1 11/29/1981 Revelation 1 (Intro.) Prophecy; historical trends; summaries

Revelation: introduction

The book of Revelation is the panoramic view of history from the time of John to the end of time: part of it is prophecy; part of it is historical trends. By way of introduction there are several things to note.

a. The perspective of prophecy

1. The Church Age is a dead spot as far as prophecy is concerned. That is, there is no prophecy in the Church Age except the terminating event, the Rapture of the Church. The Church Age is the age of historical trends, it is not a dispensation of prophecy. No prophecy has to be fulfilled in the Church Age. That includes the regathering of Israel and all of the other freakish things that people use to say the Rapture is going to occur in this generation. This is a false hope. It may occur in this generation; it could occur tonight. By the same token the Rapture could be 1000 years away, and that would lead a lot of people astray and even become a distraction from the perception of Bible doctrine. It is far more important for you to know the doctrine of impersonal love, for example, than it is for you to know the day, the hour, the moment that the Rapture occurs. No one knows the day, the hour, or the moment that the Rapture will occur. It is important therefore in learning doctrine to make our applications to history rather than to prophecy.

2. Therefore this means that no prophecy is being fulfilled during the Church Age. The Church Age is the dispensation of historical trends.

3. The next prophetic event in the Rapture or the resurrection of the Church. In the meantime there are simply historical trends but no prophecy.

4. Historical trends is technical in the sense of relating to the impact of the royal family of God on history. That is what historical trends means in the light of the Word of God, the impact of the Church Age believer; the royal family of God on history. That impact is based upon either objective reality or subjective reality.

5. The primary consideration is the believer's relationship to the dynaspheres. Which category is the issue: the dynasphere invented by God or the two invented by Satan?

6. Because the believer is weak — and, as a matter of fact, all of homo sapien is weak — and inferior to angels he must depend on a power much greater than himself in order to survive and thrive in the devil's world. The choice is limited to the power spheres of Satan, which we call the cosmic dynaspheres, or the power system of God known as the divine dynasphere. It is this daily decision on the part of the believer that determines the historical trends in any given generation and in any geographical location during the dispensation of the Church.

7. It therefore becomes imperative that we as believers become aware of the principle of historical trends. It is related to our mandates as believers in Jesus Christ and it is the fulfilment of God's will and God's plan that becomes the great issue in the spiritual life. We face an issue that no generation has ever faced before. In previous dispensations there was always unfulfilled prophecy; this dispensation is different, there is no prophecy to be fulfilled. This means that instead of being prophecy conscious with regard to the Christian way of life we must become historical trend conscious.

b. Historical trends

1. Historical trends during the Church Age depend on the number of believers in any given generation deciding for residence and function inside the divine dynasphere.

2. When a maximum number of believers in this dispensation perpetuate their spiritual momentum to the point of maturity a large pivot of mature believers is formed. The world historically lives on that prosperity — blessing by association.

3. But when a maximum number of believers live in the cosmic system during any given generation, the client nation to God malfunctions and historical disaster occurs throughout planet earth. But even though disaster exists there are no tragedies in history.

4. Historical blessing then is the result of a maximum number of believers living in the divine dynasphere, whereas historical disaster finds a maximum number of believers living out their lives in the cosmic system. Both peoples and nations are the products of their own decisions. No nation ever suffers historical disaster unless they ask for it. Peoples and individuals must take the responsibility for their own decisions.

5. Historical trends then depend on the spiritual life of the individual believer. This is the invisible factor of history rather than the obvious and visible factor of human leadership plus the economic interpretation of history.

6. Believers residing in the divine dynasphere influence the historical trends in the direction of blessing, while believers residing in the cosmic system influence historical trends in the direction of degeneration and disaster.

7. The predictability of historical trends is based on the impact of objective reality of those believers and unbelievers whose modus operandi is related to the divine dynaspheres.

8. Therefore the second and third chapters of Revelation are a summary of the historical trends of the Church Age, they are not a prophecy. All seven churches represent trends at any moment in any part of the earth right now, there is no chronological sequence of events from the seven churches. Prophecy does not begin until the removal of the Church by the resurrection or the Rapture. Then the Tribulation or Daniel's seventieth week begins and, with it, prophecy begins. In the meantime Jesus Christ controls history.

Summary #1

1. The Church Age is located between the two greatest prophetic periods of human history, the first and second advents of Jesus Christ. The Church Age is a dead spot, there is no prophecy in the Church Age. Before it we have a tremendous period of prophecy and after it we have another tremendous period of prophecy. In between these two great prophetic periods we live in the most thrilling age of all because it is a dead spot, it is not an age of prophecy.

2. The first prophetic period of human history has been fulfilled so that it is no longer a prophetic period, it is history to us. Nevertheless that was the greatest of all prophetic periods. In fact it was so great that unbelievers reject it entirely, including most of Israel. This first prophetic period includes the incarnation, the virgin birth, the function of the humanity of Christ inside the prototype divine dynasphere, the impeccability of Jesus Christ, the work of Christ on the cross — redemption, reconciliation, propitiation, our Lord's physical death, burial, resurrection, and ascension. These were all a part of that thrilling prophetic period. To us it is the most important of all, it is the basis of our so great salvation, the basis of the fact that we are a part of the patent of royalty. All of that was in the Age of Israel, not in the Church Age.

3. All the Old Testament prophecies pertaining to the first advent have been fulfilled and we, the royal family of God, live in the dispensation of no prophecy and therefore the greatest challenge to spiritual living that has ever existed. We live in a prophetic dead spot: no prophecy, only historical trends determined by the believer's attitude toward Bible doctrine.

4. The book of Revelation distinguishes between the historical impact of the present Church Age and the prophetic impact of the Tribulation and second advent of Christ. In other words, there is still one very exciting prophetic period built around the second advent of Christ. It includes the Tribulation, the second advent, the Millennium, the last revolution of history, and the destruction of the earth. But we have no part of it, we will be in heaven during those great prophetic events that we are going to study. We have a far greater challenge because it is the challenge of the invisible. Only in this dispensation is every believer a priest. The decisions that the believer makes every day, the decisions of royalty, are therefore far more important than the run of the mill believers in any other dispensation.

5. Therefore the book of Revelation is not written to satisfy morbid curiosity but to delineate the role of the Church, the royal family of God, in the field of historical impact, and to reveal through prophecy of the Tribulational events the disastrous nature of history prior to the second advent. (When Jesus Christ comes back He is going to straighten everything out. Until Jesus Christ returns to the earth planet earth is never going to be straightened out)

6. One of the two prophetic trends of history has already been fulfilled — the first advent, the other is pending, after the Church has been removed from the earth through resurrection. There is only one time in human history when the decisions of every believer enter into the historical trends of a geographical area. We are living in it; we are even royalty.

7. Our Lord Jesus Christ is the prophetic key to history and the true title of the book of Revelation is found in the first three Greek words, Apokaluyij I)hsou Xristou. It is the revelation of one Person, the Person who controls history, our Lord and saviour, Jesus Christ.

Summary #2

1. The Church Age is the dispensation of no prophecy, the dead spot in history, the period of historical trends.

2. The only prophecy of the Church Age is the terminating event, the Rapture or the resurrection of the Church. The time of that terminating event is unknown to all mankind.

3. Needless to say, the dispensation of no prophecy is terminated with a prophecy. That is why we have the doctrine of the imminency of the Rapture. Since the time of the apostles the Rapture could have occurred, and it could still occur tonight and it could still occur a thousand years from now. The reason is that in the period of no prophecy you only have one prophecy which terminates it and therefore everything is historical trends until that occurs, and when it occurs no one knows.

4. The fact that periodic historical trends approximate the conditions and circumstances of the Tribulation does not mean that any given period of Church history is the so-called Rapture generation. The point is that the believer is to live every day as unto the Lord and he is to live every day as if the Rapture might occur from now.

5. Circumstances of the past have often resulted in false conclusions in predicting the time of the Rapture.

6. We live in a time when the Rapture could occur at any moment, but this does not mean that it will occur for similar circumstances have existed since the time John wrote Revelation.

7. The first prophecy of the Church Age is the resurrection or Rapture of the Church.

8. Until then there is no prophecy, only historical trends which vary with the decisions and attitudes of all believers in the body of Christ. The decisions and attitudes of believers towards God's game plan for the Church Age is basically residence and function in the divine dynasphere.

9. Do not be misled by so-called prophetic scholars whose doctrine may be true but whose emphasis is false and distorted, for the Church Age has no prophetic implications until the Rapture.

10 Remember that all prophecy regarding the first advent of Christ has been fulfilled, including the insertion of the mystery age, the dispensation of the Church — inserted between the Age of Israel and the Tribulation — therefore we, the believers of the Church Age, are living between the two greatest prophetic events in human history, the first and second advents of Christ. The book of Revelation makes all of the necessary distinctions to keep us from error regarding false teaching in prophetic fields.

2 12/01/1981 Revelation 1:1a (Outline) Decision & purpose of Christian life

Why am I, a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ, here?

1. At some time in your life you have probably asked yourself this question, especially when a bad decision has been made and you try to blame that bad decision on someone else, even God.

2. How many times have you blasphemed and said to yourself: "Why did God let this happen to me?" — as if somehow everything around which is distasteful is God's fault.

3. The first thing you should know then is that you have a very serious deep-rooted spiritual problem, the problem of arrogance and preoccupation with self, the problem of ignorance of doctrine and cosmic involvement. If that is your problem then you obviously cannot answer the question: Why am I here?

4. Since the day you believed in the Lord Jesus Christ you have continued to live on planet earth through the courtesy, grace, power, and authority of our Lord Jesus Christ.

5. As a royal priest and ambassador for Christ you live on this earth no longer your own person. You are not the master of your destiny, you are not the Lord of your fate.

6. Since you remain in this life through the power and the authority of our Lord Jesus Christ you have a right to ask yourself this question: Why do you reject that power, that authority, by living in the cosmic system? You are dedicating yourself to a life of complete and total misery when you ignore the authority of God and repudiate His power.

7. Since you remain in this life through the power and the authority of the Lord Jesus Christ you have the right to ask yourself another question: Why do you reject God's authority by rejecting Bible doctrine?

8. Every time doctrine is available to you and you do not take advantage of the opportunity to function at gate four of the divine dynasphere — learning it — you are rejecting the very power, the very authority which keeps you alive in this life.

9. Some of you are distracted by preoccupation with self, some of you are simply distracted by seeking pleasure, and we now have a whole generation of silly young girls who are boy-crazy and who as soon as they get involved with some young man they depart from doctrine. Revelation is going to show us that you have a purpose in life as a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Principle: the decision and the purpose of the Christian way of life

1. The purpose of the Christian way of life demands residence and function inside the divine dynasphere.

2. Your excuses and distractions are not legitimate, not even the ones where you think you can actually blame someone else for your circumstances. Blaming others is cowardice and irresponsibility. Adulthood and maturity is taking responsibility for your own decisions.

3. The power and the authority of God which keeps you alive and well in the devil's world is the same power and authority which provides blessing for you and capacity for that blessing.

4. That same power and authority of God has provided in logistical grace or what we also call temporal security, everything you need to face life with its problems, its pressures, its disasters on the one hand, and its pleasures on the other hand.

5. The trends of history depend on the believer's recognition of divine power and authority in his life. The very power that keeps you alive in this life can take you out at any time.

6. If you make decisions which result in residence in the cosmic system and you prolong your stay, you have rejected the authority of God, you have repudiated His matchless grace.

7. Those same decisions to live inside the cosmic system are the basis for historical disaster, historical downtrends, as well as your own personal discipline and punishment from God.

8. If you make decisions which result in residence in the divine dynasphere you are not only accepting the authority of God but you are utilising the power that He has provided for great blessing in your spiritual life and in every other facet of your life. And you have taken the only road to personal happiness and blessing that exists for you under the principle: "Why am I here?"

9. Rejection of Bible doctrine is rejection of God's authority in your life. Rejection of the divine dynasphere through living in the cosmic system is rejection of God's power in your life, God's will, God's plan.

10. This is the difference between objective and subjective reality in history. Subjective reality or cosmic involvement is the downtrend of history; objective reality or living in the divine dynasphere is the uptrend of history. And since we live in the dead spot when there is no prophecy it becomes exceedingly important for us as believers to recognise our responsibility to the power that keeps us on this earth, the power that has provided a perfect plan and purpose, and to the country in which we have had so much blessing.

Historical trends: understood when one remembers the following principles

1. Even though history is the record of man's decisions and actions it is Jesus Christ who controls history. This means, of course, that there are two sources of judgment in history. When our country is judged, just as when client nation Israel was judged, there are two sources of that judgment: the erroneous decisions of believers in our country and the wise and sovereign decisions of our Lord Jesus Christ.

2. The trends of history are determined in the Church Age by whether the believer in Christ chooses to live in the divine dynasphere or Satan's cosmic system. This affects our economic situation and our military situation.

3. There are no tragedies in history. There are historical disasters but these disasters are not tragedies since these individuals and the individuals who form nations are the products of their own decisions, not their environment. Disaster is an objective reality in history; tragedy is subjective reality in history. Decisions create environment; environment does not create decisions.

4. People individually and collectively are the products of their own decisions.

5. The demand for power exceeds the need for power. Divinely authorised authority is ignored and brushed aside. We only have under the laws of divine establishment so many places for authority and so many places for power. But as more and more people become arrogant they say: "I should have power." Therefore, for example, the government creates the bureaucratic system which actually takes power away from the government. There are arrogant people in the slums who say: "I have nothing; I should have power." So to the scum, power is the name of the game. There is also labour power. All of these are violations of two principles: the laws of divine establishment and the whole concept that enforced humility is a virtue related to authority. Without respect for legitimate authority (which is limited) there is arrogance.

6. Arrogant people or arrogant nations never see their own inconsistencies, only the inconsistencies of others.

7. Jealous people and envious nations never see their own sins and production of evil, only the sin and evil of others.

The outline of the book of Revelation

The book of Revelation has nine major chapters or thoughts. They do not coincide with the chapters in the English Bible.

1. Jesus Christ is the key to history and prophecy — chapter 1.
2. The historical trends, or the Church on earth — chapters 2 and 3.
3. The Church in heaven, or when prophecy begins — chapters 4-5.
4. The Tribulation — chapters 6-18.
 - a. The panorama of the Tribulation — chapter 6.
 - b. Evangelism in the Tribulation — chapter 7.
 - c. The trumpet judgements of the Tribulation — chapters 8-10.
 - d. The two witnesses and the seventh trumpet — chapter 11.
 - e. The fall of Satan or Armageddon motivation — chapter 12.
 - f. The two dictators — chapter 13.
 - g. The principle of grace before judgment — chapter 14.
 - h. The vial judgements — chapters 15-16.
 - i. The rise and fall of ecumenical religion — chapters 17-18.
5. The second advent of Jesus Christ — chapter 19.

6. The Millennium and the last judgment — chapter 20.
7. The eternal state — chapter 21:1-8.
8. The eternal Jerusalem — chapters 21:9-22:5.
9. The termination of the canon of scripture — chapter 22:6-21.

The outline of chapter one

1. The introduction to the apocalypse — verses 1-8.
2. The occasion of the apocalypse — verses 9-11.
3. The person of the apocalypse — verses 12-20.

Chapter 1

The title and the human author of the book — verses 1-2

Verse 1 — “The revelation of Jesus Christ.” We start out with the objective genitive, the nominative singular subject a)pokaluyij, which means revelation, disclosure of truth. That disclosure of truth includes eschatological doctrine. Notice there is the absence of the definite article in front of a)pokaluyij. The absence of the definite article in the Greek emphasises the qualitative aspect of the noun, therefore it is translated with the definite article. We would say “the revelation,” which is a correct translation for the absence of the definite article with emphasis on the definite article. With it we have the objective genitive of the two titles of the Lord Jesus Christ. The first is I)hsouj, and the second is Xristoj. So it is the apocalypse of Jesus Christ, or the revelation of Jesus Christ which is the correct translation.

After the title we have a patent of royalty. We begin with the accusative singular from the relative pronoun o(j, whose antecedent is a)pokaluyij, “The apocalypse or revelation of Jesus Christ.” The first thing that is revealed is our Lord’s royal patent plus both an historical and eschatological exposition of the tactical victory of the angelic conflict; “which” — and then we have a subject for the relative clause, the nominative subject o(qeoj, and this time we do not translate the definite article since it is generic, merely setting aside the uniqueness of God. And then the verb, the aorist active indicative of didomi, which means to give. We wouldn’t know anything if God in His grace had not given us information. And there is one thing that volition needs: information. The culminative aorist tense views the event in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. The existing result is a divine text of history from the time of John to the end of time. The active voice: God the Father produces the action of the verb, and since the aorist tense connotes indefinite action in past time this occurred after the ascension of our Lord Jesus Christ and was used in the ceremony in which our Lord Jesus Christ received His battlefield royalty, His royal patent. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical reality of our Lord's royal patent, the battlefield royalty of the angelic conflict. That is because of His victory in the angelic conflict, His strategic victory at the cross, resurrection and ascension. The book of Revelation therefore is a patent of royalty, the doctrine of which confers the rights and privileges of our Lord's appointment to battlefield royalty and/or the victory of the angelic conflict.

Next we have a dative indirect object from the intensive pronoun autoj used as a personal pronoun, third masculine singular, referring to our Lord Jesus Christ. The dative of indirect object indicates the one, Jesus Christ, for whom and in whose interest the patent of royalty is disclosed. The patent of royalty was issued right after the ascension; it is now disclosed to us. This explains the book of Revelation in its true context for this book is the revelation of our Lord's royal patent, His battlefield royalty, or how the angelic will be resolved as a result of the cross, resurrection and ascension of Jesus Christ. The book of Revelation is both history and prophecy as to the outcome of the angelic conflict. Satan was defeated at the cross but conflict was not concluded until the second advent of Christ and then one flurry at the end of the Millennium. The cross is historical, the second advent is prophetic, and this prophecy reveals the termination of the conflict.

3 12/02/1981 Revelation 1:1b, 2 Purpose/author; slavery; inspiration

We now come to the purpose of the epistle. First of all in the aorist active infinitive of the verb deiknumi, which means to point out, to show, to make known something, to explain, to prove. Here it means to make known the royal patent of the royal family of God. Our relationship with the Lord Jesus Christ who has a third royal patent from His resurrection, ascension and session, means that we are involved in that royal patent and therefore have a tremendous influence on history, individually and collectively, by the decisions we make regarding the plan of God, the divine dynasphere. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It takes the succession of events in Revelation, gathers them up into one entirety, forming our Lord's royal patent, and revealing His tactical victory in the angelic conflict. The active voice: God the Father produces the action of the verb by revealing to the royal family of God our Lord's tactical victory in the angelic conflict. The infinitive of purpose expresses the objective of the action denoted by the finite verb, "he gave." All of this is very important because the book of Revelation is a patent of royalty, the document which confers the rights and privileges of our Lord's appointment to battlefield royalty or the victory of the angelic conflict. This explains the book of Revelation in its true context for the book is a revelation of the royal patent of God the Son. The book is in part history and its trends, and in part prophecy which will become a part of history after the Rapture. The book of Revelation is the prophecy of the outcome of the angelic conflict. Satan was defeated at the cross, the strategic victory, and the conflict is not concluded until its tactical victory at the second advent. The cross is historical, the second advent is prophetic, this prophecy reveals the termination of the angelic conflict.

With this we have the dative plural, indirect object from the noun douloj, which does not mean a servant, it means a slave. It refers here to the royal family of God or Church Age believers. You and I are slaves of our Lord Jesus Christ, but unusual slaves in that we have options every day. We have free will, we have the opportunity to function within the framework of God's plan or within the framework of the Satanic administration of the rulership of this world. Douloj means a slave who is totally dependant on his master to sustain him on earth. Next we have the possessive genitive from the intensive pronoun a)utoj. It is used as a personal pronoun and is translated "his," "to make known to his slaves."

Slaves

1. Believers are called slaves because they are totally dependant upon God's plan and provision for living in the devil's world between the first advent, the strategic victory of our Lord, and the second advent, the tactical victory of our Lord.
2. Being a slave gives the believer the advantage of being the recipient of God's grace policy as the principle and logistical grace plus the divine dynasphere as the provision.
3. Every free will decision a believer makes in the direction of his master, residence and function in the divine dynasphere — means blessing.
4. Every decision the believer makes toward freedom from his master means involvement in the cosmic system — with loss of blessing. (You can use your volition and run away from your master to the cosmic system)
5. Being a slave to God the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ means blessing, happiness, and a life full of meaning, purpose and definition.
6. Being a slave to God means benefiting from God's power, God's authority, God's grace, and God's courtesy. Being a slave to God means benefiting from the divine provision of logistical grace.
7. Being a slave to God means degrees of happiness from residence and function inside the divine dynasphere.

Principle: It is no disgrace to be a slave, provided you are a slave to the right thing.

Next we have the accusative neuter plural from the relative pronoun w(j). The neuter gender in the relative pronoun means “things”; the relative pronoun means “which.” Translation: “things which” — a reference to the historical trends of the Church Age and the prophetic events which occur after the resurrection of the Church. Again, the neuter gender denotes the contents of the book of Revelation. The impersonal verb dei is used quite frequently in the book of Revelation by John. It is the impersonal verb of compulsion or responsibility and is translated “must,” “things which must.” Then we have a prepositional phrase e)n, plus the locative of taxoj, which means soon or shortly. It is an adverbial idiom, it means with speed or soon or shortly. The preposition is not translated in the idiom, it is simply translated like an adverb, “things which must shortly [or soon] take place.” The dramatic aorist tense of the aorist middle infinitive of ginomai, comes up next. It means to take place. The dramatic aorist is used for what is about to be accomplished, i.e. the historical trends of the Church Age. This was written when the Church Age was in its first century and the trends that were about to take place are revealed in the next two chapters, plus the prophetic fulfillment of the Tribulation as the background for the second advent of Christ and His Millennial reign. The middle voice is a dynamic middle, it emphasizes the part taken by the subject and the action of the verb. The subject includes both historical and prophetic events and when you put them all together you have a picture of the history of the world from the time of the apostle John to the end of time. And you also have them in their proper sequence so that as we move along we will be chronologically in sequence. The infinitive of time has no significance of time in itself but derives it from the neuter of the relative pronoun o(j). Therefore it is simply translated, “things which must soon take place.”

The chain of communication: It begins with the intensive use of the conjunction kai, which introduces a fact which is both surprising and noteworthy, and therefore the translation, “furthermore.” Then comes the aorist active indicative of the verb shmaw, which means to make a report, to communicate a message. Homer used shmaw meaning to command or to issue a directive or a series of directives. Here it means to communicate a message. In other words, God the Father gave the royal patent to the Son and when He did He gave Him the area of history under which the royal patent would function. It functions in the Church Age in chronological sequence from the time of John in the Church Age, AD 96, down to the Rapture of the Church. The royal patent is also included for the Tribulation, the second advent, for the Millennial reign of Christ when the royal patent will be functioning — Jesus Christ will be the ruler of the world — and then for the great revolution at the end, and then the royal patent will continue to function through the destruction of the heavens and this planet earth, and then the creation of the new heavens and the new earth and the eternal state. In other words, the entire panoramic view of the royal patent is given in sequence and all the way through the rest of world history from the time when John wrote this are all the area of our Lord’s third royal patent. It will function from the Church Age on. Therefore Revelation becomes the history of humanity from the time of John to the end of the world.

Next we have the aorist active participle of the verb a)postellw, and it means here, “having sent it.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action. The participle indicates antecedent action. The action of the aorist participle precedes the action of the main verb, shmainw, communicating the message. The action of this participle precedes that action, having sent it he communicated the message to His slave, i.e. John.

Here is the chain of command. The preposition dia, plus the singular of aggeloi, through his angel. Aggeloi is used two ways in Revelation: first of all for the super beings, angels; but when we get to the angels of the seven churches we are not talking about angels, we are talking about pastors, communicators of doctrine. Here it is used for someone superior to human beings, a teaching angel teaching John, the human author of the book.

Translation of verse 1: The revelation [or the apocalypse] of Jesus Christ, which the God [God the Father] has given to him, to make known [make known the royal patent] to his slaves things which must soon [in chronological sequence] take place; furthermore, he [the glorified Christ] communicated this message having sent it to his slave, his servant John, through angels.

Verse 2, The human author. First of all we have a nominative singular, relative pronoun, o(j). It is referring to a person rather than the content taught. It is translated “who” instead of “things which” as in the previous verse where we had content. Then we have the aorist active indicative of the verb marturew, marturew, which means here to give a deposition. The book of Revelation is a deposition, a written testimony of history. Marturew means to testify, to declare, to confirm, and since this is in writing it means here to make a deposition. The aorist tense is constative, gathering up into one entirety the written deposition of our Lord in historical sequence from the time of John to the end of time, and it is our Lord’s royal patent which is covered in that historical period. The active voice: John the apostle produces the action of the verb in writing the deposition which we call the Revelation of Jesus Christ.

Then we have the adverbial accusative of reference from logoj, not translated “word” here but “doctrine.” It is the generic use of the definite article with it and also it is an appositional accusative translated “with reference to the Word” [or “the doctrine”]. This is followed by the subjective genitive qeoj, translated “with reference to the Word [or doctrine] given by God.”

Inspiration

1. Definition: God so supernaturally directed the human writers of scripture that without waiving their human intelligence, their individuality, their literary style, their personal feelings, or any other human factor, His complete and coherent message to mankind was recorded with perfect accuracy in the original language of scripture, the very words bearing the authority of divine authorship.

2. No passage of scripture originates from man’s own thinking independent of God — 2 Peter 1:20,21.

3. The descriptions of the canon of scripture take cognisance of all three persons of the Holy Trinity. The Bible is related to God the Father as the author of the divine plan. Therefore in Hebrews 4:12 the Bible is called the Word of God. The Bible is related to God the Son as the central subject of the book. Therefore 1 Corinthians 2:16 calls the Bible the mind of Christ. The Bible is mechanically formed through the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. Therefore Hebrews 3:7 calls the Bible the voice of the Spirit.

4. God has placed the highest possible value on the canon and Bible doctrine — Psalm 138:2, “I myself will worship toward the temple of your holiness [the real Holy of Holies which is heaven], and celebrate your person, because of your grace and because of your doctrine, and because you have magnified your doctrinal teaching over your reputation.”

5. Doctrine vindicates both the essence and the plan of God — Romans 3:3,4.

6. The doctrine of verbal plenary inspiration. It involves the principle of the two mechanical functions in the formation of the canon of scripture. The mechanical function is described in principle in 2 Timothy 3:16, “all scripture is qeopneustoj,” and it does not mean “given by inspiration.” Qeopneustoj does not mean inspire, it means God-breathed. That is inhale and exhale. Inspire is only inhale, but there is also exhale. The inhale: God the Holy Spirit communicating the truth to human authors within the framework of their vocabulary, their personality, and their written form. This is the input of God the Holy Spirit.

Next we have the connective kai, followed by the appositional accusative very similar to the Attic Greek. Here is the Attic Greek absolute, this is not Koine Greek, “of the testimony,” marturia, the word for testimony or deposition. Our Lord gave it verbally so that marturia is verbal testimony. John put a testimony in writing but the testimony was given by our Lord Jesus Christ, “given by Jesus Christ.” With this we have the accusative neuter plural of apposition from the correlative relative pronoun o(soj, used in the category of quality and number, meaning “about everything which.” And then the verb, the aorist active indicative of the verb o(raw, what John had seen; “about everything to which he was an eyewitness” is a better translation.

4 12/03/1981 Revelation 1:2 Heathens; seven postulates of history

Corrected translation of verse 2: “Who made a deposition about everything to which he was an eyewitness, namely, the word given by God and the testimony given by Jesus Christ.”

Man is the product of his own decisions, not his environment

1. Environment is an excuse for bad decisions; volition is the issue in the angelic conflict.
2. Good decisions open options for greater decisions; bad decisions destroy all options and terminate in disaster.
3. Historically good environment is manufactured by good decisions while bad environment is the product of bad decisions.
4. Therefore historically prosperity comes from good decisions while historical disaster originates from bad decisions.
5. Good decisions relate to living in the divine dynasphere while bad decisions relate to living in the cosmic system of Satan who is the ruler of this world.
6. The best illustration of this principle is found in the doctrine of heathenism in which heathen are not the victims of their environment, they are the creators of it. We learn this principle from three passages of scripture: Acts 17:6, "they have upset the world" is the way the unbeliever describes it; Colossians 1:6, "the gospel which has come to you just as in all the world;" 1 Timothy 3:16, "he was proclaimed among the nations, he became the object of faith in the world." The gospel and truth came first and people made wrong decisions.

The origin of disaster

1. There are two categories of disaster — natural and historical.
2. Natural disaster includes earthquakes, tidal waves, hurricanes, floods, volcanoes, etc.
3. Historical disaster includes military defeat, economic depression, famine, disease, degeneracy, crime, terrorism, revolution, tyranny, and so on.
4. There are two sources of natural disaster, the volition of man and the sovereignty of God.
5. The volition of man is illustrated by the careless camper who throws a cigarette into some dry brush and starts a forest fire.
6. The sovereignty of God in the function of historical judgment may cause natural disaster, as illustrated by the eruption of Mount Vesuvius in AD 79 which destroyed Pompeii, or the destruction of Sodom during the time of Abraham and Lot.
7. There are two sources of historical disaster, the volition of man and the sovereignty of God.

8. The volition of man creates the environment which results in divine judgment, such as the administration of the five cycles of discipline. Man creates the environment by his bad decisions, his cosmic involvement, and the result is that the sovereignty of God administers the five cycles of discipline (Leviticus 26).

The book of Revelation is filled with historical and natural disasters brought on by the volition of man and administered by the sovereignty of God.

The postulates of advantage and historical trends — the first three are personal and the last four are national.

1. There are no advantages to the advantages without the advantage. Advantage in the singular is defined as God's blessings or an upward trend of history, or objective reality from a maximum number of believers residing in the divine dynasphere. We will simply define it as God's blessing on an individual as the result of his consistent residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. The advantages in the plural simply describe the blessings that come to an individual from his residence and function in the divine dynasphere, especially the development of motivating and functional virtue, and momentum from gate four to gate eight.

2. If you have the advantage — your decisions toward doctrine which are positive, your decisions to reside and function inside the divine dynasphere, your decisions to reject distractions and temptations — you have the advantage, i.e. those degrees of happiness inside the divine dynasphere.

3. Without the advantage there are no advantages. The advantage is the use of your own free will to recover from the cosmic system when you sin or fail.

4. No nation can have the advantages (prosperity, blessing by association with mature believers) without the advantage, the pivot of mature believers who possess objective reality. As goes the believer, so goes the nation. Our advantages include freedom, the functions of evangelism, Bible teaching, missionary activity, the enjoyment of certain pleasures which are closed to other nations.

5. A nation without the advantage (the pivot of mature believers) loses the advantages and receive from the sovereignty of God the cycles of historical disaster.

6. No nation can recover its advantages without the advantage.

a. Believers living in the cosmic system are like salt that has lost its savour, its ability to impartflavour.

b. As goes the believer, so goes the nation — the salt of the earth principle.

- c. A maximum number of believers in the cosmic system destroy the advantage of that nation.
 - d. Therefore the believer must make daily decisions for the divine dynasphere for any uptrend in the history of that nation.
 - e. Both national prosperity and client nation function depend on the formation of a pivot of believers who have advanced to gate eight as the basis for forming that pivot.
 - f. When a maximum number of believers are living in the cosmic system that nation loses its prosperity resulting in both natural and historical disaster.
 - g. The nation can only recover its advantages of prosperity from God through the formation of a new pivot. (Pivot people are being constantly being cycled into eternity and a new pivot has to be formed)
7. Loss of both the advantages and the advantage eventuates in the removal of that nation from history. This means that the justice of God administers the 5th cycle of discipline to that nation and only the pivot of mature believers survives, under the principle of the remnant according to the election of grace.

1981 Revelation

5 12/04/1981 Revelation 1:3, 4a Revelation's special blessings; John

There are very special blessings stated in connection with the correct understanding of this book. The first thing we notice is the special blessing which comes in exegesis and interpretation.

Verse 3 — “Blessed” is the nominative singular of makarioj. Makarioj is first found in Pindar as a poetic word denoting transcendent happiness in life. It means also to be above normal care and anxieties, to be free from worries, to be happy in that sense. It doesn’t mean that you will have no problems in life but it does mean that you will have great happiness. Because of the elliptical style of Revelation occasionally the verb to be has to be inserted, the present active indicative of e)imi, “Happy is.” The articular present active participle from the verb a)naginwskw, which means to gather exact knowledge from something, to exegete, to teach, to read not in the sense of simply reading but to read in the sense of interpretation. Since the exact meaning of the verb is to know exactly and accurately it is used to denote the public teaching of Bible doctrine. So we will translate: “Happy is he who exegetes for teaching [or, who teaches].” The definite article with the participle is used as a personal pronoun to designate those pastors who will teach the book of Revelation as a result of careful exegesis and study. The perfective present tense refers to what has come to be in the past but is emphasised as a present reality denoting the continuation of existing results. The active voice: during the course of the Church Age certain pastors will teach exegetically and accurately the book of Revelation. The participle is circumstantial and refers to the fact that even ministers have happiness. It is a reference to that pastor then who exegetes, analyses and communicates the content of Revelation to his congregation. There is always blessing to that pastor who will persist in the study of the Word and be faithful in teaching it to his congregation.

The second blessing is the special blessing is for those who will sit through and listen to the entire book. We start out with the connective use of the conjunction kai which extends the special blessing to the congregation, i.e. to positive believers in the congregation where Revelation is taught. This is not found in any other book of the Bible. Then there is the articular present participle of the verb a)kouw, which does not mean just to sit there and listen, it means to listen and understand. The nominative plural definite article in contrast to the previous definite article which was in the singular is the difference between the one teaching and those who are positive and concentrating on the exegesis of the book. The present tense is a progressive present for the function of GAP at gate four of the divine dynasphere. This is persistence in the perception of doctrine and brings out once again that there are degrees of happiness for the believer who resides and functions inside the divine dynasphere. The positive believer produces the action of the verb in residence in the divine dynasphere, simultaneously in the local church where the book is taught. The participle is circumstantial, meaning that under those conditions there is happiness but it does not guarantee happiness for those who are out “raising hell” while Revelation is being taught in church.

With this we have the accusative plural direct object from the noun logoj, which sometimes means “word,” sometimes it means the Word taught [doctrine]. Here it is in the plural so we translate it with the definite article, “the words.” “Happy are they who keep hearing the words [the doctrines, the content].” With it we have the descriptive genitive singular from the noun profhteia, plus the definite article used for the near demonstrative and we translate it “of this prophecy.”

Happiness

1. Happiness can only exist inside the divine dynasphere.
2. Each gate in the divine dynasphere produces a certain degree of happiness.
3. Add to this the manufacture of virtue. Why virtue? Because as you manufacture motivating and functional virtue you simultaneously produce a by-product called happiness. Virtue and happiness go together.
4. Residence and function inside the divine dynasphere produces the basis for all happiness in life. It produces not only happiness but a happiness base so that you can be happy in a lot of places.

5. There are degrees of happiness inside the divine dynasphere and the perception of doctrine at gate four is included in this happiness concept.

The third factor this verse is a special blessing and application. Some of the greatest moments of happiness that you will ever have are application type happiness conditions. Therefore the connective use of the conjunction kai, and with it the present active participle of the verb terew. The present active participle terew, minus the definite article, indicates that this participle belongs with the previous participle and they both share the same definite article. Terew means to guard, to watch over, to keep, to observe, to pay attention to; hence the verb connotes application. The retroactive progressive present tense denotes what is begun in the past and continues into the present, the application of doctrine at the various momentum tests of life.

You are going to find that as you have testing the application of doctrine brings happiness in the midst of pressure, that as you have prosperity the application of doctrine to prosperity guards and preserves your happiness and makes your prosperity meaningful rather than a basis of distraction and a basis of disillusion.

The active voice: believers living in the divine dynasphere produce the action, the application of doctrine at gate four in momentum testing. We also have the accusative neuter plural direct object from the definite article ta, used as a near demonstrative pronoun and translated "those things." The neuter indicates the content of doctrine perceived by concentration and now applied by reverse concentration. And then the perfect passive participle which follows from grafw, which means "which have been written," referring to the content of the Word of God. The perfect tense is the perfect of existing state in which the book of Revelation is completed and the emphasis is placed on the existing results as having this as the completed last book in the canon of scripture. This is a strong way of saying that the book of Revelation exists for your blessing and always will exist for someone's blessing. The participle is circumstantial and is followed by a prepositional phrase, e)n, plus the locative singular of the intensive pronoun a)toij, and it is translated "in it."

So we have: "Happy is he who teaches exegetically, and happy are they who keep hearing the words of this prophecy [the book of Revelation], and keep preserving those things which have been written in it."

Next we have the explanatory use of the post positive conjunction gar followed by the nominative subject of kairoj. Kairoj refers to a period of time or a point of time. Here it refers to any point of time when application of doctrine is pertinent. It is not referring to any historical occasion, it is simply referring to a point when it is necessary for you to apply doctrine to a situation, either to be happy or to survive. So we will translate it: "for the time for application." Then we have again the ellipsis which requires the verb to be, and then the adverb of time e)gguj, "is near." This means that the believer must discern and distinguish between the Church Age which is the dispensation of historical trends and the Tribulation which is a dispensation of prophecy as far as the Church is concerned.

Application means discernment. Discernment is the link between teaching and application; discernment must be both historical and prophetic — historical applied to the trends of the Church Age and prophetic applied to the prophecies of the Tribulation, second advent, and Millennium.

Seven special blessings mentioned in the book of Revelation

1. The function of gate four in the divine dynasphere, verse 3. Perception and application of doctrine resulting in wisdom and discernment. There are degrees of happiness in the divine dynasphere.
2. For those believers who die during the Tribulation there is special dying grace — Revelation 14:13.
3. For mature believers in the Tribulation who are alert regarding the second advent. Historically the Tribulation is a very difficult period, it is filled with every possible type of pressure and keeping one's wits and surviving and interpreting the time in which those people live. There is special blessing for alertness in historical crisis — Revelation 16:15.
4. For those who attend the marriage supper of the Lamb, Revelation 19:9.
5. For those believers who have part in the first resurrection, Revelation 20:6.
6. For those who keep the content of this book, Revelation 22:7.
7. For those who guard or keep His mandates, Revelation 22:14.

Verse 4, the salutation of the book. "John," 'Ioanhj, the human author of the fourth gospel and the three epistles of John. John came to the Roman province of Asia around AD 70, shortly after the death of Paul and shortly before the fall of Jerusalem. He became the pastor of the church at Ephesus as well as the non-resident pastor of the six churches that are mentioned in this verse and in the next two chapters. According to Eusebius, the famous church historian and church father, John was imprisoned on the island of Patmos in the 15th year of the reign of Domitian, AD 96, and he remained there until the reign of Nerva around 97 or 98 AD. On the death of Domitian John returned to his resident pastorate at Ephesus and non-resident pastorate of the six other churches of Revelation chapters two and three. But he anticipated historical trends in all of those churches, so when we get to chapters two and three and discover that the angel there is a messenger and a pastor, he is writing to those who would pastor in the future, not to any present pastor.

John's father, Zebedee, had a very successful fishing business. His mother, Salome, followed Jesus all the way to the cross. She is mentioned in Mark 15:40 and Matthew 27:50. John's home in Bethsaida was staffed with many servants, Mark 1:20. His mother was independently wealthy — Luke 8:3. The description of his home indicates wealth. John was also well acquainted with Caiaphas who was the high priest and one of the most influential men in all of the land. John and Peter were close friends and remained in Jerusalem together after the ascension of our Lord. What brought them together in great friendship was not the fact that they came from the same background. Peter came from the opposite background but they merged into a great friendship not on the basis of the social circles in which they had previously travelled or their environmental background but because of their tremendous love for the Lord Jesus Christ. Even during the persecutions of Saul of Tarsus there was a time when Peter, John and Paul, were all in Jerusalem at the same time. Peter and John lived there; Saul came in to kill Christians. However John did not meet Saul of Tarsus at that time but in Galatians 1:19 John and Paul met in Jerusalem. During the persecution of Herod Agrippa John lost his brother, James, Acts 12:2, while his friend Peter sought safety in flight, Acts 12:18,19. That left John holding the fort in Jerusalem until shortly before the fall of Jerusalem. Fifteen years after Paul's first visit to Jerusalem John was still in Jerusalem and was listed as one of the pillars of the church. It was John who took part in settling the controversy between the Jewish and Gentile believers, Acts 15:6,13; Galatians 2:9. After the death of Mary, the mother of the humanity of Christ, John was released from his obligation to Jesus regarding the mother of His humanity. That obligation was taken on in John 19:26,27, and he kept his word. John was a man of impeccable integrity. When he told the Lord he would take care of Mary he did so, and not until she died did he depart from Jerusalem. Jesus called John "Son of Thunder" and this indicates that he was not that sweet simpleton that he has been described as. He was a vigorous, powerful aristocrat and not some mealy-mouthed hippie! John survived until the reign of Trajan who began his reign in AD 98. Both Irenaeus and Jerome wrote that John continued his ministry in Ephesus until the time of Trajan. John lived to an advanced old age so that he had to be carried to the church to preach. It is clear that John wrote Revelation on the Island of Patmos around AD 96.

Next we have the dative of indirect object or dative of possession from the definite article taij plus the numeral e(pta), plus the noun e)kklhsia. It is correctly translated, "John to the seven churches." The word "church" is a dative of indirect object, it indicates the one in whose interest Revelation is written. Revelation was written for believers. It was written to be explained to believers by the pastor in the local church. The dative of possession is a Greek idiom indicating that John is the pastor of all seven of these churches, and at the moment he is the non-resident pastor of all seven. There were other local churches in the Roman province of Asia such as Troy, Colosse, Magnesia, but John was not the pastor of those churches and John did not write to those churches, he only wrote to his own congregation.

It is an erroneous conclusion to imply that Revelation was written for believers in the Tribulation. Remember that this is the last book of the New Testament, it is the patent of royalty of our Lord Jesus Christ. The dative plural of the definite article taij is repeated because the definite article is used for the near demonstrative pronoun and translated "to those,” “who are.” Again we have an ellipsis demanding the insertion of the verb to be into the English for better translation. The entire book of Revelation was originally written for the royal family of God. Believers in the Tribulation are not royal family. This was written for us so that we can learn to distinguish between historical trends and prophetic trends. This was written for our understanding and orientation to history. We must not only be oriented to God through residence in the divine dynasphere, we must be oriented to other believers, we must also be oriented to history.

Then we have the prepositional phrase e)n plus the locative of A)sia. Asia is a transliterated Greek word and it does not refer to Asia as we know it today, it refers to Asia as Asia existed in the time of John. Today Asia is a continent; in John’s day it was a Roman province, Western Turkey. It was one of the most brilliant centres of Hellenism during the period of the Roman empire. It was the cultural centre of the Roman empire and the wealthiest part of the empire, the prosperity centre.

Now we begin with the actual salutation. John, like Paul, always emphasises the most important policy principle in our relationship to God and God’s administration of blessing to us — xarij, grace. It denotes the divine policy for the royal family of God, and from grace, without any works or merit on our part, comes e)irhnh, translated peace but it means prosperity, “Grace and prosperity.” Next comes the dative plural indirect object from su, and it addressed to all believers — “to you.” You can’t have prosperity without grace, and you can’t have any of these things without understanding the content of this book; this is another insertion of hidden blessing which will become obvious through perception of doctrine. And where is it? — “from him,” the preposition a)po, plus the ablative of ultimate source from a)utoj, and it refers to the glorified Lord Jesus Christ in status quo hypostatic union, now possessing a third royal patent which is the subject of this book as He is seated at the right hand of the Father. The entire panorama of history, both historical trends of the Church Age and prophetic trends of the Tribulation, second advent, Millennium, last revolution, destruction of the universe; all of these things are a part of the royal patent. And from the royal patent comes grace and prosperity to us.

Once our Lord received His royal patent, King of kings and Lord of Lords, the Age of Israel came to a halt and the dispensation of the Church, the royal family of God, the body of Christ, began. It is an inserted period of history for the purpose of forming a royal family of God for our Lord under His third patent. The book of Revelation is the history of the third royal patent of our Lord Jesus Christ. There is no prophecy in the Church Age which is a dead spot as far as prophecy is concerned. It is the period of historical trends and you do not have to be a prophet to know what is going to happen during the Church Age, you have to be a student of the Word of God.

“from” begins a long prepositional phrase. The preposition is the Greek word a)po, plus the ablative of source. It is correctly translated “from,” “him” is a definite article in the ablative case and we have this definite article to indicate a personal pronoun. The personal pronoun refers to the one who is the secret, the key to history, our Lord Jesus Christ. With that we now have the outline of the principle that Jesus Christ controls history. First we have our Lord in the present, Jesus Christ at the present time in history. We have an articular present active participle from the verb e)imi, the verb to be. It is translated “from him who is.” The definite article is a nominative masculine singular subject used as a personal pronoun, and with the preposition a)po is translated “from him’ . Next the definite article also refers to the Lord Jesus Christ the subject of the book, for Jesus Christ is the key to history. It is translated with the present participle “from him who is.” The definite article also indicates that the participle is to be translated into English by a small relative clause. The static present tense represents a condition which is assumed as perpetually existing and taken for granted as a fact. It is a reference to the status of our Lord Jesus Christ at the present time. He is seated at the right hand of the Father with His third royal patent. He is in hypostatic union, He is eternal God united with true glorified, resurrected humanity forever. And so our Lord Jesus Christ has His third royal patent; we are the royal family.

1981 Revelation

6 12/06/1981 Revelation 1:4b The Lord Jesus Christ; seven spirits

Before the incarnation our Lord had a different form. He was simply eternal God, not the God-Man in hypostatic union. So the next phrase in the Greek is our Lord in the past — “and which was,” kai o( en. First of all “who is” refers to our Lord’s present status at the right hand of the Father. Next we have the imperfect active indicative, and with it we have the same definite article in the nominative singular, o). It is used with the indicative in the pattern of an entirely different type of Greek, Ionian Greek. Ionian Greek is the only Greek which takes a definite article with the indicative. The definite article used with the indicative mood in the Ionic Greek is used for both a personal pronoun and the relative pronoun, so again we translate kai o(, the first two words here, “and.” Then we have “he who,” followed by the imperfect active indicative again of the verb e)imi, the verb to be, and it should be translated “was,” and can be translated “always existed.” It is referring to Christ as eternal God prior to the hypostatic union, prior to the virgin birth and incarnation. The imperfect tense is the progressive imperfect of description, it represents linear aktionsart in past time, both eternity past and history up to the time of the virgin birth and incarnation. The active voice: Jesus Christ as eternal God produces the action of the verb. So the past tense takes us up to the moment of the first advent, one of the two key moments in all of prophetic history, a prophecy now fulfilled by the virgin birth of our Lord Jesus Christ. Up to that time He was simply eternal God, infinite, eternal, holy God.

Now for the third presentation of the one who is the key to human history, our Lord in the future, kai o(e)rxomenoj. We start again with the connective use of the conjunction kai, indicating a categorical division in this case and transition. Then we go back to the articular present active participle from the verb e)rxomai, and it is translated “who is coming” or “who is to come.” The definite article in the nominative singular is used for both the personal pronoun and the relative pronoun. The futuristic present tense denotes an event that has not yet occurred, the second advent of Christ, but is regarded as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as already coming to pass. That is the way you have to study the prophecy in this history book, things that have not yet happened but are just as certain as any past event in history. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb and the participle is circumstantial, reference to the second advent of Christ. All prophecy after the Church Age centres around the second advent, just as all prophecy before the Church Age centred around the first advent of Christ.

And then we add another phrase: the connective use of the conjunction kai indicates that we are still talking about the same person, so whatever the seven spirits are they refer to the Lord Jesus Christ. We have a connection conjunction, we are not talking about the Holy Spirit. The preposition plus the ablative is used here, a)po plus the ablative plural from pneuma plus the numeral, e(pta for seven — “and from the seven spirits.” The conjunction again tells us that we are talking about the same person; the prepositional phrase tells us we are looking at a different aspect. The kai plus the preposition a)po tells us that one of these views is going to be expanded. Which one is most important to us right now? Our Lord as He is at the present. And so the kai plus a)po tells us that this view is going to be expanded. The seven spirits do not refer to God the Holy Spirit, that’s singular. It refers to our Lord Jesus Christ and it takes the first of the three views of our Lord, “who is.” At the present time our Lord is seated at the right hand and it describes Him under the phrase “seven spirits.”

Now how can we say that the seven spirits actually refer to the Lord? We have to go back and look at the word pneuma, which means wind, breath, life, spirit [spirit as part of human personality]. Spirit is also used for elect angels in Hebrews 1:7; for fallen angels in Mark 8:12; it is also used for human personality and for the Holy Spirit. The word e(pta, (seven) sometimes refers to the seven pastors of the seven churches, and this means that we have a complicated principle as far as this “seven spirits” is concerned because we are going to talk about the Lord Jesus Christ who is, but we are going to talk about the Lord Jesus Christ in terms of what He has left the Church, the formation of the body of Christ. So while this is talking about the Lord Jesus Christ it is talking about, Why am I here as a Christian? Why do I still live? I live because He has provided a power by which I can live. So “who is” tells us that He is at the right hand of the Father and to every generation of believers He has given the seven spirits, He has given a system of power.

We can find more about the seven spirits by going to Isaiah chapter 11 verses 1,2. The Holy Spirit is not seven, the Holy Spirit is a power system in the divine dynasphere, as the pervading influence, as the vital force in our lives, influencing seven pastors. We will get to God the Holy Spirit under that concept.

Isaiah 11:1, “Then a root shoot that buds will spring [first advent] from the stump of Jesse” — Israel under the fifth cycle of discipline. It refers to the Davidic dynasty which started with Jesse the father of David. It is another way of talking about Israel as a client nation to God. But since AD 70 it has been cut off for the last time. Three times the fifth cycle of discipline has been administered to Israel as a client nation. Now we live in the Church Age, the times of the Gentiles. Only a Gentile nation can be a client nation to God, there is no such thing as a Jewish nation in this dispensation. There will be no Jewish client nation to God until the end of the Tribulation, until the second advent of Christ, until the dispensation of the Millennium. So the stump of Jesse means historically Israel is cut off as a client nation to God. The first Gentile nation to become a client nation to God was the Roman empire.

But there is a time coming. It says that there is a shoot that will spring up, and that is the first advent. When Isaiah wrote both the first and the second advents were prophetic. "From the stump of Jesse," "from" means out of the fifth cycle of discipline, out of the destroyed client nation; "and a branch from his roots," that is Christ at the second advent; "will bear fruit."

Verse 2, "And the spirit of the Lord," God the Holy Spirit, "will rest on him." So Isaiah 11:2 prophesies that Christ would come in hypostatic union. He is the one who is and from the seven spirits of God, but "and" tells us we are still talking about Christ. We are not talking about His person however, we are talking about His will to the royal family, we are talking about our inheritance. And in Isaiah 11:2 we meet God the Holy Spirit who sustained our Lord Jesus Christ, beginning with the phrase "who is," the prototype divine dynasphere. The power system: gate one, God the Holy Spirit. This sustained our Lord during His incarnation, this is the basis of our Lord's impeccability.

Once our Lord is resurrected, ascended and seated at the right hand of the Father, and once the Church Age begins, the heritage of our Lord is given to us, only it is not called God the Holy Spirit, it is called seven spirits because it includes the ministry of the Spirit but it includes all of the functions of the divine dynasphere. All of these functions of the prototype divine dynasphere were prophesied in Isaiah 11:2.

First then there is the person, and He is called the Spirit of the Lord. Spirit of the Lord is gate one of the divine dynasphere. That is one of the seven spirits because we are looking at God the Holy Spirit, not just simply as a member of the Trinity but as our heritage for power in this dispensation. Next, "the spirit of wisdom." That is the Hebrew word chakmah, which is a reference to the application of doctrine. Wisdom is the application of doctrine, so we are looking at gate four of the divine dynasphere, and one of its functions, application. So now we begin to see what our heritage is. Our heritage is gate one of the divine dynasphere but gate one is a person, God the Holy Spirit. Pneuma has to be in the singular for the Spirit but this is in the plural because it is an entire system. The seven spirits is a system and the seven spirits are defined for us in Isaiah 11:2.

Then we have the third spirit, "understanding." The Hebrew noun is binah, a very strong word for perception.

The fourth spirit is "the spirit of counsel," etsah, which means a plan or a purpose. We have a plan or a purpose, it is a reference to God's game plan which is residence and function in the divine dynasphere. So the fourth spirit refers to the entire plan.

The fifth spirit is called the spirit of virtue. This is the noun gerubah and it refers to virtue; it refers to the principle of the Christian way of life. The principle of the Christian way of life, since it is in the divine dynasphere, it categorically divided into the invisible life and the visible life. The invisible life is directed toward God; the visible life is directed toward man.

The invisible life is the function of the royal priesthood; the visible life is the function of the ambassadorship. This is accomplished by virtue, so virtue is a word that covers the entire Christian life. Motivating virtue is the perception of doctrine at gate four, the function of your royal priesthood. Motivating virtue is directed toward God. Functional virtue is the application of doctrine at gate four, the function of your ambassadorship.

Number six is “the spirit of knowledge,” the Hebrew noun daath, which means insight, intelligence, wisdom. This is the spirit of understanding historical trends, understanding the time in which we live. It is the concept of objective reality, orienting to the life in which we live.

The seventh spirit is “fear,” jerah, which means respect or honour, and it is the function of gate five, social life with God, occupation with the person of Christ, personal love for God.

Translation of Revelation 1:4 so far, “John to the seven churches, those who are in the province of Asia: Grace and prosperity from him who is, and who always existed, and who is to come; and from the seven spirits [including God the Holy Spirit as the power system for both the prototype and divine dynaspheres of the royal family of God] ...”

In Isaiah 11:1,2 we not only have the prophecy of the two advents of Christ but the means of sustaining the humanity of Christ during His first advent — the Father’s invention of the prototype divine dynasphere. The power system for the prototype divine dynasphere is God the Holy Spirit who sustained our Lord during the incarnation, i.e. He sustained the humanity of Christ. There are seven descriptions of God the Holy Spirit in this role in Isaiah 11:2. According to Revelation 3:1 Christ’s humanity in glorified state still resides in and possesses the prototype divine dynasphere, and in Revelation 4:5 it is stated that the seven spirits are synonymous with the seven lamps which are the seven churches; again giving us a perfect picture that the plan of God can never be divorced from the divine dynasphere, the modus vivendi of our priesthood in the divine dynasphere, the modus operandi of our ambassadorship in the divine dynasphere. With the divine dynasphere on earth there can be no prophecy, only historical trends. That will be true until the divine dynasphere is removed; it only exists during the Church Age. When it is removed prophecy will resume. There is no prophecy in the Church Age. Instead there is something that you can understand as a believer, and should with the seven spirits of God, and that is historical trends.

So when it says in Revelation 4:5 that the seven spirits are synonymous with the seven lampstands, which are the seven churches, this means two things: it means that the divine dynasphere has been given to the Church, the royal family of God, for use in this dispensation; it means that the believer’s residence and function in the divine dynasphere determines the historical trends of the Church Age. With the divine dynasphere on earth then there can be no prophecy, only historical trends. In Revelation 5:6 our Lord’s first advent is related to the prophecy of the seven eyes of Zechariah 3:3-4:14. Again the seven eyes are the seven spirits, a reference to the power system and its function, the divine dynasphere. So the Holy Spirit sustained our Lord Jesus Christ under the title of the seven spirits related to the prototype divine dynasphere. The Holy Spirit was given without measure to the incarnate Christ, John 3:34. The Holy Spirit is mentioned in a special way at the baptism of our Lord — Matthew 3:16. The ministry of the Holy Spirit is related to the ministry of Christ in Matthew 12:18,28 as well as many other passages. When our Lord was bearing our sins on the cross and being judged the Holy Spirit as God forsook Him.

We have one more phrase in verse four, the accusative neuter plural from the relative pronoun o), and it is correctly translated “who.” Then because of ellipsis we have the verb to be, followed by the improper preposition *e*nwpion (an improper preposition is using some other form of speech other than a preposition to act as a preposition. This was originally an adverb, now used as a preposition), plus the genitive from the noun qronoj, and with it the possessive genitive from the possessive pronoun a)utoj, used as a personal pronoun translated “his” — “before his throne,” a reference to the throne on which our Lord Jesus Christ is seated at the right hand of the Father.

Translation of verse 4 — “John to the seven churches, those which are in the province of Asia: Grace to you, and prosperity, from him who is [the present status of the glorified Christ], and who always existed [Christ as eternal God prior to the incarnation], and who is to come [the future status of our Lord at the second advent]; and from the seven spirits [God the Holy Spirit as the power system of both the prototype divine dynasphere and the divine dynasphere used by the royal family of God] who are before his throne.”

This verse emphasises once again that Jesus Christ is the focal point of history, in fact Jesus Christ controls both history and prophecy. Jesus Christ permits historical trends, therefore in history people are the products of their own decisions, not their environment. Furthermore there are no tragedies in history, only disasters. Tragedy is a word that belongs to drama but not to history. Disaster is self-manufactured inside the cosmic system by an act of one’s own self-will. Collective disaster is the product of collective decisions. The demand for power, then, exceeds the need for power, for power is the manifestation of envy, jealousy, and arrogance.

Quoting from Garry North’s book, ‘Successful Investing in the Age of Envy’: “Envy, i.e. true envy is one of the most insidious evils that can afflict a civilisation. Envy is not mere covetousness, not just a desire to steal or illegally obtain another person’s goods. Envy is that grinding resentment of another person’s advantages; it is the sin that cannot be placated. Envy is a destroyer.

Jealousy or covetousness says: He’s got it; I want it; I’ll steal it; I’ll use it for myself. But envy says something worse: He’s got it; I want it; I know that I can never get it; I’ll destroy it so that no one else can have it.

Modern socialism is the politics of envy. The socialist knows that there are not enough rich people to support all the poor people of this world. He knows that governments’ programs of wealth redistribution cannot uplift the vast majority of men but that doesn’t convince him to abandon socialism. He likes socialism because he thinks that socialism will make it impossible for the wealth-poverty gap to exist, not because the poor have risen but because the rich have been pulled down to the level of the poor. Envy is the politics of economic devolution (degeneration, retrograde development). When envy becomes the foundation of politics the whole society is threatened. Men lose faith in the ability of civil government to protect their property and their futures. Men become secretive, they hide their resources from prying eyes, they reduce their consideration of others, the concept of brotherly love is abandoned.”

1981 Revelation

7 12/06/1981 Revelation 1:4c Humility; 7 spirits in divine dynasphere

Article from the Pensacola (Florida) Journal, 3 December 1981

by Charley Reese:

Everything humanity needs is free of charge.

“God has provided everything that humanity needs to sustain itself free of charge. On the surface that may strike you as a strange statement but it is true. If you feel uncomfortable with the concept “God” then substitute “nature” or “universe.” The origin of our bounty is not what I want to write about. Look around you. Everything you see, whether it is a computer, television set, or a nylon carpet has been assembled from materials which existed on this planet before man arrived. Concepts like natural or man-made are misleading; man has never made anything. All man can do is rearrange matter already in existence. A synthetic anything is merely a new combination of natural materials. Everything necessary to duplicate out present civilisation existed in the stone age. To this bounty of natural resources which came with the planet man has added only two ingredients: knowledge and work. What you see around you, good or bad is the product of the increased human knowledge of matter and human labour directed by that knowledge and applied to the matter. It is therefore no accident that education or the acquisition of knowledge and work have always been two of man’s most cherished values. Too bad both seem to be falling out of favour with large segments of the American population.

But now that you see all the wealth that is created by the application of knowledge and work you can also see that there are two ways of sustaining life. We either work or we live off the product of someone else’s work. If we work we are productive; if we live off someone else’s work we are a parasite. The one exception are those who live off the savings they have accumulated from private labour.

All of us are at one time parasites. Children are parasites, though through disease, ageing or accident adults can be forced into parasite existence in a free society. People choose to share the fruit of their labour with those who are not productive but for whom they care. The ancient function of the family is to pool the labour to create a surplus to provide for those family members who are not productive or who may become non-productive.

What has happened to us however is that the Welfare State has been imposed on us by politicians. This State forcibly confiscates a portion of the fruit of our labour and redistributes it to the parasites we don't even know, much less care about. The only claim these parasites have to our labour is a legal definition created out of thin air by lawyers. There is nothing charitable or just about the system. Those who labour don't feel good about it because they have no choice in the matter; those who receive don't feel good about it because they feel guilty for not being productive. The only beneficiary is government which itself is a parasite and which uses the redistribution scheme as an excuse to expand its size and its power. (Remember the principle: the demand for power exceeds the need for power) More seriously, the system destroys the work ethic. The lazy have no incentive to work for they are subsidised; the energetic soon become discouraged because so much of their labour is confiscated. Since work is the source of wealth every Welfare State, under whatever guise, eventually destroys itself. As soon as there are more consumers than producers the standard of living begins and inevitable decline as the common store of wealth is consumed faster than it can be replaced.

The standard of living in America today is declining and will continue to decline so long as we allow politicians to impose this destructive welfare state on us. The alternative to impoverishment is to return to a system in which everyone is encouraged to work and no one is encouraged to be a parasite. You encourage work by not confiscating its fruit; you discourage parasites by refusing to subsidise them. You want to know how to get Americans off their backsides? Just let the Government send them a mailgram. Quote: 'All forms of subsidies have now ceased. If you like to eat, you'd better find a job or a friend in a hurry'."

Historically all nations come to this sort of a problem. It is true historically in every nation that has ever achieved or attained any system of prosperity. The national entity, the empire, the group, whatever it is, is a product of its own decisions, not its environment. Decisions create environment, not environment decisions, and when people allege that environment creates decisions they announce that they are weak and flawed.

Historically, getting back to our own country (America), we had three categories of environment, all the products of many, many decisions. There was the north, the south, and the frontier. The people in all of these areas were the products of their decisions. Also, this opened up options for decisions. Eventually the north, through immigration and through the industrial revolution, became a manufacturing industrial revolution-type entity; factories, cities, in other words, an urban population functioning under the principles of management and labour. The south was an agricultural economy. Each, of course had its own successful people. The landed aristocracy was the success mark in the south, comparable to nobility in the rise of western European civilisation. In the north you have successful people in the monetary field, the rise of capitalism, supply and demand, and you have your successful millionaires who had no landed patent of nobility, the same as in western Europe.

Then you always have something to which people can direct their energies, toward which people can make decisions. Under the principle of inheritance the eldest son would inherit his father's fortune in the north, the eldest son would inherit his father's land in the south. And younger sons were often the best and most successful, the ones with the greatest amount of ability; and therefore they would have the option of finding their fortune by going to the frontier, the same thing that happened in England, Germany, France, Italy and Spain over the last 400 years as they began to emerge from medieval times. So that there were options, opportunities.

But as a land becomes prosperous the frontier decreases, shrinks, and eventually the frontier will be the source of the whining and the complaining, for if any of the conquered people are left alive they always whine and complain and demand damages as the nation reaches its peak of prosperity — like the Indians, whining and complaining and saying, "This land is ours." So that becomes, then, a source of trouble as the frontier shrinks, and while the frontier is shrinking there is always a class struggle. This happened in England between the landed aristocracy and the successful manufacturers as they became successful.

This conflict often ends, as it did in the USA, in a civil war in which slavery was merely an excuse. Slavery was on its way out and would have been peaceably and easily settled within a generation, but it made a marvellous excuse for arrogance for you see when arrogance intrudes immediately there is conflict. We have already studied the principle that those who are arrogant never recognise their own inconsistencies, their sins, their failures, only the inconsistencies of others. Arrogance in the north saw inconsistency in the south; arrogance in the south saw inconsistency in the north, and a conflict was inevitable in those circumstances. The only thing that could have staved it off was a successful evangelism that brought about perception of doctrine, the function of impersonal love whereby time would resolve many social problems. Slavery was a social problem which would have been resolved, and replaced by other social problems. There will always be problems and there will always be self-righteous arrogance to handle them wrongly. The greatest difficulty in problems are the solutions where human good is produced.

So it was inevitable that a war would come here; it was inevitable that there would be a French revolution; it was inevitable that there would be a Russian revolution, because once you destroy the frontiers and their opportunities prosperity becomes a state of instability. Once you achieve prosperity you, at the same time, achieve instability, for a generation comes along that has no appreciation of that prosperity unless it is a generation of doctrinal people who through the Word of God have come to develop a capacity for life and therefore appreciation of what they possess. But generally there is dissatisfaction, and dissatisfaction can manifest itself through violence, it can manifest itself through the guilt complex. It has many manifestations, but once there is no frontier at all then the State receives its greatest challenge. You have no outlet for decisions, you have no place where people in the south and people in the north can go and find their fortune, where they can use their energy and make their decisions, and therefore life becomes a very strong issue. A nation either passes the prosperity test or flunks it. If it flunks it, it has a tremendous rise in crime. Instead of people going to a frontier to seek their fortune they make decisions to become criminals and prey off the land. There is no frontier, just prosperous people to rob, to cheat, to destroy. You have philosophical opinions such as redistribution of wealth: "You are wealthy, I am poor, it is beneath my dignity to be poor, I am going to take your wealth. I am going to take it through legislation, through violence, through crime. But I envy you and I intend to have it and if I can't have it, no one will have it."

There was a time when the frontier turned and destroyed Rome. Discontented peoples became restless and infiltrated, eventually invaded, and destroyed the empire. Whether they were called Gauls or Huns or Vandals, whatever they were called and by whatever designation it happened then, it happens again and again and again in history, demonstrating the fact that human beings are simply unable to handle prosperity and that most people when you get down to the bedrock of their living, if they have any character at all they generally do better in adversity than they do in prosperity. It takes true greatness to handle prosperity, it simply takes greatness to handle adversity. Prosperity requires more spiritual strength, more capacity for life, more human ability than does anything else in life; it is the most subtle of all fields of testing. The prosperity involved is often pseudo prosperity provided by Satan and if it is real prosperity it challenges Satan, it challenges those involved, and the decisions that are made often destroy it before Satan or anyone else can get to it.

The frontiers of the past are now screaming to western Europe, "We have been exploited"; third world nations: "We have been exploited." The Africans have been beautifully administrated by the Belgians and the English, and in some cases by the French, but the Africans turned against those who came down and used them as a frontier, and now everywhere we are going to see what you have never seen before in history: the stone age trend, in which people appear not to have options. They can't choose to go to work because there are no jobs, they can't choose to live normally because there is no option for normal living, it has been destroyed by bad decisions over a period of time. And in their frustration of having no options at all — closed doors — and failing to realise the source of closed doors (bad decisions destroy options) they revert to their emotionalism, they can no longer think, and to survive they emote, they escape through crime, drug addiction, joining organisations that promise them everything and give them nothing: exploitation of the masses. They become communists, they enter into areas of violence, of crime, complaining is a way of life. This destroys any possibility of capacity for life and therefore lays the groundwork for the greatest rise of terrorism and crime and violence and masses being directed by conspiracies of one kind or another. It is not environment which causes this because this comes from places of wealth and influence as well as places of poverty and struggling. It is a matter of individual decision and then the amalgamation of individual decision into collective decision, and then the destruction of individual and collective decision, and the frustration that brings about emotion which is irrational. From emotion something snaps and then people go in different directions which could all be classified as the various areas of degeneracy, and then you fall back into a dark ages such has occurred at various times in history.

It is interesting that Revelation chapters 1, 2, and 3 come before chapters 6 through 19. It is no accident, it is a part of the picture. We must learn historical trends to appreciate the prophecies regarding the Tribulation, the second advent of Christ, the transfer of the rulership of this world from Satan to Christ, the one thousand year reign of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Millennial reign, demonstrating that perfect environment isn't the solution to man's problems. People constantly seek solutions by improving their environment and therefore never orient to the environment they resent. By not orienting to the environment they resent and not meeting it with the principles of Bible doctrine when they have improved environment they are not improved. The environment is improved and instead of having a solution they have simply intensified their problems.

1981 Revelation

8 12/08/1981 Revelation 1:5a Territorial development; subject of Revelation

Verse 5, the subject of the book of Revelation. The subject is the unique person of Jesus Christ, the basis and the function of His royal patent as it relates to the history of mankind from the time of John to the end of time. This includes historical trends of the Church Age, the beginning of prophecy with the termination of the Church Age, the Rapture, all of the unusual activities of the Tribulation, the terrible confusion and disasters which occur during the Tribulation, how these are all sorted out by the second advent of Christ, how there is a coup de tat in which Satan as the ruler of this world is superseded by our Lord, and how our Lord rules perfectly the entire earth in the Millennium under a system of perfect environment for which those without doctrine have no capacity to appreciate. At the end of 1000 years of perfect environment their lack of capacity is manifest by releasing Satan from his prison and Satan stirs up the Gog revolution as a demonstration that perfect environment is not the solution to man's problems. Then comes the last judgment with the second resurrection and the destruction of planet earth and the universe as we now know it followed by the creation of a new heavens and a new earth and a new Jerusalem for your occupancy and the occupancy of all who believe in Jesus Christ. Therefore you must constantly keep in mind when we get into some of the details of these prophecies that even though man is the product of his own decisions Jesus Christ controls history.

We begin the exegesis with the connective use of the conjunction kai, which is simply transferred here "and," but we will see some great exegetical complications with the word kai. It is used in place of numerals as when giving a summary — point one, point two, etc.; it is used to delineate categories; it is used to advance the thought, so it has to be translated "furthermore" or "moreover." One of the weakest areas of translation in all past translations has been lack of understanding of this little three-letter word. Here is verse 5 it is simply "And."

Then we have the prepositional phrase a)po plus the ablative of source from two proper nouns. The first is 'Ihsouj, Jesus, the second is Xristoj, the appointed one, the anointed, the one appointed by God the Father to steer the course of human history to the divine purpose and the proper conclusion, not only in your life as an individual but in the function of literally millions of decisions throughout world history. We will translate it: “And from Jesus Christ.” “Jesus” is simply the Greek equivalent of the Hebrew “Joshua” and it means “saviour”; “Christ” means appointed to destiny, anointed, in the time context of the Old Testament. The ablative of source as the object of the preposition a)po indicates that the original situation contributed in some way to the present status of our Lord Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ is the subject of the book and the present status of our Lord is denoted by certain doctrines we have studied: the doctrine of the virgin birth, the beginning of the incarnation or the first advent -resultant immediately, the doctrine of the hypostatic union. In hypostatic union the weak part would be the humanity, the susceptible part; for deity cannot sin, deity cannot fail, but the humanity of Christ in hypostatic union could. The prototype divine dynasphere, our Lord’s impeccability inside the prototype divine dynasphere: He was not able to sin in the divine dynasphere, as God He is able not to sin.

Next we have o(martuj o(pistoj, the appositional use of the nominative case: the adjective pistoj, the noun martuj. It is correctly translated, “faithful [or dependable] witness,” a witness inspiring faith, trust, confidence, therefore a faithful or dependable witness. Jesus Christ is not only the witness about the fact of the existence of God but is the manifestation of the Godhead, John 1:18; 6:46; 1 Timothy 6:16; 1 John 4:12. As the faithful witness Jesus Christ presents true evidence of God and true testimony about God’s plan; and therefore provides hope for all of us in the midst of historical confusion and disaster. It is the nominative of apposition which modifies Jesus Christ — dependable, inspiring faith or trust. So we translate: “And from Jesus Christ, the dependable witness.” This is why the Bible is called the mind of Christ in 1 Corinthians 2:16, because Jesus Christ is the dependable witness of all truth, all doctrine, the controller of all history; and therefore the one who gives us hope in the darkest hour of history, the one who makes life meaningful in the midst of the greatest disasters of life. The believer also becomes a dependable witness through his residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. He produces motivating virtue toward God, he produces functional worship toward mankind, toward the circumstances of history. Jesus Christ, then, as the dependable witness lived inside the prototype divine dynasphere, an exclusive invention for the Church Age believer only. After the Church Age there will never be again in human history the divine dynasphere. We now possess that same divine dynasphere as the royal family of God in the Church Age and have the same mission to fulfil, the manufacture of virtue in that divine dynasphere which becomes a dependable testimony or the giving of evidence to mankind about God, for mankind in every generation, in every moment of history, needs God. This is why the believer is called an ambassador for Christ in 2 Corinthians 5:20, because in the absence of our Lord seated at the right hand of the Father we are His witnesses, His representatives, therefore His ambassadors on this earth.

This brings us now to the beginning of a very important subject. It is the nominative apposition of the word prwtwtokoj, a word translated “firstborn” but has a tremendous significance to us.

One of the things we need to become used to is the fact that the book of Revelation deals with the historical trends of the time in which we live. While we will be studying prophetic things those prophetic things will not be seen by us in our life time on this earth, for no believer will be alive on this earth at the time that the prophetic part of the book of Revelation begins. So joining the historical with the prophetic to form a panorama of world history the book of Revelation is the text book of history from the time of the Roman empire to the end of time. We have noted therefore the historical trends and they become extremely important, not only for our own application of doctrine but for the spiritual life, the plan of God, the purpose for our very existence on this earth after salvation.

We have now accumulated eight basic principles in the concept of historical trends which will be demonstrated in almost every chapter in the book of Revelation.

1. Even though history is the record of man's decisions and actions it is Jesus Christ who controls history. Therefore there are two sources of judgment in history: the sovereign decisions of Jesus Christ and the erroneous decisions of mankind.

2. The trends of history are determined in the Church Age by whether the believer chooses to live in the divine dynasphere or inside Satan's cosmic system.

3. There are no tragedies in history. There are historical disasters but these disasters are not tragedies since the individuals or nations are the products of their own decisions, not the products of their environments. Decision creates environment, not environment decision.

4. People individually and collectively are the products of their own decisions.

5. The demand for power exceeds the need for power. Therefore divinely authorised authority is ignored and brushed aside.

6. Arrogant people or arrogant nations never see their own inconsistencies, only the inconsistencies of others.

7. Jealous people and envious nations never see their own sins and their production of evil, only the sins and evil production of others.

8. Arrogant individuals, groups or nations never see the disastrous consequences or evil results of their own cosmic involvement or evil modus operandi. Preoccupation with self to the exclusion of objective reality is the greatest blindness problem in this life.

Let's take, for example, the 5th trend: the demand for power exceeds the need for power.

a. The need for power is determined by the laws of divine establishment.

b. The demand for power is determined by the arrogance, lust, envy, greed, motivating and functional evil of the cosmic system.

c. Legitimate power is defined in terms of authority — delegated authority from God, delegated authority in social life, economic life, domestic life, professional life, political life, and spiritual life.

d. Evil and destructive power exists to the extent that cosmic arrogance exceeds the restraints on cosmic arrogance, restraints from the function of legitimate authority in life such as parents over children, husbands over wives, management over labour, law enforcement and jurisprudence protecting the freedom, the privacy, the property of the individual citizen, the authority of the pastor to teach doctrine in his congregation and the influence of that doctrine on the royal family of God.

e. Since we are the products of our volition rather than our environment cosmic arrogance can only be restrained through enforced and genuine humility, gate three of the divine dynasphere.

f. This brings us to the conflict between objective reality in life which is inside the divine dynasphere and subjective reality of life which is related to the cosmic system.

g. Believers are not only the products of their own decisions in life but the nations in which they reside reflect the believer's volition.

h. The believer's good decisions to live in the divine dynasphere are reflected by national prosperity while the believer's bad decisions to live in the cosmic system are reflected by national disaster.

1981 Revelation

Lesson #9

9 12/09/1981 Revelation 1:5b Power: demand exceeds need; firstborn

We now move to the nominative of apposition from the noun prwtwtokoj, which means firstborn. Translation: "And from Jesus Christ, the dependable witness, the firstborn ..."

a. The title "firstborn" denotes the privileges of primogeniture, that is the right of the firstborn to all the inheritance.

b. In the Jewish connotation which is in view here this would include three factors. 1. Rulership: Christ is the ruler of both Israel and the Church, and at the second advent will supersede Satan as the ruler of this world. "King of kings and Lord of lords" refers to that royal patent which will be exercised at the second advent of Jesus Christ; 2. The priesthood: Jesus Christ is the high priest of the royal priesthood made up of all believers in the Church Age, sometimes called the body of Christ; 3. The double portion: Jesus Christ has a double portion inheritance, the spiritual inheritance ruling both Israel and the Church throughout the Millennial reign of Christ and forever.

c. Since all believers of the Church Age are royal family of God through baptism of the Spirit and union with Christ we share in this inheritance, the primogeniture of Christ.

d. However only mature believers have the full privileges of the firstborn. For example, rulership. Mature believers will rule with Christ in the future. For example, priesthood. Only the mature believers benefit from the invisible part of the Christian way of life inside the divine dynasphere. For example, the double portion. That is reserved for the mature believer only. In time it is the imputation of supergrace blessing in its six paragraphs; in eternity it is the imputation of the great rewards which will come to us at the judgment seat of Christ.

e. Documentation for primogeniture: Romans 8:28,29; Colossians 1:15, 18; Hebrews 12:23.

f. The ablative of source which follows is nekroj and refers to physical death. It is translated “firstborn from the dead” in verse 5.

g. The ablative denotes the original situation where firstborn was assigned — resurrection, which contributed to our Lord’s present status quo. In resurrection He became the firstborn. That is why it is said “firstborn from the dead,” and we too will enjoy the privileges of primogeniture for all eternity as royal family of God because we, after Christ, will be the first category of believers to be resurrected. After our Lord’s resurrection the next resurrection is the Rapture of the Church, not the Old Testament saints.

There are two words we might as well get used to. The first is qanatoj, which means death, and we are going to see it used again in this chapter for spiritual death. It is used for our Lord’s bearing our sins on the cross. And the other we will see a great deal of is nekroj, and that is our Lord’s physical death on the cross. Remember that our Lord died twice on the cross that we might be born twice.

You cannot understand the dynamic and historical impact of the first advent unless you look at Christ from a threefold standpoint. First, He is eternal God; secondly, eternal God became man — Emmanuel, the God-Man, the hypostatic union, the incarnation; thirdly, the second advent of Christ when He will return in hypostatic union. So we have the eternal God — first advent, second advent. We always have to look at it this way because the tremendous Christological impact comes from the fact that Jesus Christ who came in the flesh was also eternal God. That was the beginning of the strategical victory of the angelic conflict, reaching its peak at the cross where He bore our sins in His own body (not His deity, deity isn’t being judged for sins, deity cannot sin).

Now we move on in verse 5 to the intensive use of the conjunction kai, which emphasises what was a noteworthy fact. We translate this “furthermore.” And with that the nominative of apposition a)rxon, a word which takes us right back to Athens in the fifth century BC to the basis of west European culture in Attica. A)rxon was the word for the ruler or the twelve rulers of the Athenian city state. It is a classical Greek word and it does mean ruler. It is very important because it refers to the fact that not one of us will take another breath or do another thing except by the courtesy of the Lord Jesus Christ. You and I are living on planet earth, the devil's kingdom at the present time, simply because of who and what Christ is. We are here because of His policy called grace and His authority won in the strategic victory of the angelic conflict, and we are here by His power. We are here because our Lord is the anax, the ruler.

1981 Revelation

10 12/10/1981 Revelation 1:5c Ruler of kings; royal patent established

Not only is our Lord an anax but He rules rulers, not peasants and peons. There is only one person in all of history who rules all the rulers, and so we have the ordinary Greek word for a ruler or a king, the descriptive genitive plural from the noun basileus; and in the plural it is correctly translated "kings," "the ruler of the kings." Then we have the genitive singular of place from the noun gē, the word for the planet earth. After the resurrection we have also the ruler of the kings of the earth. Our Lord will return to the earth for the tactical victory of becoming the ruler of all the kings of planet earth. Through resurrection, ascension and session our Lord Jesus Christ won a royal patent. That royal patent supersedes Satan as the ruler of this world. Before the cross Satan offered our Lord the kingdoms of the world, the kosmos, Matthew 4:8. Our Lord refused because He will not exercise His royal patent until the second advent. Before our Lord will exercise His royal patent on earth millions of people are going to make millions of decisions which will have exhausted every connotation of self-determination that could ever exist in combination in every system of numbers, every variation that could ever exist in every category, so that by the time of the second advent there will be in the history of the human race a total exhaustion of every category of decisions that could be made in history. It will be demonstrated that no one ever came up with a thought, and idea or decision that had not been tried and failed. Our Lord returns when every human resource of every genius has been combined in the functions of history to demonstrate that man has exhausted his resources. Once everything has been tried our Lord will then come back and sort it all out. And the fascinating thing is that He will establish perfect environment on the earth.

Principle

1. Note that through warfare our Lord Jesus Christ comes to establish His patent of nobility. He establishes His patent of nobility the way all patents of nobility have been established in world history, through the sword, warfare, Revelation 19.
2. His government is established through military victory — the last phase of the Armageddon campaign, Revelation 16.

3. Only violence and death on the battlefield will pave the way for Millennial reign. Perfect environment is not established by disarmament but by armament.

4. Good government can only be maintained by good military establishment. Both tyranny and good government maintain themselves by good military but military establishment indicates the nation involved has freedom. Establishment doctrine is freedom doctrine.

5. The freedom of the client nation to God can only be purchased by military victory. Freedom is purchased on battlefields, not by politicians making speeches.

6. Warfare is historically the only way to right wrongs until the second advent of Jesus Christ. Wrongs are increased and intensified through disarmament. The principle is that we all have old sin natures and as long as we do these old sin natures have to be regulated en masse by force. This includes, of course, law enforcement. Law enforcement is a form of warfare, warfare against crime. Therefore it is imperative that the client nation to God have a strong military establishment which includes law enforcement and good jurisprudence.

7. Therefore there are certain things under the laws of divine establishment that must exist in the national entity. The necessities for maintaining freedom include universal military training, mobilisation plans which means a good general staff, a strong military industrial base for logistical support of deployed forces, strategic and tactical plans, and great civil and military leadership.

1981 Revelation

11 12/11/1981 Revelation 1:5d Motivation: God's, the believer's

The book of Revelation is designed to orient believers to the historical trends of the dispensation of the Church and to see the entire panorama of history and the principle that we have been studying — Jesus Christ controls history — and other similar principles which will occur from time to time as we progress in this book. Therefore behind everything is the very principle, the very heart of the Christian way of life, the divine dynasphere in which we have: Gate 1, the filling of the Spirit; Gate two, basic impersonal love; Gate three, enforced and genuine humility; Gate four, perception and application of doctrine; Gate 5, love of God, occupation with Christ as you mature; Gate 6, right man-right woman where pertinent; Gate 7, friendship and advanced impersonal love; Gate 8, the completion of the edification complex, cracking the maturity barrier, and the reception of the supergrace blessings in 6 categories.

The Christian way of life can only exist inside the divine dynasphere and it is divided into two parts: invisible and visible. The invisible way of the Christian life is the function of the royal priesthood, the visible way of the Christian life is the function of our ambassadorship. At Gate 4 the privacy of the priesthood gives you the opportunity for perception of doctrine and the application of doctrine to experience. The invisible part of the Christian way of life is directed toward God; the visible part of the Christian way of life is directed toward man. It is impossible to glorify the Lord Jesus Christ except through residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. As one continues in the Christian life he produces the motivating virtues from the priesthood, the functional virtues or counterpart from the royal ambassadorship. For example, worship toward God is a motivating virtue for morality directed toward man. The second one that we have studied, personal love directed toward God, is the motivating virtue for the functional virtue of impersonal love directed toward man. Confidence is a motivating virtue directed toward God and its counterpart is the functional virtue of courage directed toward man and circumstances.

It is imperative to understand that the mandates all relate in one way or another in the function of our spiritual experience to the divine dynasphere. For example, the command to be filled with the Spirit is Gate 1, the residence in the divine dynasphere. The command to walk by means of the Spirit is the function at the various gates. The negative mandate, "Grieve not the Holy Spirit," is to avoid cosmic one with its 26 gates of interlocking systems of arrogance and cosmic 2 with its 9 gates of interlocking systems of hatred which is called "quenching the Holy Spirit." And the mandates are simple: "Be filled with the Spirit," residence in the divine dynasphere; "Walk by means of the Spirit," function in the divine dynasphere. "Grieve not the Spirit," avoid cosmic one; "Quench not the Spirit," avoid cosmic two. Cosmic one and cosmic two is the Satanic genius in the administration of his world rulership. The believer living inside of the divine dynasphere produces the uptrend in history, the believer living in the cosmic system produces the downtrend in history.

Continuing with the exegesis of verse 5, we begin with the articular present active participle of the verb agapaw, and it is translated "to him who has loved us." The one participle with its definite article gives us a small relative clause. The dative singular, indirect object from the definite article is used as a personal pronoun as well as a relative pronoun, translated "To him who." The present tense is a retroactive progressive present also known as the present tense of duration. It denotes what has begun in the past and continues in the present. There never was a time when God did not love us and the conditions under which that exists we will note in a moment. The active voice: Jesus Christ as God produces the action of the verb. Jesus Christ as the God-Man also produces the action of the verb in the function of impersonal love from the prototype divine dynasphere. The participle is circumstantial, being articular it also acts as a relative clause.

Then we have the accusative plural direct object from the personal pronoun egw, correctly translated "us." It refers to the royal family of God, the Church Age believer. God is eternal, God is infinite, therefore God possesses eternal and infinite love. God is immutable, unchangeable. Therefore the love of God is stable, unchangeable, compatible with His perfect character. God is holy, therefore the holiness of God possesses perfect integrity, and this is the key to understanding the love of God. God's holiness is composed of His justice and His perfect righteousness, and when we believed in Christ His perfect righteousness was imputed to us establishing a grace pipeline from the justice of God to the righteousness of God, the basis of all blessing. Possessing the righteousness of God is also the basis for divine love.

It is important to understand God's love for God. The basis of it is the essence of the Father, the essence of the Son, the essence of the Holy Spirit. God is one in essence, three in personality. The sovereignty of God the Father, the sovereignty of the Son, the sovereignty of the Holy Spirit is coequal and coeternal, they have the identical infinity, the identical eternal life, and so on. But the basic issue in the integrity of God. God is love. Each member of the Trinity has perfect love, perfect capacity for love, there never was a time when this love did not exist, there never was a time when it increased or decreased, there never was a time when it was involved in anything that was remotely identified with failure such as sin in the human race. Integrity is the issue, God's perfect righteousness and God's justice. Justice and righteousness is actually the two attributes related to divine holiness and the Father has perfect righteousness and justice, the Son has perfect righteousness and justice, and the Holy Spirit has perfect righteousness and justice.

God the Father in perfect subjective love loves His own integrity. And the key: the love goes to His perfect righteousness. He loves His own righteousness, it is perfect, and He loves it with His perfect subjective love. Since He is loving a characteristic He has we call it subjective. Subjective, when used of the human race is bad; subjective, when used for God is good, perfect goodness.

Now God the Father being love also loves the perfect integrity of God the Son. That is called objective love. Furthermore He loves the perfect integrity of God the Holy Spirit because there never was a time when all three members of the Trinity did not have perfect righteousness. We call that the love of God for God, or love directed toward God. It is called objective because the target for the love is perfect divine righteousness, and this is true of all three members of the Godhead, the Trinity.

Now you can begin to see the implications of what happens at salvation when we believe in Christ. That perfect righteousness is imputed to us, we have that same righteousness, and therefore God loves the believer and the justice of God can even provide blessing for the believer in failure, as illustrated by logistical grace where God keeps the carnal believer, the sinning believer, the believer functioning in motivating and functioning evil, the believer in the in the cosmic system. The reason is not because there is any merit in carnality, there isn't .

In verse 5 the one who loves us is a specific member of the Trinity: God the Son, the Lord Jesus Christ. It isn't the Father or the Holy Spirit who is mentioned loving us here, even though that is a true fact, but not taught here. "To him who loves us" is referring to the Lord Jesus Christ who is different from the Father and different from the Holy Spirit in that He is true humanity and different in true humanity in that He is God.

"To him who has loved us." What does this mean? Go back to the principle. There are three phases to the plan of God and in each one of those phases we have our Lord's love described in terms of personal and impersonal love. In salvation we have this same categorical concept: God's love for God — subjective, objective; God's love for mankind — divine personal and impersonal love. In phase one divine impersonal love is directed toward all, it is unconditional — John 3:16; "To him who loved us" in our case, doesn't refer to the unbeliever in phase one. Divine personal love is always conditional. Divine impersonal love is directed toward all, but the few (believers) are the object of divine personal love, those members of the human race in any given generation who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. The few are those believers who receive the imputation of +R, God's righteousness, and just as the Father, the Son, and the Spirit love perfectly in subjective and objective love the perfect righteousness of their own holiness, so they love that same righteousness in us since it is imputed. And since we are the royal family of God we possess a double portion of God's righteousness. Imputed to us was the righteousness of the Father, and being in union with Christ through the baptism of the Spirit we have the righteousness of the Son. As royal family of God we have a double portion.

In phase two of the plan of God the "all" represents all believers, and when it says, "To him who loved us" it obviously includes divine impersonal love — unconditional — directed toward all believers. And the manifestation of divine impersonal love is the imputation of logistical grace to all of us. Every believer who fails or succeeds receives the imputation of logistical grace — because they are the objects of divine impersonal love. But there is an advance on that for the few — out of the all come the few (few being less than all) — are those who advance to maturity, who go from gate four to gate eight of the divine dynasphere, who persist in the perception of doctrine, who pass the momentum tests for acceleration of growth. And divine personal love is conditional, it is only for those few who advance to maturity in any given generation. It is the few that determine the uptrend in history; it is those outside of the few, the all in the cosmic system, that determine the downtrend in history. So divine personal love is directed toward the few.

When it says, "To him who loved us" in this passage it must include both. He loves impersonally those who are believers in Jesus Christ because all believers have +R. And for the few, add to that from the justice of God to the righteousness of God the six paragraphs of supergrace blessing.

The next phrase is definitely going to emphasise divine impersonal love. From the standpoint of His humanity our Lord resided and functioned inside the divine dynasphere, producing personal love for God as the motivating virtue for the function of impersonal love toward all mankind in dying for their sins. Now Jesus Christ is the God-Man — hypostatic union. As God He has perfect objective and subjective love toward the other members of the Godhead. As God He has divine impersonal love for all mankind and He has divine personal love for the few who believe in Christ. As Man Jesus Christian the prototype divine dynasphere had personal love for God as the motivating virtue and impersonal love for man as the functional virtue, and it was His humanity which bore our sins. Remember, He bore our sins in his own body, not in His deity. The sins of the world were not imputed to His deity. When Jesus Christ approached the cross His humanity was residing inside the prototype divine dynasphere. His deity: He said in Hebrews 10, "Lo I come to do thy will, O God." His humanity said: "Father, if it be thy will let this cup pass from me." However, He went on to add: "Not my will but thine be done," the function of gate three, enforced humility.

This next phrase emphasises the humanity of Christ, and that becomes important because of the function we are about to note. We have a connective kai related to our Lord's motivation for His saving work on the cross. Our Lord was motivated to go to the cross because He loved us from His humanity. He cannot love us as sinners from His deity as God. There is divine impersonal love toward the entire human race, as manifest by what He did, but God cannot stand sin. We always explain this by saying that God loves the sinner without loving his sin but that would be a compromise of character were it not for one very important thing. The motivating factor must be distinguished from the action, and the motivating factor has to be ascribed to God the Father because John 3:16 says: "God so loved the world that he gave ..."

Throughout the book of John it says "the Father gave." So divine impersonal love is directed toward all from the standpoint of deity based on the fact that it doesn't make any difference whether you are good or bad, moral or immoral, whether you are sinful, evil, or whatever your status quo. We all have an old sin nature, we are all spiritually dead. The status of the object of love is inconsequential. Impersonal love emphasises the integrity of the subject — the integrity of God the Father is perfect; the integrity of God the Son is perfect; the integrity of God the Holy Spirit is perfect. That is not the motivating factor here because we are talking about the Son and we are talking about His motivation from inside the prototype divine dynasphere, because that is where all of our motivation for the spiritual life must come. You cannot be an object of someone else's influence, you must be influenced by the divine dynasphere, which means in effect that you must be influenced by God the Holy Spirit, you must be influenced by Bible doctrine you have learned and can apply, you must be influenced by your own integrity, gates 2 and 3, impersonal love, enforced and genuine humility. All true motivation in the Christian life is totally apart from human beings, it is the wonderful invention of God the Father for the royal family, the divine dynasphere. This then presents it to us from the standpoint of the work of our Lord on the cross, the aorist active participle of the verb luo. There is another verb that looks very much like it, luo, which is pronounced the same, but they are two very different words. So we have here not the word meaning to wash, as per the King James version error. The word we actually have here is the word which means to deliver, to loose, to untie, to free, to release, to liberate. The word "wash" does not occur here.

The accusative plural direct object follows, e)gw, and it should be translated, "and has released us (or delivered us)," not "washed" us.

"And from Jesus Christ, the dependable witness, the firstborn from the dead, and the ruler of the kings of the earth. To him who has loved us, and has released us (or, liberated us) ..." So we must note then the morphology of the verb. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it views the work of Christ on the cross bearing our sins and being judged for them in its entirety, but it emphasises the existing results in eternal salvation. Salvation is available to all. Those of us who have believed in Christ have attained it, we can never lose it. The active voice: Jesus Christ produced the action of the verb by being judged for our sins when they were imputed to Him on the cross. The participle: the action of the aorist participle precedes the action of the main verb, and the main verb is coming up, an aorist active indicative of poiew. The principle is that you have to be saved by faith in Christ before you can be made a part of the royal family of God, and the word to make or do is coming up in the next verse as the main verb. The sentence goes into verse 6 where we get our main verb.

Then the prepositional phrase e)k plus the ablative from a(rmartia, plus the possessive genitive from e)gw which is translated “our,” “from our sins.” Our sins were separated from us and imputed to Christ and judged at the cross. There is one more prepositional phrase before the main verb, the preposition e)n plus the instrumental of a(ima, which is translated “by means of his blood.” The possessive genitive singular from a)utoj is the intensive pronoun used as a third person personal pronoun. It is our sins, His blood. His blood is the covering for our sins, i.e. principle of atonement.

Translation of verse 5: “And from Jesus Christ, the dependable witness, the first-born from the dead, also the kings of the earth. To him who has loved us, and has released us from our sins by means of his own blood.”

The blood of Christ

The literal and figurative use of blood demands that we understand several things. In the concept of water which is sometimes used literally in scripture but sometimes it is used figuratively just as blood is used figuratively. For example water is used for salvation in Isaiah 55 and Revelation 22:17; for the Holy Spirit in John 7:37-39; for the Word of God in Eph. 5:26 and 1 John 5:8. And likewise blood is used both literally and figuratively. In the figurative use it refers to the spiritual death of our Lord on the cross, also known as the saving work of Christ. The literal blood of Christ refers to the somatic death of our Lord upon the cross.

The issue for the literal blood of Christ on the cross comes from John 19:34 as it relates to 1 John 5:6 and we call that the somatic death of our Lord on the cross. The reason John emphasised the literal blood of Christ is because he lived long enough to see gnosticism consolidated into a philosophical system which was as devastating in John’s day as communism is today. The Gnostics claimed that Christ never had true humanity and that the cross was an optical illusion. And therefore John often wrote polemically under the ministry of the Spirit in order to refute this principle.

In somatic death irreversible changes begin at various rates after the cessation of breathing and these changes include the cooling off of the body and the development of muscular rigidity. Then follows the breakdown of the cells and the gravitation of the blood to dependent parts plus the clotting of the blood. This is important for this reason. When our Lord was first nailed to the cross there was a little bleeding from His hands and His feet but His blood almost immediately coagulated. He did not bleed to death.

Our Lord’s physical death had nothing to do with our salvation, except to indicate that it was finished. Our Lord had completed His saving work while He was still alive on the cross.

He used the Greek word in the present tense of telew, tetelestai: it has been finished in the past with the result that it stands finished forever. Salvation was finished when our Lord was still alive and able to speak. While He was still alive our sins were imputed to Him and judged; while He was still alive towards sin He accomplished redemption, toward man He accomplished reconciliation, toward God He accomplished propitiation. Redemption, reconciliation and propitiation are the three aspects of our Lord's saving work from the standpoint of direction. The Father had to be propitiated or there is no salvation. Sin had to be paid for or there is no salvation. And man has to be reconciled apart from his own works or there is no salvation. All were accomplished on the cross. The literal blood of Christ refers to His physical death on the cross but our Lord only died physically because His work was finished. It was the option He personally exercised. It is therefore the spiritual death of Christ which is important to us.

12 12/13/1981 Revelation 1:6a Royal family's privilege; innovation

Verse 6, The first thing that we notice in this verse is that God has a purpose for each one of us. It is not only a matter of principle but it becomes a matter of great application that we understand that God has given each one of us life on this earth after salvation for a purpose. His plan has meaning and definition for each one of us. So we begin the first part of this verse which is the privilege of the royal family. Our Lord is seated at the right hand of the Father, He is King of kings and Lord of lords as His royal title and He is minus a royal family. In His third royal patent there was no royal family. So we are called out as royal family and therefore as royalty we have privileges that have never existed before, one of which will be emphasised: each one of us is a priest. Another that will be emphasised: Never before in history was every believer the personal representative of God on earth: a royal ambassador. So we have not only these two warrants which are in writing but with them we are a part of a fantastic plan and it is our volition on a daily basis that is the determining factor in historical trends.

So we have the privilege of the royal family introduced by the connective conjunction kai, which relates this sentence to the previous one. Conjunctions are used in the Koine Greek for relationship. Then we have the aorist active indicative of the verb poiew which means here to bring about — “And he has brought about.” We have the culminative aorist tense which views the work of God in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. We fall into the historical flow of those existing results. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb as a result of His resurrection, ascension and session, when He received His royal patent as ruler of this world. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the formation of the royal family of God during the Church Age.

This is followed by a double accusative called the accusative of personal and impersonal object. The personal object is the accusative plural direct object from the personal pronoun egw, referring to each believer in Christ. With it we have the accusative of impersonal object from the noun basileia, basileia, which means royal power, it can also mean kingdom. The royal power is the divine dynasphere, God's game plan for the Church Age.

The word to "bring about" means to provide. Poiew means not only to produce, to make, or to do, but also to provide. So the translation so far: "And he has brought about (provided) for us a royal power." This royal power demands that we become aware of the fact of logistical grace. Once we accept Christ as saviour we move into God's plan, the believer in time. In time we face the issue of volition. You and I are the products of our own decisions, not our environment. Your attitude toward Bible doctrine is the determining factor and positive volition is the momentum of the Christian life in the divine dynasphere. Negative volition is the reversion of the Christian life in the cosmic system. In either case salvation is not lost but the blessings of prosperity of time, the prosperity of our national entity, and its proper influence on the world are all involved in this particular factor. So we find ourselves as individuals facing the issue of power, for in ourselves whatever our abilities may be we cannot cope with power greater than we are, we must simply, under the principle of humility, recognise its existence. Humility recognises the existence of the divine dynasphere with its eight gates, and the plan of God. We merge into a power greater than we are so that we can cope with the historical trends, and that includes prosperity. Many people have failed the prosperity test; many others have failed the disaster test, but in our lifetime we face both prosperity and disaster and the divine dynasphere is so constructed that we can pass both with flying colours. In the cosmic system of the genius of Satan we lose all of the benefits of that power and we come under a power which will grind us into the dust, will neutralise whatever assets we have — our abilities, our relationships, our love life, our social life, our business life, our professional life, whatever it is. We are offered so many things as a believer in the cosmic system.

So we have choices, and in order to make the proper choices God had to do something for us that He did not do in the Old Testament. That comes up in the next phrase. We now have the way we approach God's plan, the divine dynasphere. We have the accusative plural from the noun i(eureuj. I(eureuj is an accusative absolute, it is without a participle grammatically and therefore grammatically independent of the rest of the sentence. It is provided so that it can be proved that the Attic accusative absolute came into the Koine Greek of the New testament. It requires also a present active infinitive from the verb e)imi in order to fill in the ellipsis and make this a legitimate translation. So we translate: "And he has provided for us a royal power, priests to God." The dative singular indirect object brings us to God, "priests to God," Qeoj. With this we have the conjunction kai, translated "even," used to describe a specific member of the holy Trinity, God the Father. He is mentioned by the dative singular from the noun Pater, plus genitive of relationship from a)utoj, an intensive pronoun used as a personal pronoun because in the Koine Greek there is no third person personal pronoun and a)utoj is used as a substitute. We translate that phrase very simply: "even his Father."

The translation so far: "And he has provided [brought about for us] a royal power [the divine dynasphere], as priests to God, even his Father."

“Priests to God, even his Father” describes the royal power and the way we contact it. In this verse then is the divine dynasphere which can only be approached through the royal priesthood. The moment you believe in Christ you represent yourself before God, you are your own representative. You have a right to direct approach, you do not have to go to a clergyman or a priest or another individual, you have a direct relationship with God. It is true that relationship with God demands a tremendous amount of information and your cognisance of God whom you are approaching means that you must not only understand God and His plan for you but you must understand the very means by which you are approaching Him. You are approaching Him through your royal priesthood.

So we have this royal power and as we make decisions within its framework so goes the uptrend of history. Therefore the universal priesthood demands that each believer reside and function inside the divine dynasphere, the royal power, for himself, living his own life as unto the Lord. Every believer as a priest represents himself before God.

There is a principle of history which we will eventually study in greater detail: there is no progress in innovation without truth. Innovation without truth is retrogressive just as innovation without a system, without a base, is destructive. Innovation without a system runs the gamut from modern art, religious cults, rock and hard rock music, weirdo poetry that has neither rhyme nor reason, socialism, communism, the welfare state, redistribution of wealth, and even ladies high fashion and clothing. Religious cults are innovation without Bible doctrine; rock and hard rock music ignores the basic system in music, it avoids both melody and harmony and therefore the innovations are strident discord.

Learn the basics of doctrine before you innovate or make any multiple applications. For the principle, innovation without truth is the application of doctrine without cognisance of that doctrine. Innovation without a system is application without truth, the absence of wisdom, the instability and eventual disaster which we have been calling the downtrends of history. Innovation imposed on others without their consent runs the gamut from arrogance to tyranny in the field of human government and political science. Socialism, communism, the welfare state and redistribution of wealth are the innovations of arrogance and tyranny. Revolution and terrorism is the disaster of innovation without truth. Historically, then, innovation based on truth is progress, solution, and the historical uptrend of prosperity. Historically, innovation based on a false premise is the retrogressive downtrend of history leading to disaster and destruction of the client nation to God. Innovation in the field of military weapons is disastrous unless the basic weapons of warfare are first put into operation. This is why in this nuclear age the infantry is still the queen of battle. We are talking of course about nuclear missiles and when we do not even have decent infantry weapons for desert warfare it seems rather ridiculous to be innovative with regard to sophisticated nuclear weaponry.

True innovation in the spiritual realm is the function of gate four of the divine dynasphere. Perception of doctrine is the inflexible base for the flexible application of Bible doctrine. We must be inflexible about doctrine and totally flexible about its application. True innovation is the application of doctrine to experience — passing the momentum tests through categorical doctrinal perception, the function of impersonal love. All true innovation on the part of the believer has its operation in the royal priesthood and its application from the royal ambassadorship.

Next we have the purpose for the royal family of God, the Church Age believer. A dative indirect object from α)τοῖς, the intensive pronoun used as a personal pronoun, since the Koine Greek does not possess a personal pronoun for the third person. It is translated correctly, “to him.” The elliptical nature of the sentence demands a verb, “to him belongs.” That would be ε)ξω, used in its idiomatic form. The predicate nominative follows, ἡ(δόξα, translated here “glory” in view of the context we have previously studied, “to him is the glory.” Idiomatically it would be better translated, “belongs the glory.”

The objective is now stated. The next phrase explains the objective of the Christian way of life, the purpose for remaining in the devil’s world after salvation. He has provided for us a royal power, the divine dynasphere. We glorify the Lord Jesus Christ through our residence and function inside the divine dynasphere, the royal power for both the function of our universal priesthood and our royal ambassadorship. The means is given to us by the connective use of the conjunction καί which joins the two predicate nominatives. Then the second predicate nominative is κρατοῖς, meaning “power.” Usually it means ruling power and is often translated correctly, “sovereignty.” There are three words for “power,” κρατοῖς, ἰσχυρῶς, and δυνάμει, and are often very closely related. They all have one thing in common: they denote the presence of some form of force. They also denote the significance of strength, in this case ruling ability. And they always have the significance of strength rather than its ruling exercise. The prepositional phrase κατακρατοῖς was simply a Greek idiom translated with adverbial force and would be translated into English “powerfully, forcibly, or impressively.” Κρατοῖς was used politically to denote a valid and superior power. It indicates the fact that in life there will always be supremacy. Communism, socialism cannot establish equality in life. Equality in life is never a divine objective, it is freedom that established the principle of inequality. The very fact that people are free means that some will use their freedom to advance and some will use their freedom to decline. Human volition reaches the peaks and it reaches the pits, and that is the principle of historical trends. Generally in the New Testament κρατοῖς refers to God’s ruling power over the Church. Therefore it is a reference to the invention and use of the divine dynasphere as a part of the Christian way of life or the function of the royal family of God. There is a Greek phrase βασιλεία τοῦ θεοῦ which anticipates the second advent of Christ and the establishment of His Millennial reign and therefore is eschatological in its connotation. With κρατοῖς it would be something like this: “To him [Jesus Christ] belongs the controlling [or ruling] power forever and ever.” The noun κρατοῖς, then, has an historical connotation and it has a prophetic connotation.

Next comes the prepositional phrase, εἰς, plus the accusative of the definite article τοῖς, and αἰών, literally translated, with αἰών being repeated, “to the ages of the ages.” But it is an idiom and it means forever and ever. The final word is ἀ)μην. Since ἀ)μην is used to confirm a personal application of Bible doctrine it is going to be translated “acknowledge.” It is also used to confirm the believer’s acceptance of his responsibility, and here the responsibility is residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. Amen was never designed to be transliterated, except where it is used in ritual. It is to be translated.

Therefore A)mhn indicates the fact that the royal family can respond to a doxology, not as a ritual but as a challenge.

1981 Revelation

15 12/16/1981 Revelation 1:7a Jesus Christ: key to prophecy; clouds

Verse 7, Jesus Christ the key to prophecy. The exegesis is rather difficult at the start of this verse. We have the demonstrative particle i)dou. I)dou is a form of the aorist middle imperative of the verb o(raw which means to see and is used to demand perception. It is a call for concentration on the subject. We must remember that behind the translation is a mandate for concentration under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit, and that is utterly impossible unless you are residing inside the divine dynasphere.

Next comes the present middle indicative of the verb e)rxomai. The verb means to come. So the translation: "Remember, he is coming." The futuristic present tense denotes an event which has not yet occurred, the second advent, but is regarded as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as already coming to pass. Therefore the futuristic present denotes a future event, the second advent, as definitely a part of God's plan and definitely the key to future history. All future history revolves around our Lord Jesus Christ because in five minutes our Lord accomplishes at the second advent what all of the men of genius in all categories of genius were not able to accomplish in the history of the world up to that time. He provides, for example, the regathering of Israel and the re-establishing of Israel as a client nation to God. He fulfils the four unconditional covenants to Israel which man cannot fulfil. At the same time He provides perfect environment on the earth which is absolutely impossible today. The only thing that is accomplished in every generation of history is the fact that there never has been since the beginning of time a generation which was not evangelised; that is the most certain thing we can say about history. But the Lord Jesus Christ is going to make the most radical change in history at His second advent.

The middle voice of e)rxomai: the subject, Jesus Christ, participates in the results of the action, therefore we call it the direct middle. He supersedes Satan as the ruler of this world at the second advent when there will then be 1000 years of perfect environment. Note: There is no way that the world can be destroyed by man's use of nuclear weaponry. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of doctrine.

The prepositional phrase that follows is meta plus the genitive plural from the definite article plus the genitive plural from the noun nefelch. Nefelch means clouds. So: "Remember, he is coming with the clouds." Meta plus the genitive means "with."

The doctrine of the clouds

1. Clouds are used literally.

2. Clouds are used figuratively.

a. Clouds are used to portray great armies or masses of people in the Bible, Jeremiah 4:13, for example. Hebrews 12:1 is another. In Revelation 1:7 the clouds refer to great armies, the multitudes of people who accompany our Lord at the second advent.

b. Clouds symbolise a time of catastrophe, a time of divine judgment, Lamentations 2:1; Ezekiel 30:3. Revelation 1:7, "Behold he cometh with clouds." Those clouds with which our Lord comes indicate the doom of many nations. Nations should be removed when they are totally involved in the cosmic system. And when the cosmic system is destroyed at the second advent so will its adherents, national and individual. The second advent passages which mention these clouds are found in many places. These are tracts where we begin but we always end up in Revelation, Joel 2:1-2; Isaiah 44:22.

c. Clouds are used in the Bible for transitory things, things that are here today and gone tomorrow, like negative believers, like prosperity. Illustration: Job 30:15; Hosea 6:4.

d. Cloud formations also represent the power and the wisdom of God, Psalm 135:6,7; 147:8; Proverbs 8:28.

e. Clouds are used to illustrate the ignorance of man and his need for divine revelation, Job 38:37; 36:39; 37:15,16.

f. Clouds are used to portray false teachers, "clouds without water," 2 Peter 2:17.

g. Clouds without rain or water symbolise human promises without fulfilment, or the malfunction of human integrity, Isaiah 25:5, or Jude 12, "these men [reversionists involved in the cosmic system] are those who are stains in your love feasts when they feast with you without fear, carrying for themselves [subjectivity, arrogance, preoccupation with self — involvement in cosmic one] clouds without water," people without integrity, doctrine, "carried along by the winds," instability.

One of the principles of upswing in history has to do with the fact that most nations have become great and blossomed out into what is known as an empire, which is a good word, not a bad word. The first client nation in history was an empire: SPQR, the Roman empire. Some of the greatest client nations in history have been empires. Empire has only been out of sorts since the communists have had so much influence in the world but those who are good students of history know that every empire functions under the shadow of great missionaries. These include Great Britain as well as SPQR and even the USA. Therefore there is always a challenge to an amalgamation of people who leave a geographical area that is dead and move to another geographical area where there is a challenge. The challenge always falls into three separate parts. There is the part of the building of an empire in which you have a base of landed aristocracy. And there is always a part of a potential empire — manifest destiny — where you have the tremendous courage which it takes to develop an industrial sphere. Then there is always a frontier so that there are no racial issues, there are no sociological issues as we know it. If a person finds that he cannot exist in a capitalistic society he can always go to the frontier. Frontiers always take up the slack historically. But once the frontiers are closed down for one reason or another — no more land to conquer, no more opportunity — then the empire goes through its consolidation period which is its prosperity period. In all of world history there never was a national entity or an empire which passed the prosperity test. It may take one hundred years, never more than two hundred, but they always flunk it and are destroyed. This principle is generally a trend of history but what happens when you have an exception or an apparent exception? Russia was very similar in its development, only the empire went east instead of west. Again, northern Russia was the area of landed aristocracy that eventually managed to move into the industrial revolution and become a manufacturing area — large cities, industrial complexes, lots of workers. In the south there was still the landed concept only this time it was the peasant but he had his own landed aristocracy. All of this was destroyed when communism took to dissatisfaction in the south, the peasants should have more land. In the north there was an industrial complex and dissatisfied workers, same concept, and in the frontier there was the frustration which came up at the turn of the century with the Russo-Japanese war, in which the great massive Russian armies were beaten on land and three Russian navies were completely destroyed by the Japs. That is when Russia realised that they really had never consolidated in the industrial revolution, for every nation that truly succeeds and perpetuates its prosperity does so because of the industrial complex, not the landed aristocracy. The landed aristocracy eventually becomes anachronistic and loses out.

“every,” paj, this adjective indicates the entire human race alive at the Second Advent of Jesus Christ; “eye,” o)fqalmoj. While the earth is a sphere rotating on its axis every eye which is capable of sight will see the return of the Lord Jesus Christ. And while on the surface this appears to be impossible it will be explained after looking at the morphology of the verb “see,” o(raw, future middle indicative; “him,” a)utoj, accusative singular direct object. The intensive pronoun used as a personal pronoun. This is what we call a predictive future. It anticipates an event which is expected to occur in future time, i.e. the Second Advent of Christ. The direct middle voice is one in which the subject, the entire population of the earth at that time, participates in the results of the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of fact. It is a dogmatic fact that every eye will see Him. How is this possible?

The real answer is found in eleven passages of the Word of God. Zechariah 12:4 is a second advent passage: “ ... strike every horse [invading army] with blindness,” supernatural darkness. Cf. Isaiah 60:2 “ ... his glory will appear.” The glory of the Lord moving through a supernatural darkness will be the only visible thing. Cf. Ezekiel 32:7,8.

“and those,” kai plus o(stij. Lit. including everyone who; “pierced,” e)kkentew, which means to pierce, to run through, to throw a javelin through, to stab, etc. Lit. “including everyone who pierced him.” ... and all the kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him.” This translation is incorrect. This is a specific reference to the mourning of Israel at the Second Advent. It is not the mourning of the entire world, “kindreds,” fulh, “tribes.” These are Jewish tribes and the occasion is the regathering of Israel by our Lord Jesus Christ; “earth,” gh, “land.” It refers to the land of Israel and the regathering of Israel in the land; “shall wail,” koptw, “grieve.” “Will grieve.”

“because of him,” e)pi a)utoj about him rather than over Him. “Even so,” nai, a particle of agreement. With the final word “amen” it is, literally: “So it shall be. Acknowledge.”

Principles

1. No nation has ever survived its prosperity after the consolidation of its three components. The three prosperity components are as follows: Landed aristocracy; industrial complex; undeveloped frontiers.
2. Reason: This is because no prosperous nation or client nation to God in prosperity perpetuates its spiritual life through perception of doctrine and residence in the divine dynasphere[1]. The real environment for the perpetuation of prosperity is the divine dynasphere.
3. Prosperity inevitably results in neglect of truth or doctrine.
4. Therefore, people take the prosperity they received from and in the divine dynasphere and they step out for a holiday. They seek to enjoy what they gained from the divine dynasphere by taking their prosperity to the cosmic system.
5. In the cosmic system the believer becomes preoccupied with the results of prosperity rather than the origin. His life is wrapped up in pleasure, promotion, success, status symbols, etc.
6. The prosperity test is the most subtle and difficult of all tests.
7. Subtle because it requires as much, if not more doctrine, from both capacity and perpetuation of prosperity than anything else.
8. Too often prosperity becomes the enemy of right priorities or true scale of values.

9. Manifest Destiny: a. The struggle for freedom; b. The establishment of freedom (through military victory); c. Capacity for freedom (enjoyment); d. The test of freedom (prosperity).

10. The prosperity of the nation eventually destroys the nation.

11. The challenge of freedom is related to the three ingredients of manifest destiny. When all are consolidated into a single national entity or empire, freedom becomes secondary to prosperity and doctrine becomes secondary to pleasure. The true expressions of prosperity are freedom and doctrine, but the inevitable expressions of prosperity come from the cosmic system. It is possible to perpetuate prosperity under freedom but it is not probable for any length of time.

Hanukkah or holocaust: Which do you personally choose?

We celebrate the virgin birth of our Lord Jesus Christ, the beginning of His incarnation, His uniqueness in hypostatic union, on 25 December. No date is given in the Gospels. The question arises: How was the 25th December selected? It is based upon one of the greatest fights for freedom in all of human history, 167 BC, the deliverance through the Maccabaeans. The Jews were freed from the Hellenistic empire of Syria. In their celebration they selected a time for an eight day feast the first day of which was 25 December. The feast was called Hanukkah (The Feast of Lights), called in the Bible the Feast of Dedication. It was to be a great celebration in which certain things were to be accomplished: Instead of the Feast of the Sun God it would be called the Feast of Lights because light was to represent, first of all, the Messiah and, secondly, their freedom. And so on the first day of the celebration, 25 December, 163 BC, all of the people in Jerusalem began celebrating in their homes by exchanging gifts. And then as the High Priest formed up the parade they marched through the city with candles or torches or some form of light and sing hymns as they formed the gigantic procession that marched all of the way to the Temple. And there were offered sacrifices which are actually recorded in Revelation 1:8 under the phrase "Omega." They offered all five of the sacrifices which speak of our Lord's work on the cross and rebound of the believer to recover from the cosmic system. Each one would portray some aspect of redemption, reconciliation, or propitiation, which is of course the true meaning of Christmas for the real Christmas tree is the cross, and the real Christmas gift is the gift of eternal salvation through faith in our Lord Jesus Christ.

However, Christmas and New Year is not significant to Israel as we celebrate them. What is significant to them is Hanukkah, the Feast of Lights. They have a slightly different emphasis because they are looking for the coming of Messiah who hasn't come as far as Israel is concerned. And because they are still looking for the first advent they periodically throughout their history have selected for themselves some of the greatest historical disasters which we simply classify as "holocaust."

20 12/22/1981 Revelation 1:8a Abraham, Paul's testimony—Alpha, Omega

Verse 8, “I,” e)gw, a pronoun in the proleptic position, the emphatic position. It emphasises the Omega glory of our Lord Jesus Christ. It emphasises that Jesus Christ, eternal God, became true humanity. And when He did (hypostatic union), at that very moment He became the unique Person of all the universe; “am,” e)imi, the static present tense is for a position which perpetually exists and because of the first advent of Christ and resultant hypostatic union the omega glory of Jesus Christ enters history and becomes the key to history, the key to history for us as a nation collectively and the key to our destiny individually as a person. Our destiny is determined by our attitude to Jesus Christ. It is Israel’s failure collectively to recognise omega glory that led to their removal as a client nation.

“the,” to, this definite article is in the nominative neuter gender single. This is the generic use of the definite article which sets aside a category as being unique. This category is unique in history and is composed of one Person, our Lord Jesus Christ.

“Alpha and Omega,” Alpha is the designation of our Lord’s deity. Hence the alpha glory of Jesus Christ is related to the fact that Jesus Christ is God. It is related to His divine essence plus the fact that Jesus Christ is the creator of the world.

Omega, on the other hand refers to our Lord Jesus Christ in hypostatic union. Therefore the Omega glory of Christ is related to the first advent, what the Jews have ignored. It refers to the fact that historically He has come. The first advent of Christ includes His virgin birth, the hypostatic union, the residence of our Lord inside the divine dynasphere, His impeccability, His saving work on the cross, His resurrection, Ascension, and session at the right hand of the Father. At that time He received His omega glory. It is the royal patent which He received under the title of King of Kings and Lord of Lords.

Our Lord's first royal patent is related to His deity. His title is Son of God and His royal family is God the Father and God the Holy Spirit. Our Lord's second royal patent came at the point of His physical birth. He was Born a son of David. His title is Son of David, it is the title of royalty, the Davidic dynasty is the royal family of Israel. But when He was seated at the right hand of the Father after His resurrection He was given a royal patent but it did not carry with it a royal family. And therefore the discontinuing of the Age of Israel and the insertion of the Church Age, the dispensation of the royal family of God. So that you as a believer are not just a child of God, you are a member of the royal family of God. Being in this dispensation therefore carries great responsibility.

The Omega glory of Jesus Christ indicates that Jesus Christ controls history. This means that the Church Age is the dead spot as far as prophecy is concerned because it is the historical dispensation in which the royal family of Christ is being formed to return with Him at the second advent. We live then in a dispensation of no prophecy. Instead of prophecy we have something of great significance: historical trends. Historical trends in any given generation of the Church Age depend on the number of believers residing in an functioning inside the divine dynasphere, plus the size of the pivot of mature believers, plus the advance of believers to maturity. Church Age believers then reside between the two greatest prophetic events of history, the first and second advents of Christ. Jesus Christ in His omega glory becomes the key to our interpretation of history on a daily basis. We receive enough of this information from the media and ignore the slant they give to it and interpret the facts in relationship to the historical trends.

Historical blessing is administered through the client nations to God. Historical disaster results from a maximum number of believers living in the cosmic system. Historical disaster is usually administered through some evil nation.

Alpha and Omega glory of Christ; Moses

Verse 8, "the beginning and the ending" is not in the original manuscript.

Historical trends in any given generation of the Church Age depend on the number of believers residing and functioning in the divine dynasphere and the formation of the size of the pivot in this generation. Historical blessing is administered through the client nation of God while historical disaster results from a maximum number of believers living in the cosmic system. And historical disaster is administered by evil nations which are anti-God.

Principle

1. From His alpha glory Jesus Christ is the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

2. Therefore, the Jews have certain privileges related to their founding as a race since they are the last pure race of history.

(There is no such thing as a pure race any longer, including the Jewish race). The first was the 400 years of slavery which gave them the necessary discipline and character to exist as a client nation.

3. As the Alpha and the Omega Jesus Christ is the key to understanding Israel. In His alpha glory Jesus Christ is the God of Israel; in His omega glory Jesus Christ is the future ruler of Israel. He was born the ruler of Israel, He was born the Son of David.

4. The Jewish race then was founded on recognition of the omega glory of Christ, for Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were all believers in the Lord Jesus Christ and were able to relate their animal sacrifices to His future work on the cross.

5. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were born again through faith in Jesus Christ whom they recognised as their God, their saviour, and their king.

6. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob set a precedent for the Jewish race in their recognition of both the alpha and the omega glory of our Lord Jesus Christ. This precedent was perpetuated by Moses the founder of the client nation to God when he wrote in Deuteronomy: "Shama Israel, Adonai Elohenu, Adonai" Deuteronomy 6:4.

Translation: Hear, O Israel! Jehovah is our God, Jehovah is one (unique)!

Holocaust? Build or borrow strength

The Origin Of Disaster

There are two categories of disaster: natural and historical. Natural disaster includes earthquakes, tidal waves, hurricanes, floods, forest fires, volcanoes and so on. Historical disasters include military defeat, economic depression, famine, disease, degeneracy, crime, terrorism etc.

Trends in the Church Age are determined by whether the believer in Christ chooses to live in the divine dynasphere or Satan's cosmic system. The major issue in whether we survive as a nation is the volition of the individual believer.

There are no tragedies in history, only historical disasters. Historical disasters are not tragedies. Tragedies belong to drama; disaster belongs to history.

People individually and collectively are the products of their own decisions.

Human rights is never an issue, it is a cosmic system. It is freedom that is the issue, a Bible doctrine from the laws of divine establishment. Human rights is a system of taking over a country for tyranny.

One of the problems which many people have is putting people on a pedestal, hero worship. It is called borrowing strength. People who do that lose their perspective. No one is perfect. Borrowing strength is that form of weakness in which the believer resides in the cosmic system and in his arrogance he doesn't see his own failures but is constantly attacking the failures of some one else.

Question: How do you borrow strength and become weak? You make your social life with the wrong crowd. You take bad advice, using others as a crutch. (You gain strength by learning Bible doctrine; you borrow strength by leaning on others). You use some one else's scale of values rather than depending on your own.

Our first word is the connective use of the conjunction kai which has many uses. There are probably eighteen to twenty uses of this conjunction. Next we have a nominative singular from the adjective paj. The adjective indicates the entire human race alive at the second advent of Jesus Christ. With this we have a noun, the nominative singular subject o)fqalmoj, which means "eye," "and every eye." It is a reference to the entire population of planet earth at that time. While the earth is a sphere rotating on its axis every eye which is capable of sight will see the return of our Lord Jesus Christ. The verb is the future middle indicative of o(raw, which means to see. With this we have the accusative singular direct object from a)utoj, which is the intensive pronoun used as a personal pronoun. This is what we call a predictive future, it anticipates an event which is expected to occur at a future time, i.e. the second advent of Christ. The direct middle voice is one in which the subject, which is the entire population of the earth at that time, participates in the results of the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of fact. It is a dogmatic fact that every eye will see Him.

The question arises: How is this possible? Humanly speaking it is impossible for everyone to see the second advent of Christ. The real answer comes up in eleven passages of the Word of God, e.g. Zechariah 12:4, "every horse [invading army] with blindness." How are they all suddenly going to become blind? It can be accomplished as a miracle. It could also be accomplished in other ways, e.g. Isaiah 5:30; Isaiah 13:9,10, 11; 60:2, "and his glory will appear." The glory of the Lord moving through the supernatural darkness will be the only visible thing. Ezekiel 32:7,8.

Then we have a Koine "ism," the conjunction kai with the nominative masculine plural o(stij, o(stij, a relative pronoun, "including everyone who." Then we have the aorist active indicative of the verb e)kkentew, which means to pierce, to run through, to throw stab with a sword or spear, etc. The accusative which follows is the direct object a)utoj and it is translated "including everyone who has pierced him." This is a quotation from Zechariah 12:10. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist and it views the rejection of Christ as saviour in the Tribulation, the greatest period of evangelism in all of human history. It is regarded from the viewpoint of it existing results, the greatest rejection of Christ of all time. These are the ones who have pierced Him. The active voice: the unbelievers of the Tribulation produce the action of the verb, rejecting Christ under the greatest wave of evangelism of all time. The indicative mood is declarative for a statement of prophetic fact. Many thousands of people will reject Christ during the Tribulation even though they hear the greatest and soundest and most lucid gospel message of all time. And what a shock it will be to reject Christ as personal saviour and then see Him return to the earth.

There is one more phrase. It begins with the conjunction kai and it will be translated, “and all the tribes of the land will grieve about him.” We should note that this quotation is taken from Zechariah 12:11-14. In that passage we have a prophetic description of Israel’s grief at the second advent. There is personal regret and personal grief in the life of everyone who lives very long, but this is historical regret and grief. The background for Zechariah 12:11-14 is national mourning because of the death of King Josiah in battle. Josiah was one of the greatest warriors down toward the end of Judah as a client nation. He was in a great battle with Pharaoh Necho of Egypt. 2 Chronicles 35:22-27 describes the entire scene. First the war, then the strategic situation, and finally the tactical situation in which Josiah was killed. According to verse 11 of Zechariah twelve the national grief and lamentation occurred just outside of Jerusalem in the Valley of Megiddo. In the sequence of verses each category of Judah is described as participating in great lamentation over the death of Israel’s king and one of the greatest generals in the last part of their client nation history. For example, Zech. 12:12 is the mourning of the ruling house of Israel. He was so loved that even his family genuinely regretted his passing. In verse 13 he was mourned by the priestly line. He was such a great man that those involved in spiritual things missed him. In verse 14 all of the families of Israel mourned him. He was truly and rightly so a popular man.

Based on this information and background the translation in the King James version is incorrect, for this is a specific reference to the mourning of Israel at the second advent. It is not the mourning of the entire world. If it was not for Zechariah we would not be able to determine this.

Again we have the nominative plural from the adjective paj, but this time the subject noun is fulh, which with the generic definite article is translated “and all the tribes.” These are Jewish tribes and the occasion is the regathering of Israel by our Lord Jesus Christ. One of His first objectives is the regathering of Israel.

With this we have the descriptive genitive singular from the noun gh, which refers here to the land of Israel. It doesn’t even refer to the earth, it refers to the land. So it is “all the tribes of the land.” While it is true that the entire population of the earth sees the second advent this is a specific reference to the regathering of Israel in the land after the second advent. Israel is scattered today and the bulk of the people will be scattered, as per the fifth cycle of discipline administered in AD 70. So Israel is regathered at the second advent and the unbelievers and believers of Israel are all regathered — the parable of the wheat and the chaff. The unbelievers will be removed from the earth under the concept of the baptism of fire; the believers of Israel will enter the Millennial reign of Christ. The baptism of fire is going to remove all unbelievers so that the Millennium will begin, and world history will begin with perfect environment and there will be all believers.

In this passage we are dealing only with Israel. We have the future middle indicative of koptw, which in the active voice means to cut off, to cut down, to cut something off from something else. In the middle voice koptw means to beat one's chest in an act of mourning. Hence, to mourn, to express grief or sorrow in a very dramatic way. To grieve implies deeper mental suffering than to mourn. So we will translate this "grieve." The predictive future anticipates a specific event connected with the second advent of Christ. The indirect middle voice emphasises the agents as producing the action of the verb rather than participating in its results. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of Jewish grief at the second advent and restoration of Israel as a client nation to God.

Next we have a preposition e)pi, plus the accusative from the intensive pronoun a)utoj. The problem here is: What does e)pi mean? With the genitive it connotes contact. With the locative it connotes position. With the accusative it connotes direction. So it is correctly translated "about him" rather than "over him".

There is one more word, and that is the affirmative particle nai, a particle of agreement. It could be translated tamely, "quite true." But when we add nai to the final word a)mhn, this is meaningful only in literature. So when you say "Quite true, Amen," this is not quite correct. It means "So it shall be." And then "Amen" means "acknowledge." This is not transliterating, it is translating. In other words, why do we have this rather strange thing? Every time we have prophecy we don't have a)mhn. The reason is because this is the first prophecy in the book of Revelation to show you what the pattern will be. Prophecy is not to satisfy your curiosity, prophecy is designed to edify, to give spiritual momentum and growth, to give an understanding of the trends of history, to give orientation not only to personal life and circumstances but to the overall historical situation in the time in which we live. Therefore if the prophecy is understood then the significance of it will be understood in the context of the book and then in loco in Revelation chapter one.

This verse adds up to the fact that Jesus Christ is the key to prophecy, not Israel, not the Middle East, not human degeneracy, not historical disaster. As the key to prophecy Jesus Christ will be observed by the entire population of the earth at the second advent. We should also notice that as the eternal ruler of client nation Israel Jesus Christ will restore it. Israel cannot be restored until then. All the Jews gathered in the land for the fulfilment of the unconditional covenants to Israel are going to grieve. Israel failed to believe in Christ for salvation and lost their client nation status during the times of the Gentiles, which includes all the Church Age, plus the entire Tribulation. There are certain parables which describe this grief in terms of the baptism of fire, like the wheat and the tares, the ten virgins. In view of the great evangelism of the Tribulation there is no excuse for any Jew rejecting Jesus Christ as saviour. The rejection of Jesus Christ results in divine judgment and the removal of all unbelieving Jews from the earth. This alone is enough reason for the grief expressed by unbelievers. The grief of Jewish believers is different for they are expressing lamentation for the failure of Israel as a client nation to God. They are expressing not only their occupation with the person of Christ but patriotism also. And just as this verse expresses the fact that Jesus Christ is the key to prophecy so the next verse will express the doctrine that Jesus Christ is the key to history.

Translation: "Remember [behold, consider], he is coming with the clouds; and every eye shall see him, including everyone who has pierced him: and all the tribes of the land will grieve about him. So it shall be, I acknowledge it."

Principles

1. No nation has ever survived its prosperity after the consolidation of its three components.

The three prosperity components are as follows: Landed aristocracy, Industrial complex, undeveloped frontier.

2. This is because no prosperous nation or client nation to God in prosperity perpetuates its spiritual life through perception of doctrine and residence in the divine dynasphere.

3. Prosperity inevitably results in neglect of truth or doctrine.

4. Therefore, people take the prosperity they received from the divine dynasphere and in the divine dynasphere, and they step out of the divine dynasphere for a vacation. They seek to enjoy what they gained from the divine dynasphere by taking their prosperity to the cosmic system.

5. In the cosmic system the believer becomes preoccupied with the results of prosperity rather than the origin. His life is wrapped up in pleasure, promotion, success, status symbols, social life, sex, wealth, material things, etc.

6. The prosperity test is the most subtle and difficult of all tests for both the individual and the nation involved. That what this grieving is about in verse seven. People have selected the wrong thing and now they are grieving because they have made an irreparable mistake. That is the Tribulation. If you are still alive there is no such thing as an irreparable mistake for you as a believer. You will pay for it and you will suffer for it but it isn't irreparable as long as you're alive.

7. It is subtle because it requires as much if not more doctrine for both capacity and perpetuation of prosperity. It is subtle because it takes more doctrine to pass the test than anything else, and the prosperity test is difficult because you forget the origin of the prosperity.

8. Too often prosperity becomes the enemy of right priorities or true scale of values.

9. This ties in with manifest destiny. First there is a struggle for freedom, then there is the establishment of freedom through military victory. Thirdly, there is capacity for freedom and the enjoyment. Finally, there is the test of freedom — prosperity.

10. The prosperity of the nation eventually destroys the nation.

11. The challenge of freedom is related to the three ingredients of manifest destiny. You have something that is equivalent to a landed aristocracy, you have an industrial complex, and you have an undeveloped frontier. When all have consolidated into a single national entity or empire freedom becomes secondary to prosperity and doctrine becomes secondary to pleasure. When people are prosperous they start looking for pleasure and, as a matter of fact they create pleasure. When pleasure is created doctrine takes a back seat and so does freedom. So the true expressions of prosperity are freedom and doctrine but the inevitable expressions of prosperity come from the cosmic system, and that means pleasure. It is possible to perpetuate prosperity under freedom but it is not probable for any length of time. Start with the old sin nature and you have your first cause, but it requires a large pivot of mature believers, it requires consistent positive volition toward doctrine for that prosperity to be perpetuated. As goes the believer so goes the client nation.

The Beggar's Song: Christmas, true/false

“Christmas is a coming and the geese are getting fat.” Fat geese were the sign of prosperity and it reminds the partying and social crowd in their time of prosperity that they should take some time to be a part of a con game. And in this line of the song the beggar is saying: You won't have fun at Christmas, you won't enjoy your party unless you give poor little me a little money. And you should be ashamed of yourself anyway because you have so much and I have nothing. The beggar's self-pity is a manifestation of his arrogance and at the same time an appeal to give on the basis of emotion and sentiment.

Christmas often becomes very emotional and very sentimental and therefore the emphasis of Christmas is thereby destroyed. For if your capacity for life is related to emotion and sentiment you have nothing. Love and the power of love is based upon thought. Thought is Bible doctrine. The emotional person feels his way through life and is very miserable, and those who have doctrine and the power of doctrine have the finest and most refined and purified emotions and sentiment in the world and therefore will enjoy Christmas or any other season.

The rich man should be exploited is the theme of that song, The Beggar's Song. The rich man should be exploited at Christmas. Christmas in the beggars mind is the redistribution of wealth. Add to this the false rationale that you should give to the beggar because it is Christmas is absolute nonsense. You should give from honourable motivation and integrity, never because of a guilt complex.

The second line: "Please to put a penny in the old man's hat." First of all the beggar is made to look old and therefore tragic. His hat is, of course, a squalid piece of material and the whole thing is to arouse your pity. This line is designed to give those who have fat geese a guilt complex as motivation for giving. The whole function of liberalism and cosmic thinking is to make those who have been successful in free enterprise feeling guilty because they have and others have not. This is one of the great evils of arrogance. The greatest arrogance in the world is found in the gutter and the most arrogant people are scum.

"If you haven't got a penny, a half-penny will do." The beggar implies that at least you have something while he has nothing. It is an erroneous implication. In reality the beggar is a con artist who is rich from the exploitation of Christmas.

"If you haven't got a half-penny then God bless you." And there is the greatest sarcasm of this song. The beggar cannot hide his arrogance, it shows in his sarcasm. In his own way he has found a way without capital to make money. Those who appear to have nothing are often the most arrogant in life. Arrogance is found in the slums as well as in the Manor. And, furthermore, the beggar hates you whether you give him anything or not. And he now expresses his lack of integrity. He is a beggar because he has no integrity, no honour. If you give, you are a sucker to be hated and you should be fleeced is his attitude. If you do not give you are exploiting the people and therefore he despises you. The beggar is preoccupied with himself, he lives in the cosmic system, he expresses his hatred from behind a facade of religiosity. (God bless you is in reality God damn you).

The Beggar's Song then expresses the sentimental, superficial, arrogant side of Christmas in contrast to the spiritual side of Christmas. You cannot enjoy Christmas by "becoming spiritual" and coming to church one night. Those who enjoy Christmas are those who have consistently, day by day, taken in Bible doctrine and functioned under the principle of the divine dynasphere.

The issue of verse 8 is Hanukkah or holocaust. Which do you personally choose? The issue will be developed first through exegesis, and along with it, interpretation. But let's first of all define our terms. We celebrate the virgin birth of our Lord Jesus Christ, the beginning of his incarnation, His uniqueness in hypostatic union, on 25 December. But our Lord could have been born almost anytime during the year except possibly summer in Palestine. Everything that is descriptive of our Lord's birth is given in the various gospels but there is one thing that is omitted: no date is given. The question arises: How did Anglo-Saxon culture, Western European culture, ever come to select the 25th December. The answer is very simple. It is based upon one of the greatest fights for freedom in all of human history. It is based upon the principle of freedom through military victory.

It all started on 25 December in BC 167, approximately 170 years before the birth of our Lord Jesus Christ. It began when a great army just prior to 25 December had invaded and come into the land of Israel. It was an army of one of the most powerful rulers in the world. When Alexander the Great died his great empire was divided among his generals and eventually the age of Hellenistic monarchies came into being with four major powers. The most powerful of all is called Syria, though by modern standards the Syria of today and the Syria of 167 BC are two different countries. For Syria in that day was an empire that went all of the way from India to the borders of Egypt. Antiochus the Fourth, known as Antiochus Epiphanes, came into the land of Israel with his army, and he set up a simultaneous date in which he was going to convert the Jews to Hellenistic culture. The sign of conversion would be the offering of pigs on altars throughout the land. The pig, of course, being unclean as an animal to Israel but was the traditional offering of the Greeks. Under pagan Greek rites and festivals they were going to have the great festival of the sun god. The soldiers went into the temple, drove the people out — except those who would be left behind to observe what they would do thereafter — and they began to offer pigs. There was a protest in the temple in Jerusalem at which point children were seized and offered on the altar.

Throughout the country this was occurring simultaneously, including a smaller town called Modin, and when the very weak priest of Modin agreed to the general officer who was in charge to go ahead and offer a pig there stepped forward a man by the name of Matthias and drew a sword. He killed the priest first (there would be no offering), then he killed the general, and then when the general's body guard attacked him several of his sons stepped forward, including the best swordsman of all, Judas Maccabaeus. The five sons of Matthias plus Matthias wiped out the entire army detachment that had been sent to the village. They picked up their weapons, asked for volunteers, and the war for freedom had begun. It lasted for three years. Matthias died but Judas Maccabaeus, his son, carried on in his place. He turned out to be a genius, first at guerrilla warfare, and eventually at conventional warfare. As a result of four major battles in those three years he defeated all of the great generals of the day. Finally, peace came and freedom. The Jews were freed from the tyranny of the Hellenistic empire called Syria.

In their celebration they selected a time for an eight-day feast, the first day of which was to be 25 December. They called this eight-day feast Hanukkah, the feasts of lights called in the Bible the feast of dedication. It was to be a great celebration in which certain things were to be accomplished. Instead of the feast of the sun god it would be called the feast of lights because light was to represent, first of all, the Messiah, and secondly, their freedom. And so on that first day of the celebration — 25 December, 163 BC — all of the people in Jerusalem began by celebrating in their homes, exchanging gifts. When the high priest formed up the parade they marched through the city and as they did the people came out of their homes with candles or torches or some form of light, and they would sing hymns as they formed up a gigantic procession that marched all the way to the temple. There were offered sacrifices which are actually recorded in Revelation 1:8 under the phrase "Omega," for they offered all five of the sacrifices which speak of our Lord's work on the cross and rebound of the believer to recover from the cosmic system. Each one would portray some aspect of redemption, reconciliation or propitiation, which is of course the true meaning of Christmas — or the real Christmas tree is the cross. The real Christmas gift is the gift of eternal salvation through faith in our Lord Jesus Christ. And so they had their great procession that night and they spent the night in rejoicing over their new freedom. This was repeated on a smaller scale all of the way through the 1st of January.

In the course of this it was decided by western European culture, since these things were so significant — freedom through military victory, salvation through our Lord Jesus Christ — to combine these into a celebration of the first advent of Christ: the incarnation, the virgin birth. This is all very significant to you and to me but it is not significant at all to Israel; that is, Christmas as we celebrate it. What is significant to them is Hanukkah, the feast of lights. They have a slightly different emphasis because they are looking for the coming of Messiah. Messiah hasn't come as far as Israel is concerned and they are looking for His coming. And because they are looking for the first advent they periodically throughout their history have selected for themselves some of the greatest of disasters which we simply classify as the holocaust.

Why the holocaust? Why do the Jews suffer periodically the most terrible persecutions? We know through Genesis 12:1-3 and other passages of the Word of God that anti-Semitism will always be punished. Gentiles often suffer a counter holocaust because of their attitude toward the Jews. We have no right to punish the Jews. The right to punish Israel belongs to God, and in His wisdom only God can do it in perfect justice. Therefore we accept Jews into our land. They make wonderful citizens on the whole.

In verse 8 we have two principles: Jesus Christ is the key to history and the principle of Omega glory: do you accept it or reject it? From that comes a sub principle: as goes the believer so goes the client nation to God. The words “the beginning and the ending” found in the KJV are not found in the original MSS, they were added erroneously.

We begin with the nominative singular subject from the first person singular pronoun e)gw. It is our first word, therefore it receives great emphasis. It emphasises the Omega glory of our Lord Jesus Christ. It emphasises that Jesus Christ, eternal God became true humanity. When He did, at that very moment He became the unique person of all the universe. So we have the word “I.” Next comes the present active indicative of the verb e)imi, “I am.” It should be noted that the static present tense is for a condition which perpetually exists, and because of the first advent of Christ and resultant hypostatic union, taken for granted as a fact by the static present, the omega glory of Jesus Christ enters history and becomes the key to history, the key to history for us as a nation collectively and the key to your destiny individually as a person. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of doctrine related to the Omega glory of our Lord Jesus Christ. This is the beginning of Omega glory. It is Israel's failure collectively to recognise Omega glory that led to their removal as a client nation.

The predicate nominative which follows is preceded by a definite article to in the nominative neuter singular. This is the generic use of the definite article, it sets aside a category as being unique. This category is unique in history, it is composed of one person, our Lord Jesus Christ — “I am the.” Then we have a double predicate nominative. First of all we have alpha and then omega. Alpha in the Greek, Alfa, and then W, omega. This is the declaration. Alpha is the first letter of the Greek alphabet which is derived from the Phoenician alphabet. Alpha is the designation of our Lord's deity, Hence the Alpha glory of our Lord Jesus Christ is related to the fact that Jesus Christ is God, coequal and co-eternal with God the Father and God the Holy Spirit. The Alpha glory of Jesus Christ is related to His divine essence, His integrity, plus the fact that Jesus Christ is the creator of the world. All of the attributes of deity belong to our Lord Jesus Christ and none of them were in any way compromised by the hypostatic union. So when Jesus Christ says, "I am the Alpha" He is referring to the fact of His deity. Omega, on the other hand, refers to our Lord Jesus Christ in hypostatic union, therefore the Omega glory of Christ is related to the first advent. The Omega glory is what the Jews have ignored. It refers to the fact that historically he has come. There were to be two advents of Christ, the Jews only recognise one, the one where He comes in His glory. The first advent of Christ includes His virgin birth, the hypostatic union, the residence of our Lord inside the prototype divine dynasphere, His impeccability, His saving work on the cross, His resurrection, ascension and session at the right hand of the Father. At that time He received His Omega glory. It is the royal patent which He received under the title of King of kings and Lord of lords.

The Omega glory of Jesus Christ indicates that Jesus Christ controls history. This means that the Church Age is the dead spot as far as prophecy is concerned because it is the historical dispensation in which the royal family of God is being formed to return with Him at the second advent. We live, then, in a dispensation of no prophecy. No prophecy means a dead spot. Instead of prophecy we have something of great significance, something that means you can tell what is going to happen in the immediate future without having the gift of prophecy — for the gift of prophecy was discontinued when the canon of scripture was completed, it was a temporary spiritual gift like the gift of tongues and designed to take up the slack in a certain area until the canon of scripture was completed and then it was discontinued. The gift of tongues was related to evangelism; the gift of prophecy was related to historical interpretation, orientation to one's time in which he lived. But these things are now gone. Once Revelation was completed those things were removed.

Historical trends in any given generation of the Church Age depend on the number of believers residing and functioning in the divine dynasphere and the formation of the size of the pivot. As over against that we have the detrimental end of the trend which is the number of believers in the cosmic system — the number of believers wrapped up in their own lives to the point where they have ignored the plan of God. This adds to the shrinking of the pivot and historical disaster. It is volition that determines environment, not environment volition.

"I am the Alpha and the Omega."

Principle

1. From His Alpha glory Jesus Christ is the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.
2. Therefore the Jews have certain privileges related to their founding as a race, since they are the last pure race in history. Every race was formed before Abraham was circumcised.

It was the circumcision of Abraham that changed him from a Gentile to the first Jew. He is therefore the father of the Jewish nation.

The Jews had certain privileges which came out of the uniqueness of their race but their first privilege was four hundred years of slavery. It was the four hundred years of slavery that gave them the necessary discipline and character to exist as a client nation to God from BC 1440 to AD 70. They were conditioned by four hundred years of slavery. They did not die in slavery; they were not destroyed by slavery. All of their genius and greatness was linked to humility and self-discipline so that it could be exploited in their magnificent history.

3. As the Alpha and the Omega Jesus Christ is the key to understanding Israel. In His Alpha glory Jesus Christ is the God of Israel. In His Omega glory Jesus Christ is the future ruler of Israel; He was born the ruler of Israel; He was born the Son of David — He is in the Davidic line. He is royalty, then, from His Omega glory. He is the ruler of Israel, and not only so, but the royal patent which He received at the right hand of the Father guarantees He is also the ruler of the world. The royal patent our Lord received at the right hand of the Father was not connected with Israel, Israel had rejected Him: “He came unto his own and his own received him not.” In His Omega glory Jesus Christ is the ruler of the world; in His Omega glory He came. But the Omega glory has two ends as far as history is concerned. The virgin birth made Him the ruler of the Jews; His ascension and session at the right hand of the Father made Him the ruler of the Gentiles, just before the times of the Gentiles would begin. Both of these royal titles merge to be claimed at the second advent.

4. The Jewish race, then, was founded on recognition of the Omega glory of Christ, for Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were all believers in the Lord Jesus Christ and were able to relate their animal sacrifices to His future work on the cross. Even though the first advent and the work of the cross was future they recognised it as the basis of their salvation and the prophecy was just as real to them, though unfulfilled at the time, as their circumstances historically were.

5. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were “born-again” through faith in Jesus Christ whom they recognised as their God, their saviour, and their King.

6. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob set a precedent for the Jewish race in their recognition of both the Alpha and the Omega glory of our Lord Jesus Christ. This precedent was perpetuated by Moses, the founder of the client nation to God, when he wrote Deuteronomy 6:4-6.

We are going to see that the problem with Israel has always been the same: the failure to recognise the Omega glory of Jesus Christ. His Alpha glory they accepted; His Omega glory they rejected. Yet the very foundation of the Jewish race, the circumcision of Abraham, and the very foundation of Israel as the first and inevitably the last client nation to God, is based upon the principle found in Deuteronomy chapter 6, verses 4-6. The Jews who reject Christ as saviour can never distinguish between prophecies of the first advent and prophecies of the second advent, which means that they have a blind spot. Rejection of the God of Israel inevitably puts the Jew inside the cosmic system. We live today in the Church Age, which is the dead spot, and they are especially vulnerable in the dead spot because they have a blind spot to go with the dead spot. The Church Age is the dispensation of historical trend; there is no prophecy in the Church Age. The two greatest prophecies in history are on each side of the Church Age: the first advent of Christ which is now history by which our so great salvation was accomplished; the second advent.

We now move on to where we see, first of all, our Lord at present. In other words, one articular present active participle from the verb e)imi to delineate the Omega glory of the Lord Jesus Christ. This is the verb to be and is translated “who is.” The definite article is used as a relative pronoun to convert the participle into a relative clause. The static present tense represents a condition which is assumed as perpetually existing, our Lord in hypostatic union and/or His Omega glory, His third royal patent. The active voice: Jesus Christ in His glorified state seated at the right hand of God the Father in a resurrection hypostatic union produces the action of the verb, and the participle is circumstantial for the Omega glory of our Lord Jesus Christ at the right hand of the Father.

That is the key to the Church Age. It refers to the status of our Lord at the present time which is quite different from what happened prior to the virgin birth, united forever with His deity in perfect true humanity. This makes Him different from the Father and the Spirit because He possesses perfect true humanity; it makes Him different from humanity in that He is eternal and infinite God. This is the present status quo. Add to the fact of His Omega glory or the issuing of the third divine patent the basic reason for the discontinuing of the Age of Israel and the insertion of the Church Age, the calling out of a royal family. Also it gives every believer a mission that never existed prior to the Church Age: never before in history has the life of the individual believer inside of a given nation been so significant as it is in this dispensation — as goes the believer’s volition on a daily basis so goes the client nation.

Next we have our Lord in the past, His Alpha glory. First we have the connective use of the conjunction kai, then we have the nominative singular from the definite article used with the indicative in the pattern of Ionic Greek. We suddenly switch after all this time. John demonstrates his education, he was a well-educated Jewish aristocrat. He now moves over to some Ionic Greek. The definite article with the indicative is not Attic Greek, or what we call Classical Greek; it is not Koine Greek, it is Ionic Greek. This is a peculiar phrase which belongs to the most brilliant minds in western Turkey. Why did he switch to Ionic Greek? Every line of the Word of God is written under the filling of the Holy Spirit. God uses the individual personality of the writer, and so He does in this case. Here is a man who goes from the smoothness of his Koine Greek to this magnificent Ionic phrase because there is no way in human language to communicate the greatness of God. Jesus Christ always existed, there never was a time when He didn’t exist. He was always perfect, always unchangeable; He always had perfect integrity, perfect power. He is greater than space; He is greater than time. So how are you going to say it? You switch languages. John switched languages to emphasise the Alpha glory of Jesus Christ — His eternal glory. So we have the definite article with the imperfect active indicative of e)imi. We translate this phrase, “and always existed.” because the progressive imperfect of description represents linear aktionsart in past time. Therefore Jesus Christ is God, eternal God, and this is His Alpha glory and always has been. Under the doctrine of immutability He has never changed and cannot change His deity, therefore the taking on of humanity. The active voice: Jesus Christ as eternal God produces the action of the verb, and the declarative indicative is for a fact that Jesus Christ is eternal and infinite God.

This becomes a very important concept because when you have a circumstantial present participle followed by an Ionic phrase you have to stop long enough to take a look at it. Why this sudden change of language apart from the fact that we are now speaking of Jesus Christ as God before the virgin birth when He became the God-Man? We are speaking of His Alpha glory before His Alpha glory merged into His Omega glory through the virgin birth. The circumstantial present active participle from e)imi again represent His Omega glory which includes being honoured with the seat at the right hand of the Father and being given His third royal patent, His battlefield royalty for the angelic conflict. So the conferring of this patent of royalty is the basis for the interrupted dispensation of Israel which is to be completed in the Tribulation. The terminating event of the dispensation of Israel is the second advent; the terminating event of the Church Age is the Rapture, which occurs before the second advent. Therefore the insertion of the Church Age for the purpose of the calling out of the royal family of God. Added to our Lord's eternal glory, which is Alpha, is His historical glory, Omega, the hypostatic union. So by changing the language John is saying, 'Look, you didn't know our Lord in His Alpha glory, that was before man existed, but the One who has Alpha glory you know under the concept of His Omega glory for He is the revelation of God — our Lord Jesus Christ, the God of Israel.' Ionic Greek says, here is a language that can be best explained from its grammar the fact that Jesus Christ always existed as God. But what is important now from AD 96 until the end of time is that everything in a world history textbook must talk about Jesus Christ.

While the royal family of God or the bride of Christ is being formed all prophecy stops and historical trends becomes God's plan for the Church Age. The believer's influences are absolutely fantastic for the uptrend or downtrend. When you find a maximum number of believers residing and functioning inside of the divine dynasphere with its eight gates you have an uptrend in history; when you find believers living in the cosmic system then you have a downtrend in history.

Then there is a third description of our Lord, the second advent description, the revelation of His Alpha and Omega glory. Again we have the connective use of the conjunction kai, translated "and," and the articular present active participle from the verb e)rxomai, "and who is to come." We leave the Ionic Greek and go back to the Koine Greek. The nominative singular definite article is used for both a personal pronoun and a relative pronoun. The futuristic present tense denotes an event which has not yet occurred, the second advent, but is regarded as so certain in thought that it is contemplated as already coming to pass. The futuristic present is that marvellous way in the Greek of describing history before history occurs, with the absolute certainty that it will occur. The active voice: Jesus Christ in both His Alpha and Omega glory produces the action this time. We see the action of the first participle produced by His Alpha glory, the action of the Ionic Greek, His Alpha glory; now we have His Alpha and Omega glory which are the producers of the action. Again we have a circumstantial participle for the revelation of our Lord's Alpha glory, His deity; the Omega glory, His hypostatic union, at the second advent of Christ.

There are two more words in this verse in the Greek, a definite article o(plus the noun, a nominative of apposition, pantokratwr, which means all-powerful one or the omnipotent one, or the total ruler would be a better translation today. Pantw comes from paj, meaning "all"; kratoj means a ruler, a sovereign. It could be translated "all-ruler" or "total ruler." The Lord Jesus Christ is the total ruler. The omnipotence is a divine attribute related to God's perfect and infinite power and therefore related to the Alpha power of Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ will rule during the Millennium, both in the power of His Alpha glory (His omnipotence) and in the power of His Omega glory which is related to the impeccability and the integrity of the residence of His humanity in the prototype divine dynasphere. Therefore we translate it "the total ruler." It is a compound noun and it occurs numerous times in the book of Revelation. In his context, then, we have the translation "total ruler" or "sovereign" and, of course, since Jesus Christ will rule planet earth as the God-Man, the Son of God, and the Son of David; ruling both Israel and all Gentile nations in the future, this is the best translation.

Translation of verse 8, "I am the Alpha and the Omega, proclaims the Lord, the God who is, who was, and who is to come, the total ruler."

Principle

1. Billions of years ago in eternity past eternal God, Jesus Christ, possessed the Alpha glory of His deity, and since the incarnation and His first advent our Lord possesses the Omega glory of His hypostatic union.
2. Omega glory includes the true humanity of Christ in hypostatic union, which means that Jesus Christ in His humanity is not only the Son of David, His second patent of nobility, but He has a third patent of royalty which was given at the right hand of the Father: "King of kings and Lord of Lords."
3. The Omega glory of Christ has been a stumbling block to the unbelieving Jew who through his negative volition has rejected Christ as his personal saviour.
4. So we have Hanukkah or holocaust, and every unbelieving Jew chooses holocaust, for the big blot-out leads to holocaust and holocaust ignores and rejects the first advent of Christ under the principle of grace before judgment. The holocaust is a judgment administered by God through the most evil organisation in the world historically at that time.
5. The Omega glory of Christ has been ignored and rejected with all other aspects of the first advent: Jesus Christ as the Son of God: Alpha glory; Jesus Christ as the Son of David: Omega glory, all in one Person forever.

The doctrine of historical trends

Historical trends are based upon the fact that the two most important prophetic acts of history are the first and second advents of our Lord Jesus Christ. The Old Testament prophecies about the first advent have been fulfilled in detail. The alpha glory of our Lord Jesus Christ as eternal God became the omega glory of our Lord Jesus Christ in hypostatic union, beginning with the virgin birth. Then His resurrection, ascension and session after His death. And at the right hand of the Father He received His third royal patent. The book of Revelation is also the history of how our Lord's royal patent relates to mankind from the time of the Church Age to the end of time. It is the story of our Lord's royal patent in history.

Because of the third royal patent, the battlefield royalty, our Lord did not have a royal family as in His two previous royal patents. With regard to His royal patent of deity He had a royal family, God the Father, God the Holy Spirit. With regard to His royal patent at the point of His birth He was born a king in the dynasty of David, He was descended from two sons of David through Bathsheba — Solomon and Nathan. Joseph, His stepfather, was descended from Solomon and the younger son of David and Bathsheba, Nathan, is in the direct line of Mary.

But once He received this patent and did not have a royal family the Age of Israel was discontinued until the royal family could be called out. This is the dispensation of the royal family called the Church Age; the royal family is called the body of Christ and is composed of all believers in Jesus Christ in this dispensation. The royal family is being formed during this dispensation. Therefore, this dispensation is the dispensation of no prophecy. This is the dead spot in history. No prophecy, only historical trends. During the Church Age there will be no client nation Israel.

The doctrine of historical trends.

1. Even though history is the record of man's decisions and actions it is Jesus Christ who controls history. Therefore there are two sources of judgment in history: the sovereign decisions of our Lord Jesus Christ and the erroneous decisions of mankind.

2. The trends of history are determined in the Church Age by whether the believer in Christ chooses to live in the divine dynasphere or the cosmic system. Living in the divine dynasphere is broken down into two mandates under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit: "Be filled with the Holy Spirit" — entrance into the divine dynasphere; "Keep walking by means of the Spirit" — functioning at Gate Two, basic impersonal love; Gate Three, enforced and genuine humility; Gate Four, perception and application of doctrine [momentum gate]; gate five, love of God; Gate Six, right man right woman; Gate Seven, advanced impersonal love; Gate Eight is maturity.

For the believer who fails there is always a downtrend in history, living in cosmic one with its twenty six gates of interlocking systems of arrogance or cosmic two with its nine gates of interlocking systems of hatred. Mandate for cosmic one: "Grieve not the Spirit"; mandate for cosmic two: "Quench not the Spirit." The trends are determined by where you reside. In other words: As goes the believer so goes the nation.

3. There are no tragedies in history. There are historical disasters but these are not tragedies since individuals and nations are the products of their own decisions, not their environment. (Decision creates environment, not environment decision).

4. People individually and collectively are the products of their own decisions.

5. The demand for power exceeds the need for power.

6. Arrogant people or arrogant nations never see their own inconsistencies, only the inconsistencies of others.

7. Jealous people and envious nations never see their own sins and their own production of evil, only the sins and evil of others.

8. Arrogant individuals, groups or nations never see the disastrous consequences or evil results of their cosmic involvement or evil modus operandi. And preoccupation with self to the exclusion of objective reality is the greatest blindness problem in life.

9. There is no progress and innovation without truth. Innovation without truth is retrogressive; innovation without a system is destructive. Innovation without truth is application of doctrine without cognisance of doctrine; innovation without a system is application without truth, the absence of wisdom, the instability and eventual disaster in downtrends of history.

Principles

1. Innovation imposed on others without their consent runs the gamut from arrogance to tyranny.

2. Socialism, communism, the welfare state, and redistribution of wealth are innovations of arrogance and tyranny.

3. Revolution and terrorism is the disaster of innovation without truth.

4. Historically innovation based on truth is progress, solution, and a historical uptrend to prosperity.

5. Historically, innovation based on a false premise is the retrogressive downtrend of history leading to the disaster and destruction of the client nation to God.
6. Innovation in the field of military weapons is disastrous unless the basic weapons of warfare are first put into operation. This is why in this nuclear age the infantry is still the queen of battle.
7. True innovation in the spiritual realm is the function of Gate Four of the divine dynasphere. Perception of doctrine is the inflexible base for flexible application of doctrine — the dynamics of innovation. The perception is inflexible; the application is very flexible.
8. True innovation is the application of doctrine to experience. Passing the momentum tests through categorical doctrinal perception, the function of impersonal love, the function of the faith-rest drill, occupation with the Person of Jesus Christ.
9. False innovation is the believer's application to life from residence and function in the cosmic system. The cosmic system provides a base for cosmic innovation.
10. All true innovation on the part of the believer has its base of operation in the royal priesthood and its application in the royal ambassadorship.
11. When people emphasise peace and security they lose freedom and truth, and its by-product of prosperity and self-determination.

Now what really is truth and freedom? Truth is the inflexible base: laws of divine establishment, the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, Bible doctrine for the believer — this is truth, an inflexible base on which you have the flexibility of innovation. The innovation is freedom.

- a. The laws of divine establishment emphasise human freedom as the heritage from God and the major issue in the angelic conflict.
- b. In this historical era of nuclear phobia and its bomb syndrome, man has come to emphasise peace as a panacea and compromised the true concept of freedom. Peace is only emphasised by those with a false sense of values. Either you emphasise freedom in your soul or you emphasise security. There are two basic scales of value in life: a scale of value which is built on security and a scale of values based on freedom. There can be no compromise. If you go with freedom then God is the source of your security, not some man-made structure that you plan out.
- c. Yet freedom, not peace, remains the most precious commodity of mankind, and the function of self-determination a part of human heritage of truth from God. (You may as well face it, if you are going to go for freedom then you are going to have to war; you have to fight for freedom periodically. If you are going to go for security then “peace at any price”) d. Freedom and truth cannot be divorced except by man's use of his freedom to reject truth, in three categories. Good decisions are related to doctrine and the more decisions you make for doctrine the greater become your options in life.

e. When man uses his freedom to reject truth he finds himself deluded by the false prophet, the false politician, for demon and demagogue combine to deceive. Jer. 6:13,14. "When pressure comes [anxiety and anticipation of disaster] they will seek peace but will find none" — Ezekiel 7:25. When historical pressure begins to build up and moves toward disaster people call for "peace." Compromise to potential enemies, "Let's be friends, let's disarm"! That is what happens to those who make security their scale of values rather than freedom. Peace at any price is the compromise of man's most valuable asset — freedom. When a nation sells its freedom for a mess of pottage called "peace" it loses everything. It loses freedom, truth, true security from God, prosperity and, of course, peace. Peace is that elusive intangible which the compromise of freedom for false security of peace inevitably results in the loss of client nation status.

12. History is often the story of how the weak control the strong. Weak, insecure, irresponsible, thoughtless, arrogant people control policy, procedure and people. In social life, in love life, in business life, in professional life, in culture, in government, etc. Through arrogance, self-centredness and preoccupation with self the weak in society actually dominate the strong. This is the historical downtrend.

Inside the divine dynasphere the battle is the Lord's, and you win. Inside the cosmic system the battle is yours, and you lose. There are no winners in the cosmic system, just categories of losers. There are no losers in the divine dynasphere, just categories of winners.

13. Human history is the narrative of man's weakness, not his strength.

This combines such concepts as the demand for power exceeds the need for power; decisions create environment, not environment decisions; people individually and collectively are the products of their own decisions. And there would be no human history without man's wrong decisions, as illustrated by the fact that man in perfect environment had no problems until they made a wrong decision. Once Adam ate of the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil history became a matter of self-determination, the use of human volition to exercise options in the soul.

The historical trends of the Church Age, therefore, include options — options compatible with the divine plan which is residence and function inside the divine dynasphere, or options related to Satan's cosmic system.

a. Weakness implies problems plus the inability to cope with those problems.

b. Those who seek solutions by improving their environment inevitably create problems which destroy their environment.

- c. Through living inside the divine dynasphere circumstances become the servant rather than the master.
- d. Good decisions turn problems into solutions without creating or intensifying problems from those solutions.
- e. The power of Bible doctrine to change men's lives is the expression of non-meritorious human volition in the function of freedom.
- f. The power of the cosmic system to change lives is the meritorious and arrogant expression of human volition inside the cosmic system, which is of course the environment of tyranny and slavery. The cosmic system offers you success, approbation, fame, but without the capacity. Therefore, many problems in life are created by prosperity. Problems come from adversity and prosperity.
- g. Inside the divine dynasphere men's lives are changed by doctrine. Inside the cosmic system men's lives are changed by the arrogance factor and evil.
- h. Man can only enter the divine dynasphere through grace, the non-meritorious expression of human volition, and this same exercise of freedom can result in making those bad decisions related to residence and function in the cosmic system.
- i. So in the historical phase of the angelic conflict man must be free to succeed, and by the same token man must be free to fail. True freedom is the source of true failure and true success.

Therefore recognition of our weaknesses is neither degrading nor demeaning. It is the beginning of objective reality in the spiritual life. All solutions in life begin by the recognition of weakness which begins the search for power, a system greater than our weaknesses. Man's decisions leading to failure brings him to his knees and the end of his own resources. This is where truth becomes meaningful, you shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free.

Weakness in the unbeliever makes evangelism meaningful; weakness in the believer makes Bible doctrine meaningful. If man is not free to fail he cannot orient to his need of Christ; if the believer is not free to fail he cannot orient to his need of the divine dynasphere and perception of doctrine in the divine dynasphere. So by taking the responsibility for his own failures and bad decisions man learns his inherent and acquired weaknesses, and he seeks for a power system greater than his weaknesses, greater than himself.

A principle emerges which often turns the tide of history in any given generation to the greater human use of human freedom — 2 Cor.12:9.

The sooner the believer realises that he needs a power greater than himself the sooner he establishes the scale of values which places Bible doctrine first. The free will of man, or human volition, resides in the privacy of the human soul and is designed to choose the power system in which he will live and have his being, either the divine dynasphere or the cosmic system. Man is not an independent power but a weak creature which must choose that power system on which to depend. This is why arrogance is self-deceit, for in arrogance man assumes that he is independent and superior to all existing powers in life. But man's strength lies in his non-meritorious volition, not in his human power, not in human authority or ability.

The principle the: Man's strength lies in his non-meritorious use of his volition, not in his human ability.

With his volition the believer can make the right decisions relating to God's power so that God's grace becomes sufficient. He can also make wrong decisions based on subjectivity of human arrogance and succumb to the satanic propaganda, the cosmic system.

Choosing Satan's deceitful and clever propaganda in religion or philosophy or psychology or sociology or political science or in any other human thought system where it may exist in a thought form results in choosing the environment of the cosmic system. Such a choice thereafter limits the use of one's freewill to bad decisions until one runs out of bad decisions and the doors are closed for all options in life, and you stand still and see the results of your own self-destruction in the form of divine discipline terminating in the sin unto death.

Choosing truth in three categories: the laws of divine establishment, the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, and Bible doctrine for the believer which leads to both residence and function inside the divine dynasphere where humility produces both objectivity and capacity for life, multiplying, of course, the options in your life for great blessing, prosperity and, above all, the glorification of the Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore man must choose something greater than himself by which to live. No man can live by his own merits or abilities and survive. No one is ever happy living by his own merits and abilities. If man is to live by his wits he must also live by his volition and the cognisance of man's inherent sinfulness, the old sin nature which is imputed at birth and subsequent weaknesses become the basis for exercising one's options in the direction of the cosmic system. We need to exercise those options in the direction of the divine dynasphere.

"Patmos" an island in the Aegean Sea, the greatest historical centre in human history. Even as John was writing the most basic concept of history during the Church Age, the dispensation of historical trends, was being formed before his eyes. The doctrine of manifest destiny which up to this time was not an issue in history was to become an issue for the first time with SPQR, the Roman empire. Here on the Island of Patmos it was John who initiated the concept of manifest destiny, a concept which divides any nation that is to be great into three historical movements: Landed aristocracy always give the nation its initial start; Industrial complex, because the landed aristocracy provide a stabilised national entity for the existence and function of industrial complex; Undeveloped frontier, in order for the complete use of the talent and the ability of any nation.

Verse 9, "I John," E)gw I)oannhj. I)oannej was an aristocratic name; John was an aristocrat. The human author of the book of Revelation was the apostle John who was functioning as a believer priest inside the divine dynasphere, as a one person congregation, on a Sunday morning in AD 96 on the Island of Patmos. He had been banished from Ephesus to Patmos during the Domitian persecution of AD 81-96. Out of John's persecution by Domitian comes blessing for him. Domitian, a very evil man, was the ruler of the Roman empire. Principle: You can have evil rulers and have great blessing in a national entity. For one of the historical trends of the Church Age: where there is no tyranny, whoever rules the land is not the major issue. It is the system of administration and the system of government that counts. Rome was being beautifully administered by the knights of Rome. The senate had become decadent. The Caesar was a very evil man. It is only when tyranny creeps in that what the top man has to say has significance.

John's persecutors sought to nullify his effectiveness by isolating him but they forgot one thing: Jesus Christ controls history. And it was the Lord's will for him to be separated from his congregations so they could get out of the routine of the messages they had been getting. It was time for John to write.

The closing book of the New Testament must demonstrate everything that would happen in history by way of trends from the time of John to the end of the Church Age — the time of the historical trends is the dispensation of the Church — and to bring together all of the historical trends, not only in our dispensation, but to give believers in the Church Age [Not the Tribulation] an understanding of what would happen in history after the Church was removed, and how to relate it to their lives now, and how to grow spiritually from understanding both the historical trends and the eschatological delineation of historical trends beginning in chapter six.

So out of John's pressures and persecutions from Domitian comes blessing for him. But not only blessing for John in isolation but blessing for believers in every generation for the rest of history. For John was isolated under the principle of cursing turned to blessing. God the Holy Spirit used the mentality of John to present to us the history of the world from his time to the end of the world and to present it in such a lucid form that it is not only understandable but it has great application to us. Out of John's pressure comes blessing and for countless generations of the royal family of God who have benefited from the study of Revelation.

John, as a believer priest at the time of verse 9, was engaged in worship of our Lord Jesus Christ When this one-man service was interrupted by the sudden appearance of our Lord Himself. The presence of our Lord caused the one person in the congregation to faint. We must also remember that John did not neglect worship when alone. For if ever you need Bible doctrine and its application it is when you are alone for what you are when you are alone determines everything else.

v20 The first interpretation of the apocalypse.

Verse 9, "I John." A threefold description of the writer follows.

a. John is a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ and therefore a member of the royal family of God. We get this from an appositional nominative case from a) delfoj — brother. With this we have the descriptive genitive from the personal pronoun su.. When you put it together it is "I John, your fellow believer."

b. John as a believer is a partner with other believers in the plan of God. The connective conjunction kai presents a second aspect of the human writer. Then we have another appositional nominative case from sugkoinwnoj, a partner, a co-participant. The areas of partnership and joint participation are given in one prepositional phrase. You see he's alone, and now he is not simply speaking to his congregation, he is speaking to the world of believers as they will exist from John's time to the Rapture. And therefore it is a partnership, still with authority, because as we with positive volition approach the book of Revelation we will benefit to the maximum. Next we have partnership — in what area? e)n plus the locative singular of the definitive article used for three nouns, so there are three ways in which the partnership will be described.

Next we have the human author of the book of Revelation and the threefold description of him.

Verse 9, "companion," sugkoinwnoj, partner. The areas of partnership and joint participation are given in one prepositional phrase, one definite article, to cover all three areas of this partnership or joint participation. The prepositional phrase is e)n plus the locative of the definite article. There are three nouns in the locative case which will give us the area of partnership.

The first locative singular is from the noun qliyij. It refers here to pressures, sufferings, disasters. The principle that comes out of this first stage of partnership:

a. All believers have problems.

b. The reason some believers do not appear to have problems is simply because they live inside the divine dynasphere where they live a happy and normal life under pressure just as they do in prosperity. They have learned to cope by attaining strength rather than borrowing strength.

c. Residence in the divine dynasphere with its function at the various gates guarantees a normal happy life no matter how great the problems or the pressures or the disasters. And believers who live in the divine dynasphere are normal and therefore entitled to sentiment. You can only be sentimental about normal people.

d. The great issue is not avoiding problems and troubles but the modus vivendi of the royal priesthood in the function of the invisible life with God and the modus operandi of the royal ambassadorship in the visible interaction with mankind.

e. This concept excludes divine discipline. Since John has in view here suffering for blessing, obviously it is that concept which is in view here.

f. Problems with people or circumstances are never resolved by adjustment to those people or circumstances, they are resolved by relationship with God. All objectivity in problems and pressures is related to your fellowship with God and not with people involved.

g. If you're right with God you can face the wrongs of human injustice and oppression. Furthermore, if you're right with God you do not consider things beneath you as demeaning.

h. Furthermore, momentum testing is designed to accelerate spiritual growth by the application of doctrine to experience. All believers residing inside the divine dynasphere are partners in the pressures of suffering, disaster, trouble, distress, affliction, oppression.

How do you handle life when you are alone? The moment you stop handling aloneness by your relationship with God, by residence and function in the divine dynasphere, you no longer are a participant in the sufferings and problems. And therefore you have lost your rapport with loved ones who are not present.

Next comes the connective conjunction kai followed by a second locative singular from the noun basileia, kingdom. The kingdom refers to phase three of the plan of God. It emphasises eternal rewards, blessings, decorations, above and beyond the resurrection body. The advance to maturity from residence and function inside the divine dynasphere is a guarantee of, not only blessings in time but, of far greater eternal blessings which glorify God forever. Blessing in time is the advance to gate eight of the divine dynasphere, perception of doctrine. But what is far more important is the glorification of our Lord Jesus Christ, the eternal blessing and reward at the Judgment Seat of Christ. In the meantime the believer must endure suffering with great poise and inner happiness which is only possible inside the divine dynasphere.

And so a third noun which goes with a preposition. The connective conjunction tells us that we are still in one prepositional phrase. We have the locative singular of the noun u(pomonh, steadfastness, fortitude, perseverance. Both the noun and the verb connote courageous endurance and so it also means active and energetic resistance of evil which comes out of the cosmic system. U(pomonh refers to residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. It refers to resistance of temptation or, if failing on that count, the habitual use of rebound to recover from sin and failure, the function of the faith-rest drill, the manufacture of motivational and functional virtue, love of God, occupation with the Person of Christ, everything which is necessary for the proper motivation for the Christian way of life.

John, as a believer in the Church Age, has a third characteristic. He possess eternal security from union with Christ; positional truth, which means he also has temporal security as well. This comes out in the second prepositional phrase e)n plus the locative of I)hsouj, Lit. "in Jesus" the humanity name of our Lord in hypostatic union. The royal family of God is formed by the unique ministry of God the Holy Spirit which only occurs in this dispensation. The baptism of the Holy Spirit enters us into union with Christ forever. This means eternal security. Temporal security and our awareness of it comes from our residence and function in the eight gates of the divine dynasphere.

Next, a verb: The aorist middle indicative of the verb ginomai, "came to be" here. John came to be, so he sees manifest destiny as relating to history and he sees his relationship to manifest destiny, for it is John who on the Island of Patmos actually brought into focus the concept of manifest destiny in history.

The thing that really brings the concept of manifest destiny all together is the undeveloped frontier. The undeveloped frontier gives those who fail under landed aristocracy a chance to go west, and those who fail in the industrial complex to go west. And there on the raw frontier your talent, your ability to survive, your ingenuity, comes out and you develop, as it were, a new aristocracy from innovation. Eventually when the undeveloped frontiers are gone the people here have no place to go. The labour complains and those who are working on the land are not satisfied because they don't share the wealth of the land and they have no place to go, an undeveloped frontier, and then trouble starts. And that is why no nation survives its prosperity.

The aorist tense of ginomai is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The middle voice describes the subject, the apostle John, as participating in the results of the action, which in this case is writing the book of Revelation. He came to be on the Island of Patmos so that we could understand the role of the believer in the dispensation in which we live. The indicative mood is declarative for historical reality.

Next comes the prepositional phrase e)n plus the locative singular of nhsoj which should be translated “on the island.” Then we have a second locative th used as a demonstrative pronoun which should be translated “that one.” Then the present passive participle of the verb kalew in the passive voice, “the one being called.” Then the dative singular, indirect object, Patmoj, Patmos, a rock in the Aegean, isolated where there are very few people.

Next we have “because of the word of God,” dia plus the accusative of logoj, “and the testimony,” the connective use of the conjunction kai used this time simply to continue the concept, therefore translated “and,” plus dia the preposition plus the accusative of marturia which means testimony in the sense that Revelation is a deposition, our Lord’s verbal testimony to John, and John writes it down under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. And the testimony is not about prophecies but it is the testimony, objective genitive I)hsouj and Xristoj, “concerning Jesus Christ.” The objective genitive of Xristoj is actually not found in the original, which means that since it is not found in the original text we are going to talk mostly in the book of Revelation about Jesus Christ in hypostatic union. So “Jesus,” just the one word, is going to emphasise the Omega glory of Jesus Christ. Translation of verse 9 — “I John, your fellow believer and partner in the pressures, and the kingdom, and the perseverance [persistence in the divine dynasphere] of Jesus, came to be on the island, the one being called Patmos, because of the word of God and the testimony concerning Jesus.”

The testimony of Jesus: 1 John 5:5-13.

Verse 5, “Who is this person overcoming the cosmic system, no one else be he who has come to believe that Jesus is the Son of God?”

Verse 6, “This one [Jesus Christ] is he who came by water and by blood; not by water alone, but by water and blood. Furthermore it is the Spirit who testifies, because the Spirit is truth.”

Verse 7, “Because there are three who testify, the Spirit, the water and the blood: and these three witnesses have the same purpose.”

John wrote that before he wrote the book of Revelation. He had a testimony of our Lord by the testimony was not completed until he authored the book of Revelation.

34 01/10/1982 Revelation 1:10 Worship; Sunday; trumpet alert

Verse 10, “was,” ginomai, I came to be. The constative aorist refers to a fact or action extended over a period of time. The Sunday on the Island of Patmos when John began writing world history as it would occur sequentially down to the end of time.

Being filled with the Spirit John fulfils his job. He fulfils it under the principle of worship, for there is resultant worship as John meets with himself on a Sunday morning on the Island of Patmos — cf. John 4:24. Worship is the function of the divine dynasphere and there is no legitimate worship in Christianity apart from residence and function inside the divine dynasphere.

“Spirit,” pneuma,e)n plus the locative, “I was in the Spirit.” The absence of the definite article in the Greek emphasises the high quality of the noun, therefore translated with the English definite article. It is an idiom that reverses the use of our definite article in the English. It is a reference to the filling of the Spirit and also to a preparation for the perception of doctrine.

“the Lord’s day,” e)n plus the locative of time from the adjective kuriakoj. It refers to belonging to the Lord. With it is a noun e(mera, day, “On the day belonging to the Lord.” It is a reference to the first day of the week, Sunday. Sunday as the first day of the week is designated as the worship day for the royal family in the Church Age. It was so designated because it was the day of our Lord’s resurrection. The Lord’s day not only commemorates the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ but is a new day marking a new dispensation. The Sabbath or Saturday was designated the day of worship for Israel but never for the Church or the royal family of God.

Worship on Sunday is the privilege of the believer and, as such, must reflect his freewill option. The Day of Pentecost occurred on Sunday and therefore commemorates the day the Church began. The Sunday or the Lord’s day is a reminder that the Church Age is a dispensation of privilege for believers who are the royal family of God.

