument in your soul is your volition. Its proper use when related to knowledge becomes fantastic; its use when related in erroneous ways — to emotion — makes it very disastrous. Emotion is a very wonderful thing and a part of our happiness but when emotion overcomes cognisance, overcomes the mentality of the soul, then it is a disaster situation, and it becomes either an active or a passive system for the unbeliever to be demon-possessed and for the believer to be under demon influence. So staying out of the cosmic system always involves the use of volition. Getting out of the cosmic system also involves the use of volition: volition in rebound.

Cosmic one emphasises arrogance: preoccupation with self; cosmic two emphasises hatred or antagonism toward the person of God, the plan of God, and the Word of God. The target of arrogance in cosmic one is self, and the target of antagonism in cosmic two is the Word of God. So that each one of these cosmic dynaspheres is different. There will be some apparent overlap. Cosmic one emphasises self in contrast to God; cosmic two emphasises human viewpoint in contrast to divine viewpoint. Cosmic one reflects Satanic attitudes at the time of Satan's fall; cosmic two emphasises Satan's attitudes at the time of man's fall. Cosmic one represents the philosophy of Satan in the prehistoric angelic conflict; cosmic two represents the philosophy of Satan in the historical extension of the angelic conflict. Through entrance into cosmic one the believer becomes inculcated with the attitude of Satan before man was created; through entrance into cosmic two the believer becomes inculcated with the attitude of Satan after the fall of man. Cosmic one reflects Satan's philosophy as the leader of fallen angels; cosmic two reflects Satan's philosophy as the ruler of this world. Man's involvement in cosmic one makes him a slave to self; man's involvement in cosmic two makes him a slave to Satan. Cosmic involvement means vulnerability to the two categories of demonism.

Life in the cosmic system makes the believer a loser in time; life in the divine dynasphere makes the believer a winner in time.

1 John 2:15-18, "Stop loving the cosmic system, or anything in the cosmic system. If anyone keeps loving the cosmic system, the love of the Father is not in him." How can the love for God the Father be in the believer in the cosmic system when he is under demon influence? "Because all that is in the cosmic system, the lust of the flesh, the lust from the eyes, and the arrogant pattern of life [the function of cosmic one], is not from the Father, but is from the cosmic system. In fact the cosmic system and its lust will pass away: but anyone who performs the will of God [life in the divine dynasphere] keeps residing forever," residence in the divine dynasphere in time is the means of glorifying God in the angelic conflict, while residence in the divine dynasphere in eternity is a memorial to the grace of God forever; “Students [children, believers at the point of reception of doctrine], it is the last favourable time to use the divine dynasphere: and just as you have heard that antichrist will come [the eschatology of the Tribulation], even now [in the Church Age] there are many antichrists [believers and unbelievers involved in the cosmic system, the demonised part of the human race]; therefore we have come to realise that it is the last favourable time [for glorification of the Lord Jesus Christ through the divine dynasphere].”

That brings us to cosmic one. The mandate is “Grieve not the Spirit,” Ephesians 4:30. This is Satan’s interlocking system of arrogance, his philosophy before the fall of man. It is a dynasphere, a power system or sphere.

Gate one of cosmic one is attitude arrogance, a system of thinking. Attitude arrogance includes pride, jealousy, bitterness, vindictiveness, implacability, hatred, self-pity, the guilt syndrome, operation over-think, and revenge motivation. All of these involve a system of thought and in this system of thought self is predominant. Self is predominant in pride, in jealousy, bitterness or implacability, self-pity, the guilt syndrome, etc. Arrogant persons are always satisfied with themselves but never satisfied with others. Pride, vanity and conceit is the basis for mental attitude sins of the creature. This originated with Satan but is transferred from the thinking of Satan to us through residence in the cosmic system, Isaiah 14:12-14; Ezekiel 28:14-17. Pride is not only exaggerated self-respect and conceit but is a total preoccupation with self which divorces the individual from the realities of life. In any state of arrogance the individual is divorced from reality.

Arrogance is a real or imagined sense of superiority which distorts life and the true perspective of human frailty, resulting in a presumptuous self-righteousness and a false sense of destiny. E.g. crusaders have a false sense of destiny. Distinction should be made, of course, between arrogance and ego. Arrogance is sinful; ego is normal and simply the function of the self-consciousness of the soul. Arrogance is not ego but egocentricity, which is self-centred, preoccupied with self, and subjective in its thinking. Egotism is the practice of arrogance in contrast to humility.

Proverbs 16:18 gives us a slant on gate one. “Pride precedes destruction, and before a fall arrogance of life.” Demonism is destruction. If you are demonised as a believer, demon influence, you are destroyed, though you still have your volition to break out.

Psalms 25:8,9, “Good and honourable is the Lord; therefore he instructs sinners in the way. In divine integrity he guides the humble, consequently he teaches the humble his way [emphasising gate three: humility and teachability].”

James 4:6, “He gives greater grace,” grace after salvation: logistical grace for all believers; supergrace for the mature believers, “That is why the scripture says, God makes war on the arrogant but he gives grace to the humble.” God makes war on us as believers when we are demonised by cosmic one, for the believer in cosmic one is arrogant and it is impossible for him to grow in grace, it is impossible to fulfil the plan of God, it is impossible to make any decisions from a position of strength, it is impossible to have any sense of personal destiny, in a state of arrogance.

1 Peter 5:5,6, "In the same way, comparative novices, be under the command and authority of elder pastors. All of you in the congregation fasten yourselves to each other [interrelate or relate] with grace symptoms: because God makes war against the arrogant, but he gives grace to the humble. Therefore become grace oriented under the authority of the ruling hand of God, that he may promote you at the proper time".

If God doesn't promote you, you are not promote you. Hence, the problem of arrogance of achievement. Achievement belongs to God; happiness belongs to the believer. True achievement is in the hands of God. There is pseudo-achievement which is not achievement at all.

When a believer makes the decision to live in the cosmic system he takes on the arrogance of gate one. He becomes preoccupied with his success, if he has any, and consequently he is bitten by that bug called inordinate ambition and competition. Instead of occupation with Christ from life in the divine dynasphere he is more concerned about the opinions of his contemporaries; he susceptible to the flattery of others, arrogance becomes his motivation. Arrogance motivates him to strive for success instead of to achieve under God. He competes with his friends, he excels and surpasses his contemporaries. All of his decisions, as a result, are made from a position of weakness; he has become involved in achievement arrogance, also a part of gate one.

The biblical concept of daily happiness based on a personal sense of destiny from life in the divine dynasphere, and the faithfulness of God in providing logistical grace is exchanged for the decisions of the cosmic system. These decisions include the philosophies to transcend, to outdo, to surpass, to gain the ascendancy over one's contemporaries, to achieve in cosmic living. The believer's arrogant lust for ascendancy and success destroys his true scale of values as they relate to Bible doctrine. His desire to outdo his contemporaries also destroys his sense of destiny from the perception of Bible doctrine. The arrogant desire to achieve and to attain greater success than his contemporaries becomes the bumpy road to uncertain things filled with the potholes of unhappiness. When arrogant ambition is in the saddle doctrine is neglected, virtue is ignored, and happiness becomes evanescent.

On the other hand, through the function of humility inside the divine dynasphere, the believer not only does his job as unto the Lord but he possesses fantastic daily happiness by doing a tough job under difficult circumstances. He leaves achievement to the Lord and he does his job as unto the Lord, not to get ahead, not to ingratiate himself with his boss or others, but to glorify the Lord in what he does. Therefore he operates under the principle: If God doesn't promote you, you are not promoted.

Proverbs 11:2, "When arrogance comes, then comes dishonour." Arrogance is involvement in cosmic one, gate one.

Proverbs 16:18, "Arrogance precedes destruction, therefore before a fall, arrogance of life."

Proverbs 29:23, "A person's arrogance will bring him low, but a spirit of humility will attain honour."

The speech of Elihu in Job 33:16,17, "Then he opens the ears of men [the function of GAP at reception], and seals their instruction [the function of retention, gnwsij becomes e)pignwsij], that he may turn aside from his discipline [the function of recall], and protect man from arrogance," reception, retention, recall, related to doctrine protects man from arrogance.

Isaiah 13:11, "I will punish the world for its evil, and the wicked for their iniquity [cosmic involvement]; I will put an end to the arrogance of the proud." Why? Because the arrogance of the proud is just another way of saying human beings who are demonised; "and I will humble the pride of ruthlessness [or tyranny]."

1 Timothy 6:3,4, "If anyone teaches a different doctrine, and does not concur with sound doctrine, those doctrines from the source of our Lord Jesus Christ, even doctrine pertaining to godliness [life in the divine dynasphere]; he has received arrogance, understanding nothing, furthermore he has a morbid obsession about controversies and verbal conflicts, from which originate jealousy, discord, and eventually evil speculation."

Arrogance is the most basic sin. It is the foundation for all evil and all human good in the field of hamartiology. Arrogance was the original sin of Satan, and what Satan thought at the time of his fall is transferred to the believer who enters into gate one of the cosmic system. This becomes demonisation, the demon influence of the believer. Arrogance, then, was the original motivator of Satan in his fall and the motivator in the first revolt against God by our first parents and all revolutions in human history. Arrogance not only rejects doctrine but becomes a distracter to the plan of God, the provision of God. It distorts life's true scale of values so that all decisions are made from a position of weakness. Arrogance is opposed to perception of doctrine, to spiritual momentum. But you have to be very wary about arrogance, it is not negative toward doctrine. Far from it. It is only in cosmic two that the believer becomes antagonistic toward doctrine.

Arrogance is opposed to perception of doctrine and spiritual momentum, and the human mind, regardless of how high the IQ, becomes totally helpless without doctrine. That state of helplessness is a vacuum that sucks in to the human mind demon thinking (demon influence). Influence is the transference of thought from one philosophical thought in the mind to another mind that is helpless and has no knowledge, no thought. The demonisation of born-again believers is today reaching an all-time high. Helplessness and uselessness is the state of the mind without Bible doctrine, without truth in three categories. The human personality cannot cope with life apart from Bible doctrine in all three categories. Category one: the laws of divine establishment. Some believers will listen to Bible doctrine but will not accept establishment truth, and they become demonised, not because they are neglecting Bible doctrine but because they do not accept the authority of establishment.

Perception cannot exist apart from positive volition. Arrogance blinds the mind so that truth is rejected. It is possible to come to Bible class every night demonised, and therefore to get nothing in the field of perception, and having received no blessing or benefit in the field of reception there is no retention. If there is no retention there is no application; therefore, what you hear in Bible class is distorted. This distortion comes from the fact that they come in a demonised state; they cannot take in what is taught, they cannot see it objectively. Therefore there is no retention and there is no application, and they take gnwsij and distort it into something ghastly.

Arrogance divorces the believer, then, from personal as well historical reality in life. Arrogance rejects human authority as well as divine authority so that the Word of God is resisted and the communicator of doctrine is rejected. Arrogance destroys capacity for life, capacity for love, capacity for happiness, capacity for blessing, capacity for generosity. Arrogance in thinking leads to irrationality, for arrogance destroys personal capability and resents capability in others. Arrogance motivates inconsistent modus operandi, the wide swing from self-pity under pressure of adversity to self-righteousness in time of prosperity. Arrogance lives on flattery and, of course, believes the lie. Arrogance hears truth to distort it, to ridicule it, to reject it.

So arrogance, then, becomes the distorter of Bible doctrine and anything that distorts Bible doctrine means that you cannot learn doctrine. If you can't learn doctrine you can't grow in grace — "Grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and saviour, Jesus Christ."

There are three areas where doctrine can be distorted then: at the point of reception; the point of retention, the ability to remember afterward what was taught, gnwsij in the left lobe transferred into e)pignwsij in the right lobe; and the point of retrieval, the point of recall of Bible doctrine, the application factor. Spiritual growth comes in two ways. First of all, from what is retained; secondly, what is recalled or retrieved at a given moment when you need it. Direct growth comes from retention. Recall also is a way of growth because when you pass a momentum test through recall of doctrine, retrieving for application, then that gives accelerated growth.

Arrogance distorts what is heard in the gnwsij state due to lack of concentration, lack of objectivity. Subjectivity bends what is taught to suit one's purpose. Arrogance attacks the e)pignwsij stage by making doctrine your servant instead of your master, and arrogance attacks in the application stage by relating it to personality self-righteousness or using it for personal self-justification.

The philosophy of arrogance always gives a false perspective of life. For example, the arrogant believer who rejects the doctrine of eternal security. Of all of the areas of arrogance, anyone who does not believe in eternal security is involved in the cosmic system. The reason for this is the system of arrogance. Any person who assumes that he can commit a sin, that he can enter into a system of evil that is greater than the work of God, is arrogant. It is the worst form of arrogance: "My sins are greater than the work of Christ on the cross," is what this says. That is arrogance. When our Lord died on the cross He was judged for all sins. He provided perfect salvation. When the individual assumes that his sins are greater than the plan of God that arrogance creates a vacuum which becomes a system for demonic telepathy which we call demon influence, demon penetration of the soul.

The believer is arrogant who succumbs to the pressure of adversity or injustice. Life is filled with injustice. When one is the victim of prejudice or injustice then this is a great temptation for arrogance. To assume that one's sufferings are greater than the plan of God when the victim of injustice or prejudice, is arrogance. Many a person becomes filled with self-pity because he assumes that his sufferings are greater than the plan of God. This is merely the manifestation of being demonised, transference of demonic false doctrine to the soul of the individual who practices self-pity in time of injustice or prejudice.

The believer is arrogant when he depends on emotional activity for spiritual blessing. This would be the tongues movement which is a demonised movement. Believers in the tongues movement are under demon influence; unbelievers in the tongues movement are under demon-possession. But there are other emotional activities: dedication ceremonies, the faggot on the fire type of thing; inspirational speakers; singing "Do Lord" until you are blue in the face; receiving personal attention from counsellors, "concerned" Christians, and so on. The person finally comes to the erroneous conclusion that his feelings and experiences are greater than Bible doctrine. Once he reaches that point he is under demon influence.

The believer is arrogant when he listens to the teaching of Bible doctrine with preconceived notions, distorting the acquisition and perception of doctrine.

The believer is arrogant when he uses e)pignwsij doctrine which he has retained to serve him rather than to lead him.

The believer is arrogant when he applies doctrine to justify himself or to establish himself in a system of self-righteousness.

We have noted that all demon influence is related to Satan's cosmic system. The divine dynasphere which is God's game plan for the Church Age finds the believer under a certain system of mandates. The first: "Be filled with the Spirit." That is entrance into the divine dynasphere which occurs at the moment of salvation and thereafter at the moment of rebound. Gate number two: the beginning of virtue, emphasis on the doctrine of impersonal love toward man and personal love toward God in worship. Gate three: enforced and genuine humility. These three gates interlock to form the momentum of the spiritual life which is perception and application of Bible doctrine.

Some distinctions should be made between cosmic one and cosmic two. Cosmic one emphasises arrogance, preoccupation with self; cosmic two emphasises hatred, antagonism toward the person of God, the plan of God and the Word of God on the part of the believer or unbeliever. The target of arrogance in cosmic one is self; the target of antagonism in cosmic two is the Word of God. Cosmic one emphasises self in contrast to God; cosmic two emphasises human viewpoint in contrast to divine viewpoint. Cosmic one reflects Satan's attitude at the time of his fall, whereas cosmic two emphasises Satan's attitude at the time of man's fall. Cosmic one represents the philosophy of Satan in the prehistoric angelic conflict; cosmic two represents the philosophy of Satan in the historical extension of the angelic conflict. Through entrance into cosmic one the believer becomes inculcated with the attitude of Satan, the philosophy of Satan before man was created. Through entrance into cosmic two the believer becomes inculcated with the attitude of Satan, the philosophy of Satan after the fall of man. Cosmic one, therefore, reflects Satan's philosophy as the leader of fallen angels, whereas cosmic two reflects Satan's philosophy as the ruler of this world. As the ruler of this world Satan administers through the cosmic system. Man's involvement in cosmic one makes him the slave to self; man's involvement in cosmic two makes him the slave of Satan.

Cosmic involvement means vulnerability to two categories of demonism: demon-possession, which is the demon invasion of the body. Only unbelievers can be demon-possessed, and only with their consent; demon influence, which is the demon invasion of the human soul and personality. It is open to both believers and unbelievers and in many ways it is far worse than demon-possession. Demon influence is by far the most effective Satanic weapon. Thought transference from demons to mankind is the great issue in demon influence.

The cosmic system is the policy of Satan plus the vehicle of Satan for his administration of the rulership of this world. Life in the cosmic system makes the believer a loser in time; life in the divine dynasphere produces the winner for both time and eternity.

The mandate with regard to the cosmic system is given in 1 John 2:15-18. "Stop loving the cosmic system, or anything in the cosmic system. If anyone keeps loving the cosmic system the love of the Father [motivating virtue of personal love for God] is not in him. Because all that is in the cosmic system, the lust of the flesh [the old sin nature], the lust from the eyes [the mental function from cosmic two, demon influence], and the arrogant pattern of life [the function of the believer in cosmic one], is not from the Father, but is from the cosmic system. In fact the cosmic system and its lusts will pass away: but anyone who performs the will of God [life in the divine dynasphere] keeps residing forever. Students, it is the last favourable time [to use the divine dynasphere]: and just as you have heard that antichrist will come [the eschatology of the Tribulation], even now many antichrists exist on earth [believers and unbelievers in the cosmic system]; therefore we have come to know that it is the last favourable time [for glorifying God in the divine dynasphere]."

We now move over to gate two of cosmic one: arrogant negative volition. The interlocking relationship with gate one results in either the rejection of the content of doctrine or the rejection of the communicator of doctrine. When anyone is preoccupied with self to any degree, when any believer is living in cosmic one, gate one, and he comes to church, the point of reception of Bible doctrine, he goes negative to doctrine unless something please him very much. Unless some illustration captures his attention at the point of reception he is preoccupied with self and he has therefore only subjective thinking through transference in demon influence and is therefore incapable of understanding what is being taught. Both the message and the messenger of doctrine are rejected when one lives in gate one of cosmic one. Defined then as the rejection of doctrine and the resistance of truth based on preoccupation with self this is the function of subjectivity in life. This subjectivity is demon influence, transference of thought. The negative volition at gate two of cosmic one is not the same as the negative volition we will study later on in cosmic two, gate two. Cosmic one has gate two, negative volition. Cosmic two also has a negative volition but the two categories of negative volition are entirely different. The negative volition of gate two, cosmic one, and negative volition of gate two are entirely different. For example, negative volition in cosmic one is related to preoccupation with self, therefore it hinges around subjective negative volition. But negative volition in cosmic two is related to antagonism toward doctrine, antagonism toward truth, and therefore it is objective, aggressive antagonistic negative volition toward the truth. Negative volition toward doctrine intensifies the arrogance in the life and results in both the blackout of the soul and scar tissue of the soul. Blackout of the soul is the first stage in which demon transference of thought under the principle of demon influence occurs. Furthermore, negative volition toward doctrine results in countless decisions made from a position of weakness plus the loss of any personal sense of destiny. Furthermore, negative volition results in slavery to the circumstances of life which means that prosperity produces self-righteous arrogance while adversity produces self-pity arrogance. Self-righteousness plus self-pity produce the guilt complex, and the wide swing between self-pity and self-righteousness under varying circumstances of life is the system of slavery in gate two of cosmic one.

Negative volition includes the arrogance of ignorance, defined as failure to make the transition from ignorance to cognisance in life. The transition must exist in the temporal realm as well as the spiritual realm. Human maturity requires making the transition from authority in the home to freedom in life. The home was designed by God for mankind in the formative years of his life. The home is organisational humility and the parents are the authority in the home. This authority is the basis for inculcation, normal teaching, training, developing certain things, e.g. poise, which is thinking under pressure just as courage is thinking under pressure. The person who has poise in normal circumstances will automatically have courage in abnormal circumstances. That should all be developed in the home; it is the responsibility of the parents and the function of the volition of the individual. The parent may be unfair, unjust, periodically or all the time, but response to parental authority is the whole basis for life as a human being. Rejection of authority in the home brings a person out of the home who is immature, an adult body with an immature mind. It is generally the adult body of a believer under demon influence, or an unbeliever under demon influence for the same reason, because all organisation in life which brings us to the point of freedom is guaranteed by authority in life. If you destroy authority you have no freedom, they stand or fall together. The response to mankind en masse to authority establishes freedom as a principle. It establishes privacy as a principle of freedom, it establishes property and the sacredness of human life. The whole structure of society collapses under the principle of the arrogance of ignorance. Arrogance rejects all authority and this produces about everything in social degeneration: criminality, homosexuality, drug addiction, etc.

Each transition in life requires virtue. Genuine humility is necessary to make the transition from authority in youth to freedom as an adult. Perception of doctrine in the divine dynasphere is necessary to make the transition from ignorance at salvation to cognisance as a believer inside of the divine dynasphere. The arrogance of ignorance is failure to make the transition from the ignorance of doctrine to the cognisance of doctrine, just as the child in the home rejects authority in the home or by-passes authority in the home and then comes into society. That person will never make the transition. He is disoriented to life in general and this is a system of arrogance, this is demon influence. The most difficult transition is to go from home to life. The other one is after salvation: to go from ignorance of doctrine at salvation to cognisance of doctrine, which requires of course, residence and function inside the divine dynasphere.

God has a plan for your life but that purpose will never be realised or understood apart from perception of Bible doctrine. You have to remember that achievement belongs to God; happiness belongs to you. But the happiness that belongs to you, your heritage as a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ, will never become a reality unless you personally make your daily decision for the perception of Bible doctrine, for rebound when necessary, for all of the mechanics that result in residence and function inside the of the divine dynasphere.

Revelation chapter 10:1 to chapter 11:14 is parenthetical and deals almost extensively with angels. Therefore it is necessary to understand once again the order of the angelic college of heralds, an order that belongs to elect angels.

Our Lord Jesus Christ is called an angel, the angel of the Lord, and as such He is the Commander-in-Chief of the angelic college of heralds under the title of the angel of the Lord. This, of course, is a theophany, a manifestation of our Lord in Old Testament times before the first advent when He appeared quite frequently as an angel. Therefore, He is classified as the ruler of the angelic college of heralds. The fact that Jesus Christ is called the angel of the Lord is a separate study.

For actual angels, the highest ranking elect angels in the universe are called seraphim (the "im" is a Hebrew plural). When we transliterate it we should transliterate it "seraphs". This is an order of rank that was created as a decoration, like the order of the morning star for believers who advance to maturity and have maximum glorification of the Lord Jesus Christ. Most angels do not have wings, wings are a badge of rank — so when angels do have wings they function as the highest insignia of rank. As we have noted before, seraphs have six wings and are the highest rank ever to exist, a rank that was created as a reward for angels who achieved maximum glorification of Christ during the prehistoric angelic conflict. There were no seraphs before the fall of Satan. Before the fall of Satan the highest ranking angel was a cherub, having four wings. Satan himself was one of the highest ranking angels before the angelic conflict began, but at the conclusion of the prehistoric angelic conflict a new rank was created as a reward for the greatest of the elect angels during that phase of the angelic conflict. The reward is related to the fact that part of the escutcheon of the seraph is the uniform of wisdom: they are said to be full of eyes within and without. "Full of eyes" is a title for maximum perception of doctrine during the prehistoric angelic conflict.

The description of the seraph in Isaiah 6:2, "Seraphs stood above him, each having six wings; with two he covered his face, and with two he covered his feet, and with two he flew."

The pair of wings which cover the face is analogous to the integrity and humility of the seraphs. In eternity past the issue was the same as it is among members of the human race: who is arrogant and who isn't. The first sin of any creature in all of history was the sin of arrogance. The sin of arrogance spawned all of the problems and the antithesis of arrogance is genuine humility. And so as with human beings it is in the angelic realm: arrogance versus humility continues to be the great issue. The various forms of arrogance, some are more subtle than others, are so fantastic that Satan actually developed a system out of it which we have studied as cosmic one, the twelve gates of interlocking systems of arrogance.

The pair of wings which cover the feet refer to seraph respect for divine authority. There are two things that we must have in life if we are ever going to go anywhere as far as spiritual things are concerned and as far as life in general. One is genuine humility which is the basis for all integrity, all character, all capacity for life and happiness; the other is respect for authority. Obviously, respect for authority is enforced humility whereas the basis for all integrity in life is genuine humility. So the pair of wings which cover the feet of the seraph indicate his respect for divine authority.

The principle behind all of this: the highest ranking type is always the servant of all, whether angelic or human. The highest ranking type is the seraph. They are the ones who serve the Lord the best of all.

The pair of wings with which the seraphs fly indicate their modus operandi which is the communication of divine policy at the highest level. In the case of Isaiah a seraph provided information which gave him a sense of destiny and led to his dedication to serve the Lord in Isaiah 6:6-8. There is no question about the fact that we as believers must have a personal sense of destiny from our perception of Bible doctrine; we must have control of our own lives through the application of doctrine in the faith-rest drill. You can face the greatest of disasters and have all kinds of horrible things happen to you, as inevitably do to believers in time of historical disaster: economic historical disaster, social historical disaster, or the obvious military disaster in warfare. So the seraph which provided the information is very important because it related Isaiah to his personal sense of destiny. He understood the plan of God for his life, it gave him the basis for getting control of his life, and then the follow-through which is making decisions from a position of strength. There seems to be a relationship in eternity past with those who make it in time. The seraph is connected with Isaiah because the seraph did it in the prehistoric angelic conflict, just as Isaiah made it in human history.

There are three ranks among the seraphim who are in the angelic college of heralds. The highest ranking seraph in the college of heralds is called the King of Arms, which follows the concept of the college of heralds in human history, and this King of Arms is the one we are about to study. He is the mighty angel in Revelation 10:1. We have already studied one King of Arms in Revelation 5:2. At a critical point in history the angelic college of heralds comes into the picture to reveal the modus operandi of God in that terrible period of the Tribulation. The highest ranking of all angelic creatures is used to conduct this activity, for out of the three ranks of the seraphs the King of Arms is the highest.

Second in rank in the angelic college of heralds is called the Officer of Arms, an angel with great authority. We will meet one in Revelation 18:1, or the angel with the key to the abyss in Revelation chapter 20:1-3.

The third in the rank is called the herald. This is the full title of herald, not the function of herald. In Revelation 4:6-8 we have the four living creatures who are full heralds. They were “full of eyes,” the uniform of wisdom for perception of maximum doctrine during the prehistoric angelic conflict, “both inside and outside.” It takes a tremendous amount of self-discipline, of decision from a position of strength, of understanding the plan of God for your life and how it relates to your life and takes control of your life, and it takes a personal sense of destiny to be consistent in the perception of Bible doctrine. And it is true in the prehistoric angelic conflict just as it is true in human history as the extension and conclusion of the angelic conflict. It all ties in together. Once more, in Revelation 10 as in Revelation 18 and chapter 20 we are going to learn from angels. It is very difficult for believers to be consistent. It is almost impossible for many simply because they have established, one way or another, too many distractions in their life so that they no longer have control of their lives, they no longer have a personal sense of destiny. And, of course, they are constantly making decisions from a position of weakness.

So it says in Revelation 4:8, “... Furthermore, day and night they never stopped saying, ‘Holy, holy, holy, Lord God, the almighty one, who was [Christ as eternal God, His first royal patent and title Son of God] and who is [the glorified Christ in His hypostatic union with two more royal patents, one at the birth where He was called son of David, one at the ascension where He was called King of kings] and who is coming [the Lord Jesus Christ at the second advent].’”

It is interesting that in Revelation 4:8 where these three aspects of our Lord are presented — Jesus Christ as eternal God; Jesus Christ as true humanity; Jesus Christ as the one who controls history and who will return. When all of these things are brought together it is the seraphs who are there to appreciate it. Why? Because they have the capacity to do so. We miss a lot of things in life and a lot of blessing because we simply do not have capacity, and capacity is a matter of your own personal decisions. All of us are the products of our own decisions. Our capacity for happiness, for life, for blessing, is related to our ability to make decisions and to stick with the plan no matter how many distractions and pressures and difficulties come along. Our failure to do so does not mean that God punishes us, which does occur at a certain stage, but we punish ourselves.

In the next area, the lower aristocracy, we have the cherubim. It must gail Satan to realise that God created a much higher echelon, just as it galls a lot of human beings when someone whom they regard with disdain is actually elevated by the grace of God. And so we have the cherubim heralds. The cherubs rank lower than seraphs, having four wings as their badge of rank. However, in eternity past and prior to the fall of Satan the cherub was the highest ranking angel in that category of creation. For the King of Arms, Officer of Arms, we have pur sui vant as the key word. At this point the cherubs fall into the category of pur sui vant. Pur sui vant was originally an old French word. It came into England as a borrowed word and it meant a follower. It is simply a designation for the lower order of aristocracy.

The pur sui vant as a badge of office wore the coat of arms of their Lord. In the system of aristocracy there are higher categories and lower categories. In England, for example, the royal officers of arms were made a corporation by Richard the third, and at present the members of this corporation are known as the college of arms or college of heralds. While pur sui vant originally meant an attendant it became technical for the functionary aristocracy, ranking below a herald but ranking higher than the rest of the people.

There are four systems of aristocracy under pur sui vant. First of all there is the red cross; secondly the blue mantle; thirdly the herald of the castle; fourthly the red dragon. Each one of these is related to a medieval system. In our analogy pur sui vant officers are simply cherubs, the angels with four wings, and are pur sui vant officers who are described in Ezekiel chapter one, verses four through six.

In Revelation chapter 10 we are going to encounter several categories from the college of heralds. The fact that teaching angels go back to Moses and Mount Sinai, the Jews were taught by angels; and the ones who taught, this was a privilege given to them because of their fantastic history in the prehistoric angelic conflict. It was a decoration or a reward.

The fourth category of the college of heralds is the wingless heralds. These are generally messengers of judgment. They would follow the same principle in the English college of heralds under the title of pur sui vant messengers. There are quite a number of pur sui vant messengers in the Word of God. There are at least nine different categories. For example, category #1: the angelic messengers who spent the night with Lot and destroyed Sodom the next day, Genesis 19:13; category #2: the destroying angel of 2 Samuel 24:16 is a pur sui vant messenger; category #3: the destroying angels of Psalm 78:49; category #4: the executioners of the city (Jerusalem), Ezekiel 9:1ff; category #5: the man clothed in linen who acted as the messenger for the chariot of fire in Ezekiel 10:6; category #6: the four angelic creatures who restrain the weather cells of the weather machine, Revelation 7:1; category #7: the angels with the seven trumpets; category #8: the seven angels with the seven plagues of Revelation 15:1, the same angels who have the vials and libation bowls in Revelation 16; category #9: the seven thunders are pur sui vant heralds who accompany the King of Arms in Revelation 10:3,4.

There are also human heralds for each advent as well as angelic. At the first advent of Christ we have the angelic heralds in Luke 2:9-15, but we also have the human herald in John the Baptist in John 3:28-31. In the second advent of Christ we have the angelic herald who is a seraph, the King of arms, the mighty angel of Revelation 10:1. We are also going to meet in Revelation 11:3-12 the human heralds of the second advent: Moses and Elijah brought back for a special ministry at the end of the Tribulation.

In the meantime we are looking at a parenthesis. It begins at Revelation 10:1 and concludes in the middle of chapter 11, verse 14. The outline of this parenthesis is very simple: The angelic herald of the second advent, Revelation 10:1-11; the human heralds of the second advent, Revelation 11:1-14.

One point of application: These heralds function as the highest form of aristocracy. They are aristocracy in the angelic realm from the prehistoric angelic conflict and they are aristocracy in the human realm from their function in human history. The whole principle of aristocracy is not titles handed down from father to elder son, it is not some system of primogeniture. Aristocracy is related to the key to happiness and blessing in life — integrity. That is why we spend so much time studying the system behind the divine dynasphere, because the system behind the plan is integrity. Our point of contact with God is through His integrity, not through His sovereignty as per hyper-Calvinism and not through His love, as per emotional fundamentalism. We deal with the integrity of God. We deal with the justice of God as the originating point for His integrity; we deal with the righteousness of God as the recipient of His integrity. When the justice of God the Father imputed all of our sins to Christ on the cross that established a principle: the justice of the Father set aside His eternal love for the Son in order to accomplish our so great salvation. The justice of God the Father imputed our sins to Christ on the cross, the justice of God the Father judged those sins. Therefore, the justice of God the Father is our point of contact with God, and has been since the fall of man. The justice of God condemned man at the fall; the justice of God provides salvation for man at the cross. The justice of God imputes the other half of divine holiness to every one of us at the point of salvation so that a grace pipeline is established between the justice of God and the righteousness of God. And every blessing that you will ever have from God in this life comes from His justice and is imputed directly to the indwelling righteousness of God which you possess. This is to keep you from falling into the pattern of Satan in the prehistoric angelic conflict. The pattern of Satan was arrogance, "I will be like the most high God." The most destructive thing that can ever happen to you is what can happen to the soul under the principle of arrogance. Arrogance destroys everything that is meaningful or wonderful or marvellous in this life. Arrogance is a destroyer of every part of us and as a result of arrogance you can have and develop in your life the most excruciating forms of misery. And it isn't discipline from God, it is the natural and logical result of your own bad decisions.

The believer who recognises that he is dealing with the integrity of God and that the integrity of God has set up a grace system, then gets into a way by which he can develop integrity which glorifies God. Integrity is the means by which we glorify God. Serving the Lord in "Christian service" is merely a by-product of integrity.

So, here in Revelation 10:1 we have the angelic herald of the second advent, the triumph of integrity in eternity past, the triumph of integrity in the prehistoric angelic conflict. We meet in verse 1 the King of Arms from the college of heralds. Chapter ten begins a parenthetical section for the purpose of introducing the heralds of the second advent, the human and the angelic.

The parenthesis begins with this kai. The conjunction kai has at least 25 different uses and this one's primary function is to start a parenthesis. The parenthesis means that we stop our study of the Tribulation as such, the sequence of events, the chronology of events. We have to be filled in on certain things before we can get to the seventh trumpet which starts in Revelation 11:15. We are now developing an honours list, one angel and two human beings who stand high in their relationship with God both in time and in eternity.

The next word after kai which introduces our parenthesis is the aorist active indicative of the verb o(raw, "Then I saw." Inside of the parenthesis we are going to see something. Instead of continuing the sequence of events with the seventh trumpet John interrupts the vision and he presents the heralds of the second advent. With this we have the actual scene which is a constative aorist that contemplates chapter 10:1 through chapter 11:14 in its entirety. It pulls it all together in the constative aorist of o(raw. This is what he saw, it does not advance the chronology but fills us in on certain principles that are necessary. The active voice: the apostle John produces the action. The indicative mood is indicative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality.

Next we have the accusative singular direct object, made up of three words. First is the adjective a)lloj. This adjective is used in the sense of different from the sixth angelic trumpeter who is a pur sui vant messenger but the same in that he is also an elect angel. So we are not seeing another trumpeter at this time. This is an angel but different from the previously-mentioned ones who blew the first six trumpets. With this we also have a noun, a)ggeloj and it means an angel. And with this the accusative singular direct object from i)sxuroj, meaning powerful, mighty, strong. This is the accusative of apposition and so we are going to translate it "the powerful one." Actually, it is the same angel as in Revelation 5:2, the King of Arms, the highest-ranking angel in the college of heralds. When the King of Arms becomes involved in anything it becomes extremely important to understand. His power comes not from his muscle but from his integrity. He is pictured in the present active participle of katabainw, he is descending, coming down. This, of course, is not a reference to Christ who does not come down to the earth in the middle of the Tribulation or near the end of the Tribulation, and this word katabainw cannot be used for Christ until the second advent. This is not the second advent.

Then we have the preposition e)k plus the ablative of o)uranoj, "from heaven." The King of Arms, then, comes from the throne room and he comes for a purpose. He is going to claim planet earth for the Lord before the Lord returns.

Next we see the escutcheon of the King of Arms. There are four parts to his escutcheon. We begin by noting the cloud, then we will see the feet, and then a couple of analogies; and all these four will form the escutcheon of the King of Arms. The perfect passive participle of the verb periballw is where we resume. It means to be clothed. We will translate it in the passive voice: "And he was wearing." The intensive perfect tense is one in which special attention is directed toward the results of the completed action of the verb. It is the emphatic way in the Greek of presenting a fact. He is wearing a cloud. The passive voice: the King of Arms receives the action of the verb as a part of his escutcheon which is a circumstantial participle designed to function as a finite verb and be preceded by the conjunction “and.” The accusative singular direct object from the noun nefelh is in the singular here, he was just wearing one cloud. The cloud represents the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ and becomes the first fourth of his escutcheon.

Clouds have many meanings as we have studied before and here it has a special meaning, the glory of the Lord. At the mount of transfiguration in Matthew 17:5 the bright cloud overshadowing them was representing the glory of the Lord. The cloud represents the presence of God and the King of Arms comes directly from heaven and is therefore the representative of God on a very special eschatological mission. The cloud also represents the glory of Christ in His strategic victory of the first advent and which is noted in the ascension in Acts 1:9, “a cloud received him out of their sight.” Clouds also represent the power and wisdom of God, as in Psalm 135:6,7; 147:8; Proverbs 8:28.

The cloud here represents the power and wisdom of God in dealing with human history plus the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ in His strategic victory at the first advent.

The second part of the escutcheon is a rainbow. We have a connective conjunction meaning that we are continuing the story of the escutcheon of this particular angel, kai. Next is the nominative singular subject i)rij, the Greek word for rainbow. With it is a prepositional phrase, e)pi plus the accusative of kefalh, “head.” With that the possessive genitive of a)utoj used as a third person personal pronoun and correctly translated, “and a rainbow over his head.”

The rainbow is the visible sign of the integrity of God in permitting, of course, the continuation of human history to resolve the angelic conflict. The integrity of God was seen in the antediluvian civilisation when, as a result of the demon genetic attack on the human race, God protected the only line of true humanity. That line belonged to Noah and his family. So to perpetuate human history God in His perfect integrity [His justice] destroyed all the contaminated part of the human race with a general flood, a disaster which devastated the earth. Afterward the rainbow was given as a sign that God would never again destroy the earth by such an historical disaster — Genesis 9:12-16. Therefore, the rainbow is used here as a visible sign of God’s perfect integrity which is man’s point of contact with God in the historical phase of the angelic conflict. By integrity we mean the holiness of God, His justice and His righteousness. The key to everything is how the justice of God superseded the love of God at the cross. God the Father loved God the Son with an eternal love but at the cross He set aside His love, and justice made the contact. Justice imputed all the sins of the world to Christ on the cross and then the justice of the Father judged them. That is the saving work of Christ. And then to anyone who believes in Christ then the other half of divine holiness is imputed — divine righteousness. Every believer has divine righteousness, establishing the grace policy down the pipeline between the justice of God and the righteousness of God. Our point of contact is always the justice of God and man’s point of contact has been the justice of God since man’s fall in the garden. And because we possess God's righteousness God loves us but that is still not the point of contact. Therefore the integrity of God is always man's point of contact.

This angel, the King of Arms, the highest representative of the angelic college of heralds, comes down to the earth carrying, as a part of his escutcheon, the principle of the integrity of God. The rainbow was the visible sign of the integrity of God related to historical disaster. The earth is never again to be overtaken by any such form of catastrophe. In other words, the integrity of God guarantees that God will never destroy or permit the destruction of planet earth during human history. Human history is to be perpetuated. The earth will not be destroyed until human history has been terminated, which means at the end of the Millennium when the angelic conflict will be permanently resolved. That is the major issue at this point. This part of the escutcheon of the King of Arms has a tremendous implication, such as the sophisticated weapons of man in this nuclear age will never destroy the earth or its population. The greatest destruction of mankind will not even come through nuclear activity, it will come in the Tribulation. Warfare and economic disaster are going to be the great population destroyers, not nuclear weapons.

The implications are tremendous. History will be perpetuated, the guarantee is the integrity of God, the sign is the rainbow. The rainbow also connotes the fact that the human race is protected from self-destruction. Given any kind of an opportunity the human race would destroy itself long before it could invent any destructive weapons. Man will continue to live on planet earth until the end of the Millennium, the end of human history. God does not permit any destruction to interfere with the use of history as the extension of the angelic conflict. God does permit man-made disaster and God does continue to judge certain segments of the human race from time to time; but God will not destroy the human race nor planet earth until the end of the Millennium. That is the subject of 2 Peter 3:5-15.

The principle from this second part of the escutcheon is the fact that divine integrity is not only the point of contact for mankind but divine holiness or integrity has total intrinsic value. This means that man has three things as a result: a personal relationship with the integrity of God and proper relationship with the integrity of God. First of all, from the doctrine he learns which establishes this relationship he has a personal sense of destiny. Secondly, the believer has control of his life through cognisance and execution of the plan of God. Thirdly, the believer makes decisions from a position of strength rather than from a position of weakness.

The rainbow also has another connotation

1. The rainbow, in addition to the connotation just noted [the integrity of God], is a reminder of the believer's eternal and temporal security.
2. Every believer at the moment of salvation is in the plan of God in time as well as in eternity. The plan of God has two aspects for you: time and eternity.

3. Therefore, no matter how great the historical disaster the plan of God and temporal security for the believer [in the divine dynasphere] continues.
4. The only exception to the temporal security of the believer is either self-perpetuating misery in the cosmic system or divine discipline terminating in the sin unto death.
5. No matter what personal testing may come your way God has a purpose for your life and He will provide under the principle of logistical grace.
6. The pattern of the integrity of God is seen in the logistical grace provision for the believer, for all blessing of logistical grace flows from the justice of God, one half of divine holiness, to the indwelling righteousness of God, the other half of divine holiness.
7. Therefore, whether you know it or not you have it. If you know it you have a sense of security. If you don't know that you have temporal security then you are not aware of it and you are anxious and worried and full of fears. Therefore the believer's sense of security must originate from cognisance of divine integrity — that is the rainbow — plus the mechanics of logistical grace provision.
8. This is part of the essence of God rationale used in the second stage of the faith-rest drill, designed to accelerate your spiritual growth. The thing that delivers a nation is spiritual growth, and this includes adversity as well as prosperity testing.
9. The use of the second stage of the faith-rest drill, then, becomes the means of awareness of temporal security. No matter what happens to you, you are still in the plan of God in time.
10. The more the believer knows about the integrity of God the greater his personal sense of destiny. The rainbow as the second part of the escutcheon of the King of Arms is a reminder of the integrity and the faithfulness of God.

The third part of the escutcheon is the face analogy. It begins with the consecutive conjunction kai, translated “and,” and the nominative singular subject from the noun prospwpon plus the possessive genitive of a)utoj, “and his face.” We have an ellipsis here, we insert e)imi, “and his face was.” Then we have the comparative conjunction o(j, and it is translated “was like.” Finally, we have the appellative nominative e(lioj, “and his face was like the sun.”

The King of Arms as the highest seraph in the college of heralds wears the escutcheon of our Lord Jesus Christ. In that sense our Lord is the sun King. Beginning at salvation and continuing into every facet of life Jesus Christ is the source of blessing. He is the source of our energy, our enlightenment and, as it were, here we bask in the warmth of His encouragement. Were it not for the sun, of course, the world would be enshrouded in darkness as it was before the creation of man. Christ means that our life has purpose, definition and meaning. This is represented by the face analogy. The only way to escape the kingdom of darkness [the cosmic system] is to first believe in Christ and then to live in His plan, the divine dynasphere. When we do we have the principle, “He who spared not his own son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him freely give us all things?” Whether personal or collective adversity comes our way only the warmth of divine blessing, the warmth of logistical grace, can penetrate the darkness of historical disaster.

The fourth part of the escutcheon is the feet analogy. We have the connective kai introducing this fourth part. We have the nominative plural from pouj, and with it the intensive pronoun a)utoj, “and his feet.” Again, because of ellipsis, we insert the verb to be, “were,” and then “like,” the same comparative conjunction o)j. Then we have the nominative plural of stuloj, correctly translated “pillars.” It also means columns. With it we have the descriptive genitive singular from the noun pur, which means fire. Translation: “and his feet were like columns of fire.” Those columns of fire represent the divine protection of the positive believer in time of historical disaster, whether it is historical disaster right now or whether it is the historical disaster of this context, the Tribulation. It refers, therefore, to the wall of fire — “columns of fire” — the divine protection of the positive believer in time of either personal or historical disaster. The wall of fire in the Church Age is the divine dynasphere and only believers living in the divine dynasphere are protected. While there is no divine dynasphere in the Tribulation, the point of context, the believers of the Tribulation are protected by the plan of God and their association with it. This means that believers in the cosmic system are never protected by the wall of fire, they are subject to the sin unto death. So God has provided the wall of fire for every believer in fellowship with God throughout human history and only believers living in the cosmic system are excluded from this wall of fire during historical disaster. In fact historical disaster is used by God to execute believers with the sin unto death.

Translation of verse one: “Then I saw another elect angel, the powerful one, coming down from heaven: and he was wearing a cloud, and a rainbow was over his head, and his face was like the sun, and his feet were like columns of fire.”

There is one other principle, that of freedom and security. People are all too often, in time of historical disaster, willing to exchange freedom in a trade-out for security. They are often willing to surrender their national freedom to a national government if that national government will provide them temporal security. So the exchange of freedom for security is to sell one’s soul for a mess of pottage and destroy the very purpose of human history as the extension of the angelic conflict. Today socialism, the welfare state, social security, redistribution of wealth, are very popular concepts. That is because in this time of economic disaster they offer security rather than freedom. The principle: Freedom is necessary to glorify God; security is not.

