Then we have the prophetic status of the seventh head, “and the other,” and this is a)lloj meaning the same category. In other words, if you are still talking about the same category and you use the word “other,” you use a)lloj. If you are talking about a different one and you change the category you use e(teroj, meaning another of a different kind. We have a)lloj so we are still talking about the same subject, and this is a reference to the prophetic Roman empire of the Tribulation which we refer to as the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation. Notice that it says, “it is not yet come,” and John uses from now on a negative adverb of time, o)upw. It is not just a straight negative, it is stronger and it always relates to time, so it is translated “not yet.” With this is the aorist active indicative of the verb e)rxomai, “has not yet come.” The aorist tense is a gnomic aorist for a fact of Bible doctrine regarded as so certain as to be axiomatic in character. Therefore it is described by the aorist tense as though it were an actual occurrence. The active voice: the Tribulation revived Roman empire of the future produces this negative action. It hasn’t come as yet. The indicative mood is declarative for the eschatological reality of this future empire although it has not yet come.

Then we have the brevity of that future revived Roman empire: the connective conjunction kai introduces a noteworthy and is translated “nevertheless.” With it we have another conjunction. This one introduces an indefinite temporal clause. This is o(tan. And we have the aorist active subjunctive, this time of erxomai. The subjunctive mood is potential, it implies a future reference. It is the mood used for the indefinite temporal clause which has, of course, an eschatological connotation. Then with this we have the accusative of general reference which becomes the subject of the infinitive because we have the aorist active infinitive coming up, the aorist active infinitive of menw. It means he must remain, “nevertheless when it comes [the revived Roman empire] it must remain for a short time.” The constative aorist takes the existence of the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation, regards it in its historical duration, and gathers it into a single whole to look at it for a moment. We have to have a support for the infinitive and we have the impersonal verb of necessity, dei, it is translated “must remain.” The active voice: the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation produces the action and this is the infinitive of time, an infinitive of intended result also, blending God’s purpose with this historical result. Then we have the accusative of extent of time from the noun o)ligoj, “for a short time.”

So having interpreted the seven heads number seven pur sui vant messenger of the execution squad is about to give way to a higher authority. That means that we are going back to the rise of the beast dictator and we are going to finish up with the interpretation of that dictator.

The interpretation of the beast is continued and concluded in verse 11. This is the final profile of the beast which began in chapter 13:1. The conjunction kai introduces a result from what precedes and therefore it is translated “And so.” The nominative singular subject once more is the beast dictator, and in the Greek it is qhrion, for our subject is once again the beast dictator, “And so the beast dictator.”

Then, once again, we have that phrase introduced as part of a relative clause. The relative pronoun o(j means “who” and it refers to the revived Roman empire. Then we begin a series of the use of the verb e)imi: the imperfect active indicative of e)imi plus the present active indicative of e)imi with some conjunctions in between. “Who was” is the imperfect use of e)imi, linear aktionsart in past time. The active voice: the historical Roman empire producing the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the historical Roman empire at the time of John, “the beast dictator who was,” referring to the Roman empire, “and is not.” The negative o)uk is used with the present of e)imi, it brings to mind the fall of the Roman empire. Again the active voice refers to the historical Roman empire, and the indicative mood is for the reality of the fall of the historical Roman empire. The rise of the beast dictator, “and he is the eighth.” He comes, of course, from the seventh but he is a unique dictator from a confederation of nations. The conjunction kai is translated “even” with the nominative singular subject a)utoj, referring to the beast dictator. A)utoj is used in the Koine Greek for the third person personal pronoun, “and he is,” the present active indicative of e)imi again, this time a static present representing a fact of eschatological doctrine. The active voice: the beast dictator produces the action in the future. The indicative mood is declarative for the point of eschatological doctrine.

With this we the predicate nominative singular from the adjective numeral o)gdooj, used as a substantive here rather than an adjective, “even he is the eighth.” This means the empire of the beast is an empire built from the seventh. He is the one who in the last half of the Tribulation is the final dictator of the revived Roman empire. The eighth empire is distinct from the seventh in that the beast dictator will conquer and subdue or control the ten nations in the confederation of the revived Roman empire, and the difference is between the first and the second halves of the Tribulation. In the first half of the Tribulation the beast is only one of many rulers; in the last half of the Tribulation he is the dictator of the entire Roman empire revived.

The source of the beast is then given, “and he is from the seventh.” That means he emerges from the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation. In other words, he emerges from the seventh head that we studied in verse nine. Apparently, the inefficiency and the bureaucracy of the revived Roman empire acts as a catalytic agency for the emergence of leadership. The leadership takes the form of organised evil and out of this organised evil comes this great dictator.

Then we have the conjunction kai again and this time it means “and finally,” “finally he will go into destruction,” which anticipates chapter 19:20, “Then the beast dictator [the ruler of the revived Roman empire] was seized, and with him the false prophet [the ruler of the state of Israel in the Tribulation] who performed miracles in his presence, by which he had deceived those who had received the mark of the beast, even those who worshipped his idol. These two [the Gentile and Jewish dictators], though still alive, were thrown into the lake of fire burning with sulphur.”

Translation of verse 11: “And so the beast that was [the historical Roman empire at the time of John], and is not [fall of the historical Roman empire in 476 AD], even he is the eighth [the dictator of the revived Roman empire], and is from the seventh [the revived Roman empire of the first half of the Tribulation], and finally he will go to destruction [the lake of fire, Revelation 19:20].”

This beast dictator has the ability to communicate. He has a tremendous imagination and 2 Thessalonians chapter 2, when studied with Daniel chapter 7 and Revelation chapter 13, makes a great package on how to take evil ideas, wrong ideas, and make them interesting. He is, of course, a religious genius as well. A person who is a genius works from the base of a genius IQ. Most people who work from the base of a genius IQ are the dullest people in the world and no one would know that they were a genius if it weren't for an achievement test. But there are people who emerge historically who emerge as truly great who are genius. Most great people in history are not great geniuses, are not even close to it; in fact a lot of them have a very low IQ but they were just stubborn and stupid and arrogant enough to stick with some point that made them famous. When you work from a base of genius the expression of that genius really is the area in which you are interested. If a genius is only interested, for example, in some science then he is said to be a genius in that science. Moses was the most unusual genius that ever lived because Moses was interested in music, he was a genius in the field of writing, he was a military genius, a genius in the field of construction and architecture, and he became the great genius that God used in the spiritual realm. He was also a genius in the field of leadership. Moses was a man of many interests but all the interests had the same base: genius. This dictator is also a genius. As Moses was an honourable, great, believer genius this man is an evil genius and his major interest is evil, where evil is exploited into political expression, into religious expression, into military expression, and the ability to take his ideas, not matter how evil they are, and find a big market for them during the Tribulation. With all of this Satan gives him some extra-natural power and this is the power of miracles which is part of the subject of 2 Thessalonians chapter two. And, of course, miracles always appeal to the emotionalism of the masses. This also demands worship of power, the idolising of evil because of involvement in the Satanic cosmic system. Those who worship power idolise evil and they will never appreciate freedom or have any real capacity for happiness. When people do not have truth and doctrine they're always impressed with the wrong things. So here is one of the great men of genius of history and he is always impressed with the wrong things. He has a dynamic in the field of verbal communication and to do so with imagination. This is brought out in Revelation 13:5. Satan gives this dictator a supernatural power of communication, a tremendous eloquence for the purpose of the presentation of his ideas. In other words, he markets his ideas.

The time limitation on him is very important. He has greater human power than perhaps anyone in the history of planet earth. This appears to be an influence outside of the revived Roman empire which is carried on mainly through religion; religion being, of course, Satanic. But there is a time limitation on his power. We noted it first in Revelation 13:5, "there was given to him authority to function forty-two months," the last half of the Tribulation. At that point he will be terminated by being cast alive into the lake of fire, Revelation 17:11. Finally, he will go to destruction, Revelation 19:20. So the greatest genius for evil and the greatest dynamic for evil, including extra-natural and supernatural modus operandi, is still under time limitation. No matter how great power is power is limited by time, and once any system of power is limited by time it is merely another finite activity which makes a splurge for the moment and disappears into the mists of history.

Evil power always has other frustrations beside time. One of them is a sense of humour. A sense of humour is a great protector of the individual. It not only protects the individual from many of the insults and problems of interaction with human beings but at the same time it has other protections as well. It becomes a safeguard against taking one's self too seriously and building up to this kind of power lust and power madness. A sense of humour also becomes a frustration to those who aspire to dictatorship, especially when you have a country where you have a large number of people who at least have the freedom to develop a sense of humour. Whether they do or not is another thing. But with all of the great power of the beast dictator he cannot laugh at himself.

The reason that people cannot laugh at themselves is because generally they are bright and they are concentrators. People who are bright in life generally develop one subject magnificently or have success in one area magnificently. They are such concentrators that they do not have the ability to laugh at themselves, they lack a sense of humour. Therefore the sense of humour acts as a safeguard for keeping one's feet on the ground with regard to reality. Whenever a person does not have a sense of humour it is inevitable that he will get lost in the field of arrogance and the only protection he has is to be a believer and have the recourse to rebound and to live inside the protocol system. People who have much power generally have no sense of humour although there are some great exceptions to this. The beast dictator cannot laugh at himself, all he can do is slander those who are beyond his power, and this is one of his weaknesses and probably why he did not go beyond the political control of the revived Roman empire, though through ecumenical religion he controlled great portions of the world.

The believer with maximum doctrine in his soul is beyond the power of any dictator because he cherishes doctrine in his soul and he will not compromise that doctrine even on the threat of losing his life. Even by killing the believer the beast dictator of the Tribulation puts the martyred believer beyond his own power. Whenever a person has to use violence, as all of the terrorist groups do, in order to try to control someone he has immediately put that person beyond his control and it is an admission that he has no leadership ability.

The beast dictator is a miserable person in his frustration while the martyred believers are very happy in heaven. The beast dictator cannot see humour in any situation, especially any situation whereby he has killed people because they disagree with him and therefore put them beyond his influence or beyond his power. His best chance was to be persuasive. But it is amazing that people never use their best weapons when they need them the most, and this man has a persuasive ability in the field of communication. If you have great ability and you use it properly you are going to bring people under your control without any type of threat. Once you threaten a person or put some kind of pressure on a person then your persuasiveness has gone, you are not marketing your ideas at all. The mature believer, of course, was beyond the control of this great dictator and that was one of his great weaknesses, one of his great limitations. What is even more humorous is the fact that Satan who gave him this great power had already been driven out of heaven permanently, yet he still had great power to communicate and to disseminate on earth, and Satan offers this man the kingdoms of the world after he has been kicked out of heaven.

We need to be aware of the doctrine of organised versus disorganised evil which is a very important doctrine to apply. This beast dictator became the ultimate dictator of the ten-nation confederation of the revived Roman empire. What is really interesting is that many times in history degeneracy combines with self-righteousness to form a revolution. Then self-righteousness and degeneracy fight it out and eventually self-righteousness, being organised evil, always wins and they have to eliminate the degeneracy. There is a very definite brief for the fact that there is a constant fight between organised and disorganised evil, between self-righteous and immoral people, the ones involved in degeneracy. This goes on in life all the time, it is a constant struggle in life, and what is even more tragic is that in most churches today the immoral crowd are always thrown out. It doesn't matter whether they are positive toward any doctrine or not, they are removed, and the self-righteous crowd always take over and therefore the church becomes a system of organised evil. This is no brief for immorality, far from it, but the point is the true principle of the local church is privacy so that the self-righteous will have a chance to grow and the immoral, amoral, group who are positive may grow, often rapidly up to a point and then they become critical of the self-righteous so that the self-righteous always become a trap. There is rapid growth on the part of the immoral, amoral, group until they discover one day the self-righteous people and they become critical of them. At that point they cease to grow. There is a constant fight wherever you find people over this matter: the self-righteous versus the amoral. The point is that the only way to protect a church organisation, for example, is through the doctrine of privacy and strong authority from the pulpit. Strong authority from the pulpit doesn't throw the prostitute out of church; strong authority from the pulpit throws the gossip out of church because the prostitute is not the catalytic agent that causes the conflict, it is the gossip, the maligner, the troublemaker. This is not only true in churches but this is true in business, military organisations, police organisations. There is no such thing in an organisation made up of more than 50 people that doesn't have all of these things, and the real key is to give everyone their privacy and therefore opportunity for everyone to grow in grace, to respect privacy and positive volition.

The thing that destroys privacy is gossip, maligning, running down other people, inordinate ambition and inordinate competition. The most important thing in life is to have privacy so that you can actually through your own self-determination either succeed or fail in your own life. Legalism is the great hindrance to this. All the people who are maligning and critical and looking down their nose at other Christians in any given church are simply people who trying to make everyone like themselves rather than growing in grace. No one ever grows in grace by being maligned, although they may pass the test and grow that way, they grow by learning doctrine. Gossiping about people is not teaching them doctrine. This is the struggle between organised and disorganised evil and the answers are found in the communication of doctrine, positive volition toward Bible doctrine, plus respect for the privacy of others as a major concept in freedom.

Privacy and property and life are sacred and must cycle together for people to grow in grace, for people to live with people under any form of government that is virtuous and honourable, and to fulfill all of the things that keep Satan at bay. In other words, the function of the client nation to God. When you have a choice of the two worlds, self-righteous or degenerate, you take neither. That is why we have client nations to God; that is why we have truth — “You shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free,” not organised evil or disorganised evil. When you have the struggle between organised and disorganised it bodes evil for everyone, and the only way to avoid it is for the truth to prevail and the truth must prevail through the establishment of a pivot. There was no pivot, there was no client nation when this dictator came to power so he came to power at exactly the right time as far as making it easy. It was a matter of disorganised evil being overcome by organised evil and wherever the truth reared its head then immediately it was removed.

One other factor that must be remembered with this principle is the fact that there is no power in public opinion. Public opinion caters to the viewpoint of the majority and the majority have no power or control in history. It is actually the minority who takes control or influences history. Sometimes it is a good minority, like the pivot of mature believers in a client nation, but all too frequently it is a bad minority made up of either disorganised or organised evil, and sometimes both. Public opinion always reacts to any type of truth because public opinion has no concept of truth, unless it is taught in the schools through establishment truth. Establishment truth is no longer taught in public schools, only in a few private schools. So public opinion is generally news today and gone tomorrow. Public opinion, then, is only a bully of the weak; it is a flatterer of the successful. Public opinion has no power with communists, for example, who ignore it all the time. Public opinion is all too often a system of arrogance, self-righteousness, mass hysteria which assumes that their condemnation is going to change the world. It is a false premise that public opinion has influence over evil when in reality evil uses public opinion for its own purposes, and generally organised evil gets into power in this way.

In verses 12-13 we have the interpretation of the ten horns. In verse 12 we have the structure of the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation. The connective conjunction kai is correctly translated "And." The nominative plural subject is made up of three different words, the definite article ta, translated "the," the indeclinable adjective numeral deka, meaning ten, and the noun keraj, "horns," "And the ten horns."

The horn in scripture is often a symbol of power and the ten horns are ten nations which were once a part of the historical Roman empire. Horns often represent nations, as in the case of the ram with two horns in Daniel 8:20-21. The ram is the Persian empire, the two horns represent each segment of the old Persian empire: one horn for the Medes and one for the Persians. In Amos 6:13 arrogant Israel boasts about her conquests of Gentile nations whom they call horns.

"And the ten horns [ten-nation confederation of the revived Roman empire] which you saw." This has to do with John's vision of the ten horns. From Jeremiah 4:25 the nation of Moab is called the horn of Moab, and that is because of the power of the nation at that time. In Daniel 7:7ff we have the same ten horns. They are the ten nations of the confederation of the revived Roman empire. The seven horns of Zechariah 1:18,19 are actually a part of four empires who have administered the fourth cycle of discipline to Israel at one time or another.

Well, the question is, who are the ten horns? It would be a matter of speculation to determine which nations of the old historical empire will be included in this ten-nation confederation in the future Tribulation.

"which you saw" is a relative clause. The aorist active indicative of the verb to see is o(raw which in the constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the apostle John as the human author produces the action. The declarative mood represents verbal action from the viewpoint of eschatological reality.

They are said to be ten kings. This is the predicate nominative plural, deka is indeclinable. Then we have the word "kings," basileuj, referring to the ten kings who are going to rule these ten nations in the Tribulation. The ten kings are said to have no power in the first half of the Tribulation. We have the beginning of a relative clause, but we have the nominative masculine plural from what is known as the qualitative relative pronoun o(stij. The qualitative relative pronoun used to be translated in classical Greek, "such a category as." We will simply translate it "who." The negative adverb follows, o(upw, "not yet." They "have not yet received," the aorist active indicative of the verb lambanw, "received." The aorist tense is a constative aorist referring to a future time. The active voice: the ten potential rulers do not rule the ten nations of the revived Roman empire until they are brought into power by the beast. This is a potential indicative depending on a future event. With this we have the accusative singular direct object from the noun basileia, “kingdoms.”

We now have the adversative conjunction alla which means that that condition will not be an indefinite condition but will be improved as far as they are concerned. alla sets up a contrast. The contrast is based on the fact that the ten nations which were a part of the Roman empire will become a part of the revived Roman empire in the Tribulation. They will come into power with the beast dictator. Whatever the form of government in these ten nations prior to one empire they will be ruled by ten proconsuls in the last half of the Tribulation. “But they will receive,” we have the present active indicative of labanw again and the present tense is a futuristic present for an event which has not yet occurred. The ten nations under proconsuls have not yet come into existence but they are regarded as so certain in thought that they are contemplated as already coming to pass. The active voice: the ten proconsuls or kings produce the action and we have a declarative mood for eschatological reality. They are said to have authority, the accusative singular direct object of the verb ecousia. Their authority and their power will be a very short one, it will be in the last half of the Tribulation. In effect, these are future Roman provinces in the revived Roman empire.

Next we have the accusative of the extent of time, the accusative feminine singular of e(ij) which is a numeral meaning “one,” plus the word for hour, o(ra). One hour here does not mean one 60-minute hour, it means the last half of the Tribulation, “with the beast dictator,” the beast dictator being the ruler of the revived Roman empire.

The formation of the revived Roman empire at the end of the Tribulation is then mentioned in verse 13. “These have one mind, and they shall give their power and their strength to the beast.” We have the nominative plural subject of the immediate demonstrative pronoun, referring once more to the ten kings or the ten proconsuls, o(toj), correctly translated “These.” The immediate demonstrative pronoun includes both the beast dictator and these ten kings, and the demonstrative pronoun places special emphasis on a designated object in the context. With this we have a subject, therefore, the present active indicative of exw, the verb to have. It is a customary present, it denotes what habitually occurs and may be reasonably expected to occur during the course of the Tribulation. The reason some of these things are being noted is because the interpretation is now given with very concise exegetical, grammatical Greek. Everything is extremely precise and it brings up a very important principle: everything related to Bible doctrine, categorically and by way of application, is precise.

The active voice: the beast dictator and his ten proconsuls produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative giving us a precise eschatological interpretation. With this we have the accusative singular direct object in which we have e(ij) again but we have a different word with it, gnwmh, and with it, e(ij), “one mind” is the way it is translated. However, gnwmh means will, resolve, decision, or purpose. It actually does not mean “mind.” We will translate it: “These [ten dictators] have one ideology.” They have a common theory and a common cause, they are united under a system of false doctrine, the ecumenical religious system of Satan. They even reside in the same cosmic system and they make maximum use of that cosmic system. Therefore they are thoroughly inculcated with the Satanic system and the religious development of it in the Tribulation.

The empire is then mentioned, "and so." The connective conjunction kai introduces a result from what precedes, "and so they give," the present active indicative of the verb didomi. The present tense is a futuristic present, it denotes an event which has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as already coming to pass. The active voice: the ten proconsuls produce the action. The indicative declarative is for the eschatological reality. The point is this: When you have a man such as the beast dictator who has that kind of ability and he has ten very arrogant, very successful, people in charge of nations, and they give their power to him, this adds to what we have already seen. This man has an unusual personality and from the negative standpoint he is one of the great leaders of all time. He is not our kind of leader, of course.

"These have one ideology, and so they give their power and authority, dunamij for power, and dunamij indicates they are all under the same system. It refers to the cosmic system. E)cuosia for authority, "and their authority to the beast dictator." In other words, this is how the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation is formed from the standpoint of ideology. From the standpoint of military conquest the beast dictator conquers three of the ten nations in war. The rest of them fall in line because they have the same ideology. From this ideology there are four proconsuls appointed.

This leads to a little dissertation in verse 14 which is really parenthetical. It deals with the final conspiracy of the Tribulation. This is only the first reference to it and it will be studied in more detail in chapter 19. Here are ten great men who have great power and they are willing to surrender their power and their authority to this most unusual dictator. Why all of this surrendering of power to power? Why a unified ideology? Why is there an attempt to set up a one-world system? The reason for it: One worldism means anti-Christ, "These shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them; for he is the Lord of lords, and King of kings: and they that are with him are called, and chosen, and faithful."

This verse is parenthetical. Why it comes up at this time is simply to show that once a world wide organisation is established, once the political power is firmed up under the beast dictator, once all of these things are put together properly, then through the use of international religion and through the use of the power of the revived Roman empire there will be a welding together of one worldism under Satan. This is Satan's last bid to control the world which he rules. Satan rules in name only but because man has free will and because he has never been able to quite bring together a system of power under internationalism to weld together the organisation to take over the world he has never succeeded.

What can we deduce from this historically? Even though at this time and very shortly thereafter the Armageddon world war will already be under way, this will be a part of it. With warfare, with disease, with physical disaster, with international religion reaching the peak of its power, with the great political strength of the revived Roman empire, with the two other great empires competing with it, the king of the north and the kings of the east, and being fused and welded under Satan, one wonders about several historical principles. The first deduction is the fact that people will survive all of these things, they will live through them. In some parts of the world people will still be living very normal lives, and at the end of all of this activity which is the wildest and most destructive in history people will still be alive at the second advent.

The first conspiracy of Revelation 16:12-16 which began the last world war of history was directed toward the destruction of the Jew as the super holocaust. The last conspiracy mentioned in 17:14 and 19:19 occurs at the end of that war and is directed toward the frustrating of the second advent of Christ, the destruction of Christ, elect angels, resurrected believers. Of course, it will not succeed. We call it, then, the anti-Christ conspiracy.

It begins with the nominative plural subject of the immediate demonstrative pronoun o(utoj. It refers to the beast dictator and the ten proconsuls. It refers, therefore, to the revived Roman empire, and like Revelation 19:19 it includes other kings, but in this context it emphasises the part of the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation as the chief Satanic agent in the conspiracy. The immediate demonstrative pronoun places special emphasis on the object called "these." Then we have the future active indicative of polemew, "These shall make war." The future tense is predictive anticipating an event which is expected to occur in future time, second advent. Their conspiracy comes just before the second advent and at the second advent. The active voice: the beast dictator and the ten proconsuls of the revived Roman empire produce the action. The indicative mood is for the reality of this eschatological doctrine, the greatest conspiracy of all time. History is filled with conspiracies in the past and there are many conspiracies in the present. If you get two arrogant people together, jealous of someone else, you have conspiracy. Arrogance is the source of all conspiracies and this is the biggest of all. So the greatest outbreak of arrogance of all time, the greatest period of cosmic involvement, is at the end of the Tribulation. The greatest manifestation of this arrogance will be in the international religious system sponsored by the dictator of the revived Roman empire.

The conspiracy has an object: the preposition meta plus the genitive of a)rnion, "against the Lamb." Our Lord Jesus Christ is identified as the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world. It first began by the identification made by John, John 1:29; Revelation 7:17. The Lamb refers to the cross which was the battlefield for the strategic victory of our Lord Jesus Christ. When our Lord Jesus Christ was on the cross He received a printout from the computer of divine decrees. The omniscience of God had entered into the computer every sin in history. All the sins of all the people in the world were programmed into the computer before the world began. The omniscience of God knew all of the sins that would be committed in human history and they were programmed in. He also knew the times at which people would resist sin and they became probables, and therefore were not programmed in. Omniscience knows the reality and the probable. The probables were the times that you resisted temptation. But all of the sins that any of us have ever committed in all of our life time, everyone down to the last sin at the end of the Millennium, were all entered into the computer of divine decrees. And the justice of God the Father then took the printout and all of the sins of the world were imputed to Christ by God the Father and there they were judged, so that no sin was left out. The cross is the greatest battlefield in history.

It is interesting to note that the greatest battlefield in history was a spiritual battle and it was won by one person, our Lord Jesus Christ. He alone was judged for our sins; He alone is the Lamb of God. That is why when Christ comes back, even though He is followed by the elect angels, all believers of the Church Age, the Old Testament saints and Tribulational martyrs, the Lord is going to do all of the fighting. He is going to fight alone and He is going to destroy all of the armies of Armageddon. He was the victor alone at the cross. That was a strategic victory. He is the only saviour. He is the tactical victor at the second advent. He does it alone. This, of course, emphasises the principle of grace. God has provided for us in eternity past. He has provided everything that we will ever need. He has provided not only blessing and that which sustains us in life but He has provided, when necessary, discipline. He has provided all of it alone. He alone delivers; He alone provides. In the whole concept of grace, God does it.

Here is a conspiracy against the really important thing in life. What is important in life? The fact that Jesus Christ was judged for the sins of the world on the cross, the fact that we have personally believed in the Lord Jesus Christ and have eternal salvation, the fact that God has a plan for each one of us after salvation and that plan starts by entrance of gate one at the moment of salvation into the protocol system. That plan for phase two eventually terminates, either by physical death or the Rapture, whichever occurs first, and that the plan then goes on forever, and the plan calls even for us to come back with the Lord and watch what the Lord will do. So the concept that the Lord did it alone is a very basic and important concept in grace. Grace is the work of God on our behalf.

Here we find the great conspiracy against grace. "These will make war against the Lamb." In so doing there is going to be immediately a tactical victory, and from that tactical victory we will then derive the reason for this passage beginning in verse 12. What is the doctrinal application? Why do we have this recorded in such detail in this one verse?

As at the cross, so at the second advent, deliverance is accomplished entirely by the Lord Jesus Christ without help from anyone. This is the principle of grace. Under the concept of grace God does it all. Therefore deliverance is a matter of grace. The deliverance at the cross at the first advent was a matter of grace: "For by grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God, not of works, lest any man should boast." Since Christ did all of the work we can only respond by faith for eternal salvation, and since Christ will do all of the work at the second advent we can only respond by observing His great victory. So both the strategic victory of the first advent and the tactical victory of the second advent are the work of Christ alone.

This dramatises the grace of God and is a reminder to us that in the protocol system there is no place for works as far as advancing in the plan of God. In God's protocol system, the divine dynasphere at gate one, we are filled with the Spirit totally apart from any human works. Even rebound is a grace modus operandi. When we get to the second gate and we are dealing with basic Christian modus operandi no works are involved, no production is involved. We do not advance in the spiritual life by even legitimate production, such as witnessing or fulfilling the function of your particular spiritual gift. There is no spiritual connotation to momentum apart from the function inside the protocol system. When we get to gate three which is basic virtue directed toward authority and forced and genuine humility, again, no works. The very definition of humility separates the believer from any function of legalism, from any system of works.

And what is momentum in the spiritual life? It is the function of the perception of doctrine at gate four: the perception of doctrine, the function of the royal priesthood, the application of doctrine, the function of the royal ambassadorship. And, again, no works are involved. Then, after the first four gates we begin to see the results of momentum. At gate five we have motivational virtue directed toward God, no works involved. At gate six we have functional virtue toward man and circumstances — no works at all. At gate seven we have testing: the eight momentum tests that every believer must pass to reach maturity. Again, no works are involved. And so the achievement of spiritual maturity, the glorification of the Lord Jesus Christ, the very purpose for which we are supported by logistical grace, is totally apart from works. It is only when we get to gates five, six, and seven, that we have any production that is meaningful. New believers can witness for Jesus Christ. One believer can be inside of the divine dynasphere and in his whole lifetime lead five people to the Lord as a result of his faithful witness, but that believer, when he stands at the judgment seat of Christ, will receive rewards and decorations for those five people he led to the Lord. His production will be gold, silver, and precious stones. But a believer can win thousands of people to the Lord by his testimony, live in the cosmic system, and his production is wood, hay, and stubble, and therefore it has no connotation except to be burned at the judgment seat of Christ. It all depends on where you are, not what you do. Where you are is the thing that counts.

Continuing in verse 14 we have the victory of the two advents mentioned by our Lord's royal title. Here it is given a little different than we are accustomed to seeing it. First of all we have "Lord of lords" and then "King of kings," just the opposite of the way the title is given in chapter nineteen. We begin with the causal use of the conjunction o(ti), "because." The strategic victory of the first advent is the basis for the tactical victory of the second advent. Our Lord accomplished the victory alone at the first advent when He was on the cross; our Lord accomplishes the victory alone at the second advent when He is mounted on that magnificent white horse. With this we have the present active indicative of the verb e)imi, "because he is." The present tense is a static present for a condition which always exists. The active voice: Jesus Christ as the winner in the first advent produces the action of the verb. Christ is the winner because of impeccability as He functioned in the prototype divine dynasphere. Our Lord Jesus Christ from the time of the virgin birth to the time that He went to the cross and was judged for our sins functioned inside of the prototype of the protocol system. It is a reminder, once again, that God has a plan for your life as a believer and that plan can never be divorced from the operational system. Now that we live in the Church Age we have the operational divine dynasphere. There is no fulfillment of the plan of God until you understand and you function inside of the divine dynasphere. Until then, of course, no plan of God exists for your life and whatever you do it is wood, hay, and stubble; it is energy of the flesh, it is legalism, and it does not glorify the Lord Jesus Christ.

So our Lord Jesus Christ made it to the cross because He lived inside the prototype divine dynasphere. His deity, of course, was absolutely incorruptible, it was impossible for Jesus Christ as God to sin. But as true humanity He was tempted in many points like as we are, yet without sin. His humanity went to the cross without sin and He was therefore qualified to bear the sins of the world.

“because he is,” the active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action as the winner. The indicative mood is declarative for our Lord’s third royal warrant as a result of His strategic victory on the cross. Note the reverse order of our Lord’s third royal title here. It is reversed because of its relationship to His two advents. “Lord of lords” emphasises the victory of the first advent, “King of kings” emphasises the victory of the second advent. So at the second advent He will be called “King of kings and Lord of Lords” but at the first advent He is “Lord of lords and King of kings.” This is a matter, therefore, of emphasis. “Lord of lords” goes right back to that strategic victory. We have the predicate nominative from kurioj which means “Lord” in the sense of God. The absence of the definite article emphasises the quality of the noun, therefore rendered properly in the English by the translation, “the Lord.” Then the ablative plural of comparison from kurioj again, separating our Lord from all other lords in history. At the time of writing the Roman empire was ruled by the Caesars, called emporator (emperor) and one of his titles was “lord,” he was to be addressed as kurioj, the deification of the rulers of the Roman empire. And so He is the Lord of all lords. Written at the time of the Roman empire it gives us once again the time when our Lord won the strategic victory on the cross. He is the Lord of lords. Jesus Christ, of course, is God. He is also the God-Man, we have noted the hypostatic union. This becomes the basis of winners during the Church Age and the manufacture of winners depends upon the function of the protocol system of the divine dynasphere. All this is brought together under the title “Lord of lords.”

Then, in His tactical victory we have “King of kings,” and again we have the predicate nominative from basileuj. It is in the singular, He is the King. And then the ablative of separation of all kings. Our Lord is separated from all rulers of all time but in this context rulers of the Millennium specifically. Here, then, is the tactical victory of our Lord Jesus Christ mentioned in His title and Jesus Christ rules the entire world, superseding Satan, at the second advent. That is a part of His great victory. As the ruler of the world our Lord is the King over all kings of the world; He is the ruler over all rulers; He is supreme during the Millennium because He is the Lord of lords and he is the King of kings.

The title of our Lord Jesus Christ as the God of Israel is given in Deuteronomy 10:17, “For the Lord your God is the God of gods and the Lord of lords, the great, the mighty, and the awesome God who does not show partiality, nor does he take a bribe.” Nebuchadnezzar’s expression of respect is similar. Daniel 2:47, “The king answered Daniel and said, ‘Emphatically your God is the God of gods, he is the Lord of kings, also a revealer of mysteries, since you have been able to reveal this mystery to me.’” Paul’s recognition of the title comes in first Timothy 6:15, “He will demonstrate in his own time — He who is the blessed and only sovereign, the King of kings and Lord of Lords.” John’s recognition of the title is found here and again in Revelation 19:16 with the reversal emphasising the second advent.

“These will make war against the Lamb [the final conspiracy of history] but the Lamb will conquer them because he is the Lord of lords, and King of kings.”

We have a threefold classification of the royal family which follows. It begins with the connective kai which introduces an additional piece of doctrine and is translated “furthermore.” Next we have the nominative plural from the definite article o(i used as an immediate demonstrative pronoun, “furthermore they.” This is a reference to the Church Age believers, the members of the royal family of God who return with our Lord Jesus Christ. Then we have the preposition meta plus the genitive singular from the intensive pronoun a)utoj, “with him,” “furthermore, those with him.”

Now we have the first classification of the royal family and it refers to salvation. It is the adjective in the predicate nominative masculine plural, klhtoi , which means called or invited. This means that all members of the human race are included in this adjective for it means to be invited to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.

When Jesus Christ was hanging on the cross He was judged for every sin which existed in the human race. There never was a sin that will be committed in the history of the human race that was not judged at the cross and because of the judgment of the cross and because all sins were judged by God the Father when Jesus Christ was bearing them you are invited. Once you are invited because of unlimited atonement you have a choice to make. You can either be positive and believe in the Lord Jesus Christ or you can be negative and say no to the gospel. All in the human race are invited. Not all accept the invitation, only those who believe in Christ accept the invitation. For those who reject the invitation they are still in a state of condemnation. This brings up the first of the issues here, for klhtoj, the adjective in the predicate nominative plural, refers to the fact that there is no one in the history of the human race for whom Christ did not die. We call it simply the doctrine of unlimited atonement. When we get to the next word we will see that those who believe are said to be elected, but those who reject Christ are not in the computer and since they are outside of the computer they cannot be construed as elected. All are invited; only believers are elected.

The atonement in the Old Testament refers to the animal sacrifices which portray the saving work of Christ on the cross. Atonement in the New Testament refers to the actual saving work of Jesus Christ on the cross, including redemption, reconciliation, and propitiation. In the Old Testament the word for atonement was kafar which means to pass over or to cover. The animal sacrifices and their blood was used to cover sin in that concept. And the communication of the saving work of Christ on the cross was used by these animal sacrifices. Atonement, therefore, is the means of reconciliation between God and man. It is the basis for divine propitiation and the portrayal of the work of Jesus Christ on the cross being judged for our sins. While animal blood was said to be the shadow in the book of Hebrews, the shadow which illustrates the judgment of our Lord for our sins in His saving work, it is the historical reality which fulfilled it. So wherever we look at the word “atonement” we are looking at the work of our Lord Jesus Christ on the cross.

The question arises, for whom did Christ die on the cross? If Christ didn't die for everyone then everyone isn't invited to have eternal salvation.

Romans 3:23-26, "For all have sinned and fallen short of the glory of God, receiving justification without payment by his grace through the redemption which is in Christ Jesus; whom God [the Father] has publicly displayed by his blood at the mercy seat through faith in Christ. For a demonstration of his integrity because of the passing over of previously committed sins, because of the clemency [delay in judgment] from God"

In other words, verse 25 tells us that the kafar [atonement] means that all of the sins of the human race were entered into the computer of divine decrees. Before the cross all of these sins were passed over when a person believed in Christ and the blood covering a sacrifice was the principle of atonement. So when Christ came to the cross historically all the sins of the past were taken out of the computer and they were imputed to Christ on the cross. The justice of God the Father judged those sins. All the sins of the future, including all the sins that we will ever commit, up to the end of time were also a part of that printout and were imputed to Christ on the cross, and the justice of God actually judged them. So all of the sins of the world were gathered up together under the principle of atonement. That means that there is an invitation to the entire human race. It is given to all, and that is what the meaning of klhtoi in this passage. All of the human race are invited to have eternal salvation through faith in Jesus Christ.

So Romans 3:26 adds: "For the demonstration of his integrity at the present time of crisis in order that he might be just and justify anyone who has faith in Christ."

Atonement, then, is just another way of describing the saving work of Christ on the cross. The fact that Christ was judged for everyone's sins is found in 2 Corinthians 5:14,15,19, "For the love of Christ controls us, having concluded this, that one [Jesus Christ alone] died for all, therefore all died; so he died for all that they who live should no longer live for themselves, but for him who died and rose again on their behalf ... God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself [not just believers but the world], not counting their trespasses against them, and he has committed to us this message of reconciliation."

1 Timothy 2:6, "who having given himself a redemptive ransom on behalf of all."

1 Timothy 4:10, "For because of this we [pastors] work hard to the point of exhaustion, because we have confidence in the living God, who is the saviour of all men, especially of believers." The invitation is given to all.

Titus 2:11, "For the grace of God bringing salvation to all has appeared." Not to some, but to all.

The entire human race was invited to salvation because Christ was judged for the entire human race on the cross. In Revelation 20:12-15 we look at unlimited atonement as far as the last judgment is concerned: "I saw the dead, small and great, standing before the throne; and the books were opened: and another of a different kind of a book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged from the things which were written in the books, according to their works,” a reference to sin at the last judgment, sin was all judged at the cross. Sin is not an issue in salvation, it is “Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved.” Sin is not an issue at the last judgment. God doesn’t make an issue of your sins; God makes an issue of the work of Christ on the cross. The invitation is open to all. When it says in verse 15, “And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was thrown into the lake of fire,” that simply means they rejected the invitation. They had many chances and they simply refused to believe.

Unlimited atonement means that Christ was judged on the cross for the entire human race. There are no exceptions and therefore the sins of the entire world — sins of believers, sins of unbelievers — were imputed to Christ and judged by God the Father. Sin therefore is never an issue in salvation, the issue is “What think ye of Christ?” Only unbelievers will stand at the judgment bar of God and they are tried, convicted, and sentenced to the lake of fire because they have rejected the invitation. John 3:18, “He who believes in him [Christ] is not judged; he who does not believe has been judged already, because he has not believed in the name of the unique Son of God.”

So we have the first of three words and the first is addressed to the entire human race, “furthermore those with him are [classified as] invited.” Obviously all believers were invited to accept Christ and they accepted the invitation, they believed in Christ, and that is the predicate nominative masculine plural from the adjective klhtoj. This means that all members of the human race were invited and the response to the invitation is non-meritorious, it is faith in Christ. It means that one of the printouts of the computer of divine decrees for believers is the next word, “election.” Salvation election means that the believer is in the purpose of God. Election at salvation means that you are a member of the human race. You are invited through God-consciousness, normal evangelism, or crisis evangelism, and then you have the opportunity of deciding. If you say yes to the invitation you believe in Christ; if you say no to the invitation you do nothing more or less than reject Christ as saviour. Those who respond to the invitation and believe are then said to be elected to privilege, and those who do not believe are said, of course, to be unbelievers and they are under the concept of spiritual death which leads to the second death. The second classification, then, recognises the believer in time. Many words could have been used but we have the predicate nominative plural from e)klektoj which is one of the words for election. We will translate it “selected.”

We move now to our second word which is the predicate nominative plural from e)klektoj and means chosen or selected. It is a reference to believers in phase two. The believer is chosen or selected for the protocol system, for residence, function and momentum inside the divine dynasphere. That brings us, then, to the five printouts which describe those who are qualified for the protocol system.

Again, we look at it from the standpoint of the omniscience of God. God knew in eternity past every thought, every decision, every action, of every person and how they would all interrelate at a given time and given place in history. The omniscience of God is one of three categories of God’s knowledge and in the omniscience of God we have Him entering into the computer of divine decrees every person who ever would accept Jesus Christ as saviour. From this computer, for those who believe, there are five printouts. These five are all mentioned in one passage, in Romans 8:28-32, and in that particular passage they come in a certain order. The first one is called foreknowledge, the second one is called predestination, the third one is election, the fourth is justification, and the fifth is glorification. Each one of these printouts has a relationship to the royal family of God. Foreknowledge, for example, means that every one of us who is a believer was in the mind of God in eternity past and there never was a time when we were not in the mind of God as a believer. God not only has a plan for our life, it is a plan which existed from eternity past. Predestination means that every believer is in the plan of God, and election means that every believer is in the purpose of God. Justification means that every believer is under the grace policy of God and glorification is simply God's recognition of those members of the royal family of God who live in the protocol system and wind up their lives in this earth as winners. So we are all in the mind of God, we are all in the plan of God, we are all under the grace of God, but not all are winners. This does recognise the fact that decisions are made by believers whereby they are winners or losers in life. But specifically now our passage is dealing with election and to understand election there are a number of principles that must be developed.

We have to start with the omniscience of God. Just as in the doctrine of divine decrees omniscience is one of three categories of divine knowledge, the other two being God's self-knowledge and God's foreknowledge. God's self-knowledge has to do with the fact that God is eternal; His knowledge is eternal. God is Himself and He knows Himself to be beyond comparison with any other creature or being, and because God is infinite His knowledge is beyond boundaries and beyond any of the limitations that we experience as members of the human race. Because God is immutable His knowledge cannot change; God cannot be ignorant about anything. God's knowledge precedes time, it precedes space, and therefore God's knowledge is not subject to time or to space. God knows Himself, He knows His attributes, He knows His plans, He knows His policies, He knows everything which relates to Himself. God's self-knowledge is related to other members of the Trinity as well. Hence, God has eternally known Himself and God has eternally known the other members of the Godhead. Each member of the Trinity has perfect subjective knowledge of Himself and perfect objective knowledge of the other members of the Godhead. The omniscience of God is the second phase of His knowledge and while God's self-knowledge always relates to the Trinity as they have always existed His omniscience relates to all creatures, both angelic and human. Omniscience is defined as God knowing perfectly, eternally, and simultaneously all that is knowable about people, the actual which goes into the decrees and the possible or the probable which does not go into the decrees but is still known to God. The actual is fed into the computer of divine decrees and becomes history, while the possible or the probable are the decisions or actions which could have occurred but did not occur. Every minute detail of both the angelic and human history is completely in God's mind at all times. Therefore, omniscience perceives the free as free, the necessary as necessary, together with all their causes, conditions, relations, as one individual system of things. And this individual system is also indivisible and is therefore the reality of life. There is also the third category which is the foreknowledge of God, and just as God has eternally had knowledge of self the omniscience of God has knowledge of all thoughts, decisions, actions of all people in history, and that is programmed into the computer of divine decrees. He has knowledge of all the probables and what would have happened.

Election is one of the two things that we should note. We have to note that one of the printouts is foreknowledge. In Romans 8:28-32 foreknowledge is the first printout, predestination is the second printout, election is the third printout, justification the fourth, and glorification the fifth. The foreknowledge of God is not the same as the omniscience of God, they are separated by the computer of divine decrees. Foreknowledge and omniscience, therefore, must be distinguished under the principle of rightly dividing the Word of truth. Omniscience programs the computer of human history. It programs in the motives, the thoughts, decisions, the actions of every person throughout all of history, and while foreknowledge is a printout of the decree regarding believers only, nothing therefore is foreknown until it is first decreed. Foreknowledge is not synonymous with omniscience, they are different aspects of divine knowledge. Only the computer of divine decrees establishes reality, which means that foreknowledge follows as a printout of the divine decrees. Foreknowledge makes nothing certain but acknowledges what is certain: the printout of the divine decrees. God foreknows all things as certainly future because He first decreed them from His omniscience. Not only did He decree them but He decreed their interrelationship with all other people. The foreknowledge of God, like election, is a printout of the divine decrees. The omniscience of God feeds the facts into the computer resulting in five categorical printouts.

Our subject is election, and to appreciate and understand election there is Psalm 139:1-6.

Verse 1, "O Lord, you have searched me and known me [in eternity past]."

Verse 2, "You know me when I sit down and when I get up; you understand my thoughts from eternity past."

Verse 3, "You have computed my journey [through life] and my lying down [the manner of my death], in fact you are intimately acquainted with all of my ways."

Verse 4, "Even before there is a word on my tongue, behold, O Lord, you have known it."

Verse 5, "You have encircled me [surrounded me with a wall of fire] behind and in front [we are protected from all sides by logistical grace], obviously you have laid your hand on me."

Verse 6, "Such knowledge [the omniscience of God] is too wonderful for me; it is too high, I cannot attain it." None of us ever have the ability to know everything that ever happens simultaneously. God has in His mind at all times every action, every thought, every decision of every person and how it relates to everyone else in the periphery in any point of time, in any geographical location in any situation or circumstance. That is omniscience.

What is election? Election is the doctrine of the divine control of human history. Predestination is the doctrine of the divine plan for the believer in history and election relates to the purpose of that plan. Justification is how the plan is administered to believers. The imputation of divine righteousness provides the basis for divine support and blessing of all believers, winners and losers, carnal and spiritual, immature and mature. Glorification is the result of all of this when the believer is a winner in the system. Election is the divine control of history and there are three elections in the Bible.

a. The election of Jesus Christ. That has to do with His hypostatic union, His first advent, His incarnation. Jesus Christ was elected to provide strategical and tactical victory for the human race during the time when Satan is the ruler of this world.

b. Israel — only the believers in Israel.

c. The Church — believers in this dispensation.

Election is, therefore, the purpose of God the Father for Jesus Christ in the incarnation. Election is the purpose of believers in Israel when Israel was a client nation. Election is the purpose of believers during the Church Age. So we are talking about election to privilege which relates us as believers in this Church Age to the function of client nations to God. Election means that the believer is in the purpose of God as a part of the historical phase of the angelic conflict. Israel illustrates the principle for us. Israel as the first and last client nation in history is classified as the first election to privilege. The first election to privilege was Israel. The order in which they occur is: a. The election of Israel; b. The election of Christ; c. The Church in the sense of the body of Christ, born-again believers. Perhaps election is easier to understand if we start with Israel. Israel is as a nation the first and last client nation in history. It is classified, therefore, as the first election to privilege. Believers in Israel determined the status quo of Israel at any given time. In BC 1441 Israel began as a client nation. Except for 70 years along the way that continued until AD 70. So for almost 1500 years Israel was a client nation to God, and how that client nation went was determined by the believers. So born-again believers in Israel are the first category in history who are said to be elected. Sometimes it was a small pivot and therefore they went down. Sometimes it was a large pivot and therefore they had great blessing. All of the believers from Moses' generation on are said to be elected. Not the unbelievers. Election says only believers are in the purpose of God. And it relates to history: as goes the believer so goes history. That is splitting the coin and looking at the other side of the doctrine of election. Only believers in Israel were elected to privilege and had the potential of becoming a part of the pivot as it then existed, the pivot of mature believers around which the client nation functions in freedom, evangelism, missionary effort, and spiritual momentum through the perception of Bible doctrine.

As goes the pivot so goes the nation. Those believers who are spinning off of the pivot are elected to privilege. What is election? It is the privilege of contributing to the blessing of a Gentile nation by advancing to maturity, not by carrying signs, not by social action, not by any form of getting involved with conspiracy or revolution, but by advancing to maturity in the protocol system. Only the believer in the Church Age is elected to privilege even as only the believer starting with Moses was elected to privilege in Israel.

There are many passages which deal with the subject. For example, 1 Peter 1:1,2, “ ... who are elected to privilege according to the foreknowledge of God the Father.” So Peter mentions two of the printouts. Election means that God has a purpose for our lives; foreknowledge means we were in the mind of God billions of years ago. These are both printouts from the computer and so Peter relates the two of them showing that election to privilege has to do with believers only.

Election is also related to the printout of predestination, one of Paul’s favourite subjects. Ephesians 1:4,5, “Just as he has elected us in him before the foundation of the world.” The omniscience of God programmed into the computer the information and election is one of the printouts. So before the foundation of the world we were invited. He knew that we would be invited, that we would accept Christ as saviour; therefore we are not only foreknown, we are also elected. We have therefore a purpose, “so he predestined us to adoption as sons through Christ Jesus.” Election to be understood must be related to key concepts such as client nation and privilege. The Jews in the Old Testament had four different client nations and it was the privilege of the Jewish believer living under the laws of divine establishment, advancing to maturity through basically the faith-rest drill, who turned the tide. We have even a greater opportunity because we are royal family of God, we live in the Church Age, and we have the protocol system, the divine dynasphere used by Jesus Christ. So the first election is the election of Israel. That is now past. Jews are still elected by believing in Christ. They are entered into union with Christ.

There is no longer a Jewish client nation and there will not be again until the second advent of Christ. In the meantime we live in the times of the Gentiles and we have another doctrine of election based upon the royal family of God and upon the fact that between the election of the Church and the election of Israel Jesus Christ came into the world and His humanity entered into the prototype divine dynasphere. Because His humanity was perfect inside of the divine dynasphere He went to the cross and was judged for the sins of the world, another printout from the computer of divine decrees. Therefore, the invitation has always existed to all since [unlimited atonement] He was judged for all.

Now, here we are with the third election. It deals with us in the Church Age because we have the operational divine dynasphere. We have a purpose and no matter how humble our circumstances, no matter how great, no matter how discouraging, no matter how prosperous, God has a purpose for our life as believers. That purpose is called election to privilege.

Notice, for example, Isaiah 42:1 where we have the second election, “Behold, my servant, whom I sustain [through the prototype divine dynasphere]; my elected one [Jesus Christ historically is the second election] in whom my soul delights. I have put my Spirit upon him [the prototype divine dynasphere].”

Acts 2:23, “This one [Jesus Christ], delivered up by the predetermined plan and foreknowledge of God, you have nailed to the cross.” Notice that Jesus Christ in hypostatic union was also under the principle of the five printouts. At the moment of the virgin birth Jesus Christ was predestined. The humanity of Christ was in the mind of the Father, the mind of the Spirit, in eternity past. He was also not only elected but He was predestined, He was in the plan of God the Father — the plan of the incarnation. Election: Jesus Christ was in the purpose of God the Father. Foreknowledge: He was in the mind of God the Father. And His justification was His resurrection and ascension, different from our justification. His glorification took place at the session, when he was seated at the right hand of the Father. So the five printouts for us under the principle of election also applied to the humanity of Christ during the first advent.

1 Peter 2:4,6, “And coming to him [Christ] as a living stone, rejected by men, but elect and precious in the sight of God ... But contained in the scripture [Isaiah 28:16]: ‘Behold I lay in Zion a chief corner stone, elected, in fact he who believes in him will not be put to shame’.” The believers of Israel were the elect, they were elected to privilege. As goes the believer in Israel so goes the client nation to God. That is what election means. We are elected to privilege. In the times of the Gentiles, the Church Age, as goes the believer in the client nation so goes that client nation. That is election. Jesus Christ brings them both together. He is the chief corner stone; He is the second election. Historically, the first election: Israel; historically, the second election: our Lord Jesus Christ; historically, the third election: the Church. Cf. Isaiah 45:4; Romans 9:6,7; 11:1-7.

The election of the Church is also an election to privilege. After the first 40 years, in AD 70, no client nation Israel could exist. There will be Jewish states throughout history but none of them can be client nations. It is now the Church all the way to the Rapture. 1 Thessalonians 1:4, “Knowing, brethren loved of God, His election for you,” it is the believer alone who is elected. Election is the motivation for the royal family of God. 2 Timothy 1:9, “The one who has saved us, and elected us to a holy station [in life], not according to our works, but according to his own predetermined plan which has been given to us in Christ before human history.” Under election to privilege the Church Age believer is responsible to our Lord Jesus Christ for the fulfillment of the privilege. And what is the privilege? To have momentum in the system, the protocol system, the divine dynasphere, to live in the system, to advance in the system from gate four to gate eight; and as a result to join the pivot and to enlarge the pivot so that the client nation may be delivered. Titus 1:1, “Paul, a slave of God, and an apostle of Jesus Christ, according to the doctrine of God’s elected ones,” Paul had a special message with regard to election, and as such he was the slave of God, he was the apostle of Jesus Christ. The doctrine has to do with election, “the full knowledge of the doctrine according to the norms of godliness” is what he goes on to speak about. Ephesians 4:1, “Therefore, I the prisoner of the Lord, continue to encourage you to walk in a manner worthy of your station in life.” He means to get back into the divine dynasphere. You not only construct and edification complex of the soul but you become a part of the pivot of mature believers, “into which station you have been elected.” Cf. Ephesians 1:3-6. Jesus Christ is pursuing us in grace right now so that we can fulfill the principle.

After e)klektoj in our verse the third classification of the royal family is kai pistoi, the last word in verse 14. It is the predicate nominative plural pistoi which means faithful, and meaning faithful it also has a different connotation. All people who accept Christ as saviour were invited, that is the gospel. Then they are elected to privilege. The final word “faithful” means that some believers in time are winners and some are losers. Attitude toward Bible doctrine, attitude toward the protocol system makes the difference. It is the winners who form the pivot and have the impact on history; it is the losers that bring trouble, because they are a spin-off and therefore have an effect on history.

Where do we find this word pistoj? Matthew 25:21, "Well done, good and faithful servant; you have been faithful in a few things, I will make you ruler over many things." Notice that God doesn't require a high IQ, a great personality, success, prosperity, He requires faithfulness. Faithfulness in the little things leads to faithfulness in greater things which result becoming a winner. Luke 16:10, "He who is faithful in a very little thing is faithful also in much; and he who is unrighteous in a very little thing is also unrighteous in much." 1 Corinthians 4:1,2, "Let a man regard us [the ministry] in this manner, a servant of Christ, and stewards of the mysteries of God. In this case, moreover, it is required in a steward that he be found faithful." 1 Timothy 1:12, "I thank Christ Jesus our Lord, who has strengthened me, because he considered me faithful, putting me in his service." Revelation 2:10, "Keep on becoming faithful until death," the word "faithful" is talking about a winner, someone who is a plugger, not someone who sky rockets and is very scintillating for a moment and then fades out into the darkness, "and I will give you a crown of life."

Verse 14, "These will make war against the Lamb, but the Lamb will conquer them because he is the Lord of lords, and King of kings: furthermore those with him are classified as invited [to believe in Christ], and selected [election to privilege], and faithful [winners in time]."

In verse 15 we have the interpretation of the waters. We have three sittings of the woman in this passage. In verse 1 we saw the woman sitting on many waters. In verse 3 we saw the woman sitting on the scarlet beast. In verse 9 we saw that the seven heads are seven mountains "on which the woman sitteth." This is a reference to the woman sitting on the many waters in verse 1. It begins with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated "Then," followed by the present active indicative of the verb legw, communication, usually translated "said," and the dative singular indirect object plus dative of advantage from the personal pronoun e)gw, "Then he said to me." The subject is the nominative plural from u(dor, "waters." Then the aorist active indicative of the verb o(raw, "the waters which you have seen [or saw]."

Next we note that the dominating influence of the great prostitute which is religion. We have an objective genitive from the relative pronoun o(j, "on which," and the nominative singular subject pornh , "whore," a reference to the great ecumenical religious system at the end of the Tribulation, ecumenical religion which performs for money and power in the same manner as the prostitute, therefore the analogy. The analogy to the prostitute is an apt view of the fact that prostitutes are a distraction to establishment truth in the same way that religion is a distraction to all truth.

The prostitute here is in the feminine gender which takes us back to the garden of Eden and the original sin of our parents. In the garden of Eden man was the authority both over the world as well as over the woman. Satan began his attack on the original parents by attacking the woman instead of the man. Religion always sides with those who have no authority for a purpose: to attack establishment authority. Religion is revolutionary; Christianity is constitutionary. Religion teaches freedom without responsibility but the power of freedom is really in virtue. Freedom demands a sense of responsibility or virtue for its perpetuation. Religion is anti-freedom, antiestablishment, and irresponsible because it has no virtue. Just as Satan rejected the authority established by God in the garden, so Satan rejects divine establishment authority in life. Therefore religion is portrayed as a woman because the woman was the first revolutionary in history. Since Adam was the ruling authority on earth his fall would have removed the issue of volition for the woman but the woman would simply have obeyed her husband in that case. However, that is not the way Satan works, he attacks the one with no authority and then destroys authority through the one who has no authority. So just as Satan used the woman to undermine the authority of Adam so Satan uses religion to undermine the authority of establishment and doctrine in life. Establishment recognises the importance of privacy, freedom, the sacredness of property and life, under the protection of the authority of government. Religion undermines all these principles by either trying to be the state or dictating to the state religious policies rather than political policies. So what the prostitute and religion have in common is they are both malcontent.

Eve as a rebellious woman in perfect environment is the perfect analogy, then, to religion. Religion distorts truth just as the woman in the garden distorted the divine mandate when she added with regard to the question: Satan said to her, speaking through the serpent, "You mean that God won't let you eat from the tree?" And her answer was, "He will not let us eat nor touch it." God said nothing about touching the tree. Actually, the woman assumed erroneously that if you eat from the tree you die. She also assumed that if you touch the tree you would die. In other words, she assumed that death lay in the property of the tree, when in fact, death lay in the act of disobedience. Therefore she either deliberately or inadvertently distorted the truth. The truth always deals with the issue of authority but she made it mysterious, the mystique syndrome, and she thought that if you touched the tree you would die, or if you ate from the fruit of the tree. So death did not lie in the property of the tree but in the act of disobedience, negative volition toward the divine mandate. Religion always denies the truth as illustrated by the fact that Satan, the father of religion, immediately told the woman: "Dying, you will not die." He was denying that the wages of disobedience is death. This results in religion ascribing to God false motivation and the maligning of divine essence. As with Satan so with the woman in the garden, her fall was related to arrogance.

Using the whore as the analogy here implies that all religion is arrogant. Satan suggested to the woman that if she ate from the tree she would be equal with God, knowing good and evil. That was the implication of Genesis 3:5. Satan's appeal to the arrogance of the woman is the transfer of Satan's own weakness to the soul of the woman. Therefore religion is a woman receiving the inculcation of Satanic doctrine to itself. The woman was designed by God to be feminine, and to be feminine she has to be subordinate to authority. She rejected the authority of Adam. When she partook of the fruit and sinned Adam was still ruling the world, but not for long. He discovered that he couldn't rule the world without the woman's cooperation, and she had to cooperate by behaving. When women don't behave and don't cooperate it always means that the ruler is discredited. The woman discovered in her fall that she was not like God and that is when she learned what God was like. That is what happens in this chapter. Religion is a woman and as a woman is not equal to God in power but the recipient of divine power in judgment.

So we have, "Then he said to me, The waters which you saw, on which the prostitute sits," the domination and control of ecumenical religion during the Tribulation. We have the word "sits," the present active indicative of kaqhmai meaning domination. The prostitute rules a system and this is analogous to ecumenical religion in its dominating role in the Tribulation. The pictorial present tense depicts the ecumenical religious system dominating people and nations throughout the world in the time of the devil's desperation. The active voice: the prostitute or ecumenical religion produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for a point of eschatological doctrine.

We have four categories which are dominated by the prostitute. The first category are the cultures of the world. Cultures always appear to be strong, many cultures are strong, and people cling to their cultures. Culture, by the way, has nothing to do with race. When you think of culture, think of thought. Culture is the thought of mankind in a specific geographical area. It can be related to race, to history, to a nation, but culture expresses itself in the singing and the dancing, the thinking, the general philosophical concepts, the paintings, the artistry, the talent. Culture expresses itself in thought and talent, and the first category to be dominated is culture. The present active indicative of e)imi comes first, the verb to be. With this we have the predicate nominative plural from the noun laoj, "people." It refers to man under the classification of culture or what people think. We have a progressive present tense, action in progress during the Tribulation. The active voice: waters are interpreted as producing the action. These people are being dominated. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the correct interpretation of waters. The predicate nominative laoj, translated correctly "people" refers to the cultural classification of people. It refers, therefore, to mankind under the classification of what he thinks in terms of culture. The cosmic dynasphere number two is a special trap for the cultures of the world. The noun laoj also means people gathered in crowds. People in crowds come to accept a system of thought, to consider a system of thought, and people in crowds are not there to think for themselves but to learn. Hence, their culture is no defense against this Satanic religion in the field of cosmic evangelism. Religion draws crowds where thinking is neutralised by emotion. Remember that most cultures of the world also express the emotion of people and this ecumenical religious system is not designed to appeal to the people who can think but to appeal to the people through emotion.

In the second category we have the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, "also," and the predicate nominative plural from o)xloj which means multitudes. This classification looks at people from the standpoint of the racial classification of mankind, "also multitudes." There is no race in the world which is not vulnerable to this false system of doctrine.

The third category is called "nations," kai this time is translated "both." This is a predicate nominative plural from e)qnoj, referring to the nations of the world at that time. No nation is exempt from Satanic evangelism. Religion seeks to control and dominate nations. The phallic cult dominated Canaan, Phoenicia, and Carthage. In the middle ages the Roman Catholic church dominated most of the European nations. The union of religion and state destroys human freedom and establishes dictatorships.

The fourth category is language, glwssa, also in the predicate nominative plural. It refers to the linguistic classification of mankind, and language is no barrier to the rapid advance of this religion in the Tribulation.

“Then he said to me, The waters which you saw, no which the prostitute sits, are peoples, and multitudes, both nations, and languages.”

In verses 16 & 17 we have the interpretation of the ten horns now continued and concluded. In verse 16 we see the great civil war. We see the political finally getting tired of religion and rising up to destroy it.

Verse 16, We translate the beginning of the verse, “Both the beast dictator and the ten horns.” We translate it with two kais together, “Both and.” “Both the beast dictator and the ten horns which you saw,” this is the political leadership of the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation. Now finally they come to disgust and this is translated by the nominative plural subject of the immediate demonstrative o(utoj, translated “these,” followed by the future active indicative of the verb misew. They don’t start out despising, they come to despise. At first the nations of the world accept the religious system, later on they detest and abhor it. It connotes aversion leading to hostility. The progressive future denotes the concept of perpetual hostility in future time. The active voice: the political side of the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation dominated all too long now turns and antagonism toward the ecumenical religious system leads to hostility. The indicative mood is declarative. The accusative singular direct object is directed again toward the great prostitute, pornh.

“Both the beast dictator and the ten horns which you saw will despise the prostitute.” This hostility arises over the matter of power and control plus the fact that if there is any establishment in any of these governments they can begin to see that religion is antiestablishment and attack upon their own authority, and they try to do something about it. Needless to say the antagonism results in civil war inside of the revived Roman empire. The result of this civil war is the fall of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation. God uses agents in the administration of personal and historical judgment. In this case the agent is the political hierarchy of the revived Roman empire. As evil as the political system is it turns against another evil. Most civil wars are not good versus evil, they are always evil versus evil with a little good on both sides. But this is strictly evil versus evil without any good on either side. Notice that God uses an evil agent to destroy an evil agent. The union of religion and state not only produces tyranny but revolution and civil war as well. In this civil war ecumenical religion, however, is destroyed.

Next we have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated “then.” After the development of hatred and hostility toward religion the political leadership will act to destroy religious power. Then we have a perfect passive participle of the verb e)rhmw which means to lay waste, to depopulate, to devastate, to bring to ruin, “having been devastated.”

However, the participle is in the accusative case and is therefore used here as a noun . It is part of a double accusative and we translate it “a devastation.”

Next we have the future active indicative of poiew which will be used as an idiom. It means to do or to make but it will not be translated that way here. The predictive future anticipates the judgment of a future religious system, Satan’s greatest system. The active voice: the beast dictator and his ten proconsuls will produce the action of the verb, that is the political leadership of the empire will become hostile to ecumenical religion as a system. It is interesting to note that sometimes religion will develop an army that will nearly conquer the world. The one that almost has is the Muslims. The only thing that stopped them was good establishment organisation, the establishment armies of the Franks. So we have the phrase, “they will make her,” the double accusative “her” and then the impersonal object of the perfect passive participle, “they will ruin her and cause her to be naked [to have her power stripped from her].” The word for naked is gumnoj and it refers to all of the glamour that we studied in the first part of this chapter.

“they will both devour her flesh [converts],” even though these people are rabid. Religion always has its own army and goes in for terrorism. The army always gets very zealous. Zeal becomes a part of arrogance and that leads to terrorism on the one hand, the use of force on the other hand. Force is the one thing that you must never use in evangelism. It isn’t a genuine conversion unless it comes from their own free will. Almost every religion in the world has finally developed an army and has tried to solve its problems by violence. So this religion had an army. The army uses violence, it is not an establishment army. The armies of the middle ages were often religious armies, not establishment armies. They tried to convert people by violence. When they do sooner or later they are destroyed by an establishment army because establishment is God’s way of checking the rise of religion so that people are destroyed. One reason why the establishment army will eventually defeat a religious army is because violence leads to degeneracy.

So we note here then that religion is finally naked. Notice that nakedness means stripped of all glamour, stripped of wealth, and stripped of power. So the next point is that when religion gets degenerate, as inevitably it will because religion always seeks to convert people by intimidation and violence, establishment comes along and strips it. Religion will eventually be defeated by an establishment army, and that is what happened here. The establishment army of the revived Roman empire representing political power will eventually become stronger than religious power because political power has an organised army which is relatively free from degeneracy. The word “flesh” is in the singular here because it is still talking about the prostitute. Her body is destroyed, the body being analogous to her converts. Her converts are destroyed because the converts are depending on the wrong thing, the worst form of evil. The worst form of evil is the weakest form of evil and the weakest form of evil is the most destructive form. Religion has no security because religion is evil, “they will both devour her and burn her with fire.” The burning with fire means total destruction.

Translation: "Both the beast dictator, and the ten horns which you saw, will despise the prostitute, they will ruin her and cause her to be naked, they will both devour her converts, and consume her with fire."

There are four attacks on this ecumenical religious system by the political hierarchy of the revived Roman empire. This is a great civil war in the midst of world war. First there is antagonism in which the whore is despised. This is followed by ruin or destruction which means loss of power and control of the political, and/or the severance of religion and the state. Where the religion dominates the state eventually the state will throw it off. Nakedness is a part of the second step in that it connotes being stripped of all power and attraction. The third step is the devouring of the converts, the flesh. This means persecution and martyrdom of religion and apostate types. Finally, to be burned by fire refers to legal punishment, which means they were destroyed legally by the establishment system and its system of jurisprudence. This is taught as a principle is Leviticus 20:14; 21:9 where the whore is burned in Israel.

In verse 17 we have the fact that Jesus Christ controls history. We begin this verse with the explanatory use of the post positive conjunctive particle gar, "For." Gar explains the hostility of the beast dictator and the ten horns toward ecumenical religion. They previously sponsored it, now they are antagonistic. The subject is the nominative singular from qeoj, "For God." Then the aorist active indicative of didomi which means here to give, "For God has given." "The aorist tense is a culminative aorist viewing the event in its entirety but regarding it from the viewpoint of existing results: hostility toward ecumenical religion of the Tribulation. The active voice: God produces the action of the verb under the principle that Jesus Christ controls history. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the divine decrees. Nations where religion controls always have a tremendous amount of violence. In the 19th century colonialism saved the lives of millions of people and was also the basis for great evangelism. It suppressed religions from following their trend of destruction. For example, in India the Moslems and the Hindus were always killing each other. The British came along and put a stop to it. The very day that they left a million Indians died. Where religion controls there is violence, evil, injustice.

Next we have e)ij plus the accusative plural from the noun kardia, "through their right lobes." It can also be translated "because of their right lobes," "For because of their right lobes God has permitted [didomi]," is the way it should be translated. In other words, because of the power lust of their right lobes God permitted them to execute His will and purpose, the judgment of international religion. Finally the political group in the revived Roman empire wanted the power, they were tired of all this nonsense. Because of what they were thinking in their hearts God used them to execute His will and purpose on ecumenical religion. Hence, there is a principle that comes out of this: Jesus Christ controls history but He often controls history by using the wrath of man to praise Him, as per Psalm 76:10. The verb didomi ordinarily means to give but here it means to permit, just as next we have an aorist active infinitive of poiew which ordinarily means to do but here means to execute, "For because of their right lobes God has permitted them to execute his purpose." The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, that is, the entire action of the last half of the Tribulation. The active voice: the beast dictator of the revived Roman empire produces the action. This is an infinitive of purpose.

God used the hostility of the political hierarchy of the revived Roman empire to judge and destroy the ecumenical religious system of the Tribulation. In controlling history our Lord Jesus Christ often uses finesse punishment. Finesse punishment is to punish someone by using someone who is mad at them. Our Lord Jesus Christ uses an evil nation to punish a nation, or in this case He uses an evil political system to punish an evil religious system. Because of the omniscience of God and the doctrine of divine decrees God uses the wrath of man to praise Him, to execute His will, to fulfill His purpose. The purpose of God is fulfilled in many ways during the course of human history: directly, from those who do the will of God; indirectly, from those who are evil — finesse punishment — following the natural inclination of their arrogance in the cosmic system; sovereignly, through the overruling will of God, the divine protection of believers under logistical grace and divine restraint of evil under the principle of the perpetuation of the human race throughout history; the conversion of bad or evil motivation into a divine purpose.

God's purpose in the formation of the revived Roman empire is therefore given in the next phrase, "therefore." We have the coupling of the conjunction kai, "therefore to give her kingdom to the beast dictator." God has permitted the execution of His purpose. In other words, the beast dictator will take over the religious organization, "until the doctrines from God shall be fulfilled." In other words, Jesus Christ controls history.

So far in verse 17, "For because of their right lobes God has permitted them to execute his purpose," he has permitted the political revived Roman empire to punish the religious, "both to execute one purpose and to give their kingdom to the beast dictator." When the ten rulers of the ten nations of the revived Roman empire gave their power and authority to the beast dictator of the empire God had a purpose in it. God permitted the formation of this great empire. He was going to use them for a finesse judgment. The formation and the consolidation of the ten nations into one great empire fulfills the purpose of God. It would be the whip by which He would take an evil whip and punish an evil religious system. The destruction of ecumenical religion, then, is both the purpose of God and the fulfillment of the seventh bowl judgment. Whether the judgment from God is administered directly or indirectly or through finesse the one principle that stands out is the fact that Jesus Christ controls history. The formation of the revived Roman empire in the Tribulation is the forging of an instrument of judgment. God often permits the rise of an evil empire to fulfill His will and purpose in history without violating the volition or freedom of any individual in history. All prophecy of judgment will be fulfilled, says the last phrase of verse 17, "until the doctrines from God shall be fulfilled."

Translation of verse 17: "For because of their right lobes [the organ of thinking] God has permitted them to execute his purpose [God used the hostility of the political hierarchy of the revived Roman empire to judge and destroy the ecumenical religious system], therefore to give their kingdom to the beast dictator, until the doctrines from God shall be completed."

Principle: Eschatology — “the doctrines from God shall be fulfilled” —anticipates finesse judgment

1. In finesse judgment God does not coerce or violate the volition, the free will, of any human being involved.

2. Actually, God uses the motivational evil of man as His agent to punish evil; the motivational evil of one group to punish the evil of another group.

3. Here, then, is finesse. Evil is used to punish evil. One system of evil becomes the agent, the other system of evil becomes the target.

4. Finesse judgment dramatises the fact that man is the product of his own evil motivation and evil decisions.

5. In fact, finesse judgment is the counterpart to the believer’s self-induced misery from his own bad decisions. This is the other side of the coin from self-induced misery of the individual believer.

6. In application, God uses our bad decisions to punish us and He does this under the principle that every person is responsible for his own decisions. When we produce through evil motivation evil decisions we become the agent of our own punishment, and God isn’t violating our free will.

7. Much of man’s misery is simply the consequence of his own bad decisions.

8. The misery produced by bad motivation followed by bad decisions becomes God’s agent for our punishment.

9. In a similar manner finesse judgment functions. Bad policy and evil decisions nationally become the basis of national judgment. Evil decisions bring both the individual and the nation in contact with evil so that evil punishes evil. This is the pattern of finesse judgment.

Verse 18, the interpretation of the woman. The connective conjunction kai advances the interpretation and so it is translated “Furthermore.” Next we have the nominative singular subject gunh, “woman,” “Furthermore the woman [the religious entity] whom you saw is that great city.” While the woman is called Babylon as a title for the perpetuation of religion from the epicentre of religion, the ancient city of Babylon, it is actually a reference to the city of Rome where we have Rome [the revived Roman empire] sponsoring this organisation. The revived Roman empire is the capital of international religion in the Tribulation as well as the capital of the revived Roman empire. Therefore we have the phrase, “Furthermore the woman which you saw is that great city. Then we have the kingdom of ecumenical religion, "who has a kingdom." We have the articular present active participle of the verb εἶπε which is translated as a relative clause. The pictorial present tense presents to the mind a picture of the eschatological event in the process of occurrence in the Tribulation. The woman here, as the personification of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation, produces the action of the verb: the possession of a religious system of evil, and evil kingdom which rules many of the kingdoms of the world. The participle is circumstantial.

Translation: "The woman which you saw is that great city that rules over the kings of the earth."

What is this system?

1. Religion with its power and influence in the Tribulation is the kingdom over the kings of the earth. This emphasises the international system Satan devised to influence the nations of the Tribulation.

2. Many religions have covered great continents and areas of the earth becoming semi-international but there never has been a totally international religion with the great influence of Satan's ecumenical religious system in the world. Never, until the Tribulation, will there be a truly international religion. This future international religion will reflect the great genius of Satan in controlling people by giving people what they want. By calling the system Babylon the Great we have the combination of idolatry and the phallic cult, including human sacrifice. All of this is reflected in the religious worship of the ancient world.

The religious system is called Babylon the great prostitute, or what we might call the high class call girl. This analogy is based on several principles. For example, the prostitute is never emotionally involved with her customer and this religion in the Tribulation fulfills that principle. The religious system of internationalism never becomes emotionally involved with its converts. For example, the prostitute arouses the lust of her customer and this religion of the future arouses the lust of its converts. For example, the prostitute takes money for her services; this religious system of the future will take money as never before. The great prostitute is described as glamorous and attractive in verse four, so this religion of the future is very glamorous and attractive to its converts. The religion is associated with high classes. Since fornication is a sin the spiritual fornication mentioned in this context is analogous to distraction from the truth or rejection of Bible doctrine. Hence, the religious prostitute of the Tribulation lures even believers away from doctrine. Fornication is mentioned in our passage, verses 2,4, and in 18:3,9; 19:2 but in every case it is not literal fornication but the spiritual fornication of apostate involvement in this Satanic system. Fornication or spiritual adultery, then, is used to describe the reversionism and the apostasy of this great system in the Tribulation.

Chapter 18

Once again we are going to meet the king of arms, the highest-ranking angel in the college of heralds. Most angels do not have wings, therefore when angels do have wings it signifies rank, and with elect angels it means that they have done something special in the prehistoric angelic conflict. Seraphs are defined as angels that have six wings. They are the highest-ranking category of elect angels, according to Isaiah 6:2. Prior to the prehistoric fall of Satan the highest-ranking category of angels were cherubs, their insignia of rank was four wings. At the conclusion of the pre historical angelic conflict a new rank was created for those elect angels whose modus operandi during the prehistoric conflict had glorified the Lord in a special way. In other words, every seraph received a battlefield commission from the prehistoric conflict. Of course, this is analogous to the eternal rewards for mature believers at the judgment seat of Christ.

The king of arms is one of those who has six wings. There are probably about seven or eight out of all of the millions of elect angels who hold this highest rank and the highest of all is the king of arms. The king of arms had a very special ministry in the days of Isaiah, Isaiah 6:6. He was the herald with the special message to Isaiah, Isaiah 6:7. So the king of arms is the first personality that we meet in chapter 18.

The outline for the chapter

Verses 1-8: the announcement of judgment.

Verses 9-19: the reaction of public opinion.

Verses 20-24: the response in heaven.

This is the judgment of ecumenical religion included in chapter eighteen. There are three categories of seraphs in the angelic college of heralds, the one we meet in verse one is the king of arms. We have noted a number of references to the king of arms in Revelation. In 5:2 where he announced, "Who is worthy to break the seals and open the books?" In 8:3-5 the king of arms is portrayed as the angel with the golden incense shovel. In 10:1 again he is called the powerful one. We also note that he has other great decorations indicating that he is the apostle Paul or the Moses of the elect angels. He is said to be the powerful one and is said to be wearing a crown. The crown indicates tremendous decorations. The rainbow over his head is a promise from God for the perpetuation of the human race, and he is the one that carries this part of our Lord's coat of arms. His face was like the sun, a reminder of grace provision for historical disaster, his feet like columns of fire, the wall of fire for positive believers in time of historical disaster. The king of arms carries all of these messages in the coat of arms which he carries. In 14:18, "In the meantime another angel [the same king of arms] who had authority over fire came out from the altar." Now in 18:1 we see him as "another angel." In 18:21 we will see him again as the strong angel; in 19:5 we will see him again. He is said to be a voice coming from the throne; in 19:17, "I saw one angel standing in the sunlight; and he shouted with a loud voice, saying to all the vultures ..." All of these are references to the king of arms, the highest-ranking of all seraphs.

There are at least two having a lesser rank: officers of arms. They rank second in the seraph order. The first is the messenger sent from God the Father to God the Son, Revelation 14:15, and the second one is the angel with the key to the abyss whom we will study in 20:1-3. Third in rank among the seraphs are those who have the full rank of heralds, e.g. 15:7.

The king of arms resumes the interpretation in verse one. The first words in the Greek are part of a prepositional phrase, meta is the preposition, plus o(utoj the demonstrative pronoun in the neuter plural, "After these things." The word "and" does not occur in this passage. It refers to the content of the previous chapter, the rise and fall of ecumenical religion during the Tribulation. Then we have the verb, the aorist active indicative of o(raw, "I saw." John is speaking as the author of the book and the constative aorist tense is simply indicating that point of time when he saw these things. The active voice: John as the human author produces the action. The indicative mood is for the continuation of the content of the book.

At this point we have the most dramatic of all the angelic creatures described here simply under the accusative singular direct object. First of all the adjective a)lloj and the noun a)ggeloj, “another angel,” another of the same category, meaning another angel in the angelic college of heralds. This is the king of arms, the highest-ranking one. He is said to be descending under the present active participle of katabainw. At this point a higher ranking angelic creature has to come down and handle the information. Up to this point we have had a pur sui vant messenger. We studied seven pur sui vant messengers in chapter 16, and number seven, after he administers the seventh bowl judgment which destroys ecumenical religion he stayed around acting as an interpreting angel. All of the angelic creatures in the college of heralds, seraphs, cherubs and pur sui vant messengers, are qualified teachers of Bible doctrine. But after he finished teaching chapter seventeen he had to step aside for the highest-ranking of all, the king of arms, who now comes down to take over to fill us in on the rest of the fall of this great religious empire that we have noted in the past.

“After these things I saw another angel [the king of arms].” Now we come to the first relative clause which is introduced in form by the present active participle of e)xw, translated “who had.” The present tense is a static present representing a condition as perpetually existing. The king of arms has the greatest authority as the highest ranking angelic creature in the college of heralds. The active voice: the king of arms produces the action. It is a circumstantial participle to form a relative clause, and he is said to have great authority. Great authority, by the way, is a reward for both angels from the past prehistoric conflict and for believers who are advancing to maturity and glorifying the Lord in this phase. In the Millennium the greatest authority will go to those members of the royal family who succeeded in utilising the protocol system to the maximum. The exploitation of the protocol system to the maximum means that certain believers will actually rule nations for the last one thousand years in history. Therefore, members of the human race in resurrection bodies — some, a few — are going to have great authority. This is authority given by God as a reward. “After these things I saw another angel who has great authority, coming down from heaven.” Note that we have inserted the relative clause in order to make better English.

So we have the angelic replacement now for the doctrinal teaching which follows. This will be the highest doctrinal teaching of all. Therefore what follows becomes very important.

Principle

In the previous chapter 17 we had a teaching angel which was a pur sui vant messenger. This does not mean that the content of this chapter is any greater than any previous chapter, after all it is all the Word of God, but it does mean that it is a different type of content which the pur sui vant messenger is not permitted to handle. There are certain types of information that can only be handled by certain types of individuals. That is true in the realm of the elect angels and it is true in the realm of Christianity today. There are certain types of doctrinal information that demand the spiritual gift for their proper development and communication. This does not mean that there is any difference in the spiritual life between layman and clergy, it simply means that God has in the total sense of His order allowed certain functions to go with certain spiritual gifts. The content of the message communicated by the pur sui vant messenger, which we have just completed in chapter 17, reveals that ecumenical religion during the Tribulation by its own bad decisions brought about its own downfall. The policy of religion dominating the civil government of the nation inevitably leads to the downfall or loss of power on the part of that religion. Many times in medieval history the Roman Catholic church actually dominated the civil life of people. Wherever it did eventually there was a break away from it and there was a reaction to it. In the 18th, 19, and 20th centuries in South America, Central America, and Mexico, the same situation has occurred. There is never a time when religion dominates the central government of a nation when it does not lead to the destruction of freedom, the loss of concepts of privacy, freedom, and the concept of sacredness of property and life. This means, of course, the downfall or loss of power on the part of that religion because inevitably people will react to it and destroy it. And while Christianity is not a religion it suffers from the same malady when it tries to control the state or become involved in crusader arrogance through social action and civil disobedience.

Christianity is not a religion but occasionally it tries to take on the role of religion. This is because of too much cosmic involvement and the shrinking of the pivot. Christianity is not a religion, nevertheless it suffers from the same malady of religion when it tries to control the state or become involved in crusader arrogance through social action and civil disobedience. The influence of Christianity within the state must be always spiritual. When a client nation declines it is always because born-again believers have become indifferent to the Word of God and the modus operandi of the protocol system. When Christianity tries to be the state, or influence the state through revolution, through violence, through any of the systems of social action or civil disobedience, it becomes apostate. The apostasy is a religious apostasy and Christianity destroys itself and the state. God blesses the civil government and the client nation through the principle of blessing by association related to a large pivot of mature believers. That brings us back to the doctrine of historical trends: as goes the believer, so goes the national entity.

The pivot is where we have to start, then, as we move into this particular chapter

The Pivot

1. The pivot is defined as the accumulation of mature believers living in a client nation or under a civil government in a specific geographical location. Pivots were actually started in the 19th century because they were under the government of the British empire, and the British empire brought establishment to the bush. Behind establishment came missionaries who presented the gospel and taught Bible doctrine and so little pivots were formed in the 19th century in almost every one of the areas of the world.

2. While the pivot is composed primarily of mature believers who have achieved gate eight of the protocol system in the plan of God it may also include, of course, those positive believers whose momentum has taken them past that first great mandate, virtue first.
3. Technically, then, the pivot may include all believers who have fulfilled the principle of virtue first as one of the major priorities in the plan of God.
4. The pivot stands out in contrast to believers living in the cosmic system, believers whose arrogance from motivational evil results in self-righteous arrogance.
5. These believers are apostate, and you can always recognise apostasy by the platitudes, by the self-righteousness, by the crusader arrogance, by the distortion of doctrine and disorientation to reality. There is a certain percentage of born-again believers who are mentally ill from arrogance.
6. The true Christian influence in the national entity is spiritual while the believer's responsibility is defined under the laws of divine establishment.
7. Christianity must never be the state. Religions always try to be the state, e.g. Iran, Arab countries. The influence of Christianity is not influencing the state with Christian principles but growing in grace, establishing a pivot. We therefore believe and advocate to the ultimate the separation of church and state for the true function of freedom and the fulfillment of human volition in the angelic conflict. We support the state, we support establishment, but we are not the establishment.
8. This does not imply that Christians should not serve in government. It does imply that believers in government service must abide by the laws of divine establishment and they must never seek to force Christianity on others. No one should be forced to believe in Christ. People must accept Christ by their own personal consent. In other words, Christianity must not be the state. The reason that ecumenical religion went out under finesse judgment is because they destroyed themselves. When religion seeks to become the state it is a bad decision, and therefore evil cancels evil. God uses evil to punish evil.

The pivot and the client nation

1. The client nation to God is not a Christian nation. There is no such thing as a Christian nation. A Christian nation would mean that every person in the nation is a Christian. It has never existed and it never will, but there is a such a thing as a client nation to God. However, a client nation to God is not a Christian nation, it is simply a national entity in which the civil government recognises establishment principles of freedom, including privacy and the sacredness of property and life.
2. The client nation to God contains a pivot of mature believers, those who have achieved spiritual momentum in the protocol system — spiritual influence.

3. This means that there is enough freedom in that nation to provide for extensive evangelism without government interference or federal persecution. From this evangelism there comes a cadre, a cadre for the pivot. It must be remembered, however, that in the development of a cadre for the pivot not all believers execute the plan of God. So that one of the greatest enemies to spiritual influence in a nation are born-again believers who want to crusade. Not all believers execute the plan of God, they become apostate through life in Satan's cosmic system. And these cosmic believers become potential revolutionists through civil disobedience, they become fanatical crusaders disrupting the freedom and rights of others through social action.

The general characteristics of a client nation to God include the following:

1. A civil government and policy based on the laws of divine establishment. That includes free enterprise.
2. The function of evangelism under the principle of freedom. We who evangelise must recognise the freedom of others. Freedom means privacy. Our job is to clearly present the gospel but we do not force people to accept Christ. We leave people with the information; they must use their volition, and it is wrong on the part of Christians to pressure people.
3. The establishment of local churches which are autonomous. To the extent that local churches form into denominations you are destroying the client nation principle. Denominations become the enemy of client nations. Autonomous local churches: neither connected with other churches to form denominations or spheres of influence, nor involved in any movement which seeks to unite church and state. One of the things that hurt England more than anything else was the fact that Henry the Eighth established his own church and made it part of the state.
4. A vigorous and dynamic Bible teaching to believers which emphasises the protocol system in the plan of God.
5. Missionary activity to other nations under the indigenous principle of not interfering with foreign governments but providing both gospel and Bible teaching for people in the nation. No missionary has the right to interfere with the government and become involved in the politics of the nation where he goes.

God uses one system of evil to cancel another system of evil, and we are seeing that. The revived Roman empire of the Tribulation is a system of political evil and God used that agent for the destruction of ecumenical religion of the Tribulation. Ecumenical religion was destroyed by the agency of the political evil that once sponsored it. That is finesse judgment. In this judgment of ecumenical religion in chapter eighteen we will note in verses 1-8 the announcement of the judgment. The announcement will come from the standpoint of finesse judgment. Then in verses 9-19 we will see the reaction of public opinion in three categories: the rulers of the world, the merchants of the world, the transportation industry of the world. Eventually we will see the response of heaven in verses 20-24.

Why is the fifth cycle of discipline administered to any given nation? Take the cause of the northern kingdom: Hosea chapter 4:1-6, "Hear the doctrine of the Lord you citizens of Israel [northern kingdom, a client nation at the time], because the Lord has a court case against you, the citizens of the nation, because there is no doctrine [no doctrine being taught] and nothing of grace being applied. Obviously there is no knowledge of God in the nation. Instead there is lying and deceiving [lack of virtue among the citizens], both murder and stealing, and rape, plus unrestrained violence. For this cause the land shall mourn, consequently everyone who lives in it shall lose strength [shall languish], along with the animals of the field," in time of degeneracy cruelty to animals is one of the functions, "both the birds of the sky and the fish of the lakes are taken away. Yet, let no one contend [blame others for the judgment], and let no one impugn; for you people are like those who contend against the priest [the communicator of doctrine. They are resisting the doctrine]. Therefore you have stumbled by day [application of doctrine in daily life], furthermore the prophet also will stumble with you by night [the apostate teaching in Bible class]; then I will destroy your mother [nation]. My people are destroyed from lack of knowledge [of doctrine. The reason they went down]. Because you have rejected knowledge, I also will reject you from being my priest nation [client nation]. Since you have neglected the doctrine of your God, I will neglect the next generation [termination of the nation]."

Jeremiah 7:24-26, the reason why the fifth cycle of discipline was administered to the southern kingdom in BC 586: "They did not hear my doctrine nor inclined their ear [negative volition], but they walked in their own counsel [arrogance and human viewpoint generated in the cosmic system] and in the stubbornness of their evil right lobes [scar tissue of the soul from cosmic two], they also went backward not forward. Since the day that their ancestors came out of the land of Egypt [the beginning of the client nation] until this day, I have sent to you day by day my servants the prophets, rising early and sending them. Yet they did not listen to me [negative volition toward doctrine] nor inclined their ear, but they stiffened their neck [scar tissue of the soul]; they did more evil than all of their ancestors.

Jeremiah 15:6, "You have forsaken me, says the Lord, You keep going backward. Therefore I will stretch out my hand against you and destroy you." This is addressed to believers.

And why did the final Jewish client nation go out under the fifth cycle of discipline? Matthew 23:37, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, who kills the prophets and stones those who are sent to her! How often I would have gathered you as my children together, and you were not willing [negative volition]."

It should be noted that the influence of the believer in the client nation, then, is related to his knowledge of Bible doctrine, therefore his momentum in the plan of God. The believer does not interfere or obstruct the function of civil government. To understand the believer's responsibility to his country it is necessary to understand the protocol system, the divine dynasphere.

“After these things,” says Revelation 18:1, “I saw another angel who had great authority coming down from heaven.” We also notice that he is highly decorated. This is brought out in the next phrase, the connective use of the conjunction kai, “and,” followed by the nominative singular subject, “and the earth.” Next we have the aorist passive indicative of the verb fwtizw which means to illuminate, “and the earth was illuminated.” The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in the moment of time, the great flash of light that came from his descent. The active voice: the earth receives the action of the verb as a result of the king of arms coming to earth. The indicative mood is declarative for the glamour, the glory of the uniform of glory in the form of light won by the king of arms as a part of whatever type of eternal reward he possesses. Next we have the preposition e)k plus the ablative of means from doca plus the possessive genitive from a)utoj, “because of his glory.” Usually the ablative is not used to indicate means, that is the instrumental case in the Greek. While the instrumental is used to express means when the expression of means is accompanied by the implication of origin then the ablative is used instead; in this case the ablative of the preposition e)k.

After these things I saw another angel who had great authority descending from heaven; and the earth was illuminated by means of his glory.”

The glory indicates that the elect angels already have their resurrection bodies, or whatever is the equivalent, and they have already received their rewards for the eternal state. So great is the glory of this angelic body that the entire planet earth is illuminated and the translucent light indicates the greatness of this seraph during the prehistoric angelic conflict. This angelic creature is like Moses or Paul as far as his activities in the prehistoric conflict is concerned. His glory is a reward, a part of the decorations that he received for his faithfulness to God in that ancient period.

The announcement of the king of arms is given in verse 2. We have a sequential kai, “Then.” Next we have the aorist active indicative from krazw, “Then he shouted.” This is the proclamation which he makes. The constative aorist tense covers the sound of his voice. The active voice: the one who is making the announcement, the king of arms, produces the action. The mood is declarative indicative for an eschatological event of the future. With it we have en plus the adjective i)sxuroj plus the noun fwnh, “with a powerful voice.”

Then the announcement: the aorist active indicative of the verb piptw which means to fall. We have the aorist tense as a constative aorist contemplating the function of finesse judgment in its entirety. The active voice: Babylon is the title given to the ecumenical religious system, for two reasons: because Babylon was the origin of the system that is used in the religion; because as Peter tells us in 1 Peter 5:13 Babylon became the title for Rome during the Roman empire. Today in Rome we have Rome as the capital of Italy, so that is Rome the city. In Rome, the city, we have the Vatican which is a state in itself and is a religious capital of a semi-ecumenical religion. So in Rome in the future there will be a religious city and there will be a civil city. The religious city is the one that is going to be nuked. We will see the word that tells us that under finesse judgment the political Rome will get tired of being pushed around by the arrogance of the religious system, ecumenical religion of the Tribulation. So political Rome being one system of evil is going to destroy the ecumenical religious system as another system of evil. We know that from a very interesting noun purwsij, a noun that refers to conflagration and the results of a nuclear blast. This word comes later on in our passage.