And so in the time of Domitian the issue arose as to who was the Lord. You see, one day per month was designated the Emperor’s day and this was also called in the Roman Empire the Lord’s day. So Sunday became an issue because the Christians said Jesus is Lord and the rest of the Roman citizens said Caesar is Lord. It was an issue of Caesar versus Christ.

In the early church, while Sunday was a special day, other days were also designated for worship. Day by day is the order which is found in Acts 2:46,47. Sunday was set aside as a public witness to the fact that Christianity worshipped Christ and not the degenerate deified Caesars like Domitian who banished John to the Island of Patmos for worshipping Christ rather than Caesar.

“and heard,” kai a)kouw, plus “behind me,” o)psiw plus the genitive of e)gw. What he heard behind him brings us right back again to our subject of historical trends — “loud,” megaj plus the accusative singular direct object fonh, “voice.”

Next is a comparative particle which tells us we are going to get an illustration as to what is meant. The illustration follows in the noun salpiggoj which refers to a trumpet. The trumpet was used in the ancient world for issuing commands in the military. The trumpet therefore demanded concentration, obedience, execution of commands. Concentration under the ministry of the Holy Spirit is necessary for perception of the plan of God. Therefore it is a reference to the first three gates of the divine dynasphere. The service was interrupted to provide the apostle John with both the historical trends of the Church Age and the prophetic pattern of what will happen after the resurrection of the Church. The trumpet is the alert signal that the trends are about to begin.

1981 Revelation

Lesson #35

35 01/10/1982 Revelation 1:5 Figurative and literal blood of Christ

1981 Revelation

36 01/12/1982 Revelation 1:11 Revelation—writing/recipients; Domitian

In verse 11 we have the divine mandate for the writing and distribution of the book of Revelation. The phrase “I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last” is not found in the original. The phrase “which are in Asia” also does not occur. What we have at the beginning of this verse is actually quite different to what the King James version has added in. These phrases do occur in other places.

“saying,” the present active indicative of the verb legw should be “which said.” The perfective present refers to a fact which has come to be in the past but is emphasised as a present reality. The active voice is the voice making a loud noise like a trumpet, the trumpet meaning alertness and concentration to what follows. The history of the world with doctrinal innovations in order that we might begin to orient to the time in which we live which is not a dispensation of prophecy but a dispensation of historical trends.

We have a relative pronoun which follows. The nominative neuter singular from the relative pronoun, o(j, “what,” followed by the present active indicative of the verb blepw which together says, “what you see.” The present tense is a progressive present for action in a state of persistence. It refers to the unfolding of the book of Revelation, an historical textbook which tells us exactly what is going to happen from John’s time to the end of time. The active voice: John produces the action of the verb in relationship to the visions on which the content of Revelation is formed as a deposition from our Lord Jesus Christ to the apostle and eventually to us. John will see a panorama of history of the human race under the principle of our Lord’s third royal patent, seated at the right hand of the Father.

Next we have the mandate for closing out the canon of scripture, the aorist active imperative of the verb grafw, “write.” John is writing a deposition, not a testimony. A testimony is verbal; a deposition is a testimony in writing, and the book of Revelation is a deposition. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it views the writing of the book of Revelation in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results: the glorious completion of the canon of scripture with the panorama of human history from John to the end of time. The active voice: John produces the action of the verb. The imperative mood is the divine mandate for closing out the canon and He selected John to do it. We have following this a prepositional phrase, e)ij plus the accusative of biblion. Lit. on a scroll. It means in effect “in a book.” Corrected translation: “Which said, Write in a book what you see.”

Next we have the mandate for distribution because in the mandate every historical trend that existed simultaneously at the end of the Roman empire, exists in the world right now. They are the historical trends that simultaneously exist at any point in history on some part of planet earth. We have the aorist active indicative of pempw, “and send it,” kai plus pempw. The aorist tense is a constative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety: the initial distribution of the Revelation manuscript to the seven churches of the Roman province of Asia. It is a foregone conclusion that John will write under the ministry of the Holy Spirit and the distribution list indicates the fact that non-face to face teaching is legitimate. For up until the time John was banished by Domitian to the Isle of Patmos John was a face to face pastor with the congregation in Ephesus and a non-face to face pastor with the other six churches mentioned in this verse. Now he is going to send it even to Ephesus, and furthermore, John is the pastor of all seven of those churches until he went to Patmos. But there are going to be pastors of all seven of those churches in the future and he is to write the first two chapters to future pastors. The point is that historical trends must be understood by pastors as well as by congregations and that no pastor can effectively communicate to his congregation unless he can understand historical trends because he always has a tendency to get of on something, to ride a hobby horse. “Which are in Asia” is a corruption, not in the best manuscripts.

Next comes the dative plural indirect object from three words. There is the dative plural of the definite article, taij, the generic use of the definite article — which indicates that these seven churches form a specific category. These churches all have something in common. At the moment John is still their pastor. Next comes the dative plural from the numeral e)pta which means “seven,” and then the dative plural from the noun e)kklhsia, “churches.” The next phrase, “which are in Asia,” is a corruption of the manuscript from which the King James version was translated. The distribution to the seven local churches follows the pattern of the preposition e)ij plus the name of each church: “to Ephesus, and to Smyrna, and to Pergamum, and to Thyatira, and to Sardis, and to Philadelphia, and to Laodicea.” This is the initial distribution list for the book of Revelation.

37 01/14/1982 Revelation 1:12 Prosperity test; seven golden lampstands

Verses 12-20, The subject of the apocalypse.

In verses 12-16 there are three introductory visions.

Verse 12, the vision of the seven golden lampstands; “and,” kai; “I turned,” e)pestrefw, “I turned around.” John turned his head in the direction of the voice. He is alert; “to see,” blepw. The pictorial present tense presents to the mind a picture of the events in the process of occurrence. Where there is a voice there is a form and John wants to see what is the form of that magnificent voice — “the voice,” fwnh.

Principles

1. Since a voice is not visible to the eye it identifies with a person who has a message. And therefore even with our Lord Jesus Christ it is still the importance of the message;

2. John refers to the person who owns the voice and he is going to see a form which he will associate with that voice. And that association is going to carry us through two chapters — two and three — and will be seen from time to time throughout the rest of Revelation. So what is coming up, the form identified with that voice, is the key to interpretation of Revelation for it is not the “Revelation of St John the divine,” it is the Revelation of Jesus Christ.

3. Therefore to ascertain whose voice is speaking John turned in the direction of the voice. In other words the voice demands attention, concentration, objectivity, poise, and good manners, everything necessary for good academic discipline.

“which,” o(stij, “that.” O(stij is the only word to indicate the hypostatic union here. Jesus Christ is God; what follows will be a description of a man, but we have the God-Man altogether here. O(stij as a qualitative relative pronoun tells us that behind the figure, the actual humanity, there is also a union with it, true and infinite deity. So “that” indicates the deity of Jesus Christ.

“spoke,” lalew, to speak, to communicate, to express. The imperfect tense is a progressive imperfect for linear aktionsart in past time. The voice that speaks now is going to be speaking for along time and great portions of the book of Revelation are simply the spoken testimony of our Lord Jesus Christ written by John.

“with me,” meta plus e)gw. John’s turning can be construed as his positive volition as well as his good manners. John had made positive decisions about doctrine which had opened the door for more and greater decisions about doctrine. Persistent positive volition toward doctrine is the only road to spiritual blessing, maturity, and glorification of the Lord Jesus Christ.

“and being turned,” kai e)pistrefw, lit., “and when I had turned around I saw,” o(raw. The panorama of human history; “seven golden candlesticks”: xruseoj, golden; luxnia, lampstand. This lampstand was the only light in the Holy Place in the tabernacle and just as the Shekina glory was the only light in the Holy of Holies so the manora (Heb.) was the only light in the holy place in the tabernacle. The central branch of the lampstand always represents our Lord Jesus Christ who functioned in the prototype divine dynasphere and established a pattern in the game plan for the Christian way of life in this dispensation. Since it is used here, not in connection with Israel, but with the Church it refers to our Lord Jesus Christ in the prototype divine dynasphere.

The six branches represent believers in union with Christ. They represent the phrase “in Christ”. The visible part of the lampstand is the light. The wick is the believer in the Lord Jesus Christ. The oil, representing the Holy Spirit, is brought up through the wick and there is a light. The wick represents the believer inside the divine dynasphere, and the light are the functional virtues which are obvious to mankind.

The vision of the glorified Christ, vv 13-15

The first principle of glorification is the principle of the King-Priest.

Light

1. The light that burns from the golden lampstand is the believer living inside the divine dynasphere — under the principle that the divine dynasphere is God’s game plan for the Church Age and it is divided into two categories: invisible and visible. The invisible life is related to the royal priesthood; the visible life is related to the royal ambassadorship.

2. So speaking of glorifying the Lord Jesus Christ we now have a vision of the glorified Christ who is in heaven, seated at the member that His third royal patent was given to His humanity.

The burning of the oil in the lamps is one type of light. But we are going to see another type of light: the light shining from the stars, which is of course Bible doctrine. The stars are called angels or messengers of local churches, hence the stars are pastors of local churches who give off another type of light.

The teaching of doctrine glorifies the Lord, therefore the light from the stars. The light burning from the lampstand is the believer applying doctrine inside of the divine dynasphere, so that Jesus Christ is glorified through the functional virtues apparent to all mankind. The middle vision portrays our Lord in His glorified state in the hypostatic union. It is the Lord Jesus Christ who is King of kings and Lord of Lords who is glorified by the teaching of doctrine. Therefore it is very important that we understand the content of this vision. The deity of Christ has been glorified forever, both in eternity past and in the eternal future. Here is a vision of the glorification of the resurrected humanity of Christ and therefore the vision describes our Lord in terms of human clothes, hair, eyes, feet, and voice. And it must be remembered that the Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written. Therefore we will relate these things to the twentieth century as far as it is possible. There is no anachronism in this vision of our glorified Lord.

1981 Revelation

38 01/15/1982 Revelation 1:13a The King–Priest; manifest destiny.

Verse 13, “And,” kai. It is translated here “and” but it is used in the sense of the Hebrew waw and it will be translated “consequently, furthermore.” There are nine different legitimate translations of this conjunction. It is used here to set up a double accusative, “in the” e)n plus the locative singular from the adjective mesoj plus luxnia. It means “and in the middle of the lampstands.” Then we have “like unto,” the accusative direct object of o(moioj, “one resembling.” The vision is introduced by giving the title “Son of man,” u(ioj plus a)nqrwpoj. This is the shortened form for our Lord’s title for the first advent. It began with the virgin birth because He was born as Adam was created — perfect. Adam was created without sin; the Lord Jesus Christ was born that way. Human life was imputed to Him the same way it was imputed to Adam. The word “Adam” in the Hebrew simply means “man” and its equivalent in the Greek is a)nqrwpoj. So He is called “Son of Man” or the “Son of Adam.” It is a title to indicate the hypostatic union; it is His true humanity which received the title “Son of Man.”

Principle

1. Jesus Christ controls history. All believers are personally related to the eternal God-Man who controls history. It is our relationship to the Lord Jesus Christ that gives us the invisible yet the very important impact on history, either uptrend or downtrend depending upon our attitude toward Bible doctrine.

2. Therefore, for the believer there are no tragedies in history — many disasters, a great deal of suffering, but there are no tragedies in history. Tragedy belongs to drama; disaster belongs to history. Since man is the product of his own decisions, individually and collectively, the result of wrong decisions is disaster; the result of right decisions is prosperity. And so we can say with regard to history: there are periods of prosperity, there are periods of disaster, but since man is the product of his own decisions there are no tragedies.

3 People individually and collectively are the products of their own decisions. That means that volition and decision produces environment, not environment decision.

4. Historical disasters result from wrong decisions which destroy options for future decisions.

In heaven, a place of perfect environment, there will be those who have great decorations and those with less. There will be great inequality. A sign of freedom is inequality: you are free to fail; you are free to succeed. Satan has invented a system called communism which seeks to set aside this concept. So to exchange freedom for security is to sell your soul for a mess of pottage. Socialism and the redistribution of wealth is very popular because it offers security instead of freedom. Also it gives those who have failed in life a chance to exercise the motivating evil of jealousy toward others. Disaster results when the demand for power exceeds the need for power. Disaster occurs when arrogant people never see their own consistencies, only the inconsistencies of others.

In verse 13 the robe which we see first is the robe of a high priest. A priest is a man who represents man to God. Our Lord Jesus Christ in His humanity is a high priest. His humanity resided inside the prototype divine dynasphere, He was therefore a priest representing Himself to God. He was our high priest and we shall see the significance of that. You have to be true humanity to be a priest. Furthermore our Lord Jesus Christ, if He is going to rule forever as per all of the prophecies with regard to the Millennium and the eternal state, He must be a man. A king must be a man to represent man, 2 Sam. 7; Psalm 89. So it is the Lord Jesus Christ in His humanity that is depicted for us here.

“clothed,” e)nduw, perf. pass. participle. This describes the dress uniform of a high priest. Correct translation: “being attired.”

The word “garment” is the accusative singular direct object of podhrh and it refers to the robe of a high priest. It is a robe reaching down to the feet and again it refers to the dress uniform of the high priest as described first in Exodus 28:2-4. Our Lord’s priestly function inside the prototype divine dynasphere resulted in maximum function of all the motivating virtues directed toward the plan of God and the Father in His incarnation. Now our Lord Jesus Christ is the King Priest, the great High Priest who represents us to God the Father. Every believer is in union with Christ and the Church is a kingdom of priests according to Revelation 1:6, and the priesthood is the modus vivendi of the invisible function of the Christian way of life.

Next is “girt about,” perizonummi, “having belted around him a golden girdle,” zwnh xruseoj, lit., a golden sash. What is this golden sash? This is the golden sash of aristocracy, it is worn across the chest. The golden sash worn around the belt was a sign of being a ranking officer in the military but the sash across the chest was the sign of aristocracy, proj plus the locative of mastoj, lit. across the chest. Our Lord’s third title of royalty is involved here. The golden sash is a reminder that our Lord Jesus Christ is the prince ruler of the Church, the titled head of the royal family of God or the Church Age believer. It is a reminder that Christ is the absolute ruler and the authority over the body of Christ.

He has delegated authority under three principles which have to do with the laws of truth: Cat.1, the laws of divine establishment; Cat.2, the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ (evangelism); Cat.3, Bible doctrine for believers (pastor-teacher).

Three things are emphasised in this verse: 1. Jesus Christ controls history; 2. Jesus Christ is the great High Priest of a kingdom of priests; 3. Jesus Christ is the sovereign ruler of the Church.

1981 Revelation

Lesson #39

39 01/17/1982 Revelation 1:13b, 14a Freedom; security; King–Priest; His hair

Verse 14, The one who controls history also administers judgment.

“And,” de, Lit., “now,” followed by kefalh, “head.” Lit., “his head.” Next is “his hair”: qrix refers to His hair. Lit. translation: “And His head and hair,” plus “white,” leukoj. Our Lord, when He ascended in His resurrection body, was 33 years old. It is noted in 1 John 3 that we are going to have a resurrection body exactly like His. That means that everyone will have a resurrection body aged 33. Our Lord appears very shortly after the ascension and His hair is now white. “White like wool” means the hair is thick and like “snow”. The white hair of our Lord Jesus Christ denotes the shock of His bearing our very own sins in His own body on the tree. “White wool” is a reminder that Jesus Christ is the Lamb of God, the efficacious sacrifice for our sins, while the whiteness of snow indicates the impeccability of Christ residing and functioning inside the prototype divine dynasphere. Because of His impeccability our Lord was qualified to go to the cross and be judged for our sins. The white hair, like the scars in our Lord’s hands and feet, are the visible manifestations of the price He had to pay on the cross. So, in effect, what John is seeing here is what he said in the first chapter of his Gospel: “Behold the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world.”

The next phrase in context emphasises future judgment. In the first phrase Christ is seen as the saviour of the world. In the next phrase He is seen as judge of the world. The white hair, like the scars in His hands, then, are visible manifestations of the price our Lord paid for our so great salvation. The white wool speaks of the perfect impeccable sacrifice, snow emphasising our Lord’s qualification to be a substitute to take our place.

This is followed by “and,” kai plus the nominative plural subject o)fqalmoj, “eyes,” and o(j, comparative particle “as.” The comparison is completed with two words: the predicate nominative flox, flame, plus the descriptive genitive singular pur — fire. Lit. flame of fire. This refers to judgment.

There are two categories of judgment we are going to note in this context. This is personal judgment in verse 14. When we get down to the bronze we are going to see another kind of judgment, national judgment.

Manifest destiny has three components: A landed aristocracy, the backbone for getting a nation started in the right way. Then it is followed by an industrial complex and there is always an undeveloped frontier.

Man is the product of his own volition. Man individually is the product of his own decisions; we as a nation are the products of our collective decisions. This is true in any particular period of history but even though man is the product of his own decisions Jesus Christ controls history. The book of Revelation is a textbook of history from the first century AD down to the end of time. It includes the Church Age, the dispensation of historical trends, and then it includes all of the chronology of eschatology of world history starting with the resurrection of the Church, the Tribulation, the second advent, the Millennial reign of Christ, the revolution at the end of the Millennium, the destruction of the universe.

The Lord Jesus Christ controls history, and as such He provided in His first advent, not only the so great salvation we enjoy through faith in Christ, but when He ascended He was given His third patent of royalty. And it is that patent of royalty that makes up the rest of world history: how He will exercise that patent at the second advent, how in the meantime there must be a royal family, therefore the Church Age is the calling out of the royal family of God, the royal family of our Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore it is a dispensation not of prophecy but of historical trends.

Controlling history means that eventually when a nation is made up of too many believers are spending their time in cosmic one with the 26 gates of interlocking systems of arrogance or cosmic two with its nine gates of interlocking systems of hatred, there must be judgment. There are five cycles of judgment to a nation but in addition to that there is national self-destruction.

So there are two categories. Self-destruction is recognised by our Lord who makes the estimate of the situation: too many believers in the cosmic system. So eventually then He adds divine judgment. That is the picture we have in verses 14 and 15.

1981 Revelation

42 01/20/1982 Revelation 1:15; Job 5:19–27 Historical judgment; divine deliverance

In verse 15 we will see His feet like bronze as the national judgment but in the meantime we have the judgment of the eyes like a flame of fire. This is individual. It is not only true in the historical trends of people collectively but it is true individually. We are the products of our own decisions. Good decisions open options for greater decisions; bad decisions destroy those options and eventually remove them altogether and the individual is removed under the principle of the sin unto death. But before his removal he has a long and miserable life of divine judgment and discipline. This is brought out now in the flame of fire, for the flame of fire speaks of individual judgment just as the feet of bronze represents national judgment.

“His eyes like a flame of fire.”

Principle

Jesus Christ will not ever tolerate arrogance, the number one enemy of the human race. The Lord Jesus Christ has charge of all judgment: individual judgment of believers called divine discipline; collective judgment of nations called historical trend. For the unbeliever salvation is always offered before judgment; for the believer grace is offered before the judgment seat of Christ. The provision of logistical grace to the believer in time and the temporal security that goes with it always precedes the evaluation of any believer at the judgment seat of Christ. Decision from human volition is always the issue in human history and in every phase of human history called the angelic conflict. For the unbeliever the option is to face Christ as saviour in time or be judged in eternity. The option for the believer is to recognise Jesus Christ as Lord in time or be evaluated at the Rapture with loss of any reward. And therefore this part of the vision emphasises the fact that human life was designed by God to make decisions that relate to the Lord Jesus Christ. To believe in Christ of course cancels any judgment in eternity. But the issue then is not eternal security which was settled at salvation but the issue is Bible doctrine, the Word of God. Jesus Christ is the living Word; doctrine is the written Word. To put Christ first in your life you must give first place to Bible doctrine.

Now by application to all of this there is also the issue of temporal security for the believer. To live inside the divine dynasphere, to learn Bible doctrine, is to recognise Jesus as Lord. Logistical grace includes the provision of the divine dynasphere and Bible doctrine as our temporal security. Our security is not found in money, in the usual systems so designated in this life, our security is related to the Word of God. To use one's volition as a believer to reject and repudiate logistical grace and temporal security means evaluation and tragedy at the judgment seat of Christ.

We now see in verses 12-20 the subject of the apocalypse and the principle that Jesus Christ controls history. In verses 12-16 there are three introductory visions. The first of these is the vision of the seven golden lamps or lampstands.

Verse 12, the vision of the seven golden lampstands. We start out with the connective conjunction kai. John uses this a great deal; Paul did not. John followed the Hebrew style of connectives, therefore we see a lot of kais. Here it is translated “And.” Next comes the aorist active indicative from the verb e)πισtrefw, and it means “And I turned around.” The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it refers to a momentary action where John turned his head in the direction of the voice. The active voice: John produces the action. The declarative mood represents the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality. Remember, the voice sounded like a trumpet. The analogy of the trumpet is not accidental. God the Holy Spirit gave this thought to John as he heard it for the first time. The trumpet means alertness, and there is for us both a personal as well as an historical application. Many, because of their faithfulness to the Word of God are going to be prospered one way or another. Prosperity is a test just like adversity is a test. If you have the ability, the capacity from doctrine, to maintain in prosperity you will pass the most difficult test in life. But the most difficult test in life is not adversity and trial and problems, the most difficult and subtle of all testings is the prosperity test. We face this test nationally and individually. Prosperity provides a certain number of tests saying to you, now that you have this prosperity are you so preoccupied with the prosperity that you have lost track of the source; are you so preoccupied with the wonderful life that God has given you that you have forgotten who gave it? The only way that you can avoid the dangers of flunking this test is to maintain your capacity, and the most difficult thing in the world is to maintain spiritual capacity — for life, for love, for happiness — when you are prosperous. It is very easy to lose the capacity because you start to neglect the Word of God. When you neglect Bible doctrine you lose the capacity. Therefore what you have left is ritual without reality.

Our next word is the present active infinitive of the verb blepw which means to see, “I turned around to see.” The pictorial present tense presents to the mind a picture of the events in the process of occurrence. Up until this moment John has had some adversity in being isolated from his congregations, being banished to a rock island, and left there in hopes that he would die. Domitian would not execute John. He learned something from Nero: Don’t kill the Christians. If they are in prominence killing them will simply expand Christianity. So Domitian was very wise and he didn’t make a martyr out of John. Instead he put him in a place which was his very own Roman Siberia in hopes that he would just simply die away and the problem of the apostle John would go away for the emperor Domitian. This means that John has perhaps suffered some privation. But all of that has gone for that voice is the voice of the Lord Jesus Christ and the greatest blessing that ever came to an individual now comes to John. Only one man in all of human history ever had the privilege of writing with perfect accuracy the entire history of the world from his day to the end of time. It starts with turning the head in the direction of the voice to see who was there, for where there is a voice there is a form.

Having heard the voice John wants to see what is the form of that magnificent voice. So John produces the action and we have the infinitive of purpose and we have the beginning of a translation: “And I turned around to see.” He wants to see the voice, says the accusative singular direct object from fwnh. The voice is that of the Lord Jesus Christ and John wants to associate a form with it.

Principle

1. Since a voice is not visible to the eye it identifies with a person who has a message. Therefore, even with our Lord Jesus Christ it is still the importance of the message.
2. John refers to the person who owns the voice and he is going to see a form that he will associate with that voice, and that association will carry us through chapters two and three and will be seen from time to time throughout the rest of the book of Revelation.
3. Therefore to ascertain whose voice is speaking John turned in the direction of the voice. In other words, the voice demands attention, concentration, objectivity, poise and, turning in the direction of the voice, good manners. Good manners accompany a good spiritual life.

Next we have a nominative feminine singular from the qualitative relative pronoun o(stij, it emphasises the essence of Jesus Christ as God — “that.” It is the only word to indicate the hypostatic union here. Jesus Christ is God. What follows will be a description of a man but we have the God-Man altogether here. O(stij as a qualitative relative pronoun tells us that behind the figure, the actual humanity, there is also in union with it true and infinite deity. So the word “that” indicates the deity of Jesus Christ. Then comes the imperfect active indicative of the verb lalew which means to speak, to communicate, to express, to proclaim. We will simply translate it, “And I turned around to see the voice that was speaking.” The imperfect tense is a progressive imperfect for linear aktionsart in past time. The voice that speaks now is going to be speaking for a long time. Great portions of the book of Revelation are simply the spoken testimony of our Lord Jesus Christ written by John just as our Lord gave it. The active voice: Jesus Christ was the voice producing the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of Jesus Christ communicating information to the apostle John. Then we have the preposition that rounds it out, meta, plus the genitive singular from the pronoun e)gw, “with me.” The act of turning can be construed as his positive volition as well as his good manners. John had made positive decisions about doctrine which had opened the door for more and greater decisions about doctrine resulting in the greatest of all on the island of Patmos. In other words, persistent, positive volition toward doctrine is the only road to spiritual blessing, maturity and glorification of the Lord Jesus Christ.

We now have another connective use of the conjunction kai and a verb, the aorist active participle e)pistrefw, “And when I had turned around.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, a momentary action expressing so much. The active voice: John produces the action. This is a temporal participle plus the principle that the action of the aorist participle precedes the action of the main verb, the main verb coming up: “I saw.” We know the main verb and we can distinguish it very easily because it is the aorist active indicative. The indicative mood is used for the main verb and the main verb is o(raw. The culminative aorist views the function of seeing in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results: the panorama of human history. Again, John produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the vision plus the main verb.

The direct object of the verb is composed of three Greek words. We have a numeral which is never conjugated, it always remains in the nominative, e(pta, "seven." But we have a double accusative. First of all the accusative feminine plural χρυσεοί, the word for "golden." With it we have the accusative feminine plural of λυχνία, and it is not a candle it is a lampstand, therefore a certain type of lamp. Λυχνία is the exact equivalent of the Hebrew menorah, "lampstand." It is a reference to Zechariah 4:2 where we have the lampstand in the tabernacle; also a reference to Exodus 25 where it is first described. This lampstand was the only light in the holy place. Just as the Shekinah glory was the only light in the holy of holies so the menorah was the only light in the holy place of the tabernacle. The central branch of the lampstand always represents our Lord Jesus Christ who functioned in the prototype divine dynasphere and established the pattern and the game plan for the Christian way of life in this dispensation. Since it is used here not in connection with Israel but the Church it refers to our Lord Jesus Christ in the prototype divine dynasphere. We saw that from the virgin birth He entered into the divine dynasphere, very shortly reached gate eight, and He functioned His entire first advent (the humanity of Christ) inside the divine dynasphere. The six branches represent believers in union with Christ. These represent being connected to the central branch — union with Christ. The hidden part of the lamp is the oil which represents the believer's function inside the divine dynasphere. The visible part of the lampstand is the light which burns as the oil comes through the wick. The wick, then, is the believer in the Lord Jesus Christ; the light is the function of operational or functional virtues during our life inside the divine dynasphere. The wick represents the believer inside of the divine dynasphere.

Translation: "And I turned around to see the voice that was speaking to me. And when I turned around I saw seven golden lampstands."

Essentially the lampstand is composed of three elements: the invisible, the visible, and the wick which is the conveyer. The invisible part of the lampstand is the oil representing the believer functioning in the divine dynasphere under the filling of the Spirit — the oil representing the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. The visible part of the lampstand is the light representing the functional virtues directed toward mankind. The central shaft is our Lord Jesus Christ and then six branches indicate the believer in union with Christ. The gold represents the divine dynasphere, the key to the Christian way of life and, of course, emphasizing residence. The gold represents the availability of the divine dynasphere to every believer, just as God the Father made available to our Lord Jesus Christ the prototype divine dynasphere. Therefore the gold of the central shaft is the function of our Lord Jesus Christ inside of the prototype divine dynasphere.

Next we notice the oil in the lamps representing the function inside the divine dynasphere. The burning wick represent functional virtue directed toward mankind. The two combined provide the utilisation of every believer's warrants: the royal priesthood for the invisible and the royal ambassadorship for the visible Christian way of life. In verse 20 we get the true interpretation of the lampstands. They are said to be the seven churches on the distribution list of the previous verse. Each believer and every local church has the logistical support of the divine dynasphere plus union with Christ plus the invisible and visible components of the Christian way of life.

Verse 13, we note in this passage that there are seven lampstands and this means that we are going to have to be dealing with light. So by way of anticipation:

1. The light that burns from the golden lampstand is the believer living inside the divine dynasphere under the principle that the divine dynasphere is God's game plan for the Church Age. It is the Christian way of life and it is divided into two categories: invisible and visible. The invisible life is related to the royal priesthood; the visible life is related to the royal ambassadorship. Every believer is a priest representing himself to God; every believer is an ambassador representing God to man. This is the dispensation in which the individual believer is emphasised.

2. We now have a vision of the glorified Christ seated at the right hand of the Father, and seated in hypostatic union. The burning of the oil in the lamps is one type of light but we are going to see another type of light: the light shining from the stars, which is Bible doctrine. The stars are called angels or messengers of local churches, hence the stars are pastors who teach doctrine or give off another type of light. The teaching of doctrine glorifies the Lord, therefore the light from the stars. The light burning from the lampstand is the believer applying doctrine inside of the divine dynasphere so that Jesus Christ is glorified through the functional virtues apparent to all mankind. The middle vision, the one we are now about to study, portrays our Lord in His glorified state in the hypostatic union. It is the Lord Jesus Christ who is King of kings and Lord of lords who is glorified by the teaching of doctrine. Therefore it is very important that we understand the content of this vision. The deity of Christ has been glorified forever, both in eternity past and in the eternal future. Here is a vision of the glorification of the resurrected humanity of Christ, and therefore the vision describes our Lord in terms of human clothes, hair, eyes, feet, and voice. And it must be remembered that the Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written, therefore we will relate these things to the 20th century where it is possible. There is no anachronism in this vision of our glorified Lord. It was pertinent in the time in which it was written and we can go back and find out exactly the significance of all of these things. In the ancient world what is presented here, His clothes, hair, eyes, feet, voice, were considered the items of major beauty in the male and the female. Therefore, since the Lord is going to be presented in beauty it becomes necessary to cover these things.

We begin the verse with the connective use of the conjunction kai, correctly translated here "consequently, furthermore, and." It is used here to set up a double accusative. We have a preposition coming up first, however, e)n plus the locative singular from the adjective mesoj plus luxnia, "And in the middle of the lampstands." As goes the believer so goes the client nation to God. As Rome in the time John wrote, so our nation in the time in which we are living is a client nation to God. The believer's attitude toward doctrine becomes the determining factor in historical trends. After salvation doctrine is the major issue: positive volition expressed through residence and function inside the divine dynasphere.

Next we have the accusative direct object from o(moioj, "one resembling." The word for resembling, taken from o(raw, is simply used here in the accusative to indicate that the vision is now introduced, and the vision is introduced by giving the title “Son of man,” u(ioj plus the descriptive genitive of a)nqrwpoj. This is the shortened form of our Lord’s title for the first advent. It began with the virgin birth because He was born as Adam was created: perfect. It is a title to indicate the hypostatic union. “And in the middle of the lampstand one resembling the Son of man.” At this point we now begin the study of our vision of the Lord.

Principle

1. Jesus Christ controls history. All believers are personally related to the eternal God-Man who controls history. It is our relationship to the Lord Jesus Christ that gives us the invisible and yet the very important impact in history — either uptrend or downtrend, depending upon our attitude toward Bible doctrine.

2. Therefore, for the believer there are no tragedies in history. Many disasters, a great deal of suffering, but there are no tragedies in history. Tragedy belongs to drama; disaster belongs to history. Since man is the product of his own decisions, individually and collectively, the result of wrong decisions is disaster; the result of right decisions is prosperity. So we can say with regard to history there are periods of prosperity, there are periods of disaster, but since man is the product of his own decisions there are no tragedies.

3. People individually and collectively are the products of their own decisions. That means that volition and decision produces environment, not environment decision.

4. Historical disasters result from wrong decisions which destroy options for future decisions. We have studied that principle under the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline, but long before God administers the fifth cycle of discipline to a nation the nation destroys itself. Generally the nation fails to pass the prosperity test.

The robe which we see first in verse 13 is the robe of the high priest. A priest is a man who represents man to God. Our Lord Jesus Christ in His humanity is a high priest. Remember His humanity resided inside the prototype divine dynasphere. He was therefore a priest representing Himself to God. He was our high priest: it is necessary to be true humanity to be a priest. Believers in Jesus Christ are also their own priest; they represent themselves to God. This is why the believer should become spiritually self-sustaining. Furthermore our Lord Jesus Christ, if He is going to rule forever as per all of the prophecies pertaining to the Millennium and the eternal state, he must be a man. A king must be a man to represent man — 2 Samuel 7 and Psalm 89. So it is the Lord Jesus Christ in His humanity that is depicted before us at this time.

We move on to the perfect passive participle of the verb εἰσενδύω which describes the dress uniform of the high priest. We translate it “being attired.” The dramatic perfect tense emphasises the existing state. In this vision our Lord is represented in the robes of the dress uniform of the high priest. The passive voice: Jesus Christ as the subject receives the action of the verb. The participle expresses the attendant circumstances, hence a circumstantial participle. While this perfect tense emphasises existing results it can be translated by the English present to give accuracy to the Greek idiom found in the passage.

Next we have the accusative singular direct object from ἱμάτιον which is the robe of a high priest. It is a robe reaching down to the feet. Again, this refers to the dress uniform of the high priest as described first in Exodus 28:2-4. Our Lord’s priestly function inside the prototype divine dynasphere resulted in maximum function of all the motivating virtues directed toward the plan of God the Father in His incarnation. Now our Lord Jesus Christ is the King priest, the great high priest who represents us to God the Father. Since every believer is in union with Christ and the Church is a kingdom of priests, according to Revelation 1:6, this priesthood is the basis for the modus vivendi of the invisible function of the Christian way of life. This is why you as a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ have a right under freedom to your privacy. The fact that you are a believer means that the invisible part of your life must be functioning toward God apart from any human influence. The only influence should come from your perception of Bible doctrine at gate four. This is a part of the fact that we wear the robe today. It is an invisible robe. We are in union with Christ and each believer is his own priest and represents himself before God. He is responsible to God for what he does with the Bible doctrine that he learns: how he uses it, how he applies it, and how he functions in the residence and modus operandi of the divine dynasphere of the Christian way of life. So since every believer is in union with Christ he shares that priesthood today. Jesus Christ is our great high priest representing Himself to God in the prototype divine dynasphere and representing us at the right hand of the Father in certain areas of intercession. Next we have in the description a connective καὶ followed by another participle: the perfect passive participle of περιζώνω, and the accusative singular of the direct object with it is ζώνη, the word for life, plus the adjective χρυσεῖον, the word for golden.

Translation: “And in the middle of the lampstands I saw one resembling the Son of man, being attired in a robe reaching down to his feet, and having belted on a golden sash across the chest.”

The golden sash is a reminder that our Lord Jesus Christ is the prince ruler of the Church, the titled head of the royal family of God or the Church Age believer. The golden sash across the chest is a reminder that Christ is the absolute ruler and the authority over the body of Christ. The Church is the body of Christ and the sash across the chest is a reminder that all authority is vested in our Lord Jesus Christ. He has delegated authority under three principles which have to do with the laws of truth — “You shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free.” All authority is delegated under category #1 truth, the laws of divine establishment. That starts with parents: the principle of organised humility, the home is organised humility. The authority is the principle of enforced humility and obedience to parents. Positive volition toward that authority is genuine humility, and that is the only way a child can ever leave home as an adult and be mature as a human being. Enforced and genuine humility then recognises all of the systems of authority that are provided in the laws of divine establishment. Then there is a second category of delegated authority, and that is involving the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. The authority under the gospel are those who have the gift of evangelism, or the power of the Word itself in witnessing. But this is a very limited system of authority. Then there is a third category which comes under Bible doctrine. Under Bible doctrine for believers we have today the pastor-teacher who is the authority for communication of Bible doctrine. That means a prepared pastor and the believer has the right to seek out a pastor who is prepared and who communicates Bible doctrine. Therefore the believer's volition becomes the individual authority, but once he goes into a church the pastor is the authority and whether he is good or bad is not the issue. If you don't like him, move on quietly but don't ever criticise a pastor. The golden sash, then, speaks of authority and the source of all authority in life related to freedom. This means that all authority in the Church is answerable to God for any abuse of that authority, and this is why pastors receive double discipline for their sins and their failures.

Three things are emphasised in this verse. First of all, Jesus Christ controls history. Secondly, Jesus Christ is the great high priest of a kingdom of priests, and the fact that the believer is a priest means that he is personally responsible to God for his own decisions. Good decisions open the door for greater decisions; bad decisions close the door and eventually destroy the options under the sin unto death. The third is that Jesus Christ is the sovereign ruler of the Church.

We move on now into verse 14 where we have a description of the hairs on His head. This is related to the time in which it was written. All beauty in the ancient world was related to the face and the feet, the hair and the eyes; the symmetry of the hands and the feet. And this explains the way people dressed in the ancient world. We see in the verse also our Lord as the one who controls history and administers judgment.

We have a transitional use of the conjunction de instead of the usual kai. It is simply translated "Now." The nominative singular kefalh gives us our subject. We go to the head which always includes the face, of course. The possessive genitive from the intensive pronoun a)utoj, used in the Koine Greek as the personal pronoun, third personal singular, "his head." Then comes the connective conjunction kai, "and", and it is a reference to John's vision of our Lord Jesus Christ as He appeared to the apostle on the Island of Patmos. We notice next the nominative plural from qric, for His hair, "Moreover his head and hair." Then because this is elliptical we must insert the verb to be, "is." Then we have a predicate nominative plural leukoj. Our Lord in His resurrection body, when He ascended, was 33 years old. He has the resurrection body of a 33-year-old man. We are going to have a resurrection body exactly like His, 1 John 3. We note now that our Lord was 33 when He ascended, and yet he appears very shortly after the ascension and His hair is now white. White is considered to be pure and is even considered to be a sign of beauty, but that is not the issue here when it says, "white like wool," which means the hair is thick, and "like snow," xiwn. The white hair of our Lord Jesus Christ denotes the shock of bearing our sins in His own body on the tree. When our Lord Jesus Christ was on that cross every sin that has ever been committed in the human race was imputed to him and judged. This gives us some concept of the tremendous shock to our Lord in being judged for our sins. This is emphasised in the two analogies: like wool and like snow. White wool is a reminder that Jesus Christ is the Lamb of God, the efficacious sacrifice for our sins; the whiteness of snow indicates the impeccability of Christ residing and functioning inside the prototype divine dynasphere. Because of His impeccability our Lord was qualified to go to the cross and be judged for our sins. The white hair, like the scars in our Lord's hands and feet, are the visible manifestations of the price He paid for our sins on the cross. The white wool speaks of His perfect impeccable sacrifice; snow emphasises our Lord's qualifications to be our substitute, to take our place for judgment of sin and for the entire human race. So in effect what John is seeing here is what he said in the first chapter of his gospel — John 1:29, "Behold the lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world." While the first phrase emphasises the judgment of our Lord on the cross, the next phrase in context emphasises future judgment. In the first phrase Christ is portrayed as saviour of the world; in the next phrase he is seen as judge of the world.

The next phrase has to do with the eyes of our Lord Jesus Christ. We have the connective use of the conjunction kai, and the nominative plural subject of qalmoj, plus the possessive genitive of a)utoj, "and his eyes." Again, because of the ellipsis we insert the verb to be. Next we have a comparative participle o(j. Then the comparison is completed with two words: the predicate nominative floc which means flame, and with it the descriptive genitive singular of the noun pur — "flame of fire." This refers to judgment.

There are two categories of judgment we will note in this context. This is personal judgment in verse 14. When we get down to the bronze we are going to see another kind of judgment and that is national judgment which takes us back into our subject of historical trends. "And his eyes a flame of fire" is individual. It is not only true in the historical trend of people collectively but it is true individually: we are the products of our own decisions.

The first principle of the flame of fire: Jesus Christ will not ever tolerate arrogance. When it says "a flame of fire" it is speaking of the fact that our Lord personally is going to do a lot of judging. For example, John 5:22,23 --- "For not even the Father judges anyone, but he has given all judgment to the Son, in order that all may honour the Son, even as they honour the Father. He who does not honour the Son does not honour the Father who sent him." So the Lord Jesus Christ has charge of all judgment. For the unbeliever salvation is always offered before judgment; for the believer, grace is offered before the judgment seat of Christ. The provision of logistical grace to the believer in time and the temporal security that goes with it — as well as eternal security — always precedes the evaluation of any believer at the judgment seat of Christ after our resurrection. Decision from human volition is always the issue in human history and in every phase of history called the angelic conflict. For the unbeliever the option is to face Christ as saviour in time or be judged in eternity. But the issue here is really for the believer. It is true that our Lord's eyes are as a flame of fire for the last judgment — all unbelievers will be assembled and judged at the end of human history. For the believer the option is to recognise Jesus Christ as Lord in time or be evaluated at the Rapture with loss of any reward. Therefore this part of the vision emphasises the fact that human life was designed by God to make decisions that relate to the Lord Jesus Christ. Individually the greatest of all decisions is to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and receive eternal salvation. After that the believer must make constant decisions. There is only one one-shot decision in history that gives salvation and eternal security. Thereafter every decision is a daily decision and all decisions require that you constantly evaluate your life, take a look in your own soul, and see what is your scale of values. To believe in Christ cancels any judgment in eternity but the issue then is not eternal security, that was settled at salvation; the issue is Bible doctrine, the Word of God. Jesus Christ is the living word; doctrine is the written Word. To put Christ first in your life you must give first place to Bible doctrine.

By application of this there is also the issue of temporal security for the believer: to make daily decisions to live inside the divine dynasphere; to learn Bible doctrine is to recognise Jesus as Lord; daily decisions regarding rebound — entering gate one, the filling of the Spirit; decisions with regard to perception of doctrine results in basic impersonal love; gate three, enforced and genuine humility. Without the first three gates your decision to learn doctrine are useless unless you have objectivity from impersonal love, enforced and genuine humility which becomes teachability for gate four which is the momentum gate, perception and application of doctrine; gate five, love of God. You cannot possibly love God unless you have Bible doctrine resident in your soul from the function of gate four, you have to make daily decisions without coercion.

Pre-degenerate thoughts

Degeneracy has many forms and is always a functional evil. All degeneracy starts with arrogance. Arrogance is a part of gate 1, cosmic one, and preoccupation with self when carried out leads to psychosis, neurosis and many other things. It also results in the principle that we are the products of our own decisions and that an arrogant nation is a self-destructive nation. But you never begin by just suddenly breaking through all barriers and moving into degeneracy. Instead there is a thought pattern which comes first. It begins when there is rejection of all kinds of authority.

Degeneracy comes in many forms. It always takes the form of violence as well as the phallic cult type of operation. It all has to begin somewhere and it begins when a maximum number of people through their own decisions become involved in the cosmic system.

Where degeneracy began in relationship to arrogance in the USA was after the second world war on the college campus when they lowered standards and allowed people in who had no respect for academic authority. From this and what was taught there were certain things that people began to think. For example: There is no such thing as an absolute or eternal truth. To a person involved in academic arrogance the assumption that everything is relative and everything changes opens the door to rejection of authority and inevitable degeneracy. To hold convictions is to be narrow-minded; to stand on principle is to be bigoted; people demand that both sides and every side of a subject is taught without anything indicating right or wrong, good or bad. This opens the door of course for socialism and communism and for many of the attitudes that we have today. It opened the door for violence on the campus, strikes, and all of the other things that have nothing to do with an education. The involvement in mob violence and mob activity is typical of the beginning of degeneracy.

A second kind of thinking that leads to degeneracy is that material change is progress. This is the assumption that material change such as electronic computers, guided missiles, wonder drugs — which are beneficial overtly and provide many wonderful things for us — when leaned on and people say that scientific invention and improvement is beneficial, they have rejected in effect the laws of divine establishment and the system of authority set up in it and have accepted scientific phenomenon as a substitute and this leads to degeneracy.

A third attitude which is related to the mental attitude of cosmic one gate one — arrogance, vanity, jealousy, bitterness, etc. is the concept that physical survival is the highest goal. This is the assumption that mere physical survival is all that counts in life and some believe there is nothing worth dying for. The phrase that began after WW2 “Better to be red than dead” or “coexistence is no existence.” So we no longer hear stirring concepts related to honour and integrity in the individual soul.

Another concept which has developed is that friendship can be purchased by money. This led to the whole change in US foreign policy which has now placed it in a very compromising position. Americans abroad are now subjected to all kinds of violence.

Another attitude that was developed in the early sixties is that people are born equal. This is not true. The Bible teaches that people are born free, not equal. Man is born with a free will as the major function of his soul and as he matures he is free to exercise his own volition apart from coercion. He is free to express his opinion without jeopardising his safety, and to determine his course of life in time as well as in eternity. A slave is a person whose will is in the possession of another. The more decisions the Federal Government has made for Americans over the past three decades the closer they have been to slavery. From this delusion of course is the concept that discernment and discrimination is evil. Nothing could be further from the truth. The delusion contends that to be selective about friends and associates is undemocratic and to attempt to make everyone equal actually destroys freedom, individuality, and personality. The only true basis of equality in mankind is the area of regeneration.

Another factor that is leading to degeneracy is the idea that the majority determines what is right. This delusion that the majority is right when in reality majority rule is simply a technique for making decisions. In many cases majority rule is rule by force rather than by law. That is degeneracy. You cannot solve the problems of life by means of violence. When people get away from their common law they are in trouble. Right is determined by Bible doctrine, not by what the majority thinks about anything.

One of the great tragedies that has led to the degeneracy of the moment is the fact that most people believe that crime can be removed by gun legislation. There are always those who feel that private citizens have no business with weapons and these herd leader types feel that people should submit meekly to violence if the duly constituted public defender is not on hand to protect them. Their arguments run like this:

1. Guns are dangerous, you might shoot yourself with one.
2. Guns invite the feeble minded to use them in a fit of temper.
3. The prevalence of guns, especially hand guns, constitutes a hazard to police work.
4. Guns are used by criminals and should be prohibited by law-abiding citizens.
5. You should not resist a criminal because someone might get hurt.

This reasoning approximates the concept that because a certain number of children are born idiots the entire population of this country should be confined to playpens and fed with spoons. Obviously guns are dangerous, they were intended to be so, they would be useless if they were not dangerous. So are cars, so are blondes, so are oil stoves, so are electric fans and so is surgery. The way to meet danger is with knowledge of course.

Other concepts that have led to our present status quo: War fare can be outlawed by disarmament; internationalism can solve man's problems [internationalism complicates man's problems]; environment is the solution to man's problems.

Temporal Security

Temporal security relates to logistical grace. All logistical grace comes from the integrity or holiness of God, composed of His justice and perfect righteousness. His righteousness was imputed to us at salvation and we now have a grace pipeline with the justice of God at one end and the righteousness of God at the other. Down this pipeline comes logistical grace, the reason we are alive, the reason we have food, shelter, clothing and certain limited blessings which are related to logistical grace. This is also the basis for all the security we need in time. Reason: because of the prosperity test.

We are facing the prosperity test and we are flunking it. Reason: There are always two issues in the prosperity test, freedom under the laws of divine establishment and security. Security becomes an issue not for those who have not but for those who have under the concept of prosperity. We are trading our freedom for that mess of pottage called human security. Now the security is actually in the freedom. Freedom is the source of the prosperity and it is the source of our security under category one truth, the laws of divine establishment, and category three truth, the laws of Bible doctrine.

But when people become security minded there are two things that happen. Those who have succeeded and prospered under the dominance of the industrial complex obviously and normally want to retain what they have. Those who have not become envious, setting up motivating evil under gate one, cosmic one. They become jealous and therefore they accept some system of redistribution of wealth, some system of the welfare state. And between the two groups they start emphasising security to the destruction of human freedom. One group, those who have, set up one system. Those who have not set up another system. One system says “We will retain what we have and you’re not going to take it away from us, we have a right to it” — which is true. But the other group say “We are going to take it away from you even if it means revolution.” Therefore, freedom gets lost. And this is the trend where we find ourselves today and we are losing out in the prosperity test. Everyone has the right to fail or succeed and everyone should therefore take the consequences of his own decision.

Temporal security for the believer

When you start to make decisions on the basis of security you provide you have entered gate one of cosmic one, arrogance, because man is not capable of providing security. Security must come from the One who controls history and all of our security is related to our residence and function inside the divine dynasphere, not inside the cosmic system. Therefore you have pseudo security set up in the cosmic system.

For the believer all security is provided by residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. For the client nation to God, freedom through military victory. The principle and the historical trend: Good decisions open the doors and options for greater decisions. Bad decisions close the doors and destroy the options. To use one’s volition as a believer to reject and repudiate the provisions of logistical grace and the mandates to reside and function in the divine dynasphere means to accept a substitute and all systems of pseudo security are related to residence and function inside the cosmic system.

Verse 14b is not a lake of fire sentence, “His eyes were like a flame of fire,” but this sentence refers to the believer who fails in this life with regard to the cosmic system. So verse 14 becomes very important as a challenge to human volition in the angelic conflict. The issue here is a believer seeing the Lord Jesus Christ in all of His glory and that glory includes the power to judge any one of us at any time under any circumstance, and to make life such a horrible, miserable thing that we can’t stand up under the pressure. Only inside the divine dynasphere can we handle the pressure.

Because Jesus Christ is God and has perfect integrity and holiness He also judges the believer in time who fails to utilise the grace provision of logistical support. The cosmic believer then spends his life being judged, being disciplined, and being used by God for people testing.

Divine justice has options. To bless the believer in the divine dynasphere. To bless him individually and to bless the nation in which he lives with an historical uptrend. Or to punish the believer living in the cosmic system and to punish the client nation in which he finds himself with historical downtrend. Our Lord with His white hair portrays the privileges of grace while our Lord with His eyes like a flame of fire emphasises the option to grace, divine justice in time.

1981 Revelation

Lesson #43

43 01/21/1982 Revelation 1:15 Doctrine of historical trends (pt. 1)

Historical judgment; divine deliverance

Verse 15, the ministry of our Lord in historical judgment — kai plus pouj; feet, o(moioj, were like, xalkolibanoj, bronze. Bronze in the ancient world was an alloy of copper and tin and associated with historical judgment. For example in Lamentations 3:6-8 it was used to illustrate the 5th cycle of discipline.

Bronze is associated with divine judgment on the believer who lives in the cosmic system, 11 Kings 25:7. It is used for historical disaster in the national economy as a part of divine discipline of a client nation to God, Deut. 28:23-25. Here in Revelation 1:15, we have “And his feet were like bronze,” a reference to the historical judgment of nations of the earth from the principle that Jesus Christ controls history.

“as” — o(j introduces a second analogy. It indicates the manner in which something appears or proceeds, or it refers to its quality. Then we have a perfect passive participle, “when it has been refined.” Puorow, refined “in a furnace” has to do with historical trends that result in the destruction of a nation, e)n plus the locate of kaminoj. The furnace is the area which introduces the principle we have been studying, a nation does not go down because of some tragedy. We are collectively the products of our own decisions even as we are individually. Whenever a nation goes down it goes down from the accumulated erroneous decisions.

The concept here

1. The furnace of divine judgment is constantly judging nations like the heat of the furnace refines the bronze, removing the impurities. Many nations, especially client nations to God, must undergo testing so that portion of the population which is negative will not infect and destroy that part of the population which is positive. So many many times disaster will come to a nation because God intends to continue using that nation as a client nation to God. But that nation cannot function in its client nation status if for some reason the negative and degenerate part of the population continues unchecked.

Principle: If degeneracy is unrestrained it will eventually influence those who are moral, who are good, and who are not degenerate. Therefore degeneracy is periodically destroyed in history. This explains the fall of certain nations that are not client nations to God and the eventual destruction of certain power mad groups who use violence to control, to gain authority and to enslave people.

2. National disaster is designed to remove the impurities of a population where the nation is going to be perpetuated as a client nation. No nation can survive without national disaster which removes its scum and gives opportunity for it to be perpetuated in history. It is the disaster that doesn't remove the scum that means the end of the line for that nation.

4. The heat of divine judgment refines the population of a nation.

The second analogy to historical judgment has to do with the voice of our Lord. The nominative singular subject fwnh, voice; "many," poluj plus u(dor, many waters. Just as with bronze this has the connotation of judgment. For example in Ezekiel 1:24 it is used for the administration of divine judgment through military defeat.

Principle

1. Historical judgment means historical disaster. Historical disaster is portrayed by two analogies: bronze in the refining process, and the noise of a successful army pursuing and destroying.

2. Bronze refers to economic disaster while the voice of many waters refers to military disaster.

3. Our Lord used His voice in BC 700 to destroy 185,000 Assyrian infantry and deliver Jerusalem and the client nation.

4. Our Lord will use His voice again at the second advent to deliver Jerusalem again from invading armies of the Armageddon campaign.

So the whole connotation here has to do with deliverance as well as judgment. The two are mingled together. But note that the deliverance is not necessarily from the disaster but deliverance in the midst of the disaster. Cf. Job 5:19-27.

Verse 19, "deliver" is natsal, hiphil stem, the causative stem. It means to rescue; "touch," nagad, to meddle. In both of these verbs you have deliverance being in disaster, not from the disaster itself. This is a promise to believers who are faithful to doctrine. We have four representative historical disasters given. The first is economic depression which in the ancient world was simply called famine.

Verse 20, “redeem”, the qal perfect of padah. It means the famine is there, people are going to starve to death all around you but although you may be hungry once or twice you are going to live through the famine.

The doctrine of historical trends

The first historical trend: Verse 15, “bronze” refers to economic judgment. The economic judgment is used to indicate the principle, the historical trend, that we are the products of our own decisions.

“Sound of many waters” is military judgment. The military judgment always comes from an outside power to indicate that while we are responsible and we by our own decisions bring ourselves to a point of economic disaster, God also judges us by military disaster. Verse 15 combines these two systems in one verse.

Economic disaster precedes military disaster and economic disaster and degeneracy always brings on the same thing. You have economic disaster plus degeneracy and when you add the two together it leads to violence and the abandonment of law, which means the abandonment of category one truth, the laws of divine establishment.

We are coming to the period when we are going to have to go through disaster. It happens every once in awhile. It will be believers who survive but no one survives apart from functioning under God’s plan — residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. No one survives in the cosmic system. Believers in the cosmic system are going to lose out and die like flies.

Since the Church Age is a dead spot in which there is no prophecy, only historical trends, it is the believer’s cognisance of doctrine which is his understanding of what’s happening. History, we must understand, is a record of man’s thoughts, motives, decisions and actions. Even though history is such a record it is still Jesus Christ who controls history.

There seems to be a contradiction in this. If we are the products of our own volition, and if history is the record of man bringing about his own disasters, then how can Jesus Christ control? There seems to be a contradiction between the sovereignty of Jesus Christ as God who controls history and the function of man’s volition. The answer in resolving the problem is the doctrine of divine decrees in which the omniscience of Jesus Christ as God knew everything that would be history and everything that would not. Everything that would be history was entered into the computer of divine decrees. The alternatives were not entered, only the realities. The printout is history. So Jesus Christ controls history because in eternity past before man was even created He knew every thought, every decision, every freewill action, of every person who ever lived. He also knew the alternatives and He also knew from divine knowledge what would have happened had we made a different decision. So we start historical trends with a fact: Jesus Christ controls history and that He has set up a system of divine laws which say that when man makes a decision “A” then certain things happen. When man makes decision “X” then something else happens, and when every decision of man individually and collectively goes into this computer and certain natural results occur. Then that decision is broken down into whether that decision was made by a believer or unbeliever in every case all the way through, etc.

The principle that Jesus Christ controls history means that nothing is ever out of control. And the principle that Jesus Christ controls history is what we learned from Job 5:19-27 where God protects the believer in economic depression, in military disaster. Therefore Jesus Christ controls history in a very special way for us as believers because as long as we are fulfilling His plan and as long as it is in His plan and His will for us to live we will continue on this earth no matter how terrible things may become. We have to remember that Jesus Christ is still in charge.

The first historical trend: Even though history is the record of man’s decisions and actions, thoughts, motivation, it is Jesus Christ who controls history.

There are two sources of judgment in history: the sovereign decisions of Jesus Christ and the erroneous decisions — or the decisions that violate truth — of mankind.

The second historical trend: The trends of history are determined in the Church Age by whether the believer chooses to live in the divine dynasphere or in the cosmic system. Those who are involved in residence and function in the divine dynasphere are going to have an absolute unique experience in eternity, something that most believers will never have. There are believers who are winners and believers who are losers. Believers who are losers are the believers involved in the cosmic system. Those who live in the divine dynasphere are going to have a special reward in eternity. It is all based upon the decisions made with regard to Bible doctrine.

When Adam and Eve were in the garden they both had access to the tree of life. The it was shut down when they fell. In heaven only a few people are going to have access to the tree of life which is the greatest perpetuation of immortal happiness, eternal happiness, that can ever exist. And it is only for a few.

The third historical trend is obviously the result of the first two plus another coming up: There are no tragedies in history. There are disasters in history but no tragedies. There has never been a disaster in history where the people involved did not make wrong decisions. So there are historical disasters but these disasters are not tragedies since individuals and nations are the products of their own decisions, not their environment. Tragedies belong to drama.

The sign that a nation is destroying itself is the collapse of the economy and the collapse of the fundamental laws of morality under the laws of divine establishment in a society. And morality doesn’t start with sex, it starts with integrity, or lack of it. Decision creates environment, not environment decision. Volition creates environment. Good decisions open options for greater decisions, bad decisions destroy options and close doors.

The fourth trend: People individually and collectively are the products of their own decisions. The decadent status of our society has been brought on by our own decisions. Everything that has happened has now come about by our individual and collective decisions. Individuals form groups, they make decisions as individuals, they make decisions as groups, and that is where we are today.

The fifth trend: The demand for power exceeds the need for power. Therefore divinely authorised authority is ignored, brushed aside, repudiated, eventually trampled.

The concept

1. The need for power is determined by the laws of divine establishment. In other words the laws of establishment always define the authority you need — parents, police, etc. But there is always some power-mad person or group who want to control everything and they cut through the laws of divine establishment.

2. The demand for power is determined by arrogance — lust, envy, greed, motivational and functional evil in the cosmic system. In other words, the demand for power exceeds the need for power — the need for power is the legitimate authority delegated by God through the laws of divine establishment, the demand for power is based upon the motivational evil — Gate 1, Cosmic 1, arrogance, lust, envy, greed, etc.

3. Legitimate power always functions in the context of legitimate authority delegated by God through the laws of divine establishment and defined in every facet of life, spiritual, social, economic, professional and national.

4. Evil and its destructive power exists to the extent that cosmic arrogance exceeds the restraints of legitimate authority and power. (Cosmic arrogance always wants to solve a problem through the use of violence.)

5. This principle is true whether in a football game where the referee loses control of the game, or a national entity where the government fails to protect freedom, privacy, property and life, or in a home where the parents have no control over the children.

6. Since we are the productions of our own volition and self-determination rather than our environment the motivating and functional evil of the cosmic system can only be restrained through enforced and genuine humility.

7. Historical trends are therefore related to the conflict between objective reality and life in the divine dynasphere versus subjectivity in life inside the cosmic system.

8. Believers are not only the products of their own decisions but the nation in which they reside is affected by their good or bad decisions. Believers deciding to live their lives in the cosmic system destroy their nation.

9. Good decisions related to living inside the divine dynasphere are reflected in national prosperity while bad decisions to live in the cosmic system of Satan are reflected by national disaster.

The sixth trend: Arrogant people and arrogant nations never see their own inconsistencies, only the inconsistencies of others.

The seventh trend: Jealous people and envious nations never see their own sins and their production of evil, only the sins and evil of others.

The eighth trend: arrogant individuals, groups or nations never see the disastrous consequences or evil results of their own cosmic involvement or evil modus operandi. Preoccupation with self to the exclusion of objective reality is the blindest problem in history.

The ninth historical trend: There is no progress in innovation without truth.

Often progress leaves truth behind. Any form of progress that rejects truth automatically parlays itself into disaster. Today we are the victims of false information but we do not have to accept this false information, and we are protected from all forms of false information today by Bible doctrine. The greatest protector against any false reporting in the news or the media is the book of Revelation.

Principle

1. Innovation without truth is retrogressive; innovation without a system is destructive. All good innovation is either based on truth or on a system. All destructive innovation is based upon the absence of truth or the absence of a system. In other words innovation must not precede truth or a system. Truth has to do with Bible doctrine and innovation based on truth becomes true progress. Innovation based on a lie is false progress. The same is true with regard to progress based on absence of a system.

2 Innovation without a system runs the gamut from modern art, religious cults, rock and hard music, weirdo poetry, socialism, communism, the welfare state, redistribution of wealth.

3. Religious cults are innovation without Bible doctrine, innovation without truth.

4. Rock and hard music ignores basic systems in harmony, melody, and so on, and therefore the innovations are strident discord.

5. The innovation of Kenesian economics ignores the most basic truths of human value, supply and demand and free enterprise.

6. Innovation which ignores basic strategy and tactics in the military means military disaster.

7. Innovation is often related to progress. But innovation is never progress unless it is related to something, a system that has proved itself or to truth. This is the principle under which we study Bible doctrine: learn the basics of doctrine before you innovate and make multiple applications. Innovation without truth is application of doctrine without cognisance of doctrine. Innovation without a system is application without truth, the absence of wisdom, the instability and eventual disaster from the downtrends of history.

This therefore becomes one of our most important concepts in modern life because we have assumed that so many innovations are progress when many of them have become detrimental. The basic issue is: Is there a system behind it? Innovation imposed on others without their consent is the great evil of the time in which we live. In the name of crusades, in the name of the better good for the greater number, in the name of many so-called crusading epigrams, innovations are imposed on others without their consent and therefore these innovations destroy freedom.

The tenth historical trend

1. When people emphasise peace and security they lose freedom and truth and its by-product of prosperity and self-determination.

The laws of divine establishment emphasise human freedom as the heritage from God, the major issue in the angelic conflict. The laws of divine establishment are designed to protect human freedom and human self-determination, and to give people the right as well as the freedom to make decisions leading to their success or to make decisions leading to their failure. People have a right to fail or succeed from their own volition, their own decisions, their own ability or lack of ability, the overestimation of their ability or their lack of ability.

2. In this historical era of nuclear phobia and the bomb syndrome man has come to emphasise peace as the panacea of life and to compromise with it the true concept of freedom.

3. Yet freedom, not peace, remains the most precious commodity of mankind in the function of self-determination. It is a part of human heritage related to the truth of God. John 8:32.

4. Freedom and truth cannot be divorced except my man's use of freedom to reject truth in its three categories — the laws of divine establishment, the Gospel, Bible doctrine. When man uses his freedom to reject truth he finds himself deluded by the false prophet, the false politician.

Historical trend number eleven: History is often the story of how the weak control the strong

Principle

1. Weak, insecure, irresponsible, thoughtless arrogant people of control policy, procedure, and people in the following areas: social life, love life, business life, professional life, culture, government, and even in some churches as well.

2. Through arrogance, self-centredness, and preoccupation with self, the weak in society come to dominate the strong.

3. The illustration: This is why a nagging wife who makes scenes in public can dominate a thoughtful, courteous, humble husband or visa versa.

4. This is why scum are possessive of and often control nice people. That is in both personal friendship as well as in the problems of class association in a national entity.

5. This is why irrational, self-righteous crusaders often dominate in politics and government administration.

6. And this is how a power-mad, irresponsible press, without integrity or a sense of responsibility can dominate and even destroy great leaders.

7. Inside the divine dynasphere the battle is the Lord's and you win. Inside the cosmic system the battle is yours and you lose.

8. There are no winners in the cosmic system, only categories of losers.

9. There are no losers in the divine dynasphere, only categories of winners.

The twelfth historical trend: Therefore human history is the narrative of man's weaknesses, not his strength.

Principle

1. There would be no human history without man's wrong decisions.
2. This is a part of the great conflict in each human soul between arrogance and humility. This conflict is the basis for weakness and wrong decisions. For example, if you think you are strong and you are really weak and become entangled in a system stronger than you are, the cosmic system, then you have chosen to be weak and to contribute to the concept of weakness in history. Under humility, if you know that you are weak and become strong by choosing the divine dynasphere then you as a believer have opted for the strength and stability of history, and the perpetuation of history to its final conclusion in the Millennium.
3. Once Adam ate from the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil history became a matter of human self-determination — the use of human volition to exercise the options of the soul. Until man ate of that tree he operated under three categories of trees in the garden — the trees that were a blessing to his soul (He had perfect happiness of soul), the trees which were good for food, a blessing for the body and related happiness, prosperity and blessing to a correlation between body and soul, and the tree of life which meant at that time immortality with perfect happiness.
4. The historical trends of the Church Age include options compatible with the divine plan which is the residence and function inside the divine dynasphere, or options which are subservient to the ruler of this world through residence and function in the cosmic system. Every believer must decide in principle which way he is going to go because as goes the believer so goes the client nation to God.

While man is free he is also weak. Bad decisions are made inside the cosmic system and they destroy future options so that the believer through the exercise of his own free will loses future options and through that same self-determination becomes the slave of Satan who is the ruler of this world and controls everyone outside of the divine dynasphere.

The twelfth historical trend — concepts:

1. Weakness implies problems plus inability to cope with those problems.
2. Those who seek solutions by improving their environment inevitably create problems which destroy their environment.
3. Through living inside the divine dynasphere circumstances become the servant rather than the master when we become slaves to our circumstances.
4. Good decisions turn problems into solutions without creating or intensifying those problems from the solutions.
5. The power of Bible doctrine to change men's lives is the expression of non-meritorious human volition in the function of freedom. The power of the cosmic system on the other hand to change lives is the meritorious and arrogant expression of human volition inside the cosmic system which is the environment of tyranny and slavery.

6. Inside the divine dynasphere men's lives are changed by doctrine. Inside the cosmic system men's lives are changed by arrogance and evil.

7. Man can only enter the divine dynasphere through grace. The non-meritorious expressions then of human volition are the issue, and to learn these non-meritorious expressions you have to start with basic doctrine such as the Rebound technique.

8. So in the historical phase of the angelic conflict man must be free to succeed. Man must also be free to fail. True freedom is the source of true success. It is also the source of true failure. Freedom, of course, carries the responsibility of making decisions on the basis of integrity, not on the basis of motivating and functional evil. Man must be so inculcated with Bible doctrine that he will take the responsibility for his own decisions in life plus their consequences. Therefore we start by recognising our own weaknesses and recognition is neither degrading or demeaning, provided the recognition comes from perception of doctrine and not some emotional folderol. All solutions in life begin with recognition of the fact that man is fundamentally weak which begins the search for the right power, a system greater than our weaknesses. And we have the ability to enter into this because of free will. Free will gives us the ability to choose for the divine dynasphere rather than the cosmic system. Man's decisions leading to failure brings him to his knees, to the end of his own resources, and this is where truth becomes meaningful.

Principles

1. Weakness in the unbeliever makes evangelism meaningful, while weakness in the believer makes Bible doctrine meaningful.

2. If man is not free to fail he cannot orient to his need of Christ and if the believer is not free to fail he cannot orient to his need of Bible doctrine.

3. By taking the responsibility for his own failures and bad decisions the believer learns his inherent and acquired weaknesses, and therefore he seeks for the power system greater than his weaknesses, greater than himself. The key is learning Bible doctrine, it is greater than we are.

4. The desire to express positive volition in solution is often the way man comes to believe in Christ, or the way a believer becomes consistently positive toward Bible doctrine.

5. Therefore, a demonstration of your weaknesses, your total helplessness, through personal or historical disaster, becomes the basis, the motivation, the means of expressing positive volition toward God's perfect plan and God's perfect system.

6. There is a small price we pay for our freedom. We must tolerate all stages of spiritual growth around us. We must tolerate all categories of bad taste and poor manners in others. And we are motivated to do so by going back to virtue.

Principles

1. Weakness in the unbeliever makes evangelism meaningful, while weakness in the believer makes Bible doctrine meaningful.

2. If man is not free to fail he cannot orient to his need of Christ and if the believer is not free to fail he cannot orient to his need of Bible doctrine.

3. By taking the responsibility for his own failures and bad decisions the believer learns his inherent and acquired weaknesses, and therefore he seeks for the power system greater than his weaknesses, greater than himself. The key is learning Bible doctrine, it is greater than we are.

4. The desire to express positive volition in solution is often the way man comes to believe in Christ, or the way a believer becomes consistently positive toward Bible doctrine.

5. Therefore, a demonstration of your weaknesses, your total helplessness, through personal or historical disaster, becomes the basis, the motivation, the means of expressing positive volition toward God's perfect plan and God's perfect system.

6. There is a small price we pay for our freedom. We must tolerate all stages of spiritual growth around us. We must tolerate all categories of bad taste and poor manners in others. And we are motivated to do so by going back to virtue.

Historical trend number thirteen: No nation has ever survived its prosperity after the consolidation of its three components.

In the Dark Ages there was only one component that functioned — landed aristocracy. Because of the function of that one component the major issue of history at that time was not manifest destiny but military ability to establish a sphere of influence and protect that sphere of influence. But with the Renaissance, the Reformation, and eventually the industrial revolution, we come back to the principle of manifest destiny which has three components — landed aristocracy, industrial complex, the undeveloped frontier.

Principle

1. Three prosperity components in manifest destiny: landed aristocracy, industrial complex, undeveloped frontier.

2. Once these three are consolidated the prosperity which results (They always consolidate under the leadership of industrial complex) cannot be perpetuated apart from a maximum number of believers living inside the divine dynasphere.

As goes the industrial complex (that means the economy) so goes the prosperity. And when the economy goes down it simply reflects degeneracy and therefore a military organisation from an evil nation comes along and destroys it.

What contributes to the collapse of an economy? Basically arrogance. The greater the freedom the fewer the people who are going to be extremely wealthy. You always have your extremely wealthy people and generally they became wealthy through courage, wisdom, and through having the ability and the integrity. Eventually there is always great jealousy.

This is the way it looks. The first generation works, the next generation plays, the third generation simply falls apart with the total pursuit of pleasure. Often they fall apart in the third generation through the guilt syndrome because by this time the fourth estate and others have made everyone jealous of the wealthy, envious: "Why should you have all of that money and we have none?" That means that the third generation becomes liberal out of sheer guilt reaction.

Degeneracy is anything that breaks down the authority of establishment. Degeneracy occurs as patriotism goes down. It is the redistribution of wealth; it is when a cop is a "pig"; it is when there is no appreciation of the principle of freedom through military victory; it is the destruction of privacy; it is the failure to pass the prosperity test.

3. People become so wrapped in a life of prosperity that they neglect doctrine; they ignore life inside the divine dynasphere and they transfer it permanently to the cosmic system.

4. In the cosmic system there exists the superficialities of prosperity without the capacity for it. Capacity is the foundation, it is the system. If you do not have the capacity it is innovation without the system.

5. The cosmic system offers pseudo prosperity in promotion, success, status, pleasure, approbation, social life, sexual life, without either capacity or perspective to pass the prosperity test.

6. Capacity from perception of doctrine at gate 4 of the divine dynasphere and perspective from application of doctrine at gate 4 is the issue.

7. Therefore the prosperity test is the most subtle and difficult for both the individual believer and the nation where he lives. Subtle because it requires as much, if not more, doctrine for both capacity and perpetuation of that prosperity, and difficult because the original source of that prosperity, Bible doctrine learned in the divine dynasphere, is forgotten.

Principle: Frustrated people are suckers for any power system that promises them betterment. The trouble is that power systems can't do anything for them.

[Don't ever feel sorry for the Indians. It's only when we fail to pass the prosperity test that the people who were once conquered in this country are suddenly promoted way up above us. The Indians only have rights as they would become citizens of this country and that's true of anyone. Once we flunk the prosperity test, instead of functioning under the principles of our Constitution and using freedom to fail or succeed, we start giving millions of dollars to this group and that group under operation guilty conscience.]

“And his feet were like bronze when it is being refined in a furnace.” “Bronze” means national discipline through the economy because the economy reflects the individual decisions of the people in a nation. The only way to get out of this problem is to follow the laws of divine establishment to its proper solution and re-establish economically. Or that can be rejected and instead the evil solution can be taken which is redistribution of wealth, the welfare state, socialism and communism.

48 01/27/1982 Revelation 1:16a Manifest destiny, pastor–teacher

The third vision: The vision of the sword and the stars.

Verse 16, “right,” deciój, hand, xeir. “And having in his right hand seven stars” — stars, a)star. Verse 20 interprets these stars. They are the future pastors of the seven churches. For the moment John is the pastor. Why is a star used for a pastor? It is simply because a star at the time of writing gave light. Stars send light to the earth; pastors who teach doctrine give light to their congregations. The right hand of our Lord is the hand of approval. God approves pastors who teach doctrine. Our Lord Jesus Christ approves the principle of pastors teaching doctrine to the royal family of God since He Himself has delegated the pastors to communicate His thinking. The stars in the right hand indicate the delegation of divine authority to pastors.

The provision of a right pastor is one of the more important aspects of logistical grace since doctrinal teaching from the minister is the only way of spiritual growth and momentum in the Christian life. The need for the pastor is based on the fact that the believer cannot learn doctrine on his own. Perception of doctrine must comply with the principles of academic life and discipline, objectivity and humility, teachability and, above all, Gate 1 of the divine dynasphere, the filling of God the Holy Spirit. In other words the first three gates of the divine dynasphere sustain perception of Bible doctrine.

This verse sixteen is a verse of grace before Judgment. There are two places where the principle of grace before Judgment is pertinent. Grace always precedes Judgment as an historical trend, first to the individual believer. God never puts discipline on us without a grace period. During that grace period we are making good or bad decisions so that we are the products of our own decisions. Before divine discipline comes to us we are still under the function of our volition and we have warning — grace warning. This is also a principle of national modus operandi in which before God uses the five cycles of discipline against a nation, before each cycle is used, there is a grace period before judgment.

So we have grace before judgment, blessing and the alternative, cursing, related to the individual volition of the believer in the Lord Jesus Christ. The blessing is related to the communication of Bible doctrine from pastors called in this vision “the seven stars.”

The alternative to the perception of doctrine is divine discipline which is portrayed in the next phrase: “and,” kai plus the nominative singular subject of the noun r(omfaia refers to a broadsword. In Revelation 6:8 the rider of the fourth horse known as “death” killed one fourth of the population of the earth during the Tribulation, and he did it with the sword of starvation, disease and wild animals.

The Word of God is said to be a sword, maxaira. And for those reject the maxaira of the Word, they have the r(omfaia of divine Judgment. So there is a choice of swords. Your grace period is always related to the fact that you are given doctrine before judgment. Whatever you are going to be judged for you have the chance to hear the causes and the reasons, the whys and the wherefores. You have a fair trial before you are judged by God, that is the principle. All divine judgment is preceded by a fair trial. The fair trial is the dissemination of Bible doctrine. You may or may not accept that doctrine and therefore you may be screaming one of these days: “Why did God let this happen to me?” This simply means that you ignored the grace period.

Then there is the r(omfaia, divine judgment. It is interesting that the maxaira is a very short sword with great flexibility, moving in all directions with a point. The r(omfaia is a very broad sword and obviously a hacking instrument. So one represents the grace of God through Bible teaching, the other represents the punishment of God through divine discipline.

The broadsword always represents military disaster. We will see this in Revelation 2:12 where r(omfaia is used for divine discipline in the form of death from violence, crime, terrorism, revolution, and military action. This is confirmed as divine discipline in Revelation 2:16 — “repent therefore or else I will come quickly and I will make war against them [believers in the cosmic system] with the sword [r(omfaia] of my mouth”.

“two-edged,” distomoj (tomoj, sharp, di, double). Then we have another word for “sharp,” o)cu)j, which altogether means a double-edged broadsword, terrible military discipline, discipline by violence, by terrorism, by military action.

This comes from God. The present middle participle from e)k poreuomai, to go out, to come out. Divine discipline on believers in the form of human violence. But this divine discipline never comes without a grace period for changing your mind. It never comes without first of all having the opportunity to set it aside and it only comes to believers who prolong their stay in the cosmic system. The broadsword is for the believer in the cosmic system. The maxaira is for the believer in the divine dynasphere.

These believers have to be judged, they have to be taken out eventually under the sin unto death. For if the Lord is going to continue to use the client nation to God He must purge those who are negative and their influence on the Christian community.

Principle: Good decisions provide options for greater decisions and divine blessing, while bad decisions destroy the options and result in divine discipline.

The believer then has a choice: doctrine taught by a pastor or divine discipline from God in the form of becoming a victim of violence, crime, terrorism, revolution, warfare. The believer’s decision regarding doctrinal teaching determines the historical trends of his country.

The hope of the individual for salvation and the hope of the world for historical deliverance are both combined in the last part of verse 16, “face,” o)psij, outward or overt appearance. The analogy is found in two words, w(j, like, and h(lioj sun: “his outward appearance was like the sun.” The external appearance of our resurrected Christ in His glorified body. The appearance of our Lord’s resurrection body is analogous to the sun, but is the Lord shining in the power of the prototype divine dynasphere which John actually saw. The glory of our Lord's humanity resides in His impeccability, His perfect integrity related to His residence and function in the prototype divine dynasphere. And this is a resurrection appearance of our Lord to the apostle John on the Island of Patmos.

The resurrection appearances

The angel who came to roll away the stone, Matt. 28:2-4, rolled away the stone of an empty tomb. The stone was not moved to let our Lord out because He could walk through solid material in His resurrection body. The stone was rolled away to let the world in. People came to verify the fact of His resurrection.

The first appearance of the resurrected Christ was to Mary Magdalene, Mark 16:9-11; John 20:11-17.

The second appearance was to the other women, Matthew 28:9,10.

The third appearance was to Peter. He appeared on Sunday afternoon, according to Luke 24:34 and 1 Corinthians 15:5.

The fourth appearance was to the two disciples on the road to Emmaus, Matthew 16:12,13; Luke 24:13-35.

The fifth appearance was to the ten disciples (Thomas was not there, or Judas Iscariot), Luke 24:36-43; John 20:19-23; Mark 16:14.

The sixth appearance was to the eleven disciples.

The seventh appearance was to the seven disciples by the Sea of Galilee, John 21:1-23.

These seven appearances might be classified as personal resurrection appearances to friends and associates.

The eighth appearance was historical and was documentation for the benefit of five hundred believers, 1 Corinthians 15:6.

The ninth appearance was for the benefit of the positive believers in our Lord's family, James, 1 Corinthians 15:7, not a believer before the resurrection, Acts 1:14; Galatians 1:19.

The tenth appearance was again to the eleven disciples on the Mountain in Galilee, Matthew 28:16-20; Mark 16:15-18.

The eleventh appearance had great historical and doctrinal significance. It was the resurrection appearance at the ascension, Luke 24:44-53; Acts 1:3-9.

The rest of the resurrection appearances were post-ascension where our Lord would leave the right hand of the Father and make an appearance under special conditions. All of these appearances ceased after the completion of the book of Revelation.

The twelfth appearance was to the first and most famous of the martyrs, Stephen, in Acts 7:55,56.

The thirteenth appearance had great significance — the appearance to Paul on the road to Damascus, the basis for his conversion, Acts 9:3-6; 22:6-11; 26:13-18.

The fourteenth appearance was to Paul in Arabia to encourage him, Acts 20:34; 26:17; Galatians 1:12,17.

The fifteenth appearance was to Paul in the Temple, Acts 9:26-30; 22:17-21; Galatians 1:18.

The sixteenth appearance was to Paul in prison, Acts 23:11.

The seventeenth and final one was the appearance to John on the Island of Patmos, Revelation 1:12-20.

“shineth,” fainw means to shine. The static present tense is for a condition which will always and eternally exist in the resurrection body of our Lord Jesus Christ. It isn't the sun shining, it is our Lord's shining in His resurrection body.

“in his strength,” e)n plus the locative of dunamij. Lit. in his power. It refers here to the prototype divine dynasphere.

1981 Revelation

Lesson #50

50 01/29/1982 Revelation 1:17a Christ's appearances; John fainting

This seventeenth resurrection appearance continues throughout the book of Revelation. It is an awesome thought that historical trends hang on the fine thread of the believer's volition and the exercise of his options with regard to the divine dynasphere versus the cosmic system.

Verse 17, What John has recorded was so fantastic to him and the emotion was so great that he fainted. He didn't faint from shock because, remember, John has already seen our resurrected Lord on four occasions. Instead it was the emotional impact of seeing all of these things and putting them together. It was relating what he knew with his emotions and it was too much for him.

We begin with "saw," o(raw, when I had seen. It was all taken in first, "him," a)utoj. The seventeenth and last appearance of the resurrected Christ. (The eighteenth resurrection appearance of our Lord Jesus Christ will be the second advent). Then we have the word "fell," piptw, to fall, "at his feet."

John was a mature believer but even the greatest of believers living at gate eight of the divine dynasphere simply have to have a special fuse. The understanding of our Lord Jesus Christ, the appreciation of Him, perception as to who and what He is. It is really too much and so fainting is really an emotional fuse.

"And," kai. This is an expletive use of kai. Translated "And so" or "Then." Believers must be in a rational state of concentration under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit in order to learn doctrine and to appreciate our Lord Jesus Christ. Next is "laid," tiqemi. The constative aorist refers to a momentary action which was part of the necessary assurance which was to bring John back into a state of concentration — "right hand", decioj refers to the right hand although decioj is "right"

"on me", e)pi e)gw. Assurance.

Now comes the great issue. He speaks. He begins a formal communication of world history. "Fear not" is mh fobou, Stop being afraid. John's awe has become a distraction to learning. To take in what the Lord was going to say John had to concentrate on content.

Principle: If you have fear in your soul you might have a lot of doctrine but you can't apply it. Fear is the inability to think under pressure.

In this case of John we are not really talking about fear but about awe, his respect, his total love. The point is that it must not hinder John being clear-headed to get the message.

This verse is going to terminate with the concept of motivating virtue and its relationship to perception for our Lord is going to say, "Fear not," not in the sense of being frightened but in the sense of awe.

The whole history of the world is based upon two major prophecies, both pertaining to the Lord Jesus Christ. The first advent of Christ beginning with the virgin birth, our Lord's humanity residing inside the divine dynasphere, His impeccability, His work on the cross, His resurrection, ascension and session — all of this is the first of two major systems of prophecy. The second great period of prophecy is the second advent of Christ, His return to the earth in order to function under His third royal patent.

In the meantime the Age of Israel was brought to a halt in order that we might have the Church Age, the dispensation for calling out a royal family of God. This is the dispensation of historical trends. There is no prophecy to be fulfilled in the Church Age. The next prophecy will be the rapture or the resurrection of the Church, and that will terminate the Church Age and move the royal family of God to heaven in preparation for the second advent of Christ, our Lord's personal rule on earth for one thousand years of perfect environment. Revelation chapters two and three give us the historical trends.

1981 Revelation

51 01/31/1982 Revelation 1:17b, 18 First advent and incarnation

Verse 17, "I am the first and the last," e)gw e)imi (o prwtoj kai esxatoj. Jesus Christ as eternal God pre-existed history as the first; Jesus Christ will conclude human history as the God-Man. The first and the last emphasises the uniqueness of the person of our Lord Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ as God is the author of history. He is the first as eternal God; He is the last in hypostatic union as the God-Man.

Verse 18, The glorified Christ identifies Himself for everyone. There is no "Amen" in the original in this verse.

"that liveth," zaw, to be alive. Lit. "and the living one"; "and was dead," kai ginomai, to become. Lit. "and I became dead," nekroj.

"and [now], behold [concentrate, see] I am alive," a reference to the resurrection of Christ. His deity was not subject to death. And because our Lord is now seated at the right hand of the Father, and because He will be in that status for ever and ever, we have the preposition e)ij plus the accusative plural of the noun a)iwv followed by the genitive plural of a)iwv which becomes "forever." And it means that what happened after the resurrection and the beginning of the Church Age now brings the believer into an entirely different perspective as far as God's plan is concerned. The moment anyone in the Church Age believes in Christ he becomes a member of the royal family of God.

The authority and power of the resurrected Christ is then given in the closing phrase of this verse, "and", kai, "furthermore," "have," e)xw. Lit. "and furthermore I have." Our Lord has something very important: "keys," kleij.

A key goes with the volition of every individual. The issue here is volition. The Lord says: "I have the keys." Each one of us has related to our volition a key. The key has to do with the angelic conflict. We were created with freewill to make decisions for or against God. The angelic conflict is resolved by the fact that the human soul possesses freewill, the only thing it had in common with the angelic creation. Therefore the keys are plural because a key goes to each volition. Your use of positive volition unlocks many doors which glorify

God and give you great blessing and happiness in life. Positive volition experientially is related to your residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. Negative volition is related to your residence and function in the cosmic system. Your attitude to doctrine is the determining factor as far as everything is concerned.

“of hell and death,” a(dhj and qanatoj. Hades is merely where people go after they die if they are unbelievers. What is the key to Hades? It means that if you reject Jesus Christ as your saviour there is a special door unlocked for you in Hades and you go there by your own volition. The Lord holds the key.

1981 Revelation

52 01/31/1982 Revelation 19, 20 Edifying and selecting future pastors

Verse 19, We have a mandate in this verse for the deposition of the world history as written in the book of Revelation: “write,” grafw o)un, “therefore write.” The constative aorist refers to an action extended over a period of time. In other words Revelation was not written at one sitting — “the things which thou hast seen”, Lit. “the things you are about to see”; “the things which are” lit. “what is”; “things which shall be hereafter”, lit. “and what is about to come to pass,” ginomai: After the rapture of the Church, world history after the Church Age.

Verse 19, corrected translation: “Therefore, write what you are about to see, both what is [the historical trends of the Church Age], and what shall occur [the prophetic events after the Church Age] after these [the historical trends of the Church Age].”

“After these” refers to the up and down trends of history during the Church Age. This anticipates the content of Revelation chapters two and three in which the role of the royal family of God in this dispensation is clearly delineated. The believer in this dispensation has an obligation to God, and a very personal one. Therefore the dramatic need for every believer to live inside the divine dynasphere every day of his life. Living in the divine dynasphere produces the uptrends in history. The downtrends of history are based upon the believer being involved in the cosmic system.

In verse 20 we have the first interpretation of the apocalypse. This is anticipating the next two chapters and becomes the interpretive key to the historical trends of the Church Age.

“mystery,” musthron, a technical word as used in the New Testament. It is called a mystery in Old Testament times simply because it was something not known. There is no revelation in the Old Testament about the Church Age. The first prophecies regarding the Church Age are found in the Gospels.

“of the seven stars.” The word for “seven” in the Greek is e(pta. Then we have a)ster for “star.” The seven stars are the pastors, those who communicate Bible doctrine during this dispensation.

“in my right,” e)pi plus decioj, an idiom meaning “on my right hand.” The right hand means royal approval as well as divine authority delegated, “the seven stars are,” e)imi , “angels,” a)ggeloj, messengers. Messengers to the seven churches.

The noun a)ggeloj is not to be transliterated here but to be translated as “messenger,” At the time John wrote he was the pastor of all seven of the churches, being in residence at the pastor in Ephesus and having a non-resident ministry in six other churches. John was aware of the fact that there would be a succession of pastors. He would die and be replaced. therefore he was writing for the benefit of those seven pastors and their congregations. But he addresses those seven letters to the pastors, not to the congregations directly.

There is a principle of course. When God removes a pastor by death or by some other means it implies that God has another person to take his place. But just because God has someone to take his place it never implies that is the one they will get. Bad decisions can preclude getting the right pastor.

Corrected translation of verse 20 — “The mystery of the seven stars which you have seen on my right hand, and the seven gold lampstands. The seven stars are the messengers [pastor-teachers] of the seven churches; and the seven lampstands are the seven churches.”

Review: Jesus Christ controls history

Most people are motivated in time by things that personally stimulate or interest them, or something which they think will advance them and stimulate in some way the ego. This is all false motivation in life as illustrated by the fact that it cannot produce happiness and therefore we are taking a look at eternity as a part of our motivation for time. As far as time is concerned we are commanded to live one day at a time and of course we must live each day in the light of eternity, so we have the challenge of historical trends.

Remember that the book of Revelation is a textbook of world history and in a text book of world history from 96 AD to the end of time Jesus Christ who controls history must be presented first and foremost. Our Lord Jesus Christ is not only the issue in salvation, as per John 3:18, under His royal title of King of kings and Lord of lords He is also the temporal issue of history as well as the issue in eternal salvation. In addition to that of course our Lord Jesus Christ controls history. So there are two factors with regard to our Lord and our orientation to Him in time: He is the issue of history; He is the controller of history.

The fact that Jesus Christ is the issue of history was the subject we studied in the first eight verses of chapter one. The apocalypse of Jesus Christ, the revelation of our Lord’s royal patent, plus the history of the world from 96 AD to the end of time. And the title of the book is the apocalypse or the revelation of our Lord Jesus Christ. The Father has turned human history over to the Lord Jesus Christ. After all, Christ started history with the creation of the universe, He continued history with the creation of man, He will conclude history with the judgment of mankind.

In verse 3 of chapter one: happiness comes from perception of the Word of God, and this is emphasised in great detail in the verse — “Happy is he who teaches exegetically [happiness for the one who studies and teaches], happy are they who keep learning or hearing the words of this prophecy [believers who take in doctrine consistently].” Revelation, as the textbook of world history is divided into two parts: historical trends dealing with the Church Age and the prophetic part dealing with the Tribulation, second advent, Millennial reign of Christ, and the end of time.

Verse 4, “John to the seven churches.” These churches would be the key to historical impact in the Roman empire for over two hundred years, and specifically for the century which was to follow the writing of the book of Revelation. These seven churches, by their residence and function in the divine dynasphere would form the pivot which would sustain the first Gentile client nation [SPQR] in the time of the Gentiles.

Verse 5, “from Jesus Christ, the dependable witness” — that is, He gives us the truth about world history. The truth comes in two categories: the doctrine of historical trends and the truth in prophetic presentation starting in chapter six and going through chapter twenty-two — “the firstborn from the dead” — “firstborn” gives Him the right to control history as the God-Man even as He controlled history as eternal God before the incarnation and before the hypostatic union; “the ruler of the kings of planet earth” — a prophetic concept fulfilled at the second advent. At the present time Satan is the ruler of this world but having a very difficult time administering his rulership. And then what is significant to us, “to him who has loved us” — the fact that Jesus Christ controls history and the fact that He created the world does not keep Him from loving us even though we have messed up His world and failed Him many times; “and has released us from our sins by means of His blood” — a reference to the saving work of our Lord Jesus Christ on the cross. The blood of Christ refers to redemption toward sin, reconciliation toward man and, of course, propitiation toward God.

Verse 6, “And he has provided for us a royal power [the divine dynasphere] to function as priests to God, even his Father” — always there must be an emphasis in the divine dynasphere on the first of our two royal warrants. The Christian way of life is divided into two parts, the invisible and the visible. The invisible deals with the function of our royal priesthood whereas the visible deals with the function of our royal ambassadorship. We have two commissions, two warrants from God: every believer is his own priest, every believer is also an ambassador. As a priest everyone represents himself to God, and that means that you must live your own life as unto the Lord and must not depend upon the advice and the counsel of others. You must gather your own wisdom from your own perception of Bible doctrine. Ambassadorship is the application of that doctrine to history, and that includes man and circumstances.

“to him belongs the glory and ruling power for ever and ever.” The principle here: your happiness and blessing in life, everything that is going to turn out right for you, must be related to the glory of the Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore there is no happiness, no blessing for you as an individual or for your country as a client nation to God in the cosmic system. In the first advent, the hypostatic union and the cross, our Lord provided the basis for taking the rulership of this world from Satan, which He will do at the second advent. Jesus Christ controls history and the principle of the first advent is that the cross must always come before the crown.

Verse 7 — He is coming with the clouds and every eye shall see Him. At this point we have a transitional verse in which we note, “I am Alpha and Omega, proclaims the Lord.” The two glories of our Lord are brought together under the title Alpha and Omega, and from these two glories Jesus Christ controls history.

During the Passover period the Jews repeat three titles of liturgy taken from Deuteronomy 6:4 — “Shamah Yisrael [Hear, concentrate, O Israel], Adonai Elohenu [Jehovah or Jesus is our God, the Alpha glory of Jesus Christ], Adonai echad [Jesus Christ is unique, His Omega glory].” He is Alpha and Omega and He controls history as Alpha and Omega; “who is,” the Omega glory of Jesus Christ as the God-Man in hypostatic union; “and who was,” the Alpha glory of Jesus Christ as God; “and who is to come,” the Alpha and Omega glory revealed at the second advent. But even before the second advent there never has been a moment in history when our Lord was not in control. Therefore the final phrase of verse 8, “the total ruler,” Jesus Christ controls history. To reject the Omega glory of Christ is to be disciplined or punished by the second person of the Trinity. This explains every historical disaster to Gentiles as well as every holocaust to the Jews. The Jews suffer holocaust because they accept our Lord’s Alpha glory as the One who is the God of Israel, but they reject Jesus Christ who was crucified for their sins. The Jews who want therefore the crown before the cross inevitably face periodically in history a holocaust. The same is true of the Gentiles.

In verses 9-11 the apostle John is presenting himself as the human author of the textbook. In verse 11, “write in a book what you see,” a panorama of world history from AD 96 to the end of time; “and send it to the seven churches.” Why? These seven churches would be the basis of sustaining civilisation as well as the Roman empire as the client nation to God for over 250 years. The roster of churches in the Roman province of Asia who provided the pivot of mature believers to sustain the Roman empire as the first Gentile client nation to God is a reminder to us that we as believers in the Lord Jesus Christ have the same responsibility as they had in their day. The historical impact of those seven churches was remarkable. The question arises: What is our historical impact in the twentieth century?

Verse 12, we have to master a principle. Jesus Christ controls history. Even though history is a record of man’s thoughts, actions, decisions and motivations it is our Lord who is in control. Man can go 180 degrees away from the Lord’s will but he cannot take control of history out of the Lord’s hands. By going 180 degrees in the wrong direction simply means punishment from the integrity of God. There are two sources of judgment in history, as we have noted: the sovereign decisions of our Lord Jesus Christ and the erroneous decisions of mankind related to the cosmic system.

“I saw seven golden lampstands.” Inverse 20 the seven lampstands are seven local churches in the Roman province of Asia. And the principle: As goes the believer so goes the client nation to God; as goes the local church, so goes the client nation. Jesus Christ who controls history has selected the local church in the nation to be the means of blessing by association or cursing by association. Therefore Jesus Christ who controls history has delegated historical responsibility to the Church. Therefore when the Church advances to maturity inside the divine dynasphere there is great historical prosperity and blessing, but when the Church becomes apostate through involvement in the cosmic system there is great historical disaster to the nation, cursing by association.

Verse 13, “Son of man” is the title of our Lord in hypostatic union and this is the title He has here. The robe and the sash are the dress uniform of the high priest and they signify the authority of our Lord to bless humanity through Bible doctrine or to curse humanity through failure to comply with Bible doctrine. The golden sash is a reminder that our Lord Jesus Christ is not only the prince ruler of the Church but He controls history through the royal patents which supersede the victory of Satan over man in the garden.

Verse 14, the white hair of our Lord Jesus Christ denotes the shock of bearing our sins in His own body on the tree. White hair is often associated with great shock, pressure and disaster. In this case the greatest shock in history occurred at the cross when our sins were imputed to our Lord and every one of them was judged on the tree. The one who controls history then is the issue of history, so that “he that believeth on Him hath everlasting life, but he that does not believe in Him shall not see life, the wrath of God abideth on him.” White wool is a reminder that Christ is the efficacious sacrifice for our sins, He is the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world. His wool had to be white, as it were, as the Lamb of God. White wool is perfection, the impeccability of our Lord residing and functioning inside of the prototype divine dynasphere. “White like snow” indicates the impeccability of Christ in residence and function inside that prototype divine dynasphere — “his eyes are like a flame of fire,” this is the alternative the world faces to believing in the Lord Jesus Christ. When people fail to believe in Christ they face at the last judgment the eyes like a flame of fire. So every member of the human race has a choice between the white hair representing eternal salvation or the eyes like a flame of fire representing the last judgment. One of the greatest decision that can be made in the human race is to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.

For us who are believers there is an issue as well. The eyes like a flame of fire have two applications always. For the unbeliever eternal salvation is offered in time before the eyes like a flame of fire at the last judgment. For the believer logistical grace support in time is offered before the judgment seat of Christ in eternity and that magnificent order which our Lord provides for the believers who are faithful in the perception of doctrine — the order of the morning star, one of the highest decorations that the believer can receive at the judgment seat of Christ.

But here we have the eyes like a flame of fire reserved for those members of the human race who reject the grace of God. For the unbeliever, rejection of eternal salvation means facing the eyes like a flame of fire at the last judgment. For the believer, rejection of the divine dynasphere and the provision of logistical grace means facing the eyes like a flame of fire at the judgment seat of Christ where they can stand in a resurrection body, the white pebble, and have no new name written on it. We are then the products of our own decisions as obvious from this verse.

Verse 15, now we have the outgrowth of the eyes that flame with fire. The bronze represents both economic depression and military disaster under the 4th cycle of discipline in which the client nation is defeated in battle but retain client nation status. As a result of collective bad decisions He administers both economic depression and military defeat under the 4th cycle of discipline. The “sound of many waters” is military disaster under the 5th cycle of discipline in which the client nation to God loses its client nation status and is completely destroyed and taken over by a foreign power. The Lord usually selects the most evil nation to administer “the sound of many waters.”

Verse 16, “seven stars” are Bible-teaching pastors. God will always provide Bible-teaching pastors for positive volition. And again you have an alternative. Just as the white wool versus the eyes flaming like fire, so we have the seven stars or the short double-edged broadsword coming from His mouth. The pastors teaching doctrine and its reception means blessing, but the sharp double-edged broadsword came out of His mouth and this is divine punishment through violence. The violence can take many forms. Violence is related to social degeneration. It can be crime, terrorism, revolution, governmental persecution of Christianity, conventional and even nuclear warfare. “And like the sun his overt appearance [His resurrection body] shines in his power” — our Lord’s prototype divine dynasphere.

Verse 17, “And when I saw him,” says John [saw the resurrected Christ]. This is resurrection appearance number seventeen, “I fainted” is literally, “I fell at his feet as though dead.” The believer must either be in the interim body we receive after physical death or in the resurrection body we receive at the Rapture to appreciate our resurrected Christ. Until we have our resurrection body our rapport in seeing the Lord is impossible. “Fear not; I am the first and the last,” Jesus Christ controls history.

Verse 18, “And so the living one [the hypostatic union, our Lord Jesus Christ the God-Man], and I became dead [both spiritual somatic death of Christ on the cross], now behold I am living forever and ever,” our Lord’s third royal patent is based on His strategic victory, His death burial and resurrection, His ascension and session; “furthermore I have the keys of death and Hades” — another way of expressing the fact that Jesus Christ controls history. Jesus Christ controls history by taking anyone out of this life He so chooses in His sovereign decision. The Lord can take nations, as it were, by the fifth cycle of discipline. He can take individuals. Hades is the temporary abode of the unbeliever until history is completed. Death terminates the unbeliever’s influence on history. Our Lord removes from history certain believers, unbelievers, whose negative impact would destroy human freedom which is the issue of the angelic conflict. Hades is the prison for dead unbelievers until history is terminated with the second resurrection and the last judgment — Revelation 20. Jesus Christ controls history through judgment but in this verse He controls history through death. Therefore out of this comes a mandate ...

Verse 19, “Therefore, write what you are about to observe.” John is about to observe through several forms the fact that Revelation is the textbook of human history from AD 96 to the end of human history; “both what is, and what shall occur [the eschatological history from the Rapture to the end of time], “after these things [after historical trends].”

1981 Revelation

Lesson #53

53 02/07/1982 Revelation 2:1a Isagogics; Miletus; Heraclitus; Ephesus

Chapter 2

The first historical trend of the Church Age is mentioned in verse one.

The word “angel,” aggeloi, means messenger and it should be translated here, “to the messenger.” It is referring to a future pastor who will take over the pulpit after John disappears from the scene.

“the church,” ekklesia, “of Ephesus,” en plus the locative of Ephesus. This church resides in a local area, it is a local church. Paul founded a church in Ephesus that became the greatest church of the ancient world. It had the three greatest pastors in the ancient world — in this order: Paul, Timothy, John.

Some isagogics regarding Ephesus: Greek civilisation gradually replaced the oriental-asiatic civilisation of the Anatoleans. Ionic Greek became the language of Ephesus. It was that language that turned the whole world around. You see, all reality and life is not related to circumstances. All reality and life is related to vocabulary. Happiness is in thought. Ionic Greek became the most revolutionary, the most dynamic language of the ancient world. Next to it was Attic Greek.

Application: Some people will never truly orient to life because they have never done anything to increase their vocabulary. Then greater the vocabulary, the greater the potentiality for thought. And in the day in which we live emotion has been substituted for increasing one’s vocabulary. Therefore, emotions have become meaningless and they are reduced to their base aspect which is simply to feel good at all costs which becomes the basis for drug addiction, and a lot of things that people do trying to find some good feeling and sustain it, and prolong it, and continue it. This is, of course, part of the degeneracy that comes to any great society. When you have an entire generation of people who cannot think, then you have a generation of people who live by their feelings, by their emotions. When this happens they destroy themselves because degeneracy is the inevitable result. (Thought animates).

“write” is aorist active imperative of grafw — “write.” The culminative aorist views writing of the book of Revelation in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results: the completion of the canon of scripture, a textbook of world history from the time of John to the end of time. It presents all of the historical trends and eschatological implications of history.

“saith,” legw. It is our Lord who is speaking; “he,” o(dh, the one who is communicating these things; “holding,” kratoj denotes legal power and authority.

Lit. translation: “He [Jesus Christ] who has empowered says.” The present tense of kratew is the present of duration. It denotes what has begun in the past [the beginning of the Church Age] and continues in to the presence.

“the seven stars,” touj e(pta aster, the pastors of the seven churches.

During the course of the Church Age there will always be somewhere a pastor teaching Bible doctrine. He will be teaching the laws of divine establishment; he will communicate the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; and he will teach categorically Bible doctrine. These pastors are positioned by our Lord and given authority and power on the basis of interest or positive volition. He does it for two reasons: positive volition toward doctrine or coming judgment from God. It is Bible doctrine which is the fuel burning in the lamps and giving true light to the events of history.

e)n decioj a)utoj, “his right hand.” The hand of approval with our Lord. Jesus Christ both approves, authorises and empowers those pastors who teach Bible doctrine in the local church.

The provision of power includes the following facts for the pastor who faithfully teaches doctrine:

1. He has power from a spiritual gift, the gift of pastor-teacher.
2. His function in the divine dynasphere is both preparation and communication of Bible doctrine.
3. Through spiritual growth and divine guidance the pastor is prepared spiritually, physically, mentally, academically, and through personal character traits, to teach Bible doctrine.

4. Personal character traits include the importance of personal humility, impersonal love, objectivity, and professionalism.
5. Personal character traits include both the motivational and functional virtues plus passing momentum tests.
6. Professionalism is the ability of the pastor to study and teach and not be distracted by inconsequential tradition.

“walketh,” peripatew, keeps walking; “in the midst,” e)n mesoj e(pta luxnia — of the lampstands. The lampstands are the seven churches, a reference to local churches where Bible doctrine is taught. They become the light of history.

Translation of verse 1: “To the messenger, the future pastor of the church at Ephesus write: He who has empowered the seven stars [pastors who teach doctrine] on his right hand [the delegation of authority and power] the one who keeps walking in the middle of the seven golden lampstands [the local churches where the believers reside in the divine dynasphere and learn doctrine] communicates these things.”

We now have our first and most important historical trend of the Church Age. It is the communication and the reception of Bible doctrine. This is the basis for any historical uptrend or age of prosperity in history. There is no true prosperity apart from Bible doctrine. Though Satan has tried desperately as the ruler of this world to simulate true prosperity he always fails, it always collapses.

There are two keys to the historical uptrend: the provision of the divine dynasphere as the divine provision and divine plan for the Church Age, and the provision of the Word of God, the New Testament canon, as the permanent receptacle for Bible doctrine. From these two power systems originates the uptrend of history.

Principle

1. This verse brings together everything related to historical uptrend. It is the verse of historical uptrend. While this is the devil’s world, Jesus Christ controls history.
2. Jesus Christ controls history, however, in compatibility with human freedom. He does not contradict or coerce human freedom. The sovereignty of God and the freewill of man are related, not contradictory. He controls history through positive volition toward truth choosing the divine plan instead of Satan’s cosmic administration.
3. Therefore, there are no tragedies in histories.

4. The reason why there are no tragedies in history is because people individually and collectively are the products of their own decisions.
5. Historical disaster results from wrong decisions which destroy future options for blessing.
6. Too often people individually and collectively make wrong decisions by treating their freedom for what appears to be security, or what appears to be pleasure.
7. The exchange of freedom for security results in cosmic involvement and historical downtrend as noted by the rise of socialism, liberalism, the welfare state, redistribution of wealth, and other Satanic philosophies which offer security instead of freedom.
8. While God has not overlooked our security in logistical grace freedom is the real issue in the continuation of the angelic conflict in human history.

Through freedom the believer chooses from his freedom both eternal and temporal security as secondary considerations in the plan of God for his life. Reversing the course of historical disaster then is a matter of positive volition toward truth which is always available in every generation. In other words the uptrends of history are related to the communication and reception of Bible doctrine. The downtrends of history are related to a maximum number of people, both believer and unbeliever, living in the cosmic system.

Therefore, there are no tragedies in history, only in drama. Historical disaster is related to certain cosmic trends such as “the demand for power exceeds the need for power.” Arrogance, of course, is the motivation for evil. Arrogance, the motivating evil of the cosmic system demands power and authority not authorised by the laws of divine establishment. Therefore disaster occurs when arrogant people and nations fail to see their own inconsistencies, only the inconsistencies of others. Disaster occurs when bad decisions create bad environment known as degeneration. Disaster occurs when jealous people or envious nations fail to see their own sins and evil production, only the sins and evil production of others. Innovation without truth brings disaster. Emphasis on peace and security at any price or at the price of freedom brings disaster. Disaster comes when the weak control the strong.

By the way, the weak always manipulate the strong under the principle that the strong have integrity. Why can the weak control the strong? Why can a nagging wife control a magnificent man and vice versa? Because the strong has integrity. Why do teen-age children control their parents today? Because the parents have integrity. What makes the person strong also makes him vulnerable to manipulation. One of the first signs of degeneracy in a nation is when the weak control the strong.

Disaster is inevitable when a nation fails to pass the prosperity test.

1981 Revelation

Lesson #55

55 02/09/1982 Revelation 2:2a Ephesus; God's knowledge, omniscience

Verse 2, An estimate of the situation in Ephesus.

“I know,” οἶδα. It is used as a perfect active indicative for divine knowledge or omniscience regarding the status quo of the church in Ephesus. It should be translated, “I have known.” The speaker is the Lord Jesus Christ and He is speaking from His deity, not His hypostatic union, not from His humanity but from His deity. The present of duration denotes what has begun in the past through the omniscience of our Lord Jesus Christ as God and continues into the present.

“I have known” brings into focus one of the major issues in Biblical theology. How can Jesus Christ as God control history and at the same time man function under his freewill? That is the major question. We have the sovereignty of God and the freewill of man. The problem is they are not contradictory. It isn't the sovereignty of God versus the freewill of man. They actually function together.

Billions of years before man existed God knew. God has three kinds of knowledge. He has self-knowledge. God is eternal, His knowledge is eternal. God is sovereign, His knowledge is infinitely superior to angelic or human perception or genius. The future is as perspicuous as the past to God. Since God is a person He possesses both self-consciousness and self-determination. Therefore God as a person acts rationally in compatibility with His absolute will and perfection. God is Himself, He knows Himself. He knows Himself to be beyond comparison with any other being. God is infinite, His knowledge is without boundary or limitation. Therefore God' knowledge is never complicated with ignorance, absurdities or any of the things whereby emotion destroys the rationale of the human mind. God existed eternally, unsustained by Himself or any other source. Therefore His knowledge is as unalterable as Himself. Our Lord Jesus Christ is God. Jesus Christ controls history.

God' knowledge exists in three categories: self-knowledge, omniscience and foreknowledge. God' self-knowledge is related to the other members of the trinity as well as to Himself. God has eternally known Himself and He has eternally known the other members of the trinity. Each member of the trinity then, God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit, has perfect subjective knowledge of self and perfect objective knowledge of the other two members of the trinity.

But our understanding of this first verb in our passage does not relate to God' self-knowledge. While God' self-knowledge related to His own divine attributes and knowledge of the other members of the trinity, omniscience is a technical term relating to man. God's objective knowledge of the universe and all of its creatures is the correct definition for omniscience.

The divine decrees establish reality in human history. It is the omniscience of God which feeds the computer which we call the decrees of God. Programming of this computer which we call human history is accomplished by the omniscience of God. The divine decrees establish reality, omniscience includes all that is in the divine decrees. God is sovereign but in His sovereignty He did not interfere when He programmed the computer and He does not interfere in the printout of the computer. The computer does the work itself. God in His omniscience programmed it, God in His foreknowledge got a printout from it, but the sovereignty of God does not interfere with the freewill of man in what he wishes to think or do or how he is motivated or what he decides.

There are a lot of things which were not entered into the computer. We can call these alternatives, alternatives to motivation, alternatives to decisions, alternatives to thoughts, alternatives to actions. These are also included in the omniscience of God.

This leads in historical trends to two ways in which prosperity can exist and two ways in which historical disaster comes about. The omniscience of God knows the alternatives of history under the category of probability. The alternatives are a part of the omniscience of God.

Omniscience is defined as God knows perfectly, eternally, and simultaneously, all that is knowable, both actual and possible.

Now the foreknowledge of God must be distinguished. Foreknowledge is not the same as omniscience. Between omniscience and foreknowledge stands the computer of divine decrees. Omniscience programs the computer with historical facts — thought, decision, action, motive. Foreknowledge is the printout of the computer of divine decrees. Nothing is foreknown until it is first decreed.

When our Lord Jesus Christ spoke to John and said, "write these down," and He said with regard to the church at Ephesus, "I have known," He was speaking from His foreknowledge.

Nothing is foreknown until it is first decreed. Only the computer of divine decrees establishes reality, which means that foreknowledge follows as a printout of the divine decrees. The foreknowledge of God makes nothing certain but acknowledges what is certain, the content of the divine decrees. So when the Lord Jesus Christ communicates prophecy it is from His foreknowledge. The omniscience of God, the omniscience of Jesus Christ, fed the facts into the computer but the one who talked to the apostle John was the Lord Jesus Christ speaking from His foreknowledge.

Therefore we have a concept with regard to the fact that the sovereignty of God and the freewill of man coexists in human history and that the sovereignty of God may reach down and punish man based upon His integrity, or He can prosper man based upon His integrity, based upon the principles that are involved, but He never interferes. Only man has the temerity to interfere with the privacy, the rights, the freedom, the functions of other people.

“works,” the accusative plural direct object from e)rgon plus the possessive genitive of the personal pronoun sou. Lit. “I have known your accomplishments.” The word e)rgon means accomplishment or production. The result of the Christian modus vivendi, royal priesthood, the invisible part of the Christian way of life, in the function of our royal priesthood.

Next we have the doubling of the conjunction kai. It is kai kai and when you have it in that form it is translated “both and.” In between there is a clause or two which is involved in the “both and” connotation.

“labour,” kopoj, hardship, trouble, difficulty, toil, pressure, labour, work. Should be translated here, “both the strenuous effort.”

“patience,” u(pomonh, patience, endurance, fortitude, steadfastness, perseverance. Should be translated “perseverance.” The noun connotes courageous endurance and refers to residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. Persistence in functioning inside the divine dynasphere. And this means both positive volition toward Bible doctrine and consistent use of the rebound technique to avoid spending too much time in the cosmic system.

Corrected translation: “I have known your accomplishments, both the strenuous efforts and your perseverance ...”

“and,” kai, furthermore. This advances the argument; “canst not,” is dunh , the present middle indicative of dunamai, the verb. A few people. the church at Ephesus, are carrying the whole Roman empire at this moment. Believers advancing to maturity are actually saving the country. Translation: “furthermore you are not able.” The present tense is a customary present. It denotes what habitually occurs or maybe reasonably expected to occur when the believer reside and functions inside the divine dynasphere.

“bear” is bastazw and this refers to the believer only who is inside the divine dynasphere. It does not refer to those who are wasting their lives in the cosmic system; “evil,” — kakoj means evils. It is a reference to categories of evil [because it is in the plural] which result from residence and function in the cosmic system.

Corrected translation so far: “I have known your accomplishments, both the strenuous efforts and perseverance, furthermore you are not able to tolerate categories of evil ...”

The Doctrine of Evil

1. Evil is the adverse trend of society. It is the destruction of society, the malfunction of society, the removal of the legitimate authority and its function under category one truth, the laws of divine establishment.

Evil is Satan's policy and function as the ruler of this world. Evil is Satan's failure to produce a system of good in mankind and in society that would bring in a pseudo millennium. Evil is Satan's system by which he administers the rulership of this world. Satan cannot restrain sin as the ruler of this world and Satan's human good is inevitably parlayed both into sin and evil. So evil then is the modus operandi and the modus vivendi of Satan as the ruler of this world.

All evil has two sources: sin and erroneous thought or human good and erroneous thinking. Evil includes sin, human good and all thinking motivation; inevitably, then, the function of mankind in the cosmic system. Evil is the function and innovation of that person who is consistently involved in the cosmic system.

2. The origin of evil. Evil originated and existed before human history. That means that evil overlapped from some previous creature existence. And the means by which it was transmitted from previous creature existence to human history is Satan himself. The origin of evil is Satan's genius to devise a system to oppose God. So evil originated in a higher form of creation; it originated in angelic creation. It originated with the greatest of all creatures to come from the hand of God, Satan himself.

Profile of Satan

This originator of evil is the highest of all creatures. He is the ruler of at least a third of all angelic creatures. As the ruler of all fallen angles he is so described in Matthew 8:28; 9:34; 12:26; Luke 11:18,19 and other passages. If ever there was a super creature it is Satan or the devil, or as he was originally known Lucifer the son of the morning.

Satan is the great antagonist of the angelic conflict. As a super genius he is the greatest organizer who has ever lived. But along with all of this facade of administrative ability he is the original murderer. There are two sides to him — the attractive side and the evil side. And where evil exists, no matter how great the attraction, the attraction amounts to degeneracy.

Since the fall of man Satan has been the ruler of this world. He is so described in Luke 7:5-7; John 12:31; 14:30; 16:11; 2 Corinthians 4:4; Ephesians 2:2. As such he has put his genius to work and he has set up a system of administration whereby his attractiveness and his evil can function side by side. Satan has devised a system whereby people can be nice, lovely, wonderful, as far as society is concerned — society gives them a high mark — but behind that facade of good, of sweetness and light, there lurks a person who is evil and destructive, not only to society but to the truth, Bible doctrine. And the system that Satan has developed with regard to human beings so that they always appear good, even though they are evil, is a system which we call arrogance; only it is not called arrogance, it is called self-respect, it is called hypocrisy, it is called self-righteousness.

While arrogance is a temporary stabiliser it cannot possibly keep the person from coming to a maximum function of evil which we call degeneracy. And degeneracy too often is related to the gutter instead of to where degeneracy is spawned, in churches, in academic classrooms, by erroneous thinking. But the erroneous thinking is related to arrogance and therefore there is no stability so that you have sweet Dr Jeckle walking around being complemented by society when in reality he is Mr Hyde. And eventually Mr Hyde wins and then society is degenerate.

Satan has to have an overall plan. His plan as the ruler of this world is related to a number of things, including racing for the tape, the tape being the Millennium. The second advent of Christ introduces the Millennium. Satan would like to introduce a perfect world which would exclude the Millennium. And the more the genius of Satan works toward producing a perfect world the more the world goes into degeneracy when it follows his plan. This proves that the greatest plans that man can devise cannot solve the problems of the world.

Satan's plans always look good to the stupid but they inevitably result in degeneracy. To the extent that we permit socialism into our country, to that extent we have degeneracy developing. Note: Systematic Theology, Vol. 2, p100-111, L.S. Chafer.

Believers are distracted by secondary things so that the very objective of the Christian life, the purpose of logistical grace by which we are supported, is all set aside by the believer's involvement in the cosmic system. Being so involved they get off the track and become a chief source for the production of evil, the Satanic system. This, of course, means failure to glorify the Lord Jesus Christ.

Satan has strategy regarding nations. He also has strategy regarding unbelievers, cf. 2 Peter 2. Furthermore Satan has strategy with regard to each one of us as believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, mentioned as a principle in 2 Corinthians 2:11. Satan is constantly working to frustrate the will of God with every believer, to neutralise doctrinal application, to keep us away from the function of taking in doctrine, and to destroy the believer's focus so that he gets his eyes on other people and things instead of the Word.

3. The system of evil. This brings us back to the cosmic system, cosmic 1 and cosmic 2. There are two cosmic dynaspheres: No 1 we call interlocking systems of arrogance, it has twenty six gates. Arrogance is the way in which those who are in the cosmic system function. The command in connection with cosmic one is: "Grieve not the Holy Spirit." Cosmic 2 is composed of nine gates of interlocking systems of hatred. The command with regard to cosmic 2 is: "Quench not the Holy Spirit."

Cosmic One

1. Mental attitude arrogance which includes more than arrogance and pride. It includes jealousy, bitterness, vindictiveness, implacability, hatred, self-pity, guilt feelings, operation over think, anything that is related to preoccupation with self to the point of abnormality.
2. Negative volition arrogance. This is found in both cosmic one and in cosmic two but in cosmic 1 negative volition arrogance is related to preoccupation with self, whereas in cosmic 2 negative volition expresses itself in antagonism toward others and toward truth.
3. Impulsive arrogance whereby a person who is preoccupied with himself to the point where he abuses whatever authority he has in life.
4. Institutional arrogance. An institution in life as a system of authority, a policy, a purpose, or objective. Institutional arrogance rejects authority in some legitimate organisation or some organisation for which you work. It also means you reject the purpose of that organisation or the policy of that organisation.
5. Blind arrogance which is really the arrogance of legalism. It is divorcement from reality through preoccupation with self in contrast to psychopathic arrogance in gate 9 where there is total divorcement from reality — here it is a partial factor. Here it can be sociopathic rather than psychotic. Blind arrogance is the allegation of the believer who claims a unique experience in the fields of emotion, self-righteousness or self-sacrifice. It isn't limited to these three fields but they illustrate the concept.
6. Conspiracy arrogance which is simply a step in advance of gate 4. It results in rejection of authority, rejection of authority results in conspiracy to overthrow the purpose, the policy, the authority of an organisation.
7. Criminal arrogance. This is total divorcement from reality as far as category 1 truth is concerned, i.e. the laws of divine establishment. The criminal is not only a con artist, a liar a thief, but he is a revolutionist. He is the person who tries to solve the problems of life through violence. The criminal is totally occupied with self, therefore he is anti-authority, antiestablishment, and very often the criminal is very self-righteous and saturated with self-justification for his evil deeds.
8. Crusader arrogance. Under this principle you find self-righteousness parlayed into trying to straighten out the world, ignoring all points of freedom, ignoring all principles of privacy. Preoccupation with self plus self-righteousness and arrogance motivates one to try to change his periphery. Under this arrogance the individual places his personal standards often above the law, or any form of authority, or any form of establishment. Crusader arrogance often interlocks with gate 7, criminal arrogance, by encouraging revolution, supporting terrorism, trying to solve problems through violence (such as assassination), creating change by means of violence.

9. Psychotic arrogance. There is no such thing as a system of psychosis that is not related to arrogance. The theory that psychosis is inherent and is a matter of genes is absolutely ludicrous as far as the Word of God is concerned. Psychosis is the result of two factors: making your own bad decisions and finally closing doors, and seeking to deal with the frustration of bad decisions in arrogance. So this becomes total divorcement from reality.

Typical of psychopathic arrogance is egocentricity, total subjectivity and preoccupation with self, intense concentration on self excluding and squeezing out such things as a sense of humour. Emotional control of reason, imbalance and instability are factors.

10. Sexual arrogance. Sex without love, preoccupation with self, making sex a means of satisfying self and ignoring anyone else involved. Sexual arrogance may be manifest through polygamy, fornication, homosexuality, incest, rape, etc. Sexual arrogance then is preoccupation with the body to the exclusion of the soul.

11. Genetic arrogance. Ancestral pride assuming that greatness in life is inherited. This is also the arrogance of frustrated parents who seek to attain recognition through the achievement of their children.

12. Political arrogance. Human panaceas for the problems of life generally start in the local periphery but they move out to cover the entire country. Man's preoccupation with self to the exclusion of category one truth results in political arrogance.

It is not really liberalism versus conservatism in politics, it is really arrogance versus humility — that is the more basic issue. Political arrogance rejects certain necessary separations in life. For example, the function of freedoms, the separation of church and state.

13. Client nation arrogance. This emphasises the laws of divine establishment and the function of government leadership in terms of arrogance versus humility. There are three basic forms of government but whether they are successful or not depends on whether there is humility or arrogance as a national modus operandi. For example monarchy is a legitimate form of government, the rule of one man in the interest of the common good, but if this becomes arrogance monarchy becomes tyranny, the rule of one man for his own advantage. The next best form of government is aristocracy. (The fewer the people running the show the better it is because there is less opportunity for malfunction.) Aristocracy is the rule of a group in the interest of the common good. If it becomes arrogant it becomes oligarchy, the rule of a group for their own benefit. The third form of government, in order of merit, is republic. Republic is the rule of the better part of the people in the interest of the common good. But when arrogance comes in you have the worst form of function in the name of government — democracy. Democracy is the rule of the worst part of the people for their own benefit. Under client nation arrogance we have the failure of our elected representatives and arrogant bureaucracy trying to control the government.

Once you degenerate in any of these there is always a struggle for power. Under tyranny there is a struggle for power that results in revolution. Under oligarchy there is conspiracy in the struggle for power. Under democracy there is the most violent, vicious struggle for power which is divided up among the evil. And when the evil are splitting the pie, in their struggle against each other they destroy any vestige of government and integrity in government. Client nation arrogance is the collective arrogance of people involved in cosmic 1.

14. Authority arrogance. (The satanic syndrome). Through arrogance and preoccupation with self the individual fails to make the most difficult transition of temporal life, the transition from authority in the home to freedom in life. We are born under a system of authority called the home, organised humility. The organised authority are parents, enforced humility. When we respond to parental authority that becomes genuine humility. Genuine humility is necessary to become mature as a person, it has nothing to do with age. Rejection of overt authority in life results in rejection of inner authority (of the soul) and that destroys self-discipline and therefore you open the doors for drug addiction, for example.

15. The arrogance of ignorance. The two most difficult problems in life are related to transition in the temporal and spiritual realms. In the temporal realm the transition from authority in the home to freedom in life; in the spiritual life the transition from ignorance at the point of salvation to the cognisance at the point of maturity. Each transition requires a basic virtue which is genuine humility — teachability. The arrogance of ignorance is failure to make the transition from ignorance to cognisance in the Christian way of life.

16. The arrogance of unhappiness. People who are ignorant are going to be unhappy. This is not talking about education, this is talking about ignorance of Bible doctrine. Self-centredness and preoccupation with self eliminates any possibility or capacity for happiness. Involvement in cosmic 1 actually guarantees unhappiness no matter how much you succeed, no matter how much you possess. It leads to erroneous ideas about what constitutes happiness and therefore people who live in cosmic 1 are unhappy people. They are demanding attention, they are expecting everyone to make them happy. The myth of arrogance is that people can make you happy. Those who have the arrogance of unhappiness generally have a martyr complex associated with it. This results in trying to control people by giving them a guilt complex from your arrogance of unhappiness. Unhappy people always try to control everything around them. Unhappy people are motivated and have tremendous energy in controlling everything around them.

17. The arrogance of disillusion and disenchantment or iconoclastic arrogance, the feet-of-clay syndrome. You put someone you admire on a pedestal and you worship at that pedestal until one day you see their feet of clay. The you become disillusioned and disenchanting and you react to whatever they represent.

Arrogance creates an idol of enchantment and illusion. And when the idol is shattered, the feet of clay appear, arrogance then is shocked and distracted and disoriented to life. Arrogance demands attention. Once the attention is lacking the arrogant creator of the idol begins to look for flaws. It is easy to find flaws in anyone because none of us are perfect and therefore illusion becomes disillusion, enchantment becomes disenchantment and the arrogant creator of the idol seeks to destroy that idol. This is a revenge in which the person can only gain his self-respect by destroying the thing that has allegedly destroyed his self respect.

Disappointment with friends, loved ones, pastors, rulers, bosses, is normal. But disenchantment from the arrogantly created idol is abnormal and evil. Illusion created by arrogance is illusion destroyed by arrogance.

18. The arrogance of morality. The self-righteous arrogance of superimposing false standards of morality on others. When a system of morality created by arrogance is superimposed on true establishment morality or on true Christian spirituality the result is arrogance of morality. It is a form of bullying from arrogance.

19. The arrogance of emotion. This is irrationality. Arrogant people stop thinking and once they do they become emotional. Emotion becomes a substitute for thought. There is nothing wrong with emotion as a response to thought but emotion as a substitute for thought is a disaster. This is the irrationality of emotion dominating the soul instead of thought. This is illustrated of course by the tongues movement in which arrogance divorces itself from the reality of doctrine and emotion dominates the soul. Emotional arrogance not only eliminates rational thinking but results in a total preoccupation with self related to emotion.

Knowledge is the environment for thinking, not emotion. Bible doctrine is the environment for decision, not emotion. Emotional arrogance converts reality into illusion and hallucination and therefore it fantasises and collapses under pressure. When you fantasise in normal situations you will always collapse under pressure.

20. The arrogance of pseudo-generosity. This finds a person giving or being generous because of preoccupation with self. A desire for attention, a desire for approbation, ingratiation or an attempt to buy happiness or friendship. The principle of generosity is found in 2 Corinthians 9:7. The function is found in verse 11.

21. The arrogance of Christian service. Loss of momentum in the spiritual life comes from rejection of doctrine and substituting Christian service as spirituality. Of course you become preoccupied with yourself, you become impressed with having witnessed today, you can make so many sacrifices doing this and that. This becomes the disaster which leads to totally blotting doctrine out of your life. Legitimate Christian service therefore often becomes a distraction to momentum when the person involved neglects doctrine.

22. The arrogance of discouragement. This is preoccupation with self under circumstances of testing and pressure. Adversity and unexplained disaster in the life often tempts the believer into a state of self-pity or preoccupation with self. This is called discouragement and it becomes a form of arrogance. Depression is often a form of arrogance though it may be physiologically as well as psychologically induced.

23. The arrogance of lust. When legitimate desire is linked with arrogance it becomes lust. Lust is inordinate desire. Inordinate means unrestrained, unregulated, and hence used with desire it converts normal desire into lust. There are many legitimate and normal desires in life. Desire in itself is not wrong. It is lust which can be either sin or human good or evil. Lust is arrogant preoccupation with one's desires.

24. Pseudo-intellectual arrogance. This is the arrogance of superimposition of human IQ over spiritual IQ. This means that arrogance accepts the human viewpoint of life and rejects the divine viewpoint. This is one of the basic functions in the cosmic system that also helps to throw off doctrine and reject it. Without the truth of Bible doctrine and the absolute standard of life, intellectualism becomes meaningless and sometimes becomes very harmful. Pseudo-intellectual arrogance either glorifies human speculation to the exclusion of Bible doctrine or seeks to reconcile Bible doctrine with false philosophical, psychological and scientific concepts. In the early church pseudo -intellectualism was manifested by gnosticism.

25. Pseudo-love arrogance. This is the attempt of anyone to duplicate the principles or function of love while residing in the cosmic system.

26. The ultimate arrogance, the function of suicide in total preoccupation with self. It is a totally locked in self-centredness which motivates taking one's own life.

This is only part of the third point of the doctrine of evil but it is a very important part of it because it is the basis for all evil. Arrogance motivates. You can take a legitimate subject and put arrogance with it and you have evil. You can take almost anything and if you are arrogant you can emphasise it out of its context so that a true thing becomes false. Satan uses truth to get people away from the greatest of all truth, Bible doctrine.

Cosmic 2

Cosmic dynasphere number 1, part of Satan's system, can be summarised very simply as preoccupation with self. It is the function of arrogance that makes, the members of the human race who are in the cosmic system able to function.

In cosmic two the key is antagonism, and that's why it is called the interlocking systems of hatred. Preoccupation with self, for example, makes the believer in cosmic 1 go negative toward doctrine. But in cosmic 2 it is not because he is preoccupied with himself, he is actually overtly antagonistic toward doctrine. He resists the doctrine. Cosmic 2 is a hatred complex that is antagonistic toward truth, antagonistic toward God, antagonistic toward the things of God. We use nine gates simply to categorise it. The person who chooses it spends his life in antagonism to God's plan.

1. Negative volition toward doctrine.

There are three categories of negative volition: negative volition at God-consciousness, Gospel hearing, and the rejection of Bible doctrine.

2. Cosmic degeneration.

Inevitably when you become antagonistic toward truth you individually enter into the state of degeneracy. If there are enough people like you in society as believers the society will become degenerate, and it will be manifest by degenerate acts. But long before degenerate acts you have degenerate thoughts. Degeneracy is in the thought. Romans 1:24-27 is a perfect illustration of cosmic degeneration: "Therefore God delivered them [people whose thought pattern was in a state of rejection of doctrine] over to the lusts of their right lobes to an immoral status that their bodies might be degraded among themselves, they who have exchanged the doctrine of God for a lie." When you leave the divine dynasphere and go into gate 2 of cosmic 1 you have rejected truth and you have exchanged it for a lie.

They have "worshipped and served the creature [Satan] more than the creature [the Lord Jesus Christ] ... Because of this God has delivered them over to the passions of dishonour [they themselves choose the passions of dishonour, He just doesn't stop them] ..."

Under the principle of the angelic conflict God cannot coerce volition. People are the products of their own decisions. If they choose to be homosexual this simply becomes the act of degeneracy which is first manifest by the decision to go to degeneracy and the thought pattern that accompanies it.

3. Antiestablishment.

When the human soul with the human mind is antagonistic toward the truth of category 1, laws of divine establishment. Its beginning, cf. 2 Timothy 3:2 -7. Gate three is also called "the hatred of establishment." No greater illustration of this can be found anywhere than in Romans 1:28-32.

4. The cosmic panaceas.

Man's attempts to improve the world are always conducted under the sponsorship of Satan. When anyone seeks a solution to life, individual or collective, apart from divine truth in its three categories, they move into the system of cosmic panaceas.

This gate not only rejects the laws of divine establishment but rejects any form of salvation by grace and spirituality by grace. It becomes in effect the satanic administration of planet earth, or how Satan keeps so many of his disciples of the streets! Instead of freedom there is a demand for equality but equality can only be achieved by coercion and slavery. Therefore the means — coercion, violence, slavery — always justifies the end at this gate. Equality demands the full mobilisation of envy, hence to promote it the successful are taxed out of existence, which destroys success. There is redistribution of wealth where the money is given to the scum and therefore, through legislation you destroy success and failure, and therefore you destroy freedom. Freedom demands success and failure.

Cosmic panaceas lead toward big government and little people. The citizens are the slaves of the state. The state owns your property, your life, your children, your mind, your soul. The more you have freedom the state becomes the servant of the people.

This gate is also what we call utopianism. The neologistic arrogance of recreating and refashioning all forms of human existence. The cosmic panaceas lead to violence, terrorism, revolution, under the principle they call social engineering. The application of what is false to life. Social engineering is the function of gate four. The state must train children to the dictates of the state rather than their parents, therefore disobedience to parents is part of the principle. In other words at total rejection of freedom and authority under the laws of divine establishment.

5. Religion.

Religion is Satan's counterfeit of the plan of God for believers in Christ. Religion is a part of Satan's policy of evil. It should be pointed out that Christianity is not a religion. Religion is man by man's efforts seeking to gain the approbation of God. In Christianity man is related to God through faith in Christ and God provides for man in grace.

6. Demonism.

7. The anthropocentric academic speculation.

The motivation for this is gate 24 of cosmic 1, pseudo -intellectual arrogance. Pseudo-intellectual arrogance becomes the basis for trying to reconcile philosophical and scientific speculation with doctrine. And when this cannot be done such a person often rejects doctrine, enters into gate 1 of cosmic 2, becomes hostile to doctrine and seeks a substitute.

Motivation and momentum of the divine system, the divine dynasphere, demands that we remain in the divine dynasphere. This is the only way we can avoid getting involved in academic speculation.

8. The Old Sin Nature gate.

9. Evil as the policy of Satan.

4. The mandate regarding evil.

Our mandate regarding evil is found in Romans 12:21: “Stop being conquered by evil, but conquer evil by means of the good — a)gaqoj, [fulfilment of the plan of God from the standpoint of imputation].”

What hinders the momentum of this plan? The answer is evil. Evil is to be conquered by means of the good. The good is the function of the plan of God inside the divine dynasphere and therefore the divine mandate of Romans 12:21 can only be executed by residence and function inside the divine dynasphere.

Ephesians 5:6 is another mandate: “Redeeming the time because the days are evil.” So the only way that you can purchase time that God has given you is to function under the plan of God. What hinders is evil. Evil is the modus operandi of the believer inside of Satan’s cosmic system.

5. Two categories of evil: Satan’s systems of motivational and functional evil.

Inside of gate 1 of cosmic one we have motivating evil — arrogance, jealousy, bitterness, vindictiveness, implacability, self-pity, and other forms of preoccupation with self. Motivating evil is thought directed toward self. With this we also have functional evil which is the result of motivating evil. When, for example, you are jealous then you are going to function toward people under jealousy.

6. The biblical principles of evil.

a. We must distinguish between the honourable and the evil in matters of spiritual growth inside the divine dynasphere. Evil is not simply a synonym for sin. Heb. 5:13,14.

b. The divine dynasphere is the believer’s only real protection against evil. 1 Cor. 13:5.

c. The believer in the cosmic system is constantly frustrated by evil. This is illustrated by two passages: Romans 7:19; 3 John 11.

d. The laws of divine establishment are designed to protect the citizens of the client nation from evil. Romans 13:3,4.

e. The domination of good in the client nation determines its historical prosperity, while the domination of evil determines its historical judgment. Proverbs 12:20; Psalm 34:16; Isaiah 13:11; 47:10,11; Micah 1:12.

f. God protects the believer inside the divine dynasphere who has positive volition toward doctrine. He protects him from evil. The principle is noted in Proverbs 12:21: “No evil happens to the righteous, but the evil are filled with trouble.” cf. Psalm 37:17; 91:10; 97:10; 119:101; 121:7; Proverbs 1:33; 2:11-13.

g. Believers are often led into the cosmic system and evil by their Christian friends. 1 Cor. 15:33; 2 Thess. 3:2,3.

h. Evil is distinguished from disease and war, Jeremiah 28:8. This verse indicates three different categories. They are not the same. This verse indicates then that evil must be distinguished from war and disease. Sin and evil occur in warfare but war in itself is not evil or sinful, it is the basis for national freedom. Disease as a category is not evil though it may be divine punishment for sin, human good, and evil.

Principle: Separate something that is perfectly all right from the fact that it is often distorted by sin, by failure, and other things. Sin is committed in war, sin is committed in crime. All crime is sin but war is not sin. Crime is an evil to be stamped out; war is a necessity and an inevitability under historical trends.

i. Motivating evil which is the basis for all functional evil exists in the thought pattern of the soul. Evil starts with a thought, degeneracy starts with a thought, Matthew 6:23; 15:19.

j. The attitude of the mature believer toward evil, Psalm 84:10.

7. Testimonies concerning evil.

The testimony of Jacob, Genesis 48:16, “The angel who has redeemed me from all evil.” Through rebound he was redeemed from evil.

Joseph in Genesis 50:20, “You intended evil against me but God meant it for good” — so evil was turned into good.

David’s testimony in Psalm 48:10, 37:25-27. The believer who reaches maturity is the believer whose blessing overflows after his death to his progeny.

Job in Job 28:28, “The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom; to shun evil is understanding of doctrine.”

Solomon in Proverbs 16:6,17; Isaiah in 59:15; Jeremiah’s testimony is found in several passages in his prophecy, 23:21,22; 9:3. Our Lord Jesus Christ in the true Lord’s prayer of John 17 had something to say about evil in His prayer: “I do not ask you to take them [the believers of this dispensation] out of the world but to guard them from evil.”

7. The final mandate which is found in 2 Thess. 5:22. “Abstain from every form of evil”.

Verse 2:2b, “and,” kai; “tried,” pairazw, to test for the purpose of discovering whether a person is good or evil. Such testing refers to cognisance of doctrine therefore those believers who are ignorant of doctrine cannot fulfil this function. The basis of testing is the absolute standard of the Word of God.

“say,” legw, which here means to call. Translated “those who call.” It refers to the Gnostic teachers, including the Nicolaitanes of verse 6. Gnosticism has infiltrated Ephesus and in fact Ephesus is the headquarters for gnosticism.

“they,” e(autoj, lit. “themselves”; “apostles,” a)postoloj, in this case it refers to false teachers who have great influence, the teachers of gnosticism who had a tremendous anti-Christian influence.

They allege to be apostles but they really are not. Gnostic pastors and Gnostic teachers were never apostles but through doctrinal testing the believers of Ephesus discovered it for themselves. And what is so wonderful about it is the fact that a mature believer learns the principle of privacy. And under the principle of privacy he does not depend upon others for deciding but he uses his own doctrine. He decides what is being taught does not agree with doctrine and he therefore departs from that person.

“found,” e(uriskw — intellectual discovery based on observation or reflection, examination or discovery. Translation: “You have discovered.” Discerning believers with maximum doctrine in the frontal lobe use their own knowledge of doctrine to discern false teaching and false teachers; “liars,” pseudhj, false.

At the time of writing Revelation chapters two and three where the seven churches are located, the rural area was the area of atheism, agnosticism, and the polytheistic worship of the gods. Christianity was located in the cities, and there were seven cities that carried the Roman empire for over three hundred and fifty years. This was because in those seven cities were the churches where Bible doctrine was taught. And in these large cities was a large pivot of believers that actually carried the empire, gave it its prosperity, and when it failed the prosperity test it was because the shrinking of the pivot occurred.

The seven golden lampstands are churches in large cities. Christianity did not spread in rural areas. Even to this day rural Christianity cannot in any way be compared with the vigour of urban Christianity. Of course large cities means large populations and that means more exposure to the teaching of doctrine and to the preaching of the Gospel. No nation in modern history ever became great until it had large industrial cities.

The ultimate solution to any problem in life, in any client nation to God, must be the advance to maturity on the part of believers, forming a large pivot for blessing to the nation. That means maximum knowledge of doctrine and recognising the difference between sin and evil, between human good and evil, and we must be able to see when human good becomes evil and when sin becomes evil, and not tolerate it.

61 02/16/1982 Revelation 2:3a Tolerant / intolerant; prosperous Rome

Verse 3, “and,” kai should be translated “furthermore” because it is going to add something, it introduces a result from what precedes; “hast”, ε)xw, you keep having. The retroactive progressive present denotes what has begun in the past [residence and function inside the divine dynasphere] and continues into the present. The active voice: believers who reside and function inside the divine dynasphere produce the action of the verb. So your impact historically is in that active voice, your advance to maturity. The active voice means that your impact on history comes from your spiritual advance.

During the period of the Antonine Caesars the impact of the pivot produced a period that historians are still astounded about when they study it.

The name of the game is pressure. The name of the game, God’s game plan, is momentum pressure. We are going to have periods of pressure and testing — some of them very painful and some of them related to the greatest of prosperity.

“and hast borne,” Lit. “furthermore you keep having perseverance,” i.e. Residence and function inside the divine dynasphere.

Principle

1. You keep having perseverance as the basis for the historical uptrend of Roman history during the time of the Antonine Caesars.

2. The military conquests of Rome were made mostly during the time of the Republic. The empire became a defensive, civilised state. With rare exceptions its wars were not for conquest. But this was not the Roman republic that was the first Gentile nation to God, it was the Roman empire.

3. We have noted the basis for Rome becoming a client nation to God and the prosperity which came from the pivot of mature believers.

Perseverance was the key to the greatness of the Roman empire. As goes the believer so goes the client nation to God. The perseverance of believers in advancing to maturity is the key. The word "perseverance" is u(pomonh, inside the divine dynasphere, historical uptrend, great prosperity, they all go together.

"and," kai followed by the aorist active indicative of the verb bastazw, endure. Lit. "and you have endured." The culminative aorist tense views the believer's residence in the divine dynasphere in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, namely passing the momentum tests. (On the path of advance there are eight major momentum tests.) The active voice: the believer inside the divine dynasphere produces the action of the verb. dia plus the accusative of a(n)oma, person or name. Dia plus the accusative is translated "because of my name." This is reference to our Lord Jesus Christ in hypostatic union seated at the right hand of the Father where He now enjoys His third royal patent.

The momentum tests that are involved in enduring because of who and what Jesus Christ is

1. The OSN test. The OSN is Satan's inside agent for producing temptation in the area of sins of cognisance or sins of ignorance or human good or evil. The OSN resides in the human body and is the source of all temptation. The volition or the freewill of man faces daily the temptations of the OSN inside the cell structure of the body. The volition or the freewill of man guards the soul.

The objective of the OSN is to control the soul. It cannot control the soul because the soul has human volition and so the OSN throws up temptation. Once it reaches the gate all the volition has to do is say, "No," and the OSN is defeated. But if the volition says, "Pass through," then that becomes sin. The origin of sin has always been human volition. Only when volition passes the temptation into the soul does the OSN control the soul and the individual enters the cosmic system. The decision is made outside the divine dynasphere.

2. People testing. It is inevitable that we are going to live around people. People become a major distraction to momentum when the believer gets his eyes on people. There are two ways to do it. One way is to love them personally; the other is to hate. Either way you are preoccupied with a person to the point of distraction or potential distraction.

The reaction of a person in love is disillusion and bitterness followed by implacability and vindictiveness as you continue in the cosmic system. The reaction of the believer to personality conflict is hatred, revenge motivation, personal insensitivity, the expression of all forms of arrogance, hostile subjectivity. The solution to people testing is the function of impersonal love under the various mandates of the royal family honour code. The reason God allows evil people to live long when often the good die young has to do with the cosmic system. He keeps the mean s.o.b. alive for a purpose — people testing in order to accelerate our spiritual growth.

3. Thought testing — generally related to the believer's negative volition toward doctrine. There are two kinds of negative volition toward doctrine: Gate 2 of cosmic 1 is negative volition based on preoccupation with self. Gate 1 of cosmic 2 is antagonism toward some form of doctrine. There are two different ways in which negative volition toward doctrine is developed: you are arrogant and preoccupied with yourself and therefore doctrine is excluded, or you are antagonistic toward its content, it attacks you in some area, you are hypersensitive about some principle. Thought distraction can simply relate to one's arrogance or preoccupation with self or it can originate from some prejudice that you have, some inflexibility that causes you to resist, doctrinal teaching that hits that area of prejudice.

Many times doubts in thought testing can result from neglect of doctrine, lack of daily function of GAP, and often the believer tries to reconcile his favourite academic subject with Bible doctrine. If reconciliation is impossible then he is distracted by taking the side of the academic subject.

The solution to thought testing includes rebound, the function of the faith-rest drill with emphasis on the essence of God rationale or the plan of God rationale which is of course the concept of logistical grace.

4. System testing. Sooner or later in life someone is going to be unfair to you and if that some is not just an individual but an individual in a system then you have system testing. The believer becomes the victim of a rotten system which requires him to have both the function of impersonal love plus the three stages of the faith-rest drill.

The world is filled with bad systems which seek to destroy the integrity and the honour of individuals. Bad systems always have their victims and likely as not if you are doing a good job you may be the victim of a bad system sooner or later. Many organisations become rotten and corrupt when the leadership of such a system is rotten or corrupt through involvement in the cosmic system. Many illustrations exist, e.g. the judicial system where the judges are sociologists instead of interpreters of the law; they favour criminals, they ignore the victims. Many people become bitter and disillusioned about doctrine simply because someone whom they love becomes the victim of such a thing.

System testing distracts from momentum of gate 4 when the believer becomes preoccupied with himself, when he resents human injustice to the point of self-pity, when he becomes bitter and full of hatred and implacability, when he seeks revenge tactics instead of leaving the problem in the Lord's hands. System testing is a major source of peer ostracism. In addition to the function of impersonal love and the faith-rest drill as solutions there must be social life with God, gate 5 — worship, spiritual life, occupation with Christ.

5. The direct attack of cosmic 1. Every one of the 26 gates of cosmic 1 is waiting to entrap you and to get you out of the momentum line.

6. The direct attack of cosmic 2.

7. Disaster testing — where the believer faces both personal and collective disaster — personal disaster for blessing or warning for being in the cosmic system, collective disaster is a historical trend and we are the products of our own decisions as a nation.

8. Prosperity testing. We must all face the prosperity test before we can attain maturity. God will provide in logistical grace some system of prosperity, some system of human recognition, something that can be construed as prosperity. Does that change our scale of values? Does that prosperity make doctrine secondary? If so many many people flunk just before they crack the maturity barrier.

The concepts of arrogance, as we have noted, and the historical trends apply to almost every facet of life and this includes the principle of culture as well. In a book called Libro Nero, by Giavani Papini, is a very excellent confession on the part of Picasso, the one whose innovation brought about what we call cubism.

Giavani Papini gives an account of an interview with the so-called top god of modern art. Here is what Picasso had to say, quoting from the book: "From the moment that art ceases to be the food that feeds the best minds the artist can use his talents to perform all the tricks of an intellectual charlatan. Most people can today no longer receive consolation and exaltation from art. The refined, the rich, the professional do-nothings, the distillers of quintessence, desire only the peculiar, the sensational, the eccentric, the scandalous, in today's art. And I, myself, since the advent of cubism have fed these fellows what they wanted and satisfied these critics with all the ridiculous ideas that have ever passed through my head. The less they understand me the more they admire me.

"Through amusing myself with all of these absurd farces I became celebrated and famous very rapidly. For a painter celebrity means sales and consequent affluence. Today, as you know, I am both celebrated but also rich. But when I am alone and do not have the effrontery to call myself an artist at all — not in the grand old meaning of the word — I consider myself a publican, a clown, a faker, a mount-te-bank. I have understood my time and exploited the imbecility, the vanity, the greed of my contemporaries. It is a bitter confession, this confession of mine, more painful than it may seem. But at last it does have the merit of being honest."

2:3, the final phrase: “and” kai plus the perfect active indicative of the verb kopiaw, to become weary, to become tired, to faint under pressure. With it we have the negative o)u indicating that they did not faint under pressure, and in the perfect tense we translate that “and you have not fainted under pressure.” The dramatic perfect tense emphasises the result of the completed action. This is the rhetorical use of the intensive perfect for a fact or condition which results from residence and function inside the divine dynasphere.

Because they passed the eight momentum tests, going from gate four to gate eight, they actually contributed to a large pivot from those churches. They made AD 96 — 180 the greatest period of prosperity in human history.

Anticipation that there would eventually be discipline comes from the manifestation of a downtrend. And with the exception of the church at Smyrna every one of these churches had believers who were on a downtrend, who were involved in the cosmic system. Outside of Smyrna there was a criticism of every one of these churches. In verse four we come to the criticism of the Ephesian church. As we do let’s recognise a principle: There is no such thing as a perfect church.

Lesson #63

Verse 4, One of the reasons why believers fail is because they leave their first love. One reason why historical downtrends occur is because believers in a client nation to God leave their first love.

“Nevertheless,” A)lla, an adversative conjunction. It sets up a contrast between the commendation of the previous verse and the condemnation of this verse. In other words the congregation is divide.

“have,” e)xw, present active indicative. It means to have, to hold, to possess: “But I hold this”; “against thee,” kata plus su., “against you.” In being critical our Lord Jesus Christ shows how the trends of history go; “that,” o(ti).

Believers in the cosmic system produce no virtue. Virtue is the exclusive function of the divine dynasphere. That is why in the game plan the mandates call for each one of us to live in the divine dynasphere. “the,” thn, the accusative singular, definite article which occurs twice is used generically for a category of love, the motivating virtue of personal love directed toward God. Two things always go when you live in the cosmic system: there is no motivating virtue, which means personal love directed toward God. Secondly there is no functional virtue, impersonal love directed toward man.

“thee,” the genitive of relationship from the personal pronoun, su. It refers to the fact that the believer so involved once resided and functioned inside the divine dynasphere where they produced the motivating virtue of personal love for God from their royal priesthood and their functional virtue, impersonal love toward man, from their ambassadorship.

“first,” the accusative singular from the adjective prwtoj. This adjective is used for rank or degree and it means first in the sense of most important. Our most important love in life as a believer is the Lord Jesus Christ; “love”, accusative singular of a)gaph. Not used here in the sense of impersonal love as it often is, but objective love toward one who is unseen, the Lord Jesus Christ.

Corrected translation: “But I hold this against you, you have forsaken your most important love.”

1. This is the equivalent to reverse process reversionism.
2. In verses 2 & 3 of this chapter we noted the Ephesian believers residing in the divine dynasphere. They had not abandoned their most important love.
3. But in verse 4 we see believers living in that same congregation living inside the cosmic system under the control of Satan, in reversionism. They have deserted their most important love.

Cosmic involvement and reversionism results in the downtrends of history and the inevitable disaster. So we can't blame disaster on anything but our own self-determination. Believers living in the cosmic system are the reason for any downtrend in a nation.
5. Therefore, believers are the products of their own decisions.
6. This historical downtrend occurred during the period known as the Antonine Caesars. It snowballed and while at the moment Ephesus enjoyed great prosperity by 180 AD there would be a great disaster caused by the increase of the number of believers living in the cosmic system.
7. The prosperity experienced by Ephesus under Nerva, Trajan, Hadrian, Antoninus Pious, and Marcus Aurelius, came to an end under the brutal rule of Commedus.

“Therefore” is the inferential conjunction o)un, a transitional particle. It denotes an inference from what precedes and is generally translated “therefore”; “remember,” present active imperative, mnemoneuw, to remember, to recall, to recall to mind. Translation: “Therefore recall to mind.” It is time to think about the situation. The Ephesian believers who are living in the cosmic system, who are contributing to the historical downtrend are to produce the action of the verb by mandate. The imperative mood is the imperative of entreaty, it does not really have the finality of a command because it demands participation from your own freewill. Therefore, it has the force of an urgency or a request; “whence,” ποθεν, from what place, or better, from what state. It is a status quo adverb. The status quo should be residence inside the divine dynasphere the only Christian status in which the plan of God can be fulfilled; “you have fallen” perfect active indicative of πειτώ. This is a reference to living in the cosmic system. To get into the cosmic system you have to use your own volition. The perfect tense is the tense of completed action and with the indicative mood the action is completed from the viewpoint of present time. And from the completed action comes existing results. Therefore we call this the intensive perfect, i.e. the existing results of sin are intensified through residence and function in the cosmic system. When special attention is directed to the results of the action [cosmic involvement] stress on the existing facts are intensified. This is the emphatic method in the Greek of presenting a fact or a condition — the believers involvement in the cosmic system and resultant historical downtrends.

The solution: “and,” και and the aorist active imperative of the verb μετανοέω, repent.

When this word came into the Koine Greek it was strictly a mental function and it means: νοέω means to think, not emote or to run around and feel sorry for something. And μετα means to change, so the word means to change your mind. This is exactly what the word means in the Old Testament too — the verb in the Hebrew is נָחַן. Cf. Exodus 13:17, “Lest the people, when they see war, change their minds and run back to Egypt.”

The word “repent” is used in connection with salvation. Salvation repentance is simply: upon hearing the Gospel and understanding it, changing your mind. If you believe in Christ you have changed your mind. Repent is a synonym for believe. You have changed your mind about Christ, therefore you have believed in Him. The change of mind, conversion, is called repentance, cf.. Mark 1:14,15; Matthew 12:41; Luke 13:2,3; 15:7, 10; Acts 17:30.

Change of attitude toward doctrine is the basis for reversion recovery. But that change of attitude first demands the rebound technique which is described as repentance. The change of mind toward doctrine is described as repentance.

When God is the subject of repentance it is an anthropopathism; God cannot change His mind. An anthropopathism ascribes to God a human characteristic which He does not actually possess, but it explains divine policy and function in terms of human frame of reference. Anthropopathisms are language of accommodation.

“repent,” Change your mind, which means the use of rebound to recover residence in the divine dynasphere. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist. It views the function of rebound in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results — residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. The only way to get back into the divine dynasphere is the rebound technique.

The next phrase emphasises the function of the believer at the various gates. Therefore this verse emphasises the filling of the Spirit which also results from the rebound technique, called here repentance.

“and,” kai plus the aorist active imperative of poiew, execute, accomplish, do. The culminative aorist views the function of the believer inside the divine dynasphere, walking by means of the Spirit, functioning at the various gates of the divine dynasphere, and regards it from the viewpoint of its existing result, momentum from function inside the divine dynasphere.

The direct object of the verb is composed of three Greek verbs. The first is the accusative plural of the definite article, “the,” ta. It is a generic definite article representing that category of believer who not only rebounds to recover from residence in the cosmic system, but perpetuates his function in the divine dynasphere. Next is the accusative plural from the adjective prwtoj — most important. It is used as an adjective of rank or degree, not first in matter of time, but in manner of rank or degree. Correct translation: “ ... accomplish the most important production”; “works,” e)rgon, production. That means walking by means of the Holy Spirit. E)rgon is used for the perception and application of doctrine at Gate 4 of the divine dynasphere.

The alternative to repentance begins with the three words, e)j de mh which are an idiom for “otherwise”; “I will come,” e)rxomai. The futuristic present tense denotes an event that has not yet occurred. Divine discipline for the individual believer, loss of local church franchise for the group of believers so involved. It also regards divine discipline for cosmic involvement as so certain that in thought it may be contemplated as already coming to pass. The middle voice of this verb: the Lord Jesus Christ who controls history produces the action of the verb. This is a potential indicative of obligation: persistence in the cosmic system demands that our Lord Jesus Christ who controls history administer punishment to believers so involved; “thee,” the dative of disadvantage of the personal pronoun su which refers to believers in the Lord Jesus Christ who are living inside the cosmic system; “quickly,” there is no such word here in the Greek; “will remove,” future active indicative of the verb kinew, to remove. Jesus Christ who controls history produces the action of the verb in removing a local church franchise, which means the inevitable destruction of the client nation. First the churches go down, no doctrine is taught in the churches because there is no demand for it. Once there is no demand for it then the people have made their own decision and they have brought upon themselves the divine discipline that follows.

The indicative mood is potential of obligation. Our Lord’s obligation to the human race demands that in any given period in the Church Age both personal and collective punishments are necessary for those involved in the cosmic system. In this way history is perpetuated and God’s plan continues to the end of time.

“candlestick,” luxnia, lampstand. With it we have the possessive genitive su, your. Every church is a lampstand, a light in the client nation to God, and as goes the local church so goes the national entity; “out of his place,” e)k plus topo)j. Lit. “from its place.” The removal of the lampstand is the end of the nation. When the churches are no longer teaching doctrine they may continue but they no longer have light. Loss of client nation status results from the failure of believers to respond to Bible doctrine. The removal of the lampstand is tantamount to the decline of the client nation to God, or to divine judgment under the five cycles of discipline. Principle: As goes the believer, so goes the client nation to God.

“unless,” e)an, is used to introduce the protasis of a third class condition. (The protasis is the premise of a debater’s technique.) Ea)n means that rebound is a possibility but it does involve your own volition under the function of your own royal priesthood before God. It is correctly translated “if.” It is accompanied by the negative mh, “If not.”

“repent,” the aorist active subjunctive of metanoiew, a change of mind. It has to do with the rebound technique. It can be a momentary action or a succession of actions occurring over a period of time.

Lesson #64

64 02/19/1982 Revelation 2:5a Doctrine of repentance / change of mind

Corrected translation of verse 5: “Therefore recall to mind from what state you have fallen, and change your mind, and execute the most important production; otherwise if you do not I will come to you in discipline, and I will remove your lampstand.”

Principles

1. Daily decisions of the believer determine the historical uptrend or downtrend of the client nation to God.
2. All momentum in the Christian way of life results from perception and application of Bible doctrine, the function of gate 4 of the divine dynasphere.
3. The first three gates of the divine dynasphere are the support for the momentum of learning doctrine, while the last four gates are the result of that momentum.
4. The uptrend of history is related then to the believer’s residence and function inside the divine dynasphere on a daily basis.
5. The downtrend of history is related to the believer’s residence and function inside the cosmic system.
6. The prosperity of a nation depends on two factors: From the standpoint of the laws of divine establishment the prosperity of a nation depends on the combination of the three components of manifest destiny; Bible doctrine gives the capacity and the stability to pass the prosperity test. From Bible doctrine then the size of the pivot of mature believers is the issue.

Principle

1. Not only believers, but all mankind, are the products of their own decisions — not their environment.
2. This is why there are no tragedies in history, only in drama.
3. This also explains the principle then: as goes the believer in his daily life, so goes the client nation to God.
4. Arrogance is not only a motivating evil but the primary reason for any client nation to pass the prosperity test. When divine judgment is administered to the client nation the pivot of mature believers is always spared.
5. When divine discipline comes to a client nation a large pivot of mature believers means national deliverance, but a small pivot of mature believers means national destruction under the 5th cycle of discipline.
6. Therefore another historical trend. A large pivot of mature believers preserves the nation in time of disaster and catastrophe, but a small pivot generally means the destruction of that nation.
7. God always uses the most evil nation available to administer the 5th cycle of discipline — the destruction of a client nation.

The solution is divided into two parts: the actual solution and the alternative. There is never an offered solution without an alternative. The corrected translation of the solution: “Therefore recall to mind from what state you have fallen, and change your mind, and accomplish the most important production.” The alternative is used with three words, “and if not,” e)j de mh. The first of these three words is the conditional particle e)j, and used with the negative mh it means “if not”; de, the post positive conjunction, emphasises the contrast between the believer who uses the solution and the alternative, the bad decision which includes both personal divine discipline as well as national disaster for the nation. The literal translation is “but if not,” but this is simply an idiom used after the affirmative clause and is translated “otherwise, or else.” This is the idiom of alternative.

There are two things that are necessary in this life if we are to have objectivity. Objectivity is the only way in which to look at life and avoid all of the pitfalls of neurosis, psychosis, sociopathic behaviour, and anything else that would be negative as far as this life in concerned. This first thing that has to be established in our souls is an absolute and complete understanding of the significance of physical death. All objectivity in life must eliminate any fear, any concern, about physical death. As soon as the doctrine of death is understood from the standpoint of the Christian, objectivity asserts itself. We have no fear of death, we have no concern about how the Lord is going to take us out, and therefore all possible subjectivity, fear and concern is eliminated.

But there is also another problem in relationship to objectivity. That has to do with impersonal love and the ability to distinguish between people and their failures; the ability to understand the principle of motivating evil. Gate 1 of cosmic 1 is the area of motivating evil. It includes such things as arrogance, pride, jealousy, vindictiveness, implacability, hatred, revenge motivation, self-pity, or even guilt reactions to life. All of these combine to form in the soul a total subjectivity.

1981 Revelation

66 02/21/1982 Revelation 2:6 How to be objective; impersonal love

Verse 6 — a manifestation of a historical uptrend. Note that they did not hate the Nicolaitanes. You and I as believers in Jesus Christ cannot afford to hate anyone or anything. The moment you do you have at that moment become a subjective person and have lost all objectivity in life and, having done so, there is no possibility that you can cope with life.

One of the great tests in momentum in the spiritual life is the people test. You must learn to distinguish between people and the things into which they become involved. You must learn to hate sin, hate human good, hate evil, but not to hate the people who are involved in it.

“But,” A)lla (adversative conjunction) — “nevertheless.” The conjunction usually sets up some kind of a contrast. Here the contrast is between the downtrend, verse 5, and the uptrend, verse 6. “At least” is the best translation; “hast,” present active indicative of the verb e)xw, you have. They have a system of objectivity; “this”, o(utoj — refers to an area of objectivity which will be explained. “At least you have this,” and the idiom implies, “in your favour”; “that”, o(ti, here a causal conjunction. Translated “because” or “namely”; “thou hatest”, misew, a verb usually indicating sin. It means to hate and is a part of the mental attitude sins of Gate 1, Cosmic 1. But here it has a good connotation without sin. It has an objective connotation. The Ephesian believers have the ability to distinguish between the person and his sins, his human good, his evil; “deeds,” e)rgon, correctly translated “deeds.”

“Nicolaitanes,” nikolaitai, the deeds of the Nicolaitanes are rejected. The Ephesian believers have too much doctrine, too much objectivity in life. The Nicolaitanes are the licentious branch of Gnosticism, the great enemy of the Church in the first two centuries. The leader of the cult was a woman who was given the Bible name of Jezebel. The problem underlying the Nicolaitane controversy is the relationship of Christianity with paganism. There is a separation issue here. The compromise with paganism among the Nicolaitane Christians was a preview of things to come in the future. The Nicolaitanes represent the Gnostic phallic cult.

The issue in this verse is the ability of believers learning Bible doctrine and growing in grace to distinguish between people and their weaknesses and failures. Under the mandates of impersonal love the Ephesian believers do not hate the Nicolaitanes, they do not hate the people who are involved in this cult, only the deeds and the functions of the phallic cult. (The word Nicolaitane means "conqueror of the people" and certainly the phallic cult attracted people.)

The Lord adds His own attitude: "which," o(j as a relative pronoun refers back to e)rgon, the deeds of the Nicolaitanes; "also," kagw, a contraction made up of kai and e)gw, and is translated "I also"; "hate," misew, hate or detest. The attitude of our Lord Jesus Christ toward evil. The very fact that there is a separation from evil is a matter of correct perspective for the believer living inside the divine dynasphere: the ability to separate the person from the problem.

There are two things that are necessary in this life if we are to have objectivity. Objectivity is the only way in which to look at life and avoid all of the pitfalls of neurosis, psychosis, sociopathic behaviour, and anything else that would be negative as far as this life in concerned. 1981 Revelation

67 02/23/1982 Revelation 2:6 Roman origins; people and their failures

1981 Revelation

Lesson #68

68 02/24/1982 Revelation 2:7a The Romans; teachability, complications

Verse 7, “hath,” e)xw, verb means to have. Present tense is a static present. It represents a situation assumed as perpetually existing: the possession of one or more ears. The active voice: the believer produces the action of the verb.

Connected with your ears is a principle called volition. You can learn anything you want to even though it may take you a little while to do it. The ear represents the grace system of perception: “an ear,” o)uj, no-one earns or deserves the right to have ears. Hearing has always been one of the major systems of perspicacity. God has provided a grace system for the perception of Bible doctrine, a system where IQ is not an issue, only positive volition and the consistent decisions to learn doctrine; “hear,” a)kouw, this goes far beyond merely hearing sound. It deals with motivation and volition and your desire to learn, your teachability. What you learn today motivates you for learning something in addition to that tomorrow. Doctrine is built on doctrine and each doctrine learned becomes motivation for learning the rest. The mandate for the Christian life is perception of doctrine — consistently; “what,” tij — what sort of thing; “Spirit,” pneuma, reference to God the Holy Spirit. The filling of the Spirit is the power by which the divine dynasphere functions; “saith”, present active indicative of legw, to say, to speak, or to communicate. The customary present tense for what habitually occurs when believers reside and function inside the divine dynasphere. The believer residing in the divine dynasphere is filled with the Spirit and therefore qualified for perception of doctrine regardless of IQ. God the Holy Spirit produces the action, teaching Bible doctrine to believers, John 14:26; 16:12-15; 1 Corinthians 2:9-16; 1 John 2:27.

The mandates regarding the Holy Spirit

1. The mandate for residence in the divine dynasphere, Ephesians 5:18: “Be filled with the Spirit.” That refers to gate 1, that’s the power in God’s power system.
2. The function in the divine dynasphere, Galatians 5:16: “Be walking by means of the Spirit.”

The two negative commands deal with the cosmic system

3. Ephesians 4:30: “Grieve not the Spirit of God.”
4. 1 Thessalonians 5:19: “Quench not the Spirit.”

These are four mandates and in each one you are indwelt by God the Holy Spirit. If you are filled with the Spirit you have entered the divine dynasphere, you are always indwelt. If you are functioning at the different gates you walk by means of the Spirit and at the same time you are indwelt by the Spirit. If you are in cosmic 1 you grieve the Holy Spirit but you are still indwelt by the Spirit. If you are in cosmic two you quench the Holy Spirit but you are still indwelt by the Holy Spirit. The teaching ministry of the Holy Spirit does not preclude the communication of Bible doctrine by the pastor but aids it and enhances it.

“churches,” e)kkhhsia, the thing that made Rome great. All teaching is conducted in the classroom of the local church. The reason for that is academic discipline. There must be a system of authority.

Translation of verse seven so far: “He who has an ear, let him hear what sort of thing [Bible doctrine] the Spirit communicates to the churches.” If you learn your doctrine, if you grow in grace, if you advance to maturity, there is a future reward in eternity.

The tree of life

The tree of life is the total happiness for which man was designed by creation before man sinned. Any references to the tree of life are confined generally to three books in the Bible, the first and the last, Genesis and Revelation, and some interesting references in Proverbs. Full capacity for eternal blessing and happiness is related to the tree of life and as we have it in this passage (Revelation 2:7) it is a special reward that belongs only to a few.

The tree of life of course is related to immortality, for capacity for blessing and happiness; it is perpetuated without any act of volition. In eternity there will be no volitional tests whereby we can lose salvation or anything related to salvation. In other words, in eternity man will not be able in his resurrection body to repeat the fall of our original parents in the Garden. The tree of life is related to immortality under the status of eternal happiness; there are degrees of happiness in heaven. The losers and the winners are the two categories of believers in heaven, in eternity. The winners are those who cracked the maturity barrier, advancing from gate four to gate eight in the divine dynasphere. The losers are the believers who lived out their lives in the cosmic system. The losers or cosmic believers have a resurrection body but they do not have the privilege of eating at the tree of life.

“in the midst of the paradise of God,” en plus the locative of paradeisoj, a transliteration from the Persian word which came through the Hebrew, pardes — a place where you had a great time. It was a place where the Persian kings threw their parties and therefore it is associated with happiness. In eternity, in heaven, there is a special park, the Paradise belonging to God, where stands the tree of life. Access is open to everyone in Paradise but the privilege of eating from the tree of life belongs only to the winners, believers who live inside the divine dynasphere and advance to maturity.

There are four categories of trees in the garden of Eden, Genesis 2:9. First category: every tree being desirable to the sight; second category: and those good for food; third category: and the tree of life in the middle of the garden; category four: and the tree of the knowledge of good and evil.

Category one is a category designed for the prosperity of the soul. All happiness in mankind must relate to man’s soul: to his self-consciousness, to his frontal lobes, the emotion (which by itself is a disaster) which was designed to be responsive to thought in the soul, the volition which is not an issue in eternity but is an issue in time. All happiness is related to what you think, and if doctrine is resident in your soul then you have happiness. If you have in the soul capacity for happiness from doctrine, then what you are doing, no matter what it is, is the expression of that happiness. Circumstances make no difference. The first tree in the garden relates to the principle of happiness of soul. Man was created in an environment of happiness for the soul. The woman was taken from man and created in an environment of happiness for the soul. Category one, then, was designed for man's pleasure of soul, for his capacity for happiness. Man in his original state then derived great pleasure from the observation of category one trees, the trees being desirable to the sight. As created from God, then, man had perfect capacity for happiness. Therefore the state of innocence in the garden was the epitome of great happiness. Man reaped what God sowed, and even though man moved into a state of sin the principle of happiness never changed. The trees were gone but the principle remains: happiness is a state of soul; misery is a state of soul. In the original creation man was created to be a creature of happiness. When man left the garden of his own volition he also walked out on perfect happiness.

Category two trees, mentioned in Genesis 2:9 — "and those good for food." Fun and happiness has always been associated with eating, and the reason for that is that God designed the taste buds. Then taste buds are not the soul, they are related to the body. And the fact is that man in the garden had happiness of soul and happiness of body. Food was designed to express happiness, to satisfy, to stimulate, to perpetuate health in the human body. Again, the grace principle of blessing: Adam in innocence reaped what God sowed. Stimulation of the taste buds was a reminder of God's grace before sin, just as eating the bread of the communion table is reminder of exactly the same thing. In our soul, if we have doctrine and when we eat the bread of the communion table it is a reminder of God's grace after man sinned. The body is the home of the soul. Therefore the first two categories of trees in the garden provided blessing for both body and soul.

Category three tree is the tree of life. The tree of life was both the capacity for happiness plus blessing — total appreciation of God's grace. Hence the tree of life is the total happiness of man designed by God when He created Adam. By creation, man was created to be happy. He had a perfect soul in a perfect body. Therefore he had perfect origin of happiness, perfect expression of happiness. The temptation came not to Adam but to the woman. And the woman became unhappy. Why? Because she thought God had put one over on her! She thought that God had forbidden the tree of the knowledge of good and evil for one reason: because God was afraid that if the woman, arrogant woman, ate from that tree she would be as smart as God!

By creation man was designed for happiness, blessing, prosperity, which was perpetuated indefinitely unless he used his own free will to reject it all. The only way man could be unhappy was to use his own free will to disobey God and eat from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, only negative volition toward the plan of God. Man was perpetuated in happiness in the garden indefinitely, there was no termination on the contract unless man terminated it. Only disobedience could destroy the perfect happiness and the perfect capacity for happiness which existed in the garden. The tree of life combined immortality with perfect happiness and could only be lost through Adam's disobedience. The first sin in life was not a sin related to morality. The greatest sins are never related to morality, they are related to the plan of God. And man's first sin was simply to eat from a tree on which the fruit was forbidden. Therefore, the first sin and the greatest sin involved no morality at all. What it involved was rejecting perfect happiness provided by God; it was rejecting perfect prosperity provided by God; it was rejecting perfect environment provided by God. In other words, the tree of life would be useless to man in a state of spiritual death from sin, which is his state today. Obviously then the tree of life was provided for man as the ruler of this world. A ruler ought to be happy. If a ruler is happy it filters down. The tree of life would be useless to man in the status of spiritual death. Why? It is impossible to be a sinner and to be happy. Sin destroys happiness. That is why you cannot sin inside the divine dynasphere, and you have to make a decision to get out. This tree was man's use, then, of positive volition toward the plan of God which made man the ruler of planet earth. And the tree of life is God's grace provision for man as the ruler of this world. Man was created to resolve the angelic conflict and for an indefinite period of time man had perfect happiness and continued to use positive signals toward divine prohibition. Man was created, however, with free will in order to resolve Satan's appeal of his sentence to go to the lake of fire, Matthew 25:41. Therefore the tree of life was the expression of man's positive volition toward God's provision: perfect happiness, perfect environment. The tree of life was provided under the principle of grace. Man didn't earn it; man didn't deserve it.

When man sinned and went into negative volition toward the divine prohibition toward the fourth tree he was driven out of the garden of Eden and cut off from the tree of life — Genesis 3:24. In other words, the tree of life represents two things: perfect happiness and perfect happiness perpetuated. It was cut off so that perfect happiness cannot exist in the human race through the tree of life. As close as you can come to perfect happiness is the status quo of maturity at gate 8. And just as eating at the tree of life meant happiness, so (eating — taking in the Word of God) doctrine in the soul is as close as you can come to the perfect happiness of the garden. There is no other way. And you can destroy that perfect happiness the same way that Adam did: by the use of your own volition. We are the products of our own volition. If man in the status of spiritual death had eaten from the tree of life his human volition or free will would no longer be the means of solving the angelic conflict. Immortality in that status of spiritual death would condemn the human race to the lake of fire with Satan. So in Genesis 3:22-24. You can't have an old sin nature and eat of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. That is a contradiction of destruction. You can't have perfect happiness and sin. You cannot choose simultaneously both the plan of God and the cosmic system of Satan because they are mutually exclusive. Man would have no free will after the fall if he had been permitted to eat of the tree of life, and therefore the tree of life was put out of his reach so that his own free will would determine where he spends eternity — that's faith in Christ at the cross — and his own free will would determine whether he would be happy or miserable in life. By expelling man from the garden the eating the tree of life was no longer the issue, but the eating of another tree, the cross. Eating is an illustration of faith; it is a non-meritorious function.

The tree of life is total happiness for which man was designed by creation before man sinned. When Adam was created by the Lord he was absolutely perfect and he was designed with a soul and a body to enjoy perfect happiness. Full capacity for eternal blessing and happiness is related to the tree of life as we have it in this passage. It is a special reward for happiness, the highest form of happiness that can exist in a resurrection body. In other words, in eternity man in his resurrection body will not be able in his resurrection body to repeat the fall of the original man. He will not be in a position to use his free will to deny the perfect happiness and to reject it as he had it in the garden. The tree of life is related to immortality under the status of perfect eternal happiness and environment. There are degrees of happiness in heaven just as there are degrees of happiness on earth.

By creation man was designed for happiness and blessing and prosperity which was to be perpetuated indefinitely, and as long as man was positive toward God's plan that is what happened in the perfect environment of the garden. The prohibition to not eat from the fourth tree was the only thing necessary, he only had to obey this one command. Only disobedience to this one command could destroy his happiness and his relationship with God. Only negative volition, then, toward the plan of God as it was then expressed and revealed was all that could destroy that perfect happiness. The tree of life, of course, combined capacity for happiness with immortality [perfect happiness and immortality go together] and could only be lost by a negative action on the part of the man and the woman. In other words the tree of life would be useless to man in the spiritual status of death. And since man died spiritually when he ate of the tree it was absolutely necessary that the tree of life be closed down until a future time, i.e. eternity. Obviously then the tree of life was provided for man as the ruler of this world. The tree, then, was man's use of positive volition toward the plan of God. And it should be remembered that the soul is not only the source of great happiness but that happiness is never divorced from virtue. Motivating virtue is virtue directed toward God, worship is a motivating virtue, it has its counterpart in a functional virtue, morality toward man. Then there is personal love for God, which is a virtue, and impersonal love which is directed toward man is a virtue. Confidence in God is a virtue; courage toward man and circumstances is a virtue. Obviously then the tree of life was provided for man to demonstrate as the ruler of this world in perfect environment, both virtue and happiness. Since both are related to the soul and the content of doctrine in the soul they obviously stand or fall together. Man was created with a free will in order that he might continue to choose God's perfect provision or to reject it.

The tree of life, then, was provided by God's grace to be associated with man's positive volition expressed in his free will for the plan of God, while he functions as the ruler of this world from his headquarters in the garden of Eden. And when man sinned or went on negative volition toward the divine provision and the plan of God for perfect environment on planet earth — perfect happiness and perfect virtue — he lost the rulership of this world and he was removed from the garden, the Paradise, Genesis 3:24. The tree of life was forbidden. No longer can man have happiness simply by partaking of the tree of life, and therefore, of course, a new tree had to be selected in order for happiness to exist. The principle is quite obvious: you cannot choose simultaneously both the plan of God and the cosmic system of Satan for they are mutually exclusive. Man would have no free will after the fall if he had been permitted to eat of then tree of life. Happiness in a state of sin is totally incompatible with God's plan and therefore they cannot coexist, and the tree of life was closed down. And, therefore, by expelling man from the garden the eating from the tree of life was no longer an issue. There is no way that God is going to permit sin to coexist with happiness. Virtue is what coexists with perfect happiness.

Category four tree in the garden: the tree of the knowledge of good and evil

After man had eaten from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil he was spiritually dead. If man in spiritual death possessed the sin nature of Adam and eats from the tree of life, then you have the coexistence of happiness with sin. Human life is imputed to man immediately after birth and it is imputed to his human soul, because that means that God, even after the fall of man, has designed a system whereby man can have happiness in time and far greater happiness in eternity. So the soul still exists and there is the human life being imputed to the soul. Human life will always exist in the soul whether the individual goes to heaven or to hell. At the same time Adam's original sin was imputed to the genetically-formed old sin nature in the body. The imputation of Adam's sin means that we have been born physically alive and spiritually dead. But it also means that if anyone dies before reaching the age of accountability he has automatic eternal salvation without going through the usual route by personal faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Note that we are condemned at birth before we are able to use our volition to commit our first sin. Eventually as an expression of our old sin nature we do so, and therefore we accumulate in our lifetime personal sins. All of these personal sins were sent to another tree; this time the tree is the cross, not the tree of life. This is the tree of eternal life. When our Lord Jesus Christ was hanging on the cross all of our personal sins were imputed to Him and judged. Therefore we have the way of salvation: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved."

After the fall the purpose of the creation of man could only be perpetuated by cutting mankind off from the tree of life, and providing a new tree of life which is the cross and eternal salvation. In this area we have the use of the fourth tree, the knowledge of good and evil. "Good" is one of the two words for the plan of God. Good in the sense of absolute good is a)gathoj: $X+Y+Z = a)gaqoj$. The other is dunamij, where we get our power sphere, the divine dynasphere. By remaining in the garden in status quo spiritual death man would have been immortal with unhappiness. Therefore, God in His wisdom shut down any possibility of the tree of life.

Now we have the issue of the fourth tree, the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. The first three categories of trees in the garden should be summarised. They should be noted because there is a great principle that comes out of this related to our subject of historical trends. Category one trees, the trees that provided happiness in the soul — prosperity and blessing — and made the soul the seat of human happiness, first of all existed in the garden in perfect status. The trees were perfect, the one who ate from the trees or looked at the trees was perfect, and the result was perfect happiness. Perfect happiness excludes boredom, therefore the reason why man sinned or rejected all of this was not boredom. Category one tree relates to capacity for happiness in the soul, a capacity that keeps you from boredom. Category two trees provided prosperity and happiness for the human body. The human body became the recipient of happiness overflowing from the soul. Therefore the principle: All capacity for happiness must reside in the soul and without that soul capacity there cannot exist that basic prosperity of capacity for life, love, and happiness. Category three tree is the tree of life which perpetuates happiness and prosperity in both the human soul and body in perfect environment in the garden. But the tree of life is only good and only fulfils its purpose in perfect environment. So the first three categories of trees are related to the plan of God for man in innocence and for the believer in resurrection body in eternity. The use of all three categories of trees is tantamount to positive volition toward the plan of God in status quo innocence. As long as man made good decisions of eating from the proper trees in the garden and refusing to eat from category four he perpetuated his options for more decisions, greater decisions, which perpetuated his happiness, his blessing, and his prosperity from God.