In glorifying God security isn’t even an issue; freedom is. Nevertheless, God’s grace policy from His integrity has provided both eternal and temporal security for every believer. Eternal security is settled at the very moment that we believe in Christ. We are born again, we are entered into union with Christ, we can never lose our salvation. But also there is temporal security. This is settled as a result of faith in Christ, the imputation of divine righteousness, one half of divine integrity, to every believer. The point is, the believer cannot work for, earn, or deserve eternal security; he cannot earn, work for, or deserve, temporal security. The grace policy of the integrity of God excludes working for the security He provides. The escutcheon of the King of Arms reminds us as believers in the Lord Jesus Christ that God is perfect, therefore His plan is perfect. His perfect plan includes temporal as well as eternal security. Man separates freedom from security by greed, arrogance, inordinate ambition, worry, fear, anxiety, and therefore he sacrifices one for the sake of the other. But God in His perfect wisdom and in His plan has provided both freedom and security as the extension of His integrity and grace policy. And He reveals it in the escutcheon of the King of Arms.

There are many things that happen in life whereby we are able to interpret the historical trends through the doctrine of the Word of God, inasmuch as historical trends is a subject of the Word and especially in this dispensation of the Church; for this is the dispensation of no prophecy, and since prophecy is not used to interpret historical trends we have to go to the doctrines which are involved. We have studied these doctrines in the past. For example, we are the products of our own decisions individually and collectively rather than the products of our environment.

In Revelation 10:1 we are meeting for the first time the angelic herald of the second advent. Once the second advent occurs Satan will be superseded by our Lord Jesus Christ who will rule forever. The rainbow over the angel's head indicates the fact that this herald of the second advent, the King of Arms, is declaring to us that the world will survive all disasters and that there will always be people on planet earth, and that these people with their volition, positive or negative, will continue to fulfil the principle of the angelic conflict. The angelic conflict will be resolved by the volition of mankind.

The third part of the escutcheon of the King of Arms: "his face was like the sun," the provision of logistical grace in times of historical disaster, "and his feet were like columns of fire," a reference to the wall of fire, the divine protection of the positive believer in time of either personal or historical disaster.

Logistical grace is defined as the divine provision and support of the believer on planet earth. This includes historical disaster. The background for logistical grace is found in 2 Corinthians 9:8, "God is able to make all grace abound toward you." This means that in time of historical disaster, in time of economic disaster, God is able to make all grace abound toward you, "that always having sufficiency in everything you may have an abundance for every good deed." God's plan has a system of logistics. God is perfect, His plan is perfect. That means that His logistical system is also perfect. We have to understand that as long as we are in the plan of God in any possible way we are logistically sustained. Even the many believers who have eternal life and are outside of the plan of God in the cosmic system are being sustained by logistical grace.

Ephesians 1:3, "Worthy of praise and glorification the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the one having provided us benefits by every spiritual blessing in the heavenlies."

If God has a plan for your life, as He does, it is God's responsibility to sustain that, to provide whatever is necessary whereby you can continue in this life to fulfil His plan. It is true that some believers are removed by the sin unto death because they have spent too much time in the cosmic system and the system of demonisation in it. And, of course, some believers are under divine discipline, but by and large the majority of believers are not even under divine discipline when they have disaster; they are simply the products of their own decisions, they have brought on themselves the disasters they face. Nevertheless, there is an overriding principle and that is the fact that for believers in the cosmic system who have failed they are still alive, even though hurting and facing some form of disaster. That is logistical grace. There are believers who are suffering for blessing; they are under logistical grace. There are believers who have succeeded and are doing very well in the divine dynasphere. There are believers who have failed. All of these believers have one thing in common: they are being kept alive by the grace of God. We are kept alive for a purpose, and that is to get into the plan of God and grow by means of grace, logistical grace, and knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. Logistical grace must come before knowledge; before you can learn Bible doctrine you have to be alive.

Logistical grace keeps alive the worst of believers and the best of believers. Sometimes logistical grace simply keeps alive the worst of believers so that the best of believers will have people testing, and pass it and move on to greater things. But the whole concept is that God supports and sustains in this life those who are personally believers in the Lord Jesus Christ. Logistical grace is based upon the integrity of God. It is based, therefore, upon His faithfulness. Therefore, we as believers facing historical disaster need to understand this principle, Lamentations 3:20-25.

All believers living in God's plan live inside the dynasphere. Believers living inside of the divine dynasphere are aware of the fact that there are three things that they will have in historical prosperity or in historical disaster. They will have a personal sense of destiny, they will have the control of their lives, and they will generally make decisions from a position of strength rather than a position of weakness. As a result of these three things they will orient to any disaster through the rationale of logistical grace.

Worry is a malfunction of the faith-rest drill, it intensifies your problems. Worry causes you to approach life emotionally rather than rationally. Worry is cowardice whereas courage is the ability to think under pressure. Poise is courage under normal circumstances.

Matthew 5:25, "Stop worrying about what you shall eat and what you shall drink; nor for your body as to what you shall wear. Is not the fact that you are alive more than food? And is not the fact that you have a body more than clothing?" The Lord says, in effect, "You are alive, you are a believer. God has a purpose for your life. Why are you worrying?" Worrying compounds the problem. The amazing thing is that God provides logistical grace for people who worry, even though worry is their unbelief and their rejection of the whole principle of logistical grace. Logistical grace works whether you deserve it or not.

Matthew 5:26, "Look at the birds of the air: they do not sow, neither do they reap," they are not functioning under the laws of free enterprise. We sow and reap under the principle of economy; “neither do they gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feeds them. Are you not of greater value than they?”

Verse 27, “Which of you by worrying can add eighteen inches to your height?” You cannot solve your problems by worry, fear, anxiety. This is cowardice, this is facing reality and becoming coward.

Verses 28, 29, “Why are you worried about your clothing? Observe how the lilies of the field grow; they do not work, neither do they spin [manufacture cloth]: in fact, I say to you, That even Solomon in all his glory did not clothe himself like one of these.” We need clothing. We do not have to be the best dressed person in history. But above all the problem is not clothing in itself, it is worry about clothing.

Verse 30, “In fact if God keeps clothing the common grass of the field ... will he not do much more for you, O believer with very little faith-rest?” In other words, this was written to people who were worried, people who were not using the faith-rest drill. If God provides clothing for grass, it follows a fortiori, that He will not withhold clothing from the believer.

Verse 31, “Therefore, do not worry, thinking, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? With what shall we clothe ourselves?” Those are questions that come readily to mind when you have lost your job, when you are in some form of economic disaster. And, by the way, it might even be your fault but that is not even the issue. The issue is not whose fault it is, the issue is the reality of it. So it no longer becomes a matter of blaming yourself or blaming someone else. Of course, again, we are all the products of our own decisions. That is not the issue, the issue is reality: I do not have a job, I do not have the means of bringing any money into the household whereby I can survive.

Verse 32, “(In fact the Gentiles eagerly search for all of these things:) furthermore, your heavenly Father knows that you have need of all these things.” Now we are getting back to the basic and fundamental concept of the first stage of the faith-rest drill: the application of omniscience to the situation. You do not even have to tell Him.

Verse 33, “Consequently.” Look, now you are in trouble, now you are in a jamb. Now you have real problems and you are facing reality: it looks like you are going to starve to death, or go naked through the streets, or you are going to wind up living in a gutter or under a bridge somewhere. Now, where are you going to start? “seek first the kingdom [salvation through faith in Christ], and his integrity.” How do I seek it? With doctrine. Start with doctrine; “and all these things [logistical grace support] shall be provided for you.” Our meaning in life as believers must be related to Bible doctrine. We have no other purpose for being here except to grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and saviour, Jesus Christ. There is only one way we grow in grace and that is through the perception of Bible doctrine, so that is the place to start.

Verse 34, “Therefore, do not worry about tomorrow: for tomorrow will take care of itself.” How? Through logistical grace. If God lets me live until tomorrow He will provide for tomorrow. “Each day has enough evil of its own.” By evil He means things with which you have to contend through the faith-rest drill. So why are you trying to project faith-rest out there to tomorrow when you haven't even handled today? Once you get into the habit of worrying about today you will worry about tomorrow, and worry cuts you off at the pass.

So the issue of logistical grace is found at gate two in the faith-rest drill. The issue is that God keeps the reversionist alive under logistical grace just as much as He does the believer in the divine dynasphere. Through logistical grace God maintains a cadre of reversionistic types in order to function under the principle of people testing.

Basically, what are the provisions of logistical grace? The first is the perpetuation of human life in time. God sustains the life of the believer in spite of the opposition of Satan and his genius policy of evil. No believer can continue in life apart from logistical grace support for Satan has the power of death, according to Ephesians 2:14,15. But God delivers from death, Job 5:20; Psalm 33:19; 56:13. Death, then, is a matter of the sovereign decision of God, the plan of God based on prior knowledge of all the facts. And again the principle: When God decides to take you home nothing can keep you here; when God decides to keep you here nothing can take you home to heaven.

Secondly, there is the formation and the preservation of the canon; thirdly, there is the logistical support of the laws of divine establishment which provides both authority and freedom in correct balance in order that we might have the opportunity of making decisions that resolve the angelic conflict. For freedom is the heritage of birth plus the resulting imputation of life as the target or the home of the human soul. Freedom is the extension of the function of our soul: the volition, the mentality, the function of our conscience, even our emotions. Freedom exists therefore for the purpose of resolving the angelic conflict and freedom belongs to us, even options in time of disaster. Divine authorisation of the local church: God has provided certain local churches where doctrine may be learned. The provision of a right pastor is a part of logistical grace, and the provision of the royal priesthood of the believer for perception of Bible doctrine plus the ministry of God the Holy Spirit provided for every one of us. Logistical grace, therefore, has every category of provision we need to meet the historical crisis of the present time.

We are all in a war called the angelic conflict. All of us are going to face adversity and prosperity. These are antithetical tests but we are to pass them both. One is more subtle than the other. One is an obvious pressure situation and one is an abstruse pressure situation but we have to pass both tests to glorify the Lord. God has a plan for our lives. We are the products of our own decisions and it is also true that to fulfil the plan of God we must make decisions from a position of strength rather than a position of weakness. We must have, from our study of the plan of God, a personal sense of destiny and we must be in control of our lives. That means that we are going to be tested to see if we can pass and grow in grace or flunk and fail miserably. Interestingly, when we fail we simply make ourselves miserable from our failures. Our failure merely intensifies our unhappiness, our disorientation and our misery. So to fail is to guarantee misery as a Christian. As a believer you are going to have moments of great unhappiness as long your own volition is functioning in your own soul, and what often passes for divine discipline is really divine discipline at all, it is simply making a bad decision.

God has created man as an extension of the prehistoric angelic conflict and that is why, prior to the second advent, there are both angelic and human heralds. Right now we are studying the angelic heralds of the second advent and are dealing with the closing days of the Tribulation.

Verse 2, the King of Arms has a ministry on this earth which begins in the verse with the title deed of planet earth. He has come down as the herald of the Lord Jesus Christ to make an announcement that our Lord is going to take over the earth, that in effect He has purchased it on the cross and has allowed history to run its course but that He will come to supersede Satan at the second advent.

We begin verse 2 with the conjunction kai, which in this case is a translational conjunction and is correctly translated “and.” The present active participle ε)χ)ω follows, and the present tense is the aoristic present for punctiliar action in present time. The active voice: the King of Arms of the angelic college of heralds produces the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial, therefore translated like a finite verb, “And he had.”

Then we have the prepositional phrase, “in his hand,” followed by the accusative singular direct object from βιβλιον, which means a little book, a little scroll. It actually refers to the title deed of planet earth. With this we have the ascriptive use of the perfect passive participle of the verb α)νοιγω to tell us the condition of the book. It means it is open, “a little book open.”

Because of our Lord’s strategic victory at the cross He has the right to rule planet earth. The earth belongs to the Lord and will be claimed by Him at the second advent. The earth is a very small part of our Lord’s creative work. He owns the earth on the basis of the fact that He created it but He never makes that the basis for His claim. The basis for His claim is the first advent and His work on the cross. He is going to regain the rulership of the earth as the last Adam. Since the earth belongs to the Lord the unbelievers at the second advent are going to be removed under the baptism of fire. So the small book opened, or the title deed of planet earth, describes our Lord’s purchase of the human race at the cross. The book or the title deed is open for the plan of salvation is the basis for that purchase. As a matter of fact the book has been open since the fall of man and the cross is the purchasing price. So when our Lord Jesus Christ went to the cross He actually went for the entire human race. That is why the book is open. No personal sins were ever imputed to us for condemnation. Instead they were imputed to Christ on the cross and they were judged. In effect, that opens the book for the entire human race. The sins of every person who has ever lived — past, present and future — were imputed to Christ on the cross and judged. Therefore it is an open book, it means that any member of the human race can share in the eternal rule of Christ and the Millennial reign of Christ.

Then we have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated “then,” followed by the aorist active indicative of the verb τιθεμι, which means here to place, “then he placed.” We have the constative aorist tense which contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the King of Arms produces the action, and the indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the significance of putting his right foot on the sea and the left one on the land.

This gives us our translation: “And he had a small open book in his hand: and he placed his right foot on the sea, and his left foot on the land.”

What is the significance of this act? It is very much like explorers who, travelling about the world a few centuries ago, encountered some land that appeared to belong to no one and would claim it for their sovereign ruler. They usually had one foot on the land and one foot on the sea by which they approached the land when they would utter their words: “In the name of [their sovereign] I claim this land for ...” This is what the angelic herald was doing. He had his right foot in the sea and his left foot on the land. There are several reasons for this but the one that perhaps is most interesting as far as present application is the fact that a few decades ago the Russian communists discovered that the secret to strategically controlling land is to control the sea. There is much more sea than there is land and the key to controlling continents is to control the sea. When the Russians realised this they began to build their navy. Today the Russians have the most modern and the largest fleet in the world today (1982) and the reason is that they understand a point of strategy: You must control the sea to control a continent.

It is not surprising then that the right foot is in the sea. This means that strategic control of all continents. But then he put his left foot on land to indicate the control of every land mass in the world. When our Lord Jesus Christ comes back He will have complete control of planet earth, both the sea and the land masses. So we have the principle. He is holding an open book, the title deed, and this is the announcement that our Lord Jesus Christ is returning to take over the world at the proper point in history. This gesture confirms the fact that Christ will supersede Satan as the ruler of this world. The concept of the title deed is nowhere recorded — we will see why — but the meaning is obvious: Jesus Christ will set aside Satan as the ruler of this world. Jesus Christ has the right to supersede Satan through His work on the cross where He provided eternal salvation for all mankind. Satan took over the rulership of this world through man’s sin. Adam lost to Satan. But our Lord takes over the rulership of this world through being judged for man’s sin. The basis, of course, of Satan’s coup det tat in the Garden of Eden is set aside by our Lord’s saving work on the cross. Satan gained the rulership of the world through Adam’s sin but our Lord regained the rulership of the world through bearing all the sins of the human race on the cross. Christ is the winner in the angelic conflict.

Now the question arises in the application of this verse: Will you, as a believer and member of the royal family of God, be able to share in any way in that victory? That will be determined at the judgment seat of Christ but it has been determined by how we handle life right now. Inasmuch as believers of the Church Age are royal family of God those who meet and pass the eight momentum tests are going to rule segments of the earth. At the present time such believers are anonymous. The winners are anonymous and they appear to have no influence on history while they form the pivot that makes the difference between whether we survive or not as a client nation to God. But in the future the believers who are anonymous and not found in the history books are going to make history for 1000 years.

They are those believers who pass these tests and advance to maturity through their daily perception and application of Bible doctrine. They are going to rule for 1000 years.

Verse 3 begins with the aorist active indicative of the verb krazw which means here to shout. He shouted with a loud voice just as a lion roars. The aorist tense is a constative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety. The entirety includes the announcement of the King of Arms that Jesus Christ is the legitimate ruler of the world and that He actually purchased the world on the cross. The active voice: the King of Arms produces the action of the verb. Just like a herald of old he shouts his proclamation. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the declaration of the King of Arms as the herald of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The analogy "just as a lion roars," the present middle indicative of the verb nukaomia. When a lion roars it is a very chilling type of sound. The pictorial present picks that up with the middle voice. The lion produces the action of the verb, a sound which can be heard at great distance. Hence, the indirect middle emphasises the agent as producing the action of the verb. When a lion roars it always has a note of confidence; when the herald gives his announcement it has tremendous confidence. The declarative indicative mood is for the reality of the analogy. "Then he shouted with a loud voice, just as a lion roars."

The proclamation which follows is called the proclamation of the seven thunders. We have the connective conjunction kai plus the temporal adverb o(ti, translated "and when he had shouted." Then we have a subject, the seven thunders are now mentioned. The seven thunders are not actual thunders, they are angels, pur sui vant messengers who accompany the King of Arms and, in effect, they rebroadcast the proclamation of the herald throughout the world. The aorist active indicative is the relaying of their proclamation: the aorist active indicative of the verb lalew, which simply means here to relay the proclamation. The culminative aorist views the proclamation in its entirety but regards it from the standpoint of existing results: the entire universe knows of the coming of Christ and the proclamation made by the King of Arms. The active voice: the King of Arms produces the action by claiming rulership of the world for our Lord Jesus Christ. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the proclamation.

The accusative plural direct object of the noun fwnh is used for voice. It means sound as well as voice. With it we have the possessive genitive plural from the reflexive pronoun h(a)utou used as a reciprocal pronoun and "their own." "He [the King of Arms] shouted with a loud voice, just as a lion roars: and when he [the King of Arms] had shouted the seven thunders [pur sui vant messengers] relayed the message with their own voices."

The meaning of this has to be taken with the next verse as well where we have the censorship of what is said. Whatever the content of the proclamation John understood exactly what was being said when it was relayed by the seven thunders. The apostle assumed that the information should go into the Word of God and he was about to write it when he was interrupted. First of all the content of the proclamation was not to be recorded in the Word of God. Both here and in verse eight the voice from heaven is God the Holy Spirit acting as the censor, indicating what is to go into the Word of God and be recorded and what is not to be recorded. This fulfils the principle of the doctrine of inspiration.

Verse 4 — the temporal conjunction o(te starts this out with kai, “And when.” In other words, once this has taken place, once the King of Arms has made the proclamation and it has been relayed by the seven thunders then something strange happens that is unexpected. John is permitted to record what happened but he has to cut off the message.

“Now when the seven thunders [the pur sui vant messengers of the angelic college of heralds] relayed their proclamation.”

John then says: “I was about to write.” The imperfect active indicative means he was already taking notes, the imperfect active indicative of the verb mellw followed by the present active infinitive of graqw. The present tense of graqw means that he already had sketched out notes and he was now about to make it a part of the Word of God. He is about to write what he had heard, and that is the major issue — he concentrated on the message, he got the message. Here is an interesting place where John listens very carefully to the proclamation, first of all as the King of Arms gives it, and secondly as it is repeated by the seven thunders. And he understands it clearly because he concentrated, the aorist active indicative of a)kouw emphasises his concentration. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety.

When this herald put one foot on the land and one on the sea, and opened the book and made his proclamation, John listened very carefully. That is concentration. He not only had concentration but at the same time he was filled with the Spirit and he was already making notes, getting ready to make this a part of the canon of scripture, a part of the book of Revelation. Now, all of a sudden he gets a command to censor it. The important thing is the message and the message is censored. It is not only given, it is repeated. When something is repeated it is to be learned. Once it is learned it is to be applied. But here is a case of where he is learning the message, he knows it, and now he is told to scratch it; once you understand it, forget it. The aorist active imperative of the verb sraqizw, “seal it up [cancel it out, forget it].” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. This is a prohibition in the aorist tense, meaning a mandate against doing something which he has not yet begun to do, he has not yet entered it into the Word of God. The active voice: John, who is writing the book of Revelation, is commanded by God the Holy Spirit: “Do not write what the seven thunders said.” The imperative is the imperative of prohibition.

Next we have the nominative neuter plural from the relative pronoun o(j which in the neuter means “what things [content].” The command is the aorist active subjunctive [not the imperative] of grafw plus the negative mh, which is tantamount to a prohibition. It means you understand it, you can write it down very easily, but don’t write it, “do not begin to write.” The ingressive aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb at its beginning. The active voice: the apostle John is prohibited from entering this message into the Word of God. The subjunctive mood plus the negative mh is a subjunctive of very strong prohibition.

Translation: "Now when the seven thunders [pur sui vant messengers] relayed the proclamation, I [John] was about to write it down: but I heard a voice [God the Holy Spirit] from heaven saying, Seal up [close down] what the seven thunders have communicated, and do not write it down."

Why?

1. God is not responsible for any bad decisions made by any member of the human race. When we make bad decisions we make them, God doesn't make them.

2. The message of the seven thunders was a message of victory. It was a victory bulletin but this victory bulletin does not comply with the rules of human volition in the angelic conflict. The one thing which you and I possess as members of the human race which resolves the angelic conflict is human volition or free will, the ability to make decisions good or bad. This is one of those messages, a victory bulletin, which is incompatible with the rules of human volition. Apparently the content of the message was of such a nature that anyone upon hearing the message and understanding it exegetically in the Word of God would sit down and say, "Okay, that's it." And that would be the end of it. In other words, everyone would be sitting on their hands. The whole concept is that people would say, "I have no part in this victory, I am not a participant, I am a spectator." But you are really not, you are a gladiator. You are supposed to be on the playing field and the playing field is the divine dynasphere. The content of this announcement which will be made just before the second advent is of such a nature that to allow them to understand it as a part of eschatology would mean that you would no longer be participating in the angelic conflict. You would say in effect that the decisions are already made.

This message will be given in the future. The one danger of certain areas of eschatology is that people distort it into a system whereby they no longer live the Christian life.

3. Divine censorship acts so that man will not hear those things which would prejudice his thinking and destroy his objectivity. There is nothing in the Word of God to give you a prejudiced viewpoint of anything, and there is nothing in the Word of God to destroy your objectivity. Therefore, when you are prejudiced and when you lose your objectivity and it gives way to subjectivity you manage to do that on your own, totally apart from Bible doctrine.

4. In addition man must take the responsibility for his own decisions and through hearing the content of the victory bulletin man would shift the responsibility of his personal decisions to the sovereignty of God, and that is blasphemy.

5. Furthermore, the content of announcement of the seven thunders would violate the principle of 2 Corinthians 5:7, "We walk by faith and not by sight."

In verses 5-7 we have the modus operandi of the King of Arms. If he won't speak to us maybe he can show us something by his actions.

Verse 5, the spectacular gesture of the King of Arms. The subject is a)ggeloj, it refers again to the King of Arms, "Then the angel." We have the demonstrative pronoun o(j in the accusative, translated "whom," and then the aorist active indicative of o(raw. We are still talking about the King of Arms, John is still seeing him, "I saw." He can't report what he said but he is still watching him because the message from this paragraph comes from what the angel does rather than what he says, the reverse of what we usually have, "Then the angel whom I had seen." The constative aorist tense contemplates the action in its entirety. John produces the action as the human author of Revelation. The declarative indicative represents the action of the verb from the viewpoint of reality. And then what he had seen to identify him again, the perfect active indicative of i(stemi, he is still standing in an attitude of claiming planet earth for our Lord. The King of Arms as the angelic herald of the second advent is still in his posture, is still claiming planet earth for our Lord Jesus Christ at the point of the second advent.

Now he does something: the aorist active indicative of a)irw, he raised his hand. The accusative singular direct object of xeir for hand. It is his hand, not someone else's. One word is found in the Greek which is not found in the King James version, the word decioj for right. The King of Arms is right-handed. He raised his right hand, and then two more words forming a prepositional phrase: e)ij plus o)uranoj, "toward heaven."

Translation: "Then the angel whom I had seen standing on the sea and on the land raised his right hand toward heaven."

This is the motion of a salute. We are not going to get the message but we are going to get the action. He is directing a salute toward the one who is coming, the Lord Jesus Christ. Heaven is the direction of the salute because heaven is where our Lord Jesus Christ now resides on His glorified state of the hypostatic union. And the salute is directed toward heaven, toward our Lord Jesus Christ who won the victory. The content of the message we are not going to get but the salute we are going to understand. Our Lord has a right to rule the earth, He is about to supersede Satan as the ruler of the world, and He is saluted.

The salute has to be recognised. The Bible has to be interpreted in the time in which it was written. The raising of the right hand has to do with a military salute. The Romans had two salutes at this time. One was for when they were in the presence of the emperor or some high-ranking officer. They simply brought up their fist doubled and moved it across their armour. The other salute had to do with visors and came into prominence after this was written and thereafter for a thousand years. The Greeks started building helmets with visors and you would lift the visor in order to see. The raising of the visor was a sign of recognition. When the visor was down you were going into battle, you were going to fight; but when you raised that visor it meant it was a friend and you recognised him. And by raising the visor they eventually brought it up to a salute. That was the concept. The salute is the best way of greeting and has been for several thousand years. It became a form of greeting among knights and nobility, and the salute finally came to mean not just a friend or a recognition of rank but something more important. During the days of the baronage in medieval times it was a recognition of a system of integrity. The salute indicated the fact that the knight involved was a part of a system of integrity and that the system of integrity was greater than the individual knight, no matter how high his rank in the baronage happened to be. That, of course, is the connotation here: the recognition that our Lord regained the earth through a system of integrity. We are a part of that system today.

This salute recognises both the sovereignty of Jesus Christ as God and the third royal patent of the humanity of Christ gained by His work on the cross. While we are not privileged to understand the content of the announcement of the seven thunders we do understand the angelic herald looking toward heaven and saluting. He is recognising the uniqueness of the person of Christ: eternal God and true humanity in one person forever. The salute also recognises the right and the authority of our Lord Jesus Christ to rule the earth, a right He possesses now but will not take now because He wants to give the royal family a chance to function in the plan and to demonstrate to all fallen angels that we can make decisions for the Lord where they made decisions against. So the salute recognises that Satan has been conquered at the cross, and when our Lord returns to the earth [second advent] He will claim what already belongs to Him, the rulership of the world.

Again, in the human race, the salute was used by men of honour to recognise men of honour. In effect, this angelic category of royalty, the college of heralds, is expressing his royalty in the only way that is permitted for us to understand at this time, and it is a reminder that we as believers in Jesus Christ are members of the royal family of God, and today we have the opportunity of expressing our royalty. And in that expression of our royalty, residence and function in the divine dynasphere, we are fulfilling in this Church Age exactly what that angelic herald is fulfilling in a future dispensation.

Verse 6, This brings us to the proclamation of the king of Arms, what he is permitted to tell us. This is the only part of the message that we are allowed to hear. Since we are in time and this does not apply directly to us the reason it is given is to show us that the time will come when all of these things will take place. Prophecy deals with future things, there is no prophecy in the Church Age.

The authority of the King of Arms comes out in the first verb of this verse, the aorist active indicative of o)numi. The word means to swear, to affirm, to confirm by an oath, to make a proclamation by the power or in the authority of someone else. He made an oath, a solemn proclamation. He makes a proclamation in the authority of Jesus Christ, even though he is the highest-ranking angel in the college of heralds and had great authority of his own. There is a higher authority and that is the secret to this angel's greatness — humility. Even though he holds the highest authority in the world he recognises a higher authority. This is the difference between a great ruler and a dictator. A dictator recognises no higher authority. A great ruler possessing absolute authority in a kingdom recognises the higher authority of God and conducts himself accordingly. He becomes a great ruler.

Principle: No matter how high we go in life there is always a higher authority around, and it is not degrading for us to recognise that authority. It is necessary to keep order in life.

Humility is never upset by the fact that it encounters an authority higher than its own. Humility, therefore, is oriented to life whereas arrogance never is. All dictators are arrogant; all great rulers with equivalent authority are humble. The difference in any form of life between happiness and orientation to life, objectivity, and the subjectivity of misery is the ability to identify, recognise and function under an authority higher than your own.

The herald took a solemn oath, he produces the action of the verb. But it says he took a solemn oath or made a solemn proclamation "by Him who lives forever." He didn't do it on his own, he did this in the power of recognising the authority of someone else.

"And he [the King of Arms] made a solemn proclamation by him who lives forever and ever."

That is the secret, that is the basis for everything that is important. He did not take this stand on the basis of his own power, even though he had more authority than Satan himself, he was a seraph. He had the highest authority in the angelic college of heralds, his humility is what made the difference. And by whom does he make this solemn oath? By the one who "created both heaven, and the things in it." When it says "who created" this is the aorist active indicative of ktizw and refers to a much higher authority. This is the highest-ranking angel in the college of heralds but he recognises a higher authority.

Note: No matter how high you go in this life your life will only stay in perspective if you remember to stay within the bounds of authority.

The principle of authority orientation

Authority orientation is life orientation, it is honour and humility. The greater the authority over people the greater the responsibility to people. The more authority you have in life the greater is your responsibility.

1. This is the principle of the salute toward heaven from the King of Arms. The King of Arms is a seraph, he is the highest-ranking angel in the college of heralds; and even though he is higher in authority than millions and millions of elect angels the King of Arms recognises higher the authority in heaven, and he does so by means of a salute.

2. The principle: No matter how high we go in life or what rank and authority we attain there is always the higher authority which must be recognised to permit and perpetuate humility. Humility is orientation to life. Only arrogance rejects higher authority; only criminals reject all authority.

3. Humility not only orients to life but to authority. That is the basis for freedom and order in life. Freedom and order means civilisation.

4. The difference between a dictator and a great ruler is the fact that the great ruler recognises authority and the dictator does not.

5. No matter how high we go in life or what success we attain there is always some system of authority higher than we are, always some system of authority that controls us and, as a matter of fact, protects others from the evil use of our power. The fact that people have power is a potential for evil, not an evil in itself. Authority protects from the potential evil in the use of our power.

6. Only Satan does not recognise any authority beyond his own, and only Satan does not recognise divine authority and how it has been delegated through the laws of divine establishment, through the structure and order of life.

The highest-ranking herald in the college of heralds, having achieved this authority as the King of arms, demonstrates his tremendous integrity, his virtue, his honour by recognising a higher authority. The King of Arms is saluting heaven expresses, therefore, the honour, the integrity, the humility, the grace orientation which made him one of the great leaders in the prehistoric angelic conflict. It is important for all of us, therefore, to remember that no matter how much authority we achieve in life, or no matter how high we go in life, there is always a superior authority to be recognised and to restrain our power and add to our sense of responsibility. The higher we go in life the greater our responsibility to all. Achievement with integrity demands greater responsibility.

Verse 6, "He [the King of Arms] made a solemn proclamation by him who lives forever and ever." Then it goes on to say: "who created," and the word for created is the aorist active indicative of the verb ktizw. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety and it recognises that everything that we are or ever will be, everything that ever exists in our periphery and environment, everyone with whom we have contact, all of it together has been produced and created and made possible by the Lord Jesus Christ. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb as the creator. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of doctrine that our Lord Jesus Christ is both the creator and the sustainer of the universe. The baby in the cradle on the first Christmas day was at the same time sustaining the universe.

"who created the heaven, and the things in it, and the earth, and the things in it, and the sea, and the things in it." Speaking of our Lord Jesus Christ, John 1:3 says, "All things came into being through him, and apart from him nothing came into being that has come into being." Colossians 1:16,17, "For by him all things were created, in the heavens and on the earth, both the visible things and the invisible things, whether thrones or powers, or rulers, or systems of authority: all things were created by him, and for him: and he is before all things [above all human authority], and by him all things hold together." Hebrews 1:10, "In the beginning, O Lord, you laid the foundations of the earth; and the heavens are the work of your hands."

The authority of the King of Arms and the one he represents is our Lord Jesus Christ. And although the King of Arms has the highest possible authority his humility, his integrity, his honour, keeps him from ever being carried away by all of that authority. He is responsible to our Lord Jesus Christ. And, of course, as far as we are concerned, apart from His saving work on the cross our Lord had prior claim to rulership of the earth as creator, and the arrogance of Satan resulted in that revolt against God whereby angelic creatures in heaven followed Satan, a creature revolt against the creator. The revolt spread to the earth where human creatures joined angelic creatures in the Satanic revolution, the creatures against the creator, the infidel against the only way of eternal salvation.

We can never revolt against our Lord Jesus Christ and come out winners. Satan is a loser; all who follow Satan in the angelic realm are losers; all unbelievers are losers; and those believers in time who become involved in Satan's cosmic system are losers. One of the problems in the world and the reason we have so much trouble is because we have so many losers.

Now for the proclamation. We do not know what was in the title deed, that is forbidden and sealed up, but we know that a proclamation is now made. It begins with the conjunction o(ti, used for the content of the solemn proclamation. We translate it "that." Then we have the future active indicative of the verb e)imi, "that there shall be." The future tense is a deliberative future used to answer a question of uncertainty. It is an idiom. The question of uncertainty deals with the time of the second advent. The active voice: time is running out. Time produces the action of the verb in the idiom. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the fact that time is running out in the Tribulation.

Then we have a negative adverb o)uketi which is a part of the idiom, it means "no more." Then the subject comes last, xronoj, which means a period of time and here it refers to the Tribulation. Literally, the proclamation says that time shall be no more, but it is an idiom and it should be translated, "that there shall be no more delay."

Translation of verse 6: "And he [the King of Arms] made a solemn proclamation by him who lives forever and ever, who created both the heaven and all the things in it, and the earth and all the things in it, also the sea and the things in it, that time [the Tribulation] should no longer be delayed [time being the end of the Tribulation, the second advent]."

The Greek idiom means that there will no longer be delay before the return of Christ. This is actually a reference, then, to the termination of the Tribulation as a period of time, and it is terminated by the second advent. Hence, the King of Arms, is announcing that very shortly the Lord Jesus Christ is going to return to claim the rulership of the earth and to dispose of Satan and his angelic coup de tat. There is no more delay and that means that the seventh trumpet is about to occur. With the seventh trumpet and what comes out of it there will be the last horrible series of disasters and then the second advent. Actually this announcement by the King of Arms is related to the events of Revelation chapter nineteen. This proclamation, by the way, is amplified in Revelation 11:15-19. That means that chapters 11-18 are a detailed discussion of the events at the end of the Tribulation with their causes and results. This is the first announcement that time has run out for Satan and that his judgment is about to be executed in Revelation chapter nineteen.

Verse 7, the announcement of the termination of the Tribulation. When the whole clause is compared with part of it we are going to see something different. Whole clauses are often compared by the use of αλλα, so αλλα which is ordinarily an adversative conjunction also has other meanings. When you are comparing a clause with a clause, instead of translating it “but” it is translated “yet,” or “nevertheless”.

“Nevertheless in the days,” εη plus the locative plural of ημερα. It refers to the sounding of the seventh trumpet. The word which is translated “voice” in the King James version can be translated “voice” [φωνη] but that isn’t its basic meaning. Its basic meaning is sound, and that is the way we will translate it. Then we have a verb which is going to be the beginning of an incomplete indefinite temporal clause, a most unusual Greek construction. The reason for it is that there are so many chapters before chapter nineteen. John is just saying that he will get back to us on this subject of the second advent, but in the meantime ... That is the reason why we have what is called an incomplete indefinite temporal clause. The temporal clause is introduced by the temporal adverb οταν, translated “when.” When you have an indefinite temporal clause you often have the verb μελλω. Here we have it in the present active subjunctive. The subjunctive indicates that this is an indefinite clause, μελλω means to be about to be and the subjunctive mood gives us an indefinite time. Before we get to the second advent we have a number of things to discuss, says the writer, and while this Greek idiom is a little obscure for people who are accustomed to English this is perfectly normal Greek for saying, “Look, I’ll get back to you later on this second advent that the herald announces. In the meantime I want to tell you a lot of other things.” The present tense of μελλω is a tendencial present, it represents what will occur but has not yet occurred, everything is indefinite. The active voice: the seventh angel will sound his trumpet, but before he does we have some things to learn. The infinitive is the intended result infinitive which blends purpose and result, and it is translated, “when he is about to sound his trumpet.” The word for sounding the trumpet is σαλπίζω. So μελλω in the present active subjunctive plus the present active infinitive of σαλπίζω is what we have.

Translation: “Yet in the days when the seventh angel is about to sound his trumpet.”

This is a reference to the last days of the Tribulation before the second advent and the overthrow of Satan as the ruler of this world. Note that μελλω does not mean to begin, as in the King James version, it means to be about to be.

With this we have the connective conjunction και and the nominative singular subject of a new phrase. The subject is μυστήριον which refers to doctrine known only those who have joined the fraternity. The major mystery doctrine in the Word of God is the doctrine of the Church, but that is not the mystery we have here. For those who know their eschatology this is understandable; for those who do not, those who are not believers, they cannot discern historical trends without understanding the prophecies of the Tribulation. In other words, this is what μυστήριον means. In the Church Age there is no prophecy. That means that we learn historical trends through Bible doctrine apart from eschatology. Prior to the Church Age all historical trends were determined by prophecy. Once the Rapture of the Church occurs [the next prophecy] then in the Tribulation every historical trend is determined by prophecy; in the Tribulation you have to know prophecy. The second advent is prophesied, the Millennium is prophesied, we are studying the prophetic details of the Tribulation. Understanding these prophetic details means understanding historical trends. If you don't know your prophecy of the Tribulation, for those who will be living; we won't be there, then what is going to happen next is a mystery, you don't know it. Only those who know their doctrine will understand what is going to happen day by day in the last half of the Tribulation. That is the use of mystery here, so that it should be translated: "But in the days when the seventh angel is about to sound his trumpet, and the mystery of God," "of God" is the possessive genitive of qeoj, "has been accomplished." The "mystery of God," then, is that body of eschatology relating to the second advent and the Millennium, and what will happen prior to the second advent.

The mystery has been expressed in Revelation through the concept of Christ being Alpha and Omega, and this is the mystery to the unbelievers of the Tribulation, and that includes Jewish unbelievers. The Jewish unbelievers are going to be very confused, they are going to face the greatest holocaust of all time and their confusion will come from the fact that they do not understand eschatology, that they have never been able to distinguish between the first and the second advents. They have never yet been able to understand their own ritual uttered every Sabbath day in the synagogue, "Shamah Yisrael [Hear O Israel], Adonai Elohenu [The Lord is our God; Jesus Christ is the God of Israel], Edonai echad [Jesus Christ is unique]." They have never been able to distinguish between the first and second advents of the God of Israel. Unique means that Jesus Christ is God and true humanity, Jewish humanity, the son of David in one person forever, the hypostatic union. That is why it is called a mystery; unbelieving Jews have never understood it.

Next we have the aorist passive indicative of the verb telew. It means to be completed, to be finished, to be accomplished, "the mystery of God has been accomplished." The accomplishment of the mystery of God is going to be the regathering of Israel, the restoration of Israel as a client nation, and for believers in Israel to recognise Adonai echad. The culminative aorist views the second advent in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of the Millennial reign of Christ. The passive voice: the mystery doctrine of the second advent, as distinguished from the first advent — Jesus Christ is Alpha and Omega — receives the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the mystery doctrine being completed. Eventually, even the unbeliever of Israel will understand when Jesus Christ returns the second time as Messiah. Messiah comes twice, not once. And they were even given a very clear sign that He would come twice: He would come by a birth, but not just an ordinary birth, a virgin birth, as per Isaiah 7:14. The sign that was given to Israel was the most obvious of all. So this verse doesn't say that the mystery is accomplished, it means it will be accomplished, eventually with the sounding of the seventh trumpet. This is an indefinite temporal clause and it relates to a contingency carrying a conditional element. Before the mystery doctrine can be cleared up for Israel the second advent will take place, but this is an indefinite temporal clause, the second advent is indefinite at this point. This indefinite temporal clause anticipates the third attack of Satan's elite guard under the seventh trumpet, the greatest function of anti-Semitism in the history of the world. So the clause is not completed at this time.

The key is the conjunction kai, "and." It is generally mistranslated "then" or not translated at all, as in the King James version. But here is an incomplete temporal clause which can only be completed by chapters 11 through 18. What occurs to complete the indefinite temporal clause is found in the rest of the book. Actually it is found in the book which the apostle John will eat very shortly, but all of the information we need to understand the mystery will be forthcoming in chapters 11-18.

Next we have a comparative particle o(j, translated "just as." It is translated to bring out an analogy, "just as he" referring here to God the Holy Spirit, and the aorist active indicative of the verb e)uaggelizw which means to announce good news, "just as he announced the good news." The constative aorist refers to an action extended over a period of time in which the Old Testament was formed. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: God announces the good news of the second advent and the Millennial reign of Christ to the prophets. God also announced the first advent of Christ. So both advents were announced. The good news has to begin with the first advent, not the second advent. The second advent is not good news to the Jew who does not accept Christ. What makes the second advent good news is the fact that there was the first advent and the good news of the saving work of Christ on the cross. When He was judged on the cross He was judged for the sins of the entire world. The direct object in the accusative plural is composed of five words, like the generic use of the definite article, used twice; the reflexive pronoun h(a)utou, translated "his own." It is in the possessive genitive singular. Then we have the accusative plural douloj which means slaves or servants, "his own servants." Next is an accusative plural in apposition from the noun profhthj, "prophets." This is a reference to the Old Testament prophecies regarding both advents. For example, we have Isaiah's reference to the first advent in chapter 53; the prophecy of the second advent in Zechariah chapter 12; Isaiah 63:1-6. So we have these prophecies clearly presented so that the Jews would understand the last phrase of Deuteronomy 6:4.

Verse 7, "But in the days when the seventh angel is about to sound his trumpet, and the mystery of God has been accomplished, just as he [God the Holy Spirit] proclaimed the good news to his own servants the prophets."

Verse 8, once he recognized authority from heaven John is given another command. This command is given by God the Holy Spirit. "And the voice which I heard from heaven communicated with me again." Then we pick up the story with the connective kai and the present active participle, legw, "and said." This is what was communicated now. Legw introduces a second command. The command is given to John, he has been censored, he can't write what the proclamation of the seven thunders was, and now he is going to get a second command. He has learned from the highest-ranking angel in the college of heralds the importance of authority and he is about to be tested with regard to authority.

Then we have the command, the present active imperative of the verb u(pagw. First of all his volition is going to be tested, he is given a command; u(pagw means to go. The verb connotes going in a certain direction, going in a specific direction. This is addressed to John. Note the structure of the passage. First we have the King of Arms, the highest-ranking angel is the college of heralds. Under him is a category of heralds called the officers of arms. Under them the heralds, and under them the pur sui vant officers and finally the pur sui vant messengers. Now we have the highest-ranking person alive among human beings at this time, the last of the apostles. This is John, the highest-ranking Christian left at the time of the writing of Revelation, and just like the high-ranking angel he has to recognise a higher authority than himself. And that is exactly what he does. He is tested. The present tense is a pictorial present, it presents in the mind a picture of John being commanded, being tested, with regard to his volition.

Life is a series of volitional tests. Every day you make volitional tests. You have in your soul volition and every day you make decisions from that volition. Those decisions fall into two categories: good decisions and bad decisions. Good decisions are decisions you make as a believer from a position of strength, and the position of strength is the logistical grace provision that provides doctrine; when you make decisions on the basis of doctrine, on the basis of truth, the laws of divine establishment. Bad decisions are made from a position of weakness and they fall into two categories: decisions to go into the cosmic system and decisions made from the cosmic system. So every day our volition is tested and we are making either good or bad decisions. If you are making good decisions from a position of strength you have control of your life. Control means your happiness, your virtue, your honour, your blessing, everything that makes life wonderful. You don't even have to have good circumstances but you do have control of your life. If you make decisions from a position of weakness you lose control of your life and you become a loser. The one who has control of his life through the good decisions from a position of strength, decisions made to re-enter the divine dynasphere or decisions to function in the divine dynasphere are good decisions. If you are making good decisions daily from a position of strength you not only have control of your life but you have a personal sense of destiny, you understand God's plan for your life and you relate to it constantly. But if you are believer making bad decisions from a position of weakness you not only lose control of your life but you have no sense of destiny at all and therefore you can be knocked over with any feather of adversity.

(Sometimes the most insignificant things are significant tests and they indicate whether you really have virtue or integrity)

So the verb means to go in a certain direction. The active voice: the apostle John, the highest-ranking Christian is given the command. The imperative mood: this is a direct command of the higher authority just recognised by the King of Arms.

“and said, Go,” go in this direction only. There is a second command, the aorist active imperative of the verb lambanw which means to take or to seize. In this case it means to take. He is going to have to go to his counterpart and he is going to have to take something from him. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. Instant action. The active voice: John is commanded to produce the action, and it is that same imperative of command. You go in a certain direction, the direction of the king of Arms, that high-ranking angel. And what is he to take? The accusative singular direct object of biblion, “book.” It refers to the title deed of planet earth; “which has been opened,” the articular perfect passive participle of the verb a)noigw. The book has already been opened. It has been opened since the cross actually. Our Lord has a right to rule the earth and He will at the second advent. In the meantime the angelic conflict pursues its course according to plan. The definite article in the participle is used as a relative pronoun, it refers to the title deed. The dramatic perfect tense represents the existing state of the book, it has been opened in a dramatic way, it was opened at the cross where our Lord provided eternal salvation, where He was judged for our sins, where He took our place. And the fact that it is mentioned as a dramatic perfect is just another reminder that the believer’s point of contact with God is the justice of God. The justice of God the Father set aside His own personal love for the Son. Love was superseded by justice and the justice of God the Father imputed the sins of the world to Christ on the cross and then He judged them so that when we believe in Christ [the point of salvation] that same justice imputes the other half of divine holiness to us — divine righteousness, the grace pipeline. Our point of contact is always the justice of God, not the love of God and not the sovereignty of God. And so when the dramatic perfect represents the existing state of the book it is going back to the cross where the book was opened. The book was closed at the garden because man lost control of the earth to Satan; it was opened at the cross. It is open because the King of Arms has read from it the proclamation that Christ is going to return to supersede Satan as the ruler of this world. The passive voice: the title deed receives the action — open. The participle is circumstantial.

“Go, take the small book which has been opened.” In this particular context of the book of Revelation we have now seen two books. We are also going to see at the last judgment the book of works by which unbelievers are judged. We are going to see the Lamb’s book of life. But in Revelation chapters 5 and 10 we have two books. We have studied now, in part at least, the second book and we have studied the first.