In the meantime we have a similar verb repeated in the same morphology, “fallen, fallen” is a good way to translate it and bring out the constative aorist. “Then he shouted with a powerful voice, saying, fallen, fallen, is Babylon the great.” This announcement of judgment coincides with the sevenfold judgment in chapter 16:19. Though the seventh bowl judgment is like the sixth, not only is it a finesse judgment but in the administration of finesse judgment there are going to be some of those unbelievers who are going to survive under the principle of judgment by pain. This is crisis evangelism. They have been evangelised under normal conditions and said no. They went as a result into the cosmic system and in the cosmic system they cannot make a good decision because of the resultant subjectivity, and in order to restore objectivity to their souls they are given pain which blacks out the influence of the cosmic system so that one more time they have a chance to accept Christ as saviour. Then there is one more judgment by death and even though this is at the time of the second advent the principle still remains: God guarantees to keep alive the human race. The human race will not be destroyed but He will perform radical surgery on certain sections of the human race in order to protect the human race.

We have next the two analogies to demons. There is an analogy to birds at the end but that doesn't have anything to do with the demons. First of all, then, we have ecumenical religion as a habitation for demons. The intensive use of the conjunction kai is translated “In fact.” Then we have the aorist active indicative from the verb ginomai, “it became.” This is a reference to the destroyed headquarters of ecumenical religion. The culminative aorist tense views the demon connection in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results: demon influence and demon possession of the cosmic system continue even with nuclear destruction. Notice that the nuclear destruction of Babylon does not in any way keep the demons from operating in the area. The active voice: ecumenical religion of the Tribulation produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of this doctrinal principle. Then we have the accusative singular direct object from katoikhthron which means simply “habitation.” Even after the nuclear destruction of that area and everyone is standing around at a distance because they don't want to get contaminated, and they are making their comments. Even though that happens right in the middle of it the demons are still active. Demons are not affected by nuclear activity. Then comes the possessive genitive plural daimoniwn, “it has become the habitation of demons.” This means that demons can operate in any area where any of the great sophisticated weapons are operating. Both demon influence and demon possession is always identified with any form of Satanic religion. The point is that the headquarters for ecumenical religion is destroyed by nuclear weapons and the people at headquarters are all killed but the demons continue to operate. The existence of demons there indicates the fact that the great motivation and the great sustaining power of any form of religion is demonism.

Demons are always the sponsorers of religion and, as a matter of fact, religion is called the devil's communion table, 1 Corinthians 10:19-21. When the revived Roman empire finally gets around to putting a nuclear missile into the headquarters of the religious ecumenical empire they destroy people but the demons are totally unhindered. The unclean spirit here is synonymous with demons as fallen angels. Demons function through religion like idolatry.

Demons can influence the thinking of people, both believers and unbelievers. We call that demon influence. But demon influence can only exist on Satan's playing ground, the cosmic system. Demon influence means demons influence the thinking of believers in the cosmic system, and obviously they also influence the thinking of unbelievers. So demon influence is the first function of demons and it is always directed toward the soul, the thinking and sometimes lack of thinking, because thought is the source of true emotion and if you have emotion without thought you have unlawful emotion, like the holy rollers. True emotion is always generated by thought and the holy rollers can't think. Unlawful emotion comes from taking dope or speaking in tongues.

Demons can indwell the body — demon possession. That is directed toward the body and demons can indwell the bodies of unbelievers; they cannot indwell the bodies of believers. The body of the believer is the temple of the Holy Spirit and he will always be indwelt by the Holy Spirit and the demons cannot go where the Holy Spirit indwells, the demon can only control the soul when the individual is in the cosmic system. Religion, by the way, is one of the many ways in the cosmic system that demons influence the thinking of both believers and unbelievers. Apart from cosmic involvement there are two volitional systems for demon possession: the unlawful isolation of dormant faculties, and passive submission to demons.

What else can demons do? Most other things have been restrained from them. Everything that demons do deals primarily with, for example, demon possession. A person is sick because demons indwell their bodies who have certain categories of illness. There are demons who produce illness. Then they have some so-called healer stand up and "bop" them on the head or wave a towel over them or pronounce the magic word, and Satan tells the demon to go. The demon then leaves the body and you have an actual case of "healing." The healing was demon-induced and the removal of the demon means instant cure. So a lot of the extra natural activity that demons do are related to demon possession. Some are even related to demon influence. Demons can influence the thinking for very strong ideas.

"and is a prison for every unclean spirit," the demons or the unclean spirits are synonymous. We have two phrases here mentioning that fact. The second phrase: the connective conjunction kai, meaning "and," and with it the noun fulakh which means prison, "and is a prison." Then we have the objective genitive singular using three words. First of all, the adjective paj, "every," and then a)kaqartoj, meaning unclean, and then finally the word pneuma used for spirits [demons, disembodied spirits]. There are two categories of demons: those who still have their bodies and those who are disembodied spirits. This is a reference to disembodied spirits but regardless of the category we have noted that they survive any kind of a nuclear holocaust — “and is a prison for every unclean spirit.” Nothing is left of the headquarters except the demons who were there before, and they are still there. As a matter of fact it is now a prison. Apparently the Lord will not permit these demons to move out and go anywhere and now this is their prison. All of the individuals in the religious headquarters which they were influencing are all gone. Nothing is left now but the demons to keep each other company, they have no people to influence or indwell.

Because of the demon infiltration in Genesis chapter six God has placed certain restraints on demon function during the historical phase of the angelic conflict. In Genesis 6:1-6 we have the genetic attack of demons upon the human race. It was accomplished in bodies. That was the first attack and as a result of that God put a limitation on demons for the rest of human history. Until the middle of the Tribulation only disembodied spirits [demons] can function on earth and their attacks are limited to the soul of mankind which they can penetrate, but not apart from man’s consent, and the bodies of human beings which they can penetrate but not apart from human consent. The human consent has to do with involvement in the cosmic system. Demons cannot cohabit with the human race. However, they can influence the human race in various ways.

Apart from the incarnation and the resultant hypostatic union Christ could not have gone to the cross to be judged for our sins. As eternal God Jesus Christ is sovereignty, perfect righteousness, justice, love, eternal life, omnipotence, omniscience, omnipresence, immutability and veracity. These characteristics of our Lord Jesus Christ make it impossible for Him to be judged for our sins. Jesus Christ is eternal life: He cannot die. Jesus Christ is immutability: He cannot change. Jesus Christ is perfect righteousness: He cannot have anything to do with sin, including bearing the sins of the world. Jesus Christ as God is omnipresent, and that means He is infinite: infinity cannot be reduced to the finite situation required for bearing our sins. Therefore, as God Jesus Christ cannot encourage sin, He is not the author of sin, He cannot tempt to sin, Jesus Christ as God can have nothing to do with sin. In order for Jesus Christ to become our saviour He had to be true humanity, and this true humanity had to be perfect. He had to arrive at the cross as Adam was created and that is exactly what happened. He was born perfect because of the virgin birth and He lived out His life inside the prototype divine dynasphere so that He came to the cross in a state of impeccability. In that state of impeccability there was a printout from the computer of divine decrees and all the sins of the entire world were in that printout. Jesus Christ was judged for those sins on the cross, but He was judged in His humanity, he bore our sins in His own body on the tree. The deity of Christ could not be judged for our sins, only the humanity of Christ. Therefore, of course, it was the greatest attack of demons with bodies [not disembodied spirits but fallen angels with bodies] which was made in Genesis 6:1-6 in an attempt to frustrate the true humanity of Christ. He had to be true humanity, there could be no angelic infiltration into the genetics of mankind. Therefore when God headed that off He also put some limitations on demon activity.

So there are two ways in which demons attack the human race today. First, demons can influence the thinking of both believers and unbelievers but demon influence can only exist in the cosmic system. This is an attack upon the soul. Religion is one of the many ways in which in the cosmic system believers and unbelievers are influenced by demons. The demon attack is against your thinking. Secondly, demons can indwell the bodies of certain unbelievers. There is no such thing as demon possession of the believer. The believer's body is the temple of the Holy Spirit which eliminates any possibility of any demon penetrating the body of the believer, therefore demon possession is limited to unbelievers only. But, again, this is only in the cosmic system. Apart from cosmic involvement there are only two volitional systems for demon possession. Firstly, the unlawful isolation of dormant faculties, the body is brought under the control of the soul and the soul is given to Satan, for example, in modern times, the Satanic mass. Such a person becomes, as it were, a disembodied spirit. Other concepts of this system, in part, include mental telepathy, extrasensory perception as a vehicle for the isolation of dormant faculties, spiritism or evil supernaturalism. The isolation of dormant faculties can occur in such things as a seance where a demon-possessed medium is involved. Telepathy or thought transference can be related to demon influence but only inside the cosmic system. Certain forms of hypnosis might even be involved. Secondly, there is passive submission to demons. This can only be accomplished through religion, idolatry, the function of the phallic cult, the use of drugs.

Religious and cosmic systems are demon contact systems devised to neutralise any positive volition toward the truth. For the unbeliever, positive volition toward establishment and the gospel; for the believer, positive volition toward the doctrine of the Word.

“Then he [the king of arms] shouted with a powerful voice, saying, fallen, fallen, is Babylon the great; in fact it has become the habitation of demons and is the prison for every unclean spirit.”

In anticipation of something we will study later on we conclude this verse with the last phrase: the conjunction kai, and once more we have the noun fulakh which generally means a prison of some sort or other. But since Babylon the great has been destroyed we have to call this a prison for demons [nothing left but demons] but with the demons we have all the corpses. The demons are left with the corpses and therefore birds are invited in to the area. That is the last invitation here. Fulakh also means a sentry post and that is the way we are going to translate it here. It is the predicate nominative, “and is the sentry post for.” Then we have a)kaqartoj once more and it refers to birds that live on carrion. It is called unclean and it refers to birds, therefore, like the vulture, the buzzard, the eagle. These are the vultures of Matthew 24:28 who gather for the great feast. They are also called by the genitive singular perfect passive participle of misew used as an adjective and can be translated “hated”. With this we have the noun o)rneon, “bird.” Unclean refers to birds that could not be eaten by the Jews. Inasmuch as the vulture and the buzzard and the eagle feed on carrion they were said to be taboo. They eat human flesh. It is the king of arms who invites them to the feast. We have therefore the participle used as an ascriptive adjective and it views carrion birds from the standpoint of the average person. The average person has no appreciation of the fact that in much of the wilderness, apart from the trash that man leaves, the carrion birds do a great job, “and is the sentry post for every unclean and hated bird.”

In Revelation chapter 19:17,18 we are going to see a very interesting banquet. “Then I saw a unique angel [the king of arms] standing in the sunlight; and he shouted with a loud voice, saying to all the birds that fly in mid air [birds who eat carrion], Come and gather to the great feast from God in order that you may eat the corpses of kings, and the corpses of general officers, the corpses of the mighty, the corpses of horses and their riders, in fact the corpses of all, both volunteers and draftees, both enlisted personnel and the officer corps." So there will be a great banquet in the future and this is a part of that banquet.

We note the principle of evil. A mandate has come from God by which we are warned about these things: Romans 12:21, "Stop being conquered by evil, but conquer evil by means of the good." That is a mandate that is directed to Christianity, to us, because we have the protocol system inside of which is insulation and protection against evil, the evil of the cosmic system. Evil is a factor the believer must face, it was not judged on the cross. For example, Hebrews 5:13,14, "For everyone partaking of milk [new believers, or losers] is ignorant of doctrine pertaining to righteousness [or virtue], because he is immature. But solid food [advanced doctrine] is belonging to the mature believer, who because of self-discipline keeps having his perceptive faculties well trained with reference to differentiating between the virtuous and the evil." This is one of the most important factors in our daily thinking. We must differentiate between what is virtuous and what is evil, what is honourable and what is dishonourable. False doctrine is both evil and even insanity, says Ecclesiastes 9:3, "This is an evil in all that is done under the sun, namely that there is one fate for all men. Furthermore, the right lobes of the human race are full of this evil, and insanity in their right lobes throughout their lives. Afterwards they go to the dead."

Psalms 21:11, "For they stretch out evil upon you, they devise a conspiracy which they are not able to carry out." Conspiracy is said to be evil. It is the result of arrogance, therefore evil, cosmic involvement.

Proverbs 12:12, 20, 21, "The evil desire the plunder of evil men, but the root of righteousness produces virtue. Deceit is in the right lobes of those who devise evil," they are thinking evil, they are deceptive, they are arrogant. Arrogant people cannot be trusted, they have no virtue, they are thinking in terms of motivational evil, "But counselors of establishment possess happiness. No evil happens to the righteous [the believer who is inside of the plan of God], but the evil are filled with trouble." Only the plan of God can take the evil of men against you and turn it into good.

Psalms 121:7, "The Lord will protect you from all evil; he will guard your soul."

Proverbs 1:33, "He who listens to me [doctrine] shall live in security, and shall be at ease in the face of evil."

There are four demon attacks on the human race. The first was a genetic attack in the antediluvian civilization, Genesis 6:1-6. That was accomplished by demons with bodies. The second was the attack of demon possession, an attack of disembodied spirits. The third is the attack of demon influence, also the attack of disembodied spirits. The fourth comes from the Tribulation: the physical attack of demon armies at the end of the Tribulation: Revelation 9:1-12; 13-21; 12:7-17. There is one other possible demon attack which we will be studying in chapter 20:7-10, the activity of demons during the Gog revolution. During the Millennium there will be no demon attacks of any kind.

Before considering Genesis 6:1-6 we should make a distinction between a fable and a myth. A fable is a story like The Fox and the Grapes in which the characters and plot neither pretend reality nor demand credence. A fable is fabricated as the vehicle of a moral or used for didactic instruction. A myth, on the other hand, is a story of anonymous origin prevalent among primitive people and by them accepted as true. They concern supernatural beings and events as well as natural beings and events influenced by supernatural agencies.

There are two kinds of demons operating today: those with bodies who at the present are not permitted on planet earth; those without bodies which we call simply disembodied spirits who are operational on the earth today. Those with bodies are visible and beautiful in appearance. They are the subject of the first demon attack in Genesis chapter 6. Disembodied spirits are invisible demons who are responsible today for both demon possession of the unbeliever, which is the invasion of the human body of the unbeliever in the cosmic system, and demon influence, the invasion of the soul and the personality of both believer and unbeliever in the cosmic system.

The antediluvian assault actually has to do with the very nature of the antediluvian civilisation. It began with the creation of man and terminated with the flood which destroyed the entire population of the earth except for eight believers, Noah and his family. Each civilisation begins with believers only and terminates with some cataclysmic judgment from God. Each civilisation even has its own climate, its own environment, and its own characteristics within species. Man has a different life span in each of these civilisations.

There are three civilisations in which demon activity occurs and is different in each one of these civilisations. First there is the antediluvian civilisation which begins with the creation of man and goes to the flood. It started with two believers, Adam and Eve. They were both saved after the fall. After the flood civilisation starts again with eight believers only: each civilisation is characterised by beginning with believers. The next civilisation is going to be the Millennial civilisation and it begins with believers only. There is demon activity in the antediluvian civilisation and there is demon activity in the post-diluvian civilisation. In the antediluvian civilisation in which demons are involved they are demons with bodies. They are involved in a sexual invasion which is recorded in Genesis 6, Jude 6, 2 Peter 2:4,5, and 1 Peter 3:18-22. This is a genetic attack on the human race to destroy true humanity on the earth and therefore frustrate the first advent of Christ: to keep Christ from coming in the flesh. The second is the post-diluvian civilisation which begins with Noah plus the seven and concludes with the second advent. There are two demon attacks in the post-diluvian civilisation but both are by disembodied spirits. The third civilisation in history is the Millennial civilisation which begins with the second advent and the Tribulational believers who survive. The attack comes at the end of the Millennium, there is no demon activity in the perfect environment of the 1000 years of Millennial history. At the end of that time Satan is released from prison and there will be an attack.

Ethnic demonology is related to the polytheism of the Babylonians, the Assyrians, the Greeks, the Phoenicians, the Canaanites, the Germanic and Indo-European types of demonology or polytheism. All of them include the same things: violence, human sacrifice, the phallic cult, idolatry. All of this involves worship of demons, according to 1 Corinthians 10:19-21. Demons appear, then, to fall into two categories: those who possess bodies and the invisible demons who are disembodied spirits who operate on the earth today but cannot be seen by the visible eye. They have no body and therefore they seek to invade the body of the unbeliever.

In Genesis 6 the object of the demon attack was to frustrate the incarnation of our Lord Jesus Christ, to prevent the humanity of Christ in His hypostatic union and therefore to hinder His saving work on the cross being judged for our sins. Satan tried many times during Old Testament times to destroy the true humanity of Christ. He attacked Adam's seed through the murder of Abel in Genesis chapter four; he attacked Abraham's seed when Sarah was found in the harem of the Egyptian king in Genesis chapter twelve. Pharaoh's mandate to kill the male line of Israel in Exodus 1:10 or to destroy all Israel in Exodus chapter fourteen were simply other Satan-inspired attacks. There are many attacks on the line of David which we have noted before, but the greatest attack of all came in Genesis chapter six.

Verse 1, "Now it came to pass when, man became numerous on the surface of the earth." The word for mankind is ha adam and it refers to both male and female. It is a generic term and it does not refer to women as such, it has no gender connotation. However, the gender does come into the picture with the population explosion which is mentioned in Genesis chapter six, "that daughters [beautiful women] were born to them." This is simply a way of saying there was an excess of females.

Verse 2 — "the sons of God," this should be translated "the sons of the gods." It is beni-ha-Elohim which is not son of God or sons of God. It is in the plural. Elohim is a title for the members of the Trinity when they are considered as a group, and then you call it "God". The suffix im is a plural suffix and it can be translated literally, "the sons of the gods." It is a technical term which is used four times in the Old Testament — Job 1:6; 2:1; 38:7; Daniel 3:25, and in each case it refers to angels. "Son of God" in the Greek is a title for the Lord Jesus Christ used in the New Testament and is a different language entirely. The "sons of gods" are demons. They would include the Titans.

In Genesis 3:15 after the fall God said to the first parents: "I will put hostility between you [Satan] and the woman [the true humanity as the source of the humanity of Christ], between your seed [Satan and the demons and unbelievers] and her seed [Christ in hypostatic union]," so one of the first titles of our Lord is "her seed." "And he [Christ] will crush your head [the head of Satan], and you [Satan] will crush he heel [at the cross]."

So the "sons," like Jupiter, Neptune, Pluto, and grandsons like Apollo, are "the sons of the gods," the sons of the Titans.

Verse 2, “the sons of the gods saw the daughters of mankind, that they were beautiful; so they took for themselves women, whomever they selected.” Why were they able to do so well with the ladies on earth? Because of their extreme beauty.

Verse 3, “Then the Lord said, ‘My Spirit [God the Holy Spirit in His function of common grace] will not contend with man forever,” the key here is “forever.” In other words, the only time you can be saved is in time, now. That is why you must believe in Christ while you are on earth, there is no change of status in eternity, “in his going astray [fornication with demons] he is flesh [true humanity],” in other words, the women who fornicated with the demons were true humanity, but their progeny will not be, “therefore his days will be one hundred and twenty years.” The Spirit would strive with man for 120 years because the judgment that would take them all into eternity would not occur until then, and for 120 years you have the same kind of powerful evangelism that will occur in the Tribulation. There would be 120 years before the flood destroyed corrupted humanity involved in that angelic conflict.

This attack apparently began 120 years before the flood. As a result of the fornication with demons we now have an attack upon the human race. We now have the progeny which is half demon half human. This group would all turn down the strong evangelism and would be destroyed by the flood. A very interesting thing comes out of this. God has promised not only that the human race will never be destroyed but that the earth will never be destroyed by flood. When the flood came there were apparently only eight human beings left on the earth who were true humanity.

Verse 4, Half human, half demons are called ha nephalim which means “fallen ones.” The word is taken from the Hebrew verb naphal which means to fall. It is equivalent to the Greek piptw. Nephalim means “fallen ones.” “The Nephalim were on the earth in those days,” the half human-half angelic creatures that were multiplying so rapidly that it was going to become a race down to the time of the flood, “therefore also afterward, the sons of the gods went in [had sex] with the daughters of men, and had children by them, were the heroes who from ancient history were famous men.”

We might notice some of the things that happened as a result of this.

The pattern of demon activity from the genetic attack on the human race: ecstasy, frenzy, and violence. We have Dionysus the god of wine, the promoter of orgiastic demon cults emphasizing emotion taking over reason. Normal emotion is simply the result of reason. Hence, demon penetration of the soul was involved here as well. The emphasis was on utter freedom, escape from human limitations by total communion with demons in the ecstasy brought on with wine, music, torch light dancing, and so on. The results were violence, sexual orgies. Dionysus became the demon of orgy and abandon. He was accompanied by demon-possessed women called “mad ones” who abandoned themselves to the demons to produce a lust frenzy related to both sex and violence. The Dionysian cult became an orgy of sex and human sacrifice, and in the middle of these things the priest and the priestess couldn’t control it and people were just torn apart.

Demon influence on thought and politics, an entire different type of demon activity: Apollo and the oracle of Delphi is one of the greatest illustrations. Apollo is the champion of lucidity, the embodiment of the Hellenistic spirit. As the god or demon of light Apollo was very much involved in the kingdom of darkness and he had a number of priestesses at Delphi. The priestess would go into a trance, her body would be possessed by the demon Apollo, and then she would make the pronouncements. The ancient world went to the oracle of Delphi for advice and to look at the future. Delphi became a demon system for controlling the lives of famous people, rulers, and even nations. Apollo represents the doctrine of demons in 1 Timothy 4:1,2.

The deceit of demon miracle healing.

Mythology gives us the pattern in the god or demon of healing, the progeny of Apollo. He was the demon who had charge of all illness and could produce it. Healing temples were constructed for his worship. To understand how demon healing works you have to go to Satan's two demon princes. One is Abaddon or Appolyon, Revelation 9:11, the prince in charge of overt warfare. The second is Beelzebub who is in charge of covert warfare and who also has charge of a sub organisation, operation mole, which is a plan to give Satan's human servants credibility in the Christian community. Satan's human deceivers include sorcerers who perform feats of necromancy, exorcists, divine healers, unbelievers involved in the tongues movement. Beelzebub is a ruler or a prince of demons and in some of his under cover activities, we note in Matthew 12:24, "When the Pharisees heard it, they said, 'This man [speaking of Jesus] casts out demons only by Beelzebub the ruler of demons.'" In other words, they claimed from their own theology of the past that Beelzebub was actually pulling out these demons who caused the illness and they alleged that that is how the Lord was performing the miracles of healing. Mark 3:22, "And the scribes who came down from Jerusalem were saying, 'He is possessed by Beelzebub,' and 'He casts out demons by the ruler of demons'." This is the way they tried to explain away our Lord's acts of healing.

Actually, there are three sources of human illness. There is psychologically-induced illness, there is physiologically-induced illness, and there is demon-induced illness. Demon-induced illness is operation mole. Some demon gets into the body of an unbeliever, he has an illness, then Beelzebub gives a command to come out, and there is instant healing.

In Genesis 6:1-4 we have the genetic acts that started the ball rolling. Verse 5, "Then the Lord observed that the evil of mankind was great on the earth, and every motive of the thoughts of his right lobe was only evil all the time." In other words, demon influence among those who were even true humanity, with a few exceptions. It must be remembered that all of this time great evangelism is occurring on the earth. The genetic destruction of true humanity became highly contagious. The half angel, half human creatures possessed super intellect and super strength, but with super intellect and super strength they had no virtue or restraint of any kind. The violence, the arrogance, and the unrestrained high IQ in a strong body was disastrous to the human race. The stories of the gods of Mount Olympus and the gods of the Canaanites and Phoenicians are filled with every category of evil. Evil and violence ruled the world in the antediluvian civilisation.

Verse 6, “Therefore the Lord himself repented that he had made man on planet earth, and he was grieved in his right lobe.” That He repented means that He changed His mind that he had made man on planet earth. Actually, this is merely an anthropopathism. It is going to explain why the flood; why the human race as it was then known had to be destroyed. Repent, changing the mind, is a human function and in order to bring to an end this demon invasion and to make it possible for true humanity to continue on the earth and for us to be here today we have judgment by death. Both evil and genetics were destroying the very purpose for which the Lord created mankind so something had to be done about it.

Verse 7, “Then the Lord decreed, ‘I will blot out mankind whom I have created from the face of the land, from man to animals to reptiles, to birds in the sky; For I have changed my mind that I have made them’.”

Verse 8, “But Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord.” Noah was a believer. Then follows the family history of Noah. Noah, a justified man [faith in Christ, he was a believer] was uncontaminated in his entire genealogy. From Adam to Noah through the line of Seth there was no demon genetics of any kind. The line was uncontaminated by genetic attack of the demons. Furthermore, Noah himself walked with God. He was the original pivot type believer. In the perpetuation of true humanity Noah had three sons: Shem, Ham, and Japheth.

Verse 11, “Now the earth was corrupt in the sight of God,” the effectiveness of the demon genetic attack from fallen angels with bodies, “furthermore the earth was saturated with violence.” This helps to explain judgment by death. When violence becomes too great on the earth, in order to protect the human race God destroys certain segments of the human race.

There is a parallel passage which begins in Matthew 24:37, “For the coming of the Son of Man [second advent] will be just like the days of Noah.” The genetic angelic attack in the time of Noah is comparable to the attack of the demon assault armies at the end of the Tribulation.

Verse 38, “For in those days which were before the flood they were eating and drinking [normal functions], they were marrying and giving in marriage [normal functions], until the day that Noah entered the ark” — they were preoccupied with their normal pleasures [preoccupation with self]

Verse 39 — “and they did not understand until the flood came and took them all away, so shall the coming of the Son of Man be.” There was no effective client nation in the time of Noah therefore the absence of the laws of divine establishment meant unrestrained demon activity. People were in better health than they had ever been in history. Health is not spirituality. There was no establishment, however.

Genesis 6:12, “Consequently God looked at the earth, and behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted their way on the earth.” This effectiveness of the genetic attack by demons. True humanity was almost extinct. The line of Christ must be true humanity all of the way from Adam to the virgin Mary, therefore the necessity of destroying the hybrid race — half human, half angelic creature.

Verse 13, “Then God said to Noah, ‘The end of all flesh has come before me,’ an idiom meaning I’m thinking about destroying the entire human race, “for the earth has become saturated with violence because of their presence [of demon sexual attacks and the evil function of their progeny]; now behold, I am about to destroy them with the earth’.” Corrupted humanity and fallen angels were to be removed from planet earth to Hades.

The fallen angels who were involved in the Genesis chapter six modus operandi were judged. In 2 Peter 2:4 we have a reference to their judgment. “For if God did not spare the angels [the Nephalim] when they sinned, but incarcerated them in pits of darkness in Tartarus, to be constantly guarded for future judgment.” The fallen angels involved in the genetic attack on the human race were sent to Hades and imprisoned in Tartarus. We note that in our passage in Revelation 18:2 it says, “Then he [the king of arms] shouted with a powerful voice, saying, Fallen, fallen, is Babylon the great, in fact it has become the habitation of demons and a prison for every unclean spirit.” The demons involved in the function of the ecumenical system of the Tribulation could not leave the area even though they were not destroyed by the nuclear attack. This tells us something about disembodied spirits. In Jude 6: “And the angels [demons] who had not kept their status quo, but abandoned their proper place of residence, he guarded them in eternal chains under thick darkness for that judgment day.”

Summary of the genetic attack of Genesis chapter six

1. The demons involved in the attack have been imprisoned in Hades in the compartment known as Tartarus, and they are there until the judgment day at the end of the Millennium.
2. The corrupted part of the human race was destroyed by the flood, and the corrupted part are also in Hades but their location is Torments where they are waiting for their trial and judgment at the great white throne.
3. Demons who at present function on planet earth under Satan’s command are disembodied spirits. This means that having no bodies they have no sexual capabilities. It further means that they are invisible to mankind.
4. Disembodied demons seek to invade the soul of mankind, and this is called demon influence. They also seek to penetrate the bodies of mankind, and this is called demon possession. Demon influence can only occur, however, when the believer or unbeliever is living in the cosmic system. There is no vulnerability to demons except in the cosmic system. Demon influence is the invasion of the soul of a believer or unbeliever. However, demon possession is the invasion of the body of the unbeliever only, and it can only occur in the cosmic system.

5. Present day invasions of demons do not include sex. Hence, never again will the human race undergo any genetical attack from Satan. The genetical attack was terminated at the flood, it was peculiar to the antediluvian civilisation.

6. All demon sex must be accomplished through a demon possessed person [an unbeliever] or a demon influenced person [believer or unbeliever in the cosmic system]. This means that they can simply influence mankind in that direction but they have no direct involvement. All sexual activity, however, in the phallic cult, including fornication, homosexuality, bestiality, etc. result from demonised human beings. The genetic attack upon the human race has been defeated and will never again be repeated.

The inevitable and eternal victory of our Lord Jesus Christ then comes into focus. The genetic attack failed. It failed because of the grace of God; it failed because Jesus Christ controls history; it failed because true humanity continued to live on planet earth. 1 Peter 2:24 tells us of the victory of the cross, "Who his own self bore our sins in his own body on the cross." Jesus Christ went to the cross as true humanity, and the reason He did is because Satan's greatest attack upon salvation at the cross was frustrated by the flood. At the time of the flood there were only eight people left on earth who were still true humanity from Adam to Noah. The reason they were still true humanity and had resisted every genetic attack is because they were believers, some of them believers of maturity. All of the human race is descended from Noah and his three sons. Our Lord Jesus Christ specifically came from Shem. There were other attacks upon the line of Christ; none of them succeeded. The issue is: Jesus Christ as God cannot be judged for the sins of the world. As God Jesus Christ can only condemn sin, so it was the humanity of Christ [1 Peter 2:20] which was judged for the sins of the world. The victory occurred at the cross, 1 Peter 2:24, but the proclamation of that victory to the Nephalim was announced in 1 Peter 3:18-22. What did our Lord say to them? Hebrews 2:9-15, "But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than angels," Jesus Christ did not become an angel, He was made lower than angels [the hypostatic union, true humanity], "now crowned with glory and honour; because he suffered death so that by the grace of God he might taste death for everyone [unlimited atonement]. For in bringing many sons to glory it was fitting that God [the Father], for whom and through whom everyone exists, to bring to the objective through sufferings the author of their salvation. For both he who sanctified [Jesus Christ through the agency of the baptism of the Spirit and resultant positional truth] sanctifies, and those who are being sanctified [the Church or royal family of God] are all from one source [God the Father is the author of the divine plan]: for which reason he [God the Son] is not ashamed to call them [the royal family] brethren, saying, I will declare your person [Christ the victor] to my brethren [the royal family], in the middle of the Church I will sing your praises [the praises of Christ as the strategic victor of the angelic conflict]. And again [quoting Isaiah 8:17], I [the Church Age believer] will put my trust in him. And again [Isaiah 8:18], Behold I and the children whom God the Father has given to me [a royal family for His third royal warrant]. Since, therefore the children share a common blood and flesh," note the Greek order: blood and flesh. Flesh means simply the body; it is the blood that provides the life in the body, so life comes first, a reference to the perpetuation of true humanity on planet earth in spite of the demon genetic attack in the antediluvian era of history, "he also himself [Christ] shared their humanity [became blood and flesh]," the genetic attack did not frustrate the hypostatic union and the incarnation of Christ. This was our Lord's message to the fallen angels in Tartarus, "in order that through death [the saving work of Christ on the cross] he might destroy [neutralise, render powerless] him who had the power of death, that is, the devil; and might deliver those who through fear of death were subjected to slavery [in the cosmic system] all their lives. For obviously he [Christ at the first advent] did not assume the nature of angels; but he did take on the seed of Abraham." Abraham is post-diluvian and the humanity of Christ is descended from Abraham, David, and so on down the line. This gives us some concept of an attack by demons with bodies.

On the other hand, today, demons with bodies are no longer permitted on earth. They will not be permitted on the earth until the middle of the Tribulation at which time the three demon assault armies will make their attack.

Demon possession is defined as the demon invasion of the body of the unbeliever. It is in contrast with demon influence which is the demon invasion of the soul and the personality of believer or unbeliever. Of the four demon attacks in history of mankind the most prominent today is actually demon influence. It is the most general and it is the most common. The reason why the demons can penetrate the body of the unbeliever is because God the Holy Spirit does not reside in the unbeliever, and the reason why no believer can be demon-possessed is because the body of the believer is the temple of the Holy Spirit. When an unbeliever resides in the cosmic system the potential for demon-possession is there, primarily through religious activity and other ways we will discuss in the future. In the meantime we are looking at believers living in the cosmic system and we see the penetration of their soul by demons.

Indirectly, demons are capable of two categories of violence. Disembodied spirits, demons, operating on planet earth today are capable of these two categories. The first is indirect violence in which the demon must use another human being as the vehicle for the expression of his violence. This is the attack of man against man and it can come from two sources: demon possession of the body in which the body becomes violent and uncontrollable, or demon influence of the soul where a person is motivated to violence. Both demon-possession and demon influence result in violence. All terrorism, all criminal activity, including rape [which is not just fornication, it is a crime and should be punished by death in every case], all the function of religious cults, organisations like the KGB in Russia, are the results of either demon influence or demon-possession, or both. In the case of idolatry certain religious activity are involved in demon-possession. Much more common, however, is demon influence in the cosmic system which is the source of most violence at present. This would include acts of hatred, anger, and certain forms of arrogance. All Muslim activity is related to demonism. Terrorism today is demon-influenced. The support of third world terrorism by the World Council of Churches is demon-influenced.

Believer and unbeliever, apart from perception of doctrine and fellowship with God in the divine dynasphere, are vulnerable to cosmic involvement and demon influence. That would be indirect violence.

Secondly, direct violence from demons is a phenomenon reserved for the last half of the Tribulation. It was also the function of the antediluvian civilisation. So only in two areas of history will there be demon violence from demons with bodies.

The origin of all of the demon influence or demon attack is always the same. It is always the decision of mankind. We are always the products of our own decisions, and in the case of demon influence, demon-possession, or the terrible things that happened in the past and will happen again in the future, they are decisions from a position of weakness. A position of weakness is described and defined as residence in the cosmic system of Satan. In that cosmic system is the function of arrogance and preoccupation with self. All decisions to enter the cosmic system are decisions made from the position of weakness; all decisions made in the cosmic system are decisions from a position of weakness. From this comes the demon influence of believers and unbelievers, and demon-possession of unbelievers only. Decisions made by the believer inside the divine dynasphere are decisions made from a position of strength. Only two decisions can be made in the cosmic system from a position of strength: the decision of the unbeliever to believe in Christ and the decision of the believer priest to rebound means the instant removal from the power of the cosmic system. Since man is the product of his own decisions it is imperative, therefore, that he makes good decisions from a position of strength rather than bad decisions from a position of weakness. Since the flood no member of the human race, believer or unbeliever, ever becomes involved with demons apart from his own free will. All demon involvement in the post-diluvian civilisation comes from one's own decision. The decision to live in the cosmic system inevitably brings one into contact with demons. The target for the demon attack at the end of the Tribulation is the person living in the cosmic system. It is another case of finesse judgment whereby Satan's demon armies attack Satan's human servants living in the cosmic system. They are victims of violence. All demon activity is related to man's free will, human consent. No one has any contact with demons apart from his own bad decisions. All demons are fallen angels under the command of Satan.

The concept of demons: there are many words in both the Hebrew and the Greek. The word shedim in the Hebrew, taken from the noun shed, is one of the common words for demons but it is also used for idols because idolatry is the most basic way to come into contact with demons. We have noted that under the devil's communion table, and we have certain prohibitions regarding idolatry, Leviticus 17:7; Isaiah 13:21. The word for sater demons in the Hebrew is saair. In the destruction of Babylon it was prophesied by Isaiah that the sater demons "will frolic there." In other words, they were imprisoned in that geographical location in the past, just as in the future destruction of Rome, the headquarters of ecumenical religion, the demons will be imprisoned there. Demons, in general, are called in the Greek daimwn. It is mistranslated in the King James version by the word "devils." There is also a specific category of demons, always determined by context when they are discussed categorically, where they are called daimonion, 1 Corinthians 10:20,21. Also there is an adjective: daimoniodhj which means demonic and is used, for example, in James 3:15. Then there is a verb: daimonizw which means to be tormented by demons, to be possessed by demons, sometimes even used for being influenced by demons.

Demon-possession, again, never occurs apart from human consent. Some form of bad decision is made resulting in the demonisation of the body of the unbeliever. These decisions are related to cosmic involvement, idolatry, religious, activity, dabbling in the occult, consulting mediums, the function of necromancy, plus decisions to become involved with drugs, under the title of farmakeia, used for drug addiction leading to demon activity, Galatians 5:20; Revelation 9:21.

The phallic cult, which includes both human sacrifice and idolatry as well as unrestrained sexual activity is mentioned in Luke 8:2, "Also some women who had been healed from demons and sickness." For example, Mary Magdalene from whom seven demons had been cast out. Idolatry is the basic system for demon-possession, Leviticus 17:7; Deuteronomy 32:17; Psalm 96:5; Psalm 106:37,39. Passive submission to demons is accomplished through idolatry, drug addiction, the function of the phallic cult, the emotional revolt of the soul. It is possible for emotion apart from thought to isolate normal faculties and bring them into focus for demon influence or demon-possession. Prolonged involvement in the cosmic system is really the secret. Active submission to demon-possession is violent and painful. The case history is found in Luke 13:11-16.

Demonism destroyed Canaan; demonism is a part of degeneracy. Saul is a case of demonism. He dabbled in the occult and because of his practice of necromancy he was punished with maximum discipline, the sin unto death, 1 Chronicles 10:13,14. Demons are often used by God for the administration of the sin unto death, and there are two illustrations in the New testament: 1 Corinthians 5:5; 1 Timothy 1:19,20. The believer involved in 1 Cor. 5:5 changed his attitude, however, and rebounded. His discipline was canceled short of death, whereas the one in 1 Timothy was carried out. Furthermore, the demonisation of a nation results in the destruction of that nation. There is a case in Isaiah chapter 47 and also in Jeremiah chapter 27. Ministers who faithfully teach Bible doctrine are often targets of demon influence, 1 Timothy 3:6,7. Demon influence is always thought transference of demon doctrines to the believer or unbeliever in the cosmic system and therefore is different from demon possession. Demon influence involves thinking, motivational thinking to many evil things. Evil can be accomplished through motivational thinking or evil can be accomplished by direct demon possession and, of course, only the unbeliever can be demon-possessed and therefore only the unbeliever is involved in those forms of evil that are direct. But those that are indirect from thought motivation come to both believer and unbeliever under the principle of demon influence.

In 1 Timothy 4:1 we read, "But the same Holy Spirit [the One who vindicated our Lord in the prototype divine dynasphere] explicitly communicates that in latter periods of time [technical for the time between the first and second advents of Christ] some believers will become apostate from doctrine, paying attention to deceitful spirits [the category of demons who are disembodied spirits] and concentrating on doctrine from demons."

So demon influence is thought transference. Doctrine by definition is a system of teaching. Demons are engaged in a system of teaching through thought transference or demon telepathy in the classroom of the cosmic system. Demon influence is the invasion of the soul, the mind, the emotions, the self-consciousness, of the soul, and the resultant invasion therefore of the human personality of the believer or unbeliever who is living in the cosmic system. Again, the cosmic system is the classroom. One enters the cosmic system through active or passive function of the free will. Once inside the cosmic system negative volition toward true doctrine creates a vacuum in which demon influence operates. The Word of God calls that “resisting the doctrine.”

In Ephesians 4:17, “This therefore I explain, and make an emphatic demand through the Lord, that you no longer continue walking just as the Gentiles walk, in the vacuum of their mind.”

That vacuum is a system for drawing in demon doctrine once you are in the cosmic system.

1 Corinthians 2:5, “That your doctrine should not depend on the wisdom of man” — another way of saying demon influence in the cosmic system, “but on the power of God,” doctrine inside the divine dynasphere.

In James 4:6-8 we have a passage that mandates resistance to the cosmic system, “He [God] provides greater grace [grace after salvation: logistical grace, supergrace blessings]. Therefore it says, ‘God makes war against the arrogant, but he gives grace to the humble. Submit therefore to God [life, residence, momentum inside the divine dynasphere]. Resist the devil and he will flee from you [the use of volition in rejecting the temptations of the old sin nature. In other words, staying out of the cosmic system]. Draw near to God [momentum in the divine dynasphere] and he will draw near to you [supergrace blessing to the believer who reaches gate eight]. Cleanse your hands, you sinning ones [the use of the rebound technique]; purify your right lobes [the avoidance of demon influence or demon telepathy], you double-minded [a description of the believer under demon influence].”

Demon influence is relative. That is, there are degrees of demon influence which in effect correspond to the degrees of reversionism. Demon influence is a process of demonisation in which every facet of the soul is essentially controlled by demon thinking so that there is a complete personality change to some form of sociopathic or psychopathic behaviour and personality. We should notice that these things become extremely important as we get into our passage in Revelation chapter eighteen. Here are demons who are forced to stay in their own geographical locality, and until someone comes back and occupies that locale those demons must remain there. However, the second advent will remove that, but there is a precedent found in verse two and that is the fact that demons are often relegated to a geographic only and unless people come back to that area they can't have demon contact. The headquarters for ecumenical religion in the Tribulation is obviously one place that is saturated with demons and once the headquarters is destroyed then the people are dead but the demons are alive, yet they cannot go anywhere. The word “prison,” fulakh, in verse 2 is very important, it means that they cannot leave that area.

Verse 3, the influence of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation. We are going to see a fascinating thing in the middle of this chapter. Even though this headquarters has been subjected to nuclear attack which totally destroys the headquarters and all the people are wiped out the demons are still alive there, but very interesting is the fact that three categories of people are going to gather in that periphery and make comments, and express the reaction of public opinion at this finesse judgment of God. That means that even though there is nuclear activity in the Tribulation the population is not destroyed and, as a matter of fact, the population in that geographical area is not destroyed. Nuclear weapons do not wipe out the population of the world.

We begin the verse with the causal use of the conjunction o(ti, which should be translated “Because.” “For” is the post positive conjunctive particle gar which is not being used here. O(ti is being used all through this passage but for some reason they wanted to translate it like gar. Then we have a nominative plural subject made up of three words: paj, the adjective “all”; the definite article ta; and the noun, e)qnoj, “Because all the nations.” Then we have the perfect active indicative of the verb pinw which means to drink. We translate it, “Because all the nations have drunk” because this is an intensive perfect tense emphasising the existing results from the past completed action. Emphasis on the result is intensified, which is an emphatic method in the Greek of presenting a fact or a status. It is a strong way of saying that a thing is in the past. It has been occurring throughout the Tribulation. Ecumenical religion has accomplished under Satan a tremendous job of evangelising for the cosmic system. The active voice: the nations of the earth during the Tribulation produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal idea from the viewpoint of eschatological reality.

Then we have a long phrase: the preposition e)k plus the ablative from o)inoj, “wine,” not literal wine here but a reference to passion or losing the ability to think, an emotion functioning in the soul not originating from thought. It is the descriptive genitive of qumoj. Qumoj tells us that, first of all, all genuine emotion originates from thought. When you have thought with or without emotion you are in a normal status quo but if you have emotion which has no origin in thought, then you are abnormal and you are suffering from what the Bible calls emotional revolt of the soul. Here we simply translate it “passion,” passion in the sense of emotion without thought. The reason we have translated it passion is because of the next word, the possessive genitive from the noun porneia, not for literal fornication but for spiritual fornication which is life in the cosmic system. All believers in the cosmic system are committing spiritual fornication. The degeneracy of nations in the Tribulation is manifest from their participation in the phallic cult phase of this Satanic-type international religion. Idolatry is always the key to the phallic cult and this international religion is characterised by idolatry, the worship of the abomination of desolation.

Now we know something else about the geographical location of demons. Wherever someone sets up an idol of any kind demons are permitted to go to that geographical area and are permitted to function there by God. Once the idol is destroyed they have to stay there unless some idol is set up nearby and they have to have divine permission to travel. Demons are simply not free to roam around the earth at will. Even though Satan is the ruler of this world they are limited to geographical locations which can be traced by the history of idolatry in the human race. This is why in 1 Corinthians 10:19-21 we have this great principle of the devil's communion table. The devil's communion table is nothing more or less than an idol being set up somewhere, or an idol temple, or the unlawful isolation of dormant faculties, and this brings demons to that area. They function there until that situation is destroyed and to leave that area they have to have divine permission. Obviously, they were not given that permission to leave the area of the destruction of the headquarters of ecumenical religion, verse 2. That is why the destroyed area is said to be a habitation of demons and a prison for every unclean spirit.

The word "wine" is used here for the wine of religion intoxicating its converts, making them drunk with arrogance. Therefore "drinking from the wine of the passion of her fornication" refers to involvement in the cosmic system. This means that religion had a tremendous influence over rulers at that time. We have, again, the conjunction kai introducing additional information, translated "Furthermore." Next we have the nominative plural from the noun basileuj, "the kings," means the rulers, with the adverbial genitive of place gh, "the kings of the earth." Then we have the aorist active indicative of the verb pornew which means to fornicate, "the kings of the earth fornicated." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety: the influence of ecumenical religion on these kings or rulers. The active voice: the rulers of planet earth during the Tribulation produce the action. The mood is declarative indicative for eschatological reality. "With her" is a prepositional phrase, meta plus the genitive of the intensive pronoun a)utoj.

Then there is an influence over business. Not only do they dominate politics of the Tribulation but they dominate the economic situation. By the way, the Tribulation up until near the end is a time of great worldwide prosperity and a lot of it has to do with this religion.

We have the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, translated "also," then the nominative plural subject from e)mporoj which means business men, wholesale dealers and retail dealers, merchants. We have the adverbial genitive of place again, "also the merchants of the earth."

Note the next phrase: the aorist active indicative from ploutew, because the merchants of the earth became very wealthy during the Tribulation. Ploutew means to become rich. The ingressive aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb from the standpoint of its beginning. The ingressive aorist denotes entrance into a state or condition, and as never before in history there will be worldwide prosperity. The active voice: the merchants produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood: eschatological reality. Next we have "from the power," e)k plus the ablative of dunamij, and a technical use of dunamij. Dunamij is often technical for a dynasphere, whether it is the divine dynasphere or the cosmic system. Here it refers to the cosmic system, "also the merchants of the earth became rich from the power." Then we have a descriptive genitive, strhnoj, meaning luxury or sensuality or both, "of her luxury" or "her sensuality," either way. This will be the basis for the second wail, the wail of the kings in verses 9,10. It should be noted that the word strhnoj in the Attic Greek means arrogance, wantonness and, in the genitive, eager desire. It also means luxury, sensuality, and this is the connotation carried into the Koine and only used once as far as the Bible is concerned.

This verse emphasises both the political power and the economic influence of international religion in the Tribulation. The lamentation of the political rulers in verses 9 and 10 indicates their loss of power and influence when ecumenical religion receives the administration of finesse judgment. The lamentation of the business men who have prospered from this religion in verse 11-16 also have a terrible grief because the world economy is going to be destroyed when this headquarters is nuked. Lust for luxury comes from life in the cosmic dynasphere. There is one way in which luxury will ruin you every time. There is nothing wrong with luxury — it is often a sign of real prosperity — as long as you can handle luxury. The only way that you can handle luxury is from virtue. People who have virtue have capacity for luxury when it is available and when they can afford it. That is true in the Tribulation. They can afford it, but those who lust for luxury really can never afford it, it destroys them because lust for luxury comes from the cosmic system whereas virtue comes from the divine dynasphere, the protocol system of God. Virtue gives you capacity for luxury but lust for luxury from the cosmic system means that luxury of any kind never makes you happy. The lamentation of the businessmen who have prospered from ecumenical religion in verses 11-16 indicates how the economy of the Tribulation is tied into this Satanic religious system.

There is something else coming up in this passage, and that is the fact that the rulers of the earth mentioned in this passage and the great businessmen have the greatest influence. Rulers have political power and the giants of business have monetary power, and they have a tremendous loyalty to this ecumenical religious system. But note that the loyalty is purchased. The rulers buy power from the religion and therefore have loyalty; business buys prosperity from the religious system and therefore their loyalty is purchased. This is generally the structure of life and this is why loyalty is never really loyalty unless there is virtue. Most cases of loyalty in life are purchased: loyalty only exists as long as the price is right, as long as someone is profiting from it, as long as someone is gaining power from it. Loyalty, therefore, is never a virtue in itself, loyalty is only a virtue where virtue preexists. Where there is loyalty without virtue, loyalty without capacity for life, it isn't loyalty at all. So we are going to see how loyalty cancels loyalty.

That is what is going to be expressed here. Lust for luxury comes from life in the cosmic dynasphere number one. Converts to the international religious system have no loyalty. International religion of the Tribulation both controls the political life of the revived Roman empire and stimulates the world economy in certain luxury items. The more powerful the religion the greater the demand for luxury items. In other words, this Satanic system creates a market for luxury to accompany lust for luxury. First of all the religion created a lust for luxury. Religion always creates arrogance and arrogance creates lust, and one of the areas of lust is lust for luxury.

Verse 4, The word “And” is the sequential use of the conjunction kai. This is followed by the aorist active indicative of the verb a)kouw which means to hear. Some of the visions are audio and some of them are visual, and we get both kinds in the book of Revelation. The aorist tense is a constative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: John as the human writer produces the action: the writing of the book of Revelation under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. Doctrine and truth is always associated with reality. Not only are we learning doctrine for its application but we learn Bible doctrine to keep in touch with reality in life — not the hard way, not the easy way, but the best way. The best way to keep in touch with reality is through the understanding of Bible doctrine as truth: “You shall know the truth and the truth shall set you free.”

With this we have the accusative singular direct object from two words, the adjective a)lloj meaning another of the same kind, same category, plus the nominative of a)ggeloi, “Then I heard another angel [the officer of arms from the angelic college of heralds].” He is said to be coming from heaven and saying. We have in this verse a separation mandate from the officer of arms. He is the second in the angelic college of heralds in the seraph rank, he is next to the king of heralds and he is the one who comes with this mandate. This is all a part of the protocol of heaven. We have the aorist active imperative of the verb e)xerxomai, “come out” with the connotation of separation. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: Tribulational believers must produce the action of the verb by separating from the apostate religious system.

That is a very important principle of separation. If you are in an apostate religious system, a cult of any kind, you will be judged or disciplined by God as an apostate believer. You are guilty by association because one of the first principles of doctrine you learn is to separate yourself from any religious organisation. We are in the world but not of the world. That means that we can have those in charge of us — bosses, companies — made up of 98 per cent unbelievers, and that is fine. That is the way it should be. But when it comes to your off time, the time when you are away from business and away from work, then you are required to maintain the high standard of separation. Separation demands that you stay away from apostate religious systems. Both believers in the Tribulation as well as those believers who are living on the earth in this dispensation of the Church who fail to separate themselves from religion will be disciplined by association. There are two ways that believers are disciplined because they fail to obey this command. One of them, of course, is the principle of association and the second one is the principle of participation. Association means that you are as pure as the driven snow but you’re hooked up with a religious organisation; participation means that the snow starts to melt and mixes with the mud.

In your lifetime you are going to have to drive on the same streets as unbelievers, you are going to have to live in neighbourhoods with unbelievers, you are going to have to work in the office with unbelievers, but there are two places, one especially, where you must never get involved with unbelievers and that has to do with your church. The second one is in part your social life, though not altogether because regarding family life you may have a father or a mother or a sister or a brother who is an unbeliever, and you are not required to be unkind to them or to evangelise them by the procedure of snootiness. You do not separate yourself from those who by birth have been joined to you. In other words, never run down your mother. Just because she isn't a Christian it has nothing to do with the case. There are certain times when the application of doctrine requires for you to be present with your unbelieving loved ones and not only to be present with them but be kind and demonstrate the fact that you since your new birth are royal family. But that is an exception. If you find that too many of your friends are either unbelievers or religious or both they will influence your thinking erroneously and you will suffer by association.

You have to remember that the key to separation is thought. The more doctrine you learn, the more doctrine you understand, the more you will stay away from apostate churches. That is a very difficult thing for people who have been in certain church organisations, some of which are merely social organisations with a strong trend toward liberalism, and people all of their lives had their friends in one of these denominational churches. It is very difficult to break away from those friendships. The recommendation is that people listen to doctrine long enough to understand the issue and then make their decision on the basis of the teaching of the Word of God. We need to note this much: When you compromise with religion, which is always the devil's ace trump, you may not compromise mentally and your sins may be the same sins you would have in a good doctrinal church, but there is a principle of judgment by association. When that cult or religious organisation is judged by God you will be punished by association. And if you participate in their sins, as born-again believers did in the Tribulation, then you add another instrument of divine punishment — punishment because of participation. In other words, the Tribulation believers who got into the ecumenical religious system, and accepted the mark of the beast and went into the whole thing, they are going to share in the judgment administered to ecumenical religion. This, of course, means a lot would share in the finesse judgment which includes judgment by death.

This is an imperative of command to all believers of the Tribulation who have become involved in both the cosmic system and the ecumenical religious system of Satan. The two go together, of course. Believers in the cosmic system are prone to hook up with the wrong organisation. Remember that this has no application to your ties by birth, or your place of business. Don't quit your job because you are the only believer in the factory, in the office, in the organisation.

We have a specific following our aorist active imperative, the preposition e)k plus the ablative of a)utoj. The gender here is feminine singular, "from her." "Then I heard another voice from heaven, saying, Come out from her." This is a reference to the great prostitute, Babylon the great, the ecumenical religious system of the Tribulation.

With this we now have a vocative. To whom is this addressed? This is not a command to unbelievers, the only issue that unbelievers must face is, What think ye of Christ? This is a command to believers: the vocative singular from laoj and with it the possessive genitive from e)gw, "my people." It is a reference to Tribulation people, both Jews and Gentiles. In fact, there were believers involved in the ecumenical religious system and that is why they were called “my people.” It simply means believers living in Satan’s cosmic system and therefore involved in the mark of the beast international religious system. And, of course, the point is: “My people” is also used in a technical way for the Jews since so much of the eschatology of the New Testament talks about the Jews and the abomination of desolation, and how ecumenical religion came to the Jewish state in Palestine in the Tribulation; but “my people” refers to both Jews and Gentiles. The principle is that many believers would rather renounce Christ than suffer death so under the influence of the cosmic system they accept the international religious system of Satan and they become prominent in some phase of the action, either politically, economically, or religiously — or, all three. Obviously, when the abomination of desolation came to Israel as a part of the treaty between the revived Roman empire and the state of Israel many Jewish believers succumbed. They saw a chance, perhaps, to make some money, they wanted to survive, a lot of different reasons. So the vocative of laoj is addressed to them primarily but does not exclude Gentile believers also involved.

Next we have a purpose clause and it is introduced by the conjunction i(na which is one of the primary ways of introducing such a clause, “that” or “in order that.” Then we have the aorist active subjunctive of the verb sugkoinwmeu, taken from the preposition sun, meaning “with,” and koinwneu, meaning “fellowship.” With this also is the negative mh, “that you might not share [participate].” The culminative aorist tense views divine judgment in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, namely believers revolved in the ecumenical religious system sharing the punishment of judgment by death. The active voice: there will be believers involved in the judgment, both Jewish and Gentile, and will die because they hooked up with religion; furthermore, no rewards or decorations in eternity, they will never have a chance to enjoy some of the special privileges of heaven in the future. The gazebo in the garden is closed to them, they will miss that party. The subjunctive mood is potential and has a future connotation used to form the purpose clause with i(na. Next we have the locative plural from a(martia plus the possessive genitive of a)utoj, “in her sins.” In other words, this means judgment by association and it also means judgment by participation. And, of course, judgment means guilt. Sins of religion are contagious to the religious is the principle. Once you get involved in religion and get a little religious then you are vulnerable to the contagion. So this is a warning to believers involved in the ecumenical religious system of the Tribulation. This anticipates all three categories of judgment used against ecumenical religion but it anticipates believers being involved.

There are three categories of judgment we will note. First there is judgment by pain: the first five bowl judgments — Revelation 16:1-11; second, judgment by death: the seventh bowl judgment, Revelation 16:17-21; third is finesse judgment, Revelation 17:16-18; 18:2-8. Crisis evangelism is always the issue in judgment by pain but since we are talking about believers here the pain is warning rather than crisis evangelism. For the unbelievers it would be crisis evangelism but for believers it is a warning to reach down and get out of there quickly. The death principle means that these people are going to receive that particular judgment and finesse judgment means that they were caught in the wrong place at the wrong time, they were in the headquarters where they go out under nuclear attack.

The nuclear attack, the only reference we have in the Tribulation, is very limited and relatively few people get hurt.

This warning, then, from the officer of arms is directed to believers. They are suffering either warning or intensive discipline because of their involvement with ecumenical religion. This warning is designed to restore objectivity and if the believer will not have objectivity through perception of doctrine then he must learn objectivity through the experience of pain through whatever system of discipline God brings to them. There are only two ways that we can have objectivity: perception and application of doctrine, the easy way, or the experience of divine judgment which is the hard way. The point is that believers must remain objective. You cannot be objective in the cosmic system and you cannot be objective functioning in the system of international religion. So it is always a warning to rebound, to get back into the protocol system. Once back in fellowship the first action of the Tribulational believer must be separation from and even renunciation of the ecumenical religious system — and, of course, whatever the consequences that go with it. Separation, then, is an application of Bible doctrine, but it is in our day a limited application. We do not separate ourselves from the normal functions of life; we do separate ourselves from religion, from what is false and apostate in teaching, and in our social life from people who might have a bad influence on us. Separation is the application of Bible doctrine which can only be effective when believers function under the priorities, and the priority is virtue first. The importance of understanding God's plan for your life is a major issue. Do you understand God's plan for your life? If you do then you are familiar with the principle of virtue first. Virtue first will actually resolve where you make your applications and where you do not make your applications. The importance of understanding God's plan for your life includes everything related to the principle of sorting out in your mind with whom you have contact and those with whom you do not have contact. It applies primarily to your outside-of-work spiritual life and social life. It is imperative, then, that we understand this separation in the light of God's plan for your life. One of the ways of resolving it is to function under the mandate, virtue first. When you get to gates five and six there is no question about the subject of separation.

“That you might not share in her sins.” Again, this means two problems. There are two ways in which one shares in the punishment that comes through some form of apostasy. One is by association with it and the other is by participation in its sins.

Now we have judgment by association, the alternative to separation, in the rest of this verse. We begin with a connective conjunction kai which means “and,” followed by the conjunction i(na again, “and that.” Then the aorist active subjunctive of lambanw plus the negative mh, and one again we have a negative purpose clause, “and that you might not receive.” The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it views punishment by association in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results: the divine discipline which comes to the believer because of malfunction in the field of separation. Believers living in the cosmic system inevitably will justify their failure to separate where it is necessary. Believers living in the cosmic system become involved one way or another in something that is wrong in their off-duty hours, like ecumenical religion of the Tribulation system which is the subject here. Involvement in ecumenical religion which is a Satanic system means judgment by association. This means divine discipline in three possible categories. First of all, warning discipline, then intensive discipline, and if that doesn't work, dying discipline. Even though some believers will receive dying discipline remember they do not lose their salvation.

Separation is a very important doctrine for this reason: the believer must always be in touch with reality and his reality must come from doctrine and its application, so that the more doctrine that he has the greater the potential for being oriented to reality. But when he gets into the cosmic system then he loses touch with reality through preoccupation with self in cosmic one and through antagonism toward the truth — resisting the truth — in cosmic two. Many of the gates in cosmic two, including the religious gate, have to do therefore with failure to separate. Once you are in cosmic two you just hook up with religion, you hook up with anti-Christian organisations and anti-Christian ideas. And once you get divorced from reality in the cosmic system you may even punish yourself, it is called finesse judgment.

Believers in the cosmic system become involved in the ecumenical religious system in the Tribulation. Involvement, then, has all the forms of punishment. The active voice: in our passage we are talking about Tribulational believers, but we make application to ourselves as believers living in the Church Age. Application is very necessary when we are discussing eschatology because sometimes when we are looking at interpretation we forget that these principles of eschatology have an application to our daily lives. The subjunctive mood is potential, it implies a future reference and is qualified by the element of contingency. The subjunctive mood is used to form a negative purpose clause with i(na plus mh. The subjunctive mood emphasises the volition of the believer, in this case of making bad decisions in the Tribulation.

Then we have a preposition e)k plus the ablative from plhgh, and with it the possessive genitive of a)utoj, “from her plagues,” a reference to the three judgments of ecumenical religion at the end of the Tribulation.

Translation: “Then I heard another voice [of the officer of arms] from heaven, saying, Come out from her, my people [a mandate to Tribulational believers requiring separation from ecumenical religion], that you might not share in her sins [guilt by participation; guilt by association], and that you might not receive punishment from her plagues.”

Verse 5, the divine condemnation. We begin with the causal use of the conjunction o(ti. O(ti is used in several ways as far as the Greek is concerned. It introduces a causal clause here and we translate it, “Because.” We have a reason for all of this. God is never unreasonable. God has a perfect reason from His perfect wisdom for anything that happens. So we have the causal use of the conjunction o(ti, rather than the word “For,” beginning verse five.

Next we have the nominative plural subject from a(martia, “sins,” and with it the possessive genitive from a)utoj, “her sins.” Then the aorist passive indicative from the verb kollaw meaning to pile up, “Because her sins have been piled up.” The culminative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results: divine judgment. The passive voice: the sins of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation receive the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of both sin and evil in the system of Satan's international religion.

With this we have the improper preposition a)xri plus the genitive from o)uranoj. O)uranoj here is a simple analogy meaning the third heaven or the presence of God, not literally but in a figurative sense. In other words, there are three ways in which sin is discussed in the computer of divine decrees. First of all there is the omniscience of God. The omniscience of God deals with creature action, it knows all of the knowable, has known it eternally, and knows it simultaneously billions of years before the universe existed or before any creature existed. The omniscience of God feeds into the computer of divine decrees. One of the areas that it programs is called sin, and the sins of the world have all been fed into the computer of divine decrees. There are a number of printouts of sin. For example, out of the divine decrees came the printout all of the sins in the history of the human race and they were imputed to our Lord Jesus Christ when He was hanging on the cross. That is why salvation is free and the manner of appropriation has to be compatible with grace, Ephesians 2:8,9.

There are other printouts with regard to sin in the divine decrees. Sin saturation is another printout. In any given generation of history degeneracy produces a saturation of sin and evil and whenever that comes out of the computer that means that that generation must receive judgment from the grace of God. First of all there will be judgment by pain. That is the manner of gleaning those who have rejected Christ time and time again by giving a last chance through crisis evangelism: judgment by pain. Judgment by pain will include two other categories: finesse judgment in which some evil organisation will attack and cause great damage, if not destruction, to a client nation to God; judgment by death in which whatever the cancer is it is removed by radical surgery, judgment by death, so that generations to come may have the same opportunity we have to be evangelised, and for the function of freedom.

"Because her sins have been piled up as high as heaven." That is a generation factor. The computer of divine decrees not only contains the marvelous plan of God in its many printouts, e.g. foreknowledge, predestination, election, imputation, and glorification, but for believers only, and that is for positive believers to become winners. Then there are the printouts for divine discipline: warning discipline, intensive discipline, and the sin unto death for believers. Then there are sin printouts. There are sin printouts at the cross which is the major issue in salvation because there Jesus Christ was judged for our sins. Then there are the effects of sin and evil on any given generation of the human race. "Because her sins have been piled up as high as heaven" is not a literal pileup, that just means that the computer of divine decrees has recorded a saturation point beyond the human race would destroy itself. To prevent the human race from destroying itself we have these various judgments.

Next we have a conjunction kai which introduces a conclusion from the preceding. Therefore we translate it "therefore." Then the nominative subject is qeoj, "therefore God," followed by the aorist active indicative of the verb mnhmoneuw which means to remember, “therefore God has remembered.” We have a culminative aorist tense contemplating the action of the justice of God in its entirety but regarding it from the viewpoint of existing results: the grace judgments of God giving other generations of the human race opportunity and freedom, the same opportunity as those in the past have had for evangelism and for the function of the plan of God in their lives. The active voice: God produces the action in grace judgment. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. Then we have the accusative plural direct from a)dikhma which means crimes. The possessive genitive from a)utoj — “her crimes.” Religion is criminal in its function. (Christianity is not a religion) Religion uses violence to resolve its problems. So in the Tribulation the sins of ecumenical religion are both criminal and evil, therefore related to the phallic cult. While God permits the escalation of these sins and crimes inevitably the justice of God will judge them. God’s timing in the administration of His justice in punishment is always perfect. God permits the free will of mankind to run its course in any given generation but in the end divine justice overrules its consequences in judgment by pain, judgment by death, and finesse judgment.

Translation: “Because her sins have piled up as high as heaven, therefore God has remembered her crimes.”

The sins piling up as high as heaven is a reference, again, to the computer of divine decrees. These sins, crime, and evil modus operandi of ecumenical religion were entered into the computer of divine decrees in eternity past before the foundation of the world. The justice of God coordinates with the omniscience of God and as a result selects the exact right time for the administration of the seven bowl judgments.

In verses 6 & 7 we see that there are always believers who understand historical trends. These believers therefore give prayers and in these verses we see the principle of imprecatory prayers related to divine judgment and understanding historical trends.

The concept of double punishment now comes into focus in verse 6. We have first of all a statement of the law of retribution and we start out with a second aorist. We are going to have a verb following the same verb in the first aorist and that means that we must now take a look at the first and second aorist. We actually have a verb with a first and second aorist of the same verb. The verb is a)podidomi. The first aorist follows the normal function of the verb, the second aorist is brought in to make it an irregular verb because there are certain expressions that the first aorist cannot bring out.

We start with a)podidomi in the second aorist active in parody. The aorist tense here is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb, the execution of divine judgment in its entirety, it takes judgment by pain, adds to it judgment by death, adds to it finesse judgment and gathers it all into one entirety: one entirety to show how we often pay double for our mistakes.

In a client nation even the foreign policy becomes a spiritual issue. We saw this when Isaiah came to his cousin, king Hezekiah, and said to him, Your foreign policy is wrong:

“Woe to them who go down to Egypt for help.” The Assyrian army was about to invade the land and the worst thing that the Jews could do would be to go to Egypt to go for help. That was a foreign policy blunder and therefore there is a relationship in the client nation only between its foreign policy and its spiritual life. Today our spiritual life, generally speaking, in Christianity is stupid and idiotic with no understanding of doctrine, emotionalism, all kinds of idiotic concepts epigrams representing the worst type of stupidity. Therefore, of course, it reflects itself in our foreign policy.

The active voice: the justice of God produces the action of the verb. We have the imperative mood of entreaty. This is a prayer, not a command to God. It is a prayer from believers during the Tribulation. The imperative of entreaty does not convey the finality of a command but has the force of urgency or request. When the aorist imperative is used it denotes summary action, action without delay or formality. It is, therefore, a part of the imprecatory prayers of the Tribulational believers.

It is followed by a dative singular indirect object from autoj, “Pay back to her” or “Give back to her,” a reference to ecumenical religion. Then we have the comparative particle o(j indicating the manner in which divine justice should be exercised, “as.” This is a prayer for the destruction of ecumenical religion, since sins are piled “as high as heaven.” Then we have the nominative singular object of a)utoj, “as she,” ecumenical religion.

Now we go to the first aorist, the first aorist indicative of a)podidomi. Only in the Koine Greek do we have this first and second aorist. Sometimes the morphology of the first aorist simply will not do and therefore a second aorist is added. Many verbs in the Koine Greek have two forms of the aorist tense: one which is irregular and one which is regular. The first aorist simply indicates the one that is regular. When in the same passage in the Word of God you have a first and second aorist of the same verb it has great significance. The second aorist is used for a very definite reason. Those who are praying are asking that God administer judgment, a privilege that does not belong to the believer ordinarily. For example, we do not have the right to pray and imprecatory prayer, but in the Tribulation the imprecatory prayer is acceptable under certain conditions where one understands the entire function of the historical trends.

So we have the first aorist indicative of a)podidomi. In the first aorist we have a culminative aorist and it views the action of the verb in its entirety, the persecution and slaughter of believers in the Tribulation from religion, but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results: judgment by pain, judgment by death. The active voice: ecumenical religion of the Tribulation produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative representing the action of the verb from the viewpoint of reality. Translation: “Give back to her [ecumenical religion of the Tribulation] as she has given [persecution and execution of believers].” The word “you” in the King James version does not occur in the original. Under the law of divine retribution God gives back to the evil organisation what the evil organisation gave to believers. This is the form of a prayer which becomes a summary of the seven bowl judgments of Revelation chapter sixteen. Note the faith-rest function in this prayer which takes personal vengeance out of the hands of the Tribulational believers and places the matter in the court of heaven under the laws of retribution, exactly what we are to do today. It fulfills the principle of Romans 12:19, "Stop avenging yourselves beloved," you and I have no right to personal vengeance. The moment we do we have entered into a state of evil, "instead give place to punishment from the justice of God." Stay out of God's way, let the justice of God with all the facts handle the situation. Then the quotation from Deuteronomy 32:35, "for it stands written, 'Punishment belongs to me, I will repay, says the Lord'." Punishment is the monopoly of the justice of God and that is the basis for the law of retribution.

Next we have the law of double punishment. First of all there is double punishment for evil deeds: judgment by pain; judgment by death. Secondly, there is double punishment for bad decisions: judgment by death; finesse judgment.

We start, then, with the first category which is double punishment for evil deeds under the divine law of retribution. We have the emphatic use of the conjunction kai, "in fact," with the aorist active imperative of the verb diplow plus a cognate accusative with the verb, the noun diplowj, and when the two are put together it is translated, "Pay back double." The constative aorist contemplates double judgment for evil deeds, or evil function. There is evil motivation and evil function. The active voice: Christ produces the action since God the Father has given to Him the function of judgment. The imperative of entreaty is a prayer of Tribulational believers. Notice that in this prayer they ask that divine justice function according to the principle of divine justice, they are not praying as stupid emotional people whose prayers never get any higher than the ceiling.

We have the preposition kata plus the accusative plural of e)rgon, and with it the usual possessive genitive of a)utoj, "according to her deeds," functional evil. Note that they are not seeking vengeance, they are going to the court of heaven and making a plea before the highest court of the universe. Ecumenical religion has persecuted believers; this merits judgment by pain. Ecumenical religion has killed believers; this merits judgment by death. Now it can be seen why these two judgments are redefined. It is because both of them have a grace principle. In praying for double according to her deeds they are recognising the fact that some of the people in ecumenical religion, when they have the opportunity, will believe in Christ. So they pray for double: judgment by pain, crisis evangelism. The other part of double is judgment by death which is radical surgery to eliminate from the human race the cancer so that the next generation will have the same chance that all generations have to believe in Christ. This judgment must be executed by the justice of God. The double punishment for evil function: the first five bowl judgments of Revelation 16:1-11, judgment by pain. The seventh bowl judgment, judgment by death, Revelation 16:7-21. So it was answered in Revelation chapter 16.

Then there is double retribution for bad decisions. We are responsible individually for every decision we ever make. We are also responsible as a nation for our decisions. All nations are responsible for their own decisions. So this is described in a different way, a different analogy is used in order that we might begin to understand and appreciate how these judgments work. The preposition e)n plus the locative singular of pothrion, a drinking goblet, plus "which" the locative singular of the relative pronoun o(j. So we translate: "In fact pay back double for her deeds in the drinking cup which." Then we have our verb the aorist active imperative of kerannumi which means to mix a drink, “to her,” dative singular indirect object of a)utoj. The constative aorist is recognising this punishment when it comes. The active voice: the justice of God will produce the action at the right time. Again, it is the imperative of entreaty, indicating that this is a prayer request for the law of retribution. This is a plea before the court of heaven offered in prayer. Again, we have that accusative singular direct from diplowj, meaning double.

Translation: Verse 5: “Because her sins have piled up as high as heaven, therefore God has remembered her crime.

Verse 6, “Give back to her [ecumenical religion of the Tribulation] as she has given [the law of retribution], in fact pay back double according to her deeds [judgment by pain plus judgment by death]: in the drinking cup which she has mixed mix for her a double portion.”

Note that prior to the administration of these two punishments that the grace of God extended a last call to salvation through judgment by pain or crisis evangelism in the administration of the first five judgments.

We come now in verse 7 to the degree of punishment related to the degree of evil. We start out with the nominative plural from the correlative relative pronoun of degrees o(soj, “To the degree,” not “How much” as in the KJV. Next we have the aorist active indicative of the verb docazw which means to glorify. Then for once we have an intensive pronoun used as an intensive pronoun instead of a personal pronoun. A)utoj is in the accusative singular direct object, and it is used as the intensive pronoun. This is one of those rare cases where it is translated as such. It is the predicate use of the intensive pronoun and therefore it is translated, “To the degree that she has glorified herself.” The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, it takes life in the cosmic system and gathers it up into a single whole. Life in the cosmic system is self-glorification and this is one reason why evil falls out with evil and why two evil entities cannot tolerate each other and one will inevitably destroy the other. This is also one of the ways in which Jesus Christ controls history. The active voice: ecumenical religion locked in the cosmic system produces the action of the verb in the Tribulation. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the relationship between ecumenical religion and Satan’s cosmic system. “To the degree that she has glorified herself.”

Now who will not appreciate the fact that ecumenical religion has glorified itself? Her political sponsorer, the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation. The beast dictator is the one who sponsored ecumenical religion and, as a matter of fact, ecumenical religion made him the titular head of this international system of evil in the future. So, of course, when she starts glorifying herself the political aspect does not appreciate the religious aspect. Therefore there is finesse judgment: the evil agent destroys the evil entity.

We have a connective conjunction kai and the aorist active indicative from strhniaw. It does not mean to “live deliciously” as in the King James version, it means to live sensually. This is a constative aorist tense contemplating the function of the phallic cult in its entirety, not only its concupiscence but its play upon the emotions of others. The active voice:

ecumenical religion of the Tribulation produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative of the function of the phallic cult as a part of ecumenical religion.

“To the degree that she glorified herself and lived sensually.” We have two things mentioned: the glorification of self, arrogance which is motivational evil; living sensually which is functional evil. So we have a double situation in this entity of evil. We have motivational evil which is always some form of arrogance, and then living sensually has to do with the functional evil in cosmic one. Therefore we have, once again, the accusative singular direct object from the correlative pronoun used to connote a comparative degree, tosoutoj, and it should be translated “to the same degree.”

Then we have the aorist active imperative of the verb didomi which means to give. The aorist tense is a constative aorist contemplating the administration of divine punishment in its entirety. We have here a case of nuclear attack in the Tribulation. The active voice: the justice of God produces the action of the verb. The imperative mood is the imperative of request used in prayer, not the imperative of command. The imperative does not convey the finality of a command here but has the force of urgency or request. With this is the dative singular indirect object a)utoj again, “to her.” This is a reference to ecumenical religion in the Tribulation. It is followed by the accusative singular direct object, basimismoj, “torture.” Then we have a nominative of explanation with it, penqoj, used for misery. It should be translated, since it is used of stress of thought and also torture or grief: “to that same degree give her torture and grief.” There are two factors there: torture and grief. Double, in other words. This follows the concept of the imprecatory prayers of the Tribulation saints but it also states the concept of divine punishment. The law of retribution must be administered by the justice of God in keeping with His perfect of the case and in keeping with His immutable virtue. When the believer takes matters into his own hands the law of retribution becomes the law of revenge and the believer sins. There is no prayer here for revenge, this is an appeal to the highest court in the universe, the court of heaven where God sits to administer justice. Believers who become involved in revenge in evil. To take matters into one’s own hands is arrogance, and that arrogance is motivational evil. Then, to go into some form of revenge is functional evil, and when believers get involved in this they are in the cosmic system and they are under demonisation [demon influence]. Hence, you have to be careful that you do not use a prayer for revenge and that is exactly how these believers handle it. They know the doctrine of prayer, they understand the law of divine retribution, and they know how to avoid turning it into personal revenge. Hence, this prayer leaves the matter of divine justice where it belongs, in the hands of God Himself. This prayer for the law of retribution is a legitimate function of the faith-rest drill.

Next we have the viewpoint of ecumenical religion in the second sentence. What is ecumenical religion thinking? The causal conjunction o(ti, “because”; the present active indicative of legw. Legw in this case does not mean to think, it means to speak what you think, “because she said.” The progressive present tense is for an action in the state of persistence. As a result of her arrogance this is her constant thought and brag. The active voice: the ecumenical religion of the Tribulation produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. This is what she really thinks, this is what she really says, this is an expression of her arrogance. First of all it is a thought because of the prepositional phrase that follows, e)n plus the locative of kardia. Kardia is the organ of thought in the soul, not the organ that pumps blood. And we have the possessive genitive of a)utoj, "in her right lobe." The content of her thought manifests both the arrogance of religion and disorientation to reality. We have a false rationale which is actually divorcement from reality, and being divorced from reality results in fantasising. The more fantasising, the less reality. The less reality the greater the subjectivity. The greater the subjectivity the greater the arrogance. It all adds up to a real disaster.

Religion becomes more and more arrogant as it gains power. Religion always starts out humble but gains power, and as it gains power it becomes arrogant. As evil arrogance it goes into competition with other forms of evil and eventually they come into conflict. Her disorientation to reality, then, intensifies the distortion and the disorientation increases with fantasising. All of this means that religion finally becomes a pain in the neck to the political power that sponsors it, the revived Roman empire, and one day finally brings on its own destruction.

Next we have o(ti and for the first time in this chapter o(ti is not a causative conjunction. In fact o(ti will not even be translated. Here the conjunction introduces direct discourse. it is equivalent to a quotation mark in the English and we simply do not translate it, "because she think in her right lobe." The we have what she thinks, we do not translate o(ti. This is what she thinks: the present active indicative of the verb kaqhmai, and it means "I am enthroned." the descriptive present tense for arrogance coming from power. This religious system has gained great power in the world therefore with it there is an increase of arrogance. The active voice: ecumenical religion produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for an unqualified assertion or allegation.

"I am enthroned a queen and I am not a widow." The predicate nominative xhra for widow is rather interesting. When "widow" is explained in the times in which it was written. It meant, as Isaiah says in Isaiah 47:8, "Now then, here this you sensual one, who dwells securely, who says in your right lobe, I am, and there is no one like [beside] me. I will not sit as a widow," a widow means simply loss of power in biblical times. You must interpret it in terms of the time in which it was written, "nor shall I know loss of children [converts]." Not being a widow means not running out of converts or running out of power or adherents, never lacking attention, never being alone. By analogy, the queen is the one getting all the attention, therefore the ecumenical religious system of the Tribulation is getting all of the attention from the general public, and being ignored by the general public is being a widow in the analogy in both this context and in Isaiah 47:8.

Then comes the prayer: "therefore" is the consecutive conjunction kai which is used with the concept of coming to a conclusion. The aorist active subjunctive of o(raw means to see or to observe, then a double negative o)u mh, "therefore I will never see grief." This is the way she thinks: the administration of divine judgment will never come to her. Ecumenical religion of the Tribulation has fantasised power into a system of false security and it is something that people often do, people who suddenly become successful or prominent or famous in some way. They fantasise the publicity, they fantasise the attention, into a system of disorientation to reality. Disorientation to reality is one of the characteristics of life in the cosmic system. This disorientation to reality results in a false sense of security, false confidence, which comes from popularity or power or admiration, or a combination of these things. The result is lots of arrogance and lots of fantasising. Just as the plan of God can only glorify God, so religion can only glorify man or Satan as the author of religion.

Translation: "To the degree that she glorifies herself, and lived sensually, to that same degree give her torture and grief: because she thinks in her right lobe, I am enthroned a queen, I am not a widow, consequently I will never see divine judgment [grief]."

Ecumenical religion of the Tribulation will be blinded by approbation lust. The fulfillment of power lust plus approbation lust will disorient ecumenical religion to the realities of divine judgment. Ecumenical religion will have a false sense of security which will be destroyed by the administration of the seventh bowl judgment and by the tactical nuclear attack on headquarters at "Babylon", the code name for the headquarters in Rome. There is no future in motivational evil; there is no security in motivational evil. Motivational evil, of course, is any form of arrogance.

In verse 8 we have finesse judgment from God, the inevitable punishment of ecumenical religion of the Tribulation, and the inevitable discipline of believers who follow this same pattern of motivational and functional evil.

We note first the suddenness of divine judgment. The reason it is always sudden is because we have a buildup here of a false sense of security. Anyone who builds his security on anything in this life has a false sense of security. Our security must be built upon the structure of Bible doctrine in the soul. Without the structure of doctrine in the soul, the edification complex that comes from gate eight, there is no way that we are going to have a true sense of security and a true orientation to reality. Our reality must be the grace of God. We must be oriented to the grace of God, to the essence of God, His divine attributes and how they function, His policies, His system, all that He has provided for us. As we have noted, God has a plan for each one of us and this is where our orientation must be. Our orientation cannot be in success or approbation or fame.

This discipline comes as a shock. It means simply that the whole system of fantasising, the whole system of putting arrogance into action in one's life, the whole false system of security and subjectivity, is a house of cards and it comes tumbling down.

We start with the preposition dia with the accusative singular from the demonstrative pronoun o(utoj, literally, "because of this" but it is an idiom and never translated that way. It is an inferential idiom meaning "therefore," "therefore in one day her plagues [judgments] will come," the future active indicative of h(kw. It means to arrive on the scene, to come suddenly over the horizon. It is a little different from the usual verb which is e)rxomai. That means to come but it is not used here because this means to show up at your front door, to arrive on the scene. The predictive future, the active voice: finesse judgment from God produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the law of divine retribution in action. The law of divine retribution in action means judgment by death and finesse judgment.

Finesse judgments always come unexpectedly and anything that is unexpected is, of course, sudden and always from a shocking source under the principle that God uses evil to judge evil. This is His finesse judgment. Evil because of arrogance and jealousy, power lust, or because of self-righteousness and crusader arrogance. Evil makes a willing agent of God to destroy another form of evil or another entity of evil. Competition for power makes it possible for evil to function as the agent of God in destroying another form of evil. We call this finesse judgment.

Note again the phrase “in one day” which emphasises the suddenness of divine judgment to the recipient of divine judgment. Even if it had been building up for a long time it is sudden simply because subjectivity never expects any form of disaster like this. By application, this is a reminder to us of how quickly the pivot shrinks, how rapidly the disorganised evil of degeneracy comes into function and is judged by organised evil. Our only protection against finesse judgment from God is the expansion of the pivot of mature believers or believers who have virtue advancing to maturity. Furthermore, in order for the pivot to be enlarged the believer must have the right priorities.

Note that in finesse judgment God does not violate the volition of man. Therefore, finesse judgment dramatises the fact that man is always the product of his own volition. Finesse judgment is the same principle as found in self-induced misery, man is the product of his own bad decisions. Finesse judgment is related to the consequences of man’s evil decisions.

Finesse Judgment

1. In finesse judgment God does not coerce or violate the volition of man. No volition is ever coerced or violated in a finesse judgment. God uses the motivational and functional evil as His agent to punish evil.
2. The finesse is found in the principle that God neutralises evil by means of evil. Zero cancels zero.
3. Finesse judgment dramatises the fact that both man individually and nations collectively are the products of their own evil motivation and evil decisions.

4. The rise of organised and disorganised evil in a country results in the historical possibility of it losing its pivot of mature believers and becoming so evil that God uses the evil of some communist entity to destroy the client nation.
5. The counterpart of finesse judgment from God is the believer's self-induced misery from his own bad decisions outside the protocol system of the plan of God.
6. God uses the believer's bad decisions as an agent to punish the believer, which emphasises the doctrine that every believer is responsible for his own decisions.
7. Unhappiness and misery which results from believers' evil motivation and bad decisions is another case of God using evil to punish evil.
8. Likewise evil policy and bad decisions on the part of a national government result in finesse judgment.

In the last half of this verse we have the three judgments all brought into focus. The first one is given in one word, the nominative of exclamation from the noun qanatoj, "death." It refers to physical death or, more technically, judgment by death. Remember that judgment by death is the function of God's grace in the perpetuation of the human race. Some generations simply hit a saturation of sin that is totally self-destructive. The cancer becomes too great and therefore God brings about the elimination of the cancer through judgment by death so that the next generation will have the same opportunity for salvation, and the next, and the next, and that the angelic conflict will continue to roll throughout human history.

Through natural generation the old sin nature is perpetuated and total depravity which follows results in the self-destructive tendencies. Man left to his own devices and without the restraint of establishment and of a pivot and a client nation somewhere on planet earth would destroy himself. Therefore the self-destructive tendency is corrected through judgment by death. Motivational arrogance and lust for power is a potential bomb in any given generation, a bomb by which man fulfills his own self-destructive tendencies. In this tendency man is in competition with other things for destruction, e.g. the flea, the virus, weapons, terrorism, etc. God has a system to protect us from these things: radical surgery whereby He separates the infected parts of the human race from the non-contaminated parts of the human race. It is called judgment by death.

"Therefore in one day her plagues will come." Then the nominative of exclamation, qanatoj, "death." The Dead Sea is a memorial to the grace of God. What was one of the most advanced civilisations of history is now simply the Dead Sea in a very desert area. In the judgment of Sodom and Gomorra the contamination of the human race was destroyed by death to protect the progeny of Abraham and to guarantee the perpetuation of Israel on the earth during the entire course of history. A similar judgment was leveled against Canaan. If it were not for judgment by death in the previous generations of history we, the human race, would not be alive on earth during this 20th century. Therefore, we can all be thankful for judgment by death. It is God's grace function to guarantee the continuation of mankind through human history. Of the three judgments mentioned in our passage judgment by death is mentioned first.

The next judgment is given the phrase of judgment by pain. Judgment by pain we first noted in chapter 16, verses 1-11. Here in verse 8 we have four words: the conjunction kai repeated twice, nearly always translated "both and," and then two nominatives of exclamation. The first is penqoj which means grief or tragedy or disaster and it actually refers here to self-induced misery, disaster that comes about because of one's own bad decisions. With it we have a second word limoj and it refers to economic depression, economic disaster, "both grief and famine" is the way it would be translated. These nominatives of exclamation, rare in the Koine Greek, simply emphasise a thought. The nominative case is used not as the subject, in fact they are used without the verb, it is used to identify a situation. Standing alone without a verb the noun in the nominative case receives a great deal of emphasis in an identifying way.

Next we have the principle that mankind, both believer and unbeliever, is the product of his own motives, his own thoughts, and his own decisions. When a person is a believer or an unbeliever he falls into this particular law. Bad decisions, then, from a position of weakness, i.e. inside the cosmic system, is the source of man's grief, sorrow and disaster. In other words, without anyone's help we manufacture our own misery from our own thinking, from our own decisions, and from our motivations before we make those decisions. In addition to this God adds to our misery. Inasmuch as we have already manufactured a good batch of misery God adds a concentrate to it called judgment by pain. Judgment by pain is used to the unbeliever. It is called warning and intensive discipline as far as the believer is concerned. Judgment by pain has a purpose: the extension of God's grace to the unbeliever in crisis evangelism.

The nominative of exclamation, penqoj, is a general term for judgment by pain. It includes all of the personal disasters except economic. The second word, limoj, means famine or economic depression and it refers to bad decisions in business or some bad decisions in government that bring about a bad economic situation. Discipline by pain, then, is the counterpart of the divine judgment for the believer under the category of warning discipline or intensive discipline. Believers living in the cosmic system are classified as carnal believers.

The next category is finesse judgment and we start this with a different use of the conjunction kai. This time it introduces a result from what precedes in negative volition toward the gospel as presented by judgment by pain. Those who did not respond were removed by finesse judgment which will be the case in the nuclear attack on the headquarters of ecumenical religion. So we are translating the conjunction this time, "furthermore." Then we have the future passive indicative of the verb katakaiw which means to consume by fire, to be burned. It is correctly translated, "she will be consumed." This is a predictive future, it anticipates the nuclear attack on ecumenical religion's headquarters, code named Babylon. The passive voice: the headquarters in Rome receives the action of the verb through tactical nuclear destruction. The indicative mood is declarative for the future reality of the nuclear destruction of the headquarters for ecumenical religion in the Tribulation. This is followed by a prepositional phrase: e)n plus the instrumental from purwsij, “by fire.”

Next we have a causal conjunction o(ti, “because,” and the nominative singular subject from kurioj and qeoj, “Lord God.” Then the articular aorist active participle from the verb krinw, “because the Lord God has judged.”

Notice that the Lord didn’t reach out and do anything Himself, He merely used an evil agent to destroy an evil entity. This is evil canceling evil. The definite article in the participle is used as a relative pronoun and refers to our Lord Jesus Christ to whom God the Father has delegated all judgment, as per John 5:22,23. With this we have the accusative singular direct object in the feminine, a)utoj, “judged her.” It refers to ecumenical religion as Satan’s international religious system in the Tribulation. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, the nuclear attack on headquarters. It also emphasises the existing results, the total destruction of that headquarters. And who destroyed it? The former sponsorer of ecumenical religion, the beast dictator, the political power of the revived Roman empire. The ellipsis demands the verb e)imi, the verb to be.

Then we have a predicate nominative from the noun isxuroj — omnipotent. It means strong ordinarily but here it should be translated, “because the Lord God who judged her is omnipotent.”

Translation: “Therefore in one day her plagues [the three judgments against ecumenical religion] will come, death, both grief and famine; furthermore she will be consumed by fire [finesse judgment]: because the Lord God who judged her is omnipotent.”

In verses 9-19 we have the public reaction to the nuclear destruction of headquarters of ecumenical religion under the code name Babylon the great. In this paragraph we have three wails of public opinion. Public opinion is always whining about something. The first lamentation is the wail of the political rulers who had so much to gain because of ecumenical religion. We have the first category of mourners in verse 9.

We meet the compromising rulers with a sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated “Then,” followed by the nominative plural subject of basileuj, “kings,” with the genitive of place gh, “the kings of the earth.” These kings must be distinguished from the beast dictator and his ten proconsuls who were formerly rulers of the ten nations in the united states of western union and/or the revived Roman empire. These are a different set of kings; these are the mourners. The beast dictator became hostile when the kings of this context remained friendly. This is a part of that great world war we have already studied. With this we have the articular aorist active participle from porneuw which means to literally fornicate but it also means to spiritually fornicate. To spiritually fornicate is simply a way of expressing apostasy. So we translate it, “who fornicated.” Then the second aorist participle steniaw, “and live sensually with her.” The morphology of both participles is the same. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety: their spiritual fornication in being involved in ecumenical religion and, with that, they live sensually with her, meaning they shared her luxury in this case. The active voice: world rulers who either compromised or became adherents to the ecumenical religious system produce the action of the verb in the Tribulation. The participle is circumstantial. The action of the aorist participle precedes the action of the main verb, and the main verb is their weeping and wailing, their lamentation.

Next comes two verbs of lamentation used in connection with the destruction of ecumenical religion. The kings are standing by, they are not too far away but are a little out of the contamination area, and they are mourning the loss of this system. The first of the two verbs of mourning is the future active indicative of klaiw which means to weep or to cry. The second one is the future middle indicative of the verb koptw, used for the form of lamentation and mourning in the ancient world, the beating of the breast. The ancients would stand at the grave of a loved one, in this case it would be the grave of an entity, and they would bang their chests.

“Then the rulers of the world, who have fornicated [cosmic involvement] and lived sensually with her [functional arrogance of cosmic one], will weep and mourn.”

We have in each case a progressive future tense, linear aktionsart in future time. The active voice: the rulers of the world again produce the action. The indicative mood is declarative for a point of prophetic doctrine. The only difference is in koptw where we have the middle voice, a direct middle which refers the results of the action to the agent thus relating the action more intimately with its subject.

The reason for this is now given in a temporal clause. For the third time in chapters 17 & 18 we have a reference to the tactical nuclear attack. It all begins with the word o(tan, “when.” With the present active subjunctive of blepw we will translate it, “when they see.” The progressive present signifies action in progress. They will be watching it, either on television or being there personally. The active voice: the rulers of the kings of the earth who compromised with ecumenical religion will produce this action. The subjunctive mood is a potential subjunctive but it is used for a future reference. Therefore this makes the clause an indefinite temporal clause. In other words, it hasn’t happened yet and it is only going to happen once in history, in the future.

Then we have the accusative singular direct object from kapnoj, “smoke.” The reason we know this is because of the ablative of source singular from purwsij which refers to burning conflagration and is a technical word used for nuclear attack.