There is only one category of tree, of course, which man was to use and to demonstrate his volition in a negative way: category four, the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. Eating from this tree destroyed man's original prosperity and happiness. Man actually stood there and had his choice between the woman and unhappiness outside the garden and the perpetuation of perfect happiness inside of the garden. Man has been making those choices ever since. Man has the propensity with his old sin nature of choosing, making decisions, whereby he makes himself miserable. Once man ate from the forbidden tree the immortality of eternal life must be attained in some other way: the tree of eternal life, the cross, where our Lord Jesus Christ bore our sins in His own body on the tree. As long as man continued in the garden without sin or that state of innocence he did not need the fruit of that fourth tree. Man did not need to know good and evil. It was unnecessary as long as he had the first three categories of trees. In spiritual death the options of free will and the function of man's decisions are then related to good and evil. Good is the plan of God while evil is the policy of Satan as the ruler of this world.

Remember that good is the plan of God: X is human life imputed at birth plus Adam's original sin = the first potential: salvation. Plus the pertinent doctrine, the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ = hope¹ (absolute confidence that when we believe in Christ we have eternal life), plus the moment we believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and possess eternal life. Now we are immature believers in Y radical. Here we have a judicial imputation. Judicial imputation number one took place at birth: Adam's original sin was imputed to us. Our personal sins were imputed to Christ on the cross. Plus judicial imputation number two: the imputation of divine righteousness to us at the moment we believed. That leads to a second potential replacing the first: the potential of great blessing in time, for all blessing is imputed to the indwelling righteousness of God. Plus the pertinent doctrine = hope² — absolute confidence that when we persist in perception of doctrine — gate four of the divine dynasphere — we reach gate eight, maturity. Plus maturity adjustment to the justice of God. Z radical brings us very close to the tree of life, for in Z radical we have the imputation of eternal life at salvation, plus the imputation of great blessing in time from advancing to gate eight = the third potential, the potential for great blessing and reward in eternity. Plus the pertinent doctrine = hope³, absolute confidence that after the Rapture of the Church at the judgment seat of Christ we are going to receive the imputation of great reward and blessing for advance in time. This equals "the good," all things working together for good — a)gaqoj. And the means of execution of this is also provided by God as the prototype was provided for the humanity of Christ, and that is the divine dynasphere with its eight gates. You cannot accomplish X+Y+Z except inside the divine dynasphere. That is why only inside the divine dynasphere, at the eight gates, you have degrees of happiness, something that is comparable to the tree of life in the garden. The believer must choose constantly between residence in the divine dynasphere and living in the cosmic system. All uptrends and downtrends of history are related to the decisions of believers in choosing life either in the divine dynasphere or in the cosmic system. In the garden of Eden man was the ruler of this world, but outside the garden Satan is the ruler of this world. Inside the garden man could only sin by eating from one tree, the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. Inside the garden neither good nor evil were issues because of the first three categories of trees. In innocence man did not have to understand good and evil to have a relationship with God. Only in sinfulness and spiritual death must man understand good and evil and make the choice, first at salvation and, afterward the divine dynasphere versus the cosmic system.

Proverbs 3:13-18

What is the issue in the book of Proverbs with regard to the book of life? It is the issue of happiness in relationship with God, happiness in relationship to what God has provided as a substitute for the first three categories of trees in the garden.

Principle

1. As indicated by the first three categories of trees in the garden God created man to be happy. But that happiness demanded perfect environment, a soul designed for happiness, and its perpetuation through the tree of life.
2. Therefore God provided the perfect soul, the perfect body, the perfect environment for man's happiness.
3. When Adam sinned it was not a sin of morality but a sin of rejection of God's plan and God who invented happiness for man. It was a rejection of God's plan and of God Himself and of God's invention. The trees were all invented for man's happiness in perfect environment. Happiness had to be perpetuated by the function of free will. Therefore one tree was forbidden. Happiness is a matter of decisions related to the soul.
4. Adam in the fall lost the divine provision of perfect happiness.
5. After salvation man can recover happiness but it is all related to a divine invention, the divine dynasphere and the daily perception of doctrine inside that dynasphere. Doctrine perceived in the cosmic system is useless, therefore the importance of the rebound technique.

6. As indicated by the first category of trees in the garden happiness is first of all the status quo of the soul, and if there is not happiness in the soul you can have everything associated with happiness in life and be unhappy with it.

7. As indicated in the second category of trees happiness is expressed from the soul to the body. Man's food was not necessary to sustain his body, the trees that were good for food stimulated the body, stimulated the taste buds.

8. Believers who are winners live in the divine dynasphere consistently but believers who are losers live in the cosmic system.

9. Therefore cosmic believers are not only losers but are unhappy as well.

10. However, cosmic believers are always seeking happiness and they seek it in some area associated with happiness. But their unhappy state of soul guarantees their unhappiness in seeking and finding their associations.

11. For example, marriage is often associated with happiness. But when an unhappy person gets married he has an unhappy marriage because he brings unhappiness into the marriage. The status of the soul is not changed by marriage.

12. Often associated with happiness is becoming wealthy. But the cosmic believer may be wealthy and be a very unhappy millionaire. Happiness is not the status of the individual financially, it is the status of the soul.

13. You may change jobs in seeking happiness but even in the perfect job, if you are unhappy of soul, you are unhappy in your job.

Principle

1. The cosmic believer is a soul minus doctrine, or what doctrine he has has no relationship to happiness and blessing. Therefore the cosmic believer is a very unhappy person.

2. The rejection of Bible doctrine — which is, of course, rejection of life in the divine dynasphere — is tantamount to Adam's rejection of perfect happiness in the garden. He used his own free will to reject it, just as we as believers make wrong decisions in life, and when we do, we simply create our own unhappiness. Unhappiness is created by man's volition. Happiness is the invention of God, and God only administers it to those who are making right decisions. Therefore the importance of the divine dynasphere.

3. Once man had sinned from eating of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, eating from the tree of life would have simply perpetuated his status of unhappiness in the garden. Therefore the tree was shut down.

4. The Church is a Christian institution and designed for happiness. But the believer in the local church minus doctrine is an unhappy person in an institution designed for happiness.

5. Marriage is a divine institution, in contrast to a Christian institution, and designed for happiness, but believers who are unhappy of soul are unhappy in the divine institutions. There is nothing wrong with the institution of marriage and there is nothing wrong with the Church, it is just that the people who are involved make it appear so.

6. You take your soul wherever you go, which means you carry your unhappiness with you, and you take it into happy circumstances and they become unhappy. One wet blanket at a party can ruin a party! One rotten apple spoils the barrel.

7. You can be unhappy at a happy party, you can be unhappy at a happy church, you can be unhappy in a happy business, you can be unhappy on a happy vacation, you can be unhappy with a million dollars, or anything you associate with happiness, and it all adds up to unhappiness. There is nothing associated with happiness that will bring you happiness if you are unhappy. That is the state of your soul.

8. Happiness and happy circumstances belongs to the happy, believers with maximum doctrine in the soul, just as happiness in unhappy circumstances belongs to the happy.

9. This is another way of describing the believer who is a winner. The happy believer is a winner because he lives his life in the divine dynasphere. Happy believers have a soul filled with Bible doctrine from residence and function at gate four, interlocked with gates one, two and three.

10. Therefore it is inevitable that the winner, the happy believer, should have access to a special reward in heaven, in eternity. And he does! It is the tree of life.

Learn then from the tree of life that happiness is not success, promotion, wealth, fame, approbation, recognition, sex, social life, or even health, for even unhappy people are involved in all of these. Happiness belongs to the believer who lives and functions in the divine dynasphere. In eternity happiness is that ultimate which belongs to the winner only. In other words, God takes the happiness that is engendered in the divine dynasphere, gate 8, and perpetuates it to the tree of life, and only a few believers in every generation are going to have the privilege in eternity of eating from the tree of life.

With that understanding you can begin to appreciate why in Proverbs the tree of life is mentioned three times. Why is the tree of life mentioned? Because the tree of life is related to the subject of human happiness. The book of Proverbs has something to say about the subject — 3:13-18.

Verse 13, “How happy is the man who finds wisdom” — wisdom is maximum doctrine applied — “the man who gains understanding of doctrine.”

Verse 14, “For its profit is better than the profit of money, and its gain than fine gold.”

Verse 15 now takes doctrine, which is a feminine gender word in the Hebrew, and translates it by the word “she” [the personification of Bible doctrine]. “She is more precious than jewels” — the possession of jewels was not only a sign of wealth but a sign of enjoyment of those things — “and nothing can compare with her [Bible doctrine].”

Verse 16, “Long life is in her right hand” — doctrine is a basis for long life — “in her left hand are riches and honour.” These are the rewards in time through advancing to maturity.

Verse 17, “Her ways,” the ways of doctrine; “are pleasant ways, and her paths,” the paths of doctrine; “are prosperity.”

Verse 18, “She is a tree of life,” doctrine is the tree of life. And the tree of life in the garden is forbidden but there is a tree of life in time — the perception of Bible doctrine in the soul produces happiness in the soul, without which there is no capacity for love, for life, for prosperity in any form; “to those who take hold of her [doctrine], and happy are all who hold her [doctrine resident in the soul].”

So perception of Bible doctrine is analogous to eating from the tree of life in the garden. In time, learning Bible doctrine is as close as we can get to the tree of life in the garden. Those who persist in the perception of doctrine in time will eat from the tree of life in eternity. In eternity there is an ultimate reward, and that ultimate reward in the resurrection body belongs to those who discover something in this life, the true secret of happiness: eating from the tree of life which God has provided for our happiness now. This is another way of saying the perception of Bible doctrine through residence and function in the divine dynasphere.

Proverbs chapter 11:11-31; 13:10-16; 15:1-5. Cursed by association; blessed by doctrine

When Adam sinned it was not a sin of morality, it was a sin of rejecting God’s plan and God’s invention of perfect happiness. After salvation man can, of course, recover happiness through his residence and function inside the divine dynasphere for there is a new tree of life since the fall of man which is the cross. And when a person believes in the Lord Jesus Christ he becomes a possessor instantly of eternal life. This means that the door for happiness is opened in this life, and the door of happiness is residence and function inside the dynasphere. The first three trees in the garden emphasise happiness as a state of the soul. The second category of trees in the garden represented or expressed the happiness relationship between the soul and the body. In time learning Bible doctrine is as close as we can get to that tree of life in Paradise, and those who persist in the perception of doctrine in time will eat from the tree of life in eternity and ultimately receive that fantastic reward. In other words, the tree of life in our context, Revelation 2:7, is the ultimate reward and blessing for the believer whose consistent and persistent positive volition toward doctrine results in spiritual advance to maturity. Therefore, in this dispensation this is only possible through our life in the divine dynasphere, which means constant decisions to reject the evil tree of the cosmic system.

In addition to the concept of the tree of life found in Revelation 2:7, it is also found in several other passages in Revelation. For example, it is found in Revelation 22:2. There the tree of life is found in the location of the new Jerusalem of eternity. It is located there for the availability of those Jews who reached maturity in the past and did so through Bible doctrine but without the benefit of the divine dynasphere. Revelation 22:14 also mentions the tree of life in relationship to eternal happiness and blessing. It is associated there with the great reward that comes to the winners — “Happy are those who wash their robes [the use of rebound in time to recover residence in the divine dynasphere] and continue their momentum, that they may have the right to the tree of life and may enter by the gates of the city.” The mature believer has as his ultimate reward in eternity for ever and ever access to a special super happiness that will not belong to the losers in eternity. So he has the ultimate in happiness in time and it is fitting that he should have the ultimate of happiness in heaven in eternity.

The principle of cursing by association with people versus blessing by association with doctrine.

If you are going to be happy in time, if you are going to fulfil God’s plan, if your life is going to glorify God, this principle must become real. Happiness does not come to you by your association with people. If you are a happy person associating with people that is one thing, but if you are an unhappy person association with people isn’t going to improve your situation.

1. There was a tremendous conflict in the garden of Eden which continues to have repercussion until this day. The woman sinned first, the sin of ignorance, and by her act of disobedience she had rejected and lost the perfect happiness of the garden of Eden. But she did so motivated by arrogance. She thought that by taking of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil it would make her as smart as God. But what she discovered immediately is that that tree of the knowledge of good and evil, when you are under the control of Satan, is human good and evil, for human good is synonymous with evil. She didn’t have any idea of good as the plan of God.

2. At the time of the woman’s sin and her spiritual death Adam was still in a state of perfect happiness. Adam and the woman had a perfect relationship because they had perfect happiness in the garden. So before the woman sinned it was a person coalescing with a person., combining perfect happiness with perfect happiness in any possible expression of happiness.

3. Adam could choose perfect happiness with God in the garden or unhappiness with the woman outside the garden. They had perfect happiness in the garden; they were created for perfect happiness. And as long as they stayed away from the forbidden tree that perfect happiness would be perpetuated by their eating at the tree of life. But when the woman sinned she was minus that perfect happiness, she became plus the old sin nature. But Adam remembers her and the good times together in the garden, and therefore he does something that creates a principle. In thinking of her as she was and the good times together he forgot the source of all of our good times, God. He had to choose between the Source and the memory of fun. So he said No to the Source, to God, and he took the fruit from the hand of the woman. But he did it on the basis of memory of the wonderful times they had had together, not the memory of the Source of happiness. For happiness you always have to go to the source and the only way you can do that is to recall doctrine at the right time in your life. This is the tragedy of so many Christians: they forgot to apply doctrine at the right time and make the right decision.

4. Unhappiness with the woman won. Adam could choose perfect happiness with God in the garden or unhappiness with the woman outside of the garden. Unhappiness with the woman won and the power of the principle of cursing by association became a major factor in human relationship throughout history. Man chose to be unhappy. We are the products of our own decisions.

5. Unhappiness always attacks happiness for happiness is the invention of God to be maintained by means of our new tree of life — Bible doctrine resident in the soul — Proverbs 3:13-18.

6. You cannot remain happy by association with unhappy people, except under one condition: the life in divine dynasphere and the daily perception of Bible doctrine. It's the only way you can handle unhappiness.

7. You can associate with unhappy people in business life, social life, married, life, home life, professional life, and spiritual life. And unless you possess Bible doctrine in your soul and its constant application and formation of a true scale of values, you will become unhappy through the principle of cursing by association.

8. The pull on Adam in the garden before he sinned was stronger in the direction of the unhappy woman who had sinned than in the direction of God who had provided the trees in the garden for his happiness. This problem continues today: the people with whom you associate may be unhappy. We can associate with them but none of us are strong enough to do it on our own. The only way you can do it is life in the divine dynasphere. Unhappy people will get to you every time if you don't have that doctrine. [If you say No to the Source, then you'll say Yes to the sourceless every time!]

Principle: Unhappiness breeds unhappiness

1. The believer associated with unhappy people is vulnerable to unhappiness.

2. Therefore, believer beware that in your association with unhappy people you do not reject or ignore your source of happiness — remember God. Your source of happiness is Bible doctrine.

3. Unhappiness is contagious unless you function at gate four of the divine dynasphere, perception and application of Bible doctrine.

4. In some cases decisions must be made in the direction of separation. In many cases, like marriage, home life, business association, there is no physical separation possible. The believer must therefore use doctrine to endure. But you can't endure grimly. If you do not endure in a state of happiness, your own personal happiness, then you are never going to make it in life and you are going to wind up under the principle of cursing by association. The point is, can you hold your own when you are associated with someone who is an unhappy person? Adam didn't, and Adam was stronger than we are. Therefore we have to have something stronger than we are to do it. And the only way to do it is to go to the source, eating from the tree of life, your daily perception of Bible doctrine. So enduring in a state of happiness it does not mean to hang on grimly, it means that you are not in any way affected by the unhappiness of someone associated with you.

5. Some situations are endured with happiness while other circumstances simply demand separation.

6. Sorting this out, however, requires maximum knowledge of doctrine for the wisdom to do so. And that doctrine must come from the basis of happiness in the human soul. The believer who does this consistently is a winner and will be rewarded by access to the tree of life in eternity. the ultimate in happiness forever and ever.

Proverbs 11:11-31

Verse 11, "By the blessing of the upright [the mature believer] a city is exalted [blessing by association], but by the mouth of the wicked one [the cosmic believer] it is destroyed."

All gossiping and maligning has its origin in unhappy souls.

Verse 12, "He who despises his neighbour [hatred: gate one, cosmic one] is destitute of doctrine [he lacks sense], but a man of understanding minds his own business [function of the doctrine of privacy]."

Happy people have no problem in giving privacy to others.

Verse 13, "He who functions as a talebearer [a violation of privacy] reveals secrets, but he who is faithful of spirit conceals the matter."

Verse 14, "Where there is no guidance [from doctrine], the people fail; but where there is no lack of leadership there is deliverance."

Verse 15, "He who is a co-signer of a note for a stranger will suffer for it, but he who hates co-signing is secure."

In other words, friendship and compatibility is not based on doing something for someone, but true rapport is based on two happy people.

Verse 16, "A grace woman acquires integrity [or honour], a strong man in doctrine attains happiness."

Verse 17, "The grace man benefits his own soul with happiness, but the cruel person [cosmic believer] troubles his own flesh."

We are, as unhappy people, our own worst enemies. God invented happiness to remove that problem.

Verse 18, "The wicked [the cosmic believer] earns the wages of a lie, but he who sows righteousness has a true reward." The true reward is the tree of life.

Verse 19, "The truly righteous believer lives, but he who pursues evil [the cosmic believer] goes to his death [doctrine of the sin unto death]."

Verse 20, "The Lord detests men of distorted right lobes [an unhappy person], but the upright in the way [the believer positive toward doctrine] are his delight."

Verse 21, "Be sure of this, the evil will not go unpunished; but the descendants of the righteous will be delivered [there is blessing by association]."

Verse 22, "Like a ring of gold in a pig's snout, so is a beautiful woman who lacks discretion [or wisdom]." In other words, the woman can be beautiful, but if she has an unhappy soul you may as well put the jewel in the pig's nose.

Verse 23, "The desire of the righteous is unique good, but the expectation of the evil [the cosmic believer] is wrath." In other words, they make decisions that bring disaster upon themselves.

Verse 24, "One man gives generously yet gains even more; another man is stingy and comes to poverty."

Verse 25, "A generous man will prosper, and he who refreshes others will himself be refreshed".

Generosity goes with a state of happiness in the soul.

Verse 26, "People curse the man who hoards grain; but blessing crowns the one who is willing to sell." Verse 27, "He who seeks good finds grace blessing; but evil comes to him who seeks it."

Verse 28, "He who trusts in riches will fall, but the righteous will prosper like the green leaf."

Verse 29, “He who causes sorrow to his family will inherit the wind; and the fool will be the servant of the wise in the right lobe.”

Notice from all of this context, happiness versus unhappiness.

Verse 30, “The fruit of the mature believer is a tree of life” — happy people witness properly. They are motivated for it. Miserable people, unhappy people of soul (unhappy believers) are ineffective in witnessing — “he who wins souls is wise.” But that wisdom must come before the soul winning.

Verse 31, “If the righteous will be rewarded on earth [the mature believer who has happiness on earth]; how much more the cosmic believer and the sinner will receive discipline.”

Proverbs 13:10-16

Verse 10, “Through arrogance comes nothing but strife [arrogance means unhappiness], but wisdom is found in those who take advice.”

Verse 11, “Dishonest money dwindles away, but he who gathers money little by little makes it grow.” Verse 12, the principle: “Hope deferred makes the heart [right lobe] sick; but desire fulfilled is a tree of life.” In other words, you will never find happiness through your hopes in getting something you associate with happiness. Your happiness will only come from feeding on the tree of life — Bible doctrine.

Verse 13, “The one who despises the word will pay for it, but the one who respects the mandate of God will be rewarded.”

Verse 14, “The teaching of the wise pastor is the fountain life, turning a person from the snares of death”.

Verse 15, “Good understanding of doctrine wins favour, but the way of the unfaithful does not endure”.

Verse 16, “Every wise person acts out of knowledge of doctrine, but a fool [the cosmic believer] exposes his folly.”

Proverbs 15:1-5

Verse 1, “A gentle answer [a happy person doesn’t have to get up on his high horse when he is challenged or when someone is being unkind] turns away wrath, but harsh words stir up anger.”

Verse 2, “The tongue of a wise person makes doctrine good, but the mouth of a fool [cosmic believer] gushes folly.”

Verse 3, “The eyes of the Lord are everywhere [the omniscience of God], keeping watch on the evil and on the good.”

Verse 4, “A soothing [healing] tongue is a tree of life.” What is the healing tongue? The healing tongue is the teaching of doctrine. And that is the tree of life — “but perversion in it is the crushing of the spirit [distorting doctrine crushes the spirit].”

Verse 5, “A fool despises his father’s discipline, but he who regards correction shows prudence.”

Notice the relationship: the pastor is in view in the first part of the passage; the father is in view in the second. Generally people who have respect for their parents in childhood [enforced and genuine humility] are teachable from the pulpit where Bible doctrine is taught. And generally the people who have no respect for their parents reject doctrine, resist the Word, and wind up as losers in the Christian life.

1981 Revelation

Lesson #73

73 03/02/1982 Revelation 2:8a Origin of Rome; history of Smyrna

Verses 1-7 dealt with the church at Ephesus; verses 8-11 deal with the church at Smyrna. In verse 8 we have the encouragement of the local church.

It begins with the connective conjunction kai, showing that all of these churches are related in a common function. The principle of the connective conjunction here is to show that the Roman empire, while it persecuted the Christians many times, was actually sustained and supported by them since they were the first Gentile client nation to God in the times of the Gentiles which began in AD 70. With this we have a dative singular, indirect object, from the noun αγγελος, which ordinarily would mean angel (a transliteration) but it actually means a messenger. Here it refers to a pastor. The dative of indirect object indicates the one in whose interest the act is performed. This is a reference to a future pastor who replaced John, after John's death, at Smyrna. And since at the moment John is the non-resident pastor this is addressed to those who would follow, who would succeed him. It is also a dative of advantage since it is to the advantage of the local church at Smyrna to have a pastor whether he is resident or not. The believer in this dispensation actually cannot learn doctrine without the gift of pastor-teacher. This is a part of the function of the divine dynasphere with regard to perception of doctrine. The pastor is the authority by which God communicates doctrine to the believers, and also it is the test. The existence of the pastor is the test for the first three gates of the divine dynasphere — the filling of the Spirit, basic impersonal love which is your objectivity (you cannot learn any subject at any time without objectivity. The subject being taught becomes the issue rather than the personality of the one who communicates). Gate three is the basis for teachability — enforced and genuine humility. So, of course, these three gates all depend upon having God's Word communicated directly to another human being, who has an old sin nature, who has the weaknesses and the strengths that belong to the human race, who is a fellow member of category homo sapiens. Therefore the importance of the local church as the classroom and the gift of pastor-teacher as communicator.

Next comes the genitive singular of relationship from the noun ἐκκλησία, used for the local church. Ἐκκλησία is used in classical Greek for the meeting of the council who run the city state. It is also used in technical areas for the function of the royal family of God. Every believer is in the body of Christ and/or the Church in relationship to God, the basis for the royal family concept, and also there is the local church where we assemble to learn doctrine. With this we have the generic use of the definite article, indicating the principle of the pastor's authority over the local church through the communication of Bible doctrine. And in this case the local church is the congregation at Smyrna. Smyrna today is Izmir, the second largest city in Turkey. We have then the preposition phrase ἐν plus the locative of Smyrna in the Greek. In transliteration the "u" becomes a "y" for some reason. By the way, we know the name of the next pastor. His name is Polycarp; he is going to succeed John.

Smyrna

— a large ancient city on the west coast of what is now Turkey, but called Asia Minor. It is at the head of the Gulf of Smyrna which reaches 30 miles inland from the Aegean Sea. The city of Smyrna was originally settled by a group of people called the Leleges. These were one of those Asiatic peoples who are identified with the Carians, who were identified as the famous mercenaries of the ancient world. About 1100 BC Smyrna was taken from the Leleges by the Aolian Greeks. In 688 BC Smyrna was taken over by the Ionian Greeks and in 627 BC the Ionian city was taken over by the Lydians. And the Lydians are the key to a lot of things, not only in western Turkey but also as far as the entire Mediterranean basin is concerned. They are definitely connected with the origin of the Romans who were a very different people from the people around them called the Latins. The real key to blessing by association is Smyrna which is the city that really started the Romans.

The secret to the rise of Rome was three things: respect for law, tremendous self-discipline, and the ability to sacrifice for their government. All of these things were a part of their concept. The thing that would sustain Rome and make it great is the divine dynasphere, function inside the divine dynasphere as over against believers being in the cosmic system. The uptrend will come from the believers on the west coast of Asia Minor, and the downtrend will come from all over the empire wherever believers became involved in the cosmic system. Under the concept of manifest destiny any great nation has to start with landed aristocracy. Eventually, of course, there will be an industrial complex as there was in Rome. And there is always an undeveloped frontier. People who can't make it under the landed aristocracy will go out to the undeveloped frontier. But eventually if the nation is going to be great there must be the leadership of the industrial complex. You can never defeat a good industrial complex, and there is a reason for that under the doctrine of manifest destiny. Manifest destiny says that if a nation is going to be great it will eventually combine all three factors in manifest destiny. The landed aristocracy will combine under the leadership of the industrial complex and eventually they will take in all of the undeveloped frontier. It is not a racial issue, it is an issue of the laws of divine establishment or category one doctrine. And the combination produced outstanding leaders, outstanding soldiers, etc. The Spaniards had the advantage of numbers, the Gauls had the advantage over the Romans in physical strength, the Carthaginians had the advantage of mental sharpness, the Greeks had the advantage of culture, the Latins and the Italians had the advantage of shrewd common sense, but Rome conquered them all. Notice the distinction between the Romans and the Latins and the Italians. They were not the same people. The Romans conquered the Latins and the Italians and eventually gave them citizenship. After the city state was developed it conquered Italy and after it conquered Italy it conquered everything in the Mediterranean basin which became the basis for setting up the first Gentile client nation to God. Before we finish our study we will see how the entire world was evangelised because the Roman legions went successfully all the way to the Euphrates, to the southern Danube, to the Rhine, all of the way to the Caledonians in Scotland. And while they could go no farther there was one thing that stepped beyond the Roman eagles and standards of SPQR — the Christian missionaries who crossed the Euphrates, the Danube, the Rhine, and went beyond Hadrian's wall. And by so doing one of the greatest periods of missionary activity that has ever existed came about. The Roman conquests were often cruel because war is often cruel but while there is cruelty in war but that doesn't mean that there is anything wrong with war. Without war we would have no freedom, we would not be evangelised, we would not have a civilisation or the greatest blessings of modern time.

The key to everything then is Smyrna. It was Smyrna which provided the greatness of the Roman empire. In 688 BC the Ionian Greeks took over and when Alexander conquered the world he went through and took Asia Minor, and after his death the city of Smyrna was ruled by the Macedonians. And one of the Macedonian generals who took over the city was Lysimachus. He rebuilt the city which had been destroyed. When he rebuilt the city he located it at the head of one of the chief highways of that area. Therefore its magnificent port became a trading centre and one of the most prosperous in all of the ancient world. Along with Ephesus and Pergamum, Smyrna became one of the most brilliant and prosperous cities of Anotalia or western Turkey. The population of the city at the time that John wrote was about 200,000. Thanks to the planning of Alexander the Great and the execution of his city planning, Smyrna had wide, paved streets. For that reason alone they could expand and expand, and it became the centre of commerce and for several hundred years it was one of the most prosperous cities in the ancient world.

In AD 23, less than a century before our passage opens up, a temple was built in honour of the emperor Tiberias and his mother Julia. It was connected by a wide golden boulevard. This became one of the most famous of all boulevards in the ancient world and people would actually travel thousands of miles just to walk on the golden boulevard. Because the trade there was so great the Jews moved in and there was a large Jewish population. There was also a very large Roman population, a large Greek population and, of course the Asiatics. There were a strong group of believers in Smyrna. The church is one of the greatest of all time. It is the only one of the seven churches in Revelation 2 & 3 which was not criticised. It became the bulwark of the Roman empire. Under the principle of the pivot and the sustaining of a client nation to God, this one was the greatest. By 300 AD the majority of the people in Ephesus and Smyrna were believers, they became almost totally Christian cities. Smyrna was the last city to hold out against the Mahommedan invasions, it did not fall to the Turks until the year 1424 AD. It was the discovery of America and the discovery of the sea routes to India which eventually ruined Smyrna's trade.

Polycarp, the pastor who succeeded John was one of John's parishioners. He was a young person in John's church in Ephesus. After the death of John he went to Smyrna where he was accepted as the pastor. It was during a pagan festival that Polycarp was brought before the proconsul, Philip, who tried to force him take an oath to revile Christ. Of course, Polycarp refused. His answer was very simple: "For eighty-six years I have been a servant of our Lord Jesus Christ, and He has done me no wrong. How can I blaspheme my Lord and King, my only saviour?" Polycarp was then seized and burned at the stake. The Roman empire had many horrible Caesars and very few good rulers. They had many things against them and yet, because of the city of Smyrna, because of the tremendous advance of believers in the divine dynasphere, it became the secret that carried the Roman empire for 300 years plus.

The mandate from our Lord Jesus Christ to John in verse 8: the aorist active imperative of the verb grafw, write. The culminative aorist views the writing of the book of Revelation in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the completion of the canon of scripture, the history of the world from the time of writing (AD 96) down to the end of the world. The book of Revelation is a text book of world history. We have already seen this in chapter one. In chapters two and three we have the historical trends of the Church Age, the dispensation of no prophecy. The next prophecy is the resurrection of the Church. In the meantime everything is discerned through historical trends. Then, Revelation in chapters four and five the removal of the Church, the royal family of God — the Rapture. In Revelation chapters 6-18, three aspects of the Tribulation. Chapter 19: the second advent of Christ and the changing of the rulership of this world from Satan, who is at that time incarcerated for a thousand years, to our Lord Jesus Christ. Then there is the Millennial reign of our Lord, one thousand years of perfect environment. And then at the end of that Millennial reign, the loosing of Satan, the Gog revolution, followed by the last judgment — the second resurrection, the destruction of planet earth by God Himself, which means that there is no way that mad men pressing buttons can destroy this earth with sophisticated weaponry.

The active voice: John, under the ministry of the Holy Spirit, produces the action of writing under the ministry of the Holy Spirit a text book of world history. Every historical trend, every eschatological function of the future is involved in this book.

Next we have the encouragement of the congregation. This follows a very definite pattern throughout. It starts out with the accusative neuter plural, direct object, from Tade. This is a strange type of demonstrative pronoun because it was used originally as a part of the introductory formula for the translation of the Persian kings' decrees into Greek. The Persians ruled so many Greeks that the decrees first came out in Persian and were then translated into Greek. And they always started out with this accusative form, tade. It is used here as the introductory formula of a decree and a mandate from our Lord Jesus Christ and as His estimation of the situation in Smyrna. With it we have the present active indicative of the verb legw, which means here to communicate. The aoristic present tense of legw sets forth an event as now occurring, therefore punctiliar action in present time. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb, the communication of an estimate of the situation. The indicative mood is declarative, representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality. The rest of the verse is really the subject of the verb.

Then we have a big subject, because the subject not only has our Lord Jesus Christ but a relative clause in there to indicate who is doing the communicating. We start then with the definite article, o(, plus the nominative singular from the subject, prwtoj, correctly translated "the first." With this a connective kai and then the generic used of the definite article plus the nominative singular subject again from e)sxatoj. Translation: "the first and the last communicates these things."

What is the meaning of our Lord's title, "the first and the last"? This is not the same as a)lfa and o)mega. It actually has a fourfold interpretation.

Twenty six years after the times of the Gentiles began in AD 70 the apostle John, during the rule of the Caesar Domitian, was banished to the Isle of Patmos in hopes that he would die there. Instead he sat down under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit to write the last book of the canon of scripture, the book of Revelation. The book of Revelation is the text book of world history from the time of John, AD 96, to the end of time. In chapters 2 & 3 we are studying historical trends. Once we understand these things we can determine exactly what is happening today, we can determine what has happened in any period of history, and we can see the entire issue of this dispensation and our relationship to it.

We have now gone into some isagogics in order to understand what we are studying with regard to these churches. Why the western coast of Turkey? Why the seven churches located in that area? Why not something in historical trends written to Rome or to Antioch or to Jerusalem? Why these? Because these seven churches, through residence and function in the divine dynasphere, carried client nation SPQR for a record time for any nation which has been a client nation to God. And for a period of time, from 96-180 AD, thanks to the mature believers who advanced from gate four to gate eight of the divine dynasphere and formed a pivot, we have one of the greatest periods of prosperity in all of human history.

The origin of the Romans includes the geographical area we are now studying. Many of the seven churches were located in the area of ancient Lydia. The source of Rome's original leadership came from the area of the seven churches and specifically from the city of Smyrna. So it is fitting that the same area should provide mature believers from all races to provide blessing by association which would carry the Roman empire through the greatest period of prosperity that the world has ever known. There was an amalgamation of races resulting in the rise of Rome. But it was not a racial issue, it was a respect for law, respect for authority, respect for good government; it was a system of integrity developed by the Romans. But the thing that sustained them and the thing that made the empire greater than the republic was on the west coast of Asia Minor: manifest destiny, combined with the seven churches of the Roman province of Asia, turned the Roman empire into a great client nation. Christianity was tested under the Roman empire but that testing prepared them for the greatest missionary thrust the world has ever known. Missionaries out of the Roman empire, after going through the ten times of persecution ending with Diocletian, went far beyond any area where Roman eagles and the standards of SPQR ever went.

The first and the last — verse 8b

There are four meanings.

1. First of all this refers to Jesus Christ as the God-Man; it refers to the hypostatic union which started at the virgin birth or the incarnation of Christ. Jesus Christ as "the first" is eternal God, coequal and CO-eternal with God the Father and God the Holy Spirit. As eternal and infinite God, Jesus Christ pre-existed history which He controls from the computer of divine decrees. Jesus Christ also concludes history as "the last". He is the God-Man, He concludes history as "the last" in hypostatic union. So He is eternal God and true humanity in One person forever. Jesus Christ as the author of history never loses control of history. He is the first and He is the last. He began history by personally creating man — Adam. And as the last Adam He will personally conclude history with the destruction of the earth. Even though history is the record of man's thoughts, motives, decisions, and actions, it is Jesus Christ, the first and the last, who controls history. Therefore, there are two sources of judgements and disasters in history: the sovereign decisions of our Lord Jesus Christ and the erroneous decisions of mankind.

Principle: People are collectively and individually the products of their own decisions. And remember that decision creates environment, not environment decision. For example, there is no such thing as a homosexual because of environment or because of genes, it is a matter of decision. In other words, we are the products of our decisions, not our environment. Our decisions create the environment; the environment does not create our decisions.

2. The second meaning has to do with the two great prophecies of history. The title “first and last” also refers to these two great prophecies because they refer to our Lord Jesus Christ. They are the first and second advents. So many prophecies in the Old Testament deal with the details of our Lord’s first advent, all of which are a part of “the first.” The Church is located in between these two great prophetic periods of human history and therefore the Church Age becomes the dispensation of no prophecy. Everything pertaining to the first advent was fulfilled prior to the beginning of the Church Age — the virgin birth, the incarnation, the hypostatic union, our Lord’s residence and function in the prototype divine dynasphere, His resultant impeccability, His saving work — redemption, reconciliation, propitiation — His death on the cross, His physical resurrection, His ascension, His session, etc. The dispensation of the Church is designed, then, to call out a royal family for our Lord’s third royal patent. Therefore the Church Age is the dispensation of historical trends, but no prophecy. The next prophecy is the termination of the Church Age, the Rapture of the Church, the resurrection of the body of Christ. And because the Church Age is the dispensation of no prophecy the next event prophetically, eschatologically, is an imminent event. In other words, there is no intervening prophecies that have to be fulfilled before the Rapture occurs. The Rapture was imminent even in the time of the apostles and still is. Therefore Christ is the first, related to the first advent and the strategic victory of the cross. Christ is the second related to His tactical victory of the second advent. The first and the last, then, is a title of our Lord Jesus Christ as the prophetic key to human history.

3. The third meaning of our subject, the Lord Jesus Christ under the title of “the first and the last,” refers to the uptrends and downtrends of history related to the believer in the Lord Jesus Christ. Christ is either first or last to every believer; there is no in between because every believer is either inside the divine dynasphere or inside the cosmic system. If you are living inside the divine dynasphere — gate 5: love of God; gate eight, which includes occupation with the person of Christ — this means that Christ is first. But if you are a believer living in cosmic dynasphere number one, cosmic dynasphere number two, then Christ is last. So the up and down trends of history are related to this particular title of our Lord. In other words, as goes the believer in Christ so goes human history in any generation. When the believer puts Christ first in his scale of values it is because he lives inside the divine dynasphere which contributes to the uptrend of history; when the believer puts Christ last in his scale of values it is because he lives in the cosmic system which contributes to the downtrend of history. Therefore, “first and last” also emphasises the function of human volition in history. It emphasises the importance of occupation with the person of Christ as well as the place of Christ in one’s scale of values and daily priorities.

4. “First and last” also refers to the source of both temporal and eternal blessing for the believer. Our first blessing relates to time while our last blessing relates to eternity. “First and last” is the fulfilment of the Christian way of life resulting in the imputation of both logistical and super grace blessing in time plus the imputation of eternal blessing and reward at the judgment seat of Christ.

The first two points are interpretation of our Lord’s title; the last two points are application of our Lord’s title.

Now for the relative clause. We start out with the nominative singular from the relative pronoun o(j, whose antecedent is “the first and the last.” So it is translated: “the first and the last who.” Next comes the aorist middle indicative of the verb ginomai, which means “to be” and it also means “to become.” We will translate it “who became.” This is the dramatic aorist tense, it states the present reality with the certitude of a past event — the death of our Lord on the cross. The idiom, of course, is a device for emphasis. The middle voice: our Lord’s humanity participated in the results of the action. This refers to His physical death on the cross. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of Bible doctrine.

Next we have the predicate nominative from nekroj, which refers to our Lord’s semantic death on the cross. Literally, “who became dead.” But it is an idiom and should be translated “who died.”

Next we have the connective conjunction kai, followed by the aorist active indicative of the verb zaw, which means to live. It is used for dead persons who return to life, hence to become alive again. And it should be translated: “who died and came to life again.” The aorist tense is a culminative aorist. It views the resurrection of our Lord in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results: the continuation of human history past the first advent. This continuation of history is the subject of the book of Revelation. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb through His physical, literal, bodily, resurrection from the dead. The indicative mood is the declarative for a dogmatic statement of doctrine — the doctrine of the literal, physical resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ from the dead.

1981 Revelation

Lesson #74

74 03/03/1982 Revelation 2:8b Roman history; "The First and the Last"

1981 Revelation

Lesson #75

75 03/04/1982 Revelation 2:9 Medal of honor winners; true wealth: ECS

Verse 9, “thy works” is not found in the original manuscripts. The verse begins with o)ida, which means cognisance, present active indicative, and it refers here to our Lord’s divine knowledge or omniscience regarding the status quo of this second church which contributed to 350 years or more of glory of the Roman empire, i.e. glory from the divine viewpoint, not the Roman empire as such, but the client nation Roman empire where over several hundreds of years millions and millions of people were led to the Lord Jesus Christ.

The accusative singular, direct object of qliyij comes up next. It refers to pressure, to afflictions, to the various disasters that often occur in life. It is translated: "I know all about your pressures." It is in the singular, gathering up all of the pressures of these people into one concept.

Then we have the conjunction kai which should be translated here, "even." It is followed by an appositional accusative of the noun ptwxeia — poverty, and with it the generic use of the definite article thn, indicating that the poverty was categorical. Ordinarily that is what it means, poverty, but here it is more than just poverty and we will translate it "including the destitution". It indicates that the poverty is categorical. Smyrna was a wealthy city and many believers were, or had been, financially extremely prosperous. But they had become victims of the ten percenters throughout the Roman empire. The ten percenters began with the Domitian persecution of the Christians. The idea was that if a person could find a Christian, preferably a wealthy one, and prove in court that he was a Christian and he was sent to jail, the Roman empire confiscated his wealth and ten per cent went to the informer. Many of the believers in Smyrna were impoverished as a result of this action. There were people who made this a profession. There was also a wealthy Jewish coalition who delighted in eliminating and destroying Christians in business enterprise by using some kind of business tactic. All of this was suffering for blessing on the part of the believers.

The spiritual status of these believers is mentioned next. Their financial status was mentioned because they were under pressure and were suffering privation because of their faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. The spiritual status of the believers is given after the adversative conjunction a)lla. It is correctly translated "but." It sets up a contrast between the poverty of the believers of Smyrna and their fantastic spiritual wealth through living and functioning inside the divine dynasphere and, above all, through passing the momentum tests dealing with the adversities they have faced. With this we have the present active indicative of e)imi, "but you are. The perfective present tense refers to a fact which has come to be in the past, i.e. the believers of Smyrna have cracked the maturity barrier by reaching gate eight. They did so at the cost of all of their wealth and possessions, but even though they are in a state of poverty they possess something that few people in history have actually possessed, and that of course is the edification complex of the soul. Of all of the possessions in life that must be related to wealth and success there is none greater than the ECS. That makes the believer who possesses it a multimillionaire spiritually. It is the highest and greatest thing that can happen to anyone in life and its repercussions go far beyond the possession of that ECS on arriving at gate eight of the divine dynasphere, because it is the ECS and the person who possess it who contributes to the blessing of the client nation and the uptrends of history. All greatness, all achievement, all aristocracy, all high-class versus low-class, all came out of one thing. Everyone started on the same basis, the use of volition and having established a system of priorities and the right scale of values: doctrine first.

Next we have the noun plousioj, which means rich and refers to the status of being a mature believer. It refers to spiritual wealth.

We then note that there was opposition from the Jewish community. This opposition is stated with the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai. This time kai is translated “also. Then we have an ellipsis which demands the repetition of o)ida — “also I know.” This is followed by the accusative singular, direct object from the noun blasfhmia, which means slander. Then we have the source of the slander, e)k plus the ablative plural from the definite article used as a demonstrative pronoun, plus the present active participle of legw. We translate: “from those who allege. The descriptive present tense is for what is now going on; the active voice: racial Jews, also religious Jews, produce the action of the verb. Religion motivates to evil; Christianity motivates to good. This is a circumstantial participle.

Then we have the accusative of general reference of the proper noun, (I)udaioj, which means a Jew by birth or race, a Jew by country or by religion, but not a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ as the God of Israel. In other words, it is referring to the unbelieving Jew. The Jewish population of Smyrna was very antagonistic toward Christianity for they considered Christianity as dangerous to their own relationship with the Roman empire. The emperors of the Roman empire were constantly confusing Jews and Christians because so many Jews were Christians.

Then we have the accusative plural from the reflexive pronoun e(auton, which is translated “they themselves. This is a part of the idiom of the accusative of general reference, plus the infinitive of indirect discourse from the verb legw, “they allege that they themselves are Jews. The present active infinitive is next, e)imi, “they are (Jews). The static present for something taken for granted as a fact; the active voice: racial and religious Jews produce the action but they produce it as unbelievers. This is the infinitive of actual result called the infinitive of indirect discourse.

Then we have the connective use of the conjunction kai —“and. And again we have the present active indicative of e)imi, but this time it is plus the negative o)uk —translated, “and they are not. The perfective present tense denotes the continuation of existing results. These people have personally rejected the Lord Jesus Christ as saviour. They have accepted the God of Israel in His Alpha glory but they have rejected the God of Israel in His Omega glory. The active voice: racial and religious Jews produce the action of the verb. They are not true Jews, not believers in the Lord Jesus Christ; they are not born again. The difference to the true and the false Jew is his attitude toward the Lord Jesus Christ who is the God of Israel, as well as the saviour of the world. Jewish business monopolies in Smyrna had effectively impoverished the Christian community. The royal family of God in Smyrna was constantly facing people testing from both the Jewish community and, of course, the greater pressure of the hostility of Rome and, therefore, in effect, the hostility of the entire cosmic system.

Then we have the final reference. All of this enmity, the hostility from the Roman government, hostility from the Jews, hostility from the ten percenters, all comes under one category; it is opposition from the cosmic system. So again we have the adversative conjunction a)lla which sets up the contrast again. The ellipsis demands the repetition of e)imi —“but they are. And then we have the predicate nominative from sunagwgh, which is translated synagogue but it means congregation actually. There is no definite article here, it is being set apart as a specific category of history. It is not a synagogue, that’s Jewish; it is Gentile and Jew; it is the government involved; it is the Gentiles in the Roman empire and the Gentiles in Smyrna specifically; it is Jewish people in Smyrna specifically. It isn’t a racial oppositional type thing.

Then we have the possessive genitive satanoj, “Satan,” taken from the Hebrew shatan and it means enemy or adversary. Translation: “but they are a congregation of Satan.

1981 Revelation

Lesson #76

76 03/05/1982 Revelation 2:10a Principles of opposition to God's plan

Verse 10. In this passage we have principles related to the opposition to the plan of God.

1. The first is fear. We begin with the mandate which is found in the present middle imperative of the verb fobew plus the negative mh. It is correctly translated, “fear not” or “do not fear.” The present tense is a progressive present plus the negative which prohibits the continuation of the action of fear. It is possible to learn a great many doctrines and yet to fall apart in some emergency or pressure situation. Sudden disaster often places the believer in some panic alley situation where he can’t concentrate. If you can’t concentrate you can’t use the doctrine you have learned. Concentration is required both to learn and to apply doctrine to any situation. (Actually, concentration is required for good living) Adversity or disaster destroys concentration and this is why believers fall apart under pressure. They cannot recall any doctrine that would be applicable to the situation because in fear they cannot think at all. Fear is lack of thinking. Because of this there are many biblical imperatives about fear.

Believers in all stages of spiritual growth can find themselves functioning under the fear syndrome because of sudden adversity. Sudden adversity is simply a test to see if you can apply doctrine under pressure. There is a principle which David enucleated in Psalm 56:3 when he said, “What time I am afraid, I will trust in you (the Lord).” In other words, he would come around to being able to think under pressure. And even in the greatest of pressures, the pressure with regard to death: “Even though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil, for you are with me.” This principle is the basis for establishing the faith-rest drill as the concept in applying doctrine that has been learned. So in the first principle that we have in opposition to the plan of God we have a solution in the faith-rest drill — the importance of the faith-rest drill in testing.

The middle voice is the direct middle, emphasising the agent as participating in the outcome of the action — freedom from fear, therefore the ability to think under pressure. And the ability to think means the ability to concentrate. The two of them together mean courage, for courage is thinking and concentration under pressure. The imperative mood plus the negative mh is the negative of prohibition which forbids the continuation of an action which is the initial reaction to suffering, pressure, or disaster.

With this we have the accusative neuter plural direct object from the relative pronoun o(j) — “Do not fear what.” The word “what” is the issue, indicating the principle that fear represents the absence of the faith-rest drill and the inability to think under pressure. Therefore this phrase emphasises the fact that if you are going to execute the plan of God as a believer, your life must be free from any form of fear.

2. Principle number two is the source of opposition and testing. It begins with the aorist middle imperative, a form of the verb o(raw, which means to see. But it becomes a particle — i)dou, translated “behold,” but it would probably be better to translate it into modern English, like “note well.” So this becomes a demonstrative particle with no exact English equivalent. And then the subject is the nominative diaboloj, which is almost transliterated “devil.” Not only is Satan the author of the cosmic system but through the influence of Satan’s cosmic system there are periodic persecutions of believers, especially at the starting of a new nation. And with this we have the present active indicative of the verb mellw, which means “to be about to be.” We could translate this: “Note that the devil is about to.” The customary present tense denotes what habitually occurs, or may be reasonably expected to occur, when a believer lives inside the divine dynasphere. Inside the divine dynasphere, of course, he is going to have three things going for him in learning doctrine: a. The filling of the Holy Spirit — the power for perception of the Word of God; b. Basic impersonal love — the objectivity for perception of Bible doctrine; c. Enforced and genuine humility — teachability for perception of doctrine. That means momentum and that means testing. This momentum testing is in view at this particular point because there is going to be opposition to any believer advancing.

Satan doesn’t attack directly, he attacks through his system. Satan has delegated the system — the 26 gates of interlocking systems of arrogance and the 9 gates of interlocking systems of hatred — to be the opposition to the Christian way of life. Indirectly, Satan is in tremendous opposition to any believer who is moving from gate four to gate eight of the divine dynasphere. But that isn’t really the issue here, the issue here is that he has delegated the responsibility and, as a result, we get attacked from all sides. Satan rarely has to tamper with his system because it works so well. The only counter to Satan’s genius and his fantastic system for administration of the rulership of this world is the perception and application of Bible doctrine inside the divine dynasphere. The active voice: Satan produces the action of the verb as the greatest executive of all time who has delegated the responsibility of attacking us to the 26 gates of cosmic one and the 9 gates of cosmic two, plus his inside help from the function of the old sin nature. And mellw never stands alone, it always has some kind of a verb form with it, generally an infinitive.

So next we have the present active infinitive of the verb ballw, which means to throw, to cast, to put, and we will translate it: “Do not fear what you are about to suffer: note that the devil is about to cast some of you into prison.” Note that mellw plus ballw is preceded by mellw plus pasxw, which means to suffer. Now you are about to suffer, you are about to be put in prison. Mellw, in each case, indicates a system is going to attack you, not Satan himself. You are going to suffer because there is a system the ruler of this world has. This system which is the invention of Satan is administered in two ways: through angelic creatures where necessary, and it is also administered through homo sapiens: believers and unbelievers in the cosmic system.

Then there is people. In this case the people represent one of the greatest nations ever to exist in history — SPQR. The people of the Roman empire represent the government. In some cases it was the senate which was responsible for persecuting Christians, in some cases it was the industrial complex leadership, in some cases it would be the emperor.

The present tense of mellw is an iterative present and it almost appears to be a customary present denoting what is reasonably expected to occur when a pivot is being formed in a client nation to God. The active voice: the believer under momentum testing produces the action of being destined or about to suffer. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of momentum inside the divine dynasphere, and therefore the anticipation of testing. So: “do not fear what you are about to suffer.” Then again we have mellw, plus ballw, and that means, “note that the devil will incarcerate some of you.” The present active infinitive, ballw, means to put or to cast. Then we have a prepositional phrase, e)k plus the ablative plural of the personal pronoun su, “some of you.” Definitely all who were taking in doctrine; definitely all who were taking in doctrine. His is suffering for blessing, for momentum, for acceleration of that momentum. And then we have one more prepositional phrase: e)ij plus the accusative singular of fulakh, “into prison.”

3. Principle number three is the historical trend of Christian suffering as testing. We begin this principle with the conjunction i(na, which has many uses. This conjunction introduces a final clause, denoting a purpose, aim, or objective. It is translated, “in order that.” Then we have the aorist passive subjunctive of the verb peirazw, which means to be tested for the purpose of discovering what you are made of, testing for good or evil. The culminative aorist tense views momentum testing in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. Passing the test and accelerating spiritual momentum to maturity. The passive voice: the believer living inside the divine dynasphere receives the action of the verb. I(na plus the subjunctive denotes the purpose clause. And what we are about to study is the basis of the greatest missionary movement of all time in history. It would be sown in the blood of martyrs throughout the entire Roman empire over a period of two hundred years. The historical trend of Christian suffering and testing is related to the Roman empire as a client nation to God. Many of these people are going to die in the most horrible way and yet they are the basis of one of the greatest counters to Satan’s administration of the rulership of this world that history has ever known.

Next we have the connective use of the conjunction kai, meaning “and,” plus the future active indicative of the verb e)xw, which generally means “to have.” Translation: “and you shall have.” The gnomic future tense is for a statement of fact regarding prosperity testing anticipating the tenure of Rome as a client nation and the contribution that this suffering would make. These ten major persecutions of Christians became the basis for millions of people being in heaven right now. And while the legions and the genius of Rome and its military activities advanced to the Euphrates, the Danube, the Rhine, and Scotland, it could never accomplish what born-again believers advancing across these borders accomplished. It was sowed in martyrdom and it rose up in the most magnificent type of spiritual power.

We have the accusative singular, direct object from qliyij, which means pressure, suffering, affliction, testing, “and you shall have adversity.” Then we have the indeclinable numeral deka, which means “ten.” With it we have the objective genitive plural h(mera, which generally means “days” but here it refers to a longer period of time. We will translate this: “And you shall have special persecutions ten times.” The ten special persecutions of Christians are related to the times of the Gentiles and Rome as the first Gentile client nation to God. And when the 5th cycle of discipline was finally administered to Judah in AD 70, just 40 years into the Church Age, that was the end of any Jewish client nation to God. The “times of the Gentiles” began and it will continue throughout the Church Age until the Rapture. During the dispensation of the Church, which is the time of historical trends, only Gentile nations can be client nations to God.

It was not the Roman republic which was a client nation to God. Before Rome could ever be a client nation it had to be an empire. It had to be an empire where often the rulers of the empire were incompetent, but the genius of Julius Caesar set up a system of administration that would function perfectly, regardless of whether the emperor was good or bad, competent or incompetent. Ten times rulers of Rome tried to wipe out Christianity in the empire not realising that they would be destroying Rome, that as long as there was a pivot of mature believers Rome would continue to be the client nation to God. In the midst of all of this attempt to wipe out Christianity, Christianity not only grew in the Roman empire but it expanded beyond the Roman empire. Rome survived in spite of itself. It survived because believers in these seven churches made decisions to reside and function inside the divine dynasphere, and by making those decisions SPQR as an empire continued until 476 AD, by which time there were too many cosmic believers in the empire and missionary activity ceased to exist. It was not until Constantine the Great and the edict of Milan, in the year 313 AD, that the Church ceased to be persecuted by Roman rulers. And then a new danger came up: the union of Church and State. So Christianity failed the prosperity test; they were happy to be a State religion and that was wrong. The Church can never function when it is sponsored by the State. The Church cannot be the State; the Church must operate under the State, under government, but never be the government. So the combination of Church and State was another test for the Church in which failure led to the Dark Ages.

Note also that these “ten times” do not include Nero’s persecution of the Church. It is excluded for the most obvious reason. He executed the apostle Paul in the year 68 AD and in that year the Lord answered Nero, he was assassinated. So he died in 68. What does that mean? The times of the Gentiles did not begin until 70 AD. And now we are at 96 AD and these ten persecutions start in 96 AD. Nero did persecute the Church, but it is not one of the ten times.

There are two reasons why Christians suffer. One of them has to do with blessing and one of them has to do with cursing or divine discipline. All suffering for blessing occurs inside the divine dynasphere and it is a part of momentum testing going from gate four to gate eight which is the objective of the spiritual life. All cursing, all divine discipline is related to the believer residing inside of the cosmic system. Whenever we suffer for blessing there is a great advance spiritually and there are wonderful things in store for the individual. Furthermore the problem of suffering itself is no difficulty where the believer has lived and resided inside the divine dynasphere, and under the perception of Bible doctrine is able to apply the doctrine to his experience. Honing the believer fine, making him strong, developing everything by way of capacity for happiness and blessing is related to suffering. Suffering and prosperity are the two greatest tests that we face as believers. Both require the application of Bible doctrine to experience, both require the flexibility that comes from virtue that comes from inside the divine dynasphere.

The ten special persecutions of Christians are related to the times of the Gentiles and Rome as the first Gentile client nation to God. In the Roman empire there would be the test of great suffering and then there would be the test of great prosperity. They would have to pass the suffering test, they would have to pass the prosperity test, and as a result Rome as an empire would then become a missionary base. Rome is the first Gentile client nation to God. The church at Smyrna survived all the persecutions of Christianity by the Roman empire because of their residence and function inside the divine dynasphere, and this means they survived because of their perception and application of Bible doctrine at gate four of the divine dynasphere. We do not include the persecutions of Nero in the ten special persecutions.

The ten special persecutions

1. The first one occurred during the time of Domitian — 81-96 AD. Domitian is the last of the Flavian emperors. He died in 96 AD because of his persecution of John, just as Nero died for his execution of Paul. Domitian was jealous of his older brother Titus who had been emperor from 79-81 AD and his arrogance eventually turned to insanity. He demanded that his subjects treat him like a god. He degraded the senate, he persecuted Christians, he announced his own deification, and he banished John to the Isle of Patmos. His wife, Domitia, arranged to have him stabbed and thus the Flavian emperors ceased to exist with Titus Flavius Domitianus.

2. The second great persecution occurred long after in 161-180 AD under Marcus Aurelius. Marcus Aurelius was a very fine unbeliever, the last of the good Antonine emperors. He was austere from his stoic beliefs but he was very philanthropic in his domestic policies. He was forced through economic disaster to debase the coinage. Whenever the industrial complex begins to collapse because capitalism fails, because there is a State attack upon capitalism, because there is some form of redistribution of wealth, some concept of the welfare state, there will always be the beginning of the cracking of the nation in its economic modus operandi. It was in AD 161 that the Parthians attacked the eastern frontier and while they were driven back the soldiers who fought them brought back from the area over the Euphrates (Persia or Parthia) the Asiatic plague which became a tremendous disaster in the Roman empire. It was actually a divine punishment and millions of people in the empire died. The Christians were blamed for it and this is how Marcus Aurelius came to persecute them. The Christians would not worship the pagan Roman gods and seek help from them and so the emperors became very antagonistic toward Christianity. Marcus Aurelius never really paid much attention to the Christians until the Asiatic plague, and then under pressure the Christians were severely persecuted. This was the second of the ten special persecutions. He died at age 59 in what is now Vienna. He was allegedly poisoned.

3. The third persecution, 180-192 AD, was under Commodus. By his persecution of the Christians Marcus Aurelius lost his wisdom and made a lot of ruinous decisions. One of his worst decisions was to elevate his son Commodus. Never had any Antonine emperor ever used any of his natural progeny to succeed him, they had always adopted someone who would be the next emperor. But here was the exception and as a result of this terrible decision it would be used of the Lord to punish SPQR for a period of some twelve years. The eighties were the worst period of all of the first century. When Commodus became emperor at age nineteen his insanity caused him to return to the Roman throne. He instituted a reign of terror, he was savage and cruel as an individual, and nothing had ever been seen like this in Rome since the time of Nero's degeneracy. Commodus had great, great arrogance about his physical strength. He would appear in the arena dressed as a gladiator but he always had unarmed opponents and he always killed these opponents. He appeared in the streets of Rome wearing a lion's skin, and called himself Hercules. He carried a club and if he didn't like the look of some of his citizens he would club them to death right there. If these gave him any opposition, out of nowhere would appear one of the special companies of Praetorian Guard to despatch the person who wouldn't lie down and die neatly! He would go into the senate and pick out senators and slaughter them on the senate floor which ran with blood. He persecuted the Christians and these persecutions were unspeakable, until a believer became his mistress. Her name was Martia. When it was discovered that Commodus intended to kill Martia because she was a believer, and kill all of the palace attendants, they formed conspiracy to assassinate him. A wrestler by the name of Narcissus was hired to strangle him to death. Thus ended the third of the ten special persecutions.

4. The fourth special persecution was under Severus — 193-211 AD. He was an African and very superstitious. In 202 Severus adopted an anti-Christian policy. He forbade Christians to witness and promised death to any Christian who would talk about the Lord Jesus Christ. Any person who believed in Christ was to be persecuted as soon as he was found. The persecutions first broke out in Alexandria. Severus had not been unfavourable toward the Christians at the earlier part of his reign and actually gave his son a Christian nurse. But the policy of Alexandria finally prevailed. Mobs of Egyptians ran loose and killed Christians, robbed, raped and stole in the name of destroying Christianity. Among the Christian martyrs in Alexandria were Felicity and Perpetua of Carthage, very famous for their stand for the Lord before they were horribly killed.

5. The fifth persecution, 235-238 AD, was under Maximus Thrax. He was an eight-foot giant of tremendous physical strength and was as brutal as he was strong. When he became emperor he ordered all Christian leaders to be put to death. And because Christians were honest and had integrity they had predominated in the civil service for some time. Pontian, the bishop of Rome, was deported to Sardinia where he died. Christian churches were burned. Origen took refuge in Cappadocia where the Roman legions functioned but they ignored the orders of the emperor. Eventually, Maximus Thrax stepped out of his chariot and a bunch of people came out of the bushes and killed him.

6. The sixth persecution was under Trajanus Decius. He sought to exterminate all Christians in the Roman empire but he didn't get to finish his persecutions because he was killed in Gothic war.

7. The seventh was under Gallus — 251-153. He continued the persecution started by Decius but he was so successful he was murdered by his own son and eventually replaced by Valerian who continued the terrible persecution.

8. Number eight is Valerian — 253-260. His persecution of Christians throughout the empire were distracted by a Persian invasion. When he had to go and fight he was captured and horribly tortured. He eventually died while being skinned alive. When the Roman envoys came to sue for peace they were presented with the skin of Valerian. As a result of this the Christians had peace for ten years.

9. Then along came Lucius Domitianus Aurelian. When he began a persecution of the Christians his generals decided they didn't like him and they murdered him. He defeated the Persians and the Goths but he could not defeat the wall of fire around the Christians.

10. Diocletian — 284-305 AD. Outside of his persecution of Christians he was very effective as a ruler. He was a Dalmatian, the son of a freed slave. He was a strong worshipper of the sun god, Jupiter, and under the influence of one of his cohorts he started the greatest of all persecutions of believers. In February of 303 he sought to completely root Christianity out of the empire. He ordered all copies of the Bible surrendered and burned, all churches destroyed, all meetings abolished. Christians were deprived of their civil rights, including the holding of public office. He retired to Dalmatia.

With the retirement of Diocletian, Galerius took his place and he continued persecution of Christians until the pressure was too great and he issued reluctantly an edict of toleration which cancelled all persecutions of believers and pardoned all Christians who were still living. In 313 Constantine issued at Milan the edict which terminated these ten special persecutions of our passage. "We grant," he said, "to the Christians and all others free choice to follow their own mode of worship, whatever they wish ...". Ten emperors administered these persecutions which prepared the church to evangelise the barbarians knocking at the gates of the empire waiting to be converted.

Because the church went through these persecutions so magnificently in so many cases two kinds of believers were manifest at the time. First of all there were believers living in the divine dynasphere contributing to the uptrend of the Roman empire. These are the ones who went to death so magnificently. These are the ones who died under dying grace and there is a special reward with regard to them. But many believers renounced Christ to escape death, to escape torture, to escape the confiscation of their property. These had already contributed to the downtrend and they continued to live in the Roman empire to be a disaster to it. But there was a purpose in all of this: God was toughening up the Church for one of the greatest missions it has ever faced — the evangelisation of the entire world. The Romans could not conquer the world but the pivot of believers sent missionaries to China, to India, to Armenia, to Parthia, to Africa, and to all of the areas of the world that Rome had never been able to conquer. And from these barbarians would come future Gentile client nations, and it was not the eagle standards of Rome but the Christian missionaries who went out from these pivots. The martyrdom of the Christians demonstrated a principle that the barbarians could not understand. All of the barbarians were magnificent in their physical strength, they were fierce as warriors and great as conquerors, but they lacked one thing: death frightened them.

Principle: How you live is determined by your attitude toward death. Sooner or later death will become a reality and you will discover an amazing thing: things that you thought were important, things that you spent your life doing, the pleasures you sought, your ambitions to succeed and to get ahead and become famous and great and to excel above your peers, all of these things when you face death as a reality will not give you one moment of peace or blessing or courage in time of your dying. If you haven't solved the problem of dying by your scale of values, and where doctrine stands, and the perception and application of doctrine in your life, then you are never going to be able to face death. Death is going to be a horror, a time and moment of truth when you will look back on your life and realise what a fool you were to spend all of your time seeking happiness when it was there in the form of Bible doctrine.

The Church is never ready to evangelise and to send out missionaries until the Church is toughened by testing, and then, having passed the testing, they have to also pass the prosperity test. Testing toughens and prosperity softens, and so to pass both tests we have the history of the first three centuries of Christianity related first of all to persecution and then to prosperity. Persecutions, then, even in a client nation to God is a historical trend until the day the Lord removes the Church by resurrection and terminates this dispensation.

Principle

1. The historical trend is there and the precedent has been set by the ten persecutions which were predicted in verse 10. There will always be in the world an eruption of persecution of believers. God often permits this because too many believers have become involved in the cosmic system and, therefore, the remnant in the pivot are toughened and their values are re-established by persecution.

2. Therefore any persecution of Christians has two purposes: either divine discipline of believers living in the cosmic system or spiritual momentum and special blessings for believers living in the divine dynasphere.

3. From the time of Constantine the Great, 313-337, another historical trend will become obvious: the problem of separation of Church and State plus the importance of the Church staying out of politics. When the Church becomes involved in politics the nation is destroyed; when the Church stays out of politics and advances spiritually to maturity the nation is saved. Our job as believers in the Lord Jesus Christ and collectively as the Church is to stay out of politics, to advance to maturity, for the only thing that can save a client nation to God is the enlarged pivot of mature believers and the blessing by association which results from it.

4. The same historical trend of cosmic failure in the Church exists today in the so-called social action of the Church.

5. Under the principle of historical trends all suffering, pressure, and persecution directed toward believers is designed for either divine discipline or divine blessing. The way to determine the purpose is whether those involved are living in the divine dynasphere — suffering for blessing, or living in the cosmic system — suffering for punishment. The historical trend, then: when the Church was separated from the State the State often persecutes the Church, but when the Church becomes the State or becomes involved in social action, the Church does the persecuting of the State. Both are wrong, the State persecuting the Church or the Church persecuting the State.

Verse 10b begins with the present middle imperative of the verb ginomai, to be or to become. Here it is translated “keep on becoming.” The progressive present tense is for action in the state of progress or persistence, therefore present linear aktionsart. The middle voice: it is a deponent verb, middle in form, active in meaning: believers are commanded to produce the action of the verb through resistance of persecution inside the divine dynasphere, or, better stated, to handle all persecution from inside the divine dynasphere. Resistance of persecution is by functional virtue, not by violence. The imperative mood is the imperative of command.

Next is the predicate nominative from the adjective pistoj, meaning faithful or dependable, hence a reference to consistent residence and function in the divine dynasphere so that when any pressures and persecutions in life come along you handle them individually from virtue. That keeps you from ever becoming a persecutor yourself. And the only virtue by which you can meet these things is the virtue manufactured inside the divine dynasphere. Here, of course, the context views residence inside the divine dynasphere from the standpoint of pressure, adversity, persecution, suffering.

Next comes the improper preposition a)xri plus the genitive of qanatoj — “until death.” Qanatoj separates phase two from phase three, apart from being alive at the resurrection. Faithfulness until death is residence and function inside the divine dynasphere.

Principle

1. The reality of death is the test of the believer’s spiritual condition and true scale of values.
2. In the face of death there are many things people value that are absolutely useless. For example, if you are dying money is no good, success is no good, wealth or promotion or social life is no good. Everything that you put before doctrine immediately becomes obsolete, useless. Dying can be the greatest happiness in life or the greatest misery, and it depends upon the content of Bible doctrine in your soul.
3. The experience of dying is a test of our living values.
4. Therefore if Bible doctrine is not first in your scale of values dying is a nightmare.
5. The ten special persecutions from Domitian to Diocletian made death a reality to millions of people who were believers.
6. Believers living in the cosmic system when facing the threat of torture and death renounced their faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.
7. Believers living in the divine dynasphere, when facing the same threat of torture and death, were not afraid. Many of them surrendered their lives under the principle of dying grace. It was not a tragedy, they could not have departed from this life apart from the Lord’s permission. But they had been prepared by their attitude toward doctrine.
8. But for cosmic believers fear of death became fear of life. If you are afraid of death you are afraid of life.
9. If there is nothing worth living for there is nothing worth dying for. But only those mature believers in the pivot understood that issue. It took the persecution of the Church to give the perspective for missionary function. In fact, the persecuted Church sustained the Roman empire.

Principle

1. Bible doctrine resident in the soul removes fear of death as well as fear of life.

2. The believer living inside the divine dynasphere is not afraid of torture and death. That means that martyrdom death is never in vain. Martyrdom without renouncing Christ, when that is the issue, is one of the greatest rewardable functions in eternity.

3. Before Constantine the Roman empire was evangelised through dying testimony; after Constantine it was evangelised through living testimony. In history it takes both. Dying testimony requires, like living testimony, that Bible doctrine is more real than anything in life. Otherwise, when called upon to live or die for the Lord Jesus Christ, if He isn't real to you, you can't do it. Jesus Christ is not real to the believer who has neglected Bible doctrine.

4. The success standards of life must be replaced by the success standards of God's plan. And the judgment seat of Christ will reveal that many people who have a comparatively humble station in life were the true great ones as far as God's plan is concerned.

5. Only through Bible doctrine can God and His plan be more real than people, situations and pleasures.

6. Beware that you do not compromise your principles through arrogant ambition.

7. Beware that you do not run your life on the basis of human viewpoint, on the basis of rationalising doctrine to fit your ambitions and functions in life. In other words, if you do not watch your step and put doctrine first in your scale of values, and establish your priorities on the basis of doctrine first — priorities related to residence and function in the divine dynasphere — God is going to send to believers of the client nation a plague of special persecution. But out of that special persecution will come a different brand of Christian than we see today.

The divine viewpoint must override peer pressure, and arrogant ambition must be replaced by doctrinal perception. When that happens and you fulfil the principle of being faithful, even unto death, there is a special super reward in heaven.

The ten special persecutions from Domitian to Diocletian made death a reality to millions of believers in the Roman empire over that period of time. Believers living in the cosmic system when facing the threat of torture and death often renounced their faith in Christ. This didn't mean they lost their salvation, they still had eternal salvation, they had merely saved their skins by their act of cowardice. Believers living in the divine dynasphere when facing the same threat of torture and death were not afraid and departed from this life under the principle of dying grace. But for the cosmic believer fear of death became fear of life.

It took the persecution of the Church to give the perspective then for missionary function. In fact the missionary church sustained the Roman empire. So the Bible doctrine resident in the soul removes fear of death as well, of course, fear of life. The believer living in the divine dynasphere is not afraid of torture and death, and their martyr deaths were not in vain. Before Constantine the Roman empire was evangelised through the dying testimony of martyrs and after Constantine it was evangelised by the living testimony of mature believers.

But doctrine must be more real than anything else in life and the success standards of life must be replaced by the success standards of God's plan. Only through Bible doctrine can God and His plan be more real than people and their plans. Ambition to excel above one's peers is a trap; it is designed to destroy both your happiness and your spiritual life by giving you either a superficial or a false scale of values. So beware that you do not compromise your own principles because of inordinate ambition. And beware that you do not run your life on the basis of human viewpoint and rationalise doctrine to fit your own ambitions. If we do not watch our step then as believers and put doctrine first in our scale of values, and establish priorities related to residence and function in the divine dynasphere, God is going to send the believers of this nation a plague of special persecutions.

The believer with maximum doctrine in his soul cannot be corrupted by fear of death any more than he could be corrupted by fear of failure in life. If your goals are set and related to advance to maturity then you have nothing to fear in life and you have nothing to fear in dying or how the Lord may choose for you to depart from this life. Divine viewpoint must override peer pressure. Arrogant ambition must be replaced by doctrinal perception so that your motivation is in line with the plan of God. Two people may arrive at the same point of success but the one who has false motivation in getting there is a weak sister. The one who has the correct doctrinal motivation in getting there will be very strong and will glorify the Lord in such advance.

The final phrase in verse ten starts out with the connective kai, translated "and." Then we have the future active indicative of the verb didomi, and it means here to give — "and I will give." The predictive future anticipates special blessing and reward at the judgment seat of Christ. The active voice: Jesus Christ as the prince ruler of the Church produces the action of the verb at the judgment seat of Christ. Every believer gets his evaluation for what he did with logistical grace from the time of salvation to the time he departs from this life. Our Lord Jesus Christ from His omniscience does the evaluation. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of eternal blessing and reward above and beyond the possession of a resurrection body for believers who crack the maturity barrier. Volition is the great issue in the angelic conflict. From salvation you are free to advance to maturity and you are free to fail, so that there will be great inequality in the perfect environment of heaven. Perfect environment always represents the function of freedom and therefore inequality is healthy because it indicates the use of our own free will to succeed or fail.

The dative singular indirect object from the personal pronoun su closes out our exegetical study of this verse. It is translated "to you." The dative of indirect object indicates the mature believers whose advance in the divine dynasphere results in getting great eternal blessing and reward above and beyond the resurrection body. This is also a dative of advantage. Then finally the accusative singular direct object from the noun stefanoj, which can be translated either crown or wreath. When used in its athletic connotation which came from the Hellenistic culture of the Roman empire it is a wreath, but when used in its military connotation it has to do with special Roman decorations. With this we have the descriptive genitive of the noun zwh, life. The crown of life was given to that believer who advanced to maturity through living in the divine dynasphere and learning Bible doctrine. However the crown of life emphasises the believer passing the momentum tests, advancing from gate four to gate eight of the divine dynasphere which is the power system for the Christian life.

Translation of verse 10: “Do not fear what you are about to suffer: note that the devil is about to cast some of you into prison in order that you may be tested; and you will have special persecution ten times: keep on becoming faithful [residence and function in the divine dynasphere] until death, and I will give to you a crown of life [eternal reward for living inside the divine dynasphere].”

The doctrine of the judgment seat of Christ

1. The judgment seat of Christ or the evaluation of believers in phase two of the plan of God occurs at the termination of the Church Age. It follows the receiving of a resurrection body. (Whether a believer succeeds or fails he will have a resurrection body)

2. The purpose of the judgment seat of Christ, 2 Corinthians 5:10, “For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that each one of us [believers in the royal family of God] may receive what is due him for the things accomplished while in the physical body [phase two], whether good [a)gaqoj] or worthless [or evil, fauloj].” If the believer lives his Christian life inside the cosmic system what he accomplishes is worthless or evil or both, fauloj. On the other hand if the believer lives his Christian life inside the divine dynasphere what he does is categorised as intrinsic good, a)gaqoj.

3. A))gaqoj refers to the plan of God from the viewpoint of imputation [$X+Y+Z = \text{Good}$]. Here again we have the principle: a)gaqoj means, first through X radical, human life imputed at birth plus Adam’s original sin. The imputation of Adam’s original sin means spiritual death, and that sets up the first potential for salvation, plus the pertinent doctrine — redemption, reconciliation, propitiation, imputation, justification, all of those things related to the work of Christ on the cross. That equals hope 1, absolute confidence that if you believe in Jesus Christ you have eternal life plus salvation adjustment to the justice of God through faith in Christ. Now you advance to being an immature believer: Y radical. Here you have judicial imputation #1 — our sins are imputed to Christ on the cross, the basis of our so great salvation. Judicial imputation #2, the basis for our relationship with God. We have God’s righteousness, one half of divine integrity, and also at the same time God has created a target for all logistical grace — imputation, and all supergrace blessing — the possession of the righteousness of God. So a new potential is set up: the potential for great blessing in time, plus the pertinent doctrine equals hope #2 — absolute confidence that you and I as believers using the divine dynasphere advance to maturity, plus maturity adjustment to the justice of God, going from gate four to gate eight. In Z radical we have the imputation of eternal life at salvation plus the imputation of supergrace blessing, blessing in time at the point of maturity, and that equals the third potential, the potential of eternal blessing and reward at the judgment seat of Christ above and beyond the resurrection body. Plus the pertinent equals hope three, absolute confidence that by attaining maturity, advancing from gate four to gate eight, we are going to receive great blessing and reward at the judgment seat of Christ. This equals the good, a)gaqoj, all things working together for good — Romans 8:28. This second Koine word a)gaqoj occurs in 2 Corinthians 5:10 — “that each one of us [royal family of God] may receive what is due him for the things accomplished in the body, whether good, a)gaqoj, or worthless.” The purpose of the judgment seat of Christ is the evaluation of each believer’s life on earth between salvation and his departure.

4. The loss of reward at the judgment seat of Christ is a major issue.

a. The gain or loss of reward and blessing above and beyond the resurrection body is determined by your personal volition. Your choice of dynasphere determines gain or loss of reward, 1 Corinthians 3:11-15.

b. Loss of reward at the judgment seat of Christ does not imply loss of salvation, 2 Timothy 2:11-13. “if we endure” is persistence and function inside the divine dynasphere. Enduring here is u)pomenw. This is God’s game plan for the Christian life, residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. And if you persist in making decisions consistent with the divine dynasphere in phase two there will be reward in phase three. “If we refuse,” i.e. to function under our Lord’s plan (X+Y+Z); “he will also refuse us (i.e. reward, not salvation).” Eternal security is a divine gift at the moment of salvation through faith in Christ. What God does for us cannot be lost, cannot be changed, cannot be removed. Eternal security depends upon the integrity of God while confidence toward God depends on the integrity of the believer, he must have doctrine resident in his soul. Failure to live in the divine dynasphere may destroy the believer’s confidence in God but failure to live in the divine dynasphere can never destroy your eternal security. Therefore the principle of 2 Timothy 2:11-13: eternal security is permanent and cannot be destroyed by Christian failure. Confidence in God is a motivating virtue which can be lost through the believer’s residence and function inside the cosmic dynasphere. The principle of eternal security: John 10:28; 1 Peter 1:3-5. Eternal security is never an issue at the judgment seat of Christ.

c. However, the cosmic believer in losing reward at the judgment seat of Christ will experience, at least for that period of time, shame. He will be in a resurrection body but there is that implication of shame at loss of reward. Perhaps this is the closest thing to any lack of happiness that can ever exist in heaven, in eternity. And this appears to be only temporary at that moment and does not seem to be perpetuated into eternity. Philippians 1:20, Confidence in time implies reward in eternity. Phil. 3:18,19, “for many keep walking in the cosmic system ...” The apostle Paul had an emotional response to his observation of cosmic Christians: “they are the enemies of the cross of Christ.” What is the end of such believers? — verse 19, “whose end is destruction [the sin unto death], whose God is emotion, whose glory [at the judgment seat of Christ] is their shame, who keep thinking about earthly things [a description of cosmic involvement].”

1 John 2:28, “And now dear children, keep on residing in it [the divine dynasphere]; that if he [Christ] should appear [the Rapture, the resurrection of the Church], we might have confidence, and might not be put to shame by him in his presence [at the judgment seat of Christ].”

5. The divine dynasphere and its relationship to the judgment seat of Christ.

Note James 1:25: “But the one who looks intently into the perfect law [Bible doctrine] that gives freedom [perception of doctrine inside the divine dynasphere], and continues to do this [momentum in the divine dynasphere], not forgetting what he has heard but doing it, this believer will be blessed [or happy] in what he is doing”. The perfect law and looking into the perfect law which gives freedom is our life inside the divine dynasphere with emphasis on perception of doctrine.

James 2:12-13, “So keep speaking and so keep doing as though who are going to be judged [evaluated] by the law that gives freedom [perception of doctrine inside the divine dynasphere is the basis for our evaluation]. For judgment for those who have not produced mercy [have not manufactured virtue inside the divine dynasphere, or better, who do not show compassion]; compassion triumphs over judgment.” This is an interim point to emphasise the fact that the judgment seat of Christ and our evaluation is related toward the many decisions for or against the divine dynasphere, residence and function therein.

6. Therefore the application of virtue to the judgment seat of Christ. Note one application found in Romans 14:10-13, “You there [the weak believer who lives in the cosmic system], why do you judge your brother? [Principle of the weak controlling the strong] or you also [the strong believer] why do you regard your brother with contempt [Lack of toleration and impersonal love]? for all will be present at the tribunal of God. For it stands written [Isaiah 45:23], For surely as I live, says the Lord, every knee will bow to me [the big genuflect after the Rapture of the Church], and every tongue will confess to God [these are believers]. So then each one of us [Church Age believers] shall give an account to God concerning himself [You are responsible for your own decisions]. Therefore let us no longer judge one another: but rather make up your mind, [determine this] not to place an obstacle or distraction in front of his brother”. This is application of virtue to the judgment seat of Christ. The only possible way to do this is inside the divine dynasphere where the motivating virtue of personal love for God is counterparted by impersonal love for mankind. There is where you get your toleration to tolerate believers in all stages of growth so that there is no distraction to their positive volition toward Bible doctrine.

7. An athletic analogy to the judgment seat of Christ. 2 Corinthians 2:5 — “Now if anyone really competes in the athletic games he does not receive a winner’s wreath unless he trains according to the rules.” The Roman empire, in copying the Greek games, copied the whole system, including the rules, and the athlete couldn’t compete unless he trained according to the rules. There were two types of athletes who existed in the Roman empire. The first group were called aqletai and were the people who entered state gymnasiums in order to train and compete in the games. There was also another category of athlete called a)gonistai and were the muscle or body builders who did not enter the games and train under the rules. So we have a)qletai and a)gonistai, two categories of athletes. And we have two kinds of believers, those who are in the divine dynasphere [comparable to the a)qletai] and those in the cosmic system [comparable to the a)gonistai]. We have the cosmic believer who doesn't train according to the rules and we have the believer in the divine dynasphere who does. Not only did the Roman athlete live inside the gymnasium for ten months but he followed a set of very strict rules which constantly tested his motivation, his decisions, and his momentum. This was a part of the system. The concept of perception of doctrine in the divine dynasphere is analogous. Once the athletes went back to their home town they received rewards which are comparable to the judgment seat of Christ.

This was Paul's subject, then, in 1 Corinthians 9:24-27: "Do you not know that those who run in a race all run [analogous to the games in the Roman empire and the function of gate four, the perception and application of doctrine necessary for momentum in the Christian life], but one receives the prize [in each event]?" analogous to the attainment of spiritual maturity or advance from gate four to gate eight in the divine dynasphere. "Run in such a way that you may win," a command for residence and function in the divine dynasphere ; "And everyone who competes in the games exercises self-discipline in all things. They [the athletes] do it to receive a perishable wreath [or crown]; but we [mature believers] an imperishable crown. Therefore [Paul's application] I do not run like a person without an objective; I do not fight like a person beating the air [cosmic believers are shadow boxers]: Instead I discipline my body, and keep it in training [residence and function in the divine dynasphere]: lest having preached [communicated doctrine] to others, I myself should be disqualified" [disqualification from both temporal blessing in time and eternal reward at the judgment seat of Christ].

8. The rewards at the judgment seat of Christ. During the Roman empire there were two Greek words used for crowns. One of them, stefanoj, which is pertinent is a reward in two areas of life. It is a reward in military service and in the empire games. There is a second word for crown which occasionally we find in the Bible, diadhma. This is a crown used for a king. Certain rewards to mature believers at the judgment seat of Christ are called stefanoi, crowns. There were six categories of such crowns given by the Roman empire. In order of merit the six categories each had a monetary reward that went with it. All six were in the form of a golden crown that you could wear for the rest of your life.

We have in the scripture, not six of the crowns, but three listed for believers. There is the crown of righteousness for the fulfilment of the plan of God in the Church Age [in other words for advancing from gate four to gate eight]. There is the crown of life for passing all of the momentum tests as you go from gate four to gate eight. And there is the crown of glory, a decoration for pastors, evangelists and faithful communicators of the Word of God.

There used to be a phrase among fundamentalist Christians about living your life in the light of eternity. Of course it is a very sound concept, a very doctrinal principle, that while we are living a day at a time as per the mandates of our Lord, we are also to live with eternity in mind. That is exactly what we have in verse 10 with regard to the judgment seat of Christ.

There are three crowns mentioned in the Word of God. The first one is the crown of righteousness, 2 Timothy 4:7,8. The corrected translation of verse 7 is as follows: "I have fought an honourable fight [a reference to the advance to maturity inside the divine dynasphere. It refers to going from gate four to gate eight of the divine dynasphere. It indicates that the apostle Paul has attained spiritual maturity at gate eight], I have completed the course [the fulfilment of God's plan for his life], I have retained the doctrine [not 'I have kept the faith'. And it refers to perception and application of doctrine resulting in the construction of the ECS]:"

Verse 8, "In the future [reference to the judgment seat of Christ] a crown of righteousness is reserved for me, which crown the Lord, the righteous evaluator, will award me on that day: ..."

The crown of righteousness is awarded to the believer who executes the plan of God during the Church Age.

" ... and not only to me, but also to all those who have loved his appearance [the appearance of Christ at the Rapture]."

The second crown is the crown of life, the one which is mentioned in Revelation 2:10. This crown is related to momentum testing. Momentum testing is only for those believers who are advancing, those believers who are taking in doctrine. The believer who faces momentum testing inside the divine dynasphere accelerates his advance to gate eight. There are two biblical references made to this second crown, James 1:12 which says, "Happy is the individual who perseveres under testing: for he will receive the crown of life, which God has promised to those who consistently love him [referring to our life inside the divine dynasphere]." The second reference is found in Revelation 2:10. So the crown of life is actually a martyrs decoration and reward and also an eternal decoration for those believers who remain in the divine dynasphere under the greatest pressures of life, and advance to maturity in times of historical disaster or historical downtrend.

Note that both the crown of righteousness and the crown of life are preceded by some form of dying grace, and that includes martyrdom. Therefore both crowns or decorations awarded to believers in eternity and believers whose priorities are so linked with Bible doctrine that in time of disaster, pressure or heartache of any kind, doctrine is more real to them than the actual suffering which they endure. And they do not compromise their doctrine or their stand or their love of the Lord because of some pressure.

The third crown is the crown of glory. This eternal decoration is given to pastors who not only reach maturity through their own personal residence and function inside the divine dynasphere, but who through faithful teaching of the Word lead others to spiritual maturity. The crown of glory belongs primarily to the pastor; firstly the apostles, and to the evangelists and prophets who taught the Word of God before the canon was completed, and afterward to the pastors. No pastor can lead his congregation, however, beyond his own stage of growth. In other words, as they would say in Rome, "No man can transfer to others rights more extensive than that which he possesses." Therefore it behoves the pastor to get cracking and get to maturity as rapidly as possible in order to lead the way; not by example, but by content of doctrine.

Philippians 4:1, “Therefore, my brethren, loved [impersonal love] and deeply desired ones [positive believers living in the divine dynasphere], my happiness and my crown ...” Paul recognises those listening to him and advancing to maturity as his crown, the crown of glory; “in this way [residence in the divine dynasphere] keep on being stabilised by the Lord ...”

1 Thessalonians 2:19,20, “For who is our hope [confidence], or happiness, or crown of boasting? Is it not you [mature believers] in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ [the judgment seat of Christ] at his coming? For you are our glory ...”

1 Peter 5:4, “And when the chief Shepherd appears [the Rapture of the Church], you will receive the unfading crown of glory ..” In the context he is talking to pastors.

Hebrews 6:10, “For God is not unjust to disregard your occupation [of pastor-teacher], also the love which you yourselves demonstrated toward his person [learning Bible doctrine in the divine dynasphere and teaching it to the congregation], having ministered doctrine to the saints, and continuing such ministry.”

There are certain rewards mentioned in the scripture that do not belong to the royal family of God. They actually belong to believers of other dispensations. For example, the reward of cities in Luke 19:12-26, or Abraham’s special city, the new Jerusalem, which is mentioned as a reward in Hebrews 11:9,10,13,16 and Revelation 21:2,10,11. There is the harvest analogy in Matthew 13:3-9, 18-33, for Old Testament believers.

There is another type of reward called “ruling with God,” referring to believers of this dispensation, the Church. We are royal family of God, we are designed to rule. We are designed to rule in eternity, we are designed by logistical grace to rule. There are a number of approaches to ruling:

The first is the a fortiori approach of Romans 5:17, “For if by the transgression of one [Adam’s original sin] spiritual death ruled through that one; much more they who receive in life the surplus from grace [the exploitation of logistical grace is parleyed into supergrace — surplus of grace] and the gift of righteousness [imputed righteousness], much more they shall rule through that one, Jesus Christ.” Those who exploit logistical grace inside the divine dynasphere are going to rule with Christ.

There is a sarcastic approach, 1 Corinthians 4:8. Paul says to the Corinthian Christians who are in the cosmic system: “You are already filled, you already have become rich, you have become kings without us: [and then he adds sarcastically] how I wish you really had become kings, so that we also might rule with you.” Now the truth of the matter of that sarcasm is very simple. The Corinthians, on the course they had already charted, were going to have no rulership in heaven, whereas Paul is going to be one of the greatest of rulers.

There is the approach from the standpoint of eternal security, 2 Timothy 2:12: “If we endure [residence and function in the divine dynasphere] we shall also rule [has to do with reward at the judgment seat of Christ].”

From the standpoint of Rapture hymnology, Revelation 5:10, “And you have made them a kingdom, even priests to our God, and they will rule on earth.”

In addition to this there are rewards related to historical trends for those who had maximum impact to historical uptrends in their life in the divine dynasphere and the resultant momentum. We have just noted the crown of life in Revelation 2:10 which is a reward related to historical trends. Momentum testing is related to historical trends in the client nation. As a result of passing persecution testing mature believers prepared the way for one of the greatest missionary movements in all of history.

Next coming up is the hidden manna and the white stone with a name on it. Actually there are seven different rewards related to historical uptrends.

There are certain historical trends that are very interesting and certain parallels between Rome as a client nation to God and the USA. For example, Rome started out as a city and then the seven hills and the amalgamation of the two races that lived on four of those hills, the Villanovans and the Sabines. From there the amalgamation included the Etruscans who came along. First Rome was a city and then it began to reach out and grab the races around it: the Italic people, the Latins as they are sometimes called, the Gauls, etc. In other words, Rome as a nation was an amalgamation of races, it was never one race. It was actually held together by its law. When people wanted to become Roman citizens it was because it was an improvement of their lot. Therefore they left their culture behind and adopted Roman culture which was based on law and order. Later on Rome would adopt Greek culture and that would be the basis for all western European civilisation. It was not Greece that brought us western European civilisation, it was Rome with its law and order. Eventually, Roman citizens numbered every race and every kind of person, but the thing that pulled them together was their respect for Roman law, their respect for Roman economy, their respect for Rome’s administration of the law. And they were unicultural: one culture, and out of one culture eventually came Christianity. There were many religions in the Roman empire but Christianity eventually dominated as the most important because, after all, without Christianity there is no such thing as civilisation. Christianity embraces every brilliant philosophy and every false system of philosophy and tolerates what is false and accepts what is true.

Now we face a problem today where we are about to destroy ourselves as client nation. We have tolerated the wrong things — cultures that are decadent, cultures that have destroyed people. There never was a black culture in Africa which ever protected the Africans and when the Africans come here they should want our culture, our system. For it is our system and our culture which allows blacks to live like kings here. In Africa they would be just someone else in the bush. So we have here now a black culture and a Hispanic culture, etc. In the Roman empire the Gauls and the Germanic people couldn’t wait to learn Latin, to enter into the culture of something they recognised as superior to their own. And no nation has ever survived the toleration of all the cultures of decadence that come in, and we won't either. When people come in and say, "You must accept my culture", that is arrogance, and that type of arrogance demands that instead of a unilingual language which is universally taught in schools that it must be their language which is taught because they say, "We are not going to learn yours". There should never be tolerated anything but English being taught in the schools as far as teaching — all communication in English. Why? English is the language of the Anglo-Saxon culture, English is the language of law and order, English is the language of the Protestant ethic, English is the language of prosperity, not Spanish. People south of the border are starving to death, they are victims of every kind of evil and their language hasn't improved their situation a bit. People have come here from Vietnam and they have learned the language because they know it is a better place to be. But it is better because of the Protestant ethic. Those who know European history know the story. The Heugenots brought prosperity to France — the Protestant ethic, free enterprise. Then when they were kicked out through the revocation of the edict of Nants they went to Switzerland and Switzerland became prosperous. They went to north Germany and north Germany became the centre of prosperity from the last century into this one. They went to England and in England there was the same prosperity. They went to the United States and everywhere where the Protestant ethic went there was capitalism, there was free enterprise, and if you had what it took you could make it. That isn't true any more because of the welfare state and socialism which is anti-Christian and anti-sanity. Japan is a nation which has done well. Why? One culture is acceptable in Japan. And if you went to Japanese schools you learned to speak Japanese!

Does that tell you something? We have created out of great potential American scum in all races, in all categories — white scum, black scum, yellow scum, brown scum — and it always is done through socialism, through the welfare state, through that evil concept of redistribution of wealth. That is where we are in our historical trends in these United States today. And the tragic thing is that we have yet to recognise our problem, we have yet to recognise the difference between freedom and what it means. Freedom is destroyed by tolerating many cultures — freedom is destroyed, respect for law is destroyed. These people do not come in respecting our laws, except in rare cases, they come into the United States because they recognise they have bettered their situation.

Therefore, when you come to this country you are no longer white, or black, or brown of skin. Your colour is no issue. You are no longer whatever your background was, you are in the United States and there is one culture and only one. But we have departed from that attitude because the same thing that destroyed the Roman republic is destroying the United States. We have opened the franchise and allowed people to vote who have no interest in this country or the understanding of it. We have opened the franchise to immigrants who understand nothing of this country. What is an American? There is no such thing as defining an American by race. We aren't a race. We are like Rome, we are a large group of races. When Julius Caesar took in the Gauls and others as citizens he shocked Rome but it was the beginning of the greatness of Rome because they were taken in on the basis of Roman culture. There is no racial issue in this country, it is a created issue for evil politicians to exploit black people, brown people, Vietnamese people, etc.

There is no race, there is no issue with colour. These are false issues that have been created and all they have done is to produce arrogance so that people say, “My race has been maltreated here.” But their race has in fact had the best opportunity it has ever had. Who are these people we are catering to who say they are the downtrodden? People are only downtrodden because they are the products of their own decisions, they have made decisions to be downtrodden.

Now we move to a principle which is the background for all of these rewards. These great decorations and rewards which come to those who glorify the Lord, who fulfil the plan of God, who reside and function inside the divine dynasphere, they all are based on a principle, temporal and eternal security. Once you decide to believe in Jesus Christ you enter the plan of God and you can't get out — that's phase one. Inside the plan of God there are many options. Good options result in opening the door for greater options. Inside the plan of God are the opportunities for bad decisions. Bad decisions destroy the options and make your life miserable (there are various types of divine discipline). And, of course, in eternity there are degrees of reward. You can make wrong decisions all of your life as a Christian, you will be miserable, but no matter how many wrong decisions you make you cannot lose your eternal salvation. So we have temporal security, the principle of logistical grace supplied, and we have eternal security, the principle of the saving work of God applied.

So we now move from the principle of rewards and decorations at the judgment seat of Christ plus the tremendous degrees of happiness and prosperity which are provided in time, and we move to the ones who fail. Security orientation from life and momentum in the divine dynasphere is the principle. The basis for temporal security — verse 11a: “He who has an ear.”

We begin with the articular present active participle from the verb e)χw, which means to have. The definite article is used as a personal pronoun and refers to the fact that believers in Jesus Christ are equipped from the moment of salvation to understand Bible doctrine, regardless of academic ability or human IQ. The present tense is a static present representing a circumstance — having ears — which is assumed as perpetually existing. The active voice: the believer produces the action, the participle is circumstantial. The accusative singular direct object from the noun o)υj, which means an ear, follows. The ear represents the grace system for perception of Bible doctrine. All kinds of people have ears and can hear, no one earns or deserves the right to have ears. The whole point of having ears means volition. You have free will; you have your own volition; you can choose to hear or not to hear. “He who has an ear,” then, refers to the principle of grace perspicacity. God has provided a grace system for the perception of Bible doctrine, a system where IQ is not the issue, only positive volition and the daily use of positive volition fulfilling the principle of residence and function in the divine dynasphere. God in His matchless grace has provided through logistical grace everything necessary to perpetuate momentum in the spiritual life.

Next, the mandate: the aorist active imperative of the verb a)kouw, which means let us hear. And in the imperative mood it is a command, it is a mandate for the Christian life. You must use your own free will for or against doctrine. If you use it for you will expose yourself to doctrinal teaching. The aorist tense is a constative aorist for a fact extended over a period of time, the taking in of Bible doctrine, the residence in the divine dynasphere, God's power system, God's game plan for the Church Age. The active voice: this is a third person suffix of the verb and indicates that the positive believer living in the divine dynasphere produces the action although the mandate belongs to all Christians. And the accusative neuter singular from the interrogative pronoun tij indicates the object of hearing doctrine, correctly translated “what sort of thing [the categories Bible doctrine].”

Then we have the nominative neuter singular subject from pneuma, referring to the third person of the Trinity, God the Holy Spirit. And it relates to the function of gate one of the divine dynasphere. Then we have the present active indicative of the verb legw, which here means to communicate. The customary present tense is for what habitually occurs when the believer resides and functions inside the divine dynasphere and is positive toward the teaching of Bible doctrine. Such Bible doctrine can only be learned and applied under the status of the filling of the Spirit who is the teacher of doctrine. The active voice: God the Holy Spirit produces the action of the verb teaching positive believers under the ministry of their pastor, as per John 14:26; 16:12-15; 1 Corinthians 2:9-16; 1 John 2:27. Apart from the ministry of God the Holy Spirit there is no perception of Bible doctrine. The only legitimate area for the use of divine power in perception of Bible doctrine, the fulfilment of the plan of God, the production of the Christian life, the glorification of the Lord Jesus Christ and, inevitably, the ultimate in happiness in time, is the ministry of the Spirit; all of these depend upon gate one or the ministry of God the Holy Spirit.

Next we have the dative plural indirect object from the noun e)kkhhsia, which is the classroom for learning Bible doctrine, correctly translated “churches.” It refers to the local church. All teaching is conducted inside the classroom of the local church and the congregation functions as students without portfolio. The minister is the teacher, therefore his authority as the pastor must be linked with the higher authority of Bible doctrine which is the mind of Christ — 1 Cor. 2:16. This is a dative of indirect object, it indicates the ones — believers assembled in the local church — in whose interest the act of teaching doctrine is performed. Therefore it is a dative of advantage, it is to your advantage to hear and to absorb Bible doctrine. Consequently the greatest decisions in life are those positive decisions made toward Bible doctrine. These decisions are related to your priorities in life, whatever they happen to be. If Bible doctrine is number one in your scale of values then you are positive toward doctrine. In other words, the believer is equipped through logistical grace to understand Bible doctrine but he must use his own volition or free will to learn the Word of God.

Furthermore, the perception of Bible doctrine properly relates to the function of freedom and security. Freedom is the origin of all true security in life and therefore the function of freedom must be directed toward the divine mandates regarding residence and function in the divine dynasphere.

Degeneracy has many forms and is always a functional evil. All degeneracy starts with arrogance. Arrogance is a part of gate one, cosmic one, and preoccupation with self when carried out leads to psychosis, neurosis, and many other things. It also results in the principle that we are the products of our own decisions and an arrogant nation is a self-destructive nation. But you never begin actually by just suddenly breaking through all barriers and moving into degeneracy. Instead there is a thought pattern which comes first.

In time of degeneracy the public is especially bad. They vacillate very easily. And very quickly they become a weapon in the hands of the demagogue. But there is a way in which this can be corrected and in which you can think for yourself. But you have to go back and take a look at the only perfect person who has ever been on this earth: our Lord Jesus Christ in His hypostatic union, manifest to His own country, “he came unto his own and his own received him not.” Certainly one of the greatest demonstrations of historical fickleness is related to our Lord Jesus Christ and how easy it was to arouse the crowds against Him. The more truth He gave and the more He was right, the more the people in power demonstrated great vacillation and fickleness. And once you become aware of this historical trend it is very easy to become discouraged by it. But there is always a factor, a factor related to Bible doctrine, a factor related to truth which can turn it all around and bring stability into the life and crystallise your opinions and your standards and your priorities. And that is, of course, the remembering of our Lord Jesus Christ. This is what the communion table is, the recalling of who and what Christ is. It is a stabilising factor for those who have Bible doctrine because it calls upon them to use their concentration, the same concentration used in the perception of doctrine, the same concentration which is used in any facet of life. The concentration is required for remembering our Lord Jesus Christ. Memory is a concentration effort just as prayer is a concentration effort.

Perception of doctrine properly relates to the function of freedom to security. Freedom is the origin for true security in life, and therefore, the function of freedom must be directed toward the divine mandates regarding residence and function in the divine dynasphere. The security of believers begins at the point of salvation through faith in Christ. At that moment they receive two categories of security: eternal security related to the possession of eternal salvation as a work of God and guarantee that we shall spend eternity in the presence of God; temporal security which is related to the imputation of divine righteousness, forming a grace pipeline for the flow of logistical grace support. The believer cannot earn, deserve, merit or work for either category of security. People often relate security to happiness or a change of circumstances instead of to freedom, and that is a disaster.

Believers are the products of their own decisions, like all other members of the human race. Therefore, decisions to live inside the divine dynasphere provide that confidence in God as a motivating virtue — which also brings to us awareness of security — while decisions to live in the cosmic system do not actually cancel the security but they do cancel our awareness of both temporal and eternal security. Therefore the result is that instability, that vacillation, that insecurity, which comes from trading freedom for a system of false security. The philosophy of the cosmic system and the welfare state, socialism and communism. Socialism offers pseudo security instead of genuine freedom. God has not overlooked the believer's security but freedom is the true issue in the angelic conflict.

Verse 11b, we start out with the articular present active participle from the verb nikaw, which means to be a winner, to be victorious, to conquer, to overcome. It should be translated winner, or he who is victorious. The definite article is a nominative masculine singular and is used as a personal pronoun in the subject. The present tense is a perfective present for a fact which has come to be in the past: initial entrance into the divine dynasphere at the point of salvation and, of course, is now emphasised as a present reality. The active voice: the believer in the Church Age and/or the royal family produces the action of the verb — being a winner.

In the previous Church — Ephesus, in chapter 2:7 — the emphasis was on perpetuation of the Christian life in the divine dynasphere resulting in momentum and maturity, and therefore reward in eternity. But here the emphasis is on the initial victory at salvation when the believer enters the divine dynasphere, because not only is he a winner for the moment but at the same time he receives something he can never lose. He can't throw it away by wrong decisions. Wrong decisions have a great deal to do with failure in life, and great unhappiness and misery, but you can make wrong decisions as a Christian all of your life and you still do not lose your salvation.

For the mature believer of Smyrna the reward is a decoration called the crown of life. Victory over the cosmic system begins at salvation with that initial entry into gate one, the filling of the Spirit. At that moment the believer in this dispensation has received 40 things from God, he has come under the support of logistical grace, and he resides in the driver's seat inside the divine dynasphere. This initial point of victory over the cosmic system at the point of salvation is also described in 1 John 3:9, which says that at the moment when anyone is born from God — salvation through faith in Christ — he is not sinning, because his seed — God the Holy Spirit — keeps residing in it [the divine dynasphere]. Furthermore he is not able to sin [i.e. inside the divine dynasphere. He is able to sin all right but any decision to sin moves him outside of the divine dynasphere]. And the reason he is not able to sin is because he has been born from God, he is in the divine dynasphere. To sin he has to step outside. Perpetuating residence in the divine dynasphere for the believer, then, is a matter of one of two things: resistance of temptation from the old sin nature residing in the body or having sinned and consequently having become involved in the cosmic system to use the rebound technique. Residence and function inside the divine dynasphere is God's game plan for the Church Age believer and this is the power system He has provided for our weaknesses.

Then we have the aorist passive subjunctive of the verb a)dikew, which also has with it the strongest possible negative you can have — o)u plus mh. Mh ordinarily goes with the subjunctive mood; o)u goes with the indicative mood but is used here in combination with mh to form an extremely strong negative. A double negative in the Greek is a stronger negative; the double negative in the English is a positive. We will translate that then, "shall not ever be hurt [injured or damaged]." The gnomic aorist tense is for a doctrine, the doctrine of eternal security, so absolute and so certain as to be axiomatic in character. The passive voice, plus the double negative o)u mh, emphasises the fact that the believer cannot ever receive the action of the verb because of eternal security. The mature believer, then, under martyrdom, dies under the principle of dying grace. The believer can only die once. Whether he dies under dying grace or the sin unto death — judgment, divine discipline for failure — the fact remains he cannot lose his salvation.

It is not possible to lose your salvation. This is stated with the prepositional phrase in terms of the lake of fire — e)k plus the ablative of means from the adjective deuteroj plus qanatoj.

Altogether it means, "shall not ever be hurt, injured or damaged by the second death."

The concept of death ...

What is the second death? Obviously if there is a second death somewhere there is a first death. If there is a first and second death there may be more deaths and, of course, there are. There are seven deaths which are found in the Bible:

a. Physical death or the first death of the human race. It is defined as the separation of the soul from the body so that the person involved no longer lives on planet earth. But such death cannot separate the believer from God — Romans 8:38,39. Physical death is a matter of God's sovereign decision as to when to take us home to be with Himself, Psalm 68:19,20. But God can and does prolong physical life on the earth and Psalm 102:19,20,23,24 tell us the whole story. God also delivers the believer from death many times before he dies, Job 5:20; Psalm 33:19; 56:13; 116:8. The believer who attains maturity departs from life under the principle of having wonderful death, death is the greatest experience of his life, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his mature ones." Psalm 23:4, "Ye though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil". Resurrection is the victory over death, 1 Corinthians 15:54-57. All of this adds up to the fact that there is a first death and all of us will face it apart from resurrection, the Rapture may occur and will occur before one group or generation actually dies physically.

Security belongs to both the winners and the losers in the Christian life. All of the way through this historical trend dissertation in Revelation 2 & 3 are a tremendous amount of security phrases. What is the meaning of these security phrases? We have a doctrine called "temporal security" as well as "eternal security." While people are struggling and scrounging, vainly often, to find some kind of security, if they are where the Lord wants them to be they couldn't be more secure. The way to be secure is to stay in the divine dynasphere, and when you get out of the divine dynasphere you have rejected the wall of fire where there is no place you are secure. In the second chapter of Revelation we discover that our life is not dependent upon social interaction, the functions of governments, the functions of Satan who would like to remove believers for obvious reasons — they foul up his administration. We are perfectly secure. Verse 11 is addressed to people who have failed as well as to people who have succeeded but they are still winners in the sense of security.

Physical death is a part of the security package. The security package started at the moment you believed in Christ. It includes dying. You are going to die in the way that the Lord wants you to, so what is your concern? It also indicates that whether you fail or succeed you are going to be in heaven. And, furthermore, even the worst failure, after he dies physically, gets an interim body and a great interlude of happiness before the resurrection. We have a perfect security package and there is no reason, then, for fear. It is mandated that we are not to fear. There is reason to fear if you like to live in the cosmic system and you like to ignore the Word of God. Then it is inevitable that you will be frightened, but there is no way that you can have any fear once you understand a principle: failures are just as much under the security package as winners.

Physical death is defined as the separation of the soul and the spirit from the physical body so that the person involved no longer lives on planet earth. The fact that we have a soul means that we will live forever, either in the lake of fire or in heaven. And such death cannot separate the believer from God. Death does not mean separation from God, on the contrary it means coming face to face with God in an interim body. Physical death is a matter of God's sovereign decision, and God knows better than we do what we should have. We make all of the decisions up to the moment of our dying but the Lord makes that one. The Lord knows best for each one of us.

The second death in the Bible has nothing to do with physical death, it is spiritual death. It is something we all had at birth; it is a type of death that accompanies life while we are alive. Since the moment we became alive we have had spiritual death. Spiritual death is the penalty of sin. And given as a warning to our original parents in the garden — Genesis 2:17, they were told that “dying they would die.” That means that eventually they would have physical death but long before physical death they would suffer spiritual death. At the moment of birth we have a death called spiritual death, the imputation of Adam’s original sin to the genetically formed old sin nature. We are born physically alive and spiritually dead. The sign of that death is the existence of the old sin nature, genetically formed in the body and controlling the soul when we sin.

The solution to spiritual death is stated in Romans 6:23: to believe in Jesus Christ. That is why we are said to be born again. When we were born physically we received human life imputed to the soul. We received Adam’s original sin imputed to the genetically-formed old sin nature. When we are born the second time we receive the imputation of divine righteousness and eternal life is imputed to the human spirit. Being born again is solving the problem of spiritual death. So our personal sins were never imputed to us for condemnation but imputed to Christ on the cross, as per 1 Peter 2:24 and Isaiah 53:6.

The third death is positional death of the believer. This has to do with something which happens at salvation: God the Holy Spirit entering us into union with Christ, which we call positional truth. It is defined as identification with Christ and it is defined two ways: retroactive positional truth identifies us with Christ in His death; current positional truth identifies us with Christ in His resurrection. So we have a type of death that is actually retroactive positional truth and it means that through the baptism of the Holy Spirit at salvation the believer is identified with Christ in His death. In His death Christ was judged for our sins but He rejected both human good and evil. Human good and evil are a great part of Satan’s plan for administering the rulership of this world. Our Lord rejected human good, He didn’t bear human good on the cross, He didn’t even bear our evil, only that part of evil that relates to sin. He was judged for our sins only and since we are identified with Christ in His death we as believers must reject and separate ourselves from human good and evil, and we do this by obeying the mandates of residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. There is no human good and there is no evil (and actually no sin) inside the divine dynasphere with its eight gates. All sin, all evil, and all human good is associated with cosmic one and the 26 gates of interlocking systems of arrogance, and cosmic two and the 9 gates of interlocking systems of hatred. So the positional death of the believer is a very important concept.

Retroactive positional truth or positional death is identification with Christ in His death where He was judged for our sins, where He rejected human good and evil, the policy of Satan as the ruler of this world. Therefore we can only sin outside the divine dynasphere and only produce human good and evil inside the cosmic system. Therefore all personal sin places us immediately inside the cosmic system.

Furthermore, the next category of death is cosmic death, the believer involved in the cosmic system. This is the same as carnality or reversionism. It is the function of the believer’s volition converting temptation into sin. Whether the believer knows that he is being tempted or not is not even the issue. The real issue is: Does he want to do it? And whether it is a sin of ignorance or a sin of cognisance he still wanted to do it and he is responsible. The decision automatically places the believer inside of the cosmic system — physically alive but said to be dead in such passages as James 1:15.

The next type of death is the production of dead works. This category combines the arrogance of Christian service at gate 21 of cosmic one with the function of human good at gate nine of cosmic two. In other words, Christian production is dead if it is performed inside the cosmic system.

There is also a category called sexual death, only found in two passages both of which deal with Abraham, Romans 4:17-21; Hebrews 11:11-12.

The seventh death is the “second death,” the one we have in verse 11. This death is for the unbeliever only. It is the final judgment for the unbeliever, the one who has rejected Jesus Christ as saviour. It is eternal separation from God and its locale is the lake of fire. The lake of fire does not exist now. There is a hell but it is a part of Hades, and there is a difference between Hades and the lake of fire. The lake of fire is found in the judgment of Hebrews 9:27. It is so described in Revelation 20:12-15. The lake of fire is the second death.

There is one other death, the sin unto death, which is maximum discipline for the believer.

Lesson #86

86 03/17/1982 Revelation 2:12a Freedom to discern; churches; cities

Verses 12-17 have to do with the church at Pergamos. This was a great church in a most unusual city.

We have the connective use of the conjunction kai, indicating that we are continuing our subject of historical trends but we are moving to a different locale. It is followed by the dative singular, definite article, toi. The generic use of the definite article is used for a category known as the second estate, the clergy — pastors of the local churches. Any kind of communicating profession always has those who communicate the truth and those who do not, those who distort the truth and those who do not. And it is very important for us to understand a principle here. We have good reporters and bad reporters in the news media, we have good clergymen and bad clergymen. You have those who teach what is truth and those who teach what is false; you have those who teach what is slanted in both. And if you get rid of the news simply because you have people who falsify it you also get rid of any system of freedom in communication. That means you also get rid of the clergy. Rather, the point is: Let's learn the truth so that we can recognise what is false and what is slanted, and discern. Freedom demands discernment. That is our first principle and it comes from a definite article. Discern what is true, and to do that you must have the truth. If you desire the truth, the truth is available: "You shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." You have to discern where clergymen are concerned. The whole basis of the fact that men stand up in pulpits and teach what is false and men stand up in pulpits and teach what is true doesn't change the principle: you have the right of discernment. Discernment is based upon your own scale of values and your knowledge of Bible doctrine. Therefore, the key is to learn the truth and the truth makes you free to discern. Therefore, you do not abolish communication systems just because they falsify information. Instead you discern what is true and what is false. You are always going to have the true and the false standing side by side and the point is not to destroy what is false but to recognise it and reject it. In any generation where you have a large number of people who understand truth and reject what is false you always have a great historical period. When you don't have that you have confusion. But it is far better to have freedom and confusion than no freedom and the lie — dictatorship.

Next we have the dative singular, indirect object from the noun a)ggeloj. This word can be transliterated "angel," in which case we are talking about a super creature. But we are talking here about human beings. It means "messenger," used here for a technical messenger — future pastors of Pergamos. The dative of indirect object indicates the ones in whose interest the act is performed — the future pastors in the city of Pergamos. The dative of advantage also has in view the advantage to the local church of having a local pastor in residence: face to face teaching, or nonresidence. Believers cannot learn doctrine without a communicator of doctrine who is in the business of communicating; a pastor-teacher by gift, by preparation, by academics, and by everything that is necessary to communicate doctrine and to go into the original languages and separate the wheat from the chaff, the true from the false.

Then we have the genitive singular of relationship from the noun e)kklhsia, which refers to local churches, not denominations. You have to remember that this was the first century when this was written and for three centuries thereafter you have local churches, like at Pergamos. Believers had fellowship as they travelled back and forth but they never formed a denomination. And you have to remember that there was no such things as the words "Catholic" and "Protestant" as we know them today until the seventeenth century and thereafter. The e)kklhsia was simply a classroom where people learned doctrine, and all believers throughout the Roman empire, and everywhere else there were believers, gathered to learn doctrine. When we talk about the church here we are talking about the church as a classroom where Bible doctrine was taught.

"in Pergamos," e)n plus the locative of Pergamum. And then we have the mandate to the apostle John, the aorist active imperative of the verb grafw, which means write. The culminative aorist tense views the writing of the book of Revelation in its entirety, but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, plus the encouragement of future pastors to study and to teach the content of the Word of God. The active voice: the apostle John, under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit, produces the action of the verb. The imperative mood is an order, a command.

It will be noted by now that we have taken up three cities, Ephesus, Smyrna and Pergamos, so it is time to look at isagogics again with regard to the Roman empire at this time. The first principle is the urban interpretation of Roman history. Rome as an agricultural country was a republic; Rome as an urban nation was an empire.

1. What is often categorised as the Roman empire is really not an empire at all. It is really an association of large cities, and these cities were made up of all races, of all peoples, and everything but nations. Rome as an empire was an association of cities, large and small.

2. Without the Greek civilisation (the Greek civilisation of city states) preceding the Romans there would have been no Roman empire. There was a Roman republic but there never would have been a Roman empire apart from the Greek civilisation of city states.

3. Roman civilisation became an urban civilisation for the city of the Roman empire was its important entity. What does that tell us? The same thing it tells us about the USA and her manifest destiny. The south was an agricultural area; the north was industrial. Where do you get your large cities? From industry. The north had the large cities, the south was agricultural — landed aristocracy. Once the war between the states was settled the US began to prosper because the undeveloped frontier was an area of townships, ranches, farms, and so on. What is it all today? One of the major parts of the undeveloped frontier is now a state of large cities — California. But the greater the urban development the more is the dependence upon the farmer. No urbanised civilisation has ever survived the loss of water and food. Roman government got into the business of water and food and through the genius of Caesar and the system he set up, Rome had for 450 years, water and food. And the empire was an association of cities. All of the churches were located in cities, there was no country church in the Roman empire. 4. The cities were to the Roman empire what cities and states are to the USA. Cities were permitted and encouraged to manage their own affairs. One thing about the Roman empire: they had literally thousands of cities in the empire and they allowed the citizens of the city to manage their own affairs. That was Caesar's idea. They had provincial governors acting as a general supervisor in large cities like Ephesus. The population of the Roman empire considered themselves citizens of the city and thus they lost racial identity and racial prejudice. Therefore, a person considered himself an Alexandrian, and Athenian, a Corinthian, a Philippian, etc. They were all races and of different colours of skin but they were all citizens of their city and they just simply had no racial prejudice. In other words, the conquests of Alexander the Great and the consequent Hellenistic monarchies paved the way for the Roman empire to be an association of cities. Rome became the master of a galaxy of cities which flourished in Hellenistic times.

Rome was not an empire as we understand empires. It was simply an association of prosperous cities, free trade between thousands of cities. On one side the Atlantic, on the other side the Euphrates, the Danube, the Rhine, all of the way up to Hadrian's wall and all of the way south to the Sahara desert. That large chunk of the world had thousands of cities and they traded — free trade — and prosperity was fantastic. Capitalism was the order of the day and people were prosperous everywhere.

And, of course, it was related to the rise of Christianity. The state of the cities plus their prosperity was the index for the condition of the Roman empire, and when something went wrong with the cities the empire went down; when the cities prospered the empire went up. Obviously the cities are necessary for the existence stability of local churches where Bible doctrine was taught, and the cities became prominent in the Roman empire. In those cities you have large groups of people together, like the apostle Paul, the apostle John, and Peter and many others. What did they do? They went to cities where there were populations and they evangelised in those cities. They did missionary work inside the Roman empire which would eventuate in the Roman empire being a strong client nation to God and a base for missionary activity outside the Roman empire to the entire world.

So there were local churches where Bible doctrine was taught and a maximum number of mature believers in any of these cities caused an uptrend in SPQR.

What held the Roman empire together, then, was the triumph of Christianity. Christianity was in the cities, and while in the rural populations they would cling to the ancient religions, generally in all the large cities Christianity became the factor. The country folk had to come to the cities to participate in their religious worship and in the cities they were evangelised. This means that the great conflict existed in the cities of the empire. There was a conflict between the Bible doctrine of the divine dynasphere and the religious and philosophical traditions of the cosmic system. Christianity took over the cities of Rome eventually through evangelism, through Bible teaching, through the functions of the Word of God.

Pergamos was one of the more important cities in the Roman province of Asia along, of course, with Ephesus and Smyrna. It was north of Smyrna and three miles from the river which flowed into the Aegean sea 15 miles further on. The early people of the city were the descendants of Greek colonists who intermarried with the Myceans. Lysimachus took over the city after the death of Alexander the Great and he deposited there nine thousand talents of gold which was the basis of turning the city into a great area later on in the Roman empire. After the death of Lysimachus there was a garrison commander there by the name of Philaterias who took over the control of the city from the garrison. He ruled the city for twenty years from 283 to 263 BC and he used the wealth that had been deposited there and established an independent Greek dynasty called the dynasty of the Attalids. In founding this particular dynasty he began one of the smartest groups of rulers in the ancient world. He was succeeded by his nephew Eumenes who became the first king of Pergamos. Eumenes increased the power of the small city state and made a nation out of it, so it became the nation of Pergamum. He even defeated the Seleucid empire, the same empire that tried to overrun Israel. His successor, Attalus the First, defeated the Gauls from the kingdom of Galatia who like the Seleucids tried to overrun this kingdom. So one thing about the freedom of this kingdom: it was based upon military victory. They never lost their freedom during the rule of the Attalids. And so it was Attalus who correctly interpreted the history of his own generation by foreseeing the rise of the Roman republic, and he did another thing: the Roman republic looked to him like the nation of the future so he made an alliance with Rome and he made sure that Pergamum was always on the side of Rome in the politics of the Mediterranean. The influence as a result of this was fantastic. The Roman republic came to power and Pergamum rode in with them on their coat tails. The kingdom of Pergamum reached its peak under Eumenes the Second, the ruler from 197-159 BC. He was succeeded by his brother who took the title of Attalus the Second. He held the rulership until Eumenes' son was old enough to take over and then we have Eumenes the Third. He ruled from 138-133 BC. He died leaving behind a very powerful small nation and in his will he made Rome his heir, he had no legitimate son. And a smarter move never occurred because now the Romans took over the protection of this city. And the Romans never forgot the fact and always gave preferential treatment to Pergamum.

At the time of writing Pergamos was the medical centre of the Roman empire. It was a royal residence; it was a very famous university town. It was also the centre for the phallic cult in that part of the world. In addition to the manufacture of its parchment Pergamos was famous for its pottery, its tapestries, and the greatest perfumes in the Roman empire. It was also a big source for silver and therefore was a source of coinage for the Roman empire.

Verse 12b, "These things saith." The present active indicative of legw, which means to speak, to communicate, to say. The active voice: we will discover shortly that the subject is the Lord Jesus Christ. He produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality.

Next we have the accusative neuter plural, direct object from the demonstrative pronoun, o(dh. The demonstrative pronoun was used originally as an introductory formula for the Greek translation of the decrees of the Persian king. When Persia was a great empire they had many Greeks under the Persian king and the king so admired the Greeks that he always translated all of his laws immediately into Greek so that the Greeks would stay up to date with what he was thinking. And o(dh was the key word. This was the one that introduced the decrees; here it is used for introducing the commands, the decrees, the mandates, the will and the plan of our Lord Jesus Christ. And it is used at this point as our Lord's estimate of the situation of the church at Pergamos. All we have so far is a partial sentence — "Communicates these things," legw plus o(dh.

Next we have a subject and it is the simple pronoun "he," referring to our Lord Jesus Christ. We find that in the articular present active participle of the verb e)xw. The definite article is used as a personal pronoun to describe our Lord Jesus Christ as we have previously noted Him in Revelation 1:16. This is a descriptive present tense. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action. The participle is circumstantial. We translate it then: "He who has." The object of the participle is composed of six Greek words in the accusative case. Three are the definite article in the accusative form, thn. Then we have a couple of adjectives, o)zuj, which means very very sharp; distomoj, a composition of two words, di for two and stomoj for mouths. It is used for a double-edged sword, the Greek word r(omfaia referring to the famous Thracian broadsword. Translation: “He who has the sharp double-edged broadsword communicates these things.”

The broadsword is a reference to divine discipline of a nation or people through military disaster or something that causes death like violence, terrorism, crime, revolution, guerrilla warfare, conventional warfare. And the divine discipline is administered to believers living in the cosmic system and in some stage of reversion. If we do not use the laws of divine establishment to keep our house in order the Lord Jesus Christ will do it for us. In that way our Lord protects the local church where evangelism and Bible teaching is absolutely necessary. So divine discipline in the form of a double-edged broadsword is reserved for a society out of control and for believers in that society who are living in the cosmic system. In other words, it takes a lot of bad decisions to become the recipient of the sword of the Lord. Good decisions provide options for greater decisions and divine blessing in the divine dynasphere, but bad decisions related to the cosmic system destroy those options and result in the divine discipline of the sharp double-edged sword. The historical trend of disaster results from negative and bad decisions of the believer.

Principle

1. The believer’s decisions regarding doctrinal teaching determine the historical trends of a client nation.
2. The believer has a choice of being taught doctrine by his right pastor or the divine discipline of the double-edged broadsword, including violence, crime, terrorism, revolution, guerrilla warfare, conventional warfare, etc.
3. Should individual believers or the entire nation be devastated by the broadsword from the Lord in any of these specified forms, many would say immediately: “What a tragedy.”
4. But there are no tragedies in history, only disasters brought on by individual and collective decisions within a national entity.
5. Because we as a nation have rejected truth — the laws of divine establishment, the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, Bible doctrine — we become liable for discipline from the sharp double-edged broadsword. And that sword can be any form of terrorism, any form of violence, a rise in crime. Which means unrestrained crime, uncontrolled revolution, predatory dictatorships, vulnerability to international blackmail, victimisation by world-wide terrorism, and either humbled or destroyed by conventional, guerrilla or nuclear warfare. And there is an overriding statement to all of this: As goes the believer, so goes the client nation. A maximum number of believers in the divine dynasphere means blessing for the nation; a maximum number of believers in the cosmic system means divine punishment. The broadsword of historical disaster is a continuing historical trend until the second advent of Christ.

We have seen how the believer's decisions regarding doctrinal teaching determined historical trends in the ancient world as well as today. The believer has a choice of being taught doctrine by his right pastor or divine discipline from the double-edged sword.

Verse 13, "thy works" is not found in the original Greek. But we do have the perfect οἶδα used as the present active indicative for the omniscience of the Lord Jesus Christ in the evaluation of the church at Pergamos before the evaluation material had become history. "I have known" is the way we will translate it. This phrase is based upon the doctrine of divine knowledge and the doctrine of divine decrees. The present tense of duration denotes what has begun in the past: the function of the omniscience of God in eternity past before man existed. The omniscience of God knew every thought, every motive, every action, every function of every person in history. And the omniscience of God entered that information into the computer of divine decrees. He also knew the alternatives, the things that didn't happen but could have happened, had each individual made different decisions at different times. But it is the printout for Pergamos that is in view when He says: "I have known." The active voice: Jesus Christ as eternal God produces the action of the verb. He always knew it, there never was a time when He didn't. The indicative mood is declarative for an accurate assessment of the situation which contributes to the doctrine of historical trends.

Next we have the interrogative adverb, pou. This adverb is used in indirect questions and it is simply translated "where." Location has to do with type of thought, the type of thought that you have finally developed whereby you are either a mature believer or you are a cosmic believer. In other words, like a piston being seated in a new engine. Then we have the present active indicative of the verb katoikew, which means residence. Translation so far: "I have (always) known where you live." The present tense is a perfective present. It refers to a fact which has come to be in the past but is emphasised now as a present reality. The active voice: believers in Pergamos produce the action of the verb. In effect it is saying to us: "I know where you live." Billions and billions of years ago God knew all about us. The indicative mood is declarative, representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of historical reality.

Then we have the particle ο(pou, which is the particle of place translated "where." It is used in answer to indirect questions, presenting the divine viewpoint of Pergamos. Pergamos could go either way: it could become a place of historical disaster, a place of affliction, a place of pressure, or it could be a place of greatness.

And now we see what the big problem is: the nominative singular, ο(qronoj, which means “the throne.” The throne is probably related to the famous altar of Zeus in Pergamos. There was in Pergamos a tremendous amount of idolatry and therefore this is where Satan’s throne was. The phallic cult, emperor worship, all of these things are a part of the modus operandi of the cosmic system. With this we have the possessive genitive of the noun satanaj, and it is a Greek transliteration from shatan of the Hebrew. It means enemy. With it we have the generic use of the definite article specifying a category, “where the throne of Satan is located.”

Principle: wherever the throne of Satan is there has to be a lot of idolatry and a lot of demonism.

1. Demonism is always associated with idolatry and Pergamos was saturated with idolatry. So Satan made his headquarters there. Satan, like all creatures, can be at one place at one time.

2. Pergamos was a centre for the phallic cult, as illustrated by the presence of the Nicolaitanes, but it wasn’t the worst place for the phallic cult. Here the cult which involved demon possession is apparently in the hands of male priests.

3. Furthermore, Satan worship or serpent worship was conducted in the temple of Esculapius.

4. Demon-motivated persecution of believers will be noted in the context.

5. What is more important is the fact that believers lived in the city which was the headquarters of Satan, and believers living in the divine dynasphere were as safe in this headquarters city for Satan as any place in heaven. Which means: living in a dangerous place is not necessarily dangerous. What is dangerous is living in the cosmic system, not your geographical location. Your security is related to your residence in the divine dynasphere, and inside the divine dynasphere there is safety even though you live in a dangerous place.

6. This establishes the fact that believers can live in perfect safety, in perfect security, in the most dangerous place in the world. But you can also live in the safest place and be in great danger all of the time if you are a cosmic resident. The wall of fire exists for residence in the divine dynasphere only. Safety and security is not where you are located but to whom you are related.

Now we have one of those unusual uses of the conjunction kai. God does not promise us freedom from adversity but He promises us the solution to adversity only inside the divine dynasphere. So we have the connective use of the conjunction kai emphasising an unexpected and noteworthy fact; it is translated “nevertheless.” And this “nevertheless,” what comes now, is very important with regard to your temporal security and your temporal safety. The present active indicative of kratew follows. It is not where you are, it is what you hang on to. Kratew means to hang on, to cling, to hold, to hold fast, to retain, to hold fast to someone so as to be closely united with him, to hold on to something that belongs to you. The Homeric Greek used kratew when it meant to possess power, and that brings us down very close to the meaning here. In Attic Greek the verb meant to rule, to win, to seize, to arrest, to imprison, to retain. Here it means to hold on, to hold fast, to remain true or faithful. “Nevertheless, you hold on,” is the translation. The present tense of duration connotes what is begun in the past — residence in the divine dynasphere — and continues into the present with advance to maturity, gate eight. The active voice: mature believers and believers with momentum produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of mature believers living in Satan’s headquarters, right under his nose in Pergamos.

And then we have the accusative singular, direct object from the noun o)noma, which means both name and person. It refers to the person of Christ because of the possessive genitive from the pronoun e)gw, my name. “Nevertheless, you hold on to my name.” What does that mean? It means that right under the nose of Satan in Pergamos believers were advancing to maturity, they were passing momentum tests, they were constructing an ECS, and they were fulfilling the principle of occupation with the person of Christ. But to hold on means to be in the divine dynasphere where it all takes place, and as a result of residence and function in the divine dynasphere it indicates the fact of holding on to the name of our Lord, glorifying the Lord Jesus Christ. In Pergamos there was a pivot of mature believers right under Satan’s nose, and the Roman empire — the first Gentile client nation to God — was being sustained. And the point is that Satan is a genius, Satan is powerful, and he is the ruler of this world; so he is far greater and far more powerful than any of us as members of the human race. And with all of his power and all of his tremendous demon army believers did not leave the city of Pergamos because of problems or because Satan was there. Believers were not only living under Satan’s nose but were advancing to maturity, right there. That gives us some idea of the tremendous power of the divine dynasphere and the tremendous provision of logistical grace. In the midst of the evil of this city the plan of God advanced because positive believers resided and functioned inside of the divine dynasphere.

Pergamos was where the throne of Satan was at this time, and the amazing thing is that there were many believers who had advanced to maturity inside the divine dynasphere in Pergamos. This establishes the fact that a believer can live in perfect security in the most dangerous place in the world, provided he is living inside the divine dynasphere. As Satan’s headquarters Pergamos was the centre of all the religions of that time. The believer living in the divine dynasphere, however, was safe and secure. Believers living in the cosmic system were constantly subjected to persecution, torture, and death.

“and thou holdest fast my name.” No one can hold fast or remain true to the person of Christ apart from positive volition.

We have a connective conjunction kai used here as an expletive conjunction, translated “that is.” Then we have the aorist middle indicative of the verb a)rneomai, a word which means to deny, to refuse, to repudiate, to resist. The original meaning of the verb was to say, No. It describes a negative attitude toward something which here, of course, would be Bible doctrine. But with the negative it means, “You do not refuse,” or, “You do not reject.” The culminative aorist views positive volition in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results — the advance to maturity inside the divine dynasphere. The direct middle voice is one in which the subject, believers in Pergamos, have advanced to maturity and participate in the outcome of the action. The indicative mood is declarative, representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of absolute reality. With this we have the accusative singular, direct object, from the noun pistij. Pistij has numerous meanings. Some of these meanings are very simple, like the first one which is non-meritorious perception in an active sense. That is translated trust, confidence, or faith. It is also used as an attribute, hence faithfulness or reliability. It has a passive meaning, which is in view here, that which is believed — Bible doctrine.

Corrected translation of verse 13 so far: “I have known where you live, where the throne of Satan is located: nevertheless you hold fast to my name, that is, you do not refuse, reject or resist my doctrine.”

Principle

1. No one can stay inside the divine dynasphere without being positive toward the teaching of the Word of God. It is impossible. No person can hold fast or remain true to the person of Christ apart from consistent positive volition toward Bible doctrine.
2. Bible doctrine is the mind of Christ, 1 Corinthians 2:16, and is vitally necessary for the believer living in the hottest part of the battle field. Just as Pergamos, in 96 AD, was the hottest part of the battlefield so our own locale may be the hottest part of the battlefield today. But it is perfectly safe for the believer who is consistent in the perception of doctrine.
3. Without residence in the divine dynasphere and the consistent perception of doctrine the believer cannot survive in the devil's world.
4. Negative volition toward Bible doctrine, as expressed in the verb a)rmeomai, is self-destructive to the life of the believer — spiritual life, social life, business or economic life, professional life, etc. The believer in the cosmic system is a fish out of water and there is no way that he can survive anything in life, in fact he will not, he will be destroyed by the ultimate punishment from God — the sin unto death.
5. The rejection of doctrine/negative volition is a guarantee that the believer will spend his life on earth inside the cosmic system, the slave to Satan. Satan offers many pleasures, many activities, but they are all dead ends. (Pleasure gives a fleeting moment of stimulation but it always winds up in frustration and a dead end and great misery. Misery is manufactured out of pleasures in life)

6. The cosmic believer has a miserable life as a Christian, both as the product of his own wrong decisions and the recipient of divine discipline, eventuating of course in the sin unto death.

7. All successful believers, or winners in the Christian life, function as a result of the gates of the divine dynasphere — Gate five: love of God; Gate six: right man, right woman; Gate seven: advanced impersonal love; Gate eight: the construction of the ECS and great maturity.

We are going to study a man whose name was Antipas, a man who is unknown apart from his name and apart from the few words that are written about him in the Word of God, but a man from whom we can understand from the standpoint of the Word of God and the Bible doctrine of the Johanine epistles and Revelation chapter 2. He was a most unusual person; every day was a wonderful day for him. He lived every day as unto the Lord; he lived his life inside the divine dynasphere. Therefore his life was wonderful as he functioned under the filling of the Spirit, under impersonal love, under humility, under love of God, etc. He died in what most people would say is a horrible and gruesome way and yet the Word of God says he died gloriously, honourably, and with integrity died in a horrible and gruesome way, demonstrating the fact that Bible doctrine is greater than any source of pain, any problem, any adversity, or any difficulty in life. Later in the text we come across a believer of the Old Testament who is set up by way of contrast, Balaam. And Balaam lived his life in the cosmic system, he thought more of money than anything else in the world. He knew doctrine, he was a born-again believer, but he was greedy for money.

The phrase in verse 13 begins with the conjunction kai which has two adverbial uses. One use is called asensive, in which kai is translated “even,” the other is called adjunctive and the translation is “also.” So whenever kai is translated “even” or “also” it is a conjunction with an adverbial connotation. Here we have the asensive use of kai translated “even.” The word “even” takes us to a historical moment, to something that happened just prior to the writing of this passage to the church involved. Therefore, it becomes something of great importance.

This is followed by a prepositional phrase, e)n plus the locative of h(mera, meaning day. It is in the plural so it is “in the days.” It is a reference to the reign of Domitian, the last of the Flavian Caesars who ruled from 81-96 AD. And we should translate this “even in the times.” The word “wherein” is not found in the original.

Next comes the nominative absolute of the proper noun, A)ntipaj. The nominative absolute is used for proverbial expression and it is translated like a genitive — “of Antipas.” Antipas is simply a nickname for Antipater and refers here to a former pastor of Pergamos before John took over as the non-resident pastor. The reason John had to take over as the non-resident pastor of Pergamos is because Antipas was martyred. The priests of the temple of Esculapius became antagonistic toward Antipas, and under cover of the Domitian persecution they seized him and put him inside of a brass bull, which they heated up and roasted him to death. At the same time there were other believers in the church who were also murdered but only Antipas is mentioned here because he is the one who died so honourably. Only Antipas is mentioned because Bible doctrine was so important and so real that the excruciating pain and the torture which he endured and the manner in which he died was completely set aside by the reality of the Word of God in his own soul.

With this we have an appositional nominative from the noun martuj. Unfortunately it is often transliterated martyr but that is not correct. Martuj means witness. And with it we have a possessive genitive from the pronoun e)gw, and this means that this witness is one who belongs to God. Therefore it is translated “my witness.” Martuj means a witness in the legal sense of one who tells the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. That is exactly what Antipas did. He told the truth about doctrine in a very special way to us: that there was no pain, no matter how excruciating, nothing more important in life for him than Bible doctrine. And he took the witness stand, first in the pulpit of the church at Pergamos, but then being roasted alive inside of a brazen bull. The truth, of course, is Bible doctrine, and as a faithful witness Antipas functioned not only as a great pastor in Pergamos but he also in time of greatest possible stress refused to renounce the Lord Jesus Christ, and he was cruelly murdered by the priests of the temple of Esculapius.

The nominative of apposition from the adjective pistoj follows. It is correctly translated “faithful one.” He was faithful as a minister but he was faithful as a person who witnessed to the fact that Bible doctrine was more powerful, more meaningful than anything in life. Then we have an explanation as to what happened to him. We have a nominative singular relative pronoun from o(j, referring to Antipas. It is correctly translated “who,” “Antipas who.” Then comes the aorist passive indicative of a)pokteinw, which means here to murder, to deprive a person of his life illegally — “who was murdered.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety; the passive voice: Antipas received the action of the verb, being assassinated after torture by the priests of the temple. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical reality of the fact that God takes note of it both now and forever. Here is a name that only occurs once in the Bible and yet it is very meaningful to us.

Next comes the prepositional phrase para, plus the locative plural form the personal pronoun su, correctly translated “in your,” and it means in your presence; it is an idiom. The problem here is with para. Para has three different meanings. Para plus the ablative means “from.” Para plus the locative means “by the side of,” “in the presence of” or “before.” That is what we have here. Para plus the accusative means “by” or “beside” or “beyond” in a comparison. The basic connotation of para plus the locative is nearness. Therefore, it connotes the city, it connotes something that happened inside of that particular area. The meaning is very obvious: everyone in Pergamos knew about Antipas and that he refused to renounce Christ under pressure. No one in that generation would ever forget it.

Next comes an adverb of place, o(pou, translated correctly, “where.” Then the nominative subject again, satanaj. Obviously this was a Satan-inspired function to break the back of the church in Pergamos. Then we have the present active indicative of the verb katoikew. Why repeat the fact that Satan resides there? Because Satan took Antipas as a personal challenge. Here is the exception to the principle that the wall of fire inside of the divine dynasphere functions all of the time. But because of this man inside of the divine dynasphere had so much doctrine, and because doctrine was number one in his life, the Lord permitted him to be taken by these people. And even though the wall of fire was removed as far as his dying was concerned the wall of fire in his soul of Bible doctrine remained in a constant frame, constantly applied to the situation. “Where Satan resides” — a retroactive progressive present denoting what has begun in the past and continuing into the present time. The active voice: Satan made his headquarters in Pergamos, so Satan produces the action of the verb, a comfortable place for Satan because of maximum idolatry in the city. The indicative mood is declarative for the principle that Satan as the ruler of this world always has his headquarters in some major city in the world. It also demonstrates the fact that Satan can only be in one place at a time.

This assassination made a great impression on Satan because he realised that throughout history he must do everything he can to distract believers from Bible doctrine. It was quite obvious that anyone who ever gets that much doctrine can ever be shaken by the power of Satan. It was a case of Goliath and David all over again. But life in the cosmic system gives no power to face this issue.

The death of Antipas did not, however, intimidate believers whose scale of values found doctrine as number one. They were not intimidated; they were living inside of the divine dynasphere, and they continued faithful to the Word of God in spite of all persecution. Others followed Antipas to martyrs graves but doctrine was more real than death and they died magnificently, honourably, and with great courage, making a permanent impression. The permanent impression is related to the noun martuj, for it does not mean martyr, it means witness to the truth. The truth is Bible doctrine and they witnessed to the importance of doctrine by the manner in which they died.

Believers living in Pergamos were also impressed. They realised how important doctrine was, and therefore when John started his non-face-to-face ministry they assembled to hear his letters and to hear his Bible teaching; they realised the importance. So the witness for God is Antipas. He impressed Satan with the truth so that Satan would seek to use every method possible from his genius to destroy, to distract, to disturb, so that truth would not be an issue.

And there was a third category of those impressed — unbelievers. Many of those very priests of the temple of Esculapius were impressed, and as a result of watching this man die. Others had been burned to death and had screamed their lungs out, and begged for mercy, and pleaded for help, but here was someone who was different and as a result they were impressed. But there was also someone else who was impressed, the members of the Holy Trinity: God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit. Antipas now has a permanent memorial in the Word of God. Satan in his own headquarters city of Pergamos could not shake mature believers from their faith, so that Pergamos contributed to the pivot of mature believers who sustained the Roman empire as the client nation to

God. The power of God, the power of the Word, the power of the divine dynasphere are not only great in life but they are even greater in death. And they are infinitely greater than the power of Satan. This principle was demonstrated at Pergamos, the headquarters of Satan, at this period of history.

Numbers 22:1-35, Balaam in monetary reversionism; his ass.

In order to understand the next verse in Revelation we must turn to Numbers 22. Money is the subject. In order to understand Balaam you have to understand that there is a river that runs through Palestine called the Jordan. Just north of the Dead Sea is the oldest city in the world, Jericho, and in Numbers 22 the Jews are camped in the plain of Moab, across from Jericho, their next objective. This is the basis for studying Numbers 22:1.

Verse 2, Balak is the king of Moab. The Amorites had controlled all of this land and had previously defeated Moab and so they were shaken that a nation that drove them down south into the area of the mountains suddenly is defeated by the Jewish infantry.

Principle: Many of the most dangerous situations that we will ever face as believers are unknown to us until a later time. God in His principle of logistical grace kept the Jews alive and it was not until they failed and went into the cosmic system that they ever learned of what had happened to them. God was faithful to a faithless people and they didn't even know it at the time. The great attacker here is a man by the name of Balaam, and Israel did not know that a Gentile believer living in the cosmic system was looking down from the high mountains to the south and the east of them and he was actually trying to destroy them for a large fee. Balak was the king of two countries: the Midianites who were Arabs and the Moabites who were cousins of the Jews. Remember that the Moabites were descendants from Lot; they got their start through Lot getting drunk and getting involved in incest. These two have combined now to stop the Amorites — they didn't have to because they walked the Jews and there was no longer an Amorite problem. Balak was thinking: "We are a wealthy nation and we have a tremendous armed force, but I don't think we can handle the Jews. So let's get them cursed; let's get them through demonism, divination, and all the other things that we are good at." So instead of launching their troops against the Jews they are first of all going to use the first phase of their religion — divination, spiritism, and demonism — and then when that fails they are going to use the second phase — the phallic cult, which was a religion related to demonism. But they want reinforcements for their religion. Their religion is no good unless they can get someone who can conjure up demons and through divination can actually put a curse on people so that the people are destroyed by that curse.

So verse 5, Balak "sent a messenger to Balaam, son of Beor, at Pethor which is near the river [Euphrates] ..." Pethor is south of Carchemish; it was the Magi town for the Babylonian Magi. Balaam means destroyer of the people, and Beor, his father, means the one who destroys by burning them up. So they had titles of divination. Balaam was in the business of cursing, a service for which he charged. But something had happened to Balaam, and he not only knew but confessed the Lord in the presence of the messengers from Moab and Balak. He also asked the Lord's will and to some extent followed it.

Verse 6 -7, Balak's request. Obviously, before his conversion Balaam had been a very successful divinator. Notice that Balaam was very famous and there is an application from verse 6 where the salvation Balaam who had been demon-possessed before, and he had practised magic and witchcraft. And the call to Balaam came when he was a believer and today of course the real power of believers is spiritual power. Our influence on our country is spiritual and there is a counter to this: Satan influences countries through the antithesis of the spiritual power of doctrine, he does it through religion. Religion is as detrimental to a nation as believers advancing in the divine dynasphere is a blessing to a nation. So many believers prefer the substitution of human power for divine dynamics and this is how they get into the cosmic system. If Balaam had been in fellowship with the Lord and not in the cosmic system he would have just told them to leave — forget it! But already his lust for money is working him into a lather and he just can't wait to earn that fee. Of course Balaam's problem in verses 9-11 is that God's conversation with him has to do with the will of God. And while God doesn't talk to us in conversation today He does through doctrine, and we know His will through doctrine. Basically there are three principles of the will of God here: the directive will of God — You will not go; the permissive will of God. God cannot coerce human volition but from His integrity He can discipline any disobedience to His will; and there is the overruling will of God which we will see. Balaam will never be permitted to curse Israel because this involves Satan and demons rather than human freedom and volition.

So we find God speaking to Balaam about the matter, verse 9. He wants Balaam to explain who these men are. And in verse 12 God said to Balaam: "Do not go with them: you shall not curse these people; for they are blessed". That is the directive will of God. The only one who can curse Israel is God Himself. The people in the client nation can bring down punishment on themselves, they can even punish themselves by wrong decisions, but there is no outside power that can destroy a client nation to God.

In verse 13 Balaam refused to go with the representatives of Balak. He is fulfilling the will of God. It was not that he was in fellowship, he just had enough discipline to be smart enough to recognise that he couldn't get away with it. That becomes a deterrent until you are too far gone in reversionism.

So in a further attempt to attract Balaam, Balak not only offers a tremendous amount of wealth, but with it he offers power: "I will do whatever you say." Three times he was approached (he finally succumbed), three times he stood on different mountains, looking from them, — the first two mountains on part of the host of Israel and could only bless them, and on the third time he gave a prophecy that goes all the way to the Millennium; it covers the same area as the book of Revelation without all the detail.

Balaam is a believer under restraint; Balaam does not close the door, however, on the temptation when he says in verse 19: "Now please, you also stay here tonight" — He is going to try to work out a way! — "and I will find out what else the Lord will speak to me." He wants that fee and he wants that power. Furthermore, he knows that the Mideanite women are the most beautiful women in all the world and he is not opposed to a little sex with all of those millions and his power!

Verse 20, the permissive will of God. God cannot coerce human volition and God reads the mind of Balaam. Balaam has made up his mind to go. Why? Not just the money alone, which is enough to make him drool, but at the same time he is going to have power.

Principle: When you as a believer have done something contrary to the will of God and are still alive, remember that you are under the permissive will of God, not the directive will of God. And there is no blessing under the permissive will of God except to be alive; all of the blessing is under the directive will of God. How does that translate into the Church Age? The directive will of God can only exist for you inside the divine dynasphere. Inside the cosmic system you are alive because of logistical grace but you are in the permissive will of God.

Verse 21, we have a change of pace. God cannot violate the volition of Balaam and Balaam had already made up his mind. In verses 21-35 Balaam is going to get three warnings. He is in the permissive will of God and just like all of us in the cosmic system God warned him. We get warnings; we get warning discipline. This is grace before judgment. Once you get in the cosmic system you divorce yourself from reality. His lust for money through arrogance is converted into lust for power. The lust for money is always a starter but it must be turned into power. There is a lust for power that goes with money and therefore arrogance is the converter.

Verse 22, the angel of the Lord is Jesus Christ. This is an anthropomorphism. God uses the form of an angel in the Old Testament to reveal Himself. We call this a Theophany. In the New Testament the resurrection appearances of our Lord are called Christophanies. In this verse the Lord Jesus Christ stood in the way against Balaam.

Verse 23, when the ass saw the angel of the Lord standing in the way with a drawn sword in His hand, the Bible says the ass backed off from the way and went into the field. Balaam struck the ass to turn her into the way. This, of course, was his first warning. The ass which had always responded had now responded to protect the master.

Verses 24, 25, we have a second warning. The ass does something peculiar, something out of the ordinary. The ass sees the danger, long before Balaam did! Balaam struck the ass again. (People who are out of kilter with life demonstrate the fact by their treatment of animals.)

Verse 26, all of this time the only one who was seeing the Lord Jesus Christ is the dumb animal. Verse 27, when the ass saw the angel of the Lord she lay down under Balaam, and Balaam was angry and struck her with a stick.

Verse 28, in time of cosmic degeneracy people will only listen to an ass. "What I have done to you that you have struck me down these three times?" But when you get divorced from reality even unusual things don't impress. Then you're in trouble!

Verse 29, "Then Balaam said to the ass"! He is now going to talk to her about it!

Verse 31-32 Balaam's faithful animal had saved his life three times. Balaam once again is getting a warning that the Lord practices capital punishment with believers, the sin unto death.

Verse 34, Balaam's rebound. Once he is in fellowship he wants to do the will of the Lord. That is always true. The Lord now instructs Balaam to go with the men. So Balaam went along with the princes of Balak, the permissive will of God and it will be used to further the plan of God. And even though Balaam will get out of fellowship again and seek to curse and destroy Israel God will use Balaam to declare the prophecies of the first client nation in history and to actually present some historical trends.

Revelation 2:15, "which thing I hate" is not found in the original manuscript. We start with the last Greek word in the sentence which is the adverb of analogy, o(moioj, which indicates that the believers at Pergamos were repeating the failure of those in client nation Israel in the time of Balaam. So we can translate it: "In the same manner."

Then we have the adverb o(utoj. Both of these adverbs go together here to form a principle. It refers to what precedes and is translated "so" or "in this manner." So we will translate the two adverbs: "So in this manner."

Next is the nominative singular personal pronoun, su, "you." The subject refers to believers in Pergamos and it refers to us today by way of application. The adjunctive use of the conjunction kai is one of eight different uses of the conjunction. It is translated "also." Then we have the present active indicative of the verb e)w, which means to have, to hold, or to have and to hold. The present tense is a perfective present. It refers to a fact which has come to be in the past but is emphasised as a present reality. The active voice: the church at Pergamos produced the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical reality of what we are about to note. "So also in the same manner you have believers ..."

Next is the participle: the present active participle of the verb krataw, which means to seize, it means to hold. Here it means to hold to or to adhere to. It is a descriptive present tense for what is now going on. The active voice: the believers in Pergamos produce the action of the verb. It is a circumstantial participle with the accusative singular direct object of the noun didaxh, for doctrine or teaching. And we have a progressive genitive plural from Nikolaitai, for the Nicolaitans.

Corrected translation: "So also in the same manner you have believers who adhere to [or hold to] the doctrine of the Nicolaitans."

What we have in the Nicolaitans is a combination of gnosticism with the phallic cult. The Nicolaitans were the cult of gnosticism which we have to call the licentious type of gnosticism. It trapped believers into the cosmic system through the function of the phallic cult. Remember that gnosticism would accept almost anything and amalgamate it into its system, making some kind of a mystery out of it, making it somehow spiritual when it really was not. The Nicolaitans are derived from two Greek words, the noun nikh, and laoj for people. The two together would mean the winner over the people, defeating the people, or overcoming the people. Balaam found a way for Balak to be a winner over the people of Israel and, therefore, the function of the phallic cult infiltrated into Israel through his teaching. The phallic cult possessed a twofold distraction to believers. The religious part was the idolatry and the system of theology that went with it. The modus operandi of the system included drunkenness, fornication, feasting, not just eating things sacrificed to idols, it was partying in relationship to the idols. They also had their own special ecstatic experiences. But the combination of these made an attractive package for a person whether he was a cold intellectual or a warm licentious type; there was something there for everyone. While the phallic cult of the Nicolaitans was rejected in Ephesus [Revelation 2:6] it was effective with many of the believers in Pergamos. The phallic cult is designed to perpetuate a downtrend in history through involving a maximum number of believers in the cosmic system. The reason can be seen for this. Pergamos was Satan's headquarters as we have noted and it did not do Satan's cause any good to have believers advancing to maturity in Pergamos, right under his nose. The power of doctrine, the power of the divine dynasphere acting as a wall of fire: as long as believers stayed within that wall of fire, the divine dynasphere, they were perfectly safe right under the nose of Satan. The doctrine of the Nicolaitans justified lasciviousness and antiestablishment behaviour through a system of substituting religion for Bible doctrine, and for the spiritual experiences, a licentious system. Principle: Religion rationalises; doctrine discerns.

Verse 16, the reversal of the downtrend. We start out with the inferential conjunction ουν, which demotes an inference from what precedes. Generally it is translated “therefore.” Then we have the aorist active imperative from μετανοειω, a mandate to believers inside the cosmic system. The word means a change of mind. The constative aorist tense is for a fact or action extended over a period of time which will result in a historical uptrend. The only way for the believer to get out of the cosmic system of Satan is through the rebound technique — the function of his priesthood. And this is the only function of his priesthood out of fellowship. Remember that the plan of God is divided into two parts: the visible and the invisible. The invisible function of the plan of God is the believer’s relationship to God inside the divine dynasphere. It is the function of his royal priesthood. The visible part of the plan of God is the function of his royal ambassadorship directed toward man’s circumstances and history. Both of these function at gate four — the function of the priesthood: perception of doctrine; the function of the ambassadorship: application of doctrine.

We will translate this so far: “Therefore change your mind.” The constative aorist is for the fact or action of rebound, the use of the rebound technique plus residence and function inside the divine dynasphere, with emphasis on the function of gate four, the perception and application of Bible doctrine. The active voice: believers in the cosmic system, through the function of the phallic cult, are commanded to produce the action of the verb. They are commanded to change their mind. This is a mandate for all believers living inside the cosmic system. Apart from rebound there is neither personal nor national recovery for the client nation to God. The client nation so involved in the cosmic system is punished by God and eventually destroyed. So the consistent use of rebound is a good decision which opens the door for greater decisions, while failure to rebound is a bad decision which destroys options and closes the door for future decisions, fulfilling the principle that we are the products of our own decisions and, first of all, we provide punishment for ourselves by our involvement in the cosmic system. But eventually God adds to that His own divine discipline: warning discipline, then eventually dying discipline. So we note that all historical uptrends relate to the believers use of rebound and his consistency of living in the divine dynasphere. Only in this way can a pivot be formed which will carry the client nation to God. The larger the pivot the greater the function of the client nation to God. The pivot is made up of mature believers only who have arrived at gate eight. A large pivot means historical blessing for that generation. But if the pivot shrinks and becomes very small and you have a large spin-off of believers involved in the cosmic system, then you have the downtrend. Therefore the mandate is given which is the rebound technique and resultant residence inside the divine dynasphere.

Principle

1. There are historical disasters but these disasters are not tragedies since both individuals and nations are the products of their own decisions, not their environment.

2. Life in the cosmic system produces both motivational and functional evil — the cult of envy, that power lust in which the demand for power exceeds the need for power.
3. In that historical downtrend of the phallic cult the weak control the strong in social life, in business life, in culture, in professional life, in government, as well as all too often in the congregation of the local church.
4. Cosmic involvement results in preoccupation with self whereby the weak in society control the strong.
5. Therefore, human history is all too often the narrative of man's weaknesses, not his strength.
6. Consequently good decisions are made for the divine dynasphere while bad decisions are made for the cosmic system.
7. The phallic cult is designed to lure believers into a pattern for making bad decisions. Satan made bad decisions and in his genius he knows how to cultivate bad decisions in believers.
8. Bad decisions made inside the cosmic system destroy the options for future decisions so that the believer through the exercise of his own free will loses future options and, through freedom of self-destruction becomes the slave to Satan who is the ruler of this world.
9. The options for the believer are simple. The believer must either decide for God's plan and God's power which is related to the divine dynasphere, or the believer will choose Satan's plan and Satan's power which is related to the cosmic system. One of the manifestations of life in the cosmic system is the modus operandi of the phallic cult as portrayed by the Nicolaitans.

Now we have the statement of alternative. We begin with the post positive conjunction de which emphasises a contrast with regard to believers. It is a contrast between the believer who uses the solution and the alternative to that solution which is divine discipline.

With this we have the conditional particle e)j plus the negative mh. They mean "if not" but it is an idiom meaning "or else" or "otherwise." Then we have the present middle indicative of the verb e)rxomai, I will come. This is a futuristic present. It denotes an event which has not yet occurred — divine discipline for cosmic involvement and adherence to the cult of the Nicolaitans. The futuristic present regards divine discipline for cosmic involvement as so certain that in thought it may be regarded as already occurring. Living in the cosmic system demands punishment from our Lord Jesus Christ. With this is the dative of disadvantage from the personal pronoun su, you. "Otherwise I will come to you."

With this we have a neuter singular form of the adjective taxuj, used for the certainty of divine judgment. It can be translated “soon, at once, shortly,” or possibly “without delay.”

The people in the client nation are the products of their own decisions. Combined with man’s free will is the fact that man is weak. Therefore he must use his volition to identify himself with a power system that is greater than himself. The alternatives are simple. Either the believer must use his volition to reside in the divine dynasphere or he must use his volition to reside in the cosmic system. There is no in between. Either you are in one or the other. Life in the divine dynasphere means historical uptrend for the client nation as well as spiritual momentum and advance for the believer. But life in the cosmic system means historical downtrend and, of course, spiritual failure means cursing by association to that client nation. This is the difference then between prosperity — personal and national — and disaster — personal and national. Historical uptrend from residence in the divine dynasphere means historical blessing while historical downtrend from the cosmic system involvement means historical disaster. Therefore the importance of the above mandate to rebound.

We have next the emphatic use of the conjunction kai, translated “in fact,” followed by the future active indicative of the verb polemew, which means to make war against. With this we have a prepositional phrase meta plus the genitive plural from the intensive pronoun a)utoj. A)utoj is used in the Koine Greek for the third person personal pronoun. It was not brought in from the Attic Greek, and therefore a)utoj doubles for that. “Against them,” since this is the plural. Translation: “In fact I will make war against them.” The future tense of polemew is a predictive future, it anticipates divine discipline against believers who live in the cosmic system and cause the historical downtrend of the client nation. The active voice: God produces the action of the verb by punishing cosmic believers with historical disaster. This historical disaster can be administered in many ways, depending upon the decisions that individuals make in the client nation. It can be for uncontrolled crime or terrorism or revolution or guerrilla warfare, or nuclear warfare.

Next we have a preposition e)n plus the instrumental of r(omphaia, the sharp double-edged sword associated with all categories of violence. In Revelation 6:8 the broadsword is carried by the rider of the fourth horse, known as death. Here we find the broadsword coming from our Lord’s mouth. The ablative of source, stoma plus the possessive genitive of e)gw, “my mouth.” The ablative of source indicates the original source of violence: the integrity of God, the justice of God under the principle that Jesus Christ controls history. The fact that Jesus Christ controls history is manifest in two ways: by divine punishment administered to a nation or an individual, or by divine blessing administered to a nation or to an individual. And even though history is the record of man’s thoughts, motives, decisions and actions, it is Jesus Christ who controls history.

There are, then, two sources of judgment in history. First of all, the erroneous decisions of the individual. Every erroneous decision you have ever made is a part of discipline to yourself and to the client nation. Secondly, the Lord Jesus Christ Himself as to the natural consequences of erroneous decisions. The omniscience of God enters every thought, every motive, every decision, every action, of every person into the computer of divine decrees without interfering with man's free will. The printout of the computer is history with its prosperity on the one hand, its judgements on the other. The source of divine judgment is cosmic involvement, and the source of cosmic involvement is human volition.

Corrected translation: "Therefore change your mind; otherwise I will soon visit you with divine discipline, in fact I will make war against them [the believers involved in the cosmic system] with the broadsword of my mouth."

Making "war with ... the broadsword of my mouth" is significant because this phrase applies to the Church Age, and one of the historical trends of the dispensation in which we live is the fact that when a nation goes too far into degeneracy — and we are the products of our own decisions, individually and collectively — then we are going to feel the broadsword. We must remember who is swinging the broadsword. As long as the Lord is swinging it you don't have to duck! It is not something to frighten the believer but to encourage.

Verse 17, the motivation for the historical uptrend. "He that hath an ear." The key to the whole thing is to have an ear and to obey a mandate with it — "let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the Churches." Churches, bodies of believers, are the key to the historical uptrend. Historical uptrend is not related directly to things that we often think of in terms of recovery — the passing of laws, getting rid of laws, etc. Many of the laws we now have are absolutely detrimental to living, and they should be rescinded.

Principle: Momentum and maturity means blessing by association. Therefore the basis for all historical uptrend is reduced to the principle of your attitude toward Bible doctrine.

big jump to the next set of titles

We start out with the articular present active participle of the verb ε)χω, a verb that John loved almost as much as the verb “to be.” We translate it: “he who has.” The definite article is used as a personal pronoun and refers to believers in the Lord Jesus Christ who from the viewpoint of salvation are equipped through logistical grace to learn Bible doctrine. Grace has overcome every human handicap in learning, and therefore perception of doctrine inside the divine dynasphere is the basis for momentum and the historical uptrend of blessing by association. The static present tense represents the circumstances of possessing ears, a status which is assumed as perpetually existing. The point is: All people have ears and ears become the analogy to the supernatural perceptive system our Lord has established for learning Bible doctrine, and from learning that Bible doctrine to grow in grace. So the static present tense represents circumstances: each one of us has ears. If the believer has ears he also has the ability to learn Bible doctrine, in fact all the realm of doctrine. The ears become the illustration for volition and motivation in learning. In John’s day most people learned, not by reading, but by hearing. If this was written in the 20th century it may we have been, “he who has eyes” — for reading. There are two basic systems of learning: hearing and reading. What is the difference between them? Hearing is motivation directed toward someone else as a communicator; reading is doing it on your own. The communicator has put it in writing. When it comes to Bible doctrine number one is the system because hearing means you must accept the authority or the credentials of the one who teaches. So it is not accidental that we have eyes omitted here because you see you can sit down and read the Bible but Bible doctrine which causes spiritual growth is communicated under a system of authority from someone else outside of yourself. And the secret to spiritual growth from the standpoint of your personality is the issue of humility versus arrogance. Arrogant people are not teachable.

Next we have a circumstantial participle in the accusative singular direct object from ο)υ)j, which means ears.

Principle: The ear refers to teachability, therefore to learnability. If you have ears, and you do, it also means you are able to learn doctrine as a believer. All kind of people have ears for perception and no one earns or deserves ears. Just as you come equipped with ears from birth, so from the second birth you come equipped with a system of perception necessary to learn doctrine. The only problem is volition. No one hears apart from his own volition, and therefore the importance of positive volition in learning doctrine. The ear represents the grace system for perception of Bible doctrine: gate four of the divine dynasphere. Learning doctrine is the basis for momentum; momentum is the basis for attainment of spiritual maturity, therefore the glorification of Christ, and that spiritual maturity is the basis for blessing by association — the historical uptrend of the client nation, forestalling the Lord’s use of the broadsword.

Any believer is qualified to learn doctrine, we all have ears. Mandate: aorist active imperative from the verb α)κουω. “Let him hear” is the way it is translated. The aorist tense is a constative aorist for a fact or action extended over a period of time. Over the period of your entire lifetime as a believer you should never stop learning doctrine. Positive volition toward doctrine inside the divine dynasphere is the secret to whether we survive as a nation. So regardless of the extent or duration gathered up into one entirety is your life as a believer. That means your life should be characterised by the daily intake of doctrine. The imperative mood is the imperative of command, it is a mandate for the royal family of God in the Church Age — perception and application of doctrine, the function of gate four of the divine dynasphere. The accusative neuter singular from the interrogative pronoun tij takes us back to the content. It is correctly translated “what sort of thing,” a reference to the categories of doctrine. Remember that all blessing by association in life, whether it is personal or national, all comes from the believer’s perception of Bible doctrine inside the divine dynasphere.

Then we have the phrase dealing with God the Holy Spirit, the nominative singular subject from pneuma, referring to the third person of the Holy Trinity — the power of the divine dynasphere, gate one. Principle: No one can learn Bible doctrine apart from the filling of the Holy Spirit, the function of gate one of the divine dynasphere. And with this the present active indicative of legw, meaning here to communicate — “what the Spirit communicates.” The customary present tense for what habitually occurs when the believer resides and functions in the divine dynasphere. This includes the fact that the believer in the divine dynasphere must be positive toward doctrine and must be teachable. Humility is necessary for learning any subject. It is always better to assume, even though you may be fairly familiar with the subject, that you know nothing, and therefore you always learn something that you didn’t know before. The active voice: God the Holy Spirit produces the action of the verb in causing the believer to learn doctrine, and therefore the Holy Spirit replaces the normal function of human IQ in perception of doctrine. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of Bible doctrine regarding the teaching ministry of God the Holy Spirit. And apart from the ministry of God the Holy Spirit there is no spiritual IQ for the perception of Bible doctrine and the resultant momentum in the Christian way of life. Therefore residence and function in the divine dynasphere is the only legitimate area for perception and application of doctrine.

As a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ you are never going to find any happiness, any blessing, and orientation to what God has for you in this life apart from Bible doctrine. Times of economic disaster are also times of punishment for believers who think that they can live without doctrine. We are the products of our own decisions and many believers today, and for some time in the past, have been making wrong decisions with regard to the Word of God, wrong decisions with regard to the establishing of their scale of values. You’ve heard it so many times about the importance of doctrine but it can go in one ear and out the other, and something attractive or something interesting, or something that sets up a spark of motivation, comes along. Many times this is merely a test to see if you have what it takes or not.

So let’s establish a principle that comes from the hidden manna that we have begun to study in Revelation 2:17: there is no happiness for the believer in this life apart from Bible doctrine being number one in his scale of values. Any system of priorities or scale of values that even puts the hidden manna [Bible doctrine] in second place is a personal disaster to you. And you can achieve everything associated with happiness in this life, wealth, prominence, prosperity, success, promotion, everything that people associate with happiness, and you can be the most miserable of creatures. And there is no way that you are going to get around this principle of you have already accepted Christ as saviour. If you accept Christ as saviour and neglect doctrine you are guaranteed a miserable life. And you will do it all by your own wrong decisions.

Just as the visible manna was stored in the ark as a permanent memorial to God's grace, so Bible doctrine is stored in the soul as e)pignwsij as a permanent memorial to God's grace. Only Bible doctrine learned inside the divine dynasphere can be used in the construction of the edification complex of the soul. Blessing from hidden manna is blessing from maximum perception of Bible doctrine. There is no way that doctrine can be second to anything in your life and you can survive it. All blessing to the believer is related to the hidden manna, the manna that is preserved as Bible doctrine in the ark of your soul. Ungathered manna is like the doctrine we did not learn. It cannot be used for momentum, application, or spiritual growth. There is no advance in hearing doctrine, it is learning it that counts.

Next we have the connective conjunction kai, plus the future active indicative of the verb didomi, to give. The future tense is a predictive future, it anticipates a future event in eternity. If you take in the hidden manna, if you have a soul filled with hidden manna, you are going to get a special reward in eternity. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb at the judgment seat of Christ. The indicative mood is declarative for reward and eternal blessing to the believer who has great historical impact through his perception of Bible doctrine.

Then comes the dative singular indirect object from the intensive pronoun a)utoj, which became a personal pronoun in the Koine Greek. The reason is because the third person Attic Greek pronouns were not passed on, therefore a)utoj is the substitute for them. Since this is the singular it is translated, "I will give to him." The dative indirect object indicates the believer, the mature type, the one who has maximum hidden manna in his soul, is the one in whose interest the eternal blessing and reward is given. The accusative singular direct object follows, it is composed of two words: the adjective leukoj, translated "white," and with this we have the Greek word psefoj, which means a pebble. It does not mean a rock or even a chip out of a rock, that would be petra and petroj. Peter was the chip off the Rock, Christ Jesus. Translation so far: "And I will give him a white pebble."

The juries in the ancient world voted privately. They had a box which was passed around in which were black pebbles and white pebbles, and each one selected a pebble and put it on the table. A black pebble was guilty; a white pebble was a vote for acquittal. The primary usage was in voting, then, or in counting. The white pebble here is the Lord's vote for acquittal for the believer — Romans 8:1. There is no judgment, no lake of fire, we are acquitted because we have personally believed in Jesus Christ. The Lord votes with a white stone for acquittal for every believer in the human race. Christ died for every person in the human race. Those who reject Him get a black pebble; those who accept Him get a white pebble. Whatever the evaluation or judgment at the judgment seat of Christ it does not include loss of salvation. Therefore every believer gets the white pebble. It has two meanings: adoption and resurrection. All believers have a resurrection body.

Adoption: The word in the New Testament is υιοθεσία, and that would be “son-placing,” literally, but it actually means adoption.

Every Roman son who became adult and was recognised as adult became officially adopted. Being a natural son was not enough. The eldest son had to be adopted as the heir. Now he had the right of marriage, he had the right of military service, he had the right to function under a bank account, he was an adult and responsible for his own actions. He was also given an official name, and this official name was a part of this white pebble we are about to study. In this white pebble is the name that you are going to have in eternity, if you have one at all.

The Romans were the most famous people in the ancient world from the standpoint of a name. They were called the trinomen people, they had three names. The first name was called praenomen, which was a name given at birth. It was not a family name. The second name was called nomen, and that was the name of the original Roman family, the clan or the family. The third name was called cognomen, which was a nickname but eventually it had other connotations as well. A nickname was often given as a descriptive name or a branch of the family name. Later it became an additional honour. A praenomen might be Gaius, or Lucius, or Marcus. A nomen might be one of the famous families of Rome, Cornelius, Fabius, Julius, Claudius, etc. A cognomen can be a nickname or a descriptive name. Take Julius Caesar: Gaius [praenomen], Julius [nomen or family name], Caesar [cognomen — it means in the Latin, “hairy”]. Romans generally addressed each other by the cognomen.

So the new name or the white stone in heaven means that you are a special person. And to have a white pebble with a new name on it is about as high an honour as you can have, and it is to show what you have done over the period of your lifetime since salvation. At the judgment seat of Christ all believers get a white stone, a resurrection body. Why? Because they are saved and are going to live forever. But there are going to be a lot of white stones with no names on them. The only white stone that has a name on it is the believer who day by day takes in the hidden manna. To have a name on that stone is the highest possible decoration for historical impact outside the order of the morning star.

Adoption in the Roman empire was an honour, and adoption meant a new name. The new name was a reward, it gave one the highest area of aristocracy. Hence the white pebble is not simply a resurrection body, it is a special reward that accompanies the resurrection body. It puts one into the highest area of aristocracy in heaven. The white stone speaks of freedom from condemnation in a resurrection body forever and ever, plus adoption for the purpose of honour. But there is no adoption for the purpose of honour except for the winner.

“and,” kai, here means “furthermore.” Then we have the prepositional phrase, e)pi plus the accusative of psefoj, plus the perfect passive participle of grafw, write. Translation: “On the stone has been written.” The perfect tense is a dramatic perfect representing the existing state in eternity for the victorious believer. He is given the highest possible aristocracy in heaven and all the privileges pertaining thereto. There are going to be very definitely levels of society in heaven. The participle is circumstantial for the reward given by our Lord Jesus Christ to winners only.

With this we have the accusative direct object composed of two words, the adjective kainoj, which means new in species, and the word o)noma, name — a new name, new in species, a new aristocracy exists in heaven.

Then the new name is described, the accusative neuter singular from o(j, referring to o)noma. And on that new name “which” we have an adjective o)udeij, meaning no one. And then the perfect o)ida, used as a present, “which no one knows.” The pictorial present tense of o)ida represents to the mind the future event of standing before all of your contemporaries in the Christian life and receiving the highest possible reward of aristocracy. The active voice: “no one” produces the action of the verb, which means everyone in time. Only eternity will reveal the true extent of rewards and blessings of believers who persist in functioning inside the divine dynasphere. No one knows it now; everyone will know it then.

Then we have e)i mh, meaning “except,” and the articular present active participle of the verb lambanw. No one knows except the one who receives it.

Lesson #100

100 04/06/1982 Revelation 2:18a Homer Lea; manifest destiny; Thyatira

The church of Thyatira is covered in the rest of the chapter, verses 18-29.

Verse 18, we begin with the connective use of the conjunction kai, translated “And,” followed by the dative singular definite article toi, and category to whom it is addressed is the second estate state, pastors or clergy. With this we have the dative singular indirect object from the noun a)ggeloi, sometimes translated correctly “angel,” and sometime translated correctly “messenger.” Here it refers to messengers or communicators. It is used technically for future pastors of the church at Thyatira. A)ggeloi is used for angels in passages like Matthew 1:20; 4:6; Acts 5:19; 2 Corinthians 11:14; 1 Timothy 5:21; Hebrews 1:4,5; 2:9; 1 Peter 1:12, etc. However, a)ggeloi or angels is used for messengers or human communicators in the following passages: Matthew 11:10; Mark 1:2; James 2:25; Revelation 2:1, 8, 12, 18. We have here the dative indirect object which indicates the ones — the future pastors who serve at Thyatira in whose interest the message from our Lord Jesus Christ is now given to the last of the apostles, John himself. Therefore this becomes a dative of advantage.

Next we have the genitive of relationship from the noun e)kklhsia used for the body of Christ as a whole and used for the local church or the classroom for the perception of Bible doctrine. “And to the future pastor or the messenger of the church.” Location: preposition e)n plus the locative Quateira, “in Thyatira.” Then comes the aorist active imperative of the verb grafw, “write.” The culminative aorist views the writing of the book of Revelation in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, not only the completion of the canon of scripture and encouragement to future pastors but a textbook of world history to the end. Furthermore, understanding the context will give the pastor insight into the historical trends which are necessary for relating his ministry to contemporary history. The active voice: the apostle John under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit produces the action of the verb. The imperative mood is a divine mandate to complete the canon of the New Testament and to complete a textbook of world history from the time of John to the end of time.

Thyatira is located on a very fertile plain of the Lycus Valley, fifty-eight miles north east of Smyrna. As a sequel to the destruction of the Persian empire by Alexander the Great it was established in BC 290 as a Macedonian colony. Thyatira became an important station on the Roman road from Pergamos to Laodicea and became a very wealthy city in northern Lydia in the Roman province of Asia. As a Hellenistic city it was a garrison post for the Seleucid empire. As a Roman city it was an important link in the Roman network of roads. It was to the Roman empire what Bastogne was to the Ardenne. Seleucis Nicator regarded the city as holy because it was the world centre for the worship of the sun god Apollos, worshipped under the title of Tyrimnos, the Lydian name for the sun god. On the early coins of Thyatira this Asiatic god is represented as a horseman carrying a double-headed axe similar to those found in the Hittite monuments. This double-headed battle axe also relates to the Lydians, to the Etruscans, to the Romans.

Thyatira was famous for its labour unions. It was the most completely unionised city in the Roman world. Every artisan in Thyatira belonged to a labour union and every guild or labour union owned property in its own name, made contracts for construction, and had tremendous power and influence. Most famous were the coppersmith unions, and the dyers' union whose purple dye was in demand all over the world. The unions sponsored also the phallic cult and various idolatrous cults, and were opposed vehemently to Christianity. In this context Thyatira is threatened with divine punishment through economic disaster. People are the products of their own decisions and the unions will make bad decisions which will destroy the economy of Thyatira unless corrected by Bible doctrine.

So far we have: "And to the messenger [future pastors of the church in Thyatira] write."

Then we have who is ultimately communicating this information. The unions have almost destroyed the town; now how can they be saved from this power control. The answer is very simple: the advance of believers inside the divine dynasphere.

We begin with the nominative subject (u(i)oj plus the definite article o(plus the genitive of qeoj, "the Son of God," the royal title of our Lord Jesus Christ as eternal God, therefore this emphasises His deity. He is speaking as God. The present active indicative of legw means to speak or to communicate: "The Son of God communicates." The present tense is an aoristic present for punctiliar action in present time. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality. The point is: No matter what reason people form guilds and unions, no matter for what reason people do anything by which they get together, when their power exceeds their purpose they become destructive. In this case we are talking about unions; in the cases of others areas we might be talking about dictators or political rulers. Anyone can get some power somehow, whether it is through a union or through politics or through some fame or success principle; and once they do and they link it up with arrogance then you have trouble. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality. Then we have the accusative neuter plural direct object from o(dh, a demonstrative pronoun used originally as an introductory formula for the Greek translation of the decrees of the Persian kings; used here, however, as the introductory formula for our Lord's estimate of the situation in the local church at Thyatira — "the Son of God [the subject] communicates these things." Between the subject and the predicate there is a relative clause divided into two parts. The first half of the relative clause is the articular present active participle from the verb e)xw, the verb to have. It is translated as an articular present participle, "the one who has." So between the phrase "the Son of God" and the verb "communicates," and the object "these things," is this relative clause that begins "the one who has." The definite article is used as a relative pronoun whose antecedent is the Son of God, the subject — "the Son of God who." The present tense is a descriptive present. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action. This is a circumstantial participle. With this we have in the relative clause an object of the participle, the accusative direct object from the noun o)fqalmoj. And with this we have a possessive genitive from a)utoj, the intensive pronoun used as the third person personal pronoun, "the one who has his eyes." The ellipsis demands e)imi. Then we have "like," the comparative article o(j, which means "like" here although on other occasions it has other meanings, and then the descriptive nominative floc, which refers to a flame. With it we have the descriptive genitive pur, which means fire. So: "the Son of God who has eyes like a flame of fire." The flame of fire connotes divine judgment related to historical trends. Remember we are the products of our own decisions, we bring disaster on ourselves, but along with it the Lord Jesus Christ also judges individuals and nations constantly. Our first principle of historical trends: Jesus Christ controls history. John 5:22,23 puts it this way: "For not even the Father judges anyone, but he has delegated all judgment to the Son in order that they all may honour the Son, even as they honour the Father. He who does not honour the Son does not honour the Father who sent him". Since the first advent of Christ the issue is that Jesus Christ controls history.

For the unbeliever eternal salvation is offered before the last judgment and the principle is always the same: grace precedes judgment. Grace often means living longer, surviving to have another opportunity, facing some disaster and re-evaluating your life and then moving on. For the believer logistical grace is always offered before the judgment seat of Christ. The provision of a definite plan and logistical grace includes temporal security, and of course temporal security precedes the evaluation of the believer at the judgment seat of Christ. God has made you secure in the devil's world. "Greater is he who is in us than he that is in the world." While Satan has the most phenomenal power and the great genius system of Cosmic one and Cosmic two, yet God has provided us fantastic security. For the unbeliever the option is simple: either receive Christ as saviour in time or else face our Lord Jesus Christ as judge in eternity. For the believer there is no such thing as a simple option such as that. For the unbeliever the option is "What think ye of Christ?"; to believe in Him eternal life, to reject Him eternal condemnation. But for the believer there are many options. However they are related to God's plan, and God's plan is related of course to the divine dynasphere with its eight gates. The principle then is: Jesus Christ not only controls history but Jesus Christ is the issue in history. For the believer in Jesus Christ there is great blessing in making decisions for the plan of God, great punishment for making decisions for the cosmic system. There is no such thing as happiness for the believer outside the divine dynasphere. Satan tries to manufacture a pseudo happiness but when you come up against the realities of self-induced misery, the reality of divine judgment, the reality of death, then of course it disappears entirely. The issue of punishment or blessing requires decision from your free will, and you are on your own. Decisions should be based on facts and all the facts are found in the content of Bible doctrine, and therefore the importance of daily perception of Bible doctrine inside the divine dynasphere. The divine dynasphere provides both happiness and security while Bible doctrine provides the necessary information to make consistent decisions for God, God's plan and the uptrends of history.