In Revelation chapter five we have the book with seven seals; in Revelation chapter ten we have the title deed of planet earth showing our Lord’s rightful claim: He has a clear title to planet earth because of His work on the cross. In chapter five the book with seven seals is a book of Tribulational judgements but in chapter ten the book of our Lord’s right to rule the earth is the subject. In chapter five the book is in the hand of Christ but in chapter ten the book is in the hand of the King of Arms, the highest-ranking angel in the college of heralds. In chapter five we noted that the book was closed but in chapter ten we have an open book. In chapter five the book is gradually opened, the seals were broken by our Lord Jesus Christ, but in chapter ten the apostle is about to eat the book.

The prepositional phrase which follows is e)n plus the locative of xeir which means hand. It is literally translated “in the hand.” Then we have a possessive genitive a)ggeloy, “of the angel.” It should be translated with the verb “from the hand of the angel.” Lambanw plus the prepositional phrase means “from” rather than the usual “in” the hand of the angel.

Then we have the articular perfect active participle from the verb i(stemi which means to stand, “who has been standing.” The King of Arms is standing there under orders waiting to have the book taken from his hand. The active voice: the King of Arms produces the action. The participle is circumstantial.

Translation: "Then the voice which I heard from heaven [God the Holy Spirit] spoke with me again, and said, Take the little book [containing the title deed of planet earth] which has been opened from the hand of the angel who has been standing on the sea and on the land."

Principle

Having recognised higher authority by his salute the angel now has been standing fast under orders. And the principle of the salute: No matter how great one's achievement, no matter how extensive one's power, there is always a higher authority to be recognised. The greater the authority in life the greater the integrity which must accompany it. For authority and power to be used properly there must be honour and integrity, and integrity must keep pace with achievement otherwise achievement and success is destroyed by arrogance. When the King of Arms saluted heaven it was an expression of humility and it was also the acknowledgement that he was to stand fast until John came to him and took the book.

Out of this comes the principle that greatness cannot be measured in terms of achievement unless that achievement is associated with humility, objectivity, honour, integrity, and virtue. Only virtue can assume great authority without abusing the power thereof.

Now it is John's turn to salute higher authority. John as the apostle possess the highest spiritual authority, he is top Christian at this time in history. There is no higher authority than John possesses as an apostle. To exercise his authority the apostle John must also possess objectivity, humility, honour, integrity and virtue. This will be demonstrated. It will be demonstrated by eating a book.

Verse 9, the apostle who is writing a book stops long enough to eat a book. We need to note Jeremiah chapter 15:15, the middle of the verse, for a precedent: "Know that I bear reproach for your sake." Jeremiah was bearing a twofold reproach for Israel. He had top authority among the prophets and in this authority he was using that responsibility and taking responsibility for the people. He was bearing the reproach from friends. The people looked down their nose at prophets. He also was bearing reproach from his right woman and his congregation. So he was carrying a load, but he wasn't crying about it and that comes out in verse 16. So he turns now to God and he says, "I recognise your authority above all else": "Your words [doctrines] were found [he studied] and I ate them". When someone eats a book it always illustrates one of two things: in the normal realm that the person is psycho; but in the spiritual realm it represents perception of Bible doctrine.

"Your doctrines were found [the first stage of the doctrine of GAP, reception, gnwsij in the left lobe, giving it a hearing whether you accept it or not]." Now in the eating of the Word remember that eating is always a non-meritorious function. The whole system for assimilating food belongs to the good, the bad, and the ugly, and this illustrates grace. Jeremiah ate a book and this illustrates the retention of Bible doctrine. Hearing is the beginning, it is a stage, it is not the end. If it is understood it is comprehensive reception. It is the attitude toward it that counts. Are you going to eat it or are you going to push your plate away and ignore it? Gnwsij does not contribute to spiritual growth, the only spiritual growth is where gnwsij becomes e)pignwsij. E)pignwsij is retention. In retention gnwsij is converted to e)pignwsij, and it is e)pignwsij that causes spiritual growth.

What is the difference between gnwsij and e)pignwsij? When you understand and take the attitude, "I understand what you are teaching but I don't believe it," it remains gnwsij; or, "I understand what you are teaching and I believe it," then it becomes e)pignwsij. When you say, "I understand what you are teaching and I believe it," that's like eating. It is analogous to eating. You eat it, you retain it, it becomes a part of you. The food that you eat becomes a part of the energy of your body, of the structure of your body, and so on. That's eating. For the person who says, "I don't believe it, I understand what you are teaching but I don't believe that," it remains gnwsij, it has no spiritual value therefore.

Verse 16, "Your words [doctrines] were found [reception] and I ate them [retention], therefore your doctrines became for me happiness [happiness comes from retention, not from reception]." Happiness is also the recall of doctrine, the third stage. Recall is the application of doctrine [e)pignwsij] to experience. From retention or e)pignwsij we have normal growth; from recall we have accelerated growth. All spiritual growth is based upon the second and the third stages in the doctrine of GAP, "and the delight of my right lobe."

In Ezekiel chapter 2, beginning at verse 8, Ezekiel had to eat a book. So the eating of the book is not without precedent. Here again eating is analogous to the perception of doctrine, and in Ezekiel's case, for the purpose of teaching it. The Lord said to Ezekiel: "Now you, son of man, listen to what I have communicated to you; do not be rebellious like that rebellious house [client nation Israel of verse 3]. Open your mouth and eat what I am giving you. Then I looked, and behold, a hand was extended to me; and lo, a book was in it. When he spread it out before me, it was written in the front and on the back ..."

Chapter 3:1, "Then he said to me, 'Son of man, eat what you find; eat this book, and go, speak to the house of Israel.' So I opened my mouth, and he fed me this book. And he said to me, 'Son of man, feed your stomach, and fill your inner parts with this book which I am giving you.' Then I ate it, and it was as sweet as honey in my mouth. Then he said to me, 'Son of man, go to the house of Israel and speak to them with my doctrine'."

So there is precedent for eating a book. We anticipate, therefore, the eating of this book in Revelation chapter ten, verse nine. "Then I went to the angel." John obeyed the first command of God the Holy Spirit which was communicated to him, and it is given here. First of all the sequential kai, "Then," and the aorist active indicative of a)perxomai is the obedience of the first part of the command, "he went." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The command was to go. The active voice: the apostle John produces the action of the verb in obedience to the first mandate from God the Holy Spirit. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. And proj plus the accusative of a)ggeloi means “fact to face” with the angel.

The next phrase is the present active participle of legw. Legw is sometimes used for asking a question, especially if the context indicates that. Legw means to say, to speak, to communicate, to talk, and so on. “I went to the angel saying” is the way it is generally translated, but we are going to translate it, “Then I went to the angel and asked him,” the aoristic present for punctiliar action in present time. The active voice: John, again, produces the action of the verb in obedience to the first mandate from the Holy Spirit, a circumstantial participle translated like a finite verb, preceded by the conjunction “and,” “and asked him,” not “and said.”

With this we have the dative singular, indirect object, from the intensive pronoun a)utoj which is used as the personal pronoun, third person in the Koine Greek since the Attic third person was never brought over, “and asked him.” The dative of respect is involved here. He had respect for the authority of the King of Arms.

“Then he replied to me and said, Take it, and eat it”. Again we have the same connotation. Taking it is a matter of reception, receptive comprehension, perception of doctrine, the point of hearing, analogous to putting the book in the mouth.

The prediction of the King of Arms accompanies this. The King of Arms is allowed some leeway, he is permitted to make a statement, “and so it will make your stomach bitter.” He starts with the stomach and the reason for this is because the bitterness in the stomach is the eschatology of Satanic desperation, the eschatology of Satan’s modus operandi from the time he was thrown out of heaven in the middle of the Tribulation to the second advent. The last half of the Tribulation is the time of Satan’s desperation. The time is short and he knows that he is going to lose.

We have a future active indicative of the verb pikrainw. The word means to make bitter. The accusative singular direct object koilia is translated “stomach,” “it will make your stomach bitter.” The future tense is a predictive future, it anticipates the closing events of the Tribulation beginning with the sounding of the seventh trumpet which throws Satan out of heaven. The active voice: the content of the little book will be the closing events of the Tribulation: how our Lord claims the earth. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of terrible events which terminate with the second advent. This is classified as the eschatology of Satan’s desperation for bitterness begins when Satan is cast out of heaven. We have yet to feel the power of Satan’s desperation. The reason is because at the present time Satan spends most of his time in heaven. Even though he is the ruler of the earth he is in heaven constantly, he has access to heaven as do fallen angels. But the time of his desperation is when the door of heaven is closed and he is confined to the earth. Satan is extremely bitter. He has brought upon himself by a series of terrible decisions the whole thing. But typical of so many creatures who through bad decisions have brought upon themselves a desperate situation he becomes bitter and blames it all on someone else. Satan becomes bitter, he blames it on the Jew and we have the greatest holocaust of all time. The bitter period of that time, just after Satan is expelled from heaven, far exceeds any other. It will be the time of Satan's implacability and he has the power for the greatest implacability of any creature.

We have the adversative conjunction which follows, it is translated "but," αλλα in the Greek. The adversative conjunction sets up a contrast with the preceding clause. Then we have the future active indicative of the verb ε)μι, the verb to be, "but it will be." This is the future tense, "in your mouth." We have ε)ν plus the locative of stoma. He takes the mouth last and he reverses the order of eating because he is dealing with results, "in your mouth it will be." The predictive future anticipates the second advent of Jesus Christ, the removal of Satan from the earth. Jesus Christ takes command of the earth and at that time He will regather Israel, restore Israel, and fulfil the four unconditional covenants to Israel: the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic and New covenants. The sweetness comes from the deliverance of the true Israel, those Jews who believe in Christ in the Tribulation. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of wonderful events: the eschatology of blessing which follows the eschatology of Satan's desperation, the second advent, the incarceration of Satan, the restoration of Israel as a client nation, the coronation, the wedding supper of the Lamb, the perfect environment of the Millennium. This will be classified, then, as the eschatology of sweetness, the eschatology of our Lord's tactical victory of the second advent, the inevitable triumph of our Lord. The word "sweet" is glukuj in the Greek.

Then we have the analogy, ο)ς, and then the word meli for honey, "sweet as honey." The contrast, then, between bitterness in the stomach and the sweetness in the mouth is the difference between the eschatology of Satan's desperation, the last half of the Tribulation, and the eschatology of our Lord's inevitable tactical victory at the second advent. The sweetness like honey, then, is the victory gained by our Lord at the second advent.

To continue the historical trends of the future John must master the contents of the little book. Future history of mankind cannot be understood apart from eschatological doctrine from the Word of God. Therefore by his obedience to a higher authority John will finish the book of Revelation. If he had not eaten it this is as far as he would have gone in Revelation, but his obedience to higher authority, even though John is the super achiever of the first century, means that you and I have the book of Revelation.

The Jews were in Egypt for about 400 years, from the time of Joseph to the time of Moses. For four generations they were slaves to the Egyptian empire. As slaves they lost many of the concepts that are so important that go with freedom and the only possible way that they could understand that freedom demands authority was to learn it in the home. And because of the oppression of the Egyptians only a few homes actually taught respect for authority. We know from the parents of Joshua and the parents of Moses that authority was taught in those homes. But Moses had to leave his home where only Aaron and his sister remained and become almost the ruler of the Egyptian empire in order to understand the issue which is found in Revelation chapter ten, the issue of authority: that no matter how high we go and how much we achieve under freedom there is always some system of authority that we must recognise. This is a very healthy thing and a wonderful thing.

When the Jews were finally freed from slavery they immediately had some very serious problems. This became obvious for as soon as they cleared Egypt and were on the peninsula of Sinai, Moses went up Mount Sinai and received the laws of divine establishment so that the Jews would understand the true meaning of their freedom. The Jews were now free, and when people have been enslaved or oppressed in any way they are inclined to distort the meaning of freedom when they have the opportunity. The Jews did exactly that. Now that they were free they were going to do what they wanted to; they had to pay attention to no authority. The Jews who came out of slavery never had military training which often acts as a stopgap measure to train people in the importance of authority in life, and how you cannot have freedom without authority nor authority without freedom. They must go together, for freedom without authority is anarchy and authority without freedom is tyranny. The two must balance out. Therefore, Moses went up Mount Sinai to get the first instalment of the laws of divine establishment and the true meaning of freedom. In fact, that is what the ten commandments actually teach: the relationship between freedom and authority in life.

When Moses came back he found immediately that he had no “congregation.” The ex-slaves who were now free were using their freedom as a licence and they moved into idolatry, no restraint to hinder them, and into the licentious functions of the phallic cult. He immediately smashed the first tablets and had to go back up the mountain and get another set.

For one generation most of the Jews were failures though they had the truth and were now the first client nation in history. The reason they failed is that they could never appreciate and understand that for freedom to exist for everyone they must have restraints, and that no matter what you achieve in life there is always a system of authority that you must recognise. This they failed to do. Their first military attempts were pitiful and only God saved them from military disaster, for without that military victory or two in the wilderness they would have lost their freedom.

It is one thing to be manumitted from some form of slavery but it is something else to think like a free person. This is almost impossible unless people are willing to accept some form of authority — authority in government, authority in life, authority in business, authority in academics, authority in the military, authority in the home [above all, the home], authority everywhere. We are always surrounded by authority. Obviously slavery is an abuse of authority; slavery means no freedom and all authority; and so people react to slavery, as the Jews did and lost out for one generation. They were not even capable of entering the land and for forty years they wandered because they could not enter the land until they could do so to conquer it. It was God’s plan for them to use the military but they were not capable of doing so. They had no authority orientation and so one generation had to die off in the wilderness over a period of forty years because they could not learn that freedom and authority are wedded and can never be divorced without the most horrible consequences.

The apostle’s obedience to the second mandate is presented in verse ten. The aorist active indicative of the verb lambanw is the first word we encounter. It means obedience, a recognition of authority. He was ordered to take the book and he took it. The book is described by the accusative singular direct object from the noun biblaridion which means a little book, a scroll, a title deed. And he took it from the hand of the angel. So the first part of the apostle's obedience is fulfilled.

Now the real issue: Is he going to do all of it? When authority gives a clear command, will it be obeyed en toto or will it be simply going through the motions? At this point John faces a problem. In his own hand now is a scroll but there is no way that it is going to be made palatable to John. He can take the book and discard it but he fulfils exactly what was meant by the authority. So we have the aorist active indicative of the verb katesqiw. He not only ate it, he swallowed it. We simply translate it, "and I ate it." The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, which means he chewed and chewed and then swallowed the book. So he did exactly what he was told. Here is the humility of the top Christian in the first century at this time. Orientation to authority is absolutely necessary for greatness and there is no greatness in achievement apart from that humility, that integrity, that honour that recognises authority. The active voice: the apostle John produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for John's assimilation of the eschatology of the book, the eschatology of Satan's desperation plus the Lord's tactical victory of the second advent. With this is the accusative singular of the intensive pronoun a)utoj, used as a personal pronoun and here it is translated "it," referring to the little book or the scroll.

Now we have the inevitable triumph of Christ recorded in the reaction. And then he adds, "Furthermore, it was." The word kai is a sequential kai adding something to what has been given in the previous clause and the best way to translate it is "furthermore." With this we have the imperfect active indicative of e)imi, it was just as he said, "it was in my mouth sweet." Again we have that predicate nominative neuter singular from glukuj, "sweet," "sweet as honey in my mouth." This is the eschatology of our Lord's tactical victory of the second advent. It includes our Lord's triumph over Satan at the second advent plus the baptism of fire [which was not as sweet as honey but involves blessing for those who avoid it], the blessing for the Church Age believer who returns with Christ, the tremendous coronation, the rulership of our Lord, the appointment of nations to believers who have achieved the highest spiritual activity in life, gate eight of the divine dynasphere; and so the whole thing is a wonderful triumph at the second advent. It was as sweet as honey also to the elect angels involved in the incarceration of Satan, it was a sweet as honey to the entire cadre of born-again believers who form the basis for the Millennial population.

But there is also with this the eschatology of Satan's desperation, brought out in the next phrase, "but," the use of kai to set up a contrast. We translate it correctly "but," just like the adversative conjunction because we have with it a temporal conjunction o(te, "but when," "but when I had eaten," and the aorist active indicative of the verb now is different from the one we have just had. This is e)sqiw, he has now eaten it. No longer is he chewing and swallowing; that's over. The culminative aorist tense views the assimilation of the eschatology of the little book which is the last half, by the way, of the book of Revelation. The eating of it is the sign that he had dedicated himself to learn that eschatology and write it down so that we would understand the historical trends right up to the end of the world.

The result is the cognisance of Satan's desperation. Satan is going to be cast out of heaven in the middle of the Tribulation. He is going to be confined to planet earth and that is the time of his desperation and, therefore, the time of his greatest function of evil. The active voice: John masters the eschatology to the end of the Tribulation which begins with the sounding of the seventh trumpet. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of John's cognisance of the eschatology of the rest of the book of Revelation.

"Then I took the little book from the hand of the angel, and I ate it; and it was as sweet as honey in my mouth: but when I had eaten it, it was bitter in my stomach."

The aorist passive indicative of pikrainw means bitter, but when used with the Greek word for stomach (koilia) it also means to be sour. Probably we could translate that, "but my stomach was made sour." This is the eschatology of Satan's desperation in the Tribulation.

And then the mandate to continue the book of Revelation comes out of this obedience. No one was ever entrusted with the details of what happens in history down to the end of the world, and how the world will be destroyed at the end of history, and how a new heavens and a new earth will be created, except John. And he has just passed his test to give him an opportunity that not even the apostle Paul was ever given, though Paul alluded to parts of these things and so did Peter. Only John was given this highest of all honours.

Verse 11, we have first of all the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated "then." Then we have the present active indicative of the verb legw, which means here to communicate or to say. Legw is in the third person plural suffix, so for once we have to note that it says literally, not "then he said unto me," but "then they said unto me." That is what the Greek says. So first we must discover: Who are "they"? The plural suffix translated "they" refers to God the Holy Spirit as the voice from heaven in verses four and eight, plus the King of Arms who is holding the little book. Both had higher authority than John. The present tense is a historical present, it denotes past events with the vividness of a present occurrence. The active voice: God the Holy Spirit as the voice from heaven and the King of Arms as the ruler of the angelic college of heralds produce the action. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality.

"Then they [God the Holy Spirit and the King of Arms] said." And then we have the dative singular indirect object from e)gw, "to me." The indirect object means that whoever is involved is benefited by the action of the verb. John is benefited. This is also dative of advantage, it was to John's advantage to spend his life slowly developing and achieving spiritually but never allowing his achievement to lead him to arrogance. From the plural suffix it is assumed that the mandate for John to continue Revelation originated from God the Holy Spirit who relayed the message to the King of Arms who in turn gave the mandate to the apostle John. Note that the mandate goes through channels. The eschatological material for the rest of the book of Revelation came from the little book which John has digested.

Basically there are three major subjects in the rest of the book of Revelation. The first is the eschatology of Satan's desperation, chapters twelve through eighteen. Secondly, the inevitable triumph of Christ or the tactical victory of the angelic conflict, chapters nineteen and twenty. Thirdly, the termination of human history as the extension of the angelic conflict, chapters twenty-one and twenty-two.

The King of Arms who stood with one foot on the sea and one foot on the land and held the little book in his hand is the angelic herald of the second advent. And just as the King of Arms is the herald of the first advent so the King of Arms is the angelic herald of the second advent. At both advents we have both human and angelic heralds. The human herald of the first advent was John the Baptist; the human heralds of the second advent are Moses and Elijah.

Luke 2:8-15, (At the first advent the King of Arms was accompanied by an army of elect angels who passed in review and gave glory to God, but at the second advent the King of Arms has a little book and seven pur sui vant messengers) “And in the same region there were shepherds living outside in the fields, guarding their flocks at night. And the angel of the Lord [the King of Arms] stood before them and the glory of the Lord shined around them; and they were extremely frightened. And the angel said to them, ‘Stop being frightened; for behold, I bring you good news producing great happiness which shall be for all people; because today in the city of David there has been born for you a saviour, who is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a sign for you: you will find a baby wrapped in strips of burial cloth [this baby was born to go to the cross to bear our sins and take our place], and he will be lying in a feeding trough.’ And suddenly there appeared with the angel [the King of Arms] a large number of soldiers from heaven praising God, and saying, ‘Glory to God in the highest place [the highest place in heaven], and on earth peace on those men whom he favours.’ And it came to pass when the angels had passed in review from them into heaven, the shepherds said to each other, ‘Let us go to Bethlehem then, and see this doctrine which has occurred [the perfect active participle of ginomai] which the Lord has made known to us.’

The content of the mandate in Revelation 10:11, the impersonal verb dei denotes compulsion of duty, therefore it is translated “must.” The accusative singular personal pronoun su is used with it, “you must.” The accusative of su means it is the accusative of general reference, it is the subject of the infinitive. However, it is easier to say that su is the subject even though it is in the accusative. Then we have the aorist active infinitive of the verb profhteuw, “you must prophesy.” The constative aorist tense refers to the action of writing the rest of the book of Revelation as a fact extended over a period of time. Regardless of how long it takes John it gathers it up now into a single whole. The active voice: John as the human author of Revelation produces the action, and this is the infinitive of intended result. Then the result is indicated as fulfilling a deliberate objective, hence the blending of purpose and result. You must purpose to write the rest of this with the result that the canon of scripture will be completed. We will translate it simply: “You must prophesy again.” The word “again” is the adverb palin.

Then we have the preposition e)pi plus the dative plural of reference. Hence it is translated, “concerning” or “about.” And then we have four categories, the objects of the preposition, all in the dative plural. The first object: laoj refers to people but here it is referring to crowds of people. Therefore we translated it: “you must prophesy again about many people,” the masses. Masses of people are going to search through the book of Revelation. The second category is the dative plural from e)qnoj, “nations.” So we are going to see many nations in the rest of the book of Revelation. The third category is the dative of glossa, which is languages. It refers to languages spoken throughout the world in the closing days of the Tribulation. Finally, we have the dative plural of basileuj, “kings.” We are going to see great dictators, kings and rulers. With this we have an adjective which is attached to these nouns in the dative plural, the adjective poluj, translated “many.”

“You must prophesy again about many peoples, both nations, and languages, and kings.” This is the mandate that is given to John to complete the book.

The first fourteen verses of chapter eleven conclude the parenthesis dealing with the heralds of the second advent. In these first fourteen verses we have a study of the two human heralds for the second advent.

One of the great privileges is to be a herald and before we look at the two human heralds of the second advent there are several passages which deal with the human herald of the first advent. The first of these is found in John 1:6-8, "There came into being a man," That is the way the herald is introduced in the corrected translation; "sent from God whose name was John. This same one came for a witness, that he might bear witness concerning the light," A witness means a herald, and he was a witness concerning the light, the first advent of Christ, "that all might believe through him [i.e. believe in the Lord Jesus Christ]. He was not that light, but came that he might bear witness to the light [the Lord Jesus Christ]"

Verses 14,15, "And the Word [the Lord Jesus Christ] became flesh [eternal God became true humanity], and tabernacled among us." The word 'tabernacled' is used rather than 'dwelt' in the Greek because the presence of the Lord in Israel was the Shekina glory in the tabernacle, and the Shekina glory has come to earth; "and we beheld his glory, the glory of the uniquely-born one from the Father, full of grace and doctrine. John witnessed [or made a pronouncement] concerning him, and shouted, saying, 'This is he of whom I spoke, "He who comes after me [first advent of Christ] has a higher rank than I, for he eternally existed before me".'

Verse 29, "The next day he saw Jesus coming to him, and said, 'Behold the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world!'"

The herald of the first advent emphasised something entirely different than the second advent. He came to die; He came to go to the cross; He came to provide eternal salvation, the first time; the second time He comes to rule the world.

In John 3:28, "You yourselves bear witness, that I said, 'I am not the Christ' but, 'I have been sent before him,' as a herald.

Verse 35, "The Father loves the Son, and has given all things into his hand." That is why in verse 36 John was the one who made the issue clear: "He who believes in the Son has eternal life; but he who does not believe the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abides on him."

This is documentation for the fact that at the first advent of Christ there was both angelic and human heralds.

The setting for the two human heralds of the second advent are given in verses one and two of Revelation chapter eleven. The setting is the restoration of the temple in Jerusalem restored as a Jewish temple.

Verse 1, we have the sequential use of the conjunction kai translated “then.” Next we have the aorist passive indicative of the verb didomi. It means that he was given a surveying instrument. The subject is called kalamoj and it is a surveying instrument. The surveying instrument or measuring rod is compared to a staff or a rod, it was like a pole: the instrumental of association from r(abdoj, translated “rod” or “pole.” “Then a surveying instrument was given to me.” “To me” is the dative of indirect object from e)gw. The aorist tense of the verb to give is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The passive voice: John as the apostle received the instrument. The declarative mood represents the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality.

The next phrase, “and the angel stood,” is not found in the original. It simply is translated, “and someone said,” the present active participle of the verb legw, “and someone said.” That “someone” is the King of Arms of the angelic college of heralds. The aoristic present is for punctiliar action. The King of Arms produces the action, the participle is circumstantial.

Now we have a mandate from the King of Arms. First of all, the present active imperative. Notice that John is still under authority. We have the verb e)geirw which we will translate “go up.” It means “get up and go.” In the imperative this form is used as an idiomatic formula, and it can be translated either come or go, here it is go. Then the aorist active imperative of metrew means to measure, “go up and measure.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety and implies the construction of a Jewish temple in Jerusalem in the middle of the Tribulation. The active voice: the apostle John is to produce the action, the imperative mood of command. “Go up and measure,” and then the accusative singular of direct object from the noun naoj, meaning temple, and with it the possessive genitive of qeoj, “the temple of God.”

Right now where the temple of God should be is an Islamic temple. The temple will contain, of course, the duplicates of all of the sacred furniture which describes the person and the work of Christ in the first advent. There would be the holy of holies containing a duplicate ark of the covenant, a mercy seat that would be constructed as before of gold and acacia wood, representing the hypostatic union.

Translation of verse one: “Then a surveying instrument was given to me [the apostle John]: and someone [the King of Arms] said, Go up and measure the temple of God.”

In front of the curtain separating the holy of holies from the holy place would be a golden altar of incense. This would be speaking of the fact that Jesus Christ, the God of Israel, is also the great High Priest through whom prayer is offered and answered. There would be the table of shewbread duplicated from Exodus chapter 25 and chapter 37. The table would be constructed of gold and acacia wood, emphasizing the doctrine of the hypostatic union. On the table would be twelve loaves of bread which are a memorial to the twelve tribes of Israel. Placed in two parallel rows within the encircling crown is a reminder that God will fulfil the four unconditional covenants to Israel at the second advent. The twelve loaves of bread in the Tribulational temple are a reminder that God will sustain Israel — true Israel; being racial Israel is not enough. Jewish believers will be sustained during the Tribulation, they will have to learn from the temple things.

When John is measuring this temple in the middle of the Tribulation everything that tells the true history of Israel is there. All of the furniture is duplicated, even the lampstand which speaks of Christ the light of the world. John said that he came to bear witness to that light, that he came to announce Him. The Tribulational temple has all of these things and yet in spite of all that there are hundreds of thousands of Jews in that future day who will not believe in Christ.

The altar is mentioned specifically. The Greek word is quasiasthron. It refers to the altar of burnt offerings in the forecourt of the temple at Jerusalem. The altar speaks of the saving work of Christ on the cross. The brass of the altar is a reminder that God the Father judged our sins after they were imputed to our Lord Jesus Christ. The burnt offerings speak of propitiation, the peace offering speaks of reconciliation; again, they talk of the saving work of Christ.

The temple in the middle of the Tribulation will have been reconstructed by Jews. However, the temple is rebuilt by unbelieving Jews who have ignored or rejected the doctrine found in the Torah, the Old Testament scriptures. They also have the book of Hebrews which the unbeliever will also reject. Temple worship for them will be ritual without reality. Temple worship in the Tribulation is revived under the dictator of Israel posing as Messiah and carrying the title “the false prophet.” In the middle of the Tribulation the false prophet or dictator of Israel permits a statue of the dictator of the revived Roman empire to be placed in the holy of holies. This is translated “the abomination of desolation” and it is found in Daniel 9:27; 11:31; 12:11; Matthew 24:15. Hence, two dictators, one Jewish and one Gentile, are the devil’s two witnesses or heralds of Satan’s being cast out of heaven and confined to the earth.

One more phrase: “and those who worship in it. The articular present active participle from the verb proskunew. We have learned the principle that you cannot give in worship what you do not have. This is false worship because these are Jewish unbelievers. They are going through the ritual but they do not have the reality. The definite article is used as a demonstrative and relative pronoun, “those who.” The pictorial present tense show presents to the mind a picture of events in the process of occurrence. The active voice: Jewish unbelievers and proselytes to Tribulational Judaism produce the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial.

We have a prepositional phrase, e)n plus a)utoj, “in it.” He is to note the fact that the temple is jammed with worshippers. The Jews worshipping in the Tribulational temple are unbelievers who have failed to understand that Jesus Christ has come in the flesh. They have failed to see the sign of the virgin birth.

The entire verse: "Then a surveying instrument was given to me [the apostle John]: and some one [the King of Arms] said, Go up and measure the temple of God, also the altar, and those who worship in it."

We note from this verse the two witnesses or heralds of the second advent, and the setting is the rebuilt temple in Jerusalem during the Tribulation. Two men are one day going to walk dramatically into this temple and they will begin to teach there. The Jews will listen. There are those who will want to destroy them but will not succeed, they are under a special divine protection. Their message will be so dynamic that very soon they will be preaching by satellite to the entire world. They are the two great evangelists of the middle part of the Tribulation. They succeed the 144,000 Jewish evangelists and they will have the most dynamic message of all.

Measuring the worshippers at the end of this verse is another way of saying that thousands and thousands of Jews who are unbelievers flock to the temple, not only from Jerusalem but from all over the world. They come to enter into the ritual. They are impressed with the ritual. And the principle: Those who are impressed with ritual never have reality. Ritual without reality is religion without salvation. Ritual without reality is a system of religion used to blind the minds of those who do not believe in Jesus Christ. Only the two human heralds will have the power and the authority to relate the sacred furniture in the temple to our Lord Jesus Christ. We know that these worshippers are Jewish unbelievers because the believers of Israel living in Jerusalem at that time have already left town. They left town under the command of Matthew 24:15-20. Only the unbelievers remain, in the pattern of 2 Thessalonians 2:7-12. The two witnesses walk into Jerusalem where you have unbelievers only at that time. The second advent will expose the false worship in the temple. In the meantime the two heralds have that job, they will use it as the basis for preaching the gospel, especially everything relating to the first advent. Those who become believers under the ministry of these two witnesses, Moses and Elijah, will form a citizen army to resist the king of the north at the siege of Jerusalem, according to Zechariah 14 and other passages.

There are two kind of Jews, then, in Jerusalem during the Tribulation. There are the Jews who believe in the first half whose order was to leave when they saw the abomination go up in the temple. And so all the Jews who were saved in the first half of the Tribulation, generally under the ministry of the 144,000 Jewish evangelists, will leave town. When the two witnesses come all of the believers have left town, according to Matthew 24. Then there is the second group who will accept Christ as saviour. They will listen to the message of Moses and Elijah; they will also hear the message of certain angels who will evangelise at that time; they will stay in Jerusalem and they will fight. They will be the heroes in the last battle of the Armageddon campaign. Each group in their own way are the heroes of the Tribulation.

There is one part of the temple that John is not to measure, given in verse two. The exception is based on the fact that the ministry of the two witnesses or human heralds of the second advent is a Jewish matter, it is not an issue as far as Gentiles are concerned.

The problem with the Gentiles is international religion which we will study in Revelation chapters 17 and 18.

We begin with the phrase, "And," and then the command: the aorist active imperative of the verb $\epsilon\kappa\beta\alpha\lambda\lambda\omega$, and it means to expel or throw out or exclude. We will translate it, "And exclude the outer court." The outer court of the temple was surrounded by high walls with several gates. There were porches running around the outer court with roofs of cedar supported by marble pillars. This will be duplicated in the Tribulation. Gentiles were permitted into the outer court, it was called the court of the Gentiles.

"and do not measure it." This time we have the aorist active subjunctive of the verb $\mu\epsilon\tau\epsilon\omega$, but with the negative $\mu\eta$ we have the subjunctive mood giving the order instead of the imperative. So we have a constative aorist, active voice: John is prohibited from producing the action. This is the prohibitive subjunctive which carries the power of the negative command.

Since the outer court is the court of the Gentiles it is not the setting of the ministry of the two witnesses, Moses and Elijah, who have special heraldry ministries to Israel. The reason for this: a causal conjunction, $\alpha\tau\iota$. Now he is given a reason, the aorist passive indicative of $\delta\iota\delta\omicron\mu\iota$, "because it is given." This is the culminative aorist tense viewing the action of the verb in its entirety but regarding it from the viewpoint of existing results. Because the Tribulation is a time when the Gentiles still control. There never will be a time when Gentiles do not have influence in the middle east until the second advent of Christ, "because it has been given to the Gentiles." "The Gentiles" is the dative of indirect object from $\epsilon\pi\alpha\gamma\alpha\gamma\epsilon\iota$, sometimes it means nations and sometimes Gentiles, "and they [the Gentiles] will," future active indicative of the verb $\pi\alpha\tau\epsilon\omega$, "trample," "for forty-two months," the last three and a half years of the Tribulation. The revived Roman empire will take over and take charge.

The ministry of the two heralds of the second advent, Moses and Elijah, will run coterminously with the Gentile control of the city of Jerusalem during the last half of the Tribulation. The question arises as to how the Gentiles gain control of Jerusalem for the last three and a half years of the Tribulation. The answer is found in Revelation chapter thirteen, second Thessalonians chapter two (verses 7-12), Daniel 9:27; 11:31; 12:11; Matthew 25:15, and other passages.

For the first three and a half years of the Tribulation Israel and the holy city enjoy a period of autonomy and prosperity. But the rise of power spheres changes all of that. There will be during this first half of the Tribulation power politics. There will be the king of the west, the revived Roman empire which does not include the USA. There will be a king of the north which today would be comparable to the Russian communist bloc, but if the Rapture doesn't occur for, say, 500 years that could be someone else from the same area. Then there is the king of the south, the pan-Arabic bloc. There are the kings of the east which today would be comparable to the Chinese communist bloc. All of these are going to put the squeeze on the middle east, and because of the proximity of the Arab nations of the king of the south and the problem there the dictator in Palestine looks for help from the king of the west, the centre of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation. The dictator does a deal with the king of the west and he does it through religion. And so since they are going to accept the ecumenical religion with Rome as the headquarters they are compelled to put a statue up in the temple to show their sincerity in the deal which is a mutual protection pact.

Simultaneously something else will be going on in heaven. There will be a war in heaven in which Michael and the army that passed in review to the shepherds at the first advent will defeat the army of Satan, and Satan and all fallen angels will be cast down to the earth. As a result of these two events the middle of the Tribulation becomes a hot-spot situation, and in that hot-spot situation God sends Moses and Elijah, the two heralds, to preach.

So the alliance between Israel and the king of the west has an ecumenical taste to it. The statue of the dictator of the revived Roman empire becomes a warning to all Jews who are believers in Christ during this first half of the Tribulation through the tremendous evangelism which has occurred.

In Matthew 24, beginning at verse 15 we begin to see the picture as to what is going on. What is the problem here? Why are there no believers when the two witnesses come to Jerusalem in the middle of the Tribulation?

This is addressed to Jewish believers in the first half of the Tribulation. "Therefore when you see the Abomination Of Desolation [the statue put up in the Tribulational temple] which message was communicated to you through the prophet Daniel [9:27; 11:31; 12:11], standing in the holy place (let the believer discern)," this is recall, third stage of the faith-rest drill, "then let those of you who are in Judea flee to the mountains [the high desert country of Edom, Moab, and Ammon]; let him who is on the roof of his house not go down and take anything out of his house; and let him who is in the field not turn back for his coat. But woe to those who are pregnant and who are nursing mothers in those days! But pray that your flight will not take place in inclement weather, or on the Sabbath; for then will be great tribulation, unequalled from the beginning of the world until now, and never will be equalled again. If those days had not been cut short no one would survive; but for the sake of the elect [you, Tribulational believers, elected to privilege] those days will be shortened."

That is the situation and why there are no believing Jews in Jerusalem when Moses and Elijah walk in. They walk in to face a hostile audience and the hostility is increased by the fact that Satan is no longer able to get into heaven. The Gentiles will begin to control Jerusalem at this time, the Jewish believers will have fled, as per the mandate of Matthew chapter twenty-four. Jerusalem will be filled with unbelieving Jews who worship in the temple contradiction, the contradiction between the statue put up by the dictator of the revived Roman empire and the furniture that speaks of our Lord Jesus Christ. The statue of the dictator and demonism will now be involved in the temple: that which speaks of Christ and that which is Satanic, the very centre of the angelic conflict in the Tribulation will focus right there. Worship in the Jewish temple will be all ritual, no reality, until the two witnesses make their appearance and challenge this farce. This is the challenge of their ministry.

There have been as a result of man's volition some very unusual and drastic periods of history, periods of terrible disaster when it appeared as though everything was going to come to an end. But the world has not come to an end and will not come to an end, except under the plan of God and under the right circumstances, and before the world can come to an end there is going to be one thousand years of great prosperity which we call the Millennial reign of Jesus Christ. Just before that great period of prosperity we do have one of the most unusual, if not the rarest type of period of history, the eschatology of Satan's desperation, a period of time which begins in the middle of the Tribulation with a battle in heaven. The battle in heaven results in Satan being confined to the earth and thrown out of heaven for the first time. Even in his first fall Satan was not thrown out of heaven. And so he is cast down to the earth in the middle of the Tribulation and that begins the time of Satan's desperation. It continues until the second advent of Christ, and therefore it is a period of roughly three and a half years of history. It is actually the story of the last half of the book of Revelation. It begins, for example, in Revelation chapter twelve with the great holocaust, the greatest attack of anti-Semitism in all of human history, carried on by Satan and his third demon assault army. In chapter thirteen are his two witnesses, his two dictators, one Jewish and one Gentile. In chapter fourteen we see a great principle. We discover that even though this is the worst period of all history it is still a period of great evangelism. But even the evangelism of that period is most unusual, it is in the extra and unusual phenomenon type of period. In chapters fifteen and sixteen we see that it is also a period of divine judgment: the seven last plagues administered by pur sui vant angels. Those seven last plagues are also called the seven goblets, mistranslated in the King James version "vials." In chapters seventeen and eighteen we see the greatest attack of Satan on the human race in ecumenical religion. The ecumenical religion of the world in the last half of the Tribulation is the most devastating period of religion in all of history. In chapter nineteen we see the eschatology of Satan's desperation coming to a close with the second advent which destroys Satan's great empire on earth. In chapter twenty, verses one through three, we see the incarceration of Satan where he is put into the abyss for a thousand years and terminates the eschatology of Satan's desperation. So all of the way from chapter twelve to chapter twenty, verse three, we have this great period of eschatology. We are getting ready for it now in chapter eleven by showing some of the most unusual events which occur at that time. It is an unusual period of history and therefore calls for some unusual evangelism under the principle that grace always precedes judgment. There is no preparation for this most devastating period of history apart from personal faith in Jesus Christ, apart from the possession of eternal life. The principle of facing death in that particular period of history worse than in any other three and a half years in all of historical events. For example, the person who faces death without eternal life is not prepared for death.

Eternal life comes in three categories. It comes in the first category, a human body at the point of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. The moment we believe in the Lord Jesus Christ we receive not only the imputation of divine righteousness but we receive that life which is necessary to be a part of the plan of God. At the moment of human birth human life was imputed to each one of us but it was imputed to the human soul. Having human life in the soul is no guarantee of salvation, it merely gives the opportunity for it by personal faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Simultaneously Adam's original sin was imputed to the genetically-formed old sin nature giving us spiritual death. We were born physically alive but we were born under condemnation. Our personal sins are not the basis of our condemnation but the imputation of Adam's sin to each one of us at birth is. Personal sins became the basis of our Lord's condemnation on the cross, His saving work where all of the sins in the history of the human race were imputed to Christ and judged on the cross. And so when a person believes in Christ he receives in this dispensation 36 things, but two things are also true for every dispensation: the imputation of divine righteousness and the imputation of eternal life.

Eternal life occupies three different bodies. We start out with eternal life in the human body and when we die physically that eternal life goes with the soul out of the body into the presence of the Lord. In the presence of the Lord we receive an interim body and that interim body also has eternal life present in it, along with human life. When the resurrection or the Rapture of the Church occurs we receive a resurrection body, and that resurrection body also has eternal life. So eternal life begins the moment we believe in Jesus Christ. We are in a physical body. If we die before the resurrection occurs then we are absent from the body and face to face with the Lord and we are in an interim body where there is great happiness and blessing in heaven. Then at the point of the resurrection or the Rapture of the Church we receive a resurrection body so that eternal life resides first of all in a human body, then in an interim body, and eventually in a resurrection body.

This is very important when we face the fact that apart from the resurrection of the Church all of us are going to die physically. This mortality is not going to take on immortality except for one generation. The Church Age, the dispensation of the royal family of God, terminates with the resurrection. Those who happen to be alive at that moment are caught up without going through physical death. They miss, therefore, the interim body in heaven and the great happiness that is related to it, but they have, of course, the resurrection body forever and ever at that point. Death has lost its sting therefore for all believers in the Lord Jesus Christ and as we face disaster this becomes a very important doctrine: to recognise that no matter how bad things become on this earth we still have a great life forever and ever with God. We are free from divine condemnation, we are not going to be thrown into the lake of fire, and no historical disaster is greater than the plan that God has for us. The only problem is, are we in the plan of God in time? That means being in the divine dynasphere.

There is a time coming after the Rapture of the Church when we are going to see death as a great and real factor, and the world will seem to be falling apart for that is the period called the Tribulation. And it is in the middle of the Tribulation that we see this tremendous thing happening: Satan cast out of heaven for the first time. Satan has access to heaven and always has had access to heaven.

One of the things that is going to happen in the middle of the Tribulation is the fact that two people are brought back to life. In all of the history of the human race very few people have been resuscitated under the plan of God. Lazarus was resuscitated, he was not resurrected. Resurrection means receiving a body of incorruption, a body which will house our eternal life for all eternity; resuscitation means coming back in a physical body and subsequently dying. Lazarus came back in his physical body and eventually died. The purpose of the resuscitation of Lazarus was an evangelistic appeal to the Jews of our Lord's day, and while many of the Jews believed many thousands of Jews saw the miracle of the resuscitation of Lazarus and rejected the Lord Jesus Christ as the Messiah. Because of their rejection of Messiah they miss the whole point of that great miracle of resuscitation.

But there is a resuscitation which has a different connotation in the middle of the Tribulation. Two men are brought back to life. Both of them had a very mysterious death. God told Moses to go up to the top of a mountain, disappear and die. That is exactly what he did. In Jude we discover that there was a great fight over the body of Moses after his soul and spirit departed to be with the Lord. This great fight was between two of the highest military leaders of all creatures: Michael, who in the elect order of battle of angels is the senior commander of the armies of heaven, and he fought with Satan. Satan, of course, is the highest ranking and most powerful of creatures to ever exist, he was created a cherub. There was a reason for this fight. Both understood the theology involved. The theology involved begins in Revelation chapter eleven, verse three, where Moses is resuscitated, brought back from his interim body in heaven for a special mission.

Elijah also had a very strange death. He was seen to get into a chariot and he disappeared from the earth. They both went to heaven, they were transferred and given their interim bodies where they have had many hundreds of years of great happiness and blessing, but both of them are coming back for a special mission. These two would not come back for a special mission were it not for the fact that the greatest period of anti-Semitism and the greatest holocaust of all time is about to occur, so that their ministry gives every Jew the opportunity of being prepared and even being protected from that great holocaust.

Before we begin verse three we have to identify the two witnesses. Verse three simply says, "And I will give to my two witnesses," the human heralds of the second advent. But we must identify these witnesses if it is possible. There was one other person in the Old Testament who had a strange death, his name was Enoch. Enoch is often identified as one of the two witnesses because he departed from the earth without dying. However, it should be remembered that the Tribulation is the last seven years of the Tribulation of Israel, the seventieth week of Daniel, and the two witnesses have to be Jews under that concept. Enoch was a Gentile and as a Gentile he was not qualified. These two witnesses are Jews coming back to Israel. Both of them have to be great public speakers because they are going to evangelise in Israel. So it should be remembered that as the Tribulation is the last seven years of the dispensation of Israel it is the Jews that are in focus here. The Jews are responsible for the dissemination of the gospel in the Jewish Age and they are responsible for the dissemination of the gospel in the Tribulation at the end of the Jewish Age. That is why we have 144,000 Jews being used as evangelists in the Tribulation. Both witnesses are human heralds of the King, the King is a Jew, the heralds of the King must be Jews following the pattern of the first advent where John the Baptist was a Jew as the herald of the first advent.

Now that we have eliminated Enoch the question is, who are the two witnesses? Actually, Jesus Himself reveals the two witnesses of the second advent on the mount of transfiguration. In Matthew chapter 17, verses 2 and 3, our Lord makes it very clear who the two witnesses are. The background to this passage is the fact that before some of the disciples died they were going to see our Lord as He would appear at the second advent. Peter, James and John are the three who had that opportunity. A part of the transfiguration scene is Matthew 17:3, "And behold, Moses and Elijah appeared to them." Moses and Elijah are identified as the human heralds of the second advent.

Of course there is a problem with John the Baptist and Elijah. That problem is one that is covered in Malachi 4:5, "Behold, I am going to send to you [the Jews in the Tribulation] Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and terrible day [the last three and a half years of the Tribulation] of the Lord." Notice that Elijah is coming before the great and terrible day of the Lord which is the last half of the Tribulation. John, as the herald of the first advent of Christ, has the same Holy Spirit and power as Elijah will have as the herald of the second advent but John is not coming just before the second advent as a herald.