The fascinating thing about this whole passage is that we actually have a case of where the individual who is under some kind of a misconception that we are going to be destroyed by nuclear weapons is wrong. Nuclear attacks will come and go. They will come like plagues, like the flea in the middle ages which caused an estimated 25,000,000 casualties in a short time. There is no system of weaponry, no system of disease, no concept of evil, that will ever destroy the human race.

So when they see the smoke from the conflagration ((porwsij refers to this nuclear attack), and all over the world people will be watching on television — people will visit the sight of this nuclear attack and not be harmed in any way. In spite of this and the great world war that occurs in the Tribulation there will still be millions and even billions of people alive on earth at the second advent. No matter how bad life may be in some area people in some area are living normal lives.

These kings all have great power. People assume that if you have great power that you are happy. That is why people who do not have great power do not know what it is like to have great power. There is no happiness in the possession of power. Only a certain kind of people can possess power and use it properly. That, of course, requires virtue with the personality and the leadership. Then there are those who lust for power and who have no business even being near power. When they manage to get that power then there is an immediate disaster in their area. This is true in business, in politics, and especially in social life. So when these kings see the smoke of the conflagration they are immediately unhappy, even though they have great power and even though they are surrounded by approbation. Lonely people often look for approbation.

It appears as though the city of Rome is involved here but this is no reference to any alleged religion of the moment. We have all kinds of religions claiming to be ecumenical, e.g. the National Council of Churches as a part of the World Council of Churches, and certainly they have produced enough evil to make claim to it; but they are in the wrong dispensation. Probably the record for all time for oppression is held by the Moslems. Islamic countries are inevitably the most cruel countries in the world. They have never developed even a culture of tolerance for anything else. The point is that religion is always cruel. But the fact remains that when we are talking about the two cities of Rome in the Tribulation we are not making any allegations with regard to any of the religions of the present time. Should there be any kind of an elapse of time before the Rapture several things are going to happen. The USA is going back to a pristine form of life and the civilisation will shift to other places. The religions as we know them to day will probably change their names and nations will change their names. If there is any delay then there will be other religious groups emerge and they will do the same thing that religions always do. Religion solves all of its problems by violence. It is intolerant because religion is a system of arrogance.

Translation: “Then the rulers of the world who fornicated [spiritual fornication: apostasy] and lived sensually with her, shall weep and mourn, when they observe the smoke of her conflagration.”

This is the nuclear destruction of the religious Rome as the capital and headquarters of ecumenical religion in the Tribulation. As we have noted, it is destroyed by finesse judgment. The agent in finesse judgment is the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation who sponsored ecumenical religion in its infancy. Needless to say, the agent is evil. An evil agent from its own volition and policy destroys the evil entity, ecumenical religion or Satan’s international religious system of the future. Apparently the attacks of political evil against religious evil include this tactical nuclear destruction of Rome as the headquarters of ecumenical religion. Just as there are two cities of Rome today, the city of Rome and the Vatican, so in the future there will be two cities in one geographical area. Without interfering with anyone's volition or policy God uses evil to neutralise evil. Finesse judgment dramatises the doctrine that everyone is the product of his own decisions. In this case ecumenical religion went too far and antagonised the beast dictator, the political sponsorer, and ecumenical religion was not prepared for what happened. Evil always comes into existence through man's own decisions and man's residence in the cosmic system.

Judgment by pain destroys temporarily the influence of the cosmic system and makes it possible for the unbeliever to have temporary objectivity. In temporary objectivity he is in crisis evangelism and he can hear the gospel again and then respond to or recall what he has already heard. In that way God gives a last chance to everyone. Normal evangelism is the presentation of the gospel in relatively normal times; crisis evangelism is the presentation of the gospel in times of individual or collective catastrophe or disaster. Under normal evangelism the unbeliever has the opportunity of objectively considering the issue of Christ, as in John 3:36. When the unbeliever rejects the gospel under normal evangelism he locates permanently in the cosmic system. His status quo is described by 2 Corinthians 4:3,4, "And even if our gospel is veiled, it is veiled to those who are lost, in whose case the god of this world [Satan] has blinded the minds of the unbelieving [those who are negative at the point of normal evangelism], so that they might not see the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God." Through cosmic involvement the unbeliever becomes disoriented to reality and is subjective. Therefore it is impossible for him to respond to the gospel.

The second principle is judgment by death, physical death. Judgment by death is the function of God's grace in the perpetuation of the human race in any generation. When a printout hits a generation from the divine decrees, when the computer suddenly prints out saturation of sin, then that means that there is a large cancer of human beings who are about to destroy the human race. In order to protect the human race God performs radical surgery on that cancer and removes it by death. That is what happened to the people of Sodom and Gomorra and to thousands of people throughout the world through history.

We start out in this verse with a perfect active participle of istemi. They are standing, They were not destroyed in the destruction. Nuclear warfare does not destroy the world any more than any other warfare. They stood — the perfect of existing state in which the past completed action is dropped from the thought and attention is focused on the existing state. They are alive and unhappy. They have just seen the basis of all their fun destroyed. The active voice: the subjects are kings, rulers, aristocrats. The participle is circumstantial which is best rendered into the English by the conjunction "and" with the finite construction. They are, however, not getting up too close. Even though they are miserable they don't want to die. How do we know that they don't want to die? Because of the prepositional phrase that follows, and it is a very strange prepositional phrase because it is apo plus and adverb makroten. Apo takes the ablative case in a noun or an adjective used as a substantive, but apo does not take an adverb, but it does here because this is Koine Greek. In the Attic Greek you'd never find it. It should be translated literally, "from afar off" or from “far away.” But you don’t translate it that way, it is an idiom. You don’t translate an idiom literally, you translate an idiom in the sense that the idiom is used. It can be translated one of two ways: “some distance away” or “at a distance.” So we translate it, “And they stood at a distance.” That is because they do not want nuclear contamination. But from where they stand they can still see the whole mess. They are standing at a distance because they are still alive and because they experience fear, dia plus the accusative of the noun foboj, “because of fear.” But what kind of fear? They are afraid in themselves but that isn’t what causing all of this wailing, it is caused by the objective genitive from basanismoj which means torture and the possessive genitive of a)utoj, “her torture.” So we translate, “and because of the fear of her torment [fear of nuclear contamination from the blast] they stood at a distance.” And what did they say? “saying.” Legontej is the present active participle of legw. This is present linear aktionsart, they kept saying it over and over again. Then we have the onomatopoetic interjection of pain, o)uai. It is also a nominative of exclamation in which the nominative is used without the verb.

The attack on ecumenical religion in the Tribulation brings into focus the whole subject of nuclear development. Nuclear development moves in two directions. The thing that always makes it worthwhile is first of all the fact that it is used in warfare. It is used under the principle of violence and neutralising the enemy. We have nuclear power and nuclear medicine much of which has been rejected through public opinion. Bureaucracy alone guarantees that the peaceful use of nuclear activity will never be fulfilled.

“saying, Woe, Woe to that great city Babylon [Rome, 1 Peter 5:13]. To make a distinction between political and religious Rome, Babylon is used as the code name. It is also called, “that powerful city.” The reason that Rome is called Babylon is because Babylon was the original of the pantheon related to the phallic cult, the devil’s communion table, and all the semi-ecumenical religions of the ancient world.

Now for the reaction to the shock. It begins with the causal use of the conjunction o(ti, “because.” With this is the locative of time from two words, the adjective numeral e(ij and the noun o(ra, “in one hour.” This emphasises the suddenness of nuclear attack and the quickness of its destruction. And with this we have the recognition on the part of those who survived that this was a judgment for they said, “your judgment,” and we have the nominative singular subject from krisij which means judgment. With it is the possessive genitive from the pronoun su, “your judgment has come,” the aorist active indicative of the verb e)rxomai, meaning to come. The culminative aorist tense views the nuclear attack in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the destruction of the headquarters of ecumenical religion. The active voice: finesse judgment produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of this future event.

We should notice, then, the human motivation in finesse judgment. In using evil as the agent for punishing evil finesse judgment always takes cognisance of human motivation as well as human volition. No human volition is ever coerced. Arrogance is the motivational evil which inspires the modus operandi of functional evil, and the point is that arrogance has no loyalty. That is why the political power destroyed the religious power it had originally sponsored in the Tribulation. This nuclear attack represents the principle that arrogance has no loyalty, arrogance has no virtue. Arrogance is the motivational evil which inspires the modus operandi of functional evil. Arrogance has no loyalty to arrogance, therefore arrogance seeks to destroy the arrogant. The most vicious destruction of an arrogant entity comes from another arrogant group. An arrogant agent is the most vicious destroyer of an arrogant entity and therefore Satan cannot control the civil wars that develop in his system because of arrogance. The arrogant motivation of the dictator of the revived Roman empire, a political power, had no qualms in destroying the arrogance of ecumenical religion of the Tribulation. Even though the political power of the beast dictator originally sponsored that ecumenical religious system under the principle of arrogance there was no loyalty. The absence of loyalty meant that the political made a nuclear attack upon the religious. Therefore arrogance has no loyalty to arrogance and when that becomes very strong motivation arrogance seeks to destroy arrogance. This is the principle of fitnesses judgment.

Verses 11-16, the second lamentation: the wail of the merchants.

Verse 11, We have the doubling of the conjunction kai, and that means “Both and.” We have the nominative plural subject e)mporj. These are the merchant class. They are called “the merchants of the earth,” the genitive of gh. Again we see two words. First of all the present active indicative of klaiw, “weep.” What makes the merchants weep? Loss of profits, going into the red. With that we have the present active indicative of the verb penqew which means to agonise over something. It doesn’t mean simply to mourn. “The merchants of the earth both weep and mourn over her [ecumenical religion].” The motive of their grief is given with the conjunction o(ti, “because.” Then with this we have an adjective o)udeij, “no one,” meaning no customers, no market. It simply refers here to the loss of market, “no one buys,” the present active indicative of the verb a)gorazw, taken from the word market and market place. A)gora is a market, and from that we have the verb a)gorazw which means to buy in the market, “no one buys their,” and the accusative singular direct object from the noun gomoj which, in this case means cargo. It also means merchandise in general or their product. With it is the adverb of time o)uketi, translated “because no one purchases [or buys] their cargo any more.” The motivation for their grief is loss of profit, indicating that they are very heavily involved in marketing their products to ecumenical religion. The merchants no longer have a market for their products, their chief customer was ecumenical religion which is now destroyed.

The destruction of ecumenical religion is the simultaneous destruction of world markets and cargoes. Therefore there will be a depression. It is the destruction of a wealthy economy and a demand for luxury items related to this power system. No ecumenical religion means no world markets for luxury items.

Translation: “The merchants of the earth both weep and mourn over her because no one buys their cargo any more.”

Verse 12, the prosperity and luxury of religion. Religion created a false economy, a demand for luxury items.

“Cargoes of gold, silver, precious gems and pearls, fine linen, purple, silk, and scarlet cloth, and every sort of citron wood, the articles of every category of ivory, expensive wood, bronze, iron, and marble.”

Verse 13, “Cargoes of cinnamon, and spice, of incense, myrrh and frankincense, of wine and olive oil, and fine flour and wheat, cattle and sheep, horses and carriages, both bodies and souls of men.”

“Horses and carriages” reminds us that the Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written. Cinnamon and spice were luxury items. Myrrh and frankincense refer to the perfumes of the ancient world. Olive oil was the base for fine foods as well as fine flour and wheat. Cattle and sheep in abundance and horses and carriages simply mean luxury ways of transportation.

Note that ecumenical religion encourages luxury and slavery for the last line of verse 13, “the bodies and souls of men,” refers to slavery. Always, when there is a rise in luxury items and when there is economic prosperity. That economic prosperity guarantees that certain people will be enslaved one way or the other. Luxury is a matter of personal taste, so notice the personal taste of those who are religious. Luxury not only is a matter of personal taste but it is a matter of the ability to afford those luxuries and religion has both at that time. Slavery is another item though. Slavery is a matter of freedom, therefore luxury should never include slavery without destroying the source of luxury. That is the principle. The source of luxury is economic prosperity. Slavery turns economic prosperity, sooner or later, into a form of degeneracy. Religion has no capacity for life, therefore religion is characterised by lust and greed which causes religion’s great demand and the great demand for luxury items. To us the message is very simple. It is given in Matthew 6:24 and Luke 16:13 — “You cannot serve God and mammon.”

Verse 14, the destruction of the religious market. The “bodies and souls of men” definitely indicates another form of their degeneracy. It doesn’t mean enslavement as we understand it, it can simply be crime. Where there is luxury there is crime, and where there is crime there is slavery.

This destruction of lust emphasises two things. First of all we have the emphatic use of the conjunction kai, translated “In fact.” Then our subject in the nominative singular is o)pora which refers to the time beginning with the rising of the star Sirius in July. It corresponds to the late summer or early fall when fruit ripens. Metaphorically then, it refers to the summer of life, the time of ripeness, the peak of vigour in life. Hence, we do not translate it “fruit” as in the King James version, that isn’t what it means at all. It means the peak or the zenith. So we translate it, “In fact the peak of your soul’s desire.” The soul’s desire or soul’s lust refers to the great demand for luxury, “has departed,” the aorist active indicative of the verb a)perxomai, which means to depart, to disappear. The culminative aorist views the destruction of lust in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the destruction of the religious market in the Tribulation. The active voice: the lust and desire for luxury items departs with the destruction of ecumenical religion. The market is gone, the merchandise no longer can be sold. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the disappearance of the market for luxury items with the destruction of ecumenical religion. The principle: economic prosperity of the last half of the Tribulation depends upon the computer tyranny called the mark of the beast. With the destruction of computer tyranny there is no demand, the world markets are closed, and the merchants are now bankrupt. "In fact the peak of your soul's desire has departed from you." Note that these people are still alive and they have switched from lust for luxury to desire for survival. But these merchants aren't going to survive because there is simply no way to make money and to keep going. Therefore we have as one of the judgments of that time the destruction of luxury.

Translation: "In fact, the peak of your soul's desire [for luxury items] has departed from you [lust has been replaced for desire for survival], all things, both riches and glamorous things, have vanished," the aorist middle indicative from a)pollumi.

The principle is a very simple one: Wealth without capacity eventually destroys the effectiveness and the meaning of wealth. Wealth demands the consideration of the entire economy but it demands a sense of responsibility. Wealth without capacity destroys the effectiveness of wealth. People who are rich without the capacity for wealth are miserable. In this case there was no capacity, this was a religious market. Glamorous things without capacity invite self-destruction. Glamour without meaning becomes evil. Capacity, of course, means class, good taste, virtue, happiness, the ability to possess, the ability to be wealthy without arrogance. It means leadership without tyranny, "consequently they will no longer find these things." The future active indicative of e(uriskw, to find, means that this economy is shut down permanently, plus the double negative: they will not ever find these things again. The destruction of ecumenical religion with its monopoly, including computer tyranny, will remove forever the wealth, the luxury, the glamour of its adherents. For those still alive the law of supply and demand is replaced by a scramble for survival. The market is closed and the demand has vanished. The question is asked: What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

This verse emphasises the punishment of ecumenical religion as an evil entity. Finesse punishment is defined, then, as God using an evil agent to punish an evil entity. This punishment is accomplished without divine coercion of human free will. The motivational evil of the punishing agent destroys the functional evil of the guilty entity being punished.

Verse 15, The ecumenical religious system was the best market for the merchants' items and all of this was lost. Destruction of ecumenical religion, then, is the destruction of the markets and the resultant loss of profit.

In verse 16 we should note again that when this lamentation over the headquarters of ecumenical religion is given all of the glamour is gone.

In verses 17-19 we see the second lamentation, the wail of the shipping industry. The reaction of the shipping industry is brought in in verse 17. "Because in one hour such great wealth has been devastated." That much of the verse should have been included in verse 16, and in the Greek verse 17 begins with the next word, "Furthermore." "Furthermore every ship captain, and all who travel by ship, and all sailors, as many as make their living by the sea, stood at a distance.”

Verse 18, “When they see the smoke of her conflagration,” a reference to the nuclear attack; the word is purwsij in the Greek, “they keep screaming and saying, What city is like this great city?”

Verse 19, “And they threw dust on their heads, and they were screaming, both weeping and mourning, saying, Woe, woe, is the great city, in which all who had ships at sea were made rich by her extravagance! and because in one hour she has been ruined.” This refers to a literal hour in which there was concentrated nuclear attack.

We learn from the three wails [the three categories] the first lesson: with finesse judgment, wherever it is found, there is always a question. It isn't worth it in the end. The first great lesson of this finesse judgment is in Mark 8:36,37. Only those segments of the human race that were destructive to the perpetuation of the human race were wiped out. These are unbelievers who were destroyed in these nuclear attacks. There is no answer to this question. The soul of man is valuable, our Lord purchased it on the cross when he was judged for our sins. And for a man to gain the whole world as these kings gained political power, as these merchants became very wealthy and therefore had wealth and influence, and as those in the shipping industry were so successful and so profitable from these things, what did it profit them to gain the whole world and yet lose their own souls? What a tragic thing it is to live in this life, to come into this world, to have all of the opportunities of personally believing in the Lord Jesus Christ, receiving Him as your own saviour, and to go through life as a vapour trail. There are so many people who reject Christ, they are just vapour trails.

Verse 20, begins the response in heaven. In heaven we have a different picture. On earth we see all those people who are vapour trails, and all of those people who have power and have succeeded in some special way, and they are all weeping and wailing. They are all losers. Achievement hasn't brought them a thing. But there is happiness on earth for those who keep their priorities straight, and to keep priorities straight you have to go right back to the protocol system.

The first command here, and these are imperatives, is a mandate for a celebration. “Rejoice” is not a good translation. We have the present middle imperative of the verb e)uphrainw. E)uphrainw is the mood of joy, it means to celebrate. It has the concept of celebration over the effectiveness of what God has wrought. “Celebrate over her.” The pictorial present tense presents to the mind a picture of future events in the process of occurrence. The middle voice is direct middle in which the subject participates in the results of the action. There is celebration in heaven, and celebration where evil destroys evil. The imperative mood is the imperative of command, a mandate for celebration. “Celebrate over her [the ecumenical religious system],” and then that vocative “O heaven.” The wailing on earth is drowned out by the celebration in heaven. The imprecatory prayers of the Tribulational martyrs have been answered.

The recipients of this mandate are now described. Three categories are mentioned: all believers in heaven, Old Testament believers, royal family, and Tribulational martyrs. There is a second category, the New Testament leadership called apostles. The third category is the Old Testament leadership called prophets. We start with believers. We have the conjunction kai translated “even.” We have the nominative plural of exclamation from a(gioj, “saints.” The word saint means simply set apart to God. The moment you believed in Jesus Christ you became a saint, you were set apart to God. It is a reference then to the family of God. Three categories are involved under the title “the saints.” First of all, the Old Testament believers whom we call “family of God.” Then the New Testament believers whom we call “royal family of God” or “Church Age believers.” Then there are the Tribulational martyrs, the ones who offer the imprecatory prayers in Revelation chapter eight.

Next we have the New Testament leadership under the nominative plural of exclamation, a)postoloj which does not mean one sent. A)postoloj is taken from the Attic Greek. When Athens developed its great fleet it always had two or three admirals waiting to see who would be sent out to command the fleet. The selected one was called a)postoloj. So a)postoloj doesn’t mean one sent, and doesn’t refer to missionaries, it refers to the highest ranking officer in the fleet. When it came over into the Koine Greek it simply meant the highest ranking officer and it refers to the New Testament leadership before the canon of scripture was completed. It is a reference to the gift of apostleship.

Then there is the Old Testament leadership under the title proqthj, another nominative plural of exclamation. It is referring to the prophets of the Old Testament. These three categories are not taking personal revenge, that is forbidden, instead they are rejoicing over something that God has done. God is preserving the human race and keeping it going until the end of history through this radical surgery.

We have the causal use of the conjunction o(ti, “because.” This is the reason for the rejoicing or the celebration. Then the nominative singular of qeoj, “because God has judged,” the aorist active indicative of the verb krinw. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, it takes the three judgments of ecumenical religion, gathers them into a single entity and becomes the basis for the celebration — judgment by pain, judgment by death, and finesse judgment. The active voice: God produces the action of the verb under the law of divine retribution. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the function of the justice of God in the execution of the law of divine retribution.

With this we have the cognate accusative krima which means judgment, “because God has judged judgment.” That is a literal translation and not the correct translation because it is an idiom. With the cognate this becomes “God has pronounced judgment [God has executed judgment] on your behalf.”

Here is the proper use of the faith-rest drill during the Tribulation. Here is the faith-rest drill regarding evil in any dispensation. It is the application of the essence of God rationale with emphasis on divine justice. It is an application of the law of retribution. The law of retribution is found in Romans 12:19. Punishment is the monopoly of God. For the believer this becomes a very important law because this keeps us from getting involved in revenge tactics.

Verse 21, a proclamation of the king of arms and a lesson for all of us to learn from history. We begin with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, "Then." With this we have a subject in the nominative singular made up of three words: e(ij, meaning one or unique; the adjective isxuroj, meaning having attained high rank and therefore having great power; the noun a)ggeloj, "one strong angel." This is the king of arms of the angelic college of heralds, the highest-ranking of all of the elect angels.

He does something significant and teaches us a lesson from history, the aorist active indicative of a)irw which means to pick up or to lift up. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The king of arms produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. What is picked up is said to be a stone but it is a great stone. The word for stone is liqoj, but in apposition to this we have some other words. We have a comparative conjunction o(j, an appositional accusative from the adjective megaj, and then the noun which tells us we are talking about a stone, mulinoj, a millstone. This stone is then cast into the sea. We have a connective kai, "and," the aorist active indicative of ballw, he threw it. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the king of arms does it, he throws it into the sea.

Translation: Then the unique powerful angel picked up a boulder the size of a large millstone and tossed it into the sea."

This is a sign of judgment. This is a warning from the king of arms before the headquarters of ecumenical religion went under nuclear attack, before it was destroyed by finesse judgment. Remember that God always destroys a client nation by an evil entity. Finesse judgment is the means of administering the fifth cycle of discipline. This is not only a warning but it is a prophecy as to the outcome of the nuclear attack made by the beast dictator as the evil agent in finesse judgment. The sea represents the people throughout the world who adhere to international religion. The Greek word is qalassa, and when that boulder hits the sea of people that means divine judgment. Waves go out from the point of impact, they move all the way out from the epicentre to the very edges. This means that ecumenical religion which is worldwide will be destroyed by the administration of the seventh bowl judgment. Just as the falling millstone drops suddenly and destroys so the religious headquarters will be the recipient of falling missiles which will destroy it and the entire system.

This analogy of destruction has been compared to Jeremiah 51:60-64 — "So Jeremiah wrote in a single book all the disasters which would come to Babylon, all these words [verses 1-59] which have been written concerning Babylon."

Verse 61, “Then Jeremiah said to Seraiah [was a prince of Judah who would go into captivity with king Zedekiah], ‘As soon as you come to Babylon, make sure that you read all these words aloud,

Verse 62, “and say, ‘Thou, O Lord, hast spoken concerning this place [Babylon as the political capital of Chaldea] to cut it off so that there be nothing living in it, from man even to beast, it will be a perpetual desolation’.” (This confirms the fact that the Babylon of Revelation is a code name for ecumenical religion whose headquarters is in Rome and not a literal Babylon)

Verse 63, “And it will come to pass as soon as you finish reading this book [the part dealing with the fall of the Chaldean empire] that you will tie a stone to this chapter and throw it in the middle of the Euphrates,”

Verse 64, “and say, ‘Just as Babylon will sink down and not rise again, because of the disaster I am going to bring about’.”

So a stone thrown in the water, making waves, is not unusual. Daniel tells us how the finesse judgment was administered. Jeremiah prophesied concerning the fall of the literal Babylon whereas in our passage we have the fall of the spiritual Babylon. The literal Babylon was destroyed in BC 539. In the case of the literal Babylon a stone was thrown into the middle of the Euphrates, in the case of the spiritual Babylon of the Tribulation, ecumenical religion, a giant millstone was thrown into the sea.

Next we have “saying,” the present active participle of the verb legw. This is what the king of arms announced. “In this manner Babylon the great city [the headquarters of ecumenical religion] will be thrown down with violence.” It will be thrown down, the future passive indicative of the same verb, ballw. This time it is in the future tense, this is a warning before it happens. The passive voice: Babylon the great, headquarters of ecumenical religion, will be destroyed. The indicative mood is declarative for the statement of reality in eschatological doctrine. It is said to be done with violence, and that would be the tremendous repercussions of that nuclear attack, “will be thrown down with violence, and never be found again.” That means that with the fall of ecumenical religion there is a judgment of peripheral categories, found in verses 22-23. Once the boulder hits a point in the sea, that would be Babylon, headquarters of ecumenical religion, there would be a great waves, and there would be other waves. Now we are down to the peripheral judgments which follow. In this paragraph the destructive path of the waves or the peripheral judgments related to the judgment of ecumenical religion is given. There are five categories of peripheral judgment mentioned in verses 22 & 23.

First of all, musicians, the entertainment industry. Then there is skilled labour. The third is industry, the fourth is utilities, and the fifth is the social and sexual life of the people. These are the peripheral categories that are destroyed throughout the world. This paragraph then continues the proclamation of the king of arms. Three categories are mentioned in verse 22 and two of the categories are mentioned in verse 23.

Note the pattern, then. In verse 21 we have the centre of impact of the millstone: divine judgment of ecumenical religious headquarters under the code name Babylon the great. Then in verse 22 judgment waves from the centre of the impact move out to engulf musicians, skilled labour and industry. In verse 23 judgment waves from the epicentre move out to engulf utilities and the social-sexual life of the adherents to ecumenical religion. In verse 22, without skilled labour industry cannot function. In verse 23 without utilities, like gas and electricity, there is no social life.

In verse 22 the judgments waves move from the centre of impact to engulf musicians, skilled labour and industry. In verse 23 the judgments waves continue and destroy the social-sexual life of the people. Verse 22 in corrected translation: "Furthermore the sound of harpists and musicians, flute players and trumpets, will never be heard again in you."

Sound has a very strange result in human life. Sound apart from words becomes a direct attack — or sometimes stimulation of — on the emotional system. Remember that the soul has the two frontal lobes which depend on words and vocabulary and how you put them together. Subordinate to them is the emotion of the soul and music apart from lyrics [the sound of music] often makes a direct assault upon the soul. Music therefore becomes a reflection of the status quo of the people in any given geographical area. For example, over the last several thousand years in Africa, India, China, and Japan, the sound without the lyrics produces a strange effect and indicates the condition of the people. The sound in Africa is the beat, and with it very primitive sounds indicating a very primitive status quo of those people. The sound, for example, in India is the terrible screeching noise of strings. The sound in Japan is very mournful and sad and causes the occidental to hear it and be under some form of being depressed. What this is saying is that the sound produced by instruments or by drums reflects the culture of the people. In the case of primitive cultures they have primitive music. Degeneracy in a nation often goes back to that primitive culture.

In the case of ecumenical religion we find the destruction of the life of many peoples through the influence of music. Notice that the music, which includes entertainment, includes many instruments. So it was not a primitive sound, it was not a beat, it was a very excellent form of music — the music of the harpists, the musicians including the flute players, the trumpeters. Generally speaking, music is entertainment. It was more than this as far as the people were concerned in the Tribulation who were related to this system. Entertainment, of course, requires skill. The skills are gone as illustrated by the fact that the musicians are destroyed. The judgment of ecumenical religion destroys the entertainment industry. The entertainment industry as represented by music was undoubtedly very similar the to the tremendous development of music back in the 5th century BC.

Next we notice the category of skilled labour, "in fact no workman of any skill will ever be found in you again." The principle "Without technical skills industries are shut down. Industry cannot survive the loss of a skilled labour force. In a degenerate society or nation skilled labour disappears, industry declines. The decline of industry means terrible self-destruction to the nation.

The third category in verse 22 is industry itself, industry which depends on the ability of skilled labour, “also the sound of the mill will never be heard in you again.”

Verse 23, two more categories are given: utilities, and there is a relationship between that and social life. Without the utility industry mankind cannot function in population centres like large cities. Utility and energy industries are essential to the function of life in large cities.

The final category is social life (including sexual life), “in fact the voice of the groom and the bride will never be heard in you again.” The two principles of direct discourse follow. Each principle of direct discourse is introduced by the conjunction o(ti, when o(ti is used in direct discourse it is not translated. It is comparable to our modern quotation marks. This introduces the direct discourse of the king of arms, therefore an application from the passage:

1. Economic prosperity did not deliver the ecumenical religious system of the Tribulation.
2. The power of deception, demonism, and drugs did not deliver her. The application to us is obvious: economic prosperity will not deliver this nation. The power of deception, demonism, drugs, will not deliver us either.

In the direct discourse we have two principles coming up in verse 23. The first is: economic prosperity did not deliver ecumenical religion: “your merchants,” we have the nominative subject of e)mporj. With this phrase we have the fact that in ecumenical religion the merchants “were great,” the imperfect active indicative of e)imi, they were always great during the course of the function of ecumenical religion. When it says they were great it says they were actually successful men, the predicate nominative plural from megistan, which means successful, “your merchants were successful.” It means the economy of the ecumenical religious system was very strong. A strong economy does not guarantee the deliverance of the nation in times of disaster. Economic prosperity did not deliver the ecumenical system of the Tribulation. There is not enough wealth or influence in the world to hold back the tide of divine judgment. Divine judgment, therefore, has greater power than any system of influence the world has ever known. The justice of God cannot be bribed by the influence of man. The key to the first principle then is influence; the key to the second principle is power. Influence and power are the two things in the world that generally deliver people, but neither influence nor power in man can stand up against divine judgment. So the power and the influence of the ecumenical religious system will not deliver them from judgment.

The second principle in verse 23 is very simple. It is the principle that the power of demonism, the power of deception, the power of drugs, does not deliver ecumenical religion of the Tribulation. We begin with the prepositional phrase e)n plus the instrumental of farmakeia which has three meanings. First it means sorcery, the use of magical arts related to idolatry and demonism. So it has the connotation of demonism. Secondly, it has to do with the use of drugs which in this context has an evil rather than a medicinal connotation. Hence, drug pushers, drug users, adding up to drug abuse. Thirdly, it is related to poisoning. Here it would be the poisoning of the mind of mankind with false doctrine from the cosmic system. We translate it, "by means of your farmakeia." The reason that we are transliterating farmakeia is because it refers to demonism related to idolatry, it also refers to drug abuse, and to cosmic poisoning of the mind. All three were involved.

With this we have the phrase, "all the nations of the world were deceived." So we have the power of demonism, the power of deception, demonism, drug abuse, which did not deliver these people. The word for "deceive" is the aorist passive indicative of the verb planaw. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. What were the results? False doctrine deceives the mind, so there was deception; the Satanic system produced demonism and, thirdly, the Satanic system produced drug abuse. This influenced the nations of the world: deception, demonism, and drug abuse of the nations of the world influenced by Satan's international religious system. The passive voice: the nations of the world in the Tribulation received the action of the verb, they were deceived, influenced by demonism, influenced by drug addiction, influenced by farmakeia in the sense of mind-poisoning from the cosmic system. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality.

Translation of verse 23, "Furthermore the light of the lamp will never shine on you again [the destruction of the utility system]; in fact the voice of the groom and the bride will never be heard in you again: your merchants were great men, successful men of the earth; by means of your farmakeia [demonism related to idolatry, drug abuse, cosmic poisoning of the mind] all the nations of the world were deceived."

Verse 24, the inherent criminality of religion. Religion is a criminal activity. Remember that Christianity is not a religion. The emphatic use of the conjunction kai, "In fact." Then, "in her" is the prepositional phrase that follows, e)n plus a)utoj, ecumenical religion being in view. Then the aorist passive indicative of the verb e(uriskw, "in her was discovered." Next we have a nominative singular subject, "the blood." Blood refers to martyrdom. There are two categories of martyrdom mentioned: the prophets, referring to the communicators of doctrine in the Tribulation, and the saints, the general run of believers in the Tribulation. This is criminality, the murdering of believers. Religion becomes criminal at this point. When anyone tries to control, to gain power through a religious system and they use any form of terrorism or murder they become criminal. The criminality even of the National Council of Churches can be demonstrated in giving money to terrorist groups or supporting terrorist groups. So people might start out with true doctrine but once they sponsor any form of violence or indicate that violence is a solution to any problem or seek to gain converts through violence, they become religious and at the same time they become evil. This becomes a criminal activity.

The criminality of ecumenical religion is given in the last phrase when it says, "all who have been slain on the earth." Not only did they murder believers in the Tribulation but they also were terrorists killing others. This is taken from a genitive absolute at the end of this verse. It isn't usual for John to use a genitive absolute. The genitive absolute is made up of the genitive plural of the adjective used as a substantive, paj, and it is in the genitive case. The subject is usually in the nominative case but this is a genitive absolute.

Then we have a genitive perfect passive participle from the verb sfazw, used here for the use of great violence, the use of terrorism and violence, “and all who have been slain on the earth.” The ecumenical religion is guilty of terrorist activities, therefore criminal behaviour. Frustrated by their attempt to seize more power, frustrated by the power of God, religion as a Satanic organisation resorts to violence and murder to accomplish its objective, to gain influence and power through terrorism. Criminality is always a sign of failure in life. There is no system of criminality that has ever existed but what it has written across it, “loser.” Losers are criminals. There never was a criminal who was a winner. They are always losers, they have failed in life, they are frustrated in life, they try to compensate for their failure and their frustration by using some form of terrorism, some form of violence in order to compensate for their failure. Criminals are losers in life, the products of their own lust, their own arrogance, and their own bad decisions.

Translation: “In fact the blood of the prophets [the ministers of the Tribulation], and saints [believers of the Tribulation], was discovered in her [the ecumenical religious system] and all who have been slain on the earth [the general public was also the product of this disastrous situation].”

We have, therefore, in all of this a challenge and an application to us as believers today, because we are going the same way. Everywhere you turn you find what was previously Christianity is now becoming very religious. Everywhere you turn believers are becoming religious by living in cosmic one and cosmic two.

What is a client nation? It is a nation where there is enough freedom for evangelism. Once you accept Christ as saviour then the plan of God is before you. You are free to execute the plan of God. Not all believers execute the plan of God and this is why we have a spin off and why the pivot is shrinking. Cosmic believers become potential revolutionists through civil disobedience and through fanatical crusades, disrupting the freedom and rights of others through social action.

The general characteristics of a client nation are:

1. A civil government and policy based on the laws of divine establishment.
2. The function of evangelism under the principle of freedom: where there is no coercion on the part of government or on the part of the evangelist.
3. The establishment of local churches which are autonomous, neither connected with other churches to form denominations or spheres of influence or involved in any movement which seeks to unite church and state.

4. The function of vigorous and dynamic Bible teaching to believers which emphasises the protocol system of the plan of God.

5. Missionary activity to other nations under the indigenous principle of not interfering with foreign governments, regardless of what type of government they have, but providing both the gospel and Bible teaching for the people of other countries.

How client nation Israel went down: Hosea 4:1-6

Verse 1, "Hear the doctrine of the Lord," doctrine is for believers in a client nation, so this is not addressed to unbelievers, it is addressed to believers. Believers determine whether a nation goes up or down. With a large pivot the nation goes up to blessing; with a small pivot the nation fails, "O people of Israel, because the Lord has a court case against the citizens of the nation, because there is nothing of doctrine being taught, nothing of grace being applied," without doctrine you can't use grace properly, "or knowledge of God in the nation."

Verse 2, "Instead there is lying and deceiving," lack of virtue. Once you remove virtue from the nation there is no way to be a client nation. There can be neither establishment nor the functions of the spiritual life, "both murder and stealing and rape." One of the first signs of degeneracy is lack of restraint of criminality. Murder fails to recognise the sacredness of human life; stealing fails to recognise the sacredness of property; rape fails to recognise the volition of the individual, therefore the sacredness of human freedom, "plus unrestrained violence."

Verse 3, "For this cause the land shall mourn, consequently everyone who lives in it shall lose strength along with the animals of the field (cruelty to animals is also a sign of degeneracy), both the birds of the sky and the fish of the lakes are taken away."

Verse 4, "Yet let no one contend [blame others because the nation is being judged], and let no one impugn [don't blame it on the leaders or some group in the nation]; for you people are like those who contend with the priest," the priest in Israel was a communicator of Bible doctrine. They are contending with the priest which means they are resisting the doctrine.

Verse 5, "Therefore you have stumbled by day [application of doctrine in daily life], furthermore the prophet also will stumble with you," those who were supposed to be teaching doctrine have become religious and are now teaching the apostasies of the cosmic system, "by night [apostate teaching in Bible class]; then I will destroy your mother [nation]," a reference to the fifth cycle of discipline.

Verse 6, "My people are destroyed from lack of knowledge of doctrine." As goes the believer, so goes the nation. "Because you have rejected knowledge of doctrine I also will reject you from being my priest nation [the client nation is a priest nation to God]. Since you have neglected the doctrine of your God, I will neglect your next generation.” The client nation will be destroyed.

What is the answer to all of this? James 4:6ff.

“But he gives greater grace [God’s daily provision to believers in the client nation. He gives them the opportunity, the protocol system, protected life, security, so that they can form a pivot in the client nation]. Therefore it says, ‘God makes war on the arrogant’,” when the pivot becomes so small you can’t see it the spin off always goes into the cosmic system and the cosmic system then has the bulk of believers. Once the bulk of believers are in the cosmic system then “God makes war against the arrogant”. How does God make war against arrogant believers? The destruction of the client nation, “ ‘but he gives grace to the humble [the believers who have discovered virtue in the protocol system]’.”

Verse 7, “Therefore submit to God [life in the protocol system, the divine dynasphere]. Resist the devil [stay out of the cosmic system or, if you get in, get out in a hurry] and he will flee from you.”

Verse 8, “Draw near to God [the function of the protocol system] and he will draw near to you [the blessings of motivational virtue, but more than that, blessing by association with the client nation]. Cleanse your hands [rebound], you sinning ones [believers in the cosmic system]; purify your right lobes [momentum at gate four], you double-minded [a believer under the influence of the cosmic system].”

What happens when you are in the cosmic system?

Verse 9, “Be miserable [self-induced misery], both mourn and weep [believers are the products of their own bad decisions]; let your laughter be turned into mourning, and your happiness be turned into gloom [the results of living in the cosmic system].”

Verse 10, “Humble yourselves [the beginning of virtue at gate three] under the mighty hand of God [the protocol system, the divine dynasphere], and he will exalt you [the believer becomes a winner in the protocol system].”

1 Peter 5:6ff

Verse 6, “Humble yourselves, therefore, under the mighty hand of God [function in the divine dynasphere], that he may exalt you at the proper time,

Verse 7, “casting all your worries on him because he cares for you.”

Verse 8, “Be vigilant, be on the alert. Your enemy, the devil, prowls about like a roaring lion seeking someone to devour [the devil taking a believer into his cosmic system].”

Verse 9, "But resist him [life in the divine dynasphere], be stabilised in doctrine ..."

Chapter 19

The subject of this chapter is two banquets at the second advent. The outline is threefold, there are three paragraphs in this chapter. The first paragraph deals with the marriage supper of the Lamb which is a banquet of blessing, verses 1-9. The second paragraph deals with the second advent of Christ, verses 10-14.

The third paragraph deals with the supper of the great God, a judgment banquet, verses 15-21.

The supper of blessing or the marriage supper of the Lamb begins in verses 1-3 begins with a celebration in heaven over the judgment of ecumenical religion, the subject of chapters 18 and 19. The celebration in heaven begins with a shout of heavenly praise in verse 1.

There are two words in the King James version which do not appear in the original manuscripts; the words "honour" and "Lord" at the end of the verse. The time of the victory shout is given first with a prepositional phrase, meta plus the accusative plural of the immediate demonstrative o(utoj, "After these things." The word "and" in the KJV is not found here either. The prepositional phrase indicates the sequence of time, after the administration of the judgment against ecumenical religion. So after the administration of this judgment we now move on to the celebration in heaven.

Heaven is always a place of great happiness and celebration, a place of tranquillity, a place of "no more sorrow, no more tears, no more pain, no more death." Immediately after physical death, whether a believer is a winner or a loser, he goes immediately into the presence of the Lord. He has an interim body, he recognises all of his friends who have preceded him into heaven. So it is always a place of great happiness. So, "after these things" we have John indicating an auditory vision rather than one by eye, "I heard," the aorist active indicative of the verb a)kouw. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety — the auditory vision. The active voice: the apostle John as the human writer of the book of Revelation produces the action under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. The indicative mood is the reality of a doctrinal principle: that God in His justice always rectifies wrongs committed against believers, but the believer must be patient under the principle of the faith-rest drill.

This anticipates something of the first two verses in this chapter, and that is the fact that every believer, sooner or later, is wronged. There are going to be times in your life when you are absolutely right and someone else is absolutely wrong, or an approximation of that principle. When that happens you are under great pressure to do the right things rather than the wrong things yourself. Any time that an individual is wronged immediately there comes into the soul some form of resentment or reaction. It is so rare that when we are right we generally make the most of it! By making the most of it we get up on our self-righteous high horse and scream "bloody murder." We are all right, someone else is all wrong! It is a sort of a refreshing immediate reaction. But the whole thing does not follow suit if one flunks this test, he is in a state of arrogance immediately. Any time that you are wronged the procedure is given in the principle of eschatology in this passage. So you are wronged. Someone has done something to hurt you, to undercut you, to destroy you, to tear you up, or something of that sort. What are you going to do about it? The principle is found as a part of the faith-rest drill in Romans 12:19, "Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord." If you get into motivational evil when you are wronged, which is very easy, you've had it, because revenge or vengeance belongs to the Lord. It does not belong to us at all, and the reason is because we never have all the facts.

What should we do? Instead of getting into gate one of cosmic one there are two things that we need to do: the function of the faith-rest drill, i.e. "Revenge belongs to me, I will repay, saith the Lord." That is the first stage of the faith-rest drill. Secondly, switch over to the rationales. When the Lord says "I will repay" you have the essence of God rationale, God knows all the facts. Furthermore, the plan of God rationale. Under the plan of God God handles all of the antagonism, that is His monopoly. It is a protocol. We leave to God all of the wrongs and injuries done to us. We leave that in His hands. Of course, we can go to others as well. The logistical grace rationale: the fact that we have been wronged doesn't cut off any support from God. We are not going to be the less for it because we have been wronged. So the first factor then is to leave the matter in the Lord's hands, and that is a matter of the faith-rest drill.

The second function is separation. Life is too short to fool with that person; move on. There is no justice on earth regarding these things. You can't look for justice on earth, you go to a higher court. That is why we have those three categories of judgment administered to ecumenical religion.

So this first victory shout indicates again that God has fulfilled His promise. They had left it in the hands of the Lord. One thing about imprecatory prayers is that the one who offers that prayer is not administering the judgment. He is asking the Lord to do it and the Lord will filter it all out and handle it. With imprecatory prayers or the faith-rest drill once you put it in the hands of the Lord you don't fool around with it any more. You therefore replace your disturbed and upset condition with tranquillity knowing that in the Lord's time, which is far better than our timing, the Lord will take care of it one way or another.

In verse 1 and in verse 3 we are going to find a lot of people rejoicing in heaven because they did not try to take revenge. They left the matter in the Lord's hands and they get the announcement of the judgment, and having left it in the Lord's hands they simply express their own +H and their own wisdom in not trying to personally get revenge. The principle of rejoicing in heaven is a principle that applies to us on earth: the happiest people in the world and the best adjusted people in the world are the people who do not seek revenge, who do not take matters into their own hands. God in His justice rectifies wrong provided that you do not interfere with divine justice. Interfering with divine justice is simply taking matters into your own hands.

First of all we hear the first chorus of the hymn of praise. It begins with the comparative particle w(j, and with it, fwnh, "what sounded like." It is an idiom. We have fwnh as the accusative singular direct object of a)kouw, and with it we have the adjective megaj, which translated in its true idiom [not literally], "After these things [after the administration of these judgments] I heard what sounded like a large crowd." That is the way it should be translated. We have a descriptive genitive for the large crowd: the adjective pollouj followed by the noun o)xloj, "crowd." This large crowd is located "in heaven," e)n plus the locative of o)uranoj, they cannot see what is going on on earth.

The content of the first shout: God the Son has just executed one of the greatest judgments of history. He has administered all three categories of judgment against ecumenical religion and destroyed it. We have a present active participle from legw and it means to shout. This is the cheering session. The descriptive present indicates the cheering session. The active voice: the cheering session of the Tribulational martyrs who produce the action of the verb. This is a victory cheer. These are the believers who offered the imprecatory prayers in chapters 6:9-11; 8:4 which were answered in the administration of the seven bowl judgments. And what did they shout? The King James version says, "Alleluia," but that isn't what they shouted. This is an unfortunate transliteration. It should be Halleluia. It is actually a transliteration from the Hebrew: "Hallelujah." "Hallelu" means praise, and "jah" means the Lord. So it actually should have been translated "Praise the Lord," and the reason they can praise the Lord: It is a great word when you put matters in the Lord's hands and the Lord has taken care of the whole matter. That is why we have this in heaven. Heaven is one place where you can say "Hallelujah" without being a jackass! So the cheering crowd says, "Praise the Lord." These are the shouts of victory as well as expressions of praise. There is no verb in the Greek but the possessive genitive will act as the verb. The possessive genitive is qeoj. Translation: "After these things I heard what sounded like a large crowd in heaven, shouting, Praise the Lord .."

Something "belongs to our Lord." The word for "our" is the possessive genitive plural from e)gw, all of these are believers, "our Lord." And what belongs to our Lord? There are four words here, not three words as in the King James version. Each of this is connected by kai, but kai merely is used as a comma here.

The first is swthria. It often means salvation and it can be salvation here, but it also means deliverance. Deliverance belongs to our Lord as well as salvation. When we are talking about entrance into the plan of God it is salvation; when we are talking about deliverance in phase two then it is phase two of the plan of God rather than phase one.

Next we have doca, "glory," a reference to the essence of God as the source of the divine plan for the human race. What better way to handle your problems than to put them in the Lord's hands, "Casting all your cares on him, for he careth for you." Emphasis is placed on the believer's point of reference here which is the integrity of God, described by the word "glory."

Finally, there is dunamij which refers to the system, the protocol, "power." Whatever the plan of God is for the believer in the Tribulation it includes a protocol system of some sort. By application, dunamij to us refers to the divine dynasphere.

So we can say, "Deliverance, glory and power belongs to our God," or we can translate it, "Salvation, glory and power belongs to our God." Both are true. The point is: To which does it refer here? Probably deliverance because these people were delivered through death.

Translation of verse one: "After these things [the great judgments of ecumenical religion] I heard what sounded like a large crowd in heaven, shouting, Praise the Lord; deliverance and glory and power belong to our God."

There is no word "Lord" here in the original manuscript and there is no word "honour." They are true but they just don't happen to be in the text. Deliverance is provided for every believer, any believer who will use the faith-rest drill. First of all you claim a promise or promises; secondly, you go to the rationales; from the rationales you come to your conclusion that the Lord can handle it better than you can. Therefore you leave it in His hands which gives you instant tranquillity. As a result of this you have control of your own life and you have a personal sense of destiny because you are not distracted by the pettiness, by the jealousy, by the bitterness, by the vindictiveness, by the hatred of other people. So you are lining up with what God's plan for your life happens to be, glory. Glory is not only perfection of divine attributes but glorification of the Lord is accomplished by doing this.

The word "power" not only refers to God's protocol plan but it is a reminder to us that Jesus Christ controls history. The power of God is infinitely greater than the power of Satan who is the present ruler of this world. To the believer in the Church Age power is, of course, the plan of God relating to the divine dynasphere. But the principle that comes out of this from the eschatological viewpoint is this: Divine judgment protects the human race from self-destruction. It also protects the believer from destroying himself through fear, worry and anxiety.

Verse 2, the reason for this victory shout. We begin with the first of two conjunctions that are similar, o(t), used this time as causal conjunctions. We translate it "Because." With this we have a predicate nominative plural from a)lhqinoj, "truth." It refers to divine veracity in the administration of judgments. It also refers to the fact that Bible doctrine explains the reason for divine judgment such as those we have studied in chapters 17 & 18. Actually, the explanation deals with the grace of God in preserving the human race as well as removing the cancer of evil. The second predicate nominative is dikaioj which, with a)lhqinoj should be translated "true and righteous." Both of these are in the plural and although we can't translate them that way into the English there is a reason for it. We have an ellipsis here so we insert the verb e)imi, "true and righteous are." Then we have a subject, the nominative plural from krisij with the possessive genitive from a)utoj, "his judgments." Translation: "because his judgments are true and righteous."

The plural of "righteous" means the integrity of God. It is in the plural because He has two parts to His integrity: justice, our point of reference, and perfect righteousness, our point of blessing. Remember that this is the basis whereby we are sustained in time. The justice of God has imputed one half of His integrity or His righteousness to us, perfect righteousness. Therefore justice sends down the grace pipeline logistical as well as supergrace blessings. "Righteous" here is in the plural because it covers the entire holiness or integrity of God. Behind the function of the justice of God is the fact that God is righteous, therefore He can make no mistakes in the exercise of His judgments. The fact that God exercised judgment by pain, followed by judgment by death, followed by finesse judgment indicates that these are perfect judgments. He handled them at the right time, at the right place, in the right way.

The plural of "true" refers to the facts of history as they come out of the computer of divine decrees. First of all, the omniscience of God enters into the computer of the divine decrees all these facts: every thought, every decision, every action, every motive of every person and how it relates to all others. And that is true of the Tribulation. The whole history of the Tribulation is in the computer and it rolls out bit by bit the function of ecumenical religion, followed by the judgment of ecumenical religion. The function of ecumenical religion came first in which there was the torture and the martyrdom of those who were winners. The whole thing rolls out of the computer and therefore it is in the plural. That is because the word "true" refers to the facts of history. "Truth," on the other hand, refers to the essence of God. The essence of God is truth, God is truth, and what He puts into the computer from His omniscience in eternity past comes out as true, both as to sequence and interaction. So there is a difference between true and truth. The facts of history in any given generation may be evil, they may be good, but they are true events. Whatever happens in history comes out, and that is true, so that the doctrine of the Word of God is absolute truth. Since doctrine comes from God it is truth. Since the facts of history are the results of our decisions, our motives, our functions, they are true.

The content of divine judgment: we have the second o(ti) introducing the fact of the three great divine judgments against ecumenical religion of the Tribulation, "because." Then we have the aorist active indicative of the verb krinw, "because he has judged." This is what they are shouting about. This is a culminative aorist tense, it views the threefold judgment of ecumenical religion in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, which includes the perpetuation of the human race during the course of human history. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the three categories of divine judgment used against ecumenical religion. With this we have the accusative singular direct object from an adjective and a noun: the adjective megaj, meaning great, and pornh, "the great whore," referring to the spiritual fornication of the religious ecumenical system of the Tribulation. Religion is the greatest seducer of souls and is one of Satan's greatest systems. So we translate: "because his judgments are true and righteous because he has judged the great prostitute."

Next we have a rather strange relative pronoun. It is the qualitative relative pronoun, ο(στις) which means a special category. It is a relative pronoun indicating that the prostitute belongs to a special category. "Who" is the way we will translate it but it should be literally, "who is such a category as." Then we have the aorist active indicative of φειρω which often means to corrupt, here it means here to seduce, "the great whore who seduced." The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the evil of ecumenical religion in its entirety. The active voice: ecumenical religion as the great whore produces the action of the verb through cosmic evangelism. The indicative mood is declarative for the eschatological reality of the evil function of ecumenical religion. And who is the victim? The accusative singular direct object of γη, meaning earth. The means by which it is accomplished: εν plus the instrumental from πορνεία plus the genitive of αὐτοῦ, "by means of her fornication." A reference to the function of cosmic evangelism in the Tribulation.

The reason for the victory celebration is given in verse two, and the perfection of divine judgment is the first subject in verse two. We have the causal conjunction ο(τι, "Because" followed by two nominative plurals, both were adjectives used as substantives, "Because true and righteous." Then we have an ellipsis using the verb to be, "are his judgments." "His judgments" is actually the subject and the others are predicate nominatives, so it should be translated, "Because his judgments are true and righteous." This becomes a very important principle for us. The interesting thing about these two words in the Greek is the fact that both of them are in the plural and practically non-translatable into English because of this. The plural of "righteous" is not translated but it actually refers to the integrity of God. The reason it is in the plural is because the holiness or the integrity of God has two attributes: justice and righteousness. Behind the function of the justice of God is the fact that God is righteous, therefore He cannot make mistakes in the execution of judgments. The plural of "true" refers to all the facts of history entered into the computer of divine decrees: the facts of history as they emanate from the person of God and the printout from the divine decrees. Hence, "true" is a technical word here referring to the printout from the divine decrees regarding history. True refers to all the facts of history, that is why it is in the plural; truth is a reference to two things: the essence of God and, as the source of the essence of God, Bible doctrine which is absolute truth. So we have to rightly divide the Word of truth and make a distinction between two words as they come into the English from the translation.

"True," being in the plural here refers to the printout of history, all the facts of history as they unroll; truth has to do with Bible doctrine. True refers to the facts of history as facts, not things that are true but facts that are true. So we have to distinguish between true and truth. The facts of history in any given generation may be evil but they are true facts, true events of history. The doctrine of the Word of God is absolute truth while the facts of history are both good and evil as true facts. Historically a person may lie but that lie is still a part of the facts of history and therefore it is true. It is true that he lied, in other words. It is true that the devil lied in the garden. That is a fact of history. True is the accuracy of history as it comes from the computer of divine decrees while truth is an attribute of God, both accurate and perfect, both infinite and absolute. Truth, then, is the source of Bible doctrine, while true is the unfolding of history as it occurs.

Notice here: "Because his judgments are true and righteous," not truth and righteousness but true and righteous. This is technical but very important. The fact that His judgments are true means that they occur periodically in history when necessary. The fact that His judgments are righteous indicates that they come from His justice and that He never fails to be right in any estimate of the situation. God always has the facts.

Next we have the content of judgment. We go on with the second use of o(t), "because," and the aorist active indicative of the verb krinw, "because he has judged." God judges; that is a fact. God's judgments are perfect; that is a doctrine. The culminative aorist tense views the threefold judgment of ecumenical religion in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the perpetuation of the human race on earth during the course of human history. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb because God the Father delegated all judgment to Him. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of these categories of judgment in this context and found throughout history.

Then that strange relative pronoun which is a qualitative relative pronoun. We never translate it fully into English. We simply translate it, o(stij), "who." It is actually referring to a specific category, a qualitative category. That means that the category is distinct from all other categories in focus at the moment. In this case it is referring to ecumenical religion as an evil entity, "who seduced," the aorist active indicative of fqeirw. The ecumenical religious system as the great prostitute produces the action of the verb through cosmic evangelism in the Tribulation. And we have the accusative singular direct object, gh, "the earth."

We break off here for concept which begins in Psalm 89. There are three categories of protocol in heaven.: the person of God, the divine decrees, and the angelic college of heralds. These are three systems of protocol in heaven that have control over the protocol systems on earth. There are three protocol systems on earth: the laws of divine establishment, the concept of the client nation to God [or priest nation as Israel was called], and the plan of God for the believer. Nothing is more important than that the people of a client nation understand the attributes of God as the ultimate source of all protocol.

Psalm 85:8-13 is where we begin to develop the concept which is found in our passage in Revelation 19. All protocol originates from God; all protocol that originates from God is His plan, His purpose, His policy. It is imperative that we as believers understand the purpose, the plan, and the policy of God.

Verse 8, "I will hear what the God Jehovah will say," we start with the source of all protocol. God's plan is totally linked to a protocol system. Nothing is more important than understanding the attributes of God. If you understand the essence of God then you will listen to what He has to say. If you do not understand the essence of God it is very easy to become flippant, to resist the doctrine and even resent the doctrine because you can't distinguish the difference between truth as an absolute and what is true in life. So reception is the first stage of GAP. "The Lord" refers to our Lord Jesus Christ. Bible doctrine is the mind of Christ and doctrine is the very basis for the protocol system, the plan of God on earth, "for he will communicate prosperity," the Tribulation is a time of great disaster, a time when people here and there are dying by the millions, but there will be many alive at the second advent. The word "peace" is the Hebrew word shalom, and it also represents the concept of the doctrine of reconciliation; and He will communicate salvation, reconciliation, and prosperity. The plan of God starts with reconciliation, "to his people," the client nation to God [in the context, Israel as a client nation], "and to his gracious ones," the winners, believers who follow the protocol system and advance to maturity; the pivot of winners, "let them not return to stupidity," the worst thing that can happen to anyone is to have absolute truth, Bible doctrine, in his soul and to stop thinking. That is the return to stupidity, that is cosmic evangelism.

Verse 9, "Nothing but his deliverance is near to those who respect him," respect comes from the laws of divine establishment as a protocol system. It also means reverence which comes from the protocol system, the plan of God, "in order that glory may dwell in your land," the secret to the client nation is not its prosperity or greatness or size or any of its leadership, it is whether it has glory or not, glory from the protocol system, the essence of God. Glory can only dwell in the land where there is a large pivot of mature believers, believers who have followed the colours, the protocol system, to maturity. These are the winners and provide the prosperity for the client nation to God. They are the ones on which the nation depends.

Verse 10, "Grace and doctrine have met together," that is the glory of a nation. As goes the believer so goes the client nation to God. How can grace and doctrine meet together? Through the protocol system which God has designed. Grace is the principle of the system; doctrine is the momentum of the system. Grace is the function of the justice of God in the imputation of divine blessing. That imputation goes to those who possess +R, divine righteousness: believers as possessors of divine righteousness. This demands not only an understanding of the attributes of God but relating it to the protocol system that emanates from certain divine attributes. For the system to work among believers there must be an understanding of protocol, there must be truth [absolute truth: Bible doctrine] in the right lobe. Essentially, of course, protocol eliminates human ability, human works, human talent, "righteousness and peace have kissed," that is the story of how protocol began. It all began with a kiss, and the righteousness has to do with the integrity of God, the essence of God. In the essence of God are all of His attributes; +R [perfect righteousness] is one of them, and God has found a way to bless us. One half of divine holiness is +R, and by imputing +R to us at the moment we believe in Christ the justice of God has found a way to bless us and to bless others who are related to us, though they may not be related to God. "Righteousness and prosperity have kissed"; God has found a way to bless us. The integrity of God is that part of divine essence known as His holiness. Holiness is composed of two divine attributes. From it comes all protocol, all authority, everything of that nature. We have one half of that system in us by imputation, righteousness. Divine righteousness is the principle and divine justice is the function. The justice of God gives us the blessings. Hence, only what the righteousness of God demands can the justice of God execute. The righteousness of God indwells every believer. And righteousness and prosperity have kissed; grace and doctrine have met together; and that is the basis, then of our study. That is the finding out how we can avoid the terrible things that happened to ecumenical religion in the Tribulation.

Verse 11, "Doctrine [doctrinal teaching] shall spring up from the land [a client nation]," the Hebrew word for land is haeretz and it refers to Israel as a client nation to God, "righteousness shall look down from heaven," the potential for great blessing because of the pivot by which God can bless. True blessing is always an overflow concept. The justice of God imputes blessing to the mature believer and that blessing overflows to the client nation. This emphasises the importance of the pivot.

Verse 12, "Also the Lord himself will give the good [the plan of God: X+Y+Z]; and our land [the client nation] will give her economic prosperity."

Verse 13, "Righteousness will go before his face [an idiom meaning "before Him"], the word "righteousness" here means integrity. The real key to a nation is the integrity of the pivot. The pivot has an integrity and if it is a large pivot then that integrity overflows to the nation, and the nation with integrity has great prosperity. If the pivot is small the pivot has integrity but the nation has instead of integrity, degeneracy and eventually the nation destroys itself, "that he [the believer] may march toward the way [the protocol system]." Marching here means advance, momentum in the protocol system.

Generally, orthodox theology divides divine attributes into two categories: the absolute attributes of God and the relative attributes of God. The relative attributes are not relative in the character of God, they simply relate to something connected with mankind. The absolute attributes are actually three: spirituality, infinity, and perfection. Under the principle of spirituality we have the life of God and the personality of God. Under the principle of infinity we have God's self-existence, God's immutability, and the unity of His attributes, though these same attributes are found in three separate and distinct persons. Under the concept of perfection we note that God is truth, God is love, and God is integrity. Under the relative attributes we have first of all the divine attributes that relate to time and space. We have the eternity of God and the immensity of God. The eternity of God means that God has always existed, in three persons, there never was a time when God did not exist. God, therefore, is not subject to time, God is the cause of time. Both time and space, though without substance are the objects of His creation. God has created many things that have no substance, time is one of them and so is space. All life is from God, but not of God as claimed by pantheism. God is a person. Personality connotes self-consciousness, self-determination. There never was a time when God was not a person, there never was a time when God did not exist. God has no beginning. God recognises Himself to be a person and as such He always acts rationally. Therefore, any protocol system that God passes on to man depends upon acting rationally, and to act rationally you must be able to think. And you must be able to think not in terms of what is true, like the events of history, but in terms of truth. Truth is Bible doctrine; it is the absolute, the thing that never changes. That is because God is infinite personality. Perfection and self-determination characterise His purpose, His design, and His execution. Therefore infinity becomes a major issue. God is infinite, and by infinity is meant that God is without boundary, without limitation; He unites in Himself those perfections which belong to His person and His character. God cannot be complicated with ignorance or absurdities. God cannot sin, God cannot tempt, God cannot solicit to sin or to evil or to human good. In other words, once again, God cannot be complicated with ignorance or absurdities.

God may be self-limited. God sovereignly chooses to limit Himself at certain times, as in the case of the humanity of Christ during the incarnation. Our Lord Jesus Christ limited Himself. He limited the function of His deity in order to comply with the Father's plan for the incarnation. In the hypostatic union our Lord Jesus Christ limited Himself, and yet as eternal God there is no limitation. God's infinity is intensive rather than extensive, He has infinite energy and infinite power. Infinity, therefore, characterises everything that God does. His love, His integrity or holiness, the dissemination of His truth, are all accomplished under the principle of infinity, so that absolute authority and absolute thought emanate from absolute infinity. The divine motive is for His own glory for which he has an eternal right. God is not motivated by mere self-praise. God recognises His glory, that is inevitable. Everything related to the attributes of God relate to His glory. For this, of course, all creatures exist. All creatures exist as an extension of the policy, the protocol, the plan of God related to His glory. This is why we exist, and when we tap this protocol system life is a very wonderful thing; when we ignore it life is a most horrible and miserable thing.

God's glory always existed, there never was a time when it did not exist. God's infinity always existed. The infinity of God involves, therefore, three factors. When we think of God's infinity we think of His self-existence. God existed eternally, unsustained by Himself or any source. The very word for God in the Old Testament — YHWH (Jehovah). Jehovah is a sacred word meaning the self-sustaining one, and it refers to the infinity of God. God's existence is unalterable; God's existence is the cause for all existence outside of Himself. He has always existed and therefore God's self-existence, that's the word Jehovah.

Then we have His immutability. God has not only eternally existed but He exists in an unchangeable form. He can't improve because He is perfect. Because of His essential character, therefore, God cannot be better; God cannot be worse. God's immutability is consistent with His perfect self-determination, freedom, and His ceaseless activity. Immutability is freedom to do according to His divine nature and therefore salvation is not God's second best. God has no second best and salvation is all a part of His eternal purpose.

Because of God's integrity or holiness plus His immutability and eternity it is impossible for God to be imperfect. God was perfect in eternity past, there never was a time when He wasn't perfect. He was perfect before any creature ever existed and He continues to be perfect with all of the creatures He has produced and all of the universe He has produced continuously. God is not changed by all of the relativities connected with people and creatures.

Divine perfection includes God's truth, God's love and God's holiness which are essential to understand in comprehending the fact that He has a protocol system. What comes from God is perfect, the only trouble with the plan is that it involves imperfect people. The difficulty is to get someone to stay with the plan long enough to be a blessing to others as well as himself. That is the problem and that is why we have absolute truth.

In connection with all of this we have time. Time is finite and it has two categories. It has succession and it also has duration. Eternity which is infinite has only duration. God is infinite and eternal, God is not in time but time is in God because God invented time. God is logical as a part of His protocol system, therefore He doesn't need to be chronological. We are chronological. God is absolute existence. Jesus Christ as God is eternal life, therefore He has always existed. When we believe in Him He shares His life with mankind at salvation. That is why when we believe in Christ we have eternal life and that is why when we believe in Christ we receive an absolute. God is an absolute. He is so absolute and so infinite that man's sin has never changed that, so when we as believers sin we have the absolute of eternal life, we have the absolute of God's righteousness and even though we sin and fail we can't lose our salvation. The absolute is never changed by the relative.

God is also immensity. God is not subject to space. God cannot be more or less than He is. God is the cause of space. In relationship to space God is both imminent and transcendent. Hence, immensity is a descriptive theological term for God's relationship to space. Omnipresence is a descriptive term of space in relationship to God. Since God is the cause of space, if space were defined in terms of boundaries, God would exceed those boundaries to the point of infinity.

There are three systems of protocol in heaven. The first has to do with the essence of God, the second has to do with the divine decrees, and the third has to do with the angelic college of heralds. There are three systems of divine protocol on the earth. The first is the laws of divine establishment, the second has to do with the client nation to God in the significance of the pivot, the third has to do with the plan of God for the believer: the protocol system which we call the divine dynasphere, God's plan for your life, the modus operandi of the royal family of God during the Church Age. These six categories are all very carefully and closely related. Certain things happen in heaven and they have a very definite relationship with what is going on on the earth.

The computer of divine decrees is a result of the second system of knowledge that God has. All of God's knowledge is infinite, eternal, and simultaneous. There never was a time when the omniscience of God did not know everything that was knowable. All of that was prior to the creation of man, the creation of the angels, and the creation of the universe. All of this knowledge was entered into the computer of divine decrees.

The plan of God for us as believers in the Church Age was entered into this computer. We have seen its various aspects under such things as the printout of foreknowledge. Nothing can be foreknown until it is first of all decreed, and the foreknowledge of God simply means that God has a plan for your life and you personally were in the thinking of God in eternity past. Another printout is predestination. Predestination means that in eternity past you were in the plan of God. Another printout is election which has to do with your privileges as a believer in God's protocol system. Your privileges under the concept of election are many.

There is a printout of sin which is in the computer of divine decrees. It is a chip called the saturation of sin. Periodically in history in certain generations evil reaches a peak which would be completely and totally self-destructive and at that point it becomes necessary for God to preserve the human race from self-destruction by judgment. In other words, in eternity past the omniscience of God programmed into the computer of divine decrees the sins of the entire human race during the course of history. The result of that printout, again, was the cross where our sins were judged and where salvation was accomplished. But the one in view as far as the protocol system is concerned is the second category of sin. They were entered into the computer of divine decrees under the concept of the saturation of sin and evil in any given generation. The saturation of sin and evil in any generation might jeopardise the perpetuation of the human race in history. God has promised that the human race will continue to live on planet earth until the end of time.

The saturation of sin and evil in any given generation of history results in the function of two laws. First of all, there is the law of self-retribution. This law is one in which mankind is the product of his own decisions. Whenever we fail, whenever we get into some kind of a problem it is always the result of our own decisions. We are inevitably the products of our own decisions. Secondly, there is the law of divine retribution in which the justice of God provides three categories of temporal judgment to protect the human race from self-destruction. These laws are the subject of chapters 16,17, 18, and the first three verses of chapter 19 of the book of Revelation. In chapter 19 the emphasis is on the Tribulational martyrs in heaven, they are celebrating a victory and the fact that they left the entire matter of judgment of ecumenical religion to the Lord Himself. They put the matter in the hands of the supreme court of heaven and now they are seeing the results of that decision.

At this time in the 20th century throughout the world in general we are now reaching a saturation of sin and evil. Such a saturation of sin and evil is self-destructive. Man has the potential of destroying himself on planet earth but God will never permit that to happen and He prevents it by three categories of judgment. The first category is called judgment by pain. Each one of these judgments is a grace function of the justice of God. Judgment by pain, for example, is the function of God's grace in crisis evangelism. It fulfills the principle that God never judges an individual or a segment of the human race without giving them the grace opportunity of changing the entire situation. We have seen this in the first five bowl judgments of Revelation 16:1-11, and the key to this category of judgment is found in 16:10, loss of utilities means you cannot function in life very well and all normal life comes to a stop when they disappear. Crisis evangelism is the presentation of the gospel in times of individual or collective catastrophe and disaster. In other words, while under normal evangelism the unbeliever has the opportunity to objectively consider the issue of Christ and eternal salvation, judgment by pain is God's last call to any generation when that generation is in the process of destroying itself by the concentration of sin and evil. A printout from the computer of divine decrees says that sin and evil has reached a saturation point, man is now on the verge of self-destruction, and in order first of all to take care of anyone who might once again consider and believe there is judgment by pain to restore objectivity, the last call in the field of evangelism.

The second category of judgment mentioned in this passage is judgment by death, the function of God's grace in the perpetuation of the human race from generation to generation through human history. God has provided that the human race will not be totally destroyed and therefore until the end of history people will always live. At the second advent there will have been seven years of concentrated disaster and catastrophe and yet millions and millions of people are still alive on the earth. However, the problem will continue to exist. Man through his own bad decisions and functions of evil keeps trying to destroy himself on the earth. Man's volition combined with man's freedom apart from virtue and apart from establishment restraint is always self-destructive. When mankind is negative toward the gospel and the laws of divine establishment he becomes degenerate under one of two categories: disorganised evil or organised evil. So God has a system: judgment by death. It is a system of radical surgery whereby the grace of God removes from a given generation in a given geopolitical area of the world the cancer of evil and thereby protects the human race from its own self-destruction. The removal of certain contaminated parts of the human population in any given generation guarantees the perpetuation of the human race for the next generation and the opportunity to possess eternal life through personal faith in Jesus Christ. Judgment by death destroys one portion of the human race to preserve the rest for evangelism. If it were not for judgment by death in the previous generations of history we as believers would not be living on planet earth today. Judgment by death guarantees the evangelism of the human race in every generation, either through normal or crisis evangelism. The judgment of Sodom and Gomorrah except for Lot and his two daughters illustrates the principle of judgment by death. Therefore we look at the Dead Sea today as a memorial to the principle of judgment by death. The annihilation of Tribulation people with the mark of the beast under the administration of judgment by death is radical surgery. This was the administration of the seventh bowl judgment.

Of all of the systems of judgment which protect the human race the third category is perhaps the most interesting, judgment by finesse. God uses evil as the agent to destroy evil without coercion of human volition. It is a system of judgment whereby God does not violate the volition of anyone involved. The union of two evil entities becomes the basis for finesse judgment in history. In the concept of finesse judgment from God he uses an evil agent to punish and destroy an evil organisation. The revived Roman empire in the Tribulation was originally the sponsorer of ecumenical religion of the Tribulation but eventually there was a falling out between the two. Eventually the system of religious evil, the ecumenical religious system of the Tribulation, became so hateful to the political entity, the revived Roman empire, that the latter destroyed it. The principle in finesse judgment: Nature takes its course. No human volition is violated. Finesse judgment, then, dramatises the fact that man is simply the product of his own volition when he becomes involved in the cosmic system and its resultant evil. In other words, Psalm 76:10, "God uses the wrath of man to praise him."

In judgment by death of client nations, then, Israel went this way. Israel comes in three categories of client nation (four of you include the united nation). Then you have the divided kingdom, then the southern kingdom, and finally the kingdom of Judea; and these were all Jewish client nations to God. There is no Jewish client nation today, and cannot be. The Church Age, starting in AD 70, is the time of the Gentiles and will be that way until the resurrection of the Church. But all three of these entities that came under judgment were destroyed by an evil agent when there was a saturation of evil in the nation: the northern kingdom in 721 BC; the southern kingdom in 586 BC; Judea in AD 70. All three of these client nations once did a great job for God but were wiped out when the printout from the computer of divine decrees said "saturation of evil."

Geopolitics relates to historical trends in any given generation or century to a geographical area. This all came about when the fertile crescent became accepted into historical language and became the basis of developing the concept. The only thing that is missing from the concept of geopolitics is a relationship between the so-called science of geopolitics and a pivot of mature believers of any kind in history. Geopolitics was kicked off with what is known as the fertile crescent which basically follows the shoreline of the eastern Mediterranean, emphasising Egypt, Babylon, and the Hittite empire. What was ignored was that somewhere under the principle of geopolitics there is always a pivot. This explains the birth of the client nation Israel and how it functions, not only as a pivot but as it sent out missionaries and actually dealt with the vortex of thought in the fertile crescent. There is always a constant relationship between geopolitics and those who are believers in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Geopolitics recognises the Mediterranean as the Roman sea and there was the era of some 300 years of the Roman sea. During that time there was the development of a pivot of mature believers. Then, of course, the great one is western European civilisation which is related to the science of geopolitics and reaches its peak under two concepts: the Renaissance and the Reformation. Out of this came four major pivots: the pivots in Germany, France, Holland and England. Starting in the 15th and 16th centuries we have the Atlantic basin, the age of discovery, and eventually what resulted was a dual pivot: a pivot in England and a pivot in the colonies which became the United States of America. We can relate it also to the Anglo-Saxon culture in that we have the dual Anglo-Saxon pivot. The part related to western European culture in the continent of Europe is about shot down. The pivot has all but disappeared from England. The great movement now is into the Pacific basin. This is the basin of the future as far as geopolitics is concerned. You can always count on the fact that when you have a new geopolitical area you always have a pivot moving with it.

The pivot is defined as the accumulation of mature believers living either in a client nation under a specific type of civil government in a specific geographical location. Sometimes there is a pivot without the civil government. While the pivot is composed primarily of mature believers it also includes the principle of those who have fulfilled the principle of advancing to gates five and six and have obeyed the mandate virtue first as far as the protocol system is concerned. Technically, then, the pivot may include all believers who have fulfilled the principle of virtue first. The pivot stands out in contrast to believers living in the cosmic system whose arrogance and motivational evil at gate one, cosmic one results in the self-righteous and crusader arrogance which inevitably leads to the reaction of total degeneracy. Believers who are apostate can easily be recognised today as a part of the historical trends because born-again believers who are apostate are involved in civil action (sometime called social action) and civil disobedience. The true Christian influence in a national entity is always spiritual, it is never political and it is never social. It is inevitably a spiritual principle and the tragedy is that believers in their arrogance working for the devil and becoming the enemies of the cross, as in Philippians 3:16, are born-again believers living in the cosmic system — in their crusader arrogance, in their self-righteous legalism. The true Christian influence, again, is always spiritual. The Christian's power is always related to his spiritual life and therefore the Christian life becomes the issue and it starts with the protocol system. There are three protocol systems in heaven. The first is related to the essence of God, the second the decrees of God, and the third to the angelic college of heralds. There are three protocol systems on earth: the laws of divine establishment, the client nation to God, and most important of all is the protocol system, God's plan for your life, the divine dynasphere with it eight gates. Because the spiritual life is being neglected today or because believers in arrogance are distracted from the spiritual life and the protocol system, we are in danger of being destroyed as a client nation to God.

Christianity must never be the state. There must always be a separation between church and state for the true function of freedom and the fulfillment of human volition in the angelic conflict. This does not imply that Christians should not serve in government but it does imply that believers in government service must abide by the laws of divine establishment and never seek to force Christianity on others apart from their own personal consent. Christianity must not be the state. The pivot is then defined as the protocol of heaven meeting the protocol of earth for the blessing of mankind. The client nation to God is not a Christian nation, there is no such thing as a Christian nation, but it is any national entity in which the civil government recognises the establishment principles of freedom, including privacy, the sacredness of property, and the sacredness of life. The client nation to God contains a pivot of mature believers who achieved through spiritual momentum the principle, the mandate, of virtue first. This means that there is enough freedom in such a nation or in a specific geographical area to provide for extensive evangelism without government interference or persecution, and without the evangelism itself violating a principle: the issue in evangelism is between the individual's soul and God, not raising a hand, not walking an aisle, not weeping tears of repentance at an altar.

Whatever form it takes, the gift of evangelism or personal witnessing or the written page, no one must ever be embarrassed by making a jackass of themselves in public.

The general characteristics of a client nation to God includes:

1. A civil government and policy based on the laws of divine establishment. The laws of divine establishment are for believer and unbeliever alike.
2. The function of evangelism under the principle of freedom. That means that the individual has a right to consider the gospel in the privacy of his own soul without someone trying to make him a number in some paper or computer.

3. The establishment of local churches which are autonomous, neither connected with other churches to form denominations or spheres of influence, nor involved in any movement which seeks to untie church and state.

4. The function of vigorous and dynamic Bible teaching so that believers can understand the protocol of heaven how it relates to the protocol of earth, and what is the Christian way of life.

5. There must be not only the spiritual growth inside the divine dynasphere, the protocol system, but missionary activity to other nations under the indigenous principle of not interfering with foreign governments but providing both the gospel and Bible teaching for people of other countries.

The first client nation to God was Israel. The record is from BC 1440 to AD 70. During that time portions of Israel were under divine discipline for their failure to function as a client nation to God. We have seen under the principle of finesse judgment how each segment of Israel was finally eliminated as a client nation to God. First the northern kingdom in BC 721. The evil agent was Assyria. The southern kingdom went out in BC 586. The evil agent was the Chaldean empire. Finally Judea, the last of the Jewish client nations, went out in AD 70. The evil agent was the Roman empire. With that the times of the Gentiles began.

James 4:6-10, the impact of the believer must be spiritual. When it is not a spiritual impact there is no blessing by association, there is the violation of the protocol system on earth which is the rejection of the protocol system in heaven. The rejection of the protocol system in heaven means judgment.

Verse 6, "He gives greater grace [the principle of logistical grace]. Therefore it says, 'God makes war against the arrogant, but gives grace to the humble'." Humility is the beginning of virtue. Virtue is necessary to be in the pivot.

Verse 7, "Therefore submit to God [life in the divine dynasphere]. Resist the devil [avoidance of the cosmic system] and he will flee from you."

Verse 8, "Draw near to God [the function of the protocol system] and he will draw near to you [the blessings of motivational virtue]. Cleanse your hands you sinners [the function of the rebound technique. Sinners are believers in the cosmic system]; and purify your right lobes [momentum from the function of GAP], you double-minded [a believer involved in both cosmic one and cosmic two]."

Verse 9, "Be miserable [self-induced from making wrong decisions from a position of weakness] and mourn and weep [the result of bad decisions]; let your laughter be turned to mourning, and your happiness into gloom." This is the result of living in the cosmic system, the rise of degeneracy, and the destruction of the client nation to God.

Verse 10, "Humble yourselves under the mighty hand of God [the believer living in the protocol system], and he will exalt you." The believer becomes a winner in the protocol system and this is the only deliverance for our nation.

Returning to our passage in Revelation 19:2, we have seen how believers can resolve their problems by utilising the various rationales. First there is the essence of God rationale. God knows all the facts and is better qualified to make a judgment in every case. This is why the Tribulational martyrs left the matter of their martyrdom, their torture, their persecution in the hands of the Lord. No retaliation on their part. This took great virtue, the kind of virtue you find in the pivot. Secondly, the plan of God rationale. To believe in the plan of God you must remember that the battle is the Lord's. Thirdly, the logistical grace rationale. The justice of God is the source of life and blessing, not other people who have disappointed you. Fourth was the A fortiori rationale of Romans 8:32. In the fifth place, the historical trend rationale. God does a much better job in dealing with evil than we do. Arrogance says, Step aside God, I'm on a crusade. Sixth, the protocol rationale. The protocol of heaven is much more capable of administering judgment than we will ever be. From these rationales comes the doctrinal conclusion that we should always leave revenge in the hands of the Lord, so that in the third stage of the faith-rest drill we then have control of our own lives, we have a personal sense of destiny, we must not surrender our happiness to loved ones, to friends, to enemies, to strangers.

We continue in verse 2 with "because he has judged the great prostitute" and we noticed that it was she who "seduced the earth by means of her fornication". This fornication is not the literal fornication but the spiritual fornication which is related to the ability of religion to distract the world.

Next we resume with the dynamics of the faith-rest drill. We start out with the conjunction kai which introduces a result from what precedes, and therefore we translate it "furthermore." This refers to the imprecatory prayers of the Tribulational martyrs who have left vengeance in the hands of the Lord. In answer to the faith-rest drill, then, of these Tribulational martyrs there are three judgments which were administered: judgment by pain, judgment by death, judgment by finesse. The faith-rest drill of the Tribulational martyrs is based on the principle of Romans 12:19, "Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord." That is a principle that belongs to us right now, just as it belongs to the dynamics of the spiritual life in the Tribulation. It is not our responsibility to take vengeance on others, to retaliate. Vengeance is the monopoly of the Lord and we are to put the matter in the Lord's hands and leave it there. This is the function of the first stage of the faith-rest drill. In the second stage we have noted the various rationales which apply, and from these rationales again comes that doctrinal conclusion: revenge is the monopoly of God. Leave it in His hands; He has all the facts and he will handle the matter. And so we have "furthermore he avenged," the aorist active indicative of ekdikew. This is a dramatic aorist tense, it states the present reality of a future act of justice on behalf of the Tribulational martyrs. This is accomplishing the entire function of the protocol of heaven. The active voice: Jesus Christ to whom the Father has committed all judgment produces the action of the verb through the protocol system: judgment by pain, judgment by death, and judgment by finesse.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object a(ima referring to the blood of the martyrs, and they are called "his servants," douloj. These are servants in very technical way. They are ones who had a great spiritual impact in the time in which they lived. They remained the servants of the Lord, they did not take vengeance, they did not take anything out of the hands of the Lord — "furthermore he avenged the blood of his servants." This statement answers the faith-rest function of these martyrs, including their imprecatory prayers.

The believer who is free from revenge is motivated to be a winner in time. Freedom from revenge is one of the greatest freedoms that we enjoy in this life and it is a freedom that only comes from the perception of doctrine and the function of the faith-rest drill. This means freedom from motivational evil as in gate one of cosmic one, anytime you are jealous or bitter or vindictive or implacable or full of self-pity or full of hatred and antagonism. Freedom from motivational evil is one of the greatest freedoms in life, and by placing the matter in the hands of the Lord the believer never loses. The only losers are those who seek to retaliate, those who seek to hurt, those who seek revenge against others when wronged.

The ellipsis demands that a verb go with the word "blood," and "by means of her hand" is the final prepositional phrase, e)k plus the ablative xeiron a)utoj. Ordinarily, the instrumental is used in the expression of impersonal means. However, when the expression of means goes back to the origin we have the ablative of means. So it is "by means of her hand," referring to ecumenical religion, the great prostitute.

Translation: "Because his judgments are true [actual historical events, the printout of the computer of divine decrees] and righteous [divine judgment is based upon the function of divine integrity]: because he has judged the great prostitute [ecumenical religion], who seduced the earth by means of her fornication [ecumenical religion as the chief agent of the cosmic evangelism in the Tribulation], furthermore he avenged the blood of his servants shed by means of her hand."

Ecumenical religion in the Tribulation is Satan's chief agent in the function of evil. It had two functions which were mentioned in this verse. First of all, the evangelism or seduction of the world's population to Satan's cosmic system — the means by which he controls mankind, both believer and unbeliever. However, Satan cannot control the evil which has developed in his own system, and therefore the basis for finesse judgment. Secondly, for those mature believers who resist the cosmic system of ecumenical religion there was torture and violence and finally murder. Those who resisted ecumenical religion are the believers who were in the pivot in that day. Rejection of ecumenical religion meant refusal to compromise with evil and it will cost many of the mature believers their lives. The only exceptions would be mature believers in some geographical location in the Tribulation where they continue to have tranquillity and prosperity. during the course of the martyrdom of those mature believers so involved they will put aside all thoughts of revenge. They die in complete mental peace. They have placed the matter entirely in the hands of the supreme court of heaven and therefore they die in great tranquillity and blessing, even though their martyrdom, for some, will be painful.

Then there is a second shout of victory. This will give us the story of that nuclear mushroom cloud which God is going to freeze in place over Rome, and the "eternal city" of Rome will be famous throughout the Millennium and throughout all eternity. It will be the museum where people will go to see what a nuclear bomb was like. And that is all Rome will be in the Millennium and in the eternal state.

Verse 3, we have the second shout of victory which is very much like the first, except it is shorter. We have the connective conjunction kai referring to sequence, "Then." Then a nominative neuter singular adjective deuteroj meaning "second," "Then a second time," followed by the perfect active indicative of the verb legw, the verb of communication. It indicates, by the way, communication through words. In other words, communication from one's thinking. It is related to logoj which is the word in the Greek for word, thought, doctrine, and other things. "Then a second time they shouted." The perfect tense is an intensive perfect, it emphasises the results of the action so that the existing fact is intensified, and therefore the Greek way of saying a thing is. They are having a wonderful time in heaven and from time to time there is something very special announced and they stop having a good time long enough to cheer. The idiom is often translated in the English present, as here. The active voice: the Tribulational martyrs produce the action of the verb from a position of strength and happiness. Disaster on earth does not mar happiness in heaven. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the eschatological event in heaven, the cheering section.

Once again we have the Greek word which is not even correctly transliterated in the King James version, A)(llelouia. It is taken from the Hebrew which is hallelujah, "praise the Lord." This is a great cheer from thousands of winners from the Tribulation. The concept is very important here. This is not gloating. Gloating is a sign of no virtue, by the way. They are very happy because ecumenical religion has been judged, and judged properly. Actually, this is occupation with the person of Jesus Christ and the administration of His justice. The reason they are cheering is because they had the good sense to leave the matter in the Lord's hands: the principle of the faith-rest drill as we have previously noted. The Tribulational martyrs do not gloat over the judgments of Christ but they rejoice in the justice of our Lord as a part of His divine holiness. The same justice of Christ has provided blessing for them in heaven while exercising judgment on the earth. Heaven is a place of great happiness for believers during the interim life.

Since three divine attributes are related to the plan of God for the believer, one of the divine characteristics is always the object of human praise and worship. The first is the omniscience of God because God has understood us from eternity past and has provided for us through His policy of grace. Remember, under the principle of the infinity and the eternity of God the omniscience of God knew everything simultaneously. There never was a time when God had to learn anything. The omniscience of God fed all of these things into the computer of divine decrees so that there are many different printouts as a result. The computer of divine decrees made many printouts. We have noted some of them related to sin, some of them related to historical trends, some of them related to the function of the essence of God related to the protocol system in the plan of God. But the point is, the omniscience of God is always one of the bases for our worship of Him, our appreciation of Him, and our praise of Him. Secondly, of course, the love of God because we as believers are the object of His eternal and infinite impersonal love, which means that He has provided for us in grace under the pattern of Romans 8:32. Thirdly, the integrity of God is composed of His righteousness and justice which means that God has perfect virtue, always had perfect virtue, there never was a time when He did not have perfect virtue. Because God has always had perfect virtue it is impossible for Him to let us down. We are going to let God down and others as well from time to time but God will never let us down even once. No matter how we fail, no matter what we do that is wrong, no matter how we become involved in the cosmic system through our own stupidity and bad decisions we are going to let people down but He will never let us down. Therefore, He is the object of our worship. Furthermore, the integrity of God establishes the grace pipeline, the means of blessing the believer without compromising the character of God. Divine justice is on the giving end and on the receiving end we have indwelling us God's perfect righteousness. God sends all blessing, all grace support — not to us because we earn it or deserve it but to His own perfect righteousness. In that way there is no compromise of the attributes of God. Imputed righteousness not only means therefore justification at salvation but it means the basis by which God can bless us with our frailties in time.

The reason for the second shout of victory is also related to one of the most unusual museums in the Millennium, a museum that appears will not only survive the Millennium but also be a part of the eternal state. Furthermore, it is a museum city related to a museum city at the present — Rome. Rome is going to be a museum in the Millennium and a Museum for all eternity.

Let us notice the Greek. We have the expletive use of the conjunction kai, translated "and so." The subject is the nominative singular from kapnoj, and it means smoke with a chemical content of some sort. We simply translate it "smoke." This smoke is the result of the nuclear attack which destroyed the headquarters of ecumenical religion at the end of the Tribulation. Hence, it is a reference to the finesse judgment in which the evil agent, evil one, the revived Roman empire, finally destroys evil two, the ecumenical religious system.

Finesse judgment is an evil agent totally apart from divine coercion doing God's work by destroying an evil entity, evil two. This can also describe how the believer and the human race in general are all our own worst enemies. Evil one is our bad decisions, negative volition toward doctrine, all of the decisions to go contrary to what the Word of God tells us is the will of God for our lives. But those bad decisions we destroy ourselves. When we get into a jamb it is always of our own making. It all adds up the fact that we destroy ourselves and we bring about our own misery by our own bad decisions, we lose control of our lives, and we have no personal sense of destiny. This is finesse discipline, we discipline ourselves, we manufacture our own misery.

"and so her smoke," the possessive genitive singular from a)utoj. Her smoke refers to ecumenical religion, "goes up," the present active indicative of the verb a)nabainw, which means to ascend, to go up. The simplest translation would be "and so her smoke goes up."

The next phrase is going to be "forever and ever," and the point is: Does the smoke keep going up forever and ever and form the typical nuclear cloud. This is envisioned as a perpetual mushroom cloud, going up constantly, and it is there for all people to see. The "eternal city" (Rome) is certainly going to be an eternal museum which will describe how stupid man is without God, without Christ as saviour, without Bible doctrine. There will be no contamination in this Millennial museum. The Millennial people have to learn a lesson because they are not going to have any religion in the Millennium. One of the signs of perfect environment is the removal of all religion. There will be worship of the Lord of course, but worship of the Lord and faith in Christ is not a religion. A true relationship with God is not a religion. So people have to learn some way, some how, what a terrible thing religion is and how self-destructive it is, and what a terrible thing evil is, and how evil always is divided. Satan with all of his genius could never control evil. He cannot keep his team together. There is always dissension on the team and dissension on the team means evil one attacks evil two and destroys evil two. So Satan cannot control his own cosmic system because his cosmic system produces evil and evil does not stick together. Evil is always falling apart and is always mutually antagonistic. People from all over the world will come to see the mushroom cloud, the only reminder on earth that there was ever warfare.

The passage should read: "Then a second time they shouted, Praise the Lord. And so her smoke goes up ..." The perfective present tense denotes a continuation of existing results of the nuclear attack and the destruction of ecumenical religion. There will be a constant ascending of smoke, a constant mushroom cloud. It will be a perpetual museum, a reminder of the power of God, a reminder to us as believers that greater is He that is in you than he that is in the world. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of eschatological doctrine to us. In the future this will be a dogmatic statement of historical doctrine. It will be an eternal monument to the self-destructive power of evil.

The eternal status of this sight in Rome is given by the prepositional phrase: e)ij plus the accusative plural of a)iwon plus the genitive plural of a)iwon which is literally, "unto the ages of the ages" but is an idiom that should be correctly translated "forever and ever."

The destruction of religion through judgment by pain, judgment by death, and judgment by finesse removes Satan's most powerful weapon as a prelude to the second advent. Satan with all of his genius has never been able to control the power generated by evil. It is a power that gets out of control. Satan is the source of all evil but he is never able to control this power. Therefore evil becomes the agent in the destruction of evil as the principle of finesse judgment. The second victory shout, then, celebrates the power of our Lord Jesus Christ in destroying the greatest system of evil the world will ever know. This reminds every believer again of 1 John 4:4, "Greater is he that is in you than he that is in the world." It also confirms the principle of Psalm 76:10, "The wrath of man shall praise thee." The point of doctrine: Jesus Christ controls history.

While Jerusalem in the Millennium will enjoy great blessing and prosperity, Rome, the so-called eternal city, will be characterised by one of the most unusual phenomena of all time, a huge mushroom cloud which people will go to see.