So we have the eyes like a flame of fire and they are for those believers who make wrong decisions after believing in the Lord Jesus Christ. The eyes like the flame of fire do not become an issue until after salvation, then you have the option and then you face the option. Which way are you going to go? Positive toward doctrine or negative toward doctrine. Are you going to live your life in the divine dynasphere where there are degrees of happiness or are you going to live in the cosmic system where misery is piled upon misery until the intensification becomes a horrible thing.

The eyes of the Lord being a flame of fire also refers to our Lord's integrity in punishing believers who spend their time in the cosmic system. Believers in the cosmic system are sustained by logistical grace. Whether you are in God's plan, the divine dynasphere, or in the cosmic system you are always indwelt by the Holy Spirit. Remember the mandate: "Be filled with the Spirit," that is the command to reside in the divine dynasphere. The mandate from Galatians 5:16 is to walk in the Spirit, that is the function at the various gates. If you are filled with the Spirit and walking in the Spirit you are indwelt by the Holy Spirit. But the negative commands are there too. For cosmic one, "grieve not the Spirit." If you are living in cosmic one you are still indwelt by the Holy Spirit; if you are in cosmic two you are quenching the Spirit, I Thessalonians 5:19, "Quench not the Spirit," but you are still indwelt by the Spirit. So matter what your status you are still indwelt by the Holy Spirit. Another principle: Whether you are in the divine dynasphere or in the cosmic system you still receive logistical grace support. You will know when logistical grace support ceases because you will cease to breath! Physical death will be the very clear indication of that.

The believer then in the cosmic system is sustained by logistical grace and therefore the Lord punishes the misuse of His grace in serving self and in serving Satan in the cosmic system. The eyes of the Lord are like a flame of fire and this refers to both divine punishment of cosmic believers and divine reprimand at the judgment seat of Christ through loss of certain blessings, loss of decorations, loss of rewards, loss of some of the super happiness systems of eternity. This doesn't mean that you are going to be miserable in eternity but there are definitely degrees of reward and definitely degrees of happiness. The eyes of the Lord as a flame of fire, then, is a challenge to every believer to make good decisions from his human volition. It is a challenge to human volition in the angelic conflict.

There are three sources of judgment in history. The sovereign decisions of our Lord Jesus Christ and the erroneous decisions of born again believers living in time. The eyes like a flame of fire are a warning against believers making bad decisions.

The second half of the relative clause starts out with the connective use of the conjunction kai, and with it we have a nominative from the word pouj. It refers to feet. And with it the possessive genitive singular from a)utoj, translated "and his feet." The predicative nominative masculine plural is from the comparative particle o(moioj, and because it is in the nominative it demands the use of the verb to be, "and his feet are like." O(moioj means like, and after o(moioj we have an associative instrumental case from the noun xalkolibanon, which means bronze, "and his feet are like bronze." It is a reference to historical judgment to the nations of history from the principle that Jesus Christ controls history. For example, bronze is used for economic judgment of a client nation. Note the use of the word "bronze" [not brass] in Deuteronomy 28:23-25. These are judgements that come to client nations who fail. They fail because of the downtrend — believers residing in the cosmic system rather than in the divine dynasphere.

Principle

1. Bad decisions bring on economic disaster as a manifestation of cosmic involvement with evil and degeneration.
2. These bad decisions from human volition result in divine judgment.
3. Jesus Christ picks an evil nation and sends it against the client nation to destroy it. To be destroyed by an evil nation is the greatest shame and loss of integrity.

Other examples: Bronze is used for slavery after the administration of the 5th cycle of discipline to a client nation, Lamentations 3:6-8. The divine judgment on a cosmic ruler named Zedekiah, king of Israel, 2 Kings 25:7.

4. The pattern of historical disaster begins with economic disaster and social degeneracy but it culminates with military disaster.
5. The only guarantee against divine judgment in historical disaster to the client nation is the resident and function of the believer inside the divine dynasphere.
6. Historical judgment is the manifestation of the fact that the essence and character of our Lord Jesus Christ cannot be compromised by evil or destroyed by cosmic involvement.
7. The trends of history never compromise the character of God.

One of the great principles in the Word of God is living your life in the light of eternity, and when you live your life in the light of eternity you have a wonderful time in time. When you live your life in the light of the moment then you are going to be totally and miserably disoriented to life, and the great tragedy occurs in eternity at the judgment seat of Christ when born again believers who cannot lose their salvation by anything they do after believing in Christ get the greatest shock of their living experience forever and ever — the shock of being in a resurrection body without anything to show for this life. Heaven is a perfect place and like all perfect places there is no equality. Equality is an invention of the genius of Satan in order to facilitate his rulership of the world. Equality is a myth, an impossibility. The idea of equality has never existed in the plan of God, but certain things are open to everyone — happiness, for example.

Our Lord Jesus Christ comes the second time at the beginning of the Millennium when He will take over the rulership of the world from Satan. He will rule for one thousand years under perfect environment. Those believers who advance from gate four to gate eight in the divine dynasphere are going to have special authority and rule with Him, and even have a decoration which they receive at the judgment seat of Christ seven years before the second advent, a decoration called the order of the morning star, one of the highest decorations for historical impact. So we have after salvation a purpose — Gate 1, the filling of the Spirit; gate two, basic impersonal love; gate three, enforced and genuine humility; gate four, perception and application of doctrine; gate five, love of God; gate six, right man, right woman; gate seven friendship, advanced impersonal love, gate eight, maturity which is the objective.

So the Lord Jesus Christ is the issue of history. The Lord Jesus Christ also controls history. In the control of history at the present time He controls through the laws of divine establishment, He controls through historical trends, and He controls through discipline, judgment and punishment of individuals and groups forming nations. There are two sources of judgment in history: wrong decisions — we are the products of our own decisions; the sovereign, honourable decisions of our Lord Jesus Christ. So we have noted the trend: As goes the believer, so goes the trends at any point in the Church Age. Residence and function inside the divine dynasphere means historical uptrend while involvement in the cosmic system means historical downtrend. So whether we survive or not as a nation depends on believers either living in the divine dynasphere or believers living in the cosmic system. The Lord Jesus Christ has chosen to control history through the Church in this dispensation. Nations rise because of an enlarged pivot of mature believers and nations fall because of a spin-off of apostate believers living in the cosmic system, but in this way the believer is the key to history until the Rapture. Historical trends are related to objective reality or life in the divine dynasphere versus subjective reality or life in the cosmic system.

Too often history is the narrative of man's weaknesses, not his strength. Inside the divine dynasphere the battle is the Lord's, and you win; inside the cosmic system the battle is yours, and you lose. There are no winners in the cosmic system, just different categories of losers. There are, of course, winners in the divine dynasphere and, again, there are different categories of winners. This is a part of the great conflict between the arrogance of the cosmic system and the humility of the divine dynasphere. There is no substitute for humility. Inside the divine dynasphere men's lives are changed by doctrine and, of course, inside the cosmic system men's lives are changed by arrogance and by evil. So knowledge of the truth is the basis for manufacturing freedom. Freedom is a manufactured product. When you make decisions for Bible doctrine you manufacture in your soul the concepts of freedom by which you live. You learn the principle of live and let live, you learn to respect the privacy of others, you learn to respect the property of others, you learn to control yourself in circumstances which are not to your liking.

Motivation of resurrection and eternity

When our Lord Jesus Christ ascended and was seated at the right hand of the Father He received His third royal patent, and therefore a history of the world had to be written regarding the use of that royal patent. First of all there had to be the calling out of a royal family, since there was no royal family to go with this patent. Therefore the sudden halt of the Age of Israel and the dispensation of the Church, a dispensation of historical trends — no prophecy, simply historical trends. The next prophecy is the Rapture or resurrection of the Church followed by the continuation of the Age of Israel called the Tribulation, and finally the second advent of our Lord Jesus Christ. This will be followed by 1000 years of perfect environment, the rule of our Lord upon the earth, He will remove Satan from the rulership of this world. Then comes of course the Gog revolution at the end of 1000 years — revolt against perfect environment — demonstrating the fact that environment is not the solution to man's problems. Then comes the end of the world, the last judgment, the destruction of the universe by nuclear fission. This will be provided by the Lord Himself, it is impossible for the universe or this earth to be destroyed until our Lord does it. Then we have the new heavens, new earth, the new Jerusalem, and the eternal state beginning. All of these things are a part of world history, starting in John's time and going down to the very end so that the book of Revelation is the history of the world during that period of time.

Our subject at the moment is historical trends. Historical trends are based upon the principle that we must as believers have a definite influence on history. It is an invisible unseen influence but nevertheless it is there. In fact the greatest influence on history is the believer in the Lord Jesus Christ. The principle of doctrine: As goes the believer, so goes the historical trends. All historical uptrends are related to the believer fulfilling the plan of God by residence and function inside the divine dynasphere with its eight gates, God's game-plan for the Church Age. When believers are involved in the divine dynasphere there is an uptrend but when believers become involved in Satan's cosmic system then we have a downtrend in history. All uptrends and downtrends in history are determined by believers living on planet earth and this is the story of Revelation chapters two and three. Seven churches in the Roman province of Asia sustained the Roman empire for over three hundred years.

1 Thess. 4:13 — “But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren.” This is a general statement as well as a specific dealing with this particular passage. Ignorance is the greatest disaster for the history of the world as well as the individual believer, for the believer's cognisance of doctrine is the basis for historical impact as well as historical uptrends; “concerning those who are asleep” — being asleep is one of the ways of describing Christian death as it relates to the body only. We note that the soul leaves the body in death and the soul of the believer is absent from the body and face to face with the Lord, enjoying an interim body where there is no more pain, no more death, the old things are passed away; “that you may not grieved like the rest” — the rest of the world being the world of unbelievers. Attitude toward Jesus Christ divides the human race into two parts: those who believe in Christ have eternal life, those who do not have eternal condemnation; “who have no hope” — there is no hope apart from the person of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Verse 14, “For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, therefore, and so, God will bring with him those who have fallen asleep in Jesus” — a reference to the resurrection of the Church, the Rapture, the next prophecy in history.

Verse 15, “for this doctrine in the word of the Lord we communicate to you, that we who are alive and remain until the coming of the Lord” — there will be one generation of believers who will be alive when the resurrection takes place; their mortal bodies will become immortal; “shall not precede those who have fallen asleep.”

Verse 16, “For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a command, with the voice of the archangel [the ruling angel of elect angels], also a command from the trumpet of God: in fact the dead in Christ shall rise first”. Notice that at the resurrection there are two commands. The voice command of the archangel is for the resurrection of living believers on the earth, mortal believers becoming immortal. They will be changed in a moment, they will receive a resurrection body. There is a trumpet command. Trumpet commands were used at the time of writing, it was one of the major means of controlling armies in the ancient world. The trumpet command is for the resurrection of the dead believers, corruption turned into incorruption.

Verse 17, “Then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, for the purpose of meeting the Lord in the air: and so we shall always be with the Lord” — that is, in our resurrection bodies.

Verse 18, “Therefore, comfort one another with these doctrines.”

There is a time coming when we are going to face the Lord in a resurrection body. All physical death at the present time simply means to be absent from the body and face to face with the Lord in an interim body, and this is an interim of great blessing until the resurrection takes place. Then the trumpet command brings into the air those who are dead in Christ. The voice command brings those who are living into the air and all receive a resurrection body. The next event on the calendar is called the big genuflect in the sky, described in Philippians 2:9-11. Then comes the judgment seat of Christ described in 2 Corinthians 5:10. This is not judgment for gain or loss of salvation, this is evaluation for what you did between the time that you believed in Christ on earth until the day you departed, either by physical death or by the Rapture, whichever occurs first. You will be evaluated simply because during this period, however long it is, you are under the support of logistical grace — everything necessary for you to fulfil the plan of God — and you are going to be evaluated in that future time on the basis of what you did in time. After salvation your attitude toward Bible doctrine determines whether you are going to be rewarded or not in eternity. You have free will; we are the products of our own decisions; you can make decisions for or against the plan of God as a believer. You cannot lose your salvation but you certainly can lose blessing in time as well as great blessing in eternity. Positive volition toward Bible doctrine and the execution of the plan of God means not only blessing in dying but also great reward in eternity. But for the believer who is negative toward doctrine there is first of all divine discipline as well as personal self-induced misery — again we are the products of our own decisions — and in eternity he will have a resurrection body minus the old sin nature and all human good, and that is all! There is no equality in heaven and in eternity there is going to be great differences between believers.

Bible doctrine is the key to growth versus failure. Whether you are a winner or a loser in the Christian life, whether you have historical impact or whether you contribute to the downtrend of history is determined by your attitude toward Bible doctrine. Some believers waste their entire life. Apart from perception of Bible doctrine you are going to be a loser. There are many categories of losers but a loser you will be, living in the cosmic system, being miserable all of your life. And some are going to be winners, and winners are those who take in doctrine on a daily basis and through the momentum of perception of doctrine advance to maturity — those who construct the edification complex of the soul. So there will be great differences in heaven just as there are great differences on earth. The inequalities of life are going to be reflected by inequalities in heaven, the only difference being that inequalities in life are often based on something that is unfair. But in heaven everything is perfectly fair. You had your opportunity in time to take in doctrine, and the fact that you failed and made erroneous decisions only emphasises the doctrine: good decisions open options for greater decisions, bad decisions destroy those options until no options are left, only the sin unto death. Good options are related to your decisions to live and function inside the divine dynasphere, bad options are related to your decisions to live inside the cosmic system.

Then comes the next item on our chronology, the second advent of Christ. When the second advent occurs we as believers in resurrection bodies return with Him. So this is the profile of the resurrection body. You receive it first at the Rapture of the Church. Then you take your resurrection body into the air for the big genuflect. The first thing you will do in your resurrection body is what you are really or allegedly doing now, worshipping the Lord. That will be the first time you worship Him in a resurrection body. Then there will be the evaluation. During the Tribulation on earth you will have a turn at the judgment seat of Christ. You will receive your royal family efficiency rating. You will either flunk or you will pass with good grades or high grades or the highest. And it all depends on the decisions you make while in this body of corruption. After the Tribulation is over Jesus Christ returns to the earth. His feet shall stand in that day on the Mount of Olives. Coming with Him will be the royal family of God. We will be in resurrection body even as our Lord's humanity will be in a resurrection body, 1 Thessalonians 3:13, "... at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his royal family [saints]." And then we have something that we have never had before. We are manifest as the key to history during the dispensation of the Church. All believers who were winners, who advanced to maturity, who used the time on earth to glorify the Lord — perception and application of Bible doctrine — are going to be presented to the world. In other words, we are unknown in time. As we move through this life with a positive volition toward doctrine we are not in anyone's history book, we are not even news, we are not even regarded in any way. And that is as it should be. You see, history depends upon our attitude toward Bible doctrine, therefore no publicity is necessary and no publicity is desired. We are here for a purpose, we are involved in a great unseen, invisible war and the trends of history depend upon our attitude toward Bible doctrine. So we live relatively unknown; we die anonymously, but the Lord knows all about us. Therefore we become known at the judgment seat of Christ to the rest of the royal family. The plan of God is going to be a great revelation at the judgment seat of Christ, and there you become known, you are presented to the royal family of God as one of the great ones. You receive your decorations and your awards. You are relatively anonymous and you will only become known as a winner, first to the Church at the judgment seat of Christ at the resurrection, and secondly, to the entire world at the second advent of Christ. Then you will be on the permanent page of history, if you are a winner, if you reside and function inside of the divine dynasphere, Colossians 3:4, "On the occasion when Christ our life ["our life" indicates the attitude of the mature believer] shall become manifest [the second advent] you also [the mature believer rewarded at the judgment seat of Christ] shall become manifest with him in glory."

When our Lord returns one of the first functions is operation footstool. After AD 70 of the Church Age we begin what is called, in Luke 21, the times of the Gentiles. From BC 1440 all of the way down to AD 70 the Jews were the client nation to God. When the Jews went out under the fifth cycle of discipline in AD 70 there could only then be Gentile client nations in this dispensation. So the history of the Church Age is the history of Gentile client nations beginning with the Roman empire and going right up to the client nation of the present time. For some 2000 years only a Gentile nation could be a client nation to God, and so it will be until the second advent of Jesus Christ. When that occurs there will be a special operation in which we participate. During the Tribulation there will be no Jewish client nation but 144,000 Jews will function in place of a client nation, Revelation 7 and 14. When the second advent then occurs operation footstool is one of the first items on the agenda. It is first mentioned as a prophecy in Psalm 110:1. This is a prophecy so important that it is quoted numerous times in the New Testament, Matthew 24:22; Mark 12:36; Luke 20:43; Acts 2:35; Hebrews 1:13; 10:13, among others. Operation footstool begins at the second advent and includes the coup de tat in which Satan loses the rulership of this world to Christ. Both Satan and all fallen angels are incarcerated for a period of 1000 years. Those of us who are winners are involved in operation footstool.

Operation footstool is described as a triumphal procession which was quite well-known at the time of writing. During the period of the Roman empire one of the greatest things that could happen was for a general to receive a triumphal procession, it was considered the ultimate in life. It was very simple. First of all the victorious general would have in the procession his army, those who were guarding the prisoners. The prisoners and the things captured would go first through the streets and they would be followed by a royal golden chariot. In that chariot, with a crown held over his head by a slave, would be the triumphant general. The slave would repeat to the general, sic transit gloria munde, sic transit gloria munde, sic transit gloria munde, a reminder not to lose his cool, not to get arrogant, and it means simply from the Latin, "For the glory of the world passes away". This was the ultimate in glory in the Roman world. Then following would be the army, and when the triumphal procession would finally come to its termination, at that point all of the captives would be seized and thrown into prison. Some would be executed, some would be disposed of in other ways. So the triumphal procession is the way in which operation footstool is described in its fulfilment. It follows the same format and procedure as that Roman triumphal procession. The prisoners in this case: Satan as the ruler, and the demons, are marched in front of the triumphant General who is our Lord Jesus Christ. Then comes the triumphant consul or tribune or leader with the crown. That, of course, is our Lord Jesus Christ at the second advent. Then follows the army. In this case it is the royal family of God, the Church Age believers, many of whom have been decorated, have received rewards. When the process ends the captives are then cast into prison, and the army does this. It is the privilege and the honour of believers who are winners in this life to incarcerate the demons who are removed from the earth so that perfect environment can exist for 1000 years during our Lord's Millennial reign.

In the triumphal process of the second advent then the demons are disarmed and publicly displayed in the triumphal procession. This is the subject of Colossians chapter 2, especially verse 15 which says: "And having disarmed demon archons and commissioned officers, he [Christ at the second advent] made a public display of them [triumphal procession], having celebrated a triumphal procession over them [i.e.. demons and fallen angels] by means of it [the strategy of the cross]."

At the end of the triumphal procession we have a description of what happens in 1 Corinthians 15:23-25, "But each man in his own battalion," describing the resurrection. There are two battalions in this review in resurrection. There is the first and second resurrection. The first resurrection has to do with eternal life; the second resurrection has to do with eternal condemnation. At the end of the Church Age is the resurrection of the Church; at the end of the Tribulation Old Testament believers and Tribulation martyrs are resurrected; at the end of the Millennium there are all of the Millennial believers who will receive a resurrection body. This is all the first resurrection; this is the first battalion. The second battalion is the unbeliever resurrected at the end of the Millennium, judged, and cast into the lake of fire forever.

Verse 23, "Each man in his own battalion: Christ the firstfruits [our Lord Jesus Christ in His resurrection]; after that those who are Christ's at his coming" — this is the second part of the first battalion, all of those in the Church Age who are believers in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Verse 24, "Then comes the end [end of the Tribulation, the second advent of Christ] when he delivers up the kingdom to God, even the Father" — our Lord Jesus Christ takes the rulership of the world away from Satan in the coup de tat, gives it to the Father who in turn gives it back to the Son as the last Adam of Hebrews chapter one, verse two — "when Christ has abolished all rule [the rule of Satan] and all authority [the dictators of the Tribulation, the two beasts of Revelation 13] and the power [the removal of demons]," as per Zechariah 13:2 and Colossians 2:15.

Verse 25, "For he must reign [for 1000 years] till he has put all enemies under his feet." So we have a special passage which deals with the incarceration of Satan. This is found in Revelation chapter 20, verses 1-3. We also have the wedding feast of the Lord. Remember the parable of the wise and foolish virgins. It deals with believers and unbelievers in the Tribulation. But in the wedding supper of the Lord when all of these things are brought together at the second advent it is found, however, in Revelation chapter 19 verse six and following, the Church as the bride is prepared for this wedding supper by resurrection, by the judgment seat of Christ after the resurrection. The doctrine of ultimate sanctification is the believer in the resurrection body. The tremendous rewards that some will receive are the result of what they did during their life on this earth as believers — perception and application of Bible doctrine, residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. The coronation of Christ as the groom precedes the wedding supper of the Lord, and this coronation is recorded in Revelation 19:6 where it says: "And I heard as it were a sound of a great crowd of people” — these are the Church Age believers, this is a prediction about you if you are a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ — “and I heard the sound of many waters” — these are the Old Testament believers who have just received their resurrection bodies, as per John 3:29, the friends of the groom; “and the sound of many thunderings” — these are the Tribulational believers at the second advent who will be the initial population for the Millennium, as per Matthew 25:1-13. All three are gathered together for a purpose, for the coronation of our Lord Jesus Christ; “saying, Hallelujah: because the Lord God [Jesus Christ], the total ruler has been crowned.”

Then comes the wedding supper in Revelation 19:7-9. “Let us have extreme happiness” — happiness is something that resides in the soul, it is a capacity which begins in the soul and relates to things in life, good or bad, adverse or wonderful; “and celebrate, and let us give glory to him [our Lord Jesus Christ]: because the marriage of the Lamb and his bride is come” — the preparation of the bride again is the resurrection.

Verse 8, “And it was given to her that she should be attired in fine linen” — imputed righteousness parlayed into great blessing at the judgment seat of Christ. It is said to be bright, related to perfection in the divine dynasphere, unsoiled, total freedom from contamination of the cosmic system; “for the fine linen is the ultimate righteousness of the saints.” All of this is a resurrection scene in the future.

Verse 9, “And he communicates to me, Write, Happiness belongs to the ones who have been invited to the marriage supper of the Lamb.” There are invitations issued to three categories: believers of this dispensation, the royal family of God; friends of the groom, the Old Testament believers and Tribulational martyrs who receive their resurrection bodies at the second advent; then there are the friends of the bride, and that is the Tribulational believers who survive the terrible things of Revelation chapters 6-18 and who will be the initial population in the Millennium, “Furthermore he communicates to me, These are true doctrines from the source of God.”

This brings us into the field of motivation, for you are going to spend a very short time on this earth. Life is just a drop in the bucket compared to eternity and there is no way to make a comparison between the few years of this life and eternity. It is eternity that counts, that which is invisible to us now and for many not very real at all. The winner is the one who will be great in eternity. The winner is the mature believer of the Church Age who will rule with Christ after this wedding feast. The winner will be identified by the awards and decoration received at the judgment seat of Christ, and all of these awards are related attitude toward Bible doctrine. He has access to the gazebo in the garden of Revelation 2:7. He will receive the crown of life, the highest decoration for living in the divine dynasphere. He will receive that decoration which has to do with his passing all momentum tests from gate four to gate eight. He will be awarded these things at the judgment seat of Christ after the resurrection. He will have authority then to rule during that period of perfect environment. This authority is mentioned in Revelation 2:26, “Furthermore the winner, even he who keeps my assignments to the end,” keeping our Lord’s assignments has to do with perception of Bible doctrine, “to him I will give authority over the nations,” this refers to the Millennial reign of our Lord. For example, in Revelation 20:4, “I saw thrones and they that sat on them,” Who is going to sit on these thrones? Every mature believer of the Church Age, “and judgment was given to them,” Revelation 5:10; “and you have made them a kingdom of priests to our God and they will rule on earth.” That is future, and it has to do with the future rule of the mature believers. Romans 5:17, “Much more then, they shall rule through that one, Jesus Christ”; 2 Timothy 2:12, “If we endure [that has to do with residence and function inside the divine dynasphere] we shall also rule.” This function is restricted to the order of chivalry in the Church Age, those who are knighted with a new name and a new title. It begins with the hidden manna, maximum doctrine resident in the soul; it goes to the resurrection body, the white pebble, the vote of God for your eternal life; and it ends up with a new name, the knighthood title you will receive at the judgment seat of Christ.

Now all of this has a point, this review of the various chronological things related to your resurrection body, and the point is a very simple one. All historical blessing and prosperity in the Church Age results from unknown and unnamed believers living inside the divine dynasphere, advancing to maturity, forming the pivot for blessing by association to the client nation of God. The mature believers who provide the basis for blessing and prosperity are not named in history. They are not found in the textbooks of world history, they are anonymous and unknown. They are unsung heroes.

These mature believers, then, who provide the basis for all of our blessing and prosperity in time are the only solution to the problems we face at the present time, economic depression, social degeneration, and military disaster just around the corner. While these believers are unknown today they will be well-known at the judgment seat of Christ to the Church, and even better known to the entire world at the second advent of Christ. At the resurrection of the Church, called the Rapture of the Church, they will have the white pebble, the resurrection body. All believers, including the losers will have the white pebble, the resurrection body, but the winners will be knighted with a new name, a new title. The most important factor in history at this time is the unknown factor — the spiritual dynamics that come from believers who reside and function in that divine dynasphere. But in the future the winning believer, the believer who advances to maturity, will become well-known. At the Rapture, again, in his resurrection body he will receive great decorations, the knighthood, the crown of life, and he will be presented to the entire world to reign with Christ during the Millennium. He will become well-known, then, to the entire world at a future time.

Therefore the challenge is presented to you: Will you live your life, as a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ, in the light of eternity to the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ?

John 11:25,26 puts it this way: “Jesus said, I am the resurrection and the life: he who believes in me shall live even if he dies: and everyone who lives and believes in me shall never die. Do you believe this?”

Thyatira was famous as the centre of labour unionism in the Roman empire. The first Gentile client nation to God found itself faced with a very serious union problem. Thyatira was the most completely unionised city in the Roman world, therefore it was impossible for many of its believers to ever advance to maturity because they were more under the influence of loyalty to unionism than to what the Word of God had to say. Therefore we are not going to find it the same as Ephesus or Smyrna or even Pergamum. The unions were the ones who sponsored the phallic cult and various idolatrous religious activities, and the unions took a stand at that time which basically has never changed: they were anti-Christian; they were anti-doctrine. It is very rare for a born-again member of a union to ever become a mature believer because of a conflict of interests between the union and Bible doctrine, for unionism is a form of power grabbing where power is not authorised under the laws of divine establishment. In this context Thyatira is threatened with divine punishment through economic disaster, for where the unions rule economic disaster is inevitable.

Too often today the unions have become a sacred cow. To even say anything unkind about the unions is considered to be political suicide, and that means that the unions have a power which has become evil. This doesn't mean that people don't have a right to decent wages but when people working for unions are making more than college professors and professional people something is terribly wrong.

Verse 19, we begin with the perfect o)ida, used as a present active indicative. O)ida is a verb of cognisance used here for divine knowledge [omniscience] regarding the status quo of the church at Thyatira. We will translate this, "I have known." The present of duration or retroactive progressive present denotes what has begun in the past through omniscience, feeding the computer of divine decrees, and continues into the present with a printout of history. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action; the indicative mood is declarative for a statement of an absolute and dogmatic fact known to our Lord in eternity past.

With this verb we have the accusative plural, direct object from the noun e)rgon, which can be translated works, deeds, production, or accomplishments. It refers to whatever the individual believer does, moment by moment, during his life in this earth. With this we have the possessive genitive singular from the personal pronoun su, referring in this context to every believer in Thyatira in the year AD 96, but also referring to every believer in the history of the Church Age. There is nothing unknown to the Lord, "I have known your accomplishments."

We have following a double use of the conjunction kai, and when it is doubled in a phrase it generally is translated "both and." But here, of course, we have the explanatory use of the conjunction kai explaining the meaning of the accusative direct object, and therefore it is translated correctly, "namely." Plus the following appositional accusatives are given, one is not found in the original. We first of all have the accusative of a)gaph. A)gaph has to do with virtue, integrity, and all Christian production has to do with virtue and integrity; which takes us right back to the Christian way of life inside the divine dynasphere, invisible and visible. The invisible is the function of the royal priesthood, it is always directed toward God. The visible is the function of the royal ambassadorship, and it is always directed toward man. In this particular area we are talking about integrity. All Christian production is based upon virtue and integrity. All Christian production is meaningless unless it is based upon virtue and integrity. Take love, for example. Personal love is never a virtue unless it is directed toward God. The functional virtue is impersonal love which is directed toward all mankind. Personal love exists in the human race: category two, right man, right woman; category three, friendship. But they are only successful when they are based upon virtue, and the virtue of love directed toward mankind is impersonal love, the application of doctrine from gate four of the divine dynasphere toward mankind. So the first item of production is not some work, not something you do. All production in the Christian life is based on thought and the Christian way of life is what you think. Action merely results from good motivation.

The second area of Christian production follows. It is also an appositional accusative from the noun pistij. It refers to the three stages of the function of the faith-rest drill. Stage one: faith reaches out and claims a promise. The reason for that is because of inability to think. Fear and cowardice is lack of thinking; it is an emotion without any rationale. To overcome it faith reaches out and claims a promise. Stage two: The doctrinal rationales which are applied to the situation. The essence of God rationale applied to the situation, the plan of God rationale applied to the situation. Often it is simply the logistical grace rationale applied to the situation. Stage three: You reach doctrinal conclusions whereby you deal with the situation from the standpoint of the application of Bible doctrine. The faith-rest drill is absolutely necessary in passing the momentum tests between gate four and gate eight. To solve your own problems you have to have the doctrine and these two techniques.

Next we have a third appositional accusative. The words “and service” do not occur in the original, but we do have the appositional accusative of diakonia. It is of course related to the noun diakonoi which is transliterated “deacon” and translated “ministry.” This word also refers to an administrative service, to behind the scenes activity, the function of believers in a local church. Like members of an air crew or combat team it takes the dedication of many different believers to form the function that is mentioned here. We are going to translate it, “and the ministry.” In this dispensation every believer is a member of the royal family of God and this results in the universal ministry of the believer. There is no such thing as full-time Christian service inasmuch as every believer is in full-time Christian service as a royal priest and as a royal ambassador. Therefore every believer as a minister of God in full-time Christian service is in view. And without this background whatever production is accomplished it is meaningless, it is wood, hay, and stubble, unless it is based upon these three appositional accusatives.

We do have the fourth appositional accusative and that is the accusative of u(pomonh, which means ordinarily in the Greek, patience, endurance, fortitude, steadfastness, and persistence. It has a technical connotation here. The noun even connotes — going back to Classical Greek — courageous endurance, and here it refers to something very similar to that, the believer’s residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. We will translate it, “and your perseverance,” but it is technical for your life. You must live (persevere) in the power sphere provided by God, the divine dynasphere. All of us are weak in this life and the ruler of this world is Satan who in his genius has provided a power system that is far stronger, far greater than we are. And when we reject the divine dynasphere we move into Satan’s cosmic one or cosmic two. We become negative toward doctrine from cosmic one through preoccupation with self, that's grieving the Holy Spirit; in cosmic two we become antagonistic toward doctrine. The combination of the two makes us enemies of the cross, as per Philippians chapter two.

So here we have "perseverance." Note that with it we have the possessive genitive from the pronoun su, which occurs in this and in the next appositional phrase only. It is, "your perseverance." And then finally we have the appositional accusative to summarise the fact that all production in the Christian life is dependant upon these four. We have the appositional accusative once more of the noun e)rgon, and again it means works, production, deeds. We will translate it simply, "your works."

Translation of the verse up to this point: "I have known your accomplishments [Christian production], namely the love" — the function of virtue inside the divine dynasphere; "and the faith" — the modus operandi of the three stages of the faith-rest drill; "and the ministry," the function of your royal warrants (ambassador and priest); "both your perseverance," your decisions to live inside the divine dynasphere; "and your production" — the result of living in the divine dynasphere.

Then he adds one phrase, the nominative neuter plural subject from e)schatoj, which means last. As an adjective it must find a noun, e)rgon, "your last production." Then he adds the accusative neuter plural direct object, pleion, the comparative of poluj. It means greater. And since greater is in the accusative and last is in the nominative obviously we have the need of a verb here, "the last works are greater." Then we have the comparative, the ablative of comparison from prwtoj, "first." This is a reference to the momentum of believers who consistently live inside the divine dynasphere and are faithful in the perception and application of doctrine. Therefore this phrase refers to the believer passing the momentum tests.

Corrected translation: "I have known your accomplishments, namely the love, and the faith, both your perseverance and your works; the last works are greater than the first."

Several principles in closing out this verse: The secret to the Christian life is not your spiritual gift here, and it is not all of the things that God has provided — though these are true. But here we have an additional thing. The secret to the Christian life in this verse is one word: consistency. What this is saying in effect is that you cannot live the Christian life unless you are organised. That is what consistency means. The only way you can be organised is to be consistent in your thinking and in your action, to be self-disciplined in your thinking and in your action.

Consistency as far as the Christian way of life is concerned has three basic principles:

- a. Consistency in living inside the divine dynasphere, which in effect means consistency in the use of the rebound technique which is the only way to recover and re-enter the divine dynasphere and regain and retain the filling of the Holy Spirit.

b. Consistency in a scale of values — Bible doctrine first, in other words, and the decisions based on that system of priorities, having the right priorities, the right scale of values, and making your decisions on the basis of your right priorities.

c. The ability to keep plugging in spite of failure, distraction, disillusion and setback. Keep plugging, keep going; don't let anything get you off the track no matter how discouraging any set of circumstances happen to become. That is why we have the last phrase at the end of verse 19 — “the last works are greater than the first.” This also means something else: it refers to the fact of having consistency and therefore passing momentum tests.

There are eight categories of momentum testing

a. The old sin nature test. The old sin nature constantly seeks to gain control of the soul. Guarding the gate of the soul is your volition. All temptation comes from the old sin nature and it moves in the direction of that gate, your volition. To say No ends the matter. To fail the temptation though and do it, whether you know it is a sin or not, means that the old sin nature now controls your soul and you are now living inside of the cosmic system. The consistent use of rebound is the way to stay out of the cosmic system.

b. People testing — reaction to people, distraction from people. Love or hatred can both be a people test. All of the people tests can only be solved through the existence of a functional virtue called impersonal love.

c. Thought testing. This can only be resolved by the daily routine and habit of doctrinal perception.

d. System testing. At some time or another we are all victims of a bad system, a bad organisation, an evil organisation, and there are three solutions. There is the function of the faith-rest drill toward the problem in the bad system. Secondly the function of impersonal love directed toward personnel in the bad system. Thirdly, occupation with the person of Christ, or a social life with God to give you the ability, the virtue and the integrity to rise above your circumstances.

e. The attack of cosmic one. For example, mental attitude arrogance, negative volition arrogance, impulsive arrogance, institutional arrogance, blind arrogance, conspiracy arrogance, crusader arrogance. The answer is again rebound and maximum growth inside the divine dynasphere.

f. The direct attack of cosmic two. For example, negative volition, degeneracy, antiestablishment, the cosmic panaceas, religion, demonism, academic speculation, the old sin nature, evil. The answer is rebound and maximum growth inside the divine dynasphere.

g. Disaster testing — always personal to you. This demands the function of the faith-rest drill.

h. Prosperity testing. Usually individual prosperity results from achievement of spiritual maturity, the arrival at gate eight. To pass the test the believer must have capacity for happiness, capacity for blessing, capacity for prosperity, and capacity for love and virtue.

To avoid being depressed, which is always a great danger in all of these tests, the believer must have great capacity for thanksgiving, a great appreciation for things in life. He must also have enthusiasms in life. Prosperity testing can only be passed where these things exist. Prosperity testing is always a maturity test or a final test which leads to maturity.

Only by passing these eight momentum tests are the “last works greater than the first,” as per our passage. And note once again that discouragement and depression accompany all of these momentum tests. They always accompany to see if Bible doctrine is more important and more real than anything else in life and to make sure that the invisible God in heaven are more real than anything else in life — people, circumstances and, of course, more real than all the systems in Satan’s ace trump which is arrogance.

We now look at how the church at Thyatira failed, why they failed, how they failed, and how this has become a part of human history from AD 96 to the present.

Verse 20, We begin in the Greek with the use of the adversative conjunction α)λλα, which is a conjunction of contrast which sets up a contrast with the preceding verse. We now see what the Lord has against the church at Thyatira. It is correctly translated “but.” With it we have the present active indicative of ε)χω, the verb to have. “But I have” is the descriptive present tense for what is now going on. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb as eternal God and the prince ruler of the Church. The indicative mood is declarative for the fact that many believers in Thyatira are living inside the cosmic system. Then we have the prepositional phrase kata plus the genitive of the personal pronoun su, which is translated “against.”

What follows, then, is an indictment against those believers involved in the cosmic system. Involvement in the cosmic system results in a historical downtrend of a Gentile client nation called SPQR, the Roman empire. The phrase “a few things” is omitted simply because it is not found in the original. The translation is simply: “But I have this against you.”

Then we begin what He has, and we start out with the conjunction ο)τι which introduces the content of the indictment of the Thyatira church. It can be translated “that,” but it really means “namely that.” Then we have the verb, the present active indicative of the verb α)φιημι, which means to tolerate here. We have seen toleration which is a virtue but there is also a toleration which has no virtue at all, it is simply a sign of cosmic living. Remember that in the cosmic system there is a great deal of toleration of all Satanic ideas and concepts and that is exactly what we have here. There is a right toleration; there is a wrong toleration. Right toleration is related to the doctrine of impersonal love but here we have toleration of that which is false and that which is evil. The active voice: believers living in the cosmic system produce the action of the verb.

Remember there are four mandates of the Christian way of life related to God the Holy Spirit. For example, the mandate in Ephesians chapter five verse eighteen — gate one of the divine dynasphere. Then the command of Galatians 5:16, “Walk by means of the Spirit,” function at the eight gates in the divine dynasphere, which is God’s game-plan for the Church Age believer. There is also a negative command dealing with cosmic one, the interlocking systems of arrogance: “Grieve not the Spirit.” And there is another negative mandate dealing with cosmic two: “Quench not the Holy Spirit. These two cosmic systems together form Satan’s system of controlling believers, as well as Satan’s genius in the administration of the rulership of this world. The cosmic believer is grieving the Holy Spirit and he is quenching the Holy Spirit, and therefore he is completely out of God’s will and out of phase with God’s plan.

The word we have next is gunh, translated “woman.” If there is anything that is really dangerous it is a smart woman, and a smart woman who has great beauty can be a “bomb” can be very dangerous or very magnificent. There is no in between! Now here is a beautiful woman with brains and ambition — the accusative singular direct object from the definite article thn, and then in the accusative gunh. We have it correctly translated “namely, you tolerate that woman.” Then we have an appositional nominative case from the indeclinable proper noun I)ezabel, our English word Isabel. There is also an articular present active participle from legw, and that plus h(a)utou means to call one’s self something. So it is translated, “who calls herself Jezebel.”

Translation so far: “But I have this fact against you, namely that you tolerate that woman Jezebel who calls herself.”

The very word Jezebel means beauty and brains, otherwise she would not have been so designated by the writer under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. This isn’t Jezebel coming back to life from the Old Testament, this is a beautiful smart woman. But we add something: she was an arrogant ambitious woman. There is nothing wrong with being beautiful and there is nothing wrong with being smart but it is the word “prophetess” where we begin to find something very much amiss; profhthj, “who calls herself a prophetess.” We have here a double accusative of direct and predicate object, h(a)utou is the direct object, the reflexive pronoun translated “herself,” and then the predicate object is profhthj, prophetess. In order to advance her own aims in order to gain attention, in order to fulfill inordinate ambition, she gave herself a title to which she was not entitled. There were no female prophets in the Church at this time. The male prophets had died out and no prophetesses existed. She was alleging to have a gift from God that did not exist, which brings her into focus as a very arrogant and ambitious woman.

Principle

1. Jezebel is not really her name. It is a pseudonym but everyone knows who it is. Jezebel merely describes what the woman was like — beautiful, smart, ambitious. So it is a reference to a very smart and beautiful woman living in the city of Thyatira as the head of a phallic cult. She was also using religion to make a name for herself.
2. She had succeeded in luring believers away from doctrine into the phallic cult in a manner similar to the historical Jezebel who invaded Israel. One of the greatest invasions that Israel ever faced was not the Assyrian army, but one woman, Jezebel.
3. The Word of God strongly opposes female leadership in spiritual things — Revelation 17:1-6.
4. The pattern for this Bible objection goes back to the Garden of Eden and the historical trend related to the principle of the weak controlling the strong. The Bible calls the woman the weaker vessel, not because she lacks courage or character but simply because she is dependant on the man.
5. The woman sinned first and at that moment became weak, while Adam had not yet sinned and therefore is classified as strong. So in the Garden when Adam looked on the first sinner she was weak and he was still in a state of perfection or innocence, he was strong.
6. From the very beginning of man's failure on planet earth he was the victim of the weak manipulating and controlling the strong.
7. Adam took the forbidden fruit from the hand of the woman, not from the tree. Jezebel, the weak, ambitious, beautiful, smart, arrogant woman controlled one of the greatest soldiers of her day. Ahab was a great military man who even frightened the Assyrians he was so great.
8. Jezebel in Thyatira is controlling believers, luring them from the blessing of the divine dynasphere into the cursing of the cosmic system. Many of these believers were like Ahab, they were strong in their field but were led astray very easily.

Translation so far: "But I have this fact against you, namely that you tolerate that woman Jezebel who calls herself a prophetess." To understand this phrase we must begin with the historical trend of how the weak control the strong.

1. There are two categories of weak people: the evil weak and the good weak. A lot of weak people are obviously evil, but just as weak are self-righteous good people.
2. The good weak are not involved in this study. The divine dynasphere was provided by God for the protection of the good weak.

3. Therefore in this study we will deal with the evil weak. From now they will simply be called the weak in our study.

4. Weak, insecure, irresponsible, thoughtless, selfish, arrogant people — the evil weak — control policy, procedure and people as a historical trend. They control them in social life, business life, government life, professional life, cultural life, spiritual life, sexual life, etc.

5. One of the signs of a declining society is the sign of the weak in society dominating the strong, and the weak in society controlling people through arrogant self-righteousness, violence, liberalism, or whatever is the going, acceptable thing in current Satanic trends.

6. The scum, the criminal element, the liberals, the hippies, the irresponsible, control the strong as an historical trend toward cosmic involvement and inevitable degeneracy.

7. This why a nagging wife who pouts, makes scenes in public, can dominate, control and manipulate what is often an honourable husband, a person who is kind, considerate and thoughtful. And this is how a power-mad fourth estate plus an irresponsible press without integrity can dominate the thinking of a nation and often destroy an truly great leader.

So under the principle of the weak controlling the strong human rights advocates destroy human freedom. Terrorism and crime are the tools by which the weak control the strong. When crime is out of control and terrorism is the order of the day then in society the weak control the strong. When liberalism is out of control teenage kids dominate and control their parents.

The solution to the historical trend called the weak controlling the strong

1. The Garden of Eden was to Adam, when he looked at the first sinner and was tempted, as the divine dynasphere is to the believer when faced with temptation and manipulation by the weak — such as Jezebel. (Jezebel is the pattern of the weak controlling the strong)

2. Inside the divine dynasphere the battle is the Lord's and you win, you make a right decision; inside the cosmic system the battle is yours, and you lose, you make a wrong decision.

3. There are no winners in the cosmic system, there are just different categories of losers. Among the categories of losers are the group who follow the principle of being strong but controlled by the weak.

4. There are no losers in the divine dynasphere, just categories of winners.

5. Obviously some, in fact many believers, have rejected the lure of the weak controlled by the strong.

6. Starting with Adam's wrong decision there would be no human history without wrong decisions. This is a part of the great conflict. Man must choose between arrogance and humility as an extension of the angelic conflict.

7. If you think you are strong you really become weak and you become entangled with the system stronger than you are — the cosmic system of Satan whereby he administers the rulership of this world.

8. If you know that you are weak you become strong in choosing the divine dynasphere. Once Adam ate of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil history became a matter of self-determination, and human volition exercises the options of life, the divine dynasphere versus the cosmic system.

Once you choose a power system in which to reside as a believer your decision merges into a power greater than you are so that your decisions take on the character of your choice. You either as a result of choosing the cosmic system take on the character of the cosmic system or you take on the character of the divine dynasphere, if you so choose. Therefore good decisions are made for the divine dynasphere and Bible doctrine while bad decisions are made for the cosmic system where the weak control the strong. Good decisions are made inside the divine dynasphere where the strong become stronger and options are created for more and greater decisions leading to the glorification of the Lord Jesus Christ and fantastic human happiness. But bad decisions are made inside the cosmic system where the weak control the strong, and both freedom and the options are destroyed so that the believer becomes the servant of Satan under the title of everything that runs the gamut from carnality to reversionism.

To understand the phrase, "that woman Jezebel who calls herself a prophetess," we need now to examine the Jezebel profile. We have simply stated that the solution to the weak controlling the strong is residence and function inside the divine dynasphere but now we need to amplify this Jezebel of Thyatira. She is not a reincarnation of Jezebel of the days of king Ahab but she follows the same pattern.

The author of the book of Kings makes no bones about the fact that Jezebel was an implacable dictator, a very clever intriguer, a shameless trollop, besides which she was a high-class whore. She was the high priestess of the phallic cult called Ashtaroth. Jezebel came from the palace of Hiram, king of Tyre, who had done so much business with Solomon when he was king of Israel. Her father, Ethball, had been a priest of Ashtaroth before he took over the throne in a palace revolution. His neighbours, the Jews, were still his best customers. In the northern kingdom there was a strong warrior king by the name of Omri. He ruled from 882-871 BC and he built a new strong fortification which became the capital of the northern kingdom and was called Samaria. He was involved in a weak controlling the strong situation which began with king Omri who like his son was one of the great generals of his day. He was led astray by a weak king, Ethbaal of Tyre. It was Ethbaal of Tyre who saw that the Jews were going to be the great warrior nation in the Middle East in the ninth century BC. King Omri was a very strong man and a great soldier but he was led astray by a very weak person, Ethbaal, king of Tyre at whose suggestion there was the marriage between his son, Ahab, and Omri's daughter Jezebel. And it was inevitable that just as Ethbaal controlled Omri so Jezebel controlled Ahab.

Like his father, Ahab was a great soldier and he would have been a great king except for the fact that he was a victim of a very evil weak person controlling the strong. In her marriage to king Ahab Jezebel changed her nationality but she didn't change her religion, the phallic cult. By controlling Ahab she brought great apostasy into Israel, the greatest invasion of the cosmic system into Israel in all of its history. This is why God raised up first Elijah and later on Elisha. But it was about 871 BC when Jezebel married king Ahab, 1 Kings 16:31ff, and thus established an alliance between two of the most vigorous people of that century, the Phoenicians and the Jews. And under the principle of the weak controlling the strong Jezebel was permitted to bring her priesthood into Israel. So she brought the phallic cult into Israel She sponsored 450 prophets of Baal and 400 prophets of Ashteroth. With her foot in the door she also arranged the assassination of the Lord's prophets — 1 Kings 18:13; 2 Kings 9:7. The evil of weak people is seen in Jezebel's murder of Naboth. This resulted in Elijah's prophecy as to how she would die, the dogs would eat her bones — 1 Kings 21:19-29.

After the Elijah revival on Mount Carmel she neutralised the revival by threatening to kill Elijah and scared him off. In this case the weak Jezebel controlled the strong Elijah, just as the weak Jezebel controlled the strong Ahab. In Israel during the time of Jezebel there were only 7000 believers who continued faithful to the Lord, just as in Thyatira at the time that John wrote this passage there were few believers inside the divine dynasphere. Jezebel survived Ahab by some fourteen years. She was a beautiful woman with brains and she was evil; she was the weak controlling the strong; she neutralised everything related to doctrine. When Jehoram, her son, was killed by Jehu Jezebel attempted to seduce Jehu. She failed and Jehu ordered her thrown from the balcony and when her body hit the courtyard the prophecy of Elijah was fulfilled — "the dogs shall eat the flesh of Jezebel and the carcass of Jezebel shall be as dung on the face of the field." What the dogs didn't eat they tossed out into a field and as such the weak always end up.

The Jezebel of Thyatira was a beautiful woman, obviously, like the Jezebel of the ninth century BC in Israel. She was also a very smart one and also made an allegation that gave her great credibility with the dumb people in the church. She went around saying she was spiritual and when this happens there are inevitably those who will believe it. We have studied before how the Roman empire was a nation of cities, an urban empire. The country people always followed the religions of Greece and Rome, the ancient religions, and all of the ancient religions had two or three things that we should bare in mind. They had human sacrifice, all the sex they wanted and more, and they had ecstasies like the holy-rollers. They put the whole package together, and when you have sex and the tongues movement, and include a human sacrifice, it seems to cause a great evangelistic push! Just as the original Jezebel used sex in the phallic cult under the principle of the weak controlling the strong, so the Jezebel of Thyatira did exactly the same thing — they evangelised with free sex. Because she was a priestess of the phallic cult and totally involved in the cosmic system Jezebel was an evil, weak woman. This made her a great attraction for the strong. Jezebel was a great manipulator of the strong so that what Jezebel wants, Jezebel gets, whether it is Naboth's vineyard in the ancient world at the time of Elijah or control of the people in Thyatira. She did it all by combination of sex, religion, ecstasies.

This brings us back to the Greek text. What is she doing? Well, we have the combination of two conjunctions, kai, kai, the double conjunction translated "both and." So with the first word kai we will translate "she both," and then we have the present active indicative of didaskw, "she both teaches." In other words, no woman or man can start a religion without some form of doctrine involved, false doctrine in this case because it was a religion. Religion and Christianity are not the same. In religion man seeks to gain the approbation of God by his works; in Christianity God seeks man through the work of the cross. "She both teaches," the present progressive tense for an action in the state of persistence, therefore present linear aktionsart. The active voice: Jezebel of Thyatira produces the action of the verb. Then we have kai again in the present active indicative of planaw, which means to deceive or seduce or to lead astray.

When you use teaching you use it for one of two reasons, to clarify the issues of an organisation and give policy to an organisation, or you use teaching in order to deceive people. Jezebel's organisation was religious, therefore it had to have justification, for sin, evil, self-indulgence, arrogance, jealousy, hatred, bitterness, implacability. These things had to be justified in a religious system, just as Islam today does the same thing. The Mohammedans are a religion who justify their violence. The reason behind all of this is very simple: you have to have a doctrine, a system to justify violence. One of the interesting things about terrorism at the present time is that many of the terrorists are anarchy groups who have no rhyme or reason to what they are doing. Others have an organised system of doctrine and they are the ones that seem to do the best as far as representing communism or whatever their personal interest is.

So we have: "she both teaches and seduces [leads astray, causes to wander]." That is exactly the function of a religion. It is to use some form of teaching and doctrine to lead astray. The perfective present tense refers to a fact of cosmic involvement in the past but is emphasised as a present reality. With this we have the accusative plural direct object composed of two words, the accusative plural from the possessive adjective e)moj, and is correctly translated "my," and with that the accusative plural from the noun douloj, which means slave. So "she both teaches and seduces [leads astray, causes to wander] my servants" — the Lord's servants, believers. This is a clear-cut illustration of the weak controlling the strong. The believers in the Lord Jesus Christ by comparison strong, but they are controlled by the weak. So here is the weak controlling the strong because the strong refuse to live within the sphere of their strength.

We are not strong in ourselves, we are strong by virtue of the fact that we have believed in the Lord Jesus Christ. Our strength comes from being born again. Our strength comes after salvation from living inside the divine dynasphere. We are not strong in ourselves, we are strong because of our relationship with the Lord Jesus Christ. After salvation that relationship must be in terms of the mandates of the Christian life, residence and function in the divine dynasphere. Our strength is potential depending upon our residence in the divine dynasphere. No one is free from the power systems which exist during the Church Age for this dispensation is the age of the power systems — the divine dynasphere versus the cosmic system. The options for the believer are very simple: either choose God's plan and God's power related to the divine dynasphere or choose Satan's plan related to the cosmic system. When we get out of the divine dynasphere we are led out by the weak controlling the strong.

Normal weakness must be distinguished, of course, from evil weakness. Normal weakness implies the fact of the problems of life and our inability to solve those problems. Evil weakness is association with the cosmic system, and evil weakness is what we have in view in this verse. Evil weakness seeks to solve the problems of life by ignoring the problems, rejecting the problems, or using cosmic solutions such as being involved in the religion in Thyatira.

Hence the historical trends. We are the products of our own decisions related to either God's power system or Satan's power system. We are the products of our own decisions for volition creates environment, not environment volition. Note that all forms of apostasy is preceded by some form of inculcation which precedes the actual function of apostasy or reversionism. There is cosmic propaganda and there is cosmic philosophy. The believer does not have to listen to false teaching or inculcation but he will do so every time if he has neglected Bible doctrine and wandered away from the power system of the divine dynasphere.

In the human history phase of the angelic conflict man must be free to fail and he must be free to succeed, and therefore the source of either failure or success is the same, the function of your own free will, the function of human volition under the principle of freedom and self determination. Freedom is useless without a sense of responsibility to ensure correct function of that freedom without distortion. And freedom carries the responsibility of making decisions on the basis of integrity and the laws of divine establishment, not on the basis of motivating evil of arrogance — gate 1, cosmic 1. Man must be so inculcated with truth and doctrine that he will take the responsibility for his own decisions in life, plus the consequences of his own decisions. Consequently, recognition and evaluation of our own personal weaknesses is neither degrading nor demeaning, but the means of recognising the principle of doctrine that God has an answer for every weakness in the human life. He alone can convert weakness into strength.

There must be a search for power to overcome weakness rather than a search for weakness by which strength is overcome, and the believers in Thyatira were failing because they were searching for weakness by which strength was overcome — as per Jezebel and the popularity of the phallic cult at that time. And by taking the responsibility for his own failure and his own bad decisions the individual believer learns his own inherent and acquired weaknesses and seeks the solution by rebound and re-entry into the divine dynasphere, God's power system. It is a system that is greater than all of our weaknesses for the divine dynasphere is greater than all believers.

We have noted that all apostasy is preceded by some form of teaching, some form of inculcation, which precedes the actual function of apostasy or reversionism. Remember that cosmic involvement doesn't mean that you are instantly ready to be a good servant of Satan. Satan must train you, and therefore the whole system of cosmic two is going to Satan's school, and when believers serve Satan it is the greatest disaster of all. They are sincere, they are motivated into thinking they are doing something for God, and in reality they are serving the ruler of this world, his majesty the devil. The negative volition of cosmic two is entirely different from the negative volition of cosmic one. In cosmic one negative volition is related to preoccupation with self, to being so interested in entertaining yourself that doctrine ceases to be important, whereas in cosmic two you have an active antagonism toward Bible doctrine. The difference is inculcation, false teaching, and the degeneracy, the antiestablishment, the cosmic panaceas, becoming involved in some religious concepts [religion and Christianity are antithetical], the academic speculation which is often tied into cosmic one [pseudo intellectual arrogance]. All of these things add up to the effectiveness of going to school in the cosmic system, the effectiveness of inculcation of human viewpoint. We see human viewpoint on every hand, we use human viewpoint to justify decisions and activities in which we are involved today. The only defence against this is to learn for yourself Bible doctrine so that you can discern for yourself.

Before we get through with this passage we are going to see how Christian friends are one of the major systems of evangelism for Satan's cosmic system, and that Christian friendships can very sustaining if everyone involved is pro-doctrine and living in the divine dynasphere, but that born again believers are the devil's best evangelists for entrance into the cosmic school for inculcation of the human viewpoint of life. Christian friends are the best system for leading you astray.

In the human history phase of the angelic conflict we have noted that man must be free to fail and that he must be free to succeed, for all historical trends are based upon good decisions or bad decisions. And we have seen that good decisions open options for greater decisions whereas bad decisions destroy those options. So the source of either failure or success is always the same — the function of your individual volition, your self-determination under the principle of freedom and self-determination. Freedom is useless without a sense of responsibility to ensure the correct function of that freedom without distortion and to avoid that pitfall of justifying what is wrong in your own life or in others. Freedom carries the responsibility of making decisions on the basis of integrity under the laws of divine establishment, not the motivating evil of arrogance as per cosmic one, gate one. Man must be so inculcated, then, with Bible doctrine that he will take the responsibilities in life, the good ones and the bad ones. Consequently recognition and evaluation of our own personal weaknesses is not degrading or demeaning, it is the means of recognising the principle of doctrine that God has an answer to weakness, converting it into strength, and that there must be, again, decisions made for the power system that gives us the ability to convert our weaknesses into strength rather than to be strong and led by the weak.

Next we have the aorist active infinitive of the verb porneuw. The aorist tense is a constative aorist for an action or a fact extended over a period of time. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. Fornication is a sin but that isn't the issue here, it is a system of evangelising for religion. Religion is the devil's ace trump. The active voice: cosmic believers produce the action through involvement with the phallic cult. The infinitive is the infinitive of intended result when the result is indicated as fulfilling a deliberate plan or objective, and therefore the blending of purpose and result. With this we also have the word for eating food which is a second aorist active infinitive preceded by the word kai, the aorist active infinitive of e)sthiw which means to eat. The constative aorist is for an action or fact extended over a period of time and hence contemplating the action in its entirety. The cosmic believers produce the action of the verb through involvement in the phallic cult, so it has some form of eating which has to do with this religion. The infinitive again is intended result and the two of them together can be simply translated: "But I have this fact against you, namely that you tolerate that woman Jezebel, who calls herself a prophetess; she both teaches and seduces my servants [cosmic believers] to fornicate, and to eat food ... " Then we have the accusative plural direct object from the neuter noun e)idwloquton, which means food which has been sacrificed to idols, to eat food sacrificed to idols. It has to do with the function of the phallic cult.

Principle: Believers must be very wary with whom they party and have their social life. The people with whom you socialise often have the greatest influence in your life. Eating food offered to idols is not the issue, it is the association and influence leading to the weak controlling the strong, and you must constantly make decisions to guard your social life. In effect this says: If you want to stay out of the cosmic system guard your social life and guard your sexual life. It is quite obvious that people who influence are related in these two areas.

There are two principles related to fornication. There is fornication as a social sin, sometimes called adultery although there is a technical difference between the two terms. Then there is fornication related to religion, and that is the phallic cult. One is a sin; one is a system of evil. Religion, being evil — all religion originates with Satan and is used as a distraction from doctrine — always throws in sex as a part of the function of the religion. This has been the case from ancient religions right down to modern religions.

We have noted the significance of fornication and the food sacrifice to idols. As we continue we begin to note some principles which relate to this passage. First, that believers involved in the divine dynasphere are strong and believers involved in the cosmic system are weak. And it is the weak believers who come into this type of activity. Once, living inside the divine dynasphere, they had the strength to produce the activities found in verse 19, but in verse 20 we find the negative side of the picture. From their own free will decisions believers became the strong being controlled and manipulated by the weak Jezebel. So we have again the historical trend of how the weak control the strong. Here were people who were strong at the start but by their failure to persist inside the divine dynasphere they became victims being led by the strong. It all starts with decisions to tolerate and it ends up with decisions to participate. This is the principle: we start out by tolerating that which is wrong and we end up by participating in that which is wrong. We do it from our own free will. Man is the product of his own decisions, and he cannot blame anyone else for decisions he has made. God has given each one of us a free will to make our decisions and when we make erroneous decisions then we wind up under the category of the weak controlling the strong. From the next verse we will learn that Jezebel of Thyatira was a believer who had both time and opportunity for rebound but did not ever recover her residence inside the divine dynasphere. The believers at Thyatira started out in the divine dynasphere but they began to tolerate and then to accept this woman who had entered gate one of cosmic one. Remember that the mandates of God the Holy Spirit always deal with these power spheres. In the dispensation of the Church we have the cosmic system versus the divine dynasphere. We are commanded to be filled with the Spirit — Gate one of the divine dynasphere; we are commanded to walk by means of the Spirit — the function of the various gates of the divine dynasphere. By way of negative commands we are commanded to “grieve not the Spirit.” That is functioning in cosmic one with its 26 gates of interlocking systems of arrogance; we are commanded to quench not the Spirit, the function of cosmic two with its nine gates of interlocking systems of hatred. It all started with this woman entering gate one of cosmic one. This became the motivating evil for this woman called Jezebel of Thyatira. Next, of course, she moved over to interlock with gate two of cosmic one, which is negative volition. This negative volition is not the type that is antagonistic toward Bible doctrine, it is simply preoccupation with self to the exclusion of doctrinal teaching. And then because of her tremendous beauty and because she was a very brilliant woman she got into gate ten, sexual arrogance; gate seventeen iconoclastic arrogance; gate nineteen, the arrogance of emotion; gate twenty-three, the arrogance of lust. And, of course, she interlocked with cosmic two immediately. Gate eight of cosmic two is the old sin nature gate and she became involved there. Gate nine is evil.

The weak controlling the strong, then, began with toleration of the weak. Note in verse 20: “But I have this fact against you, namely that you tolerate that woman Jezebel”. Toleration is a wonderful thing if it extends from the virtue of impersonal love. But never does impersonal love tolerate beyond the point of compromising your life in making wrong decisions. That is exactly what happened here. They abandoned the concept of toleration as they began to fail in the function of impersonal love as a virtue, and the more they failed in the function of impersonal love as a virtue the more they began to tolerate what was doctrinally in error. As a result they finally opened the floodgates to allow this cult to develop inside the church. So we have the case of the weak controlling the strong and it always begins by toleration — the strong tolerate the weak, they have the strength of toleration but they misplace it — and then using one’s free will to be inculcated and taught by the weak. So that the weak influence the strong by some system of teaching or inculcation and finally become involved in the cosmic system advocated by the weak. And then the believer’s involved with Jezebel began to make wrong decisions. Wrong decisions result in further cosmic involvement and they require the rebound technique to escape, as we will see in the next verse, but instead of using that and re-entering the divine dynasphere they continued to become enmeshed in the cosmic system. The greater the function of our volition under the principle of freedom the more we as believers must be aware of our inherent and acquired weaknesses so that we turn to God’s provision of the divine dynasphere for the ability to cope with these things and not let them become a means of tripping us up.

This brings us to our first principle with regard to the interpretation of verse 20: We need God, we need God's provision, we need God's plan for our lives:

1. God's plan is first of all salvation through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Then it continues after the moment of salvation with residence and function inside the divine dynasphere which He has provided for us under the principle of logistical grace.

2. Man is neither the master of his fate nor the Lord of his destiny. This is illustrated by the historical trend which we have developed before in which the weak control the strong. The weak control the strong in business, in government, socially, in all forms of organisations, even in some churches. Man is not the master of his fate. As a matter of fact he is the product of his own decisions but that doesn't make him the master of his fate.

3. Man lives in the devil's world and he is therefore vulnerable to involvement in the cosmic system.

4. Therefore through wrong decisions: every terrible thing that comes to us comes through wrong decisions we have made, we can never blame anyone else, we must take the responsibility for our own decisions, that is a part of growing up. The believer becomes involved in the cosmic system of Satan as the ruler of this world and the genius who has developed this unusual system.

5. Without the power of the divine dynasphere and the provision of logistical grace man cannot withstand the pressures and temptations to become involved in the cosmic system. In other words, none of us as believers on our own are stronger than the cosmic system. We find ourselves therefore caught between two systems. We are human and therefore naturally weak. We find ourselves forced to face the issue: Which system do we choose, the cosmic system of Satan or the divine dynasphere system of our Lord? One offers great happiness and blessing, the other offers pseudo happiness and pseudo blessing and inevitably trips us up in wrong decisions. We are the products of wrong decisions. The more wrong decisions we make the more we become involved with Jezebel of Thyatira.

6. Apart from doctrine and the divine dynasphere man does not have the power, the strength, the ability to resist life in the cosmic system. Therefore the believer lives by his own volition and chooses something greater than himself by which to live.

7. Each one of us must choose in what power sphere he is going to live. This does not mean that because you made a one-shot decision you will always do it. This is the decision that is made every day. Some times it is made through the rebound technique and sometimes it is made simply by positive volition towards Bible doctrine. But every day you have to face the same decision all of the way to the end of your life on this earth — to choose one system as over against another, recognising the fact that our power is not in our inherent ability but in the volition, the freedom we have to choose one system as over against another.

8. There will always be some Jezebel hanging around to push man or mankind into the cosmic system through the historical trends of the weak manipulating the strong. This is talking about someone who is attractive, not someone who is beautiful and dumb, which is not attractiveness all. This is talking about the dangerous combination which has the ability to manipulate through hypocrisy and at the same time to attract the men through the obvious system — Adam meets Eve!

Again the corrected translation: “But again I have this fact against you, namely that you tolerate that woman Jezebel who calls herself a prophetess; she both teaches and then seduces [leads astray] my servants to fornicate and to eat food which has been sacrificed to idols.”

Believers in Thyatira began to lean on their local Jezebel rather than on Bible doctrine. They began to lean on her and the cosmic system rather than the divine dynasphere and the other provisions of logistical grace. They became the strong controlled by the weak and they did so by abandoning the divine dynasphere and neglecting the perception of Bible doctrine. Therefore they began to live on borrowed strength, and once you begin to live on borrowed strength from Jezebel you immediately become weak. Once you begin to lean on people then you start to borrow strength. It often starts out with asceticism, with conversation; this is a smart woman. It starts out with conversation, with attraction, with asceticism. This is the front for the phallic cult — asceticism. And to go from asceticism to ecstasies then you go through the phallic modus operandi. So their association with cosmic Jezebel was a social one, a conversational one, and it led them into the cosmic system and they fulfilled the pattern, then, of 1 Corinthians 15:33, “Do not be deceived, evil companions corrupt good morals”. They borrowed Jezebel’s standards and made Jezebel’s standards their own. It started out with strong asceticism, often a reaction to salvation.

Note: People, if they get the wrong teaching, think they have to give up everything.

So by so doing they abandoned the standards of doctrine. They had learned these things inside the divine dynasphere but they walked away from them. They began to neglect doctrine in preoccupation with self because the Jezebel approach has never changed. It is to get you to become preoccupied with yourself. The Jezebel approach is to find something nice in you and exploit it. The point is, when a person uses their beauty, their cleverness, to appeal to your arrogance you are in the cosmic system. Many a person has become “Gung ho for Christ” on the basis of a nice smile from a pretty girl! or from a soft-spoken counsellor: “Now you have a real talent here, you should be using that for the Lord.” So you have all the athletes up there giving their testimony! When you identify with an organisation that says you are important, although you may be the worst cluck in the world, you go for it. That is how religion recruits. These believers related their volition to what Jezebel was doing rather than what they had been doing in the divine dynasphere. Therefore they came under the principle of borrowed strength. Borrowed strength is weakness; acquired strength is power; that is the principle.

They followed Jezebel in the cult of phallic reversionism to live out their lives in the cosmic system. They ignored the dynamics of 2 Corinthians 12:9.10, "My grace (logistical) is sufficient for you, for the power (divine dynasphere) functions in our weaknesses. Most gladly therefore I will rather demonstrate confidence toward God in my weaknesses, that the power of Christ (the divine dynasphere) may pitch a tent over me. Therefore, for the sake of Christ I find contentment (happiness) in the divine dynasphere ..."

Verse 21, the principle of grace before judgment. Jezebel is a believer; she is given time to repent of her fornication, "and she repented not." Fornication here means a great deal more than simply illicit sexual intercourse. It has to do with the entire phallic cult.

We start out in the Greek with the connective use of the conjunction kai which expresses a result from what precedes. It is translated here, "And so," or it could be "Furthermore." Next comes the aorist active indicative of the verb didomi, the verb to give, to grant — "And so I gave." The culminative aorist tense views the decision opportunity for rebound in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, Jezebel of Thyatira's option to recover fellowship with God and re-enter the divine dynasphere. This woman had many opportunities to use her own free will and walk out on the deal in which she was involved; but she liked what she was doing, it appealed to her arrogance. She not only felt important but she got her kicks out of controlling people. Both male and female find happiness in running the show when they reach a certain stage of arrogance — happiness comes from controlling people. That is why we get so many lousy politicians instead of real statesmen. The active voice: God produces the action of the verb; the indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the principle of grace before judgment, the option to use grace provision of rebound to cancel out the divine discipline for cosmic involvement on the part of this Christian woman. With this we have the dative singular indirect object from the intensive pronoun a)utoj, used for the personal pronoun, third person, and it is correctly translated "to her," "And so I gave to her." The dative of indirect object indicates the one, Jezebel of Thyatira, and unknown Christian female, in whose interest additional time is given for rebound and recovery to the divine dynasphere.

The word that follows is an accusative singular direct object from xronoj, the word for time, "And so I gave her time." One of the provisions of logistical grace that God has for all of us is whenever we fail, when we make wrong decisions, God gives us additional time, either to rebound and recover or to get more deeply involved in the cosmic system. He always holds off discipline so that when He finally does punish us it comes as such a terrible shock that we lose our poise and we are forced to face the reality of the situation. It is a sort of a last call to rebound and recovery of the divine dynasphere. The options of grace, then, exclude the fact that every believer is the product of his own decisions. The decision to live in the cosmic system brings on self-induced misery and the principle that we are the products of our own decisions. Many of the things that we suffer we blame on someone else but in reality we have made the decisions that place us in that situation. Furthermore, the options of grace determine whether the believer is suffering for blessing or suffering for divine discipline. The provision of time is a part of logistical grace for every believer and none of us have ever failed and not been given time to rebound, to recover, to remove ourselves from that failure. For some believers the provision of time is an opportunity to advance to maturity in the divine dynasphere, and thus fulfil the plan of God and move on to greater things. For other believers the provision of time is simply grace before judgment or an additional opportunity for rebound and to recover for the divine dynasphere and, of course, refusing it. Still other believers the provision of time is simply for the purpose of extending one's life for divine discipline. That was the tragedy of Jezebel.

Principle: Logistical grace belongs to the reversionistic and cosmic believer just as much as it belongs to the advancing and mature believer. Logistical grace is for all believers, the winners and the losers; those who fail and those who succeed. And one of the manifestations of logistical grace is time. God gives each one of us a day at a time: a day in which to make decisions to recover, a day in which to make decisions to become more involved in our misery. The difference is how the believer uses or exploits logistical grace provision and the exercise of his options, and the options have to do with Bible doctrine. The believer exploits logistical grace only through the perception of Bible doctrine. There is therefore no substitute for the daily perception of the Word of God. Positive believers parlay logistical grace provision into great blessing both in time and in eternity, whereas negative believers use logistical grace to make themselves miserable and to experience divine discipline in time, and loss of reward in eternity.

“And I gave her time to repent ...”

Jezebel had time, and the reason for that is because Jezebel of Thyatira was a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ, and one of the provisions of logistical grace — one of the major provisions — is time. What do we all have in common right now as believers? We all are recipients of one paragraph of logistical grace: time. We are alive, our time has not run out. We are given time and this is a provision of logistical grace. We are all given time before God steps in to discipline us. Long before we are hit with divine punishment or discipline we make our own bed of misery, we make our own disaster, we are the products of our own decisions individually as well as collectively. Therefore when we make wrong decisions we pay the piper for them, and we even intensify the natural results of our wrong decisions by whimpering and crying and carrying on, without even offering the one prayer that can turn around lives, namely the rebound technique. Around the corner from every problem there is great blessing, but for the wimpy losers in Christianity, those who neglect Bible doctrine, we are the products of our own decisions, and we pay every day for our failure to take in doctrine. Doctrine is not only the key to spiritual advance and recruiting for the pivot which changes history but doctrine also is a key and daily test for your volition — the rejection of Bible doctrine on any given day, the resistance of it. Preoccupation with yourself because you are involved in hedonistic activities is another way of saying no to doctrine. Preoccupation with self is negative volition from cosmic one; antagonism toward doctrine is negative volition from cosmic two. But they combine so that you make your own life by your own decisions, and when your decisions are bad you definitely make misery for yourself constantly.

The options of grace exclude the fact that every believer is the product of his own decisions and therefore grace gives us the option to recover from our bad decisions. That includes time; God gives each one of us time. The options of grace determine whether the believer is suffering for blessing or for cursing, and the provision of time, then, is a very definite part of logistical grace. For some believers the provision of time is opportunity to form a part of the pivot and, from that, great blessing by association, whereas for other believers the provision of time is simply grace before judgment or additional opportunity for rebound recovery and re-entry into the divine dynasphere. For other believers the provision of time is for divine discipline and the inevitable administration of the sin unto death.

That brings us now to the purpose clause which is actually made up of two words: the conjunction i(na, which introduces a sub-final purpose clause. A sub-final purpose clause denotes the direction of the action of the main verb toward a given result, which result is sought or anticipated through the function of one's free will. We can translate it "that" or "in order that." With it we have the verb, the aorist active subjunctive of metanoew, mistranslated "repent" in the Bible. Actually, "repent" is anachronistic, it has no meaning today except to feel sorry for something that you have done, and that is not the meaning of repentance in the Bible at all. The modern connotation of repentance is emotional and there is no emotion in this word. Meta means change; noew means thinking, not change of emotion. So it is correctly translated, "in order that she might change her mind". It becomes a technical word here for rebound. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the rebound technique in its entirety, including the decision to confess to God one's sins. For some the constative aorist would take less than a minute; for others it might take several hours, depending how good the memory was and how long it has been. The active voice: the believer out of fellowship, known as the carnal believer, the cosmic believer, the reversionistic believer, produces the action of the verb. The subjunctive mood: a potential subjunctive implying a future reference; it is qualified by the element of contingency.

The element of contingency is, What hits you first? What makes you realise? If you are in the cosmic system and you are neglecting doctrine, you are not interested, there are two things that can cause you to change your mind. First, your bad decisions result in a tremendous amount of trouble, self-induced under the historical principle: we are the products of our own decisions. You finally get into some kind of a jamb that is so bad that you stop and think. Remember that repent means to think, to change your thinking. And you may have ignored the trouble you have produced yourself, you may have justified it, you may have blamed it on someone else. Therefore the next step is warning discipline or punishment from God. If that doesn't do it then we move to intensive discipline. Failing that God will take you out under the sin unto death. The only reason some believers are not dead under the sin unto death is simply because they have Christian friends who haven't passed the people test, that's all.

Next we have the phrase, "of her fornication." The phrase is out of place in the King James version. In the Greek text this phrase comes at the end of the sentence, and so repentance has nothing to do with fornication but it has to do with any sin or any system of evil.

Jezebel had a great deal to confess to the Lord her arrogance, her jealousy, her vindictiveness, her implacability, her gossip, her lying. She told hundreds of lies every day in the inculcation of false doctrine. We move to the connective conjunction kai, emphasising a fact as surprising, or unexpected, or noteworthy. We translate is, “nevertheless.” Then we have the present active indicative of qelw, plus the negative o)u, and we translate that, “she did not wish [or will, or purpose, or desire],” it was not her desire to rebound. She enjoyed being the head of a great phallic system. The present tense is a retroactive progressive present known as the present tense of duration. It denotes what has begun in the past and continues into the present time. The active voice: Jezebel of Thyatira, an unknown Christian female of great talent and beauty produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a locked-in negative volition, she refused. Then we have the verb metanoew again, this time in the aorist active infinitive — “she did not wish to change her mind.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. God dealt with her through the historical trends, she was the product of her own decisions. Then He dealt with her with warning discipline. She still refused.

Then we have “fornication” finally. The preposition e)k plus the ablative of porneia, and it means “from her fornication,” the whole function of the phallic cult, the literal sin of fornication plus everything that went with it in the cult. That included mental sins, verbal sins, overt sins. They were concentrated into a system of evil. It is an idiom here, so it should be translated: “about her fornication.”

Corrected translation: “And so I gave her time in order that she might change her mind [the function of the rebound technique] nevertheless she did not wish to change her mind [rebound] about her fornication.”

This is grace before judgment. Under the provision of logistical grace this Christian female involved in the phallic cult was given extra time for rebound and recovery of her fellowship with God — the chance to get back into the divine dynasphere. But in spite of the grace provision of time she refused to rebound and therefore she must take the temporal and eternal consequences of her negative volition. We, therefore, all of us as individuals and collectively, are the products of our own decisions.

We resume with the manifestation of the historical downtrend. In verse 22 we note divine discipline the alternative to rebound. We begin by noting the discipline of cosmic leadership. Jezebel represented cosmic leadership in Thyatira where she is by far the greatest leader for evil.

We begin with the demonstrative particle i)dou, a word which is derived from the aorist middle imperative of the verb o(raw, which means to look, to see. But here it is used for a call to clear consideration, for contemplation. So we could translate it best “consider.” But that doesn’t quite get the imperative in there, so let’s try something from the Navy, “Now hear this.” This is exactly what i)dou means.

Remember a principle of historical trends. No nation can survive multicultures, but any nation can survive and will survive many religions. Why? Many religions means freedom but a client nation to God which is prosperous only has one culture that brought prosperity. Culture reflects prosperity. Culture is what you do in your spare time, it is your system of music and art, literature, drama. Culture is related to your entertainment. No nation can survive unless it has one culture.

The culture that made Rome great was Greek culture. It was a manifestation of their prosperity. Rome became a powerful nation through self-discipline, through law, the laws of divine establishment. Rome was started by the Sabines and the Etruscans and others, like eventually the Latins and the Gauls, many races. You can have many races but you cannot tolerate many cultures. And what made this country (America) great was Anglo-Saxon culture. When you go to a country you like the first thing you do is adopt their culture. Why? Because their culture is a reflection of their prosperity. You are going to that country because it is a country of freedom and prosperity. That should be the attitude. No nation ever survives the dominance of many cultures, for a nation's greatness comes from the fact that it has one culture. You can have many religions, that's freedom; but only one culture, and the culture must reflect in some way the laws of divine establishment.

Three things are sacred under the laws of divine establishment. Human life is sacred and therefore when you have a culture of arrogance that seeks to destroy human life to save one's honour — aristocracy duels — you have a bad culture. Human life is sacred; property is sacred; freedom is sacred; and the three stand or fall together. You can't have one without the other. You can't have freedom without privacy and privacy demands property. You must have property for privacy and freedom. And when you try to divide them and say, Yes, you should do something about murder but let burglars go, then we are saying that we believe in the sacredness of human life but we don't believe in the sacredness of property. If you don't believe in the sacredness of property you don't believe in the sacredness of human life.

"Now hear this." Cults often intrude on the concept of freedom of religion. In a basic sense a cult is not a religion because a cult not only talks about God or gods but it also sets up a system of life. So apart from what you do to earn a living you have a culture. Cults encourage uniculture under the title of toleration. Basically a religion is intolerant of others because man is seeking to gain the approbation of God by his own works, his own function, by his personality. Remember that Christianity is not a religion. You can have many religions in a nation under the principle of freedom (concept of freedom of religion) but you can only have one culture and survive. When you get into multicultural aspects you are destroying the very foundations of category one truth, the laws of divine establishment.

We have the present active indicative of the verb ballw, which means to throw and it means to cast: "Now hear this, I will cast." The futuristic present denotes an event, divine discipline, which has not yet occurred but which is regarded as so certain in thought that it may be regarded as already coming to pass. Jezebel and the cult are going to get their "comeuppance." The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ, the prince ruler of the Church, produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of divine judgment on believers involved in the cosmic system.

With this we have the accusative feminine singular direct object from the intensive pronoun a)utoj, and we remember that a)utoj is used as the third person personal pronoun since the Attic third person singular word, and the plural word did not come into the Koine Greek, so a)utoj is used instead. We translate it simply “her,” “I will throw [or cast] her.” Then we have a prepositional phrase e)ij plus the accusative singular of the noun klinh, “into a bed.”

Jezebel fornicated around Thyatira as a form of religion, not just as a sin. That is a part of religion as well: parlaying the sin of fornication into the evil of fornication. But remember the principle: people are the products of their own decisions individually and collectively. Nothing horrible ever happens to us apart from our own decisions. And God doesn't start out punishing us, we punish ourselves under the principles of category one truth. If you make bad decisions then you are going to start making your own misery. God will add to it if you do not wake up and realise that you are on the wrong track. Obviously Jezebel of Thyatira did not wake up. She was accustomed to getting into bed for fun; this is not fun any more. And when you do things that are wrong for fun eventually the fun turns to the most intense type of misery. None of us can get away with sin for pleasure.

The Lord said: “I will cast her into a bed.” This is a bed of punishment.

Principle

1. Since the bed is associated with fornication and also associated with illness and disease it is used to describe the nature of Jezebel's discipline from our Lord Jesus Christ.
2. The Jezebel of Thyatira, from her own free will, chose a bed of fornication. Therefore our Lord chose for her punishment a bed of illness and decay.
3. Promiscuity results in both total frustration and unhappiness as well as added divine discipline. The road to happiness goes through the Word of God, the divine dynasphere, not through the bedroom of Jezebel.
4. We as believers are the products of our own decisions. Likewise, Jezebel of Thyatira as a believer was the product of her own decisions.
5. She chose fornication and thereby chose for herself a life of misery, frustration, unhappiness.
6. She was seeking pleasure but she found self-induced misery and unhappiness to which God will eventually add (futuristic present) divine punishment, the bed of illness, disease, incapacitation.
7. Since God designed sex as an expression of category two love between one man and one woman He will not permit the distortion of sex into sin and evil.

8. Illicit sex offers a moment of pleasure and a lifetime of misery and unhappiness.

9. Promiscuity then is a distraction from the road of happiness, a dead end for what could otherwise be a very wonderful and happy life.

10. God who invented sex for happiness also invented happiness which can only exist inside the divine dynasphere and under God's rules. Legitimate sex related to the divine dynasphere is an expression of human happiness, but any form of illegitimate sex inside the cosmic system guarantees misery, frustration, unhappiness, and punishment from God.

The second principle in this verse is the discipline of her cosmic followers. A lot of believers followed her into this phallic cult. Now we have the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, and the corrected translation is "also." With it we have the accusative plural direct object from the definite article touj. This is the generic use of the definite article representing that category of believers who are involved in the phallic cult, involved in the cosmic system of Satan. The definite article is used here as the immediate demonstrative pronoun and translated "those," "Also those." Then the present active participle of moixeuw, which means to fornicate or to commit adultery, "Also those who commit adultery." The progressive present signifies action in a state of persistence. This isn't one act of adultery, it is a continuing action and it is parlayed into evil because it is related to religion. The active voice: cosmic believers who are the followers of Jezebel are involved in the phallic cult of Thyatira, phallic Gnosticism. This is a circumstantial participle and it is followed by a preposition, meta plus the genitive singular of that same intensive pronoun, a)utoj, "with her."

Then we have another prepositional phrase: e)ij plus the accusative of the adjective megaj and the noun qliyisj, and it means "into great disaster." There are three basic kinds of historical disaster: economic depression, social degeneration, and military disaster. This one refers to social degeneration. When a large part of the population of any nation are practising and condoning fornication it is the beginning of social degeneration. It eventuates in fornication being turned into homosexuality and other degeneracies. There is a whole area of social degeneration that starts with fornication between a man and a woman and ends up with all of the distortions. By the way, social degeneration always precedes military disaster. You can't fight a war with socially degenerate people.

Note that the female leader, and her followers made individual bad decisions. These bad decisions resulted in both self-induced misery and punishment from God. In closing out this verse we have a conditional clause in which we see the alternative to divine discipline. We begin with the conditional particle e)an plus the negative mh, which introduces the alternative to divine discipline but not the alternative to self-induced misery. The translation of the two words together is "if not," but it is an idiom meaning "unless."

With this we have the third person plural future active indicative of metanoew, meaning to change the mind in the technical sense of rebound, “Unless they shall change their minds.” With this we have a prepositional phrase, e)k plus the ablative of e)rgon, and with it the genitive of a)utoj the intensive pronoun used as the personal pronoun, translated literally, “from her deeds,” but it is an idiom meaning “about her deeds.” Corrected translation: “Unless they shall change their minds [rebound] with regard to [or about] her actions.” The future tense of metanoew is a predictive future, it anticipates the alternative to divine discipline, the use of the rebound technique. The active voice: each believer must rebound for himself to recover residence in the divine dynasphere and cancel out the divine discipline. The indicative mood is potential indicative of obligation. The reality of cancelling the divine discipline and the conversion of suffering for punishment into suffering for blessing is an individual decision, an individual modus operandi.

Corrected translation of verse 22: “Now hear this. I will cast her into a bed of punishment, also those who commit adultery with her into great disaster [pressure, affliction], unless they shall change their minds [the priestly function of the rebound technique] about her actions [the phallic cult into which they had been drawn].”

Before we move on we have to note a principle which has to do with suffering. Suffering may be related to many things but there are two general categories. There is suffering for blessing and there is suffering for cursing or discipline. There is always an issue in suffering, it is not accidental. There is no such thing as accidental suffering and there is no such thing as being “innocently involved”. All suffering is either for divine discipline or for divine blessing — that is, for the believer. The issue as far as discipline is concerned is very simple: it can be sin or evil, or even human good. It is always sin, cosmic involvement, reversionism, apostasy, which is the issue of suffering for discipline. The issue as far as suffering for blessing is a very simple one: grace, a means by which God can bless you with undeserved blessing. The issue then is sin versus grace. The category involved in each one is very simple: the category for suffering for discipline is unbearable; the suffering for blessing is bearable, you derive blessing from the adversity. In each case there is a concept from the dynasphere involved. For example, if you are suffering from divine discipline it is always accompanied by arrogance. Arrogance intensifies everything that is negative and bad in this life, for arrogance takes the most objective person in the world and makes him subjective. You cannot approach life from the standpoint of subjectivity without making yourself miserable and, of course, everyone around you. Remember also: there is no solution to subjectivity as long as you are in that status, even if you are counselled until doomsday! On the other hand suffering for blessing is accompanied by humility. Humility always brings objectivity, they go hand in hand. You cannot begin to see any purpose or meaning to your life without humility.

Suffering for discipline and suffering for blessing each has a solution related to it. If you are suffering for divine discipline the solution is rebound, a change of mind. The solution for suffering for blessing is the three stages of the faith-rest drill with emphasis on the rationales. The objective is for all suffering to be turned to blessing but in order for suffering to be turned to blessing a number of decisions have to be made, rebound for example, or the function of the faith-rest drill, the application of doctrine.

Verse 23, divine punishment and historical trends. We start out with the connective use of the conjunction kai, which adds something to the concept. We simply translate it "furthermore." Kai introduces the result from making wrong decisions regarding the cosmic system and the phallic cult. With this we have the future active indicative of the verb a)pokeinw, used here for the administration of the sin unto death for cosmic believers. For believers who live their lives in the divine dynasphere there is nothing but blessing and spiritual growth, both in time and eternity, but for the believer who lives in the cosmic system there is self-induced misery from wrong decisions, followed by warning discipline, followed by the intensification of divine punishment, and eventuating with maximum divine punishment for the believer, the sin unto death. The future tense is a predictive future, it anticipates the administration of the sin unto death for the cosmic believer who does not rebound or "repent." The active voice: Jesus Christ, the prince ruler of the Church, the judge of the royal family, produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the doctrine of Christian capital punishment, not for crime as such but something worse than crime: a believer living under the control of Satan in the cosmic system. The sin unto death is defined as maximum divine discipline from the justice of God resulting in a very painful physical death for the culprit. Since the sin terminating unto death is living inside the cosmic system it is not a specific sin, it is a series of sins. It includes therefore carnality. It is a series of evil functions, motivating evil as well as functional evil. Maximum punishment administered through the sin unto death does not imply that the believer, however, will be miserable before the Rapture. In heaven he will have great interim happiness.

The sin unto death is rejection also of establishment truth. The sin unto death means that the believer has rejected several categories of doctrine: category #1, the laws of divine establishment; category #2, the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; category #3, Bible doctrine for the believer. Category #2 is not an issue here, the person has already accepted Christ as saviour and he can renounce Christ and still not lose his salvation. But he rejects doctrine and this always moves into the laws of divine establishment. Remember that in the laws of divine establishment three things are sacred: life, with the exception of criminals and the concept of capital punishment, plus the concept of enemy in warfare; property, which is just as sacred as life, they must go together; freedom is sacred. These three stand or fall together. If property is rejected as sacred then freedom to hold property, to gain, to own, to make profit, is gone. And eventually this applies to life, which will belong to the state if you have no freedom and you have no property. All systems of crime violate these three principles. So it is not surprising that in passages like Jeremiah 9:13-16 we see people dying the sin unto death simply because as believers they have rejected establishment truth.

It says here in verse 23 that He is going to kill the converts to the phallic cult who are believers. "Furthermore I will execute [kill, put to death]." And then we have the accusative plural direct object from teknon, and while it is ordinarily translated "children," a child in relationship to father and mother or descendants, it also means "students" because of the authority principle. We will translate "her followers." "Furthermore I will put to death her followers," i.e. believers who have become involved in the cosmic system, and with her. Next we have how they are going to be dealt with, a prepositional phrase e)n plus the instrumental of qanatoj, and it is translated “by means of death.” Dying horribly and miserably is the means of removing from this life those believers who are perpetual losers and failures through involvement in the cosmic system. This is capital punishment for cosmic believers. There is no place in the plan of God for residence and function in the cosmic system, especially as God has provided in rebound a way to recover. The believer enters the cosmic system through sin. He remains through failure to use the logistical grace provision of the rebound technique. And because of logistical grace provision there is no excuse for any believer spending much time in the cosmic system. It is simply a matter of good decisions versus bad decisions. Every believer is the product of his own decisions and every believer must take the responsibility for his daily decisions in life in phase two of the plan of God.

The verse then goes on to explain why capital punishment is necessary in Christian circles. God provides capital punishment. God is perfect; His decisions are perfect. Capital punishment is provided under the laws of divine establishment for criminals who have been convicted in a court of law. But God Himself is judge and God Himself removes from this life certain believers under the same principle of capital punishment. We continue with the connective use of the conjunction kai, translated here “And so.” It introduces a result from what precedes. With this we have the nominative plural subject composed of three Greek words. First we have the nominative plural from the adjective paj, and then we have a definite article a(i, and with it the nominative plural from the noun e)kklhsia, “And so all the churches.” A church is just another way of describing a believer, just like battalion is another way of describing a soldier. And so all the churches, all the believers, all the battalions, emphasising the fact that the local church is a class room for the perception of Bible doctrine and that perception of doctrine is the basis for blessing in the client nation as well as future reward and decoration for glorifying the Lord. The future tense is a predictive future, it anticipates the results of cosmic believers dying the sin unto death — cognisance and the inculcation of the power and the integrity of God.

“shall know” is the future middle indicative of ginwskw, meaning to know. Never let your ambition, your goals, your lifetime desires separate you from the plan of God. If you do you will not only have self-induced misery but in addition to that there will be punishment from God. The predictive future anticipates the results of cosmic believers being executed under the principle of capital punishment — executed by God, dying horribly and miserably. Cognisance and inculcation of the power and the integrity of God results. The middle voice is the indirect middle, it emphasises the agent, believers gathered up into their battalions, local churches, as producing the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of inculcation from the administration of the sin unto death to cosmic believers, to losers. With this we have the conjunction o(ti, used after verbs of cognisance to give us the content. It is translated here “that,” “And all the churches will know that.”

What will they know? First of all we have the content, the nominative subject from the personal pronoun e)gw, which refers to the Lord Jesus Christ as eternal God, the evaluator of every believer in the royal family in this dispensation. It is correctly translated “I,” referring to the Lord Jesus Christ who commands all the churches, all the battalions, who is the prince ruler of the Church and in charge of both blessing and punishment. Your decisions will determine whether to you our Lord administers blessing or whether He administers punishment.

Then we have the present active indicative of e)imi, the verb to be. It is correctly translated “so all the churches will know that I am,” static present tense for the fact that the deity and essence of our Lord Jesus Christ is infinite and eternal, and that as the God-Man and having the third royal patent plus His deity He is in charge. Next we have the active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the deity of our Lord Jesus Christ, the reality of His hypostatic union, the reality of two sources of authority from one person: authority from the fact that He is eternal God, the creator and the sustainer of the universe; authority from the fact that in His humanity He achieved the highest thing that any member of the human race can do as the morning star.

“am he who,” the next phrase is quoted from four passages in the Old Testament: Jeremiah 11:20, “But, O Lord of the armies.” It was Jesus Christ who put a wall around Israel as the Lord of the armies; “who judges righteously,” divine integrity, “who tests the kidneys [emotions] and the heart [right lobe].”

17:10, “I, the Lord, search the heart [right lobe], I test the kidneys [emotions], even to give every man according to his modus operandi” — the Lord judges from the facts. The facts are what you think and how you emote in your soul. So our Lord never makes a mistake in executing any Christian under the sin unto death, or in administering punishment of any kind.

Psalm 7:9, “O let the evil of the reversionist [cosmic believer] come to an end, but establish the righteous [mature believer]; for the righteous God tests the hearts [right lobes] and the kidneys [emotions].”

Psalm 26:2, “Examine me, O Lord, and test me; test my kidneys [emotions] and my heart [right lobe].”

Now for the quotation in the Greek. It starts out with an articular present active participle from the verb e)raunaw, and it means to investigate: “I am he who investigates.” The definite article is used as a personal pronoun, referring to our Lord Jesus Christ. The retroactive progressive present tense denotes what has begun in the past and continues into the present time. Our Lord is constantly evaluating every living believer on the face of the earth. He tests the right lobe, what we think; He tests the kidneys, the emotions, which either respond or control the soul. If they control it is a sign of being a cosmic believer. The active voice: Jesus Christ is eternal God. He produces the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial, the present tense can also be a customary present tense to denote what habitually occurs, the evaluation by our Lord Jesus Christ. In this usage the temporal element is remote since the act or state is assumed to be true in the past, the future or the present. Furthermore the action of the present participle is coterminous with the action of the main verb which is “I will give.”

Translation so far: “Furthermore, I will execute her followers by means of death; and so all the churches will know that I am he who investigates ...”

Now we need an object. We have a dual direct object. First, the accusative plural direct object from nefroj, which means kidneys. The absence of the definite article emphasises the quality of the noun, and it is translated with the definite article, “the emotions.” The emotion responds to both life in the divine dynasphere and the perception of doctrine in the divine dynasphere. Psalm 16:7, “I will praise the Lord who has counselled me, even at night my emotions correct me [instruct me, punish me, exhort me, train me]”. We are trained by our emotions. Happiness from life in the divine dynasphere or unhappiness from life in the cosmic system are reflected in each one of us emotionally.

So the emotion and the cosmic involvement becomes a major issue. For example the believer who lives in the cosmic system is negative toward doctrine. The believer’s emotion reacts to lack of Bible doctrine in the soul plus failure to live in the divine dynasphere. Remember that emotion is a responder to what exists in the frontal lobe. Emotion can respond to doctrine or emotion can react to doctrine. Emotion cannot think, cannot reason, cannot learn. In fact emotion without thought is always, inevitably arrogance. Emotion responds to thought but cannot replace thought. Inside the divine dynasphere emotion responds to thought; inside the cosmic system emotion dominates or replaces thought. Therefore divine discipline and punishment of believers is related to the emotions of the soul. The destruction of the emotions of the soul demands that the justice of God execute such a believer by means of the sin unto death. This destruction of the emotions results from the believer residing and functioning in the cosmic system. For the believer living in the divine dynasphere the emotions function normally in great happiness and capacity for life is wonderful, but emotions are a sign in the cosmic system of your own cosmic failures. There is terrible pain emotionally in the soul for the believer living in the cosmic system. For the believer living in the cosmic system his emotions have great capacity for misery, unhappiness, frustration; it even explains some forms of depression. The believers emotions cannot function normally in the cosmic system.

Therefore these emotions are constantly investigated by God for the purpose of providing happiness and blessing, or investigated for the purpose of providing punishment and even death.

“and so all the churches will know that I am he who investigates the reins [kidneys, emotions].” The Greek word for reins is the word nefroj, and it means kidneys. Actually it refers to the Hebrew kiljah. The kidneys are used in the Bible for emotions, just as the heart is used for the right lobe where we do our thinking. The adrenal glands secrete many hormones, one of which is adrenaline, the emotional hormone of fright, flight and fight. The secretion of the adrenaline accomplishes four things which are related to the principle of emotions: increased pulse rate, cardiac blood output, increased blood to the muscles and increased glucose. The reins or kidneys are comparable then to the right man, right woman analogy. The right man of the soul is the frontal lobe where we do our thinking and the right woman is the emotion which responds to what we think. Since the reins or the kidneys refer to the adrenal glands where the emotional hormone of fear is secreted, it is so linked with fear in Job 16:13; 19:27. And for the believer living inside the divine dynasphere perception of Bible doctrine, the function of the other gates, is related to the various degrees of happiness and emotions respond to happiness as well as other things.

We have the left and right rein and we have an analogy there as well. The left rein is the function of the believer's royal priesthood in responding emotionally to God. It is a part of worship. The right rein is the function of the believer's royal ambassadorship and responses emotionally to people and situations. Emotions work in both directions — toward God and toward people, and situations. In other words, the left rein is the capacity for spiritual life in responding to Bible doctrine which is perceived at gate four, while the right rein is capacity for temporal life in applying doctrine. Happiness from life in the divine dynasphere or unhappiness from life in the cosmic system are reflected in the emotions as well as in the thinking.

Note some passages of scripture:

2 Corinthians 6:11,12, "hindered by your own emotions." People react emotionally to doctrine, to the communication of doctrine or the communicator, person or content. That is because people live by their emotions rather than by thinking. You cannot react emotionally and be objective in life. Emotional reaction also goes with drugs, and people who are searching for happiness in the wrong direction. Emotions are designed to respond to the right lobe, they are not designed to run the soul. People whose emotions are out of control are miserable, unhappy people and will never change.

Romans 16:17,18, "for such believers do not obey our Lord Jesus Christ [they do not live in the divine dynasphere], but they obey their emotions, serving themselves; and by their smooth and flattering speech they deceive the right lobes of the stupid [the cosmic believer]."

Philippians 3:18,19, "For many [cosmic believers] keep walking [in the cosmic system] concerning whom I have communicated to you many times and now continue communicating, even though weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ" — believers living in cosmic one with its twenty-six gates of interlocking systems of arrogance, or cosmic two with its nine gates of interlocking systems of hatred, are the enemies of the cross. They are so involved as believers in Satan's program that they become the enemies of the cross. Emotional revolt of the soul is a part of this. In cosmic one they are grieving the Holy Spirit, in cosmic two they are quenching the Holy Spirit — "whose termination is destruction [the sin unto death], whose god is his emotions, whose fame is by means of his dishonour and who keeps thinking about earthly things [the propaganda of the cosmic system]."

That brings us to the second part of the direct object, and we have next the accusative plural of the noun kardia. And just as nefroj means kidney kardia is translated heart. The corrected translation: "Furthermore I will execute her followers by means of death; and so all the churches will know that I am he who investigates the emotions and the right lobe."

Let's stop and take a look again at the heart. We have two Greek words here. The first one we have noted is nefroj, the second is kardia. They both have physiological connotations and the physiology of the kidneys, as we have already seen, has spiritual illustration of emotion. Emotion is a definite part of the soul. It can be good or bad, depending on the status quo of the believer. Kardia also in its physiological function has analogy to thought, for the thinking of the soul is done primarily with the right lobe — the true thinking that leads to wisdom. So emotion and thinking are a part of the soul. Therefore they are used throughout the scripture because of the analogy. For example, in the Bible the word "heart" is never used for the physiological heart, the heart is always used as a part of the soul, as the most important of the real "you."

In the Bible the word "heart" is only used for thinking; the Bible never uses "heart" for emotion. The mentality of the soul is divided into two lobes. The left lobe is called the nouj, and the right lobe is called kardia. The nouj produces a type of thinking called gnwsij, a limited type of thinking, whereas the heart or the kardia produces a tremendous type of thinking called e)pignwsij. Gnwsisj and e)pignwsij are both functions in the soul for the unbeliever as well as the believer. We are only going to study them in relationship to the believer. The heart or kardia is the dominant lobe designed by God to dominate the soul. Therefore the heart in the Bible is the organ of thinking. For example, 1 Samuel 16:7, "But the Lord said to Samuel," when Samuel was trying to anoint a son of Jesse, "Do not look at his outward appearance because I have rejected him; for God sees not as man sees, for man looks [evaluates] on the basis of outward appearance, but the Lord [looks on the heart] evaluates on the basis of thought in the soul." The Lord's evaluation of you is what you think, not how you look. The heart is used in the Bible for the place of thinking, the place of processing thought, the location of vocabulary and categories with which to think. Therefore the heart is the thinking function in the Bible.

Proverbs 19:2 tells us that we have two lobes. We also have a response to those two lobes — emotion. Emotion responds to thought in the normal soul; emotion dominates thought in the abnormal soul. One of the basic differences between normality and abnormality is the place of your emotion. If emotion dominates thinking then you are abnormal, temporarily or permanently. If thinking dominates emotion so that emotion responds to thinking, then you are normal.

We also have volition of the soul. Man is the product of his own decisions, and decisions make environment, not environment decisions. Those who use their volition to crack the maturity barrier and have maximum historical impact are going to have a phenomenal series of things in eternity that will make them as superior to the average Christian in a resurrection body as the archangel is superior to the ordinary angel. There is not even equality among angelic creatures because both angelic creatures and human beings have free will. We are always the products of our own decisions, individually and collectively.

The frame of reference is the antechamber for Bible doctrine. Proverbs 4:4 — "Then he taught me and said to me, Let your heart hold fast my words." Learning is the heart holding fast words. The memory centre is the second part of the heart. Things do not often go from the antechamber to the memory centre — until you have heard it anywhere from five to five hundred times. Then you file it and you can keep it and use it, you remember and identify with it. Memory centre circulates doctrine into various parts of the right lobe and heart. The heart circulates blood; memory centre circulates doctrine.

Lamentations 3:20, 24, "Surely my soul remembers," notice, the soul remembers, "and is humbled within me. "This [doctrine] I recall to mind," there is the memory centre working, "therefore I have confidence." And what does the person here involved recall? Logistical grace. "The Lord's grace support never ceases, his grace expressions never fail. They are new every morning; Great is your faithfulness. The Lord is my portion, says my soul, [the Lord is the source of logistical grace] therefore I have confidence in him".

Psalm 119:16, "I shall delight in doctrinal principles; I shall not forget your word."

Psalm 119:109, "My life is in continual danger, yet I do not forget your doctrinal categories"

The third part of the heart is the vocabulary storage. In other words, every doctrine you learn has some technical words related to it. For example, the hypostatic union. In any technical field there are technical words that have to be learned on which the concepts of that science are constructed.

And then there is categorical doctrinal storage which is the basis for classification of doctrine. The heart or the right lobe is the storage or the residence for Bible doctrine in the soul by which there is a maximum adjustment to the plan of God.

Proverbs 2:2, "Make your ear attentive to wisdom," concentrate on doctrinal teaching, in other words — "Incline your heart to understanding." Concentration requires not only the function of the heart [right lobe] but the function of the volition toward the subject.

Proverbs 3:3, "Do not let grace and truth [doctrine] leave you; bind them around your neck," make notes, "write them in the tablet of your heart."

Proverbs 15:14,15, "The mind of the intelligent seeks knowledge, but the mouth of fools feeds on folly. All the days of the afflicted are evil, but a good heart [perception of doctrine daily] has a continual feast."

Proverbs 18:15, "The heart [right lobe] of the wise acquires knowledge, and the ear of the wise seeks knowledge."

The heart also contains suneidhsij, which means conscience. The conscience extrapolates from doctrine norms and standards for life. It is a separate compartment of the heart. It is so used in Romans 2:15;9:1; 13:5; 1 Corinthians 8:7; 2 Corinthians 4:2;5:11; Titus 1:15; Hebrews 9:14.

Finally there is the launching pad, the place of application of doctrine to experience, the place of applying doctrine to the momentum tests for accelerated advance to maturity.

On the other hand the right lobe can be a place of failure as far as the Lord is concerned. The thinking of the reversionist is mentioned in Psalm 10:6, "He [the reversionist] says in his heart, "I shall not be moved; Throughout all generations I shall not be in adversity," stubbornness, stupidity. Verse 11, "He [the reversionist] says in his heart, "God has forgotten; He has hidden His face; He will never see it."

Verse 13, "Why has the wicked spurned God? He has said in his heart, You will not punish me. "

Rationalising maladjustment is one of the functions of the heart. Isaiah 47:10, "And you felt secure in your evil and said, 'No one sees me,' Your evil wisdom and knowledge have deluded you; for you have said in your heart [right lobe], "I am, and there is no one beside me.". That is locked in arrogance.

Thinking arrogance is always related to the heart. Luke 9:46,47, "Now a controversy entered in among the disciples as to which of them was the greatest. But Jesus, knowing that they were reasoning in their heart, took a child." And then He used the child as an illustration.

Luke 2:19, "Mary treasured up all of these things, pondering them in her heart."

There are various facets to heart function. Proverbs 5:12-14, "How I have hated instruction! And my heart spurned reproof! And I have not listened to the voice of my teachers, nor inclined my ear to my instructors! I was almost in utter ruin in the middle of the assembly and congregation." Nothing will ruin a person faster than the malfunction of the heart — rejection of truth.

Proverbs 6:14, "Who by perversity in his heart devises evil continuously, he is the one who spreads strife." Verse 18, "The heart that devises wicked plans, feet that run rapidly to evil."

Verse 23b, "and I will give unto every one of you according to your works." We start out with the connective kai, "and," followed by the future active indicative of the verb didomi, which means to give, and here it will be translated "administer." The predictive future tense anticipates the administration of divine discipline to cosmic believers who fail to rebound and recover residence in the divine dynasphere. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the of divine discipline of the cosmic believer. It is followed by the dative indirect object of the adjective and substantive e(kastoj, and it means "each one," plus the dative plural of disadvantage from the pronoun su, "each one of you."

We have noted how Jesus Christ controls history and we noticed that He does not interfere with free will or volition. We have also noted that when things reach a certain point, when the human race would be in jeopardy, then at that point our Lord Jesus Christ interferes and we have the administration of the cycles of discipline. As a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ and one who is consistent in the perception of doctrine you ought to begin to recognise certain signs, certain characteristics, certain categories, not only historically but individually. For example, historically you ought to be able to recognise that there are three categories of historical disaster. There are no tragedies in history, only disasters. The reason there are no tragedies in history is that we are the products of our own decisions. If we were not the products of our own decisions then there would be tragedies. Tragedy belongs to drama. Good decisions open options for greater decisions, bad decisions destroy the options.

The uniform of glory which is worn over the resurrection body has a counterpart in time, the uniform of honour. The uniform of honour belongs to the believer who resides and functions inside the divine dynasphere. There are certain characteristics of the uniform of honour. The person who has it lives by virtue: motivating virtue directed toward God, the function of his ambassadorship; functional virtue directed toward man and circumstances, which would be the function of his royal priesthood. The uniform of honour is going to be parlayed into the uniform of glory in eternity. Those who wear the uniform of honour, a modus operandi of the soul, in time, are going to have a "new name written," and that is the knighthood. They are going to have the privilege in eternity of functioning at the gazebo in the garden, the tree of life in the Paradise of God. The uniform of glory in eternity and the decoration which goes with it, the order of the morning star, means that there will be a presentation in the court of heaven for a few believers out of every generation, those who make the pivot, those who advance to maturity, those who function inside the divine dynasphere. After the Rapture of the Church there is a special court presentation. At the second advent of Christ those who wear the order of the morning star are going to be presented to the population of the world. In the Church Age these believers advanced to maturity between the time of salvation and departure from this life. God under logistical grace provides the believer a certain amount of time on this earth. That time is terminated either by death or resurrection, whichever occurs first. During that time on earth the believer is sustained logistically so that he can receive this decoration in heaven. Those who parlay logistical grace into supergrace are the believers who are going to receive the order of the morning star, the uniform of glory that goes with it, and all of the privileges pertaining thereto. The during the time of the Tribulation on earth there is a special court presentation for the VIPs of the Church Age. The only way to get into this presentation is to wear the uniform of glory and be decorated with the order of the morning star.

But that is only a part of the story, because generally speaking the person who is making the great contribution to history is the believer who advances to maturity. As goes the believer so goes the client nation to God, and the believer living in the divine dynasphere contributes to the uptrend of the client nation, and the believer living in the cosmic system contributes to the downtrend of history. It is the historical impact of the unknown factor, the unknown factor being as goes the believer so goes the historical trends of any given generation. So at the second advent there will be a presentation to the entire population of the world of every person who has the order of the morning star and the uniform of glory. And the believer wears this decoration also at the wedding supper of the Lamb, at the coronation. The authority of this particular decoration is phenomenal because for one thousand years of perfect environment on the earth, the Millennial reign of our Lord Jesus Christ, the person who wears the uniform of glory, the same uniform that our Lord presented at the mount of transfiguration even before He had a resurrection body, will rule nations and act as judges of the world. And then in eternity some unique privileges belong to the believer who wears the order of the morning star.

You are going to begin to recognise in your own life what it means to wear the uniform of honour which is parlayed into the uniform of glory in eternity. You will be able to recognise through the honour code, through the various categories of virtue, and when you recognise these in your own life: the motivating virtue of personal love for God, the functional virtue of impersonal love for man, the motivating virtue of confidence toward God, the functional virtue of courage directed toward man and circumstances. You will be able to recognise the signs in your own life.

But there are certain signs you ought to begin to recognise in client the nation, signs which are very similar to the signs which occurred in client nation SPQR in certain stages of its history. For example, the three categories of historical disaster: economic depression, social degeneration, military defeat. They are interrelated and they are also related to rejection of the three basic categories of category one truth, the laws of divine establishment. Three things are sacred under the laws of divine establishment. One is individual freedom. You cannot have that individual freedom of course without privacy, which is a part of the concept. And there must be law to establish that privacy. Secondly, there is the sacredness of property. In a society where property is not sacred you have a decline of that society. Property includes not only land but anything that you can earn through the normal functions of business in life, anything you can accumulate. The third is human life. These three are absolutely sacred according to the Word of God and they are the basis for the modus operandi of the angelic conflict. Economic depression is an attack upon freedom. Men are not free to go out and use their money under the principle of capitalism and form a country or organisation or business, to invest. Military defeat is inevitable if you have social degeneration. You cannot fight a war with social degenerates.

The major factor with all of these things is, What does the believer do spiritually? The major factor in history has always been, since the beginning of the times of the Gentiles in August of AD 70, the spiritual life of the believer. Negative volition toward doctrine means historical downtrend; positive volition toward doctrine means historical uptrend. A maximum number of believers in a spin-off from the pivot then you go through the cycles of discipline and the downtrend.

“and I will give to each one of you” — “each one” refers to the principle that we are the products of our own decisions, individually and collectively. If individually we are negative toward doctrine and live in the cosmic system, and there are enough of us who make that decision, it is inevitable that our country will go through a period of terrible historical disaster just as occurred at the end of the Antonine Caesars. In AD 96 when John on the Isle of Patmos wrote the book of Revelation as the textbook of history from then until the end of time, once he completed the last “Amen” of chapter 22 the Roman emperor who put him there died. Then along came Nirva, Trajan, Hadrian, Antoninus Pious, Marcus Aurelius, from 96 to 180 AD. During that time there was a maximum pivot from the seven churches in chapters two and three so that this is one of the greatest periods in all of history. Then from 180-192 AD was the decade of disaster.

The issue in recovery from a downtrend is, What do you do? What is your attitude as a believer? You are the key.

Next we have a prepositional phrase, kata plus the accusative plural from the noun e)rgon. E)rgon means deeds, actions, accomplishments. It is a reference to actions inside the cosmic system. Translation: “according to your activities,” believers living in cosmic one and cosmic two, the system by which Satan administers the rulership of the world.

Translation of verse 23: “Furthermore I will execute her followers [believers in the cosmic system] by means of death; and so all the churches will know that I am he who investigates the emotions and the right lobe: and I will administer punishment to each one of you [cosmic believers] according to your activities [inside the cosmic system].”

So the noun e)rgon, translated here “activities,” refers to the entire function of human good, sin, and motivational and functional evil inside the cosmic system. Based on complete facts in every case there is a tremendous amount of divine discipline and punishment administered to cosmic believers, falling into two categories: that which we bring on ourselves and that which God administers. The ultimate punishment is mentioned in this context as the sin unto death which does not cancel salvation but guarantees no rewards or decorations in eternity. This verse is dealing with the cosmic or carnal believer only, the believer in various stages of reversionism.

The degeneracy related to Jezebel of Thyatira and the revival of the Phoenician-Canaanite phallic cult is the basis for many warnings in the Old Testament, so much so that we can understand why this famous woman who had beauty and brains in one person is called Jezebel in our context. Deuteronomy 23:17,18 gives us a clue as to the meaning of Jezebel: “None of the daughters of Israel shall be a cult prostitute [religious prostitute, priestess], nor shall any of the sons of Israel be a cult prostitute [men who acted as priests in this function]. You shall not bring the hire of a temple prostitute or the wages of a dog [male prostitute involved in homosexual activity] into the house of the Lord your God for any votive offering [used to fulfil a vow], for both of these are an abomination to the Lord your God.”

1 Kings 14:22-24, “And Judah did evil in the sight of the Lord ... For they also built for themselves high places and pillars and Asherim [the naked female statue used in the phallic cult] on every high hill and beneath every beautiful tree. And there were also male cult prostitutes in the land.”

The children and female virginity were always sacrificed to the phallic cult, plus homosexual acts among the males. Women sacrificed their virginity at the shrines of Ashtarte, and they did so in the belief that this propitiated the goddess of love — called Ashtarte, Aphrodite, Venus, Ishtar, depending on the language — and the goddess would then give them blessing and good fortune in life, and give them a wonderful husband. So the licentious rites were motivated by the desire to have a wonderful life. They were always accompanied by the worship of the reproductive sexual organs, whether it was the worship of Ishtar in Babylon or Aphrodite in Greece or Venus in Rome or Ashtarte in Phoenicia and Palestine. It was always the same function. The woman would have to go and sit in the temple and wait for someone to go and throw some money at her feet. With this stranger she would have to have sex, no matter who he was. The symbol of the phallus was a part of the worship for it expressed to their decadent minds that through submission in sexual intercourse with a male or a female prostitute of the temple all the citizens communicated to the power of God. Sexuality was the mystery copulation of living for one moment, the moment of sex, and that moment was contact with God. It was a moment of forgetting the past and forgetting the future. The sexual act was an act of concentration in devil worship. So we are not talking about normal fornication, we are talking about religious fornication. Religious fornication actually brought in a concept of God, that during the sexual act in the concentration of pleasure you are actually having contact with God in some mysterious way. So sexuality was the mystery copulation of living for that moment of sex which was contact with God. The sexual act, then, became under the phallic cult an act of worship and therefore was justified by those involved as contact with God through the reproductive organs.

All of this is pertinent to what we have been studying concerning Jezebel of Thyatira. This is all done by believers and this is a part of their cosmic involvement. By involvement in cosmic one they became preoccupied with self, by involvement in cosmic two they became antagonistic toward the Word of God and Bible doctrine. As they did so, gradually their concepts of God changed and as their concepts of God changed long came the evangelist. The evangelist was the person who sold them on the phallic cult. Evangelism was very successful under this system and is still successful today. We have licentious Gnosticism in a rather crude form as illustrated by the Jones cult. It is a major distraction to historical uptrend because it contributes to social degeneration and no nation can survive social degeneration, combining religion and sex into a cult degeneration.

Verse 24, We begin with the post positive conjunctive particle de, which sets up a contrast between believers living in the cosmic system which we have just studied in verses 20-23 and believers living in the divine dynasphere which we will be noting from now on to the end of the chapter. The divine dynasphere is God's plan for the royal family of God in this dispensation. Living in the divine dynasphere is the basis for glorifying the Lord Jesus Christ, bringing historical blessing to the client nation. When too many believers live in the cosmic system then there is a historical downtrend — living in cosmic one with its 26 gates of interlocking systems of arrogance or cosmic two with its 9 gates of interlocking systems of hatred.

We now have a contrast. The first word is translated "but," the conjunction de setting up a contrast between believers of verses 20-23 living in the cosmic system and believers beginning in verse 24 living in the divine dynasphere, the place of solution. Next we have the present active indicative of the verb legw, which means "I say" — "But I say." The aoristic present tense is for punctiliar action in present time. The aoristic present sets forth an event as now occurring. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb through His messenger, the apostle John, who is the non-resident pastor of the local church in Thyatira. You ask the question: Which is the most advantageous, to have face to face teaching or non-face to face teaching? The answer is very simple: whatever is available. It has to be doctrinal teaching. Having a face to face pastor is no good if the pastor isn't teaching doctrine. The whole purpose for assembling in the local church is for the royal family to learn doctrine. Everything depends on it whether it is worship or production or any other factor related to the Christian way of life. There is no momentum apart from perception of doctrine; there is no capacity for happiness, capacity for love, capacity for blessing, apart from perception of doctrine. Perception of doctrine is the whole story; it is the issue and everything else revolves around it; it is the hub on which the wheel turns.

For those in Thyatira there was no pastor teaching doctrine and therefore they received doctrinal teaching through the apostle John. They didn't have the advantage of modern technology which we enjoy today and therefore John would have to send letters to the local church in Thyatira. In that way they would receive their doctrinal lesson. In some generations there is an abundance of pastors for teaching doctrine and a general state of prosperity. However, in other generations there is a lack of pastors and a general state of historical disaster. The issue is not which is the most advantageous but what form of Bible teaching is available to match your positive volition.

Principle: Positive volition demands Bible teaching. Therefore believers with positive volition must be particular. The issue is not which is most advantageous, face to face or non face to face, it is a matter of what is available.

The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of doctrinal communication from the Lord Jesus Christ through a non-resident pastor. With this we have the dative plural indirect object from the personal pronoun su, translated "you," "But I say to you." The dative of indirect object indicates the ones in whose interest the communication of doctrine is given. Therefore there is a the dative of advantage whether you are getting it face to face or non face to face. The people of Thyatira to whom this is addressed were getting it non-face to face; it came to them in written form, yet it was to their advantage to have it that way. Please note: Here was a congregation with a non-resident pastor and yet it is to their advantage to have a non-resident pastor because the non-resident pastor is the apostle John and he is orthodox and biblically accurate, he is teaching Bible doctrine.

Next we have a dative plural of advantage from the second definite article toij, and it is used as an immediate demonstrative pronoun referring or calling special attention to those believers who reside and function inside of the divine dynasphere, with emphasis on those mature believers who have reached gate eight of the divine dynasphere by passing all of the momentum tests, by persistence in the perception of Bible doctrine. This second definite article toij is translated "those," "But I say to you, those."

Then we have the word loipoj, which goes with the first definite article. It is translated "others," "to the others." So far: "But I say to you, the others," believers living in the divine dynasphere, believers who are in contrast to the Christians of Thyatira who are living in the cosmic system. Then to make sure we know that this is a local problem all the way, e)n plus the locative plural of Quratira, "in Thyatira." "But I say to you, the others [believers living in the divine dynasphere], those of you who are in Thyatira."

Principle: In Pergamum we noted that believers were advancing to maturity right under the nose of Satan where Satan's headquarters is. Now in Thyatira we note that believers were advancing to maturity in spite of the distraction of the phallic cult. This advance to maturity in areas of special pressure and distraction is because of the grace provision of the divine dynasphere, whether it is Houston, Texas in the twentieth century or whether it is Thyatira in the first and second centuries. It makes no difference whether you live in a large city with many pressures or live in a quiet out-of-the-way place where pressures are relatively small and practically non-existent. You can advance to maturity as easily in a pressure context as you can in a quiet, pleasant country area. Without the divine dynasphere and its wall of fire such normal Christian living in abnormal circumstances would be impossible. The wall of fire only exists for the believer in the divine dynasphere and it works just as well in a large city as it does in a quiet rural area.

In both Pergamum and Thyatira believers were living inside the divine dynasphere, fulfilling the plan of God in spite of every possible distraction. Satan's headquarters was in Pergamum. In Thyatira the Gnostic cult was flourishing under one of the most dynamic women of all times. Inside the divine dynasphere Bible doctrine is number one on the believer's scale of values but involvement in the cosmic system destroys the importance of Bible doctrine and replaces it with a variety of things, including putting pleasure first. Those who put pleasure first have the least amount of pleasure in this life. The believer living inside the divine dynasphere is impervious to the charms of Jezebel and the attractions of the phallic cult. Permanent Bible doctrine in the soul is far more important than a few moments of pleasure. (Of course the person who puts doctrine first is not denied any pleasure, he just enjoys his pleasure) Furthermore, after those few moments of pleasure comes the frustration, the unhappiness, the misery, the depression, the discouragement, for making bad decisions. Good decisions related to the divine dynasphere and Bible doctrine provide options for greater decisions but bad decisions destroy those options and leave the believer in a wake of self-made disaster and misery.

Next we have a nominative plural subject from a correlative relative pronoun, o(soj, translated "as many as." With it we have the present active indicative of the verb e)xw, plus the negative o)uk, "as many as do not adhere to." It means "have not" literally, but it is an idiom meaning "do not adhere to" or "hold to." The perfective present tense refers to a fact which has come to be in the past but is emphasised as a present reality. The active voice plus the negative indicates that believers living inside the divine dynasphere do not produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of reality, namely believers living inside the divine dynasphere and learning doctrine on a daily basis do not succumb to false teaching, they are not suckers for the phallic cult or any other pressure that comes along. With this we have the accusative feminine singular from the immediate demonstrative o(utoj, part of the direct object. The immediate demonstrative gives special emphasis to a designated object, namely the false teaching of Jezebel of Thyatira. With this the rest of the direct object, the accusative feminine singular from the Greek noun didaxh, which means doctrine. Here it means false teaching, the false teaching of licentious Gnosticism. This would include both the Nicolaitanes and the Jezebelites.

Translation: “But I say to you, the others, those of you who are in Thyatira, as many as do not adhere to this false doctrine [licentious Gnosticism].”

Principle

1. The phallic cult is a part of licentious reversionism, or licentious Gnosticism, and is actually referred to in passages like 2 Corinthians 12:21; Ephesians 4:19; 5:5; 3:5; Revelation 2:14, 20-23.

2. Phallic reversionism is always related to demonism. It combines demonism with licentiousness. The link between the two is idolatry. Idolatry was therefore specifically forbidden client nation Israel when they entered the land, Exodus 20:3, 23; 23:24; Deuteronomy 4:28; 5:7; 6:14; 7:16; 8:19. No nation can survive the spread of the phallic cult, it is a part of the principle of social degeneration.

3. The fact that Israel was a client nation to God from the time of the Exodus (BC 1441-AD 70) is documented by, for example, Exodus 19:4-6, “You yourselves have seen what I did to the Egyptians, and how I carried you on eagles’ wings and brought you to myself. Now then, if you will indeed obey my voice to keep my mandates, then you will be my own special treasure among all the peoples, the Gentiles, for all the earth is mine; and you shall be a kingdom of priests and a holy nation [two ways of describing a client nation to God].”

4. This explains, then, the universal priesthood of the believer in the Church Age since the function of the Gentile client nation to God depends upon the number of royal priests in that nation who attain maturity.

5. Idolatry is the subject of the first two commandments in the decalogue. Idolatry is the enemy of freedom. Wherever idolatry is practised freedom does not exist, as in India. The first commandment prohibits mental or soulish idolatry, Deuteronomy 5:6,7; the second commandment prohibits overt idolatry, Deuteronomy 5:8,10. Obviously then idolatry begins in the soul or in the mind and proceeds to an overt practice. Mental idolatry precedes overt idolatry, Judges 2:10-13; Ezekiel 14:7. Scar tissue of the soul and cosmic involvement precedes the modus operandi of idolatry. It starts with negative volition toward doctrine; it starts with residence in the cosmic system — Romans 1:18-25. For this reason idolatry is often called spiritual adultery because it is unfaithfulness to the Lord, Jeremiah 3:8-10; Ezekiel 16:23-43; 23:24-30; Revelation 17:1-15. Idolatry is also the basis for contacting demons, demon influence or demon possession. For the unbeliever this means demon possession; for the believer this means demon influence. The believer’s body is the temple of the Holy Spirit and he cannot be demon-possessed, but demon influence means false doctrine controlling his mind as he lives in the cosmic system; it means scar-tissue of the soul. Idolatry, then, is the basis for contacting demons, Zechariah 10:2. Idolatry is called the devil’s communion table, then, in 1 Corinthians 10:19-21. Note that the believer can only be under demon influence through false doctrine, while the unbeliever can experience actual demon possession. Idolatry also motivates the entire realm of sexual sins and therefore idolatry is related to the phallic cult, Ezekiel 22:3-18; 23:37-39.

The phallic cult includes the following functions: immorality of all kinds, Leviticus 18:3-25; demonism, either demon influence or demon possession, Leviticus 20:6; idolatry as related to the phallic cult always includes human sacrifice — Leviticus 20:1-5.

Remember this: All cults link the phallic function with demons through idolatry. In the ancient world the phallic function and the demon function always had design to lead people to some form of ecstasies where the emotion controls the soul and reason disappears completely. In the ancient world this form of ecstasies always reached its climax with human sacrifice. Today human sacrifice seems to be out so the tongues movement does the same thing. Ecstasies completely removes all the stops. The tongues movement is totally evil. Born-again believers in the tongues movement are the servants of the devil. We also have something else that comes out of the phallic cult: the rejection of establishment authority. When you get into the tongues movement today, as with the phallic cult in the past, the things that are sacred under category #1 truth — the laws of divine establishment: first of all freedom; secondly, property; thirdly, life — are all rejected. Wherever you find cults you find these things. They reject legitimate authority; they reject establishment authority — Leviticus 20:9. Also, the phallic cult has spiritual, cultural and social degeneracy, Leviticus 20:10-23. We might also conclude with the fact that idolatry with its ecstatic cultism is the origin of homosexuality, bestiality, incest, etc., Deuteronomy 12:29-31. So licentious Gnosticism and the phallic cult practised in Pergamum and Thyatira posed a serious threat to the continuation of the Roman empire as the first Gentile client nation to God. Idolatry and the practice of the phallic cult was responsible for the historical downtrend in Israel as a client nation, the basis of the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline, Isaiah 2:8, 18-20; 21:9; 36:18-20; 37:12-19; Jeremiah 3:6-11; 2:27-30; 7:17-20; 17:1-4; Ezekiel 6:4-6.

Phallic cult evangelism

The best illustration in the ancient world mentioned in the Word of God are the Canaanites. The Canaanites became the Phoenicians when they mixed with the great sea peoples. So we will use the Phoenicians as the background for phallic cult evangelism. By the time of the Roman empire the phallic cult was carried on by this beautiful and brilliant woman called Jezebel. Why is she called Jezebel? Because Jezebel was a Phoenician who married a Jewish king who was a brilliant soldier but a jackass otherwise!

The Phoenicians, who were the evangelists of the phallic cult, are descendants from two peoples — the Canaanites and the sea peoples. The Old Testament prohibited idolatry and the practices of idolatry by the Canaanites is well documented. You might say that the Canaanites who occupied the land before Israel were landlocked as a people until they combined with the Oddities.

In about 1200 BC the sea peoples invaded the near east: Anatolia, the Mediterranean, North Africa, and Palestine. The fall of the Hittite empire, the destruction of Troy, the disappearance of the Minoan civilisation, the pressure of the Dorians who forced the Mycenians to go to their ships and leave Greece, resulted in having peoples wandering. There were great migrations by sea as well as by land. Out of this came new races, new peoples. There were the Philistines, the Phoenicians, and the Greeks and the Romans also came from these same wanderings or migrations. The Phoenicians are the result of intermarrying with the Canaanites and establishing a great maritime empire which gave both an alphabet to the world and a religion to the entire area covered by the Roman empire. That includes western Turkey. In both the Bible and in Homer the Phoenicians are called Sidonians. In Africa they were called the Carthaginians. The word "Phoenician" is derived from a Greek word, Phoinikē. In the Greek it means crimson or purple colours, dye which was manufactured in Tyre and Sidon. The land of these people was called in the Greek Phoinikē, which we translate Phoenicia. The people were called Phoinikeij, which we call Phoenician. The word Canaanite in the Hebrew is kanan, and it means Canaanite or merchant, a dealer in crimson dye. In 1 Chronicles 1:13 it says: "And Canaan became the father of Sidon [Phoenicia]." The demand for purple and crimson dye, plus the great maritime free enterprise system, made the Phoenicians and Carthaginians the only empire in history without a strong federal government. For over 1000 years they were a great people and a great empire — strictly free enterprise and no federal government. They never went into debt, they always had a balanced budget. They had one of the most stable governments. The senate of Phoenicia was composed of business executives, no elections, and the senate ran the country. They were a mixed race held together by free enterprise and maritime power, plus the fact that they only had one culture.

The religion of the Phoenicians

The source of information about the Phoenician-Canaanite religion in the Bible plus one other book — The Epic of Ugarit. The chief god of the Phoenicians was El, and he is the counterfeit God the Father. He has a son — Baal, the counterfeit Son of God. Baal had a struggle with Mot, the god of death, but Mot overcame Baal and killed him. This is the Satanic counterfeit of the crucifixion of Christ. You see, they had a trinity and they had a devil called Mot. Now where things get sticky is that Baal had a sister who was also his wife. Her name was Anath. Anath found his body and she brought it back to life — counterfeit resurrection. She was the goddess of sex, murder, warfare, and love. They all go together because the sex was violent, the murder was violent, the war was violent, therefore the love was violent, as of the phallic cult. She was also the founder of the greatest criminal organisation of all times, Thugs. Anath was also called something else — Ashtarte. Baal means lord, the second person of the Phoenician trinity. he was worshipped under hyphenated titles — Baal-shamen [lord of heaven]; Baal-melquart [lord Hercules]; baal-gad [lord of good luck]; Baal-merodach [Jupiter the sun god]; Baal-hanan [lord of heat].

Dionysius, the god of wine, was another of the favourite gods. He was not discovered by the Greeks but by the people of Asia-minor and Anatolia. In Lydia Dionysius was called Bacchus, so the Romans at an early stage worshipped the god of wine. It was through the worship of Baal that the Omri dynasty of the northern kingdom of Israel — the great warrior dynasty: Omri, Ahab, Ahaziah and Jehoram — attempted to fuse the Phoenicians and the Jews into one powerful race. The Phoenicians were the greatest maritime power and the Jews were the greatest military power at that time. Ahab and his father before him, Omri, were great soldiers, the greatest generals of their day. So in order to fuse the two people Jezebel, the daughter of the king of Phoenicia, was married off to Ahab the son of king Omri. The evil of Omri is mentioned in 1 Kings 16:25,26 while the evil of Ahab is summarised in 1 Kings 16:30,31.

Our subject is the Phoenicians as evangelists of the phallic cult and why the word “Jezebel” occurs in our context. Jezebel didn’t come back to life but her facsimile was there in person and she herself was a believer who attracted many others into the phallic cult.

Idolatry begins in the soul and proceeds overtly to practice. Mental idolatry precedes overt idolatry. Scar tissue of the soul and cosmic involvement always precedes the modus operandi of idolatry, therefore idolatry is the manifestation of negative volition toward doctrine and living inside the cosmic system, as per Romans 1:18-25. For this reason idolatry is often called spiritual adultery. It is also the basis for contacting demons — demon influence or demon possession — depending on whether you are an unbeliever or a believer. If you are a believer you cannot be demon-possessed, you can only come under demon influence. The believer can only be under demon influence through false doctrine, living in the cosmic system. Idolatry also motivates the entire realm of the phallic cult, Leviticus 18:3-25; demonism, Leviticus 20:6; human sacrifice, Leviticus 20:1-5; rejection of establishment and authority, Leviticus 20:9. In Leviticus chapter 20:10-23 we have spiritual, cultural and social degeneracy from the phallic cult. Idolatry is one of the things that originates such things as homosexuality, bestiality, incest, and so on, Deuteronomy 12:29-31.

We have seen how the sea peoples combined with the Canaanites to form the Phoenicians. We took up the religion of the Phoenicians as the foundation for the phallic cult and how the Phoenicians were the evangelists for the phallic cult with religion, licentiousness, human sacrifice, demonism, and ecstatic abandonment to pleasure. The entire Baal system for the phallic cult spread to the area we are studying where names were changed by the Greek and Roman people; they changed the gods to fit into their own language. The worshippers were required to submit to violence, rape, murder, and therefore Jezebel of Thyatira brought the same system of power politics to Christianity that Jezebel of Phoenicia brought to the court of northern Israel, so that the religion of Baal was the religion of licentious Gnosticism, designed to make slaves of cosmic believers and exploit the common man. The cult led by Jezebel of Thyatira was a facsimile, then, of the Baal cult which Israel faced in the time of Elijah and thereafter. Therefore it is not surprising that in the next phrase of verse 24 we have this cult described as the deeper things of Satan. Anath, Astarte, Ashera, Ishtar, Aphrodite, Isis and Venus, are different languages for the same person, the goddess of love in the Baal cult. In both Phoenicia and Israel

Anath, the wife of Baal, was depicted as a nude woman mounted on a lion with a lily in one hand and a snake in the other. The significance of this has been brought out by archaeology. The lily symbolised sex, the snake in the other hand fecundity, the lion conquest and power.

It would appear that this Jezebel cult was far worse than the Nicolaitanes which we studied in verse 15. This was a revival of the old Phoenician cult and this is why Jezebel was used for the female leader in Thyatira. The doctrine of Jezebel is the depths or the deep things of Satan. This cult has not distracted nor caused apostasy among positive believers, those who are living inside the divine dynasphere and those who are learning Bible doctrine on a daily basis.

So we pick up again with the nominative masculine plural subject of the qualitative pronoun o(stisj, and it is a qualitative relative pronoun emphasising a quality by which the preceding statement is to be confirmed. So we can translate it, "such a category who." We are talking about mature believers, believers who are positive toward doctrine, believers who have doctrine first in their scale of values. This is followed by the aorist active indicative of the Greek verb ginwskw, and with it the negative o)uk, "such a category who have not come to know." It means to know, to understand, and it is used for the mystery doctrine of Gnosticism, or the mystery rites of the various phallic cults that are related to it. The ingressive aorist tense is one in which the action signified by the aorist may be contemplated at it's beginning. It denotes entrance into a state or condition. Here with the negative o)uk it denotes not entering into the state or condition. In other words, not being evangelised by the phallic cult of Thyatira. The active voice: believers living in the divine dynasphere produce the action of the verb by resisting the revival of the Baal cult in Thyatira. The indicative mood is declarative viewing the action of the verb from the viewpoint of reality. The reality is residence and function in the divine dynasphere insulating these believers against this phallic activity. We also saw last time the relationship between the modern tongues movement and the phallic cult.

The accusative neuter plural direct object follows. It is from an adjective, baquj, which means deep things or deep secrets, a reference to doctrine related to demonism and the phallic cult. The next phrase is an idiom used as an adjective to be translated either to be alleged or so-called. In this idiom we have two words: a relative adverb o(j, and the verb legw. Ordinarily it would be translated "as speaking," but here it is an idiom meaning "alleged." So we translate it, "alleged deep secrets," a phrase used as an adjective. With this we have the possessive genitive from the proper noun for Satan, and it is correctly translated, "of Satan."

Translation: "But I say to you, the others [believers living inside the divine dynasphere], those of you who are in Thyatira, as many as do not adhere to this false doctrine [the revival of the Baal cult], such category of mature believers who have not come to know the alleged deep things of Satan."

Next we have a present active of the verb ballw plus the negative o)u. It ordinarily would be translated, "I will not cast" or "I will not throw," but here it simply means "I place no." The idea is conceived as independent of any particular verbal relationship, and so with it we have a nominative neuter singular of an adjective αλλοj, plus the nominative masculine singular βαροj, meaning burden or weight. Altogether it says, "I place no other burden." With this we have a prepositional phrase, ἐπι plus the accusative of σου, "on you." The present tense of βαλλω is a customary present for what may be reasonably expected to occur when believers live in the divine dynasphere. They face the whole problem of historical trends, they have the ability to cope and they understand the solution. They are in the field of active panaceas even though they are unknown to history. The people who make the greatest impact on history, either pro or con, are believers in the Lord Jesus Christ. As goes the believer so goes the historical trend. Believers living in the divine dynasphere contribute to the uptrend of history, believers in the cosmic system contribute to the downtrend of history. The active voice: our Lord produces the action of not putting any other burden on them because they are obviously involved in the historical trend.

The entire passage says: "But I say to you, the others, those in Thyatira, as many as do not adhere to this doctrine, such a category who have not come to know the alleged deep things of Satan; on you I place no other burden.."

This anticipates the subject of the uniform of honour which we will be studying in Revelation 3:4. Those who do not adhere to this false doctrine are the mature believers who in eternity are going to wear the uniform of translucent light over their resurrection body, they have not soiled their clothes. No additional burden or mandate is given to these mature believers who live and function inside the divine dynasphere. It isn't necessary to emphasise the negative with believers who are positive toward doctrine. In other words, believers who are positive toward doctrine do not need a lot of negative mandates, they are functioning in the positive mandates relating to residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. They actually fulfil certain doctrines we have studied. For example, the divine dynasphere and the edification complex of the soul; for example, the royal family honour code which we studied in Romans thirteen. For example, the concept of virtue we studied in 1 John chapter five, and also the functional virtue of impersonal love which we studied in that chapter.

Verse 25 then gives us the mandate to these people. They have passed the major momentum tests, they have advanced to maturity, therefore they don't need a lot of negative hoopla. Instead, one positive statement given in this verse.

The adverb μόνον which begins this is actually an adverb used as a conjunction to break off a discussion. It isn't necessary, positive believers simply do not need the negative, mature believers especially. You don't have to tell a positive believer, Don't do this and Don't do that. Just give them the positive mandate and they will carry it out. So for the mature believers who have advanced from gate four to gate eight in the divine dynasphere the negative is unnecessary, therefore the negative is cut off by the adverb used as a conjunction and translated "Only." Then with this the adverb conjunction goes with the aorist active imperative of the verb κρατεω, a positive mandate. It means to hold fast or to hang on. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist viewing the believer's residence and function inside the divine dynasphere in its entirety, but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, namely the momentum of going from gate four [perception and application of doctrine] to gate eight, which is maturity. This also implies passing the eight momentum tests. They have moved along, now they need simply to stand fast. The active voice: positive believers produce the action, they have produced it by advancing to maturity, passing the momentum tests. The imperative mood is a command or mandate to positive believers in Thyatira.

With this we have the accusative neuter singular direct object from the relative pronoun o(j, and as usual translated “who” or “what”; here as the accusative, “to what.” And then the present active indicative of the verb e)xw, “hold fast to what you have.” The present tense of duration denotes what has begun in the past and continues into the present time. This includes parlaying logistical grace into maturity and utilising to the maximum the divine dynasphere. The active voice: the positive believer produces the action of the verb although all believers possess logistical grace and the divine dynasphere. But only positive believers utilise this grace provision and turn it into something absolutely fantastic in time, contributing to the historical uptrend, having great blessing and happiness individually. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the provision of logistical grace and the provision of the divine dynasphere. “Only hold on to what you have.”

Then we have one more phrase, the improper preposition a)xri plus the relative pronoun o(j, and it is translated “until which time,” it is an idiom. The genitive from the relative pronoun o(j introduces an indefinite temporal clause and “until which time” is the correct way. There is also in this idiom a small, small word made up of two letters. It is called the mobile a)n, a small particle which is very important because it denotes that the action of the verb depends on some circumstance implied in the context. The circumstance here is the Rapture of the Church. The temporal clause a)n plus the subjunctive describes an event which will occur in the future, namely the Rapture of the Church, but when it occurs cannot be assumed with certainty. In other words, this is another way of saying no one, absolutely no one, knows when the Rapture is going to occur. No one knows if they are in the Rapture generation or not. That is the importance of one Greek word, often not even translatable. In the temporal clause plus the subjunctive it is described as an event that will occur, namely the Rapture, but when it occurs cannot be assumed, says this particle. The Rapture is imminent but no one knows the day or the hour. In this idiom neither the relative pronoun o(j nor the mobile a)n are translatable, we simply take the three words together and translate them “until” because they are introducing an indefinite temporal clause. No one knows when it will happen but everyone knows it will happen sooner or later. Only the time is unknown.

Next we have the aorist active subjunctive from the verb e)(kw, correctly translated “until I have come,” i.e. the Rapture of the Church. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the Rapture or the royal family resurrection in its entirety as a momentary action, an action which will be unknown by all who participate. Only God knows and that is the way it should be. We are to carry on as usual. If you are doing what is right — the will of God — you don’t have to anticipate any event which is coming up. The active voice: Jesus Christ will produce the action of the verb at the Rapture, and the subjunctive mood is a potential subjunctive implying a future reference regarding the Rapture, plus the indefinite temporal connotation of the imminency of the Rapture.

Corrected translation: “Only hold on to what you have [the residence and function inside the divine dynasphere] until I come [the Rapture].”

The divine plan for the Church Age never changes. The provision of logistical grace plus function in the divine dynasphere for the royal family of God demands that we as believers keep on doing what we are doing. All the mandates of the Christian way of life are related to residence and function at the various gates of the divine dynasphere and therefore John emphasises to positive believers in Thyatira the importance of just doing what they are doing. They have already passed the test, they haven't been caught up in the tongues movement as it existed in its phallic form in that day. They were not caught up in all that emotional nonsense. God's plan utilises God's power and exploits God's grace, God's logistical grace provision, so that God is glorified and the Gentile client nation SPQR is perpetuated. Today it would be the Gentile client nation USA is perpetuated. Luke 21:24 — The times of the Gentiles are the time in which we live, “Jerusalem will be trampled underfoot by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.” The times of the Gentiles began in AD 70 and concludes at the Rapture of the Church. For all practical purposes Israel will not be a client nation again in the Tribulation but there will be no client nation in the Tribulation due to the intensifying of power politics. Instead 144,000 individual Jewish evangelists will function as a client nation.

So the same message regarding the times of the Gentiles was given by the apostle Paul in Romans 11:25, “For brethren [royal family of God] I do not wish you to be ignorant about this mystery, that you stop being wise in your own estimation,” ignorance produces arrogance, “that the hardening in part has happened to Israel until the time of the fullness of the Gentiles [the Church Age] has come in.” In other words, in every generation of the Church Age the basis for historical uptrend of prosperity will always be the same: As goes the believer so goes the client nation, and so goes the trends of history in that generation. Furthermore in every generation of the Church Age the basis for historical downtrend will always be the same. When things start to go bad historically as they appear to be doing now it is because the pivot of mature believers has shrunk. It is because believers are not fulfilling divine mandates, not executing the plan of God. Individually as believers and collectively as a client nation to God we are the products of our own decisions. Decisions create environment, not environment decisions. There are no tragedies in history, rather historical disasters based on cosmic involvement. Such disasters cannot be tragedies since both individuals and nations are the products of their own decisions. Individual subjectivity contributes to the destruction of national objectivity. This is why arrogant individuals and arrogant nations never see their own inconsistencies and failures, only the failures of others. Furthermore, since authority in life is a matter of human volition cosmic believers always use their volition to accept wrong authority and follow wrong leadership. They follow demagogues. Establishment authority in the client nation breaks down when those involved in the cosmic system use their free will to accept the authority of evil. This is how believers go from the directive will of God to the permissive will of God, by going from the divine dynasphere to the cosmic system.

If anything will give meaning and purpose to your life, if anything will give right motivation, if anything will make your life meaningful and bring happiness to you it is the next eight verses. We begin in verses 26-28 with the reward for momentum and maturity: the dynamics of historical impact. And we begin by noting that those who are unknown in history in the Church Age will be well known, they will be the famous people of the Millennium. So even though you are not in the history books now as a mature believer you will make history for the 1000 years of this dispensation. Therefore we are going to see how the invisible of the Church Age will become the visible in the Millennial reign of Christ, and you will finally come to be — if you follow through on this — single-minded in your life. Only single-minded people ever achieve maximum happiness in life. And by single-minded I mean you will understand why you are here, you will understand the purpose for being here, and you will understand that nothing is more important to your life than Bible doctrine. So we begin with the reward for momentum, maturity, the dynamics of historical impact.

The reward of Millennial authority is verse 26. “He that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him I will give power over the nations.” The order is a matter of encouragement. We don’t start out with the rewards. The rewards actually come at the judgment seat of Christ. That is when the mature believer receives the highest decoration, the order of the morning star and the uniform of glory, the translucent transcendent uniform of light that goes over the resurrection body. Then it is seven years later before the second advent, the coronation, the wedding supper of the Lamb, and then the Millennial reign of Christ. It is of the Millennial reign of Christ that we are talking in verse 26. In verse 28 we will go back to the decorations, and then in chapter three we will get the uniform of glory.

The King James version is its usual innocuous self! So we have to start all over with the Greek. The connective use of the conjunction kai introduces a result from what precedes. So this word kai is translated “furthermore.” With it we have the articular present active participle of the verb nikaw, which means to win. The definite article is a generic definite article describing the mature believer as a separate category from all human beings in his own generation and in all generations. When the participle is not accompanied by a noun it may function as a substantive as here. So instead of translating it like a participle we translate it like a noun: “Furthermore the winner.” Basically there are two categories of believers, winners and losers, great people and wimps. The winner is the believer who advances from gate four to gate eight of the divine dynasphere, therefore the mature believer who has constructed the edification complex of the soul. With this we have the ascensive use of the conjunction kai, translated “even.” The articular present active participle from terew, which means to keep or to guard. The winner is now described, “even he who keeps” or “even he who guards.” The definite article is used as a personal pronoun describing the believer who advances to maturity. The present tense is a customary present for what may be reasonably expected to occur when the believer lives in the divine dynasphere and passes the momentum tests, and through the daily perception of doctrine goes from gate four to gate eight. The active voice: the positive believer produces the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial for the fulfilment of the plan of God through the daily perception of Bible doctrine. With this we have a direct object composed of three words. The first is the accusative plural from the noun e)rgon, which is generally translated “works” but has other related meanings. With this we have the accusative plural definite article used in the generic sense in describing the believer who has attained or achieved maturity. We also have a possessive genitive singular from the personal pronoun $\epsilon\gamma\omega$, and this makes up the direct object and is translated “my assignments” — “even he who keeps my assignments.” The assignment is the word $\epsilon\rho\gamma\omicron\upsilon\varsigma$ here. The tasks or assignments of God are the fulfilment of the plan of God inside the divine dynasphere. $X+Y+Z =$ the assignments of God.

Then we have a prepositional phrase, “until the end,” the famous improper Attic Greek preposition which we had in the previous verse, $\alpha\chi\rho\iota$, used as an improper preposition with the genitive singular of the noun $\tau\epsilon\lambda\omicron\varsigma$, and this is a genitive of time, we have a temporal clause again. $\alpha\chi\rho\iota$ plus $\tau\epsilon\lambda\omicron\varsigma$ means “until the end” and it is a reference to the end of the believer’s life on this earth, which may mean either death or the Rapture, whichever occurs first. Phase two is terminated either by death or the Rapture of the Church and therefore the prepositional phrase refers to that part of God’s plan between salvation and physical death. “Until the end” takes you from the moment you believe in Christ until the moment that you depart from this life, either by death or resurrection, whichever occurs first.

“Furthermore the winner, even he who keeps my assignments until the end,” until the termination of God’s plan.

Then we have the principle which follows, “I am going to give that person some special authority.”

We are going to look at the subject of winners and losers. There is nothing worse than for a Christian to be a loser. Every believer who lives in the cosmic system is a loser all the way and what happens to losers in eternity shouldn’t happen to a dog with hydrophobia! Eternity and heaven is for all believers and there is no way you can lose your salvation, but there are tremendous degrees of happiness and blessing forever and ever and ever in heaven.

The name of the doctrine which is necessary for our continued study of Revelation chapters two and three is

The profile of a winner

1. Believers in time and in eternity believers are classified into two categories: winners or losers.
2. The winners are believers who live in the divine dynasphere learning Bible doctrine, passing the momentum tests, advancing to maturity, fulfilling the plan of God and glorifying the Lord Jesus Christ.
3. The losers are believers who live in the cosmic system, servants of Satan, constantly under the control of their old sin nature (carnality), involved in both motivational and functional evil.

4. Losers are Christians who fail in time but they do not lose their salvation. However, Christians who are losers in time do occupy an inferior place in heaven and have no authority in the Millennium, which means no impact on history.
5. Winners are described in Revelation chapters two and three by the present active participle of the verb nikaw; it is used seven times in our context, Revelation 2:7,11, 17, 26; 3:5,12, 21.
6. In each case the participle is translated like a noun which is a legitimate grammatical use in the Greek. Therefore it is translated consistently “the winner.”
7. All historical blessing and prosperity in the Church Age results from unknown and unnamed persons who are believers in the Lord Jesus Christ living in the divine dynasphere.
8. These mature believers we are going to call winners. These winners provide blessing by association and historical uptrend not recorded in any human history book of the world.
9. Therefore, these believers who are winners are unknown, anonymous, unsung heroes of history during the Church Age. They have used the hidden manna of Bible doctrine and other provisions of logistical grace to advance from gate four to gate eight of the divine dynasphere.

The divine dynasphere is the plan of God for the Church Age — Gate one, the filling of the Spirit; Gate two, basic impersonal love; Gate three, enforced and genuine humility. Gate one is spiritual IQ; Gate two is objectivity in learning doctrine; Gate three is teachability in learning doctrine; Gate four is perception and application of doctrine (the momentum gate); Gate five, love of God; Gate six, right man, right woman where pertinent; Gate seven, friendship, advanced impersonal love; Gate eight, is spiritual maturity, the construction of the edification complex of the soul. Believers who advance to gate eight contribute to the historical uptrend of the client nation, which at the time of writing was SPQR, the Roman empire, but today is the USA. On the basis of historical trends, as goes the believer so goes the client nation to God. The winner, then, is the secret to national and historical blessing in this life and in this dispensation. These Christian heroes of history are anonymous today but they will be well known at a future point in history and they will take a prominent place in the last one thousand years of human history. As the resurrection of the Church is called the Rapture it becomes a major issue because at that time they will receive what is called a white pebble, a resurrection body. They will be knighted with a new name or title and they will become the most well known of all men in history. Cracking the maturity barrier, reaching maturity as an anonymous individual as far as world history is concerned is very important because it means that although you are anonymous now in the Church Age you will be the most famous of people in the Millennium. So just as the mature believer is born twice he gets two cracks at history, and he will have the greatest and most permanent of all fame in the last one thousand years of history.

1. It is the objective, then, of this profile to present the doctrine that the anonymous believers with maximum historical impact today will be famous at a future time in history.
2. The winner will be at the Rapture of the Church; so will a lot of believers who are not winners — 1 Thessalonians 4:13-18.
3. The winners will participate also in the big genuflect in the sky, Philippians 2:9-11, a time when every knee shall bow and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of the Father. Losers are going to glorify God whether they want to or not.
4. The winner is going to be decorated.

After the big genuflect the winners and the losers are going to be separated and there will be great inequality in heaven. Notice the one thing they all have in common in Philippians 2:9-11, "Therefore also God [the Father] has exalted him [our Lord Jesus Christ] to the maximum, and has given him a name [our Lord's title of knighthood]," the same name we will study in connection with winners. He has given Him a name, our Lord's royal patent, which prepares the way for the new knighthood of Revelation 2:17, the new order of chivalry for the Millennium and the eternal state; "which is superior to every name, that in the presence of the person of Christ every knee of heaven shall bow," this is right after the Rapture of the Church, the worship of the entire royal family of God. The winners and the losers will be there together; "both the ones on the earth," the believers who are alive at the time of the Rapture; "and the ones under the earth," the believers who died during the Church Age; "and every tongue shall acknowledge that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father". One thing is clear: winners and losers alike have the right perspective at the resurrection and thereafter. So the issue in the difference between winners and losers is not their attitude at the resurrection, it is their attitude in time — the attitude now. Winners and losers will be there, 2 Corinthians 5:10, where the winner is described as "good" because he fulfilled the plan of God [X+Y+Z]. The loser is described as "ashamed" at the judgment seat of Christ, Romans 5:5, "and hope does not make us ashamed." It is the loser who is going to be ashamed, therefore the importance of that phrase from 2 Timothy 2:15, "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed" at the judgment seat of Christ. And what keeps him from being ashamed at the judgment seat of Christ? Rightly dividing or categorising the Word of truth. Philippians 1:20, "According to my earnest anticipation and hope that I shall not be put to shame in anything [at the judgment seat of Christ], but with all confidence, Christ shall even now, as always [from the judgment seat of Christ until eternity], be glorified in my body, whether by life or by death."

But the loser is described in several passages: Philippians 3:18,19, "For many [cosmic believers who are losers] keep walking [in the cosmic system], concerning whom I have communicated to you that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ, whose end is destruction," they will die the sin unto death, "whose god is their emotion," holy-rollers and so on, "whose glory is their shame," at the judgment seat of Christ there is no glory for them, all they have is a resurrection body, "who keep thinking about earthly things," result of cosmic involvement.

The drama of winners and losers at the judgment seat of Christ is emphasised by 1 John 2:28, “And now, dear children [all believers], keep residing in it [the divine dynasphere], so that if he [Christ] should appear [the Rapture followed by the judgment seat of Christ], we might have confidence,” the winner has confidence at the judgment seat of Christ, “and might not be put to shame [that is the loser] by him in his presence.”

Two major declarations are given to the winners with maximum historical impact, and these are as high as any believer could ever go. For life in the divine dynasphere there is a special declaration mentioned in Revelation 2:10, “Keep on becoming faithful unto death and I will give you the crown of life,” the highest decoration for living the Christian life, but not the highest decoration given. But it will be given prior to the awarding of the highest decoration that a human being can ever receive and hold forever and ever, for maximum historical impact. Revelation 2:28, “Furthermore I will give to him [the mature believer, the winner in time] the order of the morning star,” the highest decoration for life on this earth, the highest decoration for historical impact and for glorification of the Lord Jesus Christ. The name for this highest decoration for the mature believer with maximum impact is the order of the morning star. The name is derived from the title of our Lord Jesus Christ. In His strategic and tactical victory our Lord Jesus Christ is called the Morning Star. For example, the strategic victory of the first advent, Numbers 24:7, “A star shall come from Jacob” — the tactical victory of the first advent. The tactical victory of the second advent: 2 Peter 1:19, “And we keep on having a more reliable doctrine,” a doctrine which is more reliable because it is in the Word, more reliable than the empiricism of Peter, James and John on the mount of transfiguration; “with reference to which doctrine you perform honourably,” a reference to the uniform of honour worn by winners in time, invisible since it is a uniform of the soul. It is the result of fulfilling the royal family honour code; it is the result of fulfilling motivating virtue and functional virtue inside the divine dynasphere; “by habitually concentrating in your right lobes on the lamp shining in a dark place [Jesus Christ controls history],” Even though Satan is the ruler of this world the lamp shining in the dark place is Christ controlling history; “until the day dawn [second advent of Christ] and the morning star [our Lord Jesus Christ] has come.” In the strategic victory of the first advent, in the tactical victory of the second advent, our Lord is called the morning star. In the empirical experience of Peter the first showing of the morning star’s uniform of glory is the mount of transfiguration. Christ is the morning star and the uniform of glory is the translucent robe, a robe of light, which He wears over His resurrection body. But even before our Lord received the resurrection body the uniform of glory in eternity — to be contrasted with the uniform of honour in time — was modelled for Peter, James and John on the mount of transfiguration. Our Lord said by way of prophecy, “Truly I say to you, there are some standing here [Peter, James and John] who will not taste death until they see the Son of Man coming in his kingdom.”

This prophecy was fulfilled in Matthew 17:1,2 — “And six days later Jesus took Peter, James and John his brother, and brought them up to a high mountain by themselves. And he was transformed before them; in fact his face shone like the sun, and his clothes became white as light.” That introduces to us that which accompanies this decoration, the highest of all decorations, the order of the morning star. It is the uniform of glory first seen on the mount of transfiguration, and now in the humanity of Christ a constantly worn uniform of translucence, a uniform of light. The “uniform of glory” is how we will designate it.

5. The decoration of the morning star. Again, Revelation 2:28, the order of the morning star is the highest decoration that God can give a human being, a decoration for historical impact, a decoration for life in the divine dynasphere as manifest by the crown of life. The decoration of the morning star includes the privilege of wearing the uniform of glory, a uniform of translucent light over the resurrection body. Revelation 3:4, “But you have a few people in Sardis,” a pivot of mature believers living in the divine dynasphere contributing to the historical uptrend plus national blessing. In other words, mature believers having maximum impact on history through their life in the divine dynasphere; “who have not soiled their clothes,” a reference to the uniform of honour worn by the mature believer in time. The winner wears the uniform of honour in time; “in fact they will walk with me in whites (plural),” the translucent uniform of glory worn over the resurrection body, but worn by winners only. Believers who fulfil life in the cosmic system will have a resurrection body but no uniform of glory. The uniform of glory is worn with the order of the morning star, the two go together, “because they are worthy,” i.e. they have been decorated with the order of the morning star. The decoration includes presentation in the court of heaven. While the Tribulation is occurring on earth those who have had maximum historical impact through living in the divine dynasphere and advancing to maturity. That is, the winners are going to be presented at court, the highest honour that God can give a Church Age believer. They will be specifically presented in the court of heaven to God the Father, Revelation 3:5, “Thus the winner shall be clothed in a white garment,” the translucent uniform of glory worn by the winners of the morning star, the same translucent uniform worn by our Lord Jesus Christ as of the moment of His resurrection; “and I will never blot his name,” the new knighthood which accompanies the order of the morning star; “out of the book of life; in fact I will acknowledge,” the presentation of morning star winners in the court of heaven during the Tribulation; “his name,” a new knighthood received at the judgment seat of Christ; “in the presence of my Father, and before his angels.” Winners will be presented in the court of heaven; losers will cool their heels in the second heaven! There is a separation between winners and losers in heaven at this stage. The order of the morning star includes a new knighthood. the order of chivalry for the royal family or Church Age believer, Revelation 2:17 “ ... to the winner [mature believer] I will give him blessing from the hidden manna [blessing in time from maximum doctrine resident in the soul], and I will give him a white pebble [resurrection body]; furthermore, on that pebble has been written a new name [title of knighthood, an honour belonging to those who hold the highest of all decorations, the order of the morning star] written which no one knows except he who receives it,” he alone knows his place in the eternal order of chivalry.

6. The winner returns with Christ at the second advent. All Church Age believers return with Christ at the second advent, winners and losers, 1 Thessalonians 3:13, “at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints,” but those who are winners come with their decorations, the order of the morning star, having received knighthood, and having a uniform of glory. On those winners of the morning star there will be a uniform of glory, Colossians 3:4, “on the occasion when Christ, our life, shall become manifest [second advent], you also [winners of the morning star] shall become manifest with him [at the second advent] in glory,” wearing the uniform of glory, a special reward for winners only.

7. Winners will also be involved in the operation footstool and our Lord’s triumphal procession. After AD 70 of the Church Age Israel no longer functions as the client nation. The Church Age began roughly between 30-32 AD. From 70 AD we have the times of the Gentiles when only a Gentile nation can function as a client nation to God. In 70 AD the first one was SPQR; today it is USA. Then comes the Rapture, the end of the Church Age. There will be no client nations during the Tribulation that follows. Instead, 144,000 individual Jewish evangelists and Bible teachers will take the place of a client nation. Then comes the second advent. Christ returns, winners return with Him in the uniform of glory, and at that time there will be a coup de tat and Satan will be set aside. There will be a triumphal procession, operation footstool, and the winners will be involved in that as well.

Psalm 110:1 describes it this way. “The Lord [God the Father] has said to my Lord [God the Son]: Sit down at my right hand” — a prophecy in the Psalms of the ascension and session of our Lord; “until I make your enemies a footstool for your feet [second advent].” Operation footstool begins at the second advent and includes the termination of the Armageddon campaign of the Tribulation, the baptism of fire which separates believer from unbeliever, and the coup de tat in which Satan loses the rulership of planet earth. Both Satan and all fallen angels will be incarcerated for 1000 years to make room for perfect environment in the Millennium.

The importance of Psalm 110:1 is noted from the numerous quotations in the New Testament, Matthew 24:22; Mark 12:36; Luke 20:43; Acts 2:35; Hebrews 1:13; 10:13, etc. Operation footstool includes the three phases of the triumphal procession. The actual procession itself is recorded numerous times because it was such a prominent thing in Roman history. Those who had the greatest impact historically were allowed the triumphal procession. Our Lord’s triumph relates to His victory over two categories of His enemies: angelic and human. The unbelievers of the Tribulation are dealt with in the baptism of fire. In the triumphal procession the prisoners and the booty always came first. The prisoners include Satan and all the fallen angels who have functioned under Satan’s command since Genesis 6. Next in the procession comes the triumphant general, a counsel, a tribune, and later on a ruler, a Caesar. Our Lord Jesus Christ comes in the triumphal procession. Then follows the army, the royal family of God, Church Age believers in resurrection bodies. Losers are just there; winners are wearing the order of the morning star on the uniform of glory. Some of the royal family are winners and some are losers, they will all be there. In the triumphal procession of the second advent all the demons who serve under Satan are disarmed for public exhibition, Colossians 2:15, “And having disarmed demon archons [generals] and commissioned officers he [Christ at the second advent] made a public display of them having celebrated a triumphal procession over them by means of it [the strategic victory of the cross in the first advent].”

At the end of the triumphal procession it always ended up in Rome by the dungeon, and at the end the prisoners were put in the dungeons. Sometimes they were executed. In this case we have 1 Corinthians 15:23-25. The prisoners [demons] will be cast into prison.

“Each man [believer] in his own battalion: Christ the firstfruits [Alpha company], after that those who are Christ’s at his coming [Bravo company of the royal family, the Rapture]. Then the end [of the Tribulation, the second advent], when he [Christ] delivers up the kingdom even to God the Father,” Christ takes the rulership of the world from Satan, gives it to God the Father who in turn gives it back to Him through a coronation, “when he [Christ] has abolished all rule [of Satan] and all authority [the dictators of the Tribulation] and power [the removal of all demons from planet earth],” as per Zechariah 13:2; Colossians 2:15. “For he must reign,” our Lord must reign for the 1000 years of the Millennium; “until he has put all enemies under his feet.”

The final part of this triumphal procession is the incarceration of Satan, described in Revelation 20:1-3, “And I saw an angel coming down from heaven, having the key to the abyss and a great chain in his hand. And he seized the dragon, the serpent of old, who is the devil and Satan, and incarcerated him for a thousand years, and threw him into the abyss, which he both shut and sealed until the thousand years were finished.” The winners will be there in the triumphal procession. Their significance? Wearing the uniform of glory, the new knighthood, the crown of life, the order of the morning star.

What is really tragic is that if you are a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ these decorations are open to you in the future, but some of you are certainly going to have to change your attitude toward Bible doctrine.

8. The winner is also at the coronation of Christ and the wedding supper which follows, Revelation 19:6-8. “And I heard, as it were, the sound of a great crowd of people [Church Age believers in resurrection bodies, winners and losers] and as the sound of many waters [Old Testament believers who now have resurrection bodies because they receive them at the second advent with Tribulational martyrs. These are the friends of the groom of John 3:29] and as the sound of mighty thunderings [believers of the Tribulation who survive to the coming of Christ. They will form a nucleus, a cadre for the population explosion of the Millennium. They are said to be the friends of the bride in Matthew 25:1-13], saying, Praise the Lord! because the Lord God [Jesus Christ], the total ruler, has now become King.”

In verse 7 we have the wedding supper of the Lamb. “Let us be extremely happy,” there are degrees of happiness in heaven, maximum happiness going to the winner of the morning star, “and celebrate with maximum happiness. Let us give glory to him [Christ is the groom who has just been crowned ruler of the world] because the marriage of the Lamb has come and his bride [the Church] has made herself ready,” that would be the judgment seat of Christ, and for morning star winners presentation in the court of heaven during the time of the Tribulation.

Verse 8, “Also it shall be given to her that she [the Church, the Bride of Christ] should be clothed in fine linen,” fine linen belongs to winners and losers. It includes all believers of the Church Age. Hence, it is not the same as the uniform of glory, it is rather the imputed righteousness received at salvation parlayed into ultimate sanctification at resurrection. All winners and losers receive the benefit of ultimate sanctification but there is a difference. For some there is something bright, “bright.” This part is limited to morning star winners who are also given the uniform of glory, “and unsoiled,” for morning star winners the uniform of honour in time is exchanged at the judgment seat of Christ for the uniform of glory. The uniform of glory means those who wear it are going to rule nations for a thousand years. The fine linen has to be explained, the uniform of glory is obvious from other passages. The fine linen is the ultimate “righteousness,” the resurrection body minus the old sin nature, “of the saints.”

Verse 9, “And he communicated to me, Write, Happiness belongs to the ones who have been invited to the marriage supper of the lamb,” maximum happiness for winners, those who receive at the judgment seat of Christ the order of the morning star. Three categories of people are invited: the bride, Church Age believers, winners and losers, with emphasis on the prominence belonging to the mature believer who holds the order of the morning star and wears the uniform of glory at the wedding feast; secondly the friends of the groom, the Old Testament saints, with special emphasis on Moses and Elijah who were martyrs in the Tribulation as well, Revelation 11:3; thirdly, invited to the wedding supper are the friends of the bride, the Tribulational believers who are alive at the second advent. This cadre of believers forms the nucleus for that population explosion of the Millennium.

9. The authority of the order of the morning star in the Millennium, or when anonymous heroes are going to become well-known heroes. The authority of the morning star in the Millennium is described in Revelation 2:26-28, “And so the winner, even he who keeps my assignments until the end [of phase two], to him I will give authority over the nations.” Notice that when Jesus Christ rules the world under perfect environment of the Millennium there will still be nationalism, not internationalism. “And he [the Lord Jesus Christ] will rule them with an iron sceptre,” criminals will be executed immediately. There will be capital punishment under the perfect environment of the Millennium; “as pots made of clay are shattered,” capital punishment in the Millennium; “as I also have received authority from my Father. Furthermore I will give to him [the one who is going to rule] the order of the morning star,” the highest decoration for historical impact and spiritual maturity in the Church Age.

10. The function of the morning star in the Millennium, Revelation 20:4. “And I saw thrones, and they that sat on them,” those who hold the morning star and wear the uniform of glory; “and judgment [rulership] was given to them,” they are going to rule for one thousand years as the most famous rulers in history.

11. The privilege of the morning star decoration in the eternal state. Certain privileges not only are related to history but certain privileges are related to eternity. In the eternal state there will be the ultimate in eternal happiness. There are degrees of happiness in eternity and the ultimate in eternal happiness in the privileged access to the gazebo in the garden, Revelation 2:7, “To the winner I will give him the privilege of eating from the tree of life in the paradise of God.” That is in eternity for the one who holds the morning star and wears the uniform of glory, and only that person will be permitted in to the gazebo of the garden, the privilege of eating at the tree of life in the paradise of God. The highest order of eternal chivalry in the new knighthood of Revelation 2:17, “To the winner I will give him blessing from the hidden manna, and I will give him a white pebble [resurrection body], furthermore on that pebble has been written a new name which no one knows except the one who has received it." There is the new order of knighthood. In chapter three we anticipate several other special privileges that go with this decoration. For example, a pillar in the temple. It has to be remembered that in the ancient world temples like the one in Ephesus had special pillars in which a famous king was allowed to write in gold and give the story of why he was famous. He also would put jewels and other valuable things into that pillar so that when people walked through that temple they would see a history book, not as we have history books made of paper, but out of a pillar. And there is a history book that will last forever and ever, it is the pillar in the temple of heaven. On that pillar will be the name, the knighthood, the decorations, and it will be a permanent history as to who was really important in this life.

Verse 26, "Furthermore the winner, even he who keeps my assignments until the end [the termination of phase two, God's plan for time] ... " Next we have the future active indicative of the verb didomi, which means to give. With this we have the dative singular indirect object from the intensive pronoun a)utoj, "I will give to him" or "to him I will give," it can be read either way. The future tense of the word didomi is a predictive future, it anticipates the second advent and the reign of Christ. As we have noted, the decoration of the order of the morning star is received at the judgment seat of Christ. With it is the uniform of glory made of translucent light exactly like the uniform of glory on the resurrection body of our Lord Jesus Christ. Losers will not have either one of these decorations. These decorations have many privileges in eternity and they have a fantastic impact in future history. Those who are invisible anonymous heroes of history at the present time are believers in the Lord Jesus Christ who have advanced to maturity, going from gate four to gate eight of the divine dynasphere. These same people, although unknown in the textbooks of modern history, are going to be famous and well-known in the future, for they will have a special presentation in the court of heaven during the Tribulation, and their name with their new knighthood is going to be given in the presentation before God the Father and the angels of heaven. Then they will return with Christ, they will be in operation footstool, they will be at the coronation of our Lord Jesus Christ, they will be present in a very special way at the wedding supper of the Lamb. And then they will be famous and well-known for God is going to present those who have won the order of the morning star in their uniform of glory to the population of the Millennium, and this is where we come in with the next phrase, "I will give to him [the one who has the order of the morning star]." The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb at the judgment seat of Christ. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of Bible doctrine. Winners will be rewarded; winners unknown and anonymous at the present will be well-known at another time in history. The dative of indirect object of the intensive pronoun is the dative of advantage as well as indicating those mature believers who have the order of the morning star. They are going to rule nations in the Millennium. Remember that in the Millennium the order of the day will still be nationalism. The Millennium is a time of perfect environment, Jesus Christ rules the world but He administers the rulership of the world through those believers of the Church Age who are decorated with the order of the morning star, the uniform of glory and the crown of life.

“I will give to him authority,” the accusative singular direct object of the noun e)ousia, which means “authority.” Then follows the prepositional phrase e)pi plus the genitive plural of e)qnoj, and it is correctly translated, “over the nations.” E)qnoj always refers to Gentile nations.

Corrected translation: “Furthermore the winner, even he who keeps my assignments until the end [termination of phase two], to him I will give authority over the nations.”

Keeping our Lord’s assignments is a daily function, making good decisions every day, making decisions for doctrine, making decisions for residence and function inside of the divine dynasphere.

This verse is a Millennial reference. The Millennium is a time of perfect environment on the earth. The lion and the lamb will lie down side by side, the swords will be turned into ploughshares, the spears into pruning hooks, and man will learn war no more. That passage in Isaiah applies only to the Millennium. Our Lord Jesus Christ told us very clearly that until the Millennium there will be wars and rumours of wars, and the only way to stop warfare is to be prepared and to be tough.

The statement found in verse 26 is a reward to mature believers, those who hold the order of the morning star, those who have the uniform of glory — these will also have the crown of life. The prepositional phrase indicates the fact that even under perfect environment nationalism will exist during the Millennium. The only possible way to keep the human race from its arrogance and from self-destructing is nationalism, breaking the human race down into national entities. This means that the laws of divine establishment will still be mandatory even in perfect environment. And it also means that in the perfect environment of the Millennium three things will be sacred: freedom, property, and human life. In the perfect environment of the Millennium mankind still has an old sin nature and while Satan is incarcerated for 1000 years and the cosmic system is defunct the existence of human volition and the old sin nature means the necessity for both the laws of divine establishment and the use of authority under perfect environment. Authority must be delegated by God for the administration of the perfect environment of the Millennium. Human history began with perfect environment in the garden of Eden, human history terminates with 1000 years of perfect environment on the entire earth. Part of that perfect environment in the function of the authority of our Lord and the function of the authority of believers who in the future will have the order of the morning star and the uniform of glory, and will be the most famous people in history. Perfect environment still demands the function of authority to coexist with man’s volition and the use of his freedom, his self-determination. While legitimate authority exists the authority depends on human volition for its function.

Authority and human volition

1. All authority in life is divided into two categories: legitimate and illegitimate. Examples of illegitimate authority — Joe Stain, Adolf Hitler.

2. Legitimate authority is defined as those powers delegated by God to human beings under the laws of divine establishment.

3. God delegates authority through His mandates recorded in the Word of God, Deuteronomy 11:27; 1 Samuel 15:22; Jeremiah 7:23; 11:4,7. Before the canon of scripture was completed these mandates were given through prophets and through apostles and other communicators of doctrine.

4. God has authority over nature. Nature obeys God, Matthew 8:27; Mark 4:41; Luke 8:25.

5. Angelic creatures are also subject to divine authority, Mark 1:27; 1 Peter 3:22.

6. However, here we are dealing with authority in the human realm and all such legitimate authority is delegated by God. Without this authority the human race could not coexist in any numbers and it is understanding authority that is the basis for growing up. Some people never grow up because they have no concept of authority, they think their freedom doesn't need any regulation or any sense of responsibility.

Example of legitimate authority delegated by God: Pastors have authority over congregations, 1 Corinthians 16:15,16; 2 Corinthians 10:8; 1 Thessalonians 5:12; Hebrews 13:7,17.

7. The government has authority over people to protect the sanctity of freedom, property, and human life.

8. The husband has authority over the wife, parents over children, teachers over students, coaches over athletes, management over labour.

9. The proper establishment use of authority in business stabilises the economy, Ephesians 6:5; Colossians 3:22.

10. Freedom through military victory is based on authority of military rank, Nehemiah 4:13-15.

There also coexists illegitimate authority. Illegitimate authority is established by Satan through the function of the cosmic system. The twenty-six gates of the interlocking systems of arrogance and the nine gates of interlocking systems of hatred, the two cosmic dynaspheres of Satan's administration, have all a system of illegitimate authority. In the angelic conflict man was created with free will. He has therefore the freedom, the free will, the self-determination to choose between legitimate and illegitimate authority — legitimate authority delegated by God; illegitimate authority provided through the Satanic administration of the rulership of this world. Therefore, all human authority is a matter of human choice, human volition.. Legitimate authority won't work unless someone accepts that authority, and even illegitimate authority won't work unless someone accepts that authority. There is no authority in life unless your volition says so, and if you are a law unto yourself then pretty soon authority will catch up with you. The laws of divine establishment also include capital punishment.

The function of authority is a matter of personal volition

1. The acceptability of authority in life depends on human volition and therefore thousands of decisions. Freedom gives the option of accepting or rejecting authority in life — legitimate or illegitimate authority.

2. All illegitimate authority in life is based on the function of the cosmic system, and people choosing for the cosmic system.

3. Arrogance results from rejection of legitimate authority in life and the most basic definition of arrogance is rejection of legitimate authority in life. Therefore arrogant people are always disoriented to life and people who accept no authority inevitably become a drug addict, or something else equally disastrous. Such arrogance is the source of evil, disorientation, and psychosis. (Very rarely is psychosis originating from physiological problems, it originates from the volition — we are the products of our own volition)

4. While God has delegated authority in life to government, to husbands, to parents, to teachers and coaches and police officers, to judges, to management, this authority is useless unless human volition accepts it.

5. The husband has legitimate authority over the wife but if the wife does not accept that authority he has no authority. Who says he has authority? His authority is useless unless the wife from her very own free will recognises and accepts that authority. That is why the Word of God commands that the husband loves the wife. The wife is never commanded to love the husband, she is commanded to obey him.

6. While parents have legitimate authority in the home this authority is useless unless the children from their own free will recognise and accept it. And while a parent loves his children, if he is normal, the children doesn't have to love him at all, but they have to have something far more important than love. They must respect him. A child's love doesn't mean a thing. With the right kind of candy you can get the love of any child under five, so the person who bring along the right candy is the one they love at the moment. Today we live in a degenerate society. Children have no respect for their parents and if they do not respect their parents they will respect no authority outside the home. If they do not respect authority in the home they do not respect authority outside the home.

7. Legitimate authority is only effective where human volition responds to it. With children it is easy, you can condition them to obey. With the wife you cannot!

8. This is why we have crime, terrorism, revolution, dictatorship, slavery, and other functions of evil because legitimate authority is only effective when human volition responds to it.

9. We are the products of our own volition, therefore when we choose for legitimate authority we are blessed, but when we choose for the cosmic system with its locked-in arrogance we are both punished by our wrong decisions and eventually individually and collectively punished by God.

The believer is protected by the directive will of God

1. Human volition can override the directive will of God. When this happens we go to the permissive will of God. God does not coerce volition. The doctrine of divine decrees is not fatalism. So when you make a decision against God's directive will, like Balaam, then you move over into the permissive will of God; He permits you to use your own volition to make your own mistakes.

2. The permissive will of God is based on the fact of human volition and human freedom as the means of resolving the angelic conflict.

3. The doctrine of the permissive will of God permits the function of human volition under the principle of human freedom. God permits mistakes up to a point, but He warns though He doesn't coerce.

4. Therefore the permissive will of God becomes activated when the believer rejects the directive will of God.

5. However, if the believer uses his volition to attempt to destroy human authority then he moves into the category of the overruling will of God.

6. The believer was designated to function under the directive will of God. Logistical grace is designed for the believer to function under the directive will of God.

7. When the believer rejects the authority of God's Word and the content of the mandates contained therein he has in essence through his own free will destroyed the authority of God in his life. He has reverted to the cosmic system and the authority of Satan as the author of evil.

Dictatorship and evil

1. People use their own free will to gravitate to a system of power, especially in time of historical disaster.
2. When people gravitate to the power of the divine dynasphere they use their volition to make good decisions for legitimate authority, plus inevitable divine blessing.
3. However, when people gravitate through their own free will to the power of the cosmic system they use their own volition to make bad decisions and to give authority to evil leaders with disastrous consequences. In other words, evil has no authority apart from human consent. Wherever evil exists someone has agreed to it; they have used their free will to accept the authority of evil. We are the products of our own decisions and we constantly assign authority to evil people representing the cosmic system. Therefore in history disaster is the result of individual and collective decisions of the people; they are the products of their own decisions. The winners in history never deviate from the divine authority of God's directive will and His mandates which lead the believer to spiritual maturity and establishes the pivot for personal and national blessing in the client nation to God.