In Luke 1:17, "And it is he [John the Baptist] who will go as a herald before him," that is, a herald before Christ at the first advent in the spirit and in the power of Elijah. John the Baptist would be a herald for the first advent and he will have the same Spirit and the same power as Elijah in the second advent. What this is saying in effect is that there is a modified divine dynasphere used by John the Baptist which will also be used by Elijah as well as the two heralds of the second advent. The priests and the Levites, of course, approached John and quizzed him regarding his identity. He made it very clear that he was not the Christ and he also made it clear that he was not Elijah returned from the dead. So it was understood by John and by the priests and by the Levites that Elijah was coming back from the dead at some time, John 1:19-21.

The priests and the Levites were religious. Religion is a form of arrogance. The difference between Christianity and religion is very simple. Religion accepts the ritual; Christianity accepts the person. Christianity is not a religion, it is a relationship with God. The greatest attack Satan ever made on our Lord Jesus Christ was religion. The Jews took their ritual and ran with it in unbelief. That's religion; it is ritual without reality. They are not the only ones who have a religion. Any group of people anywhere in the world who reject Christ as saviour accept the substitute which is religion. They accept the sugar-coated pill that will take them all the way to hell — religion. There are many organisations which call themselves Christian but they are not, they are religion. We will see this in great detail when we get to Revelation chapters seventeen and eighteen for the last great struggle of Satan in the eschatology of Satan's desperation is his religious attack on the human race. The greatest function of religion in the history of the world will occur at the end of the Tribulation. But religion is always the devil's ace trump. Satan uses religion to blind the minds of them that believe not lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ who is the image of God should shine unto them. So we must learn to distinguish between religion and salvation. The two have nothing in common. Religion is related to the cosmic system and, of course, our relationship with God is related to the divine dynasphere.

Ritual without reality is meaningless and Israel has never discovered that. And that is why, "Are you Elijah?" and John said, "I am not." The Jews could not distinguish between our Lord's Alpha and Omega glory, and its consequences. If Jesus, however, had been accepted as Messiah at the first advent then Elijah would have been the herald of the first advent. That is what we have in Matthew 11:9,10 — “But why do you go out? To see a prophet? Yes, I tell you, and one who is more than a prophet [John the Baptist]. This is the one about whom it has been written [Malachi 3:1], ‘Behold, I send my herald before your face, who will prepare your way before you’.”

That is John the Baptist, the herald of the first advent. He is sent first to prepare the way for our Lord. Then Jesus explains that it is the Jews who if they had accepted Him during the first advent then John would have been Elijah.

“Truly, I say to you, among those born of women there has not arisen anyone greater than John the Baptist ... and from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffers violence, and violent men seize it for themselves. For all the prophets and the Torah [the Old Testament] prophesied until John. And if you wish to receive it, he is Elijah, who is to come.” But they didn't do that and so John is the herald, Elijah is one of the two witnesses in Revelation 11:3.

The “iffy” approach, then, says in effect that if Jesus Christ had been received by Israel as their Messiah and King, then Elijah would have been the herald of the first advent. But the omniscience of God knew that Christ would be rejected by Israel at the first advent. Therefore it was necessary to have heralds for two advents. John the Baptist is the human herald of the first advent; Elijah is one of the two human heralds of the second advent. Jesus Christ clarified this point while coming down from the mount of transfiguration — Matthew 17:10-13:

“Why then do the scribes say that Elijah must come first?” And he [Jesus] answered and said, ‘Elijah is coming and will re-establish all things; but I say to you, that Elijah has already come, and they did not recognise him [John the Baptist], but they have done to him everything they wished. So also the Son of Man is about to suffer by them’. Then the disciples understood that he had spoken to them about John the Baptist.” They were now getting it straight: John the Baptist was the herald of the first advent; Elijah the herald of the second advent.

The conclusion of the whole thing is found in Matthew 17:3 where we read of the two witnesses of the second advent: “And behold, Moses and Elijah appeared to them.” That is the decision factor right there.

In Revelation 11:3 we begin with the future active indicative of the verb didomi. The future tense is a predictive future and it anticipates an event expected to occur in future time, the last half of the Tribulation. The active voice: God the Father produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality. In other words, all during the worst period of disaster in human history, all during the time of the eschatology of Satan's desperation, we have two men who will have a magnificent ministry and will once more declare the difference between the first and the second advent, and will explain Deuteronomy 6:4: that Jesus Christ had to come the first time to guarantee promises to Israel, promises of salvation, promises of the future of Israel, promises of the function of client nation Israel in the Millennium. All of these things to be fulfilled demanded salvation. He came the first time to die; He comes the second time to rule. The two heralds will explain all of these things.

We actually have in the Greek here an ellipsis which demands the accusative singular direct object from dunamij, the word for power. He is going to give them dunamij, and that is a very significant gift, "And I will give to my two witnesses power." This is a modified divine dynasphere.

Believers after the resurrection of the Church do not receive the divine dynasphere. The divine dynasphere is a present first given at the virgin birth of Christ. At the first advent of Christ our Lord, while He was born and slept in a feeding trough, was also given the divine dynasphere and the humanity of Christ lived in that divine dynasphere all the way to the cross where He was judged for our sins. When Christ was ascended, seated at the right hand of the Father and given His third royal patent, He was minus a royal family. Therefore the Age of Israel was stopped, Church Age was inserted in order that we might have a royal family. You and I as believers in the Church Age are royal family of God. Once the royal family is completed it is resurrected — the Rapture of the Church. Then we go back to Israel, the Tribulation. Of course, with the resurrection of the Church the operational divine dynasphere goes too. But there is for just a couple of people a modified divine dynasphere in the Tribulation and it is given to Moses and Elijah as the heralds of the second advent. The divine dynasphere was given to the royal family only, but that is the operational. There are three divine dynaspheres: the prototype, which was the one used by our Lord's humanity resulting in His impeccability; the operational divine dynasphere which is God's plan for the believer in this dispensation, residence, function, momentum in the divine dynasphere; then there is a modified divine dynasphere for several people like Moses and Elijah as the heralds of the second advent. That is mentioned right here in verse three.

He also says, "I will give it to my two witnesses." We have the generic use of the definite article toij which is in the dative plural, dative of indirect object. Then we have the word duw, "two." And with that in the dative plural indirect object we also have the word martuj, "my two witnesses [or heralds]." Martuj is used for a witness that bears the divine message, therefore a herald. And we have the possessive genitive from the pronoun e)gw, "mine, they belong to me." They are the heralds of Christ at the second advent. The dative indirect object indicates the ones in whose interest the modified divine dynasphere is given. With the modified divine dynasphere the two human heralds of the second advent possess both the power and the authority for their ministry, for they minister in the most difficult period of human history, the time of the eschatology of Satan's desperation. They live in a time when miracles and extra natural phenomena in all categories will exist: miracles from Satan, miracles from the power of demonism and, of course, miracles from God, both supernatural and extra natural categories of miracles. And miracles are always a distraction to the perception of Bible doctrine. It is a sort of a short-cut system. In other words, why have deliverance through the use of Bible doctrine and the second stage of the faith-rest drill when you can stand around and just say, "Lord deliver me," and He performs a miracle? People who are the recipients of miracles rarely ever advance in the spiritual life. They want God to do something special for them, they are arrogant. They do not want to learn day by day by day, Bible doctrine and apply it to experience.

Moses and Elijah had a crisis personality and during their first tour of duty on earth both were the key men in historical situations, especially adversity. They were designed for crisis, they provided leadership for historical crises. Moses was a crisis personality for both Egypt as well as for the beginning of client nation Israel. Elijah was a crisis leader during the apostasy of the northern kingdom. The two greatest crisis personalities return to serve the Lord at this stage of the Tribulation, the time we are calling the eschatology of Satan's desperation. The two men that we are studying can be classified as men of crisis personality. No man in history was ever loved or hated more than Moses or than Elijah. They qualified eminently for the title "crisis personality." Not only were Jews jealous of Moses but he received great jealousy in the court of Egypt, for it was Moses the adopted son of the Queen who actually took charge of the Egyptian empire. When three great Egyptian armies had been defeated by the invading Ethiopians it was the military genius of Moses that actually took a crack army and went out and defeated the Ethiopians and saved Egypt. Moses was a crisis personality and he demonstrated it throughout his 120 years of life on this earth. Elijah is also a crisis personality and he also departed from this life in a strange way.

We continue now with the extend of the ministry of Moses and Elijah. Their ministry will be run, of course, coterminously with the eschatology of Satan's desperation. We begin with the future active indicative of the verb profhteuw, "and they will prophesy." The word prophesy means two things. It means first of all to foretell the future, and also means to teach Bible doctrine. Both were true of Moses and Elijah during their first tour of duty on earth and both will be true of their second tour of duty on earth, for they will be teaching Bible doctrine in the most difficult period of all human history and against the greatest possible opposition.

Sometimes people like to reduce the meaning a little bit by saying that the word prophesying means forth telling as well as foretelling. Foretelling is what Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, all of these men who had the gift of prophecy in the past, did. They foretold the future. But for all of the prophecies we find in the great books of the Old Testament which are listed as prophecy we also discover that they preached a tremendous number of sermons.

So we have the connotation here in verse three of teaching Bible doctrine and evangelising on the part of both men. The two heralds of the second advent, Moses and Elijah, will teach Bible doctrine related to the duplicate sacred articles of furniture found in the temple. We noted this briefly in verse one.

Furthermore we have an accusative plural of direct object, h(mera, and the word h(mera means days. And with it we have the exact number of days. In the Greek that would be one thousand two hundred and sixty days, roughly three and one half years. That three and one half years is the last half of the Tribulation. The ministry of Moses and Elijah as the heralds of the second advent, then, covers exactly the same period as the time of the eschatology of Satan's desperation. Their resuscitation is not resurrection for the Old Testament saints will not be resurrected until the second advent. So we have the future tense of the word profhteuw, it is a predictive future anticipating a crisis ministry of two great crisis personalities. The active voice: Moses and Elijah produce the action of the verb in three ways. First, they will teach the true meaning of the sacred articles of furniture in the Tribulational temple in Jerusalem while at the same time exposing the false implications of the statue of the dictator of the revived Roman empire which will be set up in the holy of holies. Secondly, they will prophesy in the sense of teaching the eschatology of Satan's desperation. They will teach the historical trends of the last three and a half years of the Tribulation. And we will study exactly what they are going to teach for we have the format. Beginning their ministry they will teach what is found in chapter twelve, the great holocaust of the last part of the Tribulation. In chapter thirteen they will expose the dictators found there, the dictator of the revived Roman empire, the beast out of the sea; and the dictator of Israel, the beast out of the land. In chapter fourteen they will lay the groundwork for greater evangelism from angelic creatures. They will teach in chapters fifteen and sixteen, before it occurs, the seven last plagues of history which are comparable to the vial judgements which should be translated goblet judgements. They will also warn of Satan's last trump in history, the greatest attack he will ever make on the human race, the attack of ecumenical religion. They will also teach the doom of Satan. Satan will hear from them time after time messages on how he and the two dictators are going to be incarcerated and destroyed. They will also exegete and interpret certain passages from prophecy in Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Daniel, Joel, Zechariah, and of course the passages noted in the book of Revelation. The indicative mood is declarative for the great ministry of Moses and Elijah.

The situation

1. When the two witnesses, Moses and Elijah, begin their ministry in the middle of the Tribulation the believers converted in the first half of the Tribulation will have fled from Jerusalem and the country of Israel in general. We have noted this in Matthew 24:15-20. There is an order there for Jews who are believers and who were converted in the first half of the Tribulation through the ministry of the 144,000 Jewish evangelists.
2. The Gentile apostate religion of the revived Roman empire, i.e. the ecumenical religion of the world at that time, will have been generally accepted by the Jews as a part of a treaty between the dictator of western Europe and the dictator of Palestine.
3. In addition, the Jewish religion will be a system of ritual without reality.
4. The two heralds, Moses and Elijah, will both evangelise and teach Bible doctrine. They will announce the approach of the second advent and they will challenge the apostasy of ecumenical religion.

5. As a result, as we only have unbelievers when they arrive, there will be a tremendous harvest of believers. Thousands will respond to their ministry, not only in the middle east but throughout the world. And, as a result, there will be a second group of Jewish believers in Palestine and they are the ones who are going to fight in the siege of Jerusalem which is the last of the four battles of the Armageddon campaign in that three and a half years. They will be the pivot that will be delivered at the second advent, the story of Zechariah chapter fourteen, verses one through nine.

The uniform of the two witnesses is also mentioned, “clothed in sackcloth.” The perfect passive participle of περιβαλλω introduces the fact that they are going to be clothed. With this we have the accusative plural direct object from σακκοι, translated sackcloth. Sackcloth is a mesh, a coarse texture of cloth made from goat’s hair, so-called because it was often used for making sacks. It was a very finely-woven material. We assume from this that because of the very fine weaving systems that they will be dressed magnificently. This is not something sloppy. Ambassadors are always well-dressed within the framework of the country where they find themselves, and that is exactly what we have here. This sackcloth does not mean that they come in as sloppy Joes to preach. To be accepted before a crowd they don’t dress like scum. They aren’t hippies and they don’t look sloppy. Moses and Elijah are high-class people and they are not going to be rejected because they have style and class. Even the scum will notice that these people have something they do not, and they will listen not because of the way they dress but because of the power of God. By this time, in the middle of the Tribulation, the world will be crawling with scum and they will listen.

So we have sackcloth emphasising the fact that they are well dressed, well groomed, and this of course is in great contrast to many of the people to whom they speak. But the fact that they are so dressed does not detract in any way from their ministry. You do not have to “establish contact” by doing what the natives do, as it were. They stand up in the midst of all kinds of people who would ordinarily resent the fact that they are even well groomed. And why are they heard? Because of the power of God through the dynamics of their doctrinal understanding.

Note, then, that Moses and Elijah are men of great action. They are crisis personalities during their lifetime. We think of Elijah on Mount Carmel — action. We think of Moses leading the people of Israel — action. But when they come back, God’s sense of humour, and there is no action; it is all talk, talk, talk. They are going to teach, they are going to communicate. While they were in their lifetime great prophets, spiritual leaders, men of action, crisis personalities, when they come back they come back with the greatest power they have ever had, the power of the completed canon of scripture, the power of Bible doctrine. The real power of spiritual leadership is involved in the communicating the doctrine of the Word of God under the power of God the Holy Spirit — accuracy of exegesis and interpretation and categories. They will come back with the Bible in their hands, they will teach from the Bible. They will teach the Word of God accurately, magnificently. The real greatness for crisis is not what you do but what you think. That is what we are to understand in bringing these two men back. They were men of action, men of deeds; now they are men of thought, men of doctrine. What do people need in the crisis more than anything else? Action? No. Doctrine, right thinking. These men do not come back to perform miracles, they do not come back as men of action, they come back as men of wisdom, teaching Bible doctrine. Why? Because in the greatest crisis of all of human history, the last three and a half years of the Tribulation the greatest need, as in any historical crisis, is Bible doctrine in the thinking of people.

While they were on earth the first time Moses and Elijah were men of miracles and dynamic action but their contribution to their contemporaries will be an even greater contribution to those to whom they minister in the last half of the Tribulation. Nothing, then, is as important as the teaching of the Word of God. Nothing carries the dynamics to so many from so few as the Word of God properly taught. In any historical crisis the outcome is determined by believers with Bible doctrine resident in their souls — the pivot concept. In the Tribulation the same factor holds true. While thousands of believers find Christ as saviour under their ministry it is those who keep on with doctrine who are going to stand in the breach. We will study them when we get to Revelation chapter sixteen. No action in life has more merit than a clear, concise communication of Bible doctrine. And it will be said at the end of the Tribulation that never in the history of the world have so many owed so much to two men — Moses and Elijah. They will have their greatest ministry for they will have the entire canon of scripture and they will communicate in great power.

Verse 4 — the Old Testament analogy to the two witnesses. We have the nominative plural subject from the immediate demonstrative pronoun o(utoj which is translated “these.” This refers to Moses and Elijah as the two heralds of the second advent, the crisis personalities for the most crisis period of history, the period of the eschatology of Satan’s desperation. During this entire period of time after Satan is thrown out of heaven, he is confined to the earth, and he knows that his time is short.

Just as Moses and Elijah as the two witnesses are associated with the Tribulational temple in Jerusalem in this context, so we have the original two people who are mentioned by the two olive trees. They are Joshua and Zerubbabel who were associated with the reconstruction of the temple in Jerusalem in the year BC 516. Now we have a Tribulational temple and in that Tribulational temple we have Moses and Elijah identified with it. This will help us to add a few concepts to the principle of the crisis personality, for Moses and Elijah in their ministry at the end of the Tribulation are compared in this passage to Joshua the high priest and Zerubbabel who led the first colony of Jews back from Babylon. These two men are compared to Moses and Elijah in the reconstruction of the temple and the ministry thereto.

We have a present active indicative of e)imi, “These are.” And with this we have the predicate nominative — three words. First of all we have the definite article, a(i, and it is the generic use of the definite article. Then the indeclinable numeral duw, and the noun e)laia, which refers to an olive tree. We have here a reference to the two olive trees, “These are the two olive trees.” We are talking about Zechariah chapter four, verse three and Zechariah chapter four, verse eleven.

The first of the two olive trees is Zerubbabel. The Jews had received the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline from the Chaldeans in BC 586 when Nebuchadnezzar took client nation Israel out for seventy years until BC 516. (There is a reason why it was to last for seventy years. It had to do with the fact that the Jews had missed seventy Sabbatical years in the first four hundred and ninety years of their history. They had never observed a Sabbatical year so the Lord gave them to Israel all at once) The year 516 BC was the year that Zerubbabel finished rebuilding the temple. He was from the tribe of Judah, the family of David, and he led the first wave of Jews back into the land in the first year of Cyrus the Great — 536 BC. So for fifty years they had remained in Babylon but Zerubbabel led them back in 536. Accompanying Zerubbabel was Joshua the high priest who was from the tribe of Levi. On the second month of the second year of their return to the land the foundations of the temple were laid. This is the famous passage in Ezra where some were crying and some were cheering. The cry-babies were those who remembered the old temple and said, “This isn’t as large”; the cheering were the younger crowd who were saying, “We are going to have a temple. Who cares whether it is smaller?”

Before the temple could be built the Samaritans infiltrated and wanted a part of the reconstruction. Zerubbabel refused. He was a real crisis personality. So they went and complained to Cyrus the Great and stopped the construction of the temple for about sixteen years. During this time the people forgot all about the temple and began to build lovely homes on the hillside for themselves. Then suddenly God raised up two prophets: Haggai and Zechariah. They said to the people, “Look at these lovely homes you live in. Take a look at the Lord’s house. Nothing has been done.” So these two men got the Jews working again on the temple and the work was resumed under the leadership of Zerubbabel and Joshua the high priest. So the Jews had both a spiritual and a civil leader. They finished the temple in four years — 516 BC, which marks the end of the Babylonian captivity.

One of the big encouraging factors to get Zerubbabel and Joshua motivated was the vision of the two olive trees — Zechariah chapter four. It illustrated the leadership necessary to rebuild the temple: civil leadership and authority, and spiritual leadership. Joshua the high priest was the spiritual leader, Zerubbabel was the civil leader, and you will note that they separated “church and state”, as it were (there was no church, it was not the Church Age). They separated the civil from the spiritual. You cannot have freedom by combining the civil and the spiritual.

Zechariah 4:2, “ ... ‘I see, and behold, a lampstand all of gold with its bowl [an oil reservoir] on top of it, and seven spouts belonging to each lamp which are on top of it; also two olive trees beside it [beside the lampstand], one on the right side of the bowl and the other on the left side of the bowl’.”

The point here is that we have one olive tree representing civil government and one olive tree representing the spiritual side of the client nation.

Verse 4, “Then I [Zechariah] spoke to the teaching angel and said, ‘What are these, my lord?’ Notice the respect Zechariah had for this teaching angel.

Verse 5, “Then the teaching angel answered and said,” and we will pick up what he said in verse 6, “This is the word of the Lord to Zerubbabel saying, ‘Not by might nor by power, but by my Spirit,’ says the Lord of the armies.”

Verse 7, that great question: “What are you, O great mountain?” The point is this: there is a mountain in the way. Someone is trying to stop the building of the temple, someone named Satan. Someone was trying to hinder Zerubbabel as the civil leader and Joshua as the spiritual leader. The mountain means the hindrance to the completion of the temple. And here is the problem. In Ezra 4:1-3 we have the infiltration of the Samaritans. Satan comes as an angel of light but doctrine motivated separation. In Ezra 4:4 we have distraction by other enemies. In Ezra 4:5-24 we have legal opposition. Then there are fourteen years when there is no work on the temple while the people build their own homes — Haggai 1:4. During those 14 years the people did not prosper because while they were building their own homes they did not go to Bible class, Haggai 1:5, 9-11. After the building was resumed there came opposition from Tattenai, the Persian governor, Ezra 5:3-6:13. However, the mountain of opposition is going to be removed.

Zechariah 4:7ff — “‘What are you, O great mountain before Zerubbabel? You will become a plain; and he [Zerubbabel] will place the headstone on the wall with shouts, “Grace, grace, grace to it!” ’

“Also the word of the Lord came to me saying, The hands of Zerubbabel have laid the foundation of this house [BC 536], and his hands will finish it [BC 516].

Verse 10, “For who has despised the day of small things? [All of those wimps who were complaining about it not being as big as the original].”

Verse 11, “Then I spoke and said to him, ‘What are the two olive trees on the right and the left of the lampstand?’ ”

Verse 14, “Then he replied, ‘These are the two anointed [“sons of oil” literally from the Hebrew] ones [Joshua and Zerubbabel] who are standing by the Lord of the entire earth’.”

These two men are crisis personalities, special people for difficult times. Crisis personalities are people who are there when the mountain looms up and people who have the ability to turn the mountain into a plain. Joshua and Zerubbabel were the men who stood in the gap when the second temple was being rebuilt. Moses and Elijah are resuscitated as crisis personalities for the greatest crisis of all human history, the period of the eschatology of Satan’s desperation. So we have another temple crisis in the Tribulation. It seeks analogy in the Old Testament [Zechariah chapter four], therefore the reference to the two olive trees. While the temple crisis is different in each case two men are always related to the solution, two men filled with the Spirit and full of Bible doctrine. In the building of the second temple in Zechariah chapter four the solution is related to the two olive trees — Zerubbabel and Joshua. It takes civil function and spiritual function to keep a client nation going or to get one cranked up, and the two must be separated; therefore two men, not one. In the profaning of the Tribulational temple in Revelation chapter eleven the solution is related to the two olive trees, only this time it is Moses and Elijah the two human heralds of the second advent.

Revelation 11:4, “These are the two olive trees.” Then, because the ministry of these two witnesses is different [they are the heralds of the second advent] a second analogy is necessary. The adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, translated “also,” then the predicate nominative plural from the generic use of the definite article, a(i. With it we have the predicate nominative plural luxnia which means lampstands. Lampstands give light, and the two witnesses give light from their doctrinal teaching regarding the Tribulational temple. The thing that strikes you in the Old Testament about Moses and Elijah is their action. Now they come back as men of doctrine, for the greatest crisis of history demands doctrine, and the real answer to crisis is doctrine resident in the soul. And they do not come back as men of action, they come back as men of doctrine — two great communicators of Bible doctrine. Lampstands give light; Moses and Elijah give light to their doctrinal discourses. They also give light as the human heralds of the second advent. They are two brilliant lights in the darkest age of history, the age of the eschatology of Satan’s desperation. These are the two olive trees.

“also the two lampstands,” Moses and Elijah are two lampstands. Now we do not have civil authority and spiritual authority, we have two men with spiritual authority, we have two lampstands.

Next we have the articular present active participle from the verb i(stemi, “who are standing.” The definite article is used as a relative pronoun whose antecedent is Moses and Elijah, the two witnesses, the two crisis personalities for the last part of the Tribulation. The dramatic perfect tense represents the status of Moses and Elijah, they stand through their entire ministry. Nothing shakes them, nothing deters them, they do not fall apart, they are true crisis personalities, they meet the crisis without any failures of any kind. The active voice: Moses and Elijah produce the action of the verb at the end of the Tribulation, the last one thousand two hundred and sixty days of the Tribulation. The participle is circumstantial.

Next we have an improper preposition, e)nw pion, plus the genitive of kurioj, “before the Lord.” This is a reference to Jesus Christ as the ruler of the world at the second advent. And with this is the possessive genitive of the noun gh, referring to the earth, “who are standing as heralds before the Lord of the planet earth,” Jesus Christ at the second advent.

Translation of verse 4: “These are the two olive trees, also the two lampstands [Moses and Elijah communicate doctrine, they are the light for the crisis] who are standing as heralds before the Lord of planet earth [Jesus Christ at the second advent].”

A further analogy develops. The olive tree analogy refers to the power of the Holy Spirit in the lives of Moses and Elijah in teaching doctrine. The most important function is the filling of the Holy Spirit and the teaching of doctrine. The lampstand analogy refers to their doctrinal message during the Tribulational ministry of Moses and Elijah. It is impossible for anyone who is a believer to face a crisis of any kind and be a crisis personality without Bible doctrine. The key to crisis is doctrine. These men have the key and they teach it courageously in the midst of the greatest opposition the world has ever known for Bible doctrine.

We see now in verse five the wall of fire provided for the two human heralds. These men are men with a message, they are not men of violence. The only time that they use anything that can be construed as violence is in self-defence because they must continue their mission. The reason for that is because they have a tremendous personal sense of destiny. Anyone who is going to be a crisis personality must have a personal sense of destiny. You as a believer should begin to have a personal sense of destiny because as a believer you are in the plan of God, you are royal family of God.

We have in verse 5 the first of several conditional clauses. We begin with an inferential explicative use of the conjunction kai, and we translate it “furthermore.” Then we have a conditional particle e)j. It introduces the protasis of a first class condition, a supposition from the viewpoint of reality. So whatever is coming up we are looking at it from the standpoint of reality. Next we have the enclitic indefinite pronoun tij, and it is always used to represent a category, in this case the category of the human race. In fact it is a very interesting category, those who are antagonistic to the teaching of doctrine during that period are antagonistic, therefore, to the two human heralds, Moses and Elijah. Hatred, antagonism and implacability is there; they are in the cosmic system and they don’t like Moses and Elijah. And everything is intensified in the last three and a half years of the Tribulation so that when people generally do not like someone else they generally try to remove them from life. These are Tribulational believers and unbelievers residing in the cosmic system.

Then we have the present active indicative of the verb qelw which means to wish to desire, it expresses volition. Generally it expresses volition related to emotion. “Furthermore if anyone [the demonised population of the last half of the Tribulation] desires [resolves, is motivated].” The present tense is a progressive present, it signifies action in a state of persistence, present linear aktionsart. The active voice: the believer and unbeliever involved in the cosmic system, demonised, produce the action. The indicative mood is declarative used to indicate the first class condition, the reality of the fact that Moses and Elijah, two of the greatest speakers who ever lived, are not liked by everyone.

Any time you have a crisis personality you are going to have great dislike or great admiration. There is no middle ground with a crisis personality. Crisis personalities are going to be disliked and when someone dislikes you they are going to do something about it. This is exactly what Moses and Elijah face constantly. They can’t walk around with a wall of fire and they do not have the wall of fire in the ordinary sense. They open their mouth and preach and people are saved and people are blessed. Other people are antagonised. Doctrine always antagonises as well as blesses, it depends upon the individual attitude. And when you find a situation where Bible doctrine does not antagonise you are probably looking at a place where there is not very much freedom. Doctrine antagonises and doctrine blesses, and that is a manifestation of freedom. Here there are those who do not want to hear Moses and Elijah, or in hearing them, dislike them. They desire to do something to them. We have the aorist active infinitive of the verb a)dikew which goes with qelw. It means to injure, to damage, to hurt, and probably to harm covers everything. The active voice of qelw, believers and unbelievers involved in the cosmic system, produce the action. The indicative mood indicates simply the first class condition. But when we go to the aorist active infinitive we now have a change from the present tense to the aorist tense. The aorist tense is a constative aorist for a fact or action extended over one thousand two hundred and sixty days, the period of the ministry of Moses and Elijah as the human heralds of the second advent. The active voice: both believers and unbelievers involved in the cosmic system have the freedom to express antagonism in terms of harm. The infinitive is the infinitive of purpose expressing the aim of the direction denoted by the finite verb, the finite verb being the verb qelw.

What does all this add up to? It all adds up to a principle, but first we need to get the translation. We have an accusative plural direct object from a)utoj, an intensive pronoun never used as an intensive pronoun, or rarely does. In the Koine Greek they forgot to bring all of the personal pronouns over from the Attic Greek, and they forgot to bring the third person personal pronoun o(u or its plural sfej. Since they didn't bring them over they had to find a substitute and that is why a)utoj is used hundreds of times as a personal pronoun, third person, and rarely ever used as an intensive pronoun. Here it is the direct object and it refers to Moses and Elijah once again. So what we have so far is: "Furthermore if anyone [demonised population, believer and unbeliever in the cosmic system] desires to harm them [Moses and Elijah]."

Then we have the apodosis. The protasis of the first class condition verifies the fact that they are going to have opposition. In the apodosis the first word is the word for fire in the Greek, pur. Next we have a verb, the present active indicative of e)kporeuomai and it really should be translated, "fire shoots out of their mouths." The e)kporeuomai is a pictorial present tense, it brings to the mind a picture of this event in the process of occurrence. These two great men on their second tour of duty in history are permitted a weapon. They are permitted to kill with a very important weapon. Reason: they are so wise, the great pressure does not bring out any antagonism in them, they can use this weapon strictly for defence. They never abuse the wall of fire given to them. They are so wise, so objective, so filled with personal responsibility and integrity that the weapon is safe in their hands. Therefore they are permitted this weapon of protection for remember that the last three and a half years of the Tribulation is the greatest period of violence in all of human history. While the active voice emphasises the action of the verb the middle voice emphasises the agent producing the action. The indirect middle emphasises the agent as producing the action rather than participating in its results. The indicative mood is declarative for the future reality of this weapons system in the hands of these two men. Principle: Always in this world there are those who can be trusted with weapons. They have a great sense of responsibility, they have virtue, integrity and honour, and they never use the weapon to gain power or authority for themselves but strictly as a matter of defence. That is exactly the principle here.

So fire shoots from their mouth. We have e)k plus the ablative of stoma for the mouth. The question always: Is it literally from their mouth or not? In this case it doesn't make any difference, it is still a weapon, it is still effective. The Bible doesn't satisfy our curiosity. What the Bible does tell us is that it is effective and the principle behind it: those who have integrity have the right to weapons. Moses and Elijah have a special weapon. They are either evangelising and teaching believers on the one hand or they are antagonising the whole cosmic system — believers and unbelievers in the cosmic system, all the fallen angels who have been thrown out of heaven. They are antagonising everyone and if you antagonise that many people one of them is going to get the idea that you should be eliminated. So before they left heaven they were given this special weapon. Note that God gives them the weapon. The police system in Jerusalem in the Tribulation is not going to protect them, no one is going to protect them, they are on their own and they are going to survive magnificently until it is the Lord's time to take them. No system of evil, no power in the world, no system of weaponry no matter how sophisticated, can take a person out of this world until God says it is time to come home.

The next phrase is, "and it destroys." The connective conjunction kai followed by the present active indicative of katesqiw means to eat, to masticate, to chew up, swallow and completely digest. What it comes to mean is to destroy, to consume in the sense of destroy, "and it destroys" is the correct translation. The static present tense is for a condition taken for granted as a fact. When God gave them a weapon the weapon was designed to destroy. That is what weapons are for! God didn't give them this fire to impress everyone. Notice that God will abolish warfare in the Millennium but until then weapons are legitimate. The active voice: fire from the mouth of Moses and Elijah produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of this defence weapons system which acts as a wall of fire protecting these two men while they carry on their ministry.

When we react is when we are at our most dangerous self. In this period of the Tribulation a lot of people are going to react to Moses and Elijah and they are going to react with violence. So what is the correct thing to do when people are out to destroy you? Exactly what the Bible says here: "and it destroys their enemies," the accusative plural direct object from e)kqroj which means enemies. Note that this weapons system is defensive. A defensive weapon is designed to match wisdom and integrity. Until the Lord calls you home you have a right to stay alive and a defensive weapon is to be used simply to defend your right to stay alive.

A weapons system is a defensive system, it is not to be used to achieve power. It is used to protect your right to live in this earth as an individual. You have a right to live until the Lord calls you home. You have a right to live to fulfil God's plan for your life. You have a right not only to live but you have a right to property. Your life and your property are both sacred. Property is anything you own. As an offensive weapon system it would be a system of tyranny; as a defensive weapon it is a system of freedom. That is why God gave the two heralds this weapon.

The two heralds were permitted to use weapons in defence of their lives. God had a purpose for their lives and that purpose did not agree, of course, with Satan who in the time of his desperation will seek to destroy every effective communication of Bible doctrine.

And so demonised people will seek to annihilate, to destroy, to assassinate Moses and Elijah during their second tour of duty to this earth. They are given one weapon by which they can kill those who try to kill them.

There are two principles here: It is important that their message be disseminated; Every human being has a right to live until he has forfeited that life to crime or until it is God's time to take him home. Life is sacred under the laws of divine establishment. Life and property are both sacred and are not to be tampered with. In the protection of them the use of violence is legitimate.

This weapons system which will be used to protect and preserve the lives of the two heralds from destruction so that the plan of God can be fulfilled in the communication of doctrine. As a defensive weapon used against their enemies it is a killer in the most honourable and righteous sense. Arrogance on the part of these two men could result in them turning the weapons system into an offensive weapon for their personal advantage, a seizure of power, but they didn't do it. All weapons must be compatible with the Word of God in a given situation. In the military to kill with weapons is an honourable thing but the use of weapons in society to eliminate someone you hate is an evil thing. In this situation God is not using Moses and Elijah as commandos from heaven to kill the enemies of the cross, He is using them to communicate Bible doctrine to people who can therefore use their volition to accept it or reject it.

So out of this first half of verse five comes a principle:

Weapon compatibility with a mission

1. In time a weapon exists, whether it is a conventional weapon or a sophisticated weapon — a missile, a nuclear bomb, a machine gun, or what ever it is — the weapon must be compatible with the mission and objective.

2. As such this weapon, the flame thrower in the context, was designed to keep them alive, not to kill those who live in the cosmic system. Why didn't God protect them? you say. God never stops the function of the angelic conflict which is volition. In the volition of certain demonised people they want to kill Moses and Elijah, but God does not stop the function of their volition. If God coerces evil volition God can coerce good volition; but God doesn't coerce any volition, that is the name of the game in the angelic conflict. Therefore recognising that people are going to try to kill them God provides them with something where their volition is involved. When you use a weapon in defence of your life your volition is involved. God does not destroy positive or negative volition, good or bad volition, they both function. Moses and Elijah have a weapon, therefore they have volition with the use of that weapon, just as those who hate them and despise them and want to kill them have volition and weapons and try to kill them. So the whole of the time of Satan's desperation, the last half of the Tribulation, is still volition. God has never tampered with volition.

No one can function in life and utilise divine power delegated to him unless he understands his mission.

3. There is no abuse in the use of this weapon on the part of Moses and Elijah. They didn't use it for their personal glory or to gain control of the world. Why didn't they? Because they understood their mission.

4. Moses and Elijah were selected for this mission because they would not abuse this sophisticated weapon for their own benefit but they would use it for the glory of God in the sense that they were glorifying God by teaching doctrine, and to continue to teach doctrine they had to use it in defence of their lives.

5. The purpose of a defensive weapon is to keep a person alive for the fulfilment of his mission.

6. Therefore they are to give people Bible doctrine and only to kill those who would seek to kill them and who would seek to hinder them from teaching doctrine. In other words, those who would try to stop their mission by killing them. Life is sacred and no one has a right to take their lives.

7. When you have power in your hands you must be alert to use that power in the context of your mission, not as a means of gaining power for self.

8. The most difficult weapons to use in the Christian life are those weapons designed for defensive action only. Therefore the principle: No one can function in life and utilise divine power delegated to him unless he understands his mission in life, the meaning of his life in relationship to logistical grace. And the application to us: to understand our mission in life. We are members of the royal family of God, we are given offensive weapons like impersonal love toward man. Our defensive weapon is residence and function in the divine dynasphere, the wall of fire. Our offensive system is perception and application of Bible doctrine.

Verse 5, "For if anyone desires to harm them," the two heralds, Moses and Elijah, "fire shoots out of their mouth, and destroys their enemies." Their enemies are both born-again believers and unbelievers in the cosmic system. They are first of all enemies of the cross, demonised, and they become the enemies of Moses and Elijah.

There is a second conditional clause. We begin with the inferential expletive kai, and with it a conditional conjunction e)i. It introduces ordinarily a second class condition, but here we find e)i plus the subjunctive and it is therefore a third class condition. That means a more probable future condition, it introduces the protasis of a third class condition. The enclitic indefinite pronoun tij follows, used for a category. It represents a category of the human race, those people in the Tribulation living in the cosmic system involved in degrees of demonism. If they are believers they can only be under demon influence which motivates them to evil and terrorism; or they can be, as unbelievers, both under demon influence and demon possessed, which influences them to do exactly the same thing. The result is the same. Technically there is a difference as to what can happen to a believer in the cosmic system.

Then we have the aorist active subjunctive of the verb qelw. This is a potential situation which will finish up the concept of this verse. Qelw means to wish or to desire and sometimes even implies the relationship between motivation and action, “also if anyone would desire.” The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety and places emphasis on motivation and the function of free will of those believers and unbelievers in the Tribulation, living in the cosmic system. The active voice: the Tribulational believers and unbelievers living in the cosmic system and are involved in their demonisation process produce the action of the verb, and people undergo personality change.

Weak people undergo personality change because of bad environment but environment is no excuse for personality change, personality degeneration. Strong people undergo personality change through perception of principle: unbelievers, principle; believers, Bible doctrine. No two people are ever the same in life. As long as you are exposed to varying circumstances of life you will undergo personality change. And, of course, it can be for the better or for the worse. It is generally for the worse unless you have the ability and the power to think, the ability and the power to perceive in terms of principle — doctrine, truth. If your life is not regulated by some system of principle of truth and doctrine then your changes are always for the worse.

The subjunctive mood is a potential subjunctive qualified by the element of contingency. Life in the cosmic system is the contingency and it motivates antagonism toward those who teach truth. Believers and unbelievers alike in the cosmic truth are antagonistic toward any communication of the truth.

“also if anyone,” demonised population residing in the cosmic system, “would desire.” Then we have the aorist active infinitive of the verb a)dikew which means to harm or to do some form of evil. In this case it has to do with assassination, terrorism. The constative aorist tense is for a fact or action extended over the period of the ministry of Moses and Elijah in the time of the eschatology of Satan’s desperation, the last half of the Tribulation. The active voice: the believer and unbeliever living in that period of time produce the action of the verb, and this is an infinitive of purpose expressing the aim of the action denoted by the main verb, qelw. With it we have the accusative plural direct object from a)utoj, which is the intensive pronoun used as the personal pronoun third person because it was not carried over from the Attic Greek. It is translated “them,” “also if anyone would desire to harm or to hurt them.” That is the protasis.

The apodosis follows and begins with an adverb which refers to what precedes, o(utoj which should be translated “in this manner.” It is a reference to the weapons system and all of the uses of weapons which we have studied. It is a reference to the weapons system of the human heralds, the fire which is said to shoot out of their mouth. The details of the weapon are not the issue. Suffice to say it is a weapon. It is a good weapon because it is a lethal weapon, it does what a weapon is intended to do, kill. This is the only way that freedom can be maintained in the face of terrorism, paramilitarism, criminality, and all of the other systems whereby people seek to gain control of you by force, by threats, by violence. Intimidation by violence is the name of the game in a degenerate society.

We have the impersonal verb of necessity which follows, dei, and it is translated “must.” Then we have the accusative of general reference of a)utoj again, this time in the third person singular referring to the demonised person motivated to use terror against Moses and Elijah, translated “he.” The accusative of general reference is not properly the subject of the infinitive but an accusative of reference but an accusative of reference used to describe the person producing the action of the infinitive. So we simplify the matter by calling it the subject of the infinitive.

Next we have the aorist passive infinitive a)pokteinw which means to kill, “he must be killed” is the translation. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it refers to the momentary action of being killed by the weapons system from the hands of the most spiritual men on the face of the earth. Spirituality does not mean that you should lie down and let people step all over you. There are always principles whereby you withdraw from any act of violence but there are also principles whereby violence becomes a necessary function. Violent people only understand violence. They do not understand reason, they are irrational, they are antiestablishment, and they want to settle everything in the manner of degeneracy, the use of violence. When you are faced with that kind of person then you must have a greater system of violence than they possess. Moses and Elijah possess a greater system of violence and they use it.

“in this manner they must be killed” is in the passive voice: the subjects, the demonised assassins receive the action of the verb, killed by the weapons systems in the hands of Moses and Elijah. This is the infinitive of actual result. Remember that demonisation in the cosmic system as we have recently studied it includes criminal arrogance. These assassins who reside in the cosmic system must be executed quickly by the two heralds. There isn't time even to take them to court, they must be executed immediately in order that the mission assigned to them might be continued, the mission of communicating Bible doctrine.

The fact that Moses and Elijah had to kill quite a few people in Jerusalem did not in any way hinder their ministry or the plan of God. If it was going to hinder the plan of God then God would not have entrusted them with a weapons system before they left heaven for their next tour of duty. They are not irresponsible people with weapons. Irresponsible people should never have weapons. But we are not dealing with irresponsible people, we are dealing with people who when faced with the message of Bible doctrine are so antagonised as to immediately resort to violence and the fact that they are instantly killed does not hinder the ministry of Moses and Elijah. These assassins who reside in the cosmic system must be executed quickly and the speed of their punishment is effective, it cause other demonised human beings who have the same idea to be restrained. In effect this weapons system which came from the hand of God becomes a system of law. That is what law is all about, it is to restrain evil instincts, to restrain violence, to bring civilisation into society. If people do not have enough norms and standards that would restrain them then they must have something to fear that will restrain them, and that is the issue of law. This weapon in the hands of Moses and Elijah is so effective it produces fear.

Note: If you were smart you would never want anyone to fear you, only respect. Fear has to be used professionally in order to have effectiveness, but watch out for the people who fear you, they are the most dangerous people of all.

However, in this case the people who fear are less dangerous because they are so impressed by the use of that weapon.

Translation of verse 5 — “Furthermore if anyone desires to harm them, fire shoots out of their mouth, and it kills their enemies: also, if anyone would desire to hurt them in this manner, they must be killed.”

Principle: As long as God has a plan for your life there is no power or combination of powers on this earth which can remove you by death or torture, or destroy you in any way. In other words, remove you by violence.

No harm will come to the two heralds of the second advent until their ministry is finished, and then they will be the objects of violence. When people really understand what is taught they either respond or react. Moses and Elijah are so great at teaching doctrine that eventually there will be a reaction, but not until God permits it. One of the adjuncts to God’s plan for the believer is to security and protection to accomplish the divine mandates, but God never protects a person in such a way as to eliminate the volition of those who are evil because evil people must be responsible for their own evil. Evil people must be responsible for their own decisions. God provides a system of security for these two men, a system of security that does not in any way hinder the volition of evil people. They leave heaven with this weapon and they do not use it in any evil way, it is dormant unless it is necessary to save their lives. In this way God protects them.

As long as the believer is alive on the earth God has a plan for his life, and only those believers who are consistent in perception of doctrine have a personal sense of destiny, and the execution of the will of God demands exemption from any harm, including physical death by violence.

The crisis personality in general

The key to the crisis personality is abnormal pressure, unusual situations and circumstances. Abnormal pressure comes generally from historical disasters. The crisis personality, either through thought or speech or action, or a combination thereof, leads and dominates in disaster. There are three ways in which the crisis personality can meet a disaster: thought, speech, action. Sometimes it is a combination. The crisis personality can think, speak and act in abnormal circumstances of adversity, and therefore the crisis personality, through these three systems, dominates in disaster so that the people involved in the adversity are delivered, encouraged, changed, or in some other way profit from the disaster.

The profit is not always victory but some form of blessing at that time or a later time. The crisis personality may be a good or a bad person, he may be pleasant or obnoxious, he may be attractive or unattractive, but he is always controversial. The crisis personality emerges as the man of the hour in the greatest historical disaster, like Winston Churchill. The crisis personality has the ability to think under pressure, the true definition of courage, and he may even be a great public speaker whose message in historical disaster turns the tide. Often, but not always, the crisis personality does not appear to adjust too well to normal times and normal circumstances, like the hero who cannot adjust the routine of garrison duty or civilian life. Generally speaking the crisis personality possesses great honour, integrity, has a strong sense of responsibility plus great leadership ability which reaches its peak of expression under disastrous circumstances. Once the crisis is past the crisis personality is all too often forgotten. Illustration: Ecclesiastes 9:14-15 — “There was a small city, with a few men in it; and a great king came to it, and surrounded it, and constructed huge siege works against it [that is the crisis]: and there was found in it [the besieged city] a humble but very wise man [crisis personality], who delivered the city by his wisdom; yet, afterward no one remembered that humble yet wise man.” He was the crisis personality but he was forgotten.

A veteran of the Marlborough wars once wrote down this sentiment:

“God and the soldier we adore,

In time of danger, not before.

The danger past, and all things cited,

God is forgotten, and the soldier slighted.”

In time of disaster people follow the leadership of the crisis personality, but once the disaster is over the same people are often embarrassed by their bad decisions which created the disaster in the first place. Therefore they blot out the embarrassment of their own failures and simultaneously they blot out the one who rectified their failures.