Verse 4, we see, once again, the angelic aristocracy with their worship. This is not a general worship of all angels, only the aristocracy, the top winners in the prehistoric angelic conflict. There are two categories of aristocracy, both are found in this passage. The first is found under the nominative plural subject presbuteroj which is unfortunately translated "elders" in the King James version. With it we have indeclinable numerals e)ikosi and tessarej, "twenty-four." So we have twenty-four elders, but they are not elders as such. Technically presbuteroj, by the way, is used for pastor-teachers, emphasising their authority over a local church as far as the congregation is concerned. The word does not mean elder, it does not mean old man, it simply means the top authority within the framework of some organisation. The word presbuteroj is also translated "senator." It was used for administrative authority. Here it means one of the 24 highest-ranking staff officers in the angelic order of battle. This is one of the two categories of aristocracy in the angelic order of battle.

The second category is from the aristocracy of the angelic college of heralds. And, again, it is the staff, the angelic staff made up of four, "the four living creatures [heralds]." "Then the twenty-four elders [staff officers of the angelic order of battle] and the four living creatures [the seraph officers of the angelic college of heralds]," since both categories are elect angels and since both categories were top winners in the prehistoric angelic conflict they have the ability and the capacity to offer maximum worship to the Lord. The previous worship of the 24 angelic staff officers we studied in Revelation chapter four, verses ten and eleven. But at this time it isn't the rank and file of elect angels, it isn't even the lower aristocracy, we just have one special category which is permitted to enter into worship at this particular time, worship related to the mushroom cloud.

Probably one of the words that seems very dull as far as most people are concerned is the word "worship." Generally speaking people do not associate the word with any form of happiness or enjoyment. Most people think of worship as an obligation, something that has to be done, often a way of gaining some good fortune from God! Worship is often a trade-out in the minds of people who are so involved. Probably the reason for this is that we do not understand that once we are absent from the body and face to face with the Lord the capacity for worship will reach its maximum, and once it does it becomes the most stimulating and the most exciting thing in the world. The idea of worshipping God is a phenomenal thing.

Worship is generally associated in the Bible with happiness because one of the most basic concepts of worship is thanksgiving. Generally, people who are grateful are happy while they are grateful. Worship is actually one of the greatest tests for capacity in life and as your capacity for worship increases so does your capacity for life and for happiness. Worship is also probably the greatest expression of objectivity in life, and objectivity is always associated with the better things in life and the greater things. All virtue is related to objectivity and without objectivity there is no virtue. But people who are self-centered and arrogant, people who are full of involvement with themselves to the exclusion of reality and everything else, really have no capacity for worship and no understanding of it. Of course, worship is related to absolute truth and therefore becomes the key to many things in life. By absolute truth is meant Bible doctrine.

In verse four which we have just begun to study we have noticed that the subject is angelic worship. We also note that the angelic worship involves only the two categories of elect angel aristocracy, the first category being the 24 "elders" who are from the angelic aristocracy called the angelic order of battle. They are the staff officers in the angelic order of battle. And the four living creatures who are seraph-ranked heralds are also staff officers in the angelic college of heralds. They are the subject and they have been in eternity for as many years as have elapsed since the creation of man and woman and placing them in the garden, however long that is. The universe is much, much older than man. Long before man was created the angelic conflict existed, and in the angelic conflict there were winners and losers. The great winners are those angels who became a part of the aristocracy of eternity for angels. There are two categories: the angelic order of battle and the angelic college of heralds. These are the greatest winners in the prehistoric angelic conflict. One thing is certain: when it comes to worship the winners are always mentioned. We are dealing here with angelic winners and they have full capacity for worship. They have the greatest capacity for worship, they are a part of the eternal aristocracy of angelic creatures, the elect angels, in heaven.

We now have their worship mentioned in verse 4 because they have greater capacity for worship at the time that this event will occur than any other kind of creature. The aorist active indicative of proskuneo has to do with their posture. Posture often has a great deal to do with attitude. Proskuneo means to fall down and prostrate themselves. They fell down. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The posture of their glorified bodies is one of total humility which is a prerequisite to any form of worship on earth or in heaven.

There is a principle that comes out of this immediately: Anything that produces maximum happiness is an exclusive club, and the greater your capacity the more exclusive you become in life. And the greater your happiness from your capacity, the daily perception of Bible doctrine, the more you are in the ranks of a few as a winner in human history. One of the greatest sources of happiness that man can experience is worship under full capacity. There is no greater form of happiness, there is no greater pleasure, but it is a pleasure and a happiness which eludes most believers simply because believers do not have the capacity and simply because believers have a false scale of values.

The active voice: only a very limited group of creatures produce the action. These are creatures with the most capacity, creatures with an ability for happiness in heaven in eternity that many creatures will never have. Both elect angels and born-again believers. For one thing is certain as a part of the rewards of being a winner either in the prehistoric angelic conflict or in the Church Age or in any dispensation of human history the capacity goes with you. Worship in heaven will be in degrees just as there will be degrees of reward. The expression of worship that is given to us is only a very small thing like "Praise the Lord." That doesn't sound like much, but when we have a record such as we have here these are the highest decorated angels from the prehistoric angelic conflict. Just as a few are going to have the order of the morning star and the gazebo in the garden, and in the new knighthood of eternity they are going to be high on the list; and they will be aristocracy forever, and will have a greater capacity forever and ever to worship God because they have something to give. This is the definition of worship: a creature who has a relationship with God and from that relationship has something to give. That is worship. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of this worship on the part of the angelic aristocracy of heaven, the staff officers from the angelic order of battle and the staff officers from the angelic college of heralds.

The connective conjunction kai is followed by the aorist active indicative of the verb proskunew, correctly translated "worship," but the corrected translation does not explain all that it means. It is a culminative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the ability in eternity, an ability that few are going to have, elect angel or born-again believer, to express maximum worship of God and from that expression to derive a happiness that very few will possess. It is one thing to have eternal life and eternal security, it is one thing to be in heaven as a loser and still have a resurrection body, but capacity is very definitely involved. The reason that we have this antiphony in heaven is simply because we have at this point those with maximum capacity to express worship. They have something to give God. The something that they have to give God falls into three categories. First of all there is glory; secondly, honour to God; thirdly, thanksgiving. They have the capacity for maximum worship in the giving of glory, honour and thanksgiving to God. The active voice: the subject again, both the angelic staff officers of the order of battle and the heralds of the college of heralds produce the action of the verb as they did in Revelation 7:11.

Psalm 29:1, "Ascribe to the Lord, O sons of power," a title for winners in the Old Testament, "ascribe to the Lord glory and strength." Glory is again a category of worship. You cannot give to God in worship what you do not have. You must have glory in order to give Him glory. That is why in Revelation 4:10 the 24 angelic staff officers were able to throw their crowns down before the throne — because they had crowns. the crowns represented the rewards that they had received for being winners in the prehistoric angelic conflict.

Verse 2, "Ascribe to the Lord glory of his name; worship the Lord in the majesty of his integrity." We are familiar with the format for the royal family of God for it was predicted by our Lord Jesus Christ in John 4:22-24, "You worship what you do not know," this is our Lord speaking to the Pharisees who alleged to be the great worshippers on God in their day, and were not. In other words, He is saying to them that they worship in ignorance. When you put the word "worship" and "ignorance" together worship is canceled. You cannot worship God in ignorance. Worship can only function and exist in any form as creatures on this earth or in heaven have cognizance. Worship demands cognizance, perception of absolute truth, perception of Bible doctrine — "we worship what we know; for deliverance is from the Jews," Christ being the Jew is the only saviour. "But the hour is coming, and now is, when true worshippers shall worship the Father in Spirit and in doctrine," prophecy concerning the royal family of the Church Age, "for such people the Father seeks to be his worshippers," God created man with free will and with soul capacity to worship Him. "God is a spirit; and those who worship him must worship in spirit [the power of God the Holy Spirit] and in doctrine." So it is impossible to have any capacity for worship until there is the filling of the Holy Spirit and the perception and application of doctrine.

Philippians 3:3, "For we are the true circumcision, who worship in the Spirit of God and glory in Christ Jesus and put no confidence in the flesh." Putting no confidence in the flesh means that any time your scale of values puts anything else before doctrine, anything else before the principles of the protocol system, then you are putting confidence in people, and a negative part of worship is putting no confidence in the flesh.

So human worship is the expression of the believer's capacity from doctrine, the believer's category one personal love for God. As such it can only be expressed inside God's protocol system, the divine dynasphere. As the function of the royal priesthood inside of the divine dynasphere it demands perception of doctrine as the prerequisite for any capacity for worship. While worship is the priestly function of the believer, especially at gate five of the divine dynasphere, it is not a true function apart from the interlocking systems of the protocol. The worship function of gate five begins with love of God through perception of Bible doctrine. The first thing that we can give God is love but we must have capacity for it, and the capacity has nothing whatever to do with emotion but it has everything to do with the perception of doctrine.

According to Revelation 4:10,11 there are three categories in worship. The first category and the highest category that we can give God then is what is described in verse 11 as doxa, "glory." This is the form that expresses maximum capacity. To have maximum capacity as a believer (or as an elect angel) you must be a winner. For the royal family of God it is impossible to give this form of worship until we have received our resurrection bodies at the Rapture, and until we have received those awards and decorations that are compatible. No one can give glory in worship unless he has glory, and glory belongs only to those believers who are winners — only those believers who advance to gate eight. So we are talking about the type of worship expressed in our passage as something that only angels, only those winners, only those elect angels of the highest order of aristocracy can give at the present time. That is why when any worship is expressed in the book of Revelation sooner or later those elect angels who were winners in the prehistoric angelic conflict are the subject of the verb proskunew, the verb to worship. So the royal family of God is eliminated. We do not have glory until we have a resurrection body. Having a resurrection body doesn't even mean having glory. Having glory means having advanced to maturity before glory can exist. The believer cannot give in worship what the believer does not possess. At the present, under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit, the believer can give worship only in what he possesses, a mind to concentrate on doctrine, a voice to sing praises, a volition to perpetuate perception of doctrine.

The believer's capacities for worship are all related to his life inside the divine dynasphere. The principle: Capacity for worship must precede the function of worship, and ritual without reality is the status quo of a believer until he has something to give to God, something that he has developed in his own soul and in his own life. In this body of corruption we cannot give this highest form of worship.

The second category is called timh, "honour." But timh means three things, therefore there are three areas of worship expression connected with this noun. The first meaning of timh, and the lowest in the order of worship but still a part of worship and a part of capacity, is respect. Timh means respect. The believer can only respect the Lord Jesus Christ through understanding His thinking, which is another way of saying perception of doctrine at gate four. In 1 Corinthians 2:16 we discover that doctrine is the thinking or the mind of Christ. Respect is the beginning of love for God. You cannot give in worship what you do not have and until you have respect for God you cannot worship Him under this category. Apart from positive volition toward doctrine, apart from putting doctrine first in your scale of values, this is impossible. Respect for the written Word must precede respect for the written Word.

The second meaning of timh is reverence. It is the concept of personal love. Personal love for Christ in worship begins with respect which is personal love of God, gate five. It continues into reverence, which is occupation with the person of Christ. Once you are occupied with the person of Christ you have something to give. Respect is the worship of the immature believer who has legitimate function in worship whereas reverence is the worship of the advancing believer. Both respect and reverence are possible for the believer in time and the believer can give in worship both respect and worship. They are the function of the believer's royal priesthood as motivational virtue in worship. All motivational virtue must express itself in the function of worship for all motivating virtue is directed toward God.

The third meaning of timh is honour. To honour God in worship requires virtue and integrity manufactured inside the divine dynasphere. Only honourable believers can honour the Lord and give honour to the Lord in worship. You cannot give what you do not have.

The simplest form of worship is the giving of thanks, the most basic form of priestly worship and modus operandi. The capacity for this worship is gratitude. You must have capacity to have gratitude, to be in a state of appreciation. Capacity for thanksgiving comes from the perception of doctrine, while gratitude is the expression of that worship toward God. If you are grateful to God for anything you express it in worship. If you have gratitude you can express it. The believer in the cosmic system does not have capacity for gratitude and therefore he cannot fulfill this form of worship. Arrogance is the absence of gratitude and thanksgiving. No matter what is done for an arrogant person they are never appreciative.

So we have the concept of worship as it is expressed in our passage: angelic creatures who have reached the top in the prehistoric angelic conflict and therefore have maximum capacity. Therefore, their posture merely indicates their attitude: their respect, their reverence, their integrity, their gratitude and their glory. All of these things they are able to give in worship. "Then the twenty-four elders and the four living creatures fell down and worshipped..."

The object of worship: "the God," the dative singular indirect object from qeoj. An interesting thing here is that we do not have the accusative direct object. This is in the dative case, the dative of advantage, and it expresses the whole concept of worship. In the dative indirect object the one who is the object receives the advantage and this is why God created us. Two members of the Godhead sit on the throne and it will be noticed that what we have next is the fact that the worship is directed toward "the God who sat on the throne." The Father is obviously sitting on the throne and also the Son, for the Father said to the Son, "Sit down at my right hand until I make your enemies the footstool for your feet." He said this first prophetically in Psalm 110:1. It is expressed then post-prophetically, and therefore historically, after the resurrection, after the ascension and session of our Lord. Therefore, this prophetic phrase of Psalm 110:1 is mentioned in Romans 8:34; Ephesians 1:20; Colossians 3:1,2; Hebrews 1:3; 1:13; 8:1; 10:12; 1 Peter 3:22. So it occurs quite a number of times indicating the fact that Jesus Christ in hypostatic union is visible on the throne; God the Father is invisible. Jesus Christ as the exalted God-Man is the visible member of the Trinity — John 3:18; 6:46; 1 Timothy 6:16. As the winner in the angelic conflict our Lord Jesus Christ is the object of worship in this context.

We have the articular present active participle from the verb kaqhmai, which means to sit and is translated here "the one who is sitting." The definite article is used as a relative pronoun and refers to our Lord Jesus Christ. The perfective present tense denotes what has come to be in the past, the ascension of our Lord, but is emphasised as a present reality. Jesus Christ is seated at the place of honour at the right hand of the Father to be the object of our worship. The active voice: the glorified Christ produces the action of the verb and the participle is circumstantial. It refers, then, to the ascension and session of Christ. He is said to be seated "upon the throne," e)pi plus the locative of qronoj.

The shout that is given is very brief. It doesn't express everything that they are saying but merely what applies to us at the present time. We start out with the present active participle of legw which means to speak, to say, to communicate. The present tense is an aoristic present for punctiliar action in present time, obviously a futuristic present. The active voice: the representatives of the two categories of angelic aristocracy produce the action of the verb, the angelic order of battle and the angelic college of heralds. The participle is circumstantial which can be translated with the conjunction and the finite verb, "and they shouted," as being literal. With this we have the word "Amen" and the word "Hallelujah," "Praise the Lord."

Translation: "Then the twenty-four elders [the staff officers of the angelic order of battle] and the four living creatures [the seraph-ranked heralds from the angelic college of heralds] fell down and worshipped God who sat on the throne [the glorified Christ, the visible one sitting on the throne], and they shouted, Amen [we acknowledge]; Praise the Lord."

At this point we have a break-in from the highest-ranked officer in the angelic college of heralds. We go back now to the king of arms.

Verse 5, we have a sequential use of the conjunction kai, "Then." It introduces a mandate from the king of arms. With this we have the nominative singular subject fwnh, "voice." We have the aorist active indicative of e) xerxomai, it means the voice was coming from a direction, "Then a voice came from." And then we have the word for throne, qronoj. The king of arms is the voice from the throne. In the indicative mood we have the declarative for the reality for the worship mandate from the throne, "from the throne" is a)po plus the ablative of qronoj. So we have, "Then a voice came from the throne." The king of arms might be described as the angel of the presence. He occupies the position which Satan held before the angelic conflict began. The only difference is that Satan held that position as the anointed cherub while the king of arms holds that position as the highest-ranking seraph from the angelic college of heralds. Satan was created with his title in the prehistoric angelic conflict. He entered that with his title already a part of him; he was so created. Hence, while not named the king of arms is the greatest of all elect angels, with the possible exception of two in the order of battle: Michael and Gabriel who are in a different form of nobility.

As the angel of the presence the king of arms would be comparable to Moses or Paul in the eternal state. The spiritual greatness of the king of arms will only be known to us in the eternal future. In the meantime we observe some of his functions as the angel of the presence. There is something we can learn from this: the highest-ranking creature by creation was the anointed cherub called Lucifer, son of the morning. Down in the order was another elect angel, and once the angelic conflict was started by Satan this elect angel who was a plugger eventually reached the top, not because he was above Satan at the beginning but in the conflict he rose to the top through his momentum. Now he is a seraph forever and ever whereas Satan the anointed cherub will spend eternity in the lake of fire. So it isn't how you start that counts, it is how you end up. How you end up is determined by your volition, by your scale of values, by what you think and how you go about it.

In verse 5 we have "Praise our God, all you his servants." This mandate of the king of arms starts out with the present active imperative of the verb a)inew, the Greek word for praise. It is an Attic Greek verb, not a Koine verb at all. Every now and then when there is a switch from the Koine to the Attic Greek it has great emphasis. Attic Greek, along with Ionian, is the most literary of the Greek dialects. A)inew means to commend or extol or to praise. It denotes a very joyful praise. It means you are not being forced to do it, you are doing it because you are motivated and because you are in a state of great happiness and blessing. It can be translated, "Give praise." It is the customary present tense for the celebration of our Lord's victory in heaven and it anticipates the coronation of Jesus Christ after the second advent plus the marriage supper of the Lamb. The active voice: both winners and losers are given this command. It is an imperative mood and it is given to winners as well as losers. We have the dative singular indirect object from qeoj plus the possessive genitive from e)gw which means "our God," "Give praise to our God."

Then the vocative plural is addressed to those who are to be involved, the adjective paj, meaning "all," and douloj meaning "servants" or "slaves," "all of you his servants." While the subject for praise is not given in this verse the context will indicate it as we move into verses 7 and 9 especially. Douloj refers to believers who are attending the coronation and then the wedding banquet of the Lord.

Now we have classification. The articular present middle participle of fobew gives us a classification which at this time in the eternal state can include both losers and winners. Fobew has two different meanings: respect and admiration on the one hand, fear on the other. The definite article is used as a personal pronoun translated "you." The perfective present tense refers to a fact which has come to be in the past but is emphasised as a present reality at the time of fulfillment, i.e. second advent of Christ. The middle voice describes the subject as participating in the results of the action or the subject acting with a view toward participating in the outcome. There is one form of worship that winners and losers in resurrection bodies in eternity can give, and that is respect and admiration for the Lord. The circumstantial participle follows, the accusative singular direct object from a)utoj, the intensive pronoun used as a personal pronoun, refers to our Lord Jesus Christ, "you who respect him."

The first category mentioned is losers. We have an appositional nominative plural from mikroj, an adjective used as a substantive, and it refers here to losers in time, "both the small." The adjective means small in importance, influence or power. It is a reference to those believers who attend our Lord's coronation at the second advent who were losers in time. There are two important points here. First of all, even though they are losers they do not lose their salvation. They merely failed to utilise the plan of God in time and they do in resurrection bodies occupy an inferior state. The second principle is that the eternal state in heaven is one where there is no equality. Everyone is happy; no one is equal. Equality is unnecessary for happiness.

There are three categories of believers who attend the second advent coronation of Christ and all three categories have losers as well as winners. "Small" refers to the losers. First of the categories is the bride made up of Church Age believers, royal family of God in resurrection bodies. Your attitude toward Bible doctrine in time will determine whether you are a winner or a loser — your understanding of the protocol system, your understanding of how protocol functions in heaven, how protocol functions on earth. The second category is the friends of the groom, Old Testament saints and Tribulational martyrs. They are now in their resurrection bodies. Some are losers and some are winners. Mikroj describes those who are losers. The third category is the friends of the bride. These are the believers who lived through the Tribulation. They will become the cadre for the Millennial reign of Christ and the basis for forming a new population in a new dispensation and a new civilisation. So they are ones who survived as winners and losers. Two categories appear in resurrection bodies: the bride or Church Age believers and the friends of the groom, Old Testament saints and Tribulational martyrs. The losers are going to be those believers in this dispensation who failed to reside, function, and continue their momentum in the divine dynasphere. Instead they lived in the cosmic system. They lose all rewards and will be low on the totem pole in eternity, even though they do have resurrection bodies. One category of losers, the believers who lived through the Tribulation, still have their bodies of corruption until the end of the Millennium, and they are present as the friends of the bride. Note that all losers have the opportunity to advance to maturity, all losers have the opportunity of glorifying God in time; but they made a large number of wrong decisions from a position of weakness, resided therefore in the cosmic system, and as a result lost control of their lives in the cosmic system; and they had no personal sense of destiny related to the plan of God for their lives. They had the wrong scale of values. And note again: Losers means loss of reward, loss of knighthood, loss of decorations at the judgment seat of Christ. They experience shame at the judgment seat of Christ but they do not lose their salvation.

The second category is the appositional nominative plural from the adjective megaj, in the plural here and it refers to those who are winners, "the great." Once again, we have three categories of winners: the bride [Church Age believers], the friends of the groom [Old Testament saints and Tribulational martyrs], and the friends of the bride [believers who lived through the Tribulation]. In all three categories there will be winners through their momentum inside the plan of God in their respective dispensations.

Inasmuch as the wedding of the Lamb takes place in heaven and the wedding supper takes place on earth it is assumed that the coronation also will take place on earth. So we have some different places where these things occur.

In verses 5, 7 we anticipate the celebration on earth after the wedding occurs. Therefore verses 5-7 anticipate the second advent. The actual wedding in the ancient world is divided into three stages. Stage one was when the contract was made. The parents decided when their children were born, or shortly thereafter, whom they would marry. The parents of the groom would make a contract with the parents of the potential bride. At the time of the wedding the groom goes to the home of the bride, and when he picks up the bride they are married, that's it, they didn't go through any ceremony. The groom picking up the bride at the home is comparable to the Rapture and the judgment seat of Christ. Then, in stage three, the groom takes the bride to his home. When the chariot is going up to the house of the bride there is a long procession behind the chariot. Those are the friends of the groom. In the analogy the groom is our Lord Jesus Christ and the friends of the groom are the Old Testament believers and the Tribulational martyrs. At the home of the groom the bride's friends wait. They didn't mix with the friends of the groom until after they went to celebrate the marriage. They had to wait outside until the groom and the bride arrived, cf. the parable of the wise and foolish virgins. These are the friends of the bride. They are waiting for the chariot to come back with the procession. The friends of the bride had to have light so that they could find the path. No electricity in those days. When they heard that the procession was coming they lit their lamps. No oil in the lamps in the parable is an illustration that they were unbelievers and were to be eliminated by the baptism of fire, they would not go into the Millennium.

Verse 6, we have, before the wedding, the coronation. The actual coronation is not given. This is the celebration that immediately follows. We have a sequential use of the conjunction kai and the aorist active indicative of a)kouw which means to hear. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The apostle John produces the action of the verb because he is reporting. The indicative mood is declarative representing the action from the viewpoint of eschatology. The word "voice," fwnh, we are going to translate as a sound. With w(j) it is going to be translated "what sounded like." In other words, we know the idiom; we translate the idiom, "Then I heard what sounded like."

Next we have the objective genitive singular from a noun and an adjective, poluj and o)xloj, "a large crowd of people." The large crowd is a reference to the royal family of God. Naturally, the royal family is at the coronation and is about to become a bride. But first of all they are celebrating the coronation of the groom. Church Age believers in their resurrection bodies are a part of the coronation celebration. The second category of those celebrating are also given by the phrase, w(j fwnh, meaning "what sounded like," and again we have the objective genitive plural from a noun and an adjective, poluj and o(udor, "many waters," a reference to the friends of the groom, the Old Testament saints and the Tribulational martyrs in their resurrection bodies at the second advent. Special emphasis is given to one friend who in John 3:29 is called a friend of the groom, John the Baptist. The third category of those who are celebrating. This time we have a different phrase altogether: the adjective isxuroj which generally means "strong" but here it means "loud" or "mighty." With it we have the noun bronth which means "peals of thunder," so it is translated "mighty peals of thunder." These are the believers who survived the Tribulation to the second advent of Christ by which they are delivered and are called the friends of the bride. So we have three categories celebrating the coronation of our Lord Jesus Christ who has just become the ruler of the world.

Now we have the recognition of God's policy of grace in the last phrase of this verse. First of all we have the present active participle of the verb legw, and we translate it "shouting." All of them are celebrating. We have the pictorial present tense. The active voice: all three categories are joining in the celebration and they are shouting "Praise the Lord," as we have already noted. It is a celebration of our Lord's coronation plus the recognition of the grace policy which made it all possible. They are celebrating the fact that they are there, as well. No one would be present at the coronation of Christ apart from God's policy of grace. So the celebration not only recognises the principle of occupation with the person of Jesus Christ but, at the same time, this celebration will commemorate grace.

Then we have the recognition of the king, "because," o(ti, then the title of our Lord, "the Lord our God the omnipotent one has become King." The word for "omnipotent one" is a nominative singular from pantokratwr, "all ruler," translated "omnipotent one." Pantokratwr stands up in contrast to kosmokratwr, used in Ephesians 6:12 for powerful demons who function under Satan during Satan's rule. Now the Lord is the pantokratwr whereas the these great demons were only kosmokratwr, rulers of the world. God's relative attribute here is omnipotence. He is all-powerful, He is able to do all things which are the object of His power and within the range of His own holy character. God has unlimited authority and power under His attribute of omnipotence.

We have, then, the final phrase, the aorist active indicative of basileuw which means to rule or to reign, "because the Lord our God the omnipotent one has become King [or rules]." The culminative aorist tense views our Lord's coronation at the second advent in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. Jesus Christ rules for the last one thousand years of human history over planet earth. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of this eschatological principle.

Translation: "Then I heard what sounded like a large crowd of people, and what sounded like many waters, and what sounded like mighty peals of thunders, saying, Praise the Lord; because the Lord our God the omnipotent one has become King."

The greatest party in all of history will be held in connection with the coronation of our Lord Jesus Christ. The categories of guests are very simple. It is in a sense a wedding party and it is called, unfortunately in the King James version, a wedding supper. A supper is a light meal at night. The Greek says, a wedding banquet. It will be a banquet in which there will be not only protocol but there will be maximum happiness. For maximum happiness there must always be protocol related to it. Abandonment of protocol means loss of happiness, someone always gets hurt.

There are four categories involved in this great wedding banquet. First of all there is the host Himself who is called the groom. That, of course, is the Lord Jesus Christ. He has just been crowned King; He has superseded Satan as the ruler of this world; He has just had a great coronation in heaven, and He comes to earth for the celebration of the marriage banquet of the Lamb. Secondly, there is the bride. The bride is made up of all believers of this dispensation, Church Age believers. Then there are the friends of the groom, the Old Testament believers plus the Tribulational martyrs. These two categories will have resurrection bodies, therefore maximum capacity for happiness. Then there are the friends of the bride, those millions of believers who lived during the Tribulation, who will survive the Tribulation and will go into the Millennium to form the cadre for the population explosion of the Millennium. They are the Tribulational believers and they are still in their bodies of corruption. So this is the categorical development of the guests.

Verse 7, the wedding of the Lamb. The marriage or wedding of the Lamb takes place immediately after the coronation of our Lord Jesus Christ. The celebration in this verse relates to the marriage of the Lamb. The verse describes the attitude of all who attend. It is given in the present active subjunctive of the verb xairw, which means to rejoice, to be glad, to be happy, to enjoy yourself at a party. We will simply translate it, "Let us rejoice." It is happiness based on attitude and the condition of your own soul. This verb always has to do with when the thought pattern is stimulated. Therefore rejoicing is related to the doctrinal content of thinking in the three categories of those who are invited this wedding feast. The present tense is a pictorial present, it depicts the celebration in the process of occurrence. The active voice: three categories of believers produce the action of the verb. First of all the Church as the bride in resurrection bodies, and then the Old Testament believers and Tribulational saints, friends of the groom in resurrection bodies, and finally believers who survive the Tribulation still in their bodies of corruption. The subjunctive mood is what we call a hortatory subjunctive in which the bride of Christ encourages the rest of the guests to join in the common expression of great happiness because of the occasion.

Next we have a conjunction kai which introduces a second verb connected with the party, the present active subjunctive of agalliw, another word for celebration. It actually means to celebrate a great victory, to celebrate something that is absolutely phenomenal. This is the greatest celebration of all time. Generally this verb always appears in the middle voice.

Here it does not; it appears in the active voice. When combined with the verb xairw it should be translated, "Let us be extremely happy and celebrate." The static present tense represents a condition which is taken for granted as a fact at the wedding of the Lamb and the great banquet which will follow. The active voice: those present at the wedding produce the action of the verb. Finally, we have another hortatory subjunctive in which one exhorts others to participate in a festal occasion. The hortatory subjunctive is always used in the first person plural.

Then we have another verb and this time it introduces a new concept because of the change of tense. We have the aorist active subjunctive of the verb didomi which always means to give or to delegate. Here we have the expression of worship: you cannot give in worship what you do not have. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the same three categories present at the great party produce the action. It is, again, a hortatory subjunctive.

We have to find out what we are giving here and the accusative singular direct object of doca indicates what is being given, "glory." The dative singular indirect object from a)utoj means, of course, "glory to him." "Let us give glory to him," referring to our Lord Jesus Christ as the groom. That is the basis for the greatest party in all of history.

The reason for the celebration is now declared, beginning with the causal conjunction o(ti, translated "because." Next is our subject, the nominative singular from gamoj which means generally marriage, it also means the wedding banquets or the wedding celebration which follows. Therefore we have the wedding of a)rnion, the "Lamb," "has come," the aorist active indicative of the verb e)rxomai. This means that the time finally arrives for the greatest of all parties. The culminative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, namely the banquet, the party which follows.

It was customary in the ancient world to have a wedding party. The party generally lasted a week or ten days during which time, at some time, the bride and the groom finally slipped off. The indicative mood is declarative from the verbal action from the viewpoint of eschatological reality, the greatest party of all time. The sequence of events: the second advent of Christ, the incarceration of Satan, the resurrection of the Old Testament saints and Tribulational martyrs, the baptism of fire which eliminates all unbelievers from the world, the coronation of our Lord Jesus Christ, and then the great celebration.

In the marriage situation of the ancient world, when the groom comes to pick up the bride, the bride must be prepared. In those days women were never tolerated to be late, they had to be prepared. When the groom showed up at the door the bride had to be waiting, otherwise the groom could turn around and nullify the contract of marriage simply because the bride was not ready. So the preparation of the bride becomes the next issue.

It is introduced with a connective conjunction kai followed by the possessive genitive from a)utoj, "and his." Then the nominative singular subject of gunh, meaning woman, but also meaning bride, "and his bride," a reference to the Church Age believer. The reason that we will be prepared as the bride of Christ is because we have all passed through the judgment seat of Christ. We have received our resurrection bodies and we have been evaluated at the judgment seat of Christ.

With this we have the aorist active indicative of the verb $\epsilon\tau\omicron\iota\mu\alpha\zeta\omega$ which means to be prepared. With the accusative singular direct object of the reflexive pronoun $h(a)\tau\omicron\upsilon$ the translation has to be changed slightly. There is no nominative so we use the genitive here as the vocabulary form. $h(a)\tau\omicron\upsilon$ is a reflexive pronoun and when the action expressed in a verb is referred back to its own subject the construction is called reflexive. Therefore we have the phrase, "because the marriage supper of the Lamb has come and the bride has prepared herself." In other words, the Church called the bride of Christ in 2 Corinthians 11:2 and Ephesians 5:25-27, and the Tribulational believers who survive called the "friends of the bride" or "the wise virgins."

Translation: "Let us rejoice and celebrate [the expression of maximum happiness at the marriage banquet of the Lamb], because the marriage banquet of the Lamb has come [following the second advent and the coronation of our Lord] and the bride has prepared herself."

The marriage banquet is important because there was no such thing as a marriage ceremony. Therefore the noun $\gamma\alpha\mu\omicron\iota$ does not mean marriage, it always means the marriage banquet. The moment that the believer received Christ as saviour, that is the moment the marriage contract was entered into. In the ancient world often the bride and the groom were not acquainted until the groom picked the bride up in the chariot. So the friends of the bride and the friends of the groom had to become acquainted with each other. Therefore there was one big party that lasted for a week or ten days, and in some cases a month. The analogy here: the groom picking up the bride in the air. The groom is the Lord Jesus Christ seated at the right hand of the Father; the bride is the Church. So at the Rapture our Lord picks us up and gives us our resurrection body. This is the bride being prepared and ready. Then comes the big genuflect in the sky when we as the bride recognise our Lord and saviour Jesus Christ. After that we have during the entire period of the Tribulation the judgment seat of Christ, the decorations and awards to winners and the explanations to the losers why they are losers. Then there is the wedding banquet. The friends of the bride are waiting outside. Once the groom has arrived with the bride, then you have the wedding banquet.

Remember that the groom is our Lord Jesus Christ who has just been crowned ruler of the world after His second advent. The bride is the Church, she has prepared herself beginning at the Rapture and continuing through judgment seat of Christ during the seven years of the Tribulation. During that time every believer will be evaluated as a winner or a loser, and winners will receive their proper rewards and decorations.

The friends of the bride, the believers who survive the Tribulation, are still on the earth. They are waiting at the home of the groom, Castle Zion in Jerusalem. The groom who now rules the earth is coming to His castle with His bride, the Church Age believers, and the friends of the groom are the Old Testament saints and Tribulational martyrs who have now received their resurrection bodies. Of course, there are false friends or unbelievers who also survive the Tribulation and they are trying to get in on the action. The baptism of fire eliminates them.

Matthew 25:1-13, a parallel passage. The unbelievers who survive have not been invited to the wedding banquet is the story of Matthew chapter 25 where we see what happens to the unbelievers who survive the Tribulation, whereas Revelation 19:7 tells us the story from the standpoint of the believer.

Verse 1, "Then the kingdom from heaven [the Millennial reign of Christ beginning with the second advent] will be analogous to ten virgins [the survivors of the Tribulation and the word "virgin" is used not in the literal sense that we use it but in the sense of the friends of the bride], who took their lamps, and went to meet the groom [second advent]."

Verse 2, "Now five of them were foolish [unbelievers], and five of them were wise [believers who survived the Tribulation]."

Verse 3, "For when the foolish took their lamps [representing their volition. Man is always the product of his own decisions], they took no oil in them [negative volition toward the gospel as it was presented dramatically during the Tribulation]."

Verse 4, "But the wise took oil in flasks along with their lamps [positive volition of Tribulational people]."

Verse 5, "Now while the groom was delaying [He is picking up the bride during the seven bowl judgments], they dropped off to sleep and continued sleeping [they survived the seven bowl judgments but they did not believe in Jesus Christ]."

Verse 6, "But at midnight [the second advent] there was a shout, "Behold the groom! Come out and meet him'."

Verse 7, "Then all the virgins [all the survivors of the Tribulation] arose and trimmed their lamps.

Verse 8, "Then the foolish said to the wise, 'Give us some of your oil, for our lamps are going out'." The principle is very obvious here: Every person must stand on his own decisions, not on someone else's.

Verse 9, "But the wise [the believers] answered and said, 'No, there will not be enough for us and for you [unbelievers cannot avoid the consequences of their own rejection of Christ at the last moment]; Go instead to the dealers [to the evangelists] and buy for yourselves'." But at the second advent evangelism has been closed down.

Verse 10, "And while they were going away to make the purchase the groom came [second advent], and those who were ready went in with him [a picture of the friends of the bride] to the wedding feast; and the door was shut." The second advent is the last chance for salvation for unbelievers of the Tribulation.

Verse 11, "Then later the other virgins came also, shouting, 'Lord, lord, open up for us!'"

Verse 12, "But he answered and said, 'It is a fact, I do not know you!'" This is equivalent to the baptism of fire for all the unbelievers are taken off the earth and cast into fire. This is the parable of the wheat and the tares. The wheat are the believers of the Tribulation going into the Millennium, the tares are the unbelievers who are cast out.

Verse 13, "Be alert then, for you do not know either the day or the hour." The phrase, "the Son of Man cometh" is not found in the original.

In revelation 19:7, the aorist tense of the verb ετοίμαζω is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It refers to the judgment seat of Christ or the evaluation of the royal family of God which occurs in heaven while the Tribulation is going on on earth. The active voice: the bride or the believers of the Church Age produce the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of this preparation beginning with the Rapture or the resurrection of the Church, the big genuflect in the sky, the judgment seat of Christ, the establishment of a new order of eternal knighthood and the presentation of winners in the court of heaven as being those on the honours list. These three doctrines explain how the bride prepares herself: the Rapture of the Church, the big genuflect in the sky and the judgment seat of Christ. The wedding, therefore, occurs in heaven. The marriage supper or wedding feast occurs on earth. The contract phase occurs on earth when you believe on Jesus Christ.

One of the basic laws of hermeneutics is the fact that the Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written. The background for the paragraph we are studying is the wedding ceremony of the ancient world which is very different from anything we have today. They had no ceremony as we understand it. They had a contract which was generally made when the bride and the groom were children. The contract, of course, is analogous to our faith in Jesus Christ. Secondly, they had the actual function where the groom went to pick up the bride. That is analogous to the preparation of the bride which is the subject of verse eight. In that particular phase we have the Rapture or the resurrection of the Church followed by the judgment seat of Christ. In the third category we have the groom bringing the bride back to his own home, and that is the actual marriage, the wedding banquet which often lasted a week or ten days, sometimes longer. That was the official beginning of the marriage.

In verse 7 we have the home of the groom and the home of the bride. The entire procedure is a very simple one and there are three categories of those involved, apart from the groom. The groom, of course, represents our Lord Jesus Christ. The bride represents the Church as the royal family of God. Then there are the friends of the groom, the Tribulational martyrs plus the Old Testament saints. Finally, there are the friends of the bride who are the Tribulational believers who survive the Tribulation to go into the Millennium to form the cadre for the population explosion at that time.

In verse 8 the preparation of the bride is amplified. This begins what is known as ultimate sanctification. There are two doctrines which introduce the subject. The subject is all those who are involved in this party and the bride is specifically in view at this point. We start out with the connective conjunction kai introducing a result of the previous verse, translated "Furthermore." Then we have the aorist passive indicative of the verb didomi which means to give, "Furthermore it has been given." The culminative aorist regards the preparation of the bride in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. The existing result is, first of all, ultimate sanctification, and this is followed by the decorations and rewards. The preparation of the bride begins with the resurrection of the Church. The winners and losers all receive resurrection bodies. Then the great genuflect and the judgment seat of Christ when every believer in the Church Age is evaluated. Some will be decorated because they are winners. Others, as losers, will not be decorated, nevertheless they will still have a resurrection body. All believers are going to be involved, "Furthermore it was given to her." The passive voice: the Church, the bride of Christ, all believers. The distinction between believers begins in time. It may not always be obvious, it may not be apparent to others. It isn't necessary for you to judge the life of other believers, that is their responsibility before God. Every believer is a priest; every believer-priest has the right to evaluate his own life before the Lord. But the real distinction between winners and losers in time is the manner in which blessing is given from God. The winners receive great blessings, first of all under logistical grace, but more than that, under the principle of supergrace blessing under six paragraphs. The winners have the greatest testing; the winners have the greatest blessing. So the distinction begins in time.

"Furthermore it has been given," the indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the preparation of the bride. All believers are involved in ultimate sanctification. Sanctification begins at salvation, it is the imputation of divine righteousness to every believer. The thing that distinguishes believers of the Church Age is the fact that we are in union with Christ. The baptism of the Spirit does not occur in any previous dispensation, nor in any future dispensation. Only believers of this dispensation are formed into the royal family of God.

We have next the fact of clothing, the dative singular indirect object of a)utoj refers to the entire body of believers for this dispensation, and it is translated, "Furthermore it has been given to her." The Church is the bride of Christ, so mentioned in 2 Corinthians 11:2; Ephesians 5:25-27. Then we begin the purpose clause, a semifinal purpose clause which is introduced with the conjunction i(na, "that" or "in order that." It introduces a semifinal purpose clause here which denotes the direction of the action of the main verb. Where is the verb to give going? "Furthermore it was given to her," a verb with action. God is giving us something and if He is going to give us something we need to know the direction of that verb. What is being give? How, when, and where?

Next we have the aorist middle subjunctive of the verb periballw which means to be clothed. The dress of the bride is very important, she does not come to the wedding to embarrass the groom. We are not going to embarrass the groom in that future day when this great party is going to take place. That is because the groom is going to provide for us the clothing. The dramatic aorist tense states a present reality with the certitude of a past event, the fact that at the Rapture of the Church every believer will have a resurrection body. That is the resurrection of the bride, that is the clothing of the bride. The middle voice is a direct middle in which the subject, the bride of Christ, acts with a view toward participating in the outcome of the action. We will be properly attired for that occasion. The subjunctive mood is a potential subjunctive implying a future reference. This is not going to happen yet, it is in the future.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object from the noun bussinoj which refers to something that was very rare and very difficult to find in the ancient world where everything was generally done by hand, "fine linen." The fine linen emphasises the resurrection body of the believer. At the point of salvation we receive the first thing necessary to be at that great party, the righteousness of God which we then have forever. It is imputed to us; it indwells us; it is not only the basis of justification but all during our time on earth all divine blessing comes from one half of divine holiness, the justice of God. The righteousness of God qualifies us for a resurrection body. So bussinoj refers to imputed righteousness received at salvation, phase one sanctification. Phase two sanctification is the believer inside of the divine dynasphere. Phase three sanctification has to do with the resurrection body. All of this has to do with the preparation of the bride.

Then there is a distinction between winners and losers. This comes next in a very interesting way. Two adjectives are used to describe the winners in contrast to the losers for that distinction will last for all eternity. The first of the two adjectives lamproj which means "shining." So the first thing we notice is that there is something shining about the resurrection bodies of winners. This is what we call the uniform of glory. It actually covers the resurrection body with a beautiful translucent light and it distinguishes winners from losers throughout all eternity. It is a reward for advancing to maturity during phase two or time on this earth. The second adjective is kaqaroj which means pure. It is the ultimate and eternal righteousness of all Church Age believers as a part of their ultimate sanctification. The word shining is very important at this point because it introduces a concept which we have not previously noted. That is the concept that this distinction will exist. It all starts with the concept of the uniform of glory, a robe of translucent light worn by our Lord Jesus Christ at His resurrection. Before our Lord received His resurrection body, the uniform of glory, the uniform was actually displayed before three of His disciples Peter, James and John, on the mount of transfiguration, Matthew 16:28ff. This was the first time that any human being had ever seen the uniform of glory. Since the order of the morning star is the highest decoration in heaven and can only be given to a believer who is mature the uniform of glory is to be worn with the order of the morning star. That explains "shining" in the middle of verse 8. Only mature believers will have the uniform of glory covering their resurrection bodies and this is merely to accompany the wearing of the order of the morning star.

In Numbers 24:17 we meet for the first time the order of the morning star in a prophecy of the first coming of Christ. The phrase, "a star shall come forth from Jacob." That star was actually the Lord Jesus Christ. In 2 Peter 1:17-19 Peter tells us what he learned at the mount of transfiguration, "When he [the Lord Jesus Christ on the mount of transfiguration] received from God the Father honour and glory," the honour is the uniform of honour, the uniform of glory, "such a sound as this was made to him by the majestic glory, 'This one

[our Lord Jesus Christ] is my beloved Son in whom I am well-pleased,' and we heard this same voice carried from heaven when we were with him in the holy mountain. And we keep on having a more reliable prophetic doctrine," that is, than the empiricism of observing the Lord's uniform of glory on the mount of transfiguration, "with reference to which doctrine you perform honourably." If you perform honourably by habitually concentrating in your right lobes, Peter says, then you will receive this uniform of glory, "as a lamp shining in a dark place until the day dawns [the second advent] and the morning star [Jesus Christ] has come." This decoration is revealed with the winners at the second advent of Christ. Colossians 3:4 says, "On the occasion when Christ our life shall become manifest [second advent] you [the mature believer with the order of the morning star and the uniform of glory] shall become manifest with him in glory [wearing the uniform of glory]." So this decoration is worn at the greatest party of all time.

Next in verse 8 we have the final phrase, the explanation of final sanctification for all believers. We have the explanatory use of the post positive conjunction gar which introduces the concept. Then we have the repetition of the subject, the nominative neuter singular from bussinoj, "For the fine linen." Then the verb, the present active indicative of the verb e)imi, the verb to be, in the static present. The static present represents a condition as perpetually existing. The active voice: the fine linen represents the resurrection body and ultimate sanctification for all believers, winners and losers. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of doctrine, the doctrine of ultimate sanctification. Then the predicate nominative plural from dikaiwma which here means a right act, the fulfillment of a legal requirement. Therefore we will call it the completion of justification — "for the fine linen is the fulfillment [or completion] of the justification of the saints." Justification is fulfilled or completed at the point of ultimate sanctification at the time of the Rapture when all believers receive that resurrection body. The beginning of justification begins at salvation with the imputation of divine righteousness; the fulfillment of justification is when each one of us receives a resurrection body: Church Age believers at the Rapture; Old Testament saints and Tribulational martyrs at the second advent; at the end of the Millennium the Millennial saints who survived the Tribulation. The fulfillment, then of the completion of justification occurs at the point of ultimate sanctification.

Translation: "Furthermore, it had been given to her that she should be clothed in fine linen, shining [winners only], but for the rest pure: for the fine linen is the fulfillment of the justification of the saints [all believers]."

Verses 5-7 refer to the wedding banquet on earth after the second advent. Verse 8 refers to the marriage in heaven prior to the second advent.

Verse 9, the wedding supper of the Lamb. We begin by noting the sequential use of the conjunction kai, "Then." With it we have the present active indicative of the verb legw, a communication word, and here it means simply to speak, "Then he said to me." The historical present tense views the past event with the vividness of a present occurrence. The active voice: John's teaching angel produces the action of the verb. The teaching angel is not identified but is probably the same officer of arms from the angelic college of heralds. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality.

With this we have the dative singular indirect object from the pronoun e)gw. It is also a dative of advantage, it is to our advantage to have this information. Then the mandate, the aorist active imperative given to the apostle John. Being one of the writers of the scripture, being an apostle under the mandate of God, he is now to write down what he sees. We have the aorist active imperative of the verb grafw which means to write. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it views the action of the verb in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. The passage is a part of the Word of God which lives and abides forever. The active voice: John as the human writer will produce the action of the verb under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. The imperative mood is the imperative of command, a mandate from one of the highest-ranking elect angels to the highest-ranking believer alive on the earth at that time. Note that the angelic members of the angelic college of heralds outrank the apostles while the apostles are still on earth. The teaching angel had to be one of the seraph rank angels who presents this information.

Next we have the blessing for the invited guests and the first word is the nominative plural of makarioj which is a word for happiness. Pindar was the first one to use makarioj in the Greek language. He used it in the Attic Greek, it was also then spread to the Ionic Greek, and eventually it went to several of the other forms and came down to us from Pindar in the Koine Greek. It denoted transcendent happiness in life, having a life beyond care, labour and death, a life which can overcome all of the problems, a happiness which has a greater reality in the life of the individual than any problem in life. In the Attic Greek makarioj was used for a happy state of the gods — the noun used here in its stylistic form which is the beatitude form. We have noted that there are seven beatitudes in the book of Revelation. The noun connotes blessing from God to man resulting in great happiness for the recipient. This happiness is the basis for understanding what this marriage supper is all about.

John 15:11, "These things I have spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy may be full." This includes the perfect tense of the verb lalew which has many meanings, but one of them is to express one's self, to proclaim, to teach. So we will translate it: "I have taught." The perfect tense is an intensive perfect, it emphasises what has occurred in the past and the existing results are then brought into focus. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb in communicating His mandates regarding the believer's residence inside the divine dynasphere. The indicative mood is declarative for a simple statement of fact. Jesus taught His disciples regarding the new way of life, the new protocol system, which would come with the Church Age inasmuch as believers in this dispensation are different from other believers in that we are royal family of God.

Jesus tells us that there is a reason for teaching these things. The conjunction i(na introduces a purpose clause. He has a purpose in teaching us all of these things, "in order that my joy," the word for "joy" is the noun xara and it has to do with happiness, "might be in you." "Might be" is a present active subjunctive of the verb e)jimi, the verb to be. The present tense is a customary present, it denotes what habitually occurs when the believer continues his momentum at gate four of the divine dynasphere. The active voice: the believer produces the action of the verb inside of the divine dynasphere. The subjunctive mood is a potential subjunctive denoting the purpose clause and implying a future reference.

We will call this joy "+H," happiness which is derived from the protocol system. We have studied in the past three kinds of happiness. First of all there is pseudo-happiness which we will call "-H." It is the occasional fun that someone might have living in the cosmic system. The cosmic system of Satan can produce stimulation, something that approximates happiness, but it is actually a pseudo-happiness. It is not a real happiness, it doesn't last and it doesn't sustain, and it is often followed by an equal and opposite reaction of depression. The second category of happiness might be called "neutral H," simply the human happiness derived from compliance with the laws of divine establishment plus the development of human integrity and honour. The unbeliever can have neutral H through his function under establishment. Genuine humility under establishment provides the basis for capacity for happiness, for love, for life limited to time, e.g. Eccl. 9:9. This is directed to the unbeliever, he can find happiness in human relationships, in his occupation — neutral H.

The third category is God's happiness which we call "+H." It is found through life in the divine dynasphere.

There are certain guests who are invited to the marriage banquet of the Lamb and there is a blessing for these guests. This blessing comes from the word for this absolute happiness — makarioj. "Blessed are they". That introduces the articular perfect passive participle from the verb kalew which means to be invited here. The definite article is used as a personal pronoun and it refers to those who are invited. Obviously the groom will be there. He is not invited; it is His party. The groom is the Lord Jesus Christ. The bride, the Church Age believers, will be there. But this is talking about the guests and there are two categories of guests who are invited under the principle of kalew. The first category are the friends of the groom. These are the Old Testament saints. They are in their resurrection bodies. Then there are the friends of the bride, those Tribulational believers who survive the Tribulation.

We have in this verse, "Then he said to me [the apostle John], Write, Blessed are they who have been invited." The perfect tense is a dramatic perfect for the completed action and existing state of these believers. Those who are invited are prepared for this magnificent banquet because in the resurrection body there is capacity for +H, and for the Tribulational believers who survive the Tribulation they have capacity because of the very doctrine by which they survive. So this is one of the happiest parties which ever existed. This is a party where no one is invited without capacity to enjoy our Lord and to enjoy the party. Therefore the dramatic perfect emphasising the results of the action. We are talking about those who have believed in Christ in time and we are talking about guests with the capacity to appreciate what is happening. The passive voice: two categories of believers receive the action as guests — the friends of the bride, the friends of the groom. This is a circumstantial participle, and with it we have a descriptive phrase, "to the wedding feast of the Lamb."

The next phrase in this verse is very important. We have the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, "also," and again the present active indicative, "also he said to me." This becomes the first of two reasons why we have the book of Revelation. We are going to discover in verse 10 that the doctrinal communication about Jesus is the perceptive insight into prophecy. There is a great need for prophecy because it is the testimony of our Lord Jesus Christ. There is also another need for prophecy: we learn to apply from the future to our present lives just as we have learned to apply from the past to our present lives. Many of the things we learn about the spiritual life we learn from the study of prophecy. And prophecy is stated right here, under this principle. We have a subject, the nominative plural subject made up of two words, a demonstrative pronoun o(utoj, and with it logoj which has a number of meanings but here it has to do with doctrine. Note that these are in the plural, "these doctrines." Here we have the present active indicative of e)imi, a verb which is used in its absolute sense here, "these doctrines are." The static present represents a condition as perpetually existing. The active voice: eschatological doctrine in this context produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of fact. With it we have a predicate nominative from the a)lhqinoj, generally translated "true," "these are the true doctrines from God," the ablative of source from qeoj. That means that there is a meaning and purpose for us having these things at this time.

Revelation 19:10 — We now begin a second section to this particular context: the second advent of Christ. This will be the subject in verses 10-14. Verse 10 is a transitional verse. Here we have John the apostle not only making a mistake but a mistake that is recorded for all eternity. He was so overcome by the teaching of the angel that he fell down and worshipped an angel. This helps us to understand the principle: it isn't the man, it is the message.

We start out with what has been called the apostle's impulsive mistake, or the angel with feet. We begin the exegesis with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, followed by the aorist active indicative of the verb piptw which often describes either an accident or an impulsive action. It means to fall. Sometimes it means to fall because of a stumble, sometimes it means to fall because of being impulsive, sometimes it even means to throw yourself on the ground because you are emotional. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It represents an impulsive move on the part of the apostle John. The active voice: this holy man of God, John, produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of this impulsive mistake.

With this, and following it, we have an improper preposition for an improper action. The preposition of e)mprosqen plus genitive of pouj, "at his feet." The word "his" is the possessive genitive from a)utoj. The purpose for falling down is then expressed: the aorist active infinitive of proskunew which means to worship — "I fell down at his feet to worship." The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the impulsive action in its entirety. The attempt to worship and backed by emotion is not worship. God does not want our emotion, God is not complimented by our emotion, and God is not glorified by our emotion.

It is our thought, it is the content of Bible doctrine in the soul that we give to God. We have noted that you cannot give to God what you do not have. At this point John is obviously not thinking. He is overwhelmed by the message of the marriage banquet of the Lamb, and being overwhelmed he goes into that slide that often ruins so many people and that is the principle of allowing the emotions to take over control of the soul and to suppress the thought. John, the human author of the book of Revelation is now worshipping another creature! This is the infinitive of purpose expressing the aim or the action denoted by the main verb, piptw. Then we have the dative singular indirect object from a)utoj, he worshipped him, the teaching angel. There is a great danger right here. When someone communicates doctrine, whether it is an angel to John or the apostle John to his congregation, or any pastor to a congregation, you are assembled not to hear a good message but to learn Bible doctrine. Idolising of the pastor must be avoided at all cost. The congregation is there to learn doctrine so that it can worship God, not to have its emotions titillated so that it can worship the pastor.

The rebuke of the teaching angel comes next. We have also the identification of the communicator. This angel is the second highest angel in the angelic college of heralds. He is next to the king of arms. He holds the rank of officer of arms. We have the connective conjunction kai, translated "and so," followed by the present active indicative of legw, "and so he said." With John down at his feet now the teaching angel is going to have to add something to the message. The historical present views the past event with the vividness of a present occurrence. The active voice: the teaching angel produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. Then John brings in his own person: the dative singular indirect object from e)gw, "and so he said to me." What he said is of the greatest importance. The dative of indirect object indicates the one in whose interest the rebuke is given. After all of this teaching comes the rebuke. We are never too old to learn. John is already an old man and he is going to learn a great deal more. The first principle of this verse: rebukes should be regarded as blessings and part of the learning process in spiritual growth and momentum. Of course, the rebuke should always be impersonal. It should come impersonally from a doctrinal source, and that is exactly what we have here.

Next we have a strong negative idiom which includes the present active subjunctive of o(raw plus the negative mh. This is only half of what is actually an idiom. All you have to do is introduce the first two words of a well known idiom and the rest of it follows. Only half of the idiom is here because of ellipsis and you have to add what was very well known at the time as a very definite idiom, poihs touto, "do not do this" is what it actually says. The rest of the idiom is the aorist active subjunctive of poiew, and with it is o(utoj, the demonstrative pronoun and it is a very strong idiom which says "Don't" or "Don't do it."

Then we have the present active indicative of e)imi in which the angel identifies himself in what is necessary for communication. He doesn't give his name, that isn't necessary. But he does express the principle that he is a servant of the Lord. The present active indicative of e)imi: the present tense is a customary present for a status assumed to be true in the present as well as the past and future, hence the temporal element is very remote here. The active voice: the officer of arms from the angelic college of heralds produces the action of the verb, and it produces it without any possible touch of arrogance. The indicative mood is declarative for a principle of doctrine, "I am your fellow servant." Both the teaching angel and the apostle John serve the same Lord Jesus Christ even though they are from different categories of creation. This officer of arms does in the angelic realm what John does in the human realm, he teaches divine doctrine and the protocol system of God.

We have a conjunction kai which is expletive in the usage and therefore we translate it "along with" rather than "and." The conjunction kai also introduces a genitive absolute, "along with," a very unusual use of the conjunction kai. Then we have what is going to be a genitive absolute, the genitive plural of a)delfoj plus the genitive of relationship su, "your brothers." Then we have the articular present active participle in the genitive case, so that the genitive of a)delfoj becomes the subject of the participle. This is what is called a genitive absolute. The subject of the articular present active participle of e)wxw is translated "who have." The definite article with the genitive case is used as the relative pronoun, "who." The customary present denotes what habitually occurs during the Church Age. God the Holy Spirit sovereignly bestows on certain male believers the gift of communication — pastor-teachers. The active voice: those believers of the Church Age who possess the gift produce the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial. The royal family of God in the Church Age is never left without the gift of pastor-teacher and the doctrine which is thereby communicated.

Then we have next the accusative singular direct object of the participle marturia, historical attestation or a declaration in matters of doctrine. It is sometimes translated "witness" but it is much stronger than that. With this is the objective genitive of the word "Jesus," I)hsouj. When he says, "having the doctrinal communication about Jesus" he is using a proper noun, I)hsouj, derived from the Hebrew noun Jeshua. It means saviour and emphasises the uniqueness of the person of Christ in hypostatic union in the incarnation. The whole realm of doctrine pertaining to the first advent and the Church Age is in view, and therefore it is a reference to the pastor-teachers of the Church Age and the New testament doctrine of the mystery which has now been revealed.

Then he gives a mandate which is very important. The purpose in communicating doctrine is for spiritual growth and so that worship on earth will be meaningful. The mandate: the aorist active imperative of poskunew, "worship" the God. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, it takes the many actions of worship and gathers them into one entirety. We have seen that you cannot give in worship what you do not have. To give in worship you must have cognisance of the person of Christ, and that comes through the perception of Bible doctrine. The active voice: the highest ranking Christian on the face of the earth is commanded to produce this action. Even the greatest fail. The imperative mood is an imperative of command. The dative singular indirect object qeoj with the definite article translated "the God," and is a reference to Jesus Christ as the manifest person of the Trinity. The Father and the Spirit are invisible and this is a command to worship Christ. The fact that Christ is the manifest person of the Trinity is found in John 1:18; 6:46; 1 Timothy 6:16; 1 John 4:12.

Then finally we get the biblical perspective of Bible prophecy. We have a second sentence in verse 10 and it begins with the explanatory use of the particle gar, "For." This is an explanation. Next we have the nominative singular subject of marturia which means testimony in a technical sense. Testimony in the ancient world was called witness. They were synonymous words, and this means testimony in a court, historical attestation, the declaration in matters of doctrine. So we will translate it "For the doctrinal communication." Then the objective genitive of I)esouj, "about Jesus." Then the verb: the present active indicative of e)imi, the verb to be. This is a static present for a condition perpetually existing. The active voice: doctrinal teaching about our Lord produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement about Bible doctrine.

What follows is a predicate nominative from the noun pneuma which has so many related meanings. Sometimes it is used as a title for the third person of the Trinity, preceded by a(gioj, "Holy Spirit." Occasionally the word "Spirit" alone refers to the Holy Spirit. It also means wind, breath, breathing, and therefore it comes to mean life. It is also used technically for the human spirit as the third part of man which is received at regeneration. Regeneration means that God the Holy Spirit creates a human spirit so that we become trichotomous at the moment of salvation. It is a neuter noun and is used with sarc to denote the immaterial part of man. It denotes a mental attitude, a human personality. It also has a meaning which seems to apply here in our verse, perceptive insight, the function of the soul, for the doctrinal communication about Jesus is the perceptive insight. Then we have the genitive of reference from the noun profhteia which means "prophecy." It should be translated, "for the doctrinal communication [the teaching about Jesus] is the life of prophecy [or, is perceptive insight into prophecy]." In other words, the key to prophecy is the unique person of Jesus Christ. The Lord Jesus Christ is both the key to prophecy and the central theme of eschatology. In the gospels Christ is presented as rejected, ridiculed, maligned, and dying for the sins of the world. But in the book of Revelation Christ is presented as the King of kings and the Lord of lords returning to the earth in all of His glory. The second advent is the high point of history.

Positive volition is a prerequisite to all worship of God. This is taught in Hebrews 10:25 where we read, "Stop neglecting the assembling of yourselves together as is the habit of certain ones." Believers become indifferent to doctrine, to the Word; believers become preoccupied with their own lives, and as a result they become negative. It is not that they are against doctrine but simply that other things are more important. So the believers who are negative and living in the cosmic system develop this concept, especially in cosmic one where preoccupation with self supersedes the importance of Bible doctrine. If Bible doctrine isn't everything then Bible doctrine is nothing in your life.

The mechanics of worship: In John 4:24 we read that God is a Spirit and all those who worship Him must worship in the Spirit and in doctrine. This means that all worship must be conducted inside the divine dynasphere. The filling of the Spirit: gate one; the perception of doctrine: gate four. So there is an interlock between gates one and four that spells out worship. Worship is your perception, your intake and, as a result, your appreciation of the Lord Jesus Christ.

There is the principle of worship itself, the function of gate five in the divine dynasphere. Eventually the intake of doctrine will cause you to fall in love with Jesus Christ, you will have a personal love for Him, "having not seen ye love," and that is where worship begins to gain momentum and stay on track. Gate five: motivational virtue which is personal love for God.

There is the expression of worship: giving what you have. You cannot give in worship what you do not have.

Our worship is incomplete without a thorough knowledge and inculcation of the prophetic doctrine dealing with the second advent. It is impossible to have a complete and total view of our Lord and to worship Him on the basis of doctrine unless you understand the second advent of Christ. The understanding of the doctrine is cognisance of Christ and understanding the Father's plan for the Son related to both the angelic conflict and to world history. This is the verse which introduces our next subject. In verses 10-14 we have the second advent of Christ and until you understand the second advent your capacity for worship is limited and your ability to be occupied with the person of Christ has blank spots. The second advent of Christ is the fulfillment of all the Old Testament prophecies and all of the eschatological doctrines of the Word. The hope of history is the one who controls history and the one who will return to the earth at the second advent to establish perfect environment.

Translation of verses 9 and 10: "Then he [the teaching angel] said to me [the apostle John], Write, Blessed are they who have been invited to the wedding feast of the Lamb. Also he said to me, These doctrines [of eschatology] are the true doctrines from God."

"Then I fell down at his feet to worship him. And so he said to me, Don't do it: I am your fellow servant, along with your brethren [pastors who would exist in every generation of Church history in this dispensation and would communicate Bible doctrine] who have the doctrinal communication about Jesus: worship God: for doctrinal communication about Jesus is the perceptive insight into prophecy."

Next we have an introduction from Peter. Here is one of the most phenomenal statements of all time for doctrinal communication about Jesus as the life of prophecy. Prophecy is about Jesus Christ.

2 Peter 1:12, "Therefore, I will always be ready to keep reminding you [repetition of Bible doctrine is necessary for inculcation] concerning these things [eschatological doctrine and, of course, doctrine in general], although you have known [they have already learned this doctrine] them, and have come to be stabilised by means of resident doctrine."

Verse 13, "Moreover, I consider it my duty, as long as I am in this tabernacle [human body], to arouse you by means of a reminder."

Verse 14, "Knowing [there is the key] that the laying aside of my tabernacle is imminent [Peter knows that he has a very short time to live], just as also our Lord Jesus Christ has made clear to me."

Verse 15, "Indeed I will be diligent that in fact at any time you may have the doctrine after my death," Peter has left us a permanent legacy, "to call to remembrance those things [things pertaining to the second advent]."

Verse 16, "For not having followed [he learned not to follow false trails, he followed the Word] as a source cleverly concocted myths when we have communicated to you all the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ [the doctrine of the second advent], but we have been made spectators [Peter was one of the three] of his majestic magnificence."

Verse 17, "For when he [Christ on the mount of transfiguration] received from God the Father honour and glory, such a sound as this was made to him by the Majestic Glory, 'This one [our Lord Jesus Christ] is my beloved Son with whom I am well pleased'." Note that Peter does not quote the rest of what was said, i.e. "Listen to him." In other words, Peter was rude on that occasion, he was talking. He doesn't talk about his rudeness because it is really not an issue here.

Verse 18, "and we [Peter James and John] heard this same voice carried from heaven when we were with him in the holy mountain."

Verse 19, "However, we keep on having a more reliable prophetic doctrine," What is more reliable than seeing the second advent? What could be more reliable than the empirical experience? What is more reliable is what is recorded in the Word of God that lives and abides forever. The Biblical account of the second advent is much more reliable than the empirical observation on the mount of transfiguration, "with reference to which doctrine you perform honourably by habitually concentrating in your right lobes." What is honourable in the spiritual life? Habitual concentration. Concentration on the teaching of doctrine; concentration on the learning of doctrine; concentration under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit.

The next word in the Greek is w(j, usually translated "as' or "like," but that isn't the translation here. This is the w(j of actual quality, and actual quality is translated "on," "on a lamp shining in a dark place," the dark place is the devil's world with all the false concepts and ideas. The lamp shining is Bible doctrine, the Word of God. Until the second advent we concentrate on the Word of God, "until the day dawns [the second advent of Christ] and the morning star [the title of Christ at the second advent] has come." That is Peter's description of the second advent in brief.

Verse 20, "Knowing this first [we must know something first], that all prophecy of scripture does not originate from one's own personal cerebration [thinking, conclusion, explanation], Verse 21, "for the prophecy was never produced by human design, but holy men [the human authors of scripture] communicated from God being carried along by the Holy Spirit." The fact is that God the Holy Spirit is the divine author and he uses the human vocabulary, human personality, the human ability, and without waving the personality of the individual or his vocabulary or his thinking ability He provides in the original with perfect accuracy God's complete and connected thought toward man. That is what we call the doctrine of verbal plenary inspiration.

What is the dying message then? What has been written down in human language as the scripture, this becomes the most important. If there is a conflict between your experience, what you observe, what you think, and what the Bible says you are wrong and the Bible is right. And the conflict can only be resolved by knowing what the Bible teaches.

The first principle of the Armageddon campaign in the dissertation on causes. We have studied from the book of Revelation three causes. The first is the cause of the Middle East campaign, the sixth bowl judgment of chapter 16 verse 12. Then the second cause noted was the cause of the last world war, the kosmokratwr demons of 16:13,14. Thirdly, we noted the cause of the specific battle of Armageddon: Jesus Christ controls history, 16:16.

Secondly, we studied the Middle East campaign from the standpoint of Daniel 11:36-45.

Thirdly, the emergence of Jewish leadership, and we studied the principle of leadership from Proverbs 24:1-6. But we noted the prophecy of leadership in Armageddon in Zechariah 12:1-6.

The fourth point that we studied in this great campaign was the siege of Jerusalem. We noted the Jewish believers who did not participate, Matthew 24:4-28, and the Jewish believers who did participate, Zechariah 14:1-9.

The fifth point is one we left hanging. Before we could get to the termination of the Armageddon campaign we had to first of all see something of the seventh bowl judgment and ecumenical religion, code named Babylon the great. Then we had to study in chapters 17 & 18 the fall of Babylon the great in judgment.

Then, of course, having noted the blessing of being involved in the wedding banquet of the Lamb we were then able to come back to this point, Revelation 19:11 and not the doctrine of the second advent and to see how the Armageddon campaign terminates. The major passage on the termination of the Armageddon campaign is Revelation 19:11-21.

The second advent of Jesus Christ is one of the greatest events in all of human history. It is the greatest outside of the strategical victory of the cross where our so great salvation was provided. It is very important, of course, to distinguish between the strategical victory of Christ bearing our sins on the cross and the tactical victory that occurs at the second advent.

The second advent is the subject of a tremendous amount of scripture, Deuteronomy 30; Matthew chapters 24 & 25; Mark 13; Luke 21; 1 Thessalonians 3:13; 5:1-5; 2 Thessalonians 1:7-2:12; 2 Peter 1:2,3; Jude 14, 15; Revelation 19:11 and many, many other passages. The second advent has many events connected with it. The baptism of fire is a very unusual thing in that it eliminates from the world all unbelievers when Christ returns, because we are not only starting a new dispensation — the Millennium — but a new civilisation as well. Every new civilisation begins with believers only. The second advent is also the time of the fulfillment of the unconditional covenants to Israel, which is a major principle of eschatology, and it is also the time in which Israel will be restored and again will become a client nation to God. The capital of the world in the Millennium will be Jerusalem. The second advent is also the termination of Satan's rule on this earth. The second advent also terminates the Armageddon campaign.

2 Peter 1:12, Peter's introduction to the second advent. "These things," he is talking about doctrine in general in the first eleven verses but he is also getting ready to develop the eschatological doctrine of the second advent. "Have known," Peter addresses this to people who already have known Bible doctrine. "And have come to be stabilised by means of resident doctrine" — their stability in studying eschatology is based upon the fact that they have learned other categories of doctrine first.

Verse 14, Peter is in good health but he is about to die.

Verse 15, "remember these things." That is the great issue: the ability to recall doctrine and to make the application.

Verse 16, The subject of 2 Peter is the "power and the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ," the doctrine of the second advent.

Verses 17, this is Peter's empirical observation of the second advent at the mount of transfiguration. That actual event is described, beginning in Matthew 16:27 where our Lord was prophesying with regard to the second advent.

Matthew 16:27, "For the Son of Man [the title of Christ in His hypostatic union] is destined to come [reference to the second advent] in the glory of his Father" — at the first advent He came in humility; at the second advent He comes in glory, "with his angels; and at that time [second advent] he will reward each one [the Old Testament saints and Tribulational martyrs who are resurrected at the second advent] according to his deeds." This is the equivalent to the Church Age believers' judgment seat of Christ.

Verse 28, "Truly I say to you, there are some of those who are standing here [Peter, James and John] who will not taste death until they see the Son of Man coming in his kingdom." The empirical observation of the second advent took place a few days later. To the apostle Peter the experience of the second advent made the doctrine a reality through empiricism. He actually observed the second advent as it would occur. He saw our Lord exactly as he would be at the second advent. That is what is described in the first nine verses of Matthew chapter 17 which follows.

Chapter 17:1, "Then six days later Jesus took with him Peter and James and John his brother, and brought them up to a high mountain [probably Mount Tabor] by themselves."

Verse 2, "And He was transformed before them; and his face shone like the sun, and his clothes became white as light."

Verse 3, "And behold, Moses and Elijah appeared to them, conversing with him [talking with our Lord]." Moses and Elijah are the two witnesses of Revelation eleven, the human heralds of the second advent.

Verse 4, "Then Peter answered and said to Jesus, 'Lord it is good for us to be here,' here is enthusiasms expressing itself, he liked the idea of staying there. The he used a first class condition, "if you wish," and Peter superimposed upon Him his own will in the matter by using the first class condition [and, of course, you do Lord. I am assuming you do, "I will make three tents here, one for you, and one for Moses, and one for Elijah."

Verse 5, While he [Peter] was still talking [he still had big plans that he hadn't finished giving], behold, a bright cloud cast a shadow over them; and behold, a voice from the cloud, saying 'This is my beloved Son, with whom I am well pleased; listen to him!' Shut up Peter, you can't learn the plan of God by cooking up your own ideas.

Verse 6, "And when the disciples heard it, they fell on their faces and they were terrified."

Verse 7, "Then Jesus came and touched them and said, 'Stop being afraid'."

Verse 8, "And lifting up their eyes, they saw no one, except Jesus himself alone." The party was over.

Peter opened his mouth and came up with his big plan. So many people are well-intentioned and really hurt others even though they have good intentions. But they always manage to foul it up because they are not personally oriented to the plan of God. The more we are oriented to the plan of God the less we use the tongue to hurt others.

Verse 9, "And as they were coming down from the mountain, Jesus commanded them, saying, 'Tell no one [the vision] until the Son of Man has risen from the dead'." James and John were probably most anxious to get down the mountain and pass the word about what a nitwit Peter was, but that is not to be the case. Peter was not going to be hurt by this because of that one word "until". After the resurrection these things would become public knowledge. The question is: Who told Matthew? Matthew was the one who writes it.

2 Peter 1:17, the Petrine conclusion which is the introduction to our subject in Revelation 19:11. "For when he [Christ on the mount of transfiguration] received from God the Father honour and glory, a sound of this category came to him," when Peter, James and John had the empirical experience of observing our Lord as he would appear at the second advent. That is when a sound of this category came to Him, "by the Majestic Glory, 'This one [our Lord Jesus Christ] is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased,' that is where he ends the quote because since then he has listened to our Lord.

Verse 18, "and we heard [empiricism] this same voice carried from heaven when we were with him in the holy mountain."

Verse 19, However, we keep on having a more reliable prophetic doctrine [the Bible account of the second advent], with reference to which doctrine you perform honourably by habitually concentrating your right lobes," concentration on the Word of God, "as on a lamp [Bible doctrine] shining in a dark place [the world] until the day dawns [the second advent when the world shall see Him face to face, Revelation 1:7] and the morning star [title of our Lord Jesus Christ] has come."

If we have a more reliable prophetic doctrine just what is the origin of this more reliable source?

Verse 20, the answer. "Knowing this first, that all prophecy of scripture does not originate from one's personal explanation,

Verse 21, "for prophecy was not produced by the design of man, but holy men [human authors of scripture] communicated from God being carried along by means of the Holy Spirit."

The doctrine of inspiration

God so supernaturally directed the writers of scripture that without waving their human intelligence, their individuality, their literary style, their personal feelings, or any other human factor, his own complete and coherent message to man was recorded with perfect accuracy in the original languages of scripture, the very words bearing the authority of divine authorship.

2 Timothy 3:16, the Greek noun is qeo pneustoj, and it doesn't mean "inspiration of God," it means "all scripture is God-breathed." All scripture is given by inspiration of God means inhale only, but in reality the doctrine of inspiration is inhale and exhale. The exhale comes from the human author, and he exhales it in writing and it becomes a part of the canon of scripture. The inhale: God the Holy Spirit communicates to human authors God's complete and coherent message, both for that generation and all generations. While writers of scripture had many other messages for their own generation only what was pertinent to all generations was actually recorded and retained as a part of the canon.

There are certain passages that deal with the subject of the inhale only, 2 Sam. 3:2,3; Is. 59:21; Jer. 1:9; Matt. 22:42-43; Mark 12:36; Acts 4:24,25; 28:25. That is the inhale. God the Holy Spirit controls the subject matter. Sometimes angels were used in the Old Testament and part of the New Testament. There were visions, dreams, direct communication from the Holy Spirit, God the Father giving certain things that were quoted (quotes from the Trinity).

In the exhale the human writers of scripture wrote down in their own language of communication the divine message to man.

The Bible is actually described as the canon in three ways. It is called the Word of God in Hebrews

4:12, hence it is related to God the Father; it is called the mind of Christ in 1 Corinthians 2:16, and therefore it is related to God the Son; it is called the voice of the Spirit in Hebrews 3:7, and therefore it is related to God the Holy Spirit. God has placed the highest possible value on the scripture since the completion on the canon, and this was anticipated in Psalm 138:2 where He regards the canon above His name.

What is the extent of inspiration? How far does inspiration go? There are seven areas to which it extends.

1. Inspiration extends to the unknown past. The Bible portrays past history and details of pristine life totally unknown to history and unconfirmed by human records or documents. That would be Genesis 1-11 or any passage dealing with the prehistoric angelic conflict, like Isaiah 14 or Ezekiel 28.

2. Ancient history, before records were properly kept. The Bible is not an historical text book but it contains many historical citations related to doctrine or the policy of God. All of these historical records in the canon provide the background for the communication of doctrine under the principle of isagogics.

3. The objective type law. The Bible contains many laws for both individual and national life. The laws are part of God's plan for Homo sapiens and they perfectly represent God's will for the preservation and the protection of human volition, human property, and human life. Repetition of these laws and subsequent recording of them, demonstrates the application to other generations.

4. Dictation. Some portions of the Word of God are simply dictated, they contain direct quotations from God. The doctrine of inspiration guarantees that such commands or quotations are properly recorded in the exact way that God wills them to be recorded.

5. Devotional literature, like the Psalms or Ecclesiastes. God uses the problems, the pressures, the property, the failure, the worship, the happiness, of certain individuals to reveal principles, provisions and blessings from the protocol system.

6. Prophecy. Inspiration involves both the selection of prophetic materials and their complete accuracy. We do not have details of prophecy. There are literally thousands of details that are not recorded in the Word, only those that are related to the principle that the Spirit of prophecy is the testimony of Jesus. Only those materials are included.

7. The recording of lies and what is false. Satan tells a lot of lies. Many of the things that are recorded are not true, so the scripture records lies, untrue statements, blasphemies, and inspiration does not sponsor these untrue statements. Inspiration does not sponsor falsehood or evil modus operandi but guarantees the accuracy of these lies and evil modus operandi.

Verse 11, the second advent of Christ. We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated "Then." The sequential conjunction begins the actual description of the second advent of Christ although it has been anticipated in references to the wedding feast of the Lamb and in the Armageddon campaign. While the wedding feast takes place in earth after the second advent of Christ the preparation takes place in heaven prior to the second advent.

Our next word is the aorist active indicative of the verb o(raw, the verb to see, "Then I saw." We are back to the concept of the vision again. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, that is the vision of the second advent of Christ. The active voice: the apostle John, the human author of Revelation, produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of eschatological reality. With this we have the accusative singular direct object from o)uranoj which can be used in three different ways. It is used for the atmosphere, for stellar space, and also for the eternal heaven. Here it would be what would be visible to John and therefore the opening up, as it were, of the stellar universe.

The perfect passive participle follows. A)noigw is the verb meaning to open, "Then I saw heaven opened. The perfect tense is an intensive perfect which places emphasis on the existing results or the completed action. This is the emphatic method of the Greeks to present a fact as existing. There is no equivalent to the intensive perfect, it is an idiom and in the English language the best we can do would be to approximate it by using the English present tense. Therefore, "I saw heaven opened." The passive voice: heaven receives the action of the verb at the second advent. The participle is circumstantial.

Then we begin to note what is said, "and behold." The demonstrative i)dou introduces what we are going to see. In the Greek the first thing we are going to see is a white horse. We have the nominative of appellation from the adjective leukoj and i(ppoj, "and behold, a white horse." The white horse is the status symbol of the winner, the victorious commander. During the first advent Christ rode into Jerusalem on an ass colt, but in the second advent He is mounted on a white horse which is always in history the symbol of victory as well as the symbol of aristocracy. Christ came the first time to save mankind but He comes the second time to deliver mankind. Therefore Christ comes as a winner. He came the first time to defeat Satan in the angelic conflict but He comes the second time to replace Satan as the ruler of the world. Therefore He comes on the white horse. Here the white horse is the symbol of victory and aristocracy. It must be remembered that both the ass colt on which our Lord rode into Jerusalem on Palm Sunday and the white horse are mounts of kings at the time in which the Bible was written. Kings rode the ass as well as the horse. The only difference is that humiliation was involved in our Lord's strategic victory of the cross at the first advent, while exaltation is involved in our Lord's tactical victory and therefore the white horse. So in reality Christ is a winner in both the advents and both the ass and the white horse are used to indicate that.

The white horse is fitting for the second advent because it portrays the majesty of His battlefield royalty. Christ is always the winner, therefore the Christian way of life is designed to make every believer a winner and to complement and glorify the victory of our Lord Jesus Christ. That is why protocol is so important. The Lord has given to us as His royal family the operational divine dynasphere, the protocol system, so that we can become winners in the devil's world. So when we come back with Him in a resurrection body we too will have those accouterments by which we glorify the Lord, like the order of the morning star and the crowns, and all of the privileges, the new knighthood.

Now we have the rider, "and he that sat upon him." It should be "and he who was mounted," the articular present active participle of kaqhmai which here means to be mounted. When used with a horse it means to be mounted. This is a futuristic present denoting an event which has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as already coming to pass. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ is the rider of the horse and therefore he produces the action of the verb from the source of His hypostatic union. As God He doesn't ride a horse because God is everywhere, but as the God-Man His humanity is mounted on this horse. Just as our Lord is now seated at the right hand of the Father that, of course, is His humanity. Deity doesn't sit. Now He is seated at the right hand of the Father, the place of honour; then he will be mounted on a white stallion, the sign of victory. This is a circumstantial participle followed by a prepositional phrase e)pi plus the accusative singular of a)utoj, "and he who was mounted on it."

Then we have the designation of the rider of the white horse, the present passive participle of kalew, used to indicate the rider. The present tense is a pictorial present which presents to the mind a picture of the classification. The passive voice: our Lord receives the action, he receives a designation here. We have two nominatives of appellation. Each one is an adjective used as a substantive. The first one is pistoj and the second one is a)lhqinoj, "Faithful and True." So a name is not given but rather characteristics are introduced first. The point is that these two characteristics are necessary to be a winner. So the first thing is that it is not that we know it is the title of our Lord or the name, but two that characteristics are given. The first of these is "faithful." This is what is necessary to be a winner. It doesn't say smart or talented or having great ability, but what it says is faithful. The whole system of God's plan is protocol and protocol demands faithfulness, adherence right down to the last point of how our Lord says it should be done. Faithfulness means that you just keep right on plugging. Our Lord was faithful, and that is the story of the first advent victory. He was faithful to the plan. The plan called for eternal God to become true humanity and to obey the Father's will for His life for 33 years on the earth. The only way to do it was to be born into a system, a protocol system. Our Lord was given for His first birthday the protocol divine dynasphere. From birth he was filled with the Spirit. He learned the principle of faithfulness at gate two, He had enforced and genuine humility, enforced humility when He went to the cross: he humbled Himself and became obedient unto death. By the time he was twelve He had learned the whole realm of doctrine: Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man, momentum, gate four. At gate five

He had love for God the Father; Gate six, He had virtue love, impersonal love for all. At gate seven all of the various tests: our Lord passed the eight momentum tests and many more.

This is a protocol system that is precise. There is only one way to do it and that is the Lord's way. So there are all of these things that God has given to us, and these procedures must be executed the Lord's way. Since we do not have the power to do them in God's way he has provided the power in God the Holy Spirit. Why was our Lord a winner in His humanity? Because He was faithful. Faithfulness is a manifestation of virtue and integrity.

The second word is alhqinoj, "true." True means that God keeps His word. Jesus Christ is God; Jesus Christ keeps His word. Jesus Christ keeps His word in the deliverance of Israel; Jesus Christ keeps His word in the second advent. No matter how great the historical disaster Jesus Christ delivers the believer living in the divine dynasphere. No historical disaster is greater than the faithfulness of God and the fact that He is true. "True" [a)lhqinoj] describes the virtue that makes faithfulness wonderful. In other words, a servant should be faithful to his master in some way but he would be motivated by the fact that his master treats him kindly or he gets money or something out of it. But when the motive is virtue the faithfulness is great. So true here represents the whole protocol system of virtue that motivates faithfulness. What does God require of us? Faithfulness: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

We note the two functions of deliverance at the second advent in the last half of verse 11. We begin the second sentence in the verse with the connective kai introducing the result from the preceding, therefore translated "consequently." With this we have a prepositional phrase, e)n plus the instrumental of dikaionunh, "and with justice." Dikaionunh always refers to the integrity of God. Sometimes it becomes synonymous with the word holiness. Here it refers to divine justice as one half of God's integrity and man's point of reference in human history.

We are getting ready to note that He is going to do some judging and He is going to make war. The connotation of making war obviously has the implication of some form of violence and the principle is immediately raised about violence. All violence in this passage comes from the integrity of God. Perfect righteousness can use violence without abusing the power of violence. The only way to meet the violence of evil is the meet violence with the violence of righteousness. The violence of evil has no respect for talk. The violence of righteousness takes life both under the authority of the laws of divine establishment and from the integrity of divine essence. There are two functions of righteousness under the laws of divine establishment. The first is the principle of freedom through military victory. The military has the right to use violence. The second is law enforcement.

Violence

1. The key to the proper use of violence in history is virtue and integrity which uses authority without abusing authority. There is nothing honourable, however, in the violence of activism. Civil disobedience is evil.

2. Arrogance abuses authority and has no sense of responsibility. Therefore because arrogance rejects authority it uses violence. Using violence under these circumstances is an expression of evil. Terrorism and terrorist organisations are evil; military in uniform in a nation is honourable. (The Russian and the Chinese communists use violence because their ideology is evil and will not work. Therefore their violence is the power of lawlessness and the power of evil)

3. The lawless abuse of power through violence is anti-Christian and anti-God.

4. The criminal uses a gun which gives him power over law-abiding citizens. Hence, the criminal misuses the gun for illegal power and illegal violence. But because the criminal has a gun it does not follow that we should forbid the possession of firearms by law-abiding citizens. The fault does not lie with the weapon, the fault lies with the criminal. Criminals are criminals whether they have weapons or not.

5. The violence of tyranny and the murder function of the criminal cannot be blamed, then, on firearms. It is not the fact that a gun has a trigger, it is the fact that someone pulls the trigger.

6. Murder and terrorism is a matter of the volition of the soul, not the gun in the hand. In other words, you cannot stop crime and violence by passing laws against the means employed by criminals.

7. The only way to meet the violence of evil is with the greater violence of integrity and honour. In establishment there are two systems of honour and integrity: law enforcement and the military. That means you do not take the law into your own hands. The violence of righteousness in law enforcement is designed to restrain the violence of crime. The violence of righteousness in military function provides national freedom so that the citizens of the client nation can function in privacy and freedom, and under the principles of the sacredness of property and life.

Our Lord demonstrates this principle of doctrine at the second advent for He uses the violence of righteousness to express His justice in both warfare and the judgment of the baptism of fire. And He ends the last great world war of history by annihilation of the enemy. Both are a matter of violence.

The first function of deliverance is judgment, the present active indicative of krinw, "judge," "consequently he will judge." We have the futuristic present denoting the future reality of the baptism of fire by which our Lord removes all unbelievers from the earth at the beginning of the Millennium. Only believers will enter the Millennium. That is because the Millennium is not only a new dispensation but at the same time it is a new and the third of four civilisations. Every civilisation begins with believers only. The active voice: Jesus Christ from perfect integrity produces the action of the verb. He is the judge. It is the judgment of all surviving unbelievers from the Tribulation. This includes the dictator of the revived Roman empire and the dictator of the Jewish state in Palestine. The indicative mood is declarative for the eschatological reality of the baptism of fire immediately after the second advent, "and with justice he will judge." The judgment function of deliverance makes it possible to begin the Millennial reign of Christ with perfect environment such as existed in the garden of Eden for our first parents. God gave our first parents everything possible to make life perfect and happy and wonderful. But He also gave them free will so that they could wreck their own perfect environment. But this time there will be 1000 years of perfect environment. The indicative mood is declarative for the eschatological reality of the termination of the Armageddon campaign and the general world war at the end of the Tribulation.

Next we have the present active indicative of palomew which means to make war in the strict sense of the word. it means to kill the enemy. Our Lord Jesus Christ is doing it. We have the futuristic present denoting the termination of the last world war in history. Our Lord ends a war by killing all the enemy. When there is no enemy left to sign the treaty you can be guaranteed peace for 1000 years! Our Lord returns to utilise the power of His perfect holiness to destroy the power of evil. Therefore He uses the violence of His perfect integrity to neutralise and destroy the violence of evil. At the second advent the violence of evil is the destroyed, and with the destruction of the violence of evil and the source of evil (Satan goes to jail for a thousand years) you can have perfect environment on the earth. This 1000 years of perfect environment starts by killing all the enemy. The active voice: Jesus Christ, from His perfect integrity, produces the action of the verb. Our Lord will annihilate all the unbelievers of all the armies of the world which are on the side of evil in the last world war of history.

Translation: "Then I saw heaven opened, and behold a white horse: and he who was mounted on it [our Lord Jesus Christ at the second advent] is called Faithful and True. Consequently, with justice he will judge and he will make war."

Not only does the second advent terminate the middle east campaign but it also terminates the last great world war in history. The revolution at the end of the Millennium [the Gog and Magog revolution. God is the code name for Satan, Magog is for all of the unbelievers who followed Satan when he is released from prison] will start war but it will never get off the ground because the Lord will end it. Our Lord returns, then, at the second advent to annihilate all evil forces — the kings of the east, the king of the north, the king of the south, and the revived Roman empire.

The last phrase of Revelation 19:9 reads, "these doctrines are the true doctrines from God." The eschatology of Revelation is doctrine, true doctrine from God. It is just as important as other passages which seem to be much more popular for many people.

The last phrase of verse 10, "the doctrinal communication about Jesus is the perceptive insight into prophecy."

Those two phrases introduce the subject we have been studying in verse 11, the second advent of Jesus Christ. Verse 11 says in corrected translation: "Then I saw heaven opened, and behold a white horse; and he who is mounted on it is called Faithful and True, consequently with justice he will judge and he will make war." The last part of chapter 19 will tell us all about how He makes war. In the meantime the one phrase that we need to note says, "he will judge." When it says the Lord is going to do a special type of judgment at a special time it becomes necessary for us to understand exactly what is necessary for us to understand exactly what is meant when it says He will judge. Since the judgment of our Lord Jesus Christ on the cross, at which time He provided for us this so great salvation, there will be seven major judgments between the cross and the end of history.

Starting with the cross we have the seven major judgments of all history. The judgment on the cross: In the computer of divine decrees the omniscience of God programmed all the sins that would ever exist. One of the major chips in the computer of divine decrees is the record of every sin committed by every person in all of human history. The printout occurred at the cross when God the Father called for the printout and all of the sins of the human race were imputed to our Lord hanging on the cross and were judged. That is the basis of our so great salvation and is number one major judgment. Starting with the judgment on the cross where Christ received judgment, there are six more major judgments in history.

The second judgment occurs during the Church Age, during the Tribulation, and will occur during the Millennium, the function of the believer in self-judgment, the recovery from the cosmic system. We simply call it the rebound technique. This is simply the believer naming his sins to God. The power of forgiveness belongs with God only. Therefore the believer names his sin to God from the privacy of his priesthood and God is faithful; always does the same thing, and God is justified on the basis of the fact that those sins were judged on the cross to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. That is the principle of if we would judge ourselves we should not be judged. So we have the self-judgment of the believer as the second great judgment in history. It is an ongoing judgment perpetuated from one generation to the other. It is the only way to recover the filling of the Spirit, the only way to reenter into fellowship with God, the only way to reenter the divine dynasphere, God's protocol plan for your life, the only way to have freedom from the cosmic system. Without the rebound technique you cannot live the Christian life. Being a Christian does not mean that you live the Christian life.

The third major judgment is the evaluation of the believer's life on planet earth in phase two. We call it, from Romans 14:10, the judgment seat of Christ. We shall all be gathered at the judgment seat of Christ and there we have the evaluation of your life. Did you use the protocol system? Did you follow the priorities of God's plan for your life? Did you follow the mandate, virtue first. All of this plus the production that results will be the subject of the judgment seat of Christ. The judgment seat of Christ guarantees inequality in heaven forever.

The fourth judgment is the judgment carried out by our Lord Jesus Christ at the second advent: the baptism of fire.

The fifth is the judgment or incarceration of Satan found in Revelation chapter 20:1-3. Satan is removed as the ruler of this world, judged and sentenced to the abyss. His prison term is 1000 years during the course of the Millennial reign of Christ.

The sixth judgment occurs at the end of the Millennium, the judgment of all fallen angels. They have actually already been tried, they were arraigned before the court of heaven prior to the creation of Adam. They were found guilty but their sentence was postponed until the end of human history. Now, in this judgment, their sentence is carried out. Fallen angels have been sentenced to the lake of fire forever, Matt. 25:41, and Satan as the chief of fallen angels is included in this judgment, Revelation 20:10. The sentence is carried out at the end of the Millennium.

Judgment number seven is the last judgment, Revelation 20:11-15, and it fulfills the principle of John 3:18.

Revelation 19:11 has judgment number four in view. So what is meant in detail by the phrase, "He will judge?"

The etymology of baptism becomes the first major consideration because most people have a very definitely slanted idea about baptism. The less you know about the subject the easier it is to assert your arrogance and therefore to have an erroneous view about the subject. A great deal is made of baptism simply because of the superficiality of teaching today and very few people understand what baptism is all about.