Summary of historical trends

1. Even though history is the record of man's thoughts, decisions, actions, motivations, Jesus Christ controls history. There are two sources of judgment in history: the sovereign decisions of our Lord Jesus Christ and the erroneous decisions of mankind.
2. As goes the believer so goes historical trends at any point in any given generation of the Church Age. Residence and function inside of the divine dynasphere means historical uptrend while involvement in the cosmic system means historical downtrend.
3. People individually and collectively are the products of their own decisions. Decisions create environment, not environment decisions. In other words, there are no tragedies in history, rather historical disasters. These disasters are not tragedies since both individuals and nations are the products of their own decisions. The pattern of historical disaster begins with economic depression, moves to social degeneracy, and military disaster. God generally selects the most evil nation to administer the fourth and fifth cycles of discipline to a client nation to God.
4. Individual subjectivity destroys national objectivity. Arrogant people or arrogant nations never see their own inconsistencies, only the inconsistencies of others. Jealous people and envious nations never see their own sins and production of evil, only the sins and evil production of others. This is why our Lord Jesus Christ, while He was on earth, enucleated a very special doctrine: the doctrine of perpetual warfare. Until the Lord returns warfare will never cease on the earth.

5. The demand for power exceeds the need for power. The need for power is determined by the laws of divine establishment which defines legitimate authority in the civil realm. The demand for power is determined by the motivating evil of cosmic one and the functional evil of cosmic two. Legitimate power always functions in the context of legitimate authority delegated by God through the laws of divine establishment, so that authority is defined for personal life, social life, economic life, professional life, national life, and spiritual life. Evil and its destructive power exists to the extent that cosmic arrogance exceeds the restraints of legitimate power and authority. Since we are the products of our own decisions and self-determination rather than environment, motivational and functional evil of the cosmic system can only be restrained through gate three of the divine dynasphere — enforced and genuine humility.

6. Historical trends are related to the conflict between objective reality or life in the divine dynasphere, versus subjective reality or life in the cosmic system. Believers are not only the products of their own decisions but the nation in which they reside is affected by their good or bad decisions. Good decisions relate to life in the divine dynasphere; bad decisions relate to life in the cosmic system. Arrogant individuals, groups or nations never see the disastrous consequences of their own bad decisions related to the cosmic system of Satan. Preoccupation with self to the exclusion of objective reality is the greatest blindness problem in life and the major explanation for such things as criminality.

7. There is no progress in innovation without truth or without a legitimate system. Innovation without truth is historically disastrous while innovation without a bona fide system is destructive. Innovation without a system includes such things as modern art, religious cults, rock and hard music, weirdo poetry, everything from Gnosticism to communism. Innovation imposed on others without their consent runs the gamut from personal arrogance to collective tyranny. Redistribution of wealth, the welfare state, socialism and communism are innovations of disaster.

8. Too often history is the story of how the weak control the strong. Weak, insecure, irresponsible, thoughtless, arrogant people often control policy, procedures and people. This is in social life, culture, business, professional life, government, churches, almost anywhere where organisation exists. Through arrogant self-centredness and preoccupation with self the weak in society control and manipulate the strong. This is why a nagging wife creates a scene in public and dominates a courteous and kind husband; this is why peons and scum are possessive and often control nice people; this is why irrational, self-righteous crusaders often dominate in politics and government administration; this is how a power-mad, irresponsible press can dominate and destroy great leaders.

9. Man's strength lies in the non-meritorious use of his volition, not in his human volition. With his volition the believer can make right decisions relating to God's power and Bible doctrine, but he can also make wrong decisions based on subjectivity and human arrogance and thereby succumb to Satanic propaganda [cosmic system], choosing to believe Satan's deceitful and clever propaganda, whether in religion, philosophy, psychology, sociology or political science, or any other thought system or any other academic subject, resulting in choosing and thinking in the environment of the cosmic system. This does not imply that the academic subjects mentioned are all Satanic viewpoint, far from it, but most of them from time to time contain a great deal of human viewpoint. Such a choice thereafter limits the use of one's free will to bad decisions, until one runs out of bad decisions, closing the doors to all options in life and terminating life on earth with the maximum punishment which we have studied under the title "the sin unto death." By choosing divine truth in three categories — establishment for everyone, the gospel for the unbeliever, doctrine for the believer — the decision results in both residence and function in the divine dynasphere where the filling of the Spirit at gate one produces the power where basic impersonal love at gate two produces the objectivity and where enforced and genuine humility at gate three produce teachability for greater options in life plus personal blessing and the glorification of our Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore man must inevitably choose something greater than himself by which to live. He must choose greater wisdom, greater power, and greater ability. There are only two power systems available today: the divine dynasphere first used in prototype by our Lord Jesus Christ during His incarnation, and the cosmic system of Satan which has been operational on planet earth since the original fall of man. If man is to live by his wits he must live by his volition. Non-meritorious use of volition, linking up with grace and the plan of God, results in historical blessing by association for all.

10. Too often history is the narrative of man's weaknesses, then, and not his strength. Inside the divine dynasphere the battle is the Lord's, and you win; inside the cosmic system the battle is yours, and you lose. There are no winners in the cosmic system, just different categories of losers; there are no losers in the divine dynasphere, just different categories of winners. There would be no human history without man's wrong decisions, and wrong decisions are made every day in the cosmic system. This is a part of the great conflict between the arrogance of the cosmic system and the humility of the divine dynasphere. Weakness becomes strength by choosing for the divine dynasphere, while strength becomes weakness by choosing for the cosmic system, so that no one can really evaluate your life and say that you are always strong, you are always strong, you are always great, you are always this. Any time you choose to go into the cosmic system, whatever your strong points happen to be they are drowned, they are immersed in weakness. There are no strong-points for the believer living in the cosmic system.

Once Adam ate from the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil history becomes a matter of self-determination. Adam made a wrong decision and now the human race is plagued with wrong decisions. The use of human volition is therefore the issue in life. To make good decisions you open options for greater decisions and blessings. If you make bad decisions you destroy those options. The historical trends of the Church Age are related to the believer's choices of options. The believers choosing for the divine dynasphere, making a large pivot in any generation, means a generation of great blessing, but believers choosing and making options for the cosmic system means a generation of disaster. So good decisions are made for the divine dynasphere, bad decisions are made by the believer for the cosmic system. While man is free mankind in general is weak. Mankind is born in weakness, he lives in weakness, and often dies in weakness. He is born in weakness, therefore he must use his volition. The greatest thing we have going for us is free will and all of us must use our free will to identify with a power system greater than we are which can turn weakness into strength, and that of course is the divine dynasphere. There is also a power system that turns strength into weakness — the cosmic system. So inside the divine dynasphere men's lives are changed by doctrine; inside the cosmic system men's lives are changed by arrogance, by motivating and functional evil. Under the principle of liberty man must be free to succeed but by the same token man must be free to fail. Therefore true freedom is the source of both failure and success. This is one of the many things that is vicious about communism, because communism relates failure or success to the State instead of to the Word of God, and the State becomes God rather than the Bible.

11. Knowledge of truth manufactures freedom. The principle is stated in John 8:32 — “You shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free.” This is another way of saying that good decisions create options for greater decisions while bad decisions destroy those options. The cosmic system has the power to change lives for the worst while the divine dynasphere has the power to change lives for the better. Better or worse are two concepts that we face in our daily lives. None of us stand still, we are constantly moving in one direction or the other. That is why volition is operational until by either wrong decisions you destroy your mentality or you become a vegetable in some other way, or you depart from this life through physical death. So better or worse is the daily option of the free will function in the sphere of freedom. Freedom carries the responsibility of making decisions based on truth or, what we call Bible doctrine, rather than making decisions based upon arrogance and evil. Preoccupation with yourself is arrogance; preoccupation with Satanic doctrine is evil. Furthermore, recognition of our weaknesses is neither demeaning nor degrading.

All solutions to life begin with weakness and with the grace principle is the only true principle in life that recognises that we are weak. We cannot save ourselves so we are saved by God's provision, “For by grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God, not of works lest any man should boast.” Once we are saved we are still weak. We are inferior to angels and we are in various degrees of inferiority in the field of mankind. While people constantly think in terms of superiority you cannot get down to making objective decisions until in humility you recognise that you are a member of the human race and that you have weaknesses like all members of the human race. Man is helpless and hopeless without God's provision, so all solutions to life begin with weakness and the recognition of our failures, and then move to God's provision for strength and integrity. All strength in life is not from muscle but from integrity. True strength and honour is a function of the soul, not a function of the body. Weakness in the unbeliever makes evangelism meaningful while weakness in the believer makes doctrine meaningful. If man is not free to fail he cannot orient to his need for Christ and if the believer is not free to fail he cannot orient to the need of life in the divine dynasphere, the need for daily perception of Bible doctrine. So by taking the responsibility for his own failures, which in effect is taking responsibility for his own decisions, all human failure comes from personal decision. Therefore we all fail but those who take responsibility for their failures have the beginning of a solution. Those who blame it on someone else will never have any happiness or solutions to the problems of life. So by taking the responsibility for his own failures and bad decisions man learns his inherent and acquired weaknesses and he seeks for a power system greater than his weaknesses, greater than himself. The principle that turns the tide of history: the greater the use of positive volition toward the power and the plan of God the greater blessing and prosperity for the client nation involved. Therefore knowledge of truth not only manufactures freedom but deliverance and prosperity to the client nation of God.

12. Out of weakness comes strength through positive volition toward truth. We need God we need God's plan for our lives. God's plan begins when we believe in Christ and it continues when we learn Bible doctrine inside the divine dynasphere, the function of gate four. Man is not the master of his fate nor the lord of his destiny. Man lives in the devil's world and through weakness is vulnerable to enslavement in the cosmic system. Man could use his own free will to become a slave or he can use that same free will to become the servant of God, and therefore the sooner the believer realises his need of a power greater than himself and outside of himself the sooner he establishes the right priorities for life and he establishes the pattern of good decisions relating to the divine dynasphere. Man is not an independent power but a creature, and as a creature a creature of weakness whose strength lies in the functions of his soul, especially his volition or free will. In other words, choosing the right power system, choosing the divine dynasphere rather than the cosmic system. Human power, ability, authority, genius, talent, even self-righteousness or a dynamic personality or even great beauty is no substitute for life in the divine dynasphere. And yet today people depend upon these things and almost anything of a creature nature rather than depending upon the provision of the creator, our Lord Jesus Christ. It takes historical or personal disaster to bring the believer to an understanding of how weakness is turned into strength.

In 2 Corinthians 12:9,10 the grace provision of the divine dynasphere is the case in point. After Paul had been praying, and praying a wrong prayer [for the disaster to be taken from him], for the thorn in the flesh to be taken from him he received quite a different answer, "And then he assured me, My grace is sufficient for you, for the power [the divine dynasphere] functions in weakness. Most gladly therefore I will rather demonstrate confidence toward God in my weakness." In other words, that would be the function of motivating virtue inside the divine dynasphere. Remember that motivating virtue is always directed toward God and is a function of the royal priesthood, in this case confidence directed toward God, whereas the functional virtue which is the counterpart is courage directed toward man and circumstances, "in order that the power of Christ [the divine dynasphere] may pitch a tent over me." Then in verse 10 Paul amplifies. "Therefore for the sake of Christ I find contentment," inside of the divine dynasphere there are degrees of happiness. To cover the whole concept we have the word "contentment." Gate one is the filling of the Spirit, there is happiness in the filling of the Spirit. The filling of the Spirit is joy [happiness]; Gate two, basic impersonal love; Gate three, enforced and genuine humility; Gate four, perception and application of doctrine, the momentum gate; Gate five, love of God; Gate six; right man, right woman where pertinent; Gate seven, friendship, advanced impersonal love; Gate eight, maturity, the ultimate. Each one of these gates represents a degree of happiness. Functioning inside of the divine dynasphere means contentment. Contentment covers all of the degrees of happiness that are available to the believer including maximum happiness from living at gate eight, "in weaknesses [helpless situations], in the antagonisms of arrogance [opposition from cosmic one], in pressures [momentum testing], in persecutions [opposition from cosmic two], in disasters [hopeless situations], for when I am weak then I am strong,” all true strength comes from weakness plus the provision of logistical grace, and that would include God’s gracious provision of the divine dynasphere.

13. The principle of borrowed strength. Borrowed strength is weakness acquired, whereas power is acquired strength. Acquired strength is that spiritual power which results from residence and function inside the divine dynasphere, and that includes spiritual momentum from doctrinal perception. But on the other hand borrowed strength is that form of human weakness by which the believer becomes involved in the cosmic system. He becomes involved in the cosmic system by depending on apparent strength and alleged wisdom — the apparent strength of others and the alleged wisdom of others. The implication of course is obvious: you can use your own free will or you can use your volition to gain strength in the divine dynasphere, or you can use your same volition to borrow strength and live in the cosmic system in a state of weakness. The believer who lives in the divine dynasphere gains strength through his daily decisions to learn Bible doctrine, Philippians 4:13, “I have the endowed power [the divine dynasphere] to attain all things [spiritual maturity] by means of the one [the Holy Spirit at gate one] who keeps on pouring the power into me [Bible doctrine].”

The question arises, How do I know when I am borrowing strength? Very simply: make your social life with the wrong crowd, make decisions to go with people who influence you erroneously. 1 Corinthians 15:33 puts it this way: “Do not be deceived, evil companions corrupt good morals.” How else can you borrow strength? Take bad advice or simply go through life being influenced by what people advise rather than what Bible doctrine says; never learn any doctrine, just depend on others for advice (Nothing is worse than taking advice from strangers); never have a thought of your own, you are weak all of your life; depend on the counsel of others, which means using someone else as a crutch rather than learning and applying doctrine for yourself; use someone else’s scale of values rather than developing your own through doctrine. Eventually some people go other ways, they depend on chemicals for comfort and courage: drug addiction, getting your strength out of a bottle. When you depend on others for happiness you will never be happy; when you are a self-contained unit you will find great happiness with others — if you bring your own happiness with you. So depending on others for happiness rather than living inside the divine dynasphere and deriving your happiness from the function of the various eight gates is borrowing strength.

The illustration: You can’t build muscle and strength by designating someone else to go to the gym and take a workout for you, you have to do it yourself. You must make the decision and you must do the exercise. You can’t gain spiritual momentum or achieve spirituality by sending a proxy to church to learn doctrine. You must relate your own volition to what you do, not what others do. Wimps spend their whole lives relating their volition to what others do. You must make daily and consistent decisions to go to church and learn doctrine for yourself and not be distracted by the opinions of others or the influence of some believer in the cosmic system. You must decide to learn doctrine, no one else can learn it for you.

14. No nation has permanently survived the prosperity of manifest destiny. The three components of manifest destiny: a landed aristocracy and agricultural economy which moves to an industrial complex, and it has an undeveloped frontier which in the first part of its history actually absorbs the failures in the landed aristocracy system plus the failures in the industrial complex — people who have talent and who work hard but they simply can't make it in the industrial complex of the landed aristocracy but they do very well in the undeveloped frontier. Historically England went this way. For prosperity to exist all three components must be combined under the leadership of the middle class industrial complex. Inevitably if the nation is going to become a client nation to God the industrial complex must carry the leadership, must dominate. And during the combined process there is a struggle for freedom, the attainment of freedom, the establishment of freedom, the capacity for freedom necessary for the function of the client nation to God. When all components of the client nation are combined under the leadership of the industrial complex there is great prosperity and inevitably prosperity tests. Once the prosperity of manifest destiny is established through consolidation it cannot be perpetuated apart from a maximum number of believers living in the divine dynasphere and learning Bible doctrine. The pivot of mature believers which perpetuates the prosperity of manifest destiny is formed by residence and function inside the divine dynasphere and/or advancing from gate four to gate eight through the perception and application of doctrine. However, when believers become so wrapped up with life of prosperity that they neglect doctrine and transfer to the cosmic system to exploit and enjoy their prosperity they use their very own volition to destroy themselves and eventually the client nation to God. In other words, it is the prosperity of any client nation to God which brings ruin and destruction to that client nation. No nation has gone down under adversity, it goes down under prosperity. Prosperity creates the climate for destruction. Prosperity leads to economic, social and military decline. The cosmic system, then, becomes the detractor and the basis for failure to pass the prosperity test, both individually and nationally. The cosmic system offers pseudo prosperity by eliminating capacity and perspective and by putting up such things as promotion, success, money, pleasure, approbation, social and sexual prosperity as substitutes. In their proper place all of these things are legitimate expressions of happiness but in the cosmic system they are the expression of evil. All capacity for prosperity comes from Bible doctrine or truth and is related to humility. The freedom and doctrine which produce the prosperity we have today has suddenly become secondary and freedom is distorted into a system of pleasure leading to social degeneration. It also has distorted into a system of welfare State leading to economic disaster. Therefore self-gratification rather than the enjoyment of prosperity is always and inevitably the ruin of a nation. Prosperity cannot be enjoyed or maintained apart from doctrine or truth and therefore, again, as goes the believer so goes the client nation. Prosperity cannot be perpetuated apart from residence and function in the divine dynasphere. The administration of the fifth cycle of discipline destroys both the client nation to God and the principle of manifest destiny, and therefore the important historical trend. The pivot of mature believers is the basis for the perpetuation of prosperity in the client nation to God. Historically no nation has permanently survived the prosperity of manifest destiny and in these times of the Gentiles

SPQR holds the record of having the longest period of prosperity. So authority is a matter of human volition. This is a part of the same principle.

We have seen that all authority in life is dependant on human volition. We are free to accept or reject authority in life. All legitimate authority is delegated by God through the laws of divine establishment and through the principles of freedom; all illegitimate authority is based on the functions of the cosmic system. And while God has delegated authority in the human race — like government, marriage, home — this authority is no good unless human volition accepts it. While the husband has legitimate authority over the wife his authority is useless unless the wife from her own free will recognises and accepts it. While parents have legitimate authority in the home that authority is useless unless children from their own free will recognise and accept it. That is why the principle that all great leadership involves salesmanship. Authority is useless and meaningless unless recognised and accepted by human volition. This is why when we have revolution, violence, crime, and other functions of evil, and this explains the rise of Hitler in Germany or Lenin in Russia.

15. Historical disaster to the client nation occurs in three categories. The first is economic depression, the accumulation of bad decisions regarding free enterprise. It can be government destruction of industry, labour destruction of industry, or management destruction of industry. Secondly, social degeneration. Individual bad decisions destroy the structure of society. The sacredness of freedom, property and life are ignored or rejected. Integrity disappears from society and is replaced by every form of crime or immorality. The third is military defeat. No nation can win a war when the manpower suffers from social degeneration and the industrial complex cannot provide logistical support. No nation can win a war without logistics and the great secret weapon is to have the backing of an industrial complex that can out-produce the enemy. Without it there is no hope for winning any future wars of any size.

Psalm Two

Under the laws of divine establishment three things are sacred: human freedom, human property, life. The laws of divine establishment revolve around these three principles and they stand or fall together. In the eyes of God people who rob a home are just as evil as the people who take life or destroy freedom. Life becomes cheap when people feel free to steal, and when you have a maximum amount of stealing such as we have in this country today that means that life is not regarded as very much. When there is no sacredness to property there is no sacredness to life and obviously freedom suffers.

Under this particular concept that we have been studying God has ordained and delegated a system of authority to protect freedom, property and life. That authority includes the judge sitting on the bench, the police officer, the military establishment protecting from criminals without, the concept of free enterprise in the economy. Everything has to have a system of authority to function. Management has the authority in economy, not labour; the police officer has the authority on the street; the judge has the authority in the court; the parents have the authority in the home; the husband has the authority over the wife; the teacher has the authority over the students; the coach has the authority over the members of the team. Authority is the secret to happiness; authority is just as important as freedom. We have to have both and you can't have one without the other.

So all authority in life is divided into two categories — legitimate authority and illegitimate authority. The believer in the divine dynasphere recognises and functions under legitimate authority; the believer in the cosmic system functions under illegitimate authority which results in economic depression, social degeneration, and military defeat. Legitimate authority is defined by those powers delegated by God to human beings under the laws of divine establishment. God delegates authority through His mandates. Government has authority over people to protect the sanctity of freedom, property and life; the husband has the authority over the wife, the parents over the children, the teachers over the students, the coaches over the athletes, management over labour, and so on.

A problem we have in life: no authority. People, to respect legitimate authority, must be hurt. Legitimate authority exists in the military, so we have basic training where people are hurt by boredom following the same commands. The purpose of close-order drill is to learn to respect authority. Respect for authority must be inculcated. The inculcation of authority is absolutely important if we are going to all utilise our freedom to fail or succeed.

Illegitimate authority on the other hand is authority established by Satan through the function of the cosmic system — Cosmic one with its 26 gates of interlocking systems of arrogance, and Cosmic two with its 9 gates of interlocking systems of hatred. In the angelic conflict man was created with free will to choose between legitimate authority delegated by God or illegitimate authority provided by Satan. Therefore authority is a matter of human choice, of human volition. The acceptability of authority in life is dependant on human volition for freedom gives the option of accepting or rejecting authority in life — legitimate or illegitimate. Again, all legitimate authority in life is delegated by God through the laws of divine establishment and the content of Bible doctrine, whereas all illegitimate authority in life is based on the function of the cosmic system. It is very easy to get into the cosmic system, it just takes wrong decisions related to wrong thinking.

Parents have legitimate authority in the home and this authority is useless unless the children from their own free will recognise and accept it. Therefore punishment of children is legitimate. Children never grow up even though they become adults by simply advance of time; they never become mature until they recognise authority in life, accept it, and orient to it whether they like the ones who have it or not. We have crime, terrorism, revolution, dictatorships, slavery, and all the functions of evil simply because authority is rejected by those in the arrogance complex — cosmic one. Preoccupation with self excludes recognition of the normal and important authorities in life.

The concept of authority is important because as we come to verse 27 we see authority used under perfect environment. The Millennium is a time of perfect environment on the earth. Under perfect environment there will be no more war. All of the things related to perfect environment will exist. The air will be pure, but not people. The old sin nature will still exist in perfect environment which lasts for 1000 years. Man's revolt against perfect environment at the end of the Millennium is a demonstration of the principle that environment is not the solution to man's problems; it is not even the basis for happiness. In perfect environment there will be nationalism, not internationalism. Under nationalism those who hold the order of the morning star will rule nations — verse 26.

What kind of rulership will exist in the Millennium under perfect environment? There will be perfect freedom for all. Freedom will be enforced and to enforce freedom there must be strict authority. Note Revelation 2:27, describing a Millennial concept, "And he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers: even as I have received of my Father".

Before we can analyse this verse we must recognise that it is quoted from the Old Testament, from the second Psalm, verses 8,9. David was the human author of this Psalm, Acts 4:25, 26. It was the lyrics of a hymn in which each stanza portrays a different viewpoint of life. For example, verses 1-3, the voice of mankind, which means the thinking of mankind. The voice merely expresses the thought; verses 4-6, the voice of God the Father; verses 7-9, the voice of God the Son; verses 10-12, the voice of God the Holy Spirit. You will note that the quotation is taken from the third stanza, the voice of God the Son, verses 7-9.

The second Psalm is quoted at least five times in the New Testament, Acts 4:25,28; 13:33; Hebrews 1:5; 5:5; Revelation 2:27. The background for the Psalm is David's study of eschatology where he sees prophetically Satan's attempt in the Tribulation to frustrate the plan of God. David studied the Tribulation and he saw Satan's attempt to hinder the second advent of Christ and his own inevitable defeat. Satan also tried to frustrate the fulfilment of the Davidic covenant and this is the description that David wrote under the ministry of the Holy Spirit.

The voice of mankind in the Tribulation, verses 1-3. "Why do the nations rage," a complete breakdown of all the nations, they are in a state of anarchy. The only authority in the nations in the Tribulation is illegitimate authority, dictatorship will be the order of the day. These are Gentile nations in the Tribulation, "And the people plot a vain thing." In other words, people are involved in a conspiracy to stop the second advent of Christ. "The kings of the earth take their stand," the four spheres of influence in the Tribulation. "And the rulers plot together against the Lord [God the Father] and against his anointed [God the Son]."

"Let us break," the piel imperfect of the verb nathaq, which means to smash; "their bands [legitimate authority under the laws of divine establishment], Let us destroy their restraint," i.e. the restraint of people and the restraint of old sin natures by establishment authority; "and throw off their chains," people are the products of their own decisions, nations are the products of their own decisions, and here is the use of volition to reject the laws of divine establishment in the Tribulation. Here is arrogance as the motivating evil of gate one, cosmic one.

The voice of God the Father, verses 4-6. "And he [God the Father] who is enthroned in heaven laughs," this is an anthropopathism for a sense of humour. Then we have an antithetical anthropopathism, "The Lord scoffs at them," sanctified ridicule.

"Then he will speak to them in his anger," another anthropopathism; "And terrify them in his wrath," a reference to the vial judgements in Revelation 16 and the fall of international religion in Revelation 17,18, plus the slaughter at the end of the Armageddon campaign, Revelation 19. These are in view in verse five. "But as for me [God the Father], I have installed my King [Jesus Christ] upon Zion, my holy mountain," the future coronation of the Lord Jesus Christ as the ruler of the world.

The voice of God the Son, verses 7-9. "I will proclaim the decree of the Lord," that is, the plan of God the Father in history. Remember the doctrine of divine decrees. The omniscience of God knows every thought, every motive, every decision, every action of every person who has ever lived in history, and it is fed into the computer of divine decrees. He also knows all of the alternatives, the options that were not exercised. Then you have the printout which is history. It is the printout that is being developed in this particular section, for one of the printouts is the fact of the second advent of Christ, the coronation of our Lord. In the first advent we had the cross, in the second advent we have the crown. The cross must come before the crown. Christ had to die for our sins on the cross; He had to be judged in our place and take our place and become our saviour before He could bring us back to rule with Him in the Millennium. "He [God the Father] said to me [God the Son], Thou art my Son, today I have begotten Thee." "Today" refers to the moment of the virgin birth.

Let us stop and take a look at this. Human life is imputed to each one of us immediately after birth. God imputes human life to the human soul; human life resides in the human soul forever. Adam's original sin is imputed to the genetically-formed old sin nature. Our personal sins are not the basis for our judgement- "The wages of sin is death" is not personal sin, it is Adam's original sin. Why? God is fair and anyone who dies before reaching accountability automatically goes to heaven because they were judged at birth — they were given spiritual death at birth, they were condemned at birth — and not having reached accountability they are automatically saved. But for the rest of us it is "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." All of our sins gathered together in one bundle were never imputed to us for judgment. Instead they were imputed to Christ on the cross and judged. The reason they were imputed to Him and judged is because of the virgin birth. When our Lord Jesus Christ came into the world human life was imputed to Him, to His human soul. But Adam's original sin could not be imputed because the old sin nature is passed down through the man in procreation. Therefore He had no old sin nature. Adam's original sin only gravitates to the old sin nature and with our Lord there was no old sin nature. Therefore Adam's original sin was not imputed. Our Lord came into the world as the last Adam, born as Adam was created — without a sin nature, perfect — and, of course, He lived in the prototype divine dynasphere and went to the cross and was qualified to bear our sins under the principle, "He who knew no sin was made sin for us." Whoever bore our sins on the cross had to be free from sins himself, and that is what is in view.

“I will proclaim the decree of the Lord” he [God the Father] said to me [God the Son], Thou art my Son [first advent], today have I begotten you,” reference to the virgin birth.

Verse eight is where the quotation begins. “Ask from me [says God the Father], and I will give you the nations as your inheritance.” Because of the strategic victory of the cross [first advent] the nations of the world are to become the inheritance of our Lord Jesus Christ at the second advent. Reason: because our Lord became our saviour, was judged for our sins, died physically, was resurrected and ascended and seated at the right hand of the Father. At the right hand of the Father He was given His third category of royalty.

1st category: Jesus Christ is God; title of royalty: Son of God; royal family: God the Father, God the Holy Spirit.

2nd category: He was born into the most famous of all the royal families, the dynasty of David, the Davidic line. He was born a King in the line of David. The virgin Mary was descended from David through the son of David and Bathsheba called Nathan. Joseph was also descended from David and Bathsheba through Solomon. So His second royalty has a title: the Son of David; royal family: dynasty of David.

3rd category: “King of kings and Lord of lords” and “morning star.” But He was minus a royal family and therefore the Age of Israel came to a halt and we have the dispensation of the Church. Believers in the Church Age are the royal family of God. So when Christ returns to the earth He will return with a royal family, some of whom have a new knighthood and some of whom will rule with Him — those who hold the order of the morning star.

“And the very ends of the earth as your possession.

And you [Jesus Christ] will rule them with an iron sceptre,

And you will shatter them to pieces like pottery.” We will see this as the function of capital punishment in the Millennium. You cannot maintain perfect environment, or even decent environment, without capital punishment. Israel always had a low crime rate and they had no prisons. They executed criminals.

Then finally the voice of God the Holy Spirit in verses 10-12. “Therefore, you kings, be wise,” the hiphil imperative from the verb sakal, and it means the application of wisdom to a situation. When you are in any position of authority it always wisdom to remember the grace of God and to function accordingly. So this is the command to the rulers of the earth during the Tribulation.

“Be warned you rulers of the earth. Serve the Lord with respect,” they serve the Lord with respect by the enforcement of the laws of divine establishment relating to freedom, property, privacy., life; “And rejoice with anticipation.”

“Kiss the Son,” the custom of kissing in the ancient world originated from the concept of animism, the belief that all objects possess life by having an indwelling soul. The Latin word for “soul” is anima. So the kiss on the mouth was the means of conveying one’s soul to another in the expression of love which resided in that soul. Later the essence of kissing was often found in the transfer of breath by those who related breath to the soul. Yukh in the Greek also meant breath as well as soul. Hence a kiss was the intermingling of anima or two souls. The kiss was also used to get to know the person by scent in the ancient world. Apart from the erotic implications of the kiss it was the means in the ancient world of recognising rulers — kissing the hand, kissing the foot, kissing the robe. It was also used in the greeting of relatives and that has come down to us today. The kiss expressed a close relationship among members of the royal family of God. That is why we have several times, “Greet one another with a holy kiss.” The kiss was used for respect, however, as well as love. Hence it became the custom of Greeting. The holy kiss was the expression of impersonal love in the royal family honour code, the function of virtue and integrity. The kiss conveyed honour.

What does kissing means here in Psalm two? It has, of course, no erotic connotation. It means respect, honour, awe. Respect the authority of the Son. “ ... lest he be angry, and you perish in the way” — nations cannot survive without the use of the laws of divine establishment. “For his wrath is kindled for a little while, but there is happiness and blessing for those who take refuge in him.”

So much then for the context, now we are ready for the passage, Revelation 2:27. The quotation begins with the conjunction kai, introducing a result from what precedes, translated “and so” or “furthermore.” Then we go to our verb, the future active indicative of the verb poimainw, which means to shepherd or to rule, “And so he shall rule.” The predictive future tense anticipates the second advent of Christ and His Millennial reign. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb and therefore the authority by which believers will rule in the Millennium is delegated by our Lord Jesus Christ as the ruler of the entire world. This is why we noted the highest decoration a believer can receive, the order of the morning star, for the only believers who are going to rule in the Millennium are those who receive at the judgment seat of Christ the order of the morning star. In the dispensation of the Church the person whose life counts the most in history, in any generation or decade, is the believer who has cracked the maturity barrier. A large pivot of mature believers means blessing; a small pivot means historical disaster. The difference between a large and a small pivot is the personal volition of the individual believer as demonstrated by his attitude toward Bible doctrine. Those who have the greatest historical impact are believers who advance to maturity through daily perception of Bible doctrine, and they are the means of historical uptrend. In other words, the solution to our problems right now can only be resolved by your attitude toward doctrine. Failure of believers in any given generation to crack the maturity barrier in any large numbers means historical downtrend because it means believers are involved in the cosmic system.

What needs to be emphasised here is the fact that the names of believers who crack the maturity barrier are not mentioned in any textbook of history. They are unknown; they are anonymous heroes. The great heroes of any generation of history in the Church Age are anonymous heroes, but they will be known for the first time at the judgment seat of Christ. They will be known to the other members of the royal family of God for they will receive the highest decoration that a believer can receive, the order of the morning star. Then while the Tribulation is occurring on earth those believers who have the order of the morning star are going to be presented in the court of heaven. They will be presented to the angels of heaven as well as God the Father. Then they return at the second advent and they will be known to the population of the earth, the largest population that the earth will ever have will be in the thousand years of our Lord's reign. At that time they will be the most famous people in history.

So those who have historical impact today have another crack at history, they will wear the order of the morning star over the uniform of glory and they will rule with the Lord Jesus Christ for one thousand years. So the heroes of history, believers, will not always be anonymous. Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of doctrine. The accusative plural direct object is from the intensive pronoun αὐτοῖς, used as a personal pronoun since the third person personal pronoun of Attic Greek was not carried over to Koine Greek. "Them" is the correct way to translate it — "And so he shall rule them." He delegates authority, and this is where those who hold the highest decoration, the order of the morning star, come into the picture.

With this we have a prepositional phrase, ἐν plus the instrumental of ῥαβδῶν, and ῥαβδῶν means a sceptre, not a rod. With it we have the instrumental of σιδῆρον, iron, which at the time of writing was the great weapon, the iron age had replaced the bronze age. Translation: "And so he shall rule them with an iron sceptre." Now the liberal, misdirected people in terms of loving everyone, being sweet to everyone, do not understand phrases like this. This emphasises what it takes to control people and to assert authority. It takes a rod of iron.

One of the things that we have to start noting with regard to historical trends is what may be called the power factor. The question which arises historically is, How much power does an organisation, a group, or an individual possess before that power is distorted under his authority. Everyone has, probably, a power factor index as part of his soul, which means simply this: How much authority can you handle, how much power can you take before you go sour, before you become a dictator, a little Caesar, etc. The principle is a very simple one: arrogance distorts power and authority. Just as we have seen that salesmanship is a characteristic of leadership so humility is a characteristic of successful and honourable use of authority. Authority is abused by arrogance, as well as the fact that arrogance distorts power and authority. We have noted before that arrogance corrupts so that some people, some individuals, and some groups cannot have too much power. We have a tendency in history to say: It is this movement or that movement; management has too much power; labour has too much power; the government has too much power; so and so has too much power, and to blame it on the group involved, when in reality it is simply the fact that the group or the individual under, in this case, legitimate criticism simply has become arrogant. It is the arrogance factor that makes the difference, so that we can't always say dogmatically that it is this group or that group who are ruining the country, that government is ruining the country, labour is running the country, management is ruining the country, this or that is ruining the country, ruining the city, the state, the county, or whatever is being ruined or allegedly ruined. In reality it is just a power factor, and at any given time in history, the other trends being equal, people simply become arrogant when they pass their power factor. They get too much power and they can't handle it and they turn to arrogance and other things. As a result they distort power into a system of dishonour rather than utilising it as a system of honour and integrity. So arrogance corrupts so that some people or groups cannot have any power, while other individuals and groups are free from arrogance, and through humility plus integrity use power and authority honourably.

Verse 26b, "to him I will give authority [power] over the nations." This principle, just mentioned, will work very well at that time because the ones involved who are going to receive this authority over the nations in the Millennium are believers in resurrection bodies. So they will not be corrupted by the power factor, they will not become arrogant, they will not abuse their authority. Furthermore it is probably one of the most unique groups of believers of all time because it is the believer in the Church Age who has been decorated with the order of the morning star at the judgment seat of Christ who having received this decoration also receives with it a uniform of translucent glory, first noted when our Lord was transfigured. On the mount of transfiguration our Lord's face shone like the sun and His clothes were suddenly turned into translucent light. This was the first time anyone in the human race had ever seen the uniform of glory. Our Lord's resurrection body has an additional factor, the uniform of glory. Only a few other people will wear forever and ever this uniform of glory. Those few are the ones who advance to maturity in time in the Church Age, the dispensation of historical trends. They will receive the order of the morning star at the judgment seat of Christ after the Rapture. Immediately after they receive it these individuals are differentiated from all other Church Age believers in a resurrection body, and that differentiation will last for ever. They alone are going to be presented in the court of heaven to God the Father and the elect angels. They alone on the return of Christ (all Church Age believers return with Christ at the second advent) have certain privileges. For example, in the Millennium they are going to rule over Gentile nations. They were the anonymous heroes while living in phase two of the Church Age, and the anonymous heroes become the most famous persons of all world history. Only the believer who cracks the maturity barrier is going to be in that picture. They have a special place at the coronation of our Lord at the second advent; they have a special place in the triumphal procession; they also have a special place in the wedding supper of the Lamb, and in eternity they will also have the privilege of the highest and most important function of maximum happiness at the gazebo in the garden, the tree of life in the paradise of God. They will have a permanent record in history, they will be a pillar in the eternal temple in which the true history of the world will be written. So they have all kinds of fantastic privileges.

Notice again at the end of verse 26, "to him I will give authority over the nations." The authority and the power they have is incorruptible. They are in a resurrection body; they wear the uniform of glory; they have also the crown of life for their residence and function in the divine dynasphere, and they have the highest decoration that God can give to a human being, the order of the morning star. And in the perfect environment of the Millennial reign of Christ all authority will be incorruptible. That is why believers in this dispensation, those who reach maturity in time, in their resurrection bodies will be the rulers of nations in the Millennium. In spite of the fact of the perfect environment provided, the lucid presentation of the laws of divine establishment, incorruptible authority and power, man has a free will and literally hundreds of thousands of people living in perfect environment on the earth will reject that perfect environment. They fall into two categories: those who show their resentment during the perfect environment by the use of violence and crime — they will be tried and executed — and those who practice hypocrisy and appear to go along with things and as soon as a leader comes along, around whom they can rally, they are going to join in a revolution. That leader, Satan, will be released from prison after 1000 years and they will rally around him for the Gog revolution.

In the meantime what we are noting here is the tremendous privileges that belong to the believer who cracks the maturity barrier, the believer who lives in the divine dynasphere, the believer who takes in Bible doctrine on a daily basis; ridiculed by friends, misunderstood by people, becoming the basis of all kinds of sarcasm, constantly facing distraction tests and all of the things that everyone who reaches maturity must face; and yet, wading through all of these, passing these tests and advancing to maturity, and becoming the basis for the continual blessing of the client nation and the perpetuation of the human race with some form of prosperity. Nothing is more important, nothing in the world, than your attitude toward Bible doctrine. You will get more flack, more ridicule; you will face more honourable testing. Honourable testing meaning you are not being punished for sin and failure but simply being tested for the application of doctrine to accelerate your spiritual growth, simply because you are consistent in the perception of doctrine. It happens to anyone who cracks the maturity barrier, and that uniform of glory which is received at the judgment seat of Christ, and that highest decoration, the order of the morning star taken from the title of our Lord Jesus Christ in Numbers 24; 2 Peter 1:19, is for them. So the authority over the nations is characterised by certain decorations. During the Millennium other believers who did not crack the maturity barrier, who are in essence peons in resurrection bodies, who are going to have a lower degree of happiness, but happiness nevertheless, will not participate in the history of planet earth.

For perfect environment to be perpetuated on the earth after the second advent there must be one ruler who is perfect and who possesses perfect integrity. And He must delegate authority to those who are perfect under the principle of ultimate sanctification and have perfect integrity. So the rulership of the world will change. We have noted the coup de tat which will occur at the second advent, and Satan is imprisoned; he is no longer the ruler of the world in the Millennium. The Lord Jesus Christ is perfect; He is the God-Man — doctrine of the hypostatic union applied — and He delegates authority to rule nations to the great believers of this dispensation, those who hold the order of the morning star and have the uniform of glory at the judgment seat of Christ. Only our Lord Jesus Christ is qualified to rule the world. Such a ruler delegates authority only to those who have attained the order of the morning star, and under the principle of ultimate sanctification they are incorruptible in their resurrection bodies.

The “sceptre of iron” (Verse 27) is mentioned in the iron age and the sceptre of iron is a reference to great power and authority. We will note that the sceptre of iron shatters vessels, which means that perfect environment can only be maintained by strict law enforcement, strict crime prevention, including individual and, if necessary, national punishment. Individual maximum punishment is capital punishment and in the Millennium it will be used. National maximum punishment is related to the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline. The sceptre of iron, the power and authority of our Lord Jesus Christ, shatters the evil vessels, whether individual criminals or national or group conspiracy. While the Millennium is characterised by perfect environment people outside the resurrection bodies still have the old sin nature, and while the cosmic system is not operative during the Millennium human volition is, and human volition can choose for evil and even create evil without the cosmic system. So human volition plus the old sin nature can still get out of hand and must be controlled for the maintenance of perfect environment. Remember that perfect environment is maintained by the iron sceptre, and the iron sceptre guarantees the fulfilment of the three sacred factors in the laws of divine establishment — human freedom and privacy, property, life.

Principle

1. Severe discipline is necessary to keep the human race in line, even in perfect environment. This is because the human race still has an old sin nature.
2. Laxity in government, or any form of rulership, inevitably results in the decline and degeneracy of a nation.
3. Therefore it is not the type of government but the integrity of government to enforce the laws of divine establishment that counts, so that freedom, property and life remains sacred in the continuation of history.
4. You cannot rule with a golden sceptre unless you rule with the iron sceptre. The golden sceptre of prosperity never precedes the iron sceptre of establishment, just as the cross must precede the crown.
5. Society will only recognise the sanctity of life, property and freedom of others when society is restrained by just law enforcement and discipline based on integrity and category one truth in the Bible, i.e. the laws of divine establishment.

So that brings us now to the analogy which is introduced by the adverb o(j, used as a conjunction for analogy. The analogy is introduced by the word “as” or “just as.” The nominative plural of skeuoj, meaning a vessel, follows plus the generic use of the definite article — “the vessels,” referring to people. A “vessel,” a piece of pottery, is an excellent illustration. The pottery represents the human body and the decorations on them are simply ways of indicating a manufacturer, some artistic value, and so on. But inside of the vessel, or what it contains, is more important than the pot itself. The soul resides in the body and the vessel is often analogous to the body, whereas the soul inside of the vessel is the important factor. It therefore refers to human life.

With this we have an adjective, keramikoj, and it is part of a nominative plural subject. The adjective means belonging to a potter. So we could translate: “as the clay pottery” or “the clay pots.” Then the present passive indicative of the verb suntribw, which means to shatter, to break in pieces — “as the clay pottery is shattered.” The pictorial present tense presents to the mind the administration of capital punishment or the fifth cycle of discipline in the process of occurrence — in this case, in the Millennium. The passive voice: evil elements of the Millennium receive the action of the verb — instant and just punishment. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the perpetuation of perfect environment through strict discipline, law enforcement, punishment of crime instantly.

Principle

1. The clay vessels represents both individuals and nations in the Millennium.
2. Only those vessels or clay pots which are evil or no good are broken in pieces, shattered, destroyed, indicating capital punishment in the Millennium to sustain perfect environment. Perfect environment does not produce law-abiding people. On the other hand you must add something to perfect environment to have law-abiding people — power and authority.
3. If the clay has been fired it cannot be reused, an illustration of capital punishment and even the fifth cycle of discipline to a nation in the Millennium.
4. Therefore in the Millennium the Lord Jesus Christ will punish individuals by taking their lives, breaking in pieces the clay pots, and nations by removal from the family of nations in the Millennium.

Now we have a second analogy. The first analogy is the clay pottery, the vessels made of clay are shattered. The second one is the authority to rule in the Millennium, an authority delegated to those believers who hold the order of the morning star. Again we have the conjunction w(j), giving a reason for the action, translated “as.” Then we have a compound particle, kagw. It comes from the conjunction kai plus the personal pronoun e)gw, literally, “and I” or “even I.” Here it is correctly translated literally, “I also” or “I too” or “I in turn.” This is a reference to our Lord Jesus Christ receiving the authority to rule in the Millennium from God the Father who gave Him the third royal title at the ascension. Then we have the perfect active indicative of lambanw, which means to receive, “I also have received,” and it is used for receiving authority. The dramatic present tense describes in an unusual and vivid way the permanence of our Lord’s appointment to rule the world in the Millennium and therefore the delegation of authority to those who hold the morning star. The active voice:

Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb. As the God-Man He receives the action of the verb through His third royal patent achieved through the first advent. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic authorisation for our Lord's Millennial rule. The source of the authorisation: the preposition para plus the ablative from the noun pathr, "from the Father."

You probably are wondering here, If you receive something from the Father doesn't that make the Son inferior to the Father? The answer is, No. God the Father, God the Son and God the Holy Spirit in their deity are coequal and CO-eternal as we have studied in the doctrine of the Trinity, but the reference here is to the fact that our Lord Jesus Christ is ruling as a member of the human race. Jesus Christ is God, He has all of the essence of the Godhead; but He is different from the Father and from the Spirit in that He is true humanity forever — humanity now in a resurrection body, wearing the uniform of glory under His title of King of kings, Lord of lords, the morning star. And it is the Father turning over to the humanity of Christ the rulership of the world. Satan, who rules the world now, is not a member of the human race, but in the future, in the Millennium, Jesus Christ will rule as a member of the human race in His resurrection body. He is the morning star and those who rule the nations under Him — that is, the Gentile nations — have the order of the morning star, and that is why they wear the uniform of glory which is unique to our Lord Jesus Christ at this time. They will wear that uniform of glory forever to distinguish them from all of the believers who failed to utilise logistical grace in time.

God the Father is the author of the divine plan for the human race and therefore He has the right to authorise and decree regarding human history. This does not change the fact that God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit are coequal and CO-eternal, one in essence but three separate and distinct personalities. Note that the cross must come before the crown. Before the Lord Jesus Christ can rule in the last 1000 years of history, with emphasis on His humanity ruling — His humanity had to go to the cross and bear our sins and be judged for us, otherwise there would be no members of the human race to whom to delegate authority. So our Lord has the crown today as seated at the right hand of the Father, and then there will be the Rapture of the Church and then the Tribulation, and then He will come back. The Rapture must occur before the Millennium because during that time we have the evaluation of believers. They receive their resurrection bodies; they stand before the judgment seat of Christ. Those who receive the morning star are going to receive their uniform of glory, so when they return there will be those of perfect integrity to rule with our Lord. So our Lord Jesus Christ will rule the world and He will delegate authority for nations.

The cross came before the crown. Jesus Christ would not have received the crown without the cross. Our Lord functioned in the divine plan of the Father calling for the first advent. And in the first advent our Lord did something else. During the incarnation, starting with the virgin birth, our Lord Jesus Christ in His humanity lived in the prototype divine dynasphere so that he prepared this system for us, and after the ascension one of the things we received on the Day of Pentecost was Gate One, the filling of the Spirit, something that did not exist in Old Testament times. The command to be filled with the Spirit belongs to this dispensation only; the command to walk by means of the Spirit belongs to this dispensation only.

Christ came the first time to save the human race; He comes the second time to rule the human race. There will be those who say No to His perfect rule. They are manifest at the Gog revolution at the end of the Millennium and they are dealt with at the great white throne judgment in the second resurrection. The baptism of fire is the first sign of His authority. When Christ first comes back He finds Tribulational people alive: Gentiles who are believers; Gentiles who are unbelievers. The Gentiles who are believers pass through the fire into the Millennium to become a cadre, a nucleus, for the population explosion of the Millennium. The Gentile unbelievers are cast off the earth.

Man was the ruler of this world when it was created, Adam being that man. Distortion in history began when Adam lost the rulership of this world and at the present time a fallen angel by the name of Lucifer the son of the morning and Satan rules the world and therefore the problems and the distortions.

That brings us to verse 28, "And I will give him the morning star." First of all we have a connective conjunction kai which introduces a result from the previous verse. We translate it "furthermore." With this we have a future active indicative of the verb didomi, meaning to give, which is used here for decoration. Sometimes it means to present and really it means here to decorate the highest honour one can receive. The gnomic future tense is for a statement of fact regarding Millennial and eternal reward for the mature believer who has historical impact in time. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action at the judgment seat of Christ in anticipation of His rule for the last 1000 years of history, a rule which begins at the second advent. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the decoration, the reality of Millennial authority, the reality of this highest of all honours given to a human being. With this we have the dative indirect object from the intensive pronoun a)utoj, used for the personal pronoun third masculine singular referring to mature believers who have maximum historical impact in the Church Age through their achievement of spiritual maturity. The dative indirect object indicates the mature believer in whose interest the authority and decoration are given, therefore also a dative of advantage. With this we have the accusative direct object composed of four words. Two of the words are the generic use of the definite article, twon, in the accusative. With this we have the reference to the order of the morning star. The problem with studying the morning star is that it involves so much eschatology. The rest of the accusative has two words, the accusative singular adjective from proinoj, translated "morning"; and with it the accusative singular the noun in the direct object, a)sthr, "star."

The morning star has two meanings in the Bible. First it refers to our Lord Jesus Christ. In Balaam's prophecy regarding Israel Christ is mentioned under the title of the morning star — Numbers 24:17. It is related to His first advent. Bible doctrine is tied into this as Christ the morning star in the famous passage in 2 Peter 1:19-21. This is perhaps the most important of the morning star passages by way of explanation. It starts out by saying, "And we keep on having a more reliable prophetic doctrine," that is, more reliable than the empirical perception that occurred at the mount of transfiguration. The mount of transfiguration is the background for this passage; “with reference to which doctrine you perform honourably by habitually concentrating in your right lobes.” And then the word o(j is sometimes used, not as a comparative particle, but as an actual quality conjunction. When that happens it is translated “on,” “on a lamp shining in a dark place,” Jesus Christ controlling history — “until the day dawn [second advent] and the morning star [Jesus Christ] has come. Knowing this first, that all prophecy of scripture [eschatological doctrine] did not originate from one’s own explanation, for prophecy was never produced by the design [purpose, will] of man, but men communicated from God being carried along by the Holy Spirit.”

All of this has to do with the morning star as explained in Matthew 2:2 where the star was first seen. In 2 Peter 1:19, the morning star “shall come up,” and that is a reference to the Lord Jesus Christ coming the second time, but the morning star is coming the first time, like Matthew 2:2 when the wise men said: “Where is he who has been born King of the Jews? For we have seen his star in the east, and have come to worship him.” So the word “star” and “morning star” are constantly used in connection with our Lord Jesus Christ. The order morning star is a special decoration for mature believers with maximum historical impact. It is given at the judgment seat of Christ; it authorises the recipient to rule with Christ in the Millennium; it is the highest of all decoration which is given by our Lord Jesus Christ.

It is our objective now to study once again the order of the morning star. We have to start out with noting who and what is a winner. The word “winner” is used at least seven times in Revelation chapters two and three. Both in time and in eternity believers fall into two categories: winners and losers. They are very easy to distinguish one from the other. The winner is the believer who lives his life in the divine dynasphere, the plan of God for the Church Age believer, the royal family of God, and this is the only dispensation in which the divine dynasphere is operative. The prototype divine dynasphere was invented for the humanity of Christ to sustain Him during the incarnation. It is used for the royal family and then never again. The loser on the other hand is a believer who is going to be in heaven with a resurrection body, and that is about all. He is the believer who lives in the cosmic system. Losers are Christians who fail in time but they do not lose their salvation as a result of their failure. They occupy an inferior place in heaven; they have no authority in the Millennium; they are as anonymous in the Millennium as they are in time.

The winners are described by the present active participle of the verb nikaw. Participles are not always translated like verbs. Many times the ascriptive participle is an adjective. But there is also the participle used as a noun, as we have seven times in the book of Revelation, 2:7, 11,17, 26, 3:5,12, 21. In each case the participle is translated like a noun and translated “the winner.” All historical blessing, all prosperity in the Church Age results from anonymous, unknown, unnamed believers living inside the divine dynasphere, advancing to spiritual maturity, forming the pivot for the client nation. These mature believers provide blessing by association as well as historical uptrend, and their names are generally not found in historical text books. They have used the hidden manna of Bible doctrine and other provisions of logistical grace to advance to maturity. So on the basis of historical uptrend — as goes the believer so goes the client nation to God — the winner is the secret to historical and national blessing in this life and in this dispensation. These Christian heroes of history are anonymous today. That has to be emphasised.

We have noted that the winner will be at the Rapture. The Church Age terminates with resurrection, 1 Thessalonians 4:13-17. This is true for the loser as well as the winner. When the resurrection occurs the trumpet assembles them in the second heaven and then “we who are alive and remain are caught up together with them to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord.” That is the beginning of phase three for all Church Age believers. Phase three begins for the dead in Christ prior to that time. They have the interim blessing. Once this occurs there is the great genuflect in the sky which finds all believers, at this point, still in their resurrection bodies. No decorations have been given as yet. In the meantime the Tribulation is in progress on earth where Revelation 6-18 is going on. The judgment seat of Christ is next. It is at the judgment seat of Christ that eternal distinctions are established among those who are believers in the Lord Jesus Christ in this dispensation, known as the royal family of God. This is where the winners and the losers are separated.

The drama of winners and losers at the judgment seat of Christ is quite a subject and is emphasised in a very real way to us in connect with our subject in 1 John 2:28, “And now dear children.” Why call believers children [or students]? because as a believer you must learn all of your life. When you stop learning you stop growing, “keep residing in it [the divine dynasphere], that if he [Christ] should appear [the Rapture of the Church which will be followed by the judgment seat of Christ], we might have confidence and might not be put to shame in his presence [at the judgment seat of Christ].”

There are two major decorations given by our Lord Jesus Christ to mature believers. The first of these two decorations we have previously studied in Revelation 2:10, the crown of life. The crown of life is like the Distinguished Service Cross, the second highest decoration you can receive in the army. The crown of life is simply faithfulness in sticking inside the divine dynasphere, that plus your positive volition toward doctrine, that plus keeping your priorities straight — doctrine first, pretty much guarantees the fulfilment of this concept. The crown of life is given first at the judgment seat of Christ to indicate the means by which one attains the highest decoration, the achievement of the order of the morning star. No one will have the order of the morning star without having the crown of life, and the crown of life has to do with logging maximum time inside the divine dynasphere. The other decoration, the two go together, “Furthermore, I will give to him [the believer in time] the order of the morning star, Revelation 2:28. This is the highest decoration for spiritual life on earth, historical impact, the glorification of Christ. The name for this highest decoration to the mature believer with maximum impact in time, the order of the morning star, is derived from the title of our Lord Jesus Christ related to His strategical and tactical victory in the angelic conflict. His strategical victory: the first advent; His tactical victory: the second advent. The tactical victory is when our Lord comes into contact with the enemy and puts him in jail for a thousand years. Jesus Christ in His two advents, then, is called the morning star.

The decoration of the morning star includes the uniform of glory. Revelation 3:4 puts it this way: "But you have a few persons in Sardis," a pivot of mature believers living in the divine dynasphere, contributing to the historical uptrend, having historical impact; "who have not soiled their clothes," in other words, they are wearing the uniform of honour. The losers have soiled clothes living in the cosmic system; "in fact they will walk with me in whites," plural, e)n plus the locative plural of leukoj, the translucent uniform of glory worn over the resurrection body; "because they are worthy" — worthiness comes from life in the divine dynasphere, the daily perception of Bible doctrine. The decoration includes the presentation in the court of heaven. During the Tribulation losers are not presented in the court of heaven. They are in heaven but heaven is a gigantic place. Only winners are going to be presented in court. "Thus the winner," says Revelation 3:5, "shall be clothed in white garments," the translucent uniform of glory, "and I will never blot his name out of the order of chivalry," this is not the book of life for people, this is the book of life for knighthood. He will never have his new knighthood cancelled; "in fact I will acknowledge," presentation of morning star winners in the court of heaven during the Tribulation; "his name [the new knighthood received at the judgment seat of Christ] in the presence of my Father, and before his angels," an honour reserved for those who advance to maturity only.

The order of the morning star includes a new knighthood, the order of chivalry for the royal family or Church Age believer, the highest order of chivalry, and this means that forever and ever, when history is closed down after the Millennium, believers who advance to maturity today are going to be distinguished in their resurrection bodies from all believers who are losers in time. How are they going to be distinguished? In the most magnificent way. They will have the highest order of knighthood, the new name which is written on the white pebble, Revelation 2:17, "To the winner [the mature believer] I will give him blessing from the hidden manna," that is blessing in time, "and I will give him a white pebble," the ultimate vote of confidence in the resurrection body. But of course, all believers, both winners and losers will have the white pebble; "furthermore on that pebble has been written a new name," the highest title of knighthood, an honour belonging to the holder of the morning star; "which no one knows except the one who receives it."

The winner returns with Christ at the second advent, after being presented at court. In 1 Thessalonians 3:13 it says, "At the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints." However, only those winners of the morning star they will be manifest with Him in glory. The ashamed crowd are not presented. The Lord doesn't even make them known. After all they contributed nothing but downtrends to history. They are going to be unknown then. Colossians 3:4 — "On the occasion when Christ our life shall become manifest, you also" — mature believers wearing the morning star, the uniform of glory; "shall become manifest with him" — the anonymous heroes are presented to the population of the world by name, by rank, by order of chivalry, by knighthood, by the obvious appearance of the uniform of glory and the magnificent and beautiful order of the morning star.

And then operation footstool, the great coup de tat, the termination of the Armageddon campaign, the great slaughter that ends the Tribulation, the baptism of fire when all unbelievers of the Tribulation are removed from the earth. The ones who survive the Tribulation are the nucleus for the population explosion of the Millennium. Then we come to the coronation. And who will be prominent in the coronation? Those who have the order of the morning star and at least two people from the Old Testament, Moses and Elijah, because they came back as the two witnesses in Revelation 11 and after evangelising were martyred; but there will also be others such as Joseph, David, Isaiah, and other prominent believers of the Old Testament. It says in Revelation 19:9, "Happiness to the ones who have been invited to the marriage supper of the lamb," three categories: the Bride (Church Age believers, divided into winners and losers; the friends of the groom, the Old Testament saints; friends of the Bride: the Tribulational believers who are still in their physical bodies and who have great reason to rejoice under perfect environment of the Millennium). Then, of course, there is the function in the Millennium of those who win the morning star. This is, again, Revelation 2:26-28. Those who have the order of the morning star are going to rule nations.

From AD 96 to the end of time the book of Revelation gives us a detailed history divided into two parts: historical trends and the eschatological development of history. So we have prophecy beginning with the Rapture of the Church, which is the next prophecy in history. As we have been studying the historical trends we have begun to note a pattern: how the historical trends depend upon the attitude of the believer toward the Word of God. It does not depend on so many things we have discussed by way of solving man's problems. There is no ruler or any category of government in this world who can do anything at all to solve the problems of this life, for the ultimate solution depends upon the believer. As goes the believer, so goes the national entity and so goes world history.

Today we are actually experiencing a world-wide depression, and it is not in this country alone. The real problem is the believer. If the believer lives inside the divine dynasphere: Gate 1, the filling of the Spirit gate 2, basic impersonal love; gate 3, enforced and genuine humility; gate 4, perception and application of doctrine, the momentum of the spiritual life; gate 5, love of God; gate 6, right man, right woman where pertinent; gate 7, friendship, advanced impersonal love; gate 8, maturity. If the believer is residing and functioning inside of the divine dynasphere then we have a historical uptrend. But if believers are living in the cosmic system of Satan, cosmic 1, with its 26 gates of interlocking systems of arrogance; cosmic 2, with its 9 gates of interlocking systems of hatred, then, of course, we have a downtrend.

Remember that freedom always guarantees inequality in life and in eternity. Once you believe in the Lord Jesus Christ you have decisions to make every day. Your attitude toward doctrine determines whether you are going to advance toward maturity — positive volition; or negative volition, going through the various stages of reversion, living in the cosmic system, eventually dying the sin unto death. You have a choice to make and that choice will be reflected at the judgment seat of Christ, for there will be those who are going to receive great rewards and will be the great people of eternity as well as the Millennium; and there will be those who receive no rewards, they will have the white pebble, the resurrection body but nothing in the order of chivalry, no new knighthood, no uniform of glory, no crown of life, no morning star, no name written in the permanent history book of heaven, the pillar in the temple. All of these things are gone. So heaven being a perfect place there are still great inequalities.

During the Church Age the historical impact of the mature believer is invisible, it is low-key from the standpoint of publicity and yet a very real factor in whether prosperity exists in any given generation in history. As goes the believer so goes the client nation to God and so goes history in any particular generation. At the judgment seat of Christ the historical impact of the mature believer becomes manifest through the recognition, the receiving the decoration of the order of the morning star, the uniform of glory, presentation in the court of heaven. At the second advent of Christ the entire population of the world is going to recognise the anonymous heroes of the Church Age. Recognition will be related to the decoration of the order of the morning star and the wearing of the uniform of glory. When the invisible Christ becomes manifest at the second advent invisible greatness of the mature believers in the Church Age will become very real and very visible.

Three crowns are given also as rewards at the judgment seat of Christ: the crown of glory, the crown of life, the crown of righteousness. These are comparable to the military crosses given by the various services. The order of the morning star is the highest possible decoration. Decorations in order of chivalry are not unknown in history. In the time of writing they had them in the Roman empire. During the middle ages they were carried over, such as the order of Malta which started in 1070 AD, the order of St John, the order of the Knights Templars, etc. No country is exactly free from the analogy that we find here.

This leads us to the last verse in this chapter, verse 29, the basis for spiritual momentum. The question arises: How does one achieve the order of the morning star? What do you have to do? What sacrifices do you have to make? What is necessary to comply with this decoration? Here is the answer given very simply "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith to the churches." That is the answer.

We begin the exegesis with the articular present active participle of the verb $\epsilon\chi\omega$ in the Greek. It means to have or to hold. Here we are going to translate it, "He who has." The definite article is used as a personal pronoun referring to the believer in the Lord Jesus Christ who from the point of salvation is equipped and supported by logistical grace to learn Bible doctrine. It is logistical grace support that actually makes the difference. The definite article emphasises that. You and I as believers in the Lord Jesus Christ are all sustained by the same concept from heaven. We are provided with exactly the same principle of logistical grace, none of us are exceptions to this. The static present tense represents the circumstances of possessing ears, a status assumed as perpetually existing in time. Hearing is not a matter of possessing ears or the normal physiological function of hearing, hearing is a matter of motivation. If the believer has ears he can understand Bible doctrine and perpetuate his momentum inside the divine dynasphere. Momentum in the divine dynasphere leading to spiritual maturity is the basis for historical impact. The active voice: the positive believer produces the action of the verb. You have to be motivated to hear doctrine on a regular basis. You have to understand the implications and you have to utilise through logistical grace provision the spiritual IQ provided by God in the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. Perception of doctrine inside the divine dynasphere is the basis for achievement of spiritual maturity, and both blessing by association and historical uptrend as far as the client nation to God is concerned. This is what is called a circumstantial participle, circumstantial for believers attaining spiritual maturity through perception of doctrine inside the divine dynasphere.

With this first phrase we have the accusative singular direct object from the noun ο)υ)ι, and that is the Greek word for ears, “He who has an ear.” The possession of an ear is the potential for learning Bible doctrine. Furthermore, you will please note it is a grace provision.

The moment you believe in Jesus Christ 40 invisible things happen to you, plus entrance into gate one of the divine dynasphere. You can't feel them, you can't experience them, they nevertheless occur, they are very real, they are provided by God. One of these 40 things is the imputation of divine righteousness; you receive the righteousness of God. This establishes a pipeline. Since the holiness of God is composed of His righteousness plus His justice this is the integrity of God. The justice of God imputes to each one of us His righteousness, one half of divine integrity, and so a pipeline exists between the justice of God and the righteousness of God. From the righteousness of God as the source comes logistical grace, for believers who are winners and believers who are losers. No matter what category of believers all believers receive certain things. For example, they receive time, the amount of time necessary for you to advance to maturity is provided, you receive any kind of support you want to name. Logistical grace includes food, shelter, clothing, opportunity to hear the gospel, a right pastor, a place to go where you can hear, or some type of machine or gadget whereby you can hear. Therefore we have a concept that comes out of this articular present active participle, “He who has an ear.” This is a reference to logistical grace, everything necessary to keep you alive so that you can make decisions. We have studied decisions from the standpoint of historical trends, as goes the believer so goes the client nation to God. The believer who makes decisions positive for the divine dynasphere and doctrine; that means historical blessing. The believer who makes negative decisions and goes into the cosmic system; that means historical downtrend. And when you see social degeneration, economic depression, or military disaster, or a combination thereof you are looking at the failure of believers to advance to maturity inside the divine dynasphere.

This brings us then to the concept of having an ear. We have freedom; we are free to succeed, to advance to maturity; we are free to fail. We are free to become winners in life; we are free to become losers in life. Attitude toward doctrine becomes the primary principle. Some people are so interested in security that they exchange freedom for security, and this is like selling your soul for a mess of pottage. Socialism and the redistribution of wealth is popular because it offers security instead of freedom, and when you get your priorities confused and you want security rather than freedom — that is what social security is all about — then, of course, you are on the wrong side of the fence, you are a loser as a believer. Freedom is necessary to glorify the Lord; security is not. Nevertheless, God has provided in grace both eternal and temporal security, and the temporal security, of course, is provided through logistical grace. Eternal security is settled at the moment you believe in Christ; temporal security is settled in less than a second through the imputation of divine righteousness. The believer cannot work for, earn, or deserve eternal security and he cannot earn, or work for or deserve temporal security. The possession of divine righteousness is your guarantee of eternal as well as temporal security.

Logistics is a technical word in the military. It is the military science of supply, provision, planning of troop movement. Therefore it has the concept of sustaining in the military functions of life. In manoeuvre logistics is the science of supporting troops in every situation. Whether advancing, retreating, evacuation, reconnaissance, attack, exploitation, pursuit, logistics is always the major issue. Logistical grace is therefore a pertinent term for us because the very fact that we possess physical ears as believers is a guarantee, an analogy, a reminder that each one of us is here today because of logistical grace. Once we believe in Jesus Christ He daily imputes to us time; He gives us a day at a time; He provides everything necessary to sustain us, to support us so that we are free to make decisions for or against His plan. Decisions for His plan make us winners; decisions against His plans make us losers, but being losers, again, does not mean loss of salvation. That is why we are commanded: "Grow by means of grace and knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ" — 2 Peter 3:18; that is why in 2 Corinthians 9:9, "God is able to make all grace abound to you, that always having all sufficiency [logistical grace] in everything you may have an abundance for every good production"; or Ephesians 1:3, "Worthy of praise and glorification the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the one having provided us benefits by every spiritual blessing in the heavenlies in Christ." This is just another way of stating the principle of logistical grace. So we are supported in a magnificent way by God Himself, and the very fact that we have ears brings this to mind. Logistical grace is based on the faithfulness of God as a part of His integrity, as a part of His holiness. For example, Lamentations chapter is a great dissertation on logistical grace in time of disaster. Jeremiah was about to get upset by the fact that the fifth cycle of discipline was administered to the southern kingdom of Judah and was standing there as the young people were being shackled for the famous death march described in Psalm 119, a death march from the ruins of Jerusalem to the capital of Chaldea in Babylon. Before this death march was going to be made over desert and rough terrain Jeremiah stood there and he watch these young people, many of whom he knew were believers. He was very concerned and then the Lord brought to mind the doctrine of logistical grace, the fact that those young people would survive, that they would be supported, that they would even come back to the land to re-establish the client nation to God.

Lamentations 3:20, "Surely my soul remembers and is humbled within me." No one can learn doctrine apart from humility. Humility is teachability, gate three of the divine dynasphere.

Verse 21, "This I recall to mind [concentration], therefore I have confidence [or hope]," this is hope number 2 in "Y" radical, or absolute confidence that attainment of maturity will result in special blessing from the justice of God. We are sustained logistically so that we can grow in grace, we are sustained, we have ears so that we can become mature believers, and the analogy is quite obvious: ears are undeserved; logistical grace is undeserved. Ears make it possible for us to hear doctrine; logistical grace makes it possible for us to hear doctrine.

Verse 22, “The Lord’s gracious functions [logistical grace] never cease, His compassions never fail,” the integrity of God is the basis for logistical grace.

Verse 23, “They are new every morning,” God provides time; God provides opportunity; God provides health so that you can decide; God provides freedom, He provides everything necessary so that we can grown in grace, “Great is your faithfulness.”

Verse 24, “The Lord is my portion [logistical support], says my soul, therefore I have confidence in him.”

Verse 25, “The Lord is good to those who trust in him.” The word for “trust” here is the strongest word for faith. It is the qal active participle of the Hebrew verb qawah, used for the for the strongest use of the faith-rest drill. It emphasises the third stage of the drill and the second stage where doctrine is applied, “To the soul who seeks him.”

So, “Great is thy faithfulness” is a manifestation of logistical grace. God’s faithfulness in rebound is stated in 1 John 1:9; His faithfulness in logistical support is mentioned in great detail in Lamentations 3:22,23. His faithfulness is based upon our relationship with Him, the fact that we have personally believed in the Lord Jesus Christ. Logistical grace, therefore, has a testimony which is found throughout the scriptures and it is represented by this participle of having an ear.

The testimony is given in the form of anthropopathism. Deuteronomy 33:27, “The eternal God is our refuge and underneath are the everlasting arms.” The everlasting arms sustain the winner and the loser, the Christian who fails and the Christian who succeeds. Each is given time and opportunity under logistical grace in order to advance or to fail miserably. God even gives extra time to believers who fail, postponing the administration of that maximum punishment, the sin unto death.

There is also the testimony of old age with regard to having an ear or logistical grace. “I have been young, but now I am old; yet I have not seen the righteous forsaken, or his descendants begging bread,” Psalm 37:25. From the standpoint of old age this was David in old age making it very clear that God had been faithful to him in his successes and God had been faithful to him in his failures.

The testimony of the shepherd is found in Psalm 23:1, “The Lord is the one shepherding me, therefore I do not lack anything,” literal translation from the Hebrew. We as believers do not lack, we have freedom and opportunity and time, and everything necessary in order to advance to maturity.

The testimony of the smartest man who ever lived, the apostle Paul. Philippians 4:19, “My God shall supply all of your needs according to his riches in glory in Christ Jesus.” The logistical grace is divided into many categories, the most obvious one is time. The second one is life-sustaining support. God sustains the life of every believer on earth regardless of his status quo. No believer will depart from this life apart from divine will, that is why Psalm 48:14 says, “This God is our God forever and ever, he will be our guide even unto death.” The assignment of guardian angels, the assignment of the wall of fire which, of course, is pertinent to the divine dynasphere; the establishment function of freedom, authority, privacy, property; all of these things are a part of the picture. So that we can conclude with Peter in 1 Peter 1:5, “We are kept by the power of God.”

There is also spiritual provision: the provision of the divine dynasphere at salvation, the provision of an evangelist to present the Word of God — it may be a believer, it may be the gift of evangelism, it may be a pastor, it could be anyone, the provision of a right pastor, the provision of doctrinal teaching, the provision of privacy for the function of positive volition.

Logistical grace, of course, is always related to the faith-rest drill. The illustration of this is found in Matthew chapter six beginning at verse twenty-five: “For this reason I say to you, Stop worrying about your life, as to what you will eat, or what you will drink; nor for your body, as to what you shall wear. Is not life more than food, and body more than clothing?” — this is logistical grace, God provides these things. Illustration: the birds, etc. of verses 26-34. All of the things that we have are courtesy of the Lord Jesus Christ. The Lord is going to provide for us as long as there is a purpose for our life; there is no way to get around it. Therefore, the conclusion of the matter: Matthew 6:34, “Do not worry about tomorrow; for tomorrow will take care of itself [under the principle of logistical grace]. Each day has enough evil of its own,” apply doctrine to the problems of the day, don’t in your imagination work up problems for tomorrow, they will come with or without your help!

So the issue in logistical grace. Logistical grace is the basis for stability in time, 1 Peter 5:12, “Stand fast in it [the grace of God].” Logistical grace is designed for momentum, Hebrews 12:28. Logistical grace continues in reversionism, 2 Corinthians 6:1, the carnal Corinthians were receiving the grace of God in vain. Logistical grace came to them just as it came to mature believers. Galatians 5:4, “You reversionists have become a casualty from Christ, whoever is being vindicated by the law; you have drifted off course.” Hebrews 12:15, “See to it that no one falls back from the grace of God,” logistical grace, “that no root of bitterness sprouting up cause trouble, and through this many be contaminated.”

What are the provisions then, in general, of logistical grace?

It is first of all the perpetuation of human life in time. God sustains the life of the believer in spite of opposition from Satan and from his genius system, the cosmic system. No believer can continue in life apart from logistical grace support for Satan has the power of death, Ephesians 2:14, 15. But God delivers from death, according to Job 5:20; Psalm 33:19; 116:8. Death, then, is a matter of the sovereignty and plan of God based on prior knowledge of all the facts, believer, the believer in the cosmic system, the believer in the divine dynasphere, God sustains all.

Secondly, we should note that logistical grace includes the formation and the preservation of the canon of scripture. This includes the mechanics of inspiration as well as the faithfulness of divine integrity in preserving the Bible for us. Consequently the 20th century believer, while nearly 2000 years away from the original writing, has the Word of God preserved with a critical apparatus for determining the original text.

Thirdly, logistical grace includes the laws of divine establishment. Under the laws of divine establishment three things are sacred: freedom, property and human life. The laws of divine establishment therefore guarantee a certain amount of protection for you, especially in the client nation, the protection of your life, the protection of your property, the protection of your freedom. The laws of divine establishment provide authority and freedom in correct balance. Freedom with authority is anarchy; authority without freedom is tyranny.

Freedom is the heritage of birth plus the resultant imputation of life to its target or home, the human soul. Freedom is the extension of soul function; freedom includes the use of your volition, your emotion, your mentality, your conscience. Freedom includes the use, as it were, of your ears. The ears represent your mentality, they represent your volition; the ears represent the functions of your soul with which you can be positive or negative toward Bible doctrine. Freedom, of course, exists in two spheres: human life as a result of imputation at birth; spiritual life as the result of imputation at salvation.

Privacy is the environment for the function of freedom. Property is the legitimate possession of the believer under both logistical and supergrace blessing. It includes, of course, ownership of tangible things. Freedom cannot exist without an umbrella of authority. Freedom and equality, for example, cannot coexist. Freedom can neither guarantee or manufacture equality in the human race. Some use freedom to advance — self-determination toward residence in the divine dynasphere, self-determination toward function at its various gates; some use freedom to fail — self determination with regard to the two cosmic dynaspheres. Freedom does not guarantee equality, the function of freedom guarantees inequality, both on earth and forever — we have noted the fact that only a few are going to receive the order of the morning star, only a few are going to have resurrection bodies clothes with the uniform of glory. Equality, then, is the device of the arrogant; it is the device of the disoriented, the sociopath. Freedom is the motivation for grace orientation. Forced equality is not only the policy of dictators and tyrants but the basis for Satan's eschatological, cosmos diabolicus, composed of his two cosmic systems. Freedom is the policy of God in the creation of the human race to resolve the angelic conflict. Freedom is dogmatic and inflexible regarding the essentials of life and reality, while being flexible and pliable regarding the nonessentials as well. Therefore freedom is both common sense, orientation to reality, which includes respect for authority, privacy, property and life. Under the laws of divine establishment freedom and authority are mated. You can't have one without the other.

Another provision is the divine authorisation for the local church. The local church is the classroom for perception of Bible doctrine and momentum in the Christian life. It is the place where the believer assembles under divine authority for learning doctrine, advancing to maturity inside the divine dynasphere. The local church can be a house, a public building, a private building, a home, a car, an office, any place where doctrine is taught by a pastor, wither face to face or through some mechanical device. Mechanically, therefore, teaching can be face to face or it could be the convenience of a tape recorder, radio or television, and so on. However, no matter what the locale strict academic discipline and Spirit-filled concentration is always mandated by the Word. Believers who assemble in the local church are Bible students without portfolio. Their royal family privilege is the filling of the Spirit, life in the divine dynasphere, and the focal point of all worship is perception of Bible doctrine. In spite of apostasy of any given generation the local church continues in every generation of the Church Age. God does not change His policy because believers fail. Actually His policy remains the same and believers are punished for their failure to comply.

Also there is the provision of a right pastor and every believer has a right pastor within reach, either mechanical device or face to face. The spiritual gift of pastor-teacher is a part of God's logistical grace provision. The spiritual gift includes both authority and ability to communicate doctrine under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. The gift is restricted to male believers but this fact does not preclude women from teaching children or women within the local church functioning in various ways. No male ever earned or deserved the gift of pastor-teacher and there is no stereotyped personality which is qualified to be a pastor. There is such a thing as recognising your gift from learning doctrine but there is no such thing as dedication to full-time Christian service or that nauseating phrase, "surrendering to preach." Spiritual growth and advance through maximum doctrine resident in the soul is the means, of course, for discovering your own spiritual gift.

The royal priesthood of the believer is another logistical grace provision. Every believer is his own priest, therefore he has the right to assemble and to "use his ears," as it were, and to hear Bible doctrine.

And, of course, there is the provision of the divine dynasphere which includes the ministry of God the Holy Spirit, objectivity from impersonal love, and humility which is teachability.

"He who has an ear," the possession of an ear is the potential for learning Bible doctrine under the grace provision of spiritual IQ. The fact that the believer has ears is a guarantee of the ability to learn doctrine. No one earns or deserves ears and no one earns or deserves the IQ for the perception of Bible doctrine. Perception, of course, depends on hearing doctrine under the principle of audio grace. No one hears apart from his own volition. You can hear the sound but to concentrate on the content of the words is something else. So no one hears apart from human volition, and therefore the importance of positive volition toward doctrine, the importance of being self-motivated from the inner resources of grace. The ear represents a grace system for the perception of Bible doctrine at gate four. As a matter of fact God has provided three gates in the divine dynasphere as the support system for learning doctrine. Gate one is the power for perception, the ability to learn doctrine — the filling of the Spirit; Gate two is basic impersonal love, which is objectivity in perception of doctrine. This, of course, means that neither the communicator nor the content is regarded in any distorted sense; Gate three is humility or teachability, and, of course, arrogant believers are not teachable, they distort and exploit Bible doctrine to their own ends. All historical impact, then, results in the award of the morning star and ruling with Christ comes from the daily perception of Bible doctrine.

To amplify what it means to have an ear spiritually we should notice a few principles with regard to the perception of Bible doctrine. First there is ignorance. All of us live at one time in our lives totally ignorant of Bible doctrine, so there is ignorance in which the believer does not understand what is being taught from the pulpit. There are many reasons why he does not understand: 1. No frame of reference through neglect of doctrine or just simply being a new believer; 2. There is arrogance, indifference, lack of concentration, negative volition. But then there is simply the fact that we all have to start with ignorance before we can come to cognisance. This means that in the perception of Bible doctrine we must first be hearers of the Word, and the hearer of the Word obviously has ears.

So we begin with the concept that Bible doctrine is taught. We call that the ICE principle. "I" is for isagogics — recovering the time in which the Bible was written. So many of the words and phrases and analogies simply deal with the time in which a given passage was written. This calls for a tremendous amount of detective work with regard to the ancient world. A good pastor actually has to live in two areas of time: in the past when the Bible was written and in the present when it has to be communicated so that the people can understand it. The "C" stands for categories of the Word of God. From time to time we develop categories and take them point by point. The "E" is for exegesis. Nothing can be categorised, interpreted or explained isagogically until it is first of all based on the original text. The ICE principle then is the principle of communicating to positive believers assembling in the local church.

When you first hear these things, if you are positive, they go into your left lobe as gnwsij. That is the first stage of knowledge, but that is a stage of knowledge of doctrine when it has no use to you as far as spiritual growth or as far as application, it merely becomes cognisance of what is being taught. So far it is not related to your life because it is simply in the left lobe, called also the nouj. This means that people can often tell you what they have heard in Bible class, but as long as it is gnwsisj it has no spiritual benefit whatever. Before Bible doctrine contributes to your growth, before Bible doctrine can be applied, before Bible doctrine is meaningful, it must be transferred to the right lobe which is called in the Bible the heart or, in the Greek, the kardia. This requires a process and this process is a part of the concept. For example, you can say, "I understand what you are teaching but I do not believe it." That equals gnwsisj; that represents negative volition; it never becomes e)pignwsij and it does not contribute to your spiritual growth. But when you say, "I understand what you are teaching and I believe it," this is how gnwsij is converted into e)pignwsisj. This breaks through the barrier; this is the use of the faith-rest drill related to the ministry of God the Holy Spirit converting the g)gnwsij doctrine into e)pignwsij. E)pignwsij enters into the right lobe. It goes into the frame of reference; it goes into the memory bank; it develops new vocabulary and categories; it is ready for application; it is the only basis for spiritual growth. Only e)pignwsij causes the believer to advance to maturity; only e)pignwsij can be formed categorically into rationales to be applied to experience. Gnwsij can never be used in reverse concentration or the second stage of the faith-rest drill. Gnwsij is only converted to e)pignwsij through faith perception. There are two things that are vitally necessary and they are road blocks when negative volition is involved. First of all, when you hear you must be filled with the Holy Spirit for perception. Once you understand it you must believe it, so that we actually have, then, a mechanical system by which doctrine becomes meaningful. Stage one is the presentation of doctrine from the pastor-teacher. Essentially this is the ICE function. The congregation is placed under a system of spiritual humility for reception and perception of doctrine. The system of spiritual humility begins with the existence of the local church, which equals organised humility. When you assemble you are a student without portfolio, the authority of the pastor becomes the principle of enforced humility. The reception of doctrine therefore becomes the basis for genuine humility — positive volition, the use of the filling of the Holy Spirit plus the faith-rest drill, second stage. There is growing in the spiritual realm just as there is growing in the human realm. The home is organised humility in the human realm; the parents are the authority for enforced humility and positive volition toward the parents results in genuine humility. No one can be mature in a human way in life without genuine humility. Genuine humility is the key to everything.

So we have isagogics presented when necessary. This is the interpretation of the Bible within the framework of its historical setting. Again, the Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written as well as the original language in which it was written. The categorical communication of doctrine fulfils the hermeneutical principle of comparing scripture with scripture to determine classification of doctrine. The exegetical communication of doctrine is the analysis of each verse in its context to determine the exact meaning of a verse and its relationship to the context. Interpretation demands analysing the grammar, the syntax, the etymology of words in the original languages.

Stage two, then, becomes operation gnwsij. This is the function of receptive comprehension. The mentality of the soul has two working parts called lobes — left and right. The function of the left lobe: the believer approaching doctrine in ignorance. The objective of doctrinal teaching is to turn ignorance into cognisance. If ignorance continues it is because the believer is negative at one of the road blocks in the function of GAP. Ignorance persists because the believer is involved in the interlocking systems of arrogance. For example, he might be involved at gate one, mental arrogance. This includes a lot of things — jealousy, bitterness, vindictiveness, implacability, hatred, any form of antagonism, any motivation regarding revenge. All of this is preoccupation with self and becomes motivating evil. Gate two is negative volition arrogance, gate four is organisational arrogance, conspiratorial arrogance, gate fourteen is authority arrogance; gate fifteen, the arrogance of ignorance; gate seventeen, iconoclastic arrogance; gate nineteen, the arrogance of emotion. Other reasons for ignorance include lack of frame of reference from sporadic exposure to doctrine. Once the believer understands doctrine under the principle of receptive comprehension that information simply resides in the left lobe — we call it gnwsij. Such gnwsij information or doctrine resident in the left lobe cannot produce either spiritual growth or be used in application. This is simply a staging area in the whole concept of learning Bible doctrine; but it is a staging area with a purpose, for if you have any flaws then the doctrine will go no further and your flaws will dominate your life, and you will not grow spiritually even though you have been exposed. These flaws can be any category from sin to evil to the function of human good, but inevitably they are related to some form of preoccupation with self, some form of arrogance.

Stage three is the transitional stage, the function of faith perception. There are two kinds of faith related to the modus operandi of the plan of God — faith perception and faith application. Faith perception is learning doctrine or converting gnwsij into e)pignwsij. Faith perception also has another function. It is tolerant of repetition, for it is repetition that makes it possible for these things to become inculcation. In stage three gnwsij, then, is converted into e)pignwsij through the function of faith perception. The mechanics involve both volition and faith and, of course, continue to use objectivity and humility. Stage three is the critical stage and you never pass the critical stage as long as flaws are present. Under ordinary circumstances you might agree with the doctrine; it might be converted into e)pignwsij during the course of the teaching of it. But if there is some stage of preoccupation with self — if you are jealous, if you are bitter, if you are vindictive, if you have revenge motivation in your soul, if you are feeling sorry for yourself — that becomes a road block, and you may hear what is said and may understand it and still it is not doctrine that will cause you to grow. Gnwsij is only converted into e)pignwsij where there is positive volition, objectivity, the filling of the Spirit.

The fourth stage is the application. Faith application is actually reverse concentration, what is necessary for the acceleration of spiritual growth. We have studied in the past the moving from gate four — perception and application of doctrine — to gate eight, which is the objective, the momentum gate. Once you understand doctrine it is tested. The testings are the eight different momentum tests and each passing a momentum test means an acceleration of spiritual growth. No one reaches maturity without these tests and without passing them. This means that in the fourth stage application demands that there be e)pignwsij only for application. Apart from e)pignwsij doctrine and the divine viewpoint application is impossible. This means that we should understand the status of e)pignwsij doctrine in the heart or the right lobe. First of all, that e)pignwsij doctrine will be in the frame of reference. The frame of reference is a chamber that calls upon vocabulary which is technical. You never advance in learning anything without vocabulary, and in technical subjects technical vocabulary is necessary. This is true just as much in theology as it is in geology or anthropology or psychology, etc. Any subject has technical terminology for understanding the subject. The subject develops its own terminology and this is true of theology just as much as any other academic subject. The general language of social life simply will not cover it so you depart from social life and the language of social life, you depart from social intercourse and the language of social intercourse to add many words to your vocabulary. Therefore the frame of reference sets up a technical vocabulary, it is the framework for learning Bible doctrine. Vocabulary storage is a very important part of the right lobe.

However, these would be useless without something else added — a memory centre. This memory centre becomes a major issue in application, the ability to recall what you have learned, the ability to take the proper doctrine and place it with the proper experience, the proper situation. Vocabulary storage demands memory centre. Memory centre is the computer for bringing into focus what is pertinent to a given situation.

You also have a categorical storage as well. Many times a category will be recalled and then the correct application will be made. People often ask: “What is the will of God?” The will of God is, first of all, learning Bible doctrine for the believer. The will of God for the unbeliever is to accept Christ as saviour but for the believer it is to learn doctrine. It goes into the frame of reference, therefore to know the will of God it isn't necessary to go to someone else, you go to your own vocabulary, you go to your own categories. The memory centre programs the whole thing for you so that if you continually learn doctrine you have programmed for you moment by moment in your life exactly what the will of God is. But knowing what the will of God is isn't enough. That also must be related to volition. Once you know what the will of God is that is only half the fight; the other is to do it. You may know what the will of God is and not do it. Once you discover the will of God it isn't pleasing to you, and since it isn't pleasing you don't do it. That, of course, takes you right into the cosmic system which immediately freezes the whole function of the kardia or the right lobe, and there is no application at all. That means that you have to have from your priesthood one thing that will help you once you go into the cosmic system through negative volition. Memory centre will immediately bring you to the realisation that the will of God for you is to rebound. So you go back into your vocabulary: What is rebound? You bring it into your memory centre. You are a priest and there is only one priestly function that can exist in the cosmic system — to name your sin, rebound.

The conscience is a part of the right lobe. The conscience is the norms and standards that you develop from doctrine, that is one half of the conscience. The other half of the conscience is priorities, and priorities are directly connected with the volition of the soul. The conscience, by the way, only uses e)pignwsij doctrine, gnwsij doctrine won't do it. The conscience only has doctrine which is fulfilling the e)pignwsij principle, so whether you have right priorities or not, whether you have a conscience that sets up norms and standards correctly or not, depends on the perception of e)pignwsij doctrine. And doing the right thing is often something that goes counter to human viewpoint, but if you have enough e)pignwsij doctrine you will do the right thing, you will do the honourable thing.

All of the wires of the soul not only interlock and relate to each other — the volition of the soul, the right lobe of the soul, they also relate to emotion, but more than that they relate to the integrity that is developed from all of this. You develop a system of integrity and as you do, at that time you will do things that are honourable even though people won't understand it, even though sometimes people will think you are crazy to do this or that or the other thing, but you will know what is right and you will do it and you will have no regard at all for the human viewpoint of your friends.

The frame of reference does a few other things as well. It sets up a system of using basic doctrines as a means of learning advanced doctrines. The frame of reference has a "red alert" section for the soul, using the garrison of doctrine for an instant reaction force against false doctrine. You have to be able to discern for yourself what is false, so this is an alarm system for detecting false teaching. The frame of reference uses e)pignwsij doctrine for dealing with problems of the subconscious and the guilt complex. The guilt complex is entirely an evil thing, the function of the subconscious is something else. The use of e)pignwsij doctrine, then, in dealing with the subconscious is very important. Many of the fears that you may ignore while you are conscious and awake come out in different ways when you are asleep. This is why some children are afraid to have the lights turned off when they go to bed, or they call for their parents and they want a drink of water. This goes into adult life as well.

The frame of reference also provides effectiveness in communicating ideas in conversation, in witnessing, in public speaking, in debate. It provides capacity for life, for love, for happiness. It raises the spiritual IQ, it motivates general learning and understanding of life. So when you put the frame of reference into the right lobe and start the operation it becomes a very delicate operation and everything balances out everything else; but two things are necessary: doctrine and the ministry of God the Holy Spirit.

Stage five is the spiritual growth, the advance from gate four to gate eight, the use of all of the things. Again you have the principle: “He who has an ear.” Now we come to the positive volition. Any believer is qualified to learn doctrine and therefore the mandate, “let him hear,” the aorist active imperative of the verb akouo. The constative aorist tense is for a fact or action extended over a period of time, that is, the believer is positive toward doctrine and he utilizes the faith-rest drill in a positive way, and therefore gets doctrine as gnosis converted into epignosis. It takes, therefore, positive volition toward doctrine inside the divine dynasphere and regardless of its extent or duration it gathers it up into a single whole as representing the fulfilment of God’s plan for the royal family believer in phase two. The active voice: the third person suffix of the verb indicates that the positive believer living in the divine dynasphere produces the action of the verb although the divine mandate belongs to all believers of the Church Age. The imperative mood is the imperative of command, this is a mandate for the royal family of God. It is a mandate that does not depend therefore on the personality of the minister, it does not depend on what your friends think, it depends strictly upon you — “let him [an individual] hear.” The hearing, of course, is more than just hearing, it is concentration under the ministry of the Spirit inside of the divine dynasphere; it is objectivity in the approach to the Word, it is motivation to persist in spite of all of the testings and all of the distortions to keep you and distract you from the Word.

Then we have the accusative neuter singular from the interrogative pronoun ti, correctly translated “what sort of thing.” It is a reference to the content of Bible doctrine and, of course, all blessing by association in historical impact comes from the momentum which comes from the doctrine. And the one who gives us the IQ for perception comes next, the nominative subject from the Greek word pneuma, “spirit.” The principle is very simple: no one can learn doctrine apart from the filling of the Holy Spirit. This is taught in John 14:26; 16:12-15; 1 Corinthians 2:9-16; 1 John 2:27. With this we have the present active indicative of lego, used for communication — to say, to speak, to communicate. The customary present tense is for what habitually occurs when the believer resides and functions inside the divine dynasphere, God’s game plan for the Church Age. The principle is very simple: power, objectivity and teachability. Power — gate one, the filling of the Spirit; objectivity — gate two, impersonal love; teachability — gate three, enforced and genuine humility. The active voice: God the Holy Spirit produces the action of the verb by providing the necessary spiritual IQ for learning doctrine. The declarative indicative mood is for a dogmatic statement of Bible doctrine, the teaching ministry of God the Holy Spirit. Apart from the ministry of God the Holy Spirit there is no spiritual IQ for the perception of Bible doctrine and resultant momentum in the Christian way of life. Therefore, in this dispensation residence and function inside of the divine dynasphere is the only legitimate area for perception and application of doctrine because it is the only place where we are filled with the Spirit. It is the place of production in the Christian life, the place of glorification of the Lord, the place of historical impact. Apart from the filling of the Spirit there is no residence or function inside the divine dynasphere and that is why we have the four mandates. Mandate #1 is positive: "be filled with the Spirit" — Ephesians 5:18; mandate #2, is positive: "walk by means of the Spirit," Galatians 5:16; mandate #3 is negative: "grieve not the Spirit," Ephesians 4:30; mandate #4 is negative: "quench not the Spirit," 1 Thessalonians 5:19. The positive mandates relate to uptrends in history; the negative mandates relate to downtrends. In cosmic one negative volition toward Bible doctrine is based upon preoccupation with self in the various categories of arrogance. In cosmic two negative volition toward doctrine is based on antagonism toward the truth. Because of the ministry of God the Holy Spirit related to positive mandates, such as Ephesians 5:18 and Galatians 5:16, a low human IQ is no handicap in learning Bible doctrine. The only handicap is cosmic involvement and resultant negative volition toward Bible doctrine. In other words, no matter how low your IQ if you are positive God the Holy Spirit will provide the necessary perceptive ability. In the cosmic system the greatest genius among Christians cannot understand the simplest of doctrines, while inside the divine dynasphere the dumbest of believers can understand the most complex doctrines of orthodox Christianity. While the channel for teaching doctrine is the ministry of the pastor-bishop, the understanding and perception of that doctrine depends on the ministry of God the Holy Spirit inside the divine dynasphere. Therefore the last word is the classroom: the dative plural, indirect object from e)kklhsia. The dative plural is an indirect object; it is also dative of advantage. All the teaching of Bible doctrine, all inculcation of the Word of God, must be under the filling of the Spirit inside the divine dynasphere, but for understanding this means one other thing: you are not only inside the divine dynasphere but you must be inside an academic situation. This can be at home. The trouble with so many tape classes is the fact that be distracted during the hearing of the tape. That home could be a church all right during the teaching of the Word, except for one thing: no academic discipline, therefore no concentration.

In the cosmic system the greatest genius among Christians cannot understand the simplest of doctrines, and sometimes that is because the great genius is arrogant. That is because the great genius looks down his nose academically, he is a snob. Therefore he is not about to sit down and listen to some dumb preacher. All teaching of Bible doctrine, all inculcation of the Word of God demands therefore that we be under a system of academic discipline, and that is really what the church is. All great decisions in life are related to assembling in the class room of the local church. And, again, the local church can be a building, a business office, a home, but nevertheless they have to observe strict academic discipline. So the principle of assembling becomes a matter of motivation related to volition and when you put it all together it simply says that there must be a regular place, a regular time, when you sit down and listen to the Word of God.

The outline of chapter three is very simple. There are three churches which are covered, the last three churches to complete the concept of historical trends: the church at Sardis, 3:1-6; the church at Philadelphia, 3:7-13; the church at Laodicea, 3:14-21. There were many other churches in the Roman province of Asia but these seven churches were well known to John and, secondly, they portrayed all of the historical trends that would occur throughout the Church Age. The times of the Gentiles began with AD 70, and in the first quarter of the century these things were not defined with regard to historical trends until John wrote on the Island of Patmos in AD 96.

Verse 1, we start with the encouragement of a future pastor. The verse deals with the basis for a historical downtrend. Even in times of historical downtrend pastors who are faithful in teaching the Word are encouraged by the phrase which begins the study of these local churches. We begin with the connective use of the conjunction kai, which is simply translated this time, "and." Next we have the dative singular definite article. This is the generic use of the definite article. In the Greek it is toi, and the generic use is used to define a category. The category is the clergy, pastors, ministers of local churches. With this we have a dative singular indirect object from the noun a)ggeloj, transliterated in the King James version "angel," but it really means messenger and that is the use here. However, it is a technical use for the word "messenger," it means future pastors in the church at Sardis. The dative indirect object indicates the ones in whose interest the information is given. It is to the advantage of every pastor to have a message from God, and it is to the advantage of the congregation to have a pastor with a message. The genitive singular of relationship from the noun e)kklhsia follows, referring here to the local church as a classroom for the perception of Bible doctrine. All local churches have location, so we have the prepositional phrase to bring that into view, e)n plus the locative from the proper noun Sardeij, "Sardis." Then we have the aorist active imperative of the verb grafw, this is the mandate. The culminative aorist tense views the writing of the book of Revelation in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results: completion of the canon of scripture, the encouragement of future pastors to teach doctrine, the completion of the textbook of world history from the time of John to the end of time. The imperative mood is the imperative of command. The active voice: the apostle John under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit produces the action of the verb. So the translation to begin our study: "And to the messenger, the future pastors of the church in Sardis, write."

Before we go any further, however, we stop to note again the principle of the urban interpretation of Rome. Remember that the Roman republic was an agricultural economy, a collection of small farmers, first of all living on seven hills and then eventually spreading out. The people of the republic were a cross-civilisation of three races: Vilanovans, Sabines, and Etruscans (or Lydians). Sardis was the capital of Lydia. So the aristocrats of Rome came primarily from the area of Sardis, 700 years before this time. Rome grew from a city to an Italian state, and eventually a Mediterranean empire. What has often been categorised as the Roman empire was in essence an association of cities. Without the Greek civilisation of the fifth century BC and the Hellenistic states of the Macedonian empire there would have been no Roman empire. The Roman empire was the logical result of the great Hellenistic states, and before that the founder of the Hellenistic states, Alexander and his Macedonian empire. Roman civilisation was an urban civilisation for the city of the Roman empire was the important entity. In fact the cities of the Roman empire were very much like states, they were analogous to states in the USA today.

Since the cities were to the Roman empire what states are to the USA this will help us to understand a principle or two behind this passage. Cities in the Roman empire were permitted and encouraged to manage their own affairs with the Roman provincial governor acting as a general supervisor. The Romans did not crack down, in fact they encouraged independence in their large cities throughout the empire. The population in the Roman empire considered themselves citizens of a city more than anything else, thus losing their racial identity and their racial prejudice. Race was never an issue to the Romans. The combining of the Sabines and the Villanovans with the Etruscans to form the aristocracy immediately eliminated any racial nonsense. The Etruscans, for example, didn't hang on to their racial concepts, and the other peoples who were brought in, the Latins and the Gauls, were not encouraged to bring along their culture, and they did not. They were proud to be Romans because Rome didn't represent a race, it represented a system, an excellent system invented by Gaius Julius Caesar. Therefore race was never an issue. And race is never an issue anyway, except where arrogance exists.

The Romans were greater than any people that have ever lived because of discipline, because of respect for authority, because of integrity. For discipline, authority and integrity are always associated with humility. So a Roman citizen considered himself an Alexandrian, an Athenian, a Corinthian, etc., so that the citizens of the Roman empire generally identified themselves with a city rather than a race. There was only one culture that was ever acceptable. You see the Romans had no culture. They started out as shepherds and farmers on seven hills and they had no culture. Therefore they borrowed a culture, and that is what preserved the Greek culture to bring about what we call classical times. Classical times isn't classical Greek, it is Greek thought and Hellenistic thought, and the only culture that the Romans ever accepted was the Greek culture. No nation can survive more than one culture, and the Romans were many races and many religions but one culture. That is why, outside of England, very few nations have ever been great for a thousand years. The British had one culture, though they were many races also.

The spectacular conquest of Alexander the Great and the consequent period of Hellenistic monarchies after Alexander's death in 323 BC paved the way for the Roman empire to be great. The Roman republic was not great — contrary to the opinions of historians who are liberals, it was the empire that was great. The republic was merely a foundation in which the empire was built, the foundation of discipline, the foundation of respect for law which brought about establishment principles. Rome, therefore became the master of a galaxy of cities throughout the world, cities which had flourished in Hellenistic times such as Athens, Corinth, Thessalonika, Pergamum, Ephesus, Antioch, Alexandria, and others. The republic was not a client nation to God, it was the empire that became a client nation to God. The direction of the Pauline epistles, of course, indicates something of Paul's preference, while John would rate first and foremost the seven churches which we are studying. To John Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamum, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia and Laodicea carried the Roman empire during the period of the Antonine Caesars, the greatest period in Roman history. The prosperity index, then, of the Roman empire was the status of its cities, their industries, their free trade, their function of capitalism. Rome had the greatest system of free trade the world has ever known. They had the greatest industrial complex of the ancient world. Most important of all, the cities were the place where the churches came into being. There were no country churches in the Roman empire and there was relatively little evangelism in the country, so that much of the opposition to churches came from country people who came to town and persecuted. Christianity flourished in the cities, the rural areas were strongholds for idolatry — the phallic cult, human sacrifice. This is one reason why they didn't mind killing Christians when they came to town, they were accustomed to worshipping with human sacrifice. Evangelism, missionary activity, and Bible teaching reached its effective peak in the cities of the Roman empire. Therefore the rapid spread of Christianity and the establishment of the local churches was a city function. And as goes the believers in the cities so went the Roman empire as the first client nation to God. It is also interesting to note that no nation or empire can survive, and the cities in the empire, without the farmer. But the farming declined and almost disappeared in the Roman empire, and yet the Roman empire had the finest of food thanks to Egypt which provided all of the grain for all of the empire. The Roman empire as the first Gentile client nation to God therefore had its own agricultural support.

Sardis was the capital of the ancient kingdom of Lydia. The Lydians were one of the three races that contributed to the Romans. The Iliad of Homer mentions Sardis under the name of Hyde [pronounced Hydee]. In the 8th century BC Sardis was the capital of the powerful Lydian empire, which produced kings like Croesus, the man who invented money. He invented money out of the most valuable of all metals, gold. The Jews did not have coined money, they had what is called talents — bars of metal. The city of Sardis was attacked by some wild Barbarians called Cimmerians in the 7th century BC. They kept attacking but because Sardis was a very beautifully fortified town they were never able to break in, except once, and they were finally driven out. But the Persians and the Athenians in the next century found a way to break through the great fortification system of Sardis, one of the greatest forts in the history of forts. Sardis was destroyed by a great earthquake in BC 17. The emperor Tiberias rebuilt it and because it was in such a fantastic location in less than two years it was rebuilt. When they rebuilt the city they took in mind traffic and so they built some of the finest boulevards and wide streets. The city of Sardis was famous for the gold taken out of the river which flowed through it, and it became a centre for making settings for jewelry. They also found out that there was something in the water beside gold, something that was perfect for dying, and it became the world centre for textile industries.

In 549 BC Sardis was captured by the Persians; in 501 BC it was captured and burned by the Ionians, the Athenians who went to Asia Minor; in 334 BC it surrendered to Alexander the Great, and he admired it so much he didn't touch a thing. By the way, his soldiers were so well behaved there wasn't one rape in town while they stayed there for six months. He controlled his army very well. He gave the city its independence which lasted for twelve years to 301 BC when it was conquered by Antiochus the Great; in 190 BC it became part of the kingdom of Pergamum; in 17 AD it was destroyed by an earthquake but the emperor Tiberius saw to it that it was rebuilt within a year; in 295 AD the Roman province of Asia was broken up and Sardis became part of the capital of Lydia; in 1402 AD it was conquered and destroyed by the Mongolian hordes, the last of the descendants of Ghengis Khan, and it never recovered from that.

Sardis was famous for other things, like the phallic cult. It was the first place in history where gold and silver coins were minted; it was famous for its fruit, its wool, its carpets, its jewelry; it was the wine centre of the world at that time. When Cicero visited Sardis he was impressed with its beauty. Three hundred years later Longus compared it to Venice in its beauty. It was the number one city for the manufacturing and the dying of woolen clothes throughout the world.

Next we have the anticipation of the historical downtrend. We begin with the present active participle from the verb legw, a word which can mean allege, answer, speak, to say. It has all kinds of related meanings. Here it means to communicate. The aoristic present tense sets forth an event as now occurring, punctiliar action in present time. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality — the Lord Jesus Christ is communicating this information through the future pastors at the church of Sardis to the people of that city and, by the way, communicating it to us likewise. You must remember that behind these words and phrases is the authority of our Lord Jesus Christ. The accusative neuter plural direct object o(dh is a demonstrative pronoun. It was used originally as the introductory formula for the Greek translation of the decrees of Persian kings. It is used here as an introductory formula to our Lord's estimate of the situation in Sardis. So we have, "communicates these things." Remember that the words in Greek are not in the same order as the English.

The subject is actually found in the relative clause which starts with the articular present active participle of e)xw, "he who has communicates these things." The definite article is used as a personal pronoun, translated "he", subject: Jesus Christ. The present tense is a descriptive present; active voice: Jesus Christ is the subject. The participle is circumstantial to set up a relative clause, "He who has communicates these things." Between "he who has" and "communicates these things" is the beginning of our study of the historical trends again. The rest of the relative clause is actually quoted from Revelation 1:4, 16, 20. First of all, from 1:4 we have the seven spirits. The accusative plural direct object of the verb e)xw is the seven spirits, "He who has the seven spirits communicates these things."

The seven spirits

This is a reference to God the Holy Spirit as the power system of the divine dynasphere. The title of God the Holy Spirit is taken from the prophecy of Isaiah 11:1,2. In Isaiah 11 we have a prophecy of the first advent of Jesus Christ.

Verse 1, "Then a shoot [a root that buds, a root shoot] will spring up," a prophecy of the first advent. And the root shoot will spring up from a dynasty which is no longer ruling in Israel, the dynasty of David. Since the fifth cycle of discipline was administered by Nebuchadnezzar no member of the royal family has ruled in Israel, so it is called "the stump," "from the stump of Jesse," that is David's line defunct from the fifth cycle of discipline; "And a branch from his roots [Christ at the second advent] will bear fruit [His rule in the Millennium].” So from verse one we have a prophecy of the two advents. It is because of a failure to properly interpret verse one that Jews have got into so much trouble in the 2000 years since Christ came the first time. Their failure to distinguish between the first and the second advent as in this passage is a part of their trouble. They can’t tell the difference between the root and the branch, and yet the root and the branch are one person, Jesus Christ, the God of Israel, the founder of Israel as the root. In the first advent He manifests Himself to Israel; in the second advent He comes back as the branch of a tree, the root grows into a great tree.

Verse 2, we have the fact that in the first advent of our Lord He was sustained by God the Holy Spirit. “And the Spirit of the Lord,” a reference to God the Holy Spirit, functioning at gate one of the prototype divine dynasphere, “will rest on him.” So here is the first of the seven spirits, His title as God. Remember that when Jesus Christ came in the flesh He was born into a power system; He was filled with the Spirit from birth. So “the Spirit of the Lord” is #1, the Holy Spirit at gate one.

The second of the seven spirits applying to the Holy Spirit. He is called “the Spirit of wisdom,” which in the Hebrew is chakmah, which means the application of doctrine from gate four of the prototype divine dynasphere.

Then we have “and understanding,” and that is the third of the seven spirits applying to God the Holy Spirit. “Understanding” is binah in the Hebrew; it is the perception of doctrine at gate four. Without the ministry of God the Holy Spirit there is no perception of doctrine.

Next He is called “the Spirit of counsel”, which is tseah in the Hebrew. It means plan or purpose, hence it is a reference of the Father’s plan to sustain the humanity of Christ in the prototype divine dynasphere. So again it refers to the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. God the Holy Spirit sustains the person of Christ during His earthly ministry.

Number five of the seven spirits: “and strength.” In the Hebrew it is “and of virtue.” It is the Hebrew word geburah, and it refers to both motivational and functional virtue produced by God the Holy Spirit in the incarnate Christ in His humanity, resulting in impeccability.

Number six is mentioned next in the verse: “The spirit of knowledge,” and this is daah, a reference to our Lord’s ability to interpret the trends of history during the first advent. By application, the ability of the believer living inside the divine dynasphere, learning doctrine , applying doctrine, and eventually coming to understand historical trends.

Number seven of the seven spirits is “the fear of the Lord.” This is jirah, the fear of the Lord meaning awe, respect, hence the function of gate five of the divine dynasphere.

So all seven descriptions in Isaiah 11:2 are really one Spirit, God the Holy Spirit whose divine power sustained the humanity of Christ in the prototype divine dynasphere, and whose divine power sustains the believer inside the operational model of the divine dynasphere for the Church Age.

1. Isaiah 11:1,2 not only prophesies of the two advents of Christ but emphasises the means for sustaining the humanity of Christ during the first advent, the power of the Holy Spirit in the prototype divine dynasphere. The Holy Spirit in the divine dynasphere is seven spirits but one person.
2. Isaiah 11:2 describes God the Holy Spirit in seven categorical functions inside the prototype divine dynasphere.
3. Revelation 3:1 indicates that the resurrected, glorified humanity of Christ at the right hand of the Father still possesses that prototype divine dynasphere in its power system, God the Holy Spirit.
4. In Revelation 4:5 it states that there is a relationship between the seven lamps, i.e. the seven local churches of Revelation 2 and 3, and the seven spirits, i.e. God the Holy Spirit. Therefore the divine dynasphere and the power of the Holy Spirit has been given to the royal family of God to be perpetuated throughout this dispensation only. You, as a believer, have something that is unique. You have the seven spirits, which means that you have the divine dynasphere available and the power system that goes with it, God the Holy Spirit, a power never made available to all believers at any other time in history. God the Holy Spirit sustained, empowered a few people in the Old Testament; now it is every believer who has the availability of the Spirit.
5. As long as the divine dynasphere is on earth, for the duration of the Church Age, there cannot be any prophecy. Prophecy stops and trends begin, trends depending on whether the believer lives in or out of the divine dynasphere.
6. This means that the dispensation of the Church is the Age of no prophecy, only historical trends.
7. The divine dynasphere in the Church Age is the key to historical trends.
8. The uptrend of history in the Church Age is influenced by the number of believers living consistently in the divine dynasphere.
9. Hence the believer's residence and function in the divine dynasphere determines historical trends for any given generation.
10. Prophecy will not resume until the divine dynasphere is removed from planet earth. This will not occur until the Rapture, until the royal family departs.
11. Revelation 5:6 emphasises our Lord's first advent under the title of the Lamb slain, and further relates the seven eyes of Zechariah chapters three and four to the seven spirits in that passage. In other words, the seven eyes and the seven spirits are synonymous.

12. Just as the Holy Spirit was the power system for the prototype divine dynasphere so the Holy Spirit is the power system or the working model of the divine dynasphere in this dispensation.

We have in verse one a principle with our Lord Jesus Christ: He was tested in all points like as we are. You will never have a test, a temptation, a justification for bitterness or reaction to life that our Lord Jesus Christ didn't face in the 33 years of His first advent. He was tested in all points like as we are, yet apart from sin, apart from having a sin nature and apart from any personal act of sin. He started out without the imputation of Adam's sin because of the virgin birth, and He started out in the prototype divine dynasphere, the same divine dynasphere that is given to us. And any time that we linger outside of the divine dynasphere it is inevitable that we are going to produce from our own volition a great deal of misery. It is also inevitable that the Lord will add to self-induced misery by divine discipline. The point that is emphasised in chapter 3:1 is a very simple one: the Lord used the power given by God the Father; the same power is available to you in the divine dynasphere.

God's game plan for the Church Age — residence and function inside the divine dynasphere — is actually an invention of God the Father. He invented it to sustain the humanity of Christ during the first advent. When our Lord was born He was given the divine dynasphere, and because there was no genetically-formed old sin nature our Lord was born as Adam was created perfect. There was one difference: God the Father invented a power system and our Lord faced the same issue we face in our Christian lives — either choose for it or against it. Of course, our Lord chose for it. Prior to the virgin birth no divine dynasphere had ever existed in human history and whatever provision for spirituality existed in the Old Testament it did not include what we have today as the royal family of God or Church Age believers.

In verse 1, the one who has the seven spirits is the Lord Jesus Christ, the one who first used the prototype divine dynasphere with such great success that it changed the course of human history and leads to historical trend number 1, Jesus Christ controls history. Our Lord's function in His humanity — only the humanity of Christ is related to the divine dynasphere — is first noted in the scripture as a child in the home. The home is a part of category #1 truth, the laws of divine establishment; the home is the school by which children are trained for life. So the home is organised humility for without humility there is absolutely no orientation to life, no human maturity, no teachability, and life then becomes a miserable, horrible thing.

Our Lord had parents, and those parents represent authority. We don't start out with freedom in life, we are not born free, nothing is born free. We are born helpless and under a system of authority. That big "A" for authority is the key to life, it is the key to freedom, it is the key to the sanctity of property, it is the key to the sanctity of life. Our Lord was born and He had parents. One was His real mother and one was His step father, not His real father. Both were descended directly from David. Joseph was descended from David through Solomon; Mary was descended from David through Nathan. So we have the principle of enforced humility. No one in this life ever reaches humility without enforced humility first. Enforced humility means authority. No one ever reaches teachability, no one ever has capacity for life, for love, for happiness, for blessing, without humility. Humility is the key to everything in life, and that is true for the unbeliever as well as for the believer. Our Lord responded to the authority of His parents.

You must remember that human authority is not always going to be fair. That is not even the point. You don't reject authority because authority is unfair, for to reject authority is to reject life. Life cannot exist without authority. Many of the people who have authority are incapable but that is not the issue. Some people never get oriented to life because they have never been oriented to authority, starting in the home. And remember the principle of historical trends: We are the products of our own decisions; decisions create environment, not environment decisions. It is the positive response to the parent's authority that leads to learning in life. Good decisions open the door for greater decisions and more decisions; bad decisions close the doors and shut down the options in life. The first great decision you make in life is to obey your parents. Whether they are fair or unfair is not the issue. That is the basis for genuine humility in life and genuine humility is the basis for maturity. Maturity has nothing to do with how many years you have.

Many human beings fail to make the transition from the home as a child to freedom in life as an adult. They reject parental authority and policy and purpose, resulting in becoming a physical adult and a mental child, or they have the soul of a child inside of an adult body. Human immaturity or lack of enforced and genuine humility cannot make proper use of freedom but distorts it into a system of evil by rejecting authority in life. Furthermore, such a person will not and cannot take the responsibility for the function of his own volition. But our Lord Jesus Christ responded to parental authority and functioned under gate three of the divine dynasphere, Luke 2:51,52, "and he was subordinate to them [His parents]." Not once was He ever touched by arrogance.

(A person who has human immaturity or lack of enforced discipline and genuine humility cannot make proper use of freedom. They distort it into a system of evil by rejecting authority in life)

Our Lord's subordination to the Father's plan follows the same parallel. The plan of God the Father is organised humility. The authority of God is the sovereignty of God, and that is enforced humility. Positive volition to the plan of God is genuine humility. Positive volition can be summarised by residence and function in the divine dynasphere, the filling of the Spirit, the daily perception of Bible doctrine and application where necessary. At the point of His birth our Lord so stated His subordination to the Father's plan. Our Lord in the cradle was in hypostatic union, Hebrews 10:5, "Therefore, when he [the incarnate Christ] entered into the world [virgin birth], He said, "You [God the Father] do not desire sacrifices and offerings." In other words, our Lord was a new priest after the order of Melchizedek, He was not going to offer animal sacrifices. He would institute the cup and the bread, but He would not go through any ritual of the animal sacrifices, "but you have prepared for me a human body ... At that time [the first Christmas] I said, "I have arrived (In the scroll of the book [Old Testament] it stands written concerning me) to accomplish your plan, O God." That is the ultimate in subordination to authority.

Before the cross our Lord faced the intensification of that test. In Matthew 26:36-42, "My Father, if it is possible [and it isn't], let this cup [the cross, His bearing our sins] be removed from me; however, not as I will, but as you will." The purity of our Lord's motivation is expressed in Philippians 2:5-8, and it is related again to humility: "Keep on thinking this within you which was also resident in Christ Jesus, who, though he eternally existed in the essence of God, he did not think equality with God a profit to be seized and held," He did not make an issue out of equality, only arrogance makes an issue out of equality. Humility never gives equality a thought, "but he deprived himself of the proper function of his deity [doctrine of kenosis], when he had received the form of a servant, when he had been born in the likeness of the human race. In fact, although he was discovered in outward appearance as a man, he humbled himself by becoming obedient to the point of the death, that is, the death of the cross."

John 15:10, "If you keep my mandates, you will reside in the sphere of my love complex; just as I [Jesus Christ] have fulfilled the mandates of my Father, and I reside in the sphere of his love complex [a synonym for the divine dynasphere]." So our Lord's emphasis on doctrine inside the divine dynasphere is a marvelous thing, and the last thing that He uttered on the cross was the word "doctrine."

The impeccability of Christ inside the divine dynasphere becomes a major issue. Impeccability means not liable to sin, exempt by virtue of being inside the divine dynasphere. As long as one remains inside the divine dynasphere he is free from sin. When you choose to sin you step outside the divine dynasphere. Inside the divine dynasphere is purity, integrity, honour, and as long as one remains inside the divine dynasphere through one's own volition the purity factor remains in status quo. Jesus Christ, during the incarnation, remained inside the divine dynasphere, therefore He did not commit an act of personal sin. Where the first Adam failed the last Adam succeeded. The first Adam was temptable and peccable; the last Adam was able not to sin in His humanity because of the divine dynasphere. Christ was born without a sin nature, therefore He could not be tempted from within. His temptations came from without and they were much more extensive than anything we will ever face. The human nature of Christ was temptable but inside the divine dynasphere His purity remained intact. Our Lord's temptations to His humanity not only came from without but He was tempted by Satan personally. That in itself is significant, Matthew 4:1. The divine nature of Christ was not temptable. Divine immutability demands impeccability, God cannot become mutable and turn temptation into sin. So His deity was not the issue. Christ is God; He is immutable; He is omnipotent, always has been and always will be. It is impossible for the deity of Christ to sin, to be tempted, or to be deceived. While Eve was deceived in her original temptation in the garden our Lord is omniscient and cannot be deceived by Satan or by sin. The sovereignty of God cannot change His mind about sin; the perfect righteousness of God cannot be corrupted by sin; the deity of Christ is not able to sin, James 1:13. The union of undiminished deity with true humanity meant that Christ was impeccable. The humanity of Christ was temptable and peccable but remained in purity inside the divine dynasphere. The deity of Christ was neither temptable nor peccable. Christ in hypostatic union, therefore, was temptable but impeccable. As God He was not able to sin; as true humanity inside the divine dynasphere He was able not to sin. This, then, is the picture of the power of the prototype divine dynasphere.

Translation of Revelation 3:1 so far: “And to the messenger [future pastors of the church at Sardis] write; He who has the seven spirits [God the Holy Spirit is the power system of the divine dynasphere] communicates these things.” The Holy Spirit was given without measure to our Lord and therefore we are commanded to be filled with the Spirit. That is entrance into the divine dynasphere, gate one. We are commanded: “Walk by means of the Spirit,” this is functioning at the various gates of the divine dynasphere. Negatively, we are commanded. “Grieve not the Spirit” — involvement in cosmic one; “Quench not the Spirit,” involvement in cosmic two.

The Lord Jesus Christ was sustained by God the Holy Spirit throughout His earthly ministry. John 3:34, the Spirit was given without measure to the incarnate Christ; Matthew 3:16, the Holy Spirit is mentioned at the baptism in a special way; Matthew 12:18,28, the Holy Spirit is related to the ministry of the incarnate Christ. When Christ was being judged for our sins on the cross the ministry of the Holy Spirit in sustaining Him was set aside. There is only one time when our Lord was out of the divine dynasphere and that was for three hours when “He who knew no sin was made sin for us.” However, the Holy Spirit participated in the resurrection of the humanity of Christ, according to Romans 8:11 and 1 Peter 3:18.

From Revelation 1:16 we have the next phrase. We have e(pta and a)steroj, “seven stars.” By comparing Revelation 1:16 for the interpretation given in 1:20 it is concluded that the seven stars are the seven future pastors of the seven churches. Just as a star is a light container so the pastor must also be a light container. The light that he must contain in his soul must be Bible doctrine which he has learned through study; the light must be maximum doctrine resident in his soul to teach the congregation. Hence we have the phrase, kai touj e(pta a)steroj, and this is a part of the accusative plural direct object from e)w, “and he who has the seven stars communicates these things.” Translation so far: “And to the messenger [the future pastors] of the church in Sardis write; He who has the seven spirits and the seven stars communicates these things.”

We are now ready for the overall evaluation. We have the perfect i)oda used as a present active indicative. It is correctly translated, “I know,” but a better translation is, “I have known.” The present tense of duration is often translated like a perfect tense because the present of duration denotes what has begun in the past and continues into the present time — begun in the past through omniscience feeding the divine computer, the computer of divine decrees, and continues into the present with a printout of historical trends. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb, as God, and the indicative mood is declarative for a statement of absolute and dogmatic fact known to our Lord Jesus Christ in eternity past.

Next we have the accusative plural direct object from the noun e)rgon, which means accomplishments or production. With it we have the possessive genitive singular from the personal pronoun su, “I have known your accomplishments,” i.e. your Christian production.

Then we have a conjunction ο(τι, used after verbs of cognisance to get the content, “namely that.” This is followed by a present active indicative of ε)χω, which is used so frequently by the apostle John. It means to have or to hold. So we have “namely that you have.” The present tense is a descriptive present for what is now going on, a false reputation assigned to the church in Sardis. They have given a false impression to the world and their false reputation is about to be exposed. The active voice: the church in Sardis produces the action of the verb. There are many churches that have false reputations. They are supposed to be great spiritual churches. In reality they are not and cannot be without the presentation of Bible doctrine and the communication of the plan of God, i.e. the divine dynasphere. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of a false reputation assigned to the church at Sardis.

Next we have the accusative singular direct object from the word ο)νομα, which has three related meanings. It means “name,” it means “person,” it means “reputation.” So we will translate it, “namely that you have a reputation.” The reputation is that they are a live-wire church, the present active indicative of ζω, which means to live. The descriptive present for what is now going on, a false reputation assigned to the church at Sardis that they are a live-wire church, active in perception and application of doctrine. The active voice: allegedly the church at Sardis is producing the action. This is a declarative indicative mood for the reality of a false reputation — “namely that you have a reputation that you are alive.” A reputation for being alive implies that the believers in the church at Sardis are positive to doctrine, living in the divine dynasphere, advancing to maturity and forming a pivot for the blessing of the first Gentile client nation to God, SPQR.

Principle

1. A false reputation for spirituality and maturity is a sign of cosmic involvement related to the function of hypocrisy.
2. To live by one’s reputation with people apart from integrity and virtue is to be a cosmic believer, the most miserable person on planet earth.
3. The only reputation that counts is the believer’s reputation with God who cannot be deceived.
4. It is impossible to have a good name or reputation with God apart from consistent residence and function inside the divine dynasphere, and that includes consistent perception of Bible doctrine.
5. The believers of Sardis involved in the cosmic system talk a good fight, which means they have been exposed to excellent doctrinal teaching, but they have learned the vocabulary without its content.

6. To talk a good fight the believer only has to know the doctrinal vocabulary, but to fight a good fight, as per 2 Timothy 4:7,8, the believer has to be consistent in living inside the divine dynasphere, consistent in the perception and application of doctrine to life. Only e)pignwsij-type doctrine results in both spiritual growth and application to adversity. Adversity is the testing point.

7. It is easy for the cosmic believer to talk a good fight but it is difficult for the positive believer to fight a good fight. Talking a good fight is exposure to doctrine, living in the cosmic system while exposed to doctrine, growing in arrogance and functioning under the principle of hypocrisy. Fighting a good fight is learning doctrine, living in the divine dynasphere, growing in grace, applying doctrine to experience. The believer who talks a good fight makes bad decisions. He is spiritually and mentally lazy, negative toward doctrine, but gives the impression of being a spiritual giant. His arrogance is stimulated by approbation from other believers which only stabilises and crystallises his facade of hypocrisy plus his legalistic vanity.

The false reputation for spirituality and maturity is a sign of cosmic involvement related to the function of hypocrisy. To live by one's reputation with people apart from integrity is one of the signs of being a cosmic believer and a cosmic believer is the most miserable person on planet earth. The only reputation that counts is the believer's reputation with God. A reputation with people is meaningless unless it is backed by virtue and integrity. It is impossible to have a reputation or a good name with God apart from consistent residence and function inside the divine dynasphere, the daily function of GAP. The believers of Sardis involved in the cosmic system, therefore, fought the good fight, which means they have been exposed to excellent doctrine and doctrinal teaching but they had only skinned off the vocabulary without the content. They talked a good fight but they did not fight a good fight. To talk a good fight the believer only has to know the doctrinal vocabulary but to fight a good fight the believer has to live in the divine dynasphere, perception and application of doctrine. So only e)pignwsij type doctrine results in spiritual growth and the application to adversity. Only e)pignwsij-type doctrine develops virtue so that the believer has an honest reputation with people. It is easy for the cosmic believer to talk a good fight but it is very difficult for the positive believer to fight a good fight, so that talking a good fight is exposure to doctrine while living in the cosmic system but fighting a good fight is the residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. The believer who talks a good fight makes bad decisions, he is spiritually and mentally lazy, negative toward doctrine, but gives the impression of being a spiritual giant. His arrogance is stimulated by approbation from other believers, which only crystallises and stabilises his facade of hypocrisy.

Our next Greek word in Revelation 3:1 is the connective conjunction kai which introduces a fact as surprising, and when it introduces something as a surprising fact it is usually translated into the English by the word "nevertheless" or "in spite of that" So we have to translate, "but in spite of that reputation." Next is the present active indicative of the verb e)imi, "in spite of that reputation you are." The perfective present refers to a fact which has come to be in the past but is emphasised as a present reality. The active voice: the cosmic believers in the church at Sardis produce the action through their hypocrisy. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of cosmic believers in the Sardis church passing themselves off as spiritual believers. With this we have the predicate nominative of the noun nekroj, "you are dead." This is a reference to believers living inside of the cosmic system. Hence the death of a cosmic believer, known as carnality and, when perpetuated, reversionism. This is the one word that clarifies the entire concept of this verse — "you are dead." Obviously they are live physically, otherwise they would not be rebuked by the Lord at this point. So what does it mean, "you are dead"?

The last part of the verse says, "I have known your accomplishments, namely that you have a reputation that you are alive, but in spite of that reputation you are dead."

The seven uses of the word "death" in the Bible

1. The first and most obvious death is physical death in the human race which is defined as separation of the soul from the body. As long as the soul resides in the body there is life in the individual. This life was imputed by God immediately after birth to the human soul. When the soul leaves the body the person is physically dead. Physical death is a matter of the sovereign decision of God based on His perfect knowledge of all the facts. No believer ever departs by physical death unless God permits it. Exception: suicide, the superimposition of one's volition over God's.

God can and does prolong physical life. The conditions under which He does so are described in Psalm 102:19, 20, 23,24; 118:18. God also delivers the believer from death, Job 5:20; Psalm 33:19; 56:13; 116:8. Believers who attain maturity depart from life under the principle of dying grace, which means dying is one of the greatest moments of life, it is the moment of great happiness, blessing, and not necessarily freedom from pain but the negation of pain as a factor. Principle of dying grace: "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints," this does not refer to the believer who dies under the sin unto death. Resurrection, of course, is the victory over death, 1 Corinthians 15. Physical death is the soul leaving the body, in the case of the believer it is the soul and the spirit, while resurrection is the soul and the spirit of the believer getting a new body in the air. This body is permanent and the soul and the spirit live in that body forever. The body we have now is a body of corruption subject to death and it will not last forever, but the one we have in the future will.

Also at the last judgment when the unbeliever is resurrected he is given a body so that when he is cast into the lake of fire forever and ever that body will suffer maximum pain. The soul of the unbeliever has a body which will suffer intensive pain forever and ever. The second resurrection is a bona fide resurrection of the unbeliever, and because he has rejected Christ in time he is judged — he is not judged for his sins because all sin was judged at the cross and therefore sin cannot be mentioned at the last judgment. Instead the issue is all of his good deeds, which will not be good enough — in eternity on the basis of his works, out of the book of works. Human good is not good enough to get to heaven. The important thing about physical death is that the soul never dies; death does not refer to the soul. Once life is imputed to the soul the soul lives forever. The issue is: Where does the soul live forever? That issue can be answered only one way: “What think ye of Christ?” Christ is the issue.

So let's take an illustration, someone who is the antithesis of the apostle Paul and who died in Rome at the same time he did, in about 66 AD. When Paul died he received an interim body, face to face with the Lord. He was recognisable in his interim body and for nearly 2000 years he and his friends have been having a wonderful time in heaven. This is the interlude of blessing. But let's take “Brother Nitwit” who also died the same year and was a loser all the way. He didn't spend five minutes of his Christian life in the divine dynasphere, he did everything wrong, he was in the cosmic system from start to finish, he was one of the world's greatest losers. When he died the same year as Paul he was absent from the body and face to face with the Lord. He also had an interim body; he also had no more sorrows, no more tears, no more pain, no more death, the old things are passed away. And he also is enjoying and has been enjoying 2000 years of great blessing. But where the difference comes is at the judgment seat of Christ after the resurrection or Rapture of the Church. That is when “Brother Nitwit” is going to be ashamed, and that is when Paul is going to have the order of the morning star and all of the blessings that attend it. So “Nitwit” forever and ever and ever in his resurrection body is going to be low on the totem pole. Nevertheless between now and the Rapture the losers have an interim of great blessing. Death has great connotations for the believer and the believer with doctrine never fears death; it is the believer without doctrine who goes out with his fingernails across the blackboard of life, hanging on for dear life! For the believer whose momentum carries him to gate eight — the mature believer of the divine dynasphere — death is profit forever and ever, says Philippians 1:20,21. “According to my intense concentration and confidence that in nothing shall I be ashamed, but in all confidence, as at all times [i.e. inside the divine dynasphere] even now Christ will be glorified in my person, either through living or through dying. For me living is Christ [in the divine dynasphere], dying is profit.”

We have seen humility as one of the great things in life, now we see with humility two other factors: concentration and confidence. Humility, concentration and confidence are the greatest virtues for happiness in this life. For the believer who spends his life inside the cosmic system, however, death is horrible. The believer living in the cosmic system dies under discipline and has the most painful, nightmarish death.

2. The second category of death in the Bible is spiritual death, probably the least understood, especially when you link it with the cross. Spiritual death is the penalty of sin and is so given as a warning to our original parents in the garden. They were warned in Genesis 2:17 that if they disobeyed God and His prohibition, “dying they would die”. That was spiritual death. They didn't die physically when they partook of the forbidden fruit, they died spiritually. But Adam's original sin which brought about that spiritual death is imputed to us at birth; it is imputed to our genetically-formed old sin nature, and when it says the wages of sin is death in Romans 6:23 it is not talking about your personal sins and it is not talking about physical death. It is talking about Adam's sin and it is talking about spiritual death, separation from God. We are born physically alive, human life imputed to the soul; we are born spiritually dead, isolated from God; that is what spiritual death is. Remember our personal sins are not the basis of our spiritual death, they are the basis of our Lord's spiritual death on the cross. When He became a substitute and took our place on the cross these personal sins were imputed to Him. He had no spiritual death of His own because through the virgin birth He was born without an old sin nature, therefore Adam's original sin couldn't be imputed to Him because He had no old sin nature. Therefore He lived a perfect life inside the divine dynasphere and when He went to the cross He was the exception. The wages of sin is death to all members of the human race, Christ is the exception. The wages of sin was not death to Him because He did not sin, but it became death to Him because as our substitute and saviour our personal sins were imputed to Him and judged. So the spiritual death He had was not His own. When Christ was on the cross He died spiritually by being judged for our sins. Later on He died physically because His work was finished. Christ died twice on the cross that we might be born twice. So the entire human race is born physically alive and spiritually dead because of the two imputations that occur at birth. Mankind is not condemned by the imputation of his own personal sins to himself but by the imputation of Adam's original sin to the genetically-formed old sin nature. Condemnation is not the basis of personal sin, condemnation is on the basis of imputed sin. From birth the status of the human race is spiritual death, so the first death that comes to us comes at birth — spiritual death, just as Adam and the woman. We end life with physical death, the exception of course is the Rapture generation.

The solution to spiritual death is stated also in Romans 6:23, "but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Eternal life is not the same as human life. Human life is imputed to the soul after birth. Eternal life comes through Jesus Christ our Lord. So when we believe in Christ we are said to be born again, and we now have eternal life. This eternal life is not imputed to the soul but it is imputed to the human spirit. Regeneration or being born again is God the Holy Spirit creating a human spirit for the imputation of eternal life.

Our personal sins were never imputed to us for condemnation, they were imputed to Christ. 2 Corinthians 5:21, "he [the Father] made him [Christ] who knew no sin [impeccability of the humanity of Christ inside the divine dynasphere] to be made sin on our behalf [our sins were imputed to Him] that we might become the righteousness of God in him [the other judicial imputation]." Isaiah 53:6, "Therefore the Lord [God the Father] has caused to fall on him [Christ on the cross] the punishment for our sins," that is spiritual death.

3. Positional death of the believer is the third category of death in the Bible. Through the baptism of the Holy Spirit at salvation the believer is identified with Christ in His death, burial and resurrection. Out of the forty things that happen to us at the point of salvation one is the baptism of the Spirit, one of the five ministries of the Spirit. The baptism of the Holy Spirit: God the Holy Spirit picks us up and puts us into union with Christ. We are in union with Christ forever, we can never get out of being in union with Christ. "In Christ" is a technical phrase in the New Testament which means two things: current positional truth and retroactive identification with Christ in His death. This means simply this: When Christ died on the cross our sins were imputed to Him and judged, but we have two other things that were not imputed, our human good and our evil which were both rejected because human good and evil must continue to be an issue throughout human history. Remember that the angelic conflict is resolved by the function of human volition and without human good and evil the options do not exist in human history. So our Lord rejected human good and evil on the cross and was judged for our sins. Positional death is identification with Christ in His death, which means that positionally we have rejected human good and evil — not experientially but positionally. So through the baptism of the Holy Spirit at salvation the believer is identified with Christ in His death, burial and resurrection. Positional death, also called retroactive positional truth, is the believer's identification with Christ in His death, for just as Jesus Christ on the cross rejected human good and evil so positionally have all believers. That is why we only confess our sins for rebound, we do not confess human good and evil. Experientially the rejection of human good and evil by the believer is a matter of spiritual growth. Positional rejection of human good and evil as the policy of Satan, the manifestation of the cosmic system, is a part of the believer's residence inside of the divine dynasphere. So positionally we were identified with Christ in His death, therefore positionally we have rejected good and evil. Experientially life in the divine dynasphere rejects human good and evil.

Colossians 2:11,12 is a good passage on this type of death. "In fact in him you have been circumcised with a circumcision not made with hands, by the renunciation of the body of the flesh," that is, the old sin nature's functions: evil and human good, "by the circumcision of Christ, having been buried with him by means of the baptism [of the Spirit]". The concept is expanded in Romans 6:1-5.

So retroactive positional truth or positional death is identification with Christ in His death where He was judged for our sins but rejected human good and evil, the policy of Satan as the ruler of this world. Therefore we can only sin outside of the divine dynasphere and only produce human good and evil inside the cosmic system. Therefore all personal sin places us immediately outside of the divine dynasphere and simultaneously inside the cosmic system. If the believer persists in this then cosmic death becomes the issue.

4. Cosmic death is therefore category #4, the one we actually have in our passage. Cosmic death is carnality, the function of the believer's volition converting temptation into sin. The old sin nature resides inside the human body. This is why people get old. Time is not the major issue, the old sin nature residing in the cell structure of the body is.

There is a gate between the body and the soul and that gate is guarded by the volition of the soul. The old sin nature can only send up temptation. It is the source of all temptation but it is not the source of sin, the source of sin is human volition. Temptation knocks on the gate and if you open the gate and let it through then it becomes sin. You may say you didn't know that it was a sin when temptation knocks, but you still wanted it to enter. Therefore whether it is a temptation regarding a sin of cognisance or a sin of ignorance it makes no difference, you are responsible because that sin of ignorance or cognisance could not exist without your volition. This is how the old sin nature controls the soul, because you open the gate and let it in. The principle: The believer cannot sin inside the divine dynasphere, so when he makes that decision to open the gate and let the sin in — he converts temptation into sin — he is outside the divine dynasphere, and once he opens the gate and commits the sin from his own free will then he is in the cosmic system. That is how cosmic death gets started. The decision to sin automatically places the believer inside the cosmic system. Living inside the cosmic system classifies that believer not only as carnal but living in temporal death. For the believer cosmic involvement through sin is always cosmic death, the believer's function inside the cosmic system. So when you sin of your own free will and enter into the cosmic system you are described in the Bible as dead. That can also be called carnal and you can call it reversionism, apostasy or anything but in some passages the Bible calls it death, James 1:15; Ephesians 5:14; 1 Timothy 5:6; Revelation 3:1; 1 John 3:14.

5. The production mortality of the believer. This category combines the arrogance of Christian service with the function of human good. It also can include the function of crusader arrogance with the modus operandi of cosmic panaceas. In other words, this is the production of Christian service, good works of the believer involving the cosmic system. All good works in the cosmic system are human good and are called "dead works," Hebrews 6:1. Anything related to the cosmic system is outside of the plan of God, including Christian service and production performed while residing in the cosmic system. The works, the production, the Christian service of the believer in the cosmic system is dead, to be burned at the judgment seat of Christ under category "wood, hay, and stubble" — 1 Corinthians 3:15. All Christian production will be evaluated at the judgment seat of Christ after the Rapture of the Church.

6. Sexual death, the inability to copulate. It is only used in connection with men, and only one man in the Bible, Abraham, Romans 4:21; Hebrews 11:11,12. The issue of sexual death is very important. Abraham had children, but none by his wife. Now at age 99 there was a covenant to be fulfilled and he doesn't have any child by his wife, Sarah. "Sarah shall have a son" is the issue. From Abraham's loins would come a great nation, Israel. So how is the promise going to be fulfilled, an unconditional promise to Abraham if he can't copulate? Here he is 99 and the promise is an unconditional promise from the Abrahamic covenant. Not only is Abraham unable to perform sexually but Sarah has passed the menopause so she could not become pregnant. That is sexual death. Both of them were sexually dead but very much alive! The promise was that Abraham would have a son by Sarah. If Abraham believed this he would do the following: cut the foreskin around the phallus and be ready for the Lord to fulfill His promise. And he did. The Jewish race is a miracle race. When Abraham had cut off the foreskin that was dead skin, that was spiritual death gone, and God revived his sexual apparatus as well as that of his wife, Sarah. And they had a son. After Sarah died Abraham had eight more sons.

7. The second death is for the unbeliever, and the unbeliever only. It is the final judgment of those who reject the Lord Jesus Christ as personal saviour; it is eternal separation from God in a literal lake of fire created out of the destruction of the universe. It is described as judgment in Hebrews 9:27, "And inasmuch as it is destined for mankind to die [physical death], but after this death the judgment [the second death]." That is why it is called the second death in Revelation 20:12-15, "the dead were judged from the things which had been written in the books according to their works ... and they were judged each one according to his works." They were not judged according to their sins because the sins of the unbeliever were judged at the cross, so he has to be judged according to his works. The lake of fire is the second death.

Verse 2, translated, “Be watchful” in the King James version. A pitiful translation. The present active imperative periphrastic is what we have. A periphrastic always has two verbs and in this one we have a participle used with a finite verb to constitute a compound tense form. The periphrastic combines two verb forms to make a more forceful mandate for alertness. In view of the overall subject of Revelation chapters 2 and 3, which is historical trends, the mandate is obvious. The reason for the periphrastic is emphasis on both linear aktionsart and duration. The actual periphrastic is composed of two verbs: ginomai and e)imi. These are the two that are always used in a periphrastic. In this particular case the verb ginomai is used instead of the verb e)imi as the first part of the periphrastic. Ordinarily, while you have e)imi you might as well know that this is most unusual, as is the mandate. Usually you have e)imi; this time we have ginomai. With it is the noun gregorew. We start with the fact that we have a present participle, ginomai, combined with a present middle imperative of gregorew, which is translated simply, “Be constantly alert,” but it is stronger than that. In fact the strength of the periphrastic simply cannot be rendered into English. The progressive present tense for both the participle and the finite verb is present linear aktionsart. It is a constant thing; you must be constant all of your Christian life. Alertness for every possible type of a problem is very important. Alertness with regard to temptation is basically where it starts; alertness with regard to your failures and what to do about it — the function of the rebound technique; alertness therefore to spend as much time as possible in the divine dynasphere; alertness to make sure that you are not distracted by others from learning the Word of God, either by the one who teaches the Word or by people in the congregation, or by your friends who have nothing whatever to do with the congregation. Distraction is a major problem and it requires alertness. But the primary alertness we have in this passage has to do with historical trends which we have studied in detail.

“Be constantly alert,” the active voice of the participle: the believer must produce the action. The middle voice of the finite verb, gregorew, is a direct middle in which the subject acts with a view to participating in the outcome of the action, participating in the results of residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. The imperative mood is a mandate for the believers to whom this was originally addressed and a mandate to Christians in general.

We have a connective kai because another part of this particular mandate includes a second verb, kai, simply translated “and.” Then the second mandate, part of the first, the aorist active imperative of the verb sthrizw, and it means to establish, to support, to confirm, to strengthen, and we are going to translate it “and strengthen” as in the King James version. But you must understand it means strengthen in the sense of support or stabilise. The original connotation of the verb was to support something so that it stands upright and immovable. In other words, this is a command to the pastor to continue teaching Bible doctrine in Sardis in spite of the tremendous surge of negative volition on the part of the believers.

One thing that men in the ministry remember is that people in general are fickle. Crowds inevitably are fickle and unstable and easily led. That is why, of course, Christianity has mandates with regard to crowds — not stay out of crowds but to stay away from the influence of crowds, and of people. Hence the two commands are directed toward the future pastors of the church at Sardis. Pastors through their own study of the Word must be able to interpret the historical trends since there is no prophecy to interpret for the Church Age. All prophecy begins after the Rapture. The historical trends are clearly delineated and the pastor must be alert to relate historical trends to the teaching and the application of the Word of God for the benefit of his congregation. But it says he must also do something else, and it is very discouraging for a pastor to study the Word of God only to have his message rejected, ridiculed, refused, or when there is rudeness during the teaching of the Word of God.

There are two basic categories of negative volition toward doctrine, both of which are related to the cosmic system. There is the negative volition of cosmic one, the twenty-six interlocking systems of arrogance; there is cosmic two, the nine interlocking systems of hatred. Each one has its own characteristics with regard to negative volition toward God's plan — negative volition toward doctrine, negative volition toward anything that the Lord has provided by way of logistical grace and the options thereof. The negative volition of cosmic one, gate two — the negative volition gate — is rejection of Bible doctrine because of preoccupation with self. Preoccupation with self includes a principle called prejudice. Prejudice is often arrogance, although not always. When you are preoccupied with yourself and you are challenged by something in the Word that militates against your background, your preconceived notions, or something that is contrary to what someone you love and admire has said. Then you reject it. You are not really rejecting the overall teaching of the Word as such but because you are preoccupied with yourself you are rejecting some principle of the Word of God. The second category is negative volition of cosmic two, gate one. This is antagonism toward doctrine from rejection of its content and this is a much more serious type of negative volition. But no matter how widespread negative volition happens to be in the local church — and every local church has its negative volition — the pastor must continue to support, to strengthen, to stabilise, to establish those who are positive to Bible teaching by continued faithfulness in teaching, no matter how much “booing” there is from the pew. Often a message is only geared to a small percentage of the congregation because those are the positive ones.

The constative aorist tense is for action extended over a period of time, such as doctrinal teaching from the pulpit designed to stabilise, support, and strengthen those believers in the congregation who are positive. The active voice: the pastor produces the action and the imperative mood is a mandate, it is the imperative of command. Translation: “Be constantly alert, and constantly strengthen, support, stabilise.”

Now we have the object of both verbs. The accusative neuter plural from the definite article ta is the generic use of the definite article. The generic use of the definite article recognises positive believers as a special category to whom the pastor must be faithful in teaching while there is negative volition present in the same congregation. It recognises positive believers as a special category which glorify Christ, provide blessing for the client nation, fulfill the plan of God for the Church Age, and personally advance to maturity in great blessing from God in time. The accusative neuter plural direct object from the adjective used as a substantive, loipoj, is an adjective but it is used as a noun. It is translated, “the remnant,” the rest who have positive volition toward doctrine. In Sardis positive volition was in the minority in that local church. It was a local church where the majority of the believers talked a good fight but did not fight a good fight. They listened and picked up the vocabulary but they distorted it into something that was meaningless. So this is the remnant and the remnant is now described by the imperfect active indicative from mellw which introduces a relative clause — “who are about to.” The imperfect tense is a tendential imperfect for an action tending toward realisation. It implies that cosmic involvement has not attained to the point of maximum punishment from God but the potential is there. In other words, when the majority of any given congregation are negative toward doctrine it has a tendency to put up a temptation in front of the positive believers, they have a tendency to go negative and get into the cosmic system themselves. This is the way it would be translated: “Be constantly alert, and strengthen the remnant.” The pastors must persist in teaching to positive believers for without doctrine they are the potential candidates for the cosmic system. They reside in a congregation where the majority of the believers are negative toward doctrine and therefore they are constantly tempted and they are constantly candidates for being influenced by the mob, influenced by the majority rather than being influenced by the teaching of Bible doctrine. This is always a problem. If everyone else is booing sometimes it is easy to join them, and the weak always do. The active voice means that these are positive believers living in the divine dynasphere and they have the potential of producing the action of the verb — although they haven’t as yet — even though there is a tremendous temptation to do so because they are in the minority. The indicative mood is the potential indicative of impulse. It is easy in a moment of impulse to get into the cosmic system. Then we have the aorist active infinitive of the verb a)poqenhskw, and it means to die, “who are about to die.” It is a reference to cosmic death and implies that from cosmic death comes the sin unto death. The constative aorist tense contemplates the possibility, the potentiality of positive believers getting into the cosmic system because so many are in the cosmic system in that particular local church. The active voice: the believers are potentially under the influence and distraction of negative believers producing the action. So we have believers in Sardis who are about to become negative. The infinitive indicates a conceived result which follows the nature of the case.

Principle

1. People influence people; believers influence believers. Our passage says: “Be constantly alert, and strengthen the remnant who are about to die,” they haven’t and they are still going strong but the potential is there. When you have a majority of people in the congregation that are negative toward doctrine it tends to cause those who are positive to become shaky, and often because they make close friendships with those who are negative they are led astray themselves.
2. Cosmic believers, especially when they are in the majority, influence positive believers living in the divine dynasphere, apart from the protection of faithful doctrinal teaching. They do this through friendship, flattery, and social life so that social life takes precedence over spiritual life.

3. Strong believers therefore become weak, and no matter how strong or talented or great a person may be in any given area arrogance neutralises that ability. So strong believers become weak when they become arrogant.

4. Arrogance is easily influenced by evil. That is because arrogance is preoccupation with self to the exclusion of any form of truth or any system of integrity.

5. Every positive believer living inside the divine dynasphere must be constantly alert from perception of doctrine not to be disillusioned or distracted or misled by cosmic believers. The pastor must be alert in teaching the Word; the congregation must be alert in the perception of doctrine to make the right application.

6. The spread of cosmic believers as the majority in any local church means the potential spread of apostasy through cosmic involvement.

7. Every cosmic believer in the local church is an evangelist for Satan and the cosmic system.

8. It is easier for believers to follow their friends into the cosmic system than to remain faithful to the teaching of Bible doctrine. The thing that causes this is arrogance in social life.

9. Where arrogance abounds friendship means influence and influence means cosmic involvement, cosmic involvement means the sin unto death.

In the next phrase we have an explanation, the explanatory use of the post-positive conjunctive particle gar, "for." With this we have the perfect active indicative of the verb e(uriskw plus the negative o)u, "for I have not found." The intensive perfect emphasises the existing results of a completed action, in this case a completed investigation of the church in Sardis. This is the emphatic method in the Greek of presenting a fact or a condition. The active voice: the Lord Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb and the findings are not favourable. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of an unfavourable report regarding the church in Sardis. With this we have the accusative plural direct object from e)rgon, which should be translated here, "accomplishments," "for I have not found your accomplishments [you production, your modus operandi]." The "your" comes from the possessive genitive singular from the pronoun su, "your accomplishments." With this we have the perfect passive participle of the verb plhrow, a word which means fulfilled, completed, executed. It is used in seven ways in the several Greek languages. It is used in the New testament in this way: for the believer functioning at gate one of the divine dynasphere, "Be filled with the Spirit" is the same verb. Secondly it is used for the pastor communicating doctrine or filling up the deficiency of the Word of God among believers, Colossians 1:25. Thirdly it is used for the humanity of Christ functioning inside of the prototype divine dynasphere, Luke 2:40. Fourth, it is used for believers living inside the divine dynasphere, Ephesians 3:19; Colossians 1:9. Fifth, it is used for capacity for happiness in the divine dynasphere, 1 John 1:4; Sixth, it is used for the priestly function of giving, Philippians 4:18; Seventh, it is used for the results of the believer residing and functioning inside of the divine dynasphere, Philippians 1:11. Hence the verb plhrow is obviously used for the execution or the fulfillment of God's plan for the royal family of the Church Age. In this context with the negative o)u, the failure of believers in Sardis to execute, to fulfill, to complete the plan of God related to residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. Translation: "For I have not found your accomplishments completed [fulfilled, executed, accomplished]." The English word "completed" seems to be in keeping with the facts of the context. There exists a remnant, a minority of positive believers in the church at Sardis. This remnant is functioning inside the divine dynasphere but is shaky because they are in such a minority and not consistent enough to avoid distractions caused by the Jezebel cult in nearby Thyatira and the potential of dying the sin unto death through cosmic involvement. There is, therefore, an historical downtrend in the city of Sardis. It is caused by inconsistency and instability of believers who vacillate between positive and negative volition, between the divine dynasphere and the cosmic system. That vacillation is instability, therefore nothing is accomplished or completed. The instability of believers in Sardis has the effect of historical downtrend for they cannot reside in the divine dynasphere long enough to advance from gate four to gate eight or complete the achievement of spiritual maturity.

So we have the perfect tense of plhrow. It is what we call an iterative perfect in which advance to maturity in the divine dynasphere is not progressive, in fact it is retrogressive. It can also be construed as the perfect of existing state in which the past is dropped from the thought and attention is focused on the present status quo. The passive voice: unstable, negative believers involved in the cosmic system continually vacillate between positive and negative volition and between the divine dynasphere and the cosmic system, and they receive the action of the verb, they are not completing God's plan. The participle is circumstantial. With the negative it means failure to execute the very purpose for which they are supported logistically.

Then finally in this verse we have the improper preposition e)mwpion plus the genitive of Qeoj, and it is translated, "in the sight of God." There is a possessive genitive from e)gw, calling it "my God."

Corrected translation of the entire verse: "Be constantly alert, and strengthen the remnant [those who still have positive volition] who were about to die [those who had the potential for cosmic death and the sin unto death]: for I have not found your accomplishments [your Christian modus vivendi] completed [fulfilled] in the sight of my God."

Principle

1. The fulfillment of the Christian way of life and the completion of the plan of God for our lives must be motivated by that function of the royal priesthood inside the divine dynasphere. Every believer is his own priest and therefore, in effect, does not have to be distracted from the Word by the majority who are negative toward doctrine. The believer must live his life as unto the Lord. In other words, not live his life as unto people, the majority, friends, people who lead him away from doctrine.
2. This prepositional phrase emphasises the fact that no believer can fulfill the plan of God inside the divine dynasphere when he has false motivation.
3. True motivation is derived from Bible doctrine resident in the soul causing personal love for God as the motivating virtue and functional virtue toward man, impersonal love. That impersonal love gives you the ability to have high regard for people without being influenced by people.
4. The turning of the tide and the reversal of historical trends is the responsibility of the believer living consistently in the divine dynasphere and functioning consistently at the various gates.

In verse three we see the alternatives to turning the tide: historical downtrend, a reversal of the great blessings that have come in the past to that area from maximum positive volition.

We belong historically to nearly two thousand years of Gentile client nations. We live in the times of the Gentiles when no Jewish nation can be a client nation to God; the next Jewish client nation will be at the second advent of our Lord and will continue down through and including all of the Millennium, the last 1000 years of history. But in the meantime this is the dispensation of the Church and in this dispensation any client nation to God is especially sensitive to historical trends. We are the products of our own decisions individually and collectively; as goes the believer, so goes the client nation to God.

For the believer who spends his time living inside the divine dynasphere, functioning at gate one, the filling of the Spirit; gate two, basic impersonal love; gate three, enforced and genuine humility, that particular believer has capacity for life. The first three gates are in support of gate four. Gate one is the IQ, the power for the ability to learn; gate two is the objectivity in learning doctrine; gate three is the teachability in learning doctrine; gate four is perception and application of doctrine, perception of doctrine, the function of the royal priesthood; application of doctrine, the function of the royal ambassadorship. The rest of the gates are the results of the first three gates in function. Gate five is love of God; gate six: right man, right woman where pertinent; gate seven: friendship plus advanced impersonal love; gate eight: the ultimate objective in the Christian life in which we have constructed the edification complex of the soul and, at the same time, advance to maturity becoming the recipients of supergrace blessings in six paragraphs. The believer living inside of the divine dynasphere contributes to the uptrend of history but the believer living in Satan's cosmic system — cosmic one with its 26 gates of interlocking systems of arrogance; cosmic two with its 9 gates of interlocking systems of hatred — is contributing to the downtrend of history. We appear to be on a downtrend at the present time, the three characteristics of the downtrends seem to be applicable at the moment in our own nation. We are seeing economic depression, social degeneration, and certainly in our lifetime we have seen military disaster, we have lost two wars. But the wars were lost here at home where we are the products of our own decisions.

We recognise from the Word of God that the human race will never be destroyed by nuclear weapons. The human race will not even be changed by these weapons. People are born, live and die, and people will continue to be born and to live and to die. The three categories of truth in the Word of God, #1, the laws of divine establishment; #2, the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; #3, Bible doctrine for believers, all deny and brand as blasphemous what people in the National Council of Churches are doing by calling for nuclear disarmament.

Our Lord Jesus Christ has declared in Matthew chapter 24, a doctrine: the perpetuation of warfare. The only one who can stop warfare is our Lord Jesus Christ at the second advent. It is not true that the swords will be turned into ploughshares and the spears into pruning hooks in this dispensation or in the Tribulation. This is only true of the Millennial reign of our Lord Jesus Christ. Furthermore, another distortion: when the Bible says, "he who carries the sword will perish by the sword," and it is commonly taken to mean warfare. Actually, it is dealing with criminality, with a civilian picking up the sword to kill someone. It is dealing with the subject of murder and we note that the Word of God advocates that murder should be punished by death.

Our Lord Jesus Christ, in Matthew chapter 24 beginning at verse four, had this to say: "See to it that no one misleads you." In time of decline of a client nation religion is always misleading. It is religion that says: "Peace, peace," when there is no peace. And the condemnation of this phrase uttered in the past by the prophets, as uttered today by many people in many pulpits, has the same connotation — there is no peace.

"... And you will be hearing of wars and rumours of wars; see to it that you are not frightened," there is the issue. Religion is frightened, it is running scared. And yet the believer in Jesus Christ understanding Bible doctrine has no fear of these things; "for these things must take place," this is one of the historical trends, the perpetuation of hot and cold wars during the Church Age and in the Tribulation to follow. War will only be abolished at the second advent of our Lord Jesus Christ; "but it is not yet the end [of the Jewish Age]. For nation will rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom," the only exception to this will occur when Jesus Christ personally rules the earth. As long as Satan is the ruler of this world there will be wars and rumours of wars.

Isaiah 2:4 tells us what will happen when our Lord Jesus Christ returns: "And he will judge between the nations, and he will reprove many peoples; therefore they will hammer their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning hooks. Nation will not lift up sword against nation, neither again will they learn the art of war." Man will not accomplish in the dispensation of the Church nor the Tribulation what only Jesus Christ can accomplish by His personal rule of the earth, beginning at the second advent. Therefore as a historical trend warfare will continue just as our Lord Jesus Christ has warned us.

Other passages tell us this fact as far as the historical trend is concerned. In Ecclesiastes 3:8, "There is a time for war and a time for peace." This means that war is often beneficial; that when people destroy themselves with their cosmic ideas, that when people start to degenerate beyond the place there the human race can be perpetuated, God used warfare in order to cleanse the human race of its degeneracy.

Numbers 21:14, "Therefore it is written in the Book of the Wars of the Lord, Waheb in Suphah [Jehovah takes in the storm]."

The misnomer of warfare is found in Matthew 26:52, And Jesus said to him [Peter], "put up your sword; for all who draw the sword [in crime] shall perish by the sword [in capital punishment]." The sword refers to capital punishment in Romans 13:4. Therefore we should have a different concept of the military. Under category #1 truth the military, if it is well prepared, often prevents war. A strong military establishment is a blessing to a nation, a protection of its stability. Under the laws of divine establishment pertaining to divine institution #4 all national freedom comes through military victory. Two factors are involved in the protection of national sovereignty and freedom. The first factor is the one we have been studying in detail in Revelation, i.e. the spiritual factor. The spiritual factor comes from a principle which has to do today with believers residing in the divine dynasphere. At the time of the writing of Nehemiah, however, there was no divine dynasphere, that belongs to the royal family of the Church Age. So there is another factor as well as the spiritual factor of the life of believers inside the divine dynasphere. Nehemiah 4:8, "And all of them together [Samaria, the Ammonites, Arabs and the Philistines] organised a conspiracy to invade and fight against Jerusalem to manufacture harm against it. But we made intercession to our God [the spiritual factor], and we established a military security system against them day and night." This is a mobilisation plan that put the nation on red alert. Verse 13, "Therefore I garrisoned troops on the lower slopes behind the walls as a mobile reserve. On the higher places I stationed troops according to their tribes with their swords, their spears, and bows... I spoke to the generals, the commissioned officers, and the men in ranks: "Do not be afraid of them; remember the Lord, hero warrior and respected one, therefore fight in battle for your fellow citizens ..." Under the laws of divine establishment three things are sacred: freedom, property and life — "And it shall come to pass that when the enemies heard that it was known to us, and that God had frustrated their plan, then all of us returned to the wall, each man to his service." Failure of the military on the battlefield indicates the failure of a cross section of people, for any military organisation represents every aspect of society in a nation. Failure in the battlefield indicates also lack of training, lack of self-discipline, lack of respect for authority, lack of motivation to courage, lack of spiritual incentive to remain free, to try to trade some form of apparent human security for what is real security — freedom. Freedom in the historical trend of this dispensation is purchased and perpetuated only through military victory. No nation has survived the fact of defeat. Failure to fight for freedom means slavery and you cannot fight for freedom unless you are prepared and professionally trained, and unless the military is given its rightful place under the laws of divine establishment. Social degeneration is always characterised by disdain of the military and the police. Jewish military failure during the Chaldean invasion by Nebuchadnezzar in BC 587 can be attributed to the spiritual and moral decline of Judah, as portrayed by the book of Jeremiah. God used the military in action, therefore, to demonstrate the degeneracy and the decline of a nation. Remember, we are the products of our own decisions individually and collectively. The issue of national sovereignty, integrity and freedom depends therefore on which army wins. The Chaldean army won in 586 BC and the Jews lost their freedom. Even Jeremiah himself, for a short time, was put in chains Jeremiah 40:1.

The second problem has to do with our Lord's teachings of the sermon on the mount, which is one of the favourite areas for the Methodist bishops. They love "turning the other cheek," but they misinterpret this, of course. These things are the manifestation of the doctrine of impersonal love or functional virtue from residence inside the divine dynasphere and daily perception of doctrine. But these things are only applicable in social situations, not historical. Furthermore, it is our Lord's policy for ruling the world in the Millennium, therefore it has a Millennial connotation, just like turning swords into ploughshares. In the meantime the order of the day is quite different and our Lord Jesus Christ makes that very clear. Our Lord rejected human violence; that is crime, an evil.

In Exodus 14:14, "The Lord will fight for you." The one who is to fight in this chapter is described by one of His titles as the God of Israel, Adonai Sabaoth. It is called Lord of hosts in translation but that is really Lord of the armies. The Lord approves of armies; He doesn't approve of disbanding armies. This is the title of our Lord as Commander-in-Chief. Joshua discovered that he was only a Chief-of-Staff under the Lord Jesus Christ in that famous section of the Word of God — Joshua 5:13-6:2. In Zechariah 14:3,4, "The Lord will go forth and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle."

Jesus Christ as the Lord of the armies is also a combat soldier in a very real sense. In the year 701 BC, during the Assyrian invasion of Sennacherib who came into Judah with one of the greatest armies in history, Isaiah 37:36 tells us what happened to that army. The Jews were without any strong military and they were overpowered. And when the coup de grace was about to be administered by the Assyrian army, this is what happened: "Then the angel of the Lord [Jesus Christ] went out, and struck down 185,000 of the camp of the Assyrians; and when the men went and returned early in the morning, behold, all of these were dead". Note verse 37: Sennacherib retreated!

The Lord Jesus Christ will break His own record in the last phase of the Armageddon campaign. In Revelation 19:11, "And I saw heaven opened; and behold, a white horse, and he who was mounted on it is called Faithful and True [our Lord Jesus Christ]; and in righteousness he judges and makes war." Verse 15, "And from his mouth came a sharp sword, so that with it might smite the nations, and he will rule them with a rod of iron; and he treads the winepress of the fierce wrath of God, the Almighty one." The winepress is described in Revelation 14:20, "And the winepress was trodden outside the city, and blood came from the winepress up to the horses' bridles, for a distance of 200 miles." So this is our same Lord Jesus Christ.

The image of our Lord is very simple. Our Lord is a warrior; our Lord recognises the difference — after all, He is God — between legitimate force and violence. Violence is the revolutionary crowd, the Jacobins of France, the communists of Russia. They use violence to get their way. Force belongs to the laws of divine establishment. There are three legitimate forces in this country: first, the military to protect us from enemies without; secondly, the police officer to protect us from enemies within; thirdly, the right of the individual citizen to protect his life and property against criminality. There is legitimate force. On the other hand, violence is crime — criminality, revolution, terrorism —, the quintessence of evil and is punishable, and should be punished by death.

In Numbers 1:2,3 our Lord commanded to take a census: “Take a census of the people of the sons of Israel ... twenty years old and upward.” Why? They needed to know who was eligible for military service. “... whoever is able to go to war in Israel, you and Aaron shall muster them by their armies.” The exception to conscription is also given: “When a man shall take a new wife he shall not go out with the army, nor be called to active duty; he shall be free to stay home for one year with his wife. He shall give pleasure to his wife whom he has taken.” The mobilisation plan for Israel is the book of Numbers, one whole book of the Bible devoted to the military of client nation Israel! Numbers means mobilisation and everything in the book is related to the war plans of client nation Israel.

There must exist in a national entity also professional, capable high-ranking officers whose life is devoted to planning of warfare, Luke 14:31, “Or what king, when he advances to meet another king in battle, will not first sit down and take counsel whether he is strong enough with ten thousand men to attack the one coming against him with an army of twenty thousand?” This is a principle enucleated by our Lord. He makes it very clear that there must be professional leadership, there must be professional military establishment.

True motivation for military training is from God Himself when He said in 2 Samuel 22:35, “He trains my hands for battle, so that my arms can bend a bow of bronze,” they are in good shape. In Psalm 144:1, “Blessed be the Lord my rock, who trains my hands for war, and my fingers for battle.” It takes training to do this, and yet some would have us disarm!

Quote from a book on military institutions of the Romans: “Victory in war does not depend on numbers or mere courage, only discipline and training will ensure it. We find that the Romans owed the conquest of the world to no other cause than continual military training,” we are talking about the first Gentile client nation to God, “exact observance of discipline, and unwearied cultivation of the arts of war. Without these what chance would the Roman armies have with their small numbers against the larger numbers of the Gauls, or what success could they have in opposing the superior numbers of the Germans. The Spaniards surpassed the Romans in both numbers and physical strength. We were always inferior to the Africans, the Carthaginians, in wealth and unequal to them in strategy and tactics,” a reference to Hannibal. “The Greeks were superior to us in skill, in arts, in all kinds of knowledge, but to all of these advantages the Romans imposed unusual care in the choice of their conscriptions and in their military training. They thoroughly understood the importance of toughening them by continual practice and training them in every manoeuvre of line and in action. They were strict in punishing idleness in the military. The courage of a soldier is intensified by his knowledge of his profession and he only wants an opportunity to execute what he has been perfectly taught. A handful of men inured to war move to certain victory, while on the contrary, numerous armies of raw and undisciplined troops are but a mass of men being dragged to the slaughter.”

So war is a principle from God. For example, in 1 Chronicles 5:19,20, “And they made war against the Hagrites (Arabs) ... and they were helped against them, and the Hagrites and all who were with them were given into their hand; for they [the Jews] cried out to God in battle, and he was entreated for them, because they trusted in him.” Verse 22, “For many fell slain, because the war was from God.”

The principles of warfare are delineated in great detail in the book of numbers, “And when Joshua took the whole land according to all that the Lord had commanded Moses, and Joshua gave it for an inheritance for Israel according to the division by tribes; therefore the land had rest from war,” Joshua 11:23 tells us therefore that victory in warfare means the perpetuation of peace; not that peace will be indefinite, but victory is remembered in war long enough to give a period of peace. God Himself has ordained the principle of peace through military victory in Psalm 46:7-9, “The Lord of the armies is with us; the God of Jacob is our bivouac. Come, and behold the works of the Lord, which he has wrought as desolations in the earth,” Jesus Christ controls history, often through warfare and military victory; “He makes wars to cease to the end of the earth; he breaks the bow and cuts the spear in two; he burns the chariots with fire,” He does this through military.

God protects from evil and warlike nations. Psalm 55:20-23, “He has put forth his hand against those who were at peace with him,” a reference to an evil nation preparing for war against a nation with whom they have a treaty; “He has violated his treaty. His [evil nation] speech was smoother than butter, but his right lobe was at war; his words were slicker than oil, yet they were from drawn swords.” So what is the good nation going to do? “Cast your burden upon the Lord, and he will sustain you; he will not allow the righteous to totter.” And the enemy? “But you, O God, will bring them down to the pit of destruction; men of bloodshed will not live out half their days. But I will trust in you.”

Jeremiah describes why often a nation is attacked, why a nation gets into war. Jeremiah 6:13, 14, “From the least of them even to the greatest of them, everyone is greedy for gain, and from the prophet even to the priest, every one manufactures lies,” lack of teaching of truth and lack of integrity in business always bring about warfare; “And they have healed the wound of my people superficially, saying, “Peace, peace, but there is no peace.” So they talk about peace but that’s a lie. The more they talk about it and the lie is accepted the sooner they are destroyed.

In Hebrews 11:35, however, there was freedom perpetuated because of this phrase: “they became courageous in battle, and put to flight the invading armies.”

Leadership is necessary, as we have noted, in war. “War plans are formed by wisdom and planning,” professional leadership; “and with wisdom men make war.” Proverbs 24:1-6, “Do not become jealous of evil men.” It is interesting to note that arrogance destroys whatever leadership ability people have. It may be business leadership, military leadership, but whatever leadership exists arrogance destroys it. Arrogance destroys talent or anything that is good in man, "For their right lobes devise violence [violence is evil], and their lips talk trouble [personality conflicts mean disaster in battle]. By wisdom [doctrine in the soul] a house is constructed [the ECS], and by understanding [doctrine] one prepares himself for war; and by knowledge [of doctrine] the rooms are filled with something of value [the spiritual blessings of supergrace]. A wise man [military leader] is strong, a man of knowledge increasing his strength. For by the art of leadership you will execute warfare, for victory is in the greatness of the one planning strategy and tactics."

All self and group discipline is dependent upon respect for authority. That is why a really great leader must also be a salesman because he must sell people on accepting his authority. The proper use of authority without the abuse of authority demands integrity. All great leaders have integrity in their profession. A relaxed mental attitude includes freedom from mental attitude sins. All great leaders have been free from worry and anxiety. Strong character of soul accompanied by strong sense of responsibility is a part of leadership. Professional understanding and knowledge of all phases of military logistics, strategy, tactics is necessary. Loyalty as a result of understanding the principle of authority. Objectivity in living by the principle and not succumbing to personality conflicts. Common sense, good judgment, fairness, objectivity, understanding of people, executive ability; the ability to organise, to categorise, to delegate. Health which includes endurance and nervous stability is also necessary. The concept of dress, presence, carriage, poise, courtesy, even flair, these are all a part of the picture. It has been noted that those who are truly great and fulfill these principles in the military also make good business executives, they do well in professions and in other fields of life.

The concept of warfare as a means of discipline is taught in Judges 5:8 — "New gods were chosen [religious reversionism]; then war was at the gate." "New gods were chosen" has to do with the fact that the Jews became idolatrous, and as soon as they did then war was at the gates; "Not a shield or a spear was seen among forty thousand in Israel," they were unprepared for war. Divine rebuke of Asah brings about the same principle in 2 Chronicles 16:8,9, "And were not the Ethiopians and Lybians a great army with many chariots and horsemen? Yet, because you relied on the Lord, He delivered them into your hand. For the eyes of the Lord move to and fro throughout the earth that he may provide support for those whose right lobe is completely his. You have acted foolishly in this, O king, therefore from now on you will always have wars." Wars, under the principle of historical trends, are brought about by collective and individual decisions.

And who suffers the most in warfare when you lose? As a result of violation of the principles of historical trends the ladies suffer. Isaiah 3:16, "Moreover, the Lord said, "Because the daughters of Zion are proud [arrogant], and walk with heads held high and seductive eyes, and walk with short sexy steps, and tinkle the bangles on their feet [a come-on]. Therefore the Lord will afflict the scalp of the daughters of Zion with scabs, and the Lord will make their foreheads bald." The scabs have to do with loss of health in time of war and it means they are no longer attractive. The foreheads bald simply means they are slaves to the enemy. "In the day of disaster the Lord will therefore take away the beauty of their anklets, headbands, crescent ornaments, dangling earrings, bracelets, veils,” there is nothing wrong with these things but in war you lose them all. Verse 24, “Now it will come to pass that instead of sweet perfume there will be a stench; instead of a belt, a rope; instead of well-set hair, a plucked-out scalp; instead of fine clothes, wearing sackcloth; instead of beauty, branded as slaves. Your men will fall by the sword, and your heroes in battle. Therefore her gates will scream and mourn; and be deserted she will sit on the ground.”

Tacitus, one of the great Roman historians: “The tranquillity of nations is not to be preserved without armies. Troops cannot be maintained without pay, and their pay cannot be made good without taxes.” The payment of taxes, the proper use of tax money to build up the military rather than socialism, respect for the military, separation of the military from politics, upgrading professional training and standards of the military, the utilisation of science to improve military weapons and concepts, and the improved spiritual quality not only of the military but the American people is definitely the answer to these bishops and the communist threat we face.

Warfare is used to illustrate doctrine, as in Ephesians 6:10ff; warfare and the military is the means of preparing people for life and future greatness, as per 2 Samuel 5:2, “Previously, when Saul was king over us, you were the one who led [the armies of] Israel out and in. And Jehovah said to you, Because you are successful in battle you will shepherd my people Israel, you will be a ruler over Israel.” David was first successful as a soldier before he was successful as a ruler, and this is one reason why the military is so important. Truly successful people in the military will be successful in any endeavour in life.

The present solution to warfare then is related to the client nation function, to the pivot of mature believers living inside the divine dynasphere, to military preparedness. It relates to spiritual functions as well. Historical trends again: As goes the believer so goes the client nation to God. A maximum number of believers living in the divine dynasphere means uptrend, but a maximum number of believers living in the cosmic system means historical downtrend and discipline to the country from God. It will be economic depression, social degeneration, military disaster. Peoples and nations are the products of their own decisions.

The fulfillment of the Christian way of life and the completion of the plan of God for our lives must be motivated by that function of the royal priesthood inside of the divine dynasphere. The prepositional phrase in verse two, “in the sight of my God,” means that no believer can fulfill the plan of God inside the divine dynasphere if his motivation is false. True motivation is derived from doctrine and that doctrine must be resident in the soul. That requires following the procedures that have been established in the Word for this factor. The turning of the tide and the reversal of the historical trends is the responsibility of the believer who is consistent in the perception of doctrine, consistent in the filling of the Spirit and therefore consistent in living in the divine dynasphere.

This brings us now to verse three where we have the alternative to reversing the historical downtrend. Please notice: Each one is responsible for his own life before the Lord. If you could ever understand this from the many doctrines we have studied you would find that immediately your life becomes simpler and the issues come into focus. It is very easy to criticise someone who is wrong, who has made a mistake, and this is all too often the arrogance demonstrated by born-again believers. This is cosmic involvement and a state of great instability. It is amazing how no one seems to want to leave anything to the Lord, and let the Lord decide the rights and the wrongs of every situation, and let the Lord handle these things as inevitably He will and He does.

Compassion is not an emotion. Compassion is the manifestation of integrity, lots of knowledge of doctrine, understanding the old sin nature, and understanding that even nice people have one. This was a problem in Sardis. There were truly believers who loved the Word but Christians in the cosmic system won't let them alone. Many times Christians in the cosmic system aren't saying, "Let's go down to the idol temple and have a good time," they're saying, "You don't need all that doctrine, you just need to live a good life." And so it is a very subtle and very great problem. What really makes it difficult is when you have a true friend, someone you truly love under category #3 love and they just simply have lost interest in the teaching of the Word of God on a consistent basis. It is very difficult to make the right choice: doctrine instead of that friend. Most people that have to do it have to turn on their friends and snarl at them, and say, "You're going in the wrong direction, I'm going this way". No one seems to have the ability to part from someone they love without getting in the last Word.

Verse 3, the congregation are called upon to remember something. The pastor was called upon in verse 2 to "be constantly alert, strengthen the remnant" who were about to die; they were about to get in the cosmic system. In verse three the first word in reality should be "Therefore," even though it is the second word. That is because it is an inferential post-positive particle o)un, which is "therefore." Then we go to the congregation, the present active imperative of the verb mnemoneuw, which means to recall, and it is a reference to recalling doctrine in this case. The people who are in the cosmic system have had doctrinal teaching, but more important the positive believers have had enough to where they need to make an application from doctrine, not from their personal likes and dislikes, not from their personal prejudices, not from personal and category #3 love. Recall is necessary for the application of doctrine to life. Are you going to apply doctrine to life or you personal feelings? It is very difficult to keep your personal feelings out of your own life and the only way to do it is perception of Bible doctrine. The present tense is a customary present for what habitually occurs when the believer learns doctrine at gate four. He has something to remember, something to apply. The active voice: the positive believers who have learned doctrine at gate four produce the action. This is the remnant. They are going to survive, they are going to have to remember some doctrine. Doctrine is going to have to be more real than their friends who are negative, their friends who are in the cosmic system. The only way that doctrine can be more real than friends that you see every day is recall, memory. The imperative of command for a mandate regarding the application of doctrine to the situation we find here — a minority of positive believers in a congregation where the majority are negative and involved in the cosmic system. "Therefore, recall to mind," is the way it should be translated.

Next in verse 3 we have an interrogative particle, poj. It is used for a direct question to determine how something has come to be or how something should happen. It is simply translated by the English word, "what." Then the perfect active indicative of the verb lambanw, receive, "remember what you have received." This is a reference to Bible doctrine. The consummative perfect presents a consummated process, the function of GAP, rather than an existing state. This use of the perfect actually has both the past act and the present result in mind. The past act is perception of Bible doctrine, the present result is the application of doctrine where you are pulled in one way but doctrine says it is the wrong way. And it applies to all kinds of situations where that might occur. In other words, it is a testing that every believer faces. You are pulled in one direction because of personal friendship and love, but in reality you need to be going in another direction. So this is really an answer to what we call in life, "push-pull," where the friend is pushing and the doctrine of the Word of God is pulling. This situation demands a decision and maybe you postpone the decision. The active voice: the believer who functions at gate four of the divine dynasphere produces the action of the verb. The declarative mood is for the reality of a past perception of doctrine demanding a present application. And please notice: you are to handle your own life, you are to make your own decisions, you're not to be influenced by friends or enemies or by what others think. You are to be influenced by the doctrine you have in your own soul. This is a private matter between you and the Lord and you must answer to the Lord inevitably and you must inevitably take the responsibility for your own decisions.

While lambanw refers to the modus operandi of GAP and eventually resulting in getting e)pignwsij doctrine it also refers to motivation. When you learn doctrine you must be motivated by doctrine. If doctrine does not become your motivation sooner or later some friend or someone you love is going to drag you away from the plan of God. So you must not only learn doctrine but what you learn must become your motivation in life.

With this we have the aorist active indicative of the verb a)kouw, a verb we have seen many times before, always with reference to the perception of doctrine. It is used for positive volition toward doctrine which includes both the recognition of the authority of one's right pastor and concentration as a result on the message. One thing that authority does for people in life: the proper use of authority keeps you from making an issue out of people and takes you from people to principle. Recognising the authority of the pastor doesn't mean liking the pastor, or loving the pastor, or having any attitude about the pastor. It means recognition, acceptance of the content of his message, i.e. Bible doctrine. So in a true situation in learning doctrine, doctrine is the issue, not the one who communicates. It is not the man it is the message. The personality of the one who is in authority is never an issue. This is true in business, in the military, and in any profession. So the true function of authority eliminates personality conflicts, and often where a personality conflict exists it is simply that authority has never been related to the purpose of the company, the organisation, the academic classroom, whatever it happens to be. Therefore you have a choice inevitably in these situations. You can recognise the authority and go for the doctrine or you can get your eyes on the person who has the authority because all authority in life has been delegated to people.

You are either motivated by people or by principle. That in principle is what we have here: “therefore recall to mind what you have received,” and if you have received truth in more of its categories: in category #1, the laws of divine establishment in which authority is defined in terms of freedom, you have received truth; the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: you may have heard it from an evangelist who is a person, but it wasn’t what kind of a person he was, it was his content and you responded to the teaching of the evangelist, the presentation of the gospel. So you don’t make an issue out of the person who is the evangelist, you make an issue out of the message.