The crisis personality in particular

1. The believer with momentum inside of the divine dynasphere is designed to be a crisis personality. He is prepared to be a crisis personality by continued momentum.
2. The believer as a crisis personality must have a personal sense of destiny. This comes from gate four of the divine dynasphere, the momentum gate, perception and application of doctrine.
3. The believer as a crisis personality must have control of his life in normal times so that he will have control of his life under pressure. No one can be a crisis personality unless he has control of his life in normal times, for it must go over to control of his life in abnormal times, under pressure. If you do not have control of your life in normal circumstances there is no way that you will have control of your life under pressure.
4. The believer as a crisis personality must make good decisions from a position of strength. If he does it under normal circumstances he will make good decisions from a position of strength in time of pressure and disaster.
5. The believer as a crisis personality must possess right priorities. These right priorities must come from his perception of Bible doctrine: the function of honour, integrity, virtue under pressure, and at all times, of course, orientation to the plan of God. Right priorities are not developed in a crisis, right priorities must be developed before the crisis. Right priorities developed before the crisis mean persistence and consistency in perception of Bible doctrine.
6. Therefore the believer as a crisis personality is spiritually prepared for disaster. Nothing greater exists than to be spiritually prepared for disaster and any abnormal circumstance of life.
7. Sometimes the pattern of the crisis personality is low profile during normal times, but emerging from obscurity to stand in the gap during the crisis.
8. The crisis results from a maximum number of bad decisions on the part of someone, therefore the crisis was created by the failure of the general public. All crises are the result of a number of bad decisions on the part of the general public. God uses that crisis to introduce His man of the hour — like David in Israel. The crisis personality then combines the use of divine power with acquired spiritual resources. The divine power is always there but you, through your own positive volition, must acquire the spiritual resources. No one can do it for you and there is no way to be a crisis personality without it. God uses prepared men. God's prepared men emerge in time of crisis — like Moses in the Exodus, David in the Goliath crisis, Elijah in the Ahab crisis, Isaiah in the Assyrian crisis, Paul in the Nero crisis, and in the time of the eschatology of the devil's desperation, Moses and Elijah, facing the greatest historical crisis of history.

We move now to other special powers given to these men. To whom much is given, much is expected, and God does not give any system of power to the believer unless he has the sense of responsibility, the integrity to handle that power and that authority. So we recognise immediately that Moses and Elijah on their second tour of duty in the time of greatest historical crisis were qualified to receive and to utilise these special powers.

We begin verses 6 with the nominative plural from the immediate demonstrative pronoun o(utoj, it is referring to Moses and Elijah. It is correctly translated, “these,” the two great human heralds of the second advent, two great crisis personalities. With this we have the present active indicative of the verb e)wxw which means to have. Anyone who is a crisis personality must have the necessary spiritual resources and others deemed necessary by God, in order to fulfil their mission. The progressive present tense signifies the action of a state of persistence, present linear aktionsart. The active voice: Moses and Elijah produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative represent the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality. These men are given supernatural powers to fulfil their ministry. They will fulfil their ministry and not be distracted by supernatural powers. Only the arrogant are distracted by being given unusual ability or extra-natural power.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object from e)cousia, which means “authority.” It refers here to the great authority of Moses and Elijah. God does give great authority to anyone who is not prepared to use it. In order to exercise authority properly one must have honour, integrity, virtue, the divine perspective in every sense of the word, must avoid all forms of arrogance [cosmic one with its various gates of interlocking systems of arrogance]. The only possible way, therefore, to exercise this power properly is to do so in a state of true humility. Both Moses and Elijah possess these characteristics, though in their first tour of duty on this earth they failed with regard to this principle. Moses and Elijah, the human heralds, have the authority or the power. Authority, of course, means power, and that is why in the Greek it is often used both ways. We can translate it, “these have the power.” It includes great authority.

Then we have the verb in the infinitive form: the aorist active infinitive of kleiw. Kleiw means to shut, and with the accusative singular direct object o)uranoj it means to shut down the sky. It is an agricultural term. The Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written and it refers to economic disaster. That is exactly what authority they have, to bring about economic disaster. Why economic disaster? Because of all the systems of disaster that make the individual realise the fallacy of his volition, his failure in taking responsibility for his own decisions, economic disaster does this in the best possible and objective way. Once people face economic disaster they face the realities of life. They can see where they have failed or succeeded. Some people come through economic disaster very well and some do not, and it is always a very clear-cut picture as to whether we have failed or succeeded in making good or bad decisions — good decisions from a position of strength; bad decisions from a position of weakness.

But there is even a greater reason for this and that is the fact that economic disaster brings a maximum number of people to a point of helplessness. Helplessness can go in either one of two ways. A helpless person or a helpless population can either become a hopeless population or they can rise to the occasion and be a crisis population. It is the difference between being a winner or a loser. A helpless population always gives up and when it does it always becomes hopeless and goes into some form of slavery or becomes some category of loser. As a result of being a loser enslavement is in order. The communists have discovered this principle and that is why they work overtime to make populations of various countries feel hopeless so that they can be exploited for communist conquest of the world, and these people become losers in their helplessness. But to face the crisis in a helpless state and to have spiritual resources from the Word of God causes the individual to become a winner. Moses and Elijah are winners and they are going to give that particular concept of doctrine to the population.

“These [Moses and Elijah] have authority and power to shut down the heavens [the sky].” The constative aorist tense has to do with the fact or action extended over a period of time. They can cut it off and they can start it again. The active voice: they have this power. The infinitive of intended result is used when a result is indicated as fulfilling a deliberate objective. The objective is to bring people back to reality in a time of hopelessness and helplessness. That means to bring them first to the reality of the cross, the reality of eternal salvation through faith in Jesus Christ, for this is the beginning of solution in time of hopelessness. Hopelessness and helplessness combine often to open up for the first time the volition of the individual. People who have rejected the gospel, people who have rejected Bible doctrine as believers, people who have become discouraged through a series of events, then have the reality that only God can intervene on their behalf, and they become positive toward the things of God, Bible doctrine as communicated in this case by Moses and Elijah. Moses and Elijah pull brands from the burning. That is, they evangelise and many people are saved in this time of great historical crisis. Also many believers who have been living in the cosmic system, whose priorities are all mixed up and who have put Bible doctrine on the bottom priority, now raise it to the top and begin to enter into a system of solution in their personal lives in time of national or international crisis. Economic disaster forces people to face reality, and being forced to face reality at that point in the crisis, they become either a winner or a loser. The crisis means permanent winner or permanent loser in the spiritual realm. For some believers in becoming losers in time of economic crisis eventually die the sin unto death. Their lives are absolutely useless and they merely demonstrate the power of God in disciplining the believer for his failure to have a personal sense of destiny from perception of doctrine, his failure to make decisions from a position of strength, and his failure to maintain control of his life through spiritual resources provided under the concept of logistical grace.

Next we have a sub-final purpose clause. It begins with the conjunction i(na). Why are they given these unusual powers? This is a time of great crisis, three and a half years of the most concentrated crisis in all of history, the time of the eschatology of the devil's desperation. The conjunction i(na) introduces a sub-final or a semi-final purpose clause which denotes the direction of the action in the main verb toward a given result. This given result is anticipated. We translate it “so that.”

With it we have a negative verb. We have the negative mh plus the present active subjunctive of brexw, “so that rain may not fall.” Again, we are talking about an agricultural economy at the time of the writing of the Bible, and lack of rain meant economic disaster. In our country today economic disaster means lack of basic industries. (High technology is no good without basic industry to support it) No system of economy will work unless it has a good foundation.

The crisis has only one solution, and this is why Moses and Elijah were sent by God in this time of the devil's desperation. The solution is a spiritual solution, a spiritual solution which begins by faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, and then the daily decisions which must be made in the face of every form of disaster: the decisions to put the Word of God first, the decision to grow in grace above everything else, the understanding of the utilisation of logistical grace, the function of the three stages of the faith-rest drill, the importance of the rebound technique to avoid cosmic involvement. Getting back to basics is the thing that counts as far as the solution is concerned. And from those basics, growing in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and saviour, Jesus Christ.

When these two men came people were so mixed up during this last half of the Tribulation. Believers were mixed up because they had ignored doctrine; unbelievers were mixed up because of the usual problems of involvement in the cosmic system. And so two men were sent from heaven by God in the middle of the Tribulation to face the most mixed-up population the world has ever known — filled with confusion and false ideas about almost every subject. How are they going to get the attention of the world? How are they going to focus their attention on the fact that it is spiritual solution that is necessary in historical crisis? Well, they are going to do it by having certain authority, certain power, certain ability, certain talents that will eventually focus attention on the message. They are going to be given extra-natural powers, not to gain control of people, not to build any personal empire, but to focus attention on Bible doctrine in a time of great adversity.

So the translation: "These have the power to shut up the sky, so that rain may not fall." The customary present tense denotes what reasonably be expected to occur following the pattern of Elijah's original ministry in 1 Kings 17:1, "Now Elijah said to Ahab, 'As the Lord, the God of Israel lives, before whom I stand, definitely there shall be neither dew nor rain these years, except by my word'." It is a duplication of the power given to Elijah in the great crisis of Ahab as the king of northern Israel. God raised up Elijah at that time and in order to get the attention of the people and to make them realise that the most important thing in life is Bible doctrine he was given certain supernatural powers. And they related to the economy for when people hurt economically that is when they begin to look around for answers, and that is exactly what happened. Cf. Luke 4:25; James 5:17. All power on the part of Elijah is going to be demonstrated so that people will listen to Bible doctrine. That is the proper use of power, to give the Word of God a hearing.

The active voice: Moses and Elijah as the two human heralds of the second advent will have the power to shut down the economy in order that people will listen to Bible doctrine. The subjunctive mood plus the negative mh is the subjunctive of prohibition. With this we have accusative of the extent of time which has as its final object h(mera, meaning days, "during the days of their prophetic ministry." The word for prophetic ministry is a descriptive genitive from the noun profhteia which means communication of doctrine. It doesn't mean teaching prophecy although it is translated “prophetic ministry”. It is actually a doctrinal ministry, for as we have already seen both the Greek words and the Hebrew words simply mean preaching doctrine, which we call forth telling. Then from that doctrine comes the future, and that would be foretelling. So the words prophet and prophecy don’t mean predicting the future as it is used in a modern connotation, it means someone who communicates doctrine. And, of course, the communication of doctrine deals with the past, the present, and the future. And so “in the days of their prophetic ministry” means the communication of Bible doctrine.

While the first authority or power given to these two heralds of the second advent is related to the ministry of Elijah, the second authority or power is related to the ministry of Moses. Moses had the power to turn water into blood in Exodus 7:19-25.

In focusing on Moses and what is coming up in the next phrase we need to go back and remember Moses for a moment. Moses grew up in the palace of the greatest line of Pharaohs that ever lived in the greatness of that country, when Egypt was the greatest empire in the world. He grew up with the royal family. Moses was going to be the next Pharaoh of Egypt, he was by far the smartest and the greatest and with that in mind he was groomed for his future position. He studied extensively in all of the Egyptian colleges, he became a great architect and built two of the treasure cities, the treasure cities through which he marched during the Exodus. He also was a great military man. He was also a musical genius and a great writer. In fact, he was multitalented in every possible way.

But about the time when Moses was about to take over as Pharaoh Moses discovered his own race, the Jews in slavery, and that is when he identified himself with them. Eventually that great passage in Hebrews 11, “he did not fear the wrath of the king, but was occupied with the Lord”. As such he identified himself with his people and renounced the throne of Egypt. He had great training, he met many a crisis while he was preparing to be the king of Egypt, but the crisis was even greater when it came to removing the Jews from slavery. He was a man who had great humility and combined with his ability that made him one of the greatest men of genius in all of history. He was therefore given by God fantastic power. He would never abuse that power, he would never use that power to gain ascendancy over anyone. He did not use his power to liberate the Jews to become his slaves, he used that power to make them a free people even though they couldn’t handle freedom and even though the first generation failed completely in freedom.

So Moses became the great liberator in Israel. In order to do that he had to face a very jealous son of the jealous father. For his rival had died while he was forty years in the wilderness and when he came back to Egypt he faced his son, Amenhotep II, who had all of his father’s stubbornness without his father’s genius. So God gave great power to Moses in the liberation, the freedom from slavery of the Jews. And now this is mentioned in the middle of Revelation 11:6. It begins with the conjunction kai, followed by the present active indicative ε)ξω which, again, is used for God giving special power to special people, “and they have.” The progressive present tense, present linear aktionsart. The active voice: Moses and Elijah as the two human heralds produce the action. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality. And, again, we have that same accusative direct object from e)cousia, and it means both power and authority. It is anarthrous, there is no definite article, emphasising the qualitative aspect of the noun rather than its mere identity. This is said to be in the prepositional phrase that follows, e)pi plus the genitive of u(dor, "over water." He was given "power over the waters."

What power was given to him is mentioned in the infinitive that follows: the present active infinitive of the verb strefw which means to turn. The descriptive present or pictorial present. The active voice: Moses and Elijah had the power, the infinitive of intended result. In time of terrible economic depression one of the worst things to have go bad is water. So he is going to deny them the use of water, "to turn the waters into blood." In Exodus 7:20 Moses had that same power. That was the first plague of Egypt.

Next we have the intensive use of the conjunction kai, translated "in fact." Then the aorist active infinitive from patassw which means to strike. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety and therefore over a period of their ministry, three and a half years, they will have this power. How much they use it is not recorded. Moses and Elijah as human heralds produce the action, this is the infinitive of intended result in which a deliberate objective is being fulfilled. The objective is to focus attention on Bible doctrine. In fact "they strike the land with every plague"; "every plague" refers to the plagues which Moses performed in BC 1441.

Corrected translation: "These [Moses and Elijah] have power to shut up the sky, so that rain may not fall in the days of their prophetic ministry: furthermore they have power over the waters to turn them into blood, in fact to strike the land with every plague as often as possible."

Principle: Both Moses and Elijah will function in the Tribulation as they had in their past ministries. For one thing is obvious: neither man ever abused the extra-natural and supernatural powers given to them. No man can ever be great in history, in any area, if he abuses power and authority. All true greatness in every field of life depends upon the proper use of authority without its abuse. Moses and Elijah demonstrated the fact that no matter how much authority, how much power, how much of supernatural activities were assigned to them they would never abuse it. They would never use it for any form of self-gain but they would utilise these things to focus attention on the Word of God. They would teach doctrine under the power of God the Holy Spirit and they will verify their ministry with these miracles they will perform. But notice: there is the basic power for communication of doctrine; the greatest power of all, the filling of the Holy Spirit; but there is also another system of power and this power is in the performing of certain miracles.

We live in a time when the performing of miracles is not necessary. The reason is that we have the completed canon of scripture and the Word of God is alive and powerful. But before the canon was completed and during this period of the last three and a half years of the Tribulation miracles are a power, a sign. The problem always comes in realising, Why miracles? Are miracles simply to alleviate suffering? Never. Miracles are designed to focus attention on the gospel. If miracles were designed to alleviate suffering then why didn't Jesus heal everyone while He was on earth? He didn't. He only healed a few when there was an opportunity to present the message. It is the doctrine that has the greatest power, and so under the ministry of the Holy Spirit Bible doctrine is communicated to people with free will so that they can accept it or reject it. Miracles are merely designed to get people to be positive long enough to hear doctrine. Most people, of course, abuse such power as miracles by simply using it to draw attention to self and in order to gain control over people. But the objective of miracles is not to gain control over people but to give people an opportunity to focus attention on doctrine. Then they can say yes or no to the doctrine. The key, then, is doctrine.

So two kinds of power are given to Moses and Elijah, the power of miracles. They will not abuse it, they will use it properly in order to focus attention on their message. Never has the land of Israel had such great opportunity to be saved as during this ministry of Moses and Elijah for they will speak under the power of God the Holy Spirit and they will perform miracles so that their message is heard. The land has its greatest opportunity for salvation and spiritual growth. Never will the power of negative volition, however, be so great for this is the eschatology of the devil's desperation. Satan is now confined to the earth and in his desperation he is going to fight these two men with every possible miracle, with every use of power, with every system of aggrandisement. Miracles or plagues are not necessary, again, in the Church Age to give credibility to the teacher, but they are necessary in the Tribulation where God the Holy Spirit only indwells a few, those who communicate doctrine, and miracles are used to focus attention on the message of Spirit-filled men. Once the canon of scripture was completed doctrinal communication became the order of the day without verification from miracles. The reason is obvious. Every believer is indwelt by the Holy Spirit in this dispensation plus the fact that every believer has the divine dynasphere which replaced the need for miracles in verifying the message. And since this is the dispensation of the divine dynasphere it is not necessary to provide any credibility to miracles. We do not live in the age of miracles. God still performs supernatural acts under certain conditions but all of the miracle gifts have been removed.

In the Tribulation, however, miracles are used as a system of authority to focus attention on the message of Moses and Elijah. They function from Jerusalem and will have a world-wide ministry, possibly through television and some satellite system which will be in operation at that time.

Verse 7, the murder of the two witnesses. No man is able to assassinate them, they will be assassinated by Satan's number two man in his organisation, Abaddon, the prince of all of Satan's undercover and terrorist activities.

We begin with the conjunction kai, translated "Now" since it is sequential. With this we have a very important temporal conjunction o(tan, it means that as long as God's plan for their lives continues nothing will harm them. But once it is finished that is something else, "Now when." This temporal conjunction introduces an indefinite temporal clause in which we are going to discover that there will come a time when this great ministry of these two men will be concluded. Next is the aorist active subjunctive of the verb telew, "Now when they had finished their testimony.” The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it views the completion of their testimony in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of its existing results. They will be removed by death. The active voice: Moses and Elijah produce the action on their second tour of duty, and the subjunctive mood is a potential subjunctive used to form an indefinite temporal clause, therefore a potential subjunctive implying a future reference qualified by the element of contingency.

Finally, we have their ministry summarised in the accusative singular direct object from marturia. Marturia means testimony in court. They have come from heaven to testify with regard to God’s plan for the lives of mankind. We have the possessive genitive plural from autoj, “their” testimony.

Corrected translation: “Now when they had finished their testimony.”

Here are two of the greatest men in all of history as far as communication of doctrine is concerned, and from them we are going to extrapolate a principle:

No one is indispensable but the Lord

1. There comes a time when the best of ministries are completed and the Lord recalls His servant to heaven.
2. No matter how great the ministry there is a time in human history when that ministry is completed and another must take its place.
3. God uses many different people in many historical situations, different people for different situations.
4. For example, the men God used in the Reformation would be very ineffective today, and vice versa.
5. No one is indispensable in the Lord’s service. God has a right time for the right man — when he should begin and when he should terminate.
6. The question arises: How is the right man determined? He must be a believer, obviously. He must have a spiritual gift of communication. He must be dedicated to the study of the Word of God above all else, and with that dedication God will provide all forms of preparation. There are those who have the gift of pastor-teacher who never succeed because they have no dedication to the study of the Word of God.
7. The power is in the Word, not in the personality of the communicator.
8. However, no matter how great the communicator, no matter how great the man, there comes a time when his work is finished. When his work is finished God removes that man by physical death, although in some case he may be permitted to remain on earth to enjoy some of the results of a faithful ministry — but not too often.

9. Humility accepts this principle of doctrine while arrogance fights it to the bitter end. Without humility the teacher of the Word of God has neither happiness nor a sense of personal destiny.

10. So it boils down to the fact that no matter how great the servant of the Lord has been and no matter how he has been used of the Lord, he is not indispensable. Only the Lord who provides and sustains His servants is indispensable, and in His great wisdom the Lord provides the minister to meet the needs and the volitional status of a specific generation.

Therefore the great differences in personality and communication from one generation to another is not the issue. The issue is: Is he God's man?

Moses and Elijah had great ministries in the past but ministries not completed, for Moses did not lead the Jews into the land and Elijah was replaced by Elisha. Moses was replaced by Joshua. God had a time for their ministry and then it was all over.

The principle is that God only uses prepared men. Too often either cosmic involvement or lack of training hinders a potential minister. A minister is only a potential servant of the Lord until he is prepared. This means both academic preparation, adversity preparation, personality preparation (arrogance versus humility), and that dedicated scale of values which always places Bible doctrine first. Moses and Elijah are those two great servants of the Lord who did not complete their ministries during their lifetime on this earth. Both were hindered from completing their ministries through arrogance. For Moses it was the arrogance of self-righteousness, "Must we bring water from this rock"; for Elijah it was the arrogance of self-pity when he said in 1 Kings: "I, only I am left, and they seek my life to take it away." Now Moses and Elijah are permitted to finish their ministries on their second tour of duty to the earth. The completion of their ministry results in their dramatic death and resuscitation. But until their ministry of announcing the second advent and the teaching of doctrine and the evangelising of positive volition is completed Moses and Elijah have a world-wide ministry and message from Jerusalem. As the heralds of the King Moses and Elijah are faithful in teaching the Word, emphasising the approach of the greatest of all eschatological events, the time of our Lord's tactical victory.

"Now when they had finished their testimony." We have noted the principle that no one is indispensable but the Lord. There comes a time when the best of the Lord's servants have finished their ministry and the Lord calls them home to heaven. Another must take their place. Moses and Elijah are those two great servants of the Lord who did not complete their ministry during their lifetime on this earth, and both were hindered from the completion of their ministry through their own failure during their first tour of duty. Moses was the most humble man in the world but one point of arrogance ended his ministry as far as leading the Jews into the promised land. But now Moses and Elijah are permitted to finish their ministry in the last three and a half years of the Tribulation. The completion of their ministry results in a very dramatic death and resuscitation but until their ministry of communicating doctrine and announcing the second advent is completed Moses and Elijah have a world-wide testimony.

Principle

1. The reason for antagonism against Moses and Elijah emphasises the effectiveness of their ministry. The reason for antagonism is that any form of apostasy, any form of cosmic involvement, becomes antagonistic toward the truth. When those who are involved in the cosmic system hear the truth they may not even identify it as truth but it arouses their antagonism.

2. For centuries people have tried to solve their problems through the key word "improvement." People go on great crusades to improve environment, improve the circumstances of life. And that word "improvement" is a distraction to the solution of problems, for countless times in history crusaders and historical trends have resulted in the improvement of environment, have resulted in times of great freedom for segments of the population of this earth, but improvement has never been the answer, and never will be the answer. It was demonstrated at the very beginning of history that perfect environment is not the answer because man has free will and man is free to fail even as he is free to succeed. He is free to reject truth or to accept truth, and the only way man can maintain a system of blessing and happiness in this life is through the perception and application of truth. Our first parents demonstrated the fact that perfect environment was not the answer to their problems and the last dispensation in history, one thousand years of perfect environment, will again demonstrate that same fact. For when Satan is released from his one-thousand-year imprisonment there will be a Gog revolution against perfect environment. All of this demonstrates once again that improvement of society is never the answer. "Improvement" is not really a key word. Instead the key word should be "regeneration" because regeneration goes with truth; improvement goes with better environment. But what good is better environment without capacity for it.

3. People need truth rather than better environment. There is no way that you can pass environmental laws that will deal with the volition of the next generation. If the next generation wants to turn every national park into a concrete jungle the hours that people have spent trying to protect the environment are ridiculous. We in this generation can only answer for our own decisions from our own scale of values. We cannot in any way pass laws or enter into crusades that will either hinder or help the volitional function of the next generation. Every generation must make its own way by its own decisions, decisions from its own scale of values. The one thing that goes from one generation to another are not the laws of the land and the crusades of this generation, but truths. In every generation truth will exist; truth will not be destroyed. The Word of God lives and abides forever, there is no way to destroy truth. Therefore Moses and Elijah are on the right track for they recognise this principle. They teach truth; they communicate Bible doctrine; they do not try to change the environment. They have the power to kill all the bad guys but they do not do so. The only ones they kill are the ones who threaten their right to free speech, those who have locked-in negative volition and would actually eliminate truth. Therefore we can learn something from the Tribulation: crusaders are inevitably arrogant. Their crusades which are going to change the world never change anyone or anything because the key to the angelic conflict is human volition and you can't change human volition, even God will not coerce human volition. All crusading is a total waste of time.

Everyone is looking for some way to improve the environment, to improve themselves, but the people who really improve themselves are the people who learn Bible doctrine, daily, consistently, truth. People are working vigorously today to change things, not realising that what is changed today (perhaps for the better, perhaps not) can be changed for the worse tomorrow, and that change based on the crusader arrogance principle never does any good. Better environment is only made by truth in the soul. When you have truth or Bible doctrine in the soul you provide better in the soul which manifests itself in better environment around you.

4. Man has already demonstrated that he is no better with good environment.

5. This is God's last lesson to the human race: the historical lesson of the Millennium with its perfect environment. And these men announce that Millennium as they teach the gospel and teach other areas of Bible doctrine.

6. Moses and Elijah teach the lesson that even perfect environment cannot solve man's problems. Man needs a challenge; man needs to work by the sweat of his brow. The woman needs to learn to entertain herself or to get into business herself.

7. Along comes Moses and Elijah saying that environment is not the solution. Man does not need improvement, man needs regeneration.

Well, this aroused the antagonism of the masses. People believed in improvement of the world rather than the regeneration of mankind. Even in the last half of the Tribulation people were trying to improve the world. Without regeneration improvement of environment is meaningless because man does not have the capacity to deal with better or even perfect environment. Moses and Elijah do not seek to improve the devil's world but to rescue mankind from cosmos diabolicus. This arouses the antagonism of Satan as nothing else will do. Once everyone has been face to face with the truth and the issues of truth the ministry and testimony of Moses and Elijah is finished. That is why we have this phrase, "When they had finished their testimony." That means an assassination is coming up.

Verse 7, "Now when Moses and Elijah had finished their testimony." We move on now to see the assassination of Moses and Elijah on their second tour of duty into this world in serving the Lord.

We start out with the nominative singular subject of the noun qhrion. Like another noun, zoion, in the book of Revelation it is also translated "beast" in the King James version. The word qhrion means monster wild animal or beast. In this verse the word qhrion refers to the prince of the fallen angels that we studied in Revelation 9:11. His name is Abaddon. This is the person who is Satan's super hit man, he is the prince and the ruler of the terrorist activity under Satan. After leading the first demon assault army in Revelation chapter nine this demon prince is assigned other duties such as the assassination of Moses and Elijah.

With this we have an articular present active participle which helps to identify him. The verb is a)nabainw and it means to ascend, and with it we have the noun for the abyss. The definite article is used as a relative pronoun; the present tense is dramatic. The active voice: Abaddon, the prince of demons, produces the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial.

When we put it all together we have: "Now when Moses and Elijah had finished their testimony, the beast monster [the demon in charge of terrorist activities] who comes up."

And then the preposition e)k plus the ablative of a)bussoj [abyss], "from the abyss." The terrorist activity of Abaddon is now described, beginning with the future active indicative of the verb poiew, which means here to make, "he will make." The future tense is predictive. The active voice: Abaddon produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for a statement of future history. And with this we have the accusative singular direct object from polemoj, meaning war, "he will make war," or it can be translated in the idiom form, "he will fight against." "He will make war against them"; "against them" is the preposition meta plus the genitive of a)utoj used as a personal pronoun, against Moses and Elijah.

We now have two more verbs, both in the future tense. The first one is the future active indicative from nikaw which means to win, to overcome, to have victory. The predictive future anticipates the fact that the ministry of Moses and Elijah in their second tour of duty has now come to an end. The active voice: Abaddon, the prince of demons, is the terrorist commander for Satan. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of this event in history in the future. Then we have the accusative plural direct object, again referring to them. We have one more verb, the future active indicative of a)pokteinw which means to kill by violence, "and will kill," "he will both overcome and kill them." The active voice: Abaddon is the hit man and does the assassinating. At this particular time the ministry of these two men is over and their defensive weapon is no longer operational.

Translation of verse 7 — "Now when they [Moses and Elijah as the heralds of the second advent] had finished their testimony [their ministry], the beast monster [Abaddon, the demon ruler of Revelation 9:11] who comes up from the abyss will make war against them; he will both overpower and kill them."

This is under the permissive will of God and we will see some of the reasons.

Principle: Frustrated arrogance gravitates to violence

1. This principle explains the reason for so much violence in the human race. The content of violence simply measures the content of arrogance in the human race. Arrogance and violence go together.
2. It also explains Satan's use of violence to seek victory in the angelic conflict. Satan, before even human history began, used violence to try to solve his problems.
3. Neither Satan nor the human race has ever learned the great lesson that violence does not solve problems. In fact, conversely, violence intensifies problems and creates new problems.
4. The assassination of Moses and Elijah is the manifestation of frustrated arrogance.
5. When any creature uses violence, including murder, to try to solve or remove a problem he destroys the very structure of civilisation and removes freedom from human modus operandi.
6. When people or any creature [angelic] murders to remove a problem they suffer from that malady of arrogance which tries to solve one's problems through the ultimate in violence, the murder of someone who seems to be the problem, or people who seem to be the problem, like anti-Semitism. It is a sign of stupidity.
7. Only God has the right to remove life or permit the removal of life from this world. In the case of Moses and Elijah He permits it. Until the conclusion of their ministry they are absolutely invulnerable to all Satanic attacks.
8. Only God's law specifies under what conditions man will kill man legitimately. Under the laws of divine establishment human life is sacred, not to be tampered with except under two conditions: a. law enforcement and capital punishment; b. the killing of one's country's enemies as a representative of one's nation in the military establishment.
9. The murder of Moses and Elijah does not solve Satan's problems, it does not provide for the victory of the devil in the angelic conflict. In fact, it will intensify his problems as is always the case with murder.
10. Frustrated arrogance is never satisfied with the function of violence to solve the problem. To alleviate the frustration of arrogance people murder. Murder is the sign of an inner sin before it becomes an overt sin. The inner sin is arrogance. People murder because they are preoccupied with self and they see some person standing in the way and therefore forming an extension of their arrogant frustration. Frustrated arrogance is never satisfied by the violence it produces and motivates. Frustrated arrogance is intensified when the violent one becomes psychopathic, disoriented to life, disoriented to the rationales of life, and this frustration of arrogance gravitating to violence is going to be manifested in a very unusual way in the next chapter, the great Jewish holocaust at the end of the Tribulation.

Restraint requires humility

1. The key to freedom in all of human society is restraint from the basic virtue of humility. There can be no freedom without two factors: authority and virtue. But authority is a restrainer when the authority of the law is feared. Now we are talking about self-restraint from virtue, if you have it. Even with law many people do not have freedom. The legitimate authority does not always guarantee freedom. In a civilised society freedom is guaranteed by the virtue of the people in that society, and the basic virtue is humility. Humility imposes self-restraint.

2. Freedom demands privacy plus the sacredness of both property and life. Under the laws of divine establishment both property and life are sacred and you cannot have freedom without the sacredness of property and life.

3. For this Bible doctrine in the realm of establishment to be fulfilled man must use his freedom to practice restraint. Since all of us have freedom all of us cannot express our freedom without someone (and a lot of someone's) practising restraint. Restraint is the manifestation of the basic virtue of humility.

4. Differences of opinion often lead to quarrels and where arrogance is involved quarrels lead to violence.

5. This explains murder within the framework of divine institution #3, the family. This is a very common practice in an arrogant society.

6. Arrogance removes restraint and self-control because arrogance is the antithesis of humility. Humility is a virtue; arrogance is the most basic of all sins, and not only is it a sin but it is a sin complex, as per cosmic one. With arrogance man seeks to solve his problems through violence which results in various categories of murder. (Arrogance has other ways of solving problems but we are looking at this one factor. Arrogance also tries to solve its problems through sex and makes sex a system for solving problems, which is a disaster and leads to terrible social degeneration).

7. Authority in life is designed to restrain the function of arrogance in man so that all members of the human race can use their freedom to fail or to succeed.

8. This is why we have governments, law-enforcement agencies, a judicial system. A judicial system may not be working too well at times but it is better than no judicial system, which is what vigilanteism is.

9. Respect for the law restrains the arrogant while virtue and integrity restrains the humble. Virtue restrains in a magnificent society; law restrains in a sick society. And when a sick society no longer fears the law then it becomes a degenerate society. In other words, restraint requires humility and the only way a society can ever properly express its freedom is to have a maximum number of people with virtue in that society. Virtue means humility. When you have, as we have today, an arrogant society, often disguising itself under self-effacement then you have first a hypocritical society, then a sick society, and then a degenerate society.

Neither Satan nor his hit man, Abaddon, are humble. They are saturated with arrogance. They form the conspiracy which leads to the murder of Moses and Elijah.

Principle: The Christian minister or Christian organisation or individual believer who advocates civil disobedience is both arrogant and evil.

1 John 3:12, "Not as Cain, who was motivated from that evil one [Satan, the inventor of the cosmic system], and consequently he murdered his brother with a sacrificial knife. And for what reason did he murder him? Because his deeds were evil." The question arises: Why were his deeds evil? Because he was arrogant. Humility practices restraint; arrogance practices evil, "and those [deeds] of his brother were righteous [honourable, virtuous]." And so the first murder was committed in the human race and it forms one of the patterns for the expression of arrogance. Murder is one pattern, lasciviousness is another expression. These are expressions of arrogance in society. Many murders are merely the reflex of arrogance, for you see arrogance removes all restraints from the person who has it. When Satan became arrogant he removed all of the restraints on his own life and he said, "I will be like the most high God." And the arrogant person takes all the restraints off his own life. "The laws are for the rest of you but not for me," says the arrogant person, "I can kill anyone I want to, I am above the law." That is the concept.

So murder always means the unlawful taking of someone's life, since there are lawful ways in which someone's life is taken. One of the most important of the lawful ways, and acts as a substitute for humility, since obviously in society in any given generation there are going to be a lot of people who are not humble, is the law with teeth in it, and the teeth in the law is capital punishment. It is ordained of God, it is not a man-made concept. In Romans 13:4 it is referred to as being a restraint. If people are arrogant they can only be restrained by the law, and they must fear the law, they must fear for their life. The only restraint an arrogant person understands is that he might lose his own life, that if he commits a certain crime or enters into a certain act of violence he might lose his life. And he is restrained because in his arrogance his life is more important to him than anything else in the world. Arrogance can only be restrained by capital punishment. And when in society you have no capital punishment the arrogant people have no fear of the law, and if they have no fear of the law it is easy under the right conditions to step over the law and enter into some form of lawlessness, whether it is lawlessness or something else.

So in Romans 13:4, "It [the law and government] is a minister of God to you for the purpose of good [the free function of the entire society]. But if you do evil [the source of evil is arrogance] keep on being afraid," The only way you are restrained if you are an arrogant person is to keep on being afraid, "for it [the law] does not wear the sword for nothing; for you see it [the law] is the minister of God for the purpose of divine wrath on him who practices evil."

You cannot restrain an arrogant society apart from capital punishment. A virtuous society is different, it is self-restraining and doesn't have to be concerned about fear of the law. But a virtuous society depends on humility.

In Genesis 9:5,6 God ordained capital punishment for the human race as the only possible way for freedom to be perpetuated in history because the great enemy of freedom is arrogance. The French revolution can be summarised very simply: it was a maximum saturation of arrogance, it was the function of ego-mania. And you always have this terrible violence like the reign of terror in the French revolution when people are out from under restraint and have no virtue. In the case of the French revolution no one was practising capital punishment, except evil was murdering right and left. It took France a long time to recover from the evils of the French revolution. Arrogance must be restrained. The best way to restrain it is self-restraint and the worst way to restrain it is fear of the law, but both are restrainers. Virtue restrains arrogance individually, and that is the honourable way to go, but law is designed to also restrain arrogance.

Another form of legitimate killing of course is the soldier representing his country on the battle field. He functions impersonally and professionally to preserve the freedom of the nation. Were it not for war the human race would not be cleansed of its total degeneracy. Warfare is one of the few ways in which the human race recovers its freedom, so periodically warfare is a good thing.

Violence was originated by Satan, John 8:43,44. "Do you not understand what I am teaching you [Jesus asked]? It is because you cannot hear my word in the cosmic system. You are from your father the devil, and the desires [the policies] of your father [the devil] you wish to accomplish."

Jesus is saying in effect that He has demonstrated the arrogance of the people in the time in which He lived. Then He adds: "He [the devil] was a murderer from the beginning." Why? Arrogance produces all motivation for murder, "furthermore he does not stand in the truth, because there is no doctrine in him. Whenever he [Satan] communicates the lie, he speaks from his own personality: for he [Satan] is a liar, and the father of it."

Under the same principle lying is motivated by arrogance. Why do we lie? Because in arrogance we don't want to be shamed, we don't want to be caught. So arrogance motivates lying just as arrogance motivates murder. That is why in this passage in John 8:44 the devil is described as not only a murderer from the beginning but he is also described as a liar and the father of it.

Jude 10,11, "But these reversionists malign what they do not understand; furthermore what things they do not understand by natural instincts [by emotion — most people do all of their learning by emotion; that's why they are stupid, because emotion has no ability to think], as unreasonable [as emotional] creatures, by these false doctrines they receive for themselves corruption. Woe to them! They have gone the way of Cain [violence, terrorism, murder], they have rushed from illegal profit into Balaam's error, they have been destroyed in Korah's revolution."

All of these have the same source, revolution, illegal profit, violence. All have the same base of arrogance.

In fact, in Romans 1:29, discussing a degenerate society, “Having been filled with all unrighteousness [lack of integrity and virtue], evil, greed, malice; full of jealousy, murder, strife, deceit, conspiracy, slander,” all of these describe the degenerate society.

In Hosea 4:1-6 one of the things that destroyed the northern kingdom were these very things. “Hear the word of the Lord, ye sons of Israel: because the Lord has a lawsuit against the inhabitants of his client nation, because nothing about doctrine is being taught, nothing about grace is being applied, so that there is nothing of knowing God in the nation. Instead there is lying [the malfunction of justice in court], deceiving, and homicide, stealing, they use violence to rape, therefore blood reaches out and touches blood,” they have become a degenerate society, “Because of this the land mourns, and all who live in it waste away, even the animals in the field [are hurt by it], the birds of the air, the fish in the lake are dying off. Only let no one bring a lawsuit, let no one accuse another [in other words in a degenerate society people abuse and distort the law and start suing each other]: for your people are like those who bring charges against the priest [lawsuits to discredit the one teaching doctrine]. Therefore you have stumbled in the daylight, even the false prophet will stumble with you in the night [darkness], and [by the cycles of discipline] I will destroy your country. My nation is destroyed for lack of knowledge [of doctrine]: because you have rejected the principle of knowing doctrine, therefore I will reject you from being a client nation to me: since you have neglected the doctrine of your God, I will neglect your citizens.” In other words, I will let you follow your own volition. That means they will destroy themselves, which they did.

Murder, by the way, is the only overt sin listed in the classification of the seven worst sins in Proverbs 6:16-19. (In verse 17, murder is mentioned). “There are six things which the Lord hates: seven which are an abomination to his soul: arrogant involvement, a lying tongue [that comes from arrogance], hands that shed innocent blood [murder], conspiracy [that is from arrogance], feet that are quick to rush to evil [arrogance], a false witness who pours out lies against other people [that is arrogance], the person who causes dissension among brethren.” These are the worst of all sins and arrogance is behind them all.

Exodus 20:13, the corrected translation: “You will not commit murder.” It does not say “thou shalt not kill.” It is the qal imperfect of ratsach, “You will not murder.” Murder is the ultimate in the destruction of human freedom in the angelic conflict, it violates the principle of the sacredness of human life and the right of every individual to follow his own volition to his own destiny, failure or success.

In verse 8 we see the desecration of the dead bodies of the two human heralds. We begin with the connective conjunction kai translated “and,” and the nominative singular subject of ptoma which refers to a corpse. Generally it is used of a corpse where the person died from some form of violence. Regardless of how a person dies a corpse is an empty house. It has been vacated. Once death has taken place the soul, or in the case of Moses and Elijah, the soul and the spirit has vacated the body. What happens to the body is absolutely inconsequential. The body no longer has any meaning once the soul has departed from it in physical death. Taking this physical body and leaving it in the streets for all to see indicates the deadness of the souls of those arrogant persons involved in the cosmic system.

“And their corpses.” We have a possessive genitive plural from a)utoj used as a personal pronoun. The ellipsis demands some verbal form, so we insert “will be displayed,” “And their dead bodies [or corpses] will be exhibited [or displayed].” Then we have a prepositional phrase e)pi plus the genitive of plateia, “in the streets.” It is in one specific street. Then the descriptive genitive singular from megaj polij, “of the great city.” It is a reference to the city of Jerusalem where the Tribulational temple is constructed and where the two human heralds of the second advent have their ministry. Jerusalem is where the law was designed to restrain the arrogant, and virtue was designed for self-restraint. But the arrogant distorted lawmaking in the great city resulting in the fact that Jerusalem is now described as Sodom, after a city, and Egypt, after a nation.

The description of the great city from the spiritual standpoint: the nominative feminine singular of a qualitative relative pronoun o(stij. We translate it “which,” or a more detailed translation, “the sort which.” Then we have the present passive indicative of the verb kalew which means to call, “which is called,” “which is designated,” “which is named.” The perfective present tense refers to a fact which has come to be in the past but is emphasised as a present reality. The passive voice: Jerusalem receives the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for s simple statement of fact, the state of Jerusalem at this time in the Tribulation.

The next word is an adverb and is very important. It means we are not to take this literally. It is the adverb pneumatikoj, and it means either spiritually or figuratively. We are to interpret the next words figuratively. There is a typical resemblance, an emblematic resemblance. In other words, pneumatikoj as an adverb means expressing one thing, Jerusalem, in terms normally denoting something else, like Sodom and Egypt. Translation: “And their dead bodies were displayed in the street of the great city which is called figuratively [spiritually, emblematically].” And then we have the words “Sodom” and “Egypt.” Sodom is Jerusalem’s moral degeneration during the closing days of the Tribulation; Egypt refers to the cosmic involvement of its citizens. Demonisation is very prominent in Jerusalem. Cosmic involvement in the sphere of religion as the devil’s ace trump has taken over there. Moral degeneration and religion, by the way, always go together, they compliment each other. Remember that Christianity is not a religion. Moral degeneration, social degeneration and religion always go together.

The adverb pneumatikoj raises a special question. The interpretation of the book of Revelation is in view. Too often the literal in Revelation is interpreted allegorically, and therefore that is wrong. There are many things in Revelation which are literal. The figurative or allegorical always has something in context to help us out, to help us understand. For example, when we noted “these are the two olive trees” we know that we were talking about a prophecy in Zechariah. Therefore we could go back there and identify and interpret without any problem. But sometimes there is no reference except in an allegorical sense and there will be something that will indicate that. For example, the conjunction ο(ι is one way of indicating that something is allegorical or figurative. In this case we have an adverb. The only reason, of course, for allegorised or spiritual interpretation is when the language of the original Greek somehow indicates that this is the way we must go. The Greek authorises it grammatically.

The identification of the city is given in the last phrase, beginning with the adverb used as a particle of place, ο(που, translated “where.” With this we have a conjunction kai, translated “even.” Then the subject, the nominative singular subject from kurioj, and a)utoj, used so many times, “their Lord.” Then the aorist passive indicative of staurow, which has to do with the saving work of Christ on the cross, “where their Lord was crucified.” The aorist tense is constative, contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety. The key death of our Lord on the cross: His first death bearing our sins, becoming our substitute; His second death, His work was finished and therefore He died physically, just as the work of Moses and Elijah is now finished and they have died physically. The passive voice: Christ receives the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of doctrine.

Translation of verse 8: “And their dead bodies will be exhibited in the street of the great city, which is figuratively designated Sodom and Egypt, even where their Lord was crucified.”

Principle: corpse arrogance

Taken from the phrase: “and their dead bodies will be exhibited in the street.”

1. It is arrogance or ignorance or both to display the corpses of those who have died, and in this case the corpses of two men who have been murdered because they taught Bible doctrine. It is arrogance on the part of the murderers and those in charge of the city to allow these corpses to remain on public display. They’re not lying in state, they’re lying in the gutter, and thousands of people are going by and laughing and ridiculing.
2. The death of those who teach doctrine, however, does not stop doctrinal teaching. Doctrinal teachers may die but the Lord always raises up others. By killing someone who teaches doctrine Satan has not won any victory over doctrine, he is still a loser. The display of the corpses is merely an attempt to say, “We have won, we have won,” kid’s stuff.
3. Doctrine is the power of God and God’s power does not stop because the teacher of doctrine is assassinated.
4. The death of the prophet does not cancel the prophecy; the death of the preacher does not stop the teaching of the Word of God.
5. The display of the two dead bodies does not imply any victory over truth.

6. Neither Moses nor Elijah are occupying dead bodies, they are back in heaven enjoying their interim bodies after a job well done. They are in a place of great happiness and blessing and all of the ridicule and all of the desecration of those dead bodies is not going to change a thing.

7. The vulgar display of a corpse is not a sign of victory but of defeat on the part of the displayers. They have actually advertised the fact that they are losers.

8. For killing the communicators of doctrine does not cancel the message of doctrine. They have made their point, they have led people to the Lord, they have helped believers grow in grace, their ministry is finished, and the results go on and on. Killing them hasn't changed a thing.

9. The death of the speaker of truth does not imply the death of truth. Truth never dies, merely those who communicate it.

Because of the ministry of Moses and Elijah lives have been changed forever in one of the most desperate periods of all of history, the last half of the Tribulation. Therefore, the death of the communicators does not in any way hinder the impact of doctrine. Vincet Omnia Veritas — doctrine conquers all.

The literal city Jerusalem: “Jerusalem, Jerusalem, how I long for you”

Note how Jerusalem is designated. First, “the great city.” That is because of David and of David's greater son, our Lord Jesus Christ. It is the great city because it is the capital of the first and last client nation to God. What made the city great was Bible doctrine; what ruined the city was rejection of Bible doctrine.