There are three words in the Greek New Testament which make references to baptism. The first of these is the noun baptw. It can be translated "baptise" but it was often translated "dip," and occasionally it was used for dying. Baptw is used, for example in Luke 16:24; John 13:26; Revelation 19:13. A second word is baptizw, and it means to baptise, to dip, to immerse. Then there is another noun, baptisnoj, which is used for cleaning, for washing dishes in Mark 7:4, for the various technical uses for the doctrine of baptisms, and it is translated in Hebrews 6:2 "baptisms." There is also another noun, baptisma, used for the concept of identification. It is used for ritual identification in Matthew 3:7, 21, 25; for actual identification in Romans 6:4 where it is used for the baptism of the Spirit; it is used as a figure of martyrdom in Mark 10:38 and Luke 12:50. Then there is a fifth word found in the New Testament, baptisthj, referring to one who performs the ritual of baptism.

The categories of baptism. In Hebrews 6:2 we have the doctrine of baptisms. If we are going to advance spiritually we must understand the doctrine of baptisms. That means that there is more than one baptism in the scripture. There are two categories of baptisms: a. Real baptisms; b. Ritual baptisms. A real baptism is an actual identification; a ritual baptism is a ritual whereby water is used. All rituals are analogous to something else, like parables.

There are four real baptisms

1. The baptism of Moses, mentioned in 1 Corinthians 10:2, which was a dry baptism because it refers to the Jews passing through the red Sea. They were said to be identified with Moses. What is the significance of baptism here? Identification with the mandates of the leader.

2. The baptism of the cross, Matthew 20:22, "Jesus answered and said, 'You do not understand for what you are asking. Can you drink the cup that I am about to drink, and be baptised with the baptism that I am baptised with?' "

What was He saying? He was talking about the cross, the baptism of the cross. No water here. It means that He was identified with the sins of the world. Baptism means identification. The Jews were identified with Moses and the cloud, a real baptism; Jesus Christ was identified with our sins on the cross.

3. The baptism of the Holy Spirit, used to form the royal family of God. At the moment of salvation in the Church Age only God does more than just regenerate. He indwells every believer. It never happened before. God the Holy Spirit seals every believer, the sealing ministry of the Spirit is unique to this dispensation. God the Holy Spirit takes every believer at salvation and baptises him, not with water, and enters him into union with Christ. That is because when Jesus Christ ascended and was seated at the right hand of the Father He had no royal family. So God the Holy Spirit takes each one of us and enters us into union with Christ forever. That is the uniqueness of the Church Age. Therefore each believer is identified with Christ in His death, rejection of human good and evil of the cosmic system, and he is also part of the body of Christ. This concept is found in such passages as Acts 1:5; 1 Corinthians 12:13; Galatians 3:26-28; Ephesians 4:5.

4. The baptism of fire, Matthew 3:11; Luke 3:16.

There are three ritual baptisms

A ritual baptism represents identification in which water is used as the system of analogy. Every time there is a legitimate reason for a ritual baptism the person going into the water there must be an understanding of what the water means.

1. The baptism of our Lord Jesus Christ in Matthew 3:13-17. The water in this case represents the Father's will for His public ministry. Our Lord was saying before He began His public ministry that he would fulfill it all of the way to the cross. So Jesus identifies Himself with the Father's plan for the incarnation. The water represents the Father's plan and the provision of the prototype divine dynasphere, and the baptism is simply Jesus giving positive affirmation.

2. The baptism of John, Matthew 3:1-10; John 1:25-33. John the Baptist is the herald of the first advent and there had to be some way to represent who was coming. So the water in this case represents the kingdom because the King has come, the first advent; it represents the kingdom of God represented through the message of John and the presence of Christ in the first advent. In the preaching of John he brought out this message. Those who were converted under John's ministry, those who believed in Christ, gave ritual testimony to the first advent and the hypostatic union and their faith in the work of Christ on the cross. To them the cross had not yet occurred, it was still a matter of eschatology. The water represents the plan of the Father in the first advent.

3. Christian baptism, Acts 2:38; 8:36-38; 16:15; 16:33. It is the ritual testimony of the baptism of the Spirit. In other words, prior to the completion of the canon of scripture the thing that was unique about believers at the beginning of the Church Age is that they are royal family. Therefore the believers before the canon they had to have some way of teaching Jews. How had they been learning throughout all of their history? By ritual. So they get one more ritual until AD 96 when the canon of scripture was closed. The water represents identification with Christ in His death. The believer was immersed under the water and was identification with Christ in His death, and as the believer comes up out of the water then he is identified with air representing identification with Christ seated at the right hand of the Father.

The doctrine of the baptism of fire

Matthew 3:11, "As for me [John the Baptist], I baptise you with water because of your change of mind, but he [Jesus Christ] who is coming after me is mightier than I, and I am not fit to unlace his sandals; he himself will baptise you with the Holy Spirit and with fire." There are three baptisms in this verse: the ritual baptism of John, the baptism of the Spirit, and the baptism of fire. When he says "He will baptise," that is baptizw, future tense. The subject is our Lord Jesus Christ, future tense, the baptism of the Spirit was future when John spoke and the baptism of fire was also future. The baptism of the Spirit began on the day of Pentecost, 50 days after our Lord's resurrection. When the second advent occurs and the Jewish Age is finished, the baptism of the Spirit interrupts the Jewish Age, we have the baptism of fire.

Verse 12, "And his grain shovel is in his hand," the grain shovel in the ancient world separated the wheat from the tares, "he will clean the threshing floor," the threshing floor is the world being cleansed for the Millennium, the new civilisation which begins with believers only, "therefore he [our Lord at the baptism of fire] will gather the wheat [the believers who survive the Tribulation] into the barn [the Millennium], and he will burn up the chaff [the unbelievers of the Tribulation] with unquenchable fire."

So at the second advent, when it says in Revelation 19:11, "He will judge," it is referring to the fact that all the believers in the Tribulation who survive will enter into the Millennium, and all the unbelievers will go off the earth, they will cast into fire, identified with fire, therefore it is called the baptism of fire. All Tribulational unbelievers who survive the Tribulation are judged by Christ and cast into the lake of fire, and this is what we call the baptism of fire.

In our study of the baptism of fire are some parables. The first is found in Matthew chapter 13:24-30, the interpretation of which is found in verses 36-43.

Verse 24, "He presented to them another parable," a parable is a narrative from which a spiritual lesson is derived. The narrative is something that everyone can understand. A parable simply takes a simple narrative, a story that all people can understand and about something that happens in normal living, and that narrative is then related to a principle of Bible doctrine. It gives the literal outward sense of the matter but requires that the audience, the recipients of the parable, make a deduction from the short story to understand the doctrine being taught. It is doctrine being taught by a short story. Characters and incidents are figurative or typical, therefore proper names and geographical locations are never made. In this case the principle of Bible doctrine has to do with the subject of the baptism of fire, "saying, 'The kingdom of heaven was compared to a man who sowed good seed in his field.'" The good seed are the believers of the Tribulation, the field is the world. The sowing of good seed in the Tribulation is Tribulational evangelism.

Verse 25, "But while men were sleeping, his enemy [Satan and the ecumenical religious system] came and sowed tares [the unbelievers living side by side with believers in the Tribulation] among the wheat, and went away." The point is that there is a coexistence of believer and unbeliever during the course of the Tribulation, just as in this dispensation.

Verse 26, "But when the grass grew up and bore grain, then the tares appeared also."

Verse 27, "Then the servants of the landowner came to him and said, 'Sir, did we not sow good seed in your field? How then does it have tares?' "

Verse 28, "And he said to them, 'An enemy has done this!' Then the servants said to him, 'Do you want us to go in and gather them up?' "

Verse 29, "But he replied, 'No; lest while you are weeding out the tares, you might damage the wheat with them'."

Verse 30, "Let them both grow up together until the harvest [the baptism of fire]; then in the time of the harvest I will instruct the reapers, 'First gather up the tares and bind them into bundles and burn them; but gather the wheat into my barn'."

How did the disciples take that?

Verse 36, "Then he [Jesus] left the crowd, and entered into the house. And his disciples came to him, saying, 'Explain to us the parable of the tares of the field'."

Verses 37, 38, 39, Then he replied to them and said, 'The one who sows the good seed is the Son of Man [title of Jesus Christ in hypostatic union], and the field is the world [during the Tribulation]; regarding the good seed, these are the citizens of the kingdom [believers who survive the Tribulation]; while the tares are the sons of the evil one [Satan]; and the enemy who sowed them is the devil, and the harvest is the end of the age [end of the Jewish Age]; and the reapers are angels.

Verse 40, "Therefore just as the tares are gathered and burned with fire [analogous to the baptism of fire at the end of the Tribulation], so shall it be at the end of the age [the Jewish Age]."

Verse 41, "The Son of Man will send forth his angels, and they will weed out of his kingdom all that offend and those who commit lawlessness [the unbelievers who survive the Tribulation],

Verse 42, "and he will throw them into the furnace of fire [a reference to Hades where these unbelievers who survive the Tribulation will reside in torments until their last judgment]; in that place there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth."

Verse 43, "Then the righteous [the believers who survive the Tribulation. This refers to imputed righteousness] in the kingdom of their Father [the Millennial reign of our Lord Jesus Christ]."

The parable of the ten virgins, Matthew 25:1-13, is another parable about the baptism of fire. The groom is our Lord Jesus Christ at the second advent. The bride is the royal family of God, the Church Age believer. The friends of the groom are the Old Testament saints and Tribulation martyrs who are resurrected at the second advent. The friends of the bride are the believers who survive the Tribulation and who will become the cadres for the population explosion in the Millennium.

The focus in Matthew 25 is on the friends of the bride, the believers who survive the Tribulation. It is also on the pseudo friends of the bride, the unbelievers who survive the Tribulation and are removed from this earth by the baptism of fire. So we have the five wise and the five foolish virgins. The five foolish virgins are unbelievers and they go out under the baptism of fire. The unbelievers of the Tribulation who survive have not been invited to the wedding banquet of the Lamb.

That brings us to the time of the baptism of fire: immediately after the second advent.

2 Thessalonians 1:7, "And to give relief to you who are afflicted along with us, when our Lord Jesus Christ shall be revealed from heaven." The Rapture is not the time of the revealing of Christ. We meet Him in the air, he does not come to the earth at the Rapture. Here we have "Christ shall be revealed from heaven," second advent, "with his mighty angels in blazing fire,"

Verse 8, "dealing out judgment to those who do not know God, even to those who do not obey the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." The mandate of the gospel is "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved."

Verse 9, "Furthermore these [unbelievers] will pay the penalty of eternal destruction, away from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power." This is a description of the baptism of fire. They are away from the presence of the Lord. He comes back; He judges them; they are the tares gathered up into bundles and cast into Hades, "away from the glory of his power" which is a one-phrase description of the Millennial reign of Christ.

Where is the punishment area for the baptism of fire? That compartment is Sheol or Hades, known as Torments, the place where all unbelievers wait in fire for the administration of the last judgment. Paradise, a compartment of Hades for Old Testament saints, is the subject given in Ephesians 4:8-10.

Verse 8, "For this reason the scripture says [quoting Psalm 68:18], When he [Christ] had ascended up on high, he led captives [Old Testament believers] in a triumphal procession from a state of captivity [they were in Paradise, hence the transfer from Paradise to the third heaven as per Matthew 27:52,53]... "

Verse 9, "(Not this doctrine that he ascended, what does it imply except that he also descended into the lower parts of the earth? [the location of Hades])." Christ could not have ascended out of Hades until He first went into Hades.

Verse 10, "For the one who descended is the same person also who ascended far above all heavens..."

From Adam to the resurrection of Christ all believers when they died went to Paradise, to Abraham's bosom. After our Lord's resurrection they were transferred to the third heaven which is called also the new Paradise.

The second compartment of Hades is the one dealing with the baptism of fire. The nomenclature is Torments. This is the residence of all unbelievers until the Millennium. The third compartment is called Tartarus and is the location for the fallen angels who were involved in the genetic attack against the human race in Genesis 6:1-6. Along with that we have a fourth compartment which is very similar called, unfortunately, the bottomless pit in the King James version. It is actually the abyss and it is defined as a jail for demons who for one reason or another have been incarcerated since the Genesis 6 fiasco, Romans 10:7; Luke 8:30,31.

The analogy to the baptism of fire is given in Matthew 24:36:—

Verse 36, "But of that day and hour no one knows, not even the angels of heaven, nor the Son of Man [in His humanity], but the Father alone [the deity of Christ has always known it]."

Verse 37, "For the coming of the Son of Man [second advent of Christ] will be just like the time of Noah."

Verse 38, "For in those days which preceded the flood they were eating and drinking, they were marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered the ark," they had a big social life and family life which was a distraction from doctrine.

Verse 39, "In fact they did not understand [ignorance of historical trends] until the flood came and swept them all away [the judgment removed the unbeliever from the earth], this is how it will be at the coming of the Son of Man."

Verse 40, "At that time [the baptism of fire] there will be two men in the field; one will be taken [the unbeliever], one will be left [the Tribulational believer who survives into the Millennium]."

Verse 41, "Two women will be grinding at the mill; one will be taken [unbeliever], and one will remain [Tribulational believer]."

Revelation 19:11, "Consequently with justice he will judge [execute judgment]." The personnel categories involved in the baptism of fire are two: Jewish unbelievers and Gentile unbelievers. Both Jews and Gentile unbelievers will survive the terrible events of the Tribulation. The baptism of fire for Jewish unbelievers is found in the Old Testament. Two passages should be noted. The first is Isaiah chapter one verses 2-4, "Listen, O heavens, and hear O earth; for the Lord communicates, Sons I have reared and brought up, but they have revolted against me." This is the revolution of the Jews who have not accepted Christ as saviour. The analogy is then given in verse three: "The ox knows its owner, and the ass its master's manger, but Israel does not know, my people do not understand." This has a specific eschatological reference to Jews in the time of the Tribulation: those who refuse to receive Christ as saviour. Verse four: "Alas, sinful nation, people weighed down with iniquity, descendants of evildoers, sons who act corruptly! They have abandoned the Lord, they have despised the Holy One of Israel [a title for Christ], they have turned away and gone backward."

Add to that Ezekiel 20:33, "As I live, declares the Lord, emphatically with a mighty hand and with an outstretched hand and with wrath poured out, I shall be king over you," the baptism of fire for the unsaved Jews.

Verse 34, "And I shall bring you out [the recovery of Israel from their dispersion] from the Gentiles and gather you from the lands where you are scattered, with a mighty hand and with an outstretched arm and with wrath poured out," second advent judgment, baptism of fire.

Verse 35, "Then I shall bring you into the desert of the peoples [probably Saudi Arabia], and there I shall enter into judgment with you face to face." There the unbelievers are going to be judged.

Verse 36, "As I entered into judgment with your ancestors in the desert of the land of Egypt, so I will enter in to judgment with you, declares the Lord."

Verse 37, "And I shall make you pass under the rod," a reference to the ancient world where the shepherd made his sheep pass under his staff for inspection and protection. Therefore the analogy to Jewish Tribulational believers being delivered from this judgment, "then I shall bring you into the bond of the covenant," referring to the believers: the fulfillment of the covenants to Israel.

Verse 38, "But I shall purge from you the rebels [unbelievers] and those who transgress against me; I shall bring them out of the land where they reside, but they will not enter the land of Israel. Therefore you [Jewish believers] will know that I am the Lord."

Note that the Jews who are unbelievers and who survive the Tribulation will not be permitted to enter Israel at all.

Malachi 4:1, "For behold the day is coming, burning like a furnace, that all the arrogant and every evildoer will be chaff; for, the day that is coming will set them afire, says the Lord of the armies, so that it will leave them neither root nor branch." This, again, is a reference to the baptism of fire for the Jews.

Matthew 25:31ff, a terribly misunderstood passage because of one Greek word. The way it looks in context is τα εθνη. It is in the plural, the vocabulary form is εθνη which refers to nations only occasionally, even rarely. Actually, it just means Gentiles in general. That is the way it is used here: Gentile unbelievers who survive the Tribulation. The judge on the throne at the second advent is found in the first verse, verse 31.

"Now when the Son of Man [title of Jesus Christ in hypostatic union] comes in his glory [second advent], and all of the elect angels with him, he will sit on his throne of glory."

Next we have the arraignment of Gentile unbelievers.

Verse 32, "And all the Gentiles will be assembled before him; then he will separate from each other, as the shepherd separates the sheep from the goats." Two categories of Gentiles: the sheep [believers] and the goats [analogous to unbelievers].

Verse 33, the separation of gentile believers from Gentile unbelievers: "Then he will place the sheep [Gentile believers] on his right hand, and the goats [Gentile unbelievers] on his left."

Verses 34-40, a commendation of the sheep.

Verse 34, "Then the King will say to those on his right [the believers], 'Come, you who are blessed from my Father [the Father is the one who imputes His own righteousness at salvation], inherit the kingdom [the Millennial reign of Christ] prepared for you from the foundation of the world.'"

Verse 35, an overt manifestation of salvation during the Tribulation: "For I was hungry, and you gave me food; I was thirsty, and you gave me something to drink; I was a stranger, and you invited me in;

Verse 36, "naked, and you clothed me; I was sick, and you visited me; I was in prison and you came to me." The Gentile believers know that they are saved and they understand eternal security, but they are just a little puzzled by what was said.

Verse 37, "Then the righteous [imputed righteousness at salvation] will answer him, saying, 'Lord, when did we observe you hungry, and feed you, or thirsty, and give you drink?'

Verse 38, 'And when did we observe you a stranger, and invite you in, or naked, and clothe you?'

Verse 39, 'And when did we see you sick, or in prison, and come to you?'"

Verse 40, "And the King will answer and say to them, 'Truly I say to you, inasmuch as you did it to one of these my brethren, even the least of them, you did it unto me.' " Who are these brethren? They are Jews, they are the 144,000 Jewish evangelists of revelation 7:4-8; 14:1-5. The evangelists of the Tribulation are going to be under great pressure and persecution and all of these things are going to happen to them. The converts are those who help them at that time, those who have accepted Christ under their ministry. The manifestation of their faith was their attitude toward the Jew. The Gentile believers befriend them in a friendless world of the Tribulation. Therefore, our Lord as the judge emphasises an overt manifestation of their inner faith in Christ, and He does it for the benefit of those unbelievers who are about to be judged. Because the unbelievers rejected the message, because they accepted the mark of the beast, because they became involved in ecumenical religion, they rejected helping these people. They were anti-Semitic. So our Lord as the judge emphasises an overt manifestation of the believers' inner faith. They did not hide their faith under a bushel.

The condemnation of the goats, verses 41-45.

Verse 41, the judgment and the sentencing of the Gentile unbelievers, "Then he will say to those on his left, 'Depart from me, accursed ones [doomed ones, guilty ones], into the eternal fire which has been prepared for the devil and his angels [fallen angels];" the basis for the indictment: the overt manifestation of their rejection of Christ.

Verse 42, " 'For I was hungry, and you gave me nothing to eat [attitude toward the gospel is reflected in the attitude toward the messenger of the gospel]; I was thirsty, and you gave me nothing to drink;

Verse 43, 'I was a stranger, and you did not offer me hospitality; naked, and you did not provide me clothing; sick and in prison, and you did not visit me.'

Verse 44, the plea of innocence. "Then they themselves will also answer, saying, 'Lord, when did we see you hungry, or thirsty, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not help you, serve you, support you?' " As unbelievers these Gentiles of the Tribulation were totally indifferent and callused toward the Jewish evangelist who was bringing the gospel.

Verse 45, the indictment of the Gentile unbelievers. "Then he will answer them, saying, 'Truly I say to you, inasmuch as you did not do it to one of these my brethren, even the least of them, you did not do it to me'."

Verse 46, their sentence for during the course of the Millennium. "Then these [Gentile individuals] will depart into eternal judgment, but the righteous into eternal life."

Application

The role of the baptism of fire has many applications. There is an application to the Jews of the Church Age, Hebrews 12:27-29, "And this [reference to Haggai 2:6], 'Yet once more,' denotes the removal of those things which are shaken," you cannot handle life if you are easily shaken, if you are without poise. Poise belongs to protocol. Protocol is God's system. What is poise to the believer? It is the ability to think under pressure. And what is it that you think under pressure? You think doctrine; you apply doctrinal principles. If you can't think you cannot apply doctrine. You have to have poise, it is a part of protocol. Who is "shaken" here? The unbelievers of the Tribulation removed by fire. You can't have perfect environment with crybabies. The removal of those things which are shaken refers to the eternal losers, the unbelievers of the Tribulation. They are removed by the baptism of fire, "like the removal of discarded things [things done with], in order that the ones not being shaken [believers who survive the Tribulation] might remain [on earth during the Millennium]."

How can you enjoy heaven on earth? How can you enjoy life in this wild world today? Doctrine and only doctrine. You have to know it first, you cannot apply what you do not know.

Verses 28, "Therefore, because we have received to ourselves an unshakable kingdom [the royal family of the Church Age, the protocol kingdom], let us hang on to grace," How do you hang on to grace? You have to understand it, you have to understand how it works. To hang on to grace you have to have no illusions about yourself. You must never take yourself seriously. Anything about yourself that comes out right or you do well, it is God's support of you. We must beware not to take credit and try to take the credit away from the Lord, "through which we might render acceptable service to God with reverence and respect." So the baptism of fire even has an application for us.

Verse 29, we are talking about the baptism of fire. "Our God is a consuming fire."

Another application of the baptism of fire is the importance of believing in Christ, especially at crisis points in history. Crisis points of history often take away the distractions and give the individual the opportunity of considering the claims of Christ on his life, and therefore believing.

Furthermore, one of the great applications of the baptism of fire is the vindication of the integrity of our Lord. In fact, that is the point in Revelation 19:11, "with justice he will judge."

Another application is an historical application. The baptism of fire is necessary for the beginning of a new civilisation. A civilisation is the divine protection of the entire human race and the guarantee of its perpetuation during the historical phase of the angelic conflict. Every civilisation has a beginning and an end. A civilisation begins with believers only. By definition a civilisation is a divine protection of all the human race, not just believers, and its perpetuation during the historical phase of the angelic conflict. And a civilisation has termini, it terminates with a heavy saturation of unbelievers and a cataclysmic judgment. In the termination of historical judgment that follows the end of a civilisation God destroys the entire human race, that is, unbelievers — and a new civilisation begins with believers only. Each civilisation of history has its own climate, its own environment, its own variations within a species. In each civilisation man has a different life, a different life span, and apparently even a different metabolism.

There are four civilisations in human history. There is the antediluvian civilization, the one before the flood, which began with Adam and Eve as believers. (Eve was not called Eve until she was a believer, she was called Isha, woman) Then just before the flood there was a tremendous saturation of unbelievers. There were only eight believers who survived the flood to start the post-diluvian civilisation which will continue until the second advent of Christ. The historical civilisation began with the man and the woman outside the Garden, as believers, and it concluded at the universal flood which destroyed the entire population of the earth except eight believers, Noah and his family. We might call the conclusion of that civilisation the baptism of water. They all drowned in the water. Then there is the post-diluvian civilisation of which we are a part. It began with believers only and it terminates with the baptism of fire when all unbelievers are cast off the earth. The third civilisation is the Millennial civilisation which begins with those who are believers who survive the Tribulation and terminates with the Gog and Magog revolution [Gog is for Satan; Magog is the unbelievers who follow Satan]. At that time we have another cataclysmic judgment, the destruction of the entire universe. At that point believers only, in resurrection bodies, will begin the eternal civilisation which, of course, has no end. This civilisation continues forever with a new heavens and a new earth and the new Jerusalem.

Verse 12, we have a post positive conjunctive particle translated "And," "And his eyes," o)fqalmoj. There is no verb here because it is very elliptical. How the Lord will appear at the second advent is now noted. The nominative of explanation from floc which means a flame. With it is the descriptive genitive pur, "And his eyes a flame of fire." The word w(j is not found there. In the King James version it says "like a flame of fire" but it simply says "his eyes a flame of fire." This is a description of Christ at the second advent as the judge of history. The deity of Christ is invisible, hence the description here is of His humanity, the humanity of Christ in hypostatic union. The passage emphasises the integrity and perfect righteousness of the deity of Christ plus His impeccability from His life in the prototype divine dynasphere. For the unbeliever of the Tribulation divine judgment is designed to bring the individual to the reality of his status and his need of salvation. First of all, the eyes of the flame of fire has that connotation. Then it has the connotation of the judge. Our Lord Jesus Christ is the judge. Because He controls history God the Father has delegated all judgment to Him, John 5:22,23.

Two principles are involved as far as the unbeliever in the Tribulation is concerned: there is always grace before judgment; there is grace by means of judgment. There is always a period of intense evangelism before judgment; there is also a period of evangelism during judgment. The second concept is that all divine judgment has the purpose of bringing the unbeliever involved in the cosmic system back to reality. Positive volition is the major issue and it is stimulated often by divine judgment. Some people will never face reality and therefore make good decisions until they are motivated, and people often have to be motivated by pain. So decision from human volition and its consequences is always the issue in the historical phase of the angelic conflict. The concept of judgment always has the connotation of pain to bring the individual back to reality, therefore to motivate consideration once again of the gospel.

Most people are indifferent to important things until they are in some form of disaster, and then in looking for solutions to disaster and pain and heartache and problems, and saying Why, Why, Why these things? then they begin to look to where the answers can be found, and that is the truth of Bible doctrine. There are some believers who will never reach maturity though because they cannot pass the prosperity test. The prosperity test means to have the same attitude and the same priorities toward Bible doctrine that you have in time of adversity, and one of the signs of reaching some form of spiritual maturity is the ability to have exactly the same scale of values in prosperity as you have in time of disaster or adversity.

The option for the unbeliever is either to believe in Christ for salvation or to be judged in eternity. Jesus Christ not only controls history, Jesus Christ is the issue of history. To the believer in Christ in time, time cancels the judgment from Christ in eternity. So historical disaster offers the option of grace or eternal judgment and to bring someone back to reality is brought out by the appearance of our Lord.

"And his eyes a flame of fire" is a reminder of the baptism of fire. While the phrase applies directly to the unbeliever of the Tribulation who sees our Lord's eyes, the eyes of the judge, as a flame of fire it is a reminder that Jesus Christ controls history through judgment and through His policy of grace. Our Lord's eyes as a flame of fire also has the application to the believer of the Church Age. There never was a bit of eschatology whereby we cannot personally apply it to ourselves. First we learn from interpretation what the eschatology is and then we apply it. For the believer alive in the devil's world two categories of grace are available. Just as God provides grace often through pain God provides grace for us in all circumstances of life. All believers who are alive are alive for one reason only: logistical grace. God's logistical grace is the perfect illustration of impersonal love toward all. God loves all believers. Logistical grace is why we are all here. God has graced all of us out, none of us deserve to be alive. When you understand that you have taken a giant stride in the spiritual life.

The eyes as a flame of fire are never directed toward the believer when he is making good decisions from a position of strength, when he is positive toward the Word, when he has control of his life inside the protocol system. Negative volition toward the plan of God means divine discipline; positive volition means great blessing and orientation to life.

Our Lord has three royal warrants and they are mentioned. "His eyes were as a flame of fire" and that is really, by interpretation, for the Tribulational unbelievers. But next we have something for the believers because it says "also." We have the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, translated "also." Then we have a prepositional phrase, e)pi plus the accusative of kefalh, and with it the usual a)utoj, "Also on his head." Then we have an appositional nominative plural which can be construed as a predicate nominative as the thing emphatically defined in the sentence, "many crowns." The word for crowns here is quite unusual. First of all is the adjective poluj and then diadhma from which we get our word "diadem." Diadhma is used for crowns here because it is a crown worn by a king. The King of kings wears three crowns. Diadhma was used as a sign of royalty among the Persians, hence it is a reference to our Lord's royal warrants. Christ wears many crowns because He has many categories of royalty, "also on head many crowns." Notice there is no verb at this point. Remember that stefanoj is a wreath or decoration awarded athletes who were winners at the games, or the highest decoration for valour in the Roman army, but diadhma is for kings only. Jesus Christ returns as the King of kings.

The doctrine of the royalty of Christ

The adjective "royal" means kingly or pertaining to a crown. It is used to describe a king as the sovereign ruler of people. The connotation of royalty is portrayed in both of the original languages of the Word. First of all we have the Hebrew melek, and the verb that goes with it, malak which means to rule as a king. We also have in the Greek the word basileuj, and the verb is basileuw. Our Lord Jesus Christ possesses three categories of royalty. First of all by virtue of His infinite and eternal being as God, His divine royalty; secondly, by virtue of the virgin birth, His Jewish royalty; thirdly, by virtue of His strategic victory of the first advent, battlefield royalty, the angelic conflict.

First of all, then, there is God's divine royalty, Jesus Christ is eternal and infinite God. He is coequal with the Father; He is coequal with the Holy Spirit. As God, Jesus Christ therefore has a special divine royalty. As the manifest person of the Trinity our Lord wears the crown of divine royalty.

The second category is the Jewish royalty of Christ and the virgin birth introduces the humanity of Christ into the world. Because of the virgin pregnancy we have the virgin birth and there was no genetic formation of the old sin nature. No old sin nature means no imputation of Adam's sin. That is the basis for the Jewish royalty of our Lord. He was born royalty. So at the point of the virgin birth Jesus Christ became Jewish royalty as a direct descendant of king David. David and Bathsheba had four children, Solomon and Nathan are the two whose lines have survived. The line of descent from Solomon is the one given in Matthew, it goes down to Joseph. The line of descent from Nathan is given in Luke, it goes down to Mary. So Mary is the mother of the humanity of Christ. Joseph is not the real father, he is the legal father. Note that the first two categories of royalty relate to our Lord's hypostatic union. Jesus Christ is the God-Man. As God we have the royalty of His deity and as man we have the royalty of His humanity, divine royalty and Jewish royalty. These are the first two crowns in our passage.

The third crown is based on the strategic victory of the angelic conflict. This might be classified as battlefield royalty when you think of the battlefield as being the angelic conflict. By living in the prototype divine dynasphere our Lord Jesus Christ from the virgin birth — as God he cannot sin; as true humanity in the hypostatic union He has the potential of sin — was able not to sin. The third crown becomes the major issue because it also has connected with it the cross. Our Lord had to be true humanity to be judged for our sins. All of our personal sins were waiting for someone who could be judged for them, waiting for the sacrifice, the Lamb of God who would take away the sin of the world. In the prototype divine dynasphere, the first Christmas present that God the Father gave to the Son, the humanity of Christ, even though He was tempted far beyond anything that we have ever known in temptation, remained perfect. Therefore He was qualified to go to the cross — in His deity, perfect; in His humanity, perfect. God the Father then called for the printout and all of the sins of the world came out of the computer of divine decrees, and when they were imputed to Christ on the cross by God the Father they were judged. They had never been judged until the cross. But they could not be imputed to anyone. Anyone who is a sinner is not qualified, the Lamb had to be spotless. Therefore our Lord bore our sins, 1 Peter 2:24, "in his own body" on the cross. So it was in the humanity of Christ that the issue existed.

Notice something about our Lord's royal titles. The general title of divine royalty is the Son of God; the Jewish royalty: the general title is the Son of David. When you put the divine royalty and the Jewish royalty together you have the hypostatic union, and the royal title of the hypostatic union is Son of Man. The battlefield royalty: King of kings and Lord of lords, the morning star — Revelation 19:16.

In Matthew 13:55,56 we have one more principle that has to do with Maryology, a heresy which is the worship of the virgin Mary. There is only one virgin birth in all of history, the uniqueness of the person of Christ.

Verse 55, "Is not this the carpenter's son? Is not his mother called Mary, and his brothers, James, Joseph and Simon and Judas?" After our Lord's birth Mary had a normal relationship with her husband Joseph and they had four sons.

Verse 56, "And his sisters, are they not all with us? Where then did this man get all these things?" We learn from these comments that Joseph and Mary had quite a family, at least six.

All of this is a part of the second advent, and as such we must remember that all three categories are related to the second advent. The issue in the first advent was the hypostatic union, therefore there were only two categories of royalty which involved the issue, but now here are three. Each category of our Lord's royalty performs a special function at the second advent. For example, the divine royalty, Jesus Christ as God: At the second advent of Christ divine royalty controls history, changes creation for the Millennial reign, judges ecumenical religion, destroys the armies of the world nations to terminate the last world war of history including the Armageddon campaign, removes unbelievers under the baptism of fire, establishes the perfect environment of the Millennium. The Jewish royalty, the second crown, also has certain functions: Regathers Israel, terminates the fifth cycle of discipline, establishes Israel as the client nation for the Millennium, fulfills the unconditional covenants, and makes Israel a source of blessing in the Millennium. Then the battlefield royalty performs a function at the second advent: Makes Christ the strategic victor of the angelic conflict, complements His victory with the tactical victory, and therefore the battlefield royalty includes the replacement of Satan, the incarceration of Satan for a thousand years, the removal of all demons, the marriage of the Church the bride of Christ, and ruling the earth in the place of Satan for the thousand years of the Millennium. Therefore this becomes the explanation for many crowns, not one crown.

We must stop long enough to recognise the doctrine which pulls all three of these crowns together, and that is, the doctrine of the hypostatic union. It is very difficult for people to understand the principle involved and it is very easy to go astray here without some type of a guideline.

In the person of Christ since the incarnation there are two natures, divine and human. They are inseparably united but they are united without mixture or loss of separate identity. That means without the loss or transfer of properties or attributes. Under the doctrine of the hypostatic union the union is personal and eternal. In other words, Jesus Christ will be the God-Man forever, there will never be a change in the hypostatic union. Since the incarnation Jesus Christ who is and always has been eternal God, coequal with the Father and the Spirit, is also true humanity. So we say he is true humanity and undiminished deity in one person forever, or the God-Man. Jesus Christ is different from God in that He is mankind and different from mankind in that He is God. The divine and the human attributes are combined in one person forever, there will never be a change. So Jesus Christ, therefore, becomes the unique person of the universe. As God, of course, He is infinitely superior to man and angels and all creation; as humanity He is now superior to all angels and all other human beings. The pre incarnate person of Christ was deity and since the incarnation, since the moment of the virgin birth. Jesus Christ combines in His person, one person, two separate natures: divine and human natures. Through the virgin birth, then, Jesus Christ was born without a sin nature, without the imputation of Adam's sin. His humanity is trichotomous; he was born as Adam was created. Jesus Christ is the only member of the human race who was born trichotomous. Adam was created trichotomous, body, soul, and spirit. We are born dichotomous with a body and a soul.

We have two categories in us as human beings. We are born with a soul and human life is imputed by God in every case. That is the immaterial part of man, the part of man that was created in the image of God, and somewhat marred by sin because the human spirit was lost. The human spirit is man's ability to have a relationship with God; the human soul is man's ability to have relationship with man. Originally the human soul was the ability to rule the earth, for when Adam was created he was the ruler of the earth and he lost dominion to Satan through the Fall. Simultaneously imputed to us at birth is Adam's original sin and it is imputed to the genetically formed old sin nature. This becomes a very important principle because when it says the wages of sin is death, Romans 5:17ff, we are sinners by birth, and we came under the wages of sin at birth. God didn't stand around and wait for us to commit a sin, Adam's sin was imputed to us and had to be because there was a vacuum until Adam's sin was imputed. The vacuum was created by the old sin nature, and the fact that we have it genetically in the cell structure of our body becomes the basis of a great conflict as to whether the old sin nature or the Holy Spirit will control the human soul. When the Holy Spirit controls the soul we are said to be spiritual and when the old sin nature controls the soul the Bible says we are carnal. Both carnality and spirituality are absolutes, mutually exclusive. There is no such thing as being partially spiritual and partially carnal. When we sin we become carnal and when we rebound we become filled with the Spirit, but that anticipates an application of this doctrine. What we need to understand here is that you and I are not sinners because we commit personal sins, we are sinners and are spiritually dead because Adam's sin was imputed to us.

When human life is imputed with members of the human race since the fall of Adam there is also genetically passed down through the 23 male chromosomes in copulation, the old sin nature. The old sin nature which is passed down demands, it is a vacuum, residence as a home. What goes with the old sin nature? That which originated the old sin nature: Adam's original sin. The old sin nature is passed down genetically, that is why the virgin birth is so important to the hypostatic union. Apart from the virgin birth Jesus Christ could not have gone to the cross. The fact that Mary had a virgin pregnancy and the 23 female chromosomes through meiosis and polar body were free from the old sin nature meant that when the Holy Spirit provided the 23 male chromosomes because of that it immediately cut off the imputation of Adam's sin because there was no old sin nature transmitted. Male and female both have the old sin nature but we are not talking about the possession of it, we are talking about the transmission of it. It is transmitted through the male and the reason is because Adam willfully sinned, knew what he was doing and committed the sin of cognizance, whereas the woman sinned in ignorance — she didn't know what she was doing but she was equally guilty, and that is why she is the one who has the womb and bears the children. That is why through meiosis and polar body the 23 female chromosomes are totally free from the old sin nature. The only way that they can ever be related to an old sin nature is for 23 male chromosomes to be added through copulation, which is the reason why we are born physically alive, because God imputes life. But God is just and the justice of God demands that there be a complete imputation at birth, and there is the old sin nature which is transmitted through the male which demands a residence. The only residence that the old sin nature will take is Adam's original sin. That is why we call these "real imputations." A real imputation has an affinity. There is a home and there is a natural occupant for that home. The soul is a home and it demands something that has affinity and the thing that has affinity is human life. There is a tremendous arrogance in the world today, and that is the arrogance that there is life in the womb. There is reflex motility and there is physiological activity but there is no life in the womb. God is the giver of life and if there was life in the womb sooner or later science would have been able to create life. Only God can create life.

When did you commit your first sin? You don't know. We all did have a starting point when we committed sin, but it doesn't make any difference when we committed our first sin because we were already spiritually dead. You and I are spiritually dead at birth. Spiritual death is the cause of sin. When did you come under the wages of sin? When Adam looked at the woman and said, "I'll take it." Personal sins are not the wages of sin that brought death, it was one thing that brought death: God in His matchless, perfect wisdom imputed Adam's sin to each one of us. All of our personal sins were in the computer of divine decrees and every sin that has ever been committed in the history of the human race was imputed to Christ on the cross. Christ was qualified to go to the cross and die for those sins. Why could not someone else? For one very simple reason: the hypostatic union. There is only one person in all of human history who was qualified to bear the sins of the world and to be judged for them, to be our substitute. He was God, and as God He couldn't do it. Jesus Christ under the hypostatic union is eternal God and eternal God can simply not die for the sins of the world, or have anything to do with sins. The very essence of God makes it impossible for God to bear sin or be judged for sin or die for sin. God can't even die. So what does it mean when it says that Christ died for our sins? For Jesus Christ to do this wonderful thing for us He had to become true humanity, but in becoming true humanity there could be no bleed-over of the divine attributes into His human nature, and the human attributes could not bleed into the divine nature. He had to be two separate and distinct persons. He had to continue to be God and He had to continue to be Man. So He had to be born like a human being and the virgin birth guaranteed that he would not come under imputed sin or have an old sin nature. As eternal God the attributes of His deity always stay with His deity, they never bleed over to His humanity; and the attributes of His humanity never bleed over into His deity. Jesus Christ is God; Jesus Christ is Man, and Jesus Christ is the God-Man forever without any crossover of attributes. Because the humanity of Christ was in the prototype divine dynasphere, He arrived at the cross without ever committing a personal sin, though he was tempted far beyond anything we have ever known.

None of the divine attributes are in any jeopardised or compromised by the hypostatic union. The incarnate person of Christ is true humanity with a body, soul and spirit. Because of the virgin birth He was born without the old sin nature and the imputation of Adam's sin and, what is even more important, Jesus Christ was born as Adam was created in the image of God. And that is the relationship between the image of God passages in Genesis and the doctrine of the hypostatic union. When God the Father gave the Lord Jesus Christ the spark of life it was the only case on record where He provided both human life and spiritual life. So God the Father imputed human life to the human soul of our Lord. He gave His uniquely-born Son — His was a unique birth — "that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life." And why can we simply believe in Him apart from any human merit? Because all of the merit resides in Him in the hypostatic union. The hypostatic union, then, is the key to the glory of Jesus Christ.

Our Lord was also born with a human spirit and therefore what could be imputed to the human spirit? He already had eternal life as God. Jesus Christ already had eternal life so what could God the Father impute? Something that becomes the key to the modus operandi of every believer. He imputed to the human spirit of our Lord the protocol system, the prototype divine dynasphere. We now live under the mandate of the operational type divine dynasphere.

When we accept Christ as saviour we have a judicial imputation. God the Father takes one half of His holiness which is perfect righteousness and he imputes it to us. So every believer has God's perfect righteousness. At the same time He imputed God's life. There are two things you must have if you are going to live with God forever: His life (eternal life) and His righteousness. Since we can't make it ourselves He provides the means. That also is the system for logistical grace. God takes this eternal life and He imputes it, and just before it arrives God the Holy Spirit creates the human spirit for each one of us. Now each one of us who are believers is trichotomous.

So in the hypostatic union we have the two natures of Christ united without transfer of attributes. In other words, the attributes of deity adhere to the divine nature; the attributes of humanity adhere to the human nature. The attributes adhere to their corresponding natures. The essence of deity cannot be changed, Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today, and forever, immutability. The infinite: Jesus Christ is God, infinity cannot be transferred to His humanity. Man does not become infinite in the hypostatic union. To take from God a single attribute of His deity would destroy His deity; to take from the humanity of our Lord a single attribute of His humanity would destroy His humanity. In fulfilling the Father's plan for the first advent certain attributes of Christ's deity were not used in obedience to the Father's plan. But this does not imply that they were surrendered or destroyed (the false doctrine of Kenosis). In the true doctrine of Kenosis Christ voluntarily took on Himself the form of mankind in order to redeem man from sin, to reconcile man to God, and to propitiate God the Father. In completing the mission of the first advent our Lord did not exercise His divine attributes to benefit Himself or to provide for Himself or to glorify Himself. Therefore the union of divine essence and the human nature in the incarnate person of Christ must be considered both hypostatic and personal. It is this doctrine which explains the many crowns in our passage and it is the key to all theology.

"and on his head many crowns," the multiplicity of crowns is based upon the various categories of royalty of our Lord Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ is eternal God. As eternal and infinite God He possesses all of the attributes of the essence of God, which means that infinitely and eternally he has coexistence with the Father and with the Holy Spirit on a coequal basis.

We now move in the last half of the verse to the royal title of infinite deity, known as the unknown royal title. We begin with the present active participle of the verb e)wxw, "to have." This is a static present for a condition which has always existed. Jesus Christ is eternal God and the unknown title is the royal eternal title of God, the royal dignity of Christ as infinite eternal God. This title is unknown to us only in the sense that we do not know Christ as God as he has eternally known Himself. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb as eternal and infinite God. The participle is circumstantial, best rendered in the English by the conjunction "and" plus the finite construction of the verb, "and he has." Then we have the accusative singular direct object from onoma. The word means name or title, personality, reputation. Here, of course, it refers to a royal title, "and he has a royal title." The word "crowns" indicates that it is not just a name, it is a royal title. Then we have finally the perfect passive participle from the verb grafw which means written, and it has the connotation of "recorded." The perfect tense is a dramatic perfect which is the rhetorical use of the intensive perfect. The dramatic perfect emphasises the results of a completed action. The results include the removal of Satan as the ruler of this world. Also, the results are threefold. As divine royalty Christ judges the world as per the baptism of fire; as Jewish royalty Christ regathers Israel and fulfills the unconditional covenants; as battlefield royalty Christ terminates the Armageddon campaign and the last world war of history, removing Satan as the ruler of this world. The passive voice: the royal warrant has been recorded. The participle is circumstantial.

"And his eyes were a flame of fire, and also on his head were many crowns [representing the three royal warrants plus the unknown one which has to do with infinity]; and he has a royal title which has been written, which no one understood except himself."

O)ida in the perfect tense has to do with knowledge that has always existed. O)udeij is the subject and it means no one [human race], and does not refer to the Father or to the Holy Spirit. The three members of the Trinity all understand the title.

Neither the unbeliever nor fallen angels can properly interpret history or understand historical trends. That is impossible and that is because the pattern of history throughout the entire Church Age is set up under doctrinal and spiritual principles. The unbeliever is the yuxikoj man. He is dichotomous, therefore he cannot understand spiritual things, he can only learn from past history. No creature outside of the plan of God can understand or appreciate our Lord's royal titles or their significance as far as the second advent is concerned. The key to history is the understanding of Bible doctrine as found in the Word of God. Since they cannot understand doctrine they cannot interpret history. Therefore both fallen angels and those living in the cosmic system, unbelievers and cosmic believers, can only distort history. Doctrine resident in the soul of the positive believer is the key which fits the lock of historical trends. Therefore history overtakes and crushes both the fallen angels and the unbelievers of the Tribulation at the second advent. That is the importance and the gist of verse twelve. What you don't understand will destroy you, that is the issue, the point being that we have volition and we have motivation to understand what we want to understand. The fact that people do not accept Christ, the fact that people do not know Bible doctrine, the fact that believers do not know doctrine, means that they are generally ruined by what they do not understand. The reason we have so much trouble and so many problems in our lives is not because we are great Christians and the devil is after us, it is because we are the products of our own bad decisions. We manufacture out of bad motivation and we manufacture out of the wrong priorities all of the troubles and disasters that come to us.

Verse 13 — we now come to the revelation of the royal title. We have the adverbial use of the conjunction kai, translated "Furthermore," followed by the perfect passive participle of the verb periballw which means to wrap around or to be clothed, or to put on clothing. Furthermore, he was clothed." The dramatic perfect is one in which the existing state is described in an unusual and vivid way. The passive voice: our Lord receives the action at the second advent. The participle is circumstantial and translated as a finite verb with the conjunction "and." "Furthermore, he was wearing a robe." The robe is a sign of His strategic victory of the angelic conflict, along with the title which follows. First we have the clothing of victory and then we have the title of victory in this verse.

Next we have another perfect passive participle from noun baptw which means to dip or to sprinkle. Here we translate it "splattered." Then we have the instrumental singular from a(ima, "with blood." The blood is used in relationship to both advents. The blood of Christ for the first advent to represent redemption, reconciliation, propitiation, the saving work of Christ on the cross; the blood here on His robe is literal blood. The fact that our Lord wears a robe splattered with blood is explained by several passages of scripture. Needless to say the blood is literal, the blood of those whom our Lord has slaughtered at the termination of the Armageddon campaign.

First we note the full uniform our Lord was wearing on the occasion of His second advent. It is described in Isaiah chapter 59 verse 17 which says, "he put on righteousness like a breastplate and a helmet of victory on his head; furthermore he put on the garments of vengeance for a uniform, and he wrapped around himself a military robe of zeal." His military robe of zeal is splattered with blood, human blood of annihilated armies. We noted this first in Revelation 14:20. The blood of our Lord's robe is also explained in Isaiah 34:2, 3, 5, 6. This is the termination of the last great world war in history. Other passages describe a similar scene: Joel 2:20; Revelation 19:21; and a more detailed passage is found in Isaiah 63:1-3 which describes the second advent. Ezekiel chapter 39 describes a similar slaughter. We simply note in passing that this is one of the signs of victory; A principle comes out of this: the violence that is involved in the last world war in history is put down by a greater violence from the Lord Jesus Christ.

In the second part of verse 13 we have the title that no one understood. We have a connective conjunction kai, and we noted in the previous verse that we had this unknown title of Christ as infinite and eternal God. In this verse we have the royal title of Jesus Christ as the strategic victor of the angelic conflict. This royal title also relates to the second advent of Christ or the tactical victory of the angelic conflict, for one category of victory leads to the other category. In verse 14 we have a royal title of Jesus Christ as the tactical victor in the angelic conflict, so all of these royal titles come together. But this one is probably the least understood of all. We have the adverbial use of the conjunction kai, translated "furthermore," and next the nominative singular subject of o)noma which has many meanings, all related. It is generally translated "name" but it means "title," "royal title," "personality." Here it means "royal title." Then the perfect passive indicative of kalew, a verb used here for nomenclature, "has been designated [or called]." It is a dramatic perfect which is the rhetorical use of the intensive perfect. Completed action and the results of the completed action of the perfect tense are emphasised here in a vivid and dramatic way. The passive voice: Jesus Christ as the unique person of the universe is the one who is in hypostatic union and receives the action of the verb — the royal title for His strategic victory followed by His tactical victory in the second advent. The indicative mood is declarative for the verbal idea being presented from the viewpoint of reality. This title is given: o(logoj tou qeou, "the Word of God." That would be a literal translation were it not for the fact that logoj just simply doesn't mean word. Very rarely does it mean word, it has meanings that are way beyond this. Translation: "now his title has been designated the Word of God."

John 1:1 starts out E)n a)rxh h)n o(logoj, "In the beginning was the Word," but that is not the translation at all. First of all a)rxh is very much in the picture here, the word "beginning." Beginning does not always mean beginning, sometimes it is idiomatic. A)rxh has numerous meanings and they are always determined by the context. In John 1:1 a)rxh refers to eternity past; in 1 John 2:7 a)rxh refers to the time when the believer became a Christian; in 1 John 3:8 a)rxh refers to the time before the creation of mankind. In other words, prehistory; in 1 John 1:1 a)rxh refers to the incarnation; in 1 John 2:13,14 it refers again to eternity past. There are so many different meanings. How do they get the idiom "in eternity past" out of this? By omitting the definite article. The preposition e)n plus the locative of a)rxh should be translated "in a beginning which is not a beginning," meaning in eternity past. This means that whatever is used here preexisted all creatures, and the word that is used for preexisting all creatures is logoj. Logoj means a thought, a vocabulary, a person with thought and vocabulary that preexisted all human beings. Logoj, therefore, is used in a very technical sense. It is a way of cracking the barrier of time and going back into eternity.

Every system of philosophy would like to establish a premise on the absolute but neither rationalism or empiricism has ever succeeded in doing so. Rationalism is the concept that reason is the source of knowledge in itself, superior to and independent of any sensory perception. Only the Word of God can penetrate the barrier of time and go into eternity past and tell us what happened in eternity past. And only faith as a non-meritorious system of perception can understand the events which preceded time, the creation of man, the planet earth, the existence of the universe, what is beyond all of these things. Empiricism is also a meritorious system of perception for empiricism is the pursuit of knowledge by observation and experimentation. Empiricism has not succeeded in breaking the time barrier and going into eternity past. The apostle John using faith as the system of perception reached beyond empirical knowledge and went beyond the incarnation, broke the barriers of time, and came up with this marvelous phrase, "In a beginning which is not a beginning, in eternity past."

Then the verb, the imperfect active indicative of e)imi, the verb to be used here in its absolute sense in the imperfect tense of duration, hence linear aktionsart in past time and, with the idiom e)n arxh, meaning there always existed. "In a beginning which was not a beginning in eternity past there always existed." The active voice: the Logoj produces the action of the verb, and the Logoj here is Jesus Christ. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of Bible doctrine. There existed in eternity past the Logoj. We know that God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit existed in eternity past. Christ was and always has been eternal God, therefore He possesses all of the attributes of eternal God. All divine titles are ascribed to Christ for He is called God. He is called the Mighty God, He is called the great God, He is called God over all, He is called Jehovah, He is called Lord, He is called King of kings and Lord of lords. He declares that He and the Father are one; He is the creator of the universe; He is the object of worship from both mankind and angelic creatures. God is not more, therefore God cannot promise more; God cannot do more than Jesus Christ is said to be to promise and to do. Therefore the verb e)imi denotes absolute existence. Christ eternally existed in past time. There are many passages dealing with this, starting with Exodus 3:14; Isaiah 9:6; Micah 5:2; John 8:58; Colossians 1:16,17; Ephesians 1:14; Revelation 1:11, etc.

In contrast to the verb e)imi, used here for the eternal existence of Christ, we will see the meaning of the logoj related to another verb, ginomai, which means to become. There is a difference between e)imi and ginomai. Ginomai is used for something that has a beginning; e)imi can have a subject that has no beginning. So we have the two verbs in contrast in John chapter one. This prepares us to take a look at this title which links eternal God, the second person, with the incarnation, o(logoj, and that is the predicate nominative. Since we are talking about a title for the Lord Jesus Christ it should be Logoj, and it is used to indicate infinite God manifest to finite creatures, Homo Sapiens. Logoj connotes both thought and revelation of that thought. Logos often means doctrine but here it is used with the descriptive genitive of Qeoj to refer to Jesus Christ. Here it means the originator of doctrine, the Lord Jesus Christ.

The Greeks used logoj as a metaphysical reality, a term in both their philosophy and their theology. They also used logoj for word, speech, utterance, revelation, thought, vocabulary, not in the sense of something proclaimed but thought in the sense of something displayed, clarified, recognised and understood. Therefore, when Heracleides used logoj extensively it must be understood that he not only used the noun to express relationship between man and God but between man and the world. He also used it to establish a relationship between man and virtue. The sofoj who broke away from Heracleides used logoj as the rational power inside of man — the power of thought, the power of speech. To Socrates and Plato logoj became not simply thought, but in the plural they both used logoi for a preexistent vocabulary, a preexistent harmony between thought of soul and the matter that existed with it. Aristotle summarised logoj by contending that man had the word in two ways, namely that his manner of life is determined by logoj or thought and he can express his manner of life by logoj, and therefore speech. The relationship between thought and speech is the issue.

When we were created in the image of God there were three characteristics involved. God is a spirit and therefore the immaterial part of man is the image of God. Man was created with a human soul and a human spirit in the image of God. When Adam sinned we lost the human spirit and became dichotomous but this much of the image of God we still have. First of all, I think, thought, vocabulary. Then we have volition, and that is self-determination. All of the philosophers recognised that they had to use something, they didn't invent it, they did not invent vocabulary, they did not invent words, they did not invent language, it came through the barrier of eternity when man was created in the image of God. Therefore logoj, used of our Lord Jesus Christ, has a very unusual meaning. In John 1:1 we have Jesus Christ in eternity past, and this is the unknown title. This is the title that no one knew in the previous verse; it is now revealed as the Logoj. In 1 John 1:1 we have the Logos in time; in Revelation 19:13 we have the Logoj in eschatology, the Logoj in the future.

All of this discussion about etymology of logoj is to bring us to a single fact which could not have been said in the first place: logoj is not only a designation for Jesus Christ in hypostatic union but is the title of our Lord Jesus Christ as the test pilot for the divine dynasphere, the entire protocol system that belongs to the family of God. There is only one period in all of human history where there is no legitimate tabernacle and no legitimate temple. There is no sacred building in the Church Age and it is the only dispensation in which there is no sacred building, but there is a statement of scripture which says that there is no temple in the eternal state. In the eternal state there is a satellite city called the holy city, the New Jerusalem, but there is no temple. Only twice in all of the scripture do we have this significant statement, "no temple." In this dispensation only the body of the believer is the sacred building, it is the temple of the Holy Spirit, 1 Corinthians 6:19,20. Only the body. Why? What does that have to do with Logoj?

"In the beginning which was not a beginning, in eternity past, there always existed the Logoj." The next verse, John 1:2, says, "He existed in eternity past face to face with God." There always existed the Logoj, furthermore the Logoj always existed face to face with God, and finally it says, "and the Logoj was God." In other words, we have a distinction between God the Father and God the Son. Both existed in eternity past, both were eternal, both were infinite, both had identical eternal and infinite attributes, one did not have more attributes than the other. So they eternally coexisted, "the Logoj was God." That is Jesus Christ in eternity past and that is the unknown title. In verse 2 we see that "the same one was in the beginning with God." O(utoj is a nominative singular demonstrative pronoun, it can be translated "this one," but a demonstrative pronoun of this emphasis can be used as a personal pronoun. He always existed in eternity past face to face with God, proj plus the accusative of qeoj. Verse two just reinforces the fact that when this unknown title logos is used it takes us out of time in the Church Age and takes us back into infinity in eternity past and indicates that Jesus Christ is, always was, and there never was a time when He was not eternal God. To prove that John 1:3 simply says that He is the creator of everything.

Verse 14 is going to explain why the Christian way of life is entirely different from the way of life of believers in the Old Testament dispensation, the way of life of believers in the Tribulation, the way of life of believers in the Millennium, why we have something unique and why we have never been given a sacred building, why there is no temple and why we do not go to Jerusalem to worship, why there is no tabernacle in existence extant any longer. It is very simple: Kai o(logoj sarc e)geneto, "And the Logoj became flesh." Notice that we have here the constative aorist, the aorist active indicative of ginomai. When we are talking about eternity past we have e)imi; when we are talking about the incarnation we have ginomai. Jesus Christ who was eternal God in eternity past and the creator of the universe became something He never was before; He became sarc — "flesh." God is not flesh, God is not material, the image of God is not material. Jesus Christ became sarc — "flesh." The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. It refers to a momentary action, it refers to the virgin birth. That is when Christ became flesh, at which time He became the God-Man, the unique person of the universe, i.e. hypostatic union. We have one more verb, the aorist active indicative of sknow, which is translated "dwelt" in the King James version but it means to tabernacle, "and the Logoj became flesh and tabernacled among us." The tabernacle came to the earth, "among us." Jesus Christ tabernacled on earth for 33 years during the first advent. Logoj Qeou refers to God the Father; Logoj refers to God the Son. Tou can be ablative or genitive of source, "the Logoj from God the Father."

Why is it that we are priests? That never occurred before and will never occur again. Why is it that God the Holy Spirit for the first time in all of human history indwells every believer? It has never happened before? Why is it that we have union with Christ, the baptism of the Spirit, retroactive and current positional truth, and it never happened before? Why is it that we have a protocol system that has never preexisted? Why is it that we do not have ritual, except for the Lord's table? This is not the age of ritual, this is the age of protocol. Every other dispensation is a dispensation of ritual, including the Millennium. Why? In human history, except for the Church Age, there has always been a tabernacle or a temple, a sacred building representing the invisible presence of God and portraying a system of Christology which did not exist prior to the first advent. This invisible presence in the Old Testament is called the Shekinah glory. What is the Shekinah glory? The Hebrew noun, shekinah, doesn't occur in the Old Testament, and it comes from the Hebrew verb shakan which means to dwell. But there is one thing that Jesus Christ never did in the Old Testament. He did not dwell on the earth; He did not sknow, but He did have a shekinah presence: the Shekinah glory. So while the Hebrew noun shekinah is not found in the Old Testament it was used by Jews since time immemorial to express the invisible presence of Jesus Christ in the Tabernacle.

Between the two cherubs looking down on the mercy seat in the tabernacle was the Shekinah glory. When the cloud was over the tabernacle that meant that there was a glory inside between the cherubs, and that glory was called in the Hebrew, kabhोध. That was the invisible presence of the God of Israel, Jesus Christ. He didn't come in the flesh, He came in light. He was invisible. There was a cloud above that they could see and they knew when that cloud was there. And when he spoke out of that cloud there was a glorious light. There was no light inside of the holy of holies. Where was the light? The candle was in the holy place; there was no light inside of the holy of holies, it was dark and it was supposed to be dark because the only light that was ever supposed to be in the holy of holies was Jesus Christ the Shekinah glory, the light of the world. So Jesus Christ, the invisible God of the Old Testament, occupied that sacred building. That is why it was sacred, because in the form of light He was there. Cf. Exodus 25:22 with Leviticus 16:2.

This same Shekinah glory represents the invisible presence of Christ and is mentioned in the New Testament. Hebrews 9:25, that glorious light, whatever it is, is in certain passages equivalent to doca, "glory." There is a passage in which the tabernacle is described in the New Testament, Hebrews 9:25 where it is describing the mercy seat, and above it the cherubs representing the holiness or the integrity of God. They are called the cherubs of doca. Why? They are just made out of gold, there is no glory in the cherubs. This glory is related to something alive, eternally alive, and doca is the same as kabodh and kabodh is the Shekinah glory, and the reason they had sacred buildings in the Old Testament is because there in that building is the invisible presence of the second person of the Trinity who had not yet become visible, had not yet become the God-Man. This is His pre-hypostatic union relationship with Israel, and in the Tribulation the temple is a false one and there is no glory there. In the Millennium there is a legitimate temple as a memorial to all of this: that Jesus Christ has throughout all the Old Testament dispensation been always faithful because always there. When they failed miserably the cloud went away. A pillar of fire at night, a cloud by daytime, the Shekinah glory in the tent called the tabernacle. So, above it the "glory," the Shekinah glory, the invisible presence of Christ as the God of Israel overshadowing the mercy seat. Overshadow means life, the only life. Doca refers to the presence of Jesus Christ as the God of Israel.

Jesus Christ is also mentioned as Shekinah glory in James 2:1, "My brethren, do not exhibit partiality," partiality is living in cosmic one; when you do not exhibit partiality you are living at gate six of the divine dynasphere, "as you keep having the doctrine from our Lord Jesus Christ." Then something is added, "we have doctrine from our Lord Jesus Christ." We have doctrine we are to use. When it is doctrine we are to apply it is called pistij; when it is doctrine we are to learn it is called a)lhqeia; if it is doctrine we are to put together categorically it is logoj. Here we have doctrine — "as you have doctrine from our Lord Jesus Christ." Who has doctrine? Some don't have enough doctrine to fill a thimble. In what form do we have the Shekinah glory? Jesus Christ has come in the flesh. We have the Shekinah glory in doctrine. How do we know that? This is what James says in 2:1, "My brethren, do not exhibit partiality as you keep having doctrine from our Lord Jesus Christ, the glory." The last two words: the Shekinah glory of the tabernacle is the glory of the hypostatic union where His humanity functioned in a prototype divine dynasphere.

That explains something. Shekinah is derived from shakan which means to dwell. The Shekinah glory is the dwelling glory. Jesus Christ, the God of Israel, dwelt with Israel overshadowing the mercy seat. The presence of the Lord Jesus Christ between the cherubs was the Shekinah glory. At the virgin birth the Shekinah glory became the incarnate Christ, the God-Man, the hypostatic union which exists forever. During the first advent the humanity of Christ produced a new glory inside a protocol system, the Father's protocol system, the prototype divine dynasphere. Believers in the Church Age have it now. They have something that no one could even touch before. They couldn't even go into the holy of holies, the Shekinah glory would have killed them if they had even tried to step into the holy of holies and see it. Yet that glory is available to us now. That Shekinah glory is Jesus Christ inside the prototype divine dynasphere. He made the Shekinah glory available and now for one dispensation only, while the royal family is being called out, their way of life is that same divine dynasphere, and they only glorify God, and they only produce glory inside of those eight gates of the divine dynasphere. That is why our body is the temple of the Holy Spirit, that is why gate one is being filled with the Spirit, and that is something that has never existed before and will be shut down and never seen again until the eternal state.

John 1:14, "And the Logoj became flesh," Jesus Christ as eternal God, "and he tabernacled among us," the Shekina glory became for the first time visible God-Man. The God-Man was the tabernacle. It isn't the tabernacle that counts, it is the One who occupied it, and the One who occupied it came in the flesh. The presence of God supersedes all sacred buildings that represent God, "and we observed his glory," the invisible God of Israel residing between the cherubs. No Jew could ever see His glory and live, that is why the holy of holies was off limits. Now, we can not only look and live but it is a part of the protocol plan. We observe His glory in the prototype divine dynasphere. It is not His glory as God but His glory as true humanity inside the prototype divine dynasphere. Why is that important? Because that is the glory He left us, the operational type divine dynasphere, and it never was given to anyone else, "the glory of the uniquely born one from the Father," we observe monogenhj glory, not the glory of God but monogenhj (uniquely born), the glory of His humanity functioning inside the prototype divine dynasphere. The glory of His deity was never in question — "full of grace [the policy for the protocol system] and doctrine [the authority and instruction for function in the system]." The only glory that can exist today is the glory of the believer inside the divine dynasphere.

Israel in the past had many failures. One of them was found in 1 Samuel 4:21,22 when the ark of the covenant was in the camp of the Philistines, "And she called the boy Ichabod [no glory], saying. 'The glory has departed from Israel because the ark of God was taken'." What is the ark of God? It is not just that box, it is the mercy seat, the golden throne, and the golden throne was in the hands of the Philistines. So the woman called her son Ichabod, meaning no glory. Why? Because glory had departed from Israel. Without that piece of furniture in the holy of holies there is no residence of the glory of the Lord Jesus Christ. The glory of the Lord only resided there when the furniture was in place. "And she said, 'The glory [Shekinah glory] has departed from Israel, for the ark of God was taken'." The Shekinah glory represents the presence of the Lord Jesus Christ dwelling between the cherubs until such time as He would become Immanuel, "God with us." So that the glory of the past is gone, and should be; a greater glory has come.

The rest of the story is the fact that the Logoj went to the cross. So He is called the Logoj of the cross in 1 Corinthians 1:18, "The Logoj of the cross is to them that perish foolishness, but unto us which are saved he is the power of God."

In describing the eternal state and the capital of the eternal state in chapter 21 we have the New Jerusalem called the holy city coming down from heaven, and actually it is a satellite city suspended above the new planet earth. In that satellite city a very remarkable statement is made in chapter 21:3, "Then I heard a voice from the throne saying, 'Behold, the tabernacle of God is with mankind...' In the eternal state we have a tabernacle, but the tabernacle is immediately defined as Jesus Christ who is the Shekinah glory "... and he will tabernacle with them."

There are two questions that arise from this statement in Revelation 21:3. The first question: What is the tabernacle of God? The second question: What does it mean, "he will tabernacle with them"? This has to do in context with the eternal state.

The tabernacle of God is Jesus Christ as the Shekinah glory, Jesus Christ who dwelt in the tabernacle of Israel. The tabernacle is the beginning of a series of sacred buildings which exist throughout human history, and these sacred buildings include both the doctrinal significance of the furniture and the ritual which goes with it. They teach, of course, both Christology and soteriology. The first of these sacred buildings was a giant tent called the tabernacle of Moses, Exodus chapters 25-40. It was not only a portrayal of the person and the work of Jesus Christ but it included the actual presence of Christ. Christ actually resided in that tabernacle.

In the history of Israel two temples followed of more permanent type structure. The first temple is called the temple of Solomon, described in 1 Kings 6-8; the second is called the temple of Zerubbabel, described in Ezra 3-6. There is also a temple in Jerusalem during the Tribulation. This is the temple in which in the middle of the Tribulation the abomination of desolation is set up, Matthew 25:15. This temple of the tribulation is mentioned in Revelation 11:1. There will also be a Millennial temple in Jerusalem during the last dispensation of history and this temple not only represents the restoration of Israel as a client nation to God but it also acts and functions as Israel's communion table, Ezekiel 40-47. There is also a temple/tabernacle in heaven which gives testimony to the person and the work of Christ during the first advent, Revelation 11:19; 13:6; and 15:5 which says, "And after these things I looked, and the temple tabernacle which serves as a testimony in heaven was opened." With Christ the Shekinah glory in heaven there would naturally be a temple tabernacle there.

In all of this there are two exceptions to sacred buildings, and they are extremely important. The first is that there is no such thing as a sacred building in the Church Age — no sanctuary, no temple, no tabernacle. Sacred buildings simply do not exist in the Church Age. The exception includes the fact that your body as a believer is said to be the only sacred building. So instead of a tent, instead of some building constructed to be a temple, the only temple in existence is found in 1 Corinthians 3:16, "Do you not know that you are the temple of God." In other words, this is the only dispensation in which the body of every believer is the temple of God, "and the Spirit of God dwells in you." That is a radical change from any sacred building in any previous dispensation to the Church Age and is also a radical change to any dispensation or part of a dispensation (there are seven years of the dispensation of Israel to run, the Tribulation) after the Rapture, after the Church Age. The second exception is the eternal state. There is no temple and no tabernacle in the new Jerusalem, the satellite city suspended in space above planet earth, Revelation 21:22, "And I saw no temple in it: for the Lord God the Almighty one, even the Lamb, is its temple." Note that in these two exceptions, in place of a sacred building we have human bodies. In the Church Age the only sacred building is the body of every believer, said to be the temple of the Holy Spirit, 1 Corinthians 6:19,20. That passage goes on to say, "therefore glorify God in your body." That word "glorify" means that the body is a temple only for the purpose of glorifying God, for the presence of God in the sacred buildings of the past was called the Shekinah glory. The sacred building, of course, emphasises ritual whereas the body of the believer in the Church Age and the presence of Christ as the Shekinah glory in the new Jerusalem in the eternal state indicate protocol and power. So all dispensations are ritualistic except the Church Age. There is only one authorised ritual for the post-canon period of the Church Age, the Lord's table. In all other dispensations there is extensive ritual.

The next question is: What is the Shekinah glory? During the entire course of human history, from the Exodus to the Millennium, except the Church Age, there has always been a tabernacle or a temple to represent the presence of invisible God. This invisible presence is called the Shekinah glory. The Hebrew word for shekinah is a word not found in the canon of scripture but used as a technical theological term to describe something in scripture. It means the dwelling place and it is taken from the Hebrew verb that is taken many times in the scripture, shakan. Shekinah means the dwelling place: the dwelling place of God, the dwelling place of glory. Jesus Christ as the God of Israel is also called kabhodh, which means "the glory." The Shekinah glory lived or tabernacled in the holy of holies over the mercy seat between the cherubs and was the only light in the holy of holies, according to Exodus 25. The Shekinah glory means God dwelling in the tabernacle or in the temple. Jesus Christ as the God of Israel is called the Shekinah glory.

What are the titles of Christ as the Shekinah glory? There is one title that is especially important that is found in Deuteronomy 6:4, "Shema Israel [Hear O Israel], Adonai Elohenu [Jesus Christ is our God], Adonai echad [Jesus Christ is unique]." In the New Testament there are two basic words used for the Shekinah glory. The first is doxa, translated "glory." The second is the noun logos, generally translated in the King James version by the word "word."

Romans 9:4, describing the privileges that belonged to Israel in the past dispensation: "who are Israelites, to whom is given the adoption [referring to the unconditional covenants and the client nation] and the glory [the Shekinah glory," Israel had something in the Old Testament no Gentile group ever had. They had doxa, the exact equivalent of the Hebrew kabhodh. The Jews had the Shekinah glory, the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ in the tabernacle as the God of Israel, "and the gift of the law, both the worship and the promises." The worship has to do with the functions of the Levitical priesthood related to the tabernacle, and the promises has to do with the unconditional covenants to be fulfilled at the second advent.

Exodus 25:21, 22, the description of the mercy seat and the holy of holies. "And you [Moses] will put the mercy seat on top of the ark, and in the ark you will put the testimony which I shall give you."

"And there I will meet with you" notice: God says, There, at the mercy seat, I will meet with you, the presence of God, "and from above the mercy seat, and between the cherubs [the Shekinah glory would reside above the mercy seat]," so the Shekinah glory was the brilliant light in the holy of holies. The light that brought out all of the beauty of the beautiful colours of the tabernacle is the Lord, "which are on the ark of the testimony." Romans 3:25-28 identifies Christ as the mercy seat. The only light in the holy of holies was Jesus Christ the Shekinah glory.

1 Samuel 4:19, Eli was the high priest of Israel and he had a son by the name of Phinehas. Eli and Phinehas died the sin unto death. The wife of Phinehas heard the news, "Now his daughter-in-law, the wife of Phinehas, was pregnant and about to give birth; and when she heard the news that the ark of God was taken [captured by the Philistines] and that her father-in-law and her husband had died, she knelt down and gave birth, for her labour pains came upon her."

Verse 20, "Then about the time of her death [she died after giving birth] the women who stood by her said to her, 'Do not be afraid, for you have given birth to a son.' But she did not answer or pay attention."

Verse 21, "Then she called the boy Ichabod [No glory; no presence of God in Israel]," she heard that the Philistines had captured an article sacred furniture: the ark of the covenant, the mercy seat on top of it, and the two cherubs, which means that God had departed from Israel — "saying, 'The glory [Shekinah glory] has departed from Israel,' for the ark of the Lord was captured."

Verse 22, "And she said, 'The glory has departed from Israel, for the ark of God was captured'."

Leviticus 10:1, we have what is called "strange fire." Aaron had four sons. Aaron was to be the source of the Levitical priesthood and his elder son was Nadab; his next son was Abihu. Nadab should have been the next high priest but that was not to be. The reason is because Nadab and Abihu offered strange fire. What they did is not that difficult to understand when the Hebrew of Leviticus 10:12; Numbers 3:4; 26:61 is studied. What they did was to take fire from the altar and go into the holy place. As members of the family, the next priests under Aaron, they are allowed to go that far. And they came to the altar of incense and offered strange incense there with the idea of breaking through the curtain, pulling back the curtain and going to see what was in the holy of holies. When they threw back the curtain and started to go in with strange fire they died instantly. They were killed right then and there by the Shekinah glory. The first result was that the Levitical priesthood of Israel descends through the youngest sons, the third son and the fourth son. The third son who became the next high priest was Eleazar. Eventually the priesthood went over to Ithamar in the days of David, but the priestly line came down through the two youngest sons of Aaron.

The second result is stated in Leviticus 16:1,2, "Now the Lord spoke to Moses after the death of the two sons of Aaron, when they approached the presence of the Lord." In other words, what they were going to do was satisfy their curiosity. That explains the meaning of the phrase "strange fire." Nadab and Abihu tried to enter the holy of holies with strange fire to see what was there, "and died." No one was to see the Shekinah glory ever.

Verse 2, "Then the Lord said to Moses, 'Tell you brother Aaron that he shall not at any time enter the holy place inside the veil [the holy of holies], before the mercy seat which is on the ark, lest he die; for I will appear in a cloud over the mercy seat'." That is the Lord Jesus Christ and His presence as the Shekinah glory. That is why the tabernacle was sacred, why the temples were sacred, why sacred buildings existed.

Hebrews 9:5, the tabernacle of Moses is described in the Greek just as it is described in passages in the Hebrew: "And above it [the mercy seat] the cherubs of glory [doca], referring to the presence of the Lord Jesus Christ, "overshadowing the mercy seat." In the Old Testament tabernacle the presence of the Lord Jesus Christ between the cherubs was the Shekinah glory. The cloud over the tabernacle indicated the fact that He was present in the holy of holies. However, beginning with the virgin birth of Christ, the incarnation, and the hypostatic union, Jesus Christ produced a new glory, a new glory in the sphere of His human nature. Before the incarnation Jesus Christ was eternal, infinite God, not true humanity. This new glory was produced in the protocol system, the prototype divine dynasphere. The humanity of Christ produced this glory. As God Jesus Christ is glory; in His humanity He produced this phenomenal glory. This same protocol system has been given today to us as members of His royal family. Because we have this protocol system we have no sacred building, and for the first time in all of human history God the Holy Spirit indwells every believer so that his body is the temple of the Holy Spirit. The protocol system for glory has become the unique plan of God: residence, function, momentum inside the operational type divine dynasphere.

There were certain things that never existed before the incarnation of our Lord Jesus Christ. There were certain privileges that believers did not have. Never in the history of the human race was there such a wonderful thing as was given after the Shekinah glory came.

2 Corinthians 3:17,18, we live in the most exciting dispensation of all human history, the dispensation of the greatest privileges and the greatest opportunity, when things have been given that were never given to any Old testament saint nor will ever be given again. The most phenomenal things have been provided but they are all on an optional basis. "Now the Lord [Kurioj] is the Spirit," a reference to the deity of God the Holy Spirit, a reference to the function of gate one of the divine dynasphere. God is actually there to help produce glory in us and the filling of the Holy Spirit is gate one in the protocol system. This is the power of God being provided for us to fulfill this function, "and where the Spirit of the Lord is," never in the Old Testament was there such a thing as the indwelling of the Spirit. There was enduement for a few believers. For the first time in history we have the indwelling of the Spirit. Where is he? He indwells every believer, "there is freedom [to execute the plan of God, to produce a greater glory than ever existed in OT times]."

Verse 18, "But we all [all believers], with unveiled face [the filling of the Spirit making it possible for the believer to walk by means of the Spirit at the other gates]," for the believer who fails his brain remains veiled, he is in cosmic one under the blackout of the soul; he is in cosmic two under scar tissue of the soul. In cosmic one he is said to be grieving the Holy Spirit; in cosmic two he is said to be quenching the Spirit, "looking into a mirror to produce a reflection," it takes all of those words to translate one Greek verb, katoptrizw, which means to look in a mirror to see a reflection. It is a present middle participle, the mirror is perception of Bible doctrine, i.e. "the glory of the Lord," the Shekinah glory is not in a sacred building any more. That is, not in the tabernacle or the temple. The Shekinah glory is produced by looking in the mirror of the Word of God, "we are being transformed into the same image," we are able to produce (without the perfection) what our Lord produced in the prototype given at the virgin birth. The operational type is only extant in the Church Age, "from glory [the Shekinah glory of Christ in the prototype] to glory [gate eight of the operational type], from the Spirit of the Lord." God the Holy Spirit provides the power, that is why we call it the divine dynasphere. The same glory that our Lord produced in the divine dynasphere can now be produced in the Church Age believer. The believer can be transformed into the same image from the source of glory, that is, the same as produced by the humanity of Christ when He was in the prototype. We can't have perfection; we can produce a glory. That is why the operational type divine dynasphere has been given to us. The protocol system used by our Lord's humanity in the first advent has become the plan of God for the Church Age believer: residence, function, momentum inside the divine dynasphere.

The first advent of Christ changed everything. Isaiah 7:14, "Therefore the Lord himself will give you a sign: Behold a virgin shall become pregnant consequently bearing a son, therefore his name shall be called Immanuel" [God is with us]. Once the virgin birth occurs the presence of the Lord is no longer in a sacred building. The sacred building of the Millennium is a memorial just as the Eucharist is a memorial, but here we have Immanuel, God is with us. The Shekinah glory has come to earth in the hypostatic union and once the hypostatic union occurs there can be no more Shekinah glory, no more sacred buildings. In the Old Testament God was with Israel in the Tabernacle, above the mercy seat, but in the New Testament God is with mankind in the hypostatic union, His true humanity residing in the prototype divine dynasphere. The Lord's title related to His eternal deity and this great event is the title Logoj. The Lord's title related to His eternal and infinite glory is Logoj tou Qeou, the Logoj of God. The Shekinah glory is the Logoj of God. The Shekinah glory comes in the flesh and therefore supersedes all sacred buildings. He tabernacled among us; He is now in human form, the God-Man forever.

Next we note that as a result of His coming in the flesh, He lived in the prototype divine dynasphere. He was able to succeed in doing what the first Adam did not do, and that is to remain impeccable for His thirty-three years on the earth. He had no imputed sin, He had no sin nature, He used His volition inside the prototype divine dynasphere to resist all sin, and therefore He was able to go to the cross. As God Jesus Christ cannot be judged for our sins. To be judged for our sins He had to arrive at the cross as perfect humanity, and He did so in the Shekinah glory protocol system. Therefore in 1 Corinthians 1:18 He is called Logoj once again, related to the Shekinah glory. This time He is called the Logoj of the cross. To those who are saved it is the power of God, dunamij, and that is the whole system. Now, instead of all the things that they did in the Old Testament, we have it all in a protocol system; we have the operational divine dynasphere. So glory is now produced by believers whose body is the temple of the Holy Spirit, therefore no sacred building. The Shekinah glory is therefore visible to believers, 1 John 1:1. No one ever saw God in the Old Testament. Now the veil has been removed and, therefore, when Jesus Christ came in the flesh he was observed empirically by John.

Then we have the Shekinah glory at the second advent — Revelation 19:12-13. In verse 13: "... now His title has been designated o(Logoj tou Qeou [the Logoj of God]." That is the title that no one understood because they didn't relate it with the Shekinah glory of the Old Testament. All of this means simply this: that the Shekinah glory comes to the believer of the Church Age through the Logos. We have noted before that Heracleides used logoj for the principle that controls the universe. He thought of logoj as the original thinker, the one who had vocabulary originally, the one who invented language and thought. Hence, from the beginning logos had the connotation of vocabulary and thinking, and life is nothing unless you are able to think, unless you have vocabulary, unless you can build thought upon thought, concept upon concept. But related to the Shekinah glory logoj means the originator of doctrine, our Lord Jesus Christ. When the Sofoj were fighting Heracleides and finally broke away from his school they used logoj in a different way. They used it for rational power inside of man. Socrates and Plato used logoj for preexistent harmony between matter and the thoughts of man's mind. Aristotle said no, that logoj represents manner of life: what you think is what you really are. Neoplatonism came along and in its debate with stoicism recaptured the meaning of logoj as revelation. Today, of course, the Shekinah glory is revealed through Bible doctrine. So they all had a piece of the action but they all missed the point. They couldn't put it all together and therefore this title of the Lord remained obscure. That is why it is so stated in Revelation. Today the Shekinah glory is revealed only through doctrine — categorical protocol system, no ritual. In the Old Testament doctrine was taught through ritual. We live, therefore in the dispensation of protocol rather than ritual, and to learn through protocol requires the function of the privacy of your priesthood, the individual motivation, positive volition, and understanding such phrases as o(logoj tou Qeou: the Logoj of God.

In Hebrews 4:12 we have that same phrase again, but it no longer refers to Jesus Christ as such, it refers to what He thinks, "The word of God is alive and powerful." That is the same phrase used again, used for the Shekinah glory. In the Old Testament the Shekinah glory had to be covered by a sacred building, it had to be hidden from the eyes of people. But now, o(Logoj tou Qeou, the Word of God, is alive and powerful. Now it is opened up to us through doctrine, through thought, through what we find in the scriptures. And there is no substitute for Bible doctrine. If doctrine is not everything in your life, doctrine is nothing in your life and you will never see the Shekinah glory this side of heaven. But God has now permitted us to do something that even Moses couldn't do. It says that Moses saw His backward parts on the mountain but he never saw His Shekinah glory. The Shekinah glory was reserved for the royal family of God.

So we have, therefore, the Shekinah glory in the Church Age. 1 Corinthians 2:7, "We speak God's wisdom in a mystery [Church Age doctrine formerly hidden, now revealed because the Shekinah glory became flesh], the hidden doctrine, which God predestined before the ages to our glory," in a very special sense, through the perception of Bible doctrine, the Shekinah glory becomes ours.

Colossians 1:25-29, "Of which [the dispensation of the Church] I have become a minister according to this dispensation from God," the dispensation of the Church calls for the ministry rather than the priesthood and the gift of prophecy as existed in the Old Testament, "which was given to me for your benefit." What is for our benefit? The fact that we can have the Shekinah glory. We can see the Shekinah glory in doctrine resident in our souls. We can come to the point of occupation with Christ, gate five of the system, "that I might implement your deficiency of ton Logon tou Qeou [the doctrine of God]." Deficiency of the Logoj of God means that we miss the boat, we miss the glory, we are losers in this dispensation.

Verse 26, "that is, the mystery which has been hidden from past ages and other generations; but has now been revealed to his saints," it was always a mystery. Nadab and Abihu wanted to solve the mystery. They died. No one ever solved the mystery, the mystery was reserved for this dispensation. We are the resolvers of the mystery as we learn Bible doctrine at gate four.

Verse 27, "to whom God has decreed to make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery," the riches of the glory of this mystery is Bible doctrine which will change our lives, "among the Gentiles, which is Christ in you the hope of glory." If you learn the protocol system you will go from glory to glory, as per 2 Corinthians 3:18, and you will have eternal reward, you will be a winner in time, you will see the glory in time.

Verse 28, "Whom we teach," teaching doctrine is the proclamation of the Shekinah glory — "admonishing [or warning] every man and teaching every man in all wisdom, that we might present every person mature in Christ," there is the Shekinah glory.

Verse 29, "For this purpose I also labour to the point of exhaustion, competing according to his [God's] game plan," the word "competing" is a)gonizw which means to compete as an athlete. What is God's game plan? We have seen the glory; we are therefore to participate in the glory — "which is operational inside the divine dynasphere."

Revelation 19:14, the second advent order of battle. There are three separate and distinct armies in heaven. First of all, there is the army of the elect angels. There is the angelic order of battle which we have noted in the past. We have seen the seraphim officers of the angelic order of battle, the ones that have six wings as their insignia of rank, who are the highest-ranking angels in that order of battle. There is the powerful angel of Revelation 5:2 who ranks as a king of arms in the angelic college of heralds. So we note that the angelic college of heralds had seraphs; but there are also ones in the order of battle as well. For example, the archangels, two army commanders, Michael and Gabriel are mentioned in the Bible; the book of Enoch mentions Rahael and Uriel. Michael commands the army of angels who defend Israel, therefore he is called the prince of Israel in Daniel 10:21. So Michael will be leading "army group A." Along with Michael is Gabriel who is not only an archangel and an army commander in the angelic order of battle but is mentioned as being in connection with the college of heralds as well. We have studied the angelic general staff, the 24 elders who are 24 staff officers. We have also noted the rank and file who are called the "hosts." The second army is "army group B" made up of the royal family of God or Church Age believers in their resurrection bodies which were received at the Rapture of the Church. Then there is "army group C" which is the family of God or the Old Testament saints and Tribulational martyrs in their resurrection bodies. We are talking about millions of creatures, angelic and human. The angelic creatures of army group A are already in whatever is equivalent to our resurrection body.

While Revelation chapters 5 and 12 discussed in detail the angelic order of battle, in this context we are actually dealing with the armies of heaven pertaining to mankind. So army group A, the elect angels in the angelic order of battle will not be under discussion. Army group B, the royal family, will be, as well as army group C, the Old Testament saints. The Church or the royal family returns with Christ, Colossians 3:4, "When Christ, our life, is revealed, then you also [we as believers] will be revealed with him in glory." So it is true that the army group A of heaven will be involved, Matthew 25:31, but the emphasis here is on the armies of regenerate Homo Sapien.

They are called armies for a special reason. Heaven has its system of protocol as we have noted in the past. Heaven has organisation, heaven has authority, and heaven has something else that is very important: heaven is going to be filled with creatures of unequal status. Some believers will have decorations and some will not. Everyone will have a resurrection body but there is no equality in the eternal future. Happiness does not depend on being equal. So these army groups indicate immediately inequality. Whenever you see the word "army" there are several things implied. The word is used in the Bible all the time but hasn't been translated right. The word "hosts" is armies. The Lord of hosts is the Lord of armies. Army means, first of all, discipline. Discipline means authority, there is a system of authority. Authority means protocol; protocol means rank; rank means inequality; inequality means happiness. When any military organisation has these things and they turn out to pass in review it is one of the most beautiful sights in the world. There is discipline and authority in heaven, and when Jesus Christ returns he returns with organisation — three army groups.

Verse 14 begins: "And the armies in heaven." Armies in peace time have a system for going from point A to point B. We then have an imperfect active indicative from the verb a)kolouqew which means to follow, "in heaven," the prepositional phrase e)n plus the locative o)uranoj. The active voice: the armies of heaven produce the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the eschatological reality of these armies coming to the earth with the Lord Jesus Christ. And it says, "[they] followed him," the dative singular indirect object from a)utoj, referring to the Lord Jesus Christ at the second advent.

Now the strange thing. Jesus Christ is coming back to end the greatest world war in history, the last one, but there will be no fighting as far as the armies are concerned. Only the Commander-in-Chief fights. All the fighting is accomplished by one person, Jesus Christ the God-Man, the Lord of the armies. Well, that is not unusual because the whole principle of the spiritual way of life is based on that concept, the battle is the Lords. Hence the principle of grace applies at the second advent just as at the first advent. At the first advent Jesus Christ did all the work. He received the imputation of our sins and He was judged on the cross. He took our place. At the second advent Jesus Christ does all the work, all the fighting, alone, without our help. But that is the way it has always been. Grace means God does the work. We need God's help; God does not need our help.

"And the armies of heaven followed him on white horses." What is the significance of this passage? First of all, believers have victory only by means of the grace policy of God and the protocol system. No believer is a winner apart from grace. Believers do nothing; Christ does the fighting, the battle is the Lord's. The only way to be a winner is through grace, and grace means God provides, God does the work. We simply latch on to what He has provided.

We are now ready for the third paragraph in this chapter, verses 15-21. It deals with the judgment feast which has to do with the last world war in history which will be the greatest world war of all time. We do not know when it will occur because we do not know when the resurrection or the Rapture of the Church will occur. But after the resurrection of the Church there will be a period of seven years which is the end of the dispensation of Israel. It will be the greatest period of concentrated power politics of all time. In that connection there will be the rise of a great Asian power. If the Rapture should occur sometime soon that Asian power could involve an amalgamation of China, Japan, and the various Asiatic peoples of south east Asia. Then there will be a great king of the north, and if the Rapture should take place anytime soon it is now comparable to the Russian communist empire. We have passages like Ezekiel chapters 38 & 39, Daniel chapter 11, and other passages like Joel chapters 2 & 3 which all add up that when that great world war comes, as inevitably it will as a part of the eschatological doctrine of scripture, then this king of the north will play a major part. Then, of course, there is the troubled Middle East. The Arabs cannot get together now but the time will come when Iraq and Iran and the Arab world will unite and form a very powerful Middle East sphere of influence, and they are called the king of the south in the eschatological passages of scripture. They will make a very major contribution to the last world war in history because they will stir up the trouble that leads to the Armageddon campaign. Then there is Western Europe. People are not aware of it today but when General Charles de Gaule made a decision to give up the North African empire he recognised that the only way that he could save France from a Russian takeover was to lose out there. He had to concentrate and he was a smart enough military man to realise that a concentration of forces was the only deterrent, and he gave up the North African empire. Now, today, France is about to become one of the greatest industrial powers in Europe. Germany, of course, is still in the picture but the point is that with the Common Market and with NATO, and with the rise of France again as a major power there is every possibility that we are getting closer than we think to the Tribulation. Of course, it could be a hundred years from now or it could be even longer. We just simply do not know when the Rapture will occur, but when it does there is going to be the king of the west and the revived Roman empire and there will then be all of the spheres of influence that will lead to the greatest world war in all of history.

We now note the end of the greatest war of history, verse 15, the termination of the last world war in history. We have seen the causes and some of the activities of this war. We have also noted that the second advent of Jesus Christ means that He is going to fight, even though He has available three army groups: the elect angels, the royal family of God, and all of the Tribulational martyrs and Old Testament saints in their resurrection bodies. But as we have seen, Jesus Christ fights alone, a perfect illustration of grace.

In the first part of verse 15 we have the concept of peace through military victory. Peace is not a real peace unless there is decisive victory. We begin with the connective use of the conjunction kai indicating the continuation of the subject. With it we have a nominative singular subject made up of two words: o)couj, meaning sharp, and with it the r(omphia, the famous broadsword of Thrace, "sharp sword." This is a long sword, not the maxiara which is used in the analogy, "The word of God is alive and powerful," and which is the Roman short sword. Whenever maxaira is used it talks about success in ranks because you are well trained with the maxaira. The maxaira speaks of balance, self-discipline, of having a solid base from which to function in your life, and that is why it is used with regard to the Word of God. But when it comes to great power and slaughter we have a different word used here, r(omphia, referring to the long Thracian broadsword which requires a man of considerable strength to use it. It was a barbarian sword and was used by the giant barbarian six and a half feet tall. The sword was often six feet long.

This sword is said to proceed from our Lord's mouth, the present middle indicative of the verb e)kporeuomai which means to go out or to proceed. The sword produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the future reality of a great slaughter by which our Lord Jesus Christ terminates the last world war of history. And it is said to come from His mouth, e)k plus the ablative of stoma. The mouth emphasises the fact that the deity of Christ is invisible at the second advent but His humanity is visible. "And a sharp broadsword comes out of his mouth." Here is the principle of freedom through military victory. The only thing organised evil can understand is force and punishment. Organised evil does not understand and is not impressed by words or by threats. Only force and punishment impresses organised evil. Therefore our Lord Jesus Christ from His perfect integrity, from the perfection of His deity and humanity, uses force. The last and greatest world war in history was terminated by the use of force. When integrity uses force it always functions professionally, and that is how it all ended. When integrity uses forces it is in no way related to murder, and the principle is: It takes violence to stop violence when the violence is initiated from arrogance and organised evil. Our Lord Jesus Christ returns the second time with the greatest violence the world has ever known and with the greatest slaughter of people the world has ever known. The same principle is found in the control of crime through capital punishment.