Then we get down to some spiritual growth, a pastor communicating Bible doctrine. If you make an issue out of the pastor you’ve had it! All of your life you are going to face the issue: people versus principle. It is a test that comes periodically. It is not always people versus principle because all of us find people to whom we are attracted, find people with whom we are compatible and who share the same principles that we do. But when it comes to an issue where you are tempted to run down someone, to malign someone, to judge someone who allegedly has wronged or who really has wronged, the allegation or the reality is really not the issue. The issue is: Are you going to live by principle or are you going to live by people? It is amazing that once you establish the principle your attitude toward people changes to where you are going to be well liked and well thought of, and before you know it you will have some real friends.

The principle comes from doctrine, through people, therefore the consummative perfect tense. The active voice: the believer who is positive produces the action. With this the aorist active indicative of akouo, the culminative aorist views the function of GAP where you learn principle in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the application of the doctrine you have learned. Once you have epignwsij in the right lobe you have principle and therefore you have a launching pad to apply principle to people, so that people are no longer obnoxious. The positive believer produces the action, the declarative indicative for the reality of positive volition on the part of a few, “Therefore recall to mind what you have received [the application of doctrine] and heard [the perception of doctrine].” The next word is the present active imperative of terew, guard it [the doctrine]. You guard doctrine and you will have wonderful friends. If you don’t guard doctrine you’ll live in the cosmic system and you will be a vacillating, hypocritical traitor to your friends. “Guard it [maintain it, keep it],” by living in the divine dynasphere. This means to guard it, to keep it in the sense of not losing it, to keep in the sense of protecting it, of paying attention to it, of applying it. To keep or guard doctrine as per this mandate one must reside and function in the divine dynasphere. Therefore it is a present tense of duration for what has been mandated in the past and continued into the present. The active voice: believers in this dispensation, royal family of God, are the recipients of this mandate; therefore they must execute it. The imperative mood of command is a mandate for the royal family to keep living in the divine dynasphere.

The pastor must persist in teaching the positive believers even if they are a minority in his congregation, for without doctrine they are potential candidates for the cosmic system, “Be constantly alert, and strengthen the remnant who are about to die [cosmic death, carnality, reversionism, cosmic involvement].” The problem is that when you are hit with a little bit of flattery by a negative believer it often becomes binding in this way: arrogance means loss of discernment. Arrogance not only means that whatever abilities or talents or greatness you have in this life is neutralised but arrogance inevitably means loss of discernment.

Principle

1. Moral people are affectionate without being passionate in category #3 relationships — social life and friendship, whereas immoral people are passionate without being affectionate in social life.
2. Affection belongs to category #3 love; affection and passion belong to category #2 love.
3. Affection comes from the soul and is meaningful in human relationships, of course, when it includes both integrity and capacity for love.
4. Passion comes from the body and must be controlled or regulated by integrity of the soul.
5. For the believer integrity of the soul is the result of living inside of the divine dynasphere and learning Bible doctrine on a constant basis.

Arrogance destroys the balance of affection and passion

1. Arrogance cannot discern between passion and affection.
2. Therefore arrogance assumes that a show of affection from the opposite sex is an invitation to passion. This is a major factor in our social degeneration in this country today.
3. Arrogance fails to distinguish between affection and passion.
4. Only humility can distinguish between affection and passion.
5. Arrogance assumes that passion is affection. Therefore arrogance enters into physical relationships without integrity of soul and capacity for love.
6. Arrogance assumes that affection is passion. Therefore arrogance becomes aggressive in lust and attempts at seduction.
7. Arrogance is weak and assumes that flattery is greatness, and there is the analogy. Just as there is a breakdown in social life of a nation so there is breakdown of spiritual life in a congregation. And they break down the same way — arrogance. One day you have in social life a lot of nice people, the next day you have a lot of lascivious maniacs. One day in a church you have the majority of the people are positive for doctrine, the next day the majority are negative. And the thing that breaks them down, the antithesis of metabolising them, and destroys them is arrogance. Arrogance disintegrates social life and converts it into degeneracy and arrogance takes positive volition and converts it into negative volition over night. That is why arrogance is weak; arrogance assumes that flattery is greatness.

8. This is why, going back to the social side, women imagine that every man is after her, and this is why on the other side of the fence the minister assumes that he is great when there is no such thing as greatness associated with the clergy. There is no such thing as looking at a minister and saying he is great. Why? Because you are looking in the wrong direction. The content of his message may be good and excellent and understandable but there is no such thing as a great minister. A "great minister" is the object of flattery and attention and is under the principle of public relations. Therefore it is false. A minister who does his job right is going to be despised, hated, loved, rejected, accepted, you name it, and he is going to the recipient. That is not greatness, not in a human sense. And you really never know whether a minister is great or not until the judgment seat of Christ, but one thing you can be sure of if you have your right pastor is that the content of his message is meaningful to you. The content of his message, regardless of how it is delivered, goes home to your soul and becomes meaningful in clarifying issues of doctrine and straightening out your thinking with regard to places where you have been false in your application. It makes the issues of life clear regardless of what category of life is being discussed by the passage.

9. The pastor must be alert to avoid arrogance and protect his congregation from arrogance through doctrinal inculcation from the pulpit. Basically, that is behind the command, "Be constantly alert, and strengthen the remnant," meaning that there is still a minority of believers, therefore persist in teaching them. Even though you may be irritated by the negativism in the congregation just go right on teaching the Word. There are positive believers there and those positive believers must be protected from going the same way as the negative crowd.

Verse 3, "Recall to mind" or "remember" is the application of Bible doctrine to the situation. "What you have received," e)pignwsij doctrine received through the function of GAP; "and heard," the positive volition toward doctrine. Hearing is perception ; "and guard it," by living in the divine dynasphere, for this is the only way that you avoid arrogance, the greatest enemy of mankind, the basis for the fall of Satan, the basis for cosmic one and it 26 gates which interlock in different categories of arrogance. Arrogance is self-destructive, destructive to a group in a collective situation of any kind, and inevitably arrogance destroys a national entity, it destroys everything. Arrogance is the basis for all misery and all unhappiness, everything in life that is totally horrible and unmentionable. And while people have a tendency to classify sins on the basis of their overt manifestation it is arrogance which is the root of all of the various manifestations of it through sin. That is why arrogance is not only a sin but arrogance is motivating evil. One thing is certain: you cannot be arrogant inside the divine dynasphere. To be arrogant you get outside of the divine dynasphere.

We have the aorist active imperative of the verb metanoew next. It means to rebound, to change the mind. The rebound technique is the only way any of us can avoid arrogance. The person who says that he has never been arrogant is a double liar. First of all he is a liar and then, of course, he is arrogant. There is no such thing as an individual who has not converted normal self-consciousness of the soul into some form of arrogance at some time. The active voice: the carnal reversionistic or cosmic believer produces the action of the verb. The imperative mood is the imperative of command, a mandate from God for the believer to leave the cosmic system and return to the divine dynasphere. So what we have here is not “Repent, repent,” some emotional claptrap, but it means change your mind and it is technical for rebound.

Translation: “Therefore recall to mind what you have received [the application of doctrine] and heard [the perception of doctrine] and guard it [by living in the divine dynasphere], and change your mind [the use of the rebound technique to recover from cosmic involvement and reenter the divine dynasphere].” That is the first sentence in verse three.

Now we have a second sentence that deals with residence in the cosmic system which is the means of historical downtrend. And we have a protasis of a third class condition to begin the sentence. That means we have two words, first of all o)un, an inferential conjunction translated “therefore.” Then we have with it e)an, plus the subjunctive which introduces the protasis of a third class condition, which is a more probable condition or a supposition from the viewpoint of probability. The alternative to historical uptrend from life in the divine dynasphere is historical downtrend from life in the cosmic system. Life in the cosmic system is characterised by arrogance, preoccupation with self, and therefore inevitable misery and unhappiness. Unhappiness self-induced plus something that is even worse and that is the inability to derive any pleasure on a permanent basis from anything that one has or has achieved, or any relationship or any function in life that is generally associated with happiness. Happiness simply does not exist in a state of arrogance. The inferential conjunction o)un, of course, draws a conclusion from what precedes. The inference comes from three mandates of the previous sentence in verse three: “recall to mind,” “guard it,” and “repent” [rebound].

“If therefore,” with this we have a verb, the aorist active subjunctive of gregorew, plus the negative mh; “If therefore you are not alert,” the constative aorist tense for a fact or action extended over a period of time. This use of the aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, i.e. phase two of the plan of God. The active voice: the believer must produce the action of the verb, namely alertness. Alertness is defined in terms of three mandates again, “recall to mind,” “guard it,” “rebound.” The subjunctive mood is a potential subjunctive implying a future reference and is qualified by the element of contingency. The alternative to alertness is divine discipline, and therefore the apodosis, the future active indicative of the verb h(kw, which means to come but it is quite different from the verb e)rxomai. E)rxomai is used for coming and going in normal circumstances; h(kw means to come suddenly, to come as a matter of a shock, to surprise someone, and so on. The predictive future anticipates divine discipline. This is the type of “coming” we have in h(kw. The active voice: Jesus Christ, the prince ruler of the Church, produces the action of the verb, discipline of the arrogant believer. The indicative mood: the reality of divine discipline to the cosmic believer.

We should be warned about one thing with regard to arrogance. People associate arrogance with the wealthy, the successful, the well-poised, people with very strong personalities, and this has nothing whatever to do with arrogance. Some of the most arrogant people are poor people, scum, people who have nothing and who have achieved nothing. Some of the most arrogant people in the world are people with problems, people who are downtrodden or depressed. Arrogance is preoccupation with self above and beyond the normal function of self-consciousness of the soul. No one is free from it but, strangely enough, when people have good poise, good leadership, and great ability and achieve, they are considered automatically to be arrogant. That is not true at all. The reason why people are accused of arrogance is because people are so arrogant themselves that they automatically transfer a sin that they know to someone else about whom they are jealous or they have some feelings of vindictiveness or bitterness or some other form of antagonism.

So the future active indicative of h(kw, “I will come.” This means to come to punish. Believers are the products of their own decisions. Bad decisions bring self-induced misery plus divine discipline. The self-induced misery is what you do to yourself with your bad decisions but the divine discipline is at the point “I will come.” Then we have an analogy introduced by the comparative adverb o(j, “as” or “like.” With it we have the nominative subject to complete the analogy, klepthj, it means thief, “like a thief.” The Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written. Coming like a thief does not imply stealth, as in modern times. It implies rather suddenness, surprise. Part of the discipline is always to be surprised by it. Divine discipline comes suddenly and when least expected. It always seems to surprise the believer and the believer often rationalises divine discipline into testing, when it isn’t testing at all. The cosmic believer will be taken by surprise at the suddenness of his divine discipline. Divine discipline, as it were, takes his breath away. “I will come to punish like a thief [suddenly, with surprise, when least expected].” Discipline that isn’t anticipated or expected hurts because you have not prepared yourself for it either mentally or physically, or in any other way that you might be able to soften the blow of some personal disaster in your life.

Then we have the connective use of the conjunction kai, but it is used here to emphasise a fact as surprising or unexpected or noteworthy, and therefore we translate it, “furthermore.” Then we have the aorist active subjunctive of the verb ginwskw and with it we have the strongest possible negative in the Greek, o)u mh, two negatives make a stronger negative in the Greek. We translate it: “you will [definitely] never know.” The constative aorist is for a momentary action. The active voice: the cosmic believer produces the action of definitely not knowing. The subjunctive of emphatic negation indicates that divine discipline always catches the believer by surprise because in his arrogance he assumes that because he hasn’t been disciplined for something he is not going to be disciplined for something. And it is true that discipline is changed by rebound. Even if the punishment goes on the cursing is turned to blessing by means of the rebound technique.

Then we have the object of the verb, the accusative feminine singular from the interrogative pronoun translated “what,” poiōj, “You will definitely not know what.” It is followed by the accusative plural direct object from the noun o(ra, which has been mistranslated “hour” in the King James version. O(ra is used for a limited portion of time. It is like the word “day” in the Greek, which is used for a period of time; o(ra is used for a limited portion of time marked out by part of a settled routine, or a train of circumstances. Therefore you can refer to a season of the year or a time of day, and it is correctly translated “point of time,” “Furthermore you will definitely not know what point of time. And then we have the repetition of the aorist active subjunctive of h(kw, “I will come.” The constative aorist refers to a momentary action when divine punishment strikes the cosmic believer. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb as the administrator of divine punishment to the cosmic believer. The subjunctive mood is the potential subjunctive qualified by the element of contingency such as rebound, transfer from the cosmic system to the divine dynasphere. Then we have the final prepositional phrase, e)pi plus the accusative singular from the personal pronoun su, and we translate that “to you,” for the administration of punishment.

Corrected translation: “Therefore recall to mind what you have received [application of doctrine] and heard [perception of doctrine], and guard it [by living in the divine dynasphere], and change your mind [rebound]. If therefore you are not alert, I will come to punish you like a thief [suddenly and violently], in fact you will definitely not know what point of time I will come to you for the administration of discipline.”

In the administration of divine punishment to cosmic believers our Lord Jesus Christ has perfect timing so that the discipline has maximum effectiveness. Remember that a thief coming suddenly always refers to violence. Furthermore the divine discipline does not necessarily match the sin, the human good or the evil which brought it about. In other words, our Lord waits to spank at a propitious time when we will hurt the most. This, of course, is for the cosmic believer who remains in that condition. Rebound changes this as we have seen. Divine discipline is designed to bring the believer back to the reality of the plan of God. You see, the cosmic believer loses touch with the reality of God’s plan and purpose for his life. Divine discipline is to bring him back to the reality of the plan of God. Therefore we must really suffer in the administration of that punishment. If it doesn’t hurt there is no reality that God is still around. Much of our suffering comes from making wrong decisions regarding doctrine and the plan of God related to the divine dynasphere. When self-induced suffering does not bring us to the point of rebound and positive volition in the divine dynasphere then God adds divine discipline which will either make us or break us. It makes us if we become aware that we have drifted from the plan of God and rebound and get back in fellowship, but if we remain in the cosmic system then we go into intensive discipline and eventually the sin unto death which was implied as a result in the previous verse. After warning discipline from God comes intensive discipline and eventually maximum discipline, the sin unto death.

Principle

1. The divine timing finds the cosmic believer unable to cope with punishment. We have noted before that when suffering is for discipline it is unbearable; if suffering is for blessing it is bearable. When suffering is for discipline it is accompanied by arrogance and subjectivity, but if suffering is for blessing it is accompanied by humility and objectivity. The solution to suffering for discipline is rebound; the solution to suffering for blessing is the three stages of the faith-rest drill.
2. If we cannot cope we either get better or worse, we never stay the same. To ignore divine warning through discipline is to become worse; to recognise the divine warning in discipline and rebound is to become better.
3. The greatest disaster in life for the believer is to become insensitive to the hard rein of divine discipline.
4. If we refuse to be led by God's Word then we will be led by God's punishment.
5. It is far better to be led by Bible doctrine than to be led by divine discipline. To be led by Bible doctrine implies humility and sensitivity to the Word; to be led by divine discipline implies arrogance, insensitivity, stupid stubbornness.
6. It is better to take time to learn doctrine than to lose time in divine punishment.
7. The issue, then, is perception versus punishment. By residence and function inside the divine dynasphere with the daily perception of Bible doctrine the person involved chooses for perception and God's plan, but by residence and function in the cosmic system, where the believer is inculcated by Satanic propaganda, the believer chooses punishment and Satan's plan.

We live in very strange times, it is very obvious that believers in client nation USA are definitely not holding up their end. As goes the believer so goes the client nation to God. A maximum number of believers moving from gate four to gate eight in the divine dynasphere produces historical prosperity, but a maximum number of believers living in the cosmic system produces historical downtrend. Historical downtrend is characterised by economic depression, social degeneration and military disaster. There is under the surface in these United States a tremendous collection of terrorist organisations. Terrorism is, of course, one of the weapons of the communists and lying low throughout the country at this very moment there is a tremendous volcano about to erupt. The US Army is aware of this and has developed its own anti-terrorist techniques. Generally speaking there is very little that has been done and very little that is recognised. Of course, one of the tragedies is something that has been noted in a recent Texas Tribune, May 13, 1982, which discusses the principle of how the US is in support of terrorism.

“On the one hand the United States deplores terrorism and terrorist groups that conduct it. On the other hand the same United States subsidises the same terrorist groups, not directly of course, but through the United Nations. That these terrorist groups would wither on the vine without direct Soviet financial and political aid adds to the lunacy. A study by the Heritage Foundation underscores the irony. The United States is directly supporting guerrilla and terrorist groups around the world since 1975 to the tune of $116,000,000 in traceable funds, with other millions buried in under-the-table transactions. The United States picks up roughly twenty-five per cent of that tab which gives the Kremlin the giggles.

UN support of guerrillas and terrorists, all anti-West and oriented toward the Soviet Union, takes many forms. Some of it is in cash outlays or in gifts of food, housing, health services, communications channels. But far more important to the terrorists is the good housekeeping seal of approval it bestows on them. Oddly enough, or not so odd, is the fact that when anti-Soviet national liberation movements spring up, such as UNITA in Angola, the United Nations puts a rubber band around its wallet and refuses to help. All of its aid funds go to anti-Western groups. Much of this aid ends up with the Palestine Liberation Organisation which supplies training and arms to most of the world's terrorist groups. In fact, as the Heritage report points out, just two years after the mass murder of Israeli athletes in Munich by the PLO the United Nations welcomed Yasser Arafat as the representatives of the Palestinian people. In fact UN agencies have granted the PLO full observer status. The PLO sits with the international civil agency where it serves, I kid you not, as an expert on airline hijacking, one of its fortes. There is indeed evidence that the UN has allowed the PLO to infiltrate the lavishly-funded UN relief and works agency, UNRWA. This not only puts a PLO hand in the $200,000,000 annual budget but also gives Arafat terrorists access to Palestinian refugee camps which, as the Heritage report notes, serves as valuable recruiting centres, bases for military training and indoctrination, and as reported by the Lebanese officials, actually military installations. At one time the Lebanese Government ringed these camps with tanks and soldiers, but since the civil war and the Syrian invasion of Lebanon the PLO openly uses these camps for military operations — at the United Nations expense and ours.

Official UN recognition is enjoyed by these communist-oriented guerrilla groups. Heritage says the South West African Peoples' Organisation (SWAPO), the African National Congress (ANC), and the Pan African Congress (PAC), are in it. As I have noted, the United States contributes some twenty-five per cent of the funds donated by the United Nations, making this country the largest financial contributor to terrorism in the world. The Soviet Union, through East Germany and Czechoslovakia, sells the terrorists arms for which the United States indirectly pays. The SWAPO case is interesting. In recent years the United Nations has given that organisation with a thoroughly documented record of terrorism some 40-billion dollars, thirty per cent of it from the United States. Interestingly, Kert Waldheim, when he was the UN Secretary General, refused to consider evidence of the nine hundred and sixty nine terrorist attacks by SWAPO involving 227 deaths, 385 abductions, and 227 serious injuries. Instead the United Nations focused its fire on South Africa, a UN member with which SWAPO is at war. And while the United States contributed the lion's share to the United Nations' world food program, whose contributions to terrorist organisations exceeds that of any other UN agency, the Soviet Union gave not a ruble. Since the UN secretariat is infiltrated at all levels by the Soviet secret police it is understandable that money should be lavished on Terrorist and guerrilla groups which the Kremlin arms and trains, or through the PLO. Why should the American taxpayer pay for this at a time when the Treasury faces a one hundred billion dollar deficit? Why should the domestic programs be curtailed so multi-millions can go to the enemies of the United States?..."

What this does not say is that in addition to this the National Council of Churches of America is one of the major contributors to terrorist organisations. This means that there is a lot of failure in many, many places and the blame of course can be laid to the door of many. But that is only part of the truth. The fact remains that we live in the dispensation of historical trends, and at the present time we, the people of the United States are a client nation to God. Therefore, as goes the believer so goes the client nation. The believer is the product of his decisions, not his environment. Decisions create environment, not environment decisions, and we have made literally hundreds of thousands of bad decisions and we are closing the options day by day for the perpetuation of this client nation to God. This is the tragedy that is rectified by the content of Revelation chapters 2 and 3.

We are studying the dispensation of historical trends. We live in a dead spot, there are no prophecies to be fulfilled at this time. The first and second advents of Jesus Christ are the major prophecies in the field of eschatology. Once our Lord Jesus Christ was seated at the right hand of the Father and once the Church Age began, from that point right down to the Rapture of the Church there is no prophecy to be fulfilled. This is the dispensation of historical trends and therefore a dead spot as far as prophecy is concerned. The next prophecy is the Rapture of the Church. We have also noted the most important factor of all, the profile of the winner, the one who receives the highest possible decoration from God at the judgment seat of Christ, the order of the morning star. We have seen how those believers who receive the order of the morning star for historical impact are going to be presented in the court of heaven during the time that the Tribulation occurs on earth. The discussion of the Tribulation on earth is the subject of Revelation chapters 6-18. Then when Christ comes back those who hold the decoration of the order of the morning star have certain special privileges related to the triumphal procession of our Lord, related to the coronation of the Lord Jesus Christ as the ruler of the world during the Millennium, and related to the rulership of various nations during His Millennial reign. But that is only the beginning of the story for in all eternity those who hold the order of the morning star are going to be infinitely greater than all other believers.

Right now we are looking at verses four through six which is a study of the uniform of glory which accompanies the order of the morning star.

Verse 4, there are two uniforms presented in this verse, the uniform of honour which is worn by the mature believer today, and the uniform of glory which is a translucent light worn over the resurrection body of those believers who receive the highest of all decorations at the judgment seat of Christ.

We actually begin the passage, not with “Thou hast,” but with an adversative conjunction, a)lla, literally translated “but.” It sets up a contrast between the cosmic believers we have been studying in verses 1-3 and the mature believers whom we now study in verses 4-6. And cosmic believers are always separated from mature believers. Believers living in the divine dynasphere are winners; believers living in the cosmic system are losers, and God always separates the winners from the losers. In this passage He does so with the adversative conjunction, “but,” setting up a contrast between the losers of the first three verses and the winners in the next three.

Next we have the present active indicative of the verb e)xw, “But you have.” This is a customary present tense, it denotes what may be reasonably expected to occur when the Word of God is faithfully taught by pastors. The temporal element is remote in this passage since the status is assumed to be true in the past or the future as well as the present. This is the meaning of the customary present, it denotes all facets of time. The active voice: the church at Sardis produces the action of the verb, which means that some of the believers in the local church continue to live in the divine dynasphere, even though they in the minority, and they persist in the perception of doctrine even though there is a tremendous amount of pressure on them to join their friends who are in the cosmic system. The church at Sardis still had those who persisted in the divine dynasphere. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of believers advancing to maturity in the midst of general apostasy and reversionism. The general apostasy of the indicative mood is the historical downtrend which results from believers spinning off from the pivot through living in the cosmic system. Three categories of historical disaster result: economic depression, social degeneration, military disaster.

These are the ones who are still holding fast. Next we have the object of the verb, the accusative plural direct object is composed of two Greek words. First of all the adjective, o)ligoj, and it means “a few”; with it we have the word o)noma, which has several meanings. It generally refers to a person. Sometimes it refers to a title. We have already seen how it refers to the order of chivalry at the judgment seat of Christ. Here it should be translated “persons” rather than “names.” It is the same problem that we have with the word o(ra, translated in the King James by a transliteration, “hour,” but it very rarely ever refers to a sixty-minute hour. Generally it refers to a period of time, longer than an hour, shorter than an hour, and it refers to a period of time which has certain limitations and certain problems. The same thing is true with regard to another Greek word, h(mera. It is generally translated “day,” but more frequently than not it does not refer to a day. Rarely does it refer to a day. It does when talking about the Sabbath but outside of that and a few other passages it refers to a point of time, like the day of salvation, a few seconds, and sometimes a thousand and seven years, like the day of the Lord.

So oligotomia is another problem, it is a technical word and it refers to persons or individuals, and we are going to translate it “But you have a few persons [individuals].” The fact is that oligotomia emphasises the fact that those who advance to maturity in Sardis go from gate four to gate eight and make good decisions every day in an area saturated with bad decisions. It is possible for you as a believer not to be influenced by your dear friends and your close friends who are in the cosmic system, not to be influenced by them socially or sexually or materially or some of the other systems of cosmic evangelism. It is possible for you every day of your life to make good decisions but you cannot do it without having the right priorities, and if Bible doctrine is not number one priority there is no way that you are going to survive cosmic evangelism. Cosmic evangelism has turned the majority of believers in the church at Sardis into reversionists and apostate believers contributing to the downtrend of history.

The Greek adjective oligotomia, meaning few, means that these believers in Sardis who advanced to maturity had to do so on their own motivation and volition without help or encouragement from others in Sardis. In fact other believers in Sardis were trying to lure them away. In other words, there was neither encouragement from Christian fellowship or social life. Instead, positive volition toward doctrine was ridiculed in Sardis and consistent living in the divine dynasphere often resulted in social ostracism by the cosmic believers. Therefore the direct object emphasises the fact that believers who advance to maturity possess very strong motivation, a good scale of values, the ability to pass the momentum tests, and the ability to stay relaxed through enforced and genuine humility. In Sardis peer pressure was strictly human viewpoint which encouraged and justified cosmic living, while ridiculing the divine viewpoint and those who were motivated by it. Those who were advancing to maturity, the “few names” as per the King James version, were truly great and strong people. But you must remember that their strength came from living in the divine dynasphere.

Next we have the locale for this, the preposition en plus the locative of Sardis.

Principle

1. Sardis was not the ideal environment for believers with positive volition toward doctrine. Hence it was a good environment for developing great strength, for rapid acceleration to maturity, for becoming eligible in the future for the crown of life, the order of the morning star, the gazebo in the garden, the order of chivalry, the new name on the white pebble of the resurrection body, and above all, wearing in time an invisible uniform of the soul, the uniform of glory, and in the future being distinguished from all losers — the majority of believers in eternity — by wearing the uniform of glory of translucent light. So Sardis was the perfect environment for testing one’s motivation and accelerating one’s advance to maturity. There was no encouragement from the majority and therefore you had to be motivated by virtue. Motivational virtue is directed toward God.

2. As goes the believer so goes the historical trend at any point in the Church Age. Your attitude toward Bible doctrine on a daily basis is the determining factor of historical impact in this dispensation, and inasmuch as we live in a client nation to God your attitude toward Bible doctrine determines the downtrends or the uptrends of this country.

3. Residence and function inside the divine dynasphere means historical uptrend; involvement in the cosmic system means historical downtrend. This, of course, refers to believers. Believers are either anonymous heroes or anonymous losers. Nothing is worse for a nation than to have the majority of believers as anonymous losers.

4. Therefore people individually and collectively are the products of their own decisions.

5. Decisions create environment, not environment decisions. Therefore there are no tragedies in history, rather historical disasters. When a nation falls to whom we are sympathetic we must remember that prior to the fall of that nation, prior to the absorption of that nation by the communists, there has been over a period of time negative volition toward truth in three categories.

6. These disasters are not tragedies since both individuals and nations are the products of their own decisions.

“But you have a few persons in Sardis,” a pivot of mature believers living in the divine dynasphere and contributing to the historical uptrend plus national blessing.

Next we have a relative clause which introduces the first of the two uniforms in this verse. This is the uniform of honour or the mature believer in time. It begins with the nominative plural of the relative pronoun $\omicron(j)$, and the antecedent is $\alpha\nu\omicron\mu\alpha$ [persons], “But you have a few persons in Sardis who.” The few persons, of course, are the pivot of mature believers living inside the divine dynasphere, contributing to the historical uptrend plus national blessing by association. This is a reference to the pivot of mature believers. Next we have the aorist active indicative of the verb $\mu\omicron\lambda\upsilon\omega$, plus the negative $\omicron\upsilon\kappa$, which means to smear dirt on something, to stain, to defile, to soil, to make impure. We will simply translate it, “who have not soiled.” The culminative aorist tense views the mature believer’s residence and function inside the divine dynasphere in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. The achievement of maturity plus the edification complex of the soul, maximum historical impact through residence and function inside the divine dynasphere, the maximum impact of the pivot and, of course, the glorification of the Lord Jesus Christ. This is the manner in which believers fulfill the plan of God as it relates to the client nation. The active voice: mature believers produce the action of the verb inside the divine dynasphere. The indicative mood plus the negative $\omicron\upsilon\kappa$ indicates the reality of the invisible uniform of honour, life in the divine dynasphere resulting in spiritual maturity. Believers who are mature wear an invisible uniform of honour and it is described in the accusative plural direct object from the noun $\iota(\mu\alpha\tau\omicron\upsilon\mu\alpha)$, and it means clothes, and refers here to the invisible uniform. With this we have the possessive genitive of $\alpha\upsilon\tau\omicron\upsilon(j)$, “their uniform of glory,” a)utoj used as a personal pronoun in the genitive indicating the uniform of glory or honour which belongs only to the mature believer in time.

The uniform of honour

1. Just as the impact of the mature believer in time is invisible so is his uniform. The mature believer is the anonymous hero of history. He will not be revealed for his fame and greatness until the judgment seat of Christ and he will be very famous in the Millennium as he rules some nation under our Lord Jesus Christ. In the meantime the believer who is mature is anonymous and he wears, therefore, an invisible uniform, the uniform of honour.

2. The uniform of honour is the life of the mature believer living in the divine dynasphere attaining spiritual maturity, glorifying Christ, having maximum impact on history as he forms part of the pivot. (I call it the uniform of honour because the modus operandi of the Christian is the royal family honour code. He executes the royal family honour code inside the divine dynasphere)

3. Such a believer is not found in the pages of our history. His influence is nevertheless real but invisible. 4. During the Church Age the historical impact of the believer is invisible, yet very real under the principle of blessing by association. Therefore during the Church Age the true impact of history is unknown to the general public.

5. However at the judgment seat of Christ the invisible historical impact of the mature believer, wearing the uniform of honour, will become known to a select group, the elect angels and the royal family of God.

6. The mature believer will receive certain decorations: the crown of life, for life in the divine dynasphere; the crown of righteousness, the execution of the royal family honour code; a new knighthood in the resurrection body anticipating Millennial chivalry; the highest decoration that man can receive from God, the order of the morning star, and with it, the uniform of glory.

7. Furthermore, at the second advent of Christ the entire population of the world will know and recognise the mature believers by the uniform of glory and by the fact that they wear the highest of all decorations, the order of the morning star.

8. The uniform of honour which is invisible in the Church Age — it is worn in the soul — will be exchanged for the uniform of glory which will be visible in the Millennium.

9. Those mature believers who receive the order of the morning star will rule with Christ over Gentile nations in the Millennium.

10. Therefore when the invisible Christ, now seated at the right hand of the Father, becomes visible at the second advent, the invisible mature believers of the Church Age will become visible with Him, manifest to the entire population of the world. The uniform of honour, therefore, anticipates the visible uniform of glory in the future.

The clothing of dishonour

1. The positive, mature believer lives consistently in the divine dynasphere. This does not imply perfect life but the daily use of rebound when necessary, and he wears the uniform of honour.

2. Clothing in natural life represents thinking, motivation, organisation, and judgment of the individual.

3. Clothing in the spiritual life represents the Christian way of life, or the carnal way of life of the royal family, whichever you happen to be. There is a uniform of honour worn by believers in the divine dynasphere but there is also a uniform of dishonour worn by cosmic believers.

4. In this passage unsoiled clothing represents the believer living in the divine dynasphere. Hence the uniform of honour, integrity, virtue in this life.

5. Soiled clothing mentioned here refers to the believer living in the cosmic system. Hence the uniform of dishonour, the uniform of carnality, evil and reversionism.

6. The believer living in the cosmic system has clothing of dishonour and contributes the historical downtrend of the client nation to God.

7. The believer living in the divine dynasphere wears the uniform of honour and not only produces personal virtue, integrity and honour but contributes to the historical uptrend of the client nation to God.

In the future mature believers are going to exchange their uniform of honour for the uniform of glory. So that is next in this verse, the uniform of glory or the mature believer in eternity. We begin with the intensive use of the conjunction kai, translated, "in fact." We move then to the future active indicative of the verb peripateo, which means to walk. It is translated, "in fact they shall walk," referring to the mature believer, the believer who advances from gate four to gate eight, living inside of the divine dynasphere. The predictive future tense anticipates the judgment seat of Christ, the second advent, the Millennial reign of Christ, the eternal state. That is when they will walk in the manner described here. The active voice: mature believers only produce the action of the verb and they produce it in the future. The indicative mood is declarative for a future reward of the uniform of glory and the privileges which are associated with that award. This verse describes the privileges which belong to the order of the morning star, wearing forever over the resurrection body the uniform of glory. With this we have a prepositional phrase, meta plus the genitive of e)gw, “they shall walk with me,” i.e. with our Lord Jesus Christ who is communicating this information through the apostle John to us as believers. With this we have a preposition e)n plus the locative plural of the adjective leukoj, and it should be translated, “in whites” — “in fact they shall walk with me in whites,” plural. It describes the uniform of glory which is a transparent garment, probably made of light, which is worn over the resurrection body as an unparalleled honour. Not all resurrection bodies have it, in fact probably relatively few, those who advance to maturity in any given generation.

Principle

1. Our Lord Jesus Christ wears the uniform of glory right now at the right hand of the Father. He first showed it to Peter, James and John even before He had received the resurrection body. In other words, the uniform of glory was modeled at the mount of transfiguration.
2. This is the fulfillment of Matthew 16:28, “Truly I say to you, there are some of those who are standing here [Peter, James and John] who shall not taste death until they see the Son of Man coming in his kingdom,” a preview of the second advent.
3. While on the mount of transfiguration Peter, James and John could not see our Lord in His resurrection body but they could see the uniform of glory which He would wear over His resurrection body in the future.
4. In Matthew 17:2 the modelling of the uniform of glory: “And he was transfigured before them; in fact his face shone like the sun, and his clothes became white as light.” Only a few, those who are mature believers who advance to maturity in any given generation will wear the uniform of glory.
5. The robe of Revelation 1:13 is that same uniform of glory.
6. The uniform of honour is the life of the mature believer in time and is manifest to the world by functional virtue such as impersonal love.
7. On the other hand the uniform of glory is the transparent garment of life which is awarded to the mature believer at the judgment seat of Christ. It is to be worn only with the highest decoration, the order of the morning star.

The principle of cosmic evangelism

The basis for cosmic it is found in the mandate which is given in verse two to the pastor of the local church: "Be constantly alert and strengthen the remnant." These are the believers who wear the uniform of honour, the minority in this congregation. The pastor must persist in teaching positive believers for without doctrine they are potential candidates for the cosmic system; "who are about to die," we have seen that this is cosmic death, the carnality which leads to eternal loss of reward, not loss of salvation. It is carnality reversionism and cosmic involvement; "for I have not found your work fulfilled in the sight of my God," which is the criticism of the majority in the Sardis church. They definitely were not advancing to maturity; they were not completing the plan of God; the plan of God was simply not fulfilled, and the reason has to do with the principle and the purpose of cosmic evangelism.

1. Cosmic evangelism is conducted by believers in the Lord Jesus Christ. They are under the control of Satan and in his power system, cosmic one, the interlocking systems of arrogance; cosmic two, the interlocking systems of hatred.

2. Cosmic evangelistic appeal is generally conducted through arrogance though the arrogance might be disguised by a facade of flattery, intellectuality, affection or passion.

3. Arrogance is easily influenced by evil, 1 Corinthians 15:33, "Be not deceived: evil friends corrupt good morals," and this includes virtue and integrity derived from residence and function inside the divine dynasphere.

4. When the mature believer in the divine dynasphere is led astray by his love for the cosmic believer the resultant arrogance means loss of discernment; he is dead cosmically.

5. His cosmic friends may be moral or immoral but the results are the same. He is evangelised for the cosmic system.

6. The moral cosmic believer is affectionate without being passionate, and with affection lures the mature believer or the believer living in the divine dynasphere outside and into the cosmic system.

7. The immoral cosmic believer is passionate without being affectionate, and with his passion lures the mature believer into the cosmic system.

8. In the first case of the moral cosmic believer friendship becomes more important than doctrine. You can be lured out of Bible class daily very easily. All you have to do is to make a friend of a moral cosmic believer and that friendship will eventually become more important than doctrine — and you're gone.

9. In the second case, the immoral believer leads to the principle that sex becomes more important than doctrine.

10. Affection comes from the soul and is very meaningful and wonderful only when it includes virtue, integrity and capacity for love.

11. Passion comes from the body and is meaningful as an expression of category #2 love only where love, honour, virtue and integrity also exist.

12. But where love, honour, integrity and virtue does not exist then you are evangelised by your cosmic friends, or in some cases, your cosmic lover. Love, honour and integrity can only exist in the divine dynasphere, in the cosmic system they are destroyed.

The objective of cosmic evangelism

1. The objective of cosmic evangelism is to lure the believer in the divine dynasphere into the cosmic system. And Satan does not attack directly, he uses believers in the cosmic system. He uses their attractiveness, he uses their relationship with you, he uses their friendship, he uses their morality, he uses their immorality. Just like communism Satan uses antithetical methods to achieve the same thing.

2. The tool of cosmic evangelism is the lure to arrogance. The human race is extremely vulnerable and the attention of a friend or the desire, the lust of a lover, can make a person forget overnight that number one priority is Bible doctrine.

3. Arrogance cannot discern between passion and affection. Arrogance cannot relate, then, to love, honour, integrity and virtue.

4. Therefore arrogance assumes that a show of affection from the opposite sex is an invitation to passion.

5. Furthermore arrogance assumes that a show of passion from the opposite sex is a sign of affection or love, and where cosmic involvement is concerned neither is true. Passion is not love and affection is not passion. The believer living in the divine dynasphere keeps them in their proper place.

6. Arrogance cannot distinguish between passion and affection, sex and love, the unreality of flattery and the reality of virtue, honour and integrity.

7. Arrogance assumes that passion is affection, therefore arrogance enters into a physical or sexual relationship without love, integrity, virtue or honour.

8. Arrogance assumes that affection is passion, therefore arrogance becomes aggressive and advances lasciviousness, attempted seduction.

9. Arrogance assumes that flattery is greatness and the weakness developed makes the arrogant person the slave of the flatterer.

10. Cosmic evangelism is easy once the victim has been lured into one of the many categories of arrogance, so inevitably arrogance is a sign of being evangelised for the cosmic system. This is exactly what has happened in Sardis.

Verse 4b, "In fact they will walk with me in whites." This is the uniform of glory. The uniform of honour is parlayed into the uniform of glory at the judgment seat of Christ. Our Lord Jesus Christ wore the uniform of glory first on the mount of transfiguration, and the uniform of glory will be worn by a few believers who achieve maturity in the future. It will be worn at the court presentation in heaven during the Tribulation, it will be worn at the coronation of our Lord after the second advent, it will be worn at the wedding supper of the Lamb, it will be worn throughout the Millennium. It is the greatest honour that a human being can receive.

The doctrine of walking

"they will walk with me in whites"

1. Walking is, of course, the function of bi-ped homo sapien. It is a form of locomotion in which forward progress is accomplished by hoisting one foot of the body in front of the body, and then placing weight on that foot, causing the body to move forward. In the New Testament, however, walking is used as a synonym for spiritual modus operandi. All of the connotations of walking in the Christian life are covered by the one Greek word peripateo. There is also the Hebrew equivalent found in the Old Testament, halak, used generally in a metaphorical way. There are also at least two other words translated "walking" in the King James version. One of them is the verb stoxew, which generally connotes marching in ranks and used primarily by the apostle Paul. The apostle John uses peripateo. There is also one other word and that is orthopodew, and it means to walk straight. With the negative it is used for cosmic involvement; with the positive it is used for living in the divine dynasphere.

2. Walking in the New Testament refers to Christian modus operandi inside the divine dynasphere. For example, walking refers to residence in the divine dynasphere in 1 John 1:7, "but if we keep walking in the light," the believer living in the divine dynasphere. The same connotation is found in Galatians 5:16, "keep walking by means of the Spirit and you will not perform any lust pattern of the old sin nature."

Functioning at the various gates of the divine dynasphere is said to be "walking in the Spirit." Also, walking is used for the three functions at gate four which are described in terms of walking. The first function of gate four of the divine dynasphere is perception of doctrine, 3 John 4, "... some of your children keep walking by means of doctrine," i.e. perceptive function of doctrine at gate four. Also at the same gate is the application of doctrine, 2 Corinthians 5:7, "We walk by faith and not by sight," and "faith" refers to the three stages of the faith-rest drill. The third function of gate four is momentum, Colossians 1:9,10, "For this reason also, since the day we heard it, we do not cease to pray for you and so to ask that you may be filled with e)pignwsij doctrine of his sovereign purpose by means of all wisdom," application of doctrine; "and spiritual understanding," perception of doctrine; "in order that you might walk worthy of the Lord." This is passing the momentum test. Walking is also used for the function of virtue inside the divine dynasphere, Ephesians 5:2, "We keep walking in love," "love" here refers to the functional virtue, impersonal love. 1 Thessalonians 2:12, "So that you may walk in a manner worthy of God who called you into his own kingdom and glory," the function of virtue inside the divine dynasphere. Romans 12:13, "Let us walk honourably as in the daytime," function of virtue inside the divine dynasphere. Ephesians 4:1,2, "I, therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, continue to encourage you to walk in a manner worthy of your station in life," royal family of God; "into which you have been elected to privilege, with all humility," function of gate three; "and courteous thoughtfulness of others, with patience," regarding the divine dynasphere, its residence; "showing forbearance," function in the divine dynasphere; "to one another in the sphere of the love complex [the divine dynasphere]."

Walking also refers to the three stages of the faith-rest drill. 2 Corinthians 5:7, "We walk by faith and not by sight." The faith-rest drill is used inside the divine dynasphere, it is also used to pass momentum testing. The faith-rest drill is used in the cosmic system only to get out and to recover life in the divine dynasphere, Colossians 2:6, "According as you have received you yourself Christ Jesus the Lord [by faith], so keep walking in him."

Walking also refers to life inside the cosmic system of Satan, Ephesians 4:17, "This I say therefore, and make emphatic demand by means of the Lord, that you no longer keep walking as the Gentiles walk in the futility of their mind [cosmic involvement]," Ephesians 5:15, "Be careful how you walk, not as unwise [cosmic involvement], but as wise [decisions regarding the divine dynasphere]."

Once a believer starts living in the cosmic system, even though he has been saved by faith in Christ and the work of the cross, he nevertheless continues to be the enemy of the cross in that system, Philippians 3:18,19, describing the walk of the believer in the cosmic system ... "whose fame is by means of dishonour [the uniform of dishonour or soiled clothes worn by the believer in the cosmic system], who keeps thinking about earthly things [involvement in cosmic two]." Or, 1 John 1:6 I "If we contend that we have fellowship with him and keep walking in darkness [the believer in the cosmic system is walking in darkness] we are lying and do not practice the truth."

Walking also refers to future reward of mature believers, Revelation 3:4, "They will walk with me in whites."

One of our Lord's titles in the strategic victory of the angelic conflict is called "the bright and morning star." Christ is called the morning star in relationship to His first and second advents. In Numbers 24:17, "A star shall come forth from Jacob [1st advent]"; 2 Peter 1:19, "A morning star has come up [2nd advent]." The same is found in Revelation 22:16 where He is called the bright morning star. Since the order of the morning star is the highest decoration that heaven can give to a believer it must be accompanied by an appropriate garment. That appropriate garment is the uniform of glory.

So far in verse four this is what we have: “But you have a few persons in Sardis who have not soiled their clothes [the uniform of honour]; in fact they will walk with me in whites [the uniform of glory].”

We have three more words in this particular verse. We start out with the causal use of the conjunction $\alpha(\text{ti}$, correctly translated “because.” Here is the reason for the special award for the uniform of glory. Worthiness in time means glory in eternity; “because they are,” the present active indicative of the verb $\epsilon(\text{imi}$, the verb to be. This is a perfective present tense, it refers to the fact of advance to maturity in past time but is emphasised as a present reality, the reality of a future reward in the resurrection body. This is tantamount to hope³ in the divine plan, X+Y+Z. The active voice: the mature believer living inside the divine dynasphere produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a reality of future reward to all mature believers.

With this we have the last word in the sentence, the predicate nominative from the adjective $\alpha(\text{cioj}$, and it means worthy. They are worthy because they have lived inside the divine dynasphere; they are worthy because they have been positive toward doctrine on a consistent basis and have not succumbed to cosmic evangelism; they are worthy because they have advanced to maturity, passing all of the momentum tests; they are worthy because they have constructed the edification complex of the soul; they are worthy because they have glorified our Lord Jesus Christ in time; they are worthy because they have maximum, yet anonymous, invisible impact in this dispensation.

The entire translation: “But you have a few persons in Sardis [the pivot of mature believers] who have not soiled their clothes; in fact, they will walk with me in whites, because they are worthy.” The mature believer exchanges the temporal uniform of honour for the eternal uniform of glory at the judgment seat of Christ. The Lord Jesus Christ as the morning star has a resurrection body enshrouded in white transparent light. While all believers will have the white pebble or the resurrection body at the Rapture of the Church, only those believers who achieve maturity through life in the divine dynasphere will have the uniform of glory covering their resurrection body. This uniform of glory is made of transparent light and resembles the highest-ranking uniform worn by our Lord Jesus Christ on His resurrection body. The uniform of glory is a part of our Lord’s third royal patent as the morning star. For mature believers with maximum historical impact in time our Lord will decorate them at the judgment seat of Christ with the order of the morning star and the uniform of glory. The order of the morning star is worn on that special uniform only. This decoration plus the uniform of glory also gives the mature believer special privileges and special fellowship with our Lord Jesus Christ after the Rapture in heaven, on the earth during the Millennium, and forever and ever in the eternal state.

You will note that while heaven is a perfect place for ever and ever there is no equality among believers in heaven, just as there is no equality among angels in heaven. There are archangels and angles; there are mature believers and there are immature believers; there are winners and losers. The losers have a resurrection body; the winners have a resurrection body plus the uniform of glory plus the order of the morning star plus the crown of life, and there are vast differences. And differences in heaven, a perfect place, represents the principle of freedom. It is always freedom that makes the difference. After salvation your attitude toward Bible doctrine is the determining factor. Positive volition: advance to maturity; negative volition: you become a loser.

Remember that freedom always results in inequalities in life. There is no equality in life; there is no equality in eternity; equality is not necessary for anything. Equality is ego-arrogant propaganda from the cosmic system. That is why communism uses it successfully and that is why so many organisations have used equality successfully. Equality does not mean happiness, it means unhappiness. Equality means loss of freedom. When people are equal, allegedly, there is no freedom, no function of freedom. The function of freedom guarantees that some will succeed and some will fail. That is why volition and freedom, live and let live, is the great issue in the angelic conflict. All believers will possess the white pebble but only the mature believers of phase two will wear the uniform of glory and receive with it the decoration of the order of the morning star.

The difference between all believers in eternity is determined by the use of their volition in time. The believer possesses freedom to choose for the plan of God, including doctrine and the divine dynasphere. He also possesses freedom to choose for Satan's plan, the cosmic system. As goes the believer's volition toward the plan of God in time, so go the rewards and decorations of eternity, as well as the difference between great happiness and misery in time. The differences between believers in eternity is not the resurrection body but the rewards, the decorations and the privileges presented at the judgment seat of Christ. The elite of Christianity are not visible in time for our uniform of glory is worn in the soul. Their faithfulness is related to their spiritual life — consistent positive volition toward doctrine, consistent filling of the Spirit inside the divine dynasphere, consistent advance from gate four to gate eight, the construction of the edification complex of the soul, the glorification of the Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore the elite of Christianity are those believers who exploit to the maximum the divine provision of logistical grace and parlay right decisions into spiritual maturity. Right decisions are made for the divine dynasphere and the Word of God. These positive decisions are right decisions. They have to be, however, daily decisions which reflect daily right priorities in life. The thousands of right decisions in time are reflected in the decorations and privileges of both the Millennium and the eternal state.

The privilege of ultimate happiness in eternity is related to the gazebo in the garden. The highest decoration for life in the divine dynasphere is: the crown of life; knighted with the new order of knighthood, the order of chivalry for eternity; decorated with the order of the morning star the highest decoration for historical impact in the angelic conflict; the uniform of glory which accompanies the morning star.

Peter's account of mount of transfiguration is given in 2 Peter 1:17-19, "For when he [Christ] received [on the mount of transfiguration] from God the Father honour," the uniform of honour was from His residence in the prototype divine dynasphere; "and glory," this was the uniform of glory which anticipated His resurrection, ascension and session; “such a sound was then made by his majestic glory [God the Father spoke], “This one [our Lord Jesus Christ] is my beloved Son in whom I am well-pleased,” some of us as sons of God are going to have that same accolade in the future; “and we heard the same voice carried from heaven when we were with him in the holy mount [the mount of transfiguration]. And we keep on having, however,” right now the issue is not what you can see. Peter, James and John saw the uniform of glory, therefore, empirically they understand something that we can only understand theologically; “a more reliable prophetic doctrine,” more reliable than the empiricism of Peter, James and John on the mount of transfiguration; “with reference to which doctrine you perform honourably,” that is the uniform of honour, invisible at the moment but parlayed into the visible uniform of glory in the future; “concentrating in your right lobes on the lamp shining in the dark place,” the lamp shining in the dark place today is Jesus Christ who controls history, “until the day dawn [second advent of Christ] and the morning star [our Lord Jesus Christ] has come,” second advent. What is invisible today is the anonymous heroes of the time in which we live, but in the future they will be well-known, they will be the great people of history.

Verse 5, the uniform of glory presented at court. First of all we have the award of the uniform of glory, and our first two words are ο(nikon. Ο(is the generic use of the definite article used to describe a category. The category here: Church Age believers who attain maturity through residence and function inside the divine dynasphere, who are persistent in the perception of Bible doctrine. So we simply translate the definite article, “the.” Next we have the present active participle from the verb nikaw, and it means to win. However the problem here is that there are two other uses for the participle in the Greek. One is ascriptive, where the participle is used as an adjective; the other is when the participle is used as a substantive. Here we have the present active participle used as a substantive and this is because there are no other nouns in the area. It is translated simply, “the winner.” With it we have an adverb, ο(utoj, and it would be translated, “So the winner”: ο(utoj means “so,” and it refers to what precedes. It can be translated “thus”; it can be translated “so.” In other words, this is simply a continuation from verse four. The mature believer decorated with the order of the morning star at the judgment seat of Christ is the winner.

Next we have we have the future middle indicative of the verb periballw, and it means to clothe, it means to wear, it means to attire, “Thus the winner [the mature believer] shall be clothed.” The predictive future tense anticipates the judgment seat of Christ when the mature believer receives the uniform of glory as a part of being decorated with the order of the morning star. The middle voice is a direct middle in which the believer participates in the results of the action, being decorated with the order of the morning star plus the uniform of glory worn over his resurrection body. Remember that the uniform of glory is a robe of translucent light. It was worn first by our Lord Jesus Christ; in fact it is worn by Him at the right hand of the Father. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the award of the uniform of glory at the judgment seat of glory. The uniform of honour is exchanged for the uniform of glory. The uniform of honour is manifest by the modus operandi of functional virtue and the fulfillment of the royal family honour code. “So the winner [the mature believer] shall be clothed.”

Now we have the prepositional phrase which describes the uniform of glory, εν plus the locative plural of the adjective leukoj plus the noun ι(mation, meaning robe or garment. It is translated, "in whites," plural.

The occasion for the uniform of glory and the wearing of the order of the morning star begins at the judgment seat of Christ where it is awarded. That is when for the first time mature believers will be decorated and they will wear the order of the morning star and the uniform of glory. With the order of the morning star they receive the uniform of glory, as we have noted. The reason for the presentation of this decoration in heaven is because Jesus Christ has as a part of His third royal patent the title "morning star." The order of the morning star, therefore, and the uniform of glory represent maximum utilisation of logistical grace during phase two of the plan of God. They also represent maximum time spent inside the divine dynasphere and the consistency of high priorities given to Bible doctrine so that doctrine comes first above everything else. Doctrine is the key for advancing to maturity.

After mature believers receive the order of the morning star and the uniform of glory they will be presented in the court of heaven, but only mature believers. Believers who do not attain maturity in this dispensation are going to have resurrection bodies but they are not going to be presented in the court of heaven. They are not going to have a chapter in the eternal history of the human race.

Once the second advent occurs the next item on the agenda is the fact that the believer in the uniform of glory and the order of the morning star is revealed to the entire population of the world.

In verse 5 we have covered one phrase: "Thus the winner," the mature believer decorated with the order of the morning star at the judgment seat of Christ, "shall be clothed in white garments," a reference, again, to the translucent uniform of glory. The winner is the believer who lives in the divine dynasphere and functions at the various gates. It is the mature believer who carries the nation. The loser is the cosmic believer who is involved in cosmic one with its 26 gates of interlocking system of arrogance and cosmic two with its 9 gates of interlocking systems of hatred.

We have noticed the resurrection of the Church which terminates the Church Age, the next prophecy in history. That is point X. Point Y is the great genuflect in the sky. When a person dies during the Church Age he is absent from the body and face to face with the Lord. That means that his soul leaves the body and enters into the presence of the Lord where he receives a new interim body. This is a period of tremendous happiness for losers and winners. Losers and winners are not distinguished after physical death in heaven. Then comes the resurrection of the Church and that is where we start X, Y and Z. At X the resurrection body is received. The dead in Christ receive theirs; those who are alive and remain receive theirs, and at point X there is no distinction among believers as yet. They all have the same resurrection body. Then at point Y, the big genuflect in the sky, the great time of worship of the entire assembled royal family of God, and still no distinction between resurrection bodies. Point Z is where the distinction begins.

The winner is the believer who logs maximum time in the divine dynasphere, the believer who advances from gate four to gate eight, who fulfills the principle of integrity and virtue in life manufactured inside the divine dynasphere. The function of the royal priesthood is directed toward God, you have to live your life as unto God; the function of the royal ambassadorship is life directed toward man and circumstances. The result is that by perception of doctrine there is motivating virtue produced in the direction of God and functional virtue produced in the direction of mankind. This is the modus operandi of the mature believer. He builds the edification complex of the soul through daily perception of Bible doctrine. So the winners are believers who live in the divine dynasphere, learn Bible doctrine on a consistent basis, pass the various momentum tests, advance to maturity, fulfill the plan of God, and glorify the Lord Jesus Christ. Losers are believers who live in the cosmic system. They become the servants of Satan, they come constantly under the control of their old sin nature and carnality, and constantly under the control of Satan through the cosmic system. Losers are Christians, then, who fail in time. They do not lose their eternal salvation because of their failure. However they do occupy an inferior status in heaven, they have no authority in the Millennium and an inferior status forever and ever.

The winners are described by the participle nikaw, winner. All historical blessing and prosperity in the Church Age results from unknown and unnamed believers who live inside the divine dynasphere and advance to spiritual maturity and form the pivot for the client nation. These are the anonymous heroes of history. They have used the hidden manna of Bible doctrine and the provision of logistical grace combined with the function inside the divine dynasphere to become winners. That is why in verse 5, "Thus the winner shall be clothed with white garments," referring to the uniform of glory. The uniform of honour is parlayed into the uniform of glory at point Z, the judgment seat of Christ.

Point Z: 2 Corinthians 5:10, "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that each one of us [each believer in Christ] may receive what is due him for the things accomplished in the body," while he was on earth, a specific reference to phase two of the plan of God, "whether good or evil [worthless]." The word for "good" is the Greek word a)gathoj, the adjective which means good of intrinsic value, and it is often used to describe the plan of God, Romans 8:28. The word for "worthless," fauloj, has to do with function inside of the cosmic system.

The loser should be noted first at point Z. There are two categories at the judgment seat of Christ, all are believers but there are two categories: those who are losers and those who are winners. The losers are going to have a period of ashamedness. Romans 5:5 puts it this way: "And hope [hope3 of Z radical] does not make us ashamed [at the judgment seat of Christ]." Or, 2 Timothy 2:15, "A workman who needs not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth." And, of course, the implication is that if you do not rightly divide the Word of truth, perception and application, then you are going to be ashamed. Or, Philippians 1:20, "According to my earnest anticipation and hope [hope3 of Z radical], that I shall not be put to same in anything," the implication is that losers are put to shame; "but with all confidence [again, the 3rd hope of Z radical] Christ shall now, as always, be glorified in my body, whether by life or by death."

Losers are found in Philippians 3:18,19. While they have not lost their salvation in that passage they are called “enemies of the cross,” their end is destruction, they are going to die the sin unto death, their god is their emotion, their emphasis is on the human viewpoint, etc. In 1 John 2:28 we are given the mandate as believers, “keep residing in it [the divine dynasphere], that if he [Christ] should appear [Rapture followed by the judgment seat of Christ], we might have confidence and might not be put to shame in his presence.” Losers are going to be put to shame in His presence.

Winners are going to receive the crown of life. This is for living inside the divine dynasphere. And with the crown of life they will also receive the decoration of maximum impact — Revelation 2:28, “Furthermore I will give to them the order of the morning star.” And, of course, the uniform of glory goes with this. The decoration of the morning star includes the privilege of wearing the uniform of glory, Revelation 3:4, walking with the Lord in whites. The decoration includes also presentation at the court of heaven.

The order of the morning star also includes a new knighthood, the order of chivalry for the royal family or Church Age believer, Revelation 2:17, “I will give him blessing from the hidden manna [Bible doctrine], and I will give him a white pebble [resurrection body], and on that pebble has been written a new title [an honour only belonging to those who hold the order of the morning star] which no one knows except the one who receives it.”

The winner also figures in the second advent. After being presented at the court of heaven he joins up with the other winners of the morning star to return to the earth. When the Lord returns to the earth those who hold the order of the morning star and wear the uniform of glory are going to be there, 1 Thessalonians 3:13, “At the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all of his saints,” those who are winners and those who are losers. They are by this time distinguished. There is no longer the common resurrection body, the white pebble. Now there is a tremendous distinction between winners and losers.

Before the Millennium there will be a coronation such as the world has never seen. Our Lord Jesus Christ is going to be crowned the ruler of the world. He will give the rulership of the world to the Father who will immediately give it back to Him. At that point, once again, there is a tremendous distinction between winners and losers. There are two kinds of people there who are believers. There are believers in their physical bodies who will be the nucleus for the Millennium and believers in resurrection bodies. It is described in Revelation 19:6, the coronation; in Revelation 19:, the wedding supper of the Lamb which follows.

Verse 6, the coronation, “I heard as, as it were, the sound of a great crowd of people [Church Age believers in resurrection bodies] and as the sound of many waters [the Old Testament saints and Tribulational martyrs have just received their resurrection bodies and they are classified as “friends of the groom”] as the sound of mighty thunders [the living and surviving Tribulational believers who will be the nucleus for the population explosion of the Millennium], saying, Praise belongs to the Lord because the Lord God [Jesus Christ] has become king.”

Verse 7, the wedding supper of the Lamb. "Let us be extremely happy." There are degrees of happiness always. In the divine dynasphere there are degrees of happiness, happiness from the filling of the Spirit, happiness which comes from objectivity, basic impersonal love. Great happiness and capacity for happiness always depends on humility. No one is ever happy in a state of arrogance. Then, of course, there is happiness for those who are positive in perception and application of doctrine, happiness in love for God, happiness in right man, right woman, in friendship, in maturity. There are also degrees of happiness in eternity; the same thing applies.

The reason for this is obvious. Once we accept Christ as saviour we are free to accept or reject Bible doctrine. The issue is no longer salvation or, What think ye of Christ? The issue is now, What do you think about Bible doctrine? Positive volition toward doctrine in the divine dynasphere means good decisions over a period of time resulting in spiritual maturity. But negative decisions toward doctrine result in becoming a loser.

Heaven is a perfect place and heaven is going to have winners and losers in varying degrees. So there will be varying degrees of happiness in heaven. No one is going to be unhappy once they get past the judgment seat of Christ but there is going to be a tremendous inequality. Remember that inequality goes with freedom.

Continuing verse 7, "and celebrate with maximum happiness and give glory to him [Christ is the groom who has just been crowned ruler of the world] because the marriage of the Lamb [Christ] has come and his bride [the Church] has made herself ready," i.e. the judgment seat of Christ, presentation of the morning star winners and then returning with Christ, "Also it was given to her that she [the bride, the Church] should be clothed in fine linen," all believers in their resurrection bodies. There is no distinction between winners and losers in this passage but there is in the next phrase; "bright," this is part of the limited group who have the uniform of glory and the order of the morning star; "unsoiled," morning star winners only. The fine linen is the ultimate righteousness, resurrection body minus the old sin nature of the saint, the royal family of God. "And he communicated to me, "Write, 'Happiness belongs to the ones who are invited to the marriage supper of the Lamb' ."

The authority of the morning star in the Millennium then becomes the next issue. The morning star people are going to stand out at the coronation, at the wedding supper of the Lamb, and now we go into the Millennium. The Millennium is a time of rulership by our Lord Jesus Christ. It is a time, however, of nationalism. The whole system for administering freedom under the rulership of our Lord is nationalism and the world again will be broken up into many nations. There will be one client nation to God and that will be Israel at that time. For the rest there will be Gentile nations and the principle is that those who hold the order of the morning star are the anonymous heroes of history. They are anonymous in the Church Age but they will be well-known in the Millennium. Revelation 2:26-28 — "to him I will give authority over the nations." The anonymous heroes of the Church Age will become famous in the Millennium. And notice: the Lord Jesus Christ "shall rule them with a rod of iron." He rules with authority. No one can rule without authority; no one can control without authority. And He rules: Revelation 20:4, "And I saw thrones, and they that sat upon them [Church Age believers, winners of the order of the morning star], and judgment was given to them.”

The privileges that belong to the morning star decoration in the eternal state is a fascinating subject. For example, once the Millennium is over there is a revolution at its end. Satan is loosed and he comes back and finds those who reject perfect environment because they have no capacity for life, love or happiness or blessing. They have rejected Christ as saviour and therefore Satan will start a revolution, the Gog revolution. After that is put down there is going to be the nuclear destruction of planet earth by the Lord Jesus Christ.

The first thing we notice about privileges in eternity. There is going to be a nuclear destruction of the universe and a new heavens and a new earth and a new Jerusalem are all going to be created, and we are going to live forever and ever in this. And we are going to have degrees of happiness, degrees of blessing, and inequality will be the order of the day in eternity, just as the angels are in eternity and there is tremendous inequality among angels.

The privileges: We only have a short time on this earth and if our priorities are straight we will have no problem. Revelation 2:7, “I will give him the privilege of eating from the tree of life in the paradise of God.” The tree of life and the paradise of God is open to mature believers only. By the way, it is going to be located in the new Jerusalem and you are going to have to have the pass to get in, and if you are not a mature believer with the coat of arms, the eternal escutcheon of maturity, you can’t get in. So the gazebo in the garden is where there is going to be a lot of partying in heaven. But if you are a loser, note that there is a special party every now and then in the new Jerusalem and it is for morning star holders only, for those who wear the uniform of glory only, for those who have the escutcheon of glory only. So there is a great benefit that belongs to a few. It should be more than a few.

The highest order of eternal chivalry is the new knighthood of Revelation 2:17, “To the winner I will give him blessing from the hidden manna [maximum doctrine in the soul], and I will give him the white pebble [resurrection body] and a new title [knighted with the new title of knighthood for the order of chivalry in eternity]”.

Then there is a third factor that is very important. The believer who has the most impact on history is the believer who advances to maturity, lives in the pivot, and therefore becomes blessing by association historically to his contemporary. This believer is going to be anonymous now but the time will come when the low profile will be famous, for in eternity. Revelation 3:12, “I will make the winner a pillar in the temple of my God. Furthermore, he will never vanish from history.” This anticipates our study of this verse. Each believer who is mature and holds the order of the morning star will have a pillar, a chapter in the permanent history of the human race. He will be famous as a ruler in the Millennium; he will be famous as having a permanent chapter in human history.

In the rest of verse twelve we have the eternal coat of arms and the heraldry of the winners. An escutcheon is simply a coat of arms often put on some kind of a shield. It has three parts. On the first, "I will emblazon on him [the mature believer, the winner] the title of my God," the title of God the Father as the author of the divine plan. The mature believer has executed the plan of God in time and, therefore, he has a heraldry and the title of God the Father. The next part of the escutcheon is next described, "also the new Jerusalem," that is, the pass to enter the new Jerusalem of the eternal state where the tree of life is located; "which shall descend from the immediate source of heaven and from the ultimate source of God." Then the third part of the escutcheon, "also emblazoned with my new name." That is the third royal patent of our Lord Jesus Christ which He earned at the cross and the first advent, and it indicates that mature believers faithfully served the Lord in time rather than Satan in the cosmic system, the honoured Him, and this is the way they are recognised in their coat of arms.

Summary: The coat of arms of the mature believer in eternity has three parts: Dexter — the title of God the Father, indicating the fulfillment of His plan in time, life in the divine dynasphere, advance to maturity, construction of the edification complex of the soul; The Middle — the new Jerusalem simply parlays supergrace blessings of time into surpassing grace blessings of eternity; the Sinister — the third royal patent of our Lord Jesus Christ indicating the fact that the mature believer glorifies God in time.

All of this pulls together what we are discussing at this point in verse 5 — "Thus the winner [the mature believer] shall be clothed with white garments."

We now move to the permanence of the uniform of glory. There are going to be great distinctions in heaven. The use of freedom in time, the use of volition in time, means inequality in heaven. Heaven is a perfect place, the circumstances of heaven are perfect and yet there will be vast differences between believers. Some will have simply a resurrection body minus the old sin nature. Others are going to have the resurrection body plus the crown of life, the crown of righteousness, the order of the morning star, the uniform of glory, the heraldry of glory as well.

Next we have the connective use of the conjunction kai, meaning "and," followed by the aorist active indicative of the verb e)xaifw, which with the strong double negative means to blot out. The double negative is not a positive in the Greek, it is a stronger negative. Here we have u)o mh. Mh is the negative usually used with the subjunctive, with the imperative, with infinitives and with any other type verb form where you have a negative, except the indicative. O)u is used with the indicative. When you put them together they are very very strong. The literal translation is, "not never." So we have so far: "and I will not ever blot out" or "I will never obliterate." The dramatic aorist tense states a present reality with the certitude of a past event. This is a grammatical device for emphasising the eternal security of the believer and applying it to the doctrine of the uniform of glory. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb to emphasise the permanence of all rewards and surpassing grace blessings in eternity. The indicative mood is declarative plus the strong double negative emphasises the permanence of rewards and also the permanence of the decision you made when you personally believed in the Lord Jesus Christ.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object from onoma. While onoma means name it also has other similar meanings in the Greek. It sometimes means “person” and it quite often, as in the book of Revelation, refers to a title, a title of knighthood. The heraldry we have noted briefly and the title of knighthood go together. Anyone who has a title of knighthood also has a coat of arms and heraldry is the study of the coat of arms. When the Normans came to England the way in which they recognised their own troops was by what they wore over the breastplate and what they had on the shield. To distinguish friend from foe a system of heraldry was used by these Norman knights. Eventually in the history of England it was picked up by the Saxons as well and, eventually of course, the amalgamation of the two led to a tremendous system of heraldry which spread all over western Europe.

The shield became the basis for it all. On the top was the “chief,” the bottom was the “base,” the left was called “dexter,” the middle was called “middle,” and then the right was called “sinister.” There are three different facets to the order of knighthood given to every mature believer as a reward in eternity and the distinction between believers will be found in that order of chivalry for eternity. There is an order of chivalry for the Millennium, there is an order of chivalry for eternity, and the uniform of glory is permanent; all of this is permanent. This is the concept: “I will never obliterate his royal title” — not “his name” but his royal title, the title he has earned as a believer in time, residing and functioning inside of the divine dynasphere and, at the same time, advancing to maturity from gate four to gate eight.

Then we have the reference to the book of life, ek plus the ablative from biblos, and with it we have zwh in the genitive. It is correctly translated “book of life.” “I will never blot his title [his honour, his awards, his heraldry] out of the book of life.”

The book of life is two things. It is one thing in time and it is something else in eternity. Basically the book of life is a registry, it has the names of every member of the human race in time. In eternity it is the registry of all believers, not all people. When a person dies without accepting Christ as saviour his name is blotted out of the book of life so that when you get to eternity the only people who are left are believers. So in eternity it is the registry of believers; in time it is the registry of the human race.

The book of life in our passage deals with also with the new knighthood, the new order of chivalry as well as the registry of the name. The book of life is related to the function of GAP in Philippians 4:3, “Help those women who fought at my side in the spread of the gospel; also help with Clement and the rest of my fellow workers, whose names are in the book of life,” meaning they are in there now and they always will be, they will never be blotted out.

The unbeliever is not registered in the book of life, according to Revelation 13:8, “And all who dwell on the earth will worship him, every one whose name has not been written from the foundation of the world in the book of life of the Lamb who has been slain.”

So you see we have different approaches to the book of life. Here we anticipate eternity because those who are going to worship in eternity are those who are still in the registry. If you are not in the registry you don't worship God. The book of life is also related to the historical power of the revived Roman empire in the Tribulation, Revelation 17:8 — “The beast that you saw [revived Roman empire] was [Roman empire in AD 96] and is not [AD 476], and is about to come out of the abyss [revived Roman empire of the Tribulation] and to go to destruction. And those who dwell on the earth will be amazed whose name has not been written in the book of life from the foundation of the world, when they shall see the beast, that was and is not and will come.”

The book of life is also related to the last judgment, Revelation 20:12, “And I saw the dead [unbelievers], great and small, standing before the throne, and books were opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged from the things that were written in the books, according to their works.” Here is the principle of the last judgment. If your name is blotted out of the book of life because you didn't accept Christ as saviour there is another set of books on you, the books of your works, every good deed you have ever done. At the last judgment your sins will not be mentioned, they were judged at the cross. But the unbelievers works will be brought up and they will tally up to -R. It will be demonstrated then that -R cannot have fellowship with +R and therefore this is the basis for going to the lake of fire. Revelation 20:15, “And if anyone's name was not found written in the book of life, he was thrown into the lake of fire.

In Revelation 3:5 it says: “I will not blot his name out of the book of life.” This means two things: that no believer can lose his salvation; that no mature believer can lose his rewards. The registry of the names of believers in this dispensation will include their royal titles, royal titles earned by advancing from gate four to gate eight of the divine dynasphere. Hence the book of life is the registry of all believers in eternity, according to Philippians 4:3; Revelation 13:8; 17:8; 20:12,15; 21:27; 22:19. In history all members are registered in the book of life but at the point of their death, or in the case of the end of the Tribulation the baptism of fire, the unbeliever is blotted out of the book of life. The believer cannot be blotted out of the book of life, emphasising the permanence of his eternal state and the irrevocable eternal rewards which belong to him. So the one who has the order of the morning star also has a special royal title which distinguishes him from other believers, and his royal title will not be blotted out, another way of saying we are not going to all be equal in eternity. There will be inequality in the perfect environment of heaven and that means that royal titles will be used for ever and ever, and royal titles belong only to those believers who advance to maturity and therefore are in the order of chivalry.

Mature believers are going to be presented at the court of the third heaven after the judgment seat of Christ. The presentation begins with the intensive use of the conjunction kai. Then we have the future active indicative of the verb o(mologew, “in fact I will acknowledge.” O(mologew is the word translated “confess” in 1 John 1:9, and we have already seen that it means to acknowledge or cite. Now here is a public acknowledgment and the one who is going to do it is our Lord Jesus Christ.

There are two ways in which you can be presented at court. The first way is to actually be brought into the presence of the king (or the queen) and receive some investiture, be presented and recognised personally by the sovereign of the land. There is another way. Kings and queens in the past history of England have had bastards, lots of them. These people couldn't even go into court until they were given a coat of arms and a family name. "I will acknowledge" — that is what Richard II did for his cousins, the Beauforts, and that is what the Lord Jesus Christ will do for every mature believer; "in fact I will acknowledge," the predictive future anticipates and event which occurs between the Rapture and the second advent in heaven. The believer who is decorated with the order of the morning star is actually presented at court. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb by making the presentation. Our Lord Jesus Christ presents every morning star-holder personally to God the Father, "in the presence of the holy angels." God the Father knows all people, He is omniscient, but this goes beyond that as an honour. The presentation is made with the believer wearing the uniform of glory. The indicative mood is declarative for the court presentation in heaven while the Tribulation is occurring on earth, Revelation 6-18.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object from o)noma, which means "name," "person," "title," "knighthood." And with it we have a)utoj, which means "his name," "his title." He will be presented with his title.

Then we have a description of the court of heaven. It begins with the improper preposition of place e)nw pion, and it has two meanings in this context. With the Father [Pathr] it means in the presence of the Father; with angels [a)ggeloj] it is "before." "In the presence of my Father," genitive of relationship from e)gw, and that describes the court of heaven where the believer who is decorated with the order of the morning star is presented; "and before his angels," the same word, e)nw pion, this time plus a)ggeloj and the possessive genitive a)utoj. These are the elect angels who did not go astray when Lucifer started the first revolution in heaven.

So it should read in verse 5: "Thus the winner [mature believer] shall be clothed in white garments; and I will never blot his name out of the book of life; in fact I will acknowledge [the presentation of the morning star winners at the court of heaven] his title [new knighthood received at the judgment seat of Christ] in the presence of my Father and before his angels."

Verse 6, how to achieve all of these things. This is the articular present active participle of e)xw, "He who has." The definite article is used for a personal pronoun referring to the believer in Christ who from the point of salvation on has been equipped and supported with logistical grace and has made positive decisions with regard to what he has been given in logistical grace. The present tense is a static present emphasising the fact that everyone has ears totally apart from human merit which is analogous to the believer being sustained by logistical grace for perception of doctrine and perpetuation of momentum. Every believer has the same opportunity.

God provides for you everything you need to advance. If you do not it is your decision, not God's provision. The only reason there will be losers at the judgment seat of Christ is because people have made wrong decisions.

Momentum inside the divine dynasphere is the only means of achieving spiritual maturity and possessing maximum historical impact. The believer who attains maturity in the divine dynasphere wears the uniform of glory, is decorated with the order of the morning star, is actually given a coat of arms a patent which is registered in the book of life, a royal patent which can never be removed. He is also in the sphere of maximum happiness forever and ever. The maximum happiness in eternity is related to the new Jerusalem which hovers over planet earth in eternity, and access into new Jerusalem is only possible for mature believers. So there are even places in heaven where forever and ever certain people are restricted from going.

The uniform of honour in time is therefore parlayed into the uniform of glory at the judgment seat of Christ. The active voice: positive believers produce the action of the verb through the exploitation of logistical grace.

“an ear,” the accusative singular direct object of o)uj, a dual word which in the singular means you have ears, plural. If it is in the plural it means everyone else has ears. So we translate: “He who has an ear.” Just as the possession of ears is totally without human merit so the provision of logistical grace is totally apart from human works, ability or merit. Possession of ears is a reminder that we as believers are equipped with grace provision for learning doctrine, we have spiritual IQ related to the first three gates of the divine dynasphere. Gate one, the power for perception of doctrine, the filling of the Holy Spirit; Gate two is objectivity for perception of doctrine, impersonal love; Gate three is teachability, which is enforced and genuine humility. Note also that no one hears apart from human positive volition toward doctrine. The ear, then, represents the grace system for the perception of doctrine; gate four of the divine dynasphere. It is perception of doctrine at gate four plus the application of doctrine to momentum testing which results in advance to maturity and the guarantee of the order of the morning star in eternity.

Next we have the mandate, “let him hear,” the aorist active imperative of the verb a)kouw, used not in the present tense, keep on hearing, but as a constative aorist which gathers up in to one entirety every moment of positive volition you have in your lifetime. There is a lesson in the constative aorist: God isn't looking for hotshots, because no matter how smart, how talented, how beautiful, how attractive, how great, how powerful, how anything you might be, it means nothing to God or God's plan. God's plan calls for pluggers. You have to make decisions every day for doctrine, you can't make them once in a while. The people who advance to maturity are all pluggers. Pluggers are the people who really make it. The constative aorist reminds us of the fact that to advance to maturity you have to plug. You have to take in doctrine to day, tomorrow, the next day. The active voice: we have the third person suffix of the verb form and it indicates that positive believers residing in the divine dynasphere produce the action of the verb. The divine mandate, however, is addressed to all members of the royal family, not just some of them. The imperative mood of command is the overall mandate for the believer of this dispensation, the Church Age, to reside and function in the divine dynasphere — positive volition, right priorities, perception of doctrine.

With this we have the teaching ministry of God the Holy Spirit in the accusative neuter singular from the interrogative pronoun tij, which means “what sort of thing?” Bible doctrine. And then pneuma, referring to God the Holy Spirit, “what the Spirit.” And then what sort of thing the Spirit communicates, which is the present active indicative of the verb legw, which means to say, speak, communicate, sometimes teach. It comes from the Greek word logoj which means “word” and “doctrine” and similar connotations. The customary present tense is for what habitually occurs when the believer resides and functions inside the divine dynasphere, in God’s plan. Perception of doctrine at gate four is the function of the royal priesthood while application of doctrine is the function of the royal ambassadorship. The Holy Spirit produces the action of the verb, He provides the necessary spiritual IQ for perception of doctrine. No one is handicapped in learning doctrine because the IQ is provided by the Spirit. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the Spirit’s ministry in perception of doctrine. This is again the principle of power, objectivity and teachability. The power: the filling of the Spirit; the objectivity: the function of impersonal love at gate two; teachability: the function of enforced and genuine humility at gate three.

Then there is the classroom, the dative plural indirect object of the noun e)kklhsia, the local church which is the classroom. This is a dative of advantage. Not only must all teaching of doctrine as perception be related to residence in the divine dynasphere but also in the classroom of the local church. However, we have to be careful here because a building is not a church. A home can be a church, as in the ancient world. It is simply a place where believers gather together under strict academic discipline for perception of doctrine. In other words, good manners must prevail whether it is face to face teaching or whether it involves nonresident teaching through some mechanical convenience, a radio, television, tape recorder, etc. The local church is an academic classroom because it is the means of communicating doctrine. Therefore perception not only demands the filling of the Spirit but the recognition of the authority of the pastor, whether he is coming out of a tape recorder, over the radio, or whatever type of pastor the individual has, and strict academic discipline is still enjoined.

Translation: “He who has an ear, let him hear [positive volition toward doctrine] what sort of thing [content of Bible doctrine] the Spirit communicates to the churches.”

There is a hero that is anonymous today, the hero we have been studying in great detail, and that is the believer who in residence and function inside the divine dynasphere advances to spiritual maturity. This is the one who has the greatest impact on history and this is the responsibility of the royal family of God living on planet earth during the dispensation of the Church — a special mission, a special opportunity, the greatest privilege that anyone could have; first of all to be a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ, to know that you possess eternal life and that your salvation can never be canceled; to know that you have a mission and a purpose, not related to anything that will ever be cited for heroism in battle, but related to something that is far, far greater, for the great heroes of the Church Age are the anonymous heroes who advance to maturity.

Before we leave verse 6 we must recognise the importance of humility in our lives. "He who has an ear," that is the ability for comprehension, the two frontal lobes, the volition, everything that God has given you by way of physiology for comprehension; "let him hear" is a mandate for positive volition toward Bible doctrine on a daily basis, the only way of advancing to maturity and wearing the uniform of glory forever; "what sort of thing" is the content of Bible doctrine, and the communicator is the Holy Spirit. But the Holy Spirit has delegated the responsibility. The Holy Spirit at gate one acts as our IQ, the power of perception, but the Holy Spirit has delegated the communication of doctrine to those who are pastors of local churches. That means that if you are ever going to advance spiritually you are going to have to listen to some pastor.

Arrogance becomes the basis for the resistance of the truth. Humility is defined in our study as freedom from the cosmic system. The cosmic system is arrogance. Cosmic evangelism is one of the most successful forms of selling the world has ever known, and the reason that it is successful is that it inevitably appeals to the ego and, in some cases, the arrogance of the individual who is the victim. So cosmic evangelism is actually an appeal to arrogance. In some cases arrogance has to be developed in order for the appeal to be made, but inevitably people who are preoccupied with self, people who are stuck on themselves, people who really are perfunctory in their attendance and in their reception of doctrine, are caught up in cosmic involvement.

You have no attitude to Bible doctrine without humility. We have seen that verse six is the means of advancing to spiritual maturity, the means of contributing to historical uptrend, the means of personal blessing by association as well as collective blessing by association.

Humility is defined as freedom from the cosmic system. The maintenance of humility demands the rebound technique. No one can recover from cosmic one and cosmic two apart from rebound. Humility is a state of thinking but humility above all is recognition of true authority in life, and submitting to that authority regardless of any personality conflict or unfairness in the function of that authority. Humility must not be confused with self-effacement or asceticism. Self-effacement and asceticism is hypocrisy, it is arrogance, it is self-righteous arrogance. They are not only negative as far as humility is concerned but they are very definitely positive as far as arrogance is concerned.

Humility is capacity for life; humility is capacity for love; humility is capacity for happiness and, therefore, humility is the potential for success for love, for happiness, for greatness. Humility has a key always so that it is recognizable. It must never be confused with pseudo spirituality or with self-effacement or with asceticism. The key to humility is authority. What do you do with authority? What is your attitude toward authority? We were born to be happy because we were born under the principle of humility. The physical birth, the life which we received after birth, was given to us by God, but that life was put into the human soul after birth. Some people are born with good parents and some people are born with bad parents. The point is that you, no matter what kind of parents you have, have no control over that at all — the unfairness that might exist or the fairness, the wisdom or the idiocy. No one has exactly the same parents as someone else. But we fail to recognise the really important thing about parents, especially when we are children, and that is their very existence is the key to whether we start life with humility or arrogance. When you have too many arrogant people and they have no capacity for love, for arrogance destroys capacity for love, then they go in for promiscuity and lasciviousness. Lasciviousness and promiscuity is born from the fact that people reject authority, that they set themselves up as an idol. Therefore this arrogance becomes one of the bases for social degeneration. Why do we have so much promiscuity in life today? Why are things that were once rejected now acceptable in society? The answer is very simple: people have become arrogant, and arrogance includes promiscuity.

Granted, some parents are idiotic and they want their children to “love” them, and they spend all of their time catering to them and they never discipline them. That is what we call spoiling. You can’t spoil a child by giving him gifts, you can only spoil a child by withholding discipline when necessary. We have permissiveness which became a philosophical application to life and we finally discovered that parents were no longer acting as parents, and they allowed their children to get away with this or that, they didn’t spank them because it might injure their “little personalities”. And we are paying for this now because we have by-passed the first system of authority. Prisons are overcrowded, and they are for two reasons: they don’t execute criminals, and parents were permissive when they had the first crack at the little child.

As a parent you should know what he should touch and shouldn’t touch; you should know what he should eat and not eat; you know what he should wear and not wear. Or do you? If you do know a few things then you should say, “No you can’t do that,” and No is what produces great people, not Yes. “No, you can’t touch that,” “No, you can’t go with your friends, they’re idiots and they’re going to get in trouble,” “No, you can’t do this”, “No, you can’t do that.” “No” is the developer of virtue because “No” and respect for the word “No” from authority is the basis for beginning humility. And people who have true capacity for love and true capacity for happiness and success, who have all of these things and still have the great virtue of humility have learned to respect authority. They start with the parents and this is the whole concept of the home. The home is organised humility. The parents are the authority in the home and therefore enforced humility and positive volition toward the authority of the parents results in genuine humility, and no one can make it in life without genuine humility.

No one is born with genuine humility, it is not inherent, it is acquired through a system related to the laws of divine establishment. It is important to acquire for genuine humility is the basis for not only virtue in life but it is the secret to happiness. And it is the only way in which you can cope with the realities of life, for where freedom exists there cannot be equality. Where tyranny exists there is a superficial quality, not a real one. But equality means slavery; freedom means inequality. The great sign of freedom is the fact that some fail and some succeed. And this is true in the Christian way of life. Some believers succeed in the Christian life and some fail. Humility is the basis for orientation to authority and therefore for orientation to the grace of God.

Since humility must be attained in life God has provided the potter's wheel of authority. Romans 9:19-21, "Therefore you will say to me, 'Why does he [God] still find fault with us? For who has resisted his purpose?' On the contrary, O mankind, who are you who answers back to God?" Answering back to God is rejection of authority, therefore arrogance. It is a sign of cosmic involvement. "Shall the thing formed say to him who formed it, 'Why have you made me like this?' Or does not the potter possess authority over the clay, from the same lump to make on the one hand a vessel for the purpose of honour" There is the invisible uniform of honour in life; "on the other hand, another vessel for the purpose of dishonour" — cosmic involvement for the born-again believer.

Whether a person is a vessel of honour or dishonour depends upon his attitude toward authority and therefore genuine humility. The potter is God; the potter's wheel is the principle of authority invented by God as the environment for freedom. And just as the chicken came before the egg so authority came before freedom. You cannot authority without freedom; you cannot have freedom without authority, they must stand together. Freedom without authority is anarchy; authority without freedom is tyranny, and therefore the potter's wheel is divine authority delegated under the laws of divine establishment, and it begins at birth; all of us have parents.

This is why in Colossians 3:20, "Children, obey your parents in all things, for this pleases the Lord." Life begins with the imputation of human life to the target or home, the soul plus the imputation of Adam's original sin which is to the genetically-formed old sin nature. God also provides the basis for overcoming the handicap — authority.

Again, the home is the principle of organizational humility. In the home are parents, the authority for enforced humility; and finally from enforced humility comes genuine humility which is the key to happiness in this life. The parents train the children in the use of restraint by volition, poise, self-control, self-discipline, the enforced humility by which one's volition has maximum function under freedom as an adult. The organisation of the humility of the home, then, provides environment for blessing in the future. A lot of people are handicapped because they have rejected the authority of their parents. Their attitude toward their parents determines their future. This is the basis for so many people failing in life, they have rejected authority.

The provision of humility at spiritual birth begins with the imputation of eternal life. God imputes two things at the point of salvation. Eternal life is imputed to the human spirit which is created by God the Holy Spirit, and one half of divine integrity or holiness, God's righteousness, is imputed as the recipient of all blessing. So a new authority comes into the life called grace. Grace is a pipeline that goes from the justice of God to the righteousness of God in you. All blessing which you receive comes from God, unearned, undeserved, and it goes to the righteousness of God so that God is not compromised with regard to His essence. You can't give money to be blessed by God; you can't work to be blessed by God. This grace system becomes a system of enforced humility. People do not realise that when they are saved by grace through faith it is the beginning of a whole new system of authority. The authority in your life becomes grace, you can't earn or deserve anything from God. You can have capacity to appreciate what He gives you and that comes through doctrine. And so we have the same principle of authority all over again. Enforced humility is the principle of positive volition toward Bible doctrine and submission to teaching of the Word of God. Persistent positive volition toward doctrine results in both spiritual maturity and genuine humility. Spiritual maturity requires two basic virtues: genuine humility and concentration. Genuine humility is positive volition toward doctrine which submits to the teaching ministry of the pastor; concentration is the function of the filling of the Spirit and genuine humility. That is why we have passages like Proverbs 3:33-35, "The curse of the Lord is on the house of evil," that is the home where arrogance is inculcated instead of enforced humility, "but he blesses the home of the righteous," organisational plus enforced humility, "He makes war against the arrogant but he gives grace to the humble. The wise person [genuine humility] will inherit honour [the integrity or learning doctrine plus loyalty as a virtue or applying doctrine] but fools carry away dishonour," the fool is the person who rejects authority in life. This is why we have, "God makes war against the arrogant but he gives grace to the humble," James 4:6; 1 Peter 5:5,6. Humbling yourself "under the mighty hand of God" is the recognition of divine authority and the manner by which He has delegated it in life.

So our passage in Revelation 3:6 says, "He who has an ear let him hear." This is a call for humility; this is a call for positive volition; this is a call for a recognition of the authority of the Word of God.

As far as we as believers are concerned there are three absolutes of humility and honour. They are the parent, the personal volition and the pastor. The parent: the home, the beginning of life; the pastor: the new life; the person involved, these are the three absolutes. The parents relate to the laws of divine establishment; the pastor relates to the perception of doctrine under the principle of GAP; personal volition relates to the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. When you believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, positive volition, then you are born again and spiritually you come under another system. Just as you had your home as organisational humility you now have the local church or its equivalent as your organisational humility. Just as parents represented authority for enforced humility, so you have a pastor with the authority in teaching for enforced humility in the spiritual life. And just as you responded to the authority of your parents for genuine humility, so you respond to the teaching of the pastor for genuine humility, the advance to maturity. Without this, of course, you will never make it in the spiritual life just as you haven't in human life. In the environment of the home the parents are the system of authority; in the environment of the soul the person's volition is his authority, so the individual must constantly make decisions. Just as the individual as a child made decisions in the home to obey parents, so the individual in salvation makes decisions with regard to doctrine by which he advances to maturity; without that humility he doesn't. His personal volition is regulated by his genuine humility. That is why believers make good decisions resulting in opening options for greater and greater decisions, and this is why they make bad decisions destroying those options. Again it is a matter of residence. Either you reside inside the divine dynasphere or you reside in the cosmic system.

The perfect example of humility as a virtue of life is given in Philippians 2:5-8, This is the key to it all, "Keep on thinking," humility is a thinking system; "this within you which was also resident in Christ Jesus, who, though he eternally existed in the essence of God, he did not think equality with God a profit to be seized and held, but he deprived himself of the proper function of deity” — doctrine of kenosis, “when he had received the form of a servant, when he had been born into the likeness of mankind. In fact, although he was discovered in outward appearance as a man, he humbled himself by becoming obedient to the point of spiritual death, that is, the death of the cross”. Here is our Lord Jesus Christ, eternal God, the unique person of the universe. In His humanity He humbled Himself; He was born into a home; He recognised the authority of His parents and He responded to it. He became mature very rapidly. He also was born into the plan of God; the plan of God was organised humility, the authority of God the Father: enforced humility. God the Father’s plan: Go to the cross; bear the sins of the world. And because He was positive to the Father’s authority [genuine humility] as He hung upon the cross bearing our sins and taking our place, doing the thing that makes us different from everyone else in the universe. That is, because of His work on the cross, we possess eternal life. And we face an issue: as believers we can be involved in the cosmic system and be arrogant; we can be involved in the divine dynasphere with humility. Humility is a daily decision, recognising certain authorities in life, recognising and appreciating them, using our free will to recognise the authority of establishment, spiritual authority, authority in the vicinity of our own personal modus operandi. So the principle behind verse six never departs from concept humility.

Verse 7 — a mandate to the pastor through the apostle John from the Lord Jesus Christ, the prince ruler of the Church. All of the seven letters in Revelation chapters two and three all begin the same way with the conjunction kai, which has numerous meanings and several grammatical connotations. Here it is simply a connective conjunction and it is translated “and.” Next is the dative singular definite article toi, it is the generic use of the definite article used to define a specific category. The specific category is what is classified as the second estate, the clergy, ministers, pastors of local churches. With this we also have the dative singular indirect object from the noun a)ggeloi, which is definitely mistranslated. The problem is that it is transliterated, and this is not addressed to an angel, it is addressed to a messenger which is the meaning of a)ggeloi. A)ggeloi is used here in a technical sense for a special messenger, the pastor of the church at Philadelphia. So we translate: “And to the messenger.” While it is in the singular it will refer to any future pastors of the church at Philadelphia. At the time John was the pastor, though not face to face. He was the nonresident pastor. All of that will change when John departs from the scene and then, of course, they will have a series of pastors.

“And to the messenger” refers to future pastors and therefore it is an encouragement to future pastors. Any profession, any job, any business requires that as a function of leadership there must be encouragement to everyone who participates. In a business everyone must be encouraged. People should be motivated for other than monetary reasons to do the best possible job, whether it is an office boy replacing the rubber bands and paper clips, or whether it is someone working the machinery, or whether it is an executive. Every facet of an organisation should receive encouragement to contribute to motivation. When this is lacking, of course, people become dissatisfied and become arrogant, and the greatest enemy to efficiency in business is arrogance. When people become arrogant they become inefficient at whatever their job profile requires. The motivation in the local church is related to the content of Bible doctrine. Anything else becomes false motivation. In the church you live your life as unto the Lord and therefore one's motivation has to relate to Bible doctrine. Your motivation for life must come inevitably from doctrine and this why a believer who is positive toward doctrine should do well in anything simply because he is motivated to do well.

The motivation is provided for pastors to keep on teaching doctrine in this phrase, "And to the messenger." More than that, of course, the whole trend of history depends upon how well the pastor teaches and how well the people who hear the teaching respond. The uptrends of history depend on this factor. So we have a dative of indirect object indicating the ones in whose interest the information is given. At the same time we also have the dative of advantage. It is to the advantage of every congregation to have good doctrinal teaching.

With this we have the genitive singular of relationship from the noun e)kklhsia, meaning "assembly," and it does not connote a building. It refers to an assembly under almost any circumstance as long as it has the ingredients: two or three are gathered together and there is a pastor communicating doctrine — "of the church."

And then we have the prepositional phrase , e)n plus the locative of Filadelfia. Philadelphia was located 28 miles south east of Sardis in Lydia. The city was founded in BC 189 by Eumenes II who was the king of Lydia, and he founded it in honour of his brother, Attalus II, whose faithfulness earned him the title of Filadelfoj. The area is famous for earthquakes. In AD 17 the city was completely destroyed by an earthquake. It was built on the Cogamus River and stood on a terrace about 650 feet above the river. Behind the city were famous volcanic bluffs and across the river was very fertile land which came from volcanic activity. The volcanic ash had produced a phenomenal vineyard-type soil and they produced the finest wines of the Roman empire. After the earthquake the city was rebuilt and called Neo-kaisaria which means "New Caesar." During the reign of Vespasian the name was changed to Flavia for the wife of Vespasian. The city is also called Little Athens because it has magnificent temples and buildings.

As the centre of the wine industry they worshipped a god of wine who in the Latin was called Bacchus and in the Greek was called Dionysus. Philadelphia was also the centre of a very large Jewish population. The church at Philadelphia had a very long life lasting 1300 years. The church was started in AD 90 and it went to AD 1390. Frederick Barbarossa visited the church on his way to the crusades in 1190. Twice Philadelphia was besieged by the Turks in 1306 and 1324 but managed to retain its independence. Finally in 1390 it was captured by the combined forces of the Turks and the Byzantines. In 1403 Tamerline captured it and he built a wall around it with the corpses of the citizens. By that time there was no church in Philadelphia.

The modern name for Philadelphia, there is still a town there, is Allah-shehir [The city of God]. One quarter of the population today is Greek and it is the centre of a famous Greek Orthodox Church. One of the most famous modern industries in Philadelphia is that they have one of the greatest licorice factories in the world. On the terrace above the river where the original city stood are the ruins of a castle and the walls can still be seen. Among them is the foundation of the early church and someone decided that one of the pillars ought to be pushed upright. So if you go that way today and you go to the area where the church is located there is one pillar standing, and they will quote to you from the Greek in Revelation and they will try to make you think that it is the pillar of this passage, but it isn't at all. The pillar that we are going to study is in heaven and it is a permanent history book, so it is not quite the same.

Verse 7 starts out, "To the messenger [future pastors] of the church in Philadelphia." And then we have the aorist active imperative of grafw, "write," the mandate given to the apostle John. The culminative aorist tense views the writing of the book of Revelation in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of its existing results — the completion of the canon of scripture, therefore the textbook of history from the time of John to the end of time, the encouragement of future pastors to teach doctrine, a message about historical trends. Remember the entire book of Revelation is addressed to the Church.

Later on when we get to chapter six and get into eschatology and start to study the Tribulation and its various aspects we will have to explain why so much detail about the Tribulation when we are not going to be here for it. The answer is very simple: the inevitable results of removing the Church, the body of Christ, from the earth is to remove the basis for historical blessing, historical uptrend, historical prosperity. Once the Church is removed there will be no historical prosperity during the Tribulation. The reason the Tribulation is such a horrible period of history is simply because there is no pivot; there are no mature believers, royal family. There will be a few mature believers in the Tribulation and there will be most unusual things happening, sensational things, but one of the great principles that we are going to learn from Revelation chapters 6-18 is that sensationalism is not spiritual advance. Sensationalism leads to emotionalism; emotionalism leads to degeneracy. Sensationalism today is out as far as spiritual advance is concerned; it is those who plug, those who take in doctrine today, tomorrow and the next day, those who are positive toward the Word of God are the ones who have the great historical impact. So we have chapters 6-18 to show us that all kinds of exciting things, like angels evangelising, Moses and Elijah coming back, demonstrate to us that sensationalism is instability historically. It is emotionalism. When emotionalism gets out of hand you have historical disaster.

The aorist tense of grafw tells us that the result of this is going to be a completed textbook of history, the message of historical trends, the implication of historical impact plus the glorification of our Lord Jesus Christ. The active voice: the apostle John under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit produces the action of the verb, and this is the imperative of command, a mandate to the great apostle to write. Now what is the command? The next two words gives us the gist of it, tadh legei. Legei is the present active indicative of the verb legw, and tadh is the accusative plural from o(de). Legw would come first in an English sentence because it is the verb, and o(de) would come after the verb because it is the object of the verb. The two together means simply, "communicates these things." Obviously we will have to look for a subject and we will get one later on. The verb is the aoristic tense, it sets forth an event as now occurring, therefore it is punctiliar action in present time. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality.

Then comes the accusative neuter plural direct object, o(de, a demonstrative pronoun used originally as an introductory formula for the decrees of the Persian kings translated into Greek. Here is an introductory formula for our Lord's estimate of the situation in Philadelphia. The translation so far has neither a subject nor a relative clause to identify the subject. These will be filled out later. What we have so far is: "And to the messenger [the future pastors] of the church in Philadelphia write."

"communicates these things." Now who communicates what? That comes up next. We are going to get a subject. This is both the subject and the relative clause which modifies the subject. The first line starts out O(a(gioj o(a)lhqinoj and we have a problem here which stems from the fact that the word o(which is used twice as the subject has several possibilities. It is the nominative masculine singular from the definite article; it is also the nominative and accusative neuter singular from the relative pronoun o(j. What settles the matter is the fact that the noun which follows the first two are the nominative masculine singular, hence the subject is in the first line and the next line will be the relative pronoun.

The subject: O(a(gioj o(a)lhqinoj. The nominative singular of a(gioj is the first part of the subject, o(a(gioj, used here as a substantive although it is an adjective used as a noun. Specifically it refers to the Lord Jesus Christ. It also refers to the Lord Jesus Christ under the concept of His integrity. "Holy" is used for the integrity of God. The one who is speaking has perfect integrity, therefore it refers to the fact that Jesus Christ controls history and that virtue will never be destroyed or overcome in history; and that historical uptrend depends upon the believer in the Lord Jesus Christ living inside the divine dynasphere and producing both motivational functional virtue. It is also a reference to our Lord Jesus Christ, not only in His deity as God, but as true humanity in the hypostatic union. "Holy" refers in the hypostatic union to His life in the prototype divine dynasphere producing impeccability and perfect virtue.

With this we have an appositional nominative a)lhqinoj, also and adjective. It means "truth" or "true one". It corresponds to the Hebrew emeth. Both of these words, Greek and Hebrew, mean stability, perpetuity, faithfulness, fidelity, true as opposed to false. We can translate it: "the truthful, trustworthy one," "The holy one, the truthful trustworthy one [our Lord Jesus Christ], communicates these things."

Now we have a subject. All we need is a relative clause and the relative clause, by the way, is quoted from Isaiah 22:22. Corrected translation from the Hebrew: "Then I will place the key of the house of David on his shoulder. When he opens no one will shut, when he shuts no one will open". This is quoted as a relative clause now related to the Lord Jesus Christ, though it was not, in Isaiah, related to our Lord; it was related to a replacement of a very arrogant, ambitious man by the name of Shebna. King Hezekiah had appointed as his prime minister, Shebna, a very arrogant, vain person. Shebna's arrogance increased as prime minister and he became involved in the cosmic system and had to be replaced. He was replaced by Eliakim. And the way that they replaced was they talked about the keys of David. Hezekiah, who was of the house [dynasty] of David simply took the keys from Shebna and gave them to Eliakim. Now Eliakim is the prime minister, and when he opens no one shuts, and when he shuts no one opens. The responsibility and the authority of Eliakim is described in Isaiah 22:22.

But this verse goes beyond Eliakim as prime minister of Judah under Hezekiah to our Lord Jesus Christ who will have that same power and authority after His ascension in heaven, and on earth when He returns for the second advent. The opening and shutting of doors refers to the highest power and authority for rulership. The reference to David is the Davidic dynasty. Hezekiah was in the line of David and so is the humanity of our Lord Jesus Christ. So it is a reference to David, to the Davidic dynasty in connection with this context: Hezekiah was in the line of David, therefore he could delegate authority and he gave the keys of David from one prime minister, Shebna, to another, Eliakim. King Hezekiah prophetically represents the Lord here, and the Lord Jesus Christ is going to do exactly the same thing at the second advent. He is going to give to all of those who hold the order of the morning star rulership in this world so that the anonymous heroes of the Church Age, those who crack the maturity barrier in the Church Age, will in the future at the second advent be famous and well-known. The Millennium will be one thousand years of perfect environment on the earth and perfect environment will include nationalism. Our Lord rules the world under the principle of nationalism, not internationalism. That means that the key of David is going to be delegated to every person who wins the order of the morning star through advance to maturity in this dispensation.

So we have in our context in Revelation 3:7 this relative clause which referred to King Hezekiah, as it was found in Isaiah 22:22, but here it refers to the King of kings and Lord of lords at the second advent.

The exegesis is relatively simple. We have an articular present active participle from the verb εἶχον, and it means to have or to have and to hold. Here it is translated "He who keeps on having." The definite article is used as a personal pronoun and refers to our Lord Jesus Christ in contrast to the context of Isaiah 22:22 where it refers to Eliakim as the prime minister under King Hezekiah. The present tense is a static present, it represents a condition as perpetually existing after the second advent of Christ when the Davidic covenant is fulfilled. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb and the participle is circumstantial. With this participle we have a direct object, the accusative singular of the noun κλεῖς, translated "key," referring to authority. Plus the indeclinable proper noun Δαυὶδ, 'David.' "Who keeps on having the key of David," a reference to the authority of our Lord Jesus Christ which He will have at the second advent when He comes to fulfill the Davidic covenant, and the delegation of authority to those believers who hold the order of the morning star. This is a fulfillment not only of the Davidic covenant but of the system of rulership which will exist in the Millennium. Authority is necessary even for perfect environment. Without authority there can be neither freedom nor privacy, nor the possession of property, nor the legitimate function of life. So authority is absolutely necessary to guarantee the sanctity of the laws of divine establishment.

Principle

1. The Lord Jesus Christ rules Israel with that divine authority called the key of David, an authority which also means He is delegating the rule of Gentile nations to mature believers of this dispensation.
2. The Lord Jesus Christ also rules the world with the authority stated in Revelation 2:26,27. Our Lord Jesus Christ receives authority from the Father to rule the world and those who receive the order of the morning star are presented at court. In the presentation at court the name of the one who holds the title that goes with the order of the morning star is not blotted out of the record of chivalry and, at that time, every mature believer is going to be assigned a nation that will exist in the Millennium. So in this presentation to God the Father and all the holy angels there will also be the assignment so that at the second advent believers who have cracked the maturity barrier will eventually go to their assignment and they will rule under the authority of the Lord Jesus Christ. They will not only have the order of the morning star presented in the court of heaven during the Tribulation but they will carry the key of David.
3. The perfect environment, then, of the Millennium still demands the function of authority to coexist with man's volition and the old sin nature.
4. The recognition and acceptance of authority is a matter of human volition both in the Church Age and in the Millennium.
5. The only difference is that in the Millennium all authority will be legitimate since Satan is incarcerated for a thousand years and the cosmic system will not function during the Millennial reign of Christ. The genius of Satan and his cosmic system will be absent from the earth during the Millennium.
6. The acceptability of authority in life is still dependent on human volition in the Millennium, as illustrated by the Gog revolution which occurs at the end of the Millennium when Satan is released from his prison. There will be a great revolution and human volition will turn against the perfect rule of our Lord.
7. The authority of our Lord Jesus Christ as the ruler of the world and its delegation to certain ones, like those who hold the order of the morning star, is still a matter of human volition. Whether people accept the authority of those who rule them or not is still a matter of their volition.
8. Human volition under perfect environment will reject the authority of our Lord and the authority He has delegated under the concept "key of David." This is demonstrated by the God revolution at the end of the Millennium — Revelation 20:7-9.

Man without truth has no capacity for perfect environment. Negative volition will enjoy 1000 years of perfect environment in the Millennium and still reject the source of it in the Gog revolution. All historical disaster is the result of individual and collective decisions for evil. At the beginning of human history in the garden of Eden the original parents had perfect environment and they used their free will to reject God's authority and eat of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. By so doing they accepted the authority of Satan, an authority which only existed in the angelic realm over fallen angels, but that was extended to include planet earth. At the end of human history in the Millennium people are still, and always will be, the products of their own decisions. Perfect environment will make no difference, they will still reject the perfect environment. The reason for this is arrogance, a facet of arrogance called boredom, preoccupation with self. Crime will be restricted and restrained by our Lord and therefore they will have to wait until Satan, the arch-criminal of all time, is released. Strict discipline and law enforcement is and always has been very necessary to keep the human race in line so that each one of us can enjoy the freedom to fail or succeed, so that each one can have his privacy, so that each one can recognise and fulfill the doctrine of the sacredness of property and the sacredness of human life. We have noted the principle that no one can rule with a golden sceptre unless he rules with an iron sceptre. Society will only recognise the sanctity of life, property and freedom when society is restrained by legitimate authority, by just laws, by good law enforcement and discipline based on integrity. And under the principle that the cross came before the crown no one has greater integrity than our Lord Jesus Christ, and no one is more qualified to rule in the last 1000 years of human history.

Our closing phrase in verse 7 is a quotation from Isaiah 22:22. We begin with the articular present active participle of the verb a)noigw, which means to open. The definite article does double duty, it is both a personal pronoun and used as a relative pronoun. The present tense is a futuristic present, it denotes an event, namely the future rule of our Lord Jesus Christ. It hasn't occurred yet but it is regarded as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as already coming to pass. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb in the Millennium through the use of His power and authority as the ruler of this world. The participle is circumstantial for a positive policy and the mandates of the Millennium.

After a connective conjunction kai we have the nominative singular subject, o)udeij. It is taken from an adjective. It is an adjective used as a substantive and it is translated "no one." Then comes the future active indicative of the verb kleiw, which means to shut. The future tense is an imperative future, it expresses a mandate involving futurity as both a Greek and Hebrew idiom. The active voice: the Millennial population produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of fact. Our Lord's authority in the Millennium is absolute; He opens the door and no one can shut it.

Then we have the reverse. This time the present active participle of kleiw with the present active indicative of a)noigw, so the two verbs are reversed. It is the same futuristic present of the participle and the same present active indicative, only it is a customary present this time of a)noigw. The customary present denotes what may be reasonably expected to occur in the Millennium under the authority and the rulership of our Lord Jesus Christ.

When our Lord shuts a door there is no way that anyone can open it. This is the function of absolute authority.

Translation of verse 7: “And to the messenger [future pastors] of the church in Philadelphia write; the holy one [the Lord Jesus Christ], the truthful trustworthy one, who keeps on having the key of David, he who opens and no one will shut; and he who shuts, and no one will open, communicates these things.

Principle

1. In the last half of verse seven we have the absolute power and authority of our Lord Jesus Christ in the last 1000 years of human history, the Millennium. At the second advent our Lord Jesus Christ will execute a coup de tat in which Satan is set aside as the ruler of this world. Our Lord replaces him and this is an expression of the perfect absolute authority necessary to give everyone the same amount of privacy.
2. Our Lord is perfect, perfect in His deity, perfect in His humanity, perfect in His hypostatic union. Therefore His power is perfect. It is impossible for our perfect Lord to distort the power He possesses. Only a perfect person can administer absolute power with perfect integrity. Our Lord has perfect integrity, His authority functions from perfect integrity.
3. Our Lord Jesus Christ therefore rules from perfect integrity and honour. Therefore He does not distort or abuse His power and His authority.
4. The power factor remains a major issue in contemporary history. Power and authority is always an issue in the subject of historical trends.
5. The power factor begins with individuals and moves from individuals to groups, organisations, governments. Power and authority are abused and distorted into tyranny through arrogance. Arrogance: gate one, cosmic one, is motivating evil.
6. Then you have arrogance at the other end. You have arrogance in society and you have arrogance in authority because an arrogant society elects arrogant officials. When you have a majority of arrogant people they gravitate to arrogant candidates so that arrogance is at both ends. Arrogance is in authority and arrogance predominates in society. Arrogance abuses power; arrogance abuses authority. And so a people who are predominantly arrogant inevitably bring upon themselves a dictatorship.
7. No one can assume authority or control of any organisation, or fulfill that responsibility, while under the influence of arrogance.
8. Arrogance corrupts power; arrogance corrupts authority, both in individuals and in groups. It isn't power that corrupts, it is arrogance that corrupts.

9. Many organisations were founded to correct abuses, to solve problems of evil, but when these organisations are carried away by arrogance they distort their power into a system of tyranny. Illustration: the labour unions. Unions were founded to correct certain abuses, but they have become powerful and they have turned their power into tyranny.

10. The key to avoiding tyranny in the use of power and authority is individual humility and integrity. No nation can survive the arrogance of any group that has too much power, including the church.

11. Because of that same human impeccability which qualified our Lord Jesus Christ to go to the cross in the first advent, our Lord is qualified to rule the world at the second advent.

The emphasis on our Lord's rulership in this passage is the fact that He is true humanity and perfect humanity in His resurrection body. He is true humanity living inside the divine dynasphere, that is the basis for impeccability in His humanity. As God Jesus Christ is not able to sin; as humanity in the divine dynasphere He is able not to sin. Not able to sin plus able not to sin equals impeccability.

Human history began with Adam ruling the world and human history will terminate with the last Adam [Jesus Christ] ruling the world. Adam ruled to world under perfect environment and the last Adam will rule the world under perfect environment. The perfect environment of the garden terminated with Adam's fall when he lost the rulership of the world to Satan and there will never be perfect environment again until the second advent. The abnormal part of history is the fact that from the fall of Adam to the second advent of Christ a super angel by the name of Lucifer or Satan rules the world. Our Lord Jesus Christ as world ruler will come at the second advent. He will delegate authority to certain ones who are also perfect in their resurrection bodies. This explains why believers of the Church Age receive a new knighthood in the order of chivalry, the order of the morning star, the uniform of glory, and the escutcheon of glory, the heraldry which will give them authority to rule in the Millennium. Today these believers who advance to maturity are anonymous heroes but in the Millennium, the last 1000 years of history, they will be the most famous human beings on earth. They are going to rule with Christ. All rulers of the Millennium will be in resurrection bodies, the state of ultimate sanctification, therefore no ruler in the Millennium will be corruptible. The state of ultimate sanctification means that they are incorruptible, honourable, ruling with wisdom and integrity under the authority of our Lord Jesus Christ. There will be no corruption from arrogance or vanity.

Today in the Church Age human leadership is protected by humility and integrity but in the Millennium human leadership is protected by the possession of a resurrection body plus the uniform of glory, plus the order of the morning star, plus the new order of chivalry. Being famous will not corrupt the anonymous heroes of the Church Age.

Verse 8, "I know thy works." We begin with the perfect o)ida used as a present active indicative. It is correctly translated "I know." The present tense of duration denotes what has begun in eternity past and continues into time, the function of divine omniscience. The active voice: Jesus Christ as God produces the action of the verb. The declarative indicative is for the reality and the veracity of God's estimate of the situation. With this we have a direct object, the accusative plural from the noun e)rgon, and while it means works or production it also means accomplishments and it refers to Christian modus operandi, Christian modus vivendi. The word "your" is the possessive genitive from the personal pronoun su, and we are going to translate that, "I know your accomplishments."

The fact that the Lord Jesus Christ is eternal God means there never was a time when He did not have a correct estimate of the situation for everyone who has ever lived. Therefore we need to go back and review the concept of the verb "I know." It refers to the divine attribute of knowledge. Actually the divine attribute of knowledge is divided into three categories: self-knowledge, omniscience and foreknowledge. All three belong to God. Since all three members of the Trinity are eternal they have always had self-knowledge, always had omniscience and have always had foreknowledge. In our passage it is referring to the self-knowledge, omniscience and foreknowledge of God the Son.

In the divine attribute of knowledge the first category is self-knowledge. Under that principle God is eternal and therefore His knowledge is eternal. God is sovereign, therefore His knowledge is infinitely superior to angelic or human perception, as well as angelic or human genius. Time has nothing to do with God's knowledge. In other words, the future is as perspicuous as the past. Since God is a person He possesses with this knowledge self-consciousness and self-determination. Therefore God as a person acts rationally with His absolute will, His perfection, His divine integrity. God is Himself and under the principle of self-knowledge therefore He knows Himself to be beyond comparison with any creature who has ever existed. Because God is infinite His knowledge has neither boundary nor limitation. Our knowledge is related to the past or observation of the future through either rationalism or empiricism with the present, and we speculate about the future.

God's knowledge has nothing to do with time. What is going to happen 100 years from now is known perfectly by God — what every person in the world will be thinking, how they will be motivated, what they will do, what they will say. God's knowledge is never complicated by ignorance or absurdity. One of the greatest problems with human knowledge is that when we know a little we often assume that a little is a lot. Therefore we add to what knowledge we have gained arrogance, and therefore limit and destroy any perspicacity in the future. This is true with Bible doctrine or in almost any subject. This is why so many people today who are an expert in knowledge in some area immediately assume that they are an expert about every area, and therefore they make dogmatic statements that are incorrect, inaccurate and are related to ignorance. Yet the people who do it are smart in their own field. Example: These days the press interview some prominent person and quote them as an expert on whatever the topic happens to be.

So God is never complicated by ignorance or absurdity. He exists eternally, He is unsustained by Himself or any other source, and therefore His knowledge is as inalterable as He Himself is. God cannot change and therefore He cannot change His knowledge. His knowledge about everything is perfect, not related to time in any way. God's knowledge precedes both time and space therefore God's knowledge is not subject to either time or space. So when our Lord Jesus Christ speaking as God says, "I know," He is referring first of all to this principle: God's knowledge cannot be more or less than it is. God's knowledge is related to His veracity, His faithfulness, His mercy, His justice, His righteousness. God's knowledge exists therefore first of all in self-knowledge. God's self-knowledge is related to the other members of the Trinity as well as to Himself. God has eternally known Himself — in this case it is God the Son; He has also eternally known God the Father and God the Holy Spirit. He has perfect subjective knowledge of self and all of His attributes of deity plus how they function in relationship to self and to other members of the Trinity. He has perfect objective knowledge about the other members of the Trinity.

The second category of God's knowledge is omniscience, the one that is pertinent to our passage — "I know your production [accomplishments]." The omniscience of God is definitely in focus here. While God's self-knowledge is related to His own divine attributes and to the other members of the Trinity omniscience relates to creatures. God knew all about all creatures long before they were created. It is defined as God's objective knowledge of the universe and all of its creatures.

Since the divine decrees establish reality omniscience includes all that is in the divine decrees plus all that is not in the divine decrees. In eternity past the omniscience of God knew every thought, every decision, every action of every creature. The omniscience of God fed that into the computer of divine decrees but He also knew the alternatives. You could have gone to three colleges; you chose one. What would have happened if you had gone to the other two? You could have married five girls but you chose one. What would have happened if you had chosen any of the other four girls? God can tell you if you had chosen the other way down to the last generation of the Millennium. But in the divine decrees we only have the printout of what you actually think and do, of how you are motivated, what you say, and how that relates to what other people in your periphery do say and think simultaneously at any point in history. We have been studying another printout of the divine decrees called historical trends for the Church Age — the interrelationship of all peoples at any given time in history.

Remember that time has nothing to do with omniscience. The future is as perspicuous as the past. The omniscience of God therefore knows all of the alternatives of history under the category of probables. So what is reality in history goes into the divine decrees; what is probability is also known to God but is not entered into the decrees since it didn't happen. So you have reality and probability and reality, and all reality goes into the divine decrees and all probability is known to the omniscience of God. This is how we distinguish between the omniscience of God and the third category of divine knowledge which is foreknowledge and which is entirely different from omniscience. The omniscience of God therefore knows the alternatives of history under the category of probability. Omniscience therefore knows in every case what individual decisions might have been different — what thoughts, what actions. Omniscience includes the actual — reality fed into the computer — and the possible — the alternatives that could have occurred but did not occur.

Omniscience is defined therefore as follows: God knows perfectly, eternally and simultaneously all that is knowable, both the actual and the possible.

God does not interfere. He knows which way your free will is going to go, what decisions you are going to make but He doesn't reach down and turn a button in your soul and say no. God allows us the freedom to fail or succeed. He provides warning for failure; He provides encouragement for success. Inevitably therefore logistical grace to the winner becomes supergrace. Logistical grace for the loser becomes divine discipline. But He never coerces.

So we have then the principle that every minute detail of both angelic and human history is completely in God's mind at all times. Remember that the actual is fed into the computer of divine decrees to become history while the possible or the probable are decisions and things that could have been done, could have been made but were not. Therefore omniscience perceives the free as free, the necessary as necessary, together with all of their causes, conditions and relations as one individual system of things, every link of which is essential to the whole. The links are the making of history; the whole is the historical result.

The third category is the foreknowledge of God. The foreknowledge of God has to be distinguished from omniscience. Between them stands the computer of divine decrees, or what actually occurs in human history. Omniscience programs the computer of divine decrees with historical facts — thought, decision, motivation, action. Foreknowledge is the printout of the computer of divine decrees. Nothing is foreknown until it is first decreed. The decree was in the mind of God billions of years ago, foreknowledge only takes cognisance of what actually happens; it is the printout of the computer. Only the computer of divine decrees establishes reality, which means that foreknowledge follows as a printout of the decrees. There would be two categories of foreknowledge in our dispensation, historical trends and what will happen in the future, called prophecy. Foreknowledge of God makes nothing certain, it merely acknowledges what is certain, the content of the divine decrees. God foreknows all things as certainly future because He first decreed them, that is, He knew them in His mind. The omniscience of God feeds the facts into the computer of divine decrees while the foreknowledge of God prints out the facts. That is essentially the difference.

In summary, God's self-knowledge and omniscience precede the divine decrees, while God's foreknowledge is the printout, the programming of the divine decrees. While the omniscience of God knows every thought, decision, action, motivation of history, not so the foreknowledge of God. The foreknowledge of God can make nothing certain, it merely acknowledges what is certain. And since the divine decrees establish certainty nothing can be foreknown until it is first decreed. God therefore foreknows all events as certainly future because He first decreed them from His omniscience. Omniscience came first, knowing the actual and the possible. Foreknowledge then follows, dealing with the actual only. While everything was decreed simultaneously and not by stages the plan of God rationale applies the foreknowledge of God to situations in life.

Next in verse 8 we have a new sentence beginning. The new sentence begins with a demonstrative particle i)dou. It is a particle taken from the aorist middle imperative of the verb o(ra meaning to see. The idiom is best translated in modern English, "Now hear this," or "Note well." Next we have a perfect active indicative of the verb didomi, which generally means to give. It also means to place, "I have placed." With it we have an improper preposition, e)nw pion, plus the genitive of su. So we have, "Now hear this, I have placed before you." The perfect of existing state is one in which the past completed action is practically dropped from the thought and attention is now focused on the existing state. The active voice: God produces the action of the verb by providing opportunity for historical impact in the Church, providing the means for historical impact by giving the believer at the point of salvation 36 things, in this dispensation only, plus the divine dynasphere. The divine dynasphere is available to the Church Age believer only. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the principle of historical impact in this dispensation.

Next we have the accusative singular direct object from the noun qura. Qura is used two ways: for a door and a shield. The Romans had a shield [qura] shaped like a door. Here it means door. With this we have the ascriptive use of the perfect passive participle from the verb a)naoiga, it describes a quality directly related to qura, the substantive, and so it is simply translated, "I place before you an open door." The open door always connotes some form of opportunity for the believer who lives inside the divine dynasphere, who lives in the plan of God. Furthermore it connotes opportunity provided by the grace of God. The open door demands spiritual aggression on the part of the positive believer living inside the divine dynasphere.

The doctrine of the open door

1. An open door is opportunity, grace opportunity, God-given opportunity, an opportunity related to giving meaning, purpose and definition to your life, an opportunity that results in happiness and blessing for the person who fulfills the plan of God.
2. The first door of opportunity in the scripture is the door of salvation, John 10:9, "I am the door; if anyone enters through me, he shall be saved; furthermore he shall go in and out, and find pasture [logistical grace provision for the believer in Christ]." Acts 14:27 puts it this way: "And so when they had arrived and gathered the church together, they began to report all the things that God had done with them and the fact that he had opened the door of faith to the Gentiles." This was a church made up of Jewish people. The fact that Gentiles could be saved apart from Judaism was foreign to their thinking. The open door of salvation is "Whosoever believeth in him shall not perish, but have everlasting life," it is not exclusive.
3. There is a second door of opportunity in life, the door of communication of truth. The communication of category #2 truth is the gospel and it is related to an open door, 2 Corinthians 2:12. There is also the open door mentioned in connection with category #3 truth, teaching doctrine to believers, Colossians 4:3. There is also the communication of all three categories of truth in relationship to an open door [Category #1, the laws of divine establishment for the entire human race; category #2, the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ for unbelievers; category #3, Bible doctrine for believers], 1 Corinthians 16:9.

4. The third door of opportunity in life is the provision of the divine dynasphere and its resultant historical impact, Revelation 3:8. The fact that the divine dynasphere is available to you as a believer is the greatest opportunity for historical impact that individual believers have ever had in any dispensation of history.

5. The fourth door of opportunity in life is the door of reversion recovery. In Revelation 3:20, "Now hear this, I have stood at the door with the result that I keep standing at the door and I knock repeatedly [warning discipline]; the door of opportunity for rebound and recovery from the cosmic system often comes through warning discipline, "if anyone hears my voice and opens the door [the use of rebound], I will come into him [face to face with him] and have dinner with him, and he with me." The open door of opportunity is related to recovery from the cosmic system through the rebound technique.

6. There are open doors in heaven, Revelation 4:1, the open door of the Rapture; Revelation 19:11, the open door of the second advent; the same door of the second advent is related to our Lord's triumphal procession in Revelation 19:11-21 as quoted from Psalm 24:7-10, "be lifted up O everlasting doors."

"I have set before you an open door." Next we have an accusative feminine singular from the relative pronoun o(j, correctly translated "which," and with the adjective o)udiej in the nominative singular subject it is used as a substantive, "which no one." This covers a great deal of territory, the human race. Then we have the present active indicative of the verb dunamai, translated to be able, "which no one is able." The customary present tense denotes what habitually occurs when the Lord opens the door of opportunity. No adverse circumstance of history or adverse power of Satan and his cosmic system can shut a door of opportunity opened by God. Today we live in the same circumstances. The door of opportunity is wide open. It is wide open for change for the better, wide open for blessing, wide open for the perpetuation of the client nation to God, wide open for everything that is wonderful and meaningful in life. And the wide open door simply demands volition, the function of your own non-meritorious free will, positive volition toward doctrine, residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. The active voice: the adjective is used as a substantive and it produces the action of the verb which is the inability of anyone in history or any force in history or any force of evil to shut the door of opportunity, only God Himself slams the door. The door of opportunity was open in Philadelphia nearly 2000 years ago and it is open today. The indicative mood is the reality of impossibility for anyone to close the door of opportunity in history. This is the opportunity provided by God in the dispensation of historical trends which we also call the Church Age. With this we have an infinitive. Dunamai requires an implied or stated infinitive. The stated infinitive is the aorist active indicative of the verb kleiw, and it means to shut. Plus the accusative singular direct object from the intensive pronoun a)utoj, "it," used as a pronoun. No one is able to shut "it," a reference to qura or the door. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist in which the event is viewed in its entirety but regarded from the viewpoint of existing results. The existing results include dynamic impact of the mature believer on the trends of history, a dynamic which is low profile and invisible, unknown to the people who are making history today as far as recognition is concerned. The real heroes of history are the anonymous heroes of history, the believers who daily by their own positive volition toward doctrine walk through the door of opportunity. The Lord has opened the door of opportunity and only He can shut it. As long as it remains open it gives us the opportunity of turning the tide of history completely. You can do more to change the conditions in this country by your daily attitude toward doctrine than the President, the Congress, the Supreme Court, than any form of local government. There is no substitute for positive volition in the dynamics of history. The dynamic impact cannot be hindered by the power of Satan nor by the influence of the cosmic system, nor by any dictator, nor by any system of human evil. The active voice of the infinitive: both angelic and human creatures in opposition to the plan of God for the Church Age produce the action of the verb, namely their inability to shut the door of opportunity. They cannot close the door of opportunity for historical uptrend. Only you can do that by your negative volition toward doctrine and your refusal to live in the divine dynasphere. This is the infinitive of actual result and with the relative clause it is translated into the English except for the intensive pronoun "it," "which no one is able to shut."

We have so far then: "I know your accomplishments [Christian production, lifestyle, modus operandi]: now hear this, I have placed before you an open door which no one is able to shut."

With this open door, the opportunity for historical impact, there is a threefold explanation. The rest of this verse eight is devoted to this explanation. The King James version is a pitiful translation at this point. The Greek does not say "thou hast a little strength." First of all we have the causal use of the conjunction $\alpha(\text{ti}$, simply translated "because." Then we have the present active indicative of the verb $\epsilon)\chi\omega$, "because you have [possess]." The descriptive present tense is for what is now going on for believers in phase two, the challenge, the open door, and how we can utilise the open door of opportunity for historical impact. The active voice: the believer produces the action of the verb in time only. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the open door of opportunity. This is the dispensation where history and historical trends are controlled by the attitude of born-again believers toward doctrine. Negative volition: historical downtrend; positive volition: historical uptrend; believers fulfilling the plan of God and residing and functioning inside the divine dynasphere as over against believers living in the cosmic system. Every uptrend and downtrend of history in the Church Age depends upon whether believers are living in the divine dynasphere, advancing from gate four to gate eight, the momentum of the Christian life, or whether they are living in the cosmic system. So we possess something. The indicative mood: the reality of the open door provided through the grace provision of the divine dynasphere and logistical support from God. The major provision here is time for advancement inside the divine dynasphere. God has given each one of us since the day we believed in Christ time. This is one thing we have going for us at the moment. Time is the open door. The door closes for each one of us when we die or when the Rapture occurs. Then the opportunity is gone, not only the opportunity for historical impact but the opportunity for the eternal order of chivalry.

The major provision here is for walking through the door of opportunity, and the first thing we have is an adverbial accusative of time from the adjective mikroj. And notice that the adjective is put with the word “power,” but this is an adverbial accusative of time and therefore it means “a little time.” It should be translated, “because you possess a little time.” This is part one in the threefold explanation of the open door of opportunity. The reason we called it “a little time” is because between salvation and what time we have left on this earth compared to eternity is mikroj, it is small. Time is just a drop in the bucket compared to eternity. When the accusative is used to indicate a point of time it is part of a continuous period implied in the context, and this implication is not possible in the locative of time. That is why we have the adverbial accusative of time. The point is that once you accept Christ as saviour you may have done a lot of things to destroy your health and everything else before you believed in Christ but God is fair and there never has been a believer, and there never will be a member of the royal family of God in the Church Age, who does not have ample time to fulfill and execute the plan before his departure either by death or by resurrection. You will have time but that time is very small compared to eternity. We all have “a little time.” There is one thing that we must spend wisely and that is time. Time plus free will equals opportunity. You are going to have a lot of tests to decide daily what your priorities are. What is more important to you than anything else in life? Once you straighten out your priorities then everything else will fall into place and you can make daily decisions which advance you to maturity.

We also have another word, the accusative singular direct object from the noun dunamij, which means power. This is where we get our word “dynasphere,” duna [power] and sfaia [sphere], a system of power devised by the Lord for the royal family of the Church Age. It was used first in prototype by our Lord Jesus Christ in the incarnation. We possess two things for utilising the open door of opportunity. First we possess “a little time,” phase two, and secondly, the divine dynasphere, the power system.

We have a second explanation in the threefold explanation. We have the conjunction kai which introduces a result from what precedes. It should be translated here “secondly,” in keeping with the context of the open door. Remember that the context is giving three reasons for the open door in the Church Age which no man can shut, the opportunity that is yours as long as you are alive and breathing. The first reason was the logistical provision of phase two, logistical grace in the form of two specifics: time and the divine dynasphere which is the power system for the execution of the plan of God.

With this, secondly, we have a verb: the aorist active indicative of the verb terew which means to guard, to hold, to guard something that belongs to self, to keep. A good way to translate here is “secondly, you keep [or guard].” The constative aorist tense is for a fact extended over a period of time, namely phase two, the “little time” we have. The keeping or guarding of the Word of God includes the function of gate four, perception and application of doctrine. All momentum in the spiritual life is directly related to your attitude toward Bible doctrine, perception of doctrine: gate four, the function of the royal priesthood; application of doctrine: gate four, the function of the royal ambassadorship. Every believer must live his own life as unto the Lord. He must have information from doctrine but no one can do it for him. The active voice: the believer produces the action of the verb. The positive believer assigns number one priority to Bible doctrine and therefore immediately he has an organised life. A lot of people today are just simply disorganised. The most maddening thing in the world is to be around disorganised people, they are a pain in the neck. What really determines whether you are organised or not are your priorities in life. Once you establish what is most important and what is next and what is next, then you can figure out a way to get dressed in four minutes! So we have the principle behind all this: the organised life versus the disorganised life; the stable versus the unstable; the good decision versus the bad decision.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object from the noun logoj, which means doctrine, thought, word, truth, “secondly you keep [guard] my doctrine.” What does it mean to keep or guard doctrine? Doctrine is number one priority, therefore your first decision should build your life around getting doctrine, whatever it takes. And you are going to be challenged on your priorities. Doctrine one day might become second place to some beautiful doll, or some wonderful party that you couldn’t miss for anything in the world, the party of the century, or whatever it is. These tests only come to people who are really positive toward doctrine, so there might be some marvelous party just around the corner just for you, as a test! With that we have the possessive genitive from the personal pronoun e)gw, “my doctrine.” So, “secondly, you keep my doctrine.” The second factor then in operation open door is Bible doctrine, both perception and application as well as priority in perspective.

The third explanation is found in the rest of the verse. Kai introduces a further result from what it precedes. The phrase concludes the threefold explanation of the open door. First explanation of the open door in terms of logistical grace: the provision of the divine dynasphere in time. Secondly, the explanation of the opportunity of the open door, perception of doctrine and resultant momentum. The third explanation indicates avoidance of the cosmic system, the aorist middle indicative of the verb a)rneomai, plus the negative o)uk, “you have not denied [repudiated].” The culminative aorist views life in the divine dynasphere and avoidance of the cosmic system in its entirety but emphasises it from the standpoint of existing results. You manage, when you get your feet wet in the cosmic system, to get out in a hurry. This really means two things. Sometimes you avoid temptation and sometimes you don’t. When you don’t you rebound. You are consistent in rebound and in avoiding temptations as you understand the. And you have a dynamic middle voice emphasising the part taken by the subject in the action of the verb, avoidance of life in the cosmic system and resultant denial or repudiation of the Lord. If you stay in the cosmic system long enough you are going to deny the Lord Jesus Christ. You haven’t lost your salvation, you just simply have reached rock bottom in the field of reversionism. The declarative indicative is for the reality of the believer living in the divine dynasphere and avoiding cosmic involvement. “Thirdly you have not denied my person,” the accusative singular direct object of o)noma, which means name, person, knighthood, all kinds of things. This means the cosmic believer repudiates Christ but this denial does not mean loss of salvation. The cosmic believer is a loser at the judgment seat of Christ but he cannot lose his salvation. The cosmic believer usually departs from this life under maximum punishment of the sin unto death but he does not lose his salvation, only his rewards, decorations, at the judgment seat of Christ.

Verse 9 — the neutralisation of opposition or how cursing is turned to blessing. Once again we begin with the demonstrative particle idou. The first section of this verse is Jewish disorientation to the Church Age. You have to remember that the first client nation in history was Israel. In BC 1440 God called out the first client nation. He made that a priest nation to Himself even though they had a specialised priesthood from the tribe of Levi, the family of Aaron. Throughout the course of the Old Testament history the client nation to God was Israel. They were the custodians of truth, they were responsible for internal evangelism and then external evangelism through missionary activity, as illustrated by one of their greatest missionaries, Jonah. They were responsible for the maintenance historically of the laws of divine establishment.

Occasionally Israel became very arrogant. With category #1 truth, with evangelism, with spiritual growth, Israel became extremely prosperous many times in history, and with prosperity came the test: Do you maintain the same priorities or not? Is Bible doctrine still number one priority? Many times they failed simply because of one thing — arrogance. Yes, they had a marvelous heritage and when you follow the truth in a marvelous heritage you have prosperity, but when you become arrogant about your marvelous heritage you have great adversity. And so we have studied from time to time the function of the cycles of discipline as they related to the first client nation in history.

But the time came when our Lord Jesus Christ came in the first advent as prophesied, and in all of these prophecies He fulfilled each one individually. “He came unto His own but His own received Him not.” They did not accept Him as the God of Israel and yet even in the first forty years of the Church Age they still functioned as the client nation to God. They were warned, however, that if they did not change their attitude toward Christ and toward Bible doctrine as it related to the dispensation of historical trends then they would go out under the fifth cycle of discipline.

They had a special warning that Isaiah mentioned in chapter 28. They were to be warned by Gentiles; they were to be evangelised not by Gentile individuals but by Jews speaking Gentile languages and speaking them in a miraculous way, the gift of tongues. The gift of tongues was the last historical warning to Israel. It was to last only for a short time and it was directed to Israel as a client nation to God. Jews were evangelised in Gentile languages, beginning on the day of Pentecost in Jerusalem and going all the way to August of AD 70. In August of AD 70 for the last time the Jews were put under the fifth cycle of discipline. They were removed from history as a client nation to God, the very purpose for which they were called out of Egypt on the day of the Passover and, with it, no longer was the gift of tongues ever used legitimately. A brand new thing began at that time called the times of the Gentiles. The rest of the Church Age is characterised by two things: historical trends and no prophecy, and the times of the Gentiles. Both of these run coterminously from AD 70. We live in a time when there are no prophecies to be fulfilled. We also live in a time when only Gentile nations can function as client nations to God.

The times of the Gentiles and historical trends are going to terminate simultaneously with the next prophecy which is the resurrection or the Rapture of the Church. Then every believer receives a resurrection body and will participate in the great genuflect in the sky in the presence of the Lord. Then comes the judgment seat of Christ where believers are going to be distinguished. Some believers will merely have a resurrection body — low on the totem pole. Some will have a resurrection body plus the uniform of glory. Some will have a new knighthood given to them at this time. Some will have the crown of life, the crown of righteousness. Some will have in addition to that the order of the morning star and a new escutcheon of glory, the order of chivalry for the Millennium and for eternity.

We live in the times of the Gentiles and therefore the tremendous challenge to each one of us. This challenge is brought out by the demonstrative particle idou, which is taken from the aorist middle imperative of the verb o(ra which means to see. This particular form in morphology becomes a particle in the Greek. It is translated in the King James version “behold,” which is slightly anachronistic. So there are two ways to approach this particular word. The first is to translate it into the Latin. It actually means note bene, note this. Or we can translate it “now hear this.” That immediately gets everyone’s attention and that is the purpose of this particle. With this we have the late omega form of didomi which is didw, and this is in the present active indicative and is translated “I will cause.” That brings us back to the fact that Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb in the active voice, He controls history. The present tense is a futuristic present, it denotes an event which has not yet occurred but which is regarded as so certain that in thought it may be contemplated as already coming to pass. In the active voice not only does Jesus Christ control history but He produces the action of the verb: the punishment of any Jew who is cosmic inspired, living in Philadelphia. In other words, the Jews are living in the cosmic system and God will deal with them, not only at that time but now. The same thing is true of Gentiles but opposition to the church in Philadelphia was coming primarily from a very large and a very prosperous and successful Jewish population. They had become very arrogant because of their prosperity and they had become very intolerant of others. In their intolerance they began to persecute the church in Philadelphia and therefore our Lord gave them the title “the synagogue of Satan”; “synagogue” being a Jewish word; “Satan” indicating the fact that they are living in the cosmic system. All of those who reside in the cosmic system, whether Jew or Gentile, are the servants of Satan. The declarative indicative mood of the verb is the reality of our Lord’s neutralisation of opposition to the local church in Philadelphia.

Then we have our prepositional phrase e)k plus the ablative of sunagwgh, plus the descriptive genitive of the proper noun satanoj, translated “Satan,” “Now hear this, I will cause those from the synagogue of Satan.” Judaism had been religionised through involvement in the cosmic system. Moses would not have recognised the Jews to whom this is addressed, except that he had so many recalcitrants in his own day. The Jews as a race are very smart and talented people but the problem with a group who are smart or an individual who is smart is arrogance and vanity. Arrogance and vanity cancels whatever God-given abilities and talents one possesses. Judaism in arrogance had taken truth and turned it into religion. The Jewish truth of the Old Testament became a religion. Religion is the devil’s ace trump. It is the greatest distracter in history, it is a blinder of souls, a producer of both blackout of the soul and scar tissue of the soul. Religion is man’s works trying to gain salvation; Christianity is the work of Christ providing salvation as a free gift through faith in Christ.

With a maximum number of Jews involved in cosmic one and cosmic two the Old Testament scriptures had been distorted. The Jewish nation twenty-six years before they had been removed as a client nation and was now persecuting. They had learned nothing from history, from historical trends. One of the great historical trends of the Church Age is the principle that God will destroy any client nation which fails in its mission to maintain freedom, to evangelise under principles of freedom, to send out missionaries, and for believers to grow in grace through daily perception of doctrine. So they had ignored history. As bright as they were they could not see it because arrogance is a blinder. You lose whatever you have when arrogance intrudes and they had learned nothing from what had happened twenty-six years before in August of AD 70. Philadelphia now had a large population of Jews who were negative toward all three categories of truth. They were living in the cosmic system. They were motivated by arrogance, jealousy, bitterness, vindictiveness, implacability, all of which are characteristics of gate one, cosmic one. And they are called the synagogue of Satan for their cosmic involvement had made them the servants of Satan.

The Jews were motivated by arrogance and therefore they made a proclamation which is given in the next phrase, “who say [proclaim, declare],” the articular present active participle of the verb legw, which can also be translated “allege.” It is a communicating verb. The definite article is used as a relative pronoun. The present tense is a customary present, it denotes Jewish racial arrogance when involved in the cosmic system.

A word about racial arrogance. There is no ascendancy of race that demands or calls for any form of arrogance at any time of history. Some races or groups of people have succeeded because of very hard work or because they were bright. Sometimes the fact that they were bright meant that they became arrogant about it. Some races have done absolutely nothing and therefore have demonstrated a general historical stupidity and they are arrogant about that. The thing that destroys people racially is that they are either in the top success bracket or they are in the stupid failure bracket, and both have one thing in common: they are very arrogant. They may be demanding rights which they already possess through freedom. They may be dealing out rights which they have won through success. But arrogance is the leveler, the destroyer. Here the Jews had racial arrogance because of their involvement in the cosmic system.

The active voice of the participle: the Jews who are negative toward all three categories of truth produce the action and this is a circumstantial participle translated therefore as a relative clause. Then we have the accusative plural of general reference from the reflexive pronoun h(a)utou, correctly translated “themselves.” This is the accusative of general reference and therefore it acts as the subject of the infinitive. Translation: “that they themselves are,” the present active infinitive of e)imi, the verb to be. This is a progressive present tense, it signifies the action in a state of persistence, therefore present linear aktionsart. The active voice: racial and religious Jews, not born again Jews living in the divine dynasphere, who have taken the superiorities of their race and through arrogance had translated them into a religion called Judaism. The infinitive of purpose expresses the action of the finite verb, “who proclaim [declare, allege] that they themselves are.” And then the accusative plural direct object from the proper noun l)oudaioj, translated correctly “Jews.” Actually they are claiming that they are true Jews, that they are God’s people and therefore these “upstart” Christians had no right to come along and try to supersede anything that the Jews had established in Philadelphia. This is a matter of arrogance. They use religion as a base for persecution. In the history of the Church Age the greatest persecutors of people in the past have been religion. Any religion can come along and be a great persecutor. A recent example is the persecution of Rhodesia and South Africa by the National Council of Churches who actually gave money for terrorist activities that finally overthrew the Governments of those countries. Wherever there is religion there is persecution and it holds all records for persecution in history.

Next to religious persecutors of people are born-again believers living in the cosmic system. You will face, sooner or later, what we call people testing in which you are going to see cosmic believers persecuting you. They have no right to, they have no reason to; and yet, they are going to malign, they are going to judge, they are going to gossip, they are going to persecute you. So you remember this passage because born-again believers living in the cosmic system are the servants of Satan. The three sources of persecution in the world today: a. religion; b. the persecutorial system of socialism (communism); c. carnal or cosmic Christians.

When it says that these Jews are “of the synagogue of Satan” we are not talking about Moses, one of the two greatest men who has ever lived. We are not talking about Isaiah, Elijah, Zechariah or David, we are talking about people who were negative toward doctrine, about people who in their arrogance rejected Christ as saviour, Jews who have all the potential in the world but are involved in the cosmic system.

Arrogance is the common denominator from the cosmic system and the only way that you can ever have equality among people is through arrogance. That is why communism is a system of great arrogance. That is why socialism is a system of arrogance, a system of arrogance devised by the arrogant, executed by the arrogant and received by the arrogant. The only way that people can reach a common area of unity and equality is through arrogance. Arrogance is the source of all equality movements in this life.

The Jews in Philadelphia had come to the position that they definitely were going to persecute the Christians. Religion persecutes the truth. The greatest persecutor of truth is religion. Apart from religion communism in its various forms is a great persecutor. All of this persecution comes from arrogance. The Jews came under the concept of religion and they were very active in attacking the church at Philadelphia. From this principle we have a historical trend. People and nations, races, cultures, groups of any kind, start out historically with great vigour and often with the truth. By following the truth they have great prosperity. And then as the prosperity test becomes overwhelming they switch from the humility which is necessary for the truth to function — truth only functions through humility, it does not function in arrogance — and they become arrogant. And as they become arrogant they phase out the truth. As they phase out the truth and become arrogant their prosperity disappears and moves to other areas where truth exists. Then they become the persecutors of the truth. That is exactly the pattern we have in the first part of verse nine. From the greatest heritage and the greatest background in the world it has all been destroyed by arrogance. And what happens to nations so that nations come and go? It happens to believers and unbelievers alike in their personal lives. They have some talent, some ability, some success, some promotion, some greatness, some form of recognition, until they reach the point of where they can't stand the prosperity and they become arrogant.

This gives us the feel for the synagogue of Satan. The synagogue of Satan can be any religion, any nation, any group of people who try to interfere with your personal freedom, your privacy, your property, your God-given rights.

“I will cause those who are from the synagogue of Satan, who allege that they themselves are Jews.” Our next word is the connective conjunction kai, the emphatic use of kai. It emphasises a fact that is surprising, unexpected, namely that all racial Jews or religious Jews are not real Jews in the Old Testament sense, in the sense of the Word of God; they are not a Jewish client nation to God. When John wrote the Jewish client nation had died twenty-six years before. Furthermore, there will not be another Jewish client nation during the Church Age. During this dispensation we live in the times of the Gentiles and only Gentile nations are qualified to be client nations. The next Jewish client nation to God will occur at the second advent when the unconditional covenants to Israel will be fulfilled. Furthermore, these racial Jews involved in the cosmic system of Satan are religious and a religious Jew is not a real Jew from the standpoint of the Word of God. So we could translate: “in spite of that allegation,” rather than “and.” And then the present active indicative of the verb e)imi plus the negative o)uk, “they are not.” They are not really Jews from the standpoint of the Word of God. Racially, yes; religiously, yes; from the standpoint of regeneration, no; from the standpoint of the laws of divine establishment which came from Moses, no. The retroactive progressive present denotes what has begun in the past and continues into the present. They are Jews by race but not regeneration. They are Jews by religion but they are not Jews from the standpoint of the laws of divine establishment, from the standpoint of their client nation heritage. The active voice: Jews who are negative in all three categories of truth produce the action of the verb. The declarative indicative is for a dogmatic statement of fact or Bible doctrine.

With this the adversative conjunction a)lla sets up a contrast to their allegation. They are not really Jews, what are they then? That is introduced by the word a)lla which means “but”, in contrast to their allegation. These Jews are the present middle indicative of the verb pseudomai, which means they are liars. The iterative present tense, also known as the present tense of repeated action, is used to describe what occurs at successive intervals or is conceived of in successive periods of history. The Jews had moments of fantastic greatness, more than any other nation. They have also had moments of fantastic failure and this is one of them described here. This is not a motivator for any form of anti-Semitism, this is simply a recognition of a historical trend. The middle voice is the dynamic middle which emphasises the part taken by the subject in the action of the verb. The declarative indicative is a dogmatic statement of a historical trend that no matter how great you were yesterday, no matter how great a nation is in the past arrogance is the corrupter and destroyer of the individual or the nation.

“but they themselves are lying” is the literal translation and we are going to translate it, “in spite of that allegation they are not really Jews but they are liars.” They themselves are telling lies.

Principle

1. Jews by birth are only racial Jews, not real Jews, so that the real issue is never racial. You never make an issue of any race unless there is arrogance involved.
2. Jewish heritage and culture is the greatest in world history but it only leads to arrogance apart from regeneration and spiritual growth from perception of doctrine.
3. All real Jews follow the principle of their origin and heritage. That is, they believe in the Lord Jesus Christ who is the God of Israel, the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.
4. Cosmic Jews are either revolutionary or religious or both.
5. Religion attacks the truth of the gospel and Bible doctrine, while revolution attacks the truth of establishment. So between religion and revolution they attack all three categories of truth in the Word of God.
6. The worst Jews — called here the synagogue of Satan — are those racial Jews who are both religious and revolutionary. Their cosmic involvement attacks every category of truth in the Word of God.

“Now hear this, I will cause those who are of the synagogue of Satan who allege [proclaim, declare] that they themselves are Jews, however in spite of all of that allegation, they are not really Jews but they are liars.”

This anticipates the next sentence in this verse. The Jews are living in the times of the Gentiles, the Church Age. This is the dispensation of historical trends, not the dispensation of Israel. The Jews in negative volition to truth have failed to understand and apply historical trends to the Church Age. That is why they get burned occasionally and suffer from intense persecution. Failure to interpret historical trends guarantees destruction of segments of society. Therefore by refusing to believe in Christ for salvation — and that is their privilege under freedom — they refused to receive Him as their saviour. But then of course this puts them in the cosmic system where the worst comes out in anyone. They have lost out in time and in eternity as a result. Many Jews in the Church Age will believe in our Lord Jesus Christ and they are the exception to what we are studying here. They will recognise the significance of what has now been taken over by the religious Jew from Deuteronomy 6:4, "Shamah Yisrael [Hear O Israel]!"

"Adonai Elohenu [Jesus Christ the Lord is our God]," the Alpha glory, Jesus Christ is God.

"Adonai echad [Jesus Christ is unique]!" that is the first advent, the hypostatic union, the God-Man and true humanity in one person forever.

This is the problem for the Jews. They recognise the Alpha glory of Jesus Christ. They recognise Him as eternal God. But since the first advent He is the God-Man; He is echad, unique, and this is what they reject, the Omega glory of our Lord Jesus Christ. From this rejection is cosmic involvement and from the cosmic involvement comes the arrogance, the vanity, the pride, the religion. Religion is merely a system of arrogance just as revolution is a system of arrogance. And so throughout history in this dispensation the Jews who have rejected truth are either religious or revolutionists. Both are detrimental to society.

The corrected translation of verse 9 as far as we have gone is as follows: "Now hear this, I will cause those who are from the synagogue of Satan, who allege that they themselves are Jews, however in spite of that allegation they are not really Jews, but they are liars."

One thing we did not note in closing out that last phrase is the fact that anyone who lives in the cosmic system becomes a liar. His life is a lie and therefore it is inevitable that every facet of his life will be a lie, whether it is conversation or whether it is his own mental attitude, divorcement from reality, the lie covers the whole situation. It is impossible for anyone who is in the cosmic system and therefore living a lie to have any true capacity for happiness, love, blessing, success, prosperity, promotion, or anything else. Therefore the cosmic system becomes a source of unhappiness whether people achieve or fail to achieve. And whether it is a believer or an unbeliever both serve Satan in the cosmic system.

This is the dispensation of the Church, not the dispensation of Israel, and therefore these Jews are very jealous and resentful of the fact and principle that in the past theirs has been the most glorious history of all. The first client nation to God from BC 1440 to AD 70 was Israel. With the third administration of the fifth cycle of discipline the times of the Gentiles were ushered in and there will be no Jewish nation as a client nation to God until the second advent of Christ; at which time our Lord will reassemble all Israel, there will be the judgment called the baptism of fire, the unbelieving Jews will be cast into fire whereas the believing Jews will form part of the nucleus for the Millennium. But in the meantime the times of the Gentiles is the order of the day and that means that no Jewish nation will ever function as a client nation to God.

The second concept in verse nine is Jewish orientation to the times of the Gentiles and the Church dispensation. Again we have to start out with i)dou, the demonstrative particle taken from the aorist middle imperative of o(r)ao, "Now hear this." And then we have the future active indicative from the verb poiew, which means to make, perform, to do, to manufacture, to produce, to bring about, to accomplish. Here it means to cause, “Now hear this, I will cause.” The predictive future tense anticipates the fulfillment of 1 Corinthians 14:24 when the Jews are converted through exposure to the gospel. The active voice: unbelieving Jews at the point of their conversion or thereafter produce the action of this verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of Jewish respect for Gentile believers in the royal family of God, as per 1 Corinthians 14:24,24. “I will cause them” refers to the fact that Jesus Christ controls history but the object of the verb is referring to Jews who are converted.

1 Cor. 14:24,25, “But if an unbeliever or someone who does not understand comes in while everyone is prophesying [teaching doctrine], he will be convinced by all who teach, he will be judged by all who teach; in fact the secrets of his right lobe are disclosed so that he will fall down and worship God, declaring with confidence that God is among you,” setting up a contrast between the teaching of doctrine and its power and the function of the gift of tongues which has no power, no meaning, no definition after the fall of Israel in AD 70.

With this we have the accusative plural direct object from a)utoj, the intensive pronoun used as a personal pronoun since the third person personal pronoun of the Attic Greek did not get into the Koine, a)utoj is used instead. It is referring to Jews who at the moment are unbelievers living in the cosmic system of Satan. But in the future many of these are going to believe in Christ because of a very important principle: believers in Philadelphia, those who were positive to doctrine, had great wisdom. They didn’t run around and antagonise all the unbelievers. They didn’t flaunt the truth, they lived the truth and they proclaimed the truth with great lucidness when necessary, and when the opportunity afforded. The principle: In time of adversity which includes discrimination from higher ranks — which includes prejudice from management, which includes abuse, you do not react to the abuse — you keep on doing your job as unto the Lord. The result is a fantastic dynamic, dynamic for evangelism that cannot be duplicated by all of the hoopla Bible school “Brother are you saved?” nonsense. You keep on doing your job and you don’t quit.

We have a principle here and it comes out of the fact that many of these Jews who were bullies, who were unfair, who were poor leaders, who underpaid and abused their employees, because they were arrogant — in the cosmic system — and as always is the mistake with industrial complex success they thought money was power, which it isn’t. Christians in Philadelphia were being persecuted by the wealthy successful classes who were Jewish people with money. These Jews were using their money, their position in management, to persecute Christians. But the Christians lived their lives as unto the Lord because they had some doctrine. And because they lived their lives as unto the Lord they didn’t bluff, the didn’t succumb, they didn’t react, they didn’t become arrogant. The real ploy of arrogance in management, in authority, in power is to bully people until they protest, and the moment they protest they are arrogant too. It is a system of Satan whereby you have arrogance evangelism and one of Satan’s great cosmic evangelistic systems is for arrogant people with power and authority to bully people, either through religion or some other form, into becoming arrogant too. As long as you do your job and live your life as unto the Lord you are impervious to bullying, but the minute that you succumb and cry “unfair” and start to resent, or “I’ll show you,” then you too are arrogant and you have been evangelised.

“Now hear this, I will cause them.” Then we have an interruption. We have a conjunction i(na to introduce a final clause. The final clause denotes a purpose, aim, goal or objective. I(na is translated “that.” This phrase is quoted from Isaiah 60:14. It is a prophecy of the Millennium when Gentiles come and bow down to the Jews of the client nation Israel. Isaiah 60:14 finds Gentiles coming to the Jews as a client nation, but John quotes it to reverse the situation; not to show the Millennium in its interpretative context but in its application. He quotes it here in reverse for the converted Jews in Philadelphia are going to come and do homage to Gentile believers. And the point is this will be a trend of the Church Age. The persecutor finally develops a respect for the persecuted and responds to the message of the gospel.

Isaiah 60:14 was addressed to the Jews. “And the sons of those who persecuted you,” here the Jews are being persecuted by the Assyrians and by the Chaldeans, “will come bowing down to you [in the Millennium], and all those who despised you will bow themselves at the soles of your feet; and they will call you the city of the Lord, the Zion of the Holy One of Israel.” So it is a prophecy in Isaiah; it is an illustration in Revelation 3:9.

Then we have following the future active indicative of the verb h(kw, which means to come. “Now hear this, I will cause them [Jesus Christ controls history] that they shall come,” and this is after their conversion, after they have received some doctrine. The predictive future tense anticipates that Jewish management antagonistic toward Christians in Philadelphia will be converted and change their attitude toward Gentile believers of the royal family of God. Active voice: certain Jews who will receive Christ as saviour will be terribly impressed by the fantastic faithfulness of people who are Christians and who work under their supervision. These Jews produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of this prediction. Hence the neutralising of opposition to Christianity through living their life as unto the Lord and not reacting to unfairness.

Next we have the connective conjunction kai, and another future active indicative from proskunew, which means to pay homage, to become respectful, to express respect. It also means to venerate and in certain conditions it means to worship but it doesn’t mean worship here. It means here to express respect, or to show respect. And with the improper preposition e)nwpiou plus the genitive plural of pouj, “show respect at your feet.” The word “your” is the possessive genitive of su, the personal pronoun second person, “your feet,” the feet of the Gentile believers who persisted in living their lives as unto the Lord no matter how they were persecuted and treated unfairly.

Since believers and unbelievers have no contact in eternity and since this context refers to the Church Age it is concluded that this passage refers to the neutralisation of Jewish opposition in the Church Age, the dispensation of historical trends. And it is not only Jewish opposition, it is any kind of opposition. Opposition is opportunity, that is the principle. But your arrogance, your reaction neutralises the potential. Evangelism, regeneration, life in the divine dynasphere, the daily perception of doctrine, causes one to live his life as unto the Lord, motivating virtue. This in turn neutralises the opposition of persecution. Instead of fighting opposition to Bible doctrine the believer should stick to the plan of God and let the plan of God run interference for him. By focusing attention on the plan of God and perception of doctrine the believer lives his life as unto the Lord which paves the way for the Lord dealing with the opposition and the antagonism to you as a believer. Live in the divine dynasphere, let the Lord handle the opposition. In this way the believer avoids making an issue of himself, he avoids the trap of arrogance whereby he is evangelised into the cosmic system. So you must avoid making an issue of yourself and clear the way for the Lord Jesus Christ to be the true issue. And you can never do it by reacting, you must respond to doctrine.

This anticipates the final phrase in this verse which is the fact that people are less likely to tamper with the life of that one who is loved by God. We begin again with the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai plus repetition of i(na and it is correctly translated “also that.” With that we have the aorist active subjunctive of ginwskw, “also that they might know.” The culminative aorist tense views the event in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results: Jewish respect for Gentile believers, or the persecutor coming to respect the persecuted. The active voice: Jewish converts produce the action of the verb by a change of attitude toward Gentile believers whom they formerly despised and persecuted in Philadelphia. The subjunctive mood is a potential subjunctive, it implies a future reference and is qualified by the element of contingency.

Next comes the conjunction o(ti introducing the content of the future knowledge of the persecutor. It introduces the content of the future knowledge when conversion to Christ and persecution of doctrine inside of the divine dynasphere has been neutralised where opposition has gone, “also that they might know.” Next is the word e)gw, the nominative subject referring to our Lord Jesus Christ, “also that they might know that I.” And then the aorist active indicative of a)gapaw, “that I have loved,” the accusative singular direct object from su, “you.” The culminative aorist tense views our Lord’s love of believers in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, namely the neutralisation of the opposition. In this case the opposition comes from Jewish unbelievers whose racial arrogance, therefore prejudice, has resulted in persecution of Gentile Christians. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of divine love directed toward Gentile believers of the Church Age, “also that they might know that I have loved you.”

Corrected translation: “Now hear this, I will cause those who are from the synagogue of Satan, who allege [proclaim, contend, declare] that they themselves are Jews, however in spite of that allegation they are not really Jews but they are liars; now hear this, I will cause them that they shall come [after their conversion] and express their respect at your feet, also that they might know that I have loved you.”

Principle

1. Jesus Christ controls history. This means that all opposition to your life which is genuine must be neutralised by the Lord for it to be effective. Therefore you must stay out of the way. To stay out of the way you must continue to respond to unfair and even cruel authority rather than react to it. Your reaction complicates the situation.

2. This is accomplished in several ways. First, in context, through conversion and doctrinal inculcation. The opposition is converted, impressed by your life of faithfulness. This is tantamount to freedom from the cosmic system as the motivation for persecution. A second way in which this is accomplished: the function of the overruling will of God as in operation Balaam, or as expressed in the Abrahamic covenant which says to the Gentile world, he who persecutes Israel I will deal with. A third way in which this is accomplished: the wall of fire which functions when the believer lives inside the divine dynasphere.

3. Opposition or persecution which Jesus Christ does not neutralise He intends for your momentum testing or your divine discipline, one or the other, depending on your status location; whether you are living in the divine dynasphere or living in the cosmic system. If you are living in the divine dynasphere it is momentum testing, if you are living in the cosmic system it is divine discipline. 4. Our status location is either life inside the divine dynasphere or involvement in the cosmic system of Satan.

5. For the believer involved in the cosmic system the same fact remains true: believers in the cosmic system also provide opposition and persecution for believers in the divine dynasphere.

6. This opposition from born-again believers can be neutralised in several ways. First through the administration of the sin unto death of the cosmic believer. Secondly, they can rebound and through doctrinal inculcation produce a change of attitude toward you and everyone else. Thirdly, the cosmic believer becomes so preoccupied with his self-induced misery plus the divine discipline added to it that he cannot find time to continue persecuting you while he is so busy being miserable. This principle of Revelation 3:9 is amplified in Romans 8:28-38.

The last phrase, "that they may know that I have loved you," requires that we stop long enough to recognise the classification of divine love. The ones who are said to be loved in verse nine are mature believers, those who have advanced from gate four to gate eight of the divine dynasphere through persistence in the perception of Bible doctrine.

God is eternal, infinite, and therefore God possesses eternal and infinite love, eternal and infinite justice or integrity. Anything that God has is beyond the scope of space and time and is perpetuated forever and ever, not having a beginning nor having an end. God is immutable and therefore the love of God is unchangeable. It is also compatible with the perfect essence or the perfect character of God. God is holy, therefore the love of God possesses perfect integrity or holiness. God's holiness or integrity is the basis for the function of divine impersonal love toward mankind and the function of God's perfect subjective and objective love toward the other members of the Trinity.

God has love toward other members of the Godhead and in the case of our passage He has love where people are concerned. God is love, always has been love, always will be perfect love; God therefore does not fall in love. The characteristics of God never change. Furthermore, God does not increase or decrease in love. God's eternal love exists with or without an object.

That tells us something: virtue exists in you with or without an object, provided you have it, and you do not have it unless you live in the divine dynasphere and take in doctrine. When love exists in you it exists as a capacity. You don't look at someone and say, "I love you," it is a capacity that is there, it is virtue and integrity directed toward all. It is manifest toward all people — impersonal love. In impersonal love there is only humility. There is no arrogance in impersonal love; there is no racial issue in impersonal love; there is no social issue in impersonal love. Impersonal love is directed toward all. It is a system of integrity, you either have it or you don't have it.

God is love, His love is not sustained by a worthy object, by attraction. Integrity says that you treat the repulsive the way you treat the attractive. You treat them with virtue, honour and integrity which is in you. The repulsive have none! Whether they are nice to you or not is not an issue. And what is the origin of this impersonal love? The origin is the love of God. What makes these Jews of verse nine, after they have been converted, come and respect the Christians in Philadelphia? Why do they respect them? Because they discover that God loved them and that impresses them. And how do they know that God loved them? From the integrity and virtue, the follow-through, from their own function in the divine dynasphere. So God's love is not sustained by a worthy object, by attraction, by promotion, or any form of physical stimulation. Since God is perfect His love is never motivated by self-promotion or self-indulgence, nor is God attracted to people because they can do something for Him.

Obviously God's love is virtuous. It is devoid of sin, human good or altruism. It is devoid of evil, it is free from hypocrisy and human blemish. But mankind tends to superimpose his own concepts of love on God. This results in misunderstanding of God's love as well as misapplication and blasphemy such as, "How can a loving God do this to me?" By saying that man takes all of his bad decisions and paints them right out. It originate from man's failure to comprehend the true nature of God's love, his cosmic involvement, his arrogance. There is no personality conflict when you have virtue. It takes two for a personality conflict and that is what broke through to these Jews. They were evangelised because the Christians who were working for them, though they were bullied daily and persecuted, kept right on doing their job as unto the Lord.

Verse 10, deliverance from historical disaster. There is always some part of the world where historical disaster exists. Right now throughout the world people are suffering some form of disaster. There are born-again believers amid these disasters. The question arises, then: Do these believers living in a hot-spot, living in the centre of some form of disaster, have any right to deliverance? The answer in verse ten is yes. People of all races, all nationalities have positive believers facing disaster all over the world. Is there a wall of fire for believers located anywhere in the world who are facing various categories of disaster, economic depression, social degeneration, military disaster, violence, criminality? The answer is yes. That is the answer in verse ten. You may not pick up the answer immediately because of the King James version and its anachronistic old English. It says, "Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I will also keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth ..."

We have the causal use of the conjunction o(ti, translated "because." We have the aorist active indicative of the verb terew, which means to keep, to guard, to keep in the sense of not losing something, to keep in the sense of protecting, to keep in the sense of paying attention to something important, like perception of Bible doctrine in the divine dynasphere. We translate: "Because you have guarded." That means to maintain or to keep doctrine by living in the divine dynasphere. This anticipates what we have in this verse, and that is, for the believer who resides and functions inside of the divine dynasphere, no matter what the historical climate may be, that believer has a wall of fire around him. In the most dangerous place in the world you are perfectly safe. The wall of fire becomes a major issue for believers and the wall of fire belongs not to the cosmic believer living in the cosmic system. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it views life in the divine dynasphere in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results: the advance to maturity and the retention of doctrine in the right lobe. The active voice: the mature believer produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a statement of historical fact that in every generation there are always some believers who live in the divine dynasphere and advance to maturity through perception and application of doctrine, no matter how evil and how bad or how good and how prosperous that particular segment of history happens to be.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object from logoj used here for doctrine, a synonym for doctrine. We now have the beginning of a passage: "Because you have guarded [maintained by living in the divine dynasphere] the doctrine." Then we have the ablative of means from the noun u(pomonh, which also has a number of meanings, patience, endurance, fortitude, perseverance, steadfastness. We are going to translate it, since it is the ablative, "by means of perseverance." With this we have the possessive genitive from the personal pronoun e)gw, and correctly translated "my," "the doctrine by means of my perseverance." This is our Lord's residence and function inside of the divine dynasphere during His earthly ministry. The noun u(pomonh connotes courageous endurance, it refers to residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. God the Father invented the divine dynasphere to sustain the humanity of Christ during His incarnation. The original divine dynasphere was a Christmas gift from God the Father to God the Son on the first Christmas day. Because of the virgin pregnancy and the virgin birth when human life was imputed to the embryo foetus, Adam's old sin nature was not imputed. Therefore our Lord was born as Adam was created, perfect. There was no genetically-formed old sin nature. There was, however, the simultaneous imputation that is the gift of the original divine dynasphere. Because of this fact the prototype divine dynasphere was given at birth and the humanity of our Lord Jesus Christ occupied the prototype divine dynasphere. He was filled with the Spirit from birth; He had perfect impersonal love; He had enforced and genuine humility; at a very early age through His perception of doctrine in His humanity He advanced from gate four to gate eight. His love of God was perfect even when He said, "My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me". He was being forsaken because "He who knew no sin was made sin for us that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him."

Our Lord had no old sin nature so the source of His temptation did not come from within but from the outside. And because our Lord was inside of the divine dynasphere He faced greater temptations and pressures than we will ever face and yet totally apart from sin. In Isaiah 11:2 we have the prophecy of the divine dynasphere, "The spirit of the Lord will rest on him"; or Isaiah 42:1, "I will put my spirit on him," fulfilled in Matthew 1:18. John 3:34, "For he whom God the Father has sent speaks the doctrines of God for he does not give the spirit by measure"; Luke 4:14, "Jesus returned to Galilee in the power of the spirit." Our Lord's function inside the divine dynasphere began at birth and continued throughout His life time.

Take for example, gate three, enforced and genuine humility which is the key to capacity for life, the key to happiness, the key to blessing. You can have the accouterments of blessing without the capacity for blessing and therefore be miserable. You can be promoted, you can be successful, you can be prosperous and everything that is associated with happiness and still be very unhappy. Reason: happiness must depend on capacity, not on achievement. Therefore, of course, our Lord fulfilled this principle. Our Lord was born into a home. The home happened to be in the dynasty of David. Joseph was descended from David through Bathsheba's son, Solomon; Mary was descended from David through Bathsheba's son, Nathan. So He was born into the dynasty but He was born into organised humility. The parents provided enforced humility and our Lord responded to the authority of His parents and that became the principle of genuine humility, gate three of the divine dynasphere.

The home or divine institution #3 is provided by God for the human race to make the most difficult transition in life: from authority in the home as child to freedom in life as an adult. Many human beings fail to make this transition because they reject parental authority, they reject parental policy. The result is that they become a physical adult but mentally a child — the soul of a child inside an adult body. Human immaturity or lack of enforced and genuine humility cannot make proper use of freedom but distorts it into evil by rejecting authority in life. Freedom and authority must go together. Furthermore, such a person will not and cannot take the responsibility for his own decisions. But our Lord Jesus Christ responded to parental authority — Luke 2:51,52.

The Lord also had another challenge to gate three of the prototype divine dynasphere. He was born under the plan of God the Father, organised humility. Therefore He had a divine parent — using the Father for the humanity of Christ — and the divine parent with all of His essence which included His sovereignty provided enforced humility. And our Lord continually responded to the plan of the Father and the will of the Father and that was His genuine humility, gate three in the prototype divine dynasphere. For example, Hebrews 10:5-9. The first thing that came from our Lord was the statement that He came to accomplish the Father's plan. In His humanity He subordinated Himself to the plan of God the Father. Our Lord's function inside the divine dynasphere is found in Philippians 2:5-8.

John 15:10 adds to that — “If you keep my mandates, you will reside in the sphere of my love complex; just as I have fulfilled the mandates of my Father, and I reside in the sphere of His love complex [divine dynasphere].”

So we have the same concept right here in this passage, Revelation 3:10. Impeccability is the issue that comes from it. “Because you have guarded [maintained by living in the divine dynasphere] the doctrine by means of my perseverance,” our Lord pioneered residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. That is the major issue when He said: “My perseverance.” Even though He was tempted far beyond anything we will ever know or ever face we recognise that He pioneered the way.

The concept

1. The mature believer guards or maintains Bible doctrine — the doctrine of our Lord’s victory in the first advent — by using the same means, the same vehicle, the divine dynasphere.
2. Just as the prototype divine dynasphere sustained our Lord to the point of impeccability so the current divine dynasphere sustains the believer to the point of spiritual maturity and sustains the believer in all kinds of historical circumstances. You can have disaster or prosperity but you are sustained by the same divine dynasphere. The divine dynasphere works in time of historical prosperity; it also works in time of historical disaster. In time of disaster it is the wall of fire.
3. Just as the Lord Jesus Christ executed the Father’s plan at the first advent, and He did it through the prototype divine dynasphere, so we as Church Age believers, royal family of God, execute the plan of God the Father through that same residence and function inside the divine dynasphere.
4. The ablative of source and the ablative of means are very close and related grammatically. The ablative of means is not the regular case for expressing means, that would be the instrumental case. However when the expression of means is accompanied by the implication of its origin or its source the ablative is used instead of the instrumental case.
5. The prototype divine dynasphere was used by our Lord’s humanity to sustain impeccability and fulfill the Father’s plan for first advent, the strategic victory related to the cross. The cross must come before the crown; the first advent must come before the second advent. And between advents our Lord has received the third patent of royalty, the one He will use at the second advent. Our Lord would not be qualified to bear our sins on the cross if He had sinned and therefore the importance of the prototype divine dynasphere as the means of maintaining impeccability.

During the incarnation impeccability means our Lord did not sin. The first Adam was temptable and peccable in the garden of Eden. That is, he was capable of being tempted and he was capable of yielding to that. All he had to do was use his volition and eat from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. The last Adam, the Lord Jesus Christ, was able not to sin and He was not able to sin because of the hypostatic union. Jesus Christ is God, coequal with the Father and the Holy Spirit, and as such He is not able to sin. As humanity Jesus Christ was inside the divine dynasphere and being in the divine dynasphere from birth He was able not to sin. The humanity of Christ was temptable and peccable but through His human volition of soul inside the divine dynasphere our Lord remained in the purity of impeccability. The deity of Christ was neither temptable nor peccable, therefore in hypostatic union as God Christ was not able to sin. He remained inside the divine dynasphere in His humanity and therefore in the divine dynasphere He was able not to sin.

The corrected translation so far in verse 10, "Because you have guarded [maintained by living in the divine dynasphere] the doctrine; which came by means of my perseverance."

Bible doctrine came to us, the royal family, through the perseverance of our Lord in the divine dynasphere. Church Age doctrine results from our Lord's residence and function in the prototype divine dynasphere during the first advent and incarnation. All the doctrine of the Church Age relates to that fact, even as the divine dynasphere is only available to Church Age believers. Mature believers and positive believers guard doctrine by means of the same divine dynasphere now made available to the entire royal family but only used by positive believers. The plan of God for the Church Age believer cannot be executed apart from residence and function in the divine dynasphere and this relates to the individual believer's advance to maturity, his recruitment for the pivot, his historical impact related to the client nation, his glorification of our Lord Jesus Christ. In other words, the anonymous heroes of history during the Church Age are mature believers living inside the divine dynasphere contributing to the historical uptrend. The heroes of past dispensations are not anonymous. Since everything around the first advent is fulfilled there is a dead spot, in the Church Age there is no prophecy to be fulfilled. The next prophecy is the event that terminates the Church Age, the Rapture, the resurrection of the Church. That is why the Rapture was imminent and why it could have occurred, as Paul said, in his day. That is why the Rapture could occur tomorrow, the next day, or a thousand years from tomorrow, because all prophecy concerning the first advent was fulfilled. And since it was fulfilled the next prophecy doesn't begin until the Rapture. So we are in a dead spot; we are between prophecies. So instead of prophecy we live in the dispensation of historical trends.

The plan of God for the Church Age believer cannot be executed, therefore, apart from residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. This relates the individual believer's advance to maturity and that, of course, is the great issue. This is the only dispensation in which the heroes of history are anonymous. They are those who continue and persist and persevere inside the divine dynasphere, therefore guarding Bible doctrine and using it for momentum and advance to maturity.

Principle

1. The humanity of Christ in hypostatic union was sustained by the prototype divine dynasphere contributing to the strategic victory of God over Satan as the ruler of this world.
2. The believer or royal family Christian is sustained by the same divine dynasphere contributing to historical impact and uptrend plus tactical victory over Satan as the ruler of this world.

You cannot have in military science a tactical victory unless first of all you have a strategic victory. It is the strategic victory that provides the logistics for tactical victory. The strategic victory was the work of our Lord Jesus Christ on the cross. The follow-up tactical victory is the believer who lives inside of the divine dynasphere during this Church Age.

We come now to the next phrase in verse 10 which deals with the wall of fire which God provides for believers living in the divine dynasphere in time of disaster. It begins with a contraction . It is made up of two words, the conjunction kai plus the pronoun e)gw, and it is contracted into kagw and is translated "I also." The future active indicative from the verb terew is next, "I also will guard." The accusative singular direct object from su is correctly translated "you."

"Because you have guarded [maintained by living in the divine dynasphere] the doctrine by means of my perseverance, I also will guard you."

The gnomic future tense is for a fact of future performance which may be rightfully expected under normal conditions inside the divine dynasphere. The statement of fact of performance is the wall of fire which God has provided for those believers who live in the divine dynasphere. You can be in the most dangerous spot in the world, the most dangerous situation that can possibly exist, and if you are living inside the divine dynasphere you are protected by the wall of fire. Only believers living in the divine dynasphere have the wall of fire. Believers living in the cosmic system do not have a wall of fire, all they have is warning discipline and if they ignore that then there is intensive discipline and eventually the sin unto death, maximum disaster, maximum pain in dying and being removed from this world. The sin unto death means loss of all the rewards we have been studying — the uniform of glory, the new knighthood and the order of the morning star, etc. So where you live your life determines whether you will ever advance spiritually and execute the plan of God or not. It also determines the difference between happiness and misery as a believer. You cannot distinguish the cosmic believer from the unbeliever, except that some unbelievers are much nicer!

"I also will guard you," the active voice: our Lord Jesus produces the action of the verb, He provides the wall of fire around the believer living inside the divine dynasphere. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the wall of fire as a protection for believers who live inside the divine dynasphere. The wall of fire relates to the divine dynasphere only, there is no wall of fire for cosmic believers.

With this we have the preposition e)k plus the ablative from w(ra, and with this we also have the concept of a limited portion of time. It is translated “from the time” and the word refers to a period marked out by a train of circumstances and the train of circumstances is historical disaster. The noun w(ra can refer to sixty minutes or a few seconds or a period of time in history. It is mistranslated in the King James version because they transliterated it. It does not refer to an hour. Generally it refers to a shorter period of time of a much longer period of time. So it should be noted that w(ra means right time, favourable time, a fixed time. It also means a “right time” as here, for Jesus Christ controls history, the first principle of the concept of historical trends. He administers historical punishment at the right time. Also our Lord Jesus Christ brings testing into the life of the positive believer for his spiritual advancement acceleration, the application of Bible doctrine to adversity. There are two general reasons why Christians suffer; there are actually 24 categorical reasons. We suffer either for discipline or for testing, all suffering comes under these categories. All divine discipline is related to cosmic involvement whereas suffering for testing and blessing is related to involvement in the divine dynasphere. When the believer is in the cosmic system he is going to have a lot of suffering that he brings on himself. This is generally the concept of warning discipline and if the suffering does not alert him to the need to rebound, to recover from the cosmic system, to get back into the plan of God, i.e. the divine dynasphere, then it goes on to intensive discipline. If that doesn't work eventually he goes out under the sin unto death — but not until he has been used by Satan for cosmic evangelism. Cosmic evangelism is directed toward positive believers who are advancing from gate four to gate eight in the divine dynasphere.

Next we have the descriptive genitive of the noun peirasmoj, and it means either testing or temptation. Here it means testings. The noun is derived from the verb peirazw, which helps us to understand the exact meaning of the noun. Peirazw means to test someone. Of course, the noun “testing” to determine good or evil comes from the verb — to test someone to find out if they are good or bad, to find out if they are virtuous or not virtuous, to find out what they really are because what a person really is not when things are going right but when they are under pressure. So the believer living in the cosmic system is destroyed by historical disaster or pressure; the believer living in the divine dynasphere is benefited by suffering, disaster, pressure because he is behind the wall of fire from where he profits from the testing.

We have here a specific reference to the ten special persecutions of the Church which we studied previously in chapter two, verse ten. That is the time of testing, the historical disaster. And this is the wall of fire that the Lord places around every positive believer living inside the divine dynasphere. The believer involved in the cosmic system has no wall of fire and is often punished by God during historical disaster. God used historical disaster to punish and to often eliminate cosmic believers. Too many cosmic believers becomes a reverse pivot and if you have too many cosmic believers the human race becomes self-destructive. The human race actually would destroy itself were it not for the fact that God eliminates from the human race X number of cosmic believers every year. Cosmic involvement produces economic disaster, social degeneration, and military defeat.

With the wall of fire we have another concept: historical disaster to the client nation. This is based upon our study of the doctrine of historical trends where if you have a large pivot of mature believers and a small spin-off of cosmic believers then the nation is blessed, prospered. But if you have a small pivot of mature believers and a large spin-off of cosmic believers then the nation begins the cycles of discipline. The wall of fire still protects even when God removes a nation. When He removed Israel as the client nation to God in AD 70 He still preserved the small pivot. The pivot is always delivered. The historical disaster of the client nation is brought up here because the fifth cycle of discipline of a client nation is the worst thing that could happen to believers living in that client nation. But the wall of fire still applies. Even though a nation may be destroyed the pivot of mature believers is always delivered.

We begin with an articular present active participle from the verb mellw, and it means "about to be." We are going to translate it, "which is about to." The definite article is used as a relative pronoun referring to the time of testing or historical disaster. The customary present tense denotes what may be reasonably expected to occur both in the personal life of a believer and the function of a Gentile client nation to God, i.e. testing and discipline. That's testing for blessing for those in the divine dynasphere but suffering for discipline for those in the cosmic system. The active voice: historical disaster or testing produces the action of the verb, this is a circumstantial participle. "I also will guard you [believers living in the divine dynasphere] from the time of testing which is about to ..." Then we have the present active infinitive of the verb e)rxomai, "which is about to occur [to come]." The futuristic present tense denotes an event which has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain in thought that it may be contemplated as already occurring. The active voice: historical disaster or a time of testing produces the action of the verb. This is the infinitive of conceived result which follows the nature of the case, namely the historical trend that both individuals and nations are the products of their own decisions.