The city is also called, in the second place, Sodom, referring to social degeneration, spiritual declension. Jerusalem in the middle of the Tribulation has been captured by negative volition. It is also called Egypt, after the empire Egypt. The empire of Egypt represent religion without reality, culture without truth, therefore power without principle, superficiality resulting in self-destruction.

The final designation: “even where their Lord was crucified.” Jerusalem is the place our Lord chose to die for our sins, to provide for us eternal salvation. The fact that Jerusalem does not respond to the message of Moses and Elijah in detail indicates that Jerusalem is the city of lost opportunities. In other words, living in a “holy” city doesn't make you holy. It isn't where you live that makes you holy, it is what you are that makes you holy, and only perception of doctrine can do that.

In verses 9 and 10 we note their celebration under the title “The devil's Christmas.”

Not only did the evil people in Jerusalem go by and gloat over those corpses but there was a world-wide television coverage of the event. We have a saturated world-wide gloating for three and a half days.

We begin verse 9 with a connective conjunction kai, “and,” and the present active indicative of blepw, “And they will view.” Belpw ordinarily means to see; here it means to view. The present tense is a descriptive present, even a futuristic present denoting an event which has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as already occurring. In other words, this is a very dramatic thing. The world-wide television coverage of the event is, of course, a major item of news for three and a half days. The active voice: the television viewers as well as the personal viewers produce the action of the verb.

Then we have a prepositional phrase describing the general subject, those who view the dead bodies from all over the world. It is described by one preposition plus a number of nouns in the ablative: e)k plus the ablative case, “from.” The first phrase is poorly translated in the King James version, laoj, which means “people” generally but here it means “masses,” and laoj refers to the people living in Jerusalem. The second ablative is fulh, and it means tribe or tribes and refers to Jews who are living in the middle east, Jews from all the tribes of Israel, not just local Jews in Jerusalem. They are those who are especially interested because they have rejected the message of Moses and Elijah. A third ablative goes with the preposition, the ablative plural of glossa, meaning foreign languages. This will be given in many different languages. This news item will be broadcast in all of the languages of the world. Finally, we have one more ablative plural, e)qnoj, Gentiles come into the picture, “and nations.”

Verse 9, “And they from the masses and from tribes and many foreign languages and Gentiles nations will view their bodies for three and a half days.” The “three and a half days” is the accusative plural direct object, and the accusative plus the accusative of the extent of time. They will be viewed for three and a half days.

Because of the dynamic impact of their ministry and the antagonism of the fourth estate, a period of international gloating begins immediately after the assassination; and after it is reported both locally and throughout the world, probably by satellite. Obviously, something therefore akin to TV coverage by satellite is involved so that people all over the world in many nations can enjoy this moment of desecration, indicating the fact that the social degeneration implied in Jerusalem is an international problem among many nations and many people. The power of the press is seen in the reaction to the ministry of the two heralds, whose ministry has caused fear and anxiety both in the press and among the people of the world. This is obviously the fourth estate at their worst.

The purpose of the fourth estate is to report news but in time of arrogance and degeneracy this is distorted into that is called “slanting” the news, tampering with the facts and using the freedom of the press to propagandise one’s personal viewpoint. This is all involved in this phrase. This is a part of self-righteous crusader arrogance. Hence, the news media at the end of the Tribulation are just as demonised as the population whom they serve. And since the forces of evil obviously control the press at the end of the Tribulation this is neither sympathy nor outrage at the desecration of the corpses of the two witnesses. This is gloating. No sympathy, no outrage is reported by the press.

Note the principle that the fourth estate, the news media, can be a factor that either good or evil. Whether good or evil the freedom of the press is essential to human freedom, by the way, and the repercussions in any given generation merely reflect the general trend of human volition at that point of history. What are we to assume from this? Regardless of how poor the news reporting may be at any given time, one thing you should always be clear about: you should always be for the freedom of the press. No matter how much the press may abuse that freedom at any given time it doesn't change the principle: freedom of the press is an essential part of free speech which is absolutely essential for the modus operandi of freedom.

Next we have a connective conjunction kai, emphasising a fact as surprising and noteworthy, and we translate it "furthermore." Then we have a present active indicative of the verb a)fiimi plus the negative o)uk which goes with the indicative mood, "furthermore they did not permit." The progressive present tense signifies the action in a state of persistence, present linear aktionsart. The active voice: not only the authorities in Jerusalem but the population in general are included in this verb. This is desecration of their bodies, a popular decision though obviously many believers and Jews in Jerusalem were not in agreement with it. However, they recognise the fact that neither Moses nor Elijah are occupying those bodies and therefore they are not disturbed by it.

Principle: Be careful what disturbs you. Most people get disturbed by inconsequential things and the best thing you can say for them is that it is loss of energy plus ear and tear on the soul.

Then we have the aorist passive infinitive from the verb tiqemi, "to be placed." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, burial is in view here; "furthermore they did not permit their dead bodies to be placed in a tomb."

This desecration was the arrogant reaction of those who assumed that an unburied body exposed to ridicule is the maximum insult of life. Actually, they are not insulting him at all, they are just showing how stupid they are. Death means that the body is no longer occupied, therefore the insult boomerangs. Those who desecrate their bodies will be miserable while they are still alive. There is no greater manifestation of total unhappiness than being a gloater. The ones guilty of desecration are miserable, not the ones who are the recipients of their gloating. Moses and Elijah are very happy in heaven enjoying marvellous things. The principle applies in every area of life: there is no happiness in gloating. Gloating is the sign of a very disoriented and unhappy person. You cannot build your happiness on someone else's unhappiness. Gloating is the sum total of arrogance expressing itself in malignant satisfaction. The malignant satisfaction is temporary and the arrogance signifies permanent unhappiness. Add to this another principle: gloaters have no virtue, no happiness, no capacity for life.

Patrick (St. Patrick) was born in Scotland just a few miles from what is now called Glasgow in the year 396. He died on 17 March, 493. The day of his death became known as St Patrick's Day.

His father was a Celtic Christian. He was not a Roman Catholic and never was. He wrote a book called Confessions, which has 25 chapters and he never mentions Rome and he never mentions the Pope. When he was a boy he was kidnapped by Irish pirates and was sold into slavery to a chieftain in northern Ireland. He escaped, was recaptured, and escaped a second time and boarded a ship that was going to Britain. While in Britain he became a refugee in an area where he found Christ as his saviour.

A few years later he returned to his home as a young man. One day while he was studying the scriptures he had what appeared to be a vision. He heard voices from the Irish coast calling for help. So he went to Ireland as a missionary for Celtic Christianity which, at that time, was not the same as Catholic Christianity.

When he arrived in Ireland he started preaching in fields. He had a tremendous amount of opposition from Celtic chiefs and the Druids, especially the Druids. In spite of the demon-possessed Druids the Lord was with him and he began to have a tremendous amount of evangelistic success. He won literally thousands and thousands of people to Christ through the preaching of the gospel and he established hundreds of churches throughout Ireland. Later on many of these churches (most of them, not all of them) were infiltrated by the Roman Catholic church, but that was after his death.

The doctrinal teaching of Patrick has been said by many to be very similar to Protestant Christianity in nature. Actually, his teaching was very similar, not to Protestant teaching of the Reformation, but more like fundamentalist Christianity today.

Quoting from one of his chapters in his book: "I am a great debtor to God who has bestowed His grace so largely on me when multitudes were born again through my ministry." Then he explains the multitude: "the Irish, who never had any knowledge of God and who worshipped only idols and unclean things, have lately become the people of the Lord and many of them are children of God." To Patrick the Bible was the Word of God and nothing outside of the Bible was ever accepted as the Word of God.

He was one of those people whose ministry was distorted later by Romanism when they claimed him and made him a saint — the hypocrisy of Romanism because he was never even a Roman Catholic. One of the tragedies is that history gets distorted and people build legends out of the wrong thing.

Verse 10, "tormented them" with the teaching of the gospel; "tormented them" with Bible doctrine; "tormented them" with truth in three categories: establishment, gospel, and doctrine for the believer.

We begin with the conjunction kai, translated "And." The substantive use of the articular present active participle katoikew. It is not translated like a verb, participles are also used as nouns. Instead of translating it, “two dwell” we translate it, “And the inhabitants,” plus the preposition epi plus the noun gh, “on the earth,” reference to the unbelievers and born-again believers who are living in the cosmic system. In other words, the people who are living in the cosmic system are going to produce the action. And what is the action? With the assassination of Moses and Elijah, two of the greatest doctrinal teachers of all time, they are going to rejoice, the present active indicative of the verb xairw. They are going to constantly rejoice. The futuristic present denotes an event which has not yet occurred but which is regarded as so certain that in thought it is regarded as already coming to pass. The active voice: the demonised people of the cosmic system, and that includes believers as well as unbelievers of the Tribulation, produce the action of the verb. This is a declarative indicative or a statement of fact. People celebrate when a good teacher of doctrine dies. That is the point. Of course, what kind of people celebrate is the issue: those who are Satan’s slaves, those who are involved in cosmic one and cosmic two.

The rejoicing is declared with a prepositional phrase, e)pi plus the locative of the intensive pronoun autos used as a personal pronoun, translated “over them,” “And the inhabitants of the earth will rejoice over them.” The dead bodies of Moses and Elijah lying in a street in Jerusalem, not lying in state.

Then we have another verb to tell how everyone feels, in fact two verbs. The present middle indicative of e)ufraiw which means to celebrate. They celebrate the death of Moses and Elijah. This is a pictorial present representing to the mind a picture of the event in the process of occurrence. The middle voice is a direct middle emphasising the agent as participating in the result. Everyone involved in the cosmic system, both believer and unbeliever, all over the world celebrates in a very special way the death of Moses and Elijah. They are celebrating for a reason, because they have finally been shut up!

As a result of this we have the devil’s Christmas, the future active indicative of the verb pempw which explains the exchange of gifts, “and they will send.” And with this the accusative singular direct object, dwron, “gifts,” just like Christmas. The future tense is a predictive future anticipating the devil’s Christmas toward the end of the Tribulation. The active voice: believers and unbelievers involved in the cosmic system produce the action of the verb.

Many, many people have a great deal of problem with the fact that the behaviour of Christians is often shocking to them and they try to explain it by saying that these people aren’t really believers. But they really are. There is nothing an unbeliever can do that a born-again believer in the cosmic system cannot do. So the idea of trying to explain away the salvation of some people by saying that they really didn’t believe in the first place is ludicrous. Let’s face the fact: there is no difference in the overt behaviour between a believer and an unbeliever in the cosmic system. They are always motivated by arrogance and whatever arrogance produces, they produce.

The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality, and they will send gifts. They celebrate during the entire time that these bodies are on display. The dative plural indirect object is from the reciprocal pronoun αλληλον, and is correctly translated “to one another,” or “to each other.” That is literal, of course. There is a better way of translating it. The reciprocal pronoun, when used with a plural subject, represents as affected, of course, by the interchange of action, an opportunity for an idiom. The Greek idiom would be translated this way: “And the inhabitants of the earth [believers and unbelievers in the cosmic system] will gloat over them; they will both celebrate and exchange gifts.” This is the devil’s Christmas, great celebration, exchanging of gifts to commemorate the death of Moses and Elijah as the human heralds of the second advent. This is a gloating operation. They have been tormented by the great doctrinal messages, by the dynamic and Spirit-filled ministry of these two men. Obviously, the population of the earth who reject the ministry of these two men celebrate their death.

Whenever you are antagonistic toward someone and you resent them because they represent an attitude not your own, and they die, you have a chance to check your own virtue — privately, without anyone knowing anything about it. Every time you gloat over the death of someone whom you despise, someone who did not agree with you in any way, someone who has aroused your ire or antagonism, you have no virtue. Virtue and integrity do not gloat over anyone’s death. Furthermore, gloating, like most forms of antagonism, uses up a tremendous amount of energy, and when you utilise all of that energy you are just wearing out your own body. You’ll pay for it eventually, biologically as well as spiritually.

One of the signs of professionalism in any area is to be able to think clearly in the area of your profession, whether it is law or medicine or doctrinal teaching or whatever it is, without reacting to anyone or anything involved in your profession. The tremendous syphoning off of energy is a loss to your own personal ability.

Obviously the population of the earth who have rejected the ministry of these two men are celebrating what we have called “the devil’s Christmas.” The reason for it is because they have already assigned blame to Moses and Elijah for all of the problems that are occurring in the last half of the Tribulation, which is a time of historical disaster. It is the old story of blaming others for our problems. In reality, this is an avoidance of reality and this is how people become psychopathic, psychotic, sociopathic, disoriented to life. Obviously, then, for us as believers it is very detrimental to our life. We lose civilisation and the background for civilisation in virtue when we gloat over the death or the failure of enemies.

Often, of course, the blaming of others takes the form of gossiping. Gossiping is merely a by-product of arrogance. The person who gossips is so arrogant that he feels that he can talk about others’ sins, real or imagined, from the viewpoint of not being a sinner himself. Gossip is a sign of lack of virtue. Conspiracy is another form: blaming everyone’s bad decisions on some person or group. We make our own decisions. We make bad decisions; we make good decisions. We want to take credit for our good decisions but we want to blame someone else for our bad decisions. We must take credit for all of our decisions in order to stay oriented to life.

In this case we have a demonised population inside the cosmic system, and they have been brainwashed. They have therefore been going around ever since these two men have been teaching doctrine to the entire world and saying this is the “ME” [Moses and Elijah] conspiracy, and looking down their self-righteous noses and saying “we must get rid of the ME conspiracy. We are having problems because of the ME conspiracy,” etc. The ministry of Moses and Elijah by satellite has antagonised a large group of people in this world. And it doesn’t really have to be a large group, all it has to be is a loud group. Loud minorities cover the silent approbation of sane majorities. For those who reject their gospel message [which includes, by the way, the message of the baptism of fire] they will be very resentful, very implacable, very antagonistic, and they will assume that because these two men have finally been murdered that their message is now cancelled, and they don’t have to worry about hellfire in the future. And things are now going to get better because the cause of all of their problems has been eliminated, by prince Abaddon, the greatest hit man of history, they think. So the devil’s Christmas is the function primarily of gate one, cosmic one: arrogance, vanity, jealousy, bitterness, self-righteousness, a false sense of destiny, and a guilt complex.

The devil’s Christmas is based on cosmic involvement, which means two categories of demonisation: in a few cases demon possession, but in all cases demon influence. The thinking is influenced so that we have the human race tragic flaw of assuming that once you kill those who teach the truth, you cancel the truth. Somehow the truth will stop. It never does, it rolls right on. The devil’s Christmas, then, is one of the greatest manifestations of arrogance in the human race, and such arrogance is self-destructive. Only the fact that Jesus Christ controls history keeps the human race intact to finish its destiny and resolve the angelic conflict by the end of history, the Gog revolution. The arrogance which results from negative volition toward doctrine produces a very temporary false hope as the wrong reason for celebrating. Furthermore, the fact that the majority of the earth’s population join in the celebration does not provide any basis for security. The principle is generally true, almost always true, when applied to a situation like this: the majority is never right. The majority is usually the non-thinking part of the population, those who are easily duped, that part of the population of the world that is conned easily. And there is no security in majority decision based on demonisation, based on arrogance in the cosmic system. So obviously the devil’s Christmas is going to be very short-lived, for it will terminate in the baptism of fire which follows the second advent of Christ. In fact, many of the local celebrities and those who are celebrating in Jerusalem will be destroyed by an earthquake which is coming up in verse 13. There will be a personal answer from the Lord almost immediately.

The basic reason for the devil’s Christmas is given, beginning with a causal conjunction, o(ti in the Greek, correctly translated “because.” With this we have a subject made up of three words: an immediate demonstrative pronoun translated “these,” an indeclinable numeral translated “two,” and the noun profth, meaning a communicator of truth, “because these two prophets”. This is why they are celebrating, this is why the devil’s Christmas, this is why they are exchanging gifts, this is why they suddenly assume their troubles are over. Simple-minded people are always disappointed in life. Why? Because they always see from their simple viewpoint what is wrong with the world, and once it is eliminated they assume that everything will be all right. They are called stupid optimists. But it never is all right. Simple-minded people never understand man's old sin nature and they never understand the total depravity of man as a doctrine. Therefore they always assume that once you kill off a couple of people or a group that they associate with the problems of the world that everything is going to be all right. And, furthermore, when people try to solve the problems of life by violence they introduce greater problems than heretofore existed.

Why were they celebrating? The verb is the aorist active indicative of basanizw and it means to torment, "because these two prophets had tormented." The culminative aorist tense views the ministry of Elijah and Moses and their messages in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. Where people did not respond positively by accepting Christ, or believers did not respond in a positive way to their doctrinal teaching, they reacted. The instant reaction to truth when you hear it is torment of soul, and no one like to be tortured in their soul. This is why people are so extremely arrogant and antagonistic when they reject Bible doctrine as believers. They're tormented in their souls. The active voice: the ministry of Moses and Elijah has produced the action of tormenting, by teaching the truth, the souls of unbelievers. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of this reaction, the reality of negative reaction to the truth, establishment truth, gospel truth, doctrinal truth for believers. The accusative plural direct object from the articular present active participle, again, katoikew, "the inhabitants of the earth."

Translation of verse 10: "And the inhabitants of the earth [mankind in the cosmic system] will gloat over them [the death of Moses and Elijah]; they will both celebrate and exchange gifts because these two prophets had tormented the inhabitants of the earth."

The same satellite communications system which disseminated the messages of Moses and Elijah now depicts their death through the news media. And not only their death but their desecration. They are constantly televised in terms of their bodies, their corpses in the streets. The warning of the second advent, the warning of eternal judgment for those who reject Christ, the warning of the baptism of fire which will follow the second advent, produced a tremendous amount of fear of punishment. Furthermore, it did something else. People who are negative toward truth inevitably do not want to think about death. They build up in their minds a mental block where death is completely removed from their thinking. They live their life in the reality of living but never in the reality of the inevitability of death. Therefore, when a message or a messenger comes along and intrudes into their thinking with the reality of death and eternal judgment for those who reject Christ, it is more than they can stand, because in effect truth rips away this tremendous mental block by which people live in the present and never think of what is going to happen in the eternal future. And once you rip away the mental block that has made them appear to be very civilised people, the civilisation and the restraints of civilisation are gone. They are totally barbaric. All barbaric festivals involve someone being slaughtered or sacrificed. Barbaric festivals of the past: human sacrifice. In effect this devil's Christmas is a barbaric festival.

The two people who have ripped away the facade and destroyed the mental blocks about the future are now dead, and the population assumes that with the death of these people that they can recover the mental blocks and start living in the present. And they do live in the present and they do the very normal thing in the present: they celebrate, they exchange gifts. They have the devil's Christmas. But the death of Moses and Elijah, therefore, appears to nullify their message. They no longer fear the wrath of God because the messengers of God are dead, and there are their corpses in the street and every day they want to see more and more film on those two corpses. You see, they're dead, they have no power, their message was not true. We can now go back and live in the present, is what they think. We can forget about death and eternal judgment. They again recover, partly, their mental blocks about the future. And how do they do it? Arrogance. Arrogance reasserts itself. All mental blocks in life must be directly related to the amount of arrogance in the soul of the person who has them. Even though the two heralds have died there is failure to realise that their message will go on, for what they do in these three and a half days of the devil's Christmas by celebrating is that they re-establish their mental blocks. In other words, we call it putting scar tissue on the soul. They block out the dynamic message that if you don't believe in Christ you are going to spend eternity in the lake of fire. Even though these two men have died their message will go on, death cannot destroy the power of truth, the power of the Word of God.

But for the moment the devil's Christmas and the wild celebration obscures reality, and they must so celebrate as to ignore reality. Actually the world goes mad. When people sit down at the TV sets and gloat over a couple of corpses, and go out and celebrate over a couple of corpses, you go right back to barbarism. From the point of this great celebration, the devil's Christmas, the world goes into the greatest era of barbarism it has ever known. Cultured people overnight become barbarians. People with a veneer of virtue from establishment lose it, and the horrible things that man does to man in the rest of the book of Revelation go right back to this hour of the devil's Christmas. They are tormented, and when they get temporary relief from their torment from the convicting ministry of God the Holy Spirit, when they can celebrate, when they can forget the reality of those messages and go back to the reality of living in the present, living life in terms of pleasure. They will remove all of the restraints they previously had. This fulfils our Lord's message on "the latter state is worse than the first."

The demonised numbers of the human race living in the cosmic system assume erroneously that by killing off the messengers everything is going to be all right, that the death of the messenger cancels the message. But the death of the messenger never cancels the message. The message will continue right down to the moment of the second advent and the silencing of the prophets does not nullify the message, it advances God's plan for the rest of the Tribulation. For apart from God's permission Abaddon could not have assassinated Moses and Elijah. Their assassination is a part of the plan and the celebration. The exchanging of gifts which characterises the devil's Christmas will be no comfort when these people face our Lord in judgment and when they face the reality of what is about to occur. They celebrate but when the celebration is over the people with whom they celebrate are going to be strangers to them, for what that celebration did was to create monsters out of the people involved. There is going to be more murder, more rape, more violence, more stealing, because after three and a half days of celebration bringing them back to their own little world of the present moment they are going to come back as barbarians. Actually, what we are going to see is a total schizophrenic change in the population of the world. People who were exchanging gifts yesterday are going to exchange violence when it is over.

And they did it to themselves. Many of these people are going to die after the devil's Christmas horribly. They are going to die before the second advent. They are going to see the results of their own folly. They are going to see what happens when you reject one portion of truth, for when you reject one portion of truth you reject truth en tote. If you reject establishment you are going to reject the gospel; if you reject the gospel you will reject establishment. Once you have no respect for the law you are lawless, you are a barbarian. We make monsters out of ourselves. Remember that all sin comes from our volition, not from the sin nature. The sin nature can only make a suggestion, it can only tempt.

There is a principle that comes out of this that we can use right now. When people derive their pleasure and their happiness from the misfortune of others, today they have no happiness, tomorrow they have disaster. Gloating over the adversities and the tragedies of others is the sign of today's misery and tomorrow's insecurity, for all capacity for life and happiness is based on truth, doctrine in its three categories.

These celebrating people have rejected doctrine which is their only source of happiness and their only hope for eternal life. Furthermore, they have rejected doctrine from the two most eloquent speakers who ever lived. They have rejected the doctrine presented in great power. These people who celebrate the devil's Christmas preferred a few days of celebrating to a life of blessing and eternity of blessing beyond their imagination. Without Bible doctrine it is impossible to understand historical trends and they have totally miscalculated and, therefore, they have become the last disaster before the Millennium.

In verses 11 and 12 we note the sudden termination of the devil's Christmas.

Verse 11 begins with the connective conjunction kai, translated "and." Immediately following is a prepositional phrase meta plus the accusative of the extent of time. A number of words which are all in the accusative follow: the accusative of the extent of time h(mera, meaning "day"; the indeclinable numeral meaning "three"; and the accusative neuter singular h(misuj, which all simply adds up to "after three and a half days."

The next word becomes very important, not only because of its meaning in this passage but because of its significance in understanding the whole realm of doctrine, and in order to set aside one of the greatest arrogances of history. Arrogance is the foundation for every form of evil and one of the great evils of our time is the idea that man has the ability to create life.

"the Spirit of life" as it is translated in the King James version is the nominative singular subject from pneuma. Sometimes the word means "spirit" but its original meaning is "breath," the breath, the air of life, plus the possessive genitive of zwh, "life." Those two words tell us the origin of life. There is no life in the womb, never has been and never will be, the concept is one of the greatest arrogances of all history. Man does not create life and, of course, copulation does not produce life. Pregnancy is not life and there is no life in the three embryonic stages in the womb. God gives life in every individual case. The woman who thinks that she carries life in her womb is suffering from terrible arrogance. There is no life in the womb and the beginning of humility and understanding of life is the fact that God imputes life to every person after the embryo emerges from the womb. God imputes life, and with that doctrine goes the fact that God has a purpose for every life, regardless of the genetic problems or accidents or happy combinations of genes that form the individual. God has a purpose in imputing life to that combination of genes, be it fortunate or unfortunate. This helps to understand the tragedies of children who die at a very early age with some form of disease, a vulnerability which came through genetics, and it helps to understand that God's purpose for that life terminated at that point, and to become bitter about God's purpose is to have a life of total misery.

Now here are two bodies lying in the streets of Jerusalem. These two were once embryos and then they emerged from the womb. God imputed life after birth to Moses and Elijah. When life is imputed it is imputed not to the body but to the format soul, and that soul, once it receives human life causes man to become a living soul. Until then he is a dead soul in the sense of a format soul. That soul is inside the body, and when the soul leaves the body, with that human life in it, that person is dead.

Moses and Elijah were in their interim bodies. They had both departed from this life under unusual circumstances. They left their interim bodies and moved back down and took their physical bodies. This is not resurrection, this is resuscitation. The soul and the spirit of Moses rejoined his body and the same was true of Elijah. Then they had their fantastic ministry which covered the better part of the last half of the Tribulation. When their ministry was finished Abaddon assassinated them and the soul and the spirit left the body in each case, went back to heaven and rejoined their interim bodies, and they again had the great period of interim happiness which belongs to all believers.

Those bodies were in the streets for three and a half days. They were empty. And once again they returned and the breath of life functioned in those bodies. So we read: "And after three and a half days the breath of life," referring to the origin of life. Life is never formed in the womb. Note that when they returned and were resuscitated, they didn't start out as embryos in a womb. Life is the monopoly of God.

Next we have a prepositional phrase, ε)κ plus the ablative of source from θεο)ς, "from God," "And after three and a half days the breath of life from God." The ablative of source implies that the original situation contributed to the present character or state. The original situation is not the Greek word σπέρμα, or the word βίος, it is the Greek word θεο)ς, "God." Life is from God.

Then we have the aorist active indicative of ε)ἰσε)ρχομαι, "entered into," "the breath of life from God entered into." And then one more prepositional phrase, ε)ν plus the locative plural of α)υτο)ις, "into them." Please notice the breath of life from God enters into, is not formed in, the womb. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The constative aorist refers to a momentary action which causes the resuscitation of the two human heralds. Resurrection means to have a permanent body which you will have forever and ever. The only resurrection body in existence right at this moment is our Lord's in heaven. There is no other person resurrected. Resuscitation means to come back into the body of corruption and to subsequently die, like Lazarus. So we have the constative aorist referring to a momentary action which causes the resuscitation of the two heralds. The active voice: the breath of life from God produces the action of the verb. It is the spark of life. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of future history. The translation: "And after three and a half days the breath of life from God entered into them," resuscitation.

Then we have a sequential use of the conjunction kai this time, translated "then." with the aorist active indicative of the verb I(sthmi which we are going to see several times in these two chapters. I(sthmi means a number of things. As a transitive verb it means to stand, or something similar to that; as an intransitive verb it means to take a stand. We are dealing with the transitive use.

The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. Everyone was gloating one day and then three and a half days afterward all of a sudden Moses and Elijah stood up and smiled at them! Can you imagine the shock? When the Lord put the breath of life back in them they just simply got up. The active voice: the two witnesses produce the action. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of fact. And it even tells us "they stood on their own feet," e)pi plus the accusative from the noun pouj, "feet." This, again, is resuscitation, not resurrection. Resuscitation is the restoration of human life in the physical body of corruption in contrast to resurrection which is life in the resurrection body forever. The resurrection body is not subject to death. Moses and Elijah, the human heralds of the second advent, will not receive their resurrection bodies until the second advent of Christ.

The second result of resuscitation begins with the connective use of the conjunction kai, "and." Then we have a subject made up of two words. This is the second result and it is followed instantly. We have the adjective megaj and the noun fobj in the nominative case, "and great fear." This is the second result. Fear is characteristic of demonisation. People in the cosmic system, both believers and unbelievers, are subject to fear. A believer can be courageous one day and if he starts living in the cosmic system he has a personality change and becomes frightened. So fear is characteristic of residence and function in the cosmic system. Fear is also a total disorientation to life, and that means for the believer a total disorientation to the plan of God. Fear is arrogant and emotional subjectivity. Fear is inability to think under pressure, the normal reaction to pressure in the cosmic state. On the other hand, courage is the ability to think under pressure; fear is the failure to think under that same pressure. Confidence toward God is motivating virtue — gate five of the divine dynasphere, while courage toward man and circumstances is the functional virtue of gate six of the divine dynasphere. Fear is a motivational evil, then, of the cosmic system. Cowardice is the function of that fear under pressure. Mankind in the cosmic system fears the truth of Bible doctrine in all three categories and, of course, man in the cosmic system fears the circumstances of life, whether it be death, disease, or disaster, the three "D's" that are usually associated with disaster. Fear in contemplation of these things is often called worry. Worry is the anticipation; fear is the actuality. Fear in our Bible study means loss of a personal sense of destiny. Our personal sense of destiny comes from perception and application of Bible doctrine.

The resuscitation, then, of the two heralds, Moses and Elijah, causes fear of them, fear of historical trends, fear of their eternal future; and with the resuscitation of Moses and Elijah the devil's Christmas comes to a screeching halt. In other words, the party's over. For three and a half days they have celebrated the devil's Christmas with gloating but their pleasure and their partying does not sustain them now. Now they have pressure on them and all of the fun that they had does not sustain.

The principle is very obvious: your pleasures and your fun will not sustain you in any form of adversity. Pleasure has no sustaining power under pressure. Pleasure is a temporary stimulus not to be confused with happiness. Happy people can indulge in pleasure but this is not what we are discussing here.

Three and a half days of celebration provided no strength for the future, no virtue, no honour, no courage. Nothing during the course of the three and a half day party throughout the world prepares these people for what now occurs.

“and great fear,” then we have a verb, the aorist active indicative of the verb $\epsilon\pi\iota\pi\tau\omega$ which means to fall upon, “great fear fell on them.” The culminative aorist tense views fear in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, inability to cope with these unusual circumstances, the resuscitation of the two witnesses. The active voice: the great fear produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative representing a result, a verbal action, on the viewpoint of reality. The accusative singular articular present active participle of $\beta\lambda\epsilon\pi\omega$ means to view, “those who were viewing them.” The definite article, by the way, is used as a personal pronoun for people throughout the world who are watching on television, gloating, and those who are personally observing, walking by at the time. The present tense is a progressive present for action in a state of progress. The entire world was watching and the media were giving everyone a chance to gloat over the desecration of these two bodies. The active voice: the entire population of the world produces the action of the verb, and the participle is circumstantial.

Translation of verse 11: “ And after three and a half days the breath of life from God entered into them [resuscitation]. Then they stood on their feet, and great fear fell on those who were viewing [observing] them.”

Verse 12: the third result of their resuscitation. This result deals with Moses and Elijah. We have the connective conjunction $\kappa\alpha\iota$ followed by the aorist active indicative of $\alpha\kappa\omega\omega$, which means to hear. Everyone is either seeing or being afraid or hearing. With these two it is hearing. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: Moses and Elijah only heard this command. The indicative mood is declarative for a simple statement of fact.

With this the objective genitive singular from two words. What they heard was megaj again, this time it isn't fear, and the noun fonh, "great voice," "And they [the two heralds] heard a loud voice."

The source of the voice: e)k plus the ablative of o)uranoj, "from heaven," and the present active participle legw, "saying." The futuristic present tense denotes the event which has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as already coming to pass. The active voice: God produces the action. The participle is circumstantial. We have a dative plural indirect object referring to Moses and Elijah, and again we have a)utoj which is the intensive pronoun used as the personal pronoun, and it is translated "them," "saying to them." The dative of indirect object indicates the ones in whose interest the mandate is given. The mandate is now given: the aorist active imperative of a)nabainw which means simply "come up." And with it the adverb of place, o(de which is translated "here." The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it means "come now." The two heralds will produce the action and this is an imperative of command. Obviously they have the ability at that moment to move out of sight.

Their obedience is then mentioned, the aorist active indicative of a)nabainw. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist this time, however, because it views the ascension or the departure of the two heralds in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, a permanent change of station for Moses and Elijah. They have now completed their work in the human body. Moses and Elijah, two great prophets who never finished their work during their first tour of duty on earth: Moses did not complete his work because he did not lead the Jews into the land and was replaced by Joshua; Elijah did not complete his work because he ran away at the peak of the great revival in the northern kingdom, and he did not learn the lesson of the cave in 1 Kings 19. He was replaced by Elisha. So it is fitting and compatible with God's grace policy that these two great prophets should return to earth and complete their mission in the most difficult period of all human history, the time of greatest disaster, the time of the eschatology of the devil's desperation. The active voice: Moses and Elijah produce the action. The indicative mood is declarative indicating the fact that they obeyed implicitly the mandate.

Their departure is in a very special vehicle, e)n plus the locative of nefele, a special cloud designed to take them out. This parallels our Lord's ascension, the only difference being that our Lord was in a resurrection body. This cloud takes them back in their physical bodies, they are transferring to heaven where they will receive their interim bodies.

Note the concentration of those who were antagonistic, who are called "their enemies." We have the connective kai, translated "and," or "while" in this case, plus the nominative plural subject from e)qxroj, "while their enemies." Now, of course, their enemies are viewing them, qeorew again in the aorist active indicative.

Translation of verse 12: "Then they [the two heralds of the second advent, Moses and Elijah] heard a loud voice from heaven saying to them, Come up here. And so they went up to heaven in a cloud; while their enemies [negative volition toward their ministry] observed them."

The principle: Those who reject the teaching of truth or doctrine in any dispensation are the enemies. Rejection of doctrine always produces antagonism. Negative volition makes the person who has it an enemy of the truth, and therefore an enemy of the communicator of the truth, Moses and Elijah in this case. Hence, those who have rejected their doctrine, believer and unbeliever, are said to be enemies. There is no record of any of these millions of viewers changing their minds, and that it a point of great significance. They had been watching a miracle. They had been gloating over the death of Moses and Elijah for three and a half days, they were watching a miracle. The doctrine which Moses and Elijah had been teaching for the last half of the Tribulation was far more dynamic than any miracle. Now they see a phenomenal miracle, resuscitation. They were negative at the point of doctrine; they remain negative at the point of the miracle. Negative volition is consistent and it also demonstrates another fact: miracles change nothing, it is truth that changes people. People who reject truth will reject miracles from the truth. Miracles in themselves are meaningless, they change nothing. The population's persistent rejection of the message resulted in scar tissue of the soul. Miracles never change scar tissue, only truth can change scar tissue. People develop scar tissue through negative volition toward the truth; people lose scar tissue by positive volition toward the truth, truth in all categories.

Any scar tissue that is developed can only be changed by going from negative to positive volition. So what is the issue? The issue is volition. Miracles are not an issue and you never lose any scar tissue by seeing a miracle. Miracles make no difference; doctrine makes the difference. If you do not accept the message the miracle will not change your mind, for the power is in the message, not in the miracle.

We have learned that an arrogant society inevitably becomes a degenerate society. Arrogance always destroys the concept of what we might call "selectivity." Always a few people succeed in any particular generation and the rest do not succeed. Success is always limited to a few no matter what the field happens to be. Obviously Bible doctrine is designed for the happiness of all but attainment and success, no matter by what standard it is measured, always emphasises the few who do it.

In a society of virtue and integrity, and therefore humility, the emphasis is always on the few: their success, their standards, their hard work, the means by which they reach attainment in whatever profession or business or activity in which they entered. Once the society becomes arrogant, because the society benefits from the success from the few, then the emphasis goes back to the masses, the "dignity" of being lazy, loss of integrity. And as the emphasis goes back to the masses eventually the glorification of the masses leads to economic destruction and social degeneration. The stupidity of the masses eventuates in war. Once social degeneration and economic declension begins it is inevitable that the masses will then put pressure upon whatever government they have.

The masses regard the success of the few as a challenge to their security. When the masses are glorified then inevitably you have redistribution of wealth, the welfare state and socialism, and the thing that breaks a nation (It broke Rome three times) is trying to feed the masses. The welfare state is the second stage of historical degeneration. Lack of class, lack of good taste in almost any field, lack of honour, lack of virtue, is simply once again a recognition of the terrible degeneracy which now exists in this country. The decline of good music: Punk rock, any kind of rock. That isn't music and those people aren't even musicians, is an example of the things that the masses without any norms or standards go for. You could see it beginning a long time ago through culture, you could see it through spiritual life, you could see it in "religion" (not Christianity), you could see it in almost every factor. And, of course, it reflects itself in economic disaster.

We noted in verse twelve of this chapter that the person who rejects the message of doctrine is never impressed by miracles. And we have also learned a principle: miracles never change anything, miracles have no permanent results in life, and miracles do not even impress those who have rejected doctrine. The only thing that is permanent and meaningful in life is Bible doctrine, the truth.

In verses 13 and 14 we have the first conclusion in this chapter, the divine judgment of the devil's Christmas. It is fitting that it should be mentioned in terms of an earthquake because natural disaster always causes people to think. Even if they go back to their old ways and do not learn from that disaster, at least it gets their attention. Earthquakes are always a warning of great natural disaster. Natural disaster will get the attention of these people where miracles had absolutely no effect. The person who will not accept the simplest of truths will never be impressed or changed by miracles.

Here is a fascinating thing. These people were absolutely indifferent to the tremendous miracles that they had witnessed during the ministry of the two men, Moses and Elijah, the heralds of the second advent. But as soon as they get into disaster then God has their attention. Disaster causes a temporary slowing down of negative volition and gives options to those involved to switch from negative to positive.

The connective kai begins the verse, correctly translated "and." With it we have a prepositional phrase, e)n plus the locative of the remote demonstrative pronoun ekeinoj, and plus the noun w(ra, "in that hour." The remote demonstrative is used to differentiate things already named from others. In other words, it is used here for a period of time ascertained from the context. Here these people had had first of all the greatest opportunity of a lifetime, truth from Moses and Elijah. From that truth they said no, negative. That truth was accompanied by great miracles. Miracles were meaningless and merely strengthened negative volition and caused these people to say, So what! The only person who is impressed by a miracle is a person who is positive toward the truth.

Truth and miracles combined cause nothing but negative volition in degenerate society, but historical disaster caused this negative volition to pause, and the option now opens in historical disaster. For those who are the strongest of negatives, who have greatest influence on others, historical disaster wipes them out. In the city of Jerusalem we have noted that group. So the option is always there in historical disaster and generally speaking most people who have been negative in the face of truth, in the face of miracles, are also negative in the face of historical disaster.

We have the beginning of a verb form here in order to show what occurred, the aorist middle indicative of the verb ginomai, translated “there was.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It takes the earthquake and regardless of its duration gathers it up into one entity, one great disaster right there in the city of Jerusalem. This is a middle voice but it is a deponent verb, middle in form, active in meaning. It is the earthquake that produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of an option from disaster. Disaster always has meaning and purpose whether it is in our lives as individuals or whether it is collective and therefore described as historical. Any time we face disaster God is giving us opportunity to pay attention to something in life that we have ignored through normal channels, the teaching of truth. “And in that hour there was a great earthquake.” This is a predicate nominative, the verb to be always takes the predicate nominative. We have the adjective megaj for “great,” and seisnoj for “earthquake.”

This is, of course, a fitting end to the devil’s Christmas in Jerusalem. The great earthquake was divine judgment obviously on negative volition, but also it was a warning, it gave a last option for many. Elijah was the great evangelist, Moses was the great Bible teacher, and the earthquake in Jerusalem emphasises the reality of judgment of those who reject Christ as saviour. Earthquakes, like any type of natural disaster, always remind us that it is time to face reality. Arrogance removes a person from the reality of his situation, and as arrogance moves us away various types of suffering, including personal disaster and historical disaster, come along to remind us that we must get back to reality and face reality with truth. For the believer it is Bible doctrine; for the unbeliever it is the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; for the masses of people it is the laws of divine establishment. All of these things must be put together. It is imperative, therefore, that we get back to reality. That is what disaster is all about.

Note what arrogance does in disaster. In personal disaster the arrogant person blames others in his periphery; he blames someone else. In historical disaster the news media blame whomever they dislike. This is always the way it is and always the way it will be.

The earthquake, then, is so designed, as any historical disaster, with two things in mind: to punish and to eliminate from society those who are negative to truth, so that society and life and history can be perpetuated; it is also designed to bless and deliver those who are involved in truth, those who are positive to doctrine. For example, in Matthew 24:7 “earthquake” used as a sign if the second advent was a warning, the last great evangelistic appeal before Christ returns to the people of the Tribulation: “look, you still have a chance to be saved.” Here is historical disaster in terms of earthquakes. Or other historical disasters, same verse: “nation shall rise against nation, kingdom against kingdom, and in various places there will be economic depression and earthquakes.” All of these things are to bring people back to reality. If you won’t face reality under normal circumstances then you will have to face abnormal circumstances, you are going to have to hurt, suffer, come face to face with an issue. In Revelation 11:19 earthquakes signify the second advent of Christ as a warning to the population. The same thing is true in Zechariah 14:5. These things are not merely for punishment; these things are always a warning. Even while man is being punished for his rejection of truth he is being warned and given options, producing a principle: as long as there is life there is hope. You can always turn things around but it must be your decision and it must come from your volition.

In that hour, then, there was a great earthquake. Just as the resurrection of Christ was accompanied by great earthquakes so the death and resuscitation of Moses and Elijah is accompanied by a great earthquake. As in the case of an earthquake which split the Mount of Olives a short time after this one, earthquake is a blessing to those who make decisions from a position of strength. The earthquake, by the way, also produces local terror. People can approach all disasters from the standpoint of knowledge or the standpoint of ignorance. Whenever we face any kind of a personal problem in our lives we either approach it from knowledge or from ignorance. Knowledge comes from doctrine. You can know doctrine and face any kind of suffering, any kind of disaster, and handle it magnificently because the power in your life is the truth in the right lobe. But if you approach that thing from ignorance you suffer both in the soul and physically in the body as well.

Now it says a tenth of the city fell. The aorist active indicative of piptw indicates that great and beautiful buildings, things that people had spent a great deal of time in investment and construction, were destroyed. One tenth of the city became rubble and this will form the great fortification in the Armageddon campaign. "And in that hour there was a great earthquake and one tenth of the city fell."

The casualty list is mentioned next. Literally, it says in the Greek, "and the names of men, seven thousand." It is an idiom and should be translated, "also seven thousand people were killed," the aorist passive indicative of apokteinw. We know something about these seven thousand. They were the ones who had the most scar tissue of the soul and would never change. These would never be impressed by anything but their own emotions, their own feelings, their own life. Therefore, these seven thousand were a millstone hanging around the neck of Jerusalem which very shortly would be under siege. And they were removed because they would have an adverse effect on the defence of Jerusalem in the great attack from the king of the north. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. God knew every one of these seven thousand people. He personally imputed human life to the soul of each one of these people. God had a purpose for each one of the seven thousand but they failed. So seven thousand received (the passive voice) death. In the passive voice in the Greek the subject receives the action of the verb. They received it, they were passed any hope, they had made their last bad decision from a position of weakness. They had enjoyed the devil's Christmas, they had lived it up, they had had a marvellous time on that occasion. Now it is over. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of this death list, and it occurred, as it says, in the earthquake.

There is always a positive result because disaster is not designed to put man down or to destroy man on the earth, disaster is designed to benefit man. Man can only stand so much prosperity and then he has to have disaster to be benefited. Many people learn from disaster, "and the rest," the nominative plural subject of loipoj, the "survivors," "became," again the aorist active indicative of ginomai. This is a culminative aorist, however, it views the disaster in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. Fear or terror became the motivation for many people coming back to reality. People can actually be frightened into facing reality. The active voice: the survivors of the earthquake in that section of Jerusalem produce the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the fact that the survivors were motivated by terror.

And so we have the predicate nominative of e)mfobj, “terrified,” “and the survivors became terrified.” By producing local terror the earthquake as a natural disaster resulted in positive volition. Some unbelievers were converted; some believers actually got out of the cosmic system. This, of course, means there was benefit.

But here is the tragic thing. The believers living in Jerusalem at that time had two of the greatest communicators of all time. They could hear Moses as believers, and Elijah. No matter how great the public speakers, and these two were the most dynamic, they were teaching truth, doctrine, doctrine, believers were distracted and lost control of their lives. They made numerous decisions from a position of weakness, and therefore got into the cosmic system. They wouldn’t learn from truth and there is only one other way to learn, the hard way. Basically then, you can learn through doctrine or you can learn through disaster.

In time of great historical disaster often a nation will come to a point of great revival. What pulls a nation back together is the spiritual factor, Bible doctrine. Disaster tends to destroy fantasising, it blows up dream castles, and it causes one to see the weakness of his own personal arrogance. So a principle emerges: Disaster and resultant fear temporarily cancels out the distractions of arrogance. The “terror” mentioned here puts them into a position of forced humility, and from that position of enforced humility they start making right decisions. From enforced humility comes teachability to those who through arrogance had no teachability. Therefore disaster becomes terror and terror becomes the means of enforced humility. And, of course, enforced humility results, as in this case, in some responding to the gospel, responding to truth. In other words, disaster brings people to the end of self and it clears the way for facing the issue of the gospel.

Before many of the people in Jerusalem could respond to the message that they had actually heard from the two witnesses they had to come to the end of self in a dramatic way. The terrors and the horrors of the natural disaster, and the resultant destruction of the temporary security which they had built up over three and a half days of the devil’s Christmas, was replaced by a fear that produced an enforced humility and teachability. This is why at the end of the verse they gave glory to God, the aorist active indicative of didomi, and didomi here means volition is behind this. The culminative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the conversion of many people through historical disaster. The active voice: the people of Jerusalem who in a state of terror were reduced to enforced humility which temporarily set aside their arrogance were free to respond to the gospel, and they did. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of giving glory to God as the manifestation of enforced humility through historical disaster.

“and they gave glory to God,” the dative singular indirect object of qeoj. They had heard the message and had been irritated by it. So they “gave glory to the God of heaven.” They were able to link the message that irritated them with the resurrection of the two witnesses and their departure into heaven, and they called Him “the God of heaven.”