Next in our verse we have a purpose clause which begins with the conjunction i(na. This conjunction plus the subjunctive mood introduces a purpose clause. Behind this all is a purpose. I(na introduces a final clause in the Greek which expresses a purpose, an objective, and a goal. This is the purpose, objective and goal of our Lord Jesus Christ. We have following that prepositional phrase, e)n plus the instrumental from the intensive pronoun a)utoj, and it should be correctly translated "with it," "in order that with it." That is, with the sword that He uses, "he might strike and kill," the aorist active subjunctive of the verb patassw, and it means to strike, to hit, and to kill. Homer in the Iliad used this verb to knock on a door very loudly and therefore to strike a door. Eventually it was used to destroy a door, and from that Demosthenes and Polybius used the verb for a fatal blow, a blow that kills and destroys. The Septuagint, the Greek translation of the Old Testament, uses this verb patassw for the Hebrew verb makah, and this demonstrates the meaning of the verb because it is used for the act of Moses when he killed the taskmaster in Egypt, according to Exodus 2:12. So it means to kill with the maximum amount of violence, and the subject of the verb is the Lord Jesus Christ. So we translate: "And a sharp broadsword comes out of his mouth in order that he might strike the nations," the accusative plural direct object from e)qnoj, referring to Gentile nations. The aorist tense of patassw is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, it collects into one concept every time our Lord strikes one of the nations at the second advent. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb by the annihilation of the armies.

As we have noted, this war will be a war of spheres of influence, of power blocs. These are antichrist nations, they are involved in the greatest world war in history. The war will be fought in every part of the globe. With this we have the subjunctive mood indicating the purpose of our Lord Jesus Christ. Isaiah 34:6, "The sword of the Lord is filled with blood." That is the way wars are won. Apart from the slaughter and resultant military victory there would be no blessing and no perfect environment for the Millennium for when Jesus Christ returns to the earth He is going to introduce 1000 years of perfect environment, in the last dispensation of history, but you cannot introduce perfect environment without slaughtering the enemy. One of the keys to the perfect environment that follows is the fact that the enemy is going to be slaughtered in every part of the world so that people can see other people die and know that they cannot contend with the power of the Lord. For one thousand years after that there will be no wars. Victory in battle precedes the prosperity of a nation; victory in battle means the destruction of the enemy army.

The victory is won by our Lord Jesus Christ and the result is now given. We have next the sequential use of the conjunctive kai, which means "then," after military victory, after the slaughter of the nations, "then he," the nominative singular subject "he" is from a)utoj, the intensive pronoun used as a personal pronoun, and "he" refers to our Lord Jesus Christ, the God-Man, "shall govern," the future active indicative of the verb poimainw. Poimainw meant originally to shepherd, to rule, to govern. Here the future tense is a predictive future for an event which is expected to occur at the second advent and thereafter, after military victory.

Whenever you have indecisiveness in some area of the world you are constantly having warfare. This means that the lessons that are learned from decisive victory have disappeared and as they gradually move over the horizon of history then new ambitious, arrogant people replace them, and warfare of all kinds begin to develop.

When it says "he shall rule" it is a predictive future, it is an event that is expected to occur after military victory. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb after terminating the last world war in history. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of eschatological doctrine.

How does our Lord rule? When there is going to be perfect environment in the world there must be a policy, and the policy is given in the prepositional phrase that follows, e)n plus the instrumental of r(abdoj. R(abdoj is a sceptre. The Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written and a sceptre was simply a sign of rank. People did not wear their crowns all the time when they were rulers in the ancient world but they carried a badge of rank called a sceptre, a stick of some kind. What kind of a sceptre does our Lord have? We have an adjective, sidhreo, which means an iron scepter, "he shall rule them with an iron sceptre." An iron sceptre means an inflexible instrument, an instrument that was consolidated into some form and remained that way. The iron sceptre then stands for the laws of divine establishment, category #1 truth in the Bible, the laws of divine establishment to guarantee freedom for all. The laws of divine establishment recognise the importance of privacy and they interpret freedom in terms of privacy. You cannot have freedom unless you have privacy. To have privacy two things must be sacred: your life and your property. The sacredness of life and property are necessary for privacy; privacy is necessary for freedom. Then you must have one other thing. When you have freedom you must also have a system for the maintenance of freedom, and that is authority. If you have freedom without authority you have anarchy; if you have authority without freedom you have tyranny. So you can have tyranny or anarchy. There must be a balance and the laws of divine establishment recognise that balance. Therefore the ruling with the rod of iron refers to the authority of our Lord Jesus Christ, the tremendous system of jurisprudence which will exist throughout the earth; a perfect system of laws to process and to administer every violation to privacy or property and life. This is only one of many blessings because it says in Psalm 46:9 — "He makes wars to cease to the ends of the earth," that is because of the great slaughter, "He breaks the bow and cuts the spear in two; he burns the chariot with fire." Isaiah 2:4, "And he will judge between nations, in fact he will render decisions for many people; and they will therefore hammer their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks. Nation will not lift up sword against nation, and never again will they learn war." That will be the result of the decisive victory of our Lord at the second advent.

This fulfills, therefore, a prophecy which is found in Isaiah 9:6,7, "For a child is born to us, and a son will be given to us." The word "child" refers to the humanity of Christ coming from the virgin birth. The "son" refers to Jesus Christ as eternal God, coequal with the Father and the Holy Spirit. So it refers to the first advent of Christ. The first advent of Christ could not accomplish these things because it was necessary to do something else. The omniscience of God programmed into the computer of divine decrees a special chip, and on that chip are all the sins of the world since human history began down to the end of time. All of those sins were actually in that chip so that when Jesus Christ came the first time He had to be true humanity, and His true humanity functioned in the prototype divine dynasphere so that He would get to the cross the way Adam was created — perfect. Adam was created perfect; Jesus Christ arrived at the cross perfect. At the cross God the Father had to set aside His love for God the Son and He functioned under His justice. The justice of God the Father programmed out of the computer all of those sins and imputed them all to Christ on the cross, and there they were judged. Having accomplished this so great salvation and having broken the back of Satan by His saving work on the cross Jesus Christ died, rose again, and is now seated at the right hand of the Father while a royal family for his third royal warrant is being formed, the royal family of the Church Age. Jesus Christ had to solve the sin problem and he did that on the cross. Now, when He returns the second time He is going to return with that same royal family which is formed during the Church Age. The royal family will return with our Lord Jesus Christ at the second advent, and after the annihilation of the enemy and the end of the last great world war of history, then He will rule for a thousand years with an iron sceptre. In that rule of the iron sceptre you will have a perfect function of the laws of divine establishment plus perfect jurisprudence operating on the earth. All of that is brought out when it says in the middle of Isaiah 9:6, "And the government [of the world] will be on his shoulders [that is second advent]; furthermore his name will be called Wonderful Counselor [the perfect judge]," our Lord Jesus Christ will judge or have a system of administration of law that will be perfect, "Mighty Hero," corrected translation from the Hebrew referring to the fact that he slaughtered the enemy and ended the last great world war of history, "the Father of Eternity," Jesus Christ is the saviour of all who believe in Him during the Millennium and He will be the Father of eternal life for all the citizens who receive Christ as saviour during the Millennium, "Prince of Peace [or prosperity]," as a result of slaughtering the enemy in the last world war both peace and prosperity will exist for the last 1000 years of history, called the Millennium.

Verse 7, "There will be no end to the increase of his government or of world peace, on the throne of David and over his kingdom, to establish it and uphold it," He will not only rule the world but He will fulfill the unconditional covenants to Israel, mentioned here as the Davidic covenant under the phrase throne of David. Note how all of this is accomplished. It is not accomplished through love, it is accomplished through integrity, "with justice and righteousness from then [the Millennial reign of Christ] on and forevermore [the eternal rule of Christ]," and how did he establish His rule? By military victory. The last phrase of this verse says, "The zeal of the Lord of the armies will accomplish this." He will accomplish it through military victory.

Notice the last phrase of Revelation 19:15. How does He rule the nations with an iron sceptre? "and [prior to this] he treads down the winepress of the wine of the wrath, even the anger of God the omnipotent one." There is a series of five different genitives in the exegesis in the description. First of all we have the descriptive genitives of o)inoj, meaning of the wine. Then the subjective genitive of qumoj meaning "of the wrath." Then the genitive of apposition from o)rgħ meaning "even the anger." Then the possessive genitive of qeoj, "of God," and finally, the appositional genitive "the omnipotent one."

What does it all mean? The winepress was used in the first stage of manufacturing wine after the harvest from the vineyard. Each vineyard possessed a winepress to extract the juice of the grape for the distillation process. The juice of the grape was extracted by trampling the grapes. The juice of the grapes filled the press, stained the robes of the workers, and became a euphemism for the slaughter or annihilation of the enemy army in the field of battle. Then when it says who is going to do this, "God the omnipotent one," that is a reference to Jesus Christ, for the word for omnipotent one is pantokratwr which means the all-powerful ruler. Satan rules the world at the present time and he rules the world through the kosmokratwr, demon rulers, Ephesians 6. So there are two references in this verse to the annihilation of the armies of the antichrist, the great slaughter which precedes the Millennial reign of Christ.

Principle: it takes virtuous violence, holy violence, the violence of integrity to neutralise and destroy the violence of evil, the violence of arrogance. No country can survive the loss of its integrity. Integrity is what makes a nation great.

Our Lord assumes the role of military establishment at the second advent in order to destroy the violence of arrogance and evil. There are two legitimate systems of violence which represent establishment doctrine: the professional function of the military establishment and the professional function of law enforcement. The principle of these two systems is the doctrine of fighting violence with violence to end violence, the same concept as freedom through military victory. The 1000 years of world peace directly related to the military victory of our Lord Jesus Christ is the termination of the last world war in history.

Note that believers have a perfect seat for watching our Lord win the victory. They are mounted in comfortable saddles secure in our Lord's victory. Under the grace policy believers go along for the ride just as believers living inside the divine dynasphere are securely mounted on the white horse of victory. Today, in bodies of corruption, our mount is the divine dynasphere; tomorrow in resurrection bodies we will come back with our Lord Jesus Christ mounted on the white horse.

1 John 5:4,5 describes the winner, "For whoever is born from God overcomes the world; and this is the victory that overcomes the world, our faith [not works, faith]. And who is the one who overcomes the world, but he that believes that Jesus is the Son of God?" Faith is the key; faith is the pattern. We are saved by faith, we walk by faith, "For by faith we stand," says Paul to the Corinthians.

So this victory is celebrated when believers in resurrection bodies mounted on white horses of victory return with Christ at the second advent.

Now we note the uniform of the army groups in this passage. We have the perfect passive participle from the verb e)nduw, "and they were clothed." There is no "and" here in the Greek but this is a circumstantial participle and to translate a circumstantial participle it is legitimate to put it in the normal verb form with the conjunction "and." The perfect tense is a dramatic perfect which is a rhetorical use of the intensive perfect, it is used for completed action with the existing status quo described in a vivid and realistic way. The completed action is the ultimate sanctification of the believer in a resurrection body: Church Age believers who receive their resurrection bodies at the Rapture plus Old Testament believers and Tribulational martyrs who receive their resurrection bodies at the second advent. Therefore their uniform is the uniform of ultimate sanctification. The passive voice: two categories of believers receive the action of the verb — army group B, the royal family at the Rapture; army group C, the family of God and/or Old Testament saints and Tribulational martyrs at the second advent. Just before Christ returns there is a resurrection of all the Old Testament saints and Tribulational martyrs. The participle is circumstantial which can be translated with the conjunction "and," and the finite construction of the verb.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object made up of three words. First of all, a very fascinating noun, bussinoj which has the concept of white, white in the sense of the resurrection body here. It is not the usual word for white which has to do with the concept of the uniform of glory. This is the word for linen, and with it leukoj, "white linen." Sometimes the word leukoj alone refers to the uniform of glory; here it refers to everyone's resurrection body. The Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written and linen was considered to be one of the most valuable of all garments. The resurrection body is the most valuable garment we will ever know. With it we have an adjective kaqaroj referring to the fact that we are now in a state of purity. In the resurrection body which we will have for all eternity there will never again be any sinning or any failure of any kind.

"and they were clothed with fine linen [ultimate sanctification], white [resurrection body] and pure [the ultimate sanctification of the eternal state]."

That brings up the question: What is sanctification? Sanctification is a very technical term. Unfortunately some technical terms get distorted. In theology it is a very good word. It is a technical theological word for the status of the believer in the three phases of the plan of God. Phase one of the plan of God is salvation and that takes place in an instant of time. The second phase is the believer in time, and the third phase is the believer in eternity. Sanctification as a word means to set apart as sacred, or set apart as consecrated to God. Therefore sanctification is a priestly term, it ties the Church Age believer into God's grace contract forever. The resurrection, ascension and session of our Lord Jesus Christ abrogated the old contract which we call the Mosaic law and simultaneously interrupted the dispensation of Israel. The interruption of the Jewish dispensation was caused by our Lord's new battlefield royalty. Our Lord, after His ascension and session was given His third title of royalty but He was minus a royal family. So the Age of Israel came to a halt and we now have the Church Age and the calling out of the royal family of God. Certain privileges occur here that have never existed before, like the baptism of the Spirit, the sealing ministry of the Spirit, God the Holy Spirit regenerated Old Testament saints but four ministries of the Holy Spirit have been added, the whole protocol system has been added. For the first time in history every believer is a priest, every believer is an ambassador, every believer has two royal warrants. There are many unique things about the Church Age and they all have to do with the fact that this is the dispensation of the royal family of God. Therefore we have a new contract or new covenant to the Church. It authorises a royal family, a royal priesthood consecrated under three stages of sanctification. Sanctification was the ministry of the priest. In the past the priest carried on the functions of sanctification. The priest offered the animal sacrifices, the priest went into the holy place and performed certain functions. The priest went through certain rituals on certain holy days such as the day of atonement. Sanctification means that God has a purpose for every one of us now because every believer is a priest representing himself to God.

In the framework of our royal priesthood there are three categories of sanctification. The etymology of sanctification is important because it says in John 6:69, "And we have believed, in fact we have come to know that you are the Holy One come from God." This is a young man speaking with regard to Jesus Christ, and just as we have seen Jesus Christ as o(Logo(tou Qeou now we have almost a similar phrase, only this time it o(a(gio(tou Qeou. Jesus Christ is called the Holy One of God and that is where sanctification originates, it comes from this word a(gio(which is translated "holy." The word is used to describe technically the royal family of God. Jesus Christ is the Holy One from God but when Jesus Christ ascended into heaven he was minus a royal family. Therefore the Church Age is the calling out of the royal family, and one of the titles for people in the royal family is saint. Every believer is a saint as of the moment they accept Jesus Christ as saviour. Saint, therefore, becomes synonymous with the royal family of God in contrast to believers in other dispensations who are simply known as family of God. This means quality possessed by persons who approach God. If there ever was a word described the meaning of saint this is it, quality. It means that God gave you 37 things at salvation, that is quality, not experiential quality. The issue here is that the moment that you believed in Christ God the Holy Spirit entered you into union with Christ, the baptism of the Spirit. It means that the moment you accepted Christ as saviour you became royal family. A saint is a believer who is different from all other believers of all other dispensations because he is a member of the royal family of God. Sanctification means that God has a purpose for your life all the way from salvation to eternity.

There are certain words that are used. The first is a(gioj. That means that you are consecrated to God. God has a plan for your life; God has a system for your life. With this there is another word very closely related to it, a(giothj which is translated holiness, which means the status quo of the believer as royal family of God. It describes the principle by which all believers are related to the integrity of God. Then there are several words that are translated the same. The first of these is a(giosunh, one of several words translated "sanctification." It emphasises the first blessing to flow through the grace pipeline from the integrity of God. It means the possession of divine righteousness, one half of God's holiness or perfect integrity. It describes the relationship between the royal family of believers and the integrity of God in this dispensation. There is one other noun, a(giosmoj, which means holiness, consecration, sanctification, and it refers to the state of being made holy and is used for the three categories of sanctification. There is also a verb which generally means to sanctify, a(giazw.

There are agents in sanctification. Phase one sanctification is salvation, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." So the agent who provided phase one sanctification is Jesus Christ. Hebrews 10:9, "then [at that time, in the cradle] he [Jesus Christ said [in the past with the result that it stands spoken forever], 'Behold, I have arrived to accomplish your plan [purpose]'. He has abrogated the first covenant, the law, in order that he might establish the second .

Verse 10 adds, "By means of which will [purpose, design] we have been sanctified [in the past, salvation] with the result that we remain consecrated to God forever through the offering of the body of Christ at one time [on the cross]."

Verse 14, "By means of one offering [the work of Christ on the cross] he has perfected for all time the ones being sanctified."

So in phase one sanctification Jesus Christ is the one who accomplished it. We do not accomplish sanctification, Christ accomplishes it. We simply accept it by faith.

Next we have, after salvation, two agents in phase two. God the Holy Spirit, Romans 15:16, "To be a minister of Christ Jesus to the Gentiles, ministering as the priest the gospel of God, that my offering of the Gentiles might be acceptable, sanctified by the Holy Spirit.

2 Thessalonians 2:13, "But we should always give thanks to God for you, brethren beloved by the Lord, because the God has chosen you from the beginning for salvation through sanctification by the Spirit by faith in doctrine."

John 17:17, "Sanctify them by means of doctrine; your word is doctrine."

The next three verses teach the lesson related to the second advent that you cannot depend upon people for your happiness. To the extent that you depend upon people to make you happy to that extent you are going to be miserable all of your life. People were not designed to make other people happy. You can be happy with people if you already have happiness but the idea that you depend upon people for happiness is always a disaster. The second advent brings out many concepts of eschatological doctrine but this passage has some very practical aspects. Happiness depends upon your relationship to the plan of God as a believer; happiness depends upon your cognisance of the protocol system and functioning in it. Happiness depends entirely on who and what the Lord is. As the scripture says, "Cursed is the man that trusteth in man and maketh flesh his arm." If you depend on people for happiness you are trusting in man, if you are trying to use people for your happiness you are making flesh your arm. There is absolutely no way that people will ever make you happy if you depend on them for happiness. If you do not depend on them for happiness and you find your happiness in God's plan then you are going to have a most wonderful relationship with people. Love will have significance in all of its human categories. But these are not designed to make you happy, they are really designed for happy people. The social life of unhappy people is a rat race and no matter how many VIPs you contact or how many people of success or prominence or fame you know, name dropping is a sign of unhappiness and instability, and you will never find happiness from famous people. As a matter of fact famous people are more insecure than infamous people, than the average man in the street. The higher you go in life the greater become your insecurities and your instabilities apart from finding your happiness and your blessing in the Lord.

Verse 16 does not start with unhappiness in depending upon people, it starts with the royal title of our Lord Jesus Christ at the second advent. But the royal title itself reminds us of the fact that only in the Lord is there happiness both in time and in eternity. Happy people are wonderful to know. Happy people who find their happiness in the Lord are wonderful to be with and are wonderful to love and to be loved by them. Unhappy people are a pain in the neck.

In verse 16 we simply have, "Furthermore he has a royal title which has been written on his robe [His military tunic] and on his thigh," that is the corrected translation. The title on His tunic has been customary for 2000 years. It identifies the rider of the white horse by His third royal warrant, His battlefield royalty of our Lord Jesus Christ. The title on His thigh is a little different, it goes back to an ancient custom of engraving one's name or title as an artist. Of course, the Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written. To understand the title on His thigh we have to thank Cicero. Cicero once remarked about a beautiful statue of Apollo on the thigh of which was the name of Myron engraved in tiny letters of silver. Myron was one of the great sculptors of all time and he lived in the fifth century BC. Always Myron in very small letters in silver actually inscribed his name on the thigh of his statues, the purpose being that any time you were successful or any time you were royalty you put that down in two different places in the ancient world. So the Bible being interpreted in the time in which it was written this refers to the battlefield title of our Lord Jesus Christ. Written on His tunic or military robe referring to His tactical victory of the second advent; the same royal title written on the thigh indicates that our Lord Jesus Christ is the author of the dispensation of the Millennial kingdom — perfect environment on earth for 1000 years. The fact that he has these titles, of course, becomes extremely important as far as where we are putting our trust and what is the source of our happiness. The answer to the next two verses is found here. If your happiness is not anchored in the person of Christ then you have no true happiness. You can be stimulated and have your ups and have your downs, but being up and being down is not being happy. Being up means that you are depending upon overt stimuli of one source or another, one of which is people. Too many born again believers are simply depending on some person to make them happy. Happiness does not come in that way.

Then we have the revelation of the royal title, "King over kings." The translation comes from the objective genitive of the noun basileuj which occurs twice. The objective genitive should be translated "King over kings," and, of course, "Lord over lords," the nominative of basileuj followed by the objective of basileuj.

The entire verse simply sounds like this: "Furthermore he has a royal title which has been written on his robe and on his thigh, KING OVER KING [a reference to our Lord's sovereignty over all human rulers], AND LORD OVER LORDS [our Lord's sovereignty over all angelic rulers, both fallen angels and elect angels." The Bible indicates our Lord's total victory in both phases of the angelic conflict: our Lord's victory in the prehistoric phase as well as in the historical phase. Our Lord has additional titles related to the angelic conflict: His title of Angel of the Lord, which makes Him the head of the angelic college of heralds, and His title Lord of the armies, which means He is the ruler over the angelic order of battle.

Verse 17, we have the invitation to the judgment feast. We have this time a sequential conjunction kai which is translated "Then." Along with this we have the usual introduction to the vision, "The I saw one angel." The words "one angel" probably means "unique" and it refers to the seraph rank king of arms from the angelic college of heralds. He is said to be standing, the perfect passive participle of the verb i(stemi). The perfect tense is an intensive perfect in which special attention is directed to the results of the action, therefore the existing result is intensified. This is an emphatic method for presenting a fact or condition in the Koine Greek. The English language has no equivalent to the idiom and it is generally translated by the English present, though not always. The active voice: the king of arms of the angelic college of heralds produces the action and he is said to be standing not in the sun but in the sunlight, a reference to the fact that the supernatural darkness which occurs at the second advent in the final phase of the Armageddon campaign is now replaced by sunshine. Hence, the war is over. The enemy has been annihilated and defeated. And in our Lord's deliverance in the Middle east campaign, known as the Armageddon campaign, Jesus Christ destroyed the enemy armies. In this great slaughter of the enemies a feast is being prepared for the vultures of Palestine. The significance of standing in the sunlight is the fact that the supernatural darkness of the second advent has been removed and now we can see the light at the end of the tunnel. The carrion birds can find the rotting carcasses of invading armies which signifies the end of the last world war in history.

"Then I saw one angel standing in the sunlight; and he shouted with a loud voice." This phrase introduces the king of arms, the highest ranking angelic herald, and he is going to invite birds to a feast. We have already seen the great banquet to which we are invited in the future, the wedding banquet of the Lamb. This is the second of the two banquets in this chapter. The once-great armies that invaded the Middle East, the armies of the great spheres of influence, are now carcasses. The manner in which the mandate was communicated to the vultures is unknown but the gist of it has been translated into human language for our edification.

Why have we spent a relatively unusual amount of time talking about corpses, about putrefying flesh, about dead soldiers scattered throughout the earth? The answer is because great armies are fighting for wrong causes at the end of the Tribulation, and great armies fighting for wrong causes are destroyed. The reason they are fighting for wrong causes is because they have related to their esprit de corpse arrogance. Arrogance destroys the great virtue in esprit de corpse and now makes them proper food for the vultures. The vultures profit more than anyone else from the last great world war. So the first lesson for the banquet for the vultures is the fact that arrogant and unthinking men fight for wrong causes. The wrong cause here is the attempt to destroy the Jewish nation in the Middle East campaign, and the attempt to destroy the plan of God for planet earth. Anti-Semitism is a part of that cause and is sponsored by Satan himself. The personnel of armies dedicated to the annihilation of the Jews became rations for the vultures. This means that their arrogant and evil thinking is not even on a level with that of the vulture. The armies have invaded Israel like vultures and consequently they become food for the vultures. Glory becomes gory. The invading armies in an evil cause become a feed for the vultures in a good cause. The vultures in the Millennium are going to be very, very healthy!

The guest list for the judgment seat follows, all the birds that fly in midair. And here is the invitation: "Come and gather to the great feast [banquet] from the God." It is called a great banquet because the vultures and the other carrion birds are going to have plenty to eat for a long time. "The God" here refers to the Lord Jesus Christ, the manifest person of the Trinity, as taught in John 1:18; 6:46; 1 Timothy 6:16; 1 John 4:12.

Verse 18, the purpose clause or the finale of the divine judgment. The principle that comes out of it: You cannot depend upon human beings for happiness. This second banquet demonstrates a number of principles:

1. Jesus Christ controls history.
2. Jesus Christ is the judge of history.
3. Jesus Christ demonstrates grace in the administration of judgment.
4. You cannot depend upon famous people, great people, or any people for happiness.

We now begin to see some of the applications from this buzzard feast. It is no accident that God the Holy Spirit has selected certain categories on whom people depend for their happiness. The banquet table is not just Palestine, the banquet table is the entire earth. The banquet for the vultures is the finale for judgment by death.

In order that we might understand that this is a judgment we have the purpose clause, the conjunction i(na with the aorist active subjunctive of e)sqiw, "in order that you may eat." The point is, there will be no honourable burial of the dead. These dead have fought on the wrong side. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, it takes the banquet of the vultures, the judgment feast of carrion eating birds, and gathers them up into one entirety, The active voice: the vultures produce the action of the verb throughout the world where the corpses from the judgment of our Lord at the second advent occur. Remember that "killed in action" covers planet earth for all of these armies. To be an unbeliever and to be under the Satanic influence of the cosmic system at the end of the Tribulation means becoming a victim of history. First, miserably alive under the category of judgment by pain, then horribly dead, a putrefying corpse on a forgotten battlefield being devoured by vultures and finally spending eternity in the lake of fire. That certainly doesn't spell happiness for those involved. We have seen, however, that they had a grace opportunity. Judgment by pain is crisis evangelism prior to the Armageddon campaign, the word war of the devil's desperation. Every soldier executed by our Lord Jesus Christ at the second advent was given a final call through crisis evangelism. Then judgment by death, our Lord's return killed millions and millions of troops fighting in the field. Finally judgment for eternity, the unbeliever stands before the great white throne.

This is the finale of the last world war and those who reject Christ as saviour are on the wrong side of history. There is nothing worse than being on the wrong side of history. The profile of those who are on the wrong side of history includes the fact that they had God-consciousness, they had normal evangelism, they had crisis evangelism, and they were still negative. Those who came up negative at every opportunity are subjected to the following judgments. First of all, being on the wrong side of history they are dependent upon people for happiness. That is self-induced misery. Then they had judgment by pain to give them another chance at objectivity and listening to the gospel. Then they had judgment by death, clearing the decks for action for the perfect environment of the Millennium. Finally, they have eternal judgment in the lake of fire. The transition between judgment by death and eternal judgment finds the vultures hard at work having a great banquet on all the battlefields of planet earth. The armies are composed of those who resisted the grace of God and were caught up in the cosmic system.

Now we have a roll call, and in this roll call of judgment by death we have almost every category of person on whom people depend for happiness. But these people on whom people depend for happiness were miserable in themselves. We notice first an accusative plural direct object from sarc with a descriptive genitive plural from basileuj, referring to world rulers at the time of the second advent. These kings were rulers who had attained the highest political rank and distinction in history at that time. Being rulers they have a number of things. Any ruler at any time in history has power, he also has wealth, fame. That goes with being a ruler. They also have control, maximum opportunity for gratification of every lust and every ambition in life. Ordinarily one thinks of rulers as having great security in life, but if there is anything that rulers do not have it is security. When faced with divine judgment by death these rulers have no security. They are casualties to their own negative volition and people associated with them can have no greater security than they have, and even though people might be the friends of these rulers and dependent upon these kings for happiness, all that they are going to get out of it is the misery and unhappiness of great insecurity. For the kings are the most insecure of all. They saw how easy it was to gain their power; they also know how easy it is to lose that power. These kings include those we have noted: the king of the north, the kings of the east, the king of the south and the king of the west. It would also include other rulers throughout the earth.

What is the principle? A lot of people depend upon the rulers whom they know personally for happiness. They depend upon them as influence peddlers, they depend upon them in order to gain a little slice of the wealth, to gain a little recognition, in order to move up into what they think is a better society. These rulers make wrong decisions personally and in the administration of their foreign and domestic policies. They are very insecure. Power is useless unless one has the capacity for power, and these rulers in the Tribulation do not even have the capacity for power. Capacity for power comes from truth, or categorical doctrine which they have rejected. In essence, they have rejected three categories of Bible doctrine: the laws of divine establishment which would give them a sense of responsibility and leadership; the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ which would provide the beginning of happiness through eternal salvation; the doctrine for believers and the responsibility to God and to man which is mandated in the Word of God. Hence, these kings and rulers hold maximum power and authority but as people they are losers, and everyone who depends on them inevitably by association becomes a loser. So we have the principle by association. Losers have no capacity for power or wisdom or its proper use, and through bad decisions these rulers have lost control of their personal lives and the historical situation at the end of the Tribulation. Being negative toward truth or doctrine these kings have no capacity for life, no capacity for happiness, and having no capacity for happiness they are simply going to make those who depend on them for happiness very unhappy. Hence, they demonstrate the principle that great human power, great human success, which most people are very ambitious to achieve, is the basis for the greatest insecurity and the greatest unhappiness in life. Jesus Christ controls history and no attainment of wealth, power or success is meaningful unless one has personally believed in Christ for salvation and has daily fellowship with Him through life inside the divine dynasphere. And while those with maximum human power become a feast for the vultures the believers in the Lord Jesus Christ at the second advent are enjoying the great party, the wedding banquet of the Lamb. A good decision today brings great happiness tomorrow. Your good decision today is to take in doctrine today and take in doctrine tomorrow.

Next we have a second category, field marshals and generals. Again we have the word sarc for corpses, and also we have a descriptive genitive from xiliarxoj. A xiliarxoj is supposed to be a person who commands a thousand men but actually it is for anyone who commands more than a thousand men. So we simply translate it "top brass" or the corpses of general officers and field marshals. So next to the rulers of nations the greatest authority on earth during the last world war of history at the end of the Tribulation are the field marshals, general officers. There is no safety nor security in attaining the highest military rank. The implication is that this rank has no real leadership, being influenced by the degeneracy which exists during the last half of the Tribulation. That is not necessarily true in every case but one thing is true, if you are in the military and you are ambitious to attain the highest rank, and you think you are going to be happy as a general officer, etc., success in the military or any other profession is not going to make you happy.

The next category is the officer corps, that is, below the rank of general. This time we have again the word for corps and with it the noun i)sxuroj which means power or rank, used in a technical sense here, and it refers to company grade and field grade officers of the various nations in that last world war of history. They all had one thing in common: they were negative toward the truth, they were unbelievers, and their volition at each stage of opportunity rejected Christ and therefore they failed to avail themselves of the only hope they had, and as a result, they are the corpses strewn throughout the world. They are all commanding units designed to execute the mandates of Satan in the last world war of history. All had experienced judgment by pain, and all experienced judgment by death.

The next, of course, is the mechanised army. Mechanisation does not protect an army from destruction. We have here "the corpses of horses, and of those mounted on them," that is their riders. In this case, of course, we are talking about mechanised armies today. The Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written and the only mechanisation was the cavalry and the chariot at the time of writing. Military effectiveness and victory depends upon the born-again Jewish soldiers whom we have already noted in the Armageddon campaign and they are survivors, along with other believers involved in the world wars.

The fifth category are the combat service support groups, and they are dead too. The word "free," e)leuqeroj here, refers to volunteers; the word douloj, translated "slaves," refers to draftees. The word "small," mikroj, refers to enlisted personnel, and the word "great, megaj, refers to the officer corps.

This fulfills the second advent prophecy of Matthew 24:27-28, "For just as the lightning comes from the east, and flashes to the west, so shall the coming of the Son of Man be. Wherever the corpses are located, there the vultures will gather."

Corrected translation of verse 18: "In order that you [the vultures] may eat the corpses of kings, the corpses of general officers, the corpses of the mighty, both the corpses of horses and their riders, in fact the corpses of all combat service support organisations, both volunteers and draftees, both enlisted personnel and officer corps." Notice the translation takes cognisance of modern terminology for ancient functions.

Jesus Christ completely annihilates every military category in every army of antiChrist involved in the last world war of history. But the greatest application to us belongs not just to the military, whose categories are mentioned exclusively here because of this war, but it belongs to all of us today because some of us, perhaps all of us, have at some time or another placed the entire happiness of our lives in the hands of another person, so that that person has the power to make us happy, that person has the power to make us unhappy, that person has the influence over our life. This is a terrible trap, for your relationships with people under those conditions can only make you unhappy. The only secret to happiness is to have the happiness before you meet these people to whom you are attracted, the people that you love, the people that you admire. There is only one way to be happy when you are going up or you are going down, and that happiness depends on Bible doctrine.

As a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ you must find your happiness in God's protocol system. There is no happiness in love, sex, or marriage. If marriage is your source of happiness then you are going to be miserable and off balance all of your life. This does not imply that there is anything wrong with marriage, it is a divine institution, but it does imply that people who enter marriage must bring their happiness with them. The same thing can be said for another category: wealth and prosperity. If you come into wealth, success and prosperity and you do not have capacity for happiness, if you do not bring your happiness with you, these things will not bring you happiness as such.

Your happiness must come from a greater source and therefore the existence of God's protocol system, God's plan for your life, the residence, function, momentum inside the divine dynasphere. The key, of course, is Bible doctrine, your daily perception of Bible doctrine as a believer. Our Lord Jesus Christ in the first advent was the pioneer, the perfect pattern of happiness in the original protocol system. In that most dramatic moment of history our Lord Jesus Christ came to the cross and was crucified as a result of seven trials. All seven trials violated the jurisprudence of both Israel and the Roman empire. These two systems met in the seven trials of our Lord Jesus Christ and they malfunctioned. But the malfunction became the benefit of the entire human race, "all things working together for good," for out of it came our so great salvation. In the most dramatic moment of history, in that six hours when our Lord was hanging on the cross bearing our sins, he spoke seven times, giving us the key to happiness and the answer to this riddle of success not bringing happiness.

Luke 23:32-34, we have several of our Lord's expressions. In this passage we see that he was not crucified alone, there was a criminal crucified on each side of Him. These men had been tried by Roman law and had been found guilty. Roman law had three systems of capital punishment. For the aristocrats, the senators or those of Patrician background, they were permitted to get into a tub of hot water and slit their wrists. Roman citizens in general were decapitated. Then, the third category was for non-Romans, and that was crucifixion.

All of the enemies of Rome, anyone who was not a Roman citizens, was crucified. Our Lord Jesus Christ as the King of Israel was not a Roman citizen and as such He was put on the cross.

Verse 32, "And two others also, who were criminals, were being led away to be put to death with him."

Verse 33, "And when they came to that place called The Skull, there they crucified him and the criminals, one on his right hand and one on his left."

Verse 34, "Now Jesus kept saying," the first comment that He made on the cross was one that indicated the fact that He had lived in His humanity inside the protocol divine dynasphere. The protocol of heaven provided for the humanity of Christ this marvelous system, the first Christmas present. At the point of the virgin birth our Lord Jesus Christ was given a protocol system. As eternal God He doesn't need support but as true humanity He needed to be sustained during His first advent. This first comment is present linear aktionsart, He kept saying it. He said: "Father forgive them; for they do not know what they are doing." He repeated this many times. So the first category of remarks has to do with the expression of His functional virtue. He had perfect virtue and perfect virtue means perfect happiness. The achievement of virtue is the only source of true happiness in life. Therefore virtue means humility directed toward authority, motivational virtue directed toward God, functional virtue directed toward mankind. For example, Jesus Christ had perfect love for God the Father. That is motivational virtue. That was a personal love. The only personal love that has virtue is personal love for God. Functional virtue was impersonal love toward all mankind. Here, of course, the emphasis is on the integrity of the subject. Jesus Christ could love His persecutors, He could love the judges who failed in the function of jurisprudence, he could fulfill every concept of impersonal love. Our Lord Jesus Christ pioneered the system of perfect happiness in life, a happiness you can have regardless of circumstances. Our Lord's perfect expression of integrity is given when He said, "Father forgive them; for they do not know what they are doing." They were ridiculing Him, they were despising Him, they were making fun of Him, they were doing everything to express their antagonism toward Him. They were implacable but He loved them, they were absolutely filled with hatred but He returned the favour with love. He was not disturbed by their negative attitude. It was a demonstration of perfect happiness. Jesus Christ had perfect happiness without any of the things that we regard as being important in happiness. So His impersonal love inside the prototype divine dynasphere is manifest in the expression of His first statement on the cross. This phrase was uttered while He was beginning to endure physical pain.

The second statement on the cross is also found in this chapter, in verse 39, where it says, "And one of the criminals who hung there hurled insults at Him, saying, 'Are you not the Messiah? Save yourself and us!'" This is the manifestation of the criminal status. He was in the cosmic system, a place of great arrogance. While cosmic one was his mental attitude arrogance it interlocked with gate seven of cosmic one, which is criminal arrogance. All criminals are arrogant. The other criminal in verse 40 had a different attitude by this time. He was much more observant, he was objective. The criminal who rejected our Lord was subjective in the cosmic system, but this man under the pressure of his dying had a surge of objectivity. "But the other [criminal] answered, and rebuked him, saying, 'Do you not fear God, since you are under the same sentence of condemnation?' " And then he adds in verse 41, "And we indeed justly, for we are receiving what we deserve for our deeds; but this one has nothing wrong." He recognised the perfection of our Lord Jesus Christ, and therefore he began to concentrate on our Lord and "he kept on repeating," says verse 42, "Jesus, remember me when you come in your kingdom!" And the Lord, of course, gave him an answer, an answer that once again expressed the perfect stability, the perfect happiness of our Lord. "And he replied to him, 'Truly I say to you, today you will be with me in Paradise.'" The criminal at that moment had expressed his faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. He is said, therefore, to be with our Lord in Paradise. When our Lord died physically His soul went to Paradise, the place where all of the Old Testament saints resided until the resurrection. His body went into the tomb, His human spirit went into the presence of the Father. When this criminal expressed, even though he was under the penalty of death, these words he had personally believed in the Lord Jesus Christ. All of his sins, all of his evil, all of his past were forgiven at that moment when he believed in the Lord. He will be in the first resurrection but the other criminal is going to be in the second resurrection, the judgment. So two criminals were crucified. One became a believer; one remained an unbeliever. And so the human race is separated by attitude toward Jesus Christ.

The third statement of our Lord on the cross is found in John 19:25. Happy people have integrity, they are thoughtful of others, they have constructed into their souls that protocol system of happiness that guarantees stability in life. Happy people take their happiness with them. In John 19:25 even though our Lord is in great pain He is still thoughtful of loved ones. There was standing there the mother of His humanity. In verse 26, "When Jesus saw his mother, and the disciple whom he loved [John] nearby, he said to his mother, 'Woman [gunh], behold, your son!' " Then in verse 27, "He said to the disciple, 'Behold, your mother!' And from that hour the disciple took her into his own household." From that time until she died she was under the care of the apostle John.

The fourth expression is that of spiritual death and it is found in Matthew 27:45, "Now from the sixth hour [noon] darkness fell on all the land until the ninth hour [3pm]." So from noon until three o'clock in the afternoon our Lord Jesus Christ was constantly receiving the imputation of every sin in the history of the human race. "And about the ninth hour Jesus uttered a cry with a loud voice, saying, 'Eli, Eli, Lama Sabachthani?' that is, 'My God, My God, why have you forsaken me?' " The forsaking of our Lord Jesus Christ is very simple. God the Father loved God the Son with an eternal love, but when Jesus Christ became true humanity so He could bear our sins in His own body on the tree, then love had to be set aside and the justice of God had to function. Justice supersedes love in the provision of our so great salvation. The justice of God the Father fed out of the computer of divine decrees all the sins of the history of the human race. So when our Lord was using the vocative, "My God", He was addressing God the Father who was imputing our sins to Him and judging every one of them. The courtroom in which all human sin was judged was the cross and it took three hours for this to occur. In judging our sins in the body of Christ on the cross the Father and the Holy Spirit had to forsake Him. "He who knew no sin was made sin for us that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him."

In John 19:28 we have the expression of His human suffering. Even though He was bearing our sins in His own body on the tree and fulfilling the plan of the Father He recognised that not only was He now in possession still of His perfect happiness but that perfect happiness would be the heritage of any believer who lived in the protocol system. Very few believers are truly happy today. Believing on the Lord Jesus Christ is the beginning. Being a believer does not guarantee happiness in time, only happiness in eternity, but you can have perfect happiness. You can take it wherever you go. "After this, Jesus, knowing that all things had already been finished, in order that the scripture might be fulfilled, said, 'I am thirsty'." Thirst is one of the great physical agonies of the cross. "A jar full of sour wine was standing there; so they put a sponge into the jar of wine and moved it up to our Lord's mouth." That was His expression of great suffering, but even in great suffering he still has His happiness. For every person there is suffering somewhere on the horizon. The one who has happiness doesn't lose it when suffering comes.

The sixth expression of the cross is that of a completed mission, fulfilling the purpose for the residence of His humanity on this earth, John 19:30: "When Jesus therefore had received the sour wine, he said, Tetelestai, the perfect tense of the verb teleo. It means it has been finished now with the result that it stands completed forever with the result that for anyone who has believed in the past their salvation has now been provided. And for anyone who believes in the future there is a message from God: "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life." Salvation for the human race was accomplished by the spiritual death of the Lord Jesus Christ. He was still alive when He finished dying for our sins, this was His spiritual death on the cross bearing our sins. The implications are many. When He said, "It is finished," nothing can be added to the work of Christ for salvation. "And having pushed forward his head he handed over his spirit [human spirit]." The human spirit goes into the presence of God the Father. Why did he push Himself forward? John 19:34 tells us what happened. "One of the soldiers pierced his side [chest cavity] with a spear, and immediately there came out a(ima and o(udor [blood clots and serum]." The issue of John 19:34 is somatic death. He was dead physically at this point as proved by the fact that when His side was pierced the blood clots and the serum came out. In dying on the cross our Lord Jesus Christ positioned His body so that a maximum amount of blood would settle in the dependent part of His heart in the lower chest cavity. He pushed His body forward in dying to prove that He did not bleed to death on the cross. Jesus Christ did not bleed to death on the cross. The blood of Christ refers to His saving work. It refers to redemption, reconciliation, propitiation. He moved His head forward and exhaled His last breath. he did not inhale again. The arrangement of the order in the pulmonary artery in the diaphragm and the various veins were such that a large amount of blood remained and settled in His left and right ventricles where it would be vulnerable to the spear thrust. He was thrust with the spear in that lower region of His heart. When the Roman soldier plunged the spear into His chest cavity out came blood clots and serum. While hanging on the cross our Lord Jesus Christ anticipated the distortion and the perversion of the true connotation of the blood of Jesus Christ which cleanses from all sin. By distorting the true meaning of the blood of Christ Satan would attack the cross in several ways. First he would obscure the fact of the hypostatic union by denying the existence of the true humanity of Christ. Secondly, he would obscure the importance of our Lord's spiritual death on the cross bearing our sins in His own body on the tree. Thirdly, Satan would philosophise the cross through declaring the cross to be an optical illusion. One of the greatest problems with emotional believers who are ignorant of Bible doctrine — therefore also without that true happiness of life — is the fact that they somehow think that there is a mysterious "something" in the blood of Christ, and that He bled to death, and that the blood was caught in a pot by an angel and carried to heaven. Nothing could be further from the truth.

There is one more expression, and the expression is the key to human happiness, Luke 23:46. This is the expression of the royal family of God heritage. This is why we are here and why we have a special mission in life. This is where the protocol of heaven meets the protocol of earth in the fantastic system of the plan of God. "And Jesus, having cried out with a loud voice, said, 'Father, into your hands I deposit my spirit.' And having said this, he expired."

In the great prophecy of our Lord Jesus Christ in Isaiah 53, verse 12 becomes pertinent. "Therefore, I [God the Father] will distribute the spoil [the plunder of victory] to him [Christ] because of the many [royal family believers], that he [Christ] will distribute the spoil to the great ones [believers who attain the victory gate eight in the protocol system]; because he [Christ] poured out his soul to death [physical death]. Prior to this physical death he was identified with the offerings of sin [He fulfilled the Levitical offerings]; because he himself carried the sins of the many, and concerning the offering for sin it [the whole thing] was caused to fall on him."

The key to what was said in its entirety is found in Psalm 31:5 where this was quoted prophetically, "Into thy hand I deposit my spirit." That part is recorded in Luke, but the rest is not recorded, "For you have delivered me, O Lord, God of doctrine." That was the last thing uttered by our Lord: the word "doctrine." The key to happiness, the key to capacity for life, for blessing, the secret to the believer's modus operandi, the protocol of heaven meeting the protocol of earth, is Bible doctrine. It is the heritage of the royal family of God, the basis for momentum inside the divine dynasphere, the secret to the protocol of heaven being brought to earth so that our life can be full of meaning and purpose and definition. Doctrine must be the number one priority for every believer. Doctrine becomes the true greatness of the individual. Doctrine, of course, is located in the pages of the scripture but doctrine is useless unless it is transferred into your individual soul.

The introduction to this verse is found in Revelation 13:6, speaking of the beast dictator: "And he opened his mouth in blasphemies against God, to slander his people and his tabernacle," the word for "tabernacle" is the Greek skhnh and it has something to do with the shekinah glory, the shekinah glory in heaven a memorial to the person and the work of Christ in His strategic victory of the first advent, "and those believers who tabernacled in heaven," and again we have the verb skhnow, the same verb that we studied in connection with the shekinah glory coming to earth in the first advent. This is a paronomasia and it introduces the profile of the beast dictator. We have noted that first of all he was a military genius, he gains control of the revived Roman empire through defeating three of the ten nations of the old Roman empire. This was noted in Revelation 13:1 as well as Daniel 7:20,21. He is certainly a political genius and this is basically the story of Revelation 13, Daniel 7, and 2 Thessalonians 2. He is thirdly a religious genius and this is his story of his support of the ecumenical religious system of the Tribulation which is known under the code name Babylon the great, the great harlot. Fourth, he has the power of miracles as we have noted in 2 Thessalonians 2:1-12. This is the appeal to the emotionalism of the masses, and is also man's worship of power and the idolising of evil because of involvement in Satan's cosmic system. Those who worship power and idolise evil will never appreciate freedom or have the capacity for happiness in this life. When people do not have truth or doctrine they are always impressed by the wrong things. We have also noted in profile that he had the dynamics of verbal communication, he had a good voice. The ability to communicate is one of the most important functions in life and Satan gives this dictator a supernatural power of communication in order to communicate evil concepts. We noted that he had, however, a time limitation on his power, and so it always is. Those who have power always have a time limitation. Time runs out and when it does the power is gone, Revelation 13:5. We also noted that evil power is frustrated by humour and the power of the paronomasia, Revelation 13:6. Humour is a great weapon in the hands of those who adhere to Bible doctrine. The paronomasia of the first advent strategic victory of Christ is emphasised in John 1:14 where our Lord tabernacled among us, the shekinah glory came to earth. With all of his great power the beast dictator cannot laugh at himself and he can only slander those who are beyond his power. That was the way it was with the Tribulational martyrs whom he slaughtered. They were beyond his power, they tabernacled in heaven with the shekinah glory. So the play on words produced a marvelous pun describing the fact that the believer in heaven and the believer on earth with maximum doctrine in the soul are beyond the power of any beast dictator. Furthermore, at this time Satan is confined to the earth and these martyrs are in heaven. Therefore the humour of it all, they have gone where Satan can never go again. It is a bad joke to Satan but it is very humorous to us. People who have too much power have no sense of humour. Too much power is defined as power acquired by arrogance. Arrogance plus power cannot laugh at self or at anything that is humorous. Any arrogant preoccupation with self always takes self too seriously and therefore the omission of a sense of humour. The believer with maximum doctrine in the soul with that happiness that we have noted is beyond the power of any dictator of this earth. In life he will not compromise doctrine; in death the interim life puts the believer way beyond the power of Satan or any dictatorial power of tyranny. Even by killing believers the beast dictator puts the martyr believer beyond his own power. The beast dictator is miserable in his frustration while the martyred believer is happy in heaven. The dictator cannot see the humour in the situation, namely that with all of his tremendous power with which he is able to kill the believer he cannot control him in time and the believer martyr is beyond his control in eternity. The mature believer is beyond the control of any dictatorial power in life because of the greater power of Bible doctrine in his soul. Furthermore, he is beyond dictatorial power in death because he is transferred to heaven. What is humorous is the fact that Satan who has this great power and who has delegated it to the beast dictator has been driven out of heaven permanently in the last half of the Tribulation. As the ruler of this world he has no power, no authority over believers apart from his cosmic system.

The introduction to Revelation 19:19 is in the principle that comes out of this concept, the principle of organised evil, for the beast dictator represents organised evil in contrast to disorganised evil. The beast dictator has a systematic or organised system of evil. As the ruler of the revived Roman empire, as the leader of ecumenical religion, disorganised or non-systematic evil is simply a degeneracy without power. With the martyrdom of Tribulational believers in the last half of the Tribulation we learn the principle that while doctrinal believers can coexist with degeneracy or disorganised evil they cannot coexist with organised evil. The society of organised or systematic evil always persecutes the truth. Organised or systematic evil cannot stand any form of truth or doctrine. When a client nation has too much degeneracy and disorganised evil is not controlled by the laws of divine establishment some dictator rises up to suppress degeneracy and disorganised evil. In so doing he often substitutes what is far worse: systematic evil or organised evil in which the government commits the crimes instead of private citizens. The power of degeneracy or disorganised evil is crime and violence while the power of systematic evil is government using its authority to destroy freedom, to confiscate property, and to murder behind the facade of the greater good for the greater number. Systematic evil is characterised by self-righteous arrogance while disorganised evil is characterised by criminal arrogance. The dictator eliminates private crime because the dictator wants a monopoly on private crime. He substitutes public crime for private crime. The enlarged pivot of mature believers, the effective function of law and order, free enterprise and the military establishment plus law enforcement and good jurisprudence, hinders the effectiveness of organised evil. Disorganised evil generally opens the way for the use of a systematic system of evil. The pattern if systematic evil replaces disorganised evil and this is often seen in history, as illustrated by the French revolution, the Russian revolution, the communist takeover of China, the rise of Adolf Hitler. It proves the point that self-righteous arrogance has more power than criminal arrogance. Self-righteous arrogance is morality without virtue, therefore the importance of the priority of the plan of God which is virtue first. Morality minus virtue becomes self-righteousness and self-righteous arrogance leads to organised evil, the systematic evil by which the dictator rises to power.

In permitting evil to run its course in human history God demonstrates the power of doctrine resident in the soul of the mature believer and the tremendous happiness that comes from that doctrine mentioned in our Lord's dying words. The mature believer keeps his priorities straight, doctrine is more important than life itself and a period of martyrdom often occurs under these circumstances. The dictator, of course, demands and gains respect from the wrong kind of people. The leader functions under the principle of mutual respect but with the dictator he demands respect through the infusion of fear, and therefore the dictator uses his power to gain respect rather than any leadership ability that he may possess. The worship of power is the dictator's way of controlling people in contrast to the person who is a leader. The ability that comes to the dictator comes from evil; the ability of true leadership comes from the truth. This also leads to the fact that now, as well as in the future, there is no real power or real significance to public opinion. Public opinion caters to the viewpoint of the majority and the majority has no power or control in history. This is one thing that disorganised evil demonstrates: that there is no power or control in history from that standpoint. The control always comes from organised evil. Organised evil means a minority control. It is always a minority which controls and influences history. Sometimes it is a good minority, like the pivot of mature believers in the client nation to God, but frequently it is the minority of evil which controls the historical trend. Public opinion reacts to minorities but public opinion has no power, no organisation. Public opinion is news today and gone tomorrow. A Gallup poll in representing public opinion is only good in a republic or in a democracy with an overextended voting franchise, but public opinion has no power against organised minorities and their depredations. Public opinion can only bully the weak and flatter the successful. Public opinion has no power with the communists who ignore it in their invasions. Public opinion is all too often a system of arrogance, a system of public self-righteousness, a system of mass hysteria which assumes that their condemnation has power or influence. In reality, evil cares nothing for public opinion.

The power of the dictator, therefore, prevents him from thinking beyond the inventory of his own ideas. The corrupting influence of power not only erases the norms of the divine establishment and supersedes the standards of category #1 truth, but hinders the cosmic dictator from utilising any previous inventory of honourable principles that he might have possessed. This explains the conflict between organised and disorganised evil, the conflict between free enterprise and evil. While disorganised evil and degeneracy coexist with Christianity organised evil always persecutes Christianity. Self-righteous arrogance and its accompanying fanaticism is just as cruel and just as degenerate as any other category of degeneracy. That is why we have in verse 19 organised evil, the last conspiracy of the last war.

In this passage there are three categories of evil. All three categories are organised evil. Category #1 is the chief conspirator and agitator of history, Satan himself. He is introduced first with a connective and sequential use of the conjunction kai, followed by the aorist active indicative of the verb o(raw. The aorist tense is a constative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety, John's vision of organised evil at the end of the Tribulation. The active voice: John as the human author produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. The accusative singular from the noun qhrion introduces the object of the vision, the dictator. The word means "beast," we call him the beast dictator. "Then I saw the beast dictator," the beast dictator of the revived Roman empire of the Tribulation.

In the trinity of evil the beast dictator is number two. The trinity of organised evil includes first of all Satan, and secondly, the beast dictator. The trinity of organised evil includes Satan as the ruler of this world and the beast dictator as the chief agitator. Along with these two is the false prophet or "beast out of the land," the religious motivator. So we have to distinguish between the conspiracy at the beginning of the world war and those which occur at the end. In other words, there are several conspiracies around this world war. The first conspiracy occurred at the beginning of the last world war of history. This is the one we studied in Revelation 16:13-16, a Satanic conspiracy to destroy the Jew so that Christ cannot return to deliver Israel and fulfill the four unconditional covenants. Satan seeks to frustrate the plan of God for Israel by total annihilation of all Jews on the earth. Therefore the Middle east campaign came into very sharp focus in chapter 16. It included the battle of Armageddon, the battle of Idumea, the battle of the Valley of Jehoshaphat, and the siege of Jerusalem. But with the second advent of Christ a second conspiracy is formed.

This is the conspiracy at the end of the last world war of history, the conspiracy mentioned first in 17:14, then 19:19-21. This conspiracy is the most ambitious of all Satanic attacks until he is released from prison at the end of the Millennium. It involves the use of violence inspired by Satan to turn the warring armies of the last world war all against our Lord Jesus Christ and the three army groups who return with Him. The conspiracy refers to 17:14 and emphasises the believers of the Church Age, the royal family of God. This conspiracy emphasises also the attack on all three army groups who come back with our Lord. However, this conspiracy fails, Satan's time is running out, and therefore his power is running out. The elapse of time is always against a dictator.

So Satan cannot stem the tide and he cannot prevent the blessing of eternal life in resurrection bodies to all categories of believers. Nor can he harm elect angels or believers who survive on earth. Satan's power is completely destroyed by the second advent. Note the principle of grace: Only Christ does the fighting. The accompanying armies observe only.

The second category of organised evil are the political rulers alive on the earth, the dictators in the last half of the Tribulation. They are involved in the conspiracy under the title of the accusative plural basileuj. These are the political rulers of various nations involved in the last world war. They are rulers especially under the influence of the beast dictator. These would include the seven nations of the revived Roman empire who came voluntarily under the control of the beast. Furthermore, he is the leader of ecumenical religion and that means that other national leaders will be brought under his sphere of influence. In addition, rulers in three great spheres of influence, Tribulation empires, are involved. The king of the north, the kings of the east, the king of the south and, of course, the ten proconsuls under the rule of the revived Roman empire. They are said to be the first two sources of organised evil.

"Then I saw the beast dictator, and the kings of the earth." The third are the military forces involved in the conspiracy, and this is our third direct object from the verb, the accusative plural direct object from strateuma which means "and their armies." The conspiracy calls for the use of force to gain the objectives of Satan which are to destroy the Lord and His elect angels plus all resurrected believers who are accompany Him at the second advent. The principle: When force is used for evil it must be destroyed. Satan's violence cannot cancel the power of our Lord. These armies are organised evil, they use violence to fulfill Satan's policy. This explains the resistance to their armies on the part of Jewish believers in the state of Israel. This explains why Christ slaughters them at the end of the Tribulation. These armies and their rulers are going to become a banquet for all the vultures of the world. Violence of disorganised evil can only be restrained by law — law enforcement, capital punishment during human history — but the violence of organised evil can only be restrained by military establishment. Therefore we have two restraints on violence. For the violence of disorganised evil, law enforcement and capital punishment, but organised evil requires more. Organised evil is lawless; organised evil is the law. Organised evil can only be restrained by military power, therefore the importance of our military establishment. In the very last conspiracy only the force of our Lord Jesus Christ neutralises the power of the last great conspiracy.

Translation: "Then I saw the beast dictator, and the kings of the earth, plus their armies."

This represents the violence of organised evil. There are many systems of organised evil on the earth today.

The application of all of this is found in Psalm two where the last great conspiracy is described. The first three verses gives us the situation, the status quo in the last half of the Tribulation, where the evil trinity, organised evil in general, has developed the tremendous conspiracy.

Verse 1, "Why do the nations rage, and the people plot a vain thing?"

Verse 2, the kings of the earth take their stand [the great conspiracy of Revelation 19:19], and the rulers plot together against the Lord [God the Father], and against his anointed one [God the Son], saying,

Verse 3, "Let us break their bands [the authority of divine establishment], let us destroy their restraining forces and throw off the chains [the chains with which they bind us]." The principle is: Let us destroy the principle that Jesus Christ controls history.

In answer to this in verses 4-6 we have the plan of God the Father. The protocol of heaven comes into action.

Verse 4, "He [God the Father, author of the divine plan] who is enthroned in heaven laughs," it is nice to know that the absolute power of heaven has a marvelous sense of humour, "the Lord scoffs at them," the anthropopathism for divine power.

Verse 5, "Then [at the end of the Tribulation] he will speak to them in his anger [the anthropopathism for divine judgment], and he will terrify them in his wrath [the seven last plagues of Revelation 16, the seven bowl judgments]."

Verse 6, "But as for me [God the Father] I have installed my King [the coronation of Christ at the second advent] on Zion [fulfillment of the Davidic covenant], my holy mountain [the ultimate victory of Christ in the angelic conflict]."

In verses 7-9 we have Jesus Christ coming into the picture. Jesus Christ controls history.

Verse 7, "I will proclaim the decree of the Lord [the printout of the computer of divine decrees]: he [God the Father] said to me [God the Son], You are my Son [first advent]; today [moment of the virgin birth, the incarnation] I have begotten you."

Verse 8, this is after the death, burial, resurrection and ascension of Christ: "Ask from me, and I will give you the nations for your inheritance [anticipating the Millennial reign of Christ]" plus the very ends of the earth as your possession [Christ will rule in the last dispensation of history]."

Verse 9, "And you will rule them with an iron sceptre [the Millennial reign of Christ is a rule of virtue] and you will shatter them to pieces like pottery [the function of jurisprudence and capital punishment in the Millennium]."

Verses 10-12, the final strophe.

Verse 10, "Therefore [divine advice to nations of the Tribulation] you kings [rulers of the earth]; become wise [believe in Christ and then learn the protocol system from Bible doctrine]; be warned [crisis evangelism] you rulers of the earth."

Verse 11, "Serve the Lord with a sense of responsibility [with reverence], and rejoice with trembling [rulers can be happy if they are born again, if they have learned Bible doctrine]."

Verse 12, "Kiss [pay homage] to the Son [faith in Christ, perception of doctrine after salvation], lest he become angry and you perish in the way [rulers without Christ have no chance], for his wrath may soon be kindled. How happy are those who take refuge in him."

Leviticus 16:1,2, "Now the Lord spoke to Moses after the death of the two sons of Aaron [Nadab and Abihu], when they approached the presence of the Lord [the explanation for the strange fire which they offered and for which they died]. Then the Lord said to Moses, Tell your brother Aaron that he shall not at any time enter the holy place inside the veil, before the mercy seat which is on the ark, lest he die; for I will appear in the cloud over the mercy seat."

As we have noted, this was the shekinah glory, the presence of Jesus Christ as the God of Israel. In Hezekiah's prayer of Isaiah 37:16, he said, "O Lord of the armies, the God of Israel, who is enthroned between the cherubs," that golden throne is called the mercy seat. The reason it is called a seat is because no one ever had the nerve just to say that the Lord actually sat there since the shekinah glory was between the cherubs or over that mercy seat. So when Hezekiah got down to serious praying he prayed to the Lord who resided between the two cherubs, to the shekinah glory.

The Jews got into a war with the Philistines and in the first battle the force that went were almost annihilated, about 4000 casualties. So they decided that they were a little rusty and needed some good luck. The good luck charm they selected was the ark of the covenant, which means the golden throne and the cherubs on each side, the whole package. So in 1 Samuel 4:4 it says, "The people went up to Shiloh [where the tabernacle was being kept at the time], and from there they carried the ark of the Lord of the armies, who sits between the cherubs: and the two sons of Eli [the high priest], Hophni and Pinehas, were there with the ark of the covenant of God [they carried it into battle]."

A second battle was fought in which the Jews were defeated again and in the course of the defeat both Hophni and Pinehas were killed in battle. The ark was not designed to be a good luck charm. The ark itself was taken by the Philistines to Ashdod and put in their temple there, the temple of Dagon. When they brought the word to Eli [he was 98 years old] he was apparently sitting on a fence and when he heard that the ark was taken he fell over backwards and broke his neck and died. That meant that there was only one person left in the clan and that was the wife of Pinehas and the news resulted in the events of 1 Samuel 4:19-22. She named her newborn son Ichabod which means "there is no glory" or simply "no glory," saying, "the glory [kabhोध] has departed from Israel; because the ark of God was captured." Then her dying words were, "The glory [kabhोध] is departed from Israel; for the ark of God is captured." The woman understood in dying that the shekinah glory, or the dwelling presence of Jesus Christ as the God of Israel between the mercy seat, was the key to understanding Israel in time of blessing. Israel is a client nation to God and any time the glory departs then it is all over.

The application to us is obvious: No pivot of mature believers means that the glory of the Lord has departed from the client nation. We live in the dispensation of no sacred buildings. The shekinah glory today resides in the divine dynasphere, as it were, and our function in the divine dynasphere is the only way our country can be delivered. In the Old Testament the presence of the Lord Jesus Christ between the cherubs was the shekinah glory and the cloud over the tabernacle indicated His presence in the holy of holies. However, beginning with the virgin birth and the incarnation we know that the hypostatic union made a great difference. Once the shekinah glory came in the flesh the shekinah glory lived in the prototype divine dynasphere. Now in the Church Age the client nation depends on believers living in the operational type divine dynasphere. When you find believers not living in the divine dynasphere and not understanding the significance of the protocol plan of God, then the glory has departed from the client nation just as obviously as the glory departed from Israel in that day. That is why 2 Corinthians 3:17,18 is so important because in essence it describes our responsibility as believers, not only to God but to the client nation. There is no solution to the problems of the client nation apart from the believer living, functioning, having momentum, and achieving maturity, inside the divine dynasphere. "Now the Lord is the Spirit [reference to the deity of the Holy Spirit and His function at gate one]; and where the Spirit of the Lord is [the Holy Spirit indwelling the believer's body], there is freedom [freedom to execute the plan of God]." The same concept is Galatians 5:1, "Stand fast, therefore, in the freedom wherewith Christ has made you free." That can only be accomplished inside the divine dynasphere.

The application to this is found in our passage in Revelation chapter 19 for we find divine judgment coming to the beast dictator and his nation at the second advent. So far we have covered this much of verse 19: "Then I saw the beast dictator, and the kings of the earth who had been concentrated to make war against him who is mounted on the horse [our Lord Jesus Christ at the second advent] and against his army."

This is the last phase of the last world war of history, Satan's last effort to frustrate the plan of God as the ruler of this world. Of course, Satan has to use violence because he cannot fight truth with the lie. The concentration of the combined armies of the political blocs and the systems of power politics in the Tribulation under many dictators, and especially at the end under the dictator of the revived Roman empire, is the greatest concentration of Gentile troops in all of human history. It is designed to destroy the Lord, the elect angels and believers, in one fell swoop. The invasion of the kings of the east, of the Asiatic bloc; the invasion of the king of the north plus the attempted invasion of the armies of the revived Roman empire, plus the attack of Arabic nations known as the king of the south, are all combined to meet the challenge of the second advent at this point. In many cases they have been fighting each other but Satan in one last tremendous effort takes all of the fighting armies and gets them to have an armistice and turn against the Lord Jesus Christ.

There is one eschatological problem in this connection: the treaty between the Jewish dictator and the revived Roman empire in the middle of the Tribulation. This is not a case of a broken treaty but a new phase of the last world war, and the dictator of the revived Roman empire turns his forces toward the invasion from heaven in contrast to the previous conspiracy. A simpler passage is found in Joel chapter three, verses nine through seventeen:

"Proclaim among the nations, Prepare for war [necessary to survive in the last half of the Tribulation], assemble the warriors [troops], let all the fighting men advance and attack. Beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruning hooks into spears [revive the industrial complex for war]; let the weakling say, I am strong. Concentrate your armies, and all you surrounding nations invade [attack Israel, concentrate there, because Christ returns to Israel]; bring down your armies, O lord [the prayer for the second advent of Christ and the three armies that we have previously noted]. Let the nations be aroused [propagandised]," if you are going to get into a full scale war you have to have people aroused, you have to arouse their antagonism, they have to get mad, and you have to use propaganda to do it. One of the major signs of degeneracy is the principle of getting people angry from that which is false, "therefore attack [motivation for attacking another country comes from propaganda] the valley of Jehoshaphat [attack Israel]; for there [our Lord's answer] I will sit to judge all the surrounding nations."

One conspiracy starts a word war, Revelation 16; one terminates it, Joel 3; Revelation 19:19.

"Put in the sickle [the seven last plagues]." What do the seven bowl judgments add to this? First of all, there are a lot of people there under pressure of warfare, economic disaster, disease, the four horsemen in other words. This is the judgment by pain. As a result of the four horsemen many people are going to believe in Christ. Some of them will even survive and spend 1000 years in perfect environment in the Millennium; many will die because they continue to make negative and bad decisions. That is judgment by death. Then there is going to be judgment by finesse in which great nations will be destroyed. New nations will come out of those nations in the Millennial reign of Christ. So the three major judgments are always God's grace opportunity, "for the harvest [the five bowl judgments, crisis evangelism] is ripe; come [prayer for the second advent], trample the grapes [our Lord's destruction of all the armies of the world]; for the winepress is full [the sixth bowl judgment, judgment by death], the vats overflow; for their evil is great."

"Multitudes, multitudes [millions, millions, millions of troops] in the valley of decision.... The sun and the moon grow dark, and the stars lose their brightness [the earth will be completely enveloped in darkness just before the second advent]. Then the Lord roars from Zion, and thunders from Jerusalem [where He comes at the second advent], consequently the heavens and the earth tremble; however the Lord will be a refuge for his people [many millions will survive], and a fortification for the citizens of Israel. Then you, o Israel, will know that I [the Lord Jesus Christ] am the Lord, your God, dwelling in Zion, my holy mountain; therefore Jerusalem will be holy, and strange [armies] will no longer pass through it."

The last world war of history is terminated, it is all over, there is nothing left but the dead. That is the reason for the vultures' banquet that we have been noting.

Revelation 19:20,21: Verse 20, the judgment of the Satanic conspirators. The termination of the last conspiracy means that the conspirators do not get away with it. We have the aorist passive indicative of πιάζω can be translated arrested as long as you understand he, the dictator, was arrested violently 'Then the beast dictator was seized," the constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. He was not just captured, he was seized violently. The passive voice: the Tribulational dictator receives the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the eschatological reality of the arrest of the great agitator of the last conspiracy. he is the arch conspirator, he is the agitator of Satan's organisation, he is the chief human conspirator in starting the last world war of history, "and with him the false prophet," the coconspirator, the religious motivator. As coconspirator the false prophet is the religious motivator and he joins in the conspiracy with Satan which began the last world war in history. That is how so many gung-ho religious types wind up on the battlefield and wind up as the vultures' banquet. The "false prophet" here is a nominative of exclamation, it is the title of the Jewish dictator.

We have a series now of relative clauses. The first of these is "who performed the miracles in his presence." "Then the beast dictator was seized, and with him the false prophet [the religious motivator] who performed miracles in his presence," the function of demonism is a part of that miracle worker. There are always certain people who are so stupid that the only thing that will move them is a miracle, or what appears to be a miracle, therefore the function of demonism and Satanic miracles. Religion, of course, emphasises miracles while Christianity emphasises the content of doctrine. Christianity emphasises thought, accurate thought, Bible doctrine; religion emphasises miracles and fanaticism, and gung-ho'ism. The power of the Word is greater than the power of miracles, for the power of the Word is in the soul while the power of miracles is in the function of empiricism. The legitimate function of miracles to call attention to doctrine was no longer valid in the Church Age after the completion of the canon of scripture, so no one is performing miracles today in the name of the Lord. The miracles of the false prophet are primarily demon-type miracles.

"In his presence" is a reference to the Gentile dictator of the revived Roman empire.

The second relative clause "by which [miracles] he deceived those who had received the mark of the beast," "he deceived those," and a third relative clause, "who received the mark of the beast," computerised tyranny, the ID card indicating that the holder is a member of the ecumenical religious system, hence a system for identifying the converts of Satan's cosmic system. The ID card or mark is given to everyone who becomes a member of the ecumenical religious system, and on this card is a code number, 666, which is printed on the hand and on the forehead. This number 666 is tied into a computer memory system which has detailed information about each convert to Satan's cosmic system. Without this card and the system of computerised tyranny the people of the Tribulation will not be able to survive in certain areas of the world. Those who accept this system are the ones who are entered into this giant computer programmed under the code number 666. The memory bank of the computer under the code number 666 destroys all privacy, all freedom, of the converts to ecumenical religion.

Application: Religion destroys your privacy. Christianity is designed to give you your privacy. In Christianity every believer has the privacy of his priesthood; under religion you live in a glass cage, and there is no more vulnerable cage than the one that will be designed by computerised tyranny. Christianity is designed for you to get information and for you in the privacy of your priesthood to reject that information or accept it; to do with it what you will.

These converts to ecumenical religion have rejected normal and crisis evangelism, they are under the program 666 in the computer, and they are a part of the religious system. Even the first bowl judgment of skin cancer [God put His mark on them] is a reminder that where there is life there is hope, and they could still have accepted Christ as saviour under the skin cancer of Judgment by pain. Those who do not have the mark of the beast or this ID card with code number 666, cannot buy or sell, therefore they are excluded from the economy of the revived Roman empire and anywhere else where ecumenical religion is operative. Generally those who possess the card or mark are unbelievers who have rejected the gospel under normal evangelism and are under the influence of the cosmic system. The mark of the beast is rejected by winners, believers who have advanced to maturity, and we have studied them as the Tribulational martyrs. These winners are not only frequently martyred for their stand but we have also noted their prayers as well.

There is a fourth relative clause — "even those who worship his idol." It is a reference to the abomination of desolation, the idol which is the facsimile of the dictator of the revived Roman empire. The idol is called not only the abomination of desolation in Matthew 24:15 but even in Old Testament passages like Daniel 11:31. Demonism in the Old Testament is related to idolatry and human sacrifice, therefore sacrifice to demons was prohibited. The function of idolatry and demon worship includes always human sacrifice. Nations in the ancient world, like Canaan, were destroyed because of this demon activity. Hence, idolatry and resultant demonism is what we call the devil's communion table, 1 Corinthians 10:19-21.

The punishment of the two dictators follows in the final statement, "though still alive these two were thrown into the lake of fire burning with sulphur." This is the fact that they are physically alive when thrown into the lake of fire, and they do not lose consciousness in the lake of fire. They continue in a state of terrible suffering without dying physically. This is, of course, extreme punishment which indicates the gravity of their crimes. For one thousand years they are the only two human occupants of the lake of fire, and it is not until the end of the Millennium that the great white throne judgment and second resurrection of unbelievers occurs. Hence, they have the lake of fire all to themselves, and since all other believers go to Hades, the place of torments, they are the only two in the lake of fire. No two human beings ever sold out to Satan in the manner in which these two dictators, one Jew and one Gentile, have done. They reached the peak of organised evil in both religious and political categories, they were the worst unbelievers of history. Hence, they are the advance guard for the final and eternal hell. They are alive in the lake of fire for 1000 years.

Translation of verse 20: "Then the beast dictator was seized, and with him the false prophet who performed miracles in his presence, by which [miracles] he had deceived those who received the mark of the beast, even those who worshipped his idol. Though still alive, these two were thrown into the lake of fire burning with sulphur."

Verse 21, The termination, then, of the Armageddon campaign and the last world war is mentioned in this final statement of the vultures' banquet. "And the rest were slain with the sword of him that sat on the horse, which sword proceeded out of his mouth, and all the fowls were filled with their flesh."

The "rest" refers to all the kings of the earth and their armies. This includes the armies which have invaded the Middle East and the armies that are fighting all over the world in that last world war. Note that the dictator of Israel is called the false prophet. This implies that he was overthrown by believers who resisted the king of the north in the siege of Jerusalem. So they were "slaughtered" literally. We have noted before that our Lord does it alone with the broadsword which came out of His mouth. The inevitable winner, then, of the last world war is our Lord Jesus Christ.

Then the final phrase. The subject is made up of two words, the adjective paj and the noun o)rneon. O)rneon refers to birds. And what did they do? The aorist passive indicative of xortazw, they "gorged" themselves. The constative aorist: they had a banquet such as has never been known before. The passive voice: the carrion-eating birds receive the action of the verb. They have the greatest meal that any carrion bird group ever had, "then all the birds were gorged from eating their corpses."

At the same time that this is going on the wedding banquet of the Lamb, where all of us will be attending, will be in progress where we will be having a marvelous party in the presence of the Lord.

Chapter 20

The chapter we are about to study is the last millennium in history. The outline has four paragraphs.

1. The incarceration of Satan — verses 1-3.
2. The first resurrection — verses 4-6.
3. The last revolution — verses 7-10.
4. The last judgment — verses 11-15.

This is a chapter of judgment. There are two general categories of divine judgment: direct and indirect. Indirect judgments are the divine judgments of history where God is not seen and God is not present. Direct judgments can be classified as those judgments when God is on the scene. That means that the indirect judgments are the ones we have been studying: the divine judgments related to time, to human history, to the function of the grace of God. So indirect judgments are judgments by pain, by death, and finesse judgments. Direct judgments are divine judgments related to the presence of Christ on earth, like the second advent or the end of the Millennium. The judgment of the armies of the last world war which we have just noted in chapter 19 would be classified as a direct judgment. Jesus Christ personally annihilated these armies that led to the banquet of the vultures. Right now in human history we are under indirect judgments, illustrated by judgment by pain, the function of God's grace in crisis evangelism fulfilling the principle of grace before judgment; illustrated by the bowl judgments, especially the judgment of Revelation 16:10 where judgment by pain is mentioned specifically. The two categories of normal evangelism take cognisance of this judgment. First of all there is normal evangelism which is the function of evangelism under more or less objective circumstances, and secondly there is crisis evangelism which is the presentation of the gospel in times of individual or collective catastrophe in history. Under normal evangelism the unbeliever has the opportunity of objectively considering the issues of Christ and eternal salvation. Normal evangelism is conducted in many ways, generally through witnessing, the gospel message in print or broadcasted through some form of technology, some form of function by an evangelist. When the unbeliever rejects Christ as saviour he goes into the cosmic system again and now becomes subjective, and for evangelism to occur it must include judgment by pain. This is what we call indirect judgment. God is not here personally, He uses the events of history. That is true of the second category of indirect judgment which is judgment by death, the function of God's grace in the perpetuation of the human race from generation to generation through human history. God has promised that the human race will never be totally destroyed on planet earth until the end of history, and in order to do this the computer of divine decrees occasionally gives a readout of maximum degeneracy and sin which would destroy the human race. Therefore the cancer is removed by judgment by death. The third category, the one which we have noted in some detail, is judgment by finesse in which an evil agent is used to destroy something representing God that has become evil — generally the destruction of a client nation, sometimes a group of believers, it varies from time to time and from place to place. God uses envy and power lust plus evil's hatred of hypocrisy in another to destroy an evil system. Finesse dramatises the fact that man is simply a product of his own volition when he becomes involved in the cosmic system and its resultant evils. In other words, God uses the wrath of man to, praise Him, as per Psalm 76:10. Therefore Jesus Christ in controlling history uses a great deal of finesse judgment. These are indirect divine judgments.

We are now coming down to direct judgments in the last part of the book of Revelation.

We might say that the judgment at the cross was a direct judgment in that Jesus Christ was present on earth. He was being judged, however. God the Father took the printout of all the sins of human history right out of divine decrees and imputed them all to Christ when He was hanging on the cross and all human sin was judged at the cross. The self-judgment of the believer does not come into this category at all, but after the Rapture and the judgment seat of Christ the Lord Jesus Christ is there to judge personally. That would be categorised as a direct judgment. But beginning with the second advent when Christ is personally on earth the baptism of fire is a judgment by God the Son, the removal of Satan as the ruler of this world and his incarceration for a thousand years is a judgment by God the Son. Therefore these are called direct judgments. The judgment of fallen angels at the end of history is a direct judgment by God the Son. Finally, the lake of fire is a direct judgment by God the Son. The eternal judgments fall under the category of direct judgment.

One other thing we need to understand in a little detail is to review the concept of dispensations since one of the great dispensational issues is found in this particular passage and the recognition of dispensational activity becomes very important.

Ephesians 3:1-5 gives us our mandate for recognition as a part of the introduction to Revelation chapter 20. In verse 1 the apostle Paul says, "For this reason I, Paul, the prisoner of Christ Jesus on behalf of you Gentiles —

Verse 2, "if you have heard of the dispensation of the grace of God [and you have, 1st class condition] which was given to me for your benefit;

Verse 3, "that by revelation [divine disclosure] the mystery [the historical trends of the Church Age] was revealed to me, just as I have previously written in brief."

Verse 4, "Face to face with which doctrine of the mystery when you exegete [that is, the pastors] you want to be able to understand my categorical insight into the mystery of Christ [Christ and His royal family],

Verse 5, "which in other dispensations was not revealed to man of other generations, so that now it has been revealed to his holy apostles and prophets by means of the Holy Spirit."

A similar passage is found in Colossians 1:25-29. We begin with a relative pronoun, "Of which," referring to the Church. "Of which dispensation I have become a minister according to this dispensation from God which has been given to me for your benefit, that I might implement your deficiency of Bible doctrine," it is always true that people who do not understand dispensations, especially in this Church Age, have a deficiency of Bible doctrine. That deficiency is a handicap that is very difficult to overcome. In fact many portions of the Word of God are closed unless you have some knowledge of dispensations, "that is, the mystery that has been hidden from past ages and other generations; but has now been revealed to his saints [believers of the royal family], to whom God has decreed to make known what is the prosperity [or the riches] of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles, which is Christ in you [the Shekinah glory], the hope [or confidence] of glory. Which we solemnly proclaim, warning every man and teaching every man in all wisdom, that we might present every one mature in Christ [at the judgment seat of Christ]. For this purpose I labour to the point of exhaustion, competing according to his game plan [the protocol system], which is effective in me in the divine dynasphere."

The first dispensation of history was the era of positive volition. It begins at the creation of man and terminates with his fall. It is the era of the Garden of Eden, it is mankind in perfect environment with only one volitional test: he was forbidden to eat of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. The dispensation terminates with the fall of man.

The second dispensation is the era of negative volition from the fall of man to the tower of Babel. It is the dispensation of internationalism which dramatises the function of man's old sin nature, not only in relationship to man but in relationship to fallen angels as well. Internationalism is a total failure and this was demonstrated in the second dispensation. In the dispensation of internationalism or the era of negative volition there was one language, one race, one skin tone, and this did not solve any of man's problems. None of them were solved in the environment of internationalism. However, man continues to cling to this thread that some form of internationalism will solve his problems. The tower of Babel was a Satanic attack against nationalism in anticipation of the next dispensation. That is the story of Genesis 11:1-9.

The third dispensation is the era of divine establishment and nationalism. It goes from the tower of Babel, which is around 5000 BC, to the establishment of the first client nation in BC 1441. There is some overlap with the next historical era but the key is to distinguish between the Jews and Gentiles at this point. There are three basic races with many subdivisions, many languages, forcing people to divide into tribes and nations. So we have the era of divine establishment as the third dispensation.

The fourth dispensation is the era of the first client nation and/or the dispensation of Israel. In that, of course, the overlap comes and the formation of the Jewish race. Abraham is the father of the Jewish race. For the first 99 years of his life Abraham was a Gentile. He became a Jew in his 99th year; circumcision was the sign. Abraham is the father, then, of the Jewish race and the period of the patriarchs runs roughly from BC 2161 to BC 1441, but the actual dispensation of Israel is the function of the Jewish client nation and Moses is the father of the Jewish nation. So the dispensation of Israel runs from BC 1441 to AD 70. There is an overlap there with the Church Age. The laws of divine establishment were declared in the Mosaic law. The Mosaic law is divided into three parts: Codex #1 was a freedom code, simply a statement of human freedom in ten mandates; Codex #2 is a complete Christology and soteriology; Codex #3 is a detailed development of establishment principles and everything necessary for the correct function of nationalism, including economy, military establishment, law enforcement, jurisprudence and even dietary laws. Israel as the first client nation was responsible as the custodian of the Word of God as it existed, and was responsible for evangelism both at home and among the heathen nations. Thirdly she was responsible for spiritual growth to perpetuate the client nation and for sending out missionaries. There were three administrations of the fifth cycle of discipline: BC 721, administered to the northern kingdom under finesse judgment by the Assyrians; BC 586, administered to the southern kingdom by the Chaldeans under same principle of finesse judgment; AD 70, administered to Judea by the Romans under the same concept. Nevertheless, in spite of the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline Israel has a future guaranteed by the unconditional covenants — the Abrahamic, Palestinian, Davidic and New covenants to Israel, all to be fulfilled at the second advent (That is the key to premillennialism). Any Jew today believing in Christ enters into the royal family of God. He is no longer a Jew just as any Gentile who believes in Christ is no longer a Gentile, he is royal family of God. The Jewish Age was stopped before it was completed, there are seven years to run. The insertion of the Church Age is for the calling out of the royal family of God. When the royal family is completed, only God knows when that is, then we have the resurrection of the royal family, and time begins again for the Age of Israel, the seven years of the Jewish Age sometimes called by Matthew the end of the [Jewish] Age. That is where we get the Tribulation.

But the dispensation of intercalation [Church Age] means that upon the strategic victory of Christ on the cross He was awarded His third royal patent. Therefore the mystery age, mystery meaning that the doctrine concerning the Church Age was not revealed in the past but is now revealed to us. It was prophesied by our Lord but there is no Church Age doctrine in the Old Testament. In His first royal patent Jesus Christ has a royal family. His title is Son of God; His royal family, the Father and the Holy Spirit. In His second royal patent He has a title, Son of David; His royal family is the Davidic dynasty. In His third royal patent, King of kings, Lord of lords, bright morning star. But He has no royal family, therefore the entrance of the Church Age. As a mystery age, then, the Church dispensation is the era of no prophecy: no prophecy in the Church Age, all historical trends are determined by volition with emphasis on the volition of believers, the formation of the pivot in the client nation. Historical trends of prosperity result from good decisions to live in God's protocol system, the divine dynasphere, while historical trends of disaster are determined by bad decisions of believers to live in the cosmic system. The Church Age is the mystery dispensation, the dispensation of the great parenthesis. No Church Age doctrine is revealed in the Old Testament, there is no prophecy of or any reference to historical trends except the times of the Gentiles mentioned very briefly in Daniel 9:26ff.

The Church Age is divided categorically two ways: the pre canon period and the post canon. The pre canon period is the book of Acts, roughly from AD 30 to AD 96. It is the period where temporary gifts were used such as the gifts of apostleship, tongues, interpretation of tongues, healing, faith. All of these spiritual gifts were designed with a specific purpose; once the canon of scripture was completed they were removed; and so we have the post canon period of scripture, the period of the New Testament epistles, and it goes from 96 AD to the Rapture of the Church whenever that occurs. The overlap is the times of the Gentiles mentioned in Luke 21:24. It begins in AD 70 and goes to the Rapture of the Church. There are no client nations to God in the Tribulation. These categories help us to understand the difference between temporary gifts, also to understand some of the phenomena that existed prior to the completion of the canon in the place of Bible doctrine, now that the canon of scripture is completed. We live in the most thrilling of times, we have everything in writing. We have no gift of healing, we have no legitimate gift of tongues, we have no spiritual gifts related to miracles, we have something far greater, Bible doctrine. The post canon period of the Church Age is the time of permanent gifts and the highest-ranking gift extant is the gift of pastor-teacher. Next come administrative gifts in the local church. The gift of evangelism is not to function in the local church at all, it is the highest gift outside of the local church.

The unique character of the Church Age is very important. First of all, the dispensation of the royal family of God has something that never occurred before and never will occur again after the Rapture. It is called the baptism of the Spirit, the basis for forming at salvation the royal family of God. God the Holy Spirit takes every believer and enters him into union with Christ. That is the doctrine of positional truth. It is absolutely unique. Never before the Church Age began and never after the Rapture will the baptism of the Spirit occur. It is for this dispensation only and it is not an experience, it is something that God the Holy Spirit does instantaneously. We do not feel it, we do not have any rosy glow because of it, it is one of 40 things that occurs simultaneously at salvation. Secondly, this is the only dispensation in which there is no prophecy and no sacred buildings. The third unique characteristic is the universal priesthood of the believer with privacy to live his life as unto God. A priest represents mankind to God, and since every believer is a priest every believer represents himself before God. The fourth unique characteristic is the royal ambassadorship of the believer with a special challenge to one's life directed toward man and circumstances. Application of doctrine comes from the function of the royal ambassadorship. The fifth characteristic: the only dispensation which provides the divine dynasphere is the Church Age. This is the dispensation of protocol and God's protocol system is fully developed for this dispensation only. This is the only dispensation in which there will ever be a divine dynasphere. The sixth characteristic is the completed canon of scripture. All divine revelation and all doctrine is reduced to writing and is contained in the canon. Therefore, there is no doctrine taught through dreams, visions, trances, angels, or alleged voices from God. Number seven is the intensification of the angelic conflict which results from our Lord's strategic victory of the cross. We live in the only dispensation that has the intensification of the angelic conflict without any angels being seen. This is the dispensation of doctrine, conflict in the soul, but the angelic conflict is intensified because the enemy is not seen and because those angels who help us, the guardian angels, are not seen. The eighth characteristic is that the Church Age is the only dispensation to have the indwelling of Christ and the first dispensation in which Jesus Christ controls history from His hypostatic union.

It should be pointed out that in every one of these dispensations salvation is always the same: personal faith in Jesus Christ. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ" is just as pertinent in the dispensation of Israel as it is right now. "Abraham believed in the Lord and it was credited to his account for righteousness." No one has ever been saved by keeping the law or by any other system of human works.

The sixth dispensation is the "doomsday era," the Tribulation.

Number seven is the era of our Lord's rulership of the world, the Millennium. This is the dispensation of one thousand years of perfect environment, beginning at the second advent and terminating with the Gog and Magog revolution. Salvation through faith in Christ and spirituality is related to the filling of the Spirit in that dispensation. The Millennium begins with believers only, those believers who survived the baptism of fire which is a direct judgment. There will be a tremendous population explosion because of perfect environment in the Millennium and unbelievers will be the children and the grandchildren of the original believing families. Perfect environment includes the incarceration of Satan, the removal of demons, and the abolition of religion — Revelation 20:1-3. Optimum spirituality will result from the filling of the Spirit, according to Isaiah 65:24; Joel 2:28,29. Israel will be restored as a client nation to God. All unconditional covenants to Israel will be fulfilled. Perfect environment will include no more war. It is a time of universal prosperity, perfect world government under Christ, and national rulership delegated to Church Age believers and Old Testament saints. There will be a universal knowledge of God, according to Isaiah 11:9, and longevity in the human race, Isaiah 65:20. The Millennium is also a time of perfect environment in nature, creation is released from the bondage of man's sin, and plant life will abound. Animals will lose their ferocity, the child will be able to put his hand in the cobra's den. The perfect environment of the Millennium will terminate with the Gog revolution. Satan is released from jail after serving his 1000 years of sentence and will stir up discontent among certain unbelievers, Revelation 20:1-7.

In the meantime the lesson is obvious. Perfect environment or ideal environment is not the solution to man's problems.

We begin chapter 20 with the incarceration of Satan. Satan's jailer is mentioned in verse 1. We have a sequential kai, translated "The," with the aorist active indicative of the verb $\epsilon\lambda\alpha\beta\epsilon$ (to take) which indicates another of the many visions of Revelation. The aorist tense is a constative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety, the arrest of Satan. There is no one on the earth at the present time who has such power. This power belongs to God and in the protocol system He has delegated that authority to the angelic college of heralds. The active voice: John, the human author, produces the action of the verb, seeing this eschatological event. The indicative mood is declarative for the accuracy of the eschatological sequence. The object of the verb in the accusative case is $\mu\epsilon\lambda\alpha\kappa\alpha\lambda\alpha\sigma$, "an angel." Satan is an angel; Satan is arrested by an angel. The absence of the definite article emphasises the qualitative aspect of the noun. The angel is identified as the officer of arms from the angelic college of heralds. Satan, being the greatest and most powerful creature ever to come from the hand of God, and being more powerful than any angel in eternity past, this indicates quite a reverse. Application: No matter how great you become, no matter how powerful, how successful, or how much approbation you receive, all you need to add to it is a little arrogance and you will fall flat on your face.

"Then I saw an angel descending from heaven." The officer of arms comes directly from the throne room of God, as he did in Revelation 14:15. He is commanded by God now to arrest Satan. He is to remove him from office as the ruler of the world in preparation for the perfect environment of the Millennial reign of Christ. At the present time Satan is the ruler of this world, Luke 4:5-7; John 12:31; 14:30; 16:11; 2 Corinthians 4:4; Ephesians 2:2. As long as Satan is the ruler of this world there cannot be the perfect environment enjoyed by Adam and the woman before the fall. Human history began with perfect environment in the garden of Eden and human history will terminate with perfect environment, the Millennial reign of Jesus Christ. There is a difference, however, since the perfect environment at the beginning of history found man in innocence while the perfect environment of the Millennial reign of Christ finds man living on this earth under the control of his old sin nature. Perfect environment on the earth for 1000 years does not solve man's problems in that the old sin nature in perfect environment is never improved. You cannot improve the old sin nature. Furthermore, environment improved or perfect is never the solution to man's problems. The solution begins with regeneration at the point of personal faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, and the first step in providing the perfect environment of the last millennium of history is the arrest of Satan and his removal from the rulership of this world. His replacement as the ruler of the world is our Lord Jesus Christ and therefore the arrest and imprisonment of Satan becomes the most important coup de tat in history. Note that God uses an elect angel to arrest a fallen angel. God usually uses that which is of the same kind for any indirect judgment.

The equipment of the arresting officer is also very interesting. He is said to have the key to the abyss. The word for "have" is the present active participle of the verb $\epsilon\chi\omega$ which means to have or to have and to hold. The pictorial present conveys to the mind the event in the process of occurrence. The active voice: the officer of arms from the angelic college of heralds produces the action of the verb as the arresting officer. The participle is circumstantial. The accusative singular direct object from kleij is the word for "key." The descriptive genitive singular of a)bussoj is used, "the key to the abyss." The abyss is the fourth compartment of sheol or Hades, it is synonymous with Tartarus in 2 Peter 2:4, the prison of certain fallen angels. He also is carrying what is called "a great chain." The word for chain is a(lusij and it could also be translated today "handcuffs." This angel holds the key to the abyss and a pair of giant handcuffs. He doesn't need anything beyond this because of the inherent power provided by God. He can overcome Satan at any time even though it wasn't that way in the original creation. We can learn something from that. A lot of people who appear as though they are not going to make it have a tremendous tenacity in life and develop a wisdom which often surpasses the smart ones, the talented ones, the beautiful ones, the ones who are always voted the most likely to succeed.