Principle

1. There are no tragedies in history because both individuals and nations are the products of their own decisions. Tragedy belongs to drama; disaster belongs to history.
2. Individual decisions produce environment, not environment decisions; collective decisions produce environment in the nation, and environment in the nation does not produce the decisions.
3. No one can become mature without taking the responsibility for their own decisions. Arrogance blames everyone else but integrity takes the responsibility.

4. As goes the believer so goes the historical trends at any point in the Church Age. Believers living in the divine dynasphere — uptrend; believers living in the cosmic system — downtrend. So the uptrend and the downtrend in the client nation is determined by the daily attitude of believers toward Bible doctrine.
5. Residence and function inside the divine dynasphere means historical uptrend while involvement in the cosmic system means historical downtrend eventuating in historical disaster.
6. People individually and collectively are the products of their own decisions. This is why decision creates environment, not environment decision.
7. It all begins with arrogance, personal arrogance, many many people becoming involved in arrogance. Arrogance blinds the people or the nation to its own inconsistencies and the consequences of its evil.
8. Arrogant individuals or nations never see the disastrous consequences of their bad decisions related to the cosmic system and this is why innovation apart from truth and integrity boomerangs in to disaster. When Hegel said, “We learn from history that we learn nothing from history”, he stated the case that arrogance is unteachable. No nation learns from the mistakes of other nations; no people learn from past history.

With this we have a prepositional phrase, e)pi plus the genitive of o)ikoumenh. E)pi plus the genitive means “on.” O)ikoumenh does not refer to planet earth, it refers to some inhabited part of planet earth. While o)ikoumenh means the inhabited earth it is used in the New Testament in a technical sense for the Roman empire. “Which is about to come upon the Roman empire” is what it means. The Roman empire was the first Gentile client nation to God of the times of the Gentiles. The times of the Gentiles began in AD 70 with the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline to Israel. This introduces the concept of the client nation and how these things come about, and why a nation can be great in one generation and in the next generation turn around and be a pitiful nation.

We should note once again that the Roman empire was the first Gentile client nation to God in history. The time of the Gentiles is partially coterminous with the Church Age. It had a different beginning but it ends at the same time. The Church Age has no prophecy, it is a dead spot as far as prophecy is concerned. The next prophecy in history will be the removal of the Church by the Rapture which precedes by seven years the second advent. During this dispensation of the Church we have historical trends only, no prophecy. Then prophecy begins and the second great sphere of prophecy deals with the second advent of Christ, preceded by the Rapture, preceded by the Tribulation — Revelation chapters 6-18. The book of Revelation is a history of the world from AD 96, the time of John, to the end of time.

In the Church Age we also have the times of the Gentiles. The times of the Gentiles did not begin at the same time as the Church Age. The Church Age began circa AD 30; the times of the Gentiles began forty years later in AD 70. There were forty years into the Church Age before the Jews were removed as a client nation to God and the Jews will never be a client nation to God again, even though Jewish nations exist periodically in history, until the second advent of Jesus Christ. In the meantime it is impossible for any Jewish nation to be a client nation. This is the times of the Gentiles when only a Gentile nation can be a client nation to God. That means, of course, that starting in AD 70 with the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline to Israel the Jews as the first client nation in history came to a close. Beginning in AD 70 the Roman empire became the first Gentile client nation in history.

By the way, during that forty years between 30 and 70 AD, the last forty years of Israel as a client nation, the Jews were warned constantly by the use of the gift of tongues. They were evangelised by Gentiles even though they were still a client nation, that is, they were evangelised in Gentile languages. They were warned in Isaiah 28 that when the time comes that you are evangelised in Gentile languages your time is coming to a close as a client nation to God. That is exactly what happened. The gift of tongues did not survive AD 70 and no one has legitimately spoken in tongues since that time.

A priest or client nation is responsible for the custodianship of the truth. The truth comes in three categories: category #1, the laws of divine establishment; category #2, the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; category #3, Bible doctrine to the believer. Before Israel such custodianship of truth involved divine revelation apart from scripture. There was no Bible before Israel became the first client nation to God and that was in the time of Moses. Moses is the father of the Jewish nation as a client nation or priest nation to God just as Abraham is the father of the Jewish race. From Adam to Moses there was no Bible and there was, therefore, no client nation or priest nation to God. Custodianship of truth came as a result of divine revelation apart from scripture and it involved custodianship given to various people like Abraham, like Adam. It was an individual custodianship. Additional custodianship was never assigned until the first client nation was born in BC 1440 when the Jews came out of Egypt and out of slavery. So the client nation or priest nation are synonyms and they emphasise a certain responsibility that belongs to a group of people at any given time in history. For example, when the Jews became a client nation to God in the time of Moses then Moses began to receive divine truth reduced to writing. So the canon of scripture was begun and throughout the dispensation of Israel there was a constant addition to the canon of scripture until it was completed some 500 years before the Church Age. Israel was responsible then for the truth and the truth was revealed in the Old Testament.

The laws of divine establishment are clearly delineated by the first two categories of the Mosaic law: the first category, codex #1 actually describes freedom in terms of the decalogue; codex #2 is a description of our Lord Jesus Christ and the truth of the gospel; codex #3 is a detailed description of the laws of divine establishment. So in the Mosaic law itself we have everything necessary for the function of a client nation or a priest nation to God. Basically the functions were very simple. First of all there was the function of evangelism inside of the client nation; outside of the client nation the same thing as a part of missionary function. So there was the function of missions as illustrated from time to time by various missionaries in the Old Testament, the most prominent being Jonah. In addition to that there is the dissemination of truth to the nation and this is absolutely impossible apart from the laws of divine establishment which guarantee freedom. So the entire function is encapsulated in the laws of divine establishment which define freedom plus the sacredness of freedom and self-determination, the sacredness of property and the sacredness of life.

The most important priest nation in all of history until the Roman empire was Israel, the only one. In fact in Exodus 19:6 our Lord revealed through Moses, "You shall be to me a kingdom of priests and a holy nation." Immediately you understand that when it says "a kingdom of priests" every person in Israel was not a priest. In fact only a few people were priests in client nation Israel and they were called Cohen, and it referred to the tribe of Levi only, and in the tribe of Levi to the same family from which Moses came. So there are two categories of priesthood in the Old Testament: the specialised priesthood of the Levitical priesthood, beginning with Aaron, the brother of Moses; secondly, the national priesthood which was the Jews function as a client nation to God. They were responsible for the fulfillment of the laws of divine establishment whereby freedom was maintained, the proper environment for self-determination, and at the same time property, and at the same time the importance of human life. All of these things gave everyone the opportunity to choose for or against freedom, to choose for or against the gospel, and as believers to choose for or against Bible doctrine. Gentile nations were not client nations to God technically until Rome came along, until AD 70, the Church Age.

Negative volition toward doctrine destroys the client nation. This was the warning of the prophet Hosea when in chapter four verse six he warned the northern kingdom of Israel that they were about to be destroyed as a client nation. They were suffering from the same problems we face today, economic problems of one type or another, social degeneration and military disaster.

Why do these things come upon a client nation to God? Just as the Roman empire was the first Gentile client nation so we today are in the line of perpetuation of client nations to God and we are a client nation to God in the same sense as the Roman empire in the first century was a client nation to God. What happens to client nations? Hosea 4:6, "My nation [client nation] is destroyed." What destroys a client nation in the time of Hosea, or later on the Roman empire, or even perhaps the United States today? "... from lack of knowledge [of doctrine]," the maturity maladjustment to the justice of God; "Because you have rejected the principle of knowing doctrine, therefore I will reject you as being a priest to me. Since you have neglected the Torah [the doctrine] of your God, I, even I, will neglect your citizens." And the fifth cycle of discipline was administered at least three times in Jewish history. The Jewish nation until AD 70 was a client nation to God, minus 70 years. First of all in BC 721 Sargon II took Samaria and the northern kingdom ceased to exist as a client nation to God, and was destroyed and went in to slavery. In BC 586 the southern kingdom of the Jews, called Judah, was taken by Nebuchadnezzar. This was the second administration of the fifth cycle of discipline. But after 70 years there was a recovery of the southern area of Palestine and there was a third Jewish client nation called Judea, and it fell in AD 70 when Titus and his Roman legions overran Jerusalem. The failure of Israel resulted in the times of the Gentiles in which Gentile nations become client nations to God. While Chaldea and the Persian empire had large groups of converts technically they were never client nations to God.

Israel is going to be restored in the future but that is a prophecy and will not occur until the second advent of Christ. The prophecy of Israel's future as a client nation is found in Isaiah 49:5-8, "And now says Jehovah [God the Father], who formed me [the humanity of the incarnate Christ] from the womb to be his servant [reference to the first advent] to bring Jacob back to him," the first advent was the cross and the cross becomes the means for the second advent, the crown. By putting the cross before the crown there will be a future Jewish nation in the Millennium as a client nation to God. To bring Jacob back to Him is the restoration of Israel as a client nation at the second advent; "in order that Israel might be gathered to him (For I [Jesus Christ] am glorified in the sight of God the Father, and my God shall be my strength [the strength of the divine dynasphere]), He says [decrees the Father], 'It is too small a thing that you should be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved ones of Israel; I [God the Father] will also make you [Christ] the light of the nations [occurs at the second advent] so that my deliverance will be to the ends of the earth'," the deliverance of Israel at the second advent, "So decrees Jehovah, the redeemer of Israel [Jesus Christ], the Holy One, regarding the despised One [Jesus Christ, first advent], regarding the One abhorred by the (Jewish) nation [first advent], regarding the servant of rulers [Jesus Christ in His third royal patent], Kings shall see and arise, Princes shall also bow down [second advent]; because of the Lord who is faithful, the Holy One of Israel who has chosen you. So decrees the Lord, 'At the right time I have answered you, therefore in the day of deliverance [second advent] I have helped you; consequently I will keep you and give you [the Jewish nation] for a covenant of the people," the restoration of Israel is the fulfillment of their unconditional covenants, "to restore the land of Israel, to make them inherit the desolate heritages [desolate after the Tribulation]."

The thing that makes a client nation tick, whether it is Israel in the past and in the future — second advent, or Gentile client nations in this dispensation of the Church, is the requirement of advance of believers to maturity. In the times of the Gentiles Gentile nations should do a far better job of representing the Lord as a client nation than Jewish nations in the past. The reason is that they are given additional power that did not exist in the Old Testament. The power is the divine dynasphere. The eight gates of the divine dynasphere is the function of the Christian way of life, the modus operandi of the royal family of God. As goes your life as a believer so goes the client nation. Positive believers mean a strong, vigorous, prosperous client nation. Negative believers mean a client nation in decline and eventually going through the five cycles of discipline. The key, then, to the success of any client nation is the individual attitude of the believers in that client nation. Historical trends are determined by the volition of the believer.

The promise to Israel as a client nation has application to us. One of the first promises to Israel as a client nation is found in Exodus 19:5,6, "Now therefore, if you will obey my doctrine and keep my covenants [establishment truth], then you shall be my special possession [client nation] among all the peoples of the earth, for the earth is mine [even though Satan rules the earth]; and you shall be to me a kingdom of priests in a holy [client] nation.”

Now you will notice what is necessary to function as a client nation. “Obey my doctrine, keep my establishment principles, then you are my special possession.” In the past the United States of America has been the special possession of our Lord. Whether that continues or not depends on your attitude toward Bible doctrine.

There is a Millennial reference to Israel as a client nation in Isaiah 61:5-7, “Strangers will stand and pasture your flocks, foreigners will be your farmers and wine producers. But you will be called the priests of the Lord [not the Levitical priesthood but the entire nation of Israel]; and you will be spoken of as ministers of our God [all believers in Israel]. You will eat of the wealth of the nations, and in their riches you will boast. Instead of your shame [today Israel is under a shame ban from the Lord, 5th cycle of discipline] you will have a double portion, and instead of humiliation [historical disaster] you will shout for joy over their portion [restoration of Israel]. Therefore they [the Jews of the Millennium] will possess a double portion in their land, everlasting happiness shall be theirs.”

Now the present role of the United States, a Gentile client nation to God or a priest nation, is very important then. We are taking up the slack during the time of Israel’s shame or disgrace. The times of the Gentiles was prophesied by our Lord in Luke 21:20-24. He prophesied in a very similar passage to where He said there will be wars and rumours of wars “until I come.” He also pointed out to the Jews that they had dropped their military. Herod the Great didn’t, he had a magnificent army and he wasn’t attacked, he was a friend of the Romans. But now that the Roman army was in Palestine the Jews said, “We don’t need an army.” And this is what happened to them, Luke 21:20, referring to the Roman army that came in AD 66 and stayed until they destroyed Israel in AD 70, “But when you see Jerusalem surrounded by armies then know,” the aorist active imperative of the verb ginwskw, you must know historical trends. This is a mandate. Learning doctrine and understanding historical trends is a mandate. The aorist tense is a constative aorist gathering up into one entirety learning of all mandates. Active voice: believers must know historical trends. The imperative mood is a mandate to believers, “that her desolation [fifth cycle of discipline to Israel] is near. Then let those in Judea flee to the mountains,” a mandate to believers who are mature. Get them out of the area, “and let those who are in the middle of Jerusalem get out. Furthermore, let not those who are in the country enter into Jerusalem,” don’t get into the trap, Jerusalem is going to be destroyed, “because these are the days of vengeance [justice, 5th cycle of discipline], in order that all things which are written may be fulfilled,” the prophecies of the end of client nationhood through the fifth cycle of discipline to Israel, “also Jerusalem will be trampled under foot until the time of the Gentiles are fulfilled.” The times of the Gentiles will not be fulfilled until the resurrection of the Church, the Rapture. In the meantime we have a long succession of Gentile client nations.

Revelation 3:10c, the last phrase: We have an aorist active infinitive of the verb peirazw, which means to test for the purpose of determining what you have, of what stuff you are made: good or evil, what are your priorities? what is important to you in life? what is your integrity status? And then we have the accusative plural of the definite article touj, it is part of the direct object and it is used as a personal pronoun and translated “those,” “to test those.” The culminative aorist tense views historical disaster in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, namely the determination of the believer’s status quo in client nation Roman empire. The active voice: historical disaster produces the action of the verb and the infinitive of intended result when the result is indicated as fulfilling a deliberate plan or purpose. Intended result blends the plan with the result. Then we have the present active indicative of the verb katoikew, and it means to live, to dwell somewhere and to live there, “to test those who live,” the descriptive present tense for what is now going on. The active voice: believers living on the earth at that time produce the action just as believers living in the United States right now also produce the same action. The participle is circumstantial. Then we have finally a preposition e)pi plus the genitive of the noun gh and it is a reference to believers in phase two living on planet earth. It is translated, “to test those who live on the earth.”

The corrected translation of the entire verse: “Because you have guarded [maintained by living in the divine dynasphere] the doctrine which came by means of my perseverance [our Lord’s residence and function in the divine dynasphere], I will also guard you [wall of fire around the divine dynasphere] from the time of testing [historical disaster] which is about to come upon the entire Roman empire.”

Notice the principle of the definite article, “those.” The definite article refers to believers who are tested by historical disaster: believers tested by historical disaster at that time and believers tested by historical disaster today. The most obvious test is the fact that historical disaster, like historical prosperity, is a test regarding the believer’s relationship with the plan of God. Whatever the believer’s relationship with the plan of God happens to be, that determines prosperity or disaster. The plan of God for this dispensation calls for every believer to reside and function inside the divine dynasphere, not the cosmic system. In the cosmic system there is only one thing you have and that is arrogance. Personal arrogance will destroy your life and overflow into the national entity. Historical disaster tests believers living in the divine dynasphere and gives them passing marks, hence blessing in disaster. Historical disaster tests believers living in the cosmic system and flunks them, which means they are punished by such disaster, often by the sin unto death. Historical disaster is a test for Christian residence either the divine dynasphere or in the cosmic system. The historical disaster then demonstrates that believers in the divine dynasphere are either winners or believers in the cosmic system are classified as losers.

Verse 11, the perpetuation of spiritual maturity is the challenge to any circumstance in life. Whether it is adversity or prosperity you can have happiness and blessing in any circumstances. Inside of the divine dynasphere there is capacity for life, there is happiness, there is blessing.

The word “behold” in the King James version is not found in the original text. Next we have the present active indicative of the verb e)rxomai, and here it means to come. The verb is often used for both the occurrence of natural events or fateful happenings. Therefore it is not surprising that ε)rxomai is used here for divine discipline for the believer. Without the adverb, however it would mean something else. The adverb is taxu, and it means quickly, rapidly or at once. The present tense of ε)rxomai is a pictorial present, it presents to the believers in mind a picture of divine discipline from cosmic involvement. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb through the administration of divine punishment to the cosmic believer. The indicative mood is the reality of divine discipline even to mature believers who get out of the divine dynasphere and slip into the cosmic system. If they get into the cosmic system they start out getting into cosmic two, and then of course cosmic one if they get into gate one which involves the arrogance and motivating evil factor. If they get in for just a short time, rebound, and get back into the divine dynasphere they are called while they are in the cosmic system, carnal. If they stay there and perpetuate life in the cosmic system they become reversionists. These are simply technical terms to describe the length of time and the spiritual disaster to the individual involved. Corrected translation: “I come quickly” — i.e. to punish cosmic involvement.

Principle

1. Maturity must be achieved and maintained. Once you crack the maturity barrier and go from gate four to gate eight it has to be maintained. The attainment of maturity is no guarantee against cosmic involvement, you still have free will. Good decisions result in options for greater decisions and blessing; bad decisions destroy those options. Even mature believers can make bad decisions.
2. The believer, after the achievement of maturity, must continue to learn doctrine. He must continue to reside and function in the divine dynasphere. He must continue therefore to maintain the right priorities of life. Number one priority must always be Bible doctrine.
3. Many mature believers can pass the adversity test. All mature believers have learned how to handle adversity. But they lean so hard into adversity that when they have a change of pace in prosperity they really don't know what to do. So many mature believers can pass the adversity test but they flunk the prosperity test. You do not handle prosperity the way you handle adversity.
4. Divine blessings must be kept in their perspective so that the mature believer never forgets the source of blessing. The source of blessing comes indirectly from God through residence and function inside the divine dynasphere, daily perception of doctrine at gate four, the advance to gate eight, passing the eight momentum tests.
5. Forgetting the source of prosperity is easy when a mature believer changes his priorities. You cannot stay out of the divine dynasphere very long without changing your priorities. You get so busy with what you are doing in life and so preoccupied with yourself in life that you forget something: the life that you have, the time that you have on this earth is courtesy of our Lord — logistical grace.

6. All too often the mature believer seeks to maintain his prosperity and perpetuate his material blessings rather than maintain the source of his prosperity and perpetuate his spiritual maturity inside the divine dynasphere.

7. Arrogance infiltrates when the mature believer associates promotion or success with himself rather than with the source, the source being the integrity of God, divine justice imputing logistical grace to the indwelling +R, and as you advance to maturity imputing supergrace blessings to that same +R. The source is the Word of God; the source is life in the divine dynasphere.

8. Therefore when the mature believer suddenly becomes involved in the cosmic system the Lord comes suddenly with divine discipline to warn him of his danger and to bring him back to the reality of the divine viewpoint.

9. So far we have the phrase “I come quickly,” referring to warning discipline. We have another reference to it in chapter three verse twenty: “Behold, I stand at the door and keep knocking”. Knocking is also warning discipline. So we have analogies: “I come quickly”; “I keep knocking.” This phrase refers to warning discipline to the mature believer who has suddenly become arrogant through involvement with the cosmic system.

“I come quickly” to punish the mature believer who has moved into the cosmic system. Now there is a mandate to that mature believer. Rebound is necessary, the warning should take care of that for a mature believer. But now here is a warning: present active imperative of the verb kratew, and it is translated “hang on.” We might say, “hang in there,” the progressive present tense for action in a state of persistence, continued residence in the divine dynasphere, “hang in there” in the divine dynasphere, the perpetuation of the perception of doctrine beyond the point of maturity. The active voice: the mature believer must produce the action by “hanging in there.” The imperative of command is for the mandate to perpetuate spiritual maturity inside the divine dynasphere. Once you’ve arrived, keep going. Keep your priorities straight.

Next we have the accusative neuter singular from the relative pronoun o(j), translated “to what.” Since this is the neuter we translate it, “hang on to what.” Then finally the present active indicative of e)χw, “to what you have.” The retroactive progressive present of e)χw denotes what has begun in the past, residence in the divine dynasphere, the attainment of spiritual maturity, and continues into the present. The active voice: the mature believer produces the action by logging maximum time in the divine dynasphere. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the possession of spiritual maturity through the advance from gate four to gate eight of the divine dynasphere. So here is the command to hang in there: “hang on to what you have” as a mature believer.

What does that mean to us?

1. This means avoid arrogance, avoid an erroneous scale of values, maintenance of supergrace blessings in their proper perspective. When you get out of fellowship rebound immediately, don't waste any time fooling around in the cosmic system.
2. Too often prosperity is parlayed into pride.
3. Prosperity is a sedative making the believer forget the source of his prosperity.
4. The source is related to the divine dynasphere and logistical grace provision. But if you get arrogant you become hypersensitive and hypersensitivity completely blocks out the right priority which is Bible doctrine.
5. Every breath we take is courtesy of our Lord Jesus Christ but prosperity has a way of breeding arrogance so that the believer associates all form of blessing with some form of human merit or human ability.
6. This results in preoccupation with self, a rationalisation we call the narcissus syndrome.
7. Cosmic involvement destroys grace thinking, therefore cosmic involvement causes malfunction of the faith-rest drill so that the believer forgets.
8. Cosmic involvement means that the believer forgets doctrine, forgets the right priorities. He forgets the source of doctrine and his former humility in the divine dynasphere is converted into arrogance and arrogance into vanity. From there it is a short trip to warning discipline and disaster.

The reason for all of this is found in the next phrase, the purpose for the warning mandate. The conjunction i(na introduces a purpose clause, "in order that." Then an adjective used as a substantive and therefore the subject, mhdeij, which means "no one." It refers to cosmic believers with influence in the Christian community elsewhere. "No one" refers to believers in the cosmic system, and they have influence through their personality, through their success, attractiveness, whatever it is. With this we have the aorist active subjunctive of lambanw, which means to take away, "in order that no one take away." The culminative aorist tense views the believer in the cosmic system in its entirety but it emphasises loss of reward because he was evangelised by other cosmic believers with influence. The active voice: generally it is a close friend or loved one who is the cosmic believer who produces the action of the verb, cosmic evangelism, a Satan-inspired modus operandi using believers to drag people out of the divine dynasphere and away from doctrine. The subjunctive mood: this is the potential subjunctive, and the subjunctive plus i(na introduces a purpose clause. It is a potential subjunctive because it implies a future reference and is qualified by the element of contingency. In this case the contingency is your own bad decisions. Your loved ones, your friends, or someone becomes more important than Bible doctrine.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object from stephanos, which refers to reward, the second highest reward that God can give. Plus the possessive genitive of the pronoun su, which indicates that those involved have not yet reached the place of historical impact which brings the highest decoration, but they at least have the crown of life. By reaching gate eight they have a crown. Now, by maintenance and moving on in gate eight they can have the order of the morning star.

Corrected translation: "I come quickly [to punish and warn the mature believer in the cosmic system]: hang on to what you have [as a mature believer], so that no one takes away your crown."

When the mature believer becomes so involved in the cosmic system that he loses his rewards at the judgment seat of Christ it is because, generally, of a person. It can be either a person or a thing in life that is put above Bible doctrine. The principle is a very simple one: people influence people; believers influence believers; cosmic believers influence mature believers where mature believers do not separate mentally from their cosmic friends. When social life is perpetuated with cosmic believers and close friendships continue it always works the same way. Just as one bad apple spoils a barrel of good apples, so one cosmic believer lures the other believers away from doctrine, away from daily perception of doctrine, away from the divine dynasphere. If you continue to associate with cosmic believers you will shortly adopt their false scale of values. This is talking about social life, not business life.

So with supergrace prosperity mature believers become very vulnerable to flattery and attention from cosmic believers. Cosmic evangelism is conducted by cosmic believers under the control of Satan's power system. The cosmic evangelist's appeal is generally conducted through arrogance; through the arrogance of either direct flattery or it may be disguised by a facade of intellectuality or affection or passion, or whatever it is. So when the believer in the divine dynasphere is led away by his love, by his affection, by his response to flattery, the result means that he is evangelised for the cosmic system and loses his rewards.

This is a very important verse that is quite unusual. An entire system of theology is based upon the concept that we have here. Wrong decisions are a system of self-punishment. We administer punishment to ourselves and through erroneous use of our own volition or free will we manufacture and create our own misery. There is a very fine line in some case as to when self-induced misery ends and divine discipline begins, but in many cases where the believer rebounds he has made a good decision whereby he is able to offset the problems of self-induced misery.

Man makes a fool of himself every time he makes wrong decisions because these wrong decisions of entrance into the cosmic system inevitably result in manufacturing his own misery. But most people in the cosmic system will not take the responsibility for their own decisions or their own actions and as a result of this they find someone else to blame. And when you blame someone else for your own failures, your own sins, your own problems and your own misery, then you have fallen into this very serious problem. As long as you do not take the responsibility for your own decisions and actions you are going to remain in the cosmic system with a cosmic viewpoint. When people reach maturity they often develop a new sensitivity, and in this new sensitivity of life they often find themselves slipping into a very serious trap of blaming others for their own failures. This is the background for this passage.

The principle behind verse 11 and the fact that you can lose your crown goes back to the fact that the Church Age is the dispensation of no prophecy. Instead it is a dispensation of historical trends and that means that all of the prophecies regarding the first advent of Christ have been fulfilled in detail. The major system of prophecy and the doctrine of eschatology in the Bible is centred around the first and second advents of our Lord Jesus Christ. In the first advent we have the strategic victory of the angelic conflict. In the second advent we have the tactical victory of the angelic conflict and there is a tremendous amount of Old Testament prophecy which was fulfilled with the first advent of Christ. Once our Lord was seated at the right hand of the Father the last of the great prophecies of the Old Testament regarding the first advent were fulfilled — Psalm 110:1. There He received His third royal patent and this is the one which is so important to us and makes this the dispensation for the forming of a royal family for that royal patent. Also there is no prophecy; we are an interlude between eschatological events. There will be no prophecy until the Church Age is terminated by the Rapture or the resurrection of the Church.

In the meantime historical trends are very pertinent. Church Age doctrine which all revolves around life in the divine dynasphere is extremely pertinent to us because it includes every principle of application of doctrine. We apply doctrine to our own personal lives, we apply doctrine to the great concept of this dispensation which isn't prophecy but virtue and integrity. First of all motivational virtue directed toward God in the divine dynasphere and, secondly, functional virtue toward man and circumstances as a function of our royal ambassadorship. This is the major emphasis in the period of historical trends. Once we understand historical trends then we do not get upset about what we consider to be the great reverses in history, for there never has been a nation or group of people which is not the product of its own decisions. Therefore we bring our failures on ourselves. We must take the responsibility for our own decisions and whether we do this or not it is going to happen at the judgment seat of Christ, for at the end of verse 11 we have this phrase: "hang on to what you have [as a mature believer stay in the divine dynasphere] so that no one takes away your crown." The implication is that even after cracking the maturity barrier you can lose your rewards at the judgment seat of Christ.

It all begins with 2 Corinthians 5:10. All of us are going to face an evaluation of our spiritual lives in the future. All of us are going to face an evaluation of what we did with logistical grace. God has capitalised every believer with logistical grace from the moment of salvation. We are given, for example, a certain amount of time on this earth; we are given food, shelter, clothing, everything necessary to function in life; we are given freedom and opportunity therefore to respond to Bible doctrine or reject it; we have options in time. We have logistical grace support from the justice of God imputed to believers to the indwelling divine righteousness, one of the things we received at salvation. And we are free to make decisions. We have positive volition toward doctrine and that has to do with good decisions. We have negative volition toward doctrine and that has to do with bad decisions. All of these things tie in together so that we as believers are either going to be highly successful by divine standards or we are going to flunk. Failure does not mean loss of salvation but failure means loss of rewards at the judgment seat of Christ. As our passage says, "hang on so that we do not lose our crown". This is actually a reference to the crown of life which was previously mentioned in chapter two and has to do with residence and function inside the divine dynasphere.

There is no such thing as equality in life; there is such a thing as equal opportunity. All opportunity comes through freedom and through free enterprise. The principle here should be very obvious. You and I find ourselves unequal today but we do have one area where we do have equality. We do have free will in our souls; we do have volition. We have the opportunity to make decisions and those who make positive decisions are going to advance to maturity inside the divine dynasphere. Those who make negative decisions toward doctrine are going to retrogress into such phraseology as carnality [one category of cosmic residence] or reversionism [another category of cosmic residence]. So it all adds up to this: your attitude toward Bible doctrine after salvation determines your status quo in time and in eternity. On this earth we have a tremendous difference among believers. Believers who are positive advance to maturity; believers who are negative or cosmic believers are failures, they have flunked the Christian life, they have failed to utilise the tremendous capital made available by the grace of God, logistical grace support. So we have vast differences in time but these differences are going to be dramatised in eternity for there we are going to have even greater differences. In heaven which is a perfect place there are going to be the mature believers, those who are able to hang on through the daily perception of doctrine. And they will have the order of the morning star, they will have various crowns, they will have all kinds of decorations, they are going to become famous as rulers of nations in the Millennium, they are going to be famous in the records system of heaven forever, they will have a chapter devoted to them in the permanent historical records of history. This will be a record that cannot be destroyed because the records will be in the temple of heaven.

The loss of reward is the subject of 1 Corinthians 3:11-15, "No man can lay a foundation other than the one which is laid, which is Jesus Christ". In other words, we are talking about those who are believers in the Lord Jesus Christ. "When anyone builds on the foundation either gold, silver or precious stones," the modus operandi in the divine dynasphere; "or wood, hay, and stubble," this is modus operandi in the cosmic system. Modus operandi in the divine dynasphere is rewardable; modus operandi in the cosmic system means loss of reward — "Each believer's production will become evident [manifest]; for the day [judgment seat of Christ] will show it, because it is revealed by fire; in fact the fire itself will test what quality each one's production is." So we are not talking about salvation, we are talking about quality of production. The only production which is rewardable is that which is related to the divine dynasphere and all production which is related to the cosmic system is not rewardable, "If anyone's production which he has built on it [the foundation of imputed righteousness] remains, he shall receive a reward. If anyone's production is burned up, he shall suffer loss of reward; but he himself shall be delivered, yet so as through fire.” So the believer who fails is going to be there and that is all. The believer who succeeds is going to have fantastic rewards.

The doctrine of eternal security is a guarantee that you are free to use your volition to succeed or fail without ever making a decision that will take away your salvation. The worst decisions you can make will never cancel the one decision you made when you believed in the Lord Jesus Christ. That is irreversible, it is perpetuated forever, it is not subject to any form of cancellation. You can make no bad decisions that will take away your salvation. Eternal security therefore becomes a base for freedom, freedom in the spiritual life, the ability to choose God’s plan as over against Satan’s plan, the cosmic system. Therefore you should have confidence in time, 1 John 3:21, “Beloved [royal family of God] if our right lobe does not condemn us [life inside the divine dynasphere] we keep on having confidence before God.” That principle of confidence then overflows to the judgment seat of Christ.

The cosmic believer loses confidence in God through his own function of volition but the believer who lives inside the divine dynasphere gains confidence in God, especially through function at gate four, the perception and application of doctrine. So while the cosmic believer is losing rewards at the judgment seat of Christ he will also have a time of discomfort which we might call shame or embarrassment. The fact that the mature believer does not have this embarrassment is taught in Romans 5:5; Philippians 1:20.

The divine dynasphere and the judgment seat of Christ guarantee great blessing for all eternity. They also guarantee special blessing in time. For example, in James 1:25 the one who looks intently into the perfect law [perception of doctrine at gate four] that gives freedom,” good decisions open options for greater decisions and for the believer who lives inside the divine dynasphere there is freedom and options for more and more decisions; “and continues to do this” [momentum inside the divine dynasphere], not forgetting what he has heard [e)pignwsij doctrine is applicable] but doing it [from e)pignwsij comes production], this believer will be happy in what he is doing, so there is blessing in time for modus operandi inside the divine dynasphere. That is why James 2:12 says, “So keep speaking and so keep doing as those who are going to be judged [evaluated] by the law that gives freedom,” Bible doctrine produces a freedom to make greater and greater decisions. That is why it says: “You shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free.” Truth comes in three categories: the laws of divine establishment, there is freedom in establishment; the gospel, you are free to accept Christ; Bible doctrine for the believer, and that is what is meant by freedom or liberty here. This principle, then, becomes a challenge to each one of us to reestablish our priorities and put Bible doctrine first. There is also the concept of application of virtue to the judgment seat of Christ, which keeps us from gossiping and maligning and judging other believers. There are many analogies in the scripture to the judgment seat of Christ.

The future is what we have in Revelation 3:11, “I come quickly” is our Lord coming to punish and warn any mature believer in the cosmic system. When we become the recipients of divine discipline it is a warning. God’s punishment makes you realise something. It alerts you to the fact that you are living in the cosmic system. Now you hurt, and God says that you are going to keep on hurting until you are aware of the fact that you must rebound. And so the only thing that divine discipline does is to motivate rebound. Suppose you ignore warning discipline and you are still in that same arrogant rut of self-pity. Then you get intensive discipline. If you ignore intensive discipline then you are simply used as an aggressor against other believers until the Lord takes you out under the sin unto death. And in eternity you will demonstrate forever and ever that you were too unteachable, that you couldn't learn anything. The demonstration will be that you will be a peon forever; all you will have is a resurrection body.

Note: The worst people in the world are not dumb people; the worst people in the world are unteachable people. Unteachability is the first sign of arrogance.

“that no one take away your crown,” crowns are military decorations. This is the way it is used in the Greek. The word is stefanoj, and the equivalent to it in the Latin is corona, the highest decoration that the Roman soldier could receive. The Romans had six categories of crowns. In Christianity Paul has given us only three by way of analogy: the crown of life for maximum time logged inside the divine dynasphere with the inevitable results of advancing to maturity; the crown of righteousness for production, the production of virtue and integrity inside of the divine dynasphere; the crown of glory which is limited to those who communicate doctrine under some spiritual gift.

You may be in a position right now where you are going to have a crown. So notice what it says here: “Hang on!” If you don't, you can lose it. That is the principle behind this verse.

The principle is found in Luke 19:12, “He said therefore, ‘A certain aristocrat went into a distant country to receive a kingdom for himself, and then return,’ that is analogous to our Lord Jesus Christ. Going into a far country is the ascension and His return is the second advent. Immediately we know that this is a reward for Old Testament saints and does not directly apply to the Church Age, but the analogy is here; there is a principle behind it, ‘And he called his ten slaves [Old Testament believers], and he gave them ten minas [money],’ this indicates that God has a different system for believers in the Old Testament to advance to maturity, but it is the same principle: logistical grace. Our Lord capitalises the Old Testament believers just as He capitalises us in logistical grace. But logistical grace is different in each dispensation. In the Old Testament it does not include the divine dynasphere and the 36 things we received at salvation. One mina was given to each servant. That is logistical support of every believer, ‘But his citizens [client nation Israel] hated him, and sent an embassy after him saying, “We do not want this man to reign over us,” indicating why our Lord went into the far country, ‘And it came about when he returned, after receiving the kingdom [second advent], he ordered that these servants to whom he had given the money [logistical support], be summoned to him that he might know what they had gained with it,’ this is the evaluation of Old Testament saints, ‘And the first appeared saying, “Lord, your mina has earned ten times more,” that is a mature Old Testament believer, ‘And he replied to him, “Well done, good slave, because you have been faithful in a very little thing, take charge of ten cities” .’

Now we learn something from this. We have already seen that the holders of the morning star are going to come back with the Lord and in the Millennial reign of Christ they are going to rule nations, Gentile nations. But these Old Testament saints are going to rule cities, indicating that the royal family of God is in the higher echelon of concept than the Old Testament saints. The point is that they will be ruling cities.

'And the second came, saying, "Lord, your mina has made five minas." And he said to him, "You are to rule over five cities." And another came, saying, "Lord, behold your mina which I kept and laid away in a piece of cloth," this is the believer who has eternal salvation and that is all, and it is an illustration of a lot of believers in the Church Age, resurrection body and nothing to show for it; "For I was afraid of you, because you are a hard man," not true. At the time He was ignored, negative volition; "you take up what you did not put down, and reap what you did not sow." This person is even antiestablishment, he is anti-free enterprise, 'And he said to him, "By your own words I will judge you, evil servant," he is a servant but he is an evil one, he lived in the cosmic system; "You knew did you that I am a hard man, taking up what I did not lay down, and reaping what I did not sow? Then why did you not put the money in the bank, and having come, I would have collected it with interest?" And he said to the bystanders, "Take his mina from him, and give it to the one who has ten minas." And they said to him, "Lord, he already has ten minas." And I say to you, that to everyone who has more it shall be given, but from the one who does not have, even what he does not have shall be taken away'. He failed to use logistical grace in time, he will have absolutely nothing but a resurrection body in eternity. And there is no excuse for it.

So obviously then rewards are related to historical trends because right in the middle of our historical trends context we suddenly have this concept. We have already noted that there is the gazebo in the garden which is the ultimate in eternal happiness. And this is for those who hang on and gain the order of the morning star, Revelation 2:7.

Those believers who advance to maturity are anonymous in history at the present time but they will become famous because they will be kings for 1000 years, the last 1000 years of history. After that, of course, they will be in the highest order of eternal chivalry forever and ever.

Verse 11, "I come quickly." The subject is the Lord Jesus Christ and it refers to the function of the justice or the holiness of God in the administration of punishment to cosmic believers; to punish and warn, not only cosmic believers as such but mature believers who linger too long in the cosmic system. "I come quickly" means to come with a sense of surprise, to come violently, to administer terrible punishment. Therefore our first doctrine that we are going to harvest out of the two verses we have been studying is the doctrine of divine discipline.

The doctrine of divine discipline

1. Definition. Divine discipline is the sum total of punitive action taken by the justice of God to correct, punish, encourage, train and motivate the believer's free will toward the person and the plan of God. Divine discipline is distinguished from divine judgment in that discipline is for believers only, whereas divine judgment is for the entire human race, all categories under certain circumstances. Believers become involved in the cosmic system under two categories: carnality, a brief stay in the cosmic system which is rapidly rooted out by warning discipline; reversionism is a prolonged residence in the cosmic system, failure to rebound, and generally not blasted out either by warning discipline or by intensive discipline. Divine discipline must also be distinguished from self-induced misery. Bad decisions not only destroy future options in life but they result in originating your own misery from your own soul totally apart from any divine administration of punishment. We pay for our bad decisions under the principle that as a man soweth he shall also reap. Sowing and reaping has nothing to do with divine discipline, it has to do simply with making bad decisions and facing the unpleasant results of them. In other words, believers are constantly making decisions which result in their own misery, unhappiness and discomfort, totally apart from punitive action from God. All people are the products of their own decisions, good or bad. Decisions create environment for life, not environment for decisions. Punishment from God often follows the self-induced misery, it never precedes it. All wrong decisions, including carnality and reversionism, relate to cosmic involvement and cosmic function. All wrong decisions in life are connected with some form of arrogance. The difference then between self-induced suffering and divine discipline is the source. We personally are the source of our self-induced misery, whereas God is the source of divine discipline.

While God is the source of divine discipline, man's free will is the source of his self-induced misery, and at the outset it should be noted that regardless of the category of suffering or discipline divine punishment of the believer does not imply or include loss of salvation. No believer can lose his salvation for any reason whatsoever. All divine discipline, except the sin unto death, is designed to coerce the believer, to teach the believer, by motivating him to recover from the cosmic system and slavery to Satan who is the ruler of this world. Therefore, divine discipline is often beneficial and profitable, but only when the believer responds through the use of the rebound drill, recovering residence and function in the divine dynasphere. The principle: believers must accept the responsibility for their own bad decisions, and further, accept the responsibility for all categories of divine discipline to which one is subjected.

2. The principle of divine discipline. While judgment is punitive action from God to all mankind divine discipline is God's punishment of believers only, and it is punishment designed to teach, punishment designed to motivate. All Church Age believers are royal family of God and God's punitive action directed toward the royal family is obviously by definition a family affair, as illustrated by the relationship between a loving parent and a wayward child, Hebrews 12:5,6; Proverbs 3:12. Divine discipline to the believer is parental training within the royal family, it is designed to inculcate humility for without humility none of us are going anywhere in life. Divine discipline teaches the believer when he refuses to learn from doctrinal teaching. Therefore we have to classify divine discipline as the believer learning the hard way: learning through pain, through hurting in some way.

Divine discipline is a warning that we as believers are out of bounds as far as the plan of God is concerned. Football is a game played inside of boundaries on a playing field and it is therefore analogous to the plan of God. The plan of God is a perfect plan designed to be executed inside of boundaries. The boundaries are described, of course, in terms of the divine dynasphere. Just as the referee blows his whistle when the play goes out of bounds so God blows the whistle on believers when they are out of bounds as far as His plan is concerned. God's whistle is a loud whistle, not in the sense of hurting your ears but simply in the sense that it hurts.

There are two systems, therefore, in learning as believers. All believers have to learn one way or the other, or both. The first system of learning is the communication of doctrine from one's own right pastor. We might classify that as an unlimited system of learning. The only limitations are put on yourself by negative volition toward doctrine — refusing to expose yourself to it or hearing it and rejecting it. So we have an unlimited system of perception that will take us into the unlimited heights of supergrace A, supergrace B, or ultra-supergrace; but there is a second way in which to learn, a limited system — divine discipline. You are limited as to what you can learn and you are limited as far as your advance is concerned. Divine discipline is a fantastic teacher and it can only teach one or two things: rebound, get back into the divine dynasphere, and then once you get back in there get cracking so that you won't have to go through this again.

So number one, the unlimited system, is unlimited in the sense that it results in both spiritual maturity and fantastic blessing. The second system, the limited system, is learning the hard way through painful experience. Furthermore, while divine discipline can teach some lessons well and produce great respect for God's authority it cannot bring the believer to maturity, only e)pignosis doctrine can accomplish that. So we have to call divine discipline, then, a limited system of learning. Nevertheless, divine discipline is a teacher and often produces teachability. Therefore it must be regarded as another form of blessing and a glorious opportunity to exercise one's options for the grace of God and the plan of God. And furthermore, divine discipline provides opportunity for believers to reverse the results of bad decisions and start making good decisions again. If you cannot learn from the humility of gate three of the divine dynasphere you can learn from hurting — divine discipline.

So that is the principle that is so important in our passage, "I come quickly," says our Lord. In other words, if you won't learn from humility you will learn from hurting. Take your choice. To continue to learn from hurting is only to distort the purpose for logistical grace and to depart from this life, phase two, in misery and disgrace called the sin unto death. If you do not learn the lesson of divine discipline as a believer you will live in the cosmic system until you are destroyed by divine discipline. One nice thing about limited learning: God will never stop teaching you if you live in the cosmic system. He will keep punishing you, giving you warning discipline, intensive discipline, and eventually dying discipline. One way or another He will persist in teaching.

3. Divine discipline relates also to the general subject of suffering. There is suffering for divine discipline and suffering for testing and blessing. That reduces all suffering for the believer to two categories and in each case there are six principles. Suffering for discipline has an issue and suffering for blessing has an issue. When you suffer for divine discipline the issue is sin, carnality, reversionism; the issue for suffering for blessing is spiritual momentum and supergrace blessings. Then there is the second approach called status. The status of suffering for discipline is cosmic involvement; the status for suffering for blessing is the divine dynasphere.

There is also a third category which is category. The category of divine discipline is unbearable suffering. God can't teach you unless you hurt enough so that He can get your attention, therefore the category is unbearable suffering; whereas suffering for testing and blessing is bearable. The fourth category is the viewpoint involved. The viewpoint for suffering for divine discipline is arrogance and subjectivity. It is very difficult to teach people when they are subjective and arrogant, and therefore before you can get their attention God says they must hurt. The viewpoint of suffering for testing and blessing is humility and objectivity.

Then, of course, there is category solution. The solution to suffering for discipline is the use of the rebound technique, whereas the solution to suffering for blessing is the three stages of the faith-rest drill.

Finally, in each case there is a result. In suffering for discipline the result is that cursing is turned to blessing, when we use the solution, plus any suffering left over is now designed for blessing, whereas the result in suffering for blessing is blessing plus the acceleration of the spiritual life.

So categorically there is a relationship between divine discipline and the overall subject of suffering. After the believer recovers fellowship with God through the rebound technique the suffering may cease, as per 1 Corinthians 11:31. If the suffering does not cease after rebound the suffering has a different purpose, blessing, and the believer is able to bear it under the principle of 1 Corinthians 10:13.

When suffering is designed for punishment or discipline the believer cannot bear it, but when suffering is designed for testing the believer can bear it and even derive great blessing from it, but only inside the divine dynasphere. Therefore once rebound has occurred the purpose of suffering changes from punishment to testing for blessing, and with that the believer once again becomes teachable under the unlimited system, the perception of doctrine at gate four of the divine dynasphere. Only rebound, then, can change cursing into blessing in the field of suffering. All Christian suffering in the cosmic system is punitive; all Christian suffering in the divine dynasphere is testing for the purpose of blessing.

4. The spheres of divine discipline. The first sphere of divine discipline is punishment in time — Hebrews 12:5-14.

“And so you yourselves have forgotten the principle of doctrine which teaches you as sons, ‘My son, do not make light of correcting discipline from the Lord, nor be fainting when you are reproved by him; for whom the Lord loves he disciplines and punishes [in time] every son whom he welcomes home.' Because of corrective discipline, endure [inside of the divine dynasphere]; for as a result God deals with you as sons; for what one [member of the royal family] is a son whom the Father does not discipline? But if you are without discipline, of which all believers have become participants, then you are bastards and not sons. Furthermore, we had our human parents for corrective discipline and we respected them; therefore to a greater degree you will become subordinate to the Father of our spirits, and continue living [in the divine dynasphere]. For they [human parents] on the one hand disciplined us for a short time [childhood] according to what seemed best to them, but he [God] on the other hand disciplines us for our benefit, in order that we might receive a share of his integrity [blessing inside the divine dynasphere]. So on the one hand all discipline while in progress [in time] appears to be an occasion not for happiness but for sorrow; on the other hand, afterwards [recovery from the cosmic system through rebound] it pays back with interest prosperous gain [resumed momentum in the divine dynasphere] to those believers who are trained [or taught] by the same discipline. Therefore, restore to power [to the divine dynasphere] the listless hands [analogy to life in the cosmic system] and restore to power the disabled knees [analogy to function in the cosmic system — a mandate to rebound], and be making straight tracks by means of your feet [momentum from gate four to gate eight] in order that the cripple [the believer involved in the cosmic system] may not be put out of joint permanently [through living in the cosmic system], but rather be restored [to the divine dynasphere]. With all the royal family of God keep moving toward the objective [advance to gate eight] which is prosperity, likewise aspire to integrity without which no man will see God" — the integrity or sanctification is, of course, salvation sanctification, reception of +R at the point of faith in Christ.

No divine discipline during the interlude of blessing between physical death and the Rapture is a very important principle. Between physical death and the Rapture we go to heaven: absent from the body, face to face with the Lord. It is a time of great happiness and the interim body is implied by 2 Corinthians 5:8. There is no difference during that interim period in heaven. All believers have an interim body which resembles their body and facial expressions on earth. Each one is recognisable. Then comes the Rapture, the big genuflect in the sky, and the judgment seat of Christ. And we at the Rapture receive our resurrection bodies and they are all the same, there is no difference, and when we all gather as the entire royal family of the Church Age to worship our Lord Jesus Christ, again there is no difference. But at the judgment seat of Christ two categories of Church Age believers become apparent, the losers and the winners. The losers are defined as believers in Christ who spent most of their Christian lives in the cosmic system. Winners are those who spent most of their time in the divine dynasphere. Hence the importance of that phrase from 2 Timothy 2:15, "we should be workmen that need not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." That's learning the easy way, learning through perception of doctrine, and that is the key to great blessing.

5. The purpose of divine discipline in time. Revelation 3:19, "Those whom I love [God's personal love for all believers based on their imputed +R], I reprimand [warning discipline] and I punish [intensive discipline]: therefore be zealous [be motivated by divine discipline], and rebound".

The purpose of divine discipline is to motivate the believer to recover his residence in the divine dynasphere through the use of the rebound technique. It is a warning that the member of the royal family, the believer, is out of bounds. God blows the whistle on him. The boundaries of the plan of God are defined in terms of the divine dynasphere, both residence and function at eight gates. God uses divine punishment to warn the believer that the cosmic system is out of bounds and its function will lead to cosmic death. The believer must recover from the cosmic system to live in the divine dynasphere to glorify the Lord Jesus Christ. Inside of the divine dynasphere logistical grace is exploited to the glory of God, but in the cosmic system logistical grace is distorted into support from God while you are serving Satan.

The cosmic believer who does not learn the lesson of divine discipline is eventually removed from this life under the most painful of circumstances, the sin unto death. Learning the easy way through perception of doctrine in the divine dynasphere, gate four, exploits logistical grace and results in spiritual maturity and the fantastic blessings that result thereof. Learning the hard way through divine discipline can only motivate the believer to get out of the cosmic system through rebound and therefore it has a limited though very necessary objective, another way of saying that no believer can advance to maturity on the basis of mastering the rebound technique.

Rebound is the means of living in the divine dynasphere while doctrine must be learned once you are inside. The purpose, then, of divine discipline is to motivate rebound; the purpose of the whole realm of doctrine is the fulfillment of the divine plan, advancing to maturity, and glorifying the Lord Jesus Christ. The limited objective of divine discipline, then, can only motivate your recovery from the cosmic system, whereas the unlimited objective of learning through Bible doctrine is the advancement to maturity and the glorification of the Lord Jesus Christ. While divine discipline has a purpose in bringing the believer back to the classroom for learning Bible doctrine, bringing him back to the filling of the Spirit which gives him the ability to learn, it has a limited function. Therefore divine discipline is never profitable unless the believer will assume the responsibility for his own personal decisions. Divine punishment causes the cosmic believer to accept the responsibility for his bad decisions and to parlay them into something that is acceptable to God through His grace, through the function of the rebound technique.

Verse 11, "I come quickly" to punish and warn. The warning here is for mature believers because if mature believers get into the cosmic system, as inevitably they will, and stay there, there is no hope for the Roman empire as a client nation to God. The same principle is facing us today, right now. Mature believers have turned their backs on doctrine, they have changed their priorities, they have rethought their position.

We have also studied the phrase, "hang on to what you have." Hang on to what you have because your attitude toward doctrine, your residence and function in the divine dynasphere is the only thing that can save us. You can't operate a domestic policy or a foreign policy on principle without a pivot of mature believers. That is the concept.

Inevitably all nations of the world must make their own success or failure by their own decisions. The trouble is that ever since Franklin Roosevelt became the president of the United States we have been telling other people how to run their business, and Franklin Roosevelt made decisions that guaranteed that one third of the earth would go into slavery under communism. That's arrogance.

"Hang on to what you have." Do you know what you have? If you don't know what you have you can't hang on to it. The only people who know what they have are the ones who reside and function inside of the divine dynasphere. But, even knowing what you have you can lose it. To hang on to what you have does not require flattery or feeling wanted, it requires truth. And from truth comes integrity. You cannot hang on to what you have without Bible doctrine and you can't hang on to what you have without truth. That is why we have the divine dynasphere: to give you the plan of God in terms of its boundaries, in terms of the playing field.

"I come quickly: hang on to what you have," these are actually alternatives, the alternative between the divine discipline and the divine dynasphere. As a mature believer you must continue in the divine dynasphere. This is the concept of the ultimate objective. To attain and maintain the ultimate objective, the glorification of Christ, which is spiritual maturity, daily perception of doctrine, residence in the divine dynasphere functioning at its various gates. To do this you must have the right priorities and you must never deviate from the right priorities; doctrine must always be first. There is more than your personal blessing involved, there is the blessing of your country, the function of the client nation, the dissemination of truth in other countries.

We have a phrase coming up: "that no one takes your crown." And that is really the key as far as eternity is concerned. But it could easily have read: "so that no one destroys the client nation, so that no enemy wipes us out, so that we don't destroy ourselves," for truth, and that means Bible doctrine, is the stabiliser not only in personal life but in collective lives.

No nation learns from the mistakes of another nation while involved in cosmic arrogance. This refers to the non-client nation where there is not a pivot of mature believers nor freedom for perception of truth in three categories — laws of divine establishment, the gospel, Bible doctrine. The non-client nation serves Satan and he can only survive by being selfish, by selfishly considering only its own national interest.

No nation can survive functioning on principle without a pivot. If a nation doesn't have a pivot and is not a client nation it doesn't have enough truth to survive by using its principle for its foreign policy and its domestic policy. The only nation that has the opportunity and the privilege and the luxury of forming its foreign and domestic policy on principle is the nation categorised as the client nation to God. Principle is no good as a modus operandi unless you have truth. It takes evangelism and positive volition toward doctrine for a nation to base its foreign and domestic policy on principle. Principle is based on truth, therefore truth must be backed by truth. If you use truth in your foreign policy you must have a pivot of mature believers thinking truth to concur with that policy when the policy is tested by defeat, by economic depression, or by social degeneration and violence. For principle to be the surviving factor in a national entity that national entity must be a client nation and it must have a pivot of mature believers. So a nation without positive volition and a pivot of mature believers is simply not a client nation to God. The Roman empire not only survived but had fantastic prosperity during the era of the Antonine Caesars, 96-192 AD. They had this prosperity because of the pivot of mature believers in the Roman province of Asia.

The function of principle and integrity in a nation's foreign and domestic policy is reserved by God under historical trends for the client nation only. Furthermore, for the client nations who are positive to Bible doctrine and possess a large pivot of mature believers so that truth backs both national integrity and the principle by which decisions are made, you have great blessing from that nation. Therefore you have a historical trend. Non-client nations can only survive by being selfish, by placing their own national interests above every other consideration. That is why Israel is surviving and doing well, in spite of our (US) meddling. Only client nations to God can function on principle and integrity and survive. And they survive because they have the pivot. Their survival depends, then, on Bible doctrine.

The American people today live in a utopia of arrogance. We are obviously in the cosmic system as a people, there are exceptions, of course, because we demand that all people adhere to our concepts of civil rights and democracy. Democracy is next to degeneracy as a form of government. We are not a democracy, we are a republic. But what made America great, therefore, was not civil rights and democracy, it was freedom. The real secret to power in history is not the accouterments of freedom mouthed by politicians talking about civil rights. The real issue is the source of freedom, Bible doctrine. That is why our Lord said: "You shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." No truth, no freedom. They go together.

When a client nation to God makes a foreign policy decision on the basis of principle it must be the application of truth based on virtue and integrity, or a pivot of virtue and integrity. But when a non-client nation to God makes a foreign policy decision on the basis of principle it leads to failure since there is no pivot of mature believers to sustain such a policy under the principle of historical trends. Only the client nation to God can function on principle from integrity. Other nations have to be selfish to survive. By that is meant that when a non-client nation seeks to deliver other nations from evil they must first count the cost and consider their own people.

We stick our self-righteous nose into the business of every nation. We ignore the point of doctrine which was stated first in the Old Testament and then the New. Deuteronomy 32:8, "When the Most High God gave nations their inheritance, when he separated the children of Adam he established boundaries for the people," boundaries for the people of the world are nations, nationalism, part of the laws of divine establishment "according to the number of citizens of Israel." That is when Israel was a client nation to God. The boundaries were based on the fact that Israel as a client nation had the truth. They were to live by the laws of divine establishment, they were to evangelise their own people, they were to teach Bible doctrine and send out missionaries. Acts 17:26, "He made from one [human race, one blood] every nation of mankind to live on the surface of the earth, having determined their appointed times, and the boundaries of their habitation.” All nations must have boundaries and those boundaries must be respected. Every nation must function on the basis of its own self-determination. No nation has the right to tell other nations how to run their business. We have the right to evangelise, to send missionaries where permitted, to reach doctrine where positive volition exists, but we do not have the right to interfere in the sovereignty of another nation unless we are at war with it.

Everything depends on the pivot. The pivot is composed of mature believers, believers can lose their maturity by getting into the cosmic system. Mature believers have advanced understanding and wisdom about many things and they can try to take the truth which they have and superimpose it on others against their will, which is wrong. It is possible to have the truth as a believer and get arrogant about the truth and make the wrong application. It is one thing to have the truth and to see where people are failing, it is something else to superimpose on them against their will your attitudes, your views, your opinions.

The next phrase which we have noted in part is a very simple one made up of three Greek words, kratei o(e)keij. The present active imperative of the verb kratew actually means here to hang on. The progressive present tense is for action in a state of persistence, i.e. continuing residence in the divine dynasphere, continuing function at the eight gates of the divine dynasphere, the necessity of historical impact, the concept of utilising the divine capital for every believer — logistical grace. The active voice: the believer must produce the action. The imperative of mood of command is for the mandate which is to perpetuate spiritual maturity and the necessity for the pivot.

The second word in the mandate for the mature believer is the accusative neuter singular of the relative pronoun o(j. The relative pronoun becomes the object of the verb in the accusative. We can translate it “to what,” “Hang on to what.” And the final word is the present active indicative e)xw, “Hang on to what you have,” which means that you have everything necessary from the point of salvation on to fulfill the plan of God, to have historical impact, to glorify the Lord Jesus Christ. The retroactive progressive present denotes what has begun in the past, the attainment of spiritual maturity and the recruitment for the pivot of mature believers. And it continues into the present. The active voice: the mature believer produces the action of the verb, This is a declarative indicative for the reality of the possession of spiritual maturity, the advance from gate four to gate eight of the divine dynasphere.

The problem in the case of hanging on is the problem of prosperity. The believers to whom this is addressed have reached the point of great prosperity. Too often prosperity is parlayed into arrogance. Prosperity is a sedative making the mature believer forget the source of his prosperity. The source is related to the principle of logistical grace, residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. Anytime any group or individual receives prosperity the great danger is to assume that somehow that prosperity is related to their ability, their achievement, rather than through the grace of God and His provision. Prosperity has a way therefore of breeding arrogance so that the people associated with this prosperity forget the origin of it. This results in preoccupation with self. Cosmic involvement therefore destroys grace thinking and causes malfunction of the faith-rest drill, the believer loses his perspective of life and even though he is a mature believer he is in danger of losing out on the most fantastic things in eternity. Cosmic involvement means the believer forgets doctrine, the source of doctrine, and humility is converted into arrogance, arrogance to vanity, and from there it is a short trip to the discipline and disaster which we noted in the phrase “I come quickly.”

In the final phrase we have a conjunction i(na that introduces a purpose clause, “that,” “in order that.” With it we have the adjective mhdeij, used here as a substantive and such it is translated “no one,” “in order that no one.” It refers to cosmic believers who have influence on your life, more when you are in prosperity than at any other time. The source of prosperity is the Lord but once we reach the point of prosperity it is amazing how old friends, new friends, and all kinds of friends suddenly appear on the scene to share our prosperity and to flatter us into the cosmic system. With the subject, the adjective mhdiej used as a substantive, we have the aorist active subjunctive of the verb lambanw, which means here to take away something that belongs to you. And it isn’t just the prosperity, it is the eternal reward. The culminative aorist tense views the mature believer’s cosmic involvement in its entirety but emphasises the results of loss of reward at the judgment seat of Christ, which is the greatest disaster that could ever overtake any believer — to reach maturity and then to get into the cosmic system through cosmic evangelism and then to lose out for all eternity. The active voice: generally it is a close friend, someone you love, someone you admire, or someone who has flattered you into getting your attention. Generally, then, some close friend or loved one who is a cosmic believer produces the action of the verb. But remember you are in greater danger as a mature believer in being led astray by believers, not unbelievers. The subjunctive mood is a potential subjunctive which with the conjunction i(na introduces a purpose clause. The potential subjunctive implies a future reference followed by the element of contingency: this doesn’t have to happen.

Then we have the direct object in the accusative singular, and this is the noun stefanoj. It refers to the second highest system of decoration at the judgment seat of Christ. With this we have the possessive genitive of the pronoun su which is translated “your” crown, something that is your very own, something you have achieved through parlaying logistical grace into supergrace through momentum from gate four to gate eight of the divine dynasphere.

Corrected translation of the verse: “I come quickly [to punish and warn the mature believer in the cosmic system]: hang on to what you have, so that no one takes away your crown [eternal reward at the judgment seat of Christ].”

Hanging on doesn’t mean standing still. No one ever stands still in the Christian life. Hanging on means to continue to advance and reach gate eight. When the mature believer becomes involved in the cosmic system he loses his rewards at the judgment seat of Christ.

The divine dynasphere is the Christian way of life and the divine dynasphere describes the Christian way of life in terms of its eight gates. The believer who lives in the divine dynasphere contributes to the uptrend of history and the believer who lives in the cosmic system of Satan, the ruler of this world, contributes to the downtrend of history. On that basis we now move to the next phrase, "I come quickly [to punish and warn believers]," in this case mature believers in the divine dynasphere. So a mandate is necessary since we are talking about the pivot, for as goes the pivot so goes the client nation to God. No client nation to God can function in its domestic policy or its foreign policy on the basis of principle unless it is backed up by a pivot of mature believers. The secret to the greatness of any client nation to God depends entirely upon the pivot. Therefore your attitude toward Bible doctrine determines the future of this country.

"hang on to what you have," i.e. hang on to what you have as a mature believer; you must utilise logistical grace. In addition you must also be inside the divine dynasphere as much as possible, therefore the importance of the rebound technique. And then the final phrase, the purpose clause, "that no one takes away your crown."

The whole purpose of the book of Revelation is to show what happens in history from the point of our Lord receiving His third royal patent to the end of history, with dissertations along the way on the eternal state. One of the longest paragraphs on the eternal state is found in the book of Revelation, it covers six whole verses. Our Lord Jesus Christ was given two titles. One title is the morning star. This emphasises His strategic and tactical victory in the first and second advents. He was also given a second marvelous title in connection with His third royal patent — "King of kings and Lord of lords." He is the King, starting at the second advent, and as the King He is the King of kings, and the kings are believers who rule Gentile nations during the Millennium. He is also the Lord, i.e., of the Old Testament saints who are going to receive their resurrection bodies at the second advent, and many of them will become "lords," ie, they will rule ten cities, five cities, one city, in contrast to believers who win the order of the morning star who are going to rule nations. In other words, the believer who is a winner in time during the Church Age is an anonymous hero but he will be a king for a thousand years, the last thousand years of history.

The concept of crowns. We have seen that the Greek word is stefanoj and it is in contrast to diadhma, which is a crown for a king. Stefanoj has a dual connotation. The Greeks used it for winning in one of the games; the Romans used it primarily as the second highest decoration in the Roman army, and one that also had with it various types of remuneration. The Latin equivalent is the word corona. There are three crowns which are awarded.

First there is the crown of life which is that decoration awarded to the mature believer at the judgment seat of Christ for consistent residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. It includes momentum from gate four to gate eight or passing the momentum tests. It also includes perpetuation of life in the divine dynasphere in time of historical disaster. It also is used for the production of motivating virtue. The crown of life is only given to mature believers whose motivational virtue in the divine dynasphere causes them to pass the momentum tests and attain spiritual maturity at gate eight. The second crown is the crown of righteousness, a decoration awarded to the mature believer for production in residence of the divine dynasphere. This production emphasises functional virtue of the mature believer directed toward man and circumstances. Functional virtue is the modus operandi of the believer's royal ambassadorship. All rewardable production must originate from residence and function in the divine dynasphere. The believer who wears the invisible uniform of honour in time will receive the crown of righteousness at the judgment seat of Christ. The function of impersonal love is the visible manifestation of the invisible uniform of honour in the believer's soul and the ultimate citation is the decoration, the crown of righteousness. There is some scripture on the crown of righteousness. 2 Timothy 4:7,8, "I have fought an honourable battle [the advance to maturity inside the divine dynasphere, emphasising the production of functional virtue], I have completed the course [phase two, the fulfillment of God's plan for his life in time], I have retained the doctrine [perception and application of doctrine at gate four of the divine dynasphere]; in the future [the judgment seat of Christ] a crown of righteousness is reserved for me, which crown the Lord, the righteous evaluator, will award me on that day [the judgment seat of Christ]; and not only to me, but also to all who love his appearance." The crown of life is awarded for living consistently in the divine dynasphere and from that life in the divine dynasphere your production — your virtue, your honour, your integrity, and whatever things the Lord provides for you. Passing the momentum tests is one of the great principles. The crown of righteousness is awarded for function in the divine dynasphere and, as such, the fulfillment of the royal family honour code.

When it says "that no one takes away your crown," this also applies to the pastor's "Distinguished Service Cross," the crown of glory. This eternal decoration is awarded to pastors who communicate Bible doctrine to the royal family faithfully. Study and teach is the order of the day for pastors and with their residence and function inside the divine dynasphere pastors must advance to maturity with the same doctrine he teaches to others. The principle is quite obvious: no pastor can lead his congregation beyond his own stage of spiritual growth.

Generally there are four categories of pastors in the time in which we live. First of all there is the cosmic pastor. He lives in the cosmic system of Satan; he is the servant of Satan. The cosmic pastor is easy to discover. Sometimes he is a believer and sometimes he is an unbeliever but he is distracted by social action, crusader arrogance, total disorientation to reality in life. He is the blind leading the blind and both fall into the ditch. Then there is the baby pastor, the pastor who has never learned any Bible doctrine but who is high-profiling his own personality while low-profiling the Word of God. Because he hasn't learned any doctrine at best he evangelises his own congregation every Sunday, at worst he is evangelising for the cosmic system. The third category is the adolescent pastor. He teaches some truth but is distracted by various forms of high profile. He is selling his own personality rather than teaching doctrine and he sells his personality by running around calling on people, visiting the sick, all of the things that a pastor is not supposed to do. He is supposed to study and teach, but the issue is distorted by programs, gimmicks and, of course, a great deal of ambition. He has ignored the basic principle of the gospel ministry: when a pastor prepares himself through studying and teaching God provides the congregation; God uses prepared men. Furthermore, if God doesn't promote you you are not promoted. The more believers learn about doctrine the more they focus on the message of the pastor and not on his personality. A mature pastor is described by Hebrews 6:10, "For God is not unjust to disregard your occupation, also the love which you yourselves have demonstrated toward his person, having ministered [doctrine] to the saints and continued such a ministry." Or Philippians 4:1, "Therefore my brethren, my beloved ones [the congregation, believers living in the divine dynasphere], my happiness and my crown, in this way [residence and function in the divine dynasphere plus persistent positive volition toward doctrine] keep on being stabilised." Or in 1 Thessalonians 2:19,20, "For who is our hope or happiness or crown of glorification? Is it not you [believers in the congregation who advance to maturity], in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ [judgment seat of Christ] at his coming [the Rapture]? For you [the believer who attains maturity] are our glory [the crown of glory at the judgment seat of Christ] and happiness." 1 Peter 5:4, "And when the Chief Shepherd [our Lord Jesus Christ] appears, you [mature pastors] will receive the unfading crown of glory."

There is a warning regarding crowns, Revelation 3:11. Also 2 John 8, "Look out for yourselves, that you do not lose your momentum that you have accomplished, but that you might receive a full reward."

There is one decoration which is higher than all of these crowns. This is the ultimate decoration at the judgment seat of Christ, the decoration that carries all of the privileges in the last one thousand years of history as well as in eternity, the order of the morning star, mentioned in Revelation 2:26, "even he who keeps my assignments [fulfilling the plan of God] until the end [the termination of phase two], to him I will give authority over the nations." This is one of those references to the fact that the mature believer, the believer who persists in advancing to gate eight, this believer is going to be a king in the last one thousand years of history. This is rulership of Gentile nations under the Lord Jesus Christ. The rulers in the Millennium are those believers who received the ultimate decoration, the order of the morning star, at the judgment seat of Christ.

Three passages of scripture explain the phrase "morning star." The morning star is related to our Lord's strategic victory in Numbers 24:17, where Balaam said: "I see him [the Lord Jesus Christ in the first advent], but not now," the first advent was a long way from Balaam's time "I behold him, but not near" [not an immediate event in history]; a star shall come forth from Jacob [first advent of Christ], and a sceptre shall arise from Israel [second advent]." The description of our Lord Jesus Christ in Revelation 22:16 adds the concept of the morning star, "I, Jesus, have sent my angel to testify these things to you for the churches." Revelation was not written for Tribulational believers it was written for the Church, "I am the root [Jesus Christ as eternal God] and the offspring of David [Jesus Christ in hypostatic union, the God-Man], the bright [or glorious] morning star." Since Bible doctrine is the mind of Christ, as per 1 Corinthians 2:16, it is related to Christ as the morning star in 2 Peter 1:19-21, "We keep on having a more reliable prophetic doctrine," more reliable than the empiricism of the mount of transfiguration; "with reference to which doctrine you perform honourably [inside of the divine dynasphere] by habitually concentrating in your right lobes," and then we have the translation of o(j as a particle of actual quality, and so it is translated "on" rather than "as," "on a lamp [Jesus Christ] shining in a dark place [Jesus Christ controls history], until a day dawn [second advent of Christ] and the morning star has come up,” a reference to the second advent of Christ under His title the morning star. The order of the morning star refers, then, to the highest decoration that can be given. It is actually sharing in our Lord’s third royal patent, “Knowing this first, then, that all prophecy of scripture [all eschatological doctrine] does not originate from one’s own explanation, for prophecy was never produced by the design, purpose, or will of man, but men communicated from God being carried along by the Holy Spirit.”

There are special privileges and maximum happiness for those who win the order of the morning star. First of all, in Revelation 2:7, “To the winner, I will authorise him to eat from the tree of life which is in the paradise of God.” We have studied this in detail as the gazebo in the garden. It is located in the new Jerusalem, it represents the concept of maximum happiness forever and ever, and it belongs to winners only. Maximum happiness will be for those who have had right priorities in the little time that we have on this earth. The gazebo in the garden indicates maximum happiness in the eternal state where degrees of happiness coexist with degrees of reward. The bottom line of history, however, is that these invisible heroes of today are going to be the famous people of the last 1000 years of history. This lesson is taught by sanctified sarcasm in 1 Corinthians 4:8, “You [the Corinthians] are already filled, you have already become rich, you have become kings without us.” Paul is a mature believer, he says to the Corinthians, in effect, ‘You are the kings and what are we?’ — “how I wish that you had really become kings so that we might rule with you.”

The real issue is stated in 2 Timothy 2:12, “If we endure [this is consistent and persistent life in the divine dynasphere during time on this earth], we shall also rule [reference to mature believers who are going to be kings for a thousand years] with him.” It also adds that if we refuse to live in the divine dynasphere he refuses us, cosmic believers, rewards, privileges, decorations at the judgment seat of Christ. In other words, no one can rule without authority and the authority to rule as kings is delegated by our Lord Jesus Christ as the ruler of the world in the Millennium. Thus, Revelation 2:26, “So the winner, even he who keeps my assignments to the end, I will give him authority over the nations.” The basis for mature believers becoming kings for a thousand years is the strategic and tactical victory of our Lord Jesus Christ. The strategic victory centres around the cross; the tactical victory centres around the overthrow of Satan at the second advent. Anonymous heroes of the Church Age become kings by appointment of our Lord Jesus Christ. The appointment and the authority to rule as a king in the Millennium is related to the function of the believer’s royal priesthood inside the divine dynasphere. Therefore, in Revelation 5:10, “And you have appointed them winners and priests to our God; and they will rule on the earth,” a reference to the Millennium. The coat of arms and the heraldry of the winner is the subject of verse 12. We have the eternal reward for maturity and historical impact cited in the coat of arms and the heraldry of the winner. The first half of the verse deals with a special historical award, the pillar in the temple reward.

We begin with the articular present active participle of the verb nikao. It is in the nominative case and when the participle is not accompanied by a noun it may function as a noun itself. It is used as a noun and therefore we have something very similar to a nominative absolute or an independent nominative. When an idea is conceived as independent of any particular verbal relations the expression of it may be left standing alone and the nominative case is used. This is translated therefore "the winner." Thus employed the nominative names an idea rather than an object and therefore a nominative absolute translated simply by the genetic use of the definite article plus the participle, "the winner." The subject of this verse is the winner. We have previously defined the winner in terms of advancing to maturity, the believer who forms the pivot in the client nation, who utilises doctrine to the maximum and glorifies the Lord Jesus Christ in phase two. The winner is the believer who lives and functions inside the divine dynasphere; the winner is the one who parlays logistical grace provision into spiritual maturity. This is the sixth time we have encountered the winner in the context of Revelation chapters two and three.

With this we have a future active indicative of the verb poiew, which means to do, to make, to produce, and similar meanings. Here it is simply translated "The winner, I will make him." The future tense is a predictive future, it anticipates the judgment seat of Christ plus the decoration of the order of the morning star, along with the crown of life and the crown of righteousness, the uniform of glory, plus the new title of knighthood and, of course, in the future placed permanently in the record section of heaven, the eternal temple of God. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb at the judgment seat of Christ. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of decoration and reward to the mature believer at the judgment seat of Christ.

With this we have a double accusative from personal and impersonal object. The personal object in the accusative singular from a)utoj. A)utoj is used as a personal pronoun although it is an intensive pronoun, and it is translated, "The winner, I will make him." The impersonal object of the verb is the accusative of the noun stuloj, and it means a pillar, "I will make him a pillar." Plus the prepositional phrase e)n plus the locative of naoj, "in the temple." And then we have qeoj, the genitive of relationship, the possessive genitive e)gw, "in the temple of my God."

Corrected translation: "The winner, I will make him [the mature believer] a pillar in the temple of my God."

The temple is the record room of heaven and it is related, of course, to historical trends. For example, Tribulational martyrs are found in the temple of heaven in Revelation 7:15. The location of the record room is described in Revelation 11:19, "And the temple of God which is in heaven was opened; and the ark of his covenant appeared in his temple, and there were flashes of lightning and sounds and peals of thunder plus an earthquake and a great hailstorm." This simply records in heaven some of the disasters and the punishments of the Tribulation which come from the temple in heaven as the record department of history. Revelation 14:15, "Another angel came out of the temple [the historical record department]." Revelation 14:17, "And another angel came out of the temple which is in heaven, and he also had a sharp sickle" Revelation 15:6, "And the seven angels who had the seven plagues [historical disasters] came out of the temple," once again, historical disaster related to the record room of heaven. Revelation 16:17, "And the seventh angel poured out his bowl upon the air; and a loud voice came out of the temple from the throne, saying, 'It is finished' ." While these passages relate the temple of heaven to the Tribulation they do make a point for us. The temple of heaven is the record department of human history, a permanent record department, and it is going to have a very special place for anonymous heroes, the believers whose priorities and scale of values is so correct that they never stop once putting Bible doctrine first in their lives. Nothing is more important to them than Bible doctrine.

Principle

1. While the temple of heaven is the record department of history the pillars found in the temple are the permanent records of Church Age heroes, the believers in this dispensation who advance to maturity and have maximum impact in history.

2. The Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written, so obviously our interpretation of a pillar in the temple must go back to the modus operandi of the ancient world where temple pillars were chapters in history books.

3. Take, for example, a temple where there was recorded history. The temple of Ephesus was 375 feet long and 180 feet wide, a rather large record-keeping area. Inside of the temple were 127 pillars on which were recorded the deeds of famous kings who had contributed to the construction of the temple. On these pillars were hung priceless gifts, trophies of the kings involved. There were tablets and records engraved telling of the deeds of these kings and other heroes. In the analogy the priceless gifts which were on the pillars depict the decorations, the rewards which belonged to the mature believer at the judgment seat of Christ. The written biography depicts the eternal history of mankind with emphasis on the true heroes of history.

The means by which the believer advances to maturity and becomes a pillar in the temple of God, a permanent chapter in the history of the human race, is the daily perception of Bible doctrine. 1 Timothy 3:15, Bible doctrine is both the pillar and the foundation of the Church: "But if I am delayed, I write in order that you may know [function of GAP at gate four] how one ought to conduct himself in the house of God, which keeps on being the church of the living God, the pillar and foundation even doctrine." Doctrine taught is the foundation. And when you respond on a regular basis to the teaching of Bible doctrine you are going to become a pillar, a permanent chapter in the heavenly temple, the record centre of all history. The pillar in the Church is the believer who through daily perception of Bible doctrine and residence in the divine dynasphere advances to maturity. The pillar of the church in time has a pillar in the temple of God forever, the reward for historical impact, the reward for being an anonymous hero. The biography of the winner is simple. Today a pillar in the Church, unknown, unseen, like his unseen uniform of honour; tomorrow a pillar in the temple of God forever and ever and ever. The pillar in the temple of God is the mature believer permanently recorded for his impact on history through residence and function inside the divine dynasphere.

Pillars are used for mature believers in Galatians 2:9, "In recognising the grace that has been given to me, James, Peter and John, who were reputed to be pillars, gave to me and Barnabas the right hand of fellowship that we might go to the Gentiles, and they to the circumcision." The pillar in the church is the mature believer with maximum historical impact in this dispensation. Therefore as a future reward he has a permanent chapter in the permanent history of the human race in heaven.

Next we have the permanency of that record. Just as the person who believes in Christ cannot lose his salvation so the mature believer with maximum historical impact cannot lose his place in the permanent history textbook of the world. While the pillars of the temple located in Philadelphia were destroyed by earthquakes the pillars of the Church, i.e. believers advancing to maturity, are parlayed into the pillars of the temple of the eternal God and their record cannot be destroyed.

We begin with the connective use of the conjunction kai, and it simply is going to emphasise what precedes. So we translate it "Furthermore." It is going to present a result that comes from what precedes. With this we have the aorist active subjunctive of e)xerxomai, which means to go out, to go away, to retire. The verb connotes the occurrence of natural events or fateful happenings. The verb is also used in the sense of "to end," "to vanish." With this we have a very strong double negative, o)u mh, the strongest you can get. A double negative is not a positive in the Greek, it is an emphatic negative. The adverb of place with it, e)xw, which means "outside," is a part of the idiom but is not included in the translation. Then we have another adverb e)ti which means "yet" or "still" but when used with negatives it connotes something which has stopped, hence the translation, "no longer," but with o)u mh it should be "any longer," "Furthermore he will not ever get outside any longer." It is literal in the translation but it is an idiom and what it means is, "Furthermore he will never vanish [from history]." The aorist tense of e)xerxomai is a culminative aorist, it views the reward of being permanently recorded in the history of the world as a winner, and this permanent historical record includes the winner's impact, historical impact in the Church Age plus his rule in the Millennium. The culminative aorist views this eternal reward from the standpoint of existing results, it cannot be erased. The mature believer of the Church Age is located in a permanent historical record centre of heaven. There are going to be a lot of believers in heaven who have no record of what they did in life, whereas the mature believers will have the entire story of their new knighthood. The active voice: mature believers produce the action through a record of achievements in both the Church Age and in the Millennium, anonymous achievements and well-known achievements. The subjunctive mood plus the double negative is known as the emphatic negative subjunctive and it means that the history textbook of heaven cannot be erased, it will never vanish.

Translation: "The winner, I will make him [the mature believer, the winner of the order of the morning star] a pillar [permanent historical record] in the temple of my God; furthermore, he will never vanish from history."

The anonymous hero of the Church Age is not only the famous hero of the Millennium but also the eternal hero in heaven forever. Only pillars are eternal heroes. The Bible must again be interpreted in the time in which it was written and permanent or alleged permanent records were kept in various temples in the ancient world at the time of writing. So this became the basis for establishing an analogy. The temple of heaven is the eternal record centre of human history and as the record department of human history each pillar represents a chapter on a mature believer in the Church Age. First, the anonymous record of historical impact now made public and preserved forever and ever in the record section of the heavenly temple. Secondly, the Millennial history of the mature believer's reign is permanently recorded and as the record and history department each pillar in the heavenly temple represents a chapter devoted to one Christian here, a winner.

That brings us now to the system of heraldry: knighthood, chivalry, and heraldry of the Millennial state and the eternal state. By way of introduction, the Greeks and Romans honoured their heroes with distinctive devices on their shields. So there was an anticipation of heraldry and chivalry as far back as the time of the writing of the book of Revelation. Chivalry, by way of explanation, then, is the integrity and the virtue knights. It is also used in terms of courtesy which is the expression of humility, gallantry, personal honour and thoughtfulness of others. Knighthood and chivalry was not only a personal attribute of honour and integrity but it was a mode of feudal tenure and a system of manners and decorum; not the superficialities of manners but an honourable system expressed through manners.

In the first part of verse 12 we have the principle of the anonymous hero of the Church Age becoming the famous and well-known person of the Millennium, "The winner, I will make him a pillar in the temple of my God." We saw that the temple is the record room of heaven related to historical trends. The pillar of the Church is the believer who through daily perception of doctrine achieves spiritual maturity, advancing from gate four to gate eight. The actual pillar is the record of his life, divided into two parts. The first part deals with his anonymous function, historical impact, in the Church Age. The second deals with his fame as a ruler of a Gentile nation in the Millennium. Just as the person who has accepted Christ as saviour cannot lose his salvation, so the believer with maximum historical impact cannot lose his place in history.

In the last half of the verse we have the escutcheon of the winner, the reward of a special heraldry. Going with the new knighthood emblazoned on the escutcheon of this person is a special shield, a coat of honour. The word "knighthood" is from an old German word which is a part of the Anglo-Saxon culture because Anglo-Saxon was a German tribe and group, along with the Jutes. The whole system of liberty and freedom which we enjoy in this country is based upon Anglo-Saxon culture and from it we have the fact that liberty and freedom was enforced and brought about by the aristocracy of England called the baronage. The war of the roses ended the barony and therefore for several hundred years destroyed the freedom in England. It was fought between the Yorks and the Lancasters, the two major families. The first age of chivalry is generally accepted as beginning with the crusades and ending with that war which lasted for thirty years, between 1455 and 1485 and ended with the Battle of Bosworth where Richard the third, Duke of Gloucester was killed. He was the last of the Yorks. Henry, Earl of Richmond then became the first Tudor King as Henry the seventh. The war of the roses received its title from Sir Walter Scott because the house of York had the white rose as one of their emblems and the house of Lancaster the red rose.

So the war of the roses destroyed the baronage of England when one half of the nobility was slain. Those who survived were ruined financially, their estates were wasted or confiscated, and not a single house retained its former wealth or influence. The ruin of English nobility jeopardised English liberty for it was the barons who had forced the Magna Carta on King John. The Magna Carta was one of the great things that happened to England during the course of their history when King John signed away a tremendous amount of his privileges to the baronage. It was the baronage that actually forced this on King John who was a tyrant, and as a tyrant has completely destroyed any possibility of freedom existing in England. But this was all changed very rapidly and in a moment of time by the barons, the nobility of the land who forced the Magna Carta on the king and thus became the guardians of liberty. Their system of liberty and integrity were related to chivalry. The Magna Carta set a precedent for future freedom and liberty, not only in England but, as a result, in the United States. The barons — the English aristocracy — for their attitude toward chivalry were the guardians of freedom. Chivalry and feudalism were actually the basis for freedom and it was not the common people who brought about freedom. (The scum tried to do it in the French revolution but they were more interested in power and they were too arrogant to be able to do it. Scum never produce freedom, their arrogance makes it impossible. The worst tyrants of all are scum with no power who suddenly obtain it through some system of violence) It was not until 1688 that with the fall of the Stuart dynasty that the Magna Carta had its final and great effect.

We begin now with the principle that the mature believer represents exactly what the baronage of England represented from the Magna Carta to the field of Bosworth. The baronage of England was actually the basis for setting up freedom. They gave freedom to the common man; they curbed the power of the king. They came to a point called contract where they agreed to serve the king but the king had to accept certain freedoms and recognise the freedoms and the rights of all of the people of the land. So the common people owed their freedom in England to the courage of the baronage. As a result of this the baronage for many years became the protector of freedom. The concept of chivalry then: Men had honour and integrity which they used to fight for freedom and therefore they set up a system of heraldry.

The mature believer or winner at the judgment seat of Christ is going to receive an eternal escutcheon, a coat of arms. There is a direct analogy here between the tremendous ability of the barons to provide freedom for the people of England and the believer in the Lord Jesus Christ in providing freedom for the client nation to God. We have the responsibility of providing freedom, prosperity and blessing for this nation. As goes the believer so goes the client nation to God. And while we have no visible escutcheon we do have a uniform of honour which is the maturity, royal family honour code, maximum doctrine resident in the soul. In the future the believer who advances to maturity is going to be recognised in a very special and wonderful way by receiving an escutcheon of glory.

Basically there are three categories related to the escutcheon, i.e. the shield which is used for the coat of arms. On the left side of the shield it is called “Sinister,” which simply means left-handed; it has no other connotation in heraldry. On the right hand of the shield we have “Dexter” for the right hand. In the centre, “Middle” was used for the middle part of the coat of arms on the shield.

We are going to note first of all the “Dexter” as the first item of heraldry in the eternal coat of arms. We start out with the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai to add another eternal reward to the pillar in the temple, the permanent chapter in history. And to show that you have permanency in history as a mature believer you are given a coat of arms. In addition to having the chapter, the eternal record in history in the temple of God there is the manifestation of it in a coat of arms. No believer, of course, who served Satan in time will have a coat of arms in eternity. Therefore the adjunctive use of the conjunction. Instead of translating it “and” we translate it “also” or “in addition to.”

With this we have the future active indicative of the verb grafw, which means here to write but the verb also refers to the mechanical activity of writing and therefore it means to inscribe, to engrave, or emblazon. In keeping with this passage we are going to translate it “emblazon” — “Also I will emblazon.” “Emblazon” is an English word which means to inscribe heraldry. It means to inscribe with the devices of heraldry or to adorn with the figures of heraldry. The future tense is a predictive future, it anticipates receiving a coat of arms at the judgment seat of Christ — mature believers only. The coat of arms goes with the decoration of the order of the morning star and the uniform of glory. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb by giving to the mature believer the coat of arms. This coat of arms comes before his rulership in the Millennium. Every mature believer of the Church Age is going to rule a Gentile nation in the Millennium. In those nations are going to be cities and mature Old Testament saints are going to be rulers of cities. Many believers of this dispensation are not going to have a coat of arms, not going to have a uniform of glory, not going to have the order of the morning star, not going to have crowns. The indicative mod is declarative for the reality of the mature believer receiving a coat of arms, an eternal heraldry, at the judgment seat of Christ.

With this we have the preposition e)pi plus the accusative singular from the intensive pronoun a)utoj. Though an intensive pronoun it isn’t used that way in the Koine. It is used for the third person personal pronoun and it is translated, “on him.” Then we have the accusative singular direct object from o)noma which means “royal title,” title of aristocracy. With that the genitive of relationship of e)gw and we call that the title of my God, the royal title.

“Also I will emblazon on him [the winner, the mature believer in time] the title of my God [God the Father, the author of the divine plan].”

So the Dexter side of the shield has to do with God the Father who is the author of the divine plan. While our Lord Jesus Christ is eternal God and coequal with the Father and with the Spirit, He often speaks as humanity and that is what we have here. In using the phrase “My God” it reminds us of the cross where He said: “My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me.” When He uttered those words on the cross He was speaking from His humanity for it was the humanity of Christ that was judged for our sins. As God, Jesus Christ cannot be judged. So we have therefore a reference to the humanity of our Lord Jesus Christ. Our Lord’s strategic victory of the first advent resulted in the award of His third royal patent after the ascension. The third royal patent includes such titles as “King of kings and Lord of lords” plus “the bright morning star.” And since the Church Age believers of the royal family are related to our Lord’s third royal patent the mature believer or winner of the morning star at the judgment seat of Christ receives a coat of arms as a part of eternal chivalry. The freedom of time, the blessing of time, the historical impact of time, everything that is important in time comes in this dispensation from the mature believer only. The cosmic believer has absolutely nothing going for him.

So emblazoned on the Dexter part of the escutcheon is the title of God the Father who is the author of the divine plan for the human race who provided both the divine dynasphere and logistical grace which are parlayed into something fantastic. Only believers or winners possess this royal escutcheon and the Dexter is always the same: it indicates that the individual has fulfilled the plan of God. And just as the baronage of England was responsible for maintaining the freedom of the English people of all classes so we have a divine period in terms of dispensations. In this dispensation all historical impact comes, not from rulers, not from armies, not from great people; historical impact comes from individual believers who form the pivot by advancing from gate four to gate eight in the divine dynasphere. This gives some concept of the importance of Bible doctrine.

Now when believers reside in the cosmic system they often take the phraseology of Christianity with them. They are full of self-righteousness and arrogance, they are full of social action, they are full of self-importance. Whatever they are doing is “to the glory of God,” and all of that is fake. This occasionally happens in the revival of chivalry.

Chivalry has never died. In fact chivalry existed long before it was recognised as such in the middle ages. Chivalry has existed since the royal family came into existence on the Day of Pentecost and the objectives of chivalry have been defined and redefined by all of the apostles in the Word of God. The interesting thing is that doctrine is the heart of chivalry. Doctrine is what gives virtue, honour and integrity to believers, all kinds of believers. Whether you are acceptable in society or not is not the issue. The issue is that society cannot exist unless you take personal responsibility for your own decisions. Bad decisions: you wind up in the cosmic system and in eternity you are going to be a second class citizen. There are degrees of happiness, there are degrees of reward, and down at the bottom of the totem pole are going to be the cosmic believers.

Just as the baronage and the system of chivalry which came from them was the means of providing and protecting freedom for all the people in the realm, so you today have a responsibility since the day you accepted Christ as your saviour. You have the responsibility of growing in grace, of living in the divine dynasphere, of advancing to gate eight of the divine dynasphere — the key to freedom, prosperity, spiritual and temporal blessing, not only in the client nation but throughout the world. Right now the world is suffering from economic depression, from social degeneration, from military disaster. That means that in some parts of the world unemployment is so great and the gross national product is so down that this leads to a desperation which often leads to more violence. We are seeing problems solved by violence and when a problem is solved by violence it isn't solved, it merely makes ten problems to take the place of the one "resolved" by violence. The reason things are so bad today is because born-again believers are simply not advancing to maturity, they are not living inside the divine dynasphere.

Now who has impact in time? Whose life really counts? As we have already seen, the one who has the crown of life for living in the divine dynasphere, the crown of righteousness for producing virtue from the divine dynasphere, the order of the morning star for maximum historical impact. Names of unbelievers are blotted out of the book of life after the judgment seat of Christ. In eternity the book of life only has a list of believers but that listing includes for mature believers their knighthood, their coat of arms, the whole listing for Millennial and eternal chivalry. Only believers who are winners possess this royal escutcheon which we are now studying.

So far we have seen that Dexter has to do with God the Father who is the author of the divine plan. So Dexter means mature believers have executed the plan of God during their lifetime on this earth. They have the right priorities; Bible doctrine is first. And the royal escutcheon will have Dexter whereas the loser or the cosmic believer of the Church Age does not even possess any part of this coat of arms, "and I will emblazon [inscribe a heraldry] on him [the winner or the mature believer in time] the title of my God [God the Father]," and having the title of God the Father on the Dexter part of the coat of arms is a reference to the honourable fulfillment of God's plan.

The Middle or second item of heraldry in the eternal coat of arms has to do with the new Jerusalem.

We move on now to the eternal coat of arms of the mature believer. Chivalry connotes guardian of freedom. Individuals who understand freedom take the responsibility of making sure that the common people have it. Freedom starts with leadership, not with the common man. The mature believer will be awarded with an eternal escutcheon and the coat of arms indicates achievement. This coat of arms which we are studying indicates those who have achieved during the Church Age. They are anonymous heroes now; they will be famous in eternity. There is a new order of chivalry which will be entered into the book of life. The book of life in eternity will have the names of only those who are believers in the Lord Jesus Christ. Today the book of life includes the names of all people, but when a person dies without personally receiving Christ as saviour his name is blotted out of the book of life. But there are some names in the book of life of Church Age believers who because of their residence and function in the divine dynasphere and because of their advance to maturity are going to have a new knighthood and are going to be part of a new order of chivalry for the Millennium and the eternal state. The sign of their achievement is their personal coat of arms which is described in the last half of Revelation 3:12.

Basically there are three categories related to the escutcheon, the shield of heraldry, apart from the upper part called the chief and the lower part called the base. There is the right side called “Dexter,” the middle called “Middle,” and the left called “Sinister,” sinister from the Latin and having to do with being left-handed.

In the last half of this verse the mature believer of the Church Age is described in terms of heraldry, described in terms of his escutcheon. We begin with the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, the first word in the last half of verse 12. The word means “also” rather than “and.” It is to add another eternal reward to the historical permanence of the invisible, unknown impact of Church Age believers. In addition to having a chapter in the eternal records of history the winner will have a coat of arms which distinguishes him forever from other believers who failed in this dispensation. No believer who served Satan in time will have a coat of arms, it is for the nature believer only, the one who makes good decisions. Good decisions open the door for better decisions and increase the options whereas bad decisions close the doors.

With this we have the future active indicative of the verb grafw which means to write and also means the mechanical activity of writing, therefore it means to inscribe, to engrave, to emblazon. Here the latter is correct. Emblazon means to inscribe with the devices of heraldry or to adorn with the figures of honour. The predictive future tense anticipates the award of the coat of arms to the mature believer which goes with the decoration of the order of the morning star and the uniform of glory. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb at the judgment seat of Christ. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the mature believer receiving the coat of arms and eternal heraldry at the judgment seat of Christ.

With this we have the preposition e)pi. E)pi has different meanings depending upon the case of the verb which is the object of the preposition. In this case we have the accusative singular from the intensive pronoun a)utoj which is used in the Koine Greek for the personal pronoun of the third person. It is translated “on him” and it becomes the Dexter part of the escutcheon. The possessive genitive from qeoj plus the genitive of relationship from e)gw are the next two words, “my God.” With that, the accusative singular direct object of o)noma refers to a royal title. It can mean name or person or title and here it refers to title — “the title of my God.” This is the title of God the Father, the author of the divine plan. The reason that this is placed upon the escutcheon is because the mature believer has executed the plan of God in time. God the Father is the author of the plan for the Church Age by which at the moment of salvation every believer receives 36 things plus the divine dynasphere, the power for execution. He enters the divine dynasphere at gate one, the filling of the Spirit; gate two, basic impersonal love; gate three, enforced and genuine humility. Gate one provides the spiritual IQ for perception of doctrine; gate two provides objectivity; gate three teachability for the function of gate four, perception and application of doctrine which is the momentum gate. Gate five is love of God; gate six, right man-right woman where pertinent; gate seven, advanced impersonal love; gate eight is spiritual maturity, the construction of the edification complex of the soul. This can only be accomplished inside the divine dynasphere. Of course the believer who fails becomes involved in the cosmic system — cosmic one with its 26 gates of interlocking systems of arrogance; cosmic two with its nine gates of interlocking systems of hatred. The cosmic believer is actually said to be the enemy of the cross in the time in which we live.

So there is a great difference between believers in time and a far greater difference between believers in eternity. The difference between believers in eternity is based upon the fact that our Lord invented the system of human freedom and self-determination in order to resolve the angelic conflict. And so after salvation our attitude toward Bible doctrine and God's plan is the determining factor. Consistent positive volition eventuates in maturity; consistent negative volition eventuates in cosmic involvement, the many categories of discipline and self-induced misery. So we have, then, those who are going to be distinguished forever and ever and the reason is freedom. Freedom guarantees inequality. There is no such thing as equality where freedom exists. Heaven is a perfect place and there will be great inequality in heaven based upon self-determination in time under the principle of freedom.

We start out then with geoj in the Dexter part of the shield. It refers to God the Father the author of the divine plan. While our Lord Jesus Christ is eternal God, coequal and co-eternal with the Father and the Holy Spirit, He often speaks from humanity as in this passage in using the phrase, "my God." He speaks from His humanity and from His third royal patent, the one that broke that back of Satan in the angelic conflict, the one which resulted from the strategic victory of our Lord Jesus Christ in the first advent. Our Lord's strategic victory of the first advent resulted in the award of His third royal patent. That is why history has changed; that is why we have the book of Revelation, because at the ascension our Lord Jesus Christ received a third royal patent the whole course of history has changed and the history of the world from the time of our Lord's ascension until the end of time is the book of Revelation. The book of Revelation is a textbook of world history divided into two categories: historical trends of the Church Age and the prophecy which follows. The third royal patent includes such titles as King of kings and Lord of Lords plus the bright morning star. And since the Church Age believer is royal family and related to our Lord's third royal patent the Mature believer of the Church Age receives the coat of arms as a part of the order of eternal chivalry. And emblazoned on the Dexter part of the escutcheon is the title of God the Father as the author of the divine plan for the human race. He provided for both the divine dynasphere and logistical grace support and therefore since the mature believer is the only believer who has executed this plan it becomes a part of his heraldry forever.

You must remember that the cosmic believer in eternity only has a resurrection body. There are degrees of happiness in eternity. He will be low on the totem pole as far as happiness is concerned. He can't lose his salvation but all he has is a resurrection body, and for the short time he spent earth and the capital support given by our Lord Jesus Christ in logistical grace he has demonstrated forever by only having a resurrection body what a fool he was as far as his decisions were concerned. The loser or cosmic believer of the Church Age does not possess a special coat of arms nor the inscriptions of heraldry.

"also I will emblazon [inscribe a heraldry] on him [the winner or mature believer in time] the title of my God," reference to God the Father and a reference to the fact that he has achieved — achievement through God's grace, achievement through making right decisions, achievement through the execution of the plan of God in time. He advanced from gate four to gate eight of the divine dynasphere.

The middle part of the coat of arms, the second item of heraldry, is a special privilege related to maximum happiness forever and ever. Again, heaven is a place of degrees of happiness. Just as there are degrees of happiness in the divine dynasphere there are degrees of happiness in heaven, and maximum happiness is only open to those who have attained spiritual maturity through residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. So the middle part of the winner's escutcheon is a pass, a pass which permits him access to the new Jerusalem which in eternity hovers over the earth. This is not the heavenly Jerusalem but the eternal Jerusalem which is located above the earth, and in the middle of this eternal Jerusalem is the famous gazebo in the garden, the paradise of God with the tree of life. And just as a knight had to show his shield at the drawbridge before he could enter the castle, so the believer carries on his escutcheon a special pass whereby he can enter into the new Jerusalem and therefore into the most exclusive parties of eternity, the parties of maximum happiness. In eternity the believers who failed in time have no access. They have happiness but that happiness is limited as far as access. This is for the aristocracy of eternity only, it isn't for all believers. There are certain parts of heaven that are excluded from believers who failed in time, and this is one part of heaven that is — a place associated with maximum happiness.

We have, then, the genitive of place from the adjective kainoj, and it precedes the proper noun 'Ierousalhm, and it means new in species, new in concept. The new Jerusalem is a place where there is a happiness never experienced or never known, and cannot be experienced by lower orders of believers in eternity in resurrection bodies. New in time is a different Greek word altogether, neoj. But that is not the word here at all. So kainoj is used here in connection with Jerusalem. It means that everything in this famous city that is suspended over the earth is the place of maximum happiness and you can't get in without the royal escutcheon. The Middle part is the pass. Therefore we have the corrected translation of the Middle part of the coat of arms: "also the new Jerusalem" — a pass to enter the new Jerusalem of the eternal state where the tree of life and maximum happiness is located. The contrast between kainoj and neoj is the difference between the Millennial Jerusalem which is new in time and the new Jerusalem, kainoj, which is an eternal Jerusalem.

The concept: Millennial Jerusalem and Eternal Jerusalem

There are two new Jerusalems. One is a neoj Jerusalem, the Jerusalem of the Millennium, and there is a kainoj Jerusalem, the Jerusalem of the eternal state. There is a vast difference. You can get into the neoj Jerusalem even if you were a loser in time, but you can't get into the kainoj Jerusalem, the eternal Jerusalem if you were a loser in time.

Under the Millennial Jerusalem we have natural light but in the eternal Jerusalem there is supernatural light. The eternal Jerusalem will not exist until the end of time, the end of history, and it is a special place for special people, the winners of the Church Age. It has supernatural light, Revelation 21:11, 23; 22:5. According to Zechariah 2:4,5 the Millennial Jerusalem has no walls, it is protected by the fact that our Lord is present there from which He rules the world. On the other hand in eternity the eternal Jerusalem has walls, Revelation 21:12, and the walls give privacy to a superior type of happiness that will never be experienced by losers in their resurrection bodies. It is an exclusive place, it keeps out everyone but the new order of chivalry. On the Millennial side, the Millennial Jerusalem is related to Israel, the inheritance of Abraham, whereas the eternal Jerusalem is related to the royal family of God and to the new order of chivalry. In the Millennial Jerusalem there is a Millennial temple that is described in detail in Ezekiel chapters 40-48. In the eternal Jerusalem there is no temple. People who have maximum capacity for happiness don't need a temple, Revelation 21:3, 22. In the Millennial temple there will be animal sacrifices in the temple, Ezekiel 40-48, but in the eternal Jerusalem there will be no animal sacrifices for the most obvious reason: ritual without reality is meaningless and the new order of chivalry needs no ritual to sustain it.

People are impressed by ritual and what goes with it, and therefore that means that they must depend on some form of outer form for happiness, which is human and normal. But the eternal Jerusalem is a place of such fantastic happiness, and the new order of chivalry has such great capacity for happiness that there is absolutely no animal sacrifice nor any other ritual. The highest order of believers in eternity do not need ritual, they have total happiness and total reality in one package. In the Millennial Jerusalem living water comes from the temple, Ezekiel 47:1; in the eternal Jerusalem the water of life comes from the throne, Revelation 22:1. In the Millennial Jerusalem unbelievers live in the city, Zechariah 12:6; 14:11; in the eternal Jerusalem you not only have only believers but only one category of believers, winners, in contrast to losers. Those who have their priorities straight in time are the ones who have access to the eternal Jerusalem.

In the Millennial Jerusalem there are trees for food and healing, according to Ezekiel 47:7-12, but in the eternal Jerusalem no one is sick, everyone has a resurrection body, and there is only the tree of life as maximum happiness and as the highest happiness award of eternity, Revelation 22:2. So the new Jerusalem refers to the eternal Jerusalem in Revelation 21:9-22:5, one of the few detailed descriptions of the eternal state. Most people mix up eternity with the Millennium. The "pearly gates" for example, belong to the Millennium. The tree of life in the eternal Jerusalem is that great happiness award and the only detailed description of eternity where you have a sequence of more than five verses is Revelation 21:9-22:5; and that is the new Jerusalem, the kainoj, not the neoj. The new Jerusalem is a part of the winner's escutcheon indicating the fact that he has access at all times to the only really exclusive part of heaven. The new Jerusalem is the middle part of the escutcheon, a pass to enter the place of maximum happiness for ever and ever and ever.

With this we have a description of where this new Jerusalem originates, the articular present active participle from the verb katabainw, which means to descend, "the new Jerusalem which descends." The definite article is used as a relative pronoun referring to the eternal Jerusalem or the new Jerusalem as the place of maximum happiness beyond anything anyone has ever known. The capacity for this maximum happiness is a part of the reward to the new order of chivalry. The present tense combines the futuristic present with the pictorial present. The futuristic present denotes an event which has not yet occurred, i.e. the descent of the eternal Jerusalem, but is regarded as so certain that in thought it may be contemplated as already coming to pass. The pictorial present presents to the mind an event in the process of occurring. Suddenly from millions and millions of light years away there comes to the new earth created by our Lord, and suspended over the Jerusalem of the earth, a very special city. The active voice: the eternal or new Jerusalem produces the action. The participle is circumstantial. We translate it, "which shall descend." Then we have the prepositional phrase denoting the source, e)k plus the genitive and a)po plus the ablative. E)k plus the genitive comes first, e)k plus the genitive of o)uranoj, the word for heaven. It is translated "from heaven," and that means from the immediate source of heaven. But a)po plus the ablative means original source, and the object of a)po is qeoj. It is translated, "from the immediate source of heaven, from the ultimate source of my God." E)k means immediate source; a)po means ultimate source.

That brings us now to the "Sinister" or the third item of heraldry in the eternal coat of arms. We have an adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, it is translated "also." This introduces the third item of the heraldry involved. On the eternal escutcheon of the mature believer is the Sinister, the left side. With this we have the possessive genitive of e)gw, translated "my," "also emblazoned," and then we have "with my new name." We have the possessive genitive of e)gw, we have the adjective kainoj again, the accusative of direct object and the word "emblazoned" which is used in the first part is supplied again. This is elliptical because by this time the apostle John is getting very excited, "also emblazoned with my new name," that is, the third royal patent of our Lord Jesus Christ. The believer carries on his coat of arms the royal title of our Lord Jesus Christ because he served the Lord faithfully in time, living in the divine dynasphere and advancing to maturity. So the mature believer has maximum historical impact, the blessing of the blessing of the supergrace contract, and of course, the ultimate glorification of Christ in time. These are the people who make consistent decisions, who have their priorities straight right from the start. No matter what happens doctrine is first. Those are the winners and those are the ones who keep their priorities straight all the time. They are the unique people of eternity, easily recognised by their uniform of glory, by their crown of life, their crown of righteousness, by their order of the morning star. And they are recognised by the fact that they have a happiness which is infinitely superior to the loser who is glad to be there but whose happiness and blessing is related to grace, they are there by the grace of God, they were losers all the way, and there is a vast difference.

Verse 12, "The winner, I will make him [the mature believer of the Church Age] a pillar in the temple of my God [the permanent record of historical impact]. Further more he will never vanish from history: also I will emblazon on him the title of my God [God the Father], also the new Jerusalem [the pass to enter the new Jerusalem of the eternal state], which shall descend from the immediate source of heaven from the ultimate source of my God: also emblazoned with my new name [the thirds royal patent of our Lord Jesus Christ indicating faithfully serving Him in time]."

We have noted that there is an aristocracy in the Millennium and the eternal state, the final aristocracy, an aristocracy made up of Church Age believers only. When our Lord's title, King of kings and Lord of lords, was given to Him after the ascension it was broken down into two parts: our Lord is ruler over the mature believers who will be kings over Gentile nations; He is Lord over Old Testament saints who will rule ten cities, five cities, four cities or one city in the Millennium. In other words, those who succeed in this dispensation are going to rule over those who succeeded in the Age of Israel. There is a new aristocracy which will function in the last 1000 years of history and then will go into the eternal state. At this point of time those of you who are alive have the potential of being in that aristocracy but you cannot live in the cosmic system, you cannot have a fouled up system of priorities, you cannot ignore the Word of God and fall into this future category. You cannot lose your salvation but in heaven there are degrees of blessing and there are degrees of privilege and happiness in the eternal state.

The aristocracy of the Millennium and the eternal state is not based on physical birth, it is based on regeneration. It potentially starts at the point of salvation through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Thereafter the believer is allotted time on this earth and what he does with doctrine on a daily basis is the determining factor. The aristocracy in the Millennium and the eternal state is not based in human ability or human wisdom or human achievement or attractiveness, it is based on advance inside the divine dynasphere. The final aristocracy of eternity will rule with Christ in the Millennium and have special privileges, rewards and decorations for all eternity.

The eternal coat of arms and heraldry of the mature believer, the winner in the Church Age, is given in the last half of verse 12. The mature believer, the winner, will be awarded an eternal coat of arms, an escutcheon of glory. We might call the escutcheon the shield of glory for the coat of arms will be emblazoned on that shield. There are three parts of the coat of arms.

We begin with the study of Dexter, the first item of heraldry in the eternal coat of arms of winners in the Church Age. The adjunctive use of the conjunction kai is to add another eternal reward to the pillar. Kai is used in this passage in order to indicate that you are in the record centre forever, there is a chapter written about you and about your life — you are anonymous in life now but you will be famous forever and ever. In addition to that pillar, that chapter in the permanent record of history, there is something else: you are given a coat of arms — a place in history plus a coat of arms. The winner will have this special coat of arms which distinguishes him forever from all the believers who are losers. No believer who lives in the cosmic system, who is the servant therefore of Satan, will have a coat of arms in eternity. Nor will he be a part of the eternal order of chivalry.

Next we have the future active indicative of the verb grafw. While it means to write the verb also refers to the mechanical activity of writing. Therefore it can be translated engraved, inscribed or emblazoned. Here it means to emblazon. That means to inscribe the devices of heraldry or adorn with the figures of heraldry, “I will emblazon.” The predictive future anticipates the award of the coat of arms to the mature believer. This coat of arms goes with the decoration of the order of the morning star and the uniform of glory. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb at the judgment seat of Christ. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the fact that anyone of you who advances to maturity, who becomes a part of the pivot, who has maximum historical impact through God's plan will have this coat of arms. "I will emblazon," and then we have a prepositional phrase, e)pi plus the accusative of the intensive pronoun a)utoj, "on him." Then we have the accusative singular direct object from the noun o)noma, which means "title" as well as "name." Therefore it refers to knighthood, "I will emblazon on him the title." But this is not our title on the coat of arms, it is the title called: possessive genitive of qeoj, which is "God." With it we also have a genitive of e)gw, the genitive of relationship, and we translate "the title of my God." This is a reference to God the Father who is the author of the divine plan, the fantastic plan for the Church Age. Inscribed on the Dexter side of the shield is the title of God the Father, and the Dexter side of the shield indicates the fact that the believer involved has executed the plan of God for the believer in this dispensation. In using the phrase "my God" for the first person of the Trinity Jesus Christ is speaking from His humanity. Our Lord Jesus Christ is the unique person of the universe. He is eternal God, He has identical essence to the Father and the Holy Spirit, and each three members of the Trinity are coequal and CO-eternal, but our Lord is different in that He is also true humanity. He is different from all humanity in that He is God; He is different from God in that He is true humanity. During His life on earth He lived inside of the prototype divine dynasphere. When He speaks from His humanity He calls God the Father "my God."

The middle part of the heraldry or the eternal coat of arms is a pass which permits the winner's access to the new Jerusalem which hovers over the earth in the eternal state. At the end of the Millennium the earth is going to be destroyed, as is this universe. There will be new heavens and new earth. Hovering above Jerusalem in the new earth will be a special partying place for winners only. This is the place of maximum happiness and it is called the new Jerusalem. It is in the middle part of the escutcheon because it is a pass which permits the new order of chivalry access to the new Jerusalem which hovers above the earth. Losers will not be permitted access to the new Jerusalem. Inside of the new Jerusalem is the gazebo in the garden, maximum happiness in eternity. That is the greatest of all partying places of all time, and just as a knight had to show his shield before the drawbridge was lowered to permit him access into the castle so the mature believer carries his own special pass, the coat of arms in the middle part of the escutcheon is the pass into the new Jerusalem and the tree of life. The genitive of place from the adjective kainoj is very important. It means new in species in contrast to naoj, which means new in time. This is an eternal Jerusalem so kainoj is used. There never was anything like this before and their never will be again.

The third part of the heraldry in the eternal coat of arms is the Sinister. We have the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai again, "also." It introduces the left hand side of the shield called "Sinister," meaning left-handed; "also emblazoned with my new name." This is the third royal patent of our Lord Jesus Christ, it indicates that the eternal order of heraldry belongs to the royal family of God in the Church Age and that believers in this dispensation are eligible. The mature believer has maximum historical impact in time; he is the anonymous hero of this dispensation; he has the blessing of the supergrace contract; he has the ultimate in glorification of Christ in time; he has emblazoned a royal title of Christ as the mature believer, the one who advances to gate eight of the divine dynasphere. He has therefore an eternal memorial to the fact that he logged maximum time inside of the divine dynasphere.

The emblazoned royal title of Christ on the mature believer's escutcheon is an eternal memorial to the fact that he served the Lord Jesus Christ and not Satan; he executed the plan of God, not Satan's, while living on this earth; he made right decisions with regard to the divine provision of logistical grace. Only the mature believer possesses this coat of arms and bears forever this royal escutcheon of temporal achievement parlayed into eternal reward.

The corrected translation of the entire verse: "The winner, I will make him [the mature believer of the Church Age] a pillar in the temple of my God [a permanent record of historical impact], furthermore he will never vanish from history: also I will emblazon [inscribe a heraldry] on him [the winner] with the title of my God [God the Father, the author of the divine plan], and the new Jerusalem [which is only open to winners], which shall descend from the immediate source of heaven and the ultimate source of my God: also emblazoned with my new name [the third royal patent of our Lord Jesus Christ, which indicates residence and function in the divine dynasphere, Bible doctrine has number one priority in the life]."

We have noted that there is an aristocracy in the Millennium and the eternal state, the final aristocracy, an aristocracy made up of Church Age believers only. When our Lord's title, King of kings and Lord of lords, was given to Him after the ascension it was broken down into two parts: our Lord is ruler over the mature believers who will be kings over Gentile nations; He is Lord over Old Testament saints who will rule ten cities, five cities, four cities or one city in the Millennium. In other words, those who succeed in this dispensation are going to rule over those who succeeded in the Age of Israel. There is a new aristocracy which will function in the last 1000 years of history and then will go into the eternal state. At this point of time those of you who are alive have the potential of being in that aristocracy but you cannot live in the cosmic system, you cannot have a fouled up system of priorities, you cannot ignore the Word of God and fall into this future category. You cannot lose your salvation but in heaven there are degrees of blessing and there are degrees of privilege and happiness in the eternal state.

The aristocracy of the Millennium and the eternal state is not based on physical birth, it is based on regeneration. It potentially starts at the point of salvation through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Thereafter the believer is allotted time on this earth and what he does with doctrine on a daily basis is the determining factor. The aristocracy in the Millennium and the eternal state is not based in human ability or human wisdom or human achievement or attractiveness, it is based on advance inside the divine dynasphere. The final aristocracy of eternity will rule with Christ in the Millennium and have special privileges, rewards and decorations for all eternity.

The eternal coat of arms and heraldry of the mature believer, the winner in the Church Age, is given in the last half of verse 12. The mature believer, the winner, will be awarded an eternal coat of arms, an escutcheon of glory. We might call the escutcheon the shield of glory for the coat of arms will be emblazoned on that shield. There are three parts of the coat of arms.

We begin with the study of Dexter, the first item of heraldry in the eternal coat of arms of winners in the Church Age. The adjunctive use of the conjunction kai is to add another eternal reward to the pillar. Kai is used in this passage in order to indicate that you are in the record centre forever, there is a chapter written about you and about your life — you are anonymous in life now but you will be famous forever and ever. In addition to that pillar, that chapter in the permanent record of history, there is something else: you are given a coat of arms — a place in history plus a coat of arms. The winner will have this special coat of arms which distinguishes him forever from all the believers who are losers. No believer who lives in the cosmic system, who is the servant therefore of Satan, will have a coat of arms in eternity. Nor will he be a part of the eternal order of chivalry.

Next we have the future active indicative of the verb grafw. While it means to write the verb also refers to the mechanical activity of writing. Therefore it can be translated engraved, inscribed or emblazoned. Here it means to emblazon. That means to inscribe the devices of heraldry or adorn with the figures of heraldry, “I will emblazon.” The predictive future anticipates the award of the coat of arms to the mature believer. This coat of arms goes with the decoration of the order of the morning star and the uniform of glory. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb at the judgment seat of Christ. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the fact that anyone of you who advances to maturity, who becomes a part of the pivot, who has maximum historical impact through God’s plan will have this coat of arms. “I will emblazon,” and then we have a prepositional phrase, e)pi plus the accusative of the intensive pronoun a)utoj, “on him.” Then we have the accusative singular direct object from the noun o)noma, which means “title” as well as “name.” Therefore it refers to knighthood, “I will emblazon on him the title.” But this is not our title on the coat of arms, it is the title called: possessive genitive of qeoj, which is “God.” With it we also have a genitive of e)gw, the genitive of relationship, and we translate “the title of my God.” This is a reference to God the Father who is the author of the divine plan, the fantastic plan for the Church Age. Inscribed on the Dexter side of the shield is the title of God the Father, and the Dexter side of the shield indicates the fact that the believer involved has executed the plan of God for the believer in this dispensation. In using the phrase “my God” for the first person of the Trinity Jesus Christ is speaking from His humanity. Our Lord Jesus Christ is the unique person of the universe. He is eternal God, He has identical essence to the Father and the Holy Spirit, and each three members of the Trinity are coequal and co-eternal, but our Lord is different in that He is also true humanity. He is different from all humanity in that He is God; He is different from God in that He is true humanity. During His life on earth He lived inside of the prototype divine dynasphere. When He speaks from His humanity He calls God the Father “my God.”

The middle part of the heraldry or the eternal coat of arms is a pass which permits the winner’s access to the new Jerusalem which hovers over the earth in the eternal state. At the end of the Millennium the earth is going to be destroyed, as is this universe. There will be new heavens and new earth. Hovering above Jerusalem in the new earth will be a special partying place for winners only. This is the place of maximum happiness and it is called the new Jerusalem. It is in the middle part of the escutcheon because it is a pass which permits the new order of chivalry access to the new Jerusalem which hovers above the earth. Losers will not be permitted access to the new Jerusalem. Inside of the new Jerusalem is the gazebo in the garden, maximum happiness in eternity. That is the greatest of all partying places of all time, and just as a knight had to show his shield before the drawbridge was lowered to permit him access into the castle so the mature believer carries his own special pass — the coat of arms in the middle part of the escutcheon is the pass into the new Jerusalem and the tree of life. The genitive of place from the adjective kainoj is very important. It means new in species in contrast to naoj, which means new in time. This is an eternal Jerusalem so kainoj is used. There never was anything like this before and there never will be again.

The third part of the heraldry in the eternal coat of arms is the Sinister. We have the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai again, “also.” It introduces the left hand side of the shield called “Sinister,” meaning left-handed, “also emblazoned with my new name.” This is the third royal patent of our Lord Jesus Christ, it indicates that the eternal order of heraldry belongs to the royal family of God in the Church Age and that believers in this dispensation are eligible. The mature believer has maximum historical impact in time; he is the anonymous hero of this dispensation; he has the blessing of the supergrace contract; he has the ultimate in glorification of Christ in time; he has emblazoned a royal title of Christ as the mature believer, the one who advances to gate eight of the divine dynasphere. He has therefore an eternal memorial to the fact that he logged maximum time inside of the divine dynasphere.

The emblazoned royal title of Christ on the mature believer’s escutcheon is an eternal memorial to the fact that he served the Lord Jesus Christ and not Satan; he executed the plan of God, not Satan’s, while living on this earth; he made right decisions with regard to the divine provision of logistical grace. Only the mature believer possesses this coat of arms and bears forever this royal escutcheon of temporal achievement parlayed into eternal reward.

The corrected translation of the entire verse: “The winner, I will make him [the mature believer of the Church Age] a pillar in the temple of my God [a permanent record of historical impact], furthermore he will never vanish from history: also I will emblazon [inscribe a heraldry] on him [the winner] with the title of my God [God the Father, the author of the divine plan], and the new Jerusalem [which is only open to winners], which shall descend from the immediate source of heaven and the ultimate source of my God: also emblazoned with my new name [the third royal patent of our Lord Jesus Christ, which indicates residence and function in the divine dynasphere, Bible doctrine has number one priority in the life].”

To go from gate four to gate eight in the divine dynasphere every believer must pass certain tests. Gate one is the filling of the Holy Spirit, the spiritual IQ for perception of doctrine; gate two is basic impersonal love, objectivity toward the teaching of the Word of God; gate three, enforced and genuine humility which is teachability. No one can learn anything apart from humility. Gate four is the momentum gate, perception of doctrine from our royal priesthood, application of doctrine from our royal ambassadorship; gate five, we start out loving God and this is the basis for motivational virtue and we end up with occupation with Christ if we continue; gate six, right man-right woman where pertinent; gate seven, the crystallisation of virtue in your life, and therefore the ability to make friends and keep them; gate eight, the advance to maturity.

Between gate four and gate eight there are eight tests to keep you from advancing to maturity. These tests require decisions on your part. Satan's trap is the cosmic system, the 26 gates of interlocking systems of arrogance and the nine gates of interlocking systems of arrogance, to collect Christians in order to make sure that a pivot does not exist on the earth. This is one of Satan's objectives as the ruler of this world: to keep a pivot from forming anywhere, to remove client nations from historical scenes. Therefore these tests are designed to keep the believer outside of the divine dynasphere and to bring him into the cosmic system. No one ever gets to gate eight without passing these tests.

The eight momentum tests

1. The first of these tests is probably the most obvious of all — the old sin nature test. The old sin nature is Satan's inside agent for temptation; it throws up temptation. Why? Because it gives the old sin nature the opportunity of controlling the soul of the individual. Guarding the gate of the soul is human volition and as temptation comes to the gate human volition can stop it or pass it on through. If it is an unknown sin or a known sin it makes no difference. Cognisance or ignorance is not an excuse simply because you wanted to pass it through and you passed it through. The primary consideration of the old sin nature residing in the cell structure of the body is temptation. The old sin nature is not the source of sin, human volition has always been the source of sin. Since sin originates from the volition of the soul man and is responsible for both his sins of cognisance and his sins of ignorance. To use his volition to commit a sin places the believer instantly outside of the divine dynasphere.

The old sin nature test is one that we face constantly and we can approach it two ways. If we commit the sin then rebound becomes necessary, But we could also reject the temptation. No one can sin inside the divine dynasphere, the decision to sin is instant rejection of the divine dynasphere and it results in cosmic involvement, 1 John 3:4-9.

2. The second of the tests is called people testing. People testing is part of a greater subject called cosmic evangelism. Many Christians are led astray because of their love, their admiration and their friendship for someone else and they now live in the cosmic system. And God keeps these friends alive just to test you. These are believers and yet they are serving the enemy. They live in the cosmic system and therefore when you are moving along you are going to be hit by a second test. These people are going to come into your life, they are going to try to influence your life, and therefore they are evangelising for Satan. This is why they are called in Philippians the enemies of the cross. However, people can only become a distraction to perception of doctrine and residence in the divine dynasphere when the believer places human relationship above Bible doctrine, when the believer places people above doctrine in his system of priorities. We all have a scale of values which changes from time to time. Circumstances and pressures and many things may change it. But there is no way that people can distract you from doctrine unless you as a believer have set aside doctrine as the number one priority in your life. Social life, sexual life, business life, often takes precedence over Bible doctrine and life inside the divine dynasphere. Therefore personal love or personal hatred, animosity or attractiveness, can trap a believer into the cosmic system. You don't have to love a person to be evangelised, there is also evangelisation by hatred. So you must remember that cosmic evangelism has two antithetical systems for evangelism. If one doesn't get you the other will. You either love people to where they become a distraction to giving doctrine the number one priority or you hate them. The point is, people are a distraction to doctrine and to the daily perception of doctrine. Therefore you can either respond to people and get in the cosmic system or you can react to people and get in the cosmic system. You either love them and follow them or you hate them and join them. The only protection you have is impersonal love.

The solution is the function of the believer's two commissions in the divine dynasphere. The function of the royal priesthood in producing motivational virtue directed toward God and the function of the royal ambassadorship in the production of virtue such as impersonal love at point gate four.

3. Category number three is thought testing. Thought testing is generally related to the believer's negative volition toward doctrine. This falls into two categories. There is preoccupation with self resulting in neglect or indifference to doctrine, the function of gate two of cosmic one. When you get into cosmic one you are preoccupied with yourself. In gate two you have rejected Bible doctrine because of preoccupation with yourself, because of arrogance. But when you get into cosmic two this would be gate one of cosmic two and when you get into this one you are actually antagonistic toward doctrine. Cosmic two is the area of antagonism toward the plan of God whereas cosmic one is the area of indifference to the real plan of God. Thought distraction, then, can be related to one's arrogance, one's preoccupation with self or hypersensitivity. Thought distraction can also originate from one's prejudice, one's inflexibility, unteachability, inability to take criticism from the Word of God. Many times doubts in thought testing result from neglect from systematic teaching of doctrine, wrong priorities, or lack of consistent function in GAP.

All subjects in the Word of God are a part of growth and your indifference to one subject means that there is something missing in your thought pattern, and what is missing will ruin you sooner or later. The entire realm of the Word of God is important.

The solution to thought testing includes rebound and the three stages of the function of the faith-rest drill with emphasis, of course, on the rationales, and the use of the believer's volition and initiative to reestablish the priorities that God has ordained — motivational and daily routine in the perception of Bible doctrine.

4. The fourth of the categories of testing is system testing. All of us are going to be part of an organisation, or we are. Wherever people are gathered together there is some system involved and so system testing becomes an issue. The world is filled with bad systems which come into existence historically because of the genius of Satan and the evil of the cosmic system. It is not stretching the point to say that some bad systems are the result of folly. Nothing is foolproof because of course fools are so ingenious. History is cluttered with bad systems which seek to destroy the honour and integrity of those in the system. Therefore a bad system always has its victims. Many organisations are legitimate and have worthy objectives but they are neutralised by their involvement in the cosmic system. It could be the government, a professional organisation, a business organisation, but wherever there are organisations there are systems, and the believer in a legitimate system becomes the victim of bad management. Personnel and management get into conflict so that system testing requires the function of impersonal love and the three stages of the faith-rest drill.

If you have a boss that you cannot stand you are in at least two categories of testing. It may be that you are out of line completely. He may have a tremendous sense of integrity and do his job right. It may be because you are sloppy and because you are a Christian you expect extra privileges.

You are going to get someone with whom you have a personality conflict who has authority over you. Many organisations of life are rotten and corrupt when the leadership of that organisation becomes involved in the cosmic system. Illustration: the judicial system which favours criminals and ignores their victims, or judges who gives precedence to sociology over law. When believers are the victims of a rotten system they must use both impersonal love as well as the faith-rest drill. In fact to cope with the injustices of life you have to function under the faith-rest drill. This cannot be emphasised enough. Some of you forget that the faith-rest drill demands claiming promises. You may have forgotten the promises. It demands, therefore, going to the rationales. You may have forgotten the rationales. They may not have been repeated to you enough to remember. These things demand inculcation and inculcation demands repetition, just like close order drill. Under pressure it isn't what you remember, it is what you cannot forget that you apply. That takes plugging.

System testing is often a source of peer ostracism. System testing may find you low on the totem pole and the first thing you may want to do, and you are wrong, is quit. That is not what you want to do at all. If the Lord opens a door and puts you in a system and you can't stand your boss or you can't stand the policy, don't leave it. Most Christians are so stupid that when they get into system testing what they do is quit. You stick at it until the Lord shuts the door. Then He will open a better one.

5. The direct attack of cosmic one. This is the attack of the twenty-six gates. Each one has its own subtle variations.

6. The direct attack of cosmic two, the hatred complex with its nine gates. This provides nine additional categories of distraction from momentum and making doctrine the number one priority. The direct attack of cosmic two is designed to cause the believer to become antagonistic toward doctrine, toward Christ, toward God's plan. While cosmic one basically produces preoccupation with self cosmic two results in that antagonism which we have studied in Philippians 3:18,19 where the believer becomes the enemy of the cross.

7. The potential distraction of disaster testing. There are two categories of disaster testing. The first is the personal disaster and it is designed for either blessing, acceleration of spiritual growth, or warning of cosmic involvement. The second is collective or historical disaster which relates to the bad decisions of others. Individuals or people who are involved collectively as individuals are the product of their own decisions and often there decisions merge with others to cause historical disaster. The problem is that decisions create environment, not environment decisions.

Collective disaster results from historical downtrend and historical downtrend results from a maximum number of believers living in the cosmic system. Personal disaster can result from making wrong decisions in your own life, you are responsible for those wrong decisions, but also you can gather with others making wrong decisions and then you have historical disaster.

When personal disaster results from cosmic involvement the believer undergoes either warning or intensive discipline. The cursing is turned into blessing when the believer learns from the suffering and rebounds. When personal suffering, disaster, adversity, results from life in the divine dynasphere then, of course, the believer is going to receive great blessing from it.

8. The potential distraction of prosperity. This is the one the nation has flunked in the past few decades since World War 2 ended in 1945. Like disaster testing prosperity testing falls into two categories. Individual prosperity testing in which some form of testing comes to you as a believer, in the field of business or promotion, or some type of recognition in some activity or profession. Every believer who advances is going to receive personal prosperity.

The question arises: What did you do when you personally became prosperous? What happened to Bible doctrine then? That is the issue.

Collective prosperity testing often results from combining the three categories of manifest destiny — landed aristocracy, the industrial complex, and the undeveloped frontier, under the leadership of the industrial complex. That is what happened to us in the last three decades, we had national prosperity. In collective prosperity testing the entire segment of society involved becomes usually hedonistic. Hedonism, of course, is making pleasure the chief function in life, self-indulgence before everything else. Hedonism is the pursuit of pleasure in life to the exclusion of truth or doctrine. Hedonism contends that moral duty is fulfilled in the gratification of pleasure seeking. And, of course, this means following the instincts of one's desires and modus vivendi. The rise of hedonism among believers indicates their failure to pass the prosperity test. Seeking happiness outside of the divine dynasphere, seeking happiness through pleasure because you have the prosperity to do so, is a dead end. The cosmic system can offer many things in this world, success. promotion, wealth, material prosperity, family name, social and sexual pleasure, anything that people generally associate with happiness. But it is a dead end. It has no capacity for happiness going with it. Prosperity related to happiness is one of the great blessings of the divine dynasphere, but prosperity related to the cosmic system results in misery, unhappiness, frustration with the accoutrements and superficialities pertaining to it. Every believer must pass the prosperity test before he can become a mature believer and enjoy the great blessings imputed in the supergrace paragraphs. Capacity for blessing of supergrace comes from the construction of the edification complex of the soul. Prosperity is the most subtle distraction in life.

No nation can survive the destruction of a one-culture system. We are receiving a tremendous Satanic attack in this area right now. No nation which has the establishment principle in freedom can have more than one culture. We have one culture, it is Anglo-Saxon. You can have many religions and many races but all races and religions must go back to a system of freedom based on that culture. So let us notice first of all how chivalry works into this picture for chivalry was the feudal system of the landed aristocracy in England which provided freedom for the people of England by curbing the power of the crown. It occurred on the field of Runnymede on the Thames, a few miles from London, and the date is very important because it explains why we, the people of the United States, are a client nation to God today, 15 June, 1215. There King John granted a list of demands drawn up by bishops, barons, and some townsmen. These demands were based on the coronation charter of King Henry I, though they extended to include 63 new articles. The document from its great length became known as Magna Carta or the Great Charter and it is one of the most notable documents in all of history. It is the basis for our culture which, in effect, means our freedom. You see freedom doesn't come from business enterprise, that is a different function. And freedom doesn't come from the modus operandi of politicians. All freedom which is for believers and unbelievers comes from the culture of a nation, and a multi-culture nation has no freedom, it has conflict. People can come in and have the same freedoms we have but there must not be a toleration of more than one culture. That is why it is so bad to have multi-lingual education in our schools. People do better, as it has been demonstrated many times in the immigrations to this country, if they go into school not speaking our language and be motivated to learn.

There is a very close relationship between category #1 truth and culture, and we have now departed from Anglo-Saxon culture. As a result the problems we face are related to category #1 truth of the Word of God, for category #1 truth is for believer and unbeliever alike. Many of the problems of violence and clashing and multi-lingual education demonstrate a tolerance of other cultures, which is not necessary for freedom. Freedom tolerates people from other countries but doesn't have to tolerate their culture at all, especially if their culture has not produced freedom for themselves. African, Asian, and even European countries have had long periods where they have had no freedom. So culture becomes a very important issue in the laws of divine establishment.

The Magna Carta is very important to our culture for four reasons. The first reason was the way in which it was obtained. King John did not grant these freedoms willingly. He could choose whether to grant these grievances or not. Furthermore he could choose just what he would grant by way of concessions to the barons as the representatives of the people of England. So it was forced from the King by a group of chivalrous men, the barons of England, the great nobility that existed from the first crusades to the field of Bosworth, the end of the wars of the roses. It was forced from the king by chivalry. The aristocracy of the present is nothing compared to what they had in those days. In that system of chivalry they represented the watchdogs of freedom because the common people, as it were, were under their protection. The common people in England have never until modern history done anything to gain their freedom. They were helpless to do so, incapable of doing so. And good aristocracy is always thoughtful of those who are, in class, inferior to them. (Not what the liberals are doing it for today in this country; they are doing it for power and as a matter of political expediency. And they are hypocrites) So it was forced from the king by chivalrous barons on behalf of freedom; it was forced on the king by the most influential people on behalf of all the people. "Government of the people, for the people and by the people" doesn't mean that all the people have a say in government because the more people that have a say in government the worse it is. Only the capable people, the smart and honourable ones should have the final say in government. A government of the people doesn't mean that all the people have a say. Democracy is the worst form of government, in fact democracy is evil. Republic, by contrast, is a great form of government. Democracy is evil because the masses are not capable of chivalry, and that is the principle. Freedom and chivalry go together. It is always a few who provide freedom for everyone. So it demonstrated that if a king do not rule as the people wished he could be made to do so, and that is why Magna Carta is one of the greatest documents in history and in the basis for our culture in this country. The way in which it was obtained: the barons, chivalry, a system of chivalry, a system of virtue, a system of honour of a few great nobles, forced the king into a system of freedom. It therefore demonstrated that if the king did not rule as the people wished he could be made to do so. In other words, you cannot have freedom and have absolute monarchy at the same time — except in the case where the monarch is enlightened, and that becomes not absolute monarchy but enlightened monarchy where a man recognises the fact that in order to give all the people freedom he must allow disagreement, he must allow people to have self-determination as long as they do not violate criminal law.

This was absolutely unusual. They had chivalry in France ruined; they had chivalry in Germany; they had chivalry in Spain, but the nobility of all the countries where they had chivalry were arrogant eventually, power mad, and abandoned the true concept of chivalry which is freedom and self-determination, and therefore the protection of the people under their command. But in England the nobility had the interest of the people — Magna Carta. So the first reason it is important to us as believers and client nation is because of the way in which it was obtained. It was not give willingly by the king but it was done without violence; it was done without overthrowing the king; it was done without disturbing the function of government. Therefore it is one of the greatest advances in history and Anglo-Saxon culture differentiates, for example, from all of the countries south of the USA and going all of the way through South America where they have constantly redressed their grievances by violence, by revolution, by a constant overthrow, constant conspiracy. We are different, and yet because of liberalism we no longer recognise it.

The second way in which Magna Carta was one of the greatest documents in history is that it saved certain feudal principles of government from being superseded by the principle of absolute monarchy. In other words, it protected the people from tyranny. The original principles of feudal government were a people who had ability and became nobility and had the best interests of the people under their jurisdiction at heart. It is the same thing today: people who have style and good manners always treat the help well. That is simply a sense of responsibility. So feudalism included the idea of an agreement between the king and his vassals, and agreement that would give them good government if they gave good service. In this way it saved the feudal principles of government from being superseded by tyranny. In other words, Magna Carta was a contract in which the king had no right to break. Hence it gave ascendancy to chivalry, and out of chivalry came freedom.

The liberal says feudalism is a horrible thing. He doesn't know his history. Feudalism is a great thing, it was the only way in which people could be divided up in groups in the protection of someone who had the power to protect them and the power to ensure their freedom.

So in the year 1215 freedom became a tremendous reality in England. This is why England became in the last century the greatest power in history since the Roman empire, because the aristocracy had a tremendous sense of responsibility, although there are always exceptions because there are always people who get arrogant with power, and arrogance plus power means irresponsibility and tyranny; but the principle was there and the principle was guaranteed. There was great stability in England for hundreds of years because they were a class society, all classes were protected. And the Magna Carta was a contract which the king had no right to break there were now two parties involved in government, not one. It knocked absolute monarchy out. In English history we discover the very basis for every freedom we have ever enjoyed, and it only came from one country. That is why we have Anglo-Saxon culture. By tolerating other cultures we are destroying the very basis of our freedoms because freedom is always a contract. The contract of Magna Carta made the king a responsible person, but whether a king was responsible or irresponsible the contract stood and freedom stood, chivalry.

Keep these things in mind otherwise you won't understand the point. There is and has been another form of chivalry which is found in this passage and which doesn't depend on King John or the barons on the field of Runnymede. It depends on you the believer.

So the feudal theory of contract was revived in England and the barons through their chivalry and integrity provided freedom for all of the people under their command. (Their peasantry was called Yeomanry) It provided a principle of freedom for the Great Charter was an acknowledgement on the part of King John of the principle of agreement. It provided precedent whereby the barons had the right as well as the power to call the king to account. And in this way for the first time in history freedom was not only guaranteed but there was a check and balance system for freedom.

The third reason why this is one of the great documents of history, and a part of our own culture: the content was important. It gave birth to freedom for the common people because it contained definite agreement to refrain from certain illegal actions. The king had power but he didn't have power just to wipe people out at will or to cease people or to enslave people at will. It was an agreement for the perpetuation of freedom without destroying authority. That is what is so important about our culture: it demands the perpetuation of freedom without the destruction of authority. So whatever the king granted in the charter to the barons they were required to observe toward men below them — the common people — these benefits. The benefits of freedom and responsibility therefore spread throughout the nation to all people without sacrificing anyone's authority and without solving the problems of society by violence.

There were certain things that King John promised. For example, "No free man shall be seized or imprisoned, or dispossessed, or outlawed, or banished, or in any way injured. Nor will we attack him or send against him (send troops) except by the legal judgment of his peers or by the law of the land," recognition of law. Even the king is under law. So the highest authority does not mean that you are excluded from law. Another statement: "To no one will we sell, to no one will we deny or delay the right of justice." You can't survive in a nation without a good system of jurisprudence. Although there was very little about trial by jury at that time, or representation of the people and other valued elements of later English liberty, yet the tyranny of the king was restricted by the provisions of the Great Charter so that new rights and freedoms had a chance to grow up. And they did magnificently. That is why England became different from all other nations in Europe and elsewhere. And we take our culture, regardless of what race or religion we are, from Anglo-Saxon culture.

There is a fourth reason. Magna Carta set a precedent for future freedom and liberty. The precedent was established. It is lost from time to time but the precedent is there. (We had a precedent set on the Day of Pentecost, a precedent called doctrinal chivalry, a precedent that still is functional) The barons, the English aristocracy, from their attitude of chivalry became the guardians of English freedoms until they were destroyed by the wars of the roses. The Tudor and Stuart dynasty got back to absolute monarchy and it was not until 1688 that the last of the Stuart dynasty was removed and William and Mary came to the throne, and again the power of the throne was curbed and freedom was again established for all people of all classes. By restricting royal rights and by the integrity of landed aristocracy chivalry was parlayed into freedom. The aristocracy of France by contrast — by example, in the days of Louis XIV, became arrogant and they sought to curtail the absolute power of the king in order for them to have that power for themselves. In other words, power without responsibility. Hence, France destroyed aristocracy by violence in the French revolution, while in England debate and parliamentary procedure replaced that violence and therefore they had a much smoother history.

In the concept, then, of manifest destiny the authority of government eventually moves from the landed aristocracy to the middle class, because in the industrial revolution it is the middle class that have the same sense of responsibility, in the last century and this century — that the barons had on the field of Runnymede. And no nation can have prosperity under manifest destiny without eventually the industrial complex taking over. Any government which takes its power from below the middle class, however, becomes irresponsible, a very important principle, because right now the press takes the lower classes and interviews them and talks to them and they get their opinions and they use them in order to try to take power away from responsible persons. This is why democracy is an evil just as republic as a form of government is great. Actually democracy is the worst form of tyranny because it is not even organised tyranny, it is the tyranny of all the people, and the masses have never had a sense of responsibility and never will. The best they can produce is the Jacobin mentality and in their lust for power they have no concept for freedom and no sense of responsibility toward others. That is why the worst tyrants always come from the lowest class.

So after 1688 the gradual rise of the house of commons in Parliament and the loss of power by the House of Lords made the transition to the industrial complex or the middle class leadership. And it was not until world war one when Lloyd George became Prime Minister that you finally had the lower class rearing its ugly head and the Labour Party taking over, and with it the decline of chivalry or the distortion of chivalry. Chivalry either declined or it was distorted into romantic disorientation and therefore it caused the baronage to cease as being the watchdogs of freedom.

The reverse trend of history

The reverse trend of history is the plan of God for the Church Age. It is the reverse trend because Satan is the ruler of this world. As such he is the tyrant of tyrants and therefore the reverse trend of history brings freedom in the midst of Satan's tyranny.

1. The plan of God for the Church Age reverses the trend of history where some form of leadership like the barons on the field of Runnymede or great rulers or middle class industrial complex leaders, or in a few cases dictators like Gaius Julius Caesar determine the course of history. These people all have one thing in common: a tremendous sense of responsibility for those under their command and a contract, a guarantee that people shall have freedom and the right of self-determination whether they make good or bad decisions, and that the only bad decisions that are punishable are criminal decisions. That is freedom, freedom for every race and every class of people in a nation — only under Anglo-Saxon culture.
2. The course of history in this dispensation, the Church Age, is determined by the attitude of the individual believer toward Bible doctrine.
3. Born-again believers are composed of every class of society with the majority coming from lower classes, as per 1 Corinthians 1:23-31.
4. Democracy is the lowest form of government with the least amount of responsibility, a total absence of integrity and stability. There is only one thing worse than democracy and that is anarchy.
5. This is because democracy gives a maximum number of scum a say in government, and because they are scum they are least qualified of all human beings to shape any form of government policy.

6. But believers of all coins in life and distinctions of humble origin or inferior ability are not classified as scum, except through residence in the cosmic system.

7. In fact God has made all believers of the Church Age royal family. So no matter what your origin — it may be very humble, it may be very high — all believers in this dispensation are different from believers in other dispensations. They were appointed royalty the day they accepted Christ as saviour through the modus operandi of the baptism of the Holy Spirit.

Therefore the royal family of God has a mission in this dispensation, to determine the course of history by their attitude to Bible doctrine and the plan of God related to the divine dynasphere. That brings us back to our first principle in historical trends: Jesus Christ controls history. Jesus Christ has delegated some of that control to the doctrine: as goes the believer so goes the client nation, so goes the trends of history in any given generation. Therefore the mission of the royal family of God is to contribute to historical uptrend and national prosperity through residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. No longer, then, does human freedom depend on the Magna Carta of Great Britain or the Constitution of the United States. No longer does a chivalrous aristocracy watch over the freedom of the common people. Instead, the watchdog of freedom and the key to historical blessing resides with lower classes, not forming mobs for the degenerate process of democracy or for the evil of violence and terrorism and intimidation, but for the purpose of glorifying the Lord Jesus Christ. Election is the doctrine of privilege and it is the privilege of you and I as believer, regardless of our origins, regardless of our abilities or race or any other factor, to actually maintain the freedoms of our generation through Christian chivalry, modus operandi in the divine dynasphere and to avoid arrogance and any other factor in the cosmic system which makes us scum instead of chivalrous.

1 Corinthians 1:23-31, "But we preach Christ crucified, to the Jews [negative Jews] a stumbling block, and to [negative] Gentiles, foolishness, but to those who are elected to privilege [we have become royal family], both Jews and Gentiles, Christ is the power of God and the wisdom of God [so that our system of chivalry is centred in Christ as the power and the wisdom. The power: He has provided for us the divine dynasphere; the wisdom: He has provided for us His thinking, Bible doctrine]. Because the foolishness of God is wiser than men, and the weakness of God is stronger than men [illustration by anthropopathism to indicate a principle that the essence of God who planned all this is far greater than any system of human wisdom or ability]. For consider your election to privilege, brethren [royal family], that there were not many wise according to human standards, not many mighty [achievers with great ability], not many aristocrats; but God has elected to privilege the foolish," the accusative neuter plural from the adjective moroj, from where we get our English word "moron," "of the word that he might shame the wise [human wisdom rather than divine], and God has elected to privilege the weak things of the world that he might put to shame the powerful things [tyranny], and the lowborn of the world," and then we have a perfect participle from e)xouqenew, and that participle means scum, "and those who are scum, God has elected to privilege those that are not that he might nullify the things that are,” God uses “are not,” and that means invisible means, the whole system of chivalry in the royal family, to handle the things that are visible. The system of our freedom and the historical trends is invisible, “that no one should boast [be arrogant] in the presence of God. Therefore you [believer] are in Christ Jesus [regardless of your background], who became to us wisdom from the source of God [there you have chivalry], and righteousness,” there is the virtue. This righteousness starts out as imputed righteousness and to that imputed righteousness comes logistical grace, the provision of doctrine, and in response to that doctrine the fantastic virtue, “and sanctification [temporal sanctification through the provision of the divine dynasphere in phase two], “and redemption [the work of Christ on the cross became the strategic victory of history and changed the entire trend of history], that just as it stands written, ‘Let him who does his glorifying, be glorifying in the Lord’,” in other words, positional truth makes royal family of God, and royal family of God lives on the earth to glorify the Lord and change the trends of history in the devil’s world. So it is the believer in Christ who is the watchdog of freedom. As goes the believer so goes freedom and prosperity in the client nation. Therefore, regardless of background all believers are elected for a purpose. The aristocracy among believers have a mission, so do the humblest of believers who are members of the body of Christ. It is our relationship with Christ which gives us the mission in this life, and those who succeed will be decorated at the judgment seat of Christ.

The greatest spiritual civil war that has ever existed, where family fights against family, where brother fights against brother, where father-in-law and son-in-law fight each other, is the struggle between the believer in the divine dynasphere and the believer in the cosmic system. The believer in cosmic one and two eventually winds up as the loser and the believer in the divine dynasphere winds up as the winner. And while we are all brethren in Christ we are as different as can be in our attitudes, our modus operandi, in whether we are fulfilling the plan of God or not. In verse 12 of our passage we notice the first words, “the winner.” Not all believers are winners and in this life inevitably the cosmic believer and the believer in the divine dynasphere come into conflict.

“The winner [mature believer], I will make him a pillar in the temple of my God,” the permanent historical record of the mature believers who are the anonymous heroes of the Church Age who will be the most famous people in history when they rule in the Millennium; “furthermore, he [the winner] will never vanish from history,” he is in a permanent chapter in heaven.

We have noted that no nation can be a client nation to God unless it has one culture only — many religions, many races, but one culture. Chivalry was the feudal system of the landed aristocracy which provided freedom for the people of England by curbing the power of the crown. The Magna Carta was one of the great documents of history. It is fascinating to note that the Roman Catholic church was never satisfied with being a religion, it wanted to be the culture and the government. And wherever that church became the culture instead of merely staying as a religion it caused a terrible vacuum in history and today there are literally thousands and thousands of people in South America, Central America and Mexico who are communists because of their antagonism toward the church. No religion should ever be the culture of the nation. The culture must always be related to freedom and the culture must have a relationship to the laws of divine establishment which are for believers and unbelievers alike. So many religions and many races, but one culture. Once a nation becomes multi-cultured it destroys itself. The toleration of more than one culture destroys the freedom of the nation.

Note: The greatest arrogance that exists comes from the gutter. It comes from the Jacobin mentality.

The aristocracy of the Millennium and the eternal state

1. The aristocracy of the Millennium and the eternal state is not based on physical birth or anything thereafter in the life, it is based on regeneration, the new birth, which occurred at the moment you believed in the Lord Jesus Christ.
2. The aristocracy of the Millennium and the eternal state is not based on human ability or human wisdom or human attractiveness, but on spiritual advance inside the divine dynasphere.
3. The final aristocracy of eternity will rule with Christ. Those who are given a coat of arms at the judgment seat of Christ, those who are entered on the lists of eternal heraldry will rule with Christ in the Millennium and they will have special privileges, rewards, decorations for all eternity that other believers do not have.
4. The final aristocracy of history is the greatest aristocracy of history, the only one which avoids any concept of snobbery since it is not based on class distinction, racial distinction, human achievement or personal attractiveness.
5. Neither race nor nationality has anything to do with the aristocracy of the Millennium and the eternal state.
6. Included in the new order of chivalry will be humble folk, famous folk, the attractive and the unattractive of this life, but they will all have one thing in common: maximum exploitation of logistical grace inside the divine dynasphere. They have used the divine dynasphere and Bible doctrine to advance to maturity.
7. Being born again gives every believer opportunity, it does not guarantee ever believer knighthood forever. It gives opportunity to use your free will, your volition, to achieve spiritual maturity and form that eternal and lasting aristocracy which glorifies our Lord Jesus Christ by its very existence in heaven.
8. While we today associate knighthood and chivalry as a mode of feudal tenure or a personal attribute of integrity, or a scheme of good manners, the aristocracy of eternity is associated with the plan of God for the Church Age believer.

9. Therefore the election to privilege in the Church Age is the greatest opportunity for becoming part of the order of chivalry in the Millennium and the knighthood for the eternal state.

And not only at the judgment seat of Christ will there be the knighting of those who achieve maturity in the Church Age, but with that new knighthood comes a coat of arms. When a person is made a knight he takes up a coat of arms which he wears on his shield and on his breastplate that he takes up from some characteristic of achievement in his life. He also takes up certain colours that are appealing to him, and therefore we have the concept of heraldry given in the last half of verse twelve. The mature believer, the winner, will be awarded an eternal escutcheon, a coat of arms in addition to the uniform of glory. We might call this escutcheon the shield of glory for the coat of arms is emblazoned on the shield.

The doctrine of the reverse trend of history

The doctrine of the reverse trend of history is the plan of God for the Church Age, and not only for the Church Age but for every believer in the Church Age, God's plan for your life.

1. The plan of God for the Church Age reverses the trend of history, and this only happens when some form of leadership, like the barons on the field of Runnymede or great rulers or the leaders of the middle class industrial complex. But behind every great man in history there is somewhere a pivot of mature believers.

2. The course of history in this dispensation, the Church Age, is determined by the attitude of the individual believer toward Bible doctrine. No man in history who is great, no man who makes great decisions in history during this dispensation, no person who is a leader or group of leaders who function on principle, can make decisions based on honour and integrity without the invisible backing of a pivot of mature believers.

3. Born-again believers are composed of every class of society with the majority coming from lower classes, as per 1 Corinthians 1:23-31.

4. Democracy is the lowest form of government with the least amount of responsibility and with almost a total absence of integrity and stability.

5. Democracy is evil because it gives a maximum number of scum a say in government, and because they are scum they are least qualified of all human beings to shape and form policy in government. When the scum have a say in government the result is disaster.

6. But believers are from all callings in life, all areas where distinction is made. Believers are from humble origin and inferior ability but they are not classified as scum except when they prolong their stay in the cosmic system. And the fact that God has made all believers of the Church Age royal family of God through the baptism of the Spirit at the moment of salvation is the significant factor for historical impact in this dispensation. In other words, the royal family of God has a mission in this dispensation. Never before in history has so much depended on so few, the believers in any given client nation. The mission of the royal family is to determine the course of history by their attitude toward Bible doctrine and the plan of God as it relates to the divine dynasphere. The mission of the royal family of God is to contribute to the historical uptrend and thereby provide national prosperity through residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. No longer does human freedom depend on the Magna Carta of Great Britain or even the Constitution of the United States. No longer do we have a chivalrous aristocracy watching over the freedom of the common people. Instead the watchdog of freedom and the key to historical blessing resides with people from all races, all classes, all connotations of human origin; not forming mobs for the degenerate process of democracy, or for the evil violence of terrorism, or for some form of intimidation, but for the purpose of glorifying the Lord Jesus Christ who controls history.

A key word from the New Testament helps us with this concept, the word "election." Election is the doctrine of privilege in time, it is the doctrine of privilege and the impact of the royal family. It is a privilege to belong to the class of society which is classless as far as historical impact.

The mission is expressed in 1 Corinthians 1:23-31. Furthermore, it is expressed in terms of demonstrating the fact that yesterday you may have been scum but with Bible doctrine tomorrow you will be the unknown, unseen hero of history.

"We preach Christ crucified [the presentation of category #2 truth, the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ], to the Jews a stumbling block, and to the Gentiles foolishness [because of their negative volition]," Gentile nations can have many races and many religions, but they can only have one culture. No client nation can survive where many cultures are tolerated. In contrast to those who reject the gospel there are in certain nations, especially client nations to God, those who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, freedom is the environment for evangelism. Therefore, in verse 24, "but to those who are elected to privilege." If you are a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ, from the moment of your faith in Him you have been elected to privilege. You have the privilege of determining historical uptrend or downtrend in this generation; you are the watchdogs of freedom, "both Jews and Gentiles, Christ is the power of God [the divine dynasphere] and the wisdom of God [reference to Bible doctrine, which is called the mind of Christ]. Because the foolishness of God is wiser than men, and the weakness of God is stronger than men," these are anthropopathisms, God is neither foolish nor weak, "For consider your election to privilege." As a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ God has a plan for your life. It is called here election to privilege, "brethren [royal family of God], that there are not many wise according to human standards." There is no place for snobbery in the Christian way of life. Those who have responded to the gospel often come from the lower classes" "not many mighty [great achievers], not many aristocrats; but God has elected to privilege the foolish [the accusative neuter plural direct object from the adjective moroj, from which we get our English word "moron"] things of this world that he might shame the wise." Why are those with high IQ, pseudo-intellectual high IQ type of people, put to shame? Because genius has a way of working out plans that look are they are a panacea for life. Smart people come up with ideas of how everything can be worked out in life, e.g. liberals who are divorced from reality. How does God “shame the wise”? Because anyone can make Bible doctrine his number one priority and advance to maturity and become forever and ever a person in the highest order of chivalry. He can be a king for a thousand years in the Millennium. And why can he do it? Because he isn't disturbed by arrogance at the moment, he is ground into the dust and therefore there is no problem with arrogance. He is looking for something greater than he is, stronger than he is, and he finds it in Bible doctrine plus residence and function in the divine dynasphere. And the thing that saves our country is not the jackass liberal but the scum of the earth who believe in Christ and then advance to maturity as members of the royal family of God.

“and God has elected to privilege the weak things of the world that he might put to shame i)xsuroj, superior persons.” The “superior persons” of this world have no control over life, and the people that are so respected and so superior can't even handle life. God has elected to privilege the weak things, and you must come to the point where you recognise that you need something more powerful than yourself, that you have no ability, no wisdom, no greatness or anything that is going to cope with the ruler of this world and his cosmic system, “and the a)gonhj [low-born] of the world, and those who are scum, the perfect passive participle of e)cougenew, which means to reject with contempt, “God has elected to privilege, the things that are not [nothing in this life], that he might nullify the things that are.” In this life people have power, people have fame, people have success people are prominent, they become achievers in some field or they don't become achievers but they are well thought of. And God doesn't use those people, only a few of them. He uses those who spend their lives in the divine dynasphere, but He uses them under a new principle: at the point of salvation He makes them royal family of God; He gives them the divine dynasphere; He gives them Bible doctrine, and they are the ones who are controlling the world. If believers fail with Bible doctrine we have historical downtrends; if believers succeed we have historical uptrends. It is the believers of this world, regardless of their background, who make the difference, “and the lowborn of the world and those who are scum, God has elected to privilege, those who are not, that he might nullify the things that are [the people who are famous by human standards] that no one should be arrogant in the presence of God. Therefore, from him [the plan of God] you are in Christ Jesus, who became to us wisdom,” we have a wisdom that exceeds the wisdom of this world, Bible doctrine, “from the source of God [Christ, and doctrine which is the mind of Christ is wisdom from the source of God], and righteousness [imputed righteousness is the basis of receiving logistical grace] and sanctification [the royal family is set apart for a purpose, therefore the provision of the divine dynasphere to accomplish that purpose], and redemption [the work of Christ on the cross which was the beginning of the strategical victory of the angelic conflict, that which changed the entire trend of history], that, just as it stands written, Jeremiah 9:23ff, ‘Let him who does his glorifying, be glorifying in the Lord’,” positional truth makes the royal family of God. The royal family of God lives on earth to glorify the Lord and to reverse the trends of history brought about by the fact that Satan is the ruler of this world. It is the believer in Christ, then, who is the watchdog of freedom. As goes the believer, so goes freedom and prosperity in the client nation to God.

Therefore, regardless of background all believers are elected for a purpose. The scum have a mission, the aristocrat has a mission, because they are blended into a new family on the earth, the royal family of God. This is the only dispensation in which there is royal family; this is the only dispensation in which the baptism of the Spirit occurs at the moment of salvation. It is not an experience, it is something that God does for us. He enters us into union with Christ. Therefore we have a new aristocracy on the earth and that aristocracy has a mission. Part of that mission is to be the watchdogs of human freedom. It is our relationship with Christ which gives us the mission of watchdogs in time. Those who succeed will be decorated at the judgment seat of Christ.

The next concept, then, is the aristocracy of the future. The aristocracy of the Millennium and the eternal state is based not on physical birth but on regeneration, the new birth which occurs at the moment of faith in Christ. The aristocracy of the Millennium and the eternal state is not based on human ability, human attractiveness, human wisdom, human personality or human power, but is based on spiritual advance inside of God's power sphere, the divine dynasphere. The final aristocracy of eternity, the new order of chivalry, will rule with Christ in the Millennium as kings for a thousand years and will have special privileges, rewards, and decorations for all eternity. The final aristocracy is the greatest aristocracy of all, the only one that will completely avoid any concept of snobbery since it is not based upon class distinction or human achievement or personal attractiveness. Neither race nor nationality has anything to do with the aristocracy of the Millennium and the eternal state. Included in the new order of chivalry will be humble folk, famous folk, the attractive and the unattractive of this life. But they all have one thing in common: maximum exploitation of logistical grace inside of the divine dynasphere.

Being born again gives every believer the opportunity to use his volition to achieve spiritual maturity and to form that eternal and lasting aristocracy which glorifies our Lord Jesus Christ forever in eternity. While we, today, associate knighthood and chivalry as a mode of feudal tenure or a personal attribute of integrity or a scheme of manners, the aristocracy of eternity is associated with the plan of God for the Church Age believer. In other words, election to privilege in the Church Age is the greatest opportunity for becoming a part of the order of chivalry in the Millennium and the new knighthood of the eternal state. It is the only opportunity for historical impact in time.

We have been studying how that you as believers are the watchdogs of freedom, you are at the controls of this country. As goes your attitude toward Bible doctrine so goes this country, and many of you are distracted by various forms of social action, by social life, by wrong priorities for one reason or another. The survival of this country does not depend on its leadership or on its people in general, it depends on you as a believer specifically. As goes your priorities in life so goes the survival of this country, and you certainly have a right to ask yourself a question: What are your priorities?

Right now we are living on the concept of evil, the scum concept, and we need now to get back to client nation USA and what we have been in the past, and what we should be in the future as a client nation to God. But there is no way we can do this as long as there is anything else in your life is more important than Bible doctrine. Whatever is more important than doctrine to you guarantees you a miserable life and, forever and ever as we shall study in great detail, just where you are going to be in heaven. The winner is the one who makes Bible doctrine number one in his life.

In verse 13 we have the means of momentum, the basis for receiving eternal decorations and rewards. We begin with the articular present active participle of the verb e)w, which means to have, "He who has." The definite article is used as a personal pronoun referring to the believer who has positive volition toward doctrine and therefore uses logistical grace support for the daily perception of Bible doctrine inside the divine dynasphere. Since the day you believed in Christ you are the recipient of logistical grace. Logistical grace comes from the justice of God, one half of divine holiness. It is imputed down the grace pipeline to the righteousness of God which is inside of you [imputed righteousness] and every bit of air you breathe, every bit of food you eat, your clothing, everything you have to sustain your life is courtesy of the justice of God. And whether you are a winner or a loser, whether you fail or succeed, whether you live in the divine dynasphere or in the cosmic system it still comes from the justice of God. You and I are nothing without the integrity of God.

"He who has," the present tense is a static present. It emphasises the fact that every person possesses ears totally apart from human merit or ability. Whatever you are today you had nothing whatever to do with the development of your ears. So it is analogous to the believer through possessing everything necessary for advance to maturity, namely the divine dynasphere, various categories of logistical grace, including time. God has given you one of the most precious things in the world, time. Time demands that you make decisions to organise your life, to organise your life on the basis of priorities, on number one priority, Bible doctrine. You also have opportunity. Time means opportunity: opportunity to advance to maturity, opportunity to live in the divine dynasphere, opportunity to fulfill God's plan for your life where life has meaning, purpose and definition. You have all the opportunities for making the right decisions. Good decisions open the doors for greater options; bad decisions close the doors and eventually destroy you.

Momentum from gate four to gate eight, then, is achieved through the daily perception of Bible doctrine plus the application of it in the momentum tests. Advancing to maturity mean wearing the invisible uniform of honour, an invisible uniform worn in the soul. Eventually the uniform of honour will be exchanged for the uniform of glory at the judgment seat of Christ.

The active voice: positive believers living inside the divine dynasphere and learning doctrine consistently produce the action of the verb through daily positive decisions related to logistical grace. The participle is circumstantial for the fact that through life in the divine dynasphere and the faithful perception of Bible doctrine believers attain spiritual maturity by the utilisation of their positive volition on a daily basis.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object from o)uj, the word for ears. It represents again the divine provision of logistical grace to every member of the royal family of God. The noun o)uj also relates logistical grace to your personal volition. You have open doors today, you have opportunities, you have time to fulfill them. Good decisions open the door for more and greater decisions; bad decisions destroy the options and result in great unhappiness in the Christian life. Every believer, like every nation, is the product of his own decisions. Every believer will take the responsibility for his own decisions at the judgment seat of Christ where positive decisions will be rewarded with many decorations and great blessings and fantastic degrees of happiness. Bad decisions in time mean loss of rewards and embarrassment at the judgment seat of Christ. The vast distinction between believers in eternity related to the principle of Bible doctrine and believers in eternity related to the arrogance of the cosmic system is the great differentiation which will exist permanently in heaven forever and ever. There will be inequality in the perfect environment of heaven.

The ears portray the believer's attitude toward Bible doctrine for you can turn a listening ear or a deaf ear to the teaching of the Word of God. Spiritual momentum, then, is based on residence in the divine dynasphere, function at gate four — perception and application of doctrine. "He who has an ear," positive volition plus grace provision equals spiritual momentum. Persistent positive volition inside the divine dynasphere equals spiritual maturity. Therefore the mandate to all members of the royal family of God, all believers of this dispensation, the aorist active imperative of the verb a)kouw, "let him hear." The aorist tense is a constative aorist for the daily function of GAP. That means daily decisions for Bible doctrine. The constative aorist takes positive volition toward doctrine in this life and gathers it up into one entirety, fulfilling the plan of God. The active voice: the third person suffix of the verb implies that only positive believers obey the mandate even though it is directed toward all believers, positive and negative. The imperative mood is the imperative of command. This is a mandate to you if you are a believer in Jesus Christ. The means of execution: the ministry of God the Holy Spirit delegating authority to the pastor-teacher.

The accusative neuter singular from the word tij, an interrogative pronoun which means, What sort of thing? It refers to Bible doctrine as the sort of thing that God the Holy Spirit communicates through the agency of pastors. The purpose of the filling of the Spirit is to give you spiritual IQ for the perception of doctrine.

Then we have the present active indicative of legw which means to say, to speak, to answer. Here it means to communicate, "what the Spirit communicates." The customary present tense is for what habitually occurs when positive believers make daily decisions for life inside the divine dynasphere, the perception of doctrine. The customary present also implies that positive believers maintain high-priority rating to Bible doctrine and they never lose sight of its daily importance as spiritual food. Just as you have physical food to sustain your body so you must have spiritual food to sustain your soul. God the Holy Spirit produces the action of the verb and the indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the Spirit's ministry in the life of the believer, grace provision without which no one could survive in the devil's world. The Holy Spirit uses agents and in this case the agent is the pastor-teacher for communication of doctrine.

There must also be some form of a classroom and therefore the last word in this particular verse is the dative plural indirect object of the noun e)kklhsia, and it has five different meanings in the Greek but the one here is referring to the local church as the classroom for learning doctrine. Spiritually the believer must reside in the divine dynasphere; temporarily he must attend some form of a local church. Whatever it is there must be some form of a classroom and there must be strict academic discipline. Hence, not only must all teaching of doctrine be related to residence in the divine dynasphere but it must also be related to attendance in the classroom of a local church. The pastor may or may not be a resident teacher but the people who are listening must concentrate, whether they are in a home, a building, a room to hear the teaching of Bible doctrine. This emphasises the importance of good manners and strict academic discipline in the most important category of worship. Motivating virtue directed toward God is the basis for concentration and positive volition, while functional virtue directed toward man is the basis for academic discipline, no talking, no unnecessary movement, nothing which would be disturbing to others. In other words, good manners are essential just as concentration under the ministry of the Spirit is essential in spiritual growth. Concentration and good manners must prevail, whether Bible teaching is face to face or non-resident; whether sitting in front of a pastor communicating doctrine, or a tape recorder, or a TV, or a radio, or some other mechanical form of communication.

There are seven factors in the perception of doctrine

1. The filling of the Spirit, which is tantamount to residence in the divine dynasphere.
2. Positive volition toward doctrine from your own free will, not because someone has coerced, traded out, or pushed.
3. Objectivity toward doctrinal teaching (without it God the Holy Spirit cannot communicate it to you) for functional virtue inside the divine dynasphere. In other words, you must approach your pastor, whoever he is, with impersonal love.
4. Humility, both enforced and genuine, for a continued teachability when faced with a tremendous variety of subjects where personal interest may or may not be involved.
5. Recognition of the authority of the pastor, not for his personality or speaking ability, but for the content of his message.
6. Self-control. That includes poise and continued objectivity when a subject or a message is not very complimentary to your person or to your way of life.
7. The persistence of positive volition toward doctrine in spite of every distraction and ever disillusion.

Verses 14-21, the church at Laodicea. In verse 14 we have a mandate to the apostle John. We begin with, as in most cases with the apostle John, the connective use of the conjunction kai, which is correctly translated "and." The next word is toi, the dative singular definite article which is the generic use of the definite article used to define or note a specific category. The category coming up is the second estate, the clergy, pastors of local churches. Correct translation: “And to.”

Then we have the dative singular indirect object from the noun a)ggeloj. It is correctly translated “messenger”; it is transliterated “angel” in the King James version. The pastor is God’s messenger, communicator, the one who communicates Bible doctrine. He doesn’t have any special “in” with God, he is a voice, a communicator. Behind the voice, of course, there has to be thought and there has to be knowledge. A)ggeloj can be transliterated and it is legitimate where the angels are in view, but when human beings are involved then it must be reduced to the concept of messengers — “And to the messenger.” So we have a dative of indirect object which indicates the ones [the pastors] in whose interest doctrinal information is provided. It is the pastor who must understand and communicate. He must be under the ministry of the Spirit; those who hear must be under the ministry of the Spirit, and this is the order of the Church Age.

The responsibility puts a pressure on the one who is a pastor that does not exist anywhere else. That responsibility can be described in one word: accuracy. The pastor in the study of the Word of God must be absolutely accurate. Accuracy demands the study of the original languages. It demands that you take apart every sentence, every word, and that you “beat your brains out” doing it. There is no short cut. There is no place in the ministry for anyone who is lazy-minded. If you are physically lazy you are mentally lazy. It requires a tremendous amount of energy to avoid mental laziness. So when it says “and to the messenger” this is the responsibility of the pastor — to study and teach. The teaching is just the tip of the iceberg. What is required by way of preparation for just one verse is phenomenal. That is, if you are going to be accurate.

So this is a dative case, indirect object, and it indicates the pastors in whose interest doctrinal information is provided. The spiritual gift of pastor-teacher is meaningless without hard work, the hardest kind of work, mental work. This is also true not only of the ministry but anything where you have to think for a living. Physical work is easy by comparison.

The problem is that the spiritual gift isn’t enough, it is only the beginning and it requires a life time of studying and teaching. The same can be said for certain other communication gifts. For example, evangelism. The average evangelist doesn’t spend twenty minutes preparing. All he does is get two or three “canned” speeches and he never departs from them. Therefore he is often inaccurate in whatever he is teaching and the average evangelist today is a very immature believer because he doesn’t really know enough doctrine to grow up himself.

“And to the messenger of the church,” the genitive singular of e)kklhsia, the genitive of relationship. The definite article in the singular is thj, and the genitive of the definite article is generic, it modifies the noun e)kklhsia and it indicates that the local church is unique, it is categorically different from everything else in two ways: first of all it is for believers to learn doctrine and therefore it is a classroom. It is the classroom that is the basis of all worship. Your basic worship and your greatest worship is learning Bible doctrine. People think they are worshipping God because they are full of emotion or because they are singing or going through some “holy-roller” routine but that isn’t worship at all. But it is different from all other classrooms in that it demands a higher form of concentration, of understanding, of good manners, of poise, of everything that you don’t see in most classrooms. E)kklhsia means an assembly, people gathered together. But it also means one person is talking; no “sharing,” which has become a system of evil as it has infiltrated churches.

“Where two or three are gathered together in my name” has to do not with prayer but with the assembly of the local church, the classroom. And notice that numbers are certainly not important because “two or three” certainly doesn’t indicate that numbers are impressive. The impressive factor is the spiritual growth as a result of assembly worship and not the actual numbers.

And of course this classroom is in a locale — “And to the messenger [future pastors of the church],” e)n plus the locative of Laodikeia, “of Laodicea.” Laodicea was located in the province of Phrygia, forty miles east of Ephesus on the Lycos river where three famous Christian cities were located. The city was founded by Antiochus II who named it after his wife Laodike. The city was populated first of all with Syrian citizens of the Hellenistic monarchy of Syria, Greeks, and some transplanted Jews from Babylon. Many of the Jews who for generations had lived in Babylon as a result of the Babylonian captivity actually moved to Laodicea, so it was a very famous Jewish centre. Antiochus ruled the Syrian empire from 261-246 BC and Laodicea was located on a great highway junction. But it did not come into its own until about 190 BC when it became part of the Roman province of Asia. From this point it became a great industrial centre and very famous for the black wool of its sheep and also famous as a medical centre because there was discovered there by some chemists something called Phrygian powder. It was manufactured and distributed there and so doctors came there and it became a great centre for ophthalmology. It was also known as a banking centre as well as a medical centre and where you have banking and medicine you also have to have entertainment, so it was famous for its race tracks and its theatres.

In about AD 60 the city was destroyed by a great earthquake. It was a very wealthy city and Rome came in and pronounced it a disaster area and offered them money to rebuild. The people said: “No, we will not take your funds, we will do it on our own.” And they quickly rebuilt the city at their own expense. They were therefore a true industrial complex.

The church in Laodicea had many famous pastors, Timothy, Mark, Epaphras. Later on in 166 AD, long after this was written, they would have a pastor by the name of Sagaris who was finally martyred there. In 1071 AD the city was taken by the Turks but in 1119 it was recovered by the Christians under the command of a famous soldier of fortune by the name of John Comnenus. In the 13th century it finally fell into the hands of the Turks permanently and that was the end of the church in Laodicea at that time.

Zeus of Laodicea was the god that most of the heathen people worshipped. He is portrayed on the coins as standing and holding in his extended right hand an eagle. In his left hand he has a spear. Many of the famous skeptic philosophers came from Laodicea and the city gave origin to several royal families of the ancient world. The city was finally abandoned because of earthquakes and is now in a heap of ruins called by the Turks Eski Hissar, meaning the old castle.

During the time of John at the time he wrote in AD 96 the city flourished as a city of great wealth in the Roman empire. But it really wasn't the kind of wealth the Roman empire needed — a pivot of mature believers. Cicero wrote many of his famous letters while living in Laodicea. Laodicea was a road junction connecting with Miletus, Ephesus and Pergamum. It also had one real great drawback and that was that there was no water supply at hand. Water had to be piped in from a hot springs some distance from the city and they constructed one of the most ingenious pipelines of the ancient world. They took cubicle blocks of stone, hollowed them out and then cemented them together. The pipeline was about three feet in diameter, bored through the centre and cemented end to end. For all of the tremendous wealth of the city there was one they could never produce and that was hot water. The hot water that started at the hot springs some three to five miles away was by the time it got to Laodicea luke warm. And one of the biggest complaints that people had who lived in Laodicea was that they could never have a hot bath. The water was lukewarm.

“And to the messenger [future pastors] of the church of Laodicea.” Now comes the mandate. John is not in Laodicea, John is on the island of Patmos. He is the pastor of Laodicea, he is non-resident so they are accustomed to receiving his letters. His messages are read by someone in the congregation and that is the way they heard John's messages. In this particular case, therefore, they are not surprised. It was Ephesus which was accustomed to the face to face teaching but when John was banished to the island of Patmos they obviously had to go on the same type of teaching. John as the nonresident pastor had been put on the island of Patmos by the ruling Caesar and he stayed there until this Caesar died and was replaced by the beginning of the Antonine Caesars and then he came back. So people were not deprived of John's messages and therefore they continued to grow in a non-face to face situation.

So the mandate to John was grafw, “write.” Write is another means of saying communicate. It is that non-face to face type of communication. The Bible was written to people who weren't there. Spiritual growth comes from perception of doctrine whether it is face to face or non-face to face. And it must be remembered that everything we study was originally given to someone non-face to face. You can grow in a non-face to face teaching situation, sometimes you can even grow faster — not necessarily, but sometimes. The aorist tense is the culminative aorist. It views the writing of the book of Revelation in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the completion of the canon of scripture, the encouragement to future pastors to study and teach. God uses prepared ministers and God provides hearers for prepared ministers. The active voice: the apostle John under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit produces the action of the verb. The imperative mood of command is a mandate to the apostle John to write the last canonical book of the Word of God.

The next two words are the key to anyone in the ministry, Tadh legei. Legei is the present active indicative of the verb legw and it means here to communicate. This is an aoristic present tense which sets forth an event as now occurring. We call that punctiliar action in present time. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ as the prince ruler of the Church produces the action. The declarative mood represents the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. The greatest reality in your life must be Bible doctrine. If Bible doctrine is not a reality there is no spiritual growth; if Bible doctrine is not a reality you can't live your life as unto the Lord. You see the ideal situation is the one we have in this dispensation. God has given you your free will, you have your freedom, but God has also given you a classroom where you can come in privacy and hear the teaching of doctrine. No one knows your business therefore what hurts you and hits you hard only you and the Lord know. What challenges you, what blesses you, what your particular needs are on any given night when you come to hear doctrine only you know, and that is the way it should be. Therefore under that principle of the privacy of the priesthood you have privacy for perception of doctrine, to live your life as unto the Lord, to make your decisions on the basis of doctrine you receive or to make wrong decisions on the basis of doctrine you reject.

Then comes the direct object of the verb, the accusative neuter plural from o(de, a demonstrative pronoun used originally to introduce the Greek translation of the decrees of the Persian kings. It is an introductory formula for what is about to be communicated, our Lord's estimate of the situation in Laodicea. If there is anything that is important to us as believers it is to be so consistent in taking in doctrine on a daily basis that we can understand the Lord's estimate of the situation as far as our own personal lives are concerned. Without it we would be in the dark, we would go off and make mistakes. Without it we would get the wrong impression of what the Lord's will is. But with Bible doctrine we are protected; with Bible doctrine we know what God's will is. Therefore we never face a difficult situation, an adversity or a problem, or some form of prosperity or promotion without first of all having information on how to handle them. When we do not have that information and face these things it becomes a beautiful system of discipline because the doctrine was available. We either weren't there to hear it or we rejected it, and consequently we make mistakes. When we make mistakes we have made our own decisions and we hurt. The more we hurt the more God is dealing with us to get us back on the track.

“And to the messenger [future pastors of the church at Laodicea] write: Communicate these things ...” Now, of course, we need the subject. Who communicates these things? It begins with a title in the Greek, ο(A)mhn, it refers to our Lord Jesus Christ and it goes back to the Hebrew version of the word. It is a transliteration here and the title is used to confirm the acceptance of a task or a mission, the performance of which needs the will and the power of God. While “Amen” is used at the end of a doxology to attest the praise of God in response to doxology it isn't even used that way here. Here it is used for a title of our Lord Jesus Christ who is both God and Man in one person forever — doctrine of the hypostatic union. Both the Hebrew “Amen” and the Greek “Amen” refer to what is sure, certain and valid. Therefore it becomes very important at this time for this reason. Our security doesn't depend upon us but on God. “Amen” is used for the reality of a system of security above and beyond any human system of security that man has ever devised. It refers to what is definite, what is sure, what is valid, what is secure. Hence, o(A)mhn is the title of our Lord Jesus Christ. It is His title as the One who controls history and the One who will also terminate history. "Amen," then, means this: until our Lord sees fit to terminate it human history cannot be terminated by any system of angelic or human power. There is no system of sophisticated weaponry or warfare, disease or natural disaster that will wipe out the entire human race. Human beings are going to keep right on living on this earth until the end of the Millennium. How do we know that? The title of our Lord Jesus Christ, "Amen," the reality of the history of the human race to resolve the angelic conflict, the reality that the human race will move to its conclusion through the Church Age, to the Rapture of the Church, the second advent plus the Millennium reign of Christ. All of these things will occur. The book of Revelation is an historical textbook and as far as our word is concerned, "the Amen." It is a guarantee that the human race will be perpetuated to the end of human history. Furthermore it is a guarantee that it will be perpetuated under two principles.

a. Grace precedes judgment. There is never a judgment which destroys a segment of the human race until first of all that segment of the human race has an opportunity to repent in the sense of changing their mind and believing in Christ, believers rebounding and starting to take in doctrine. This is always illustrated by Noah and the flood. Noah preached for 120 years before the flood came. That is grace before judgment. And yet the negative volition was almost universal and the human race was reduced to just a few people.

b. For those who repent (change their mind), in the case of the unbeliever repentance is manifest by believing in Christ; in the case of the believer in the cosmic system repentance is manifest by the rebound technique; judgment is followed by grace and there is survival. So grace precedes judgment and grace follows judgment; in the middle we have judgment in terms of historical disaster. Those who survive historical disaster or judgment are the ones who heeded the warning of grace before the disaster. That is survival.

So grace precedes judgment and for those who repent there is survival; repentance is the secret to survival.

"Amen" is a very important title of our Lord Jesus Christ and it is the title whereby He says: "I guarantee the continuation of the human race, and I guarantee your survival in the midst of the greatest disasters that history can produce if you can utilise the logistical grace available to you." Surviving in the devil's world, surviving under historical disaster, is a matter of utilisation of logistical grace, the modus operandi of the faith-rest drill, life in the divine dynasphere. The only wall of fire for believers is the wall of fire that goes around the divine dynasphere. If you are a believer living in the cosmic system you have no wall of fire and historical disaster wipes you out just like it wipes out your counterpart unbeliever in the cosmic system. Survival depends on life in the divine dynasphere.