This is not the same as giving glory in worship. Giving glory in worship is the worship of the mature believer in the resurrection body. It goes with the uniform of glory and wearing the order of the morning star after the judgment seat of Christ. You cannot give to God what you do not have. So these are not believers giving glory to God, these are unbelievers accepting Christ as saviour. So here, giving glory to the God of heaven is the expression of the enforced humility, not of worship. This is a way of describing the fact that this disaster which killed many was also profitable for many for they personally believed in the Lord Jesus Christ and received Him as their saviour.

We now have a transitional verse 14 which is the woe count. The word for “woe” is taken from Greek drama, ο)uai. We have the interjection ouai used as a substitute to denote calamity or great disaster. The adjective deuteroj which goes with it tells us that this is the second one. We have seen already two categories of disaster. We have seen spiritual disaster, historical disaster in the field of social degeneration, economic disaster, and warfare on the horizon. “The second woe” is the corrected translation. With this is the aorist active indicative of α)perxomai, and it means to go away and depart and is better translated, “has passed.” The dramatic aorist tense states a present reality with the certitude of a past event. The active voice: the second woe or the sixth trumpet produces the action of the verb. We have finished with it now. We studied the sixth trumpet or the second woe in Revelation 9:13-21, and this is another way of telling us that what we have been examining is parenthetical to prepare us for the eschatology of the devil’s desperation. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality, “The second woe has passed.” Coming up is the third woe which will be the greatest period of concentrated disaster in all of human history.

We have a demonstrative particle to go with it, the dramatic particle idou and this is also taken from drama. With idou it means that something is now going to come up that is even worse, and it is described under the numeral used as an adjective, tritoj, “the third.” The third is the worst of all, “Behold, the third woe comes.” We change from the aorist tense to the present active indicative, and not α)perxomai but the simple verb ε)rxomai. The futuristic present denotes an action which is about to take place in sequence with the first two woes and is even worse as far as disaster is concerned. The active voice: the third woe produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for a simple statement of fact, and that isn’t enough just to put the verb in so we have an adverb to go with it to intensify it, taxu which means quickly, in a short time, soon. An adverb and a verb together in this particular sequence indicates something far worse is about to occur.

Woe, of course, anticipates great catastrophe. Hence, it becomes the eschatology of the devil’s desperation. The three woes are synonymous with the last three trumpets (5,6,7) except that the seventh trumpet is only the beginning event of the third woe. The third woe is the entire eschatology of the devil’s desperation. It starts with the seventh trumpet, the expulsion of Satan from heaven, and it ends with the second advent. Therefore the woe count is very important at this point. “The second woe is past; behold, the third woe follows soon.”

The third woe, or the eschatology of the devil’s desperation

1. It begins with the seventh trumpet or the greatest of all Jewish holocausts. The greatest wave of anti-Semitism in all of history will occur in the last half of the Tribulation. It is the first event to follow the expulsion of Satan from heaven. We will study it in Revelation chapter twelve.

2. The devil has two witnesses. His demon attacks fail so he must go back to human beings and he has two men that he has selected who are to become dictators and he will try to rule, to control, to destroy through them. The devil’s two dictators: Revelation chapter thirteen, the Gentile dictator in verses 1-10; in verses 11-18, the Jewish dictator. Just as God sent Moses and Elijah, so the devil has two special leaders.

3. The perpetuation of evangelism during the time of the eschatology of the devil’s desperation — Revelation chapter fourteen. One thing that is always the solution to life is truth. Bible doctrine is truth, and truth will continue in the most desperate period of all human history.

4. Divine judgment will also continue. Divine judgment is designed to be a blessing to those people who have a volition which will respond to disaster when it will not respond to anything else. Therefore, we have divine judgment during the period of the devil’s desperation, Revelation chapters fifteen and sixteen. In chapter fifteen it is called the seven last plagues and it is exactly the same as chapter sixteen where it they are called the seven vials (drinking goblets).

5. We have Satan’s last desperate attack on the human race and when everything else has failed there is the attack of religion. Religion is the most powerful of all Satan’s attacks. It is the last desperate attack on the human race and it will come in the form of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation, Revelation chapters seventeen and eighteen. In chapter seventeen we have the function of ecumenical religion; in chapter eighteen we have the judgment of ecumenical religion.

6. The termination of the eschatology of the devil’s desperation, Revelation chapters nineteen and twenty: the second advent of Christ in chapter nineteen; the judgment of Satan in chapter twenty.

We move on now to a new subject: the seventh trumpet, which is only a part of the third woe. At this point we have an outline because the seventh trumpet goes from 11:15 to 12:17.

Revelation 11:15-19 — the anticipation of the Millennial reign of Christ.

Revelation 12:1-11 — the back ground for the seventh trumpet.

Revelation 12:12-17 — the seventh trumpet itself.

We begin now with the anticipation of the Millennial reign of Christ. We begin verse 15 with a temporal kai which is an Attic Greek concept. It is translated “when”. Next we have the nominative singular subject from an adjective numeral, e)bdomoj, and it means seventh. With it is the noun aggeloj, taking us back to the angelic order of heralds. It refers to a pur sui vant angel, “When the seventh angel.”

Next comes the aorist active indicative of the verb salpizw and it means to sound a trumpet, “When the seventh angel had sounded his trumpet.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It really hasn’t begun yet, but when it does certain things will happen. The active voice: the seventh pur sui vant messenger from the angelic college of heralds produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality. The angel hasn’t sounded the trumpet yet, and before he does we are going to get a message.

The message is given by the kai again. This is the adjunctive use of kai and it is translated “also.” The seventh trumpet is going to begin a time of great historical disaster and we will see many principles dealing with historical disaster and its meaning in the time in which we live. We will see the blessings which come from historical disaster and the greatness which comes from it. We will see how failure is developed in historical disaster, why people give up, why they are distracted, why people are divorced from reality.

With this we have the aorist middle indicative of ginomai, “there were also.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The middle voice is the deponent verb, therefore middle in form, active in meaning. Loud voices are going to produce the action of the verb. These loud voices have been studied before in 5:11 where we read in that passage, “I both saw and heard the voice of many angels around the throne, plus the voice of the angelic heralds and the angelic general staff: and their number was beyond counting ...”

The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality. It is time once again to see that even though things are bad on the earth, as illustrated by the third woe, God has control of everything from heaven. Once again this is noted by the predicate nominative plural composed of two words, megaj, “loud,” and fonh, the word for sound. Once again we are going to have loud voices or loud sounds. The loud voices are explained by 5:11. They include the four angelic heralds representing the angelic college of heralds, the 24 angelic staff officers representing the elect angel order of battle, plus billions of elect angels. And they were saying something, the present active participle of legw. The pictorial present presents this to the mind as something to refresh before we get back into disaster. The active voice: the three categories of elect angels actually produce this fantastic sound of worship. The circumstantial participle can be translated as a finite verb or as a participle, and can be translated "which were saying" or "and said." The sounding of the seventh trumpet takes us to the point of the second advent of Christ in the sense that it begins the eschatology of the devil's desperation and/or the third woe.

The content of the message which is given in worship follows. Certain things are very important in worship as we have noted before. You cannot give in worship what you do not possess. Those in heaven possess something to give in worship that we do not possess today. Certain categories possess glory and therefore they can give glory to God. That is the highest thing that can be given in worship. We on this earth cannot give glory to God, we do not have the qualifications because we do not possess any glory on this earth. Those who advance to maturity inside of the divine dynasphere will have glory to give in the future, when they receive their crowns, when they receive the uniform of glory, and when they receive the order of the morning star. So the highest thing anyone in heaven can give is glory, and that is what these three categories of angels are going to do. The highest worship that man can possess must come from truth [doctrine] in his soul. Doctrine resident in the soul is the means of the highest expression of worship. When truth is absent then there must be something else as a worship substitute which is false and which is related to arrogance. It can be some form of ritual without reality or it can be some form of works which glorifies man instead of the principle, as with the angels, which is giving glory to God.

Arrogance negates the truth, therefore, in another way. Arrogance destroys worship. It is impossible to enter into worship and to give truth to God in worship as long as arrogance is present in the soul. You cannot give in worship what you do not possess and, of course, all worship is based around the perception of Bible doctrine. Arrogance is a distraction to that perception. All worship is based on the application of Bible doctrine. The worship of the communion table is the application of the doctrines of soteriology and Christology to the ritual in which we engage. Ritual is therefore legitimate in that particular situation because arrogance is eliminated. You cannot concentrate, you cannot apply doctrine at the communion table if there is any form of arrogance involved. That is why rebound is so necessary. But the same thing is true as far as learning doctrine is concerned. Learning doctrine means doctrine in the soul. Once doctrine is in the soul you can give it in worship as you give it in application to your experience in life. Therefore the person who succeeds is always the person who has doctrine.

Spiritual success is for the believer who has Bible doctrine. Those who have Bible doctrine have something to give the Lord. The more doctrine they have the sooner they come to maturity, and when they come to maturity they form a pivot. As goes the pivot so goes the prosperity and blessing in any given generation of people. This pivot also becomes a basis of honouring the Lord because periods of prosperity in history are related to that pivot. From this concept of having truth, "you shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free," comes the highest concept of worship in giving recognition to God.

The elect angels in heaven all declare before we start the details in chapter twelve, the details of the eschatology of the devil's desperation, the greatest period of historical disaster in all of human history. Before they even start the angels announce what happens at the end. It is going to turn out all right. In the meantime, a message in angelic worship to the population on the earth who are positive, those who have positive volition toward doctrine. No matter how bad things get God still has control of history. Not only does He have control of history but your life is in His hands and in great disaster God has a purpose for your life even as in times of great prosperity. Even before this eschatology begins we have this wonderful statement in heaven: It will all turn out all right. Not only will it all turn out well but for those believers living on the earth with Bible doctrine in their souls but they are going to have the privilege of living in one of the most exciting times in history and surviving it perfectly. God's grace is just as strong in time of adversity as it is in time of prosperity. God's provision does not go out with adversity, it never changes.

The first announcement of the Millennium is given in verses 15-19. So we have an outline because this part of the passage should go with chapter twelve.

We have first of all the anticipation of the Millennial reign of Christ in verses 15-19.

We have the background for the seventh trumpet in chapter 12:1-11.

We have the third trumpet which is a part of the third woe in verses 12-17.

This anticipates the time of perfect environment on the earth, the Millennial reign of Christ, beginning in 11:15-19.

Verse 15, "When the seventh angel had sounded his trumpet there were also loud voices which were saying."

What is the content of the message? First we have a subject in the nominative singular and it is basileia in the Greek, translated "kingdom." It refers here to the fact that we are about to anticipate kingdoms in poor environment suddenly becoming kingdoms in perfect environment due to the second advent of Christ. With this we have another aorist middle indicative from ginomai, meaning to be or to become. It should be translated, "the kingdom of the world has become." This is a culminative aorist, it views the coup de tat of the second advent in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, perfect environment on the earth for one thousand years before eternity begins. The active voice: (actually a middle voice but a deponent verb, active in meaning) the kingdom of the world produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of historical reality. The historical reality is the second advent. Then we insert the accusative direct object, "the kingdom of our Lord," the objective genitive from the noun kurioj. We have with this the possessive genitive of e)gw, "our Lord," remembering that the elect angels in heaven are speaking and they call God the Father "our Lord"; on earth the world "Lord" is used for the Son.

We have a connective kai and the objective genitive of Xristoj, and with it we have a)utoj, the intensive pronoun used as a personal pronoun, third person, and it refers to God the Father, "and his Christ." The word improvised provides that angels are speaking in this context. They refer to God the Father as Lord and God the Son as His Christ. Believers on earth use kurioj for God the Son; elect angels use kurioj for God the Father. The principle: In order to accomplish this Jesus must return in His hypostatic union to remove Satan as the ruler of this world. By removing Satan He has removed one of the greatest problems but the problems are not going to change. He has removed Satan as the ruler of this world and He has established perfect environment but perfect environment plus the old sin nature immediately gets out of hand. The angels speak of God the Father and God the Son because of the major issue involved: Does God keep His word? The answer, of course, is obviously yes.

The Davidic covenant is unconditional, which means it has not been fulfilled to Israel. The covenant simply says in 2 Samuel chapter 7 that David is going to have a son who will reign forever. This is an unconditional promise to David. This immediately brings up an issue: Will God keep His word to David? If God keeps His word to David, God will keep His word to Israel.

Daniel 9:24 gives us the concept of how things develop for the second advent and the fulfilment of the unconditional covenants to Israel. All of this brings up a major issue: Does God keep His word? It is demonstrated that He does.

"Four hundred and ninety years have been decreed for your people [Israel]," this was a message given to Daniel dealing with the principle that after the termination of the fifth cycle of discipline to Israel in BC 516 and the completion of the walls of Jerusalem in BC 445, the Jews would have 490 years. 516 BC was the year that the temple was completed under the ministry of Zerubbabel and Joshua the high priest, "and your holy city [Jerusalem]." The key date here is the date 445 BC. This is the date when the clock begins for the next increment of 490 years of Jewish history. They were to be give another 490 years; they had just completed 490 years.

In 586 BC 490 years had been completed, and that was the year that the Chaldeans came for the third time under Nebuchanezzar and took the Jews into captivity, destroying the city. Fifty years later in BC 536 Cyrus the Great, king of Persia issued a decree which made it possible for a remnant of Jews to return to rebuild the temple. They returned under Zerubbabel the ruler and Joshua the high priest. The temple was finally completed in 516 BC. But while that ends the fifth cycle of discipline it does not start the time clock. The reason that the fifth cycle of discipline lasted for seventy years is because in the first increment of 490 years the Jews disobeyed a command. The command was to observe their sabbatical years, a part of economic concepts and prosperity. They did not observe these sabbatical years so God gave them all of their sabbatical years at one time — 70 years, from 586 BC to 516 BC. That completed the fifth cycle of discipline but it did not begin the time clock, however.

The time clock is not going to start until 445 BC, but in 458 something else had to happen. The Jews had to get back on to Bible doctrine and the importance of Bible doctrine, so God selected the great man Ezra to go back and remind the Jews of the importance of doctrine. Then in 445 Artaxerxes sent Nehemiah back to rebuild the walls and the streets of the city of Jerusalem. BC 445 begins the second increment of 490 years. Between the second and third increments is the Church Age.

Daniel 9:24 continues with six things to be accomplished at the end of the second increment of 490 years. At the end of that increment, which will be the second advent of Christ, God is going to fulfil His unconditional promises, the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic, and New covenants. But that isn't the only thing to be fulfilled. Six things are to be fulfilled; God keeps His word. These six items are all accomplished at the second advent of Christ.

The first of the six, "to finish the transgression." The second advent of Christ terminates the fifth cycle of discipline which began in AD 70.

The second of the six, "to make an end of sin." This is the baptism of fire which eliminates Jewish unbelievers of the Tribulation.

The third of the six, "to make a propitiatory covering over iniquity." (Note the corrected translation). The propitiatory covering over iniquity is the regathering of the Jews at the second advent to become the client nation in the Millennium. This regathering terminates the fifth cycle of discipline. The fourth six, "to bring in everlasting righteousness" — the resurrection of the Old Testament believers, and specifically the Old Testament Jews and the Tribulational martyrs.

The fifth six, "to seal up the vision and prophecy". This is the fulfilment of the unconditional covenants to Israel.

The sixth six, "to anoint [or dedicate] the holy of holies". The dedication of the Millennial temple.

All six of these items are fulfilled at the second advent of Christ and are a part of His tactical victory.

Next we have in verses 25 and 26 the chronology between the two administrations of the fifth cycle of discipline to Israel. This is a prophecy of that period between 445 BC down to 30 AD and 70 AD, when the fifth cycle of discipline is administered.

The second 490 begins in 445 BC but it is not a continuous period. There is a break, as we will note. Daniel 9:25, "You must know then and understand ["Know" is perception; "understand" is application] that from the issuing of the decree to restore and rebuild Jerusalem until Messiah the Prince [the first advent] is 483 years," the remaining seven will be in the Tribulation. The time is measured in lunar years and the lunar year is not the same as our calendar year. A lunar year is 360 days.

The problem with 483 years is how to get a date from it that makes sense. From 445 until Messiah we have 483 years, so we start with the fact that we have 483 years in that increment, as per this passage in Daniel. How are we going to determine a date there? But when we subtract 445 from 483 we find a very serious problem because the difference is 38 years. It has to come up 30 or 32, not 38. We can knock out one more year because of the transition from BC to AD. So our magic number is now 37. But Christ did not die in AD 37.

The problem is very simple. Daniel's prophecy is in lunar years; our calendar works on the calendar year. There are five extra days in the calendar year. All we have to do then is to multiply 490 times five. That gives us the extra day problem. Multiplying 490 by 5 gives us 2,450. Dividing that number by 360 gives us five days short of seven years. That makes 30 AD the date.

But if you say that we are dealing with 483 years here, and we are, we can take 483 and multiply it by five. We get 2,415. Then, again, divide it by 360 and you get almost 5. And 5 from 37 is 32, for those who prefer the 32 AD date. Christ died in April of either 30 or 32 AD. The reason for using 490 rather than 483 is because when it says the Tribulation is going to last seven years, it is seven lunar years. It is putting all of the calendar in one basket.

Continuing in verse 25 — “it [Jerusalem] will be built again, with streets and moats, even in times of distress.” That is the first 49 years, a reference to Nehemiah chapter two and following describing the opposition to the rebuilding of the walls. The first increment of the 49 years terminates in BC 396, just after the completion of the book of Malachi. The book of Malachi takes up the social problems in Israel when the Jews were already failing. One of them was marriage and the other was taxation. After Malachi was completed that first increment was completed; just as after Revelation was completed you have the greatest period of prosperity in all of history. The Old Testament ended with pivot failure; the New Testament ends with pivot success.

In verse 26 we have two great events at the end of the 483 years. “Then after 434 years [added to the 49] Messiah will be cut off and have no one [“and have no one” is a Chaldean idiom meaning “not for himself”],” When Messiah is cut off He is not going to die for Himself, He is going to die for the sins of the world, “and the people [the Romans who destroyed Jerusalem in AD 70, Luke 21:20-24].”

While 434 takes us to the point of the cross the actual administration of the fifth cycle of discipline did not occur until AD 70. Between 30 and 70 AD we have the grace period, grace before judgment. Why wasn't the 5th cycle administered in 30 AD? Because grace precedes judgment always. The grace period is mentioned in Isaiah 28: Jews who had the responsibility for evangelising in their client nation status are going to be evangelised in Gentile languages, the function of the gift of tongues, that is when it was used legitimately.

“and the people of the prince,” the prince is not there, he is said “to come.” Notice: “the people of the prince who is to come.” The people are SPQR, Roman empire; the prince who is to come is the future dictator of the revived Roman empire. There is an historical Roman empire and there is a prophetic Roman empire. The historical Roman empire ended in 476 AD; the prophetic Roman empire begins in the Tribulation. So we have “the people of the prince who shall come.” The people are the Romans in the time of this prophecy and the prince who is to come is the Roman dictator of the prophetic Roman empire of the Tribulation.

“who will destroy the city,” the people destroy the city, not the prince who is to come, “and the sanctuary [the temple],” and that is August of AD 70, “and its end [in AD 70] will come like a flood. Furthermore, to the end [of the Jewish Age],” this skips over the cross and the Church Age, and the Rapture of the Church and the Tribulation. The “end” refers to the second advent of Christ, “wars and desolations [historical disasters] are decreed.”

Verse 27, the Tribulation or the last seven [lunar] years. “And he [the dictator of the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation].”

Who is this “he”? He is described in the scriptures in eight different ways:

- a. He is described as the prince in Daniel 9:26.
- b. He is the feet of the image in Daniel 2:31-35.
- c. He is the little horn of Daniel 7:8,9, 19-26.
- d. He is the prince of Tyrus in Ezekiel 28:1-10.
- e. He is the personification of the abomination of desolation in Daniel 11:31; 12:11; Matthew 24:15; Mark 13:14. The abomination is a statue of this dictator set up in the holy of holies in Jerusalem.
- f. He is the man of sin in 2 Thessalonians 2:3-10.
- g. He is the anti-Christ in 1 John 2:18. (The problem is there are two anti-Christ in the Tribulation. The word “anti” means a. “against”; b. “instead of”) The dictator of the revived Roman empire is the “against” type. The dictator, the false prophet, of Israel in the Tribulation, passing himself off as the Messiah, is the “instead of”.
- h. He is the scarlet coloured beast on whom the whore rides — Revelation 17:3, 8-13.

And we will study him as the beast out of the sea — Revelation 13:1-10.

“will make a firm covenant [treaty] with the many [the Jews of the nation of Israel in the Tribulation] for one week,” that one week is the last seven years of the Age of Israel, the Tribulation. Shortly after the Rapture the revived Roman empire will make a treaty with Israel, and it will last for one week, seven years, “but in the middle of the week [Tribulation] he will put a stop to the sacrifice and food offerings; and under the protection [wing] of the abomination [ecumenical religion of the Roman dictator] there comes one who causes desolation [the Roman dictator] until the end [of the Tribulation]. Then what is decreed will be poured out on the desolator,” i.e. it is decreed that he will go to the lake of fire at the second advent.

Revelation 11:15, “and he shall reign for ever and ever.” We have the intensive use of the conjunction kai, “in fact,” and the future active indicative of the verb basileuw, “he will reign.” The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb for the last one thousand years of history, perfect environment on the earth. But it says at the end here, “forever and ever,” e)ij touj aionaj ton aionon, which is literally, “unto the ages of the ages” and means “forever and ever.” In other words, the Millennial reign of Christ, starting at the second advent, is the last one thousand years of history and the great test to demonstrate that perfect environment is not the solution to man’s problems. At the end of that there will be the Gog revolution, and that first 1000 years is the end of history but the rule of Christ will go on forever and ever.

The angelic conflict began in human history with perfect environment in the Garden of Eden; it will terminate with perfect environment throughout the world in the Millennium. Man failed in the perfect environment of the garden and man will fail in the perfect environment of the Millennium.

Perfect environment does not bring happiness. The key to happiness is virtue. Those who have virtue in perfect environment will be very happy and very prosperous; those who do not are going to be very miserable in perfect environment, and when Satan is released to start the Gog revolution they will be right there with him.

Another principle that comes out of this which may seem rather remote at first: the masses have no mentality. You can never trust the masses, the mobs of people, people who always want something without responsibility, want something for nothing, always demanding something. Masses are arrogant because they have the mob syndrome, the demand syndrome.

In verse 15 we read: “The kingdom of the world has become the kingdom of our Lord,” that is the beginning of the Millennial reign of Christ, “and his Christ; in fact he [Christ] will rule forever and ever.”

As we move into verse 16 the subject, again, is worship: the worship of the 24 angelic staff officers who are always the leaders in worship. The posture of worship is noted first. It isn’t often when worship is taught in the Bible or mentioned, or is brought into the context, that the posture is so emphasised. So we note first the posture of these second highest ranking angels in the angelic order of battle.

We have a consecutive conjunction kai translated “then,” We have the nominative plural subject which is the 24 angelic staff officers. We have a verb, the present middle participle from the verb kaqhmai, correctly translated “who were sitting”, the descriptive present tense for what is now going on. Apparently they do their work sitting, and this has a very significant verb. People who work sitting work with their brains. These are smart elect angels. Even at that stage of the angelic conflict — they are now in human history — they are still thinking, they are still using their minds.

Principle: Your life is never better than your power of thinking. Without thought running through your soul your life is nothing. Without the ability to think, without the vocabulary to think, without the desire to think, without enthusiasm about something that requires thought, your life is useless.

The middle voice: this is a deponent verb, it is middle in form and active in meaning. The 24 angelic staff officers sitting produce the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial. And they are not sitting on their seats, as per the King James version. The Greek clarifies the issue for us, e)pi plus the accusative plural of the noun qronoj. These are not seats in the sense of chair, these are thrones indicating achievement, achievement by thought. Spirituality can never be divorced from thinking. Basically, as we define it, spirituality is the filling of the Holy Spirit, but the purpose of the filling of the Spirit is perception of doctrine. Perception of doctrine is thinking.

So they were sitting on their thrones, indicating achievement, indicating the greatest possible type of achievement, the only achievement that is eternal in nature. For we have another prepositional phrase, the improper preposition e)nopion. And with it we have the genitive of qeoj, “before God”. They have made their achievement in the past, in the angelic conflict before human history, “before God.” Therefore they sit before God, “Then the twenty-four angelic staff officers who were sitting on their thrones in the presence of God.” This is the highest and the ultimate in spiritual achievement. For the angels are already in their eternal status quo and these 24 angelic staff officers occupy thrones in the presence of God, indicating the ultimate in spiritual achievement, and indicating that this ultimate in spiritual achievement was acquired through whatever system of spirituality God had for the angels. But it was related to, and not divorced from, thought.

Now they leave their thrones. It is time for worship and the change in posture is very important. On the throne they are doing something that they have always done well — the ability to think. But here is something that is very important: they now change their posture. They go down on their faces and they are going to go into worship. The important thing to learn from this change of posture is that worship is not emotion, worship is thought. They move from thinking on the job as staff officers to worship. They make the transition and they tell us a story by doing it. The story is told in two ways: first by the content of their worship, thought, application of doctrine, and, secondly, by moving to a new posture and thinking. Change of posture does not mean changing from thinking to emotion.

There is a lesson here. Happiness is a state of the soul, not the body. The body can be stimulated. The connection between the soul and the body is emotion. People often think that because they are emotionally stimulated that somehow they are happy. Nothing could be farther from the truth. The soul was designed to think. Happiness cannot be divorced from thinking. And that is why Bible doctrine is so important because Bible doctrine is a system of thought. When your soul leaves our body in physical death you take with you your thinking, and your thinking goes to heaven in your soul. Then you get an interim body and you will think in that interim body, and that is the period of great happiness but it is because you took your thinking with you and you are now in heaven, the perfect environment for thinking. The earth is not the perfect environment for thinking, this is the devil's world. Arrogance destroys thinking. Arrogance is related to emotion, not thought. Arrogance is subjectivity, and subjective thinking simply depends upon emotion or environment or something that is related to the body or the earth. So it becomes imperative to realise that spiritual life is devoted to thinking. And spiritual life includes, as we have noted before, worship. Your true worship is thinking.

When the 24 angelic staff officers changed their posture to prostration in the presence of our Lord by falling on their faces they are still thinking, as will be noted in a moment by what they say in verse 17. They have something to say because they are thinking. And we have already noted the principle: You cannot give what you do not have. If you don't have thought you can't worship the Lord, as illustrated by the communion table, the Eucharist. You can only worship up to the point of your ability to think.

The aorist active indicative of piptw is the change of posture from working [sitting on the throne] to worship. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It takes up everything they are going to say in the next verse or two and gathers it into one entirety, because that is their worship. The fact that they fell on their faces before God is not worship; the fact that they were thinking something is worship. The change of posture is merely to show us that all worship is based upon, not only the filling of the Spirit, but on doctrine and humility. The posture is the posture of humility, they fall on their faces before the throne. Every time the 24 angelic staff officers are mentioned in terms of worship what they say is of the utmost importance. It is the content; it is the thought. Along with the four angelic heralds they express the epitome of worship in the glorification of Christ, the glorification of God. You glorify God by what you think and by what you express in worship, not by what you emote.

We note the reason for their prostration. The posture of worship emphasises the fact that all worship is the function of humility. Enforced humility: you concentrate even though you are tired; genuine humility: you are concentrated because you are interested. The posture of worship, therefore, emphasises both enforced and genuine humility. Worship cannot exist in the Church Age apart from royal family residence, function, and momentum inside the divine dynasphere. The 24 angelic staff officers worship in heaven; our worship is conducted inside the divine dynasphere. Worship cannot exist in the Church Age apart from the system: the divine dynasphere.

Then we have the phrase, “and they worshipped.” We have the connective conjunction kai for “and.” Then the aorist active indicative of proskunew which means to worship. The culminative aorist tense views the worship of the 24 angelic staff officers in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results.

The message of verses 17 and 18: their message is significant enough to make it a part of the Word of God forever and ever. What they say becomes a pattern for thought in worship, a pattern for principle in worship, a pattern for application in worship.

The active voice: the 24 angelic staff officers produce the action of the verb, as they did in Revelation 4:10-11.

We also have a dative singular indirect object from the noun qeoj. The dative indirect object indicates the one in whose interest the act of worship is performed. They worship God; it is in His interest.

Translation of verse 16: “Then the twenty-four angelic staff officers, who were sitting on the thrones in the presence of God, fell on their faces, and they worshipped God”.

The angelic general staff cannot give in worship what they do not possess. They have a complete knowledge of doctrine, they possess that in their souls. They have a complete knowledge of the doctrine of eschatology related to the second advent of Christ and His Millennial reign. Note that the 24 angelic staff officers in the expression of their worship are pre-Millennial. Therefore, in their worship they express doctrine resident in their angelic souls. Only cognisance of doctrine can express that doctrine in worship. You cannot express in worship those doctrines about which you are ignorant. The more doctrine you know the greater becomes the expression of your worship toward God, the greater your love for God expressed in worship. Again, therefore, the principle: Worship requires thinking. Ignorance of doctrine has no basis for worship.

Remember the principle of this passage: You cannot offer in worship what you have not acquired by grace. Therefore you cannot give in worship what you do not have.

The first word of verse 17 is the word “saying,” the present active participle of the verb legw. Now we are going to get the content of worship but we have to assume that this was not all that was involved in the expression of their worship. They said many other things but only those things which are pertinent to us as believers were actually recorded in the canon of scripture. In verses 17 and 18 we have a very short message expressed in worship and it begins with the expression of thanksgiving.

The present active participle of legw indicates that we are now going to get a part of what they said in their worship, the part that applies to us. The descriptive present tense of legw indicates what was then going on or will be going on in the future. Then active voice: the angelic general staff composed of the 24 elders produces the action of the verb, and it is a circumstantial participle. We can translate it, therefore, “and said” rather than “saying.”

The first thing that we note in that which is recorded is thanksgiving: the present active indicative of the verb e)uxaristew, “we are thankful” or “we thank you.” This expresses the first concept in worship. Thanksgiving is a very rare thing in time of national degeneracy. People are not appreciative and this is always true when any country involves itself in socialism of any form. Socialism, in effect, says that no matter how terrible a person is the government owes them a living. There is no government without taxation and what happens, in effect, is that successful people are constantly bailing out people who have totally and completely failed. As long as you stay on the free enterprise system that is all right, but when you bring socialism in any form into to the picture then immediately you destroy something in the personality of the people within a national entity. You destroy their capacity for life, for love and for happiness.

Thanksgiving is an expression of individual capacity. No two people have exactly the same intensity of thanksgiving. There are no two people in the world who are to the same degree appreciative. But it takes certain things to be thankful. First of all, it takes humility. Those who are oriented to life and free from the subjectivity of arrogance have the ability to be thankful. They have true gratitude in their souls; they are appreciative of anything that is done for them. Thanksgiving is not only a part of prayer but here it is an expression of worship.

“We are thankful,” we have the perfective present tense which refers to what has come to be in the past and is emphasised as a present reality. The active voice: the 24 angelic staff officers produce the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of their thanksgiving in worship.

With this we have the dative singular indirect object from the pronoun su, “we are thankful to you.” With it we have a vocative singular kurioj referring to our Lord Jesus Christ and translated, “O Lord.” This is actually addressed to the Lord Jesus Christ who is there, and He is now called “the omnipotent God.” We have a nominative singular of appellation or a nominative of apposition from two words: qeoj and the noun pantokrator. Pantokrator originally meant “all-powerful,” for the word pan, meaning all, and pantor which meant “ruler.” Each noun is preceded by a definite article. The basic function of the Greek definite article is to point out individual identity, hence to point out the object and draw attention to it. Hence, the definite article points out the particular object, and the particular object about which they are thankful is the omnipotence of God. The article is used with the name of Christ as God because of His hypostatic union and it is assumed that this doctrine of the hypostatic union is well-known to the reader. The definite article can be construed also as generic since it takes deity and sets deity apart as a separatory and worthy of worship, unique and different from creatures who are doing the worshipping. “We are thankful to you, O Lord, the omnipotent God.”

The omnipotent God refers to the deity of Christ though this is addressed to Him in hypostatic union. Along with this is a reference to the strategic victory of Christ at the first advent. This is accomplished with the participle e)imi used twice. It is the verb to be, used as the articular present active participle and translated “who is.” The definite article is used as a relative pronoun. The present tense is a static present representing a condition which is assumed as perpetually existing, the omega glory of our Lord Jesus Christ in His hypostatic union. The omega glory of Christ refers to His third royal patent which he received after His ascension and the strategic victory of the first advent. The active voice: Jesus Christ in His glorified state produces this action. And, again, we have a circumstantial participle representing the omega glory of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Then we have the connective kai, “and,” plus the definite article used as a relative pronoun, “and who always existed,” the perfect active indicative of e)imi. The imperfect tense is a descriptive imperfect, it is used for linear aktionsart in past time. In His alpha glory Jesus Christ has always existed. The active voice: Jesus Christ as eternal God produces the action, and the indicative mood is declarative for the fact that Jesus Christ is not only true humanity but in this passage He is eternal God. The words “and art to come”, as in the King James version, are not found in the original.

We have the alpha and omega glory combined in the form of the strategic victory of Jesus Christ on the cross. In His alpha glory Jesus Christ is eternal God; in His omega glory Jesus Christ is in hypostatic union.

We need to remember that this worship expressed by angels is directed toward the Lord Jesus Christ who is unique. The essence of God comes from this same verb o)usia from which we get “essence,” the very being of the deity of Christ. God is a spirit. His attributes, His qualities are invisible to human perception which means that we cannot understand God through rationalism or empiricism. The believer, of course, is totally dependant on what the Word of God has to say. In the doctrine of divine essence we recognise the fact that God has always existed in three persons, and one of them is in view here — God the Holy Spirit. Because Jesus Christ is eternal life there never was a time when He did not exist; because Jesus Christ is immutable there never was a time when His deity could be changed or jeopardised. The fact that God exists in three separate and distinct persons is well documented in the Word of God and each one of these persons has identical essence.

We are here interested in the attributes of deity as they relate to the Person in our context, the Lord Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ as God has two categories of divine attributes. He has, first of all, the intransitive or the absolute category. These are primary and cannot be communicated. The relative attributes are transitive, secondary and communicable, and it is through the relative attributes that we come to understand the absolute attributes of our Lord as God.

All thanksgiving must relate to the absolute, God Himself. When thanksgiving is divorced from its relationship to the Lord Jesus Christ as the God-Man then it loses something; and no matter what people do for you, if you do not understand His attributes, His plan, if you do not have His virtue [gates 5 and 6] people are going to do thousands of things for you and you will never appreciate any of them. That very lack of appreciation is the arrogance or the subjectivity which will make you miserable all the days of your life. To the extent that you have genuine gratitude in your soul, not something that is worked up because you know you are supposed to do it — it is based on doctrine in the soul. It isn't the gift you appreciate, it is the giver. And that is the way it is with the Lord, and before you will ever be on a true thanksgiving basis you are going to have to appreciate the Lord.

Notice that the angels in verse 17 do not mention anything about what they have been given. They have been given crowns, they have been given great decorations. The said: "We are thankful to you, O Lord." Thanksgiving must be directed toward the person who gives, not the gift itself.

"who is," Jesus Christ in His omega glory is the God-Man, "who was," the alpha glory of Jesus Christ as God in eternity past. And why the order? Why do we have the omega glory first, "who is"? Why the God-Man? Because this is the greatest gift of all. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son"; "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift." Always the gift that is most important comes first, and the gift that is most important is eternal life purchased for us on the cross.

We now have a reference to the tactical victory of our Lord Jesus Christ at the second advent. It comes up with the causal use of the conjunction o(ti which means "because." With it we have the perfect active indicative of the verb lambanw. This means a dramatic perfect which emphasises the results of the action. It is the description of the fact of a vivid and realistic gift, something He has done. The active voice: the glorified Christ in hypostatic union produces the action. The indicative is the declarative indicative for a dogmatic statement of Bible doctrine.

The accusative which follows is the direct object and is composed of three words, megaj, meaning "great"; dunamij, meaning "power"; and autoj, used here for the third person personal pronoun. It is translated, "your great power."

— "because you have taken your great power." The angels are power conscious, they have just gone through the angelic conflict, the prehistoric part. You can be power conscious in an evil way and you can be power conscious in a good way. The good way is where you have gratitude, where you recognise authority, where you possess personal humility, where you have virtue. This power consciousness is a good power consciousness, it is something that isn't abused. But then there is a pseudo power consciousness in which arrogance intervenes and makes it a system for the abuse of others.

The final phrase: "and you have begun to rule," the aorist active indicative of basileuw which means to rule or to reign. That refers to the Millennial reign of Christ. The angels are thankful for something that hasn't happened yet, so there is a sphere of gratitude in the sphere of eschatology. But it also has application. At the time that John wrote there was a need for God's power, not their own. There was the use of divine power that made the age of the Antonine Caesars, immediately after writing Revelation, one of the greatest periods in all of history.

The aorist tense is an ingressive aorist, it contemplates the action of our Lord's eternal rule at its beginning, the second advent of Christ. The active voice: Jesus Christ in His hypostatic union, omega glory, produces the action, He begins His rule. The indicative mood is declarative for a statement of doctrine related to the second advent of Christ and His tactical victory. The Millennium begins with the second advent and the maximum use of divine power. What the angels are anticipating and are thankful for is that great power, that maximum power. That maximum power is not being used in the Church Age. Why? Because the Church Age, more than any other dispensation in the history of mankind, demonstrates the importance of making good decisions which utilise the power of God without abusing the power of God. So God has deliberately limited His power. Since the canon of scripture is completed miracles are out. The great power that He has given us today is not the power of miracles, it is the power of the divine dynasphere. Jesus Christ is not using raw power as He will at the end of the Armageddon campaign in Revelation chapter 19, He is utilising His power through believers who can accept or reject that power. Acceptance versus rejection is what you do with gate four (perception and application of doctrine), the momentum gate.

The most powerful nation in all of history was SPQR, the Roman empire. During the course of the Roman republic and then during the empire after the second Punic war, the masses had their way with regard to one thing — socialism. The Roman government was supporting as many as a million people with free food and other things at a time when populations were very thin. Whenever this happens, as long as you have a strong industrial complex, a strong economy, you can pay for socialism. All socialism is taxing the rich to feed the poor and, in some cases, scum. As a result, eventually socialism wins, the masses demand more and more, and they destroy the nation. This was the reason for the destruction of the Roman empire. Socialism can only exist as long as there is a major capitalistic system to support it. That means good business function.

Verse 18, the restoration of Israel at the second advent. Why do we study the Millennium when we are not yet through with the Tribulation? The point is to encourage Israel, for no one will be persecuted in the Tribulation as much as Israel. All of the previous holocausts involving Israel will be nothing compared to what Satan will try to do in the Tribulation, and therefore Israel must constantly have before them a true hope, and the hope is mentioned in this passage. The born again Jews of the Tribulation plus all of the resurrected Jews in the first resurrection will be regathered at one time to form a great nation in the middle east. So the Jews need encouragement, especially those who have personally believed in the Lord Jesus Christ, those who understand the true meaning of the ritual of Israel, “Shamah Yisrael, Adonai Elohenu, Adonai echad.”

In response to this type of thing the masses are always angry. Demagogues and evil nations always react to the truth. We find, therefore, in verse 18 the reaction to this type of message, “And the nations were angry ...” The nations always react to anything that is truth and they always stick their nose into someone else’s business.

We start out with the conjunction kai which introduces a result from what precedes, translated “and so.” Then we have the nominative plural subject from e)qnoj which refers to nations, plus the aorist active indicative of the verb o)rgizw which means to be angry. The anger is one that generally comes from emotion. We have noted before that emotion has no power to think, it has no power to rationalise, it has no standards of any kind.

Emotion was designed as a part of the soul to be a responder to thought. O)rgizw is a Greek word for emotional anger, anger which is senseless and useless, anger which is typical of people who cannot think, who have no truth and no standards by which to decide what is right and what is wrong. The aorist tense is a constative aorist which contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The passive voice: the nations of the world receive the action of the verb at the second advent, at the coronation of Jesus Christ. They react to the fact that now there is going to be perfect government on the earth. Actually, evil people are never worried about perfect government, they simply want power to exercise. And when anyone who is evil exercises power it is always tyranny, for they do not care about rights and freedom, they only care about themselves and their power lust. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality.

There is one prophecy about this anger mentioned in Psalm 2:1-3. "Why do the nations rage, and why do the people plot [or form conspiracies] in vain?" So the first verse in Psalm 2 poses two questions regarding nations in the Tribulation. Why do people react against anything that is perfect? God is perfect, He has a perfect plan for us. He has a perfect system by which nations can govern their people.

Verse 2, the explanation. "The kings of the earth take their stand [against our Lord]," in the last half of the Tribulation, the time of the eschatology of the devil's desperation, we find that nations are raging against God. There are four blocks of nations in the Tribulation: the king of the north, the pan-Arabic bloc, the oriental bloc, and the revived Roman empire. So we have spheres of influence. Nations form blocs of nations to protect themselves, "and the rulers conspire together against the Lord [God the Father], and against his anointed [God the Son], saying, Let us destroy their restraint, let us throw off their chains." The restraint here refers to God's restraint in history under the principle that Jesus Christ controls history. Were it not for divine restraint we would not be alive, nor would there be any people on the face of the earth for people all have a tendency of self-destruction. "Throw off their chains" means that God the Father, God the Son so function in the Tribulation to preserve a large population for entry into the Millennium.

So we have as a result of this the anger of God the Father. This is an anthropathism ascribing to God a characteristic which He does not possess but explains divine policy in terms of human frame of reference.

We have the temporal use of the conjunction kai translated "then", plus the nominative singular from the subject o)rggh. God meets anger with anger, as it were. God is perfect, God cannot be angry, but this describes something of God's attitude in our verse 18. It is translated, "Then your anger." This is a reference to the anger of God the Father as portrayed in Psalm 2:4-6.

"And he [God the Father] who is enthroned in heaven laughs: the Lord scoffs at them," so the divine anger toward these nations is described as laughter, as if the creature could ever challenge the creator.

“He [God] will speak to them in his anger, he will terrify them in his wrath,” a reference to the closing events of the Tribulation and the second advent. This speaking to them in His anger refers to the Armageddon campaign and how He will terminate it. It refers to the baptism of fire and how the unbelievers of the earth will be separated from believers: believers will go into the Millennium but the unbelievers will be cast into fire.

“But for me [God the Father], I have installed my King [Jesus Christ, the son of David] on Zion, my holy mountain.”

Then we have the phrase in our passage in Revelation 11:18, “then your anger came,” the aorist active indicative of the verb e)rxomai. E)rxomai means the anger of God trumps the anger of nations. This has always been true to some extent but this is the last trump ever played by the second advent of Christ. In the meantime God controls the nations of the world and permits the continuation of man on this earth under the principle that Jesus Christ controls history. In this way we know and we have a guarantee that right down to the end of history there will always be large populations on this earth and that no sophisticated weaponry will destroy the entire population of the earth. The only thing that will ever destroy the population of the world, or a large segment of it, will be the Lord Himself at the second advent or the baptism of fire when a new civilisation begins with believers only.

“your anger” refers to God the Father producing the action of the verb in the following way: He turns over all judgment to Christ who separates the wheat from the tares at the second advent. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the baptism of fire. With the baptism of fire we have the resurrection of Old Testament saints.

“also the time,” the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai and the nominative singular of kairoj. With kairoj we have the adverbial genitive of reference, nekroj, “the time with reference to the dead.” Nekroj refers to those who are physically dead, the Old Testament saints who are going to be resurrected. The Old Testament believers include Jews and Gentiles but the emphasis in this passage will be on the Jews who are resurrected. The Tribulational martyrs will also be included, they are resurrected at the second advent of Christ.

The regathering of Israel demands that all Israel be present, including Abraham, the father of the Jewish race, and Moses, the father of the client nation Israel. And, of course, the resurrection of any category of persons demands their evaluation or judgment. In this case we have the resurrection of believers which means their evaluation of their time on earth. Some will receive reward and decoration and some will not. Hence, a situation which is comparable to the judgment seat of Christ. However, this is at the second advent.

The corrected translation of verse 18 so far: “And so the nations were angry, then your anger came [the second advent of Christ, the baptism of fire], also the time with reference to the dead [the resurrection of the Old Testament saints and Tribulational martyrs].”

The next word in this sentence is the aorist passive infinitive of the verb krinw which means to evaluate or to judge. Here it means to be evaluated. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the evaluation of all the Old Testament believers and Tribulational martyrs in its entirety. This evaluation is comparable to the judgment seat of Christ. The passive voice: just as you and I as believers will be evaluated at the Rapture of the Church so these believers of the Old Testament and Tribulational martyrs will be evaluated at the second advent. The infinitive is an infinitive of actional result, it is the actual result of the second advent and the regathering of Israel. In the regathering of Israel many of the Old Testament saints are going to receive great reward and high decorations. Therefore, many of them are going to rule ten cities, twenty cities, five cities, and some none.

We have a conjunction which follows but the conjunction is used in the expletive case. Kai sometimes is only used to render an explanation, and when that happens it is translated, "that is." Then we have another infinitive, this time the aorist active infinitive of didomi which means to give. The culminative aorist tense views the decorations which are going to be given at that time but regards them from the viewpoint of existing results. The Millennium is going to be a time when there will only be great rulers. Most of the rulers will be in resurrection bodies therefore they will be able to rule under the principles of perfect government, perfect environment and blessing for all. The active voice: Christ produces the action and this is an infinitive of actual result.

"to be evaluated, that is, to give," what is given is mentioned as the accusative singular direct object from misqoj, reward, decoration. Those who rule in Israel when Israel is regathered in the Millennium, and those who rule Gentile nations in the Millennium will be rulers in resurrection bodies. They will have staffs of those who are in resurrection bodies. With their resurrection bodies they will be able to accomplish many unusual things. They will move vertically or horizontally, they will function under great wisdom, the solutions to problems will be instantaneous, and perfect environment will continue throughout the Millennium.