Translation: "Then I saw an angel [the officer of arms, college of heralds] descending from heaven, he had the key to the abyss and was holding a pair of giant handcuffs."

The chain is used to control Satan after his apprehension and arrest so that he can be imprisoned for 1000 years in the abyss. This is the longest prison sentence in history. Translating the last phrase, "holding a pair of giant handcuffs," is attempting to convey the concept of the Greek text. As the arresting officer the officer of arms is equipped to bring Satan into custody. He has the key to his jail and a large chain to control him after his arrest. Note that an angel is used to arrest an angel. God follows protocol in judgment just as He follows protocol in blessing. Protocol is the name of the game. The fact that God has a protocol system is extremely important because there will never be any happiness, any blessing, or any capacity for life, until the protocol system is learned. That is the key to everything.

The king of arms is the second highest ranking angel in the college of heralds, therefore one of the highest ranking elect angels of all time. And the protocol system is followed: an angel is used to arrest an angel. Prior to the fall of Satan Lucifer himself was the highest ranking angel in creation. In fact Satan was the anointed cherub which means the king of arms was lower in rank by creation. There were no seraphs when God originally created the angelic creatures. However, all of that is changed since the arrogance and fall of Satan. If there is any one thing that will destroy faster and lead down the path to destruction in a hurry it is entertaining arrogance in the life. None of us can afford arrogance. During the ensuing prehistoric angelic conflict the king of arms chose for God, the officer of arms chose for God. They became elect angels of the highest rank and God created a new aristocracy as a result of the prehistorical angelic conflict. While Satan revolted against God, and at this time lost his power, we find elect angels going through whatever system of salvation was to become elect angels and rising to the top. So it isn't how you start life that counts, it is how you end up. That is one of the great applications that we can learn from this eschatological event.

The officer of arms is an elect angel and he ends up being the second highest aristocrat in the college of heralds while Satan ends up in the abyss for the longest prison sentence of any creature in all of history. The principle: No one ever loses by choosing the plan of God; no one ever loses by learning the protocol system of God and following it. Satan in revolt gained more power and approbation than any creature, but he lost it all. One of the manifestations of arrogance is greed, and greed is one of the great enemies of the human race. Arrogance is the greatest enemy to the creature whether angelic or human. With arrogance is motivational evil. Evil was created from Satan's arrogance. God despises evil; God has nothing to do with evil; God is not the author of evil; evil started with a motivation called arrogance in the greatest of all creatures, Satan himself. The one who rules the world and has ruled the world since the fall of man is now the source of all evil.

One thing about evil: Evil is always restless. There is no tranquillity in evil. People who are gossips and maligners and judges are restless people, they never have any tranquillity. They are always on the move. Evil is never satisfied with approbation and in arrogance demands more and more power, more and more approbation. In his lust for power Satan wanted to displace God, but he discovered instead that God replaced him. Now there is an entire order of angels called seraphs.

Note another principle: God never sends a boy to do a man's job. So if you want to be used by God — which is a legitimate ambition in life, you must continue momentum in the protocol system. In other words, you have to grow up spiritually. Your spiritual growth is the basis of your usefulness to God, not your talent, not your personality.

Verse 2, Satan's arrest. We do not know if Satan put up a fight but if he did he got whipped by someone he could have whipped by natural creation. The supernatural always supersedes the natural. Whatever you have naturally all you need to neutralise it is a little arrogance, but what you have spiritually requires the tenacity of day-by-day perspicacity, learning the protocol system and functioning under it.

We have a verb at the beginning of the verse, an aorist active indicative of kratew which means to seize with violence, to use force, to arrest by using force. So force was used, which indicates some resistance on the part of the most powerful of all creatures. An interesting thing is, Satan doesn't have his bodyguard any more, he doesn't have any of his angelic creatures, they have all been processed out. He stands alone and he gets whipped. The active voice: the officer of arms from the angelic college of heralds does the job. The indicative mood is declarative representing the reality of Satan's arrest. The officer of arms, once inferior, has stayed in God's protocol system, has risen to the top in God's protocol system, and now arrests Satan. Satan is called, this time, drakwn, "the dragon." It has the connotation of beauty. This is the most sensational arrest in history. Public enemy of all time is taken into custody. Perfect environment would be absolutely impossible with Satan roaming around the universe unrestrained and unfettered.

Concept: Criminals have no rights. A criminal is a criminal because he has rejected establishment, he has rejected freedom, he has rejected privacy, he has rejected the sacredness of property and life. Anyone who rejects the sacredness of freedom, property and life has no rights whatever. Criminals should be removed from society and normal living. Imprisonment means the absence of normal living. Perfect environment would be impossible without the greatest criminal of all time being imprisoned for a thousand years.

Next we see that Satan is called “the ancient serpent.” That means that Satan was the original source of temptation plus the inventor of cosmic one. He is called “the Devil,” Satan as the accuser of the believer in the court of heaven. Then we have “even Satan.” Satan means enemy, enemy of both God and man, plus the inventor of cosmic two. So we have a number of his aliases. Note that Satan is not called by his original name when he is arrested. His original name, as stated in the King James version, was Lucifer the son of the morning. Actually, that is not the correct translation. What is wrong with it? First of all, Lucifer is not Lucifer. Lucifer means the morning star, and that is his real name: The morning star, the son of the dawn. The morning star is the decoration which all of the great believers, the winners, will wear. It is a title that later was given to our Lord Jesus Christ in relationship with His hypostatic union. But Satan was the original morning star, the son of the dawn.

Isaiah 14:12, “How you are fallen,” a reference to the fall of the Devil — from heaven, O morning star, o son of the dawn!” This is the one who is called the dragon, the serpent, the Devil, even Satan, in the arrest passage, Revelation 20:2. “You have been cast down to the earth, you who weakened the nations!”

Verse 13, “You thought in your right lobe,” arrogance always begins with a thought. There is no such thing as an arrogant act without thought, “I will ascend to heaven; I will raise my throne above the stars [angelic creatures] of God” — in other words, Satan decided he was going to rule the angels since he was the highest ranking of all creatures. The stars of God are angelic creatures, “I will sit enthroned on the mount of the assembly,” the heavenly location for the angelic for the angelic convocation, “in the uttermost extremity of the north.’

Verse 14, “I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will make myself like the Most High God [I will be God].”

Verse 15, “Nevertheless you will be cast down into Sheol, to the recesses of the abyss.”

Ezekiel 28:12, “Thus saith the Lord God, ‘You had the seal of perfection, full of wisdom and perfect beauty’.”

Verse 13, “You were in Eden, the garden of God,” not the garden of Eden where man existed, that came later. This is another Eden, garden of God, “... On the day that you [Satan] were created,” he was in Eden, the garden of God. Not the garden of Eden of Genesis 2.

Verse 14, “You were the anointed who guards the throne room, and I [God] placed you there. You were on the holy mountain of God; you walked in the midst of the stones of fire.”

Verse 15, Satan was created perfect, just as Adam and the woman were created perfect. “You were blameless in your ways from the day you were created, until unrighteousness was found in you,” his original sin.

Verse 16, "... you were internally filled with violence," arrogant people always try to solve their problems with violence or its equivalent, putting down someone else. Arrogance cannot stand competition, "And you sinned; therefore I have cast you as profane from the mountain of God." Profane means lack of protocol. He rejected the protocol of heaven in the original creation. "Furthermore I have destroyed you, O guardian cherub, from the midst of the stones of fire."

Verse 17, "Because of your beauty your right lobe was lifted up; you distorted your wisdom because of your glamour."

Verse 18, "By the multitude of your iniquities and dishonest trade," he traded his relationship to God in protocol by creation for arrogant, inordinate ambition. He multiplied his evil which started with arrogance, "you have desecrated your sanctuaries," his responsibilities in the castle of heaven.

This is the one who has aliases. Notice in Revelation 20:2 there is no morning star, no son of the dawn mentioned any longer. Notice the aliases: "the ancient serpent," Satan as the original source of temptation of man, the inventor of cosmic one; "the Devil," Satan as the maligner; "Satan" [or enemy], Satan is both the enemy of God and man plus the inventor of cosmic two.

Translation: "And he [the officer of arms] seized the dragon, that ancient serpent, who is the Devil, even Satan, and bound him a thousand years."

Since Satan means enemy the Devil is the enemy of the following:

1. He is the enemy of mankind in general, illustrated by the fact that he is the original murderer, John 8:44.
2. he is the enemy of Bible doctrine, Matthew 13:9, 39.
3. He is the enemy of the unbeliever, Luke 8:12; 2 Corinthians 4:3,4; 2 Thessalonians 2:7-10; Colossians 2:8.
4. He is the enemy of the Church, Revelation 2:9, 13, 24.
5. He is the enemy of Christ, Revelation 12:4.
6. He is the enemy of Israel, Revelation 12:13,15.

As far as human history is concerned Satan has two advents. Both advents find Satan entering the world in a time of perfect environment. The first time Satan came it was to the perfect environment of the garden of Eden — Genesis 3:1-21. The result: Satan took over the rulership of the world from man. The second time Satan enters perfect environment is at the end of the Millennium. The result is the Gog and Magog revolution which results in Satan being cast into the lake of fire. Satan also has strategy to control the world which he rules. His control of the nations is mentioned in Revelation 12:9; 20:3. He also has control of the human race, but only by consent of the human race. You must of your own free will do something to enter the cosmic system. Satan controls the human race through cosmic involvement and/or demon influence. And, of course, he has control of believers in that cosmic system, 2 Corinthians 2:11; 11:3.

Advice for believers: James 4:6-10, our protection is grace as the policy of the plan of God. "He gives greater grace [greater than He has ever given before: the protocol system]. Therefore it says, 'God makes war against the arrogant, but he gives grace to the humble'. Therefore submit to God," submission has to do with the protocol system, "Resist the devil [avoidance or recovery from the cosmic system] and he will flee from you," the protocol system God has given us is greater than the power of Satan, "Draw near to God [momentum in the divine dynasphere] and he will draw near to you. Cleanse your hands, you sinning ones [rebound]; and purify your right lobes [momentum at gate four of the divine dynasphere], you double-minded," a believer living in cosmic one and cosmic two, "Be miserable, both mourn and weep; let your laughter be turned to mourning, and your happiness into gloom," result of living in the cosmic system. The believer becomes the product of his own bad decisions. He loses control of his own life, he has no personal sense of destiny, "Humble yourselves under the mighty hand of God," the believer learning and using the divine protocol system, "and he will exalt you [the advance in the protocol system]."

The prison term of Satan: we have the aorist active indicative of ballw which refers to incarceration, "and he bound him [incarcerated him] for a thousand years. The constative aorist contemplates Satan's prison sentence in its entirety. He didn't escape, he was bound for a thousand years. The active voice: the officer of arms produced the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of Satan's imprisonment during the entire Millennial reign of Christ. "Him," the accusative singular direct object of a)utoj, refers to Satan. This phrase occurs six times in our context, verses 2,3,4,5,6,7. The Latin word for a thousand years is millennium. In the Greek it is xilioi e)toj. It is both a dispensation and a civilisation.

Verse 3, we have the aorist active indicative of the verb ballw, which means to throw. Here it means to throw with vigour and therefore to throw with violence. The subject is the officer of arms from the angelic college of heralds, the second ranking seraph in the elect system of aristocracy among angels. The object of the verb is Satan who in prehistoric times was the guardian cherub, at that time being the highest ranking of all angelic creatures by creation. Hence, Satan was higher in rank than the one who now throws him into prison. The principle has application to us, even though it deals with the prehistoric angelic conflict: Those who make decisions against God wind up as losers. Satan is overpowered by an angel who was once inferior to him both in power and in beauty. The principle is: No one wins in rebellion against God. This is demonstrated by the dramatic arrest in verse 2.

The abyss is a part of Tartarus, the fourth compartment of Sheol or Hades, the prison of certain categories of fallen angels. The abyss is synonymous with Tartarus, according to 2 Peter 2:4 where the fallen angels of Genesis 6 are imprisoned. "Then he [the officer of arms] threw him [Satan] into the abyss [the fourth compartment of Sheol or Hades], he both locked and sealed it over him.” The word for “locked” is the aorist active indicative of the verb kleiw. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The prison door of the abyss was locked, and that is a very impressive thing because when we get to the end of this chapter we will see something of that prison door. The active voice: the officer of arms produces the action of the verb. By the way, this rank was achieved during the angelic conflict, and the principle: Those who are faithful to God surpass losers both in time and in eternity. The indicative mood is for the reality of Satan’s future imprisonment during the Millennial reign of Christ.

The second verb used here is the aorist active indicative of sfragizw. The culminative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, 1000 years of incarceration for the most powerful creature that ever came from the hand of God. Satan has neither power nor influence during the Millennial reign of Christ and this is a part of the perfect environment of the Millennial dispensation and civilisation. The active voice: the officer of arms produces the action of the verb. By creation this officer of arms was lower in rank than Satan but as a result of Satan’s fall in the prehistoric angelic conflict a higher rank was created by God, namely the seraph rank, and the officer of arms is the second highest in that particular rank. Therefore he is a very high angelic aristocrat as a result of his faithfulness to the person, to the plan, to the protocol, and to the policy of God in the prehistoric angelic conflict. “And sealed it over him,” this is a maximum security system.

The purpose for maximum security is also given in this verse. A purpose clause always begins with the conjunction i(na. We have i(na plus the subjunctive mood. This also has the negative mh in it, so it is a negative purpose clause, “that he should not.” The verb is the aorist active subjunctive of planaw which means to deceive, “that he should not deceive.” The culminative aorist tense views the action of the verb in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. During the Millennial reign of Christ the nations of the world for the first time in human history will not be deceived by Satan. The active voice: Satan as the ruler of the world today is the deceiver of nations and as long as Satan rules this world there will be wars because Satan deceives nations. War and many other problems cannot be abolished without the incarceration of Satan. The accusative plural direct object from e)qnoj is the word for nations. In the plural it often refers to Gentiles as a race, but it also has national connotations as well. The adverb e)pi means “any longer”; “that he should not deceive the nations any longer” is the literal translation, but we translate it in better English, “that he should no longer deceive the nations.” This implies that Satan as the ruler of the world deceives nations as his perpetual policy in human history. However, the nations cannot be deceived apart from their own arrogance and culpability. Nations are protected from Satanic deceit by a pivot of mature believers. Satan uses demonism related to idolatry, dope pedaling, drug abuse, to deceive nations as well as individuals, Revelation 18:3. Satan uses religion to deceive the nations, Revelation 19:20. The results of Satan’s deception are given in 2 Timothy 3:13, “But evil men and impostors will proceed from bad to worse, deceiving and being deceived,” deceiving with false doctrine and demonism, being deceived by their own involvement in the cosmic system. Arrogance is the major form of self-deception.

Then we have a final phrase, the term of the imprisonment, “until,” an Attic adverb. All of a sudden, in the middle of Koine Greek we have $\alpha\upsilon\tau\iota$. This is not a Koine word at all. It is a temporal conjunction introducing a temporal clause of future purpose, “until.” One again we have the phrase, “until the thousand years are completed.” The thousand years are literal, the last dispensation of human history. The aorist passive of $\tau\epsilon\lambda\epsilon\omega$ is the phrase for completed. The aorist tense is constative, contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety. The passive voice: the Millennium or thousand years receives the action of the verb. The subjunctive mood is potential implying a future reference, future to the time of Satan’s imprisonment. The prophecy of the devil’s release from prison is also mentioned at this time, “after these things he must be released for a short time.”

The longest prison sentence in history goes to Satan himself. After serving his prison sentence of a thousand years, during which we have the Millennial reign of Christ on earth and perfect environment, Satan is released to once again enter perfect environment and try to do something about it.

There is an important lesson here. Very few ever profit from incarceration. It is generally true that you cannot profit from any form of punishment or any form of rebuke or any form of being censored, unless you have humility. Humility is teachability. Arrogance cannot stand rebuke, to be put down, and arrogance destroys any possibility of profiting from any of these things. Imprisonment is generally useless as far as rehabilitation is concerned. There are some wonderful exceptions.

Satan did not learn all of the time he was in prison and he burned with arrogance. When he comes out after his release he will once again stir up trouble. Interestingly enough, after one thousand years of perfect environment on the earth he will find a lot of people who will join his revolution. Putting people in perfect environment means nothing because arrogance has no capacity for love or life or happiness or blessing or any anything that approaches good environment. This literal thousand-year prison term did not help Satan a bit at all. When you do not learn humility the hard way there is no way that you will ever learn this basic virtue. Learning the hard way is, of course, enforced humility; genuine humility is the basic virtue of life. Without the basic virtue of genuine humility there can never be true happiness in life and you do not carry built into your own soul any capacity for life or happiness.

Christ reigns in perfect environment for a literal 1000 years of history; the last 1000 years of history. The release of Satan from his prison at the end of the Millennial reign of Christ and the subsequent revolution merely demonstrate the fact that perfect environment is not the solution to man’s problems. We live in a time when there is no such thing as perfect environment on the earth but protocol from heaven has provided perfect environment. It has provided a perfect inner happiness for each one of us through the perception of Bible doctrine, through the modus vivendi of the divine dynasphere, through function in the protocol system. Man’s problems can only be solved spiritually from within, not environmentally from without.

Verses four, five, and six in this chapter deal with the general subject of the first and second resurrections. By way of introduction to the next two verses we note that there are two ways in which people in the Bible have returned from the dead. One is called resurrection, the other is called resuscitation. Resuscitation is when a person returns from the dead in his body of corruption and therefore subsequently he dies again. This was true of Lazarus. Resurrection is when a believer or, as we will note, an unbeliever is resurrected from the dead. A person returns from the dead as far as the believer is concerned in a body of incorruption and he is never again subject to any form of death. Therefore resurrection is rising again from the dead, the soul and the spirit joining the body and being in a permanent body forever and ever in the eternal state. More than that, resurrection is the beginning of the eternal state for the persons involved. Resurrection, therefore, is one of the basic doctrines which all believers must understand for spiritual growth, as stated in Hebrews 6:1,2. Resurrection is also a part of the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, 1 Corinthians 15:1-4. The resurrection also emphasises the difference between a theophany and a Christophany. A theophany is an appearance of Jesus Christ prior to His incarnation: He appeared as an angel, as a man in Abraham's tent, as a man who wrestled with Jacob, and in other forms as well. A Christophany is an appearance of Jesus Christ after His resurrection from the dead. There are 23 different appearances which are recorded in the Word of God.

The resurrection of Christ is also a part of His strategic victory, 1 Corinthians 15:20-25. In verse 23, "But each one [category] in his own order [tacij, battalion]: Christ the firstfruits," Christ is a part of the first resurrection. We actually have four companies. The firstfruits refers to Christ who has already been resurrected. The second in line is going to be the Church, the royal family of God who will be resurrected at the Rapture. Then we have the Old Testament believers plus Tribulational martyrs who will be resurrected at the second advent. Finally, there are those Tribulational believers who survived the Tribulation and they will be resurrected after the end of the Millennium.

The second phase of resurrection is necessary for the perpetuation of the line of David and the fulfillment of the Davidic covenant, Romans 1:3, "Concerning his Son, who was born of the seed of David according to the flesh." Jesus Christ came as the seed of David. The reason is because David was promised that he would have a Son who would reign forever. The Davidic dynasty is gone but the Son who would reign forever is descended from David and Bathsheba. Mary was descended through the fourth son, Nathan. The line of Solomon goes down through Joseph who was the legal but not the real father of our Lord's humanity. However, the Son dies on the cross. How can He reign forever? Through resurrection, and when the Son returns He will fulfill the Davidic covenant. Romans 1:4, "Having been established the Son of God in the sphere of inherent power [the deity of Christ], according to the standard of the Spirit of sanctification [ministry of the Holy Spirit] from the source of resurrection from the dead." So this will be fulfilled through resurrection from the dead. And 2 Timothy 2:8 says, "Keep in mind Jesus Christ has been resurrected from the dead, descendant of David, according to my gospel."

There are two agents in resurrection. God the Father is said to be the agent of resurrection in Colossians 2:12; 1 Thessalonians 1:10; 1 Peter 1:21. There is also a reference or two to God the Holy Spirit raising the humanity of Christ, Acts 2:24; Romans 1:4; 8:11; 1 Peter 3:18. But the Lord is also said to raise Himself, so the resurrection is the function of the entire Trinity. The resurrection is necessary for the advance of the plan of the Father, Isaiah 53:10, "He shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days [resurrection], therefore the plan of the Lord will advance in his hand [of our Lord Jesus Christ]." The resurrection of Christ is the basis for the believer's confidence in the future, 1 Peter 1:3-5.

Resurrection has always been a source of great application to believers in time of discouragement. In Hebrews 11 we have some illustrations of this principle. In verse 9 we read about Abraham: "By means of faith [doctrine] he lived as a temporary resident with reference to the land, as a foreign land, dwelling in tents with Isaac and Jacob, joint heirs of the promise." Abraham was an extremely wealthy man but he chose to live in a tent until God chose to provide him with a home. Abraham was claiming a promise and therefore living in a tent didn't make any difference to him. Verse 10, "for he himself kept waiting with anticipation for a city having foundations whose builder and designer is God." Verse 13, "All of these were still living by faith when they died," Abraham died in a tent. He was still waiting for the promise, he wouldn't move out of the tent and into a permanent shelter, "not having received the promise, but having seen the same from a distance, they saluted and embraced it." By faith, even in dying, they recognised that God would keep His word and that the promise would still be fulfilled. How did they know it? Why did they salute it? Why did they embrace the promise? They are going to receive it in resurrection. In his resurrection body Abraham will enjoy that city coming down out of heaven. Abraham constantly applied the doctrine of resurrection and as a result of that application he was never discouraged, he lived a marvelous life, and he always lived in a tent. And he made other applications of resurrection as well. Isaac on the altar, verses 17,18, "By means of faith Abraham, when he was being tested, offered Isaac as a sacrifice; and he who had received the promises was about to sacrifice his only son [the only one who was recognised in the line]; even though God had said to him, 'In Isaac your seed shall be designated'."

There is an even more dramatic verse, verse 22, "By means of faith, Joseph, while he was in the process of dying, recalled to mind about the exodus of the people of Israel, so he gave an order concerning his bones." He knew that by the time the Jews left Egypt his body would be gone, all except the bones. So he gave an order concerning his bones. Why? Because he was an heir of the promise with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and he wanted to be resurrected on the very spot that belonged to him for all eternity. So in Genesis 50:24-26 we have an amplification of what it means "concerning his bones." "Then Joseph said to his brothers, 'I am about to die, but God will definitely come to your aid, and take you out of this land to the land he has promised you with an oath.'" The land was promised to Abraham in Genesis 13:14,15; 15:18,19; to Isaac in Genesis 26:3,4; to Jacob in 35:12. It was an unconditional promise, there were no strings attached of any kind. For the next 400 years, after Joseph was buried, the coffin of Joseph remained outside, above ground. When the Jews went into slavery this was the source of their hope. Though he had been the Prime Minister of Egypt he was not buried, he had no funeral. For 400 years the bones of Joseph remained unburied as a testimony both to God's faithfulness and to the doctrine of resurrection. Every generation in slavery saw the unburied coffin and they learned the story, they learned about God's plan plus the fact of the doctrine of resurrection. Joseph was not to be buried until the Jews as a free people could enter the land of promise and be buried in the land that belonged to him forever. That is exactly what happened. In Exodus 13:19 Moses, understanding the issue, took the bones of Joseph with him when he left Egypt, "for he had made the sons of Israel solemnly promise, saying, 'God will definitely deliver you; and then you must carry my bones from this place'." So the coffin was at the head of the column all of the march through the desert for forty years. When the Jews finally came into the land Joseph was finally buried after more than 400 years. So when the resurrection occurs at the second advent Joseph will stand beside Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and he will survey for the first time the land that has been promised to him. In Joshua 24:32 — "And Joseph's bones which the Jews had brought up from Egypt were buried at Shechem, on a track of land that Jacob bought from the sons of Hamor for one hundred pieces of silver." This became the inheritance of Joseph's descendants.

So we come to Revelation 20:4 and we see two rewards given to the Tribulational martyrs. The first is, they act as judges, and in other cases they actually rule nations. The judges of the Millennium are mentioned first, John sees all this as a vision, the aorist active indicative of the verb o(raw). "And I saw thrones, and they that sat upon them," the aorist active indicative of kaqizw is for sitting on these thrones of judgment. The aorist tense is a constative aorist, it gathers into one entirety this vision. The active voice: Tribulational martyrs who were willing to die for the Word of God, who made application of Bible doctrine in their martyrdom, who recognised that life on earth is not nearly as important as life in eternity, and were willing to die rather than to compromise Bible doctrine. They refused to accept the Satanic ecumenical religious system that will exist in the Tribulation. Therefore, to them life is not nearly as important as Bible doctrine. Principle: If doctrine is not everything to you, doctrine is nothing to you.

An aorist passive indicative follows, the aorist passive of didomi which means to give, "and judgment was given to them." The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, in resurrection bodies they are judges throughout the earth, but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. Tribulational martyrs resurrected at the second advent as a part of the third phase of the first resurrection are rewarded with judgment responsibilities in the Millennium. The passive voice: Tribulational martyrs, mature believers, winners in time, receive the action of the verb as a part of their reward for their victory in the Tribulation. The indicative mood is declarative for the eschatological reality, many of the judges of the Millennium are going to be those Tribulational martyrs to whom doctrine was much more important than life itself.

Then the dative plural indirect object, also the dative of advantage, "it was given to them," a)utoj. It is to their advantage to have these wonderful blessings. The dative of indirect object also indicates the ones in whose interest the act is performed. It is to their advantage and in their interest that they were rewarded with judgeships in the Millennium. This is the second vision of John regarding the Millennial reign of Christ and each vision is introduced by the aorist active indicative of o(raw), "I saw." The phrase occurs three times in this chapter, in verses 1,4,11.

Next we have the identification of the judges. We have the accusative plural direct object of yuxh, “the souls.” With this an articular perfect passive participle from pelekizw which means to be beheaded with an axe. “Furthermore I saw the souls of those who have been decapitated.” The definite article is used as a relative pronoun, “who.” The perfect tense is dramatic, a rhetorical application of the perfect tense. This perfect tense indicates a completed action with emphasis on the results of the action, and that is the existing state of martyrdom. But if they had been immature they could very easily have chosen to say: “Well, I can’t lose my salvation, I’ll just go ahead and become one of the converts to ecumenical religion.” But they didn’t say that. Doctrine was more important than compromise. The passive voice: believers who are winners in the Tribulation receive the action of the verb. Then he says, “because of the testimony for [or about] Jesus.”

Translation of verse 4 so far, “The I saw the thrones, and they sat on them, and judgment was given to them: furthermore I saw the souls of those who had been decapitated because of the witness for Jesus.”

Then he adds a connective conjunction kai, but it is used as an emphatic conjunction and is translated, “really.” This is really why they were willing to accept death rather than compromise. Then we have a prepositional phrase, dia plus the accusative of logoj, “because of doctrine from God.” Doctrine made the difference, doctrine was the source of their happiness, “and these [winners] who are such a category as do not worship the beast dictator, nor his image, and did not receive the mark on the forehead, and in their hands.”

Then we have a specific reference to their resurrection. Just as today in the Church Age, so also in the future in the Tribulation, all spiritual momentum in the plan of God is accomplished through doctrine, “really because of doctrine from God.” This emphasises the importance of Bible doctrine and, of course, it must be the number one priority in the life. It says “they lived,” the aorist active indicative of zaw, this is their resurrection. They took the side of doctrine and now they see its wonderful benefits on earth, “they both came to life.” This is an ingressive aorist, it denotes entrance into a state or condition, therefore into a resurrection status. The active voice: Tribulational martyrs produce the action. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of doctrine, the resurrection of Tribulational martyrs as a part of the first resurrection. This is the concept of Isaiah 26:19,20 and Daniel 12:13.

The entire verse in corrected translation: “Then I saw the thrones, and they sat on them, and judgment was given to them: furthermore I saw the souls of those who had been decapitated because of the witness for Jesus, really because of doctrine from God, and these winners who are of such a category as do not worship the beast dictator, not his image, and do not receive the mark on their foreheads or on their hands; they both came to life and ruled with Christ for a thousand years.”

Verse 5 — we have reached a parenthesis. The next sentence, “But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished” is a parenthesis, and the sentence of verse 4 is concluded at the end of verse 5. So without the parenthesis it would read: “and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years; this is the first resurrection.” The sentence is completed after the parenthesis. So we note in verse 5 that we have a parenthesis regarding the second resurrection. There are two sentences in this verse. The first sentence is a parenthesis to bring out a contrast between the first and second resurrections. After the parenthetical sentence the subject of verse 4 is continued regarding the first resurrection.

The first word of the sentence, "But," does not occur in the original. It simply refers in the nominative plural from loipoj specifically to unbelievers now in the Tribulation. With have a contrast to the believers in verse 4 set up here without the use of the conjunction. Loipoj, "The rest," means the unbelievers. A descriptive genitive follows, "The rest of the dead," nekroj, referring to Tribulational unbelievers who died prior to the second advent. These unbelievers survived the Tribulation but they were removed by the baptism of fire. Actually, this is the second resurrection which includes all the unbelievers of history.

Then we have the aorist active indicative of zaw, and it means "came to life." It is an ingressive aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb at its beginning, hence it denotes entrance into a state or condition, in this case the unbelievers in the second resurrection. As we will see at the end of this chapter the second resurrection is simply a means of bringing all unbelievers of the human race together for the last judgment, after which time they are cast into the lake of fire. "The rest of the dead [the unbelievers of the Tribulation plus all the unbelievers of history] did not come to life until the thousand years had been completed." We have the negative plus zaw. The ingressive aorist contemplates the action of the verb at its beginning, the entrance into the state of the second resurrection. The active voice: all unbelievers are judged at this time. Why are they judged? Because they have rejected Jesus Christ as saviour. "He that believeth not on him is condemned already because he has not believed on the name of the only begotten Son of God." But when they are indicted on the cross the evidence is based not on the fact that they have rejected Christ but on the fact that they are standing there on the basis of their human good. No sin will be mentioned at the last judgment because every sin in the history of the human race went to court at the cross, and God the Father from His justice imputed all of these sins to Christ on the cross. He programmed them right out of the computer of divine decrees and He judged those sins. So at the last judgment what is left for the indictment? The people who stand there are unbelievers and only one thing is left, their good deeds. "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us." So they will be judged on the basis of their good deeds and cast into the lake of fire forever. But to get them there, to court, they have to be resurrected.

"The rest of the dead did not come to life until the thousand years had been completed," the aorist passive subjunctive of the verb telew. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety, the resurrection of all unbelievers at the end of the Millennium, but regarding it from the viewpoint of existing results, the last judgment. Hebrews 9:27, "It is appointed unto man once to die, but after that the judgment." "Once to die" is physical death, the soul leaving the body and in the case of the unbeliever goes into Hades. In the second resurrection the soul leaves Hades, returns to the body and then stands before the great white throne for the last judgment. This is at the end of the Millennium; it is called the second death. "After that the judgment" is the second death, being cast into the lake of fire forever and ever.

"Until the thousand years have been completed" is the end of the parenthesis. Now we pick up the sentence which was begun in verse four: "This is the first resurrection." That is the completion of the sentence.

Verse 6, the characteristics of the first resurrection. We start out with the nominative singular subject makarioj, a word for happiness. This is what is called a beatitude, simply a provision of happiness. This is the fifth beatitude in the book of Revelation. The first was in chapter one, verse three, the blessing which comes from mastering the content of the book of Revelation. The second beatitude is related to dying. People are afraid of dying; the fear death. So the second beatitude, Revelation 14:13, says, "Happy are the dead who die in the Lord," a reference to dying grace and also to any believer who dies. Any believer who dies is going to be with the Lord, so any believer is going to be happy immediately after he dies. The believer living in the divine dynasphere has happiness in dying just as in living. Furthermore, there will be no regrets. The third beatitude is the blessing of application of doctrine found in Revelation 16:15. All of us face situations where we can only handle them through the proper application of doctrine. Many of the doctrines that we learn are simply to give us a personal love and appreciation of the Lord Jesus Christ. This expresses itself in our confidence in Him, our worship of Him, our love of Him, and being motivated by that love for him. There are situations where certain doctrines are applied. Here is a situation, the Armageddon campaign: "Be alert, I will come suddenly as a thief," surprise element, "happy is he [the Tribulational believer who is a winner] who stays alert, guards his uniform equipment so that he may not march naked and they see his shame." The fourth of the beatitudes has to do with being invited to a party, the blessing of being invited to a special party at the second advent. It follows the coronation of Jesus Christ. It is found in Revelation 19:9. The fifth of the beatitudes is the blessing of being part of the first resurrection. Ultimate sanctification is in view there. The sixth of the beatitudes is found in Revelation 22:7, the blessing of positive volition toward doctrine: "Behold, I am coming quickly: happy is he who heeds the doctrines of the prophecy of this book." So there is always great happiness related to doctrine, both in its perception and application. The final beatitude of the book of Revelation is the blessing of being a winner in the plan of God: 22:14, "Happy are they who wash their robes, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter by the gate of the city."

Here we have the fifth beatitude, the blessing of being a part in the first resurrection. It also says more than happiness here. There is a second subject, a(gioj, which is translated "holy," a good translation but sometimes rather abstruse. There are three categories of sanctification and this is really what it connotes here. First of all, the moment we accept Christ as saviour we enter into union with Christ through the baptism of the Spirit, and that is called phase one sanctification. Secondly, certain believers advance from gate four to gate eight inside the divine dynasphere, the advanced to maturity, and that is called temporal sanctification. Phase three sanctification comes at the end of the Church Age with the resurrection or the Rapture of the Church. That is called ultimate sanctification. Ultimate sanctification belongs to all believers as does positional sanctification. The sanctification that is always in doubt is the one that deals with the protocol system, and that has to do with whether you are a winner or a loser. Only winners have the second sanctification. So we have "Happy and holy is he," the reference to the believer in a resurrection body. All believers, therefore, are going to have happiness in the eternal state.

We have something here that adds to the happiness, the articular present active participle of the verb εἶπω which means to have or to have and to hold. The definite article is used as a personal plus a relative pronoun. The static present refers to a condition which will exist in the eternal state. We will always be happy in the eternal state. The active voice: the believer produces the action. It is a circumstantial participle. Then we have an independent nominative from μέρος, meaning a part, a part of the whole. One would expect here the accusative direct object of the participle but instead we have an independent nominative. Why? It is technical in the Greek language, but when an idea is conceived independent of any particular verbal relationship the expression may be left standing alone in the nominative case with descriptive or explanatory phrase added. Therefore it takes the happiness all of us will ultimately have and isolates it from everything that we are experiencing today. We may be miserable but ultimately God is going to work it out no matter how many bad decisions you make, no matter how miserable you make yourself, ultimately all of us are going to be happy. That is grace. Grace can overrule and take care of every failure we can ever have. "Happy and holy is he who has part in the first resurrection," because the believer is going to be happy under a state of ultimate sanctification and it is going to be that way forever and ever.

The second half of the verse says, "the second death does not have jurisdiction over you." All of the unhappy people in the eternal state are going to be unbelievers. And they will be unhappy forever because the lake of fire is a place of second resurrection, a place of consciousness, a place of intense pain, a place where the pain never ceases. Ultimately in the eternal state God who has worked all of this out in His grace is going to provide for us perfect happiness but He can't provide it for those who rejected Him as saviour.

"but they shall be priests," there is a Millennial priesthood, "of God and of Christ, in fact they shall rule with him a thousand years." This priesthood is a different priesthood. Today every believer is a priest, in the past they had specialised priesthoods, the Levitical priesthood of Israel, the family priesthood of the patriarchs, but in the future there is going to be one of great strength and that is the one dealing with the Tribulational martyrs. The Tribulational martyrs were mature believers, they thought more of doctrine than they did of death and they would not renounce the Lord and they died. Therefore, some of them are going to be judges in the Millennium, some are going to rule, but all of these martyrs are going to form a specialised priesthood.

The first thing we note in verses 7-10 is the release of Satan from prison. Verse 7 begins with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, translated "Now." The conjunction οταν introduces an indefinite future temporal clause. We can translate it "when" or "whenever." It is looking forward to the completion of the thousand-year sentence, "Now when the thousand years had been completed." We have the aorist passive subjunctive of the verb τελειωσει. The culminative aorist tense contemplates the last Millennium as history in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. When the last dispensation is completed it coincides exactly with the release of Satan from prison. Satan has been in prison for a thousand years and during that thousand years on earth perfect environment has existed. The passive voice: the Millennial reign of Christ receives the action of the verb. The subjunctive mood is used to indicate the indefinite temporal clause where the time involved is a future event in history. We are looking at something prophetically.

Then we have the subject, satanaj. When we have a transliteration of Satan it is taken from shatan, so you would think this came from that, but it came from the Aramaic rather than the Hebrew. Therefore, in the Greek it is satanoj. The proper noun is simply translated "Satan," it is not a transliteration. It would only be a transliteration if it had been taken from the Hebrew. What is the difference? People expected a new person to come out of jail, so instead of calling him shatan, the same old criminal, he is actually called satanaj. That is taken from the Aramaic which is very similar. So Satan is now released: future passive indicative of luw. It is a predictive future anticipating his release at the end of the Millennium. The passive voice: Satan receives the action of the verb. He is released from his jail. Neither Satan nor fallen angels will function during the Millennial reign of Christ. The removal of fallen angels and Satan from the earth is a part of the perfect environment of the Millennium. While human volition is no longer influenced by Satan many of the people of the Millennium will reject Christ as their personal saviour and they will continue to produce evil from the function of their own volition. It is a rather subdued evil because any evil that is involved in criminality means instant death: capital punishment. We need to remember that Satan is the arch criminal of all history. In fact he is the arch criminal of the prehistorical angelic conflict. Satan, then, as the inventor of the cosmic system, and as the inventor of criminality, has now been released from prison. The leopard does not change his spots and he is now ready to start a revolution.

Verse 8, the Gog and Magog revolution. Gog is Satan as the leader of the last international conspiracy. This is the code name for Satan. We start out with the future active indicative of e)xerxomai, "He will appear." As soon as Satan gets out of jail he goes back to planet earth, his old haunts. This is a reference to Satan's return to the earth from his prison in Hades and therefore we might call this the second advent of Satan. The first advent of Satan, Genesis 3:1-5, was where Satan came to perfect environment and destroyed it; the second advent, Revelation 20:7,8, the same thing is true. In both advents of Satan he found perfect environment on the earth and conspired to destroy it. In his first advent he was successful; in his second advent the conspiracy and the revolution will fail. In both advents Satan alleges to improve perfect environment. To do that he has to lie a lot, so he lies, he distorts, and he uses a system of flattery in order to appeal to the arrogance of individuals.

Part of Satan's philosophy includes the idea that by improving man's environment, by eliminating the weak and unfit from society. Environment is not the solution to man's problems, only a personal relationship to God will solve it. Satan also likes to promote education, he also likes to promote reformation and better social understanding; and one of his greatest systems of flattery is that gimmick: better social understanding. So man by man's efforts cannot produce a golden age, but Satan comes along with a lie and says, "O yes, you can. All you have to do is to eliminate the weak; all you have to do is to improve the environment by reformation, by better social understanding.” There’s always a gimmick, and the principle is: The end of history, like the beginning of history, will demonstrate man’s need for relationship with God through faith in Christ, and then the blessing of the protocol system which follows.

“He will appear.” The future tense indicates that the second advent of Satan is a future event of eschatological doctrine. Hence, the predictive future anticipates the return of Satan to planet earth after his release from prison after serving his 1000 years. The active voice: Satan produces the action of the verb in returning to planet earth, the only option left. In fact, Satan is running out of options. He cannot return to heaven, he does not desire to remain in that section of Hades after he gets out. The principle is: Evil always closes down one’s options in life. The more decisions anyone makes for evil the more they limit their options in life until their options are choked off. For the unbeliever or fallen angels the options are also destroyed for eternity. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. Why did he come back? The aorist active infinitive of planaw, to deceive. If ever there was a word to describe revolution, the Russian revolution, the French revolution, the Cuban revolution, etc., this is it: a few smart people have deceived a whole lot of idiots who are the pawns in the game of revolution. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, the last Satanic conspiracy in history. It regards it from the viewpoint of its existing results, the revolution against the rule of Jesus Christ, the perfect environment of the Millennium. Because of the perfect environment of the Millennial reign of Christ Satan must use his greatest genius, deception, lies, to awaken dissatisfaction. Where no dissatisfaction could legitimately exist he manages to do it. There is no organisation, there is no church, there is no business, there is no profession, there is no group of people in a social relationship, no matter how perfect or sublime, that cannot be destroyed by the entrance of some person with that in mind. That is demonstrated by the perfect environment of the Millennium. The trouble maker this time is Satan, he has the great genius and ability to do this. He will open his mouth, use his personality, and he will gain thousands and perhaps even millions of revolutionaries to join his group. All of this, of course, is deception. People are easily deceived unless their soul is loaded up with truth, with doctrine. The only thing that frees us from deception is doctrine: “Ye shall know the truth, and the truth will make you free.” The active voice: Satan produces the action of the verb through dishonesty, through deceit, through misrepresentation, collusion, treachery, fabrication, hypocrisy, sham, subterfuge. The infinitive of purpose: it is Satan’s purpose to use his genius, to use his personality, to use his beauty, to regain control of planet earth. One thousand years of imprisonment have not changed Satan a bit, and while Satan is a genius he has not learned the simplest lesson of society: the power of God is infinitely greater than the power of man or the power of any angelic creature.

The culminative aorist tense of the verb planaw contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, the last Satanic conspiracy against Christ, and it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, a revolution against the rule of Christ, the perfect environment of the Millennium. Because of the perfect environment of our Lord’s Millennial reign and all that goes with it Satan must use tremendous deception in order to pick up revolutionaries. He does. The fact that he is able with his genius to lie, one of the concepts of criminality, and to deceive, and to gain influence over people, is very important. It all goes to prove a very interesting principle and the inference is quite obvious. Here is a period of a thousand years after the second advent of our Lord Jesus Christ, a period of perfect environment. The only thing that isn't perfect is the fact that man still has an old sin nature. Life is extended, the only reason anyone ever dies in the Millennium is simply because of capital punishment, and the lion and the lamb lie down side by side so there is no violence in the animal life. Swords are turned into plowshares, spears into pruning hooks, man will learn war no more. All of this adds up to the fact that you would think that people would be very happy and very satisfied. But there is a kind of person who if he can't find something to complain about is not happy. And there is nothing to complain about. If there is anything that is frustrating it is for a gripey person not to have a gripe. So when Satan is released from his thousand years of incarceration, the first thing he does is to try to use his genius to establish a few things to complain about. That is exactly how deception begins.

The principle that goes with this, and the one that we can apply though we are not in the Millennial dispensation, is this: The only happiness that the believer, or anyone for that matter, can ever have is the happiness that is manufactured inside the divine dynasphere. The divine dynasphere is a factory for manufacturing happiness. Happiness therefore comes from a system, whereas unhappiness also comes from a system, Satan's cosmic system. When the believer is in the divine dynasphere we call him the protocol believer; when he is in the cosmic system we call him a cosmic believer. So using that nomenclature the protocol believer has happiness; the cosmic believer has unhappiness. The other way of looking at the absolute category of the spiritual life is to recognise the principle that when God the Holy Spirit controls the soul the believer is said to be spiritual; when the old sin nature gains control of the soul then the believer is said to be carnal. The fruit of the Spirit, when the Holy Spirit controls the soul, is happiness, "love, joy", etc. From the standpoint of who controls the soul you are either carnal or spiritual. The spiritual believer has some degree of happiness, depending on his growth, of course. (There are no degrees of spirituality; there are degrees of growth) A mature believer has more happiness when he is filled with the Spirit than an immature believer. The carnal believer can have a pseudo stimulation but no real happiness. So, once again, a system: spirituality manufactures happiness; carnality manufactures misery. So when we are looking at life from the control of the soul we talk about the carnal believer and the spiritual believer; when we look at life from the standpoint of God's protocol system, the divine dynasphere, we have the protocol believe and the cosmic believer. The principle is this: When you vest your happiness in a person, in a social life, in a sexual life, in a business life, in a professional life, in some form of success and human security, immediately you have a problem which is not happiness because you are using something that cannot manufacture happiness. If you want to have a relationship with a member of the opposite sex and you depend on that for happiness, you have done a terrible thing to that person. By depending on her for happiness you are not happy, because you are depending on the wrong thing. A woman simply cannot manufacture happiness; stimulation, yes; happiness, no. Personal love is one of two ways that we guarantee a miserable life if in personal love we depend upon our opposite number for our happiness. This is because in personal love if you love someone of the opposite sex or you depend on friends for your happiness then obviously you have surrendered the control of your life to that person. Furthermore you have surrendered your happiness to that person. That person will disappoint you, disenchant you, disillusion you, and distract you. The point is that you are going to be disappointed sooner or later in that person, some how, some way, along the way. Therefore that person has made you miserable because you surrendered your life to them. That is a tragedy because you have done that person a disservice in many ways because you blame that person when anything goes wrong and you blame that person when you are disenchanted, disillusioned, upset. But it is not just personal love where you turn the custodianship of your life over to someone else, you do it also with personal hatred — anything that is personal.

The reason that Satan can pick up so many people in the Millennium for his revolution is because in perfect environment it is personal, and people are still depending on people for happiness. People are seeking happiness by trying to extrapolate it from people, from pleasant circumstances. There are pleasant circumstances and lovely people.

We could learn something from this revolution, then. Don't get personal until you have your very own happiness. Take it wherever you go. Once you carry your very own happiness around with you then you become personal and you interact in groups or traffic, or wherever your interaction is involved, you bring happiness into the picture because you have been functioning in God's protocol system. In the divine dynasphere you have developed virtue. Virtue must precede happiness. And at gate six you have developed impersonal love which is the capacity for personal love. No one can succeed in human relationships without impersonal love, without virtue. This becomes a major issue because from impersonal love you have an attitude toward the entire human race, toward all. Impersonal love toward all means you can concentrate on one person and bring happiness into the picture and you are not surrendering your happiness to them or the custodianship of your life to them, you are bringing to that one person your happiness, therefore blessing by association. Where there would be formerly antagonism toward a stranger or toward someone you have loved and they have disappointed you, and where you would bring to them this antagonism now you bring to them impersonal love, and you bring into their life happiness by the very fact of your toleration, by the function. So don't get personal until you have the virtue to do it.

Now Satan comes back, and there are two kinds of people on the earth in the Millennium. There are believers and there are unbelievers. There are believers who have functioned in God's protocol system that will exist in the Millennium, a system that is different from ours but it produces happiness. There are unbelievers and since there is no cosmic system there are believers who are frustrated but the old sin nature has nowhere to go. But they are waiting, they are biding their time. They will be irritated and stay irritated. The point is: Satan has not been rehabilitated and after his release from prison he comes back to find a potential for revolution and terrorism. (Terrorism is a splinter of a revolution; the whole log is the revolution itself). The infinitive of purpose indicates that Satan's purpose is to use his genius to regain control of planet earth. One thousand years of imprisonment have not changed criminality in the father of criminality. While Satan is a genius he has not learned the simplest lesson that the power of God is infinitely greater than creature power, and so he goes about to deceive, the accusative plural direct object of e)qnoj, "the nations."

We have so far, then, in this verse: "Then he [Satan] will appear on earth to deceive the nations," and then we have the phrase, "those in the four hemispheres of the earth."

The revolution, then, is universal and international. This means the human beings with one thousand years of perfect enjoyment throughout the entire earth have their malcontents who are ready to join. This proves that man can be given every category of blessing, the best possible environment in which to enjoy it, and cannot be satisfied apart from a personal relationship with God. That begins with regeneration, and that introduces the subject of protocol whereby all of the freedoms and blessings are channeled into a system of capacity and therefore become a part of enjoyment of life. So the whole principle is that man can be given everything that he associates with happiness and blessing but he can't be satisfied unless he has a relationship with protocol. The most shocking principle here is the total depravity of man still existing in the Millennium. While restrained by the ruler of this world, our Lord Jesus Christ, it is still ready to break out just as soon as a leader shows up. One thousand years of perfect environment which can only produce happiness find millions who are discontented and ready for a change.

How can Satan deceive so many Millennial citizens? Mankind apart from absolute truth, Bible doctrine, and apart from the protocol system of God can be very easily deceived. Discernment comes from doctrine and the ability to recognise the situation as it is, and the solution, comes from the protocol system. In spite of the perfect environment, the fantastic prosperity of the human race, the dynamic spiritual life of many of the believers, and everything associated with human happiness, there are actually millions of people on the earth at that time ready to follow anyone who would overthrow the perfect reign of our Lord Jesus Christ. The reason is obvious. Millions of people in perfect environment still have no capacity for this blessing, no capacity for life, no capacity for happiness or success, because they have rejected the three categories of Bible doctrine, category #1, the laws of divine establishment for all the human race; category #2, the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ for the unbeliever; category #3, Bible doctrine for the believer. Negative volition toward absolute truth and/or Bible doctrine destroys capacity for life, capacity for blessing, capacity for prosperity, and capacity for happiness. Only the believer living in the protocol system and perpetuating momentum in the plan and policy of God has the necessary capacity to enjoy blessing and perfect happiness in the Millennial reign of Christ. Happiness is the status of the soul with maximum doctrine, not the possession of things, not approbation from people, success, prosperity or achievement. Life is meaningless, then, without Bible doctrine and the resources of arrogance can only produce unhappiness and self-induced misery.

This brings us to the code name of the conspiracy. It is given under the first word, "Gog." The accusative singular definite article goes with it. So we have "Gog and Magog," from all nations there will be those who will join the conspiracy. They will follow Satan in the last revolution. There are only four other references to Gog and Magog and they are all found in the Old Testament. All of them distinguish between Gog as the leader and Magog as the people, Genesis 10:2; 1 Chronicles 1:5; 5:4; Ezekiel 38:2. In each of those four references we have phrases like Ezekiel 38:2, "Son of man, set your face toward Gog of the land of Magog." So the four Old Testament references always recognise Gog as the leader and, for example, Magog as the people or the land involved. So it is always Gog of Magog as in Ezekiel 38 and 39. Gog is the ruler of a great empire in the Tribulation; Magog are the people that he rules. If the Rapture occurs soon it is quite obvious that Gog is the dictator of the Russian communist empire of the king of the north; Magog is used to describe the people of that empire because they represent many different races.

This is a code name here for the conspiracy and it is taken vocabulary-wise from what we have in the Old Testament. It is Gog and Magog. God is, again however, Satan; Magog are the people who follow him. He goes forth "to deceive the nations, those from the four hemispheres of the earth, Gog and Magog." What is the meaning of the code name Gog and Magog? Gog is the code name for Satan as the leader of the last revolution in history; Magog is the code name for those who join the revolution. Since they join the revolution from all races and nations of the earth, and since they are anti-God they are under the code name Magog. While Gog and Magog is not the same as Gog of Magog, the king of the north in the Old Testament, the code name is taken from Ezekiel 38 and 39 because of a similarity in pattern. Gog is used to designate the antichrist leader, the king of the north in Ezekiel 38 and 39 and, of course, Satan released from prison at the end of the Millennium. Magog is used to designate the antichrist followers from all of the nations and races. The army of the king of the north was the eschatological reference in Ezekiel. So the code name Gog and Magog explains the structure of this verse. First we are introduced to Gog, who is Satan, as the leader and the arch conspirator of the last revolution in history. In the last half of this verse we meet Magog, the international revolutionary army who concentrate to overthrow the rule of Christ on earth. So that once again the code name follows the pattern just as it was in Ezekiel 38 and 39.

One of the most phenomenal demonstrations in all of history of God's grace toward the unbeliever is found in the Millennium. Instead of judgment by pain it is warning by perfect environment. The unbeliever in the Millennium shares the perfect environment that God provides. Jesus Christ rules the earth and He rules the believer and the unbeliever, and the unbeliever is the beneficiary of the most phenomenal things in the Millennium. Yet he rejects the gospel, and he refuses to believe in Jesus Christ who is not only ruling the world at that time but in the first advent went to the cross and was judged for his sins. People who are thrown into the lake of fire who lived in perfect environment will probably, once they are in the lake of fire forever, have a comprehension of grace that few people ever had.

Our next phrase begins with the aorist active infinitive of sunagw, and it means to assemble. Here it is a military word, "to concentrate." So the people of the revolution are concentrated, "to concentrate them." The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. Satan's revolution gains momentum and it suddenly has a tremendous mob. Satan as the leader in the active voice produces the action under the code name Gog. The direct object refers to Magog, the antichrist revolutionary army. Note a principle here. There hasn't been any warfare for a thousand years but revolution must resort to violence to fulfill its purpose. That is why we have Islamic and Marxist terrorist groups throughout the world. The infinitive of intended result means when the result is indicated as fulfilling a deliberate objective, a blending of purpose and result. Note that they have come to fight, they have come to kill, they have come to use terrorism.

We have a prepositional phrase, e)ij plus the accusative of polemoj which means battle. Satan seeks to overthrow the rule of Christ by violence because he cannot meet the wonderful administration of our Lord's rulership of the world. There is no argument that he can present so the time for argument is gone, we have now come to violence. Revolution ignores and rejects virtue, therefore it cannot succeed by peaceful means. Virtue is always pro-establishment and anti-revolutionary. Revolutions are born in violence and they die in violence.

The next phrase is Magog's numerical advantage. The phrase is a very simple one: "whose number is like the sand of the sea." Whether this refers to the sand on beaches or the sand under the ocean the analogy is the same, the revolutionary army numbers in the millions. Millions of people rejected Christ as saviour under evangelism in perfect environment. During the Millennium there is no military establishment, Isaiah 2:4; Hosea 2:18; Micah 4:3; Psalm 46:9; there is no army to fight against the revolution. So in our Lord's rule there is no army. This is parallel to the danger which threatened Israel when they became the first client nation to God and they were leaving Egypt, when they were threatened at the Red Sea. They had no military establishment. There is a direct parallel between Israel at the Red Sea and the world at the end of the Millennium. The threat to Israel was the best organised armoured force of the day, Pharaoh's chariot army. At the end of the Millennium the whole world is facing disaster because suddenly a great revolutionary army appears and there is no army for establishment. So we have a similar situation. At the Red Sea Moses said, "Stand still and watch the deliverance of the Lord. The Lord will fight for you this day." So in the situation of Israel the Lord did the fighting, and that is exactly what is going to happen here. Superior numbers are inconsequential against God's plan and God's people. Here is a final demonstration that the majority is not right. The majority are in the revolution. Absolute truth and/or Bible doctrine is right whether one person believes it or a million.

Translation: "Then he [Satan] will appear on earth [second advent of Satan] to deceive the nations, those in the four hemispheres of the earth, Gog and Magog, to concentrate them for battle: whose number is as the sand of the sea."

In verse 9 we have the end of the antichrist revolution which goes under the code name of the Gog and Magog revolution. The advance of the revolutionary army is the first item in the verse. We have the aorist active indicative of a)nabainw which is a very aggressive verb in the Greek, and it means to ascend. Here it has the classical connotation of Xenophon which means to march, to advance. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, the tremendous organisational ability of Satan's genius in getting together a revolutionary army where weapons have ceased to exist. Nevertheless, weaponry is available or produced very suddenly and at the same time an army is organised for the coup de tat, the takeover of the rulership of the world. The active voice: the revolutionary army under the code name Magog and under the leadership of Satan whose code name is Gog, produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the aggressiveness of the revolutionary army. They became the aggressors and this aggression confirms the negative volition of the revolution.

Then we have e)pi plus the accusative of the adjective platoj which means wide. With this we have the word gh referring to the land rather than planet earth. "Then they marched over the wide terrain of the land," the high desert country of southern Israel. Even though the world has been disarmed during this thousand years of our Lord's reign Satan, on his release from prison, organises all of the negative volition into a very large revolutionary army. There is a principle that emerges from this: World peace and international disarmament do not prevent war. International disarmament has never been a prevention of war, it has been an encouragement to war. World peace movements always bring on bigger and greater wars to the extent that they are successful. The secret, of course, is the military establishment. In this case there is no military establishment, except our Lord Jesus Christ and we will see what He does to the revolution. While the world has been without weapons for a thousand years the evil genius of Satan is quick to arm and to organise this revolutionary army. Well-armed and possessing overwhelming numbers the revolutionary army has great confidence in Satan and the fact that they outnumber the believers of the Millennium. This is an army made up of millions of people.

So it would appear from the context in the Greek that the concentration point of the revolutionary army is the great valley of Esdraelon which is associated with Armageddon prior to the Millennium. Millions of unbelievers who have enjoyed the benefit of prosperity, perfect environment and have enjoyed perfect government are looking for a leader like Satan around whom they can rally and express their discontent, their rejection of the whole thing. Again the principle: the power of arrogance is always greater than the power of prosperity. Both the doctrine and the prosperity provided by our Lord Jesus Christ in His thousand-year reign is rejected by the arrogance of power lust. Again, the principle is: arrogance demands power. Arrogance is never satisfied with perfect environment.

The objective of the revolutionary army is given in the next phrase in the Greek where we have the aorist active indicative of kuklow which means to surround or envelop, "and they surrounded." They surrounded "the bivouac of the saints." The culminative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the use of aggression to gain a tactical advantage. An aggressor army generally gains such tactical advantage. The culminative aorist signifies the effort or process. The aorist denotes the attainment of the end of such effort or process. Aggression gives tactical advantage. The active voice: the revolutionary army under the code name Magog produces the action of the verb through logistics and tactics, the genius of Satan's leadership. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of eschatological doctrine. Remember that this time Satan is doing it alone, he has no angelic force to back him up. The fallen angelic force is incarcerated and will not be seen again until their last judgment.

The next word is the object of the verb, the accusative singular direct object of the noun parembolh, which means bivouac or fortified camp or barracks. In addition is a second accusative direct object from the noun polij, meaning city, plus the perfect passive participle of the verb agapaw meaning to love, but is used here as an adjective and therefore correctly translated “the beloved city.” The beloved city refers to Jerusalem, both the capital of Israel as Millennial client nation to God, and the capital of the world during the reign of Christ. But it is not the capital of the world in the eternal state. The target or the objective is twofold: first, to annihilate the army protecting the holy city; secondly, to destroy Jerusalem as the capital of the world during the Millennial reign of Christ.

The divine judgment then follows: a sequential use of the conjunction kai, “then,” plus the nominative singular from the noun pur which is generally translated “fire” or something approximating fire. The absence of the definite article emphasises the quality of our Lord’s weapon. Whatever it is it is associated with fire and it is supernatural. Once again our Lord personally administers the judgment just as He did at the second advent. The army of the saints outside Jerusalem do absolutely no fighting. The only armies that could be in existence is one of the three armies that came back with our Lord, and since it says “saints” it would refer to a human army. Two human armies returned with Christ: the royal family of God and the Old Testament saints and Tribulational martyrs. The tactical disadvantage of being surrounded by superior numbers is offset, then, by the function of our Lord’s weaponry.

So the passage says, “and fire came down,” katabainw; They came up, the advance was called anabainw. Here is the humour of it all: “Greater is he who is in you than he who is in the world.”

So the beloved city is the target, and the army, whichever one it is, and the fact of its superiority of numbers is offset by katabainw. Again, it is our Lord’s marvelous sense of humour. Satan made the first move, an aggressive move, and that was anabainw, he advanced; our Lord counters with katabainw and that destroys the revolution. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. Against this weapon all superior tactics and numbers are absolutely useless. The active voice: the divine weapon, simply called here pur or fire, produces the action. So the declarative mood is for the eschatological reality of the fact that once again our Lord in His perfection, in His infinite righteousness, uses violence to stop violence forever. Violence and evil can only be stemmed by the violence of virtue.

Translation: “Then they marched [advanced] over the wide terrain of the land, and surrounded the bivouac of the saints, and the beloved city: then fire came down from heaven, and devoured them.”

This is the category of judgment by death from heaven. Being from heaven it is being administered in two ways: either through the protocol system of the angelic college of heralds or directly by God. In this case, the latter, directly by God. Not again, the Lord does the fighting, not army of the saints who are surrounded. The bivouac of the saints are merely spectators to this judgment function of the grace of God. The revolutionary army comes to nothing. This last evil function of Satan is defeated. Notice again that the numerical superiority and tactical advantage is meaningless when the battle is the Lord’s.

Verse 10, the divine judgment of Gog, the code name for the revolutionary leader. Note that the revolutionary leader here is called by a slightly different name: diabolos, which means enemy. As Satan he is the deceiver; as Devil he is the enemy of God. It says, "And the diabolos [enemy] who had deceived," this is the present active participle from planaw because it was a continuous thing. It is a retroactive progressive present, which denotes what was begun in the past and continues into the present time. It is called the present tense of duration. However long it took, apparently a very short time, it resulted in a great revolution. The idiom is best translated by the English perfect tense, therefore "the devil who had deceived them." The active voice: Satan produces the action of the verb. It is a circumstantial participle translated as a relative clause.

And what happens to him? The aorist passive indicative of ballw, which means to throw, "was thrown." The aorist tense is a culminative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety but regarding it from the viewpoint of existing results: the judgment of Satan who has already been tried and found guilty before human history began, and he will be judged before all fallen angels. The lake of fire was created for the devil and his angels, Matthew 25:41. The fact that unbelievers also share in the eternal lake of fire is the subject coming up at the end of the chapter. The passive voice: the devil receives the action of the verb and gets preferential treatment. He goes into the lake of fire before any of the fallen angels. They are still incarcerated in Hades. But two members of the human race precede him which must have been very humiliating: the beast and the false prophet. The passive voice: the devil receives the action of the verb at the end of the revolution. The declarative indicative mood represents the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. Once again, it is called "the lake of fire and sulphur."

The lake of fire is literal and eternal, it is said to be a place "where the worm dieth not" and "fire is not quenched," the description of Mark 9:44,46,48. So it is a literal lake of fire, unquenchable, eternal, where the worm dieth not. The lake of fire is the final destination and the eternal abode of both fallen angels and unbelievers in the human race. All unbelievers of history will occupy the lake of fire because they have rejected Christ as saviour, John 3:18. As far as unbelievers are concerned Hebrews 9:27 applies.

Some of the categories of unbelievers who are thrown into the lake of fire are actually mentioned in Revelation 21:8 and we will study them when we arrive at the eternal state. The two great dictators of the Tribulation, the beast dictator and ruler of the revived Roman empire and the dictator of Israel known as the false prophet, are the first occupants of the lake of fire, even though Satan and all fallen angels were sentenced to the lake of fire before man was created. The sentence was not carried out because of Satan's appeal and the resultant angelic conflict, this time in human history.

In the human race it takes two witnesses to establish the reality of the situation. In the case of the angelic creatures it takes one. So we have a strange trio, the unholy trinity: Satan, the beast, and the false prophet, two members of the human race and the highest created angel of all time.

So it says, “thrown into the lake of fire and burning sulphur where the beast [the dictator of the revived Roman empire] and the false prophet [false messiah and dictator of Israel] are located.”

Then we have the eternal punishment mentioned in a very specific way. A lot of people try to rationalise Hell or say that there is going to be some point at which you can get out of Hell. But this is not true. We have the future passive indicative of the verb bassanizw which means to torment, “and they will be tormented.” The progressive future tense is linear aktionsart in future time. It goes on forever. The passive voice plus the third person plural suffix refers to the unholy trinity who receive the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of doctrine, “and they will be tormented day and night forever and ever.” Note that Satan is the greatest deceiver of human history, the greatest liar, having begun with Eve in the garden and going all the way to the end of history. The protection against the deception of Satan is the perception of Bible doctrine plus the marvelous protocol system that God has given to us. We should note that the unholy trinity are in a state of being alive in the lake of fire. To be tormented forever one must live, to be tortured one must be alive. The torture is over when you die, but notice that they are tortured forever and ever. Hence, physical death is not the end for the unbeliever, as per Hebrews 9:27.

The doctrine of revolution

Revolution generally starts with some form of arrogance, some major function inside the cosmic system, some major contact with evil on the part of those involved. When we talk about evil here we are not talking about obvious degeneracy, we are talking about self-righteous arrogance. Most revolutions are started by self-righteous people. Self-righteous arrogance hooks up with criminal arrogance, criminal arrogance hooks up with crusader arrogance and the combination produces revolution. There is great power in public opinion when the public loses authority orientation and becomes arrogant and emotional. Hence, public opinion becomes a power without facts and without reason, a tool to be used by revolutionaries. Revolutions are not started by the majority, they are started by a small well-organised group of people. They never have the majority on their side but they use as a tool public opinion where public opinion is without facts or without reason. Public opinion arrogance is created into a revolutionary weapon, and that revolutionary weapon in the hands of a good organisation means an effective revolution. Then public opinion which becomes power for revolution is a weapon formed from strong delusion. Satan deceives, he is the author of strong delusion. Truth is the only protection the public has against revolution. So in effect crusader arrogance plus criminal arrogance equals revolution. Behind crusader arrogance is self-righteousness, so self-righteousness is the motivational evil behind it all.

Revolution has to be understood as the overthrow by violence of duly constituted authority resulting in fundamental changes in political organisation, constitution or government. revolution is a form of conspiracy to overthrow establishment, to remove authority of establishment by means of violence. Conspiracy is a combination of persons whose objective is evil and to overthrow establishment. The carefully devised and secret plan of the conspirators is called a plot, while the means of carrying out the plot is called intrigue. Machination emphasises the crafty and tortuous process often used in doing so. So revolution has its own vocabulary and has had for many centuries. Revolution is the antagonism of evil for the laws of divine establishment designed by God to guarantee the freedom of the human race and to give every opportunity for a person to be evangelised.

Evil is the concept behind all revolution, as in Proverbs 17:11, "A revolutionary man seeks only evil." Hence, revolution has to be related to evil, Psalm 64:4,5, "They shoot from concealment at the blameless; suddenly they shoot at him, and do not fear. They hold fast to themselves an evil purpose; they conspire to lay snares secretly; they rationalise, 'Who can see them?' " So since evil is the plan and the policy of Satan as the ruler of this world evil is related to the whole cosmic system: sin + arrogance = evil. The evil motivation for evil involves many of the categories of the cosmic system we have studied. Revolution involves the overthrow of laws of divine establishment, Romans 13:1-7. Revolution involves lawless mobs of people who cannot think nor achieve, therefore the mob is manipulated by the criminal element, but generally the self-righteous criminal element. The mob is the weapon of the revolution, exploited by the crusader, exploited by criminal arrogance, as well as political arrogance. The Bible condemns revolution — Numbers 16 where we have the rejection of the first revolution in Israel; the family of Aaron was challenged as being the family of the priesthood.

The source of revolution is always reversionism, according to Jeremiah 5:23; Isaiah 1:2-5. When a mob of people have rejected Bible doctrine they are a weapon to be forged by a revolutionary organisation. They are stupid and blind. There are three categories of people involved in a revolution: the hard core conspirators, the general public, who will never join a revolution unless they become stupid, and once they do they become the sheep who follow the propaganda machine; they have to be malcontent from arrogance plus the recipients of strong delusion, the propaganda of Satan; then they are motivated to join the revolution and are manipulated by the hard core revolutionist, and category three are the incorruptibles, the people in the client nation whose establishment norms and perception of doctrine combine with their honour and integrity to reject all revolutionary overtures. These are the people who live and die by their convictions. They have accepted some category of truth so that they are insulated against strong delusion. Furthermore, the incorruptibles are free from the cosmic system.

No revolution can gain momentum apart from the function of the cosmic system. Both arrogance and strong delusion are the necessary ingredients for a revolution. Most revolutions lead to a civil war. They become a struggle for power and violence. If revolution does gain enough converts from the general public and the common people civil war is inevitable. When revolution starts a civil war there are two opposing forces seeking to gain control of power, and everyone is caught in between them. When revolution starts a civil war the issue is always truth, but somehow truth gets lost in the violence. Violence always submerges truth and the facts of an issue at hand.

When politics starts a civil war the issue is freedom; when revolution starts a civil war the issue is truth: both get lost. Revolution is inevitable where no distinction is made between authoritarian government and totalitarian government. This is one point that we must understand: Many forms of government, including monarchy, oligarchy, republic, and even dictatorships, can function under the laws of divine establishment which provide the umbrella for the modus operandi of freedom. Revolution is antiestablishment, therefore anti-authoritarian. Revolution generally starts in a totalitarian government that is a highly centralised form of government under the control of one political group. It is imperative that we distinguish between authoritarian government and totalitarian government. An authoritarian government provides the balance between authority and freedom and is compatible with the laws of divine establishment. A totalitarian government destroys freedom with the total ascendancy of authority producing tyranny.

Two categories of human freedom exist in life: temporal freedom and spiritual freedom. Temporal freedom results from the imputation of human life at birth and the function of an establishment organisation. Spirit freedom results from the imputation of divine righteousness at the moment of faith in Christ and provides under the protocol system freedom in either totalitarian or authoritarian nations. In other words, the possibility of blessing for a believer in any part of the world is there once, of course, he accepts Christ as saviour.

In studying the last judgment we come first of all in verse 11 to the courtroom. We have to remember that this is a second courtroom as far as eternal judgment is concerned. The first courtroom is the cross where 1 Peter 2:24 "He [Christ] bore our sins in his own body on the tree." Our sins were judged at the cross. That resolved the problem of sin and that opens the door to salvation for anyone who will believe in Christ. The second courtroom occurs at the end of the Millennial reign of Christ. After the Gog and Magog revolution there is a second resurrection called the great white throne judgment, the last judgment, and all the unbelievers, all of those who rejected Christ as saviour, will be brought up into court. So courtroom number one is the cross; courtroom number two is the last judgment, the great white throne judgment at the end of human history.

In verse 11 the judge's bench is mentioned first. We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, "Then." The words "I saw" is simply a means of expressing the eschatological vision which would be the content of the next few verses. The constative aorist of $\omega\rho\alpha\upsilon$ means that the entire action of the verb is contemplated in its entirety, this is a vision of the courtroom of the last judgment of human history. The active voice of the verb: the apostle John observes eschatologically a future judgment. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the fact that there will be a judgment of all unbelievers once human history is terminated. The combination is based on John 3:18 — "He that believeth on him is not condemned; but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he has not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God." Condemnation comes from failure to believe in Christ. Unbelief, rejection of Christ, is the basis for being indicted in the courtroom at the last judgment. Those who have personally believed in the Lord Jesus Christ will not be there, Romans 8:1.

We note the name of the courtroom in the accusative singular direct object of the verb. It takes three words: megaj, the adjective for “great”; leukoj, the adjective for “white”; and the noun qronoj, “the great white throne”, the name of the courtroom. The first adjective, “great,” emphasises the importance of the judge, our Lord Jesus Christ in hypostatic union. The second adjective, “white,” emphasises the integrity of the judge, His infinite and eternal holiness. The judges bench emphasises the fact that none of the culprits, all unbelievers of history, possess the perfect righteousness of God. The perfect righteousness of God, however, is imputed to all who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.

The judge is mentioned in the next phrase, “and he who was sitting on it.” We have the present active participle of the verb kaqhmai to indicate that the judge is now in the court. The present tense is a futuristic present noting an event which has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain in thought that it may be contemplated as already coming to pass. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb, He is the Judge occupying the bench and presiding over the court of the last judgment. The participle is circumstantial. It is fitting that Jesus Christ as the only saviour should occupy the judge’s bench. Those who rejected His saving work face Him at the judgment bar. By refusing to believe on Him in time the unbeliever will find that our Lord is a reality when they are on the edge of eternity. They refused to face the fact that Christ is the saviour in time; now they will face the fact that Christ is the judge for all eternity.

The destruction of the universe is mentioned next to indicate that this courtroom finds that there is no longer a universe for those who have failed to make the right decision in time. So we have the phrase, “from whose presence the earth and heaven have vanished.” So just before this judgment occurs both earth and heaven have vanished. We have two nouns as a dual subject. The first is the noun gh referring to planet earth and also there is o)uranoj referring to the rest of the universe. They are said to have fled. This is the aorist active indicative of the verb feugw, and it actually means here to vanish. The old universe has disappeared.

The culminative aorist tense contemplates the destruction of the universe at the end of the Millennium after the Gog revolution in its entirety, but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, namely the last judgment and the creation of the new earth to follow. The active voice: heaven and earth produce the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the destruction of the universe which is the last item on the agenda before all unbelievers are resurrected and judged. The last judgment, known as great white throne, immediately follows the destruction of the universe. Actually, it is not the objective of this verse to discuss how the universe is destroyed, that will be in the next chapter, but merely to show where in the sequence of events this judgment occurs. So the last judgment follows the termination of the Millennium, the release of Satan from his one thousand years incarceration, and following the Gog revolution and the destruction of the universe.

The fact of the destruction of the present universe is mentioned by way of contrast with Bible doctrine in Matthew 24:35; Mark 13:31; Luke 21:33, which essentially all say the same thing, but it is so important it is repeated by all three of the synoptic writers. The universe as we now know it will be completely destroyed: "Heaven and earth will pass away, but my doctrines will never pass away." The Word of God lives and abides forever. We have that in writing which can never be destroyed even though the universe is destroyed. So in contrast Bible doctrine as absolute truth and a future fact of history which is true are brought into focus. It is true that the present universe will be destroyed at the end of the Millennium. It is a fact that absolute truth and Bible doctrine cannot be destroyed, they are indestructible.

We should notice the distinction between two words: Truth and true. Truth is a noun and true is an adjective, therefore an obvious distinction exists grammatically. But there is more to it as these two words are found in the Bible. True is an adjective describing the facts of history as they are printed out on the computer of divine decrees; truth is a noun referring to both the attributes of God and Bible doctrine. The attribute of God especially in view is His veracity. Bible doctrine is absolute truth while the facts of history are true but not necessarily truth. The facts of history at any given time may be the function of sin, evil, deception, lies, but their occurrence is true. Lies are told, deception occurs, so while that is true it is not truth. The doctrine of the Word of God is absolute truth while the facts of history, both good and bad, are simply true facts. Therefore true describes the accuracy of the historical events as they come from the computer of divine decrees while truth is both an attribute of eternal and infinite God and the content of the Word of God/Bible doctrine. The source of truth is Bible doctrine; the source of what is true is history as it reads out from the computer of divine decrees. The believer who rightly divides the Word of truth will always distinguish between true and truth.

For a brief resume of the destruction of the historical universe in a little more detail we look to 2 Peter

3:5, "For they are willfully ignorant of this fact, that by the word of God the heavens existed long ago and the earth was formed out of water and by water."

Verse 6, "Through which the world at that time [the antediluvian planet earth] was destroyed being flooded with water."

Verse 7, "But the present heavens and earth [post-diluvian universe and earth] by his word are being reserved for fire [nuclear destruction], kept for the day of judgment [end of the Millennium] and destruction of ungodly [all unbelievers] men."

Verse 8, "But do not let this one doctrine escape your notice, beloved, that with the Lord one day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day."

Verse 9, "The Lord is not slow about his promises, as some men conclude slowness, but is patient toward you, not willing that anyone should perish [referring to the last judgment] but for all to come to repentance [a technical word for a change of mind about Christ]."

Verses 10-12 gives us the story of the destruction of the universe which occurs at the end of the Millennium.

Verse 10, “But the day of the Lord [a portion of the day of the Lord dealing with the destruction of the present universe and the last judgment of all unbelievers] will come like a thief,” “like a thief” must be understood in the time on which the Bible was written. The thief in the ancient world came suddenly, he had to take the household by surprise. So suddenly, not stealthily, is the connotation of coming like a thief. The Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written: the thief in the ancient world had to take his victims by surprise, “in which the heavens [the present universe] will vanish with a sudden roar, and the elements will be dissolved with intense heat, both the earth and the works [reference to the book of works, the basis for indictment at the last judgment] in it will be investigated,” the future passive indicative of ε(uriskw and it is a reference to the last judgment which follows the destruction of the universe. Note that both the destruction of the present universe and the last judgment are both related and sequential. The destruction of the present universe is followed by the last judgment in which the unbeliever is indicted by his good works found in the “books according to their works.” Then, of course, the books are destroyed.

Verse 11, “Since all these things are in the process of being dissolved in this manner, what kind of people ought you to be [directed to the believer] in holy manner of life and godliness [a reference to the protocol system],

Verse 12, “anticipating and earnestly desiring the coming day of God,” the day of Christ is the Rapture of the Church; the day of the Lord is the Tribulation, second advent, and Millennium; the day of God is the eternal state. Notice that “day” is not used in any of these connotations as a 24-hour day, “because of which the burning heavens will be dissolved and the elements will melt with intense heat!”

Verse 13, “But according to his announced promise,” which occurs twice in Isaiah: 65:17; 66:22, and once in Revelation 20:1, “we are anticipating new heavens and a new earth, in which righteousness [virtue and integrity] is at home.” In other words, in the eternal state the believer in his resurrection body will enjoy ultimate sanctification and he will have perfect righteousness and integrity forever. At that point the modus operandi and the behaviour pattern of every believer in the resurrection body will be equivalent to the imputed righteousness he now enjoys.

Verse 14, “Therefore, beloved, since you anticipate these things, be zealous that you may be observed by him [or investigated by Him as a winner] in prosperity, spotless [living in the divine dynasphere] and blameless [the fulfillment of the divine mandate, virtue first].”

Revelation 20:11 so far, “Then I saw a great white throne [the courtroom of the last judgment], and he [our Lord Jesus Christ] who was sitting on it, from whose presence the earth and heaven have vanished.”

The basis for the last judgment is now given. We have an inferential use of the conjunction kai, “consequently.” Then we have a subject in the nominative singular, topo, which means place, a room, and we will translate it “an inhabited place.” But we have to stop for a moment because we have the negative conjunction ou, and it says “no room” or “inhabited place.” Then we have the verb, the aorist passive indicative of e(uriskw, “was found.” Translation: “no inhabited space was found.” The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it views the destruction of the universe in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, no place in God’s universe for the unbeliever of human history. In eternity they are consigned to the lake of fire. There is no place for the unbeliever because the universe because the universe in which they made wrong decisions has now been destroyed. The passive voice: no room or place receives the action of the verb. We have a dative plural indirect object from a)utoj, “for them.”

Translation of verse 11: “Then I saw a great white throne, and he who was sitting on it, from whose presence the earth and heaven have vanished; consequently no inhabited space was found for them.”

At the end of verse 12 and the end of verse 13 we have repetitive statements: “then the dead were judged from the things which were written in the books, according to their works.” This same sentence ends both verse twelve and verse thirteen. So before we get into these two verses it is better that we approach with some concept of the doctrine of human good.

Human good is then production of mankind living inside Satan’s cosmic system, consequently human good is not valid as far as God is concerned, except in one case. Human good production of the believer in the cosmic system is classified as “wood, hay, and stubble” at the judgment seat of Christ. We begin, then, the study of human in 1 Corinthians 3:11-16.

Verse 11, we have a foundation for the Christian way of life: personal faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Salvation, then, is the base on which the believer builds his life. “For no man can lay a foundation other than the one which is laid, which is Jesus Christ.”

Verse 12, “Now if any man builds on the foundation [the function of the believer in the protocol system] with gold, silver, precious stones,” that is one category, protocol believer’s production from the divine dynasphere, “wood, hay, straw,” the cosmic believer’s production doing the same things: witnessing, giving, and so on; Christian service of all categories.

Verse 13, “each man’s work [Christian works or production] will become evident; for the day will show it,” the day refers to the judgment seat of Christ immediately after the Rapture, “because it is revealed by fire; in fact the fire itself will test the quality of each man’s work.”

Verse 14, “If any man’s work which he has built upon it remains, he shall receive a reward.”

Verse 15, “If any man’s work which he has built on it [on the foundation of time, phase two: plan of God] is burned up, he shall suffer loss [loss of reward]; but he himself shall be saved, yet so as through fire.”

Verse 16, “Do you not know that you are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwells in you?” That is the beginning of the protocol system which has God has ordained.

God has a plan for your life and that plan is related to the protocol system. Human good, of course, is the production of mankind apart from the plan of God. Human good is motivated by arrogance and has absolutely no credit with God whatsoever. Because human good originates inside the cosmic system and is totally divorced from God’s protocol system, it is dead to God. Hence, it is called dead works, Hebrews 6:1. Christian service inside of the divine dynasphere is classified as divine good but Christian service inside the cosmic system is called human good. Only inside the protocol system, the divine dynasphere, is divine good manufactured. Human good is characterised by many things. One of its more obvious characteristics is fanaticism- zeal without knowledge; Christian service, human good outside of the divine dynasphere. Fanaticism is good works from arrogance, Christian service inside the cosmic system. Fanaticism is excessive enthusiasm without motivational virtue. This means enthusiasm without motivational virtue. This means enthusiasm plus the three categories of virtue for legitimate enthusiasm. Fanaticism is irresponsible arrogance without functional virtue, without motivational virtue, without basic virtue from the protocol system. Fanaticism is arrogant concentration without doctrinal inculcation. It is misguided zeal, inordinate ambition, humourless bigotry, the distortion and misapplication of Bible doctrine. Fanaticism produces human good — Christian service in the cosmic system.

There are three classification of human good. Number 1 is what we have just been noting: human good of the believer living in the cosmic system. Number 2 is the human good of establishment orientation in the client nation to God. This is an exception. It is not really human good, it is establishment good. Number 3 is the human good of the unbeliever registered in the book of works, the basis for the indictment of all unbelievers at the last judgment. The sins of the unbeliever were judged at the cross, along with all of the sins of the believer, but human good was not judged at the cross. Therefore, human good becomes the basis for the indictment of the last judgment. At the end of Revelation 20:12, “then the dead were judged from the things which had been written in the books, according to their works”; at the end of verse 13, “then the dead were judged from the things which had been written in the books, according to their works.” So the principle that we now note is the fact that this trial has no reference to sin. There is no such thing as the last judgment somehow related to sin. Those who are arraigned before the throne of God are unbelievers only and these unbelievers cannot be judged for their sins because their sins already went to courtroom number one, the cross.

Courtroom number two, however, is a different story. There we have the great white throne and there the unbeliever will be arraigned and indicted. The indictment is not based upon his sin but on his human good.

Verse 12, “And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written into the books, according to their works.”

We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, "Then," followed by the aorist active indicative of α (raw which introduces another view of the last judgment. We have the accusative plural direct object from nekroj, translated "dead." All believers have been resurrected by this time and are in resurrection bodies, the first resurrection has been concluded. This is a reference to dead said to be great and small. However, they are all unbelievers. We have two adjectives here: megaj and mikro, "great," unbelievers in history who were famous or great, or who performed an unusual number of good deeds during their lifetime; "small," which means small in importance, small in influence and power, a reference to all unbelievers who were losers in life.

These are said to be standing, therefore we now come to the second resurrection: the perfect active participle i(stemi, which means to stand and is used here to designate the second resurrection, the arraignment of all unbelievers before the bar of God. The unbelievers are resurrected to answer to the indictment before the divine judge. The intensive perfect emphasises the results of the second resurrection of all unbelievers. When special attention is directed to the results of the action stress upon existing results is intensified. Therefore it is called the intensive perfect. It is the Greek way of saying a thing is, and since the intensive perfect is a Greek idiom there is no exact translation on the English. The closest we can come is to use the English present tense, therefore translated "standing" instead of "having stood." The active voice: all unbelievers of history produce the action of the verb. They are arraigned into the final court for the last judgment. The participle is circumstantial. There is no word for "God" here in the original text. It simply is a prepositional phrase which says, "before the throne."

It is important to notice the principle of books. We will call this library the evidence for the prosecution. We have the nominative plural subject from biblion, and it refers to a tremendous gathering of evidence, evidence gathered into books. The absence of the definite article with biblion emphasises the quality of the evidence. There is no hearsay. Nothing but facts have been accumulated as evidence, "and the books were opened," the aorist passive indicative of the verb a)noigw. It is a culminative aorist contemplating the presentation of the evidence in its entirety, but regarding it from the viewpoint of its existing results, all unbelievers condemned on the basis of their good works, their human good. The passive voice: two categories of books receive the action of the verb. First there is the book of life. Originally it contained the names of everyone ever born into the human race, since Christ died for all when He was on the cross. The doctrine of unlimited atonement is taught in 1 Corinthians 5:14,15,19; 1 Timothy 2:6; 4:10; Titus 2:11; 2 Peter 2:1; 1 John 2:2. At the time of the last judgment the book of life does not contain the names of all the human race, for once a person dies without believing in Christ his name is blotted out of the book of life. So at the last judgment the book of life contains only the names of believers. No unbelievers are listed and therefore the first evidence against those who have been arraigned is the fact that their name is not found in the book of life. They have not personally accepted Christ as saviour. So the first point of evidence at the last judgment is the fact that there is no registry in the book of life of these people. That is evidence of the fact that they did not personally believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, they did not receive Him as personal saviour during their life on this earth. The second book to receive the action of the verb in this verse is the book of works. It contains the names of all unbelievers.

So we have two types of evidence. First of all we have negative evidence. In the book of life no unbeliever is there. Their name has been blotted out. Then there is the book of works and their name is in this book. So the book of life is the registry of believers only, however the book of works is a registry of unbelievers only. Each unbeliever has a section in the book of works, depending on how many good deeds. In the book of works are recorded the good deeds of every unbeliever since the beginning of time. Every person who rejects Christ as saviour is recorded in the book of works and such rejection is tantamount to accepting one's own good works in place of the work of Christ on the cross for salvation. The salvation issue is the work of Christ on the cross versus the works of mankind. Hence the unbeliever chooses to stand on his own works and on his own human merit rather than the merit and the work of Christ on the cross. Therefore the unbeliever is judged from the book of works and condemned because his works are not adequate for salvation. Note, once again, that the unbeliever is not judged for his sins, his sins have already been judged on the cross. All the sins of human history were taken out of the computer of divine decrees by God the Father, imputed to Christ on the cross, and judged. Therefore, under the law of double jeopardy all sins have been judged once on the cross and cannot be judged again in the arraignment of the supreme court of heaven at the second resurrection. Because all sins have been judged at the cross anyone can believe in Christ and have eternal life.

There are several implications from the judgment of all human sins on the cross. a. Human sins cannot be the basis for the indictment of the last judgment. b. The mechanics of the rebound technique for the believer recognises the judgment of our sins and cites those things which have been judged. We rebound by simply naming our sins to God. Why? Because by naming those sins no works are involved. All of the work was in sinning but there is no work in simply citing them or naming them. So we name them to God and we are instantly forgiven because those sins were judged on the cross.

The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. Two sets of books are used to indict the unbeliever in the last judgment. The evidence from the book of life: the unbeliever's name is blotted out of the book of life when he dies without believing in Christ. The second part of the evidence is the book of works. The unbeliever's works recorded in the book of works demonstrate the fact that minus R cannot have fellowship with plus R. To live with God forever one must have the life of God, eternal life; and be as good as God is good and therefore possess His righteousness. The only way we can possess His righteousness is to personally believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Guilt is proved with two witnesses, and that is why it says in the middle of verse 12. "then the books (plural) were opened." First, "another book was opened which is the book of life." There is the first witness, the roster of all believers in history. Then, "the dead were judged" but their name was not found in the book of life, so then the dead were judged from the "things which had been written in the books (plural), according to their works." So first we have the book of life which originally contained the names of all members of the human race, since when Christ died on the cross He was judged for the sins of the world — the doctrine of unlimited atonement, 1 Corinthians 5:14, 15, 19; 1 Timothy 2:6; 4:10; Titus 2:11; 2 Peter 2:1; 1 John 2:2. Christ died for the sins of the world. He did not die for the elect, He died for all, believer and unbeliever. However at the time of the last judgment the names of all unbelievers have been blotted out of the book of life since they rejected this so great salvation in time. Hence, the first part of evidence at the last judgment is the fact that the unbeliever does not have his name written in the book of life. This is the principle of John 3:18. The opposite side of the picture is very clear. No believer will be found at the last judgment, “There is therefore now no judgment to them who are in Christ Jesus.” The second book to receive the action of the verb is the book of works containing the names of all unbelievers since the beginning of human history. In the books of works are recorded the good deeds of every believer since the beginning of time. Every person who rejects Christ as saviour is recorded in the book of works. Such rejection, of course, is tantamount to accepting one’s good works in place of the saving work of Christ on the cross. The salvation issue, therefore, is the work of Christ versus human works, human good. Hence the unbeliever chooses to stand on his own merits rather than on the merit of the work of Christ on the cross which is described in many ways: redemption, reconciliation, propitiation, unlimited atonement. Therefore the unbeliever is judged from the book of works and condemned. This is the second witness against him. He is condemned because his works are not adequate for salvation, and we note that the unbeliever is not judged for his sins, which are not even mentioned, because they were judged at the cross. Therefore two courtrooms are involved: the cross and the great white throne, the last judgment at the end of the Millennium and the Gog revolution.

We have noted that even the believer produces human good but that human good is never found in the books of works because that human good is burned at the judgment seat of Christ. It is the wood, hay, and stubble of 1 Corinthians 3:11 which is burned in 1 Corinthians 3:15.

Verse 13, the mechanics of arraignment and indictment. This is the second resurrection and, strangely enough, it begins with the sea. This is not talking about people who drown in the sea, nor is it talking about people who were buried in the sea. It is talking about the sea as the most powerful set of gates ever used for a prison.

The verse begins with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, “Then.” followed by the nominative singular subject qalassa, “the sea.” It refers here to the flood waters generally of the universal flood. That is one way in which it is used. So it can refer to all the waters which cover planet earth.

At the time of Noah he and his family were not only living believers on planet earth but they were the only true human beings left after the flood. The rest of the human race had been contaminated, Genesis 6:1-13. Verses 12, 13, “And God looked on the earth, and behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted their way upon the earth. Then God said to Noah, ‘The end of all flesh is at hand’.” all flesh being those members of the human race who were half human and half angelic, “ ‘for the earth is filled with violence because of them’ ,” these angelic creatures were very violent and unrestrained because they had not been judged in the judgment of fallen angels before human history began, at the time of Matthew 25:15 where Satan and all fallen angels were indicted and their judgment was the lake of fire, and judgment not carried out because it was appealed, “ ‘now behold, I am about to destroy them with the earth’ .”

Many believers and unbelievers have died at sea. This does not refer to human beings. This has nothing to do with burial at sea. Human beings, whether buried on land, or sea; whether their bodies were blown up and disappeared, whether their physical bodies were burned or used for the advance of medical science, they are resurrected from Hades as unbelievers and resurrection from heaven as believers. Notice that it says the sea gave up the dead, not Hades. That is coming up next under the mistranslation “Hell.” So actually what we have here is something very different, we are not talking about the normal human unbelievers whose souls are in Hades. This is something very unique. We have the nominative singular subject of qalassa which refers to the location of the Nephalim, those who are not with the fallen angels in a compartment of Hades called the abyss or Tartarus. Neither are they with unbelievers in that compartment of Hades called torments. The souls of all unbelievers are located in torments until the second resurrection but they are not mentioned under “the sea gave up its dead,” they are mentioned when it says “death and Hades gave up its dead.” Tartarus, which also has another name, the abyss, is where the fallen angels are. They will be brought out of the abyss and brought up for their judgment at the end of time and they will be cast into the lake of fire. But this is not a reference to Tartarus, a reference to torments; this is a place that deals with unbelievers. All angelic unbelievers during the Millennium are in Tartarus. It does not say Tartarus gave up the dead, it doesn't say the abyss gave up the dead, it doesn't even say Hades gave up the dead, it says the sea gave up its dead. There is another category at the gates of Tartarus. The gates of Tartarus are called the sea and the reason they are not in Hades is because they are one half angel, they are one half human being. Therefore they are not even permitted in Tartarus, they are in the gate to Hades.