So this title, o(A)mhn, is the title of the Lord Jesus Christ controlling history and as the only one who can terminate history. Generally in the New Testament "Amen" is also used in a liturgical way. It is the liturgical acclamation in Christian worship, as found in 1 Corinthians 14:16, or in heavenly worship of the angelic chiefs of staff of heaven which we will note in Revelation chapters 4 and 5. In the Hebrew the verb Amen also means to believe, and therefore it refers to our response to the principle that Jesus Christ controls history. We simply trust Him under the principle of the faith-rest drill. We trust the one who controls history for our usefulness in life, our purpose in life, our happiness in life, our blessing in life, and our survival in life.

Now we have the beginning of a subject. "The Amen," Jesus Christ the only saviour, the one who controls history, "communicates these things." This is not the end of our subject, we have other words coming up in a moment. It should be noted though that Amen in the Hebrew and Amen in the Greek also means truth, doctrine. The Amen is Jesus Christ as the God of doctrine and this is verified for us in Isaiah chapter 65:16, "Because he who is blessed in the earth [the believer] shall be blessed by the God of Amen," that is what it says in the Hebrew, "and he who swears [that is, when your word is your bond and you are saying that something is true] in the earth shall swear by the God of Amen." Twice in the Hebrew of this verse we have the title "the God of Amen." This is the God of doctrine.

Next we have the continuation of the subject. We have three appositional nominatives. The adjective pistoj comes first. Pistoj means faithful. Then we have a noun martuj which means witness, someone who makes an accurate deposition. So we have the phrase, "the faithful witness." But then since it is a deposition we have another adjective in the appositional nominative, alhtinoj, which means "true," "the faithful and true witness." Our Lord Jesus Christ in His deposition that history will continue and that believers who are in the divine dynasphere will survive the greatest of disasters, that's faithfulness, pistoj. Then the fact that He is true, that He guarantees these things, that the Bible is true, that doctrine is true, is found in alhqinoj. Our Lord Jesus Christ as the one who controls history has made a deposition and that deposition is given in the book of Revelation. The deposition is faithfulness to the believers who are in the pivot, and the deposition is true. The human race cannot be destroyed by outer space nonsense, nor can it be destroyed by sophisticated weaponry, nor can it be destroyed by conventional weaponry.

So we have a faithful and true deposition. Our Lord Jesus Christ is the faithful and true witness. He made a deposition about history, about God the Father and His plan. Our Lord Jesus Christ is also the manifestation of the Godhead and as the faithful and true witness He presents a perfect deposition of world history. As the faithful and true witness Jesus Christ presents to the world evidence about God, truth about His perfect plan, evidence about human history, and trends and prophecies as to the course of human history. Perfect God can only create a perfect plan and the testimony of God's plan is given through the incarnation of our Lord Jesus Christ, His first advent.

Our Lord's testimony began with His virgin birth: the fact of His true humanity and the fact of His true humanity residing inside of the prototype divine dynasphere; the fact that Satan could not destroy the Lord Jesus Christ because His humanity resided inside of the divine dynasphere is evidence — the only place of real security for any believer is the divine dynasphere, the same place our Lord resided during His earthly ministry — His function in hypostatic union, His impeccability, His work of salvation on the cross followed by His physical death, resurrection, ascension and session, the award of His third royal patent which resulted in the Church Age and the calling out of a royal family, the perpetuation of history so that there could be a second advent, a tactical victory to follow the strategic victory of our Lord. All of these things are a deposition to you and to me, a guarantee of our survival in the divine dynasphere, a guarantee of the perpetuation of the human race, a guarantee that this textbook of world history called the book of Revelation will occur in the sequence, in the chronology which is presented in the chapters that follow.

Verse 14, “And to the messenger [future pastors of the church at Laodicea] write: the Amen [Jesus Christ as the only saviour and the God of doctrine, the one who controls history], the faithful and true witness ...”

Now we come to the third part of that subject “which communicates these things.” The subject concludes with an appositional nominative from the noun a)rxh, which while it means beginning it also means first cause, primacy, ruler, rank. It is taken from the Greek verb a)rxw which means to rule. The rulers in Athens were called A)rxonj, and it means here, “ruler.” It is not the “beginning” of the creation of God but the ruler, the prince. And then we have the descriptive genitive of ktisij which means creation. It refers not to the word which was created by our Lord or natural creation, but it refers to certain types of new creatures. It refers to new creatures in Christ Jesus or the royal family of God. Plus the possessive genitive of qeoj. The creatures here belong to God. So we translate: “the ruler of the creation of God [royal family of God].”

Now we have the full subject: “the Amen [Jesus Christ as saviour, the God of doctrine], the faithful and true witness [His deposition regarding the solutions to history], the ruler of the creation of God.” He is the ruler of the royal family and this is the subject which “communicates these things.” It took 36 things at salvation plus the provision of the divine dynasphere to manufacture the creation of God and/or the royal family. The uniqueness of the Church Age believer is based on the first advent of Christ and our Lord’s achievement of His third royal patent. The third royal patent resulted in halting the dispensation of Israel and inserting the Church Age to call out the royal family. Each one of us has two commissions as royal family. We are first of all royal priests, that is the intake of doctrine; and we are royal ambassadors, that is the application of doctrine.

Verse 15, an estimate of the situation. The first phrase, “I know thy works,” is where it all begins. We have the perfect o)ida used as a present active indicative for the function of divine knowledge. God knows long before anything happens exactly what is going to happen. Furthermore, He knows what thinking is behind it, what motivation is behind it, what decision you finally made. The active voice: Jesus Christ as God produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the veracity of God’s estimate of the situation.

With this verb we have the accusative plural from the noun e)rgon. Being in the plural it means works or production or modus operandi, “I know your accomplishments.” God has known all about us from eternity past, we are just now becoming acquainted with Him as we learn Bible doctrine, and learn more and more Bible doctrine.

When He says, "I know your accomplishments" we are looking at God's knowledge of the Laodicean church, a group of people in that great city. The accomplishment of believers in the Laodicean church was known to God under certain categories, therefore we need to categorise God's knowledge. God has three categories of knowledge.

The first we call self-knowledge. God is eternal; His knowledge is eternal. God is sovereign, therefore His knowledge is infinitely superior to any creature knowledge. Time has nothing to do with God's knowledge. There never was a time when God didn't know everything that would happen, everything in all of human history. The future, therefore is as perspicuous to God as the past. And since God is a person He possesses both self-consciousness and self-determination. Therefore God as a person acts rationally in compatibility, of course, with His absolute will and perfection. God is Himself and because God is Himself eternally and infinitely God knows Himself to be beyond comparison with any being, any creature. Because God is infinite His knowledge has neither boundary nor limitation. Infinity goes beyond time and infinity also goes beyond space. So whatever God has by way of knowledge of Himself it is beyond time and beyond space. Therefore God's knowledge is never complicated with either ignorance or absurdity. God existed eternally, unsustained by Himself or any other source, and therefore His knowledge is as unalterable as Himself. God cannot change; His knowledge cannot change. God's knowledge therefore precedes time and precedes space, therefore God's knowledge is not subject to time or space, as ours is.

God knows Himself, and He also knows the other members of the Trinity. He understands their attributes as He understands Himself. God's knowledge of Himself has to be classified as perfect subjectivity; God's knowledge of the other members of the Trinity is classified as perfect objectivity. So in God's knowledge of God we have subjectivity and objectivity. And since subjectivity has many imperfections related to arrogance and preoccupation with self we mustn't think of subjectivity in terms of human modus operandi. Subjectivity here refers to perfection. God has perfect subjective knowledge of Himself. God the Father has perfect objective knowledge of the Son and the Spirit, and likewise the Son has perfect objective knowledge of the Father and the Spirit, and so on. God has eternally known Himself. Each member of the Trinity has perfect subjective knowledge of self and all the attributes of deity plus perfect knowledge of the other members of the Trinity and their attributes.

But this particular knowledge is not the one in view when it says in verse 15, "I know your accomplishments." What is in view is the second category, the omniscience of God. While God's self-knowledge relates to His divine attributes and the knowledge of the other members of the Trinity omniscience relates to creatures. In our first category God knows God, God knows Himself; in our second category omniscience is a technical word which does not cover all of the areas of God's knowledge but it deals with creatures.

Omniscience is defined as God's objective knowledge of the universe and all the creatures in it, angelic and human. The omniscience of God is the key to this verse, "I know your accomplishments." Since the divine decrees establish reality we cannot separate the divine decrees from the omniscience of God. The divine decrees is the computer and what the omniscience of God puts into the computer is every thought every person ever had and, with that, every motivation that every person ever had, every decision and every action that every person ever had in history. But omniscience also knows the things that didn't happen but could have happened; it knows probability as well as actuality. Only actuality is programmed in. That is history. What could have happened but did not is probability, and omniscience knows the probability. Omniscience, then, is defined: God knows perfectly, eternally and simultaneously all that is knowable, both the actual and the possible, both the historical and the probable. The actual is fed into the computer of divine decrees to become history while the possible or probable are decisions which could have been made but were not. Every minute detail of both angelic and human history is completely in God's mind at all times. Therefore omniscience perceives the free as free, the necessary as necessary, together with all their causes and conditions and relations in one indivisible system of things, every link of which is essential to the whole.

There is one other category called the foreknowledge of God. The foreknowledge of God must be distinguished from omniscience. Between foreknowledge and omniscience stands the computer of divine decrees. Foreknowledge is the printout of history, it does not deal with what is programmed in. Omniscience programs the computer of divine decrees with historical facts. Historical facts are made up of your thoughts, your decisions, your actions. Foreknowledge is the printout of the computer. Nothing is foreknown, therefore, until it is first of all decreed. Foreknowledge is therefore limited to what actually comes out of the computer, the unfolding of history. Foreknowledge has nothing to do with probability or the alternatives. Foreknowledge of God, therefore, makes nothing certain, it simply acknowledges what is already certain, the content of the divine decrees. God foreknows all things as certainly future because He has first of all decreed them in His omniscience.

Omniscience comes first, knowing the actual and the possible. Foreknowledge deals only with the actual. While everything was decreed simultaneously, not by stages, the plan of God rationale applies only foreknowledge in this particular case. Foreknowledge means what comes out of the computer. So foreknowledge is applied here as well. God knows our accomplishments, He knows them as they have unfolded. From the standpoint of God's omniscience what He put into the computer He knew billions of years ago, but His statement now is foreknowledge. God knew what would come out of the computer. And so both omniscience and foreknowledge as distinct concepts of God's divine attributes are involved in the phrase, the perfect active indicative of o)ida, which we have studied in verse 15.

Next in verse 15 we begin with a negative estimate of the situation. It begins with the conjunction o(ti used after verbs of cognisance to give the content. "I know you accomplishments, that ..." Next is the present active indicative of the verb e)imi, the verb to be, "that you are." The present tense is a perfective present, it refers to a fact which has come to be in the past but is emphasised as a present reality. God knows what we are every second that we spend on this earth. The active voice: believers in the Church Age, namely Laodicea in AD 96, produce the action of the verb. The action they produce becomes a pattern for believers throughout the Church Age who fail. The indicative mood is declarative for a historical reality.

Next we have two negative adverbs, “neither,” “nor,” o)ute, o)ute, and with each of these negative adverbs we have a predicate adjective. The first is yuxroj, and it means “cold”; the second means hot or boiling, zestoj, “neither cold nor hot” is the translation. “Cold” is used for the unbeliever. There were some unbelievers in the Laodicean church. “Hot” refers to believers who have lived inside of the divine dynasphere and who have utilised logistical grace and have advanced to maturity. It becomes obvious then that this passage is not addressed to the unbelievers. In the negative estimate of the situation it is also obvious that because of the cosmic influence there were quite a number of unbelievers in the Laodicean church. As a result neither are there any people who have advanced to maturity. Living inside the divine dynasphere is God’s will for this dispensation and, of course, it is the only way to advance to maturity.

The use of “cold” and “hot” and “lukewarm” refer to categories based on the problem in the Laodicean waterworks. The problem had to do with the kind of pipes they had which were constructed of cubicle blocks of stone carved out of a quarry and which had a hole bored through them. Each block was cemented to another and in that way the pipeline was constructed. When the water left the hot springs it was hot but by the time it had reached Laodicea it was lukewarm. This lukewarm water was loaded with minerals and therefore not very palatable, it was insipid. Everyone complained about the water.

The second problem: What happens to intellectuals when they become arrogant? Arrogance plus intellectuality means pseudo-intellectuality. Believers living in Laodicea were involved in the cosmic system and were influenced by pseudo-intellectuality.

Next in verse 15 the apostle John states a preference with regard to the negative estimate of the situation. His preference is a positive estimate of the situation where either cold or hot would help. If they were cold he could give them the gospel; if they were hot he could give them advanced doctrine; but because they are lukewarm all he can do is warn them, and that is the most unproductive type of teaching.

The category of problem-solving is given in two concepts in this passage: those who are cold and those who are hot. But there is no problem-solving for those who are lukewarm. The lukewarm person is a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ. Now there is a road back, a very difficult road back. It requires that you make daily decisions under the pressures and the adversities of various categories of divine discipline as well as self-induced misery. And there are those who will never find that road back because it is impossible for them to fulfill the principle of rebound, change their priorities in life, put first things first over a period of time, because there is no instant solution to the category “lukewarm.”

The word “lukewarm” becomes a very excellent illustration, an analogy to the fact that the person in this world who is most disoriented is that believer in the Lord Jesus Christ who is categorised as lukewarm. The cosmic believer is disoriented to life and there is no instant solution to any of his problems. He has to take a road back that requires making decisions that he failed to make in the past: making decisions to rebound, making decisions for Bible doctrine, etc. Divine discipline is the teacher of those who will not learn doctrine. It is limited in what it can teach but at least it does require a concentration from the lukewarm which they do not have in other areas. The “lukewarm” is going to be described in great detail. The lukewarm people are often very wealthy, very successful, very famous, very prominent. They are believers but they have completely and totally failed as far as spiritual life is concerned.

So we have the apostolic personal preference stated in the last phrase in which he states beginning with the particle o)feilon, which is translated “I would” or “I wish.” O)feilon introduces an unattainable wish or desire on the part of the communicator, the apostle John. This is a particle, it used with the imperfect tense to express present time. It is possible that the particle of unattainable wish or desire is taken from the aorist tense of the verb o)feilw, which means to wish or desire. We should understand that this introduces an unattainable desire. The apostle John here would like to simply give a message where the solutions are obvious but that only applies where believers are positive toward doctrine and living in the divine dynasphere. That would represent the category “hot.” Or, if the person is an unbeliever, there is a message that can be given very briefly regarding the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, the way of eternal salvation through faith in the Son of God, but that isn’t possible with those who are lukewarm; and the more you personally counsel these people the worse it becomes, because counselling means that they are depending upon you, they are using your volition as a crutch. It is impossible for these people on their own to take the hard road back from being lukewarm. We have studied it as carnality, as reversionism, as cosmic involvement. These are the people who through their own decisions have brought themselves to the place of impossible solutions. And where the solutions are not readily available and require months and sometimes even years of positive volition and daily decisions, and maintaining the right priorities, Bible doctrine first, obviously they are not going to take that solution and they are not going to go that way. Instead they will begin to look for things to alleviate the pain of suffering under divine discipline or from self-induced misery. Therefore they become pursuers of pleasure, they try to find interests in life, they try to find new friends, they try to find an environment of flattery and acceptability in some social structure whereby some of the pain from their own bad decisions can be alleviated. And that is the story of at least eighty per cent of believers in the world today.

The very fact that they are believers means this: that whatever success they have in life, whatever moment of stimulation and happiness may come their way, whatever nice group of people they may meet somewhere, whatever they find by way of a love relationship — category two, success and approbation from mankind in general —, whatever they may find in these areas are simply not a solution to their problem. These things are wonderful for positive believers. Positive believers can enjoy them without being distracted by them. But there is absolutely no answer and no solution for the lukewarm believer in the area of seeking pleasure, seeking new friends, seeking new scenes, changing his environment to something that is more compatible with flattering and with recognition. There is no solution simply because the believers involved will not take the hard road back. It is a very difficult answer because Bible doctrine must be first. You cannot take a believer in the cosmic system and make Bible doctrine number one priority in his life. Because of the tremendous instability it is very difficult to reestablish the right priorities. It takes a tremendous amount of motivation and that motivation generally has to come from two categories of discipline that we will study in detail — warning divine discipline and intensive divine discipline.

For recovery it takes the daily use of the volition to make right decisions. There is only one volitional decision in life that is permanent and that is the decision to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. That one decision guarantees eternal life and means that you have a relationship with God forever.

The tragic thing that occurs then is the fact that in solving any problem in the life it requires consistent daily decisions based on the right priorities. Therefore the apostle is saying very simply, “would that you were cold or hot”, then it would be so easy, then the message would be so simple. But one message today clearly understood is not going to solve your problem because if Bible doctrine does not become your number one priority and if you do not log a maximum amount of time in the divine dynasphere there is no way that you can consistently make the right decisions.

Recovery from the cosmic system is very simple in principle, the rebound technique, but it requires days and days and even months of getting back to doctrine on a daily basis, and it is so easy once you have been in the cosmic system to try it for a week and then go back to the same old way. Eventually there is something that happens to these people, the sin unto death.

The apostle’s personal preference is based on the principle of positive volition. If the Laodiceans were cold they would be unbelievers and the answer to their problem would be very simple: “Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved.” A one-shot decision will answer their problem because the moment you are born again the past is blotted out. And as far as the Laodiceans being hot, well they are not. As such they would be believers living inside the divine dynasphere and now ready for another message of doctrinal teaching, but these things are meaningless to the lukewarm believer. If the Laodiceans were hot they would be in the divine dynasphere and ready for the tremendous content of the book of Revelation, beginning in chapter four.

“I would that you were cold or hot,” how easy it would be if that were true. The other six churches all have a fine pivot of mature believers plus a lot of positive believers, with a minimum number of cosmic believers. They are carrying the Roman empire at this time. They will be responsible as a large pivot in only one Roman province for one of the greatest periods of prosperity the world has ever known in human history, the period of the Antonine Caesars, 96-192 AD.

The real situation, cosmic involvement and the potential for maximum discipline, is the subject of verse 16, “So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spew thee out of my mouth.” The real status quo is given, beginning with an adverb, o(utoj. It refers to what precedes, and it refers to the apostle’s preference of status, not the real status quo. With the conjunction o(ti it becomes an idiom to indicate, “Let’s face the reality of the situation.” O(utoj plus o)ti means literally, “So because the reality of the situation is now before us.” The reality is given by the simple verb to be in the present active indicative.

This is the Greek word e)imi; it gives the real situation. The perfective present tense refers to a fact which has come to be in the past and is emphasised as a present reality in Laodicea. They are not living in the divine dynasphere; “lukewarm” is the issue in this verse. How are you going to get people out of status quo lukewarm? Well, we begin with the phrase, “So because you are.” The active voice: Laodicean believers produce the action of the verb as cosmic believers. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical reality of the situation.

Then the predicate nominative gives us our category, xliaroj, which means something that was hot but is now cooled off to the point of being insipid and therefore lukewarm or cosmic involvement. It also refers to the unpleasant taste of the water. “So therefore because you are lukewarm,” the adjective is used as a predicate nominative. It has a dual connotation; the status quo of the reversionistic believer and the status quo from the divine standpoint which has the emetic connotation. “And neither hot nor cold” is better translated, “in fact neither hot nor cold.” John makes it very clear that there is no simple solution to their problem.

Now we have the result of perpetual cosmic involvement: the emetic condition. The emetic condition is not helpful, it is destructive. It is the reason why so many believers die horribly, miserably, before God intends for them to die. It is the story of the sin unto death. It is the basis for one of the greatest tragedies that could ever occur to you as a believer. It is also one of the greatest disgraces.

The final phrase of verse 16 begins with the perfect active indicative of the verb mellw, which means to be about to be. We translate it: “I am about to.” The customary present denotes what habitually occurs when believers persist in living in the cosmic system of Satan. By persisting is meant that they ignore the final teaching that God gives to all cosmic believers. All divine discipline is a gracious act on the part of God to try to teach us what we will not learn the easy way. Learning the easy way is perception of doctrine in the divine dynasphere; learning the hard way is divine discipline. We also have here a futuristic present denoting an event which has not yet occurred, namely the administration of the sin unto death, but is regarded as so certain in thought that it may be contemplated as already coming to pass. With this we have the active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb. God the Father has turned all judgment over to our Lord Jesus Christ — John 5:22, 27. The declarative indicative mood is for the reality of maximum discipline to believers who are unteachable. There are two categories of being unteachable. One is the resistance of doctrine and the other is related to it, cosmic involvement. And there are two categories of teaching as far as believers are concerned: the communication of Bible doctrine by the pastor on the one hand and the administration of divine discipline from our Lord Jesus Christ on the other hand.

So He says, “I am about to do something,” and what He is about to do is the aorist active infinitive of the verb e)mew, which means to vomit. The constative aorist contemplates the administration of the sin unto death in its entirety. They are not going to die happily, they are going to die in a horribly miserable way. Vomiting is miserable, so is the sin unto death. It is the last miserable experience that the cosmic believer has on this earth. The infinitive of actual result means that the sin unto death is the terrible reality. With this we have the accusative singular direct object from the personal pronoun su, and this refers to cosmic believers only.

Principle: All problems are unsolvable in the cosmic system.

The reason you can't make decisions to solve your problems in the cosmic system is because in the cosmic system you are the servant of Satan, the slave of Satan.

Then to make things very clear we have e)k plus the ablative singular of stoma, plus e)gw, "out of [from] my mouth." This has nothing to do with loss of salvation, this is simply the last category of divine discipline. It is your merit badge that you were unteachable. There is one merit badge that belongs to the Christian who stays in the cosmic system. You were totally unteachable by the most stringent forms of divine discipline. God always picks the thing that will hurt you the most and when you cannot respond to that your only excuse for living is to be used as one of the aggressors to try to lure other believers out of the divine dynasphere. After that it is all over. So this is the problem as far as this passage is concerned.

Corrected translation: "Therefore because you are lukewarm, in fact neither hot nor cold, I am about to vomit you from my mouth."

Verse 17, these people who are in this category do have certain kinds of prosperity, but their success and prosperity does not bring them happiness. In fact successful people are twice as miserable when they hurt as unsuccessful people.

We begin with the causal use of the conjunction o(ti, correctly translated "because." Next comes the present active indicative of legw. Legw is a verb which comes from logoj which originally meant thought. In other words, legw is merely verbalising your thoughts, which is what speaking is in most cases, though not all. So when it says "Because you say," this is the verbalisation of the thinking of these cosmic believers who are said to be lukewarm and whose liability is moving in the direction of warning discipline, intensive discipline and, in some cases, dying discipline. The descriptive present tense is for what is now going on in Laodicea. It is also the present tense of duration for what was begun in the past when these believers were given some prosperity. The implication is that in most cases first they had the prosperity from living in the divine dynasphere. The divine dynasphere was the source of whatever prosperity they happened to have. That is when they were "hot." Lukewarm means they have cooled off. They were once hot and in the divine dynasphere; now they are in the cosmic system. Lukewarm always means that one time it was hot.

Believers in their advance to maturity inevitably start to get prosperous one way or another. They may have social prosperity, they may have business prosperity; there are many categories to prosperity but whatever it is they have prosperity. But the prosperity came to them in the divine dynasphere. However, they were not able to pass the prosperity test. Now they still have the prosperity in the cosmic system, it is still there. But the prosperity in the cosmic system is going to be a means of setting up for discipline. Prosperous people, like non-prosperous people, are very unhappy people. Prosperity doesn't change anything. It may change a few overt manifestations in life but it doesn't change the soul. Inside is the same old person with the same uncertainties, the same problems. The facade is different but inside is a miserable person.

The active voice: the cosmic believers have flunked the prosperity test and they are the ones who produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the historical reality of the situation. Therefore we have next the word o(ti again. The first one means "because" but the second one means "quote," "Because you say, quote." Now here is the interesting thing. These people in Laodicea had responded to John's ministry after salvation, they had begun to grow in grace. They had been in the divine dynasphere and had made some tremendous progress in their spiritual lives so that already logistical grace was being parlayed into the beginnings of some supergrace manifestations. They had prosperity. Now that they have been evangelised for the cosmic system they haven't lost their salvation and, as a matter of fact, in this case they haven't even lost their prosperity. But they have changed their status from life in the divine dynasphere to life in the cosmic system.

Now this is what they say, and they have problems which are made by their own volition. You and I have never had a problem in our lives that our volition somehow wasn't related to. There are certain categories of suffering that are designed for blessing and for growth but apart from that most of the suffering that comes to people comes to them because of their own decisions. (This is true of adults; it isn't always true of children) "Because you say, I am," the present active indicative of the verb e)imi. The predicate nominative with it is plousioj which means rich, prosperous, wealthy — "Because you say, I am wealthy." The progressive present tense is for an action in the state of persistence, therefore it is linear aktionsart. The active voice: the cosmic believer who has flunked the prosperity test produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of reality. The reality is the continuation of material prosperity the source of which is the divine dynasphere but its perpetuation in the cosmic system. This is often the status of cosmic believers who are successful and prosperous. People forget the source of their prosperity. Prosperity comes to us because of our residence in the divine dynasphere.

Prosperity testing occurs in two categories: for individuals in the divine dynasphere and for nations where there is a large enough pivot for God to prosper that nation. Prosperity testing occurs for a nation or a city when the three categories of manifest destiny are combined under the leadership of the industrial complex. This means prosperity for unbelievers, cosmic believers and believers living inside the divine dynasphere. Add to this the prosperity of blessing by association and you have a momentum test. The Laodiceans received their prosperity while living and functioning in the divine dynasphere and this means that we have here an expression of arrogance: "Because you say, I am wealthy." This word plousioj means many things such as success, financial wealth, promotion, fame, approbation, social prosperity, and many other things. When some form of wealth or prosperity comes to the believer one of two things happens. First of all it finds him in the divine dynasphere where the prosperity begins. Either he remains in the divine dynasphere and the capacity stays ahead of the prosperity and he is a very happy person , or he becomes inflamed with arrogance and takes his prosperity into the cosmic system where it makes him miserable sooner or later.

There is nothing wrong with prosperity but all too frequently there is something wrong with those who have prosperity. Prosperity was designed to be a blessing but prosperity can never be a blessing without the capacity. The capacity comes from the divine dynasphere and when you take your prosperity into the cosmic system sooner or later it is going to make you miserable. Wealth or prosperity in the divine dynasphere is a fantastic blessing but wealth or prosperity in the cosmic system is the Laodicean syndrome. The believer flunks the prosperity test when riches or wealth change his priorities so that doctrine is no longer first in his life. That is one of the great problems with the prosperity test. No believer survives the prosperity test when wealth, success, riches, promotion, fame and approbation come between him and Bible doctrine. The prosperity test, then, is far more subtle and far more difficult than the adversity test. Without capacity for happiness and prosperity the wealth in the prosperity test, the success in the prosperity test, the fame in the prosperity test results in a frantic search for happiness. The frantic search for happiness leads the believer into the cosmic system and a dead-end street, for true happiness can only be found inside the divine dynasphere.

“Because you say” — we are talking now about those believers who are in the cosmic system and who fall into many of the categories that we have in this passage — “I am rich.” This is the prosperity test and no one ever goes from gate four to gate eight without facing eight major tests. If you pass the tests it accelerates spiritual growth; if you flunk the test you wind up in the cosmic system. Now we are talking here about cosmic believers. They became wealthy, prosperous, successful, rich while they were still in the divine dynasphere. But they have left the divine dynasphere and they are now in the cosmic system. In other words, they flunked the prosperity test. Prosperity testing occurs not only to individual believers but, of course, nations as well. Prosperity testing is an historical trend as well as an individual test. Prosperity testing occurs to a nation or a city when the three categories of manifest destiny are combined under the leadership of the industrial complex. This means prosperity for unbelievers, cosmic believers, believers living inside the divine dynasphere. So there is a kind of prosperity that comes to all people in a client nation when there is a large pivot. Add to this the prosperity of blessing by association and you have momentum test number eight, the prosperity test. Add to this the fact that the Laodiceans were formally hot, and this is analogous to the fact that they once lived in the divine dynasphere, they had advanced almost to maturity and in some cases they had moved that far. The prosperity test, of course, takes many forms and many of them had different categories of prosperity.

The basic principle that we are going to note out of this is one that is very important: neither rich people nor poor people, nor any category in between can handle any form of prosperity without capacity. Your capacity should always precede, run ahead of your prosperity and that is only possible inside the divine dynasphere. Capacity must come first. When some form of wealth or prosperity comes to the believer one of two things will happen: either he will remain in the divine dynasphere and therefore maintain his capacity for prosperity and therefore have great happiness in prosperity, or he becomes inflamed with arrogance and takes his prosperity into the cosmic system where it makes him miserable. There is nothing wrong with prosperity, only those who have prosperity. Wealth and prosperity in the divine dynasphere becomes a fantastic blessing but wealth and prosperity in the cosmic system is the Laodicean syndrome.

Then we move on to the intensive use of the conjunction kai. The intensive kai is generally translated “in fact.” And then we have an additional phrase, the perfect active indicative of the verb ploutew, which means to acquire wealth. “Because you say, quote: I am rich, in fact I have acquired wealth”. The intensive perfect tense is used here and it means this: when special attention is directed towards the results of the action emphasis on the existing facts is intensified. This is a strong way of saying a thing is. The active voice: cosmic believers have become very successful in business but they do not have any happiness accompanying it. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the fact that they have flunked the prosperity test. Reason: prosperity will take you into the cosmic system unless you have the capacity for it when it comes.

The next phrase deals with the principle of flunking the prosperity test. There are four words: kai o)uden xreian e)xw. The first word, kai, is simply a connective use of the conjunction, it means “and.” The present active indicative of e)xw, “and I have.” The progressive present tense signifies action in progress or a state of persistence, present linear aktionsart, living in the cosmic system. The active voice: the cosmic believer produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative representing the cosmic viewpoint from the standpoint of historical reality. This is the cosmic viewpoint. The whole system of priorities and the proper scale of values is set aside when a person says: “I have need of nothing.”

Next we have the accusative singular direct object from xreian, which means “need.” Next the accusative neuter singular from o)udeij, meaning “nothing”. This implies that the believer does not need Bible doctrine, it implies that he doesn’t need the divine dynasphere, it implies that he does not need logistical grace in any form. In other words, what has happened? By shifting into the cosmic system the believer has lost the right priorities of the divine dynasphere. When he says: “I am rich and that is all I need,” then he has put wealth above doctrine and the divine dynasphere. This implies that the believer doesn’t need Bible doctrine. In effect this is reverse process reversionism. This is flunking the prosperity test. And in reverse process reversionism where doctrine used to be number one, now it is reversed and wealth and riches has become number one. And this changes the priorities and out of this comes a conclusion from the cosmic system: “I don’t need anything. I am wealthy therefore I need nothing.” But in the divine dynasphere doctrine makes you realise that you need the grace of God on a daily and a moment by moment basis.

Principle

1. This statement from a believer in the cosmic system indicates scar tissue of the soul. Scar tissue of the soul comes from many things, rejection of doctrine in general, and results in a complete change of priorities.
2. This is the Laodicean syndrome. The Laodicean Christians have been exposed to doctrinal teaching in the past. They have been exposed to the teaching of four great pastors: Epaphras, Timothy, Mark and John. So they can't say they haven't heard. Obviously in the Laodicean syndrome they have made wrong decisions against the whole realm of doctrine.
3. Therefore this is a reaction from the cosmic system. The reaction stated here indicates negative volition after first of all being positive. It indicates that positive volition came first but now they are negative. Hence these believers have left the divine dynasphere and they have entered into the cosmic system through flunking the prosperity test.
4. From their own decisions Laodicean believers have succumbed to cosmic evangelism. This cosmic evangelism was functioning when they were in prosperity. They didn't go into the cosmic system when they were in adversity, they passed the adversity test. But the prosperity test is so different, it brings a whole new set of pressures, and while they could handle adversity by the use of the faith-rest drill in prosperity they just kicked the faith-rest drill out and everything it meant to them.
5. Whatever spiritual advances had been made in the past these were now neutralised by cosmic evangelism.
6. Those who are making this statement under the Laodicean syndrome have rejected the authority of pastors like Epaphras, Timothy, Mark and John. In effect they have rejected their teaching, i.e. the content of their message.
7. Only positive volition toward the content of doctrine from inside the divine dynasphere will maintain the right priorities to avoid the cosmic trap. People change when they become wealthy; people change when they become poor. People are constantly in the process of changing and the stability that avoids change for the worse always comes from the divine dynasphere.
8. Only the daily perception of Bible doctrine in the divine dynasphere will provide the believer capacity for prosperity.
9. Your capacity should always be ahead of your prosperity otherwise prosperity will lead you into the cosmic trap.

There are two side effects that are very tragic. The first effect is the blackout of the soul. This is the status of the believer in negative volition toward doctrine. In other words, in the cosmic system. The cosmic system of Satan includes two cosmic dynaspheres: cosmic #1, where doctrine is rejected because of preoccupation with self; cosmic #2, where doctrine is rejected because of antagonism toward it. The black-out of the soul finds the believer entering gate two of cosmic one — negative volition toward Bible doctrine from arrogance or preoccupation with self. He also enters cosmic two, gate one, in which he is antagonistic toward doctrine. Satan's kingdom, the cosmic system, is called the kingdom of darkness in Ephesians 5:11; 6:12; Colossians 1:13, "He has delivered us [believers] from the domain [kingdom] of darkness and has transferred us into the kingdom of the Son of His love [the divine dynasphere]." The kingdom of the Son of His love emphasises the divine dynasphere from the standpoint of virtue. For example, there is motivating virtue which is personal love toward God; there is functional virtue which is impersonal love directed toward man and circumstances. So it is called the kingdom of the Son of His love, referring to the divine dynasphere producing virtue, and since the domain of Satan is called the kingdom of darkness those believers who reside and function in the cosmic system are said to walk in darkness, 1 John 1:6; 2:11; John 12:35.

The mechanics of the blackout of the soul are really described in summary in Ephesians 4:17, "Therefore I explain this, and make an emphatic demand by means of the Lord, that you no longer walk like as other Gentiles walk [unbelievers] in the vacuum of their minds." The word "vacuum, mataiwthj, is the key to this problem that comes to all believers who are in the cosmic system. Every day and the longer you are in the cosmic system the more you lose the divine perspective of life, until it is blotted out completely if you stay there long enough. This means that you no longer understand establishment or the gospel, or Bible doctrine which is the means of advancing to maturity as a believer. The blackout of the soul therefore relates to reversionism.

In stage two of reversionism you have reaction, which is usually a frantic search for happiness. It comes in several forms, asceticism of cosmic one. For example, self-righteous arrogance at gate five is one of the illustrations. This always results in becoming critical of others. The lascivious trend in cosmic two is found in gate two, degeneracy; gate three, antiestablishment; gate six, demonism; gate the eight, the old sin nature; and eventually everything ends up in evil.

The third stage is operation boomerang: the frantic search for happiness bounces back and you are twice as miserable as you were before you started out. The frantic search for happiness is intensified with disastrous results. For example, in cosmic one, gate seven, criminal arrogance; or gate eight, crusader arrogance; gate nine, psychopathic arrogance; gate ten, sexual arrogance. In cosmic two, for example, gate two degeneracy or gate nine, Satan's policy of evil. Stage three is the emotional revolt of the soul. The holy-rollers are probably the best illustration. Stage five is negative volition toward Bible doctrine and in stage six you have blackout of the soul. If blackout of the soul is not alleviated by rebound — getting back into the divine dynasphere and learning doctrine. Then eventually you go to stage seven which is scar tissue of the soul, and from there the stage we have here in the phrase "I have need of nothing" which is reverse process reversionism. When you get to the point where your wealth, your success, your prosperity says you need nothing, then you have abandoned logistical grace and you have abandoned the divine dynasphere and Bible doctrine. "Having become darkened in your understanding," Ephesians 3:18, is blackout of the soul; "having been alienated from the life of God," the life of God is the divine dynasphere, and you are alienated from the divine dynasphere. Why? Because of ignorance.

There was the same problem when our Lord was alive. You would have thought that everyone would have listened to our Lord and responded, but that isn't true. John 12:37, "But though he had performed many miracles before them, yet they did not believe in him." Verse 38, "That the word of Isaiah the prophet might be fulfilled when he spoke, Lord who has believed our message and to whom is the arm of the Lord [Christ] revealed. For this cause they could not believe for Isaiah said again, He has blinded their eyes." How? By simply giving them truth, which they rejected. That is the way you get blackout of the soul. "Lest they should see with their eyes," the eyes are wisdom or perception of doctrine, "and perceive with their right lobe and be converted and I restore them." So the problem is always the same, whether it was when Christ was on earth or at the present time. The blackout of the soul becomes a major issue and a major problem, John 6:39-45.

There is an answer to this given by Paul in Ephesians 4:15-18, "But by teaching doctrine in the sphere of the love complex [the divine dynasphere], you may cause them to grow up by the all things of doctrinal teaching with reference to him, who is the absolute authority, even Christ, from whom all the body, being joined together and being taught categorically by every joint of supply [the pastor is the joint of supply] according to the operational power [gate one of the divine dynasphere] in measure" [one pastor for each part of the body of Christ], resulting in an edification complex belonging to himself in the sphere of the love complex [the divine dynasphere]. Therefore I explain this, and make an emphatic demand by means of the Lord, that you walk not longer as the Gentiles walk, in the vacuum of your mind."

Again, our passage says: "Because you say, quote: I am rich, in fact I have become very wealthy, and therefore I have need of absolutely nothing". Nothing could be more tragic than to get into this situation. This is reverse process reversionism which means facing in the opposite direction and having the exact opposite priorities from what you should have in life. There are a few verses that should be remembered, like John 15:23 where our Lord says: "He who hates me also hates my Father." In other words, the fact that believers could hate the Lord is almost unthinkable but it is true where in the cosmic system long enough that is exactly what happens. And so, 1 Peter 5:8: "Be stabilised [inside the divine dynasphere], be on the alert. Your enemy, the devil, prowls about like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour." And he doesn't personally try to devour you, he has a system. He reaches out with the twenty-six tentacles of cosmic one and the nine tentacles of cosmic two. That is why it says in James 4:4, where all of us are called "female hookers": "You female hookers, do you not know that the cosmic system keeps on being alienation from God? Therefore whoever has decided [options from personal volition] to be a love of the cosmic system appoints himself the enemy of God." It says in Philipians 3:18 the same thing: that we [believers in the cosmic system] are the enemies of the cross.

In 2 Timothy 2:26 we have another warning: “And that they should come to their senses.” When some believer says, “I don’t need any doctrine,” they have to come to their senses; “from the devil’s trap [the cosmic system], having been led captive by him with reference to a system” — it is a system, he doesn’t come and personally overcome you, he has a system for overcoming you.

That is why it says in 1 John 2:18,19, “Little children, it is the last hour [the entire Church Age]; and just as you have heard that antichrist is coming [in the Tribulation], even now [in the Church Age] there are many antichrists having come on the scene ... They [antichrists, believers in reverse process reversionism] have departed from us [they have left the divine dynasphere, they function inside the cosmic system], at least they were not with us; for if they had been with us [second class condition: but they were not] they would have resided with us; that it might be demonstrated that all believers are not with us.”

So again the principle: the cosmic system completely changes your attitude about everything.

The principle of momentum testing

1. Momentum testing is designed with two things in mind: first, opportunity for the application of doctrine learned at gate four. Now you don’t apply all the doctrine you have learned every day, you apply different doctrines to different situations and there are some doctrines that have an application that is quite different, and that is in worship or our unseen relationship with the Lord. The opportunity for application of doctrine comes from perception of doctrine, the function of your royal priesthood, whereas the application of doctrine is the function of your royal ambassadorship. Momentum is designed so that you will have the opportunity for application of doctrine. Secondly, momentum testing is designed to accelerate your momentum.
2. No believer attains maturity apart from momentum testing, all eight categories.
3. Spiritual growth results from perception of Bible doctrine, but spiritual growth is accelerated through the application of that doctrine to the categories of testing.
4. All suffering is divided into two categories: suffering for testing and blessing; suffering for discipline and punishment.
5. No believer can fulfill the plan of God and glorify the Lord Jesus Christ apart from momentum testing.
6. Therefore some of the testing in the divine dynasphere is suffering and some of it is prosperity, but the testing actually exists in eight categories for the purpose of application and acceleration of spiritual growth.

7. All categories of testing in the divine dynasphere are designed for blessing. Therefore whether blessing or prosperity, whether adversity or some other form of suffering, the divine purpose is for your good.

8. Human volition plays an important part in testing for the believer must make the right decisions based on his application of Bible doctrine and his residence in the divine dynasphere.

9. Divine faithfulness also plays a very important role in testing. 1 Corinthians 10:13 — “Testing has not caught up with you.” God gives you the opportunity for capacity before the testing, just as He gives you the opportunity for capacity before the prosperity. Nothing is any good without capacity. The real secret to happiness is not prosperity, the real secret to happiness is your capacity for it. Capacity is everything; prosperity or adversity is incidental; “except the human kind; moreover God is faithful [there is the wonderful provision of logistical grace], who will not permit you to be tested beyond your capabilities [your capacity], but with the momentum testing he will also provide a way out [a solution], so that you can carry the pressure [whether it is pressure from prosperity or pressure from adversity].”

In going from gate four, the momentum gate, to gate eight in God’s plan there are eight categories of momentum testing. We have seen the first three so far: old sin nature testing, thought testing, and people testing. These three are the beginning of tests and very few people manage to survive these three so that they can continue their momentum. To pass these three tests is to give acceleration to your spiritual momentum; to fail these tests is to become involved in the cosmic system where there is great unhappiness. Behind all of this is the principle that we must never forget: we are the products of our own decisions. When we come to the place where we have made an especially bad decision, and in that decision great catastrophe has resulted, it is usually a series of decisions that bring us to that point. Bad decisions will destroy your life and make you miserable and long before any divine discipline comes your way you will be the product of your own bad decisions. You will be miserable, you will be unhappy, and you will have brought it all on yourself. Taking responsibility for your own decisions is a part of growing up, and once you begin to take the responsibility for your own decisions as a believer you can then start looking at solutions.

We find that in Laodicea the people were not taking responsibility for their own decisions. The Laodiceans started out living in the divine dynasphere and fulfilling God’s plan. Many of them had already advanced to maturity but somewhere along the line prosperity came along and they couldn’t pass the prosperity test. As a result of flunking the prosperity test they moved into the cosmic system. We are now detailing some of the solutions to failing the prosperity test. In the first three tests we have noted the solution is rebound in the old sin nature test; the faith-rest drill is the solution to thought testing; in people testing the solution is impersonal love.

The Christian way of life actually falls into two general categories which we might classify as invisible and visible. Under the concept of invisible we have the warrant of the royal priesthood; under the concept of visible we have the warrant of the royal ambassadorship. In the invisible part of the Christian life the priest represents himself to God, whereas the visible — the ambassador — represents God to mankind. One demands perception of doctrine (the invisible), the other demands application of doctrine (the visible). The invisible part of the Christian way of life demands as a virtue personal love directed toward God. Personal love is only a virtue when it is directed toward God. Personal love is virtuous in the human race when it is backed by integrity. The counterpart in the visible function is impersonal love directed toward all mankind.

All problem-solving must have a base called virtue. You cannot solve your problem relationships with people or your problem relationships with the circumstances of life unless you have virtue. Motivating virtue is personal love for God, perception of Bible doctrine at gate four. Problem-solving is the application of that doctrine at gate four in the function of impersonal love. You have to build up in your own soul a base not only for problem-solving but also a base for happiness, a base for capacity when you are prosperous. Prosperous people are just as miserable as any other category unless they have the capacity for what they should be enjoying. There are two categories of virtue: motivational and functional. All motivating virtues are manufactured inside the divine dynasphere and directed toward God; all functional virtues are manufactured inside the divine dynasphere and directed toward man. Impersonal love is really the index to your character. It isn't how personable you are, how attractive you are, how successful you are. The real secret to your life is your ability to function under impersonal love, the highest form of human virtue directed toward mankind. Satan has developed in the cosmic system a substitute. He recognises the dangers of impersonal love to his cosmic system whether you do or not and therefore he has set up a substitute called motivational arrogance — crusader arrogance, the social gospel, social action, etc. Behind it is an attempt to find a substitute virtue in life for impersonal love. It doesn't work because it is functioning from the wrong base, the cosmic system, because what motivates people in the cosmic system is arrogance. Arrogance has many different manifestations.

Impersonal love toward mankind is virtuous while personal love for mankind is virtue-dependant. In other words, if you are going to perpetuate personal love with other human beings there must be virtue in your life. Functional virtue is manufactured from residence and function inside the divine dynasphere, especially at gate four. Impersonal love always emphasises the virtue, the integrity, the honour of the subject. If the subject has honour, integrity and virtue then the object of impersonal love always benefits because the object does not have to seek that love by being attractive, or attentive, or something that is very important to the subject. Personal love always emphasises the object and the object can have virtue or no virtue but the object must have something, however, that the subject likes. Therefore there is a vast difference between personal and impersonal love. For example, impersonal love emphasises the integrity of the subject and this, of course, is the basis for problem-solving using yourself as a base. But the problem with personal love is that it depends upon the attractiveness of the object and therefore it has not virtue in itself, it is simply a basis of attractiveness and that, of course, means a few. The imperative of life is impersonal love; the option of life is personal love. Impersonal love is directed toward all. The object of impersonal love is the entire human race, the attractive and the unattractive, whereas personal love is always directed toward just a few. As a matter of fact impersonal love is motivated by God but personal love is motivated by rapport. Therefore there is a great distinction between personal and impersonal love. Impersonal love is non-discriminating; personal love is very discriminating. Personal love, by the way, is unfair; impersonal love is always fair. Impersonal love is unconditional; personal love is conditional. Impersonal love possesses the highest form of emotion; personal love possesses a limited form of emotion. Impersonal love is a functional virtue; at best personal love (if it is going to be perpetuated) is virtue-dependant. In other words, impersonal love is only a virtue when it is directed toward all mankind. Impersonal love is manufactured inside the divine dynasphere from perception of Bible doctrine. But it isn't the perception that manufactures the impersonal love, the perception of doctrine manufactures the personal love toward God which motivates impersonal love. Impersonal love is not sustained by the object of love but by the doctrinal content of your soul. Impersonal love functions whether the person is attractive or not, therefore impersonal love does not depend on rapport with the object nor the attractiveness of the object. For this reason impersonal love is a virtue, it is directed toward all mankind. It cannot be corrupted or deceived by flattery or emotion or approbation or exploited by arrogance. In other words, impersonal love is a relaxed mental attitude from spiritual momentum. But more than that it is the application of doctrine to people in circumstances. Therefore impersonal love becomes the antithesis of arrogance, jealousy, bitterness, vindictiveness, self-pity, revenge modus operandi, hatred, guilt subordination, etc.

The object of impersonal love can be an enemy or a friend, a person who is unworthy or worthy, a person who is attractive or unattractive, a person who is virtuous or evil. In other words, impersonal love functions consistently whether faced with animosity and antagonism on the one hand or love and admiration on the other hand. Just having that stable base of impersonal love means that you have the ability not to be distracted in your Christian life by people. One of the greatest dangers you face to spiritual growth are the people around you, the people in your circumstances. Impersonal love is not influenced by the attitudes of others toward you, but because of doctrine resident in your soul and occupation with the person of Christ at gate five you are on a solid basis for the application of doctrine to those who are antagonistic toward you. Therefore, you see, impersonal love functions virtuously toward all because of your honour, because of your integrity, not the beauty, or the attractiveness of someone else. Impersonal love is not only the fulfillment of the royal family honour code but it is the means of solving the problems in your life, and it is your only hope for consistent happiness in life whether you have disappointing human relationships or prosperity in human relationships.

The role of personal love should not be ignored at this particular time. Personal love toward man falls into two categories: category romance [right-man, right-woman], and friendship or category three love. Since there is not virtue in personal love for mankind personal love makes the individual vulnerable to the tragic flaws of life. Personal love for anyone is a manufacturing system for problems apart from virtue. Personal love for anyone often makes the individual subjective, hypersensitive, have emphasis on self. This produces subjectivity and hypersensitivity as manifestations of arrogance. Personal love for anyone combines your personal problems with theirs, resulting in the intensification of the stresses in life. Therefore personal love for another human being often causes subjectivity, arrogance, loss of good norms and standards, even sociopathic behaviour, psychosis, and so on. Personal love for mankind is virtue dependent and it can only be sustained by the virtue of impersonal love toward all.

What motivates impersonal love? There are two categories depending on their direction or object: virtue directed toward God which motivates; virtue directed toward man which results as functional virtue. No one is capable of fulfilling the requirements of impersonal love toward all mankind unless first of all he has reached the point of occupation with the person of Jesus Christ. And if the Lord is more real to you than anything else your priorities are straight; Bible doctrine is still number one priority. That is so necessary of you are going to be happy in life. Virtue directed toward God motivates virtue directed toward man and personal love for God motivates impersonal love for mankind. Motivating virtue is the motivating virtue of the royal family; functional virtue is the modus operandi.

God has a playing field, as it were, boundaries for the way in which the Christian way of life functions. We call it the divine dynasphere; it is a power system. Gate one is the filling of the Spirit; gate two, basic impersonal love; gate three, enforced and genuine humility. These three gates support the momentum function of the Christian way of life which is gate four, perception and application of Bible doctrine. Gate one is the filling of the Spirit or the IQ. The spiritual IQ is a factor; human IQ is not necessary since momentum demands cognisance of Bible doctrine, in fact inculcation. Gate two is objectivity in approaching the Word of God so as to avoid all personality problems and other distractions that keep you from benefiting from listening to Bible teaching. Gate three has to do with teachability, both enforced and genuine humility are very definitely a part of orientation to life.

Gate four, then, is the function of the Christian way of life. First of all there is the perception of doctrine, the function of our royal priesthood, and then there is application of doctrine, the function of our royal ambassadorship. The function of our royal priesthood is directed toward God. This produces motivating virtue. The application of our ambassadorship is directed toward people and circumstances. It is the function of our ambassadorship which generally lags behind in our spiritual growth.

Gate five is love of God and eventually is parlayed into occupation with the person of Christ. Gate six, right-man, right-woman where pertinent. This is the most personal and most intimate of all categories of love in the human race. Gate seven has the crystallisation of virtue and integrity in the life, also the modus operandi of friendship or category three love. Gate eight is the objective, the advance to maturity.

We have studied in the past detailed mandates with regard to our residence and function inside the divine dynasphere. The Laodicean believers had failed in this matter. Many of them had already advanced to maturity but they had been distracted and they had gone from the momentum line into the cosmic system: cosmic one with its 26 gates of interlocking systems of arrogance; cosmic two with its nine gates of interlocking systems of hatred. They had been distracted and as a result of this they had failed primarily to pass the prosperity test, which means most of them had already made great spiritual advances at the time that they failed. We are noting their attitude in verse 17 with regard to that particular problem.

All virtue and all significance and all solutions to the problems of human relationship, social intercourse, are dependent upon the possession of impersonal love. Impersonal love does not relate to any other possession you may have. It does not relate to wealth or success in promotion or any other factors in life that are associated with happiness. It is related entirely to virtue and to integrity in the life and without impersonal love you cannot solve the problems in your life. Without impersonal love you get into gate one, cosmic one, and that of course is arrogance. In gate one of cosmic one your arrogance will destroy any possibility of virtue residing in your life. Instead of virtue in the life you have self-pity, preoccupation with self, all of the things that are related to arrogance. Where you once said to someone, I love you, now jealousy comes in and through that jealousy the expression of various forms of evil; for jealousy is simply arrogance and jealousy and arrogance are simply motivating evils. Therefore whether it is bitterness or vindictiveness or implacability or revenge tactics or hatred where were once there were the allegations of love it is an excellent illustration of the fact that there is no virtue in personal love. The virtue resides in impersonal love and solving the problems of life related to people and circumstances demands the possession of virtue, for it is the virtue of impersonal love that forms the base for solving your problems.

We do not believe in counseling people, and the reason we do not is because counseling means that you are dependent on someone else to solve your problems. You do not come to your problems suddenly, you come to your problems by making decisions. You make decisions with regard to your scale of values, your priorities in life; you make decisions with regard to your modus vivendi in life, you associate with certain people, certain organisations, certain individuals, whatever it is. You make decisions with regard to you locale in life, you constantly make lot of decisions and then eventually down the line you make decision X where the problem breaks out in all of its intensity. Now you have a problem. Then having brought yourself to point X by a number of decisions, and you are responsible for your own decisions, you go to someone else and you seek counsel. And this is ludicrous because the good advice they give you you may or you may not take, but the point is you made the decisions to get there and you have to make the decisions to resolve the problem. Therefore you have to have information to make your own decisions. You not only have to have information but you have to have the integrity to make the right decisions to solve this problem and either get back to square one or move on to square X, Y and Z. It all depends on you. You have to get back to the divine dynasphere. In order to do this you have to take Bible doctrine that you have learned over the years and you have to apply it. And the problem is: Why can't you take all of this doctrine you have learned at gate four, why can't you apply the doctrines of the hypostatic union, of divine decrees, the doctrine of our Lord's impeccability, redemption, reconciliation, propitiation, imputation? Why can't you apply, for example, the doctrine of election which is so important in problem-solving. The answer is that these doctrine pertaining to our Lord and to His plan cannot be applied in your life because the system for application calls for a virtue called impersonal love, and if you don't have it you can't make the application. Impersonal love is the sum total of your virtue and your integrity applied to all people — not to some people but to all people — and your attitude toward unattractive people, your attitude toward people who are antagonistic, your attitude toward those with whom you have a natural personality conflict is really the key to your life and your ability to apply doctrine to experience. If you do not have the attitude of virtue, honour, love and integrity toward those who are antagonistic toward you, toward those you would otherwise despise, toward those who irritate you, then you will never be successful in your personal relationships in life and you will never enjoy a longtime friendship and you will never have the perpetuation of love between yourself and a member of the opposite sex.

The existence of arrogance cuts off any possibility of the application of doctrine to experience. Yet that is why we are here, not only to learn doctrine and grow but to apply doctrine. That is why God has given us in the spiritual momentum line eight different momentum tests. We have to pass those tests to get to gate eight and that is the problem with the Laodiceans, they had moved up very close to gate eight. Some of them were already there and then they flunked some of these tests, and so as goes the second momentum test so goes your life because that is people testing. You can't live very long in this life without having contact with other people. If you cannot be objective about people you cannot be objective about circumstances and therefore you cannot be objective about life.

While personal love is directed toward mankind in a selective sense, emphasising the attractiveness of the object and related to a few people, impersonal love is non-discriminating. It emphasises the virtue, the honour, the integrity of the subject and it relates to all mankind and fulfills the mandate, "Love everyone." Impersonal love is very personal but it has a different direction, the direction is your own life. You must be objective, you must have virtue and integrity from life and residence and function in the divine dynasphere. The pattern of impersonal love as the ultimate functional virtue, then, is the essence of God or the interaction of divine attributes in infinite and eternal God and the emphasis on that subject. For example we have studied before the fact that God is love. God's love is perfect, it is infinite, it is eternal, it is based on His integrity which is His holiness, composed of His righteousness and justice. How can we ever have a personal love for someone unless you can be fair, there is the concept of justice, unless you have enough integrity and therefore enough honour to graciously handle their faults and not take offense. God's love has always existed without an object and this in itself boggles the mind because God has always been love, there never was a time when God did not exist. He has always been love but He doesn't have to have an object to be love. That is the secret to impersonal love: the presence of integrity, the presence of virtue, the stability of virtue and integrity in the life, which means that God's love does not fluctuate, it does not discriminate, it does not depend upon merit or the attractiveness of the object. The attributes of divine integrity become the pattern therefore for human impersonal love, love as a virtue. In other words, for impersonal love as a virtue directed toward all mankind there must be an attitude of soul, there must be an objectivity, there must be everything found in the divine dynasphere. God the Father invented the divine dynasphere as a system for the function of impersonal love.

The functional virtue of impersonal love is the sum total of the believer's honour, integrity and objectivity manufactured from Bible doctrine resident in the soul. There must be doctrine first, there must be truth. Truth is the basis for the crystallisation of integrity in your life. The emphasis of impersonal love is always the spiritual momentum and the virtue of the believer as the subject of love. Therefore impersonal love is unconditional as far as the object is concerned. It is unprejudiced, tolerant, courteous, considerate, now matter how great the stress of antagonism. The relaxed mental attitude, then, of impersonal love is the antithesis of gate one, cosmic one, where we have arrogance, jealousy, bitterness, vindictiveness, implacability, self-pity, guilt reaction or revenge motivation. Impersonal love, then, as a virtue is not only manufactured inside the divine dynasphere but can only function when the believer resides in that divine dynasphere. Inside the cosmic system any former category of human love becomes hypocrisy. It really becomes preoccupation with self and in effect it says: "I love you because of what you can do for me." That is the hypocrisy of human love, there is no virtue in that, you love people for all the wrong reasons and there is no happiness in it.

When it is said that impersonal love is unconditional it means that it has no merit as a sign to the object. When the object has no attractiveness is not the issue, that is the issue in personal love, not in impersonal love. All motivation of course for the function of impersonal love must originate in your relationship to God as a Christian. That takes us back to, What is Christianity? It is the function of your royal priesthood, it is the function of your royal ambassadorship. Your priesthood functions toward God, your ambassadorship functions toward man and circumstances. God is invisible to us and is only known through perception of Bible doctrine, and if He is real to you through the perception of Bible doctrine so that you love Him on the basis of doctrine — doctrine is the secret to knowing God and therefore loving Him — then the same principle is applied to mankind under the same principle of impersonal love. Personal love is a motivating virtue toward God; impersonal love is a functional virtue directed toward man. Once you start doing things on the basis of what people do to you, you are a slave. Someone offends you, you offend them back; someone talks about you, you do it right back to them. Once you do that you are in the cosmic system, you are a slave. You are Satan's slave and you will spend your whole life responding and reacting and being miserable. People who go from response to someone who is attractive to reaction to someone who is antagonistic are unstable and miserable, and if it goes on long enough it can even result in psychopathic and sociopathic modus operandi.

So impersonal love as a virtue originates from the motivation of the love of God. Personal love of people is a distraction to your relationship with God if you put it first. Impersonal love for people is a manifestation of your love of God. But if in his preoccupation with self, his arrogance, his hypersensitivity, the believer kicks his enemies in the teeth and smiles at his friends he is a problem.

So the modus operandi of impersonal love is the problem-solver of our first three momentum tests. And as a functional virtue which can be observed and noted by others it is the obvious manifestation of dynamic spiritual living — that is, impersonal love as a functional virtue. Dynamic spiritual living is residence and function in the divine dynasphere. The divine dynasphere is invisible but the function of its virtue is visible and impressive, the testimony of your royal ambassadorship. This is why impersonal love is imperative while personal love is optional, and the believer in Jesus Christ being both a priest and an ambassador has two functions. His priesthood leads to motivating virtue and his ambassadorship leads to functional virtue and therefore the two functions of gate four are involved: the perception of doctrine and the application of doctrine. Perception of doctrine is related to motivating virtue; application of doctrine is related to functional virtue. This is the problem-solving process. You must have a base from which to solve your own problems, sooner or later you must become spiritually self-sustaining. You don't have to consult the counsel of others if you are consistent in your intake of doctrine, what you need is to function the base of impersonal love. Many times your problems come from the antagonisms of others, real or imagined, and you have no way of solving these things unless you have virtue, the virtue of impersonal love. The function of impersonal love is the panacea for personality conflicts, the solution to the problems of personal relationships and, of course, human interaction the dynamic impact of functional virtue in society. For this reason personal love is optional in your life but impersonal love is God's mandate. Unconditional personal love is non-existent for all personal love is conditional and selective. Man saturated with arrogance, preoccupied with himself cannot possibly sustain human relationships. Therefore personal love in the human race depends on virtue. Without honour, integrity, virtue impersonal love will never be successful or genuine. This expresses the principle that personal love in the human race is virtue dependent.

The cosmic system has a lot to offer you. It offers you great unhappiness. For example, the cosmic system often duplicates the blessings that God provides for the believer in the divine dynasphere, it offers you wealth, wealth without honour and therefore misery. It offers you success but success without integrity and therefore unhappiness. It offers you promotion but it promotes you beyond your ability, your capacity and your integrity, and therefore the promotion brings great unhappiness. It offers you approbation without achievement, a hypocrisy designed to make you miserable. It offers you love without virtue and love without virtue is one of the greatest frustrations in life and it results in the functions of a frantic search for happiness. All of these things can be yours in the cosmic system and you will notice what is missing: capacity — capacity for love, capacity for happiness, capacity for blessing. So it is really the integrity of impersonal love that really is the base for solving your own problems. The object of impersonal love can be known or unknown; the object of impersonal love can be an enemy or a friend, it can be someone who is attractive or someone who is antagonistic, someone who is virtuous or someone who is evil. Impersonal love perpetuates its virtue and integrity and honour without discrimination or without making any distinctions. Impersonal love cannot be destroyed by hatred.

Our Lord did not react to the injustice of the cross, the arrogance, the hypocrisy, the self-righteousness and all the evil functions directed toward His person in hypostatic union. He treated the human race with impersonal love. This is described at the Praetorium where he picked up His cross, and therefore the mandate to us: "Take up your cross and follow me." What is taking up your cross and following Him? Some form of self-sacrifice? No. It is the construction of impersonal love in your life, the construction of virtue through the consistent perception of Bible doctrine. Personal love for God motivated His impersonal love in going to the cross, and the cross includes the person and the work of our Lord Jesus Christ. The person was motivated by a love for God and in bearing our sins we have impersonal love directed toward the entire human race. That is why the bread of the communion table reminds us of our Lord's motivating virtue of personal love toward God the Father, while the cup reminds us of our Lord's functional virtue of impersonal love toward all mankind. Impersonal love, then, follows the precept that we are never to love people as an entity — category "all" — because of who and what they are. That would be personal. But under the virtue of impersonal love we are to love all people because of who and what we are. Believers motivated by personal love for God and functioning under the virtue of impersonal love for all are those who have reached the place of problem-solving in their lives, and with problem-solving comes the stability of great happiness. Because impersonal love extrapolates honour, integrity and virtue from residence inside the divine dynasphere it disregards malice, hatred, hostility, antagonism, implacability, vindictiveness in others. It substitutes the virtue of impersonal love and therefore tolerance and objectivity toward all. Therefore impersonal love is strong, it is dynamic, because it does not depend on approbation. It doesn't depend upon human recognition or attention or flattery or patronage, but it depends on Bible doctrine which manufactures the motivating virtue inside the divine dynasphere. While the motivating virtue of impersonal love is invisible the function is very visible to all. Sensitivity is the impact of impersonal love in thoughtfulness of others, it manifests itself in good manners and willingness to accommodate one's self to an individual or group. This is true in business, professional life, academic life, social life, every category of life. This means that the function of sensitivity combines the virtue of impersonal love with the virtue of enforced and genuine humility to make the dynamic person.

What we have today are primarily believers who cannot apply doctrine and this is, of course, hypersensitivity, the arrogant function of the believer in the cosmic system. This was the problem with the Laodiceans. They were lukewarm, they were in category hypersensitivity. Sensitivity is objective; hypersensitivity is subjective. Sensitivity is virtuous; hypersensitivity is arrogance. Hypersensitivity is arrogant preoccupation with self or the subjective function of making false issue out of one's self. Hypersensitive people function under the demand syndrome and they use a number of strategies to get their own way or to control their own periphery or the people around them. The obsession of self-importance plus preoccupation of subjective arrogance eventuates in superimposing one's will or one's opinion on a group and simultaneously be insensitive with regard to the opinions of that group. Hypersensitive people are always insensitive to the feelings of others. The sensitivity of impersonal love is the impact of this functional virtue: no hypersensitivity, no arrogant subjectivity which, of course, is divorced from reality. Sensitivity is a part of impersonal love and it is virtuous, it is objective, it is totally oriented to reality and used as impersonal love to deal with reality and to solve the problems of life. The Laodiceans had failed with regard to this matter.

In verse 17 the particular test is a prosperity test. There are nine momentum tests in advancing from gate four to gate eight. Gate four is the momentum gate with its perception and application of doctrine. Gate eight is the ultimate objective of spiritual maturity. We have already seen the cosmic perspective and its failure in the first half of verse 17: “Because you say, quote: I am rich, in fact I have become very wealthy [prosperity test], and I have need of nothing [flunking the prosperity test].” We have noted that prosperity testing occurs for a nation or city or an individual where the three categories of manifest destiny are combined under the leadership of the industrial complex. The result of flunking the prosperity test on the part of a client nation of God is very simple. There is social degeneration, economic decline, and eventually military disaster.

When some form of wealth or prosperity comes to the believer one of two things happens to him as an individual. He either remains in the divine dynasphere and has the capacity for prosperity from perception and application of doctrine, primarily the application of doctrine, the stabilising of his priorities, maintaining Bible doctrine is number one in his scale of values. That is the one who passes the prosperity test. Or he becomes inflamed with arrogance and he takes his prosperity into the cosmic system where it makes him miserable for life. His misery is not divine discipline, at least not at first. His misery comes from his own decisions. Bad decisions are the cause of misery and unhappiness in life. Each one of us must take the responsibility for his own decisions and when we fail to do so we fail to recognise that we bring about most of the trouble we have in this life. We bring it about by our own personal decisions. God adds to those decisions and self-induced misery eventually by warning discipline.

Wealth or prosperity in the divine dynasphere in the divine dynasphere is a fantastic blessing but wealth or prosperity in the cosmic system is the Laodicean syndrome. The believer flunks the prosperity test when riches or wealth or promotion or success change his priorities so that Bible doctrine is no longer number one priority in his life. No believer survives the prosperity test when his wealth or success or promotion or approbation comes between him and Bible doctrine. The prosperity test is therefore far more subtle, far more difficult than the adversity. Without capacity for wealth and prosperity wealth, riches, fame and approbation result in a frantic search for happiness, and a frantic search for happiness leads to the destruction of right priorities and eventually winds up in the cosmic system, the last place you will ever find happiness. And so the principle we have been studying: Your capacity should always precede your prosperity, otherwise prosperity takes you into the cosmic system and great misery.

“Because you say I am rich.” There is nothing wrong with that. The problem comes from the next phrase: “and I have need of nothing.” The Laodicean Christians had been exposed to doctrinal teaching from four great pastors — Epaphras, Timothy, John Mark and the apostle John. The reaction stated here indicates negative volition after first of all being positive. These people became successful and as they became prosperous they suddenly put Bible doctrine way back in the scale of values and they put other things first. Inevitably they went into the cosmic system so that all of the great Bible teaching which they had was absolutely useless. And, as we shall see, many of them will capsize in life — the sin unto death — for their own decisions had caused the Laodiceans to succumb to cosmic evangelism which functions during prosperity testing. Whatever spiritual advances had been made are now negated. Some of them were actually mature believers. This is why they are described as lukewarm. They had once been hot in a state of maturity, now they had cooled off. Only positive volition toward doctrine inside the divine dynasphere will maintain the right priorities to avoid the cosmic trap, and only the daily perception of Bible doctrine in the divine dynasphere will provide the mature believer for the necessary capacity for prosperity. And, again, your capacity should always precede your prosperity, otherwise your prosperity will become a trap instead of a blessing. That is why we have been studying momentum testing.

We have noted the principles of momentum testing and then the actual categories. The first test was the old sin nature test, the second test was people testing -one of the places where you will discover in a hurry whether you will ever be capable of passing the prosperity test, because people can only become a distraction to perception of doctrine and residence in the divine dynasphere (in other words, the plan of God) when the believer places human relationships above Bible doctrine. So whether it is social life or sexual life or business life or professional life or any category of life that you choose to use, whenever prosperity takes precedence over doctrine because you become too infatuated with people and what they think of you, then you are in trouble and you have made your own trouble. Personal hatred, animosity or attraction can trap the believer in the cosmic system. The solution to people testing is the function of the believer inside the divine dynasphere and the base of impersonal love. Then the third test is thought testing which is generally related to the believer's negative volition toward doctrine.

There are two ways to be negative toward doctrine. Inside of Satan's cosmic one there is preoccupation with self; inside of cosmic two there is antagonism toward doctrine. Often this is a combination, preoccupation with self plus antagonism toward doctrine. Certain doctrines are pleasing to you, certain ones are not. We all have areas where doctrine is very critical of us and therefore we must have humility, we must have objectivity, we must have the ministry of God the Holy Spirit, and not to take it as a criticism from the person but criticism from the content of doctrine, therefore from God Himself. This is the beauty of having the policy in the congregation of privacy. You come into the congregation as a private individual. If you are a believer you hear under the privacy of your royal priesthood and you can sit under the teaching of the Word knowing that no one knows your personal business or problems. But the point is that if you are ever going to grow there are certain things where the Bible will be critical of your problem — we all have different ones — and when we face this criticism as it is communicated you cannot take it personally as from a person, but we must take it objectively under the ministry of the Spirit as from God. But the issue of privacy is the whole issue in the congregation. You must have privacy so that you can take in doctrine.

Thought testing, then, is generally related to negative volition. Thought distraction is another way of putting it. Thought distraction can relate to one's arrogance or preoccupation with self, or hypersensitivity. It can also originate from prejudice, inflexibility, unteachability, which is just another way of saying arrogance. For if you have prejudice and inflexibility, lack of teachability (which means lack of humility), inability to take criticism from the Word, this is of course the symptoms of arrogance. Many times doubts in thought testing result from neglect of systematic teaching of the Word of God, plus wrong priorities and lack of consistency in the function of GAP. Too often the believer is not interested in the variety of subjects found in the Bible and is motivated to the function of GAP only when the subject may interest him.

The solution to thought testing includes not only the rebound technique but the three stages of the faith-rest drill.

System testing: Sooner or later all of us get into systems. If you are in the academic pipe you are in a system. If you play in a team you are in a system. If you go to a church you are in a system. If you are working in a business you are in a system. If you function in a professional organisation you are in a system. Any kind of group of people organised are a system and the world is filled with both good systems and bad systems. The testing usually comes in a bad system, but not always. It comes into existence historically because of the genius of Satan and the evil of the cosmic system. It is not stretching it to say, however, that some bad systems are only bad because of your approach to them. When you enter some organisation and you seek to undermine the authority of that organisation, you seek to destroy the honour and integrity there, then of course that is your fault. But inevitably all systems are going to react against some person or some individual and a bad system always has its victims. If you are the victim of a bad system you face a test. Are you going to be bitter? Are you going to be vindictive? Are you going to seek to destroy that system? If you have changed jobs from one business to another, if you have changed professions, and one system has maltreated you, it is a test. Are you going to allow the rest of your life to be coloured by what has happened to you in that system? That is the problem. A bad system always has its victims.

Many organisations are legitimate and have worthy objectives but they are neutralised by their involvement in the cosmic system through one of three factors: the problem of personnel, the problem of the policy, the objectives of the system. First of all you look at the objectives of the system. When you enter a system the objective is to make money, to make profit. An organisation will have system of authority. That comes under personnel. And there are certain policies and you may grumble about the policies. But you say, "I am a Christian, I don't have to do those things, I am above those organisations, I am not going to comply." That is arrogance and your Christianity is lived under the rulership of Satan in the cosmic system. Therefore believers in a legitimate system can become the victim of bad management. You may have a boss over you who is a nitwit. What are you going to do? Are you going to comply or not? If you stay in the organisation you must comply. If you get out of the organisation then get out of the organisation without disturbing the organisation. You should get out without disturbing the structure of the organisation. If you stay in the system you have to do your job as unto the Lord, and "under the Lord" is a little more complicated than you first realised. It means you are not entitled to any bitterness because of unfair treatment. You are not entitled to any antagonism because you have been maltreated. You are not entitled to any of the functions of gate one, cosmic one, and you have flunked system testing when you become bitter or jealous or vindictive, or you seek to overthrow or undermine the authority structure in the system.

The believer in a legitimate system can become the victim of bad management. That means personality and management conflict so that system testing requires the function of impersonal love. If you have impersonal love you are going to pass most of these tests because, you see, people cannot get to you. You treat people from your integrity and honour rather than treating them on the basis of their attitude toward you. Many organisations of life have become rotten and corrupt when the leadership of that organisation becomes involved in the cosmic system. When believers are the victim of a rotten system they must use impersonal love when dealing with people and they must use doctrinal rationales in dealing with situations. There are two bases then, the one we have studied, impersonal love in dealing with people, and the doctrinal rationales in dealing with circumstances or situations. One requires the faith-rest drill, one requires the application of your integrity. Sooner or later you are going to be unfairly treated by a system and the honour and the integrity of your soul plus the doctrinal rationales will bring you out with flying colours. To flunk system testing is a deterrent to the momentum of your spiritual life, the advance to maturity. To flunk system testing results in the believer himself becoming a new convert to the cosmic system of Satan through reaction to injustice rather than response to doctrine. Self-pity, bitterness, hatred, implacability, vindictiveness, revenge modus operandi, all of which takes the problem of a bad system out of the Lord's hands, puts them in yours and guarantees no solution. System testing, then, is a major source of peer ostracism and in facing system testing there are the options of separation from the system or the option of living within the system itself and coping with it through the function of your impersonal love, which is the base for the application of doctrine to people, or the function of the rationales of the second stage of the faith-rest drill: the logistical grace rationale, the plan of God rationale, the divine attribute rationale, the imputation rationale. Various doctrines and the rationales are the means of making application of those doctrines to circumstances.

In most cases of system testing it is living within the system that is the most difficult and sooner or later you are going to have to live within a system which is unfair to you, and you should stay with that system until the Lord's testing in that field is over. Then if you depart from that system you should do so without bitterness, without rancour without complaining about those who have "despitefully used you." If the rotten system is a church, and there are rotten system churches — one that does not teach doctrine, one that involves the communist party or social action — then separation is the best decision provided you do it properly. The only way to do it properly is to separate without complaining about the pastor or the people or the false doctrine. Just simply get out and do not complain. To the extent that you complain and run these people down you share their discipline.

The direct attack of cosmic one: the 26 gates of cosmic one, the arrogance system.

The direct attack of cosmic two: the 9 gates of cosmic two, the interlocking systems of hatred.

Disaster testing: All of us sooner or later face major disasters. Everything we ever learned, whether it is applied directly to the situation or directly to ourselves. Every time you learn a doctrine that doctrine holds two things for you. First of all it is going to apply to some circumstance in life, and secondly that doctrine is going to apply to you as an individual. When you learn a doctrine it always has something you need to know, and that something that you need to know will some day be applied in the circumstances of adversity. You are going to face sooner or later the great adversities of this life and when you do the doctrine which has strengthened you can be applied to the situation. Once you learn a doctrine as e)pignwsij it becomes a part of you, it becomes a part of your strength and it gives you something that is necessary for application in adversity — flexibility, which is absolutely necessary in adverse circumstances. Every kind of storm requires a different system of seamanship, and all kinds of storms in your life require different applications. But none of these applications are any good if you personally are arrogant. Arrogance destroys application. You must be humble and therefore flexible; you must search through and find the proper application for the proper situation. God is going to permit a certain number of disasters in your life not of your own making. There is testing for blessing, for acceleration of spiritual growth. Remember, there are two kinds of suffering for the believer: suffering for discipline and suffering for blessing. The issue in suffering for divine discipline is sin; the issue in suffering for blessing is momentum — spiritual growth. The status for suffering for discipline: the believer is in the cosmic system; the status for suffering for blessing: the believer is in the divine dynasphere. The category of divine discipline — suffering for discipline: the suffering is unbearable; the category for suffering for blessing: it is bearable and actually contributes to your blessing. The viewpoint of suffering for discipline is arrogance and subjectivity; the viewpoint of suffering for blessing is humility and objectivity. There is your application. The solution to suffering for discipline is the rebound technique; the solution to suffering for blessing is using impersonal love as the base in dealing with personnel problems and the doctrine rationales of the second stage of the faith-rest drill for the circumstances of adversity. The result of suffering for discipline is cursing turned to blessing when the solution is used, and the result of suffering for blessing is spiritual growth and acceleration.

Hedonism is a philosophical concept: the pursuit of pleasure in life to the exclusion of truth and doctrine; the highest function in life is pleasure. This, of course rearranges one's scale of values. Hedonism contends that the moral duty of man is fulfilled in the gratification of pleasure-seeking instincts as his modus vivendi. The rise of hedonism among believers indicates their failure to pass the prosperity test.

There is a great deal of pleasure and a great deal of happiness for all believers but it doesn't come by first of all seeking pleasure. It comes from seeking the Lord through Bible doctrine, and then, of course, there is a tremendous buildup of capacity. Capacity for life, capacity for love, capacity for happiness must precede prosperity. Seeking happiness outside the divine dynasphere, then, is a dead end. The cosmic system can offer anything in this world: success, promotion, material prosperity, fame, social life, sexual pleasure, anything but happiness. Prosperity related to capacity for happiness is one of the great blessings of the divine dynasphere but prosperity related to the cosmic system results in misery, unhappiness, frustration with all of the accouterments of superficialities of prosperity and happiness. Again, the principle: for happiness capacity must and always precede prosperity, otherwise prosperity is distorted into a system of misery.

Principle

1. Every believer must pass the prosperity test before he can achieve spiritual maturity and before he can enjoy the great prosperity and blessings of supergrace.
2. Capacity for blessings of the supergrace status comes from the construction of the edification complex of the soul. Every floor of the edification complex contributes to your capacity for life, your capacity for happiness, your capacity for prosperity.
3. Prosperity is the most subtle distraction to life in the divine dynasphere and therefore the greatest distraction to fulfilling the plan of God for your life. And, again, there is nothing wrong with prosperity, it is what is wrong with the people who can't handle prosperity.
4. Prosperity cannot bring happiness with it unless the believer is living in the divine dynasphere and consistently taking in Bible doctrine.
5. Therefore for true happiness and prosperity the believer must live in the divine dynasphere. He must function at its various gates, especially gate four [perception and application of doctrine]. Capacity for life, capacity for blessing, capacity for happiness cannot be separated from the filling of the Spirit at gate one, from basic impersonal love at gate two, from enforced and genuine humility at gate three [there is no happiness in life without humility].
6. Therefore the prosperity test is vitally necessary before reaching maturity...
7. ... because passing the prosperity test consolidates the believer's scale of values resulting in stabilising the right priorities of life, and gives the capacity so that prosperity can be enjoyed. Capacity must precede prosperity.
8. Passing the prosperity test gives stability to spiritual maturity. The mature believer never depends on his prosperity but he always depends on the Source of his prosperity. Prosperity can come or go but he Source of prosperity is always there, God Himself and logistical grace.

We have noticed eight categories of momentum tests. We should notice, then, that the mature believer is characterised by consistent victory in these eight categories of human testing. We should also note that only the mature believer is qualified to handle these tests on a consistent basis. This means that all momentum in the Christian life depends on the categories of testing for its acceleration or for spiritual growth in advance to maturity. You see, growth is not simply an extension of the frame, the base, by perception of doctrine. Spiritual growth is the putting on of the muscle and the power and the strength from the application of that doctrine to experience. Every category of testing demands that doctrine should have already been perceived and perception of doctrine means having answers. But the perception is not the whole story, it is the application of doctrine.

The application of doctrine comes from two basic functions: the base of impersonal love and the second stage of the faith-rest drill, reverse concentration in the use of doctrinal rationales. Impersonal love must be a part of the integrity of your life and the second stage of the faith-rest drill must be organized into its proper rationales for instant application of doctrine. Superficial Christians spend all of their lives trying to apply a verse to a situation and you will never get past the sophomore stage of the Christian life that way. You have to have verses in order to give you the ability to think and therefore to apply doctrine. These verses are to remove fear or panic from your soul brought about by pressure, but claiming a promise will not take you past stabilising your soul for thought. It is the reverse thinking that counts and therefore you can claim promises until doomsday and you will never solve your problems. All stage one of stage one of the faith-rest drill is designed for is to remove fear. If you have fear or some extreme emotional activity in your soul you cannot think, and if you cannot think you cannot apply. Therefore probably the greatest weakness we have is failure to apply doctrine, failure to use as the base of all modus operandi impersonal love. You are just simply not passing people testing, prosperity testing especially. Failure to pass the prosperity test results in cosmic involvement and, of course, the retrogression of your spiritual life, whereas passing the momentum tests result s in spiritual growth, the fulfillment of God's plan in your life, the advance to the objective of spiritual maturity and the glorification of the Lord Jesus Christ. And no one ever loses by glorifying the Lord Jesus Christ. Passing a momentum test also results in historical impact, the uptrend of history, blessing by association and the prosperity of contemporary history. As goes the believer so goes the trends of history, as we have noted. After reaching gate eight these tests become the characteristic of the mature believer. The mature believer, ninety per cent of the time, will pass the eight momentum tests. No believer can maintain maturity without consistency in facing the momentum tests and continuing to pass them.

In the next part of verse 17 we begin to see the real situation when you flunk one of the tests. First of all we notice that flunking comes from ignorance, just like in academic circles. If you are ignorant of a subject you flunk it. If you know the subject you pass it in varying degrees of passing it. Ignorance is the most serious of all spiritual problems. Not sin, but ignorance! Sin comes from volition and sin can be handled where there is cognisance of doctrine. Where there is ignorance of doctrine neither sin nor anything else can be handled properly.

So we have the result of cosmic involvement, the ignorance of the cosmic believer. We start out with the emphatic use of the conjunction kai, meaning here "in fact." Then we have the perfect o)ida, the perfect form of the verb used as a present tense for ignorance in this case because with this present active indicative we have the negative o)uk, "in fact you do not know." That is the worst problem in the spiritual life. Ignorance: not having doctrinal facts, not understanding. The progressive present tense is for an action in the state of persistence, the ignorance which comes from the believer living in the cosmic system. Human viewpoint, Satanic viewpoint results. The active voice: the cosmic believer produces the action of the verb through ignorance. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the ignorance of the cosmic believer regarding his status quo.

With this we have the conjunction o(ti used after verbs of ignorance to describe the areas of ignorance involved and the human viewpoint developed from living in the cosmic system. This is the ignorance of the believer who flunks the prosperity test in this context. The principle is very simple: ignorance guarantees failure. We are talking about spiritual life failure, failure to follow the Lord. No doctrine; no dynamics. No divine dynasphere; no fulfillment of the plan of God for your life. In place of strength there is weakness and out of this weakness comes disaster from cosmic living.

The present active indicative of e)jimi, the verb to be, follows. It should be translated: “in fact you do not know that you are.” The present tense is a descriptive present for the true status of the cosmic believer who flunks momentum testing. The active voice: the cosmic believer produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the true status of the cosmic believer.

There are five words which follow, each word is in the nominative case and is a predicate nominative after the verb to be. It describes the cosmic believer in his failure to pass the prosperity test. The first word is talaipwroj and it connotes no capacity for prosperity when living in the cosmic system. It is a compound adjective, it is made up of the verb telaiw which means to endure and with it we have pwroj means callous or scar tissue. Therefore when you put the two together it simply means to endure calluses on your feet. We translate it to be miserable, wretched, distressed. It also connotes poor in quality, therefore no capacity for prosperity. We will simply translate it: “in fact you do not know that you are miserable.” You can be stimulated by some form of pleasure and during the stimulation not know that you are miserable. The status quo is miserable because you really do not have the capacity for the stimulation of pleasure nor for any form of prosperity which brings it about. Capacity must precede prosperity otherwise prosperity first makes one miserable and then destroys the believer. For the cosmic believer prosperity becomes a source of misery or wretchedness. Only the believer living in the divine dynasphere could possibly have the prosperity and make the prosperity enjoyable — the capacity. There is nothing more miserable than a cosmic believer with money or some other form of prosperity. He is not only miserable himself but he generally contributes to the misery of others in his periphery. Under the historical trend he contributes to the downfall of his country: as goes the believer so goes the client nation to God. Wealth plus frustration equals misery, wretchedness. Wealth, frustration and misery result in conversion to Satanic systems — socialism, communism, hedonism, lasciviousness and many others of the distorted kind.

The second predicate nominative is a little shorter word as far as syllables in the Greek — e)leeinoj which means no happiness from prosperity when living in the cosmic system, just as our first one meant no capacity for prosperity when living in the cosmic system. This adjective means pitiful or to be pitied. It also means lamentable or insignificant or despicable, “you do not know that you are miserable and despicable.”

The third one is ptwkoj. The adjective meant begging originally, dependent on others for support. It also came to mean poor, miserable, beggarly, but it also means impotent, loss of strength. When we put it all together it is: “in fact you do not know that you are miserable [no capacity for prosperity], and despicable [no happiness from prosperity], and impotent [poor, beggarly, miserable, connoting spiritual poverty in the cosmic system, lack of spiritual strength guaranteeing cosmic weakness].”

Number four is the predicate nominative tufloj which means no perception or application of doctrine. Believers living in the cosmic system could have learned doctrine, could have notebooks filled with doctrinal principles and cannot apply them in the cosmic system. From the cosmic system there is no application of doctrine and you start a recessive concept of forgetting what you knew the longer you stayed in the cosmic system. We are going to translate it as it is: “blind.” It is an adjective meaning blindness, here it means mental and spiritual blindness, blackout of the soul, scar tissue of the soul.

Number five is gumnoj which is correctly translated “naked.” It means no uniform of honour can be worn when you live in the cosmic system. The uniform of honour is the invisible status of the mature believer living in the divine dynasphere. He is fulfilling the royal family honour code, he is producing virtue and integrity through residence and function inside the divine dynasphere.

Translation of the entire verse: “Because you say, quote: I am rich, in fact I have become very wealthy [prosperity test], and I have need of nothing [flunking the prosperity test]; in fact you do not know that you are miserable [no capacity for prosperity in the cosmic system], and despicable [no happiness from prosperity when living in the cosmic system], and impotent [poor beggarly, miserable, connoting spiritual poverty in the cosmic system], and blind [no perception or application of doctrine when involved in the cosmic system], and naked [no uniform of honour when living in the cosmic system].”

The results, then, of cosmic involvement are obvious from this translation. The principle is a very simple one and a very short one: spiritual blindness and nakedness makes the believer helpless as far as God’s plan is concerned. People who are physically blind and, of course, without clothing cannot function in society. Disorientation to the plan of God is what is being said here, but there is more than that being said here. There is no way that you as a believer are ever going to have any happiness apart from God’s plan for your life — the divine dynasphere, residence therein. The function at gate four, perception and application of doctrine, the development of capacity before you receive the blessing. God often punishes people, disciplines them, by giving them prosperity without capacity. When people are punished by adversity they simply grit their teeth and carry on but when people are punished by prosperity it is devastating. To have prosperity and no capacity for it is one of the most miserable conditions in the world and this is what this passage is saying. Without spiritual sight from doctrine and the integrity plus virtue of the uniform of honour the believer cannot survive in the devil’s world. You and I as believers cannot survive in the cosmic system. Blessing when you are in adversity or prosperity comes from being in the divine dynasphere but when you have either adversity or prosperity in the cosmic system it is the worst kind of punishment. So God blesses by both adversity and prosperity to the believer in the divine dynasphere but God punishes by adversity and prosperity the believer in the cosmic system. Believers in the cosmic system are slaves to Satan. They are liable for self-induced misery from wrong decisions, and divine discipline as the only form of spiritual teaching to which they can respond.

Verse 18. We move now to recovery from the cosmic system in verse eighteen. Obviously the first problem in recovery is to rebound. After that to sort out your priorities and decide what is best for you in life and what should have first place in your scale of values. The problems that believers face often come from wrong priorities as well as ignorance and the principle is one we have studied many times before under historical trends: good decisions result in options for greater decisions and great blessing; bad decisions destroy those options and eventuate in the sin unto death. Of course the principle, then, is that every believer, as with every member of the human race, must take the responsibility for his own decisions. Generally it takes a lot of bad decisions to get some crisis point which is destructive to your own life, bad decisions followed by bad decisions followed by bad decisions and inevitably the person is involved in cosmic one, gate one, in their arrogance and preoccupation with self and generally try to blame the whole thing on someone else. We have already seen under the principle of the old sin nature test that even insanity is no excuse. It takes a lot of bad decisions to get to the point of being sociopathic or psychopathic. The sooner we learn to be responsible for our own decisions the better off we are. We are, after all, going to be held responsible for our decisions as they are seen at the judgment seat of Christ.

The Laodiceans are not contributing to the uptrend of history, they are contributing to the downtrend, and all of this can be changed but it cannot be changed without a reevaluation of their scale of values and rearrangement of their priorities. Therefore the apostle John begins verse 18 with the present active indicative of the verb sumbouleuw, and it means to counsel, to give advice, to advise, and we will translate it: "I advise." With it we have the dative singular indirect object from the personal pronoun us, "I advise you." This brings up the whole problem of pastoral counselling and, of course, we know that there is no place in the ministry for counseling when the ministry functions under its proper principles. You see, you are a priest, you have the privacy of your priesthood, you must make your own decisions. You must make your decisions on the best possible information. Information is given consistently from the pulpit and therefore if you are going to be spiritually self-sustaining you reside in the divine dynasphere, you make your own decisions from two different foundations: from the base of impersonal love which is virtue and, secondly, from the base of the second stage of the faith-rest drill which are the doctrinal rationales. The principle of being counseled then is ludicrous. You have to live your life as unto the Lord, you do not live your life as unto a pastor. The pastor is the final authority in the local church but the pastor's responsibility and the purpose for the pastor's authority is to communicate Bible doctrine so that you can make your own decisions on the basis of facts.

Sometimes you do not have those facts and when you do not it is because your priorities have been wrong and you have made wrong decisions. You have neglected Bible doctrine and God often punishes us in divine discipline by simply giving us a problem or allowing our decisions to bring us into a situation where if we had listened in Bible class or we had been in Bible class we would know exactly what the answer is. But not having been there in the first place or not having been there in the second place through not listening we therefore missed the lesson that we needed to know. Everything we learn sooner or later has application, either in our life with God or our relationship with people and our life in facing circumstances.

So we have the phrase, "I counsel or advise you." This seems to contradict what has just been said but it does not when you remember that this counseling is simply the presentation of doctrine; this is a part of the Word of God. In other words, what he is actually saying and the true interpretation is simply this: the Word of God must be our counsel. We must get our advice from Bible doctrine in the Word of God. The dative indirect object of the personal pronoun indicates the one in whose interest the act is performed. All counseling is conducted through perception of Bible doctrine. In other words, once you learn the doctrine the application is the counseling. You counsel yourself, you live your own life, you make your own decisions as unto the Lord, and you function under the privacy of your own priesthood. Therefore your business remains your business. The church should be one place where no one knows your business. The church is the place where you should have privacy and therefore objectivity in the perception of Bible doctrine.

The present tense of sumbouleuw is the descriptive present for what is now going on, the counseling of the cosmic believers in Laodicea and the Roman province of Asia. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ counsels the cosmic believer through the apostle John's teaching, not through one on one or private or personal counseling. For the believer in the Lord Jesus Christ there is no need for counseling provided that he is positive toward doctrine. There is no question about the fact that believers who live in the cosmic system can stand some counseling from those who are professionally involved, like a psychiatrist or psychologist, but one person who is not a professional counselor is a minister. He shouldn't be. There is no profit in a minister doing anything but teaching the Word of God. So the active voice emphasises the fact that our Lord Jesus Christ counsels through Bible teaching, through doctrine. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of divine counsel to believers in the cosmic system. In other words, this is advice for all of us when we become involved in the cosmic system.

Principle

1. If you are positive and your priorities place Bible doctrine first in your scale of values then counsel for you must be Bible doctrine. This is a part of being spiritually self-sustaining. Your information in facing the vicissitudes of life should come from doctrine resident in your own soul otherwise you will never live your own life, other people will live it for you. You will make decisions but you will make decisions out of the influence of other people rather than under the influence of doctrine, and therefore your life will be miserable as long as you live. You must live your own life before the Lord. You must take the responsibility for your own decisions, this is a part of even human maturity. Both believer and unbeliever taking responsibility for their own bad decisions have grown up.
2. Every believer, then, must make his own decisions and Bible doctrine perceived gives him options for good decisions, good decisions which glorify the Lord and bring personal happiness into his life, good decisions that provide historical impact and personal prosperity.

3. The ideal counseling or advice comes from Bible doctrine resident in your own soul, i.e. epignwsij doctrine. Gnwsij doctrine has no application. This is the major principle of divine guidance in doing the will of God.

4. There are three categories of counseling from the standpoint of Bible doctrine. The first is perception and application of doctrine or the function of gate four of the divine dynasphere. Secondly, there is counseling through impersonal love. Impersonal love gives you the ability to face situations with people who are antagonistic, people who are seeking to destroy you, people who manifest the most heinous animosity, and handle the situation properly — the application of impersonal love. So counsel comes from the presence of impersonal love in your soul. As goes your impersonal love so goes your personal relationships in the human race. Thirdly, there is divine discipline, punishment from God. God constantly counsels the cosmic believer through punishment. This is called learning the hard way, and applying doctrine the hard way. This is a limited academic function.

Being counseled by another believer or a pastor does have hazards, and there are four hazards that you should understand before you run off and become the victim of someone else's counseling. It may be excellent advice, it may be poor advice. That is not the issue.

a. The believer who is counseling you is someone you admire, someone that you respect, but they may not be mature and they may give you wrong advice.

b. Such counseling demands the compromise of your privacy. The counselor may be a gossip. You were designed in salvation and being born again never to have to surrender your privacy under any circumstances. You must live your life as unto the Lord, that is the privacy of your priesthood.

c. The counselor may have some prejudice which destroys the objectivity of his advice. So prejudice can result in getting bad advice.

d. The believer being counseled may start leaning on the counselor and using him as a crutch, so that the counselor begins to live his life for him.

Notice: When we talk about counseling we are talking about personal problems. You have a right to go to the right professional people for financial counseling, for insurance counseling, for business counseling. So don't be stupid about this, we are talking about your personal problems, not categories in life where counseling is a professional function.

5. It should be noted from this verb, then, that the Lord counsels or advises but the Lord does not coerce. The Lord mandates but He does not coerce.

6. The believer must make his own decisions from his own free will and take the responsibility for his decisions.

7. No matter how one is deceived or how stupid a person might be in a given situation he must learn to blame himself, otherwise he cannot learn from his own mistakes. He made the decision because he wanted to do it that way, and therefore the believer loses ground spiritually every time he blames someone else for his wrong decisions, his mistakes, and his sins.

Next we have the aorist active infinitive of $\alpha\gamma\omicron\rho\alpha\zeta\omega$. This comes from an Attic Greek word $\alpha\gamma\omicron\rho\alpha$ which means the market place, and so it means to buy, to purchase, to invest. Here it is translated, "I counsel you to buy [purchase]." The ingressive aorist tense in which the action signified by the verb is contemplated at its beginning therefore denotes reentrance into the divine dynasphere and the function of doctrinal perception and the application of doctrine. The only way to stay there comes up in this counsel now: "I counsel you to buy [begin to buy]." You have to begin all over. If you stay in the cosmic system for any length of time you have forgotten what you have previously learned and you have to start all over. Once you have the filling of the Spirit you have objectivity or you have IQ for learning doctrine. Then you interlock with gate two, basic impersonal love, and you have your objectivity. You have to have impersonal love to learn doctrine. Impersonal love means that you do not emphasise the personality of the pastor, you emphasise the content of his message, and by so doing you remain objective. Then gate three is the enforced and genuine humility which adds up to one word: teachability. These three gates support the function of gate four coming up in buying gold — gate four with its perception of doctrine from your royal priesthood, gate four with its application of doctrine from your royal ambassadorship. So in the concept of buying gold we have to begin and we begin all over when we spend any length of time in the cosmic system and then finally rebound. So the ingressive aorist denotes entrance into the divine dynasphere and the beginning of doctrinal perception. If when you reenter the divine dynasphere you are negative toward doctrine then you will very quickly get right back into the cosmic system. But this is the road back. The active voice: the cosmic believer produces the action of the verb through reversion recovery, reentry into the divine dynasphere and the modus operandi of gate four, perception and application of doctrine. This is, of course, an infinitive of purpose.

Then, note, we buy from our Lord. The preposition $\pi\alpha\rho\alpha$ plus the ablative of $\epsilon\gamma\omega$, "buy from me." This is the ablative of ultimate source, The ultimate source of doctrine is the Lord Jesus Christ. In first Corinthians 2:16 doctrine is called the "mind of Christ." Then in presenting something of value, the accusative singular direct object from the noun $\chi\rho\upsilon\sigma\iota\omicron\nu$, which is not really gold. It is actually a diminutive from the word for gold which is $\chi\rho\upsilon\sigma\omicron\iota$, but we do not have $\chi\rho\upsilon\sigma\omicron\iota$ here. $\chi\rho\upsilon\sigma\iota\omicron\nu$ actually means something of value, made of gold, something that is actually manufactured from gold, coins or jewelry. So it doesn't refer to gold, it refers to something of value manufactured from gold. The diminutive refers therefore to Bible doctrine or what is manufactured from the mind of Christ. The diminutive $\chi\rho\upsilon\sigma\iota\omicron\nu$ emphasises the fact that Bible doctrine must always be number one in our scale of values and number one in the priorities of life, and that without it we are in a very hopeless situation.

Corrected translation: "I counsel you to buy from me gold," something of value manufactured out of gold. In this case it is analogous to Bible doctrine.

It just so happens that believers living in the cosmic system are off the gold standard! Cosmic believers have a false scale of values and have the wrong priorities of life. Bible doctrine is the coin of the realm for spiritual capitalism. The only way to advance to maturity and fulfill the plan of God for phase two is to take this advice: the perception of Bible doctrine.

With this we have a further description of the gold coming from the perfect passive participle of the verb purow, and it means to refine through heat. The intensive perfect tense, known also as the perfect of existing state, is the tense of the finished product. When special attention is directed toward the results of the action stress on the existing fact is intensified. In other words, the Greek has an emphatic method for presenting a fact or a condition. Therefore it can be translated close to the English word "refined". The active voice: Bible doctrine in the canon of scripture produces the action. The participle is circumstantial indicating the reality of the situation. The writing has been tested in every generation by great antagonism and yet Bible doctrine survives untarnished like gold. Gold cannot be tarnished; Bible doctrine cannot be tarnished or destroyed by opposition. The refining is done by a prepositional phrase, e)k [from] plus the ablative of pur [fire].

So the entire translation: "I counsel you to buy [perception of doctrine and application of doctrine] from me [our Lord Jesus Christ] gold [something of value] refined by fire [the concept of inspiration and canonicity]".

Principle

1. By burning and heating gold in the refining process the gold is melted and purified by skimming of the slag. The skinning off of the slag is the skimming off of false doctrine. This is an illustration, then, of the purity of doctrine, the purity of Bible truth. There is no dross, there is nothing false.
2. The purchasing of gold is analogous to your function as a believer at gate four of the divine dynasphere. Spiritual wealth comes from the accumulation and investment of spiritual capital, and your accumulation and investment of spiritual capital is your perception and application of Bible doctrine.
3. The accumulation of spiritual wealth can be translated into spiritual terms, the daily perception of doctrine inside the divine dynasphere, the consistent application of doctrine where necessary.
4. The investment of gold or Bible doctrine or spiritual wealth is the application of that perceived doctrine to experience. In other words, the principle: you cannot apply what you do not know. Ignorance can make no application of doctrine. Cognisance is necessary.

5. Doctrine only becomes personal capital through perception. That doctrine or capital or gold can only be invested through personal application of that doctrine — gate four. To accumulate capital you have the daily perception of doctrine; to invest that capital you have the application of doctrine.

6. The refining process should also be noted — refined by fire. God the Holy Spirit purifies the Word in the original languages of scripture through the mechanics of inspiration. This demands accurate teaching from the pastor and one of the things that should frighten every pastor: he is personally responsible to the Lord for being accurate. The pastor is the banker, he provides capital for investment. The banker must not provide counterfeit currency, he must provide the pure gold of Bible doctrine, that which has been purified and refined by God the Holy Spirit in the formation of the canon of scripture through the mechanics of plenary, verbal inspiration. Refined gold or pure Bible doctrine is the basis for both divine guidance and the daily dynamics of decision in your life.

“I counsel you to buy [perception of doctrine at gate four and it’s application] gold [something of value, Bible doctrine] from me [Jesus Christ] refined by fire [inspiration and canonicity].”

We find gold or pure doctrine is the basis for all divine guidance in life, and people are constantly seeking to find out what the Lord’s will is in a given situation. The problem with trying to explain it to people is that they do not have a basis for understanding the Lord’s will in a given situation simply because they cannot encompass it in a doctrinal area. So we must stop long enough to see that in guiding yourself and knowing the Lord’s will you must have a sphere in which to operate. Therefore we have the principle of divine guidance. How can you know God’s will in a given situation if you do not know the principles by which God functions in your life.

Divine guidance is the doctrine of determining the will of God for your life, and divine guidance is the communication of the divine will through divine revelation. So obviously we go right back to that gold we are supposed to buy which is the perception of Bible doctrine. Today divine revelation is confined to the canon of scripture. In the ancient world it included direct revelation from God through dreams, visions, dialogues and other means. These are not open today. God does communicate to us outside of the Word, we have studied that principle under the doctrine of divine discipline. Often punishment from God is a system of teaching but, of course, a limited agenda. Hence the only classification for knowing what the will of God is is to understand the principles we will note briefly.

First of all, in dealing with the subject, What is the will of God for your life? You must realise two things: first of all you have certain things in common for other believers. In other words, God often has a will for all believers. Secondly, God has a will or a plan for you as an individual. For example, God’s will for your life is residence and function inside the divine dynasphere but that is God’s will for everyone’s life, so you are not alone there. But suppose you are having domestic problems. What is God’s will for me in a given domestic problem situation? How should I handle it? Well that isn't the same God's will as single people, they are not having that problem. So we have to look at the problem two ways: what is God's will for all of us, and then what is God's will for me in a given situation — in business, in social life, in domestic life, in spiritual life, in relationship with people and with adverse situations, in relationship with prosperous situations.

There are three categories of God's will which exist in history. First there is the sovereign will of God. The will of God must be consistent with His divine attributes and His personality because God cannot compromise His essence. God is a person, His personality connotes self-determination and self-consciousness. God recognises Himself as a person and as such He thinks, He decides, and above all God always acts rationally. God's actions are never irrational or irresponsible so you can conclude that any time you are getting into something where your actions are irrational or irresponsible, that's not God's will for your personal life.

The sovereignty or will of God is manifest in the decrees of God, the giant computer which we have studied in some detail. We have noted how there are three categories of divine knowledge. God's knowledge of Himself and the other members of the Godhead, the Trinity. That is one type of knowledge that is always consistent. We have studied it first of all as perfect subjective knowledge, for example the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ about Himself from eternity past. And then perfect objective knowledge, His knowledge about God the Father and God the Holy Spirit.

A second aspect is called omniscience. Omniscience takes cognisance of everything that every creature will ever do — angelic creatures, human creatures, all kinds of creatures. God knew billions of years ago in the infinity of eternity past every thought, every motive, every decision, and every action that you and I would ever have. And He entered that into the computer of divine decrees. He also knew the alternatives, the potential activities, and the fact that we rejected them. We could have gone to another city, we could have married a different person, we could have gone to a different school, we could have done this or that. Omniscience takes both the potential and the real of history, and He knows both. Now, only what actually happens was entered into the computer of divine decrees so that the printout is what we call history. From the standpoint of theology we have studied the printout as being election, foreknowledge, predestination, and so on. Omniscience also knows the potential that did not happen and God can tell you in eternity past what would have happened if you had a choice, if you had married someone else, if you had gone to a different school, etc.

Then, of course, foreknowledge of God is one of the printouts. God does not foreknow anything until it is first decreed is the doctrinal principle we have studied. The divine decrees are the giant computer and everything is programmed that will ever happen in history and it's relationship with everything else. So obviously God has set up certain principles whereby we can determine what His will is, see the alternatives, make our decision either for God or for Satan in the angelic conflict. Everything actually depends on God's will and nothing is certain apart from God's will.

We have also seen the permissive will of God as well as the directive will of God. The directive will of God: we know what it is and we fail to do it. Then we go into the permissive will of God. The permissive will of God says simply this: it is the application of logistical grace. What is the will of God? He has a directive will. There is only one way and that is God's way. But we have free will and therefore we may not want to go God's way, so there is the permissive will of God. Basically the difference between the direct will of God and the permissive will of God is the fact that even though we do not do God's will He permits us to stay alive. He continues to provide logistical grace. Balaam was the great illustration of this. God told Balaam not to go to try to curse Israel but Balaam finally went anyway and when he did he immediately came under the category of permissive will of God.

There are certain things that we do that God overrules. When we are in the permissive will of God as believers it looks like this. The directive will of God is your function in the divine dynasphere; the permissive will of God is your function in the cosmic system. But there are certain things that believers do in the cosmic system and God will not permit them. He will not permit the destruction of Israel, for example. So we take believers who want to destroy Israel and they are in the cosmic system — Satan is the father of anti-Semitism — and when they try to do it God will not permit it. God punishes Israel, they are His people, He has a right to punish them, but e doesn't expect anything from us in that regard. So in the permissive will of God you are still alive but you are in the cosmic system.

Then there is the overruling will of God. There are certain things that God protects. Suppose that you are a believer here and you want to get revenge. You hate some believer and there is no impersonal love, no virtue in your life. You want to get revenge and you want to destroy a believer who is advancing from gate four to gate eight of the divine dynasphere. So you try your best to eliminate them, destroy them, cut them down with gossip, maligning, etc. But God overrules and He will not permit that because He is protecting this person in going from gate four to gate eight. That is what we call the overruling will of God.

These are the three factors with which we work in knowing the will of God: the directive will of God, the permissive will of God, and the overruling will of God under which many believers function all of their lives. (The overruling will of God is that under which God permits them to live, to attack believers in the divine dynasphere, He keeps them alive sometimes to use them in momentum testing) We are either in the directive will of God living in the divine dynasphere or we are in the overruling will of God living in the cosmic system.

The believer who lives consistently in the divine dynasphere and advances to maturity contributes to the uptrend of history. The believer who lives in the cosmic system contributes to the downtrend of history. The believer living in the divine dynasphere is in the corrective will of God; the believer who lives in the cosmic system is in the permissive will of God. And then the believer who seeks to destroy the believer who is honouring the Lord and that believer he persues goes right on and is protected by God in the wall of fire area, that is the overruling will of God.

Let's look at it from the concept of historical trends. Manifest destiny is the origin of any national entity that becomes a client nation to God. First of all it starts with a landed aristocracy, very capable and responsible people who start the ball rolling. But eventually the landed aristocracy runs out of gas and the industrial complex takes over. Eventually in a client nation to God you must have the middle class of the industrial complex run the nation. So you have landed aristocracy, industrial complex living side by side, and the undeveloped frontier. It is impossible under the directive will of God for a client nation to be perpetuated with the landed aristocracy ruling. (Another principle: No nation can ever win a war against a successful industrial complex) Apart from the leadership of the middle class industrial complex the undeveloped frontier could never be absorbed. Apart from that leadership — the Protestant ethic is often how it is called in history — there could be no material prosperity, there could be no spiritual prosperity that would inevitably lead to the full function of a client nation to God, the full function being the sending out of missionaries.

There must be the three factors in manifest destiny: your landed aristocracy who always start the ball rolling and initiate certain things in establishment that must exist; your industrial complex middle class which inevitably must take over and the leadership must come from them; the undeveloped frontier which must be absorbed into the picture before you can have a client nation to God fulfilling client nation principles with regard to freedom, the privacy, the sacredness of property and human life and, therefore, evangelism, Bible teaching and the true function of missionary activity.

The academic concept of divine guidance is a bit different. This is the one we have in our passage which says: "I counsel you to buy from me gold refined by fire." This brings us to the academic principle of divine guidance, for in principle all divine guidance depends upon Bible doctrine in your soul, your function at gate four of the divine dynasphere. The perception of doctrine must precede the application of doctrine but it is perception plus application that finally leads to understanding the will of God in any given set of circumstances, any situation where you have to make a quick decision or have to make a difficult decision. So we have the principle of doctrine in the soul.

Psalm 32:8, "I will instruct you and teach you in the way which you should go; I will counsel you with my eye upon you". There is the principle of divine guidance, God doesn't do it without Bible doctrine.

Isaiah 58:11, "Therefore the Lord will continually guide you, by satisfying your soul in the scorched places [Bible doctrine], to give strength to your bones; therefore you will be like a watered garden [water of the Word], like a spring of water, whose waters do not deceive."

Proverbs 3:1-6, "My son do not forget my doctrine, but let your right lobe keep my principles; for length of days, and years of life, and prosperity, will add to you. Do not let grace and doctrine leave you; bind them around your neck; write them on the tablets of your right lobe [perception and application of doctrine]; so you will find grace and good understanding in the sight o f God and in the sight of man. Trust in the Lord with all of your right lobe, do not lean on your human understanding. In all your ways acknowledge him, and he will direct your paths.” The application of doctrine, of course, is the final issue in divine guidance.

The principle of the filling of the Spirit at gate one of the divine dynasphere is also involved. You cannot understand the will of God unless you are filled with the Spirit. This is another way of saying that if you are in the cosmic system then obviously you are under the principle of the permissive will of God, you are not in God’s directive will. Ephesians 5:14 gives us a wonderful concept here: “Therefore, he communicates, Wake up [learn to do the will of God] you sleeping ones [believers who are in the cosmic system] and get up from among the dead ones,” prolonged stay in the cosmic system means the sin unto death; “and Christ will shine on you,” an analogy to the fact that you can do the will of God. Therefore, beware that you walk accurately, not as unwise ones [no spiritual common sense] but as wise ones [application of doctrine to experience], constantly buying time [like buying gold has to do with the perception of doctrine and the application of it in doing the will of God], because the days are evil,” this is the day when Satan rules the world and has a genius system, the cosmic system, for doing so; “Because of this, stop being ignorant,” you cannot do the will of God in ignorance; “but constantly and thoroughly understand the will [the policy, the purpose] of God.”

So divine guidance, then, falls into two concepts: the filling of the Spirit interlocking with gate four, perception and application of doctrine, and both are necessary to do the will of God on the broad scale of your life or to do it on the individual problem situation as these things arise in your life.

There is then a third principle, the principle of spiritual growth. The more you know about doctrine the more you grow, the more you grow the more you know the will of God. That is why 2 Peter 3:18 says: “But grow by means of grace and knowledge of our Lord and saviour, Jesus Christ. To him be the glory both now” — “now” means you can do the will of God now and you can glorify God now; “and to the day of eternity,” that is the time of receiving the order of the morning star, the uniform of glory, the new order of knighthood, the wonderful principles related to the order of heraldry and chivalry bearing the coat of arms of our Lord, all of the things related to the eternal future and the judgment seat of Christ.

Mechanically there are certain things that are good in knowing the will of God and doing it, and certain things that are sometimes a hindrance. There is a place for guidance through prayer but it always is used by people who know a lot of doctrine and have a number of options open and want some additional wisdom. Guidance through prayer is the most overworked thing of all. The person who says, “I don’t know what we should do here, let’s pray about it” is the person who has lagged behind in learning doctrine, because divine guidance is really based on the principle of seeing an issue, relating that issue to the doctrine and the principles in your soul, and making a decision. It doesn’t call for prayer. Most people who say, “Let’s pray about it” are people who are in the cosmic system.

Divine guidance and making decisions according to the will of God require thinking, thinking related to the reality of doctrine and therefore common sense. There are three categories of doctrine: #1, the laws of divine establishment; #2, the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; #3, Bible doctrine for the believer. Now the problem is that most common sense principles are related to the laws of divine establishment and other principles are related to Bible doctrine. So between the laws of divine establishment and Bible doctrine we should know the will of God for any situation. For the unbeliever the will of God is very simple: category #2 doctrine, the gospel. So guidance from thinking becomes a great issue: guidance through perception of doctrine, guidance through application of doctrine. Sometimes, if your heart is in the right place when you want to do the will of God, God will provide a valley for you to run down. We call that “providential circumstances.” Guidance through the ministry of the Word and the function of the Holy Spirit is the basic system.

One other thing: no one is ever going to do the will of God without gate three. All good decisions in life are made from either enforced or genuine humility. You cannot make decisions in arrogance that are the will of God — ever. And, furthermore, we have already studied gate two as the base for making application. So the first four gates of the divine dynasphere are the key to divine guidance.

So far in our verse we have: “I counsel you to buy from me gold refined by fire,” the greatest purchasing power in the world belongs to Bible doctrine. Therefore, the purpose clause that follows. Next we have the conjunction i(na, translated “that” or “in order that.” I(na plus the subjunctive mood introduces a purpose clause. What is the purpose here? The aorist active subjunctive of the verb ploutew, “in order that you may become rich.” There is a purpose here: wealth, spiritual wealth. The aorist tense is the ingressive aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb at it’s beginning. It denotes entrance into a state or a condition whereby there is going to be great prosperity as a result. It is recovery from the cosmic system, reentry into the divine dynasphere, continuing one’s momentum at gate four, moving to gate eight, the point of spiritual wealth. Prosperity is actually perhaps a better word here, “in order that you may become prosperous.” Here we have the connotation of spiritual prosperity. Spiritual prosperity does lead to material prosperity but God gives you the type of material prosperity that is befitting your situation in life. It may be promotion, it may be money, it may be property, it may be success in some field or profession. So the ingressive aorist simply indicates you are now on the right track again because you have rebounded, because you have left the cosmic system, because you have reentered the divine dynasphere which is the only place where the plan of God can be executed. The active voice: the believer who is positive to doctrine and who rebounds and who therefore lives in the divine dynasphere produces the action of the verb. He gains capital and purchasing power from his perception of doctrine at gate four. He becomes rich spiritually, the advance to supergrace status with it’s six categories of blessing. The subjunctive mood: this is the concept of the potential subjunctive. Spiritual wealth, advance to maturity, is a potential. It depends on your daily decisions, it depends upon your priorities. Therefore the potential subjunctive implies a future reference and is qualified by the element of contingency.

We have, therefore, the first half of the verse sounding like this: "I counsel you to buy from me gold [Bible doctrine] refined by fire, in order that you may become prosperous [spiritual wealth]." From this, then, comes a motivational and a functional virtue. It begins with the connective use of the conjunction kai, "and." It is followed by the direct object of the verb implied and is composed of two words, the accusative neuter plural from leukoj, which means "white," and i(mation which has to do with clothing, "white clothing." The implied verb is "to wear," to wear white clothing, and this is a reference again to the uniform of honour. It refers to the motivational and functional virtue developed inside the divine dynasphere. The uniform of honour is invisible, it is worn in the soul. It is worn by those believers whose residence and function is advancing to gate eight of the divine dynasphere. They are passing the momentum tests, they are accelerating their momentum, they are moving to the place of glorification of the Lord Jesus Christ. At the judgment seat of Christ the uniform of honour will be replaced by something that is visible, a translucent uniform of light worn over the resurrection body.

During the Church Age the historical impact of the mature believer is anonymous and invisible; yet it is a very real principle of blessing by association. All blessing that comes to this nation comes from believers who advance to maturity. This is the basis of our prosperity, this is the basis of our blessing. But these believers are anonymous heroes, they are not found on the pages of the textbooks of history. And while not recorded in any historical textbook the mature believer is the anonymous hero of the Church Age, but his anonymous status will be changed at the judgment seat of Christ. The court of heaven will evaluate his life on earth under terms of historical impact. And during the Tribulation he will receive certain decorations and honours, certain crowns. Higher than the crowns he will receive the order of the morning star, he will receive the uniform of glory which will distinguish him from other believers in eternity by the translucent light which covers his resurrection body. He will receive the new order of knighthood and this new order of knighthood will be actually registered in the book of life. He will also be presented at the court of heaven. While other believers will be cooling their heels in some other part of heaven he will actually be presented at court. He will receive a coat of arms which he will bear forever. He will then come back with our Lord Jesus Christ, be present at His coronation, will be present at the wedding supper, and will then be presented to the entire world as a ruler of some Gentile nation for one thousand years. So the anonymous hero of the Church Age will become the public hero of the Millennium.

Beginning, then, at the judgment seat of Christ the invisible historical impact of the mature believer, the one who now wears the uniform of honour, will become known by the uniform of glory. He will become known first of all to the royal family of God at the judgment seat of Christ, then to the elect angels in the court of heaven while the Tribulation is occurring on earth, then to the entire world in the Millennial reign of Christ. Then he will have special privileges which he will have for all eternity. So wearing the uniform of honour means the construction of the edification of the edification complex of the soul, it means the production of both motivating and functional virtue. It means great happiness in life, it means great capacity for life, it means blessing and, according to this context, it means solving your own problems, being able to make your own decisions for or against the plan of God.

The most subtle and the most difficult of all tests in the momentum field is the prosperity test number eight. People who can handle adversity very well and who know how to apply the rationales from the second stage of the faith-rest drill, or know how to utilise the base of impersonal love from application of doctrine, and who have passed the old sin nature test, people testing, thought testing, system testing, the test of cosmic one, the test of cosmic two, and the adversity test, inevitably stumble when it comes to prosperity. The most difficult thing in the world is to be able to handle prosperity properly, to maintain your same priorities to handle the problems that occur.

Prosperity is very subtle in its attack upon the human being because inevitably he is so enthusiastic about his newly found promotion or success, or wealth, or acclaim, or recognition or fame, that almost automatically he begins to assign a secondary role to his perception of Bible doctrine and his function in the divine dynasphere. And as goes the believer so goes the client nation to God, and inevitably these believers let down the client nation as well as bringing on themselves tremendous difficulties. This was the problem with the Laodicean church. The Laodiceans did not pass the prosperity test. Many of them in business had become very wealthy, many of them were now highly successful in professional fields. They now were enjoying in a city of 600,000 people all of the fantastic blessings of social prosperity, sexual prosperity, material prosperity. They were receiving the applause and the acclaim of people all around them, society in general, and as a result they lost their priorities.

The problem is stated for us as we have studied it in detail in verse 17, “because you say, quote: I am rich, in fact I have become very wealthy [the prosperity test], and I have need of nothing [flunking the prosperity test].” The prosperity test causes people to fail to apply doctrine. We have already seen that this is one of the major problems in the spiritual life. Learning doctrine is one thing, applying it is something else. No one can apply doctrine apart from the divine dynasphere, apart from the base of impersonal love, and apart from the second stage of the faith-rest drill, the use of the rationales. It is much easier to apply doctrine in adversity than in prosperity. One of the first things that is neglected in prosperity is Bible doctrine.

“in fact you do not know,” the greatest problem in life is ignorance, not having all the facts for perception, not having all of the facts for application; “you do not know that you are miserable,” when you do not know that you are miserable, that is the worst kind of unhappiness. No capacity for prosperity, and no capacity for prosperity comes from living in the cosmic system. It comes from gate one, arrogance, preoccupation with self, and the inevitable results — jealousy, bitterness, vindictiveness, loss therefore of any inner beauty, loss of impersonal love which is the great key to capacity. We have already seen that capacity for prosperity must precede prosperity. To have prosperity without capacity is to be unhappy and to be miserable. And so, “you do not know that you are miserable,” no capacity for prosperity when living in the cosmic system; “and despicable,” insignificant, pitiful, no happiness from prosperity when living in the cosmic system; “and impotent,” meaning poor, beggarly, miserable, connoting spiritual poverty in the cosmic system; “and blind” no perception of doctrine when involved in the cosmic system; “and naked,” no uniform of honour when living in the cosmic system.

In verse 18 we had to stop and take a look at the evils of counseling. Counseling is one of the worst things that can ever happen to you. Unless it is a medical function, not a spiritual function, you do not need counseling, you need doctrine. You need to learn to counsel yourself. This means that this counseling must come from doctrine that you have learned. Every believer must make his own decisions and Bible doctrine perceived gives him the options for good decisions which glorify the Lord and provide both historical impact and personal prosperity. The ideal counselor and adviser comes from your own soul in which Bible doctrine resides, and we have noted that this is a major principle in divine guidance, knowing the will of God. You are wasting your time in leaning on someone else for spiritual advice. You were never designed to be counseled, you were designed to learn Bible doctrine and counsel yourself.

The white clothes in verse 18 refer to the uniform of honour which is both motivational and functional virtue developed from doctrine in the soul. The doctrine in your soul is not only applied to given situations, it is applied actually to circumstances and people. It is applied to self in counseling; it is applied to God in personal love. Doctrine in your soul; personal love for God. Your relationship with God is your capacity for life. It is applied to self, you do all of your own counseling; it is applied to circumstances and people, the application of doctrine whereby you can meet any of the testiness of this life.

We are now ready for the conjunction in which introduces a purpose clause. The construction of the edification complex of the soul and the production of honour, virtue and integrity inside of the divine dynasphere, plus the concept of the invisible uniform, leads to a purpose clause, in plus the subjunctive, "in order that." The greatest manifestation of virtue and integrity is the function of impersonal love. It is a sign of having capacity for life, it is a sign of being spiritually self-sustaining. You are never spiritually self-sustaining until you have enough doctrine in your soul to apply it to God who is invisible, and you have a very deep personal love for God which is motivating virtue. You also apply that same Bible doctrine to yourself, you do not go to others for counseling, you do not tell your private business to others, you do your own counseling. Then, of course, it is applied to circumstances and people which is functional virtue. This is being spiritually self-sustaining. This is not only perception of doctrine but application of doctrine inside of the divine dynasphere. Therefore the positive picture of being spiritually self-sustaining is found in the aorist middle subjunctive of the verb periballw, "in order that you may clothe yourself." The aorist tense is the constative aorist for a fact or action extended over a period of time, phase two of the believer in this life. This use of the aorist contemplates the action of the verb in it's entirety. It takes residence and function inside the divine dynasphere and gathers it up into a single entirety. The middle voice: the direct middle refers to the results of the action directly to the agent with reflexive force, therefore translated "in order that you may clothe yourself." The subjunctive mood is potential and implies a future reference and indicates the qualification based on contingency. Contingency is not making a one-shot decision. You have to be consistent. This is what is wrong with the Christian life: everyone wants inspiration, no one wants to make daily decisions. You don't want to do something you have to do daily, it is like exercise, you work out for awhile and you get lazy. You break your routine and stop it. This is much worse, of course, because it destroys you spiritually.

So you have to constantly make decisions so that your priorities are never challenged, doctrine first. Result: you have love of God. There is where you start to become spiritually self-sustaining. There is your capacity for happiness and your capacity for life. Your objective is gate eight of the divine dynasphere, the place of spiritual maturity, the ultimate. That is where we are all going if we stay with it, but you don't get there by making one decision. You get there by making thousands of decisions over a period of time, and right decisions.

So the element of contingency which is resident in this particular subjunctive mood actually refers to a residence, residence in the divine dynasphere and all the decisions it takes to stay there or to get back there, depending upon your situation. The subjunctive plus the conjunction i(na therefore introduces the purpose clause. The translation implies a positive purpose related to the function of your volition. Again, good decisions are daily decisions related to life in the divine dynasphere and perception of Bible doctrine. Good decisions provide options for greater decisions; bad decisions are daily decisions related to involvement and function in the cosmic system. Bad decisions for the believer destroy his options, terminate his possibilities for any real blessing from God, destroy his capacity, and often God spans him, disciplines him, by giving him prosperity. Remember, there are two ways you can learn. You can learn from doctrine the easy way or you can learn from divine discipline the hard way. Divine discipline is designed by God to teach you but it only has a limited lesson, to teach you to rebound, to teach you to avoid the cosmic system, to teach you to get back in the divine dynasphere and stay there. But it is a terrible way to learn and if you do not learn eventually you are going out under the sin unto death, and it will be horrible.

Death is not the end of the results from bad decisions because they actually overflow into the judgment seat of Christ, embarrassment and being ashamed. And then imagine, spending all eternity wondering why you don't have a uniform of glory, the uniform of translucent light that covers the resurrection body; and why you can't go into the gazebo in the garden where the big parties are in heaven, and why you can't go into the new Jerusalem suspended above the earth.

If you are really going to make it you had better start now, because you are not going to be ruling anything for a thousand years, just those who make it; just those who keep on making the right decisions.

Now we go to the negative side of that same purpose clause. That is because we have two words first, kai meaning "and," and then the negative that goes with the subjunctive, mh. Kai mh, "and not." Then with this we have a nominative singular subject, a)isxunh, a word which means shame and embarrassment. With the generic use of the definite article this classifies this as the shame related to the judgment seat of Christ. "Nakedness" in the passage refers to no uniform of honour in time; "shame" refers to how you will feel at the judgment seat of Christ. Nakedness is used in this passage not for literal nakedness or lack of clothing, it is used for a spiritual condition. It means you are not wearing the uniform of honour. And it means simply this: if you are in the divine dynasphere and advancing from gate four to gate eight then you are going to be wearing the uniform of honour. But if you are in the cosmic system, functioning at cosmic one and cosmic two, then you are “naked.” Spiritual nakedness is something to be ashamed of. If you are spiritually naked you are going to be ashamed. No one is more confused than a believer who is negative toward consistent doctrinal teaching.

Then we have a possessive genitive as well as a genitive of description from the noun gumnothj, and it doesn't simply mean nakedness, it is disgraceful nakedness; “and the shame of your disgraceful nakedness,” the disgraceful nakedness describes the cosmic believer in time. The shame describes what happens to him at the judgment seat of Christ where he is going to be embarrassed and ashamed. All of the nakedness of his soul in the cosmic system is going to be revealed. And then we have the aorist passive subjunctive of fanerow, “may not be revealed.” In other words, if you don't get with doctrine then you are going to have the alternative, the shame of your disgraceful nakedness revealed. You have a choice.

It says in verse 17 it says that the Laodiceans were blind spiritually. Blind people don't know where they are going, they can't see, they have to depend on someone else. If you have to depend on someone else for your spiritual life then you are blind. If someone else has to counsel you then you are blind. All of this is a sign of cosmic involvement.

So an offering is made here, “and eyesalve,” kollurion, a famous medicine, an eyesalve invented in Laodicea. Now in order that you might appreciate the fact “that the shame of your nakedness be not revealed at the judgment seat of Christ,” the culminative aorist views that judgment seat of Christ in it's entirety and emphasises the existing results. The believer who is consistent in advancing to maturity, the believer who is consistent in the perception of Bible doctrine, will never have any regrets forever and ever and ever. Eternity is a long time; we are here for just a short time.

So we have the final solution in the eyesalve and we have a verb here to tell what you do with it. The aorist active infinitive of e)gxriw, and it means to rub it in, “and eyesalve to rub in.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in it's entirety. It refers to alertness in historical trends extended over a period of time. In other words, “eyesalve” produces the action of the verb and this eyesalve represents the ability of doctrine in your soul to understand historical trends, to understand what is happening in this country now, what is happening in the Middle East, what is happening in Europe, what is happening throughout the world. So Bible doctrine does another thing for us. As members of the royal family of God it is eyesalve. We can see and understand contemporary history.

“to rub in your eyes,” the accusative plural direct object from o)fthalmoj, which means “eyes.” Rubbing it in your eyes is the understanding of historical trends, you are no longer blind as to what is happening in history.

The Laodiceans had no capacity for love, for life, for prosperity, or for happiness. They were living in the cosmic system and life in the cosmic system destroys every blessing that God brings your way. And the regrets are the disgrace, the ashamedness which comes at the judgment seat of Christ. Like I John 2:28, “And now, dear children, keep on residing in it [the divine dynasphere]; that if he should appear [the Rapture], we might have confidence, and might not be put to shame by him at his coming.” The embarrassment of being put to shame belongs to the cosmic believer who often has, as the Laodiceans, great capacity for life missing. The prosperity is there, the capacity is not. Capacity must precede prosperity, and so the tragedy of these people in our context.

As we come to the end of verse eighteen we note once again that at Laodicea there was a medical centre. And one of the things that had been discovered was one of the wonderful Phrygian powders from which eyesalve was manufactured. It did a fantastic job of helping people with eye problems in the ancient world. It's exact nature we do not know but it's success was well attested in the Roman world. We have in the Greek of verse 18 the word egkriw which means to rub in, to anoint. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in it's entirety. It refers as far as we are concerned not to literally rubbing in a medicine but to alertness with regard to historical trends in the time in which we live. The active voice: The kollurion produces the action of the verb, and this eyesalve represents the subject of historical trends during the Church Age. The infinitive of purpose indicates that it is imperative that we as believers understand the historical circumstances in which we live. The accusative plural direct object from ophthalmoj gives us the word for eyes in the Greek — “and eyesalve to run in your eyes,” meaning to understand historical trends. That is brought out in the final purpose clause, ina plus the perfect active subjunctive of blepw. The present active infinitive of blepw is the actual verb to see. We translate this, “in order that you may keep seeing,” seeing in the sense of being able to understand historical trends. The progressive present tense is for action in the state of persistence, therefore present linear aktionsart. There never must be a time in your life when you do not understand historical trends and relate them properly to doctrine so that you are not discouraged, so that you do not fall apart, and so that you do not become an arrogant crusader, for the solutions to the problems of life are not found in arrogant crusading of any kind, they are found in recruiting for the pivot of mature believers. The subjunctive mood is the potential subjunctive qualified by the element of contingency — the understand and application of historical trends. Too many believers are involved in some form of social action. Too many believers are spending their lives in the cosmic system trying to straighten out this world which will not be straightened out by them under any circumstances. The only hope and the only blessing and the only historical impact of the believer comes from his residence and function in the divine dynasphere, his maximum perception of Bible doctrine, his formation of the pivot from which the Lord blesses the client nation.

Translation of the verse: “I counsel you to buy from me gold [perception of Bible doctrine] refined by fire [the doctrines of inspiration and canonicity], in order that you may become rich; and wear white clothes [the invisible uniform of honour], that you may clothe yourselves [through residence and function in the divine dynasphere], and that the shame of your disgraceful nakedness [believer living in the cosmic system] may not be revealed [at the judgment seat of Christ]; and to buy eyesalve [analogous to the doctrine of historical trends] to rub in your eyes [perception of historical trends], in order that you may keep on seeing.”

Buying gold is the perception of Bible doctrine inside the divine dynasphere, the basis for advancing to spiritual maturity and resultant spiritual prosperity as well as material prosperity in some form. The wearing of white clothes is the uniform of honour, the fulfillment of both motivating and functional virtue. Motivating virtue is the function of the royal priesthood inside the divine dynasphere. It is directed toward God. All motivating virtue is directed toward God whether it is worship or morality directed toward man and circumstances. Personal love is the greatest of the motivating virtues directed toward God. It's counterpart is the functional virtue, impersonal love directed toward man, the treating of man in perfect honour and in virtue. The concept of confidence in God is a motivating virtue, and it's counterpart is courage toward man as the functional virtue. So always in view here: motivational virtues must precede functional virtues just as capacity for prosperity and blessing must actually precede the blessing.

Then we have the rubbing in of the eyesalve which is our understanding of the doctrine of historical trends. We will stop long enough to review some of the concepts that are found in the eyesalve, concepts dealing with historical trends. We have seen in some detail that the Church Age is a dead spot as far as prophecy is concerned. There was a great deal of prophecy in the Old Testament about many things, and when our Lord Jesus Christ came in the flesh the actual prophecies of the first advent were fulfilled in detail. Once our Lord was seated at the right hand of the Father and had received His third royal patent then the dispensation of Israel came to a close very shortly thereafter and the Church Age began.

The Church Age is a time of no prophecy, it is the time of rest from prophecy. The Church Age is the dispensation of historical trends. The next prophecy is the resurrection or the Rapture of the Church, the subject of Revelation chapters four and five. Chapter four begins with the Rapture of the Church and then everything is fulfilled on a prophetic basis. So the Church Age is located between the two greatest prophetic periods of all human history. The first prophetic period has been fulfilled in relationship to the first advent of our Lord Jesus Christ, all of the things that are entailed in the first advent.

The Church Age is the time of the calling out of a royal family. Our Lord Jesus Christ did not have a royal family for His third royal patent. For His first royal patent He had God the Father and God the Holy Spirit. His title under His first royal patent is Son of God. For His second royal patent He had the dynasty of David. This is the royalty into which He was born and His title is Son of David. But for His third royal patent there was no royal family and therefore the Church Age is the time of the calling out of the royal family. It is also a time of dispensation of no prophecy, only a time of historical trends, the next prophetic event being the resurrection of the Church. Needless to say the dispensation of no prophecy is terminated with a prophecy, the Rapture or the resurrection of the Church.

Therefore the book of Revelation which we are studying becomes a textbook of world history, world history as related to our Lord Jesus Christ and His third royal patent. It starts at AD 96 with the apostle John on the Isle of Patmos and it terminates with the destruction of the universe and the creation of new heavens and new earth and a new Jerusalem. Of the two categories of world history one is now in the process — historical trends. The second category is prophetic and we will study it at a future time. Therefore, of course, the divine counsel to learn historical trends is always mandated, “rub eyesalve in your eyes in order that you may keep on seeing.” This is the purpose for studying historical trends.

We have already noted some of them.

1. Even though history is the history of man’s thoughts, decisions, actions, motivations, it is Jesus Christ who controls history. There are two sources of judgment in history: the sovereign decisions of Jesus Christ and the erroneous decisions of mankind. The emphasis of historical trends is on the erroneous decisions of mankind.

2. Therefore, as goes the believer in his decisions so goes the historical trend at any given point of the Church Age. Residence and function in the divine dynasphere means historical uptrend, whereas involvement in the cosmic system means historical downtrend. We as members of the royal family of God and a kingdom of priests have therefore a tremendous responsibility to the human race. We have the responsibility of advancing to maturity.

3. People individually and collectively are the products of their own decisions. In other words, decisions create environment, not environment decisions. There are no tragedies in history, there are only historical disasters. These disasters are not tragedies since both individuals and nations are the products of their own decisions. The pattern of historical disaster begins with economic depression, moves both to social degeneracy and military disaster. In times of historical disaster the truly great people are the ones who run counter to the flow of traffic. In time of disaster people panic and they fall apart, and they all run in one direction. They try to hide, they think in terms of security, and they lose that keenness of making decisions. As a result they merely contribute to the downtrend in the historical situation.

Decisions are the great issue in life, and one that has been ignored in life by mankind in general. And it isn’t just one decision, it is the hundreds of decisions that you make, or thousands of decisions you make in a given period of time. So the fall of nations is not a tragedy, it is historical disaster. No nation ever falls apart from the accumulated wrong decisions of the people living in that nation. While we may be sympathetic with a nation and say, “What a tragedy,” the historical trend says not a tragedy, these people are the products of their own decisions. The pattern of historical disaster then begins with economic depression. It moves to the social degeneracy which is simply the manifestation of many wrong decisions by many people in a national entity. God often selects the most evil nation to administer discipline to the client nations so involved.

4. Individual subjectivity destroys national objectivity. People are merely the products of their own attitudes and as such the nation becomes the product of the attitudes of the people in that nation. Arrogant people result in an arrogant nation. Arrogant people or arrogant nations never see their own inconsistencies, only the inconsistencies of others. Jealous people and envious nations never see their own sins and the production of evil, they only see the sins and the production of evil of others. This is the normal pattern for arrogance and involvement in cosmic one.

Therefore always in historical trends many of the problems we see come from the demand for power, for the demand for power among human beings always exceeds the need for power among human beings. Under the laws of divine establishment or category one truth we have studied many times the various forms of legitimate authority in life. Legitimate authority is necessary so that each one of us might have his freedom and privacy, and that there might be the recognition of certain divine gifts — the sacredness of property, the sacredness of life. Therefore certain types of authority are necessary. But people who do not have authority and become arrogant seek to establish themselves as an authority and so the historical downtrend always includes the demand for power exceeding the need for power. The need for power is determined, then, by the laws of divine establishment which defines all legitimate authority in the civil realm. It also defines authority in the business realm. It defines authority in the spiritual realm and the professional realm. There is no area of life where authority does not exist. For example, when the authority of the coach is superseded by the demand for power by the players, then you have disaster. The demand for power, then, is always determined by some form of motivational evil in cosmic one and some functional evil in cosmic two. Legitimate power always functions within the context of legitimate authority delegated by God through the laws of divine establishment. That authority is defined for any category of life whether social life or business life or personal life, professional life, national life. Evil and its destructive power exists to the extent that cosmic arrogance exceeds the restraints of legitimate power and authority. This principle is true whether in a football game where the referee loses control, or a national entity where the government fails to protect the freedom, the privacy, the property, the life of its citizens; the local church where the pastor does not teach Bible doctrine, or in the home where parents have no control over their children. Since we are the products of our own decisions and self-determination rather than our own environment motivational and functional evil in the cosmic system can all be restrained through gate three of the divine dynasphere, which is enforced and genuine humility.

Historical trends, then, are related to the conflict between objective reality in life in the divine dynasphere versus subjective reality of life in the cosmic system. Believers are not only the products of their own decisions (not their environment) but the nation in which they reside is affected by their good or bad decisions. Good decisions relate to life in the divine dynasphere; bad decisions relate to life in the cosmic system. Arrogant groups of individuals or nations never see, then, the disastrous consequences of their cosmic involvement. For that reason, of course, there is nothing but trouble in the glen, as it were. The problems can obviously be corrected then by following the mandate at the end of verse 18. Eyesalve has to do with historical trends and the whole story of it as a doctrine — “Rub it in your eyes [perception of historical trends] in order that you may keep on seeing [the application of historical trends to the time in which we live].” And, of course, preoccupation with self to the exclusion of objective reality becomes the greatest blindness problem in life. As we saw at the end of verse 17 they were blind, they had no perception of doctrine, they had no concept of the cosmic system, they did not understand historical trends, they were merely contributing to historical downtrends. They were said to be blind and naked and therefore the clothing of one’s self is the development of virtue through perception of doctrine in verse 18. Anointing of the eyes with eyesalve “in order that you may see” is the understanding of historical trends and its application to circumstances.

There is no progress in the innovations of society unless it is backed by truth, and this is true in our personal lives. There is no progress spiritually unless we can apply doctrine to experience, the second stage of the faith-rest drill with its doctrinal rationales and, above all, the existence of impersonal love in the life, for it is impersonal love, love for all, that makes it possible to make right applications. Therefore innovation becomes a basis for expression of arrogance rather than advance or progress in life in science. Innovation without truth is historically disastrous while innovation without a system is destructive. Innovation without a system includes such things as modern art, religious cults, rock and hard music, weirdo poetry, everything from Gnosticism to socialism, communism to the welfare state; all these things are innovations, and innovation therefore becomes destructive. Nothing could be more destructive to the prosperity of this nation than the welfare state, than socialism, than communism. Innovation imposed on others without their consent runs the gamut from arrogance to tyranny.

Too often, then, history is the story of how the weak control the strong. Weak, insecure, irresponsible, thoughtless, arrogant people often (though not always) control procedure and function in people. In social life they do it, in cultural life, in business, in government, in churches. Through arrogant self-centredness and preoccupation with self the weak in society control and manipulate the strong. Weakness is characterised by one thing: arrogance.

The problem in Laodicea was the practical application base, not the academic application, those are the rationales. The practical application base is impersonal love. There is no application to life, to people, or to circumstances unless you impersonal love as a base. We have already seen how impersonal love has direction. In part of worship it goes toward God with personal love. Impersonal love is directed toward people in relationships; it is directed toward capacity. Without impersonal love you have no capacity for life, without impersonal love you have no capacity for personal love. Until you can handle all the people you cannot possibly handle one person or a few people you call friends. You have no application, no base for it. Impersonal love is not impersonal, it is the whole system of integrity and honour in your life. It is unconditional; it is directed toward all alike. The same courtesy you would give to someone you love, you would give to a stranger because you have virtue, integrity and honour. Impersonal love toward mankind therefore is the highest virtue directed toward man. Personal love toward mankind is only virtue-dependant. Impersonal love is always a virtue; personal love is no virtue at all. It may sound strange to you but your attitude toward strangers and your attitude toward enemies and people you do not like is the basis for having wonderful relationships in life with people. You can't have personal love without impersonal love, it is that simple. Impersonal love gives vigour to a population. We have lost our vigour in this country. Impersonal love is manufactured inside of the divine dynasphere.

While personal love is directed toward mankind in a selective way, emphasising the attractiveness of the object and related to a few, impersonal love is non-discriminating, emphasising virtue, honour and integrity toward all whether the object has animosity, is a stranger, or a friend. Impersonal love as a virtue directed toward all mankind can exist only in the soul. Whether the object is present or absent impersonal love goes right on and acts as a base. People can't apply in a practical way the principles of Christianity to their lives because they have no base, no way of applying, no channel by which the information in their soul goes out to those who live in your periphery.

Human personal love is weak and vulnerable to destruction through arrogance. Therefore it is virtue-dependant in its function perpetuation and reciprocation. God the Father invented the divine dynasphere as the only way to manufacture impersonal love, the system by which we make application of doctrine to experience. The existence of holiness in God as the subject is the model and the pattern for the existence of virtue in the believer who takes in doctrine consistently. Therefore the function of impersonal love is the sum total of the believer's honour, integrity and objectivity manufactured from all types of Bible doctrine. And so impersonal love becomes the major problem-solver in this life. The emphasis of impersonal love is always spiritual momentum and perception of doctrine. Impersonal love is always unconditional as far as any object is concerned — unprejudiced, tolerant, courteous, considerate, no matter how great the stress of antagonism. Therefore application depends on impersonal love. You cannot be the victim of gossip, maligning, unfair treatment, unjust treatment; you cannot be the victim of antagonism and actually handle it, unless you have impersonal love in your soul.

Inside the cosmic system any form of human love becomes hypocrisy, it becomes preoccupation with self, it becomes the function of the Narcissus syndrome. Since the object of impersonal love is the entire human race impersonal love must not only be virtuous but unconditional. Unconditional means no merit is assigned to the object. And, again, so many people are failing in their relationships of human love simply because they lack this impersonal love.

The bottom side of this base of impersonal love, the one which applies to people, has something we call sensitivity. How can you apply truth to people unless you are sensitive to people? Sensitivity is a system of alertness, alertness in the field of objectivity. Sensitivity is the impact of impersonal love expressed, then, in understanding others and in thoughtfulness for others. Sensitivity manifests itself in good manners, willingness to accommodate one's self to an individual or a group; and, of course, it means that you are going to be misunderstood, you are often going to be called weak and bullied, but that shouldn't bother you at all if you have the strong integrity of impersonal love.

Sensitivity, then, combines with the virtue of impersonal love and with the virtue of enforced and genuine humility to provide the best possible capacity for life, the capacity which is lacking in the Laodiceans. By way of contrast hypersensitivity is arrogance. The person who has impersonal love inside the divine dynasphere has great sensitivity to people. But the person in cosmic one is insensitive to people and preoccupied with self, and therefore becomes hypersensitive. Hypersensitivity is arrogant preoccupation with self, the subjective function of making a false issue out of one's self. Hypersensitive people always function under the demand syndrome and use a number of strategies to get their own way or to control their periphery. The obsession of self-importance, preoccupation with self to the exclusion of those around you is the trade mark of hypersensitivity. Hypersensitive people, of course, are always insensitive to the feelings of others. And, of course, hypersensitivity and impersonal love cannot coexist and therefore if people live, especially in cosmic one, and they go in through gate one and function there, they are never going to be able to apply one ounce of doctrine though they may know the whole realm of doctrine. There will be no application.

In Christianity in Laodicea there was a conflict in the sensitivity of virtue and the hypersensitivity of arrogance. Sensitivity represents functional virtue, impersonal love toward others; hypersensitivity represents the function of arrogance toward others. Therefore sensitivity versus hypersensitivity is one of the great battles in Christianity. Those who live in the divine dynasphere consistently are sensitive; those who live in the cosmic system are hypersensitive. In the angelic conflict stage of the Church Age the opposing forces are in one dynasphere or the other and one of the great battles to be fought every day is sensitivity versus hypersensitivity. Sensitivity is objective and humble; hypersensitivity is subjective and arrogant.

Just as there is a relationship between motivational and functional virtue, as a result of hypersensitivity there exists a relationship between motivational and functional evil. When confronted with obvious superiority the hypersensitive believer in the cosmic system seeks to destroy that superior person or rationalise his own pseudo-superiority. Thus he divorces himself from reality and intensifies his antagonisms. When confronted with obvious inferiority the hypersensitive believer becomes a bully and a tyrant and, again, he divorces himself from reality. This, of course, results in the destruction of society which results in the destruction of the client nation. And had Laodicea been the only source of support for the Roman empire the Roman empire would have gone down in AD 96. But such is not the case, and there were some people who were ready to learn in Laodicea.

Inside of many of your souls, though obviously not all, there is a tremendous mass of doctrine which we call from its Biblical phrase, e)pignwsij. You have learned that doctrine through residence and function in the divine dynasphere. The key is that when you learn doctrine at gate four you have to apply that doctrine, and the application of e)pignwsij to your life and experience falls into two basic categories. There is first of all academic application. Academic application of Bible doctrine to your life is to deal with all circumstances of life, not simply adverse circumstances, whereas practical application is designed to deal with all the people with whom you come into contact, good and bad. You cannot apply doctrine that you have learned as e)pignwsij to circumstances unless you have a base for doing so, and the base for applying e)pignwsij doctrine academically to circumstances is the second stage of the faith-rest drill with its rationales, the plan of God rationale, the essence of God rationale, the logistical grace rationale, all of the various rationales. And then in practical application you must also have a base, and this is the one that people don't understand. You cannot solve people problems for yourself unless you have the base of impersonal love.

Principle

1. The Church Age is not only the dispensation of no prophecy but the dispensation of historical trends without prophecy.
2. Only during the Church Age are historical trends related exclusively to the decisions made by believers in any given generation.
3. In all other dispensations historical trends are determined by prophecy.
4. This means that decisions of believers and other believers of other dispensations were programmed into the computer of divine decrees and the printout was prophecy. Prophecy determines historical trends in all other dispensations but the Church Age.
5. This is the only dispensation where eschatology does not determine historical trends; this is the only dispensation where the believer's decisions alone determine historical trends. In other words, your attitude toward Bible doctrine determines the historical trends in this generation. This means both decision and application, then, are the key to historical trends in the Church Age. Your decisions as a believer and your applications of doctrine or failure of application determines historical trends in the Church Age.

The most important base for decision and application is impersonal love, the virtue of the Church Age. This virtue compensates for any lack of equality in any given generation. Equality is always related to opportunity in the Christian life, and not the results. It is true that we have a moment of equality at the moment of salvation when forty things are given to each one of us and that is equality for the moment. But that is a temporary thing. We all, at that point, have equality of opportunity but from there on it is a matter of volition. The fact that you have equality of opportunity guarantees inequality of result. Some are going to be winners because they reside and function in the divine dynasphere and because they are consistent in the perception and application of Bible doctrine. Some are going to be losers. They had their chance at the point of salvation but they used their free will to fail.

This is the dispensation of no prophecy and it is the dispensation of equal opportunity among believers — opportunity only. At the moment of salvation we have the same opportunity as all other believers at the moment of salvation, but thereafter there is a vast difference and great inequalities exist because of failure to utilise logistical grace, or success in the utilisation of logistical grace.

When we talk about love, anticipating verse 19: "Those whom I love," people often think of love in terms of sex. Furthermore they glorify sex as a problem-solver and a happiness maker. But sex does not solve problems, it is for those who have already solved their problems. To fall in love without the capacity for love is the greatest single sociological disaster in life, and people who are constantly searching for an opposite number therefore stick their necks out and guarantee disaster. They put the cart before the horse. They have no capacity for love but they are constantly searching for someone to love. You can't have a relationship with a member of the opposite sex without having the capacity first and if you simply focus in on sex then sex doesn't solve any problems. Sex merely intensifies the problems you have. By this is meant there can be no personal love between a man and a woman unless each one possesses impersonal love — the capacity. Since sex is an expression of personal love between one man and one woman, obviously the blessing of category two love and sex depends upon the possession of virtue, honour, and integrity of impersonal love. In other words, capacity for love precedes blessing in love.

Capacity, of course, takes us back to impersonal love and it inserts virtue, honour and integrity in all human relationships. Those who try to solve their problems through sex intensify their problems. Sex is not a problem-solver but is an expression of capacity for love when there is impersonal love in the life. The principle is: capacity must precede any form of blessing or possible blessing. The real secret is to have the capacity first, then you enjoy the blessing. Otherwise you do not enjoy the blessing.

The concept itself leads us to the other side of the fence. We have been considering the concept of love and we have noted the basis for the Christian way of life as it relates to love. The Christian way of life is divided into two parts: visible and invisible. The invisible is the function of your royal priesthood directed toward God, and the problem with so many people in sex and in other human relationships — where the boss seems to be unfair, where people are unkind, etc. — is the fact that the only personal love that has virtue is directed toward God. And with personal love for God, which is responding to His love for us, then we have something that is fantastic. That must come first and that comes from the perception of doctrine at gate four, and that becomes motivating virtue in life. It becomes the only motive by which there can be happiness and blessing in this life. Then there is the visible function of the Christian way of life, the royal ambassadorship. This is directed toward people as the objects of love; but the virtue is in impersonal love, not personal love, because impersonal love has the virtue, honour and integrity and becomes the functional virtue. If you have love for God in a personal way from your perception of doctrine you will have impersonal love for people as the application of doctrine to experience. And it is the way you treat all people that will actually determine your ability to single out one individual of the opposite sex and treat them in magnificent personal love. But personal love is virtue-dependant.

Verse 19, motivation for recovery from the cosmic system. We start out with the accusative masculine plural from o(soj, a correlative relative pronoun. This relative pronoun of quantity and number combines with a conditional conjunction e)an, and the two words together form a simple idiom: "those whom." The indefinite pronoun expresses a substantive idea in a general sense as representing a category, that is o(soj. Hence, the indefinite pronoun expresses the category without specifying by name anyone in that category. The idiom is used to state a principle with regard to believers but to state the principle without naming names, not someone by name but a category.

The first encouraging thing is that these who have failed are loved by the Lord just as those who have succeeded, those who are winners. It is obvious that the Lord loves the winner, the one who advances to maturity; it is not obvious that the Lord loves the loser, but He does. This takes us right back to the concept of impersonal love, "I love you because of virtue, honour and integrity in my soul. I do not love you because you are attractive or unattractive, I love you because of who and what I am.” The pronoun here is speaking of God. It is the personal pronoun ego in the nominative, first person singular, referring to God the Father, God the Son and God the Holy Spirit at different times. Here it refers to God the Son who is the prince-ruler of the Church and the one who is dispensing logistical grace in this dispensation. Then we have the verb, the present active indicative of the verb filio. This is rather strange when you would expect amare which is generally used for impersonal love but the point is that if you have impersonal love directed toward all you are now qualified to have personal love directed toward a few. Here we are talking about the few in the sense of losers, believers who live in the cosmic system, believers who are Christians but not living the Christian way of life. This is not the word for impersonal love. Why do we have the verb for personal love? Well obviously it is a reference to divine personal love, and obviously God could not love losers unless God had virtue, honour, integrity, His perfect essence. And the reason that God can even love personally a loser is because of His magnificent essence. So we have a reference to divine personal love directed toward those who believe in Christ, those who possess God’s perfect righteousness, and while this is a personal love directed toward them it is based upon virtue — impersonal love. When God the Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, is the subject and you are a loser and He loves you personally, that should be motive enough to recover from the cosmic system. Therefore filio is used instead of the usual amare.

Translation so far: “Those whom [Church Age believers] I [the Lord Jesus Christ] love [personal love directed toward those who possess +R but are losers].”

Verse 19, “Those whom I love,” Church Age believers, royal family of God. The subject is the Lord Jesus Christ in His personal love directed toward the few who are believers. The reason for it we will note later.

There are three classifications of divine love. First of all there is God’s love for God; secondly, God’s love for man; thirdly, God’s love for His own policy. So when you think of the love of God you have to think of the object. God, for example, has a love for the other members of the Godhead and for His own perfect integrity. God also has a love for man and for His own policy. These three factors are the principles in the love of God. And they have to be classified.

God’s love for God is classified two ways. Each member of the Godhead loves His own perfect essence, His own attributes. That is called perfect subjective love. He also loves the essence of the attributes of the other members of the Godhead. That is called perfect objective love. However, we are not studying it at this moment since it is not pertinent to our verse. Our verse deals with God’s love for man which is classified into two categories: God’s impersonal love for all mankind, as manifest by the cross, and God’s personal love for those who possess His righteousness or those who are believers in Christ. The concept of God’s love for His policy is classified as an anthropathism in contrast to the other concepts or principles like God’s love for man direct. The anthropathism, “I love Jacob but I hate Esau,” is an illustration.

In classifying divine love toward man we have to look at it from the standpoint of the three phases of the plan of God. There is salvation or phase one. When you believe in the Lord Jesus Christ you receive forty things and the divine dynasphere. Then there is phase two, the believer in time beginning with his salvation and terminating with his departure from this life whether by physical death or the resurrection. Then there is phase three, the believer in eternity. Each one of these phases of the plan has the connotation of personal or impersonal love. Divine impersonal love is directed toward all, for example, in phase one or salvation. God loves the human race. Illustration: when Christ was on the cross He received all of the sins of the world, they were all imputed to Him and judged. Divine personal love, however, is directed only toward those who actually believe in Christ. At the cross Christ died for all and therefore the love of God for the human race is impersonal, emphasising the integrity of the subject.

But those who believe in Christ have that which makes it personal, they have the righteousness of God. So in the classification of phase one of salvation there is divine impersonal love directed toward the entire human race; there is divine personal love directed toward those who have the righteousness of God. And there are two categories of believers who have this righteousness: believers living in the divine dynasphere who are winners, and believers who are living in the cosmic system and are losers. So when God expresses His love He sometimes expresses it categorically to those who live in the divine dynasphere. In our passage He is going to express His personal love to those who are losers living in the cosmic system. All of us are blessed by God because of who and what God is. Divine personal love is directed toward the few, however, who advance to maturity. In going from gate four to gate eight the mature believer becomes the object of divine personal love, and the same thing is true in the third category of God's plan: phase three, the believer in eternity.

Our context is referring to divine personal love. We discovered that when we saw the verb filew, used for divine personal love and human personal love where man is the subject. We have seen also that agapaw is the verb used for impersonal love. So we are talking about God the Son as the subject and filew is used to indicate the personal love of the Lord, and therefore is directed toward the few, those believers who personally accept the Lord Jesus Christ as saviour under category one. Under category two it is advance to maturity. So obviously when we have filew we are simply looking at losers from the standpoint of the fact that while they are in cosmic one they still have God's righteousness, they haven't lost their salvation. While they are in cosmic two they still have God's righteousness, and that is the status quo of the Laodiceans under the phrase, "those whom I love." In this case it is personal love because losers have +R.

The present tense is a static present, it represents a condition as perpetually existing. Because of the imputation of +R at the point of salvation God personally loves every believer. Active voice: in this particular context God the Son, our Lord Jesus Christ, produces the action, and the indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of Bible doctrine. That is why you and I are alive. When we fail or when we succeed it makes no difference as far as His love is concerned, He still loves us with the same amount of infinite, eternal, and personal love.

The manifestation of this comes in the next verb, the present active indicative of the verb $\epsilon\lambda\epsilon\gamma\chi\omega$, and it means to convince, to convict, to point out something to someone, to bring to light or reality. It should be translated here, to reprimand or to reprove, "Those whom I love, I reprimand." The present tense is a customary present, it denotes that which habitually occurs when a believer becomes involved in the cosmic system and is a loser. Such a believer receives warning discipline as a means of motivating rebound. The active voice: God produces the action of the verb through the provision of warning discipline.

When it says, "I reprimand," it means after you through your own decisions, your own motives and your own actions have made a mess out of your life, and you have made yourself miserable and unhappy. Once you have done that it means that you have prolonged your stay in the cosmic system and somehow you have to be motivated to get out. You have to be taught the difference between man and animal. The animal has instinct; man has to be taught everything. The only time that man becomes instinctive is the time that man reverts to becoming an animal himself in his soul. He ignores the soul by the dominance of emotion. Here we have suffering but the suffering is brought about by your own volition. The only way that you can ever recover is to get out of the cosmic system and get back in the divine dynasphere, and that calls for a positive decision. But since, as you live a long time in the cosmic system, you become instinctive rather than rational. Remember that Christians in the cosmic system become sociopathic, psychopathic and neurotic. They have to be taught again, but they have to be motivated to rebound. Therefore warning discipline is brought about by the Lord, and that is exactly what we have here when it says, "I reprimand". The active voice: God produces the action of the verb by the provision of warning discipline to the believer in the cosmic system. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of warning discipline as a teaching instrument. It is to teach the believer, that is the whole purpose of divine discipline.

Warning discipline is only the beginning here, for we have a connective conjunction $\kappa\alpha\iota$ and then a third present active indicative. This time the verb is $\pi\alpha\iota\delta\epsilon\upsilon\omega$, a word which is taken from the word $\pi\alpha\iota\varsigma$ which means a child, and it means to train the child by punishment, by discipline. So the concept is to discipline with punishment. $\pi\alpha\iota\delta\epsilon\upsilon\omega$ is intensive discipline for the cosmic believer. The present tense is a customary present which habitually occurs when the cosmic believer through his own volition gets into the cosmic system and stays there — no rebound. The active voice: God produces the action of the verb by providing intensive discipline after warning discipline.

There are three stages to divine discipline.

Stage one is to alert the cosmic believer to his state of cosmic involvement and to give him the opportunity to rebound. This discipline is both coterminous and coexistent with self-induced misery from bad decisions. In other words, it is tacked on to bad decisions. The cosmic believer manufactures his own unhappiness through his own free will. So there is warning discipline to give him the motivation to rebound.

Stage two is intensive discipline, the intensification of divine discipline is administered by the justice of God to the cosmic believer who fails to heed the warning, "Behold I stand at the door and knock.” This is continued negative volition and the perpetuation of cosmic involvement without rebound. This category prepares the cosmic believer for the administration of the sin unto death.

Stage three is dying discipline, the sin unto death, in which the believer is removed from phase two. This discipline is manifest at the judgment seat of Christ through loss of any reward or decoration on the one hand, and there is embarrassment on the other.

The key to the maintenance of life in the divine dynasphere is the perpetual use of the rebound technique when necessary. Therefore, in the last half of this verse there is a mandate to rebound and the only way to recover life in the divine dynasphere. That mandate for recovery from the cosmic system follows. First of all there must be motivation and the motivation, of course, comes from hurting.

All of us have to learn some things the hard way. Your life can be very easily gauged by the number of things you have to learn the hard way. Those who have to be disciplined by God constantly, those who ignore warning discipline and go into intensive discipline, are stupid no matter how high their IQ. They are stupid because they have to learn everything the hard way. How do you know when you are stupid? It is $C+C=STUPIDITY$. Crisis warning discipline plus crisis intensive discipline equals stupidity. Your stupidity is measured by the number of crises in your life. This is not talking about testing, it is talking about God actually having to discipline you. As soon as the pain of divine discipline is removed then you fall right back into the same old way, that's dumb! And it is inexcusable because spiritual IQ is not measured in terms of human IQ.

People have to be motivated when they fail even as they have to be motivated when they succeed. People who are going to live their lives as unto the Lord have to solve their own problems, and they have to be motivated to solve their own problems by the perception of doctrine. And if people who fail are ever going to recover they have to be motivated from their own soul and make the decision from their own free will. That is how problem-solving gets started. So we have motivation here, the present active imperative of the verb zhleuw, which means to be eager, to be zealous, or to be properly motivated. We will translate it, “be zealous,” but it really means to be properly motivated. The customary present tense is for what habitually occurs when motivation for rebound is present, either from warning or intensive discipline, or wisdom from past recollection and application of doctrine. The active voice: cosmic believers produce the action of the verb through proper motivation. The imperative mood is the imperative of command which is a mandate for proper motivation to continue rebound modus operandi. You have to be motivated to rebound and that is why divine discipline, otherwise you could simply follow your own destiny with your own volition and destroy yourself in half the time of divine discipline. You have to remember that all of the time that you are under divine discipline you are being kept alive! Under divine discipline the justice of God is still sending logistical grace to the righteousness of God in your soul. Therefore you are being faithfully kept alive while you are under divine discipline. Left to your own devices you wouldn't be alive. Divine discipline often lessens the intensity of your suffering. You see, it is our decisions that make us suffer.

Divine discipline is a blessing. It is not designed just to make us hurt. We hurt so that we will be motivated to get back into the plan and often divine discipline isn't nearly as painful as the things we do ourselves with our wrong decisions. Man suffers more from his own volition than he does from the justice of God in divine discipline. All God is doing is motivating us.

The word for zeal in verse 19 indicates the proper motivation for the use of the rebound technique. The inferential conjunction ο)un denotes that what it introduces is the result of inference from what precedes, "therefore be zealous." We have the connective conjunction kai which indicates the fact that rebound is necessary for motivation from either doctrinal wisdom or divine discipline, one or the other. Rebound is one of the most essential functions in your life on this earth. Without rebound there is absolutely no way that you can maintain any kind of fulfillment of the plan of God, staying inside the divine dynasphere, and everything related to it.

Next we have, after the motivation, the mechanics in the verb metanoew. The aorist active imperative of this verb is generally misunderstood. It means to change the mind. The subject of changing the mind is always found in the context. The word "repent" in modern English connotes some form of emotion, feeling sorry for something you have done, and that is definitely not the connotation in the Greek. It means to change one's mind. Here it is a technical word for rebound, the naming of your sins to God as a function of your royal priesthood in the cosmic system. The aorist tense is a constative aorist for a momentary action. Rebound is a function that should not take long. The active voice: the carnal or the cosmic believer produces the action of the verb by confessing his known sins to God as the only legitimate priestly function inside the cosmic system. The imperative mood is the imperative of command, a mandate from God to the cosmic believer to confess his sins (privately) to God and to leave the cosmic system. The moment of rebound means that he reenters the divine dynasphere.

The mechanics of recovery from the cosmic system is the rebound technique only. In the mechanics of rebound the cosmic believer is free to confess his sins and to recover life in the divine dynasphere or he can ignore the discipline and the warning which comes from it, the warning of discipline or intensive discipline, and continue life in the cosmic system. Life in the cosmic system results in the believer in Christ serving Satan all of his life. It is a life of terrible misery.

Believers generally misunderstand divine discipline. On the pain curve we cause our own pain to self by wrong decisions. We produce our own unhappiness; we are the source of our own misery. The decisions we make result in bringing pain and misery to ourselves and this pain can intensify anywhere from, say, zero to one hundred per cent depending on how long you live in the cosmic system. The cosmic system is merely the circumstances, the environment of pain. And we make our own decisions that bring about our suffering, it is not caused by outside sources. The intensity of pain brought about by our own volition can go all the way to one hundred per cent.

Now divine discipline doesn't work that way, it is a different story. In administering divine discipline the Lord may tune in when we hit forty per cent with warning discipline. Divine discipline is designed to teach, not to hurt, and it is generally not as painful as the suffering we bring on ourselves. We bring pain to ourselves by wrong decisions and the pain intensifies as we accumulate wrong decisions without a break. When the Lord comes in with warning discipline it is simply a way of saying: "Look, to learn Bible doctrine you have to be in the divine dynasphere. So you are not in the divine dynasphere, therefore you cannot learn doctrine, you cannot grow. But you can get back into the divine dynasphere and this pain is to teach you, to motivate you, to rebound." But it is not an intense thing. It will be described in the next verse as standing at the door and knocking. God spans us, reprimands us, as a teaching aid. Unfortunately there is very little that you can learn through it except to be motivated to rebound. Learning the hard way is a limited academic subject. Once you ignore warning discipline then the next time it comes in as intensive discipline. So when you hurt the most in this world don't say that God is punishing you.

To get out of the divine dynasphere you have to make a decision to sin. Let's say you are in the divine dynasphere and you are a new believer. Let's say you are a socialist, or a communist, or some kind of activist, a terrorist even. Now let's say that you have been saved for five minutes and you haven't committed a sin. The fact that you are a socialist or a communist or a terrorist or anything else does not knock you out of the divine dynasphere. Being a communist or a socialist or a terrorist motivates you to sin, but the only way you get out of the divine dynasphere is sin. It is not what you are, it is what you do. You can't get out by being evil. When we are born again we are generally either evil or full of human good and self-righteousness. You cannot get out of the divine dynasphere because you are evil, the only way you can get out of the divine dynasphere is to sin, and when you decide to sin that is the moment you go outside. Because that decision cannot be made in the divine dynasphere it has to be made outside and the moment you make a decision to sin you enter the cosmic system. It is important to understand that the only decision that gets you out of the divine dynasphere is sin.

Life in the cosmic system results in the believer serving Satan. Life in the cosmic system is a miserable existence in time, an embarrassment at the judgment seat of Christ, and means occupying an inferior status quo both in the Millennium and in the eternal state. So obviously then rebound is a pivotal factor. You make a decision by which you get out of the divine dynasphere; you also make a decision by which you get back into the divine dynasphere.

Rebound is as simple as 1 John 1:9, which in corrected translation says: "If we acknowledge [admit, name] our sins, he is faithful and righteous so that he has forgiven us our sins, and cleansed us from all unrighteousness [sins of ignorance]." Usually when we commit sins of cognisance somewhere in the background there are also sins of ignorance that are also cleansed. So rebound is the grace function of the believer which accomplishes the following results: restoration of fellowship with God; recovery of the filling of the Holy Spirit; reentry into the divine dynasphere; recovery from the cosmic system [cosmic one where we are grieving the Spirit; cosmic two where we are quenching the Spirit]. Rebound, then, is the most basic modus operandi of the spiritual life and the most important function of the priesthood outside the cosmic system. Rebound is a part of God's logistical grace provision for the fulfillment of the plan of God and the execution of the Christian way of life. Without this grace provision of rebound the believer in phase two cannot exploit the positional victory over the old sin nature gained at the point of salvation through the baptism of the Spirit. And apart from the rebound technique no believer can function inside the divine dynasphere and therefore no believer can fulfill the plan of God. There is no execution of divine mandates apart from life in the divine dynasphere for all of them require the power of God the Holy Spirit.

All suffering in the Christian life should be turned to blessing but it is impossible to do this apart from rebound. In suffering for discipline the issue is sin; in suffering for blessing the issue is grace. The category for suffering for discipline is unbearable suffering; the category for suffering for blessing is bearable suffering. The status of suffering for discipline is arrogant subjectivity; the status of suffering for blessing is enforced and genuine humility. The solution to suffering for discipline is rebound; the solution to suffering for blessing is the three stages of the faith-rest drill.

The greatest opposition to rebound, of course, is impulsive arrogance, impulsive arrogance of gate three, cosmic one. Illustration: Matthew 18:23-35. Another great enemy of rebound is the blind arrogance of gate five of cosmic one, Luke 15:11-32. The third great enemy of rebound is the iconoclastic arrogance of gate seventeen of cosmic one, 2 Corinthians 2:5-11.

The dispensation in which we live provides the greatest opportunity for all believers and the greatest challenge that has existed in all of human history, or ever will. The reason for this is because this is the only dispensation or era of history in which prophecy has absolutely no part. Historical trends in all other dispensations determined by prophecy but in this Church Age there is no prophecy. Therefore the dispensation in which we find ourselves is one in which everything depends upon the individual volition of the believer in the Lord Jesus Christ. As goes your volition, your decisions, so goes the historical trends in the Church Age. This is the dispensation of the mystery. It was so-called according to the books of Ephesians and Colossians because of the fact that there was no prophecy revealed about this age. In all of the prophecies of the Old Testament there is a great deal of eschatology regarding Israel as a client nation to God, there is a tremendous amount of prophecy about the Tribulation, the second advent, the Millennial reign of Christ, and in these prophecies there is a great deal of information with regard to historical trends so that it is easy to conclude that historical trends are determined by prophecy in every dispensation except this one. It therefore becomes very important in the Church Age to realise that your daily decisions and your personal decisions are the difference between prosperity and adversity, and between blessing and cursing as far as the client nation is concerned. This means that you and I as believers have a tremendous responsibility in the intensified stage of the great angelic conflict, generally speaking an unseen conflict. The heroes are, therefore, low-profile and invisible until the judgment seat of Christ. And those who often determine your prosperity and mine are those believers who are faithful in the perception of Bible doctrine and who have advanced to maturity.

By the same token bad decisions mean several things in this dispensation. It means first of all that most of the pain that you suffer comes from your own bad decisions and that when you receive divine discipline it is often less than the pain that you have produced by your own negative volition.

That brings us now to verse 20 which is not a salvation verse. It has nothing whatever to do with salvation; it has everything to do with believers in the cosmic system. It has to do with the fact that believers make their own pain and by making pain for themselves by wrong decisions they spread the pain to others. You cannot manufacture pain in your own life without an overflow into the lives of other people. There are actually three analogies in this verse. First of all the analogy to warning discipline; secondly, the analogy to rebound function; and thirdly, the analogy to life in the divine dynasphere.

The analogy to warning discipline begins with the demonstrative particle i)dou. It is formed from the aorist middle imperative of the verb o(rai, "to see," and rather than behold it should be translated, "Now hear this." The perfect active indicative of the verb i(stemi follows, and it means to stand, "Now hear this, I stand." The reason we translate it like an English present is the intensive perfect emphasises the existing results from the completed action. When special attention is directed toward the results of the action the existing fact of warning discipline is intensified. This is the emphatic method in the Greek of presenting a fact that is, and the fact that it is warning discipline, and warning discipline is punishment from God. But it is not suffering or punishment or pain as we bring on ourselves through wrong decisions and through making poor use of our volition, but rather it is a teaching aid. So in fact the intensive perfect presents the facts of warning discipline more forcibly than either the Greek or the English present tense but translated like the English present. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb through the administration of warning discipline. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of warning discipline. The only way sometimes to distinguish between warning discipline and pain that you have brought on yourself is the fact that whatever decisions you have made lead to the pain. And there may be some sphere where you can hurt in a very intensive way that is not related to the hundreds of decisions you have made in a given period of time. Therefore it will be something special that hurts in a very sharp and special way in your life as a teaching aid.

Then we have the preposition e)pi plus the accusative of qura, "at the door." The door is the only escape hatch from the cosmic system. So immediately our Lord finds believers in this dispensation living in the cosmic system. The door also means something else. Not only is it an escape hatch from the cosmic system and therefore being under the direct control of Satan, but the door is also an opportunity to rebound and to recover from the cosmic system. Rebound also means reentry into the divine dynasphere which is God's plan for the Church Age and for the believer in Christ. The only priestly function directed toward God on the part of the cosmic believer is the function of the rebound technique. Hence the door is warning discipline. Christ standing at the door is knocking, warning, and indicating the grace way of escape. No believer can escape from the cosmic system, and therefore slavery to Satan, apart from the rebound technique.

Then we have a present active indicative from the verb krouw, and it means to knock. The retroactive progressive present means that warning discipline has begun in the past and continues into the present. Believers in the cosmic system are slow learners. Therefore there is a prolonged type of warning discipline. Warning discipline is the only way that our Lord can get the attention of the cosmic believer. Warning discipline makes the cosmic believer so miserable that he is forced to face the reality of his cosmic involvement and, of course, the only solution which is the rebound technique. The active voice: Our Lord produces the action of the verb, the warning discipline to rescue the cosmic believer from the disaster of his status quo. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of warning discipline as the first step in motivating rebound and recovery from the cosmic system.

The corrected translation should bring out the linear aktionsart, and it is therefore translated: "Now hear this, I stand at the door and I keep knocking." Warning discipline is a continuous function.

The doctrine of divine discipline

There is in rightly dividing the Word of truth a tremendous distinction between the pain and the misery we bring to ourselves by wrong decisions and the suffering or the reprimand or discipline which comes from the justice of God. Divine discipline is totally fair; pain and misery brought about by our own wrong decisions is totally unfair, exasperating, impossible. Divine discipline teaches but pain brought about by our own erroneous decisions do not have any teaching content at all.

1. Divine discipline is the sum total of punitive action taken by the justice of God to correct, to teach, to encourage, to train, to motivate the believer's free will toward the person and the plan of God. All divine discipline is designed to bring you back on the correct course of the plan of God.
2. Divine discipline is distinguished from divine judgment in that discipline is a teaching aid for believers only, while judgment from God is directed toward all categories of humanity, believers and unbelievers, under certain given circumstances.
3. Believers become involved in the cosmic system under two categories: carnality, a brief stay in the cosmic system followed by the use of rebound often encouraged by warning discipline; reversionism, a prolonged stay in the cosmic system and the neglect of the rebound technique.
4. Divine discipline must be distinguished from self-induced misery. Bad decisions not only destroy your options in life but they result in bringing about your own pain through your own function of volition. So bad decisions not only destroy your future options but they result in self-induced misery totally apart from the divine administration of punishment.

5. In other words, believers are constantly making decisions which result in their own misery, unhappiness, discomfort, totally apart from any punitive action taken by the justice of God. In other words, self-induced misery is being unfair to yourself. Divine discipline is God being totally fair with you.

6. All people are products of their own decisions, good or bad. Decisions create environment for life, not environment decisions.

7. Punishment from God often follows bad decisions producing self-induced misery, but God is credited or blamed for a lot of misery He does not initiate.

8. All wrong decisions, including carnality and reversionism, relate to cosmic involvement and function.

9. All wrong decisions in life are connected with some form of arrogance, which emphasises gate one, cosmic one. Therefore gate one, cosmic one is what we might classify the cosmic recruiter and the motivator for all evil. Some of the functions of gate one, cosmic one, include arrogance, jealousy, bitterness, vindictiveness, implacability, self-pity, revenge motivation, etc.

Now it should become obvious that the difference between self-induced suffering or pain and divine discipline is the source. God is the source of divine discipline; man's volition or free will is the source of self-induced misery and pain in his life. At the outset it should be noted that regardless of the category of suffering and discipline divine punishment of the believer does not imply loss of salvation. You cannot lose your salvation. All divine discipline, except the sin unto death, is designed to teach the believer, to correct the believer, to motivate the believer to recover from the cosmic system and slavery to Satan, the ruler of this world. Therefore, divine discipline is often very beneficial but only when the believer responds to the teaching of discipline and is motivated to rebound, thereby recovering residence in the divine dynasphere.

The principle that comes out of all this is a very simple one: the believer must accept the responsibility for his own bad decisions and, further, accept the responsibility for all categories of divine discipline to which he is subjected. You are divorced from reality to the extent that you refuse to accept the responsibility for your own decisions.

While judgment is punitive action from God to all mankind divine discipline is God's last system for teaching believers only. Therefore distinguish between judgment and discipline. All believers are members of the royal family of God and His punitive action directed toward believers is a family affair — Hebrews 12:5. When God punishes or reprimands the believer it is designed for his blessing; it is parental training in the royal family.

There are two systems of learning in the Church Age. As you learn doctrine you grow in grace. You cannot grow spiritually, you cannot have any momentum in the Christian life except from perception of doctrine. The first system of learning in the Church Age is the communication of Bible doctrine from your own pastor-teacher. This has unlimited academic potential. Secondly, there is divine discipline from God, which is very limited. The unlimited concept of learning doctrine from your pastor results in spiritual maturity and fantastic blessing, but learning the hard way from divine discipline is learning through pain, and that is of course stupid. While divine discipline can teach some lessons well and produce great respect for God's authority it cannot bring the believer to maturity. Only the perception and application of doctrine can do that. Nevertheless, divine discipline is a teacher and often as a producer of humility it results in teachability. Therefore divine discipline must be regarded as another form of blessing and a glorious opportunity to exercise one's options for the grace of God and the plan of God. Furthermore divine discipline provides opportunity for the believer to reverse the results of his bad decisions and start making good decisions for the plan of God and the grace of God. The principle that comes out of this: If you cannot learn from humility you can learn from hurting.

Divine discipline is also related to the general subject of suffering, but we should note that the general subject of suffering comes under three categories. First, as it is related to human volition, suffering by self-determination. Then, God comes into the picture to present two other categories of suffering and these are the ones we want to note: suffering for discipline and suffering for blessing.

Suffering for divine discipline is involved in the cosmic system; suffering for blessing involves the divine dynasphere. Suffering for divine discipline is unbearable suffering in contrast to suffering for blessing which is bearable and results in blessing. Each category has its own viewpoint. The viewpoint in suffering for discipline is arrogance and subjectivity; the viewpoint in suffering for blessing is humility and objectivity. In each case there is a solution. If you are suffering from divine discipline the solution is the rebound technique. In this case one of three things can happen. First of all, all the suffering can cease at that moment. In other cases the suffering is simply diminished. In the third case the suffering continues at the same level. If the suffering is either diminished or continues at the same level it is now diminished in the divine dynasphere or in the same level in the divine dynasphere. Therefore in the divine dynasphere the purpose of that suffering is blessing, whereas the purpose of that same suffering in the cosmic system is cursing. So the use of the rebound technique converts suffering from cursing to blessing.

Once that same suffering has continued or is perpetuated either in diminished form or in the intensified form in the divine dynasphere the solution demands that you go right back to application of that suffering. And there is an academic application, the base is the faith-rest drill, the second stage — the rationales. That would apply doctrine to the circumstances of life. And there is a practical application which takes you to impersonal love, and that applies to people.

After the believer recovers his fellowship with God he is back in the divine dynasphere, he is filled with the Spirit. His suffering may cease, as per 1 Corinthians 11:31. If the suffering does not cease after rebound the purpose is changed, cursing into blessing, as per 1 Corinthians 10:13. When suffering is designed for punishment or discipline the believer cannot bear it, but when the suffering is designed for testing and blessing he can, and out of it comes even great happiness. That, of course, is related to the divine dynasphere. Again, this emphasises the importance of the rebound drill. Every opportunity to apply doctrine inside the divine dynasphere is simply the field training exercise for advance to maturity, but rebound has to come first. All Christian suffering in the cosmic system is punitive and painful.

There are certain spheres of divine discipline. Our first one is punishment in time, which is the general subject of Hebrews 12:5-14.