Next comes the dative plural indirect object from douloj, used here for servants, those who serve the Lord properly in life. Service always begins with virtue. There is no plan of God that does not put virtue first. Virtue and integrity must reside in the believer before anything that he does is significant. So we have the dative of indirect object, "to your servants." This indicates the ones in whose interest the act of reward is performed, Old Testament believers, Tribulational martyrs who achieve maturity during phase two.

Then we have the dative plural indirect object of hagioj which refers to the saints, the Old Testament believers who attain maturity. We have two dative plural indirect objects. One is profthj, the prophets, and the other is hagioj, "to the prophets and to the saints." Then we have a third category, those who respect or reverence his person. That would be the Tribulational martyrs. We have a dative plural indirect object from the present middle participle fobew which can mean either fear or respect. Here it means respect. Those who are martyred during the Tribulation have more respect and love for the Lord than for their own lives. The indirect object indicates Tribulational martyrs who achieve maturity in phase two. It is to their advantage to receive rewards and decorations at the second advent and they will be resurrected ahead of their peers who survive the Tribulation.

In this passage where we have fobew we have a perfective present tense denoting a fact which has come to be in the past, phase two of the Old Testament prophets, and so on. Those who have functioned to glorify the Lord in past time, and it emphasises a present reality. They are going to receive rewards and decorations. In the middle voice the subject, mature believers of the Old Testament, Tribulational martyrs — act with a view toward participating in the outcome. They are going to be rewarded, they are going to be rulers in the Millennium. The middle voice relates the action of the verb more intimately to the subject, and since the verb here is fobew these believers, first of all, have motivating virtue. They respect the Lord. They will not have, as we have, the divine dynasphere but they will have the equivalent of gate five. They will have great love for the Lord, and that love for the Lord is motivating virtue which is the basis for all reward. Rewards are given to them for their functional virtue as a result of motivating virtue, so the same policy applies in every resurrection where believers are concerned. If you have virtue first then your production is meaningful; if you put production before virtue then there is no reward. That production is the wood, hay and stubble of 1 Corinthians 3, it is burned at the judgment seat of Christ. Only Church Age believers possess the divine dynasphere to accomplish this.

A new plan has to be brought into focus for the Tribulation. Reason: the Church Age so far has lasted nearly 2000 years. We do not know how long it is going to last but when the royal family is completed there will be the resurrection of the Church. Our way of life is the divine dynasphere. But the Tribulation is going to last only seven years, therefore the plan of God for Tribulational believers must be an accelerated plan so that believers can advance rapidly to maturity. It will be an accelerated spiritual life such as has not been seen in the history of the world.

This middle voice is called a dynamic middle because it emphasises the part taken by the subject in the action of the verb. These believers who are rewarded are winners. The participle is circumstantial and we translate it: “and to those who respect.”

Next comes the accusative singular o)noma which means the person or the name. Here it refers to the person. With this we have the pronoun, “his person,” “and to those who respect his person.” That is personal love for Jesus Christ. How do you know when you are advancing in the spiritual life? You know it because of gate five in the divine dynasphere, you have a personal love for God. That is the ultimate in virtue. The only virtuous love that is personal is personal love for God. Personal love for God as the motivating virtue produces gate six, the functional virtue of impersonal love for all mankind. All production comes out of gate six and it must be prefaced by gate five. There must be personal love for God before there can be production in the Christian way of life.

“and to those who respect his person,” personal love for Christ, motivating virtue, occupation with Christ. The adjectives which follow are classified as an anacoluthon which is in the form of an accusative absolute without any participle. The accusative absolute is grammatically independent of the rest of the verse. We have two adjectives which follow. There is the accusative plural of mikroj, and mikroj is not going to mean what it appears to mean in the King James version. It refers here to the humble and the insignificant and it is simply a way of designating the lower classes, people who have not achieved as others have, people who are in lower classes of society. Here, what is ordinarily translated “little” means the lower classes. Then the second accusative plural is the adjective megaj, and in the anacoluthon this means the upper classes, “both lower and upper classes.”

Three points with regard to these classes

1. Note that the lower class believers have the same opportunity to achieve spiritually and to become winners as the upper class or the privileged class. Because one is in a lower class of society it does not hinder him from becoming a winner. God has a plan that goes right through class distinction.
2. Class distinctions and racial distinctions are never issues in the spiritual life, only positive volition toward doctrine which causes the believer to advance to maturity. Class distinction is set aside for those who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.
3. These Tribulational believers present in their resurrection bodies at the second advent are classified as Tribulational martyrs in contrast to the Tribulational believers who survive the Tribulation and go into the Millennium to form the population in the Millennium. There will be class distinctions, even in the Millennium.

We have one more phrase in verse 18 which deals with the tactical defeat of Satan. It begins with the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, meaning “also,” plus the aorist active infinitive of diafqeirw which means to destroy, “Also to destroy.” The culminative aorist tense views the expelling of fallen angels or demons from the earth plus the imprisonment of Satan in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. Christ becomes the ruler of the world and perfect environment will exist for one thousand years. This is the tactical victory of our Lord which complements the strategic victory at the cross. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb, and this will be amplified in Revelation chapters 19 and 20. This is the infinitive of actual result, the second advent of our Lord Jesus Christ.

With this we have the accusative plural direct object from the definite article touj. With it we also have the present active participle again of diafqeirw, and here it means again to destroy but it is in the present tense, “to destroy those who keep on destroying the earth.” The present tense is a perfective present referring to a fact which has come to be in the past: the fact that five demon assaults on the earth have been the source of destruction. The active voice: from the fall of man to the second advent fallen angels have been producing the action of the verb. The particle is circumstantial for the angelic conflict extended to human history. Then the accusative singular direct object from gh referring to the earth.

Corrected translation: “also to destroy those who destroy the earth.”

Everything mentioned in verse 18 must occur before Israel can be restored as a client nation to God in the Millennium. The removal of Satan as the ruler of this world plus the destruction of the entire Satanic organization is necessary for the restoration of Israel. Before Israel can be restored and become the recipients of the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic and New covenants there must be this clearing the way for it. Until that time Israel is always the target for Satanic attacks.

Translation of verse 18: "And so the nations were angry. Then your anger came, also the time with reference to the dead [resurrection of the OT saints] to be evaluated; that is, to present the rewards to your servants, namely to the prophets, and to the saints, and to those who respect his person, both the lower and upper classes; also to destroy those who destroy the earth."

The signs of the restoration of Israel are given in verse 19. There are a few words that are mistranslated in the King James version. We begin with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, "then," with the nominative subject naoj referring to the temple in heaven. The temple that was in existence at the time of the Exodus (in the form of the tabernacle), and the temple which was built in the days of Solomon, is simply a counterpart to the great temple in heaven, the temple which portrays all of the ministry of our Lord Jesus Christ in the angelic conflict, breaking the back of Satan in the strategic victory of the cross and then the tactical victory of the second advent. This is the temple with the possessive genitive of qeoj, this is the temple of God. This temple resides in heaven and has always been in heaven and, of course, the counterpart has been as per the instructions given in the Word of God for the building of the temple.

So we have a subject. The heavenly sign is the fact that there is a temple in heaven. And immediately we ask, Why is there a temple in heaven? Why is it necessary?

This temple is Jewish. It is the Jewish temple which portrayed the person and the work of the Lord Jesus Christ, every facet of the temple. Every bit of it is to demonstrate to Israel that in heaven there is the fact that the Jews will always exist and that Satan will never be able to destroy the Jews. Remember that Satan has access to heaven and spends a great deal of time there. Satan has to pass this temple periodically and he knows the significance of it. The significance of the temple in heaven is the fact that God keeps His word, that God is faithful, that there never will be a time when God does not keep His word. The illustration is Israel. God keeps His word to Israel and Israel will always exist in spite of every Satanic attempt to destroy the people of Israel. God keeps His word through His unconditional covenants; God keeps His word through the Lord Jesus Christ, for every bit of the furniture in that temple speaks of Christ.

Next we have a nominative neuter singular from the relative pronoun o(j, translated "which," rather than "who." We insert the verb e)jimi because of ellipsis, "which was." Then we have a prepositional phrase e)n plus the locative of ouranoj, telling us that this temple is in heaven, "which was in the heaven." This temple of God is in heaven as a guarantee and a reminder to all the fallen angels who live in heaven and a reminder to us who will live on earth, that God will keep His word to believers, and that there is a group where believers and unbelievers exist where God will keep His word. God always keeps His word when He makes a promise.

Then we have the aorist passive indicative of anoigw, and it means to open. The culminative aorist tense views the opening of the heavenly temple in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. The existing results are implied in the next passage, the regathering of Israel, the restoration of Israel as a client nation to God, and Israel going into the Millennium as the client nation to God for the last one thousand years of history and forever. With this we have a passive voice: the temple receives the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of this sign from heaven: Israel has a future. As goes the Jew so goes the future of eschatology and there will always be Jews alive on this earth.

Next we have a connective kai and a nominative singular subject, kibwtoj, which refers to the ark. With this we have the possessive genitive singular diaqkh, meaning covenant, “the ark of his covenant,” we have a possessive genitive singular from the intensive pronoun autoj used as a personal pronoun.

The ark of the covenant is a box made out of acacia wood and overlaid with gold. It is the symbol of the Lord’s presence and the client nation status of Israel. It was located in the holy of holies. How do we know that Israel was a client nation when it came out of slavery from Egypt? Because they had the ark of the covenant with them. How do we know that they were a client nation in the Old Testament? They had the ark of the covenant. They lost the ark of the covenant when they were taken into captivity in 586 BC, the fifth cycle of discipline, and again in 70 AD. The original is in heaven and there in heaven they have the sign that there will always be Jew in every generation in history, and that there will come a time, second advent, when Israel will be restored.

“Then the temple of God which was in heaven was opened, and the ark of the covenant was seen”. Again, the ark of the covenant is the symbol of the Lord’s faithfulness and the Lord’s presence in the client nation Israel. It is located in the holy of holies of the Jewish tabernacle, then the temple, but there is no Jewish tabernacle or temple today and the original is in heaven itself.

It is called the ark of the covenant because it contains the tablets of the Mosaic law, but it also contains the promises dealing with the unconditional covenants to Israel. As the symbol of the Lord’s presence in the client nation status of Israel the ark was always carried in advance of Israel on the march. We notice this first in Numbers 10:33; Deuteronomy 1:33; Psalm 132:8. The ark remained in Shiloh until the time of the priest Eli when it accompanied the army in a campaign against the Philistines. It was taken along for good luck in battle but it turned out not to be good luck in battle, it was a misuse of the doctrine. The doctrine speaks of the Lord’s faithfulness, it was not a good luck charm, and when they decided in the days of king Saul to take it into battle as a good luck charm then immediately it was abused and misused, and that was the end of it. Distortion or misuse of doctrine results in great discipline from God. They were defeated by the Philistines and the ark was captured. It was brought back eventually by David.

When the temple was constructed the ark was then again placed in the holy of holies. The ark of the covenant of God is described in detail in Exodus 25:10-22; 37:1-9. The acacia wood represents the humanity of Christ; the gold represents the deity of Christ; the construction of the box represents Christ in hypostatic union. The guarantee of eternal salvation for anyone who believes in Christ, the guarantee of the future of Israel is based upon the fact that Jesus Christ, eternal God, became true humanity and went to the cross and was judged for our sins. The ark represents the fact that Jesus Christ is the God of Israel, and He is both the saviour and the deliverer of Israel. In the structure of the ark we have the uniqueness of our Lord Jesus Christ. The ark represents the fact that Jesus Christ, the God of Israel, is also the saviour of the world, and only Jesus Christ, the son of David can fulfil the unconditional covenants to Israel. But the ark also reminds Israel that there must be a first advent for provision of eternal salvation before Christ can come again and regather them.

The ark also reminds us of another factor because inside of the ark are deposited three categories of sacred articles. We know this from Hebrews 9:4. First of all, the tables of the law which defined freedom for the client nation to God and were the basis for the laws of divine establishment. Freedom, in turn, must be related to the future of the nation for even though God has promised the Jews would have a future their positive volition is demanded for entrance into that future. That means that every Jew, like everyone else, must personally believe in Christ for eternal salvation. If he is going to see the fulfilment of the future of Israel this is absolutely necessary.

Secondly, there was the urn of manna representing the principle of logistical grace. God has provided for all believers under logistical grace and has especially provided for Israel in this regard. It also emphasises the fact that Jesus Christ controls history. Then there is Aaron's rod that budded which represents the spiritual factor in the function of the client nation: the function of the priesthood, the importance of the pivot of mature believers, for the dissemination of doctrine was primarily in the hands of the Levitical priesthood. Later on God had to raise up prophets in order to strengthen the function of Bible teaching in Israel. Aaron's rod that budded advises us of the separation of temporal and spiritual powers. It is a part of the laws of divine establishment that freedom cannot exist without all temporal and spiritual power being separated, and there must never be an overlap of one into the other.

Over the top of the ark was the lid, and on top of that lid was a solid gold throne. On each end of the throne there was a cherub. These cherubs were looking down toward the seat of that throne. In the box we have the articles; they also represent sin. Sin is a violation of divine law, divine standards. In the use of the pot of manna, this was sin in the sense of rejection of divine authority. Aaron's rod that budded had the same connotation, rejection of logistical grace. Everything in the box, then, also speaks of man's failure and man's sin.

On the top of the ark is the mercy seat. It is described in Exodus 25:17-22. It was constructed of solid gold representing the essence of God. On each side of the throne was a cherub with gold wings. The cherubs represent the believer's point of contact with God which is the integrity of God. One cherub represents the perfect righteousness of God, the other represents the perfect justice of God. That is our point of contact with the integrity or holiness of God.

Once a year on the day of atonement the high priest would come in and sprinkle blood over the top of that mercy seat. The righteousness of God looks down and sees the blood and is satisfied — propitiation; the justice of God looks down and sees the blood and is satisfied, for the justice of God judged our sins — that was the representation of the animal blood, and the righteousness of God can therefore be imputed to anyone who believes in Christ. That opens the door for the justice of God providing logistical grace to every believer, because whether the believer is a winner or a loser that grace pipeline is open. Everything that sustains us in life comes from the justice of God down this great pipeline to the righteousness of God. Again, it delineates the faithfulness of God to each one of us.

“was seen,” the aorist passive indicative of o(raw. It was actually seen in heaven. It is not on earth; it is simply seen, a manifestation once more that in view of what is coming up in the next chapter Israel will survive it all and there will always be Jews alive in every generation, including the generation of the Tribulation. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The passive voice: the ark receives the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. Once again we have e)n plus the locative of naoj, “in his temple.”

Translation to this point: “Then the temple of God which was in heaven was opened, and the ark of the covenant was seen in his temple.”

What follows are the earthly signs of judgment against anti-Semitism. These are merely weather signs and it is bad weather for anyone who seeks to persecute the Jew. It is a warning that God never allows anyone to get away with anti-Semitism. The aorist middle indicative of the verb ginomai is translated, “and there was.” Then we have the signs. We have a)straph, correctly translated “flashes of lightning.” As flashes of lightning it means that there are many people who are punished for anti-Semitism that realise why they are being punished. There are those who apparently understand the issue. Many people, of course, do not know why they are being punished for anti-Semitism and so we have other warnings.

Next we have the predicate nominative plural from fonh which should be translated “noises.” Some people have delicate ears and a very sensitive form of hearing, and noises shatter them. This means that a lot of people who are sensitive about normal things are going to be shattered because of their anti-Semitism.

Next we have the predicate nominative of the noun bronth, “thunder.” So there are flashes of lightning and noises and thunders.

Finally, we have two more: the predicate nominative of seismoj, “earthquake,” “and great hail storms.”

Corrected translation: "Then the temple of God in heaven was opened, and the ark of the covenant was seen in his temple: and there followed flashes of lightning, and noises, and thunders, both an earthquake and great hail storms."

Principle

First of all, the restoration of Israel is preceded by the events of Revelation chapter 12, the greatest anti-Semitism movement in history personally led by Satan. It will be the attack of Satan's third demon assault army.

Secondly, the seventh trumpet does not begin formally until Revelation 12:12-17. This seventh trumpet is a part of the third woe which precedes the restoration of Israel at the second advent. Of course, the third demon assault army makes many attacks, one is upon the Jew. So while the seventh trumpet is a part of the third woe it is not the entire third woe.

Thirdly, we note that the seventh trumpet is the greatest and most awful Jewish persecution in history. It is the holocausts of holocausts.

Fourth, we note that the divine guarantee of the restoration of Israel in this paragraph tells us that Satan's attack will fail. But it will be used to judge many Jews who have rejected Christ as saviour.

Finally, the events in Revelation chapter 12 can be classified as retrospective exposition. They occur before this paragraph we have just studied, as far as chronology is concerned.

We begin verse 1 with the connective use of the conjunction kai which brings us into the time of the devil's desperation, the background for the seventh trumpet. The nominative singular subject is composed of two words. The first word is the adjective megaj. With it is the word shmeion, translated "sign" but actually means a great deal more than that, "And a great sign." Inasmuch as the Bible says it is great it is something that requires a great deal of analysis. Next is the aorist passive indicative of the verb o(raw, "was seen." The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The passive voice: the subject, the great sign receives the action of the verb. It is seen. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of this sign which will in effect explain the origin of the humanity of Christ.

Next we note that this great sign is in heaven, therefore all the more reason why we should observe it, e)n plus the locative of o)uranoj. This is a legitimate sign, a sign that is going to tell us a great deal.

Translation so far: "And a great sign was seen in heaven."

It is the word shmeion that we must stop and observe. What does a sign mean? What is the meaning of shmeion? It connotes a wonder, a miracle, that which is contrary to the usual course of nature, something extra-natural, something even supernatural; in this case, like the origin of the Jewish race at the point of Abraham's circumcision. Hence, a sign is a miraculous function of divine origin, something that is performed by God totally apart from human modus operandi.

There are actually seven signs mentioned in the book of Revelation. This is the first of the seven. There will be a second one in Revelation 12:3, a third one in 13:13,14, a fourth one in 15:1, the 16:14 and 19:20 complete the signs. Signs, then, are miracles and these miracles are accomplished by the Lord. Signs and miracles are also said in Revelation to be accomplished by Satan in 13:13, 14. The dictator of Israel during the Tribulation performs "signs," 19:20. The seven pur sui vant messengers which introduce and blow the seven trumpets are followed by seven pur sui vant messengers who have seven bowls or goblets of judgment which are related to the sign in Revelation 15:1. Certain demons perform signs or miracles, according to Revelation 16:14. So signs are related to both supernatural and extra-natural activity. Signs are usually connected with future events. The rainbow was given as a sign to Noah in Genesis 9:12,13, the covenant of Noah that never again would the earth be destroyed by rain. Circumcision was the sign that Gentile Abraham would become a new race, and his son Isaac would perpetuate that race. All the races of the world, of course, come from Noah after the flood. Noah had three sons, Shem, Ham and Japheth. The Semitic line comes down to Abraham. As a Gentile at age 99 Abraham became a Jew. This was shmeion, a supernatural act. This was the newest race and it was called out so that there could be in Old Testament times a client nation to God based on one race and one culture. From this race and from this client nation and from this culture would come the humanity of Christ and our so great salvation.

The plagues against Egypt were called shmeion, signs of divine displeasure, Exodus 4:8ff; Joshua 24:17. The miracle of the first advent was called a sign to attest the hypostatic union and our Lord's unique relationship with God the Father, Matthew 12:38. The Jews wanted signs or attesting miracles rather than doctrine. Their great problem was that when the Jews were delivered from slavery in Egypt they didn't want doctrine, they wanted signs, they wanted miracles. Negative volition toward doctrine is often manifest by the sign movement today, especially in fundamentalist circles, e.g. the tongues movement. God does not speak to us by the use of miracles today. Once the canon of scripture was completed the age of miracles was shut down. It is negative volition to look for a miracle when God has provided the royal family of the Church Age the greatest of all miracles, Bible doctrine resident in the soul. Faith must stand on doctrine, not on miracles.

The great sign begins with Abraham at age 99 when he was sexually dead. But Abraham believed God's promise that he would have a son and that from that son would come race and nation. Even though he was sexually dead once he circumcised himself that was the function of the faith-rest drill in the second and third stages. By circumcision, the cutting away of the dead flesh, God revived the use of his sexual organs and he had a son, Isaac. Abraham became a Jew, along with Sarah, at age 99 under the act of faith-rest, believing the promise in the Abrahamic covenant. He believed that promise and God honoured his faith.

Then we have his son, Isaac, and "in Isaac shall thy seed be called." Isaac had twin sons. Esau, the eldest of the twins is a Gentile, but the younger son was Jacob, and Jacob is the Jew. The difference between the two, even though they were twins: one was a believer, regenerate, born again; one was an unbeliever and therefore is the father of the Edomites, the Gentile nations south of Palestine.

So we have the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob as the Lord Jesus Christ. But Jesus Christ is eternal God and therefore as eternal God there is no way that He can go to the cross and bear our sins. As eternal God he can have nothing to do with sin: He cannot bear sin; He cannot receive sin by imputation; He cannot be judged for sin; He cannot solicit to sin. Therefore Jesus Christ, to bear our sins on the cross, must become man — true humanity. Furthermore, He must go to the cross as perfect humanity, and a second sign after circumcision was given. We go from circumcision to Isaiah 7:14 where we have the virgin birth. This is the sign of the virgin birth, this is the declaration that Jesus Christ would come into the world. But He had to come through a virgin birth, a miracle. Why?

We have to go back to Adam and Eve. Adam wilfully sinned, he knew what he was doing when he sinned. Eve was deceived, she did not know what she was doing but she was guilty. Therefore, the old sin nature was passed down through the man in copulation. The old sin nature is in the 23 chromosomes which the man provides to fertilise the female ovum. The 23 chromosomes in the female ovum are totally free from the old sin nature because Eve was deceived, and even though she was guilty these are the only chromosomes in the entire body that are free from the old sin nature. Therefore, man through copulation provides the basis for the old sin nature so that when human life (which does not exist in the womb) is given by God after birth and imputed to the human soul, simultaneously Adam's original sin is imputed to the genetically-formed old sin nature. The word "sign" becomes very important because when we receive life we also receive spiritual death. God does not wait until we sin personally. Our personal sins have never been imputed to us for judgment. The wages of sin is death and we are under spiritual death because Adam's original sin is imputed to the genetically-formed old sin nature. When Adam sinned originally the old sin nature was created through that sin and therefore there is perfect harmony between Adam's original sin and the old sin nature. This also means that if anyone dies before reaching accountability he is automatically saved.

All personal sins are never imputed to us, they are to be imputed to Christ on the cross. But how can our Lord get to the cross? The only possible way is to by-pass those 23 male chromosomes which fertilise the female ovum. They carry the old sin nature. Man and woman are born into the world with an old sin nature because of copulation. Therefore, in the case of the virgin birth this is cut off and God the Holy Spirit provides 23 perfect chromosomes to match the 23 perfect chromosomes in the womb of the virgin Mary. In this way we have a virgin pregnancy and, as a result, a virgin birth. John 3:16 says that "he gave his only begotten son", but the Greek word monogenh means "uniquely-born." This human life was given by God the Father because He loved the world and it was imputed to the human soul of our Lord. But Adam's original sin could not be imputed because there was not an old sin nature. Therefore, instead, God the Father gave the prototype divine dynasphere which was imputed to the human spirit of our Lord Jesus Christ. So this is the second sign — Isaiah 7:14.

The third sign is the woman clothed with the sun and the eleven stars, Revelation 12:1. This is the one that comes into focus at this time. We have the nominative singular subject of the Greek word gunh, which means woman. It is a reference to the nation Israel. We have the sign of the race in circumcision, we have the sign of salvation, the saviour of the world and the hope of Israel in the virgin birth; now we have the sign of the nation. So we have the nation Israel emphasising the nation as the source of the humanity of Christ and the hypostatic union. First it was the race: Jesus Christ is the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Then it was the nation: Jesus Christ is born son of David, the ruling dynasty of the nation.

Next we have the perfect passive participle of the verb periballw which means to clothe, to wrap around, "clothed with the sun." The perfect tense is a dramatic perfect emphasising the results of a completed action. The race became a nation. The passive voice: the woman as Israel receives the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial. The accusative singular direct object from h(lioj) brings us into focus with the verb. The sun is a reference to Jacob. What is the difference? The sun is light. Jacob is one of the twins. Esau was his older brother but Esau was negative, an unbeliever. Jacob as a believer is the "light" picture and the Jewish race, therefore, begins with regeneration. Abraham was a believer, Isaac was a believer, Jacob was a believer. The Jewish race was founded on regeneration. Therefore Israel becomes very significant to all of us and becomes a major subject in the Bible, because it is the race founded by regeneration.

Jacob is the sun. There is also a feminine counterpart in the accusative singular direct object from selnhh which means moon. The moon refers to the wives of Jacob. They reflect his glory in the sense that the moon is a reflecting object, "under her feet" [under Israel's feet] refers to the fact that Jacob had two wives and two mistresses. The twelve patriarchs came from the two mistresses and the two wives.

Next we have "a crown of twelve stars on her head." So the woman Israel was started as the wives of Israel as the moon, Jacob as the sun. The twelve stars are the twelve patriarchs.

The sign of the woman is completed with the nominative singular stefanoj, "crown." Sovereignty begins with the tribe and the tribe has twelve children, the twelve patriarchs, the cadre which forms both racial and national Israel.

Translation: "And a great sign was seen in heaven; a woman [Israel] clothed with the sun [Jacob], and the moon [wives and mistresses of Jacob] under her [Israel's] feet, and a crown of twelve stars [the twelve patriarchs] on her head."

We must remember first that the source of the humanity of Christ is racial Israel. Israel is not only unique for the fact that the humanity of Christ originated from Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Judah, but both racial and national uniqueness is existing here. These miracles [signs] all add up to remind us of the uniqueness of the person of Christ, Jesus Christ in hypostatic union.

Romans 9:1, "I am communicating doctrine, I am not lying, my conscience bearing joint testimony with me in the Holy Spirit," the information that Paul gives comes from his right lobe and it comes from that part of his right lobe called the suneidhsij or conscience. Paul had learned through reception the doctrines he is about to give us. They entered his left lobe, resided there briefly as gnwsij, and by faith they were transferred to his right lobe and became e)pignwsij, and he is now giving us from his conscience these particular principles of doctrine.

Verse 2, "I have great sorrow and constant pain in my right lobe," which is related to Israel.

Verse 3, "For I could wish that I myself were [cherim] cursed," but it isn't possible. There is only one in all of human history who has truly been cherim, and He has been cherim for the entire human race. That is the Lord Jesus Christ when He was hanging on the cross. When our sins were imputed to Him by God the Father He became cherim, and God the Father then judged those sins. Our Lord was cursed on the cross for us. So Paul's desire here is an impossible desire. That is why it is translated "wish" instead of "pray." Paul knew better than to pray for it and so it is a wish, "separated from Christ for the sake of my brethren," and when he says "brethren" he is not talking about the Romans, he is talking about the Jews. He is using "brethren" in its racial sense, "my fellow countrymen," the national Jews because in the past he had served as a Pharisee, "according to earthly descent," not according to citizenship, but according to earthly descent, the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

Verse 4, "who are Israelites, to whom is the adoption." Adoption means that you are not a true son but you are adopted into the family and become one. The Jews had been adopted by God, and that is the principle here. And when were they adopted by God? When Abraham was circumcised (the first sign), “as sons and the glory.” This refers to the Shekinah glory, the presence of the Lord Jesus Christ, and it was the light in the holy of holies, the Shekinah glory [the sign of Christ, the light of the world] as the God of Israel. That Shekinah is exactly identical with the phrase, Adonai elohenu (Jesus Christ is our God) “and the covenants and the gift of the law,” not only the laws of divine establishment but also the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ and doctrine for the believer. All three categories are found in the Mosaic law, and this is the sign of authority in client nation Israel, “and the worship,” the worship of the true God in contrast to the cultic activities of the Romans during the time of SPQR and the republic, “and the promises,” the eternal heritage of any Jew who had become a true Jew, not by birth but by believing in the Lord Jesus Christ by recognising that last phrase, Adonai echad.

Verse 5, “from whom are the fathers,” the regenerate ancestry in the formation of Israel, “in fact from whom is Christ, the one who came in the flesh.” And there it is, the third line of Deuteronomy 6:4, Adonai echad, “the one who is God, ruler over all,” and that is the second line, Adonai elohenu, “extolled forever. Amen.”

Verse 6, “However, this is not to imply that the word of God has failed.” Paul stops now and makes a very important point. In every generation outside of the client nation very few Jews were born again believers, and therefore true Jews. And immediately this is an implication: Has the Word of God failed? No. And why hasn’t the Word of God failed? It isn’t the Word of God that has failed in any given generation, it is the volition of the Jew that has failed. The same thing is true today, of course, with the Gentiles; the same thing is true with us. It isn’t that the Word of God ever fails, it is that we fail by our negative volition, “for not all who are from Israel [not all who have the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob] are really Israel [born again Jews].”

Verse 7, “neither because they are Abraham’s posterity are all racial Jews the children of the internal inheritance, but: In Isaac [not Ishmael but born again Isaac] your posterity shall be designated [elected to privilege, i.e.. client nation to God].”

Verse 8, “This means that the descendants of the flesh [racial Jews] are not the children of God, but the children of the promise [the born again Jews who believe in Christ] are imputed for the seed,” i.e. for true Israel.

So we return to Revelation 12:1. Since the day that Satan discovered that Israel was to be the source of the incarnate Christ Israel has been the target for the devil’s hatred and antagonism. There is an historical and eternal relationship between the uniqueness of the person of Christ and the uniqueness of Israel. The spiritual heritage of the Jew gives him the greatest possible opportunity for eternal salvation through personal faith in Christ. Everything in his heritage and culture speaks of the person and the work of Jesus Christ. Self-determination is the issue in the historical phase of the angelic conflict: he can believe in Christ and be saved, he can reject Christ and be a racial Jew which is not a true Jew. Every Jew has the opportunity, then, of believing in Christ or rejecting Him from very ancient times. The very content of divine revelation to Israel plus the ritual by which they were taught communicates this principle.

Take, for example, the Levitical offerings. There was the burnt offering. It taught propitiation, emphasising the work of Christ on the cross bearing our sins. Then there was the meal or the food offering, propitiation emphasising the person of Christ. So you have the signs, the sign of the person of Christ, the hypostatic union. Then there is the peace offering, reconciliation. Jesus Christ came as a Jew. He went to the cross as a Jew. He received the imputation of our sins as a Jew, and as a Jew provided eternal salvation. The sin offering, rebound, emphasising unknown sins. The trespass offering is rebound emphasising known sins.

The interesting thing is that all of the Jews could enter into these offerings because they had grades that went from the very expensive to the very inexpensive. If all you could afford was a pigeon or a turtledove, an inexpensive offering, you could enter into these rituals and understand the principles of the Levitical offerings.

Take, for example, the feasts or the holy days. The feasts and the holy days in Rome were designed to give cruelty the expression of sentimentality; the feast days in Israel were designed to give great spiritual emphasis to our Lord Jesus Christ. The first was the Passover, the necessity for salvation to true Israel. There was the feast of unleavened bread, fellowship with God as a believing Jew; the feast of the firstfruits the first Sunday after the Passover, emphasising the resurrection of Christ, the guarantee of the resurrection of all true Israel. The feast of Pentecost [fifty days] representing the fifth cycle of discipline to Israel as a client nation to God but the perpetuation of true Israel as a part of the royal family during the Age of the Gentiles. Then came the great gap between the feasts, from June to October. Pentecost occurred in June and then there was no feast until October. The gap represented the times of the Gentiles, the Church Age, the perpetuation of true Israel by being brought into the royal family of God, like the apostle Paul. Then the feast of the trumpets, the termination of the fifth cycle of discipline to Israel, the restoration of Israel at the second advent of Christ. Israel again becomes the client nation. Born again Jews who survive the Tribulation will enter the Millennium to become client nation to God for the last 1000 years of history. Then the feast of atonement, the fulfilment of the unconditional covenants to Israel at the second advent.

The principle of Romans 2:29, "But he is a Jew who is one by hidden birth [being born again]; and circumcision [the first sign to Israel] is that which is of the right lobe, by means of the Holy Spirit, not by means of the letter [keeping of the law]; whose approval is not from man, but from God."

Finally, there was the feast of the tabernacles representing the Millennial reign of Christ whose perfect environment fulfils the unconditional covenants to the restored Israel, but the restored true Israel, the born again Jew.

Principle

1. No one ever had to take more time off to learn how Israel became unique than the Jews. The Jews were ordered to take time off for learning. The time off for learning was first of all the Sabbath day. The time off were the feast days — seven each year. The time off were the sabbatical years. Every seventh year the Jews were to stop everything and to spend that entire year in intense study of the Word of God as they possessed it and as it was presented to them through the ritual of the priesthood and the communication of the prophets. The continual annual sacrifices were designed to show exactly how Israel became unique. Everything in Jewish culture is really a spiritual factor. Israel has the only culture totally based on spiritual things — doctrine.

2. Jesus Christ is the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. He is the major subject of the law and the prophets, the Old Testament canon.

3. Every ritual reveals some aspect regarding Christ, so that the Jews could not miss the point except by deliberately refusing to do so, negative volition.

4. The tragedy of negative volition toward Christ is the tragedy of neglected opportunity.

The tragedy of the Jews is that so many of them are unbelievers. But God doesn't wait until they're dying, God provides for them a special sin unto death and He gives them, young and old alike, but not without purpose and not without reason, the holocaust. But that doesn't mean that we approve of any holocaust in any sense of the word or any other type of persecution of any people.

Arrogance on the part of Israel is unteachable, and even though the Jews as a race have greater IQ than almost any race they are still unteachable. While the Jews have great men of art, literature, business, and with great perspicacity and great IQ, they still cannot learn the greatest thing of all: Jesus Christ is the only saviour; He is their God. So for this reason there is a holocaust.

Genesis 37:9-11 explains interpreting the woman in Revelation 12:1 as Israel and the twelve stars as the patriarchs. Joseph received truth through a dream. This was before the canon of scripture existed. God revealed Himself to Joseph and therefore this dream is truth, Bible doctrine.

Romans 9:25, "As he has also communicated in Hosea, 'I will call those who were not my people [Gentiles], My People'," this recognises when the two races finally came together for the benefit of the Gentiles. The Roman people and the Jewish people both failed at the cross, their system of law broke down. But while they failed at the cross at the time that John was writing in AD 96 they had finally come together for one of the greatest periods of all of human history when Nirva came to the throne as the first of the Antonine Caesars. This brought together the doctrine of Israel [Bible doctrine] with the greatness of Roman law and administration to form the first Gentile client nation, the empire of Rome. The greatest period of history went from 96-192 AD. It brought together the Jews as the apostles, John, Peter, and Paul, as the three great ones, communicating doctrine which led to the first great Gentile client nation. The Jews provided the truth and the Gentiles became vigorous in the Roman empire.

— “and those who have not been loved [the Jewish nation during the times of the Gentiles] as those having been loved.”

That is a prophecy of the restoration of the Jews at the second advent. But before the Jews can be restored they will go through one of the greatest periods of holocaust they have ever known.

Verse 26, “And it shall be in the place [Israel] where it was said, ‘You are not my people,’ in that place [Israel] they shall be called the sons of the living God,” because Israel will be absorbed by the Roman empire and will become a part of the Roman province of Judea.

Verse 27, “In fact, Isaiah speaking in an emergency with reference to Israel, ‘If the number of the sons of Israel be as the sand of the sea, a remnant shall be delivered.’” And that is true of the Tribulation. Jews will have multiplied on the face of the earth and a remnant shall be delivered.

Verse 28, “For the Lord will execute his word upon the earth,” second advent. And this is to the Jews. A remnant will be delivered at the end of verse 27, “completing what he also decreed,” the unconditional covenants.

Verse 29, “And so just as Isaiah has prophesied, ‘Except the Lord of the armies [Jesus Christ, the God of Israel] had left us a seed [the spiritual seed of Abraham], we [the Jews] would have become like Sodom, we would have been made like Gomorrah.’” Sodom and Gomorrah were two branches of the Canaanites who did not survive. They were all killed. And the Jews would be that way too were it not for the Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of the armies.

Verse 30, “Therefore to what conclusion are we forced? That the Gentiles, who did not strive for righteousness,” that is one of the big problems of the Jews. They allowed the Mosaic law to flatter them instead of challenge them, and so demonstrated that they were in the cosmic system and therefore vulnerable to flattery. The Romans did not have the Mosaic law. God did not reveal Himself to the Romans, “have attained righteousness.” How did they attain it? Because the Jew came to them and said, ‘Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved,’ “that is, righteousness from the source of faith,” faith in Christ.

Verse 31, “in the meantime Israel, who pursued after the law [with self-righteousness. They used the law as a system of flattery. ‘I’ve kept the law; I’m a great person], has not accomplished the purpose of the law.”

Verse 32, “Why? Because they did not pursue it by means of faith,” they rejected Christ as saviour, “but as by means of works. Therefore they have tripped over that rock [Christ],”

Verse 33, “just as it stand written, ‘Behold I lay in Zion a stone of stumbling, even a rock which arouses opposition, nevertheless he who believes on him will not be humiliated’ ”

— the origin of the Jews in the past was regeneration. The Jews are the only race that has ever been founded on regeneration.

The self-righteous Jew in keeping the law for salvation is religious without being regenerate and therefore the arrogant Jew accepts the ritual without accepting the person behind the ritual. Every once in a while throughout history this gathers up a tremendous momentum and leads to great disaster. The pattern for eternal salvation and becoming a true Jew is established by the precedent of Abraham, the father of the Jewish race, Genesis 15:6. This establishes the holiness of God as the point of contact for Israel. Cf. Psalm 85:10. This contact with the justice of God as one half of divine righteousness was manifest by the appearance of the Shekinah glory in the holy of holies.

Jesus Christ as the God of Israel is the Shekinah glory which was manifest in the Old Testament times between the cherubs in the holy of holies. But with the incarnation or the first advent Jesus Christ became the Shekinah glory in a different sense, John 1:14, “And the word became flesh and tabernacled in our presence, (and we beheld his glory, the glory of the uniquely-born one from the Father,) full of grace and full of doctrine.”

The true Jew cannot be a true Jew, then, simply because he possesses the genes of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. The only way for a Jew to be a Jew is to possess the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, the Shekinah glory, the Lord Jesus Christ. And to become part of Israel’s eternal heritage there must be regeneration, the possession of eternal life. The Jew who rejects Christ as saviour will never see the glorious fulfilment, then, of the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic and New covenants to Israel. However, the failure of some Jews to believe in Christ does not cancel or abrogate God’s promises to the rest. Individual or collective failures never hinder the plan of God, nor the validity of the Word of God.

The term double entendre is French for double meaning. By definition a double entendre is an expression capable of two interpretations. A double entendre in verse two results from the fact that the Jews had been pregnant for two thousand years without delivering. That is the basis for this double entendre. The reason that they cannot deliver, even though they want to deliver as a group, is simply because they have failed in part and in general to recognise Jesus Christ, the God of Israel, as their Messiah. In general the Jews rejected the sign of the first advent. The first sign is the sign of circumcision. That is how the race began. The second sign is the virgin birth, the basis for fulfilment of all Israel’s covenants in the future — the virgin birth leading to the hypostatic union, our Lord Jesus Christ coming in the flesh, the God of Israel coming to Israel, the first advent. The third sign is the woman Israel, referring to the nation, for the Jews who are the only people in the world today who are both a race and a nation. In addition they are a culture. They have the distinction of having all three.

The Jews ignored the pregnancy sign and therefore God the Holy Spirit, speaking through the apostle John, uses pregnancy under a double entendre to show their problem; to show the pain of Israel, the difficulty of Israel. The Jews rejected the first advent and its sign, Isaiah 7:14. Therefore the virgin birth of Christ is the first part of the double entendre. The virgin birth was more than a sign, it was the means by which Israel could recognise the coming of Christ. Just as Mary as a virgin was pregnant, so for 2000 years since Mary Israel has been pregnant. Mary delivered a son who 33 years later went to the cross and was judged for our sins, took our place, became the saviour of the world and at the same time became the basis for the fulfilling of the unconditional covenants to Israel. Mary's son was the son of David, the fulfilment of the Davidic covenant.

But for 2000 years Israel has been in labour pains. That is the problem. Why is the Jew different? Because the Jew is pregnant. The Jew is having labour pains and these labour pains can only be alleviated by going back to the sign and recognising that Mary delivered the Messiah, and that the Messiah has come, that He went to the cross and was judged for the sins of every Jew who ever lived. "But to the Jews Christ is not yet come", Christ has not yet been born, therefore the sign has not occurred yet. That means the Jews are in labour pains for 2000 years. It means that every Jew is under a special stress that no one else has. The race is unique from the standpoint of its stress. The only release for the labour pains of Israel is for the Jew to personally believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. The holocaust pregnancy is all pain and no delivery. To the unbelieving Jew the baby is still in the womb, he has rejected the true meaning of Isaiah 7:14. Therefore we have in this passage one of the greatest double entendres in history: the virgin pregnancy and the holocaust pregnancy.

We are studying in this passage the double entendre pregnancy. Why do the Jews become the victims of terrible persecution periodically here and there throughout the world for the last 2000 years? And then, of course, why racial persecution anyway? A free country has no rights to persecute any race or any particular group of people.

There are four approaches to this verse 12 in chapter 12: the interpretation; the exegesis; the virgin pregnancy; the holocaust pregnancy.

First of all, the interpretation of the verse. It all begins with a double entendre, a word which has come into the English from the French which means double-meaning. A double entendre is an expression capable of two interpretations. It usually results from ambiguity of meaning arising from language that lends itself to more than one interpretation. The double entendre in this verse results from the fact that the Jews rejected the sign of messiahship at the first advent. The sign that they rejected was the virgin pregnancy of Mary which was followed by the virgin birth of our Lord Jesus Christ, the beginning of His hypostatic union and His fantastic ministry of the first advent resulting in the strategic victory of the angelic conflict. Because the unbelieving Jews rejected the first advent and its sign, the virgin birth, we have a phenomenon called holocaust.

Isaiah 7:14, "Therefore the Lord himself will give you a sign: Behold, a virgin will be pregnant [the real sign is the sign of the pregnant virgin] and she will give birth to a son [second half of the sign, the virgin birth of our Lord Jesus Christ], and she will call his name Immanuel [God is with us, a reference to the hypostatic union and the uniqueness of our Lord Jesus Christ].”

Therefore the birth of Jesus Christ is the first part of the double entendre. Because so many of the Jews rejected the sign of the virgin birth to them Christ was never born, there is no first advent. Under that sense the embryo is in the womb of Israel waiting to be delivered and in very intense pain. Hence, the second part of the double entendre is the holocaust pregnancy, all pain and no delivery. The Jews who do not accept the birth of Messiah, the first advent, His saving work on the cross, are in a perpetual state of misery: the pain of pregnancy without any relief of giving birth to the embryo. To the unbelieving Jew the baby is still in the womb because there is no virgin birth, they have rejected the true meaning of the sign in Isaiah 7:14. This sign is also recorded in the last line of their greatest portion of ritual, Deuteronomy 6:4, and it is definitely related to the holocaust:

The first line says, Shamah Yisrael. The qal imperative of the verb shamah which means “listen.” “Listen O Israel.” If ever a Jew should listen it is to the meaning of the next two lines.

The second line talks about the God of Israel under His sacred name, the Tetragrammaton, pronounced Adonai, translated sometimes “Jehovah,” Adonai Elohenu, “Jehovah [or Adonai] is our God.” That is a reference to Jesus Christ as the God of Israel, and it is His alpha glory. But that is not the source of the holocaust. All of the holocausts of history have their source in the final phrase.

The third line: Adonai echad. There is the issue: “The Lord is unique.” The uniqueness of Jesus Christ begins at the point of His true humanity. Therefore it begins at the point of His virgin birth. Mary had a virgin pregnancy; our Lord was virgin born.

The uniqueness of our Lord, the last line: Adonai echad, is the hypostatic union. Jesus Christ is both undiminished deity and true humanity in one person forever. To become true humanity apart from sin there had to be the virgin pregnancy, then the virgin birth. In this way neither Adam’s original sin nor the old sin nature existed in the humanity of Christ. This, of course, resulted in the fact that while our Lord’s humanity was temptable He was impeccable because he continued to reside inside of the prototype divine dynasphere.

To the unbelieving Jew the Lord was never born; he ignores and rejects the first advent of Christ. Therefore his historic suffering will be called in this study “the holocaust pregnancy,” persecution, pain, suffering, without deliverance. Rejection of the sign of the virgin birth produces the double entendre, an analogy to the woman, Israel. Israel is in a constant state of pain, a constant state of suffering, still waiting for the coming of the Messiah. To the unbelieving Jew He has not come as yet and, therefore, we have a beautiful double entendre. All members of the human race are the products of their own decisions, not their environment. In the case of our Lord we have the 23 chromosomes, not provided by the male [that would make our Lord a sinner] but by the Holy Spirit, fertilising the 23 chromosomes in the female ovum, in this case the virgin Mary.

Though polar body and meiosis we have 23 cells that are totally free from the old sin nature — the old sin nature resides in the cell structure of the body. And so we have a virgin pregnancy which eventuated in a virgin birth and the uniqueness of our Lord Jesus Christ, Adonai echad. But unbelief cuts this off. So what we have is a double entendre in which we find Israel compared to a pregnant woman in terrible pain and torture, and no deliverance. Therefore, in this passage we have one of the greatest double entendres of history because it explains why anti-Semitism, why historically there have been so many holocausts.