Being half human and half angelic, after their death, Genesis 6, they did not go to Hades. The dead Nephalim are not with the fallen angels in the compartment known as Tartarus or the abyss, neither are they with human unbelievers in the compartment of Hades known as Torments. They were all drowned in the flood. That is the way the super race died, and they all are located on the bottom of the sea. It is possible that the sea or qalassa refers to the very gates of Hades, Luke 8:31 which says, “And they [the demons known as legion] were entreating him [Jesus] not to command them to depart to the abyss.” In the King James the word “sea” or “deep” is used, which is inaccurate. The abyss is the jail for demons, fallen angels, and they begged Him not to go to jail. The same word a)bussoj is used in Revelation 20:3 where Satan goes for his 1000-year sentence. In the Septuagint of Genesis 1:2 uses the word a)bussoj which is synonymous with water. The gates of Hades are water gates, and the Nephalim couldn't go through the gates into the prison. They have to stay at the gates because they are not human and they are not angelic, they are half human and half angelic. Job 38:8 says, “Or who closed the sea with doors?” There it is, the water gates, the gates to the prison of fallen angels. This phrase tells us that the abyss or Tartarus has sea doors and the reason the sea has to give up its dead is because when they came to the sea doors after Noah's flood they couldn't go in. There was no place for them. So since the flood the Nephilim have been cooling it at the water gate. From the water gate they join the second resurrection to be judged with human unbelievers. They are judged with human unbelievers because they rejected Christ as saviour in human history. They did not reject God in the angelic conflict, they were not there.

We come to the verb now, the verb to give up: the aorist active indicative of didomi which means to give. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the Nephilim in its entirety. While half human and half angelic creatures they rejected Christ as saviour during human history before the flood. Noah constantly evangelised them, they had every opportunity to believe and they rejected Christ as saviour in human history. Therefore they are judged with human unbelievers of history. The active voice: the sea or the water gates of Tartarus produce the action of the verb at the second resurrection. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the second resurrection including the Nephilim. Since all Nephilim are unbelievers they are included in the second resurrection. Mechanically the human soul of the Nephilim leaves the water gates of the abyss or Tartarus, rejoins its super body at the point of its death and is arraigned before the great white throne court.

When this verse says, "the sea gave up the dead," it refers to the resurrection of the Nephilim of Genesis 6:4, and since all the Nephilim were unbelievers they are included in the second resurrection. Mechanically, the human soul of the Nephilim leaves the water gates or the abyss, rejoins its super body at the point of its death and is arraigned before the great white throne with human beings. The Nephilim are classified as the older heroes in Greek history. In discussing the first heroic age, Cambridge Ancient History, vol. 2, part 1, quotes the distinction between the first heroic age and the second.

"those in it." That is, those located at the sea gates. So the second resurrection actually has two stages. The first stage has to do with the Nephilim who being half angelic and half human, but having lived in human history, having rejected Christ as saviour, and having not been judged with fallen angels before human history — the Nephilim are brought up to be judged. Since they are half human they have a resurrection. The second stage is the unbeliever Homo sapiens who is also resurrected. All are judged in the same way.

Next we have the arraignment of human unbelievers. We have the adjunctive use of the conjunction kai, "also." Then we have two words for the subject, both are in the nominative singular: qanatoj, translated "death," referring to the fact that no matter where the body of the unbeliever is located and no matter how it was destroyed the unbeliever will participate in the second resurrection in the last judgment; and a(dhj), referring to the location of the unbeliever's soul until the second resurrection. Then we have the aorist active indicative of the verb didomi which means to give, and here it means to give up, "also death and Hades gave up the dead, those in them." The dead this time refers to all unbelievers in human history. These unbelievers in their life time had every opportunity to accept Christ as saviour. There is no such thing as an unbeliever who didn't have a chance for salvation.

The first chance is at the point of God-consciousness. Then there is the point of gospel hearing under two categories: normal evangelism and crisis evangelism. So in principle there are three possible exposures and no one ever departs from this life without having a chance one way or another.

Next we have the word “then” which introduces the third sentence in this verse: the sequential conjunction kai, and the aorist passive indicative of krinw which means to be judged, “then they were judged.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The passive voice: every unbeliever in the history of the human race receives the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the dogmatic statement of fact and of doctrine: all unbelievers are judged at the end of human history.

Then we have a very strange appositional nominative which is very important, e(kastoj, “each one.”

There is no mass judgment, no mass indictment. Obviously there is a mass arraignment but each one has his turn at the judgment bar. Then that very important prepositional phrase, kata plus the accusative plural from e)rgon, “according to their works.” Every unbeliever is personally judged from his own records. Evidence is found in two records: the book of life where his name is blotted out, and the book of works. Note again, the unbeliever is not judged for his sins, and this is because his sins were all judged at courtroom number one, the cross. Hence, the indictment is based on human works which were not judged at the cross. This is the application of the law of double jeopardy: human sins can only be judged once, at the cross. No sin will ever be mentioned at the last judgment.

Translation: “Then the sea gave up the dead, those in it; also death and Hades gave up the dead, those in them: then they were judged each one according to their works.”

Because of the doctrine of unlimited atonement the unbeliever cannot be judged for his sins, therefore the basis for the indictment of all unbelievers is the area of human good. Human works and good deeds add up to minus R. Minus R cannot have fellowship with plus R, you must have perfect righteousness to live with God forever, and when you believe in Christ one of the things that you receive is the righteousness of God. That is the basis of your justification. Every person in human history who believes in Christ, at the moment he believes he receives eternal life. If you are going to live with God you must have his life and you must be as good as He is by the imputation of eternal life and the imputation of God’s righteousness. All of that is fulfilled.

The Old Testament believers received the imputed righteousness of God, Genesis 15:6; Romans 4:3. They were not saved by keeping the law, they were saved by faith in Christ. Church Age believers received the imputed righteousness of God, 2 Corinthians 5:21. The Tribulational believers receive the imputed righteousness of God, Revelation 7:14. And we can infer from the fact that Old Testament believers are said to have imputed righteousness at the point of faith, Genesis 15:6, Church Age believers are said to have it at the point of faith in Christ, 2 Corinthians 5:21, and Tribulational believers are said to have it, Revelation 7:14, that believers in every dispensation have received God's righteousness at the moment of salvation. The fact of unlimited atonement means that the sins of the unbelievers cannot be used as the basis of their indictment, therefore they are judged according to their works, Romans 2:5,6.

The doctrine of the last judgment

1. The last judgment is also known as the great white throne judgment. It is the divine administration of permanent judgment to all unbelievers. It is an eternal sentence. The last judgment is the alternative to eternal salvation through faith in Christ, therefore the last judgment is for all unbelievers in history. Like all judgments the last judgment is the expression of the integrity or holiness of God toward those who reject Christ as saviour. The holiness or integrity of God is composed of two attributes: justice and righteousness. To those who believe in Christ God imputes one half of His integrity and/or divine righteousness at the moment of salvation. This means that the unbeliever does not have this righteousness because he has not believed in Christ. If you don't believe in Christ you do not receive this perfect righteousness of God by imputation. The last judgment is a demonstration that human righteousness and good deeds will not qualify mankind for salvation. The very good deeds on which the unbeliever depends are used to indict him at the last judgment. Hence, the great white throne is the culminating judgment of history in which all unbelievers are arraigned, the second resurrection, and indicted on the basis of the evidence and sentenced to the lake of fire forever. This is also called the second death or living in the lake of fire forever. There is no second chance beyond the grave. When a person dies physically without believing in Christ as saviour he will be arraigned and judged at the last judgment, Hebrews 9:27.

2. There are two categories of the human race: believers and unbelievers. Those who do not reach accountability are always on the believer's side; they are included with believers, they are automatically saved.

3. At the last judgment the unbeliever's indictment is John 3:18. The ministry of the Holy Spirit of God in common grace or convicting the world is related to one sin, John 16:9, "Concerning sin because they believe not on me." Revelation 20:15, "Everyone who was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire." The book of life at the last judgment is a registry of believers only. Since Christ died for all, all names were entered into the book of life when God imputed human life after birth. However, when anyone dies without accepting Christ as saviour his name is blotted out of the book of life. Therefore the unbeliever is said to have two appointments, Hebrews 9:27, physical death and judgment. The arraignment of the unbeliever is accomplished through the second resurrection, Daniel 12:2, "And many of those who sleep in the dust of the ground will awake [analogous to resurrection], those to eternal life [first resurrection], but the others to disgrace and eternal rejection [the unbeliever at the second resurrection]."

There are a number of different kinds of death mentioned in the scripture. For example, the most prominent death and the one that people seem to understand is physical death. Out of the seven types of death used in the scripture physical death is probably the most obvious. It is defined as the separation of the soul from the body so that the person involved no longer lives on planet earth. Such death cannot separate the believer from God according to Romans 8:38,39. Physical death, then, is a matter of the sovereign decision of God based on His perfect knowledge of all the facts, Psalm 68:19,20. God does, and God can, prolong physical life under certain conditions that are specified in the 102nd Psalm, verses 19, 20, 23, 24, and also in Psalm 118:18. God also delivers the believer from death under many circumstances, Job 5:20; Psalm 33:19; 56:13; 116:8. The believer who advances to maturity departs from life under the principle of dying grace, Psalm 23:4; 116:15. Resurrection is the victory over death, 1 Corinthians 15:54-57. Physical death is also defined in terms of the believer's victory in life because of faith in Christ. Death means no appointment with judgment, Hebrews 9:27. Death means face to face with the Lord, 2 Corinthians 5:8; the end of any kind of pain or suffering, Revelation 21:4. Death means an inheritance which is incorruptible and undefiled, 1 Peter 1:4,5. Death for the believer means a new home, as per John 14:1-6; the full realisation of eternal life in John 11:25; 10:28; 20:31. Physical death means waiting for the resurrection in an interim body, John 11:25; 1 Thessalonians 4; Job 19. For the believer whose momentum carries him to gate eight of the divine dynasphere death is said to be profit forever and ever, Philippians 1:20,21. For the believer who spends his life inside the cosmic system death is a horrible thing, he dies under discipline called the sin unto death, 1 John 5:16; Psalm 118:17,18; Revelation 3:16; Acts 5.

Sometimes death is referring to spiritual death, not physical death at all. The reality of spiritual death is the fact that the penalty of sin is death. God told our first parents in the garden that the day they disobeyed His mandate about the tree of the knowledge of good and evil and ate of the fruit, dying they would die. When they ate the fruit they did not die, therefore it was not a physical death, it was a spiritual death. They died instantly, but they died spiritually. They were still very much alive physically. The penalty was imposed, then, at the fall of man and is perpetuated in the human race through the imputation of Adam's original sin to the genetically-formed old sin nature at birth, Romans 5:12. In effect, the entire human race sinned when Adam sinned. Being the federal head of the human race, the entire human race was "in Adam" seminally. That is another reason why at the point of physical birth, when we receive physical life, we also receive the imputation of Adam's sin. Mankind is not condemned by the imputation of personal sin. Our personal sins have never been imputed to us, they were imputed to Christ. Mankind is not condemned by the imputation of his personal sins but by the imputation of Adam's sin which is imputed to the genetically-formed old sin nature. The solution to spiritual death is stated in Romans 6:23, "The wages of sin is [spiritual] death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

The third category of death in the Bible is positional death of the believer. Positional death occurs as a result on one of the 37 things we receive at the point of salvation, the baptism of the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit takes every believer at the moment of salvation and enters him into union with Christ. Through baptism of the Spirit at salvation the believer is identified with Christ in his death burial and resurrection. Positional death, also called retroactive positional truth. It is the believer's identification with Christ in His death. Just as Christ rejected human good and evil on the cross, so we have done so positionally. Human good, evil, and sin are three of the issues from the cosmic system. When Christ was on the cross He received the imputation of our sins but He rejected human good and evil because they continue to be an issue for the believer. He can choose human good as over against divine good; he can choose evil in the cosmic system as over against God's protocol plan for his life in the divine dynasphere. So we have the concept that positional rejection of human good and evil is the basis for experiential rejection. Colossians 2:11-12, "In fact, in him [union with Christ] you have been circumcised with a circumcision not made with hands, by the renunciation of the body of the flesh [the old sin nature] by the circumcision of Christ [reference to retroactive positional truth]; having been buried with him by means of the baptism [of the Spirit]." Retroactive positional truth or positional death, then, is identification with Christ in His death when He was judged for our sins when at the same time He rejected human good and evil as the policy of Satan as the ruler of this world. Therefore we can only sin outside of the divine dynasphere. We can only produce human good and evil in the cosmic system, therefore all personal sin places us immediately outside of the divine dynasphere and inside of Satan's cosmic system.

That becomes the issue for the fourth death which is cosmic death of the believer. Cosmic death is what we call carnality. There are two ways of looking at the believer who is a loser. One is to look at it from the standpoint of the body of the believer. The body of the believer is said to be the temple of the Holy Spirit. It is also the location of the old sin nature. The issue is who controls the soul. Volition guards the gate of the soul. The old sin nature tries to gain control of the soul through temptation. All you have to do is say no to temptation to keep the old sin nature from controlling the soul. When the old sin nature is not controlling the soul the Holy Spirit is, and that is the filling of the Spirit. So from this standpoint every time you sin — the source of all sin is human volition — temptation is converted into sin and then the believer is said to be carnal. It means the old sin nature controls the soul. When the Holy Spirit controls the soul then the believer is said to be spiritual. So at any given time you are either spiritual or carnal. Therefore spirituality is an absolute and carnality is an absolute.

The fifth category of death is the production mortality of the believer. This category combines the arrogance of Christian service with the function of human good. It also can include the function of crusader arrogance with the modus operandi of functional evil, the motivational evil being arrogance itself. Arrogance plus self-righteousness plus crusader arrogance equals the total function of evil. In other words, the production of Christian service, good works, legitimate things, become wood hay and straw. They are called dead works in Hebrews 6:1.

Number six is sexual death, Hebrews 11:11,12; Romans 4:17-21. Abraham is the one person who was said to have sexual death in the Bible.

The seventh death in the Bible is the second death when the unbeliever is judged. He has rejected Christ as saviour. He is not judged according to his sins but he is judged according to his works.

The eighth death found in the scripture is the sin unto death: maximum punishment of the believer in time, a horrible death as a maximum discipline.

Hades is the Hebrew word sheol, and the Greek word a(idhj). Both words are talking about the same place, the vast suffering place of the departed dead of the human race and the abode of certain categories of fallen angels. The dying are said to go to Sheol in Numbers 16:30; Ezekiel 31:15,17. Those who were saved in the Old Testament went to Sheol, according to Hosea 13:14; Psalm 49:16. The reason for that, called Paradise or Abraham's bosom, is because all of the born-again believers went there until the resurrection of Christ when they were transferred to the third heaven. The unbeliever is also there and said to be in torments, a different compartment. By the way, wherever Sheol is used the Septuagint always used Hades. There is also another compartment called Tartarus which is the location of certain fallen angels. This is called the abyss.

Verse 14, the sentence of the court. We have a sequential use of the conjunction kai, "Then," followed by the nominative subject qanatoj, used for death number seven, the second death. With this is the appositional nominative a(idhj, "Hades" is the location of all unbelievers until the second resurrection. Then we have the aorist passive indicative of the verb ballw which means to throw. The aorist tense is a culminative aorist, it contemplates the execution of the sentence in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of its existing results. The unbeliever resides in the lake of fire forever. The passive voice: the unbeliever receives the action of the verb at the last judgment. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the unbeliever living in the lake of fire. Then we have the phrase, "into the lake of fire." Translation: "Then death even Hades were thrown into the lake of fire." Every human being is the product of his own decisions, the function of his own volition. The lake of fire is the eternal residence of the unbeliever because he has made the worst of all decisions under three categories: God-consciousness, the point at which he became aware of the existence of God; gospel hearing, normal evangelism and crisis evangelism. So he is the product of his own decisions. There is no excuse, Romans 1:18-25.

What about the heathen? Heathenism is the apostasy of the unbeliever in three stages of negative volition. Consequently heathenism is simply a way of describing the rejection of God's plan of salvation.

Romans 1:18, "For the wrath of God is being revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and anti-justice of those who suppress the truth through unrighteousness."

The unbeliever suppresses the truth by its rejection. That means that salvation maladjustment occurs at either God-consciousness or the two categories of gospel hearing. The word "heathen", by the way, is a Gothic word. The Gothic word means "open country", hence the word originally meant heath or the open country. It is equivalent to the Latin paganus, from which we get the word "pagan." Heathenism is defined as one of a nation or a race or a people who do not acknowledge the God of the Bible, and we call them simply heathen or pagan.

Wherever a place in this earth is described as heathenistic it is a place where the truth has been at some time in the past. Many doctrines of the Word of God resolve the problems of heathenism, such as the doctrine of divine essence applied, the doctrine of unlimited atonement applied, the doctrine of God-consciousness applied, the application of the doctrine of the justice of God.

The biblical documentation is very important. It tells us that there never has been a generation that has not been evangelised or has not reached the point of God-consciousness.

Acts 17:6, "And when they did not find them, they began dragging Jason and some of the brethren before the city authorities, shouting, 'These men who have upset the world have come here also.'"

Colossians 1:6, "The gospel which has come to you, just as in all the world and is constantly bearing fruit and spreading."

1 Timothy 3:16, "And by consent of all great is the mystery of doctrine with reference to godliness:

The unique one [Christ as eternal God] became visible by means of the flesh, the same one was vindicated by means of the Holy Spirit, was observed by angels, was proclaimed to all the nations, became the object of faith in the world, was taken into his place of glory."

We also have documents by people who wrote in the ancient world:

Justin Martyr, who lived in the second century, said: "There is no people, Greek or Barbarian, or any other race by whatsoever appellation or manner by which they may be distinguished, however ignorant of art and agriculture, whether they dwell in tents or wander about in covered wagons, among whom prayers and thanksgiving are not offered in the name of the crucified Christ to God the Father." In other words, all over the world the Lord was known.

Tertullian, who also wrote in the second century: "We are but yesterday and yet we already fill your cities, your islands, your camps, your palaces, your senate and forum. We have left you only your empty temples."

Origen, who goes into the third century, said: "In all Greece and in all barbarous races within our world there are tens of thousands who have left their national laws and customary gods for the law of Moses and the word of our Lord Jesus Christ, though to adhere to the Word of God is to incur the hatred of idolaters, and to embrace that word is to incur the risk of death as well; and considering how in a few years, and with no great store of teachers, in spite of the attacks which have cost us life and property, the preaching of that word has found its way into every part of the world so that the Greeks and barbarians, wise and unwise, adhere to faith in Jesus Christ.

Eusebius, the fourth century historian: "There flourished at that time many successors to the apostles who reared to edifice on the foundations that were laid, continuing the work of preaching the gospel, and scattering abundantly over the entire earth the wholesome seed of the heavenly kingdom. For a very large number of disciples carried away by fervent love of doctrine which the divine Word had revealed to them, fulfilled the command of our saviour, leaving their country they fulfilled the office of evangelist to carry the gospel to those who had never heard the word of faith."

Missionary documentation regarding the dissemination of the gospel goes all of the way up to the present time.

God's perfect righteousness and perfect justice prohibit Him from being unfair. God is the epitome of all involved in perfect integrity — perfect, eternal, infinite integrity. Therefore, since it is impossible for God to be unfair there never was, and there never will be, a person who didn't have a chance to hear. Since God cannot be unfair or compromise His justice, positive volition at the point of God-consciousness is always met with missionary and evangelistic activity. In other words, there is no such thing as a human being who does not have the chance to be saved. It is God's will that all members of the human race be saved, 2 Peter 3:9. Only negative volition to the gospel, either under normal or crisis evangelism, frustrates the will and desire of God.

God does not violate or coerce human volition. Such a course of action violates the principle of the angelic conflict and its extension into human history. God has provided salvation for the entire human race. Each person must make his own decision. God cannot force you to make a decision, you must make your own. Furthermore, to avoid any works it must be made in privacy, and therefore, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." Unlimited atonement indicates God's desire for everyone to believe but He can't force you to do it.

God-consciousness is the point at which mankind becomes aware of the existence of God through the function of his own mentality. Every human being has at least three chances. First, God consciousness; secondly, gospel hearing or normal evangelism; thirdly, gospel hearing under crisis evangelism. The major issue is your own mentality because by your own thinking you can become aware of the existence of God. Man has the ability to arrive at God-consciousness through the function of his mentality, and when a member of the human race has reached God-consciousness that is called the point of accountability. Such accountability varies with culture, languages, environment and circumstances. Those members of the human race who are morons and do not reach accountability are automatically saved at the point of death. Babies and others who die before reaching accountability are also saved according to 2 Samuel 2:22. The issue of God-consciousness is the subject of Romans 1:20-21. Jeremiah 29:13, "And you will seek me [positive volition at God-consciousness] and find me [positive volition at gospel hearing], when you search for me with all your heart." John 7:17, "If any man is willing to do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it is from God or I speak of myself." Acts 17:27, "That they should seek God, if perhaps they might grope for him and find him, though he is not far from each of us," relating God-consciousness to the principle.

There are five ways in which God-consciousness may be arrived at through a system of thought. These are different categories of thinking and the ability is one of IQ. But no matter how low the IQ, as long as it does not drop below the level of accountability, then there are there are five different ways that by thinking, apart from any information outside of your own mentality, you can reach God-consciousness.

1. Theological. The principle is very simple. God must exist because men universally believe in His existence. The creature does not crave what does not exist. "Men seek after God," says Psalm 42:1,2.

2. Anthropological. To a greater or lesser degree man's soul possession, both volition and conscience, are an urge to choose right rather than wrong. When anyone has a desire to choose right over wrong, not even being able to define them but saying, "This is wrong, and this is right," then you have the principle of awareness of a higher standard. The structure of society is based on human recognition of virtue and truth. This phenomenon has no explanation apart from the existence of God. A material, ungoverned universe can know nothing of moral values and distinctions apart from the absolute righteousness of a supreme being.

3. Ontological. Since the human mind possesses the idea of perfection or perfect and absolute being, such a being must exist, and apart from religious or moral tendencies previously considered the existence of God is a necessary ideal tendency of the human mind. Beyond the relative with which man measures there is the absolute which gives character or value to the relative. The relative must have an absolute to provide its value.

4. Teleological. This is the structure of the universe. Once you examine the structure of the universe it demands a designer no matter how you examine it. Scientifically you can be either telescopic or microscopic. Telescopic phenomena or microscopic phenomena possesses order, design, arrangement, purpose, and adaptation, all of which suggest a Designer. Whether we are looking at the structure of the atom or the design of the galaxies their order can no more be accidental than the shuffling of 26 letters of the English alphabet into a beautiful poem. Behind the design is a Designer.

5. Cosmological. The intuitive law of cause and effect demands the existence of God. In no sense can the universe be its own cause. Order and arrangement in the universe demand a creator as well as a sustainer, as per Colossians 1:16,17. If God is left out design, arrangement, order, function and operation of the universe become an unsolvable problem of infinite proportions.

The question arises: Which came first, the gospel or the heathen? The gospel came first. The origin of heathenism is very simple then: heathen are heathen not because they have never heard the gospel but because they have and rejected the gospel, as per Romans 1:18-23. Heathenism is related to liberalism and various forms of cosmic reversionism.

Salvation is personal faith in the Lord Jesus Christ; negative volition toward the gospel is rejection of Christ. Rejection of Christ produces a vacuum in the soul into which all of the cosmic system of Satan — all of the propaganda — is developed. Evil [cosmic doctrines in the soul] produces reversionistic liberalism. The mechanics of this liberalism and evil are found in Romans 1:24,25. Both theological and political liberalism exploit the ignorance of man by catering to his emotional revolt of the soul, and sometimes his lust. Liberals, whether theological or political, seek to satisfy their arrogance on the one hand or a guilt complex on the other by trying to play God. As was once said, “When someone is running toward you to do you a favour, run in the opposite direction as fast as you can.” Liberals seek to establish a perfect world order without God. It is always the same pattern and tradition of operation fig leaves: man by man’s efforts seeking to establish a perfect environment and world order apart from God. Liberalism, then, is another manifestation of heathenism with a veneer of human good added. Heathenism rejects truth and there is not truth is the premise of heathenism. Therefore the conclusion can be no stronger than the premise. If you start without truth you end up without truth no matter what system of logic and no matter how illogical you may be. No matter how logical or rational you are in between a false premise inevitably leads to a false conclusion. Truth is designed to free man from both heathenism and liberalism, and therefore heathenism must find a substitute for the truth it has rejected. That is the story of Romans 1:22-24. In starting without truth heathenism seeks to establish a society without God, and the false premise of this society leads to the false conclusion of this society and the inevitable judgment from God. So heathenism is the story of the unbeliever rejecting the gospel.

Translation of verse 14: “Then death even Hades were thrown into the lake of fire. This is the second death.”

The judgment of our Lord at the great white throne is a just and fair sentence. The work of Christ on the cross demands nothing less than the administration of eternal punishment at the last judgment, Romans 1:20, “So they are without excuse.”

Verse 15, the punishment fits the crime. We start out with the protasis of a first class condition, a supposition from the viewpoint of reality, and it is introduced by the Greek conjunction e)j. The first class condition is formed with e)j plus any tense and the indicative mood in the verb. The nominative singular subject is the indefinite pronoun tij, and the indefinite pronoun is used to express a category. In this case the category is the unbeliever, “And if anyone was not found,” the aorist passive indicative of the verb e(uriskw plus the negative o)ux. The culminative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results given in the apodasis, “thrown into the lake of fire.” The passive voice: the unbelievers of history receive the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the fact that all unbelievers are blotted out of the book of life by the end of the Millennium and therefore they end up in the lake of fire.

As we have already seen, the book of life is the first category of evidence at the trial and that category says that they are not believers, they did not personally accept Christ in time though they had three categorical opportunities. The tragic fact is that all members of the human race were originally in the book of life but when they died without accepting Christ as saviour their name was blotted out. So the book of life at the end of human history, at the end of the Millennium, is a registry of believers only. The reason the registry at the end of the Millennium is called the book of life is because God has imputed to every member of the human race human life with the opportunity of getting a second imputation: eternal life.

Then we have the apodaxis, the punishment. The logical conclusion is based on the premise. The fact that the unbeliever was not registered in the book of life at the end of the Millennium means that they will suffer eternal punishment: the lake of fire.

Indirect Judgments: pain, death, finesse

The book of Revelation is primarily eschatological after chapter five and everything that it presents with regard to the Tribulation, the second advent, the Millennial reign of Christ, and the end of history are interlaced with a great deal of divine judgment. There are three categories of judgment found in the Word of God: indirect divine judgment, the unique divine judgment, and direct divine judgment. All three categories are found extensively in the book of Revelation.

First of all we note the source of all divine judgment as being the same source as the Christian way of life, the same source as the same so great salvation we enjoy. That has to do with the concept of protocol. God has a plan for your life and that plan is summarised in one word: protocol. Protocol is the divine system in the plan of God for every believer in the Lord Jesus Christ in this dispensation. The Church Age believer is classified as royal family of God, and this means that God's plan is based on protocol rather than milk. Protocol is the expression of God's power and infinite genius. Protocol is the overlay map of human history. We saw this in the historical trends of Revelation chapters two and three. To fulfill the plan of God the believer must not only understand protocol but he must be inculcated into its procedures. The believer must understand the protocol of the royal priesthood as it relates to one's attitude toward God. Furthermore, he must understand the protocol of the royal ambassadorship as it relates towards people and circumstances. Therefore the importance of a good definition.

By definition protocol is a rigid long-established code and procedure prescribing complete deference to superior rank, followed by strict adherence to due order and precedence, coupled with precisely correct procedure.

Protocol, then, is a rigid, long-established code and procedure. The code is God's game plan for the Church Age, the system God has devised to make the believer in Christ the winner during this stage of the angelic conflict. The code defines the modus vivendi living inside of the divine dynasphere. The procedure is the modus operandi of the believer living also in that same protocol system. Therefore procedure connotes residence, function, momentum inside the divine dynasphere. The rigidity of the code is the fact that God has always one way of doing a thing. That is the right way. Under God's protocol system the end never justifies the means. Both means and end must comply with the divine standard of protocol. Therefore a wrong thing done in a wrong way is wrong, a right thing done in a wrong way is wrong, a wrong thing done in a right way is wrong. God's protocol system guarantees that we do a right thing in a right way. A right thing must be done in a right way to comply with God's protocol standards.

The protocol system of God is structured into a plan which we call the divine dynasphere, which is the power system composed of eight gates. This protocol system in the divine dynasphere is actually the Christian way of life. In fact, the divine dynasphere is the only place where the protocol of heaven meets the protocol of earth to provide blessing and happiness for every believer in the Lord Jesus Christ. The divine dynasphere is the only place of influence which is designed to do a right thing in a right way. This means that whether God is blessing or punishing from the protocol system it is always a right thing done in a right way.

Protocol is complete deference to superior rank. This is the believer's authority orientation to the plan of God. Protocol as a system demands a recognition of authority which God has delegated to the system. In the administration of judgment God often delegates punishment to another entity: angels, people, and nations.

The freedom of the Christian life is mentioned in Galatians 5:1. It depends on submission to a system of authority established by divine protocol. Galatians 5:1, "It is for freedom that Christ has set us free, therefore keep standing firm [the believer living in the divine dynasphere] and do not become entangled again [subordinate again] in the yoke of slavery." All teachability, objectivity, and virtue begins with humility produced through several protocol systems: gate three of the divine dynasphere, authority in the home, or some other establishment system of judgment. Submission to authority in any protocol system can be enforced or genuine humility but it cannot, of course, be involved in any form of arrogance. Delegated authority from God resides in the content of the Word of God.

Protocol is strict adherence to due order of precedence. This is the basis for identifying one's priorities in life and forming a good scale of values. A false set of values destroys motivation for living the Christian life. The believer must have a frame of reference for the protocol system, the possession of a true scale of values.

Protocol is precisely correct procedure. As it relates to the Christian life it is also a correct procedure that relates to divine judgment. Protocol is not only a source of blessing and happiness for the believer but God's protocol is a source of judgment. The protocol of heaven and the protocol of earth combine to perform systems of judgment and punishment of human beings on this earth. The protocol of heaven includes the function of the divine attributes. All judgment of any kind has its origin from the essence of God. The protocol function of the computer of divine decrees, certain programs in the computer, certain chips, result in periodic historical judgment. The protocol function of the elect angelic aristocracy also means that certain judgments are administered by the angelic college of heralds. With regard to the protocol of earth we have the protocol function of the laws of divine establishment, and the laws of divine establishment are designed to punish crime, terrorism, degeneracy. Many a person has suffered, and rightly so, because they have violated the laws of divine establishment which recognise the sacredness of human life, the sacredness of property, and the sacredness of human freedom. The protocol function of the client nation of God: the five cycles of discipline are administered to a client nation for apostasy, for a shrinking pivot of believers living in the protocol system. The protocol function of the divine dynasphere determines whether you are a winner or a loser as a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ. Under divine discipline there is not only self-induced suffering but there are three systems of discipline from God: warning, intensive and dying. All divine judgment, then, is the result of negative volition and bad decisions. The poor judgment of man results in protocol judgment from God.

There are categories of judgment. The first is indirect judgment in which God uses an agent for the administration of punishment — angels, mankind, some organisation. There are three categories of indirect judgment: judgment by pain, judgment by death, and judgment by finesse. Secondly, there is the unique judgment of history: the cross where God the Father printed out of the computer of divine decrees all the sins of the world. They were imputed to Christ and judged. There is one PROM chip which in eternity past the omniscience of God put into the computer of divine decrees. He programmed into this chip all the sins of the history of the human race. These sins are not imputed to the ones who commit them, they were reserved in this PROM chip. The printout of that chip occurred at the cross. This is the basis of our so great salvation. The Lord Jesus Christ became our substitute and took our place. This is the unique judgment of history: God the Father judging God the Son as the basis of the saving work of Christ and resulting in the principle, "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved."

There is also direct judgment. This is judgment directly administered by our Lord Jesus Christ after His resurrection. We will note briefly the judgments involved at the Rapture and at the second advent, and at the end of the Millennium, but it all starts with the computer of divine decrees. In eternity past the omniscience of God programmed into the computer of divine decrees the sins of the entire human race, from Adam's original sin to the last sin of the Millennium. This is on a PROM chip for a printout at the cross. In addition to this there are, of course, other chips relating to sin. There is a category called the saturation of sinfulness and this was programmed into the computer of divine decrees. The saturation of sin, human good and evil in a given generation is on a separate chip. The reason for this is to protect the human race from self-destruction, for in any given generation the saturation of sin, degeneracy, evil, human good, often reaches a peak, and that peak would destroy the human race. But God has promised to preserve the human race from generation to generation, giving every generation the opportunity of believing in Christ. Therefore there is a form of judgment of radical surgery whereby this strong peak is destroyed giving opportunity for the next generation.

So there are several chips involved in the computer of divine decrees with relationship to sin. One is the saturation of sin and the other has to do with all of our personal sins. When we were born into this world, at the moment of physical birth, God imputed human life to the soul of every person involved. Simultaneously He imputed Adam's original sin to the genetically-formed old sin nature. We are condemned at birth — born physically alive but spiritually dead. In the wisdom of God this fulfills several principles. First, condemnation must precede justification. Secondly, the principle that anyone who does not reach accountability automatically goes to heaven because they have been automatically condemned at birth. There is always in each generation a segment of the human race who do not reach accountability because of some mental problem. They are morons and therefore never reach that accountability. Finally, there are those who because their own sins are not imputed to them are going to have three opportunities for evangelism: God-consciousness, gospel hearing under normal evangelism, and gospel hearing under crisis evangelism. All of our personal sins are collected in that PROM chip. They were programmed in in eternity past: every sin ever committed in the human race. The printout occurs, again, at the cross where those sons were judged by God the Father. Because those sins were judged the scripture says, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved."

There are three systems of indirect judgment from God. The first of these systems we simply call judgment by pain. Judgment by pain is the function of God's grace in crisis evangelism. It is the primary system of evangelism in the book of Revelation. It fulfills the doctrinal principle of grace before judgment where the divine policy is always the fact that grace precedes any form of judgment of the human race. God always gives the human race an opportunity to change its mind. Judgment by pain was illustrated to us in the five bowl judgments of Revelation 16:1-11. Pain often produces an objectivity that cannot be produced in any other way. Pain brings one back to reality when nothing else will do it. This is the basis for crisis evangelism.

We should note the fact that normal evangelism always comes first. Normal evangelism occurs in the presentation of the gospel in times of relative tranquillity and prosperity. Under normal evangelism the unbeliever has the opportunity of objectively considering the issue of the Lord Jesus Christ in eternal salvation. John 3:18 tells us, "He who believes in him is not judged; he who does not believe has been judged already because he has not believed in the name [person] of the uniquely-born Son of God." Normal evangelism can be conducted in one of several ways: preaching from an evangelist, personal witnessing, the distribution of the gospel message in print, the communication of the gospel through technology — radio, television, tape recorders. When the unbeliever rejects Christ as saviour in his negative volition he enters the cosmic system. Crisis evangelism, then, is the presentation of the gospel in times of individual or collective disaster. It is primarily designed to reach the unbeliever in the cosmic system who has rejected Christ as saviour. Because the unbeliever is very subjective he needs objectivity to consider again the gospel and therefore the administration of judgment by pain. The condition of the unbeliever at this point is described in 2 Corinthians 4:3,4. He has heard the gospel under normal evangelism. "If our gospel is veiled, it is veiled to those who are perishing, in whose case the god of this world [Satan] has blinded the minds of the unbeliever, so that he might not see the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God." So his mind is veiled through subjectivity, preoccupation with self, living inside the cosmic system. Through cosmic involvement the unbeliever becomes disoriented to reality, he becomes subjective in his outlet so that he cannot give proper consideration to the issue of salvation. Therefore God in His matchless grace introduces judgment by pain, some form of personal catastrophe or historical disaster in order to restore objectivity and to bring the unbeliever back to reality, and also to the place of recall. Judgment by pain temporarily negates the influence of the cosmic system. Hence, it is used under the grace policy of God as the last call, the last invitation, to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Direct judgment: the unbeliever faces at the last judgment the judge, our Lord Jesus Christ whom he rejected in time. This principle is stated by the apostle Peter in 2 Peter 2:20-22, where the apostle makes it very clear that they have escaped the cosmic system for a reason. Judgment by pain is to establish reality in the life; to reestablish, therefore, a temporary reality; to give the opportunity to recall what one has heard about the gospel and to believe in Christ, or to hear it again and believe. "For if they have escaped the defilements of the cosmic system [judgment by pain, the restoration of objectivity for a last call for the gospel] by the knowledge of our Lord and saviour Jesus Christ, they are again entangled in them [in the cosmic system] and are overcome, the last state [the status of rejecting Christ] has become worse than the first' — they have lost, in other words, the last opportunity to have eternal life. They have rejected Christ as saviour under crisis evangelism and the passage goes on to point out all of the tragedy that results from making this wrong decision.

The second category of indirect judgment is judgment by death. Judgment by death is the function of God's grace in the perpetuation of the human race from generation to generation throughout human history. God has promised that the human race will not be totally destroyed on planet earth until the end of history. This means that after the Millennial reign of Christ, after the last judgment, the Gog and Magog revolution, the greatest threat to this promise is the saturation of evil in any generation of history. God has said He will not destroy the human race. This means there is nothing today that could destroy the human race. There is no system of weaponry or any concept ever devised which is destructive to mankind, whether it is the flea which is one of the greatest destroyers of all time and has proved to be very successful in the middle ages where 5-million people died in three years, or the virus which in 1918 wiped out 25-million people in just a few months. Nothing will ever destroy the human race during human history. In every generation the potential for self-destruction, however, continues to exist. When a maximum number of people live in the cosmic system there is always a saturation of evil which is self-destructive. All man's self-destructive tendencies are controlled by the administration of the judgment death. This is from the protocol of heaven. The saturation of degeneracy plus inventive evil cannot offset the laws that God has provided to protect us. Great segments of the population of the world are often destroyed by the administration of judgment by death, and yet man continues to survive because judgment by death is a system of radical surgery whereby the grace of God removes the cancer of evil from a threatened generation, thus protecting the human race from self-destruction. The removal of certain contaminated parts of the human race in a threatened generation guarantees the perpetuation of mankind on earth and gives the next generation equal opportunity to evangelise and respond by believing in Christ. Judgment by death destroys one portion of the human race to preserve the rest in this historical phase of the angelic conflict.

Judgment by death guarantees the evangelism of the human race in every generation, either through normal or crisis evangelism, or both. Therefore judgment by death is a grace blessing from God in every generation of human history. The very existence of the Dead Sea in the Middle East is a memorial to the principle of judgment by death for the destruction of Sodom and Gomorra was the removal of a cancer of the generation that would have eventually destroyed the human race.

Perhaps the most subtle of all judgments, however, is the third: judgment by finesse. Under the principle of indirect judgment God often uses evil as His agent to destroy evil without using or involving human volition. No coercion of human volition is involved in judgment by finesse. Either the union or the conflict of two evil entities becomes the basis for finesse judgment in which God uses an evil agent to punish and destroy an evil organisation. With all of his genius Satan has never solved the problem of civil war in his own system. The very nature of evil causes one category of evil to despise another category of evil. This is illustrated by the antagonism which exists between self-righteous arrogance and concupiscence. It is inevitable, therefore, that certain categories of evil may become hostile toward other categories of evil, resulting in zero canceling zero, evil canceling evil. By its very nature of imperfection evil can never be consistent, and since God uses agents in the administration of divine judgment it is not surprising that the agent is often an evil person, an evil organisation, and evil nation or some form of angelic evil like demonism. For example, demons were used to punish evil exorcists in Acts 19:13-16. In Revelation 9:1-11 the first demon assault army tortured for five months unbelievers on the earth. Evil was used as an agent to punish evil. In Revelation 9:13-21 the second demon assault army killed one third of the population of the earth, and this combined finesse judgment with judgment by death. As a result the Tribulation was still liveable and many millions survived the Tribulation. In the first half of the Tribulation the beast dictator of the revived Roman empire actually was the sponsorer and the leader of ecumenical religion of the world, religion as the devil's ace trump, a Satanic system. However, it was inevitable that the two systems of evil, political and religious, would become antagonistic. In this classical case of finesse judgment the evil agent was the dictator of the revived Roman empire and the victim was the religion. So in this case we have the political power of the dictator of the revived Roman empire as the agent and the victim was the international religious organisation. In Revelation 17:16,17 we see that remarkable case of finesses judgment where we have the dictator of the revived Roman empire turning against the religious system which he organised and developed and becoming the evil agent to destroy the evil system.

Out of this comes a principle. God uses evil to destroy evil. God uses arrogance to destroy arrogance. God uses envy and power lust of an evil agent to destroy an evil system. The political power of the revived Roman empire is the evil agent turned against the religious hypocrisy of ecumenical religion as the evil entity. No human volition is violated. God merely uses the evil motivation of one evil organisation to destroy the function of another evil organisation. Finesse judgment exploits civil war and natural antagonism which exists within the framework of evil. Finesse judgment dramatises the fact that man is simply the product of his own volition, and when he becomes involved in the cosmic system of Satan he becomes involved in its attendant evils and therefore is liable for destruction from evil.

Nothing is more embarrassing for believers to be punished by an evil agent. As it says in Psalm 76:10, "God uses the wrath of man to praise him." Jesus Christ often uses finesse judgment in the control of history.

The result of all of this is that client nations are often destroyed because they become evil. In the administration of the fifth cycle of discipline to the client nation to God finesse judgment was always used and employed. The client nation to God under the fifth cycle of discipline is an evil entity at that point while an evil agent is some foreign power antagonistic to the client nation. For example, there were three Jewish client nations in history. First of all, the northern kingdom, then the southern kingdom, and finally Judea. God used an evil agent, Assyria, to punish the evil of the northern kingdom as a client nation to God in BC 721. In BC 586 the southern kingdom had been functioning as a client nation to God and it was destroyed by an evil agent, the Chaldeans. Then after the return of the Jews to the land there was the third client nation, Judea, and God used an evil agent, Rome, to punish the evil of the kingdom of Judea in AD 70.

There are three categories of indirect judgment which are usually used in the destruction of a client nation. It should be noted that normal evangelism occurred in Judea, for example, between 30-66 AD. But in 66 AD the Jewish wars began and at that particular time it became not the normal evangelism but the crisis evangelism of judgment by pain. Furthermore, at this time there was the legitimate function of the gift of tongues, as in Isaiah 28:11. The Jews were warned that they were about to be destroyed, that they had reached the saturation point of evil, that as a client nation they were no longer acceptable to the protocol of God, and therefore they were warned by the function of the gift of tongues. That was the only purpose for it. It was a purpose so stated in 1 Corinthians 14:21-22, which says, "In the Torah it stands written, 'By means of foreign languages and from the lips of strangers [Gentiles speaking Gentile languages to evangelise the Jew], I will speak to this people.'" The Jews were responsible for evangelisation but they failed, and so in the period between 30 and 70 AD the gift of tongues was not only a means of evangelising Israel but it was a warning: the fifth cycle of discipline is coming. "So then tongues are for a sign, not for believers, but for unbelievers." In 70 AD the gift of tongues ceased altogether. Obviously the gift of tongues was a part of normal as well as crisis evangelism in Israel. Judgment by pain means that normal evangelism is changed into crisis evangelism and between 66-70 AD there was judgment by pain.

Our Lord Jesus Christ warned the Jews that this was coming, and He even explained why judgment by finesse would be administered under the system of the fifth cycle of discipline. Luke 13:34 — "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, the city that kills the prophets and stones those sent to her! [Negative volition under the function of normal evangelism] How often I would have gathered your children together, just as a hen gathers her brood under her wings, but you did not wish it!" We have here the aorist active indicative of the verb ε)qelew which is not Koine Greek, it is Attic Greek, the classical Greek of Athens in contrast to Ionic Greek, the classical Greek of the Athenian colonies. When He used this word instead of the normal Koine word [which is very similar: qelw] it was one of the greatest warnings the Greeks could have had, because instead of using the Koine of the day He turned to something that was far more important, the Attic Greek. When he said that in the Greek it is translated, "You did not desire it, you did not wish it," and He indicated the problem with that client nation. Negative volition toward the gospel. The administration of the fifth cycle of discipline follows the pattern, then, in Job 12:23, "He makes a nation great, then destroys them; he enlarges the nations, then leads them away." Historically, this is accomplished by indirect judgment in all three categories. However, the primary destruction of the client nation is the result of human volition making bad decisions from a position of weakness in the cosmic system. Because evil is arrogant, one form of evil like Rome cannot tolerate another form of evil like Israel became. The principle then: Arrogance cannot tolerate arrogance, therefore evil tends to cancel evil. This is the basis for the finesse judgment. Our Lord Jesus Christ prophesied the modus operandi of all three categories of indirect judgment in Luke 21:20-24, "They shall fall by the edge of the sword [judgment by death], and will be led captive into all nations [judgment by pain]; and Jerusalem will be trampled under foot by the Gentiles [judgment by finesse] until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Since 70 AD we have lived in the times of the Gentiles. No Jewish nation can be a client nation to God. In fact there never will be a Jewish nation as a client nation to God again until the second advent. Therefore, whether they are Jews in the land today or not is totally inconsequential as far as prophecy is concerned. There will not be any Jews in the land of significance until after the Church is removed. We live in the times of the Gentiles which means that only a Gentile nation can function as a client nation to God.

Chapter 21

Now the theme changes completely and we move to the eternal state. Forget everything about our life on this earth, we are now going to see what it is going to be like forever and ever and ever. The eternal state covers chapter twenty-one and the first five verses of chapter twenty-two. From chapter 22:6-21 we have the conclusion of the book.

Outline

There are three paragraphs in chapter twenty-one: The description of the eternal state, verses 1-5; The citizens of the eternal state, verses 6-8; The capital of the eternal state, verses 9-27.

In verse 1 we note the new universe. We have seen the destruction of the old universe, now there is a new universe created for the eternal state. So, in effect, there have been three universes in history. The first one was the angelic universe, the one which included planet earth, having all of the monsters and an entirely different way of life. Many of the things that have been dug up, called dinosaurs and other things, simply belong to another universe, the angelic universe. Secondly, we have the universe of mankind, the universe of human history. There are some differences. The first universe, the angelic, was quite different not only with regard to planet earth and not only with regard to the planets around planet earth, but in the universe at large. The third category is the new universe of the eternal state and this is the one we are about to study.

Three things are noted in verse one. First of all, there is a new vision, the sequential use of the conjunction kai, "Then." With this we have the aorist active indicative of the verb o(raw, indicating we are now starting a new vision, "Then I saw." The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the apostle John is about to observe what life will be like in the eternal state. The eternal state doesn't even exist at this time. Heaven does but the future existence of the universe and how it will be is only described briefly in this chapter. The apostle John gets to see this. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of this eschatological doctrine regarding the eternal state.

The second thing we note is the new heaven, "a new heaven." The absence of the definite article emphasises the quality of the direct object. The new heaven is a reference to that part of the universe called heaven. We should note that the Bible speaks of three heavens. There is the band of atmosphere around the earth, called the first heaven in Genesis 1:6-8. The second heaven is the stellar universe (Acts 7:42) which is the realm of prehistoric angelic activity as well as present angelic activity, and this second heaven includes billions of light years of space. The third heaven is the throne room of God which is beyond stellar space. It is discussed as the third heaven in 2 Corinthians 12:2 and Revelation chapters four and five. There are three heavens, including planet earth, in the universe: the original universe of the angels, Genesis 1:1; 2 Peter 3:5; the restored earth for the occupancy of man, Genesis 1:3-31; 2 Peter 3:7; the new heavens and the new earth, Revelation 21:1; 2 Peter 3:13. There is also the new earth. The destruction of the universe of human history is the subject of 2 Peter 3:5-13. The destruction of the historical universe is the subject of Revelation 20.

We have so far: "Then I saw a new heaven, a new universe and a new earth." That is followed by the fact that some explanation is demanded once again so the apostle adds under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit an insertion. Starting with the post positive conjunctive particle gar he explains the need for a new universe, a new heaven and a new earth to replace the historical universe in which we now live. The dual subject follows which is in the nominative singular, and the dual subject here is the first heaven and the first earth: "the first heaven and the first earth were departed," the aorist active indicative of the verb a)perxomai, which means to go away, to vanish, or to depart. We will translate that, "for the first heaven and the first earth were blown away." That is the best translation because of the thermonuclear destruction of the historical universe which is described in 2 Peter chapter 3:5-13. The constative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety: the destruction of the universe that we now occupy. Man cannot destroy this universe but God can and God will, as we have noted, after the last judgment. The active voice: the first heaven and the first earth, or the universe of human history, produces the action of the verb. It is dramatically destroyed. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the destruction of the universe that we are now occupying. The destruction of the present historical universe provides the explanation for the creation of a new heaven, new earth, and new universe.

Isaiah 65:17, "For behold, I create new heavens and a new earth; consequently the former things shall not be remembered or entered into the right lobe [come to mind]."

An analogy between the eternal state and the eternal state of regenerate Israel is given in Isaiah 66:22, "For just as the new heavens and the new earth which I create will endure before me, saith the Lord, so your offspring and your name will endure." In other words, we will see the fulfillment of this when we study the satellite city of the new universe. The believers of Israel will definitely be there.

2 Peter 3:5, "For they are willfully ignorant of this fact, that by the word of God the heavens [the universe of the prehistoric angelic conflict] existed long ago and the earth was formed out of water and by water," planet earth of present history.

Verse 6, "through which the world at that time [antediluvian planet earth] was destroyed, being flooded by water."

Verse 7, "But the present heavens and earth [post-diluvian universe] by his word are being preserved for fire [God's nuclear destruction at the end of the Millennium], kept for the day of judgment [the last judgment] and destruction of ungodly men [the unbelievers cast into the lake of fire forever]."

Verse 8, "Do not let this one doctrine escape your notice, beloved, with the Lord one day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day."

Verse 9, "The Lord is not slow about his promise, as some men conclude slowness, but he is patient toward all of you, not wishing for anyone to perish," it is God's will, God's desire that all should believe in Christ. The fact that men reject Christ as saviour means that they are rejecting the will of God for their lives, "not wishing for anyone to perish but for all to come to a change of mind [about Jesus Christ]."

Verse 10, "But the day of the Lord [that portion of the day of the Lord related to the destruction of the historical universe] will come like a thief [in the ancient world the thief came suddenly and took his victims by surprise] in which the heavens [the universe about us now] will disappear with a sudden roar [the nuclear destruction of the present historical universe] and the elements will be dissolved with intense heat, but the earth and its works will be burned up," that is when the evidence by which the unbeliever was convicted, the book of works, will be destroyed.

Verse 11, "Since all these things [temporary existence of the historical universe] are in the process of being dissolved in this manner, what kind of people ought you to be in your Christian way of life and godliness,

Verse 12, “anticipating and earnestly desiring the coming day of God, because of which the burning heavens will be dissolved, and the elements will melt with intense heat!”

Verse 13, “But according to his announced promise [the promise of Isaiah 65:17; 66:22] we are anticipating new heavens and a new earth, in which righteousness is at home.”

Verse 14, “Therefore, beloved, since you anticipate these things, be zealous that you may be observed by him [Christ as the judge] in prosperity [found a winner by the protocol system], spotless [life in the divine dynasphere] and blameless [to fulfill the priorities of the plan of God at present].”

We still have one phase left in Revelation 20:1, “and there was no longer any sea.” Planet earth of the eternal state has no sea or water like the present planet earth. Water and sea is necessary for the historical planet on which we now find ourselves. It is necessary for the function of evaporation and precipitation, hence necessary for the basic needs of man, food, water, and survival. The implication of Revelation 21:23 and 22:5 is that there will also be no sun for light, hence in the eternal state God will provide directly rather than through natural laws not only our light but anything else we need. There will be water and oceans in the Millennium but no water, no oceans, in the eternal state. Therefore the contrast between the present universe and planet earth and the eternal universe and its planet earth at that time. Millennial passages indicate seas and waters on planet earth, Psalm 72:8; Ezekiel 47:10, 15; Zechariah 9:10; 14:8. One of the proofs that the context is dealing with the eternal state is the fact that there is no sea on the new earth whereas in the Millennium there is lots of water. In the universe of the future which we will occupy in resurrection bodies no water is necessary.

Water on planet earth during the eternal state is not necessary for either man’s survival or the imprisonment and control of fallen angels. The sea is often related to the abyss or Tartarus, the prison of angelic hordes, fallen angels, but once all fallen angels are put into the lake of fire, Matthew 25:41, it is unnecessary to have sea or water as the gates of their present prison. Furthermore, the sea during human history is not only the source of perpetual unrest and instability of weather but at the same time is used as an analogy to evil. We saw that is Revelation 13:1, the beast out of the sea is the product of evil. Hence, the absent of sea on planet earth during the eternal state connotes the absence of evil during the eternal state. In the historical planet earth the seas form the boundaries for nations. Acts 17:26, “And he made from one, every nation of mankind to live on the face of the earth, having determined their appointed times [historical duration] and the boundaries of their habitation.” One of the boundaries of their habitation are the seas. In the eternal state nationalism will no longer be necessary, even though it will exist. Hence the sea will not be a necessary boundary for nations.

In verse two the proper noun “John” does not occur in the original manuscript, hence it is omitted from the translation. Obviously, the apostle John is the subject of the verb o(raw which is in the aorist active indicative. It simply says, “I saw.” The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, the vision of the new Jerusalem, the capital of the eternal state. The active voice: John produces the action. The declarative indicative is for the reality of eschatological information about the eternal state. The verse begins by saying, "I saw the holy city, the new Jerusalem." This is not the Jerusalem of the present time, this is the satellite city which will be suspended above the earth. In the eternal state the new Jerusalem is suspended in the sky above the sight of the original Jerusalem but it is a much larger city. In eternity the new Jerusalem fulfills several important functions. First of all it will be the capital of the new universe of the eternal state and the residence of our Lord Jesus Christ. It also fulfills the divine promise to Abraham which is given in Hebrews chapter 11.

Verse 8, "By means of faith [doctrine resident in the soul] Abraham, when he was called, obeyed by going out to a place which he was to receive for an inheritance; and he went out, not knowing where he was going."

Verse 9, "By means of faith he lived as an alien in the land of promise, as in a foreign land, dwelling in tents with Isaac and Jacob, joint heirs with him of the same promise." Why did he live in a tent? Because Abraham had tremendous happiness, tremendous capacity for life, capacity for success, for wealth. He was living in a tent not to be a martyr but he was living his life in the light of eternity, even though he was enjoying life.

Verse 10, "For he kept waiting with anticipation for a city [the new Jerusalem] which has foundations, whose architect and builder is God." Note that the city has foundations even though it is suspended in air, and while there is no description outside of the fact that the builder and the architect is God we are going to see it in great detail. Abraham's lived in the future, knowing that he would have this great city. His testimony to the fact that this would be his city is the fact that he continued to live in a tent.

Verse 13, However, he died without ever receiving the city: "All these died in faith [in doctrine], without receiving the promises, but having seen them and saluted them from a distance [Abraham died saluting the city], and having acknowledged that they were strangers and transients on the earth." In other words, they were passing through types from grace to glory.

Then in chapter 12:22 we have once again a reference to that city. "But you have come to Mount Zion, even the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and the millions of angels,"

Verse 23, "also to the church of the firstborn [the royal family of God will be living in this great city] who have been registered in heaven, and to God, the judge of all, and to the spirits of justified ones made perfect," This is a reference to ultimate sanctification.

Verse 24, "and to Jesus, the mediator of the new covenant."

The location of the capital is now given in Revelation 20:2. The present active participle of katabainw indicates that it is suspended in space. Katabainw means to descend, “descending out of heaven from God.” Along with Revelation 3:12 which uses the same Greek words this phrase suggests that the new Jerusalem, the capital of the universe in the eternal state, is suspended above the earth as a satellite city. The size of the city: 1400 miles square times 1400 miles high. This city is not to be confused with the Millennial Jerusalem which is the capital of client nation Israel and the capital of planet earth during the Millennium. Note, therefore, that there, are some great differences between this satellite city and the Millennial city of Jerusalem.

There is a Jerusalem of the Millennium; there is a Jerusalem of the eternal state. The new Jerusalem in the eternal state is the satellite; the Jerusalem of the Millennium is located around the present site. There are differences. For example, in the Millennial Jerusalem there is natural light; in the eternal Jerusalem there is supernatural light, the shekinah glory. The Millennial Jerusalem has no walls but the eternal Jerusalem has very high walls. There is a temple in the Millennial Jerusalem; there is no temple in the eternal Jerusalem. The shekinah glory who now indwells the believer as the Lord Jesus Christ will function as the temple. In the Millennial Jerusalem there are animal sacrifices mentioned — Ezekiel chapters 40-48; there are no animal sacrifices in the eternal state. Living water comes from the temple, according to Ezekiel 47:1, in the Millennial Jerusalem; the water of life comes out from the throne of God in Revelation 22:1. Unbelievers live in the city of Jerusalem in the Millennium, Zechariah 12:6; 14:11; only believers live in the city in the eternal state, Revelation 21:4,7; 22:14. There are trees for food and healing in the Millennial city of Jerusalem, Ezekiel 47:7-12; there is the tree of life in the eternal Jerusalem.

We have an analogy now, the analogy as to a bride. This is the most beautiful city of all eternity as well as time. It is introduced with the perfect passive participle of the verb toimazw which means to prepare, “having been prepared.” The perfect tense is a dramatic perfect, the rhetorical application of the perfect tense. The action of preparation has been completed. The existing state of beauty is described in an unusually vivid and realistic way. This is the most breathtaking city that will ever exist and it will exist forever and ever. The passive voice: the new Jerusalem, the capital of the eternal state receives the action of the verb. This is a circumstantial participle and it is translated, “having been prepared as.” “As” is the Greek word w(j, the conjunction of analogy. It simply means this is an illustration, nothing more, nothing less. “For her husband” is a reference to its inspiring beauty. The sheer beauty of the holy city, the new Jerusalem, will be reserved for the passage we will study from verse nine. The Church is called the bride of Christ, it is not related to the analogy in this verse. So we have the beauty of the city suddenly appearing in the sky. We have those who are occupying it. There is one thing about that city that emphasises the importance of it and that is found back in Revelation chapter three, verse twelve. The first three words are “The winner,” the believer who advances to maturity, the believer who reaches gate eight, the believer who forms the pivot for the client nation. “The winner, I will make him a pillar in the temple of my God.” This “temple of my God” is not the temple of the eternal state, there is none, the shekinah glory is the temple. This is a public building, and it can be translated “I will make him a pillar in the public building of my God.” The word “temple” is used because in the ancient world one of the ways of keeping historical records was to inscribe on the pillar of a temple the name of some famous king who had done great deeds. That was the historical record. There were many temples in the ancient world and inside was like walking into a book. The pillars had the names of people and all of the things that they did, and their greatness. Those temples have been destroyed and we do not have records from that particular source any more, they didn't last. But the idea is there because the Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written.

"The winner, I will make him a pillar in the temple of my God," that is, if you advance in the protocol system and form up in the pivot with other like-minded believers. Then the client nation will be delivered. It is the only way it will be delivered. In the future, in that magnificent satellite city of the eternal state, there will be a pillar in the temple of God. There will be a permanent historical record of your life and your impact on history. The greatest impact on history is the believer, either for good or for bad. If the client nation survives the believer is a winner. If the client nation goes down the believer is a loser, "furthermore, he will never vanish from history; in fact I will emblazon on him the title of my God and the name of the city of my God, the new Jerusalem, which shall descend from heaven from God, also my new title." The winner is recorded in the temple of records in the eternal state.

Verse 3, This is a proclamation from heaven which begins with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, followed by the aorist active indicative of the verb a)kouw meaning to hear. "Then I heard." The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. "Then I heard a great [or loud] voice [the voice of the king of arms actually] from the throne, saying." The present active participle of legw gives us the announcement of what he is about to say. The present tense of duration is for doctrine taught in the past with the result that it stands forever in the canon of scripture. The active voice: the king of arms makes this announcement. The king of arms actually functions as a teaching angel to communicate the fact that instead of a tabernacle or temple the Lord Himself is going to be the sacred building. Then we have the demonstrative particle i)dou which occurs quite frequently in this section of the book of Revelation. It is taken from the aorist middle imperative of o(raw and is used as a particle to demand concentration on a point of doctrine, "Behold, the tabernacle." The word for tabernacle is sknh. "Behold, the tabernacle of God is [ellipsis demands the insertion of the verb to be] with mankind," which means simply that those believers living in the capital suspended above the earth actually had the presence of God. This is the capital of the new universe.

The question arises: What is the tabernacle of God? It is no other than the person of our Lord Jesus Christ who as the Shekinah glory dwelt in the tabernacle of Israel. Not only on earth but in heaven there is what we call a tabernacle-temple which gives testimony to the person and the work of Christ on the cross. The tabernacle of Moses in Exodus chapters 25-40 is not only a portrayal of the person and the work of Christ during His first advent but is actually the sacred building for the location of the presence of Jesus Christ as the God of Israel.

There is also the Millennial temple in Israel indicating the restoration of Israel as the client nation during the 1000-year reign of Christ. The only other exception is the eternal state in Revelation 21:22 where we read that there is no temple in the new Jerusalem: "for the Lord God the Almighty One, even the Lamb is the temple.” This explains the concept of the Shekinah glory.

The word “shekinah” is not a Bible word but is a noun based on a Bible word. The word in the Old Testament is the Hebrew word shakan, and it means to dwell. Often a verb was converted into a noun by adding a suffix and then shortening up a vowel. So we have the noun which came into being to describe it, shekinah. However, the next word is a Bible word, kabod. Its equivalent in the New Testament is doxa, “glory.” The shekinah glory is a technical word used to describe the presence of the Lord Jesus Christ with Israel as the God of Israel. Romans 9:4 adds to this: that the Jewish heritage included the Shekinah glory.

The seven principles related to the shekinah glory

We live in the Church Age, a dispensation which is unique. It is the dispensation of the royal family of God. After the Church Age is the resurrection of the Church, then the Tribulation, the second advent, then 1000 years of perfect environment on earth, followed by the end of history, the point at which we get the new heavens and the new earth, the new Jerusalem, the satellite city. Then we have the fact that there is no temple in the eternal state because the sacred building is present and visible to all in the eternal state. The temple is the Lord Jesus Christ. There is only one time in history when there is no temple, no sacred building, and that is the Church Age. Therefore we live in the most unusual of all dispensations.

1. The Shekinah glory in Israel was the presence of the Lord Jesus Christ in the holy of holies, Exodus 25:21,22; Leviticus 26:11,12; Psalm 99:1; Hebrews 9:6.

2. At the first advent and the incarnation there was a change. The Shekinah glory changed residence. Our Lord Jesus Christ came to the earth as the God-Man, undiminished deity and true humanity in one person forever. The Shekinah glory resided in the prototype divine dynasphere, “The word became flesh and tabernacled among us.”

3. 2 Corinthians 3:17ff, the first word starts out by telling us that God the Holy Spirit is deity, kurioj refers to deity. “Now the Lord is the Spirit [the Holy Spirit is God]; and where the Spirit of the Lord is,” He indwells the body of every believer, so when the believer enters gate one of the divine dynasphere the Holy Spirit controls the soul. We call that the filling of the Holy Spirit, that is the power gate. There is a reason why God the Holy Spirit indwells the body of every believer, “there is freedom.” Never before in human history did God the Holy Spirit ever indwell anyone. The freedom here is the freedom to execute the protocol plan of God inside the divine dynasphere, Galatians 5:1. 2 Corinthians 3:18 adds: “But we all, with an unveiled face,” the story of the ritual modus operandi of the Age of Israel is one of veils. Moses put a veil on his face when he went up to the Mount Sinai to receive the law so that the people could not see the tremendous glory that shone on his face from being in the presence of the Lord Jesus Christ as the God of Israel. There was a veil in front of the holy of holies, no one was to pass that veil on pain of death. The veil was used constantly to indicate that that was a ritual dispensation and that doctrine was learned through ritual function, but the ritual is gone because the Shekinah has departed from all the ritual systems. The Shekinah glory came in the flesh and dwelt in the prototype divine dynasphere. That changes everything. That is the reason why for the first time in all of human history God the Holy Spirit indwells the body of every believer as of the moment of salvation. That means something else: that we can be filled with the Spirit, and that one of the 40 things that happens to us at the point of salvation is that we not only receive the indwelling of the Holy Spirit but we enter into the divine dynasphere and once we do the veil is removed. We live in a dispensation with no veil. There is no veil except negative volition toward doctrine, the veil over the soul, "looking into a mirror [God's Word and the function of gate four, the momentum gate, to produce a reflection] the glory of God," we look into the mirror of gate four not to produce our reflection but to produce the reflection of the Shekinah glory who also indwells us, "are being transformed into the same image," life in the divine dynasphere reflects the glory of God. Being transformed into the same image means the protocol system transfers the believer of the Church Age into the reflected glory of our Lord, that is the Shekinah glory. In other words, the life in us shows on the outside as we gain momentum from gate four of the divine dynasphere, "from glory to glory," the first "glory" is the humanity of Christ indwelling the prototype divine dynasphere during His life on earth. That was the Shekinah glory coming in the flesh, that was Immanuel, "God with us" prophesied by Isaiah. Then we have the operational divine glory and the second "glory" is function of the believer only inside the protocol system, "to glory, just as from the Spirit of the Lord," the ministry of God the Holy Spirit in the protocol system, gate one of the divine dynasphere.

4. You should now reach some conclusions. The first conclusion demands that we understand three things: In the dispensation of Israel Jesus Christ the shekinah glory dwelt in sacred buildings; at the second advent the Shekinah glory came personally to Israel inside the prototype divine dynasphere so that Israel could see the humanity of Christ and draw conclusions that this was the God-Man, this was the Messiah for whom they were waiting; for the first time in human history both God the Son and God the Holy Spirit now indwell every believer, each having a separate purpose. The Holy Spirit indwells to make the believer's body a temple fit for the occupancy of the Shekinah glory, and Christ the Shekinah glory indwells to produce that glory in us as the royal family of God.

5. The Holy Spirit indwells the believer as part of the protocol plan of God for the Church Age. The protocol plan of God is based on the fact that all ritual is canceled, that all ritual had to do with sacred buildings. There are no sacred buildings in the Church Age even as there will be no sacred building in the eternal state, the new Jerusalem, the satellite city above the earth. The Holy Spirit indwells the believer as a part of the protocol plan of God for the Church Age. And since the Shekinah glory dwells in sacred buildings, and since there are no sacred buildings in this dispensation, the body becomes the issue. Your body is therefore occupied by God the Holy Spirit who makes it a temple for the residence for the Shekinah glory. The fact that you are indwelt personally by God the Holy Spirit and indwelt personally by Jesus Christ means that there is a way of life which is greater than anything which ever existed before and demands a greater personal responsibility than has ever existed in all of human history with regard to anyone, believer or unbeliever. On your shoulders rests the responsibility for the perpetuation of the client nation.

2 Corinthians 6:16 says, “We are the temple of the living God.” Why? Well, we have a paraphrase from the Old Testament and the Shekinah glory: “Just as God has said, ‘I will dwell in them’.” When did He say that? In the Old Testament. He said that He would live in the holy of holies; now, He lives in us, “I will dwell in them and walk among them,” that was Israel, but Israel is no longer a client nation, this is the times of the Gentiles and this is the times of the royal family of God. And whether a client nation survives or not depends on the daily decisions of believers and no one else. It is because the body of the believer is the temple that a new protocol system is designed by God to replace the ritual system of the tabernacle and the temple in Israel.

6. Our Lord prophesied on earth when the shekinah glory was in the prototype protocol system. When the Shekinah glory indwelt the prototype this is what the Shekinah glory said in prophesy, John 14:20, our Lord prophesied during the first advent that He the Shekinah glory would indwell every believer in this dispensation. You are not only indwelt by the Holy Spirit you are indwelt by the person of our Lord Jesus Christ: “In that day [the Church Age] you will know that I am in the Father,” Jesus Christ as eternal God is coequal and coeternal with God the Father, and that means that they have identical essence though they are two separate and distinct persons, “and you [believers of the Church Age], and you are in me [positional truth, the formation of the royal family of God through the baptism of the Spirit], and I in you,” that was something that was the most difficult of all for them to understand and it is the most difficult thing for believers to understand today — the indwelling presence of the Shekinah glory, the indwelling presence of the Lord Jesus Christ as the Shekinah glory in every believer in this dispensation.

7. Therefore, the necessity for the new plan of God, the protocol plan in the divine dynasphere. This is the fact that every believer be indwelt by Jesus Christ the Shekinah glory calls for something by way of a plan for believers that never existed before. God has a plan for your life and it is like something that never existed in the Old Testament. It is superior to everything in the Old Testament. Those who believed in the Old Testament are called “family of God” but you and I as believers are “royal family of God.”

Colossians 1:27, “To whom God decreed [or purposed] to make known what is the wealth [not riches. Wealth is invisible; riches are very visible] of the glory of the mystery,” the indwelling presence of the Shekinah glory, “in the Gentile [believers], which is Christ in you, the confidence [or hope] of glory.” Only the divine dynasphere contains the machinery to glorify the Shekinah glory.

Verse 28, “Him we teach, warning every man [about living in the cosmic system] and teaching every man in all wisdom [teaching the mechanics of the protocol system], that we might present every man [believer] mature in Christ.”

Verse 29, “For this purpose I also labour to the point of exhaustion, competing according to his game plan [the protocol system, the divine dynasphere], which is operational in me [inside the divine dynasphere].”

Romans 8:10, “In fact if Christ is in you [1st class condition: and He is], though the body is dead [because of the sin nature] because of sin [the sin nature], on the other hand the Spirit [God the Holy Spirit] is life because of righteousness.”

2 Corinthians 13:5, this approaches it from the standpoint of the privacy of the believer's priesthood.

“Test yourselves [only you can determine your status] to see if you are in the doctrine [also used here for the divine dynasphere]; examine yourselves,” only the individual believer under the privacy of his own royal priesthood can determine whether he is living in the protocol system of God or in the cosmic system of Satan, “Or do you not know this about yourselves, that Jesus Christ [the Shekinah glory] is in you, unless indeed you have failed the test?” If you don't know that, you have failed the test. The believer fails the test through ignorance of the Shekinah glory, ignorance of God's protocol system, ignorance of the divine dynasphere and even ignorance of the enemy, Satan's cosmic system. You have to know something to test yourself.

Philippians 1:20, the testimony of the apostle: “According to my intense concentration [on doctrine, on Christ] and resultant confidence, that in nothing shall I be disgraced [life in the cosmic system], but with all integrity [of the protocol system], even now, as always, Christ [the Shekinah glory] shall be exalted in my body,” Paul is saying he passed the test, he was in the divine dynasphere and living there — “whether by life or by death,” Christ indwells Paul. Paul cannot see the indwelling of Christ except as he looks into the mirror of the Word of God and gets the reflection of the Shekinah glory. But once he dies he is absent from the body and face to face with the Shekinah glory. For those who are living in the divine dynasphere life is wonderful and death is even more fantastic because the Shekinah glory which we see reflected in the mirror of the Word of God at gate four becomes a face to face proposition the moment we die. That is why he concludes his testimony in verse 21 by saying, “For me, living is Christ [the reflected glory of Christ from living in the divine dynasphere], dying is profit.” Why is dying advantage? Because as long as he lives he is in the protocol system; when he dies he is face to face with the Lord. He can't lose, he is a double winner. He is a winner in time and he is a winner for all eternity.

Next we have the future active indicative of the verb skhnow which means to tabernacle. It is used of our Lord Jesus Christ as the Shekinah glory. He tabernacled in the tabernacle in the Age of Israel, then He came in the flesh: “the Logoj became flesh and tabernacled among us.” Now it says He will tabernacle in the New Jerusalem, the satellite city suspended above the earth in the eternal state. The predictive future tense anticipates the eternal state and explains there is neither tabernacle nor temple in the new Jerusalem, the capital of the eternal state. Why? Because the Lord Jesus Christ, the Shekinah glory is there. The active voice: Jesus Christ as the Shekinah glory produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of eschatological doctrine.

We have a prepositional phrase meta plus the genitive plural of the intensive pronoun a)utoj, “with them.” Not all believers are going to live there, though a lot of believers are. In that satellite city in the eternal state will be living the winners. Since they are the ones who saw the reflected Shekinah glory in the mirror of the Word of God, living in the divine dynasphere, they are going to be there as citizens. Losers are not going to be living in the new Jerusalem, though they can visit.

In the next phrase we have the new citizens of the eternal state. It begins with the conjunction kai, “and,” “and they shall be his people.” The word for “peoples” is a predicate nominative plural from laoj. In the plural it indicates the fact that there are several categories of believers in resurrection bodies whilst citizens of the satellite city, the headquarters for the eternal state. Mature believers of the Old Testament would be included, mature believers in the Church Age, mature believers in the Tribulation and Millennium. So the plural refers to certain great believers in every generation of human history, those who were winners, those who advanced to maturity in the plan that God has set up. We also have the future active indicative of e)imi to remind us that we are now in the eternal state. The future tense is a predictive future anticipating the existence of the capital of the eternal state, the satellite city which is suspended above the earth. The active voice: certain mature believers produce the action. The indicative mood is declarative and a reminder once again that there is very little said about the eternal state. This is the most concentrated passage. There are several passages in Isaiah which talk about the new heavens and the new earth, and those passages simply mention the eternal state in passing.

Verse 4, the abolition of all suffering. This is a description of the eternal state in which there will be no suffering. All suffering is confined to time, and for the believer it has two purposes: the acceleration of spiritual growth; discipline for bad decisions. “God” does not appear in the original manuscript as a word; He is the subject, but the word qeoj does not occur. Again, it is the inferior manuscripts and translation of the King James version. “And he shall wipe away [remove or erase].” Again, the future active indicative of e)xaleifw which means to erase. But, of course, you don’t erase tears, you wipe them away. The predictive future anticipates the eternal state. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb, the abolition of all human suffering. Suffering is obliterated. The indicative mood is declarative representing the verbal action from the viewpoint of reality. There will be no suffering forever and ever and ever. Tears are associated with sorrow, suffering, pain, disaster, discomfort, all of which does not exist in the eternal state for the believer in Christ. The suffering of the unbeliever in the eternal state is intense; the believer will never suffer again in the eternal state. This phrase means that the past is blotted out. Tears not only refer to actual pain but tears refer to regret. All types of suffering are going to be removed in the eternal state and there will be no remorse, no regrets, and no sadness. The remorse, then, of the loser at the judgment seat of Christ is temporary and cannot extend into the eternal state.

Not only is suffering abolished in the eternal state but so is physical death. We have a conjunction kai introducing a result from what precedes and it should be translated “furthermore.” Then we have a nominative singular subject, qanatoj, “death.” It refers to physical death which is a subject of fear and uncertainty, and often pain, in this life. Physical death occurs officially when the soul departs from the body, terminating life on planet earth, and means entrance into the eternal state. The entire human race enters into the eternal state in one of two ways: as a believer, and therefore go to heaven waiting for the official eternal state to begin at the end of human history; as an unbeliever, go to Hades and wait for the second resurrection which occurs at the end of history and the great white throne or last judgment, followed by the inevitable and eternal lake of fire. For the believer, of course, entering into heaven means waiting for the first resurrection. For the average person, then, death is one of the most feared of all experiences in life, but for the believer death is simply a transfer from time to eternity, from planet earth to heaven. The eternal state abolishes physical death for all mankind, both the unbeliever in the lake of fire and the believer in heaven. "No more death" refers to the believer in the eternal state. Remember, the unbeliever is under the punishment of the second death.

Translation of verse 4 so far: "And he shall wipe away every tear from their eyes; furthermore death will not longer exist."

For the winner death is one of the greatest blessings in life, it is not something to be feared. For the believer who is a loser it is going to be the last terrible suffering outside of the chagrin at the judgment seat of Christ.

Job 5:19-27.

"In six troubles he will deliver you," the hiphil imperfect of the verb natsal which means to deliver and emphasises the wall of fire principle which God has provided for the positive believer — "Furthermore in seven evil will not touch you."

Verse 20, logistical grace has a wall of fire and it is parlayed into deliverance of the winner, the believer who is mature or advancing. Not all of the seven troubles are given, but here are some of them. The first is depression, economic disaster, "In famine he shall preserve you from death." Famine is economic disaster under the agricultural economy of the ancient world. "And in war from the power of the sword," just because you go to war it doesn't mean you are going to die. If you are a believer and you are advancing in the plan of God and you stay in the divine dynasphere you can survive even military disaster.

Verse 21, "You will be hidden from the scourge of the tongue," let the Lord handle it. That is real deliverance, but if you are in the cosmic system, forget it! "Neither will you be afraid of destruction when it comes," but the word destruction is our word qanatoj, or the Hebrew equivalent, and refers to violent death. One thing the believer in God's plan does not fear is death.

Verse 22, "You will laugh at death and economic depression," this doesn't mean historical laughter, "and wild animals of the earth," in the day in which this was written wild animals were a source of violent death. If this had been written today it would have been talking about automobiles, aircraft, nuclear weapons, conventional weapons. The point is: laughter here means the inner resources of doctrine producing a good sense of humour in time of pressure. Doctrine provides a sense of humour for disaster is the principle.

Verse 23, "For your contract," has to do with a covenant, and the covenant has to do with God's provision of logistical grace, "will be with the stones of the field," until God is ready to take you home nothing can destroy you. Again, the Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written, and when Job was living a good round stone was a good weapon, a good bullet from a sling. So it is talking again about weapons, and you have nothing to fear from weapons, "And the wild animals will be at peace with you," as a source of disaster. What this passage is saying is that no instrument of death can remove the believer in God's plan from this life until God permits. Only the integrity of God can transfer the believer from time to eternity.

Verse 24, "Therefore you will know that your tent [body, a temporary shelter] is in peace," a state of prosperity. Dying grace, "For you will visit your home [heaven] and you will not forfeit blessing." You do not forfeit blessing by dying, you gain blessing. The mature believer in eternity will receive the imputation of blessing and reward to his resurrection body.

Verse 25, "Furthermore you will know that your seed will be numerous," this does not refer to your own progeny, it simply means here that the human race will go right on. You will die and someone else will be born and take your place. The seed of the human race goes right on. You do have an impact in dying if you are a mature believer, it is the fact that "Your descendants will be like the grass of the earth." It means blessing by association. Your children, grandchildren, etc., will be blessed by association, even if they are unbelievers. God blesses those people as long as they live not because they are saved or unsaved but because they were associated with someone who advanced to maturity.

Verse 26, "You will come to the grave in a full age," which doesn't mean that you are going to be old, it simply means that God is going to take you at the right time. In matters of life and death timing is very important. God's timing is perfect because God is perfect. God's timing of the death of the mature believer is perfect. The point of dying grace is dying at the right time, "Like the shock of corn in its season," there is a right and a wrong time to pick corn, only the expert can determine. God is the expert; God decides when it is time to take you home. All corn does not ripen at the same time, but when corn is ripe it is harvested and separated from the sheaf. The separation of the corn from its sheaf is comparable to the soul and the spirit of the believer leaving the body in physical death. When the right time comes the integrity of God removes the soul and the spirit from the body we are said to be absent from the body and face to face with the Lord. Since God knows the best time no one should ever question His judgment.

Verse 27, We are not in the eternal state yet, so what is the conclusion? "Behold this [doctrine], we have investigated it [researched it, we have the facts]," getting the facts is learning Bible doctrine, so when you have the facts you make right decisions from a position of strength. You can have control of your life and a personal sense of destiny. Get the facts, research it, before you make decisions — “this is the gist of it; hear it, and know it for yourself,” you can be taught it but no one can make you know it for yourself, that’s your problem. You have to concentrate, you have to learn doctrine, you have to know it for yourself. Hear it and apply it to yourself.

We move on now to abolition of human suffering under the phrase, “neither, no, nor,” which is a particle which occurs three times in the Greek, ο)υτε, translated “negative, nor, nor.” The three categories are added as far as the eternal state is concerned. The happiness and the blessing of the eternal state is so fantastic it is indescribable, therefore the only way to get any concept of what it is all about is to note it from the negative standpoint.

At this point there are three categories which we add to the abolition of human suffering. They are connected with each one of these negative particles, ο)υτε. The first is penqoj which means sorrow, sadness, grief, and it is a reference to mental pain. The next word is kraugh which means crying from grief or from anxiety and is actually a manifestation of pain. The final one is ponoj and it refers to physical pain. So these are all different aspects of suffering and of anguish. So we translate it: “Neither mental pain [sadness, grief, sorrow], nor crying [the manifestation of pain in this case], nor pain [meaning physical pain].” With this we have the adverb e)ti, which is translated in several ways. Here it is used in the eternal state and it means “no longer.” But we are going to see it in connection with the Rapture of the Church where it means “soon” in the sense of imminency. And with this is the future active indicative of e)imi plus the negative ο)υκ, “will exist no longer.” “Neither shall there any longer be” is the easiest way to translate it with the negative particles, “any longer be mental anguish, nor crying, nor physical pain.”

With this we come now to the concept: For the believer in Christ suffering, sorrow, pain, depression, is limited to our lot on this earth. Sometimes suffering is self-induced through our own bad decisions; sometimes suffering is a reminder that we must take the responsibility for our own decisions in life. Our decisions often create the suffering, therefore we must take the responsibility and not pass it on to others. Sometimes the suffering is divine testing, the more infrequent reason for suffering. All such suffering is for blessing and establishing the right priorities and continuing our spiritual momentum. So whether it is suffering for blessing or cursing it can all be worked into momentum in our life on planet earth. In the case of divine discipline the issue is cosmic involvement plus sin, human good and the function of evil, whereas the issue in suffering for blessing is involvement in the divine dynasphere, being a protocol Christian rather than a cosmic Christian. In suffering for divine discipline the category is always painful and unbearable, whereas suffering for blessing is both bearable and solvable. All suffering is not solvable. If the suffering is self-induced then the born-again believer is going to suffer. As long as he lives he will be off-balance, he will never get straightened out, and his suffering is hopeless. When you find someone is in hopeless suffering they are always looking for someone to lean on. The solution to self-induced misery is the rebound technique which turns cursing into blessing and changes the category of suffering from divine discipline and judgment to the rearrangement of priorities and the perspective of life, and whatever suffering is left over is for blessing.

Principle

1. One's spirituality change must dominate personality change after salvation. In other words, your personality changes, whatever they are, must be related to the filling of the Spirit, the use of the faith-rest drill, the proper use of prayer, humility (enforced or genuine), perception and application of doctrine (momentum). The changes must be spirituality changes, not personality changes.
2. This is only possible through inculcation of doctrine regarding God's protocol plan as manifest through life inside the divine dynasphere.
3. Only in the divine dynasphere does suffering have a blessing connotation.
4. In the cosmic system all suffering is self-induced misery plus divine discipline tacked on to it.
5. So to avoid suffering for cursing the believer must substitute spiritual righteousness for his self-righteousness. Self-righteousness is arrogance; spiritual righteousness is your stage of growth in the divine dynasphere. We are all at a different stage of spiritual growth and, therefore, at a different stage in our attitudes and in our lives.
6. To do this, we as believers must reside, function, continue momentum inside the protocol system, the divine dynasphere.
7. But any alteration of personality accomplished by self produces a chain of self-induced misery and suffering by legalism.
8. This suffering brings on a series of solutions which compound the suffering. If you are trying to solve your problems and your source is arrogance, and you are going around being counseled, and people are telling you as an excuse you came from a broken home, or your mother dropped you on your head when you were a baby, or your father threw acid in your face at five, then you say, "All of my problems come from the fact that my father threw acid in my face," and it never occurs to you that your problems are related to your arrogance, present and now arrogance. So what happened in the past is inconsequential and has nothing to do with the case. Each suffering brings on a series of solutions which compounds the suffering on the one hand, and rationalises the suffering as Satanic persecution on the other hand. Solutions become intensified suffering because there is only one solution, and that is God's protocol plan for your life.

9. In reality this suffering is compounded with ignorance and bad decisions combining to form a miserable life, making the believer dependent upon human viewpoint counseling and false teaching. However though, suffering for blessing and suffering for cursing are both abolished in the eternal state.

We move on now in verse 4 to abolition of human suffering under the phrase, “neither, no, nor,” which is a particle which occurs three times in the Greek, ο)υτε, translated “negative, nor, nor.” The three categories are added as far as the eternal state is concerned. The happiness and the blessing of the eternal state is so fantastic it is indescribable, therefore the only way to get any concept of what it is all about is to note it from the negative standpoint.

At this point there are three categories which we add to the abolition of human suffering. They are connected with each one of these negative particles, ο)υτε. The first is πενqoj which means sorrow, sadness, grief, and it is a reference to mental pain. The next word is κραugh which means crying from grief or from anxiety and is actually a manifestation of pain. The final one is ποnoj and it refers to physical pain. So these are all different aspects of suffering and of anguish. So we translate it: “Neither mental pain [sadness, grief, sorrow], nor crying [the manifestation of pain in this case], nor pain [meaning physical pain].” With this we have the adverb ε)τι, which is translated in several ways. Here it is used in the eternal state and it means “no longer.” But we are going to see it in connection with the Rapture of the Church where it means “soon” in the sense of imminency. And with this is the future active indicative of ε)μι plus the negative ο)υκ, “will exist no longer.” “Neither shall there any longer be” is the easiest way to translate it with the negative particles, “any longer be mental anguish, nor crying, nor physical pain.”

With this we come now to the concept: For the believer in Christ suffering, sorrow, pain, depression, is limited to our lot on this earth. Sometimes suffering is self-induced through our own bad decisions; sometimes suffering is a reminder that we must take the responsibility for our own decisions in life. Our decisions often create the suffering, therefore we must take the responsibility and not pass it on to others. Sometimes the suffering is divine testing, the more infrequent reason for suffering. All such suffering is for blessing and establishing the right priorities and continuing our spiritual momentum. So whether it is suffering for blessing or cursing it can all be worked into momentum in our life on planet earth. In the case of divine discipline the issue is cosmic involvement plus sin, human good and the function of evil, whereas the issue in suffering for blessing is involvement in the divine dynasphere, being a protocol Christian rather than a cosmic Christian. In suffering for divine discipline the category is always painful and unbearable, whereas suffering for blessing is both bearable and solvable. All suffering is not solvable. If the suffering is self-induced then the born-again believer is going to suffer. As long as he lives he will be off-balance, he will never get straightened out, and his suffering is hopeless. When you find someone is in hopeless suffering they are always looking for someone to lean on. The solution to self-induced misery is the rebound technique which turns cursing into blessing and changes the category of suffering from divine discipline and judgment to the rearrangement of priorities and the perspective of life, and whatever suffering is left over is for blessing.

Principle

1. Because the believer has misconceptions at the point of salvation he often suffers for the entire time of his Christian life on this earth. This suffering does not mean that he has lost his salvation and it does not mean that he wasn't saved in the first place. When you believe in Christ you are saved: once saved always saved, you can't lose your salvation.

2. The misconception is that salvation means instant change, and if there is not instant change for the better you really weren't saved in the first place. Nothing in life that is worthwhile comes in an instant, except one thing: salvation.

3. In an instant of time you give up something, and giving up something or changing your personality and behaviour pattern may be very commendable but do not confuse it with the Christian way of life. At best it is reform; at worst it is guilt reaction or herd conformity. Herd conformity is a terrible thing because it comes from ignorance: the ignorance of the preacher, the ignorance of the congregation, the ignorance of the evangelist, the ignorance of Christians in general.

4. One of the major issues after believing in Christ for salvation is therefore the conflict between personality change and spirituality change, and you must distinguish between them. Personality change is phony and false as far as doctrine is concerned; spirituality change is a gradual thing that comes through learning and utilising the divine dynasphere, God's protocol plan for your life. The changes that come gradually from life in the divine dynasphere, from perception of doctrine, are the real changes, the wonderful changes and the things that make you a winner. But they are not personality changes, they are spirituality changes. Spirituality changes are made through life in the divine dynasphere; personality changes are made through herd conformity through being terrorised or bullied by a lot of legalists.

5. Personality change is the function of instant legalism. Instant legalism means instant arrogance. Instant arrogance means the acquisition of self-righteousness, and one of our greatest enemies is self-righteousness.

6. Personality change is often mistaken for spirituality and even assumed, erroneously, to be the Christian way of life.

7. When this distortion exists in your life you have become your own worst enemy because you will, keep making many bad decisions, and these bad decisions will distract you from God's protocol plan for your life residence, function, momentum inside the divine dynasphere.

8. Once the believer is locked into the idea that personality change, a reverse behaviour pattern — and self-sacrifice is the Christian way of life he has dedicated himself to full-time self-induced misery, the inevitable result of legalism.

9. Once a person decides that by rigid observation of a few taboos he is a great Christian, a spiritual giant, he will never regain balance and all suffering is brought about by his abysmal ignorance of the protocol plan of God and his evil, arrogant function in the cosmic system. In other words, change in personality and behaviour pattern maybe good and it maybe bad; and it may be acceptable to society and it may not be, but one thing it is not: whatever the value, whatever it is, it is not the Christian way of life.

We continue verse 4 with the causal conjunction o(t), correctly translated “because.” With it we have a nominative neuter plural subject prwtōj, which means here the first things of the old order of things, “because the old order of things.” Then we have the aorist active indicative of the verb aperxomai, “have passed away.” The culminative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. Historical suffering, group suffering, suffering where you were the innocent party but someone else made the mistake, is gone forever in the eternal state. The active voice: historical suffering, the old order of things, produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of Bible doctrine: the historical sufferings of man’s life on earth during time have departed forever because the old order of things, historical suffering, has passed away. Historical suffering, then, is that period of time from the fall of man to the end of the Tribulation and/or the second advent. It is doubtful that there will be any historical suffering during the perfect environment of the Millennium — only at the end when the Gog and Magog revolution occurs. However, at the end of the Millennium when Satan is released from prison historical suffering related to that revolution will be very brief and will be put down.

Under historical suffering the innocent suffer with the guilty

1. In historical suffering generally there are innocent people who did not make the decision to enter into a state of self-induced misery, who did not make the decisions that brought on the suffering; but they are so related to someone who did that they suffer as the innocent party.

2. The system of suffering, whatever it is, reaches both the innocent and the guilty in a specific geographical location, as small as a home or as large as a country.

3. Historical suffering may be internal and external to a nation or group of people.

4. External suffering is the repercussion of power politics: world wide economic disaster, invasion from an enemy nation, bad business judgment on the part of, say, bankers.

5. Internal suffering is natural disaster: warfare, revolution, terrorism, crime, economic depression, social defamation from gossip, etc.
6. When government interferes in private industry the innocent suffer with the guilty.
7. When the government through regulation and taxation destroys private industry and the economy the innocent suffer with the guilty.
8. When law and order malfunction in the courts and capital punishment is not in force for the guilty there is always a crime wave. In that crime wave the innocent suffer with the guilty. The victim is forgotten.
9. In the rise of Marxism, socialism or communism, it destroys the basic laws of divine establishment such as freedom, privacy, the sacredness of property and life. This results in the innocent suffering with the guilty.
10. A stupid national foreign policy. The innocent suffer with the guilty.
11. When gossip, maligning, revenge modus operandi, occur in the local church the innocent suffer with the guilty.

Verse 4 in corrected translation: "And he shall wipe away every tear from their eyes; furthermore death shall no longer exist, neither shall there be any longer mental anguish, nor crying, nor physical pain: because the old order of things has passed away."

Why do the innocent suffer with the guilty? The question poses a number of problems and applications of doctrine. One thing: God is fair. You always start with that principle. It is impossible for God to be unfair. We say the innocent suffer with the guilty because we know that certain people are responsible for the suffering of a lot of other people. The real problem is, are they innocent, and what does it mean if they are innocent? Here is the principle that you must remember when it comes to this category, because sooner or later you will be involved with some group where you had nothing to do with it but you are feeling the pain: God always protects the innocent and whenever apparently an innocent person suffers with the guilty it means there are facts that we do not have, but God reads minds. Therefore, we have to leave these things in the Lord's hands. Sometimes it is a testing for believers to accelerate their spiritual growth. And logistical grace is still operational.

Verse 5, We note first the declaration of our Lord Jesus Christ. It begins with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, "Then," rather than "And." With this is the articular present active participle of the verb kaqhmai which means to sit, "And he that sat." The definite article is used as a personal pronoun referring to our Lord Jesus Christ. The present tense of the participle is futuristic and it denotes an event which has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain in thought that it is contemplated as already coming to pass. The active voice of the participle: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb. The participle itself is circumstantial. It is followed by the prepositional phrase, "on the throne." "Said" is the aorist active indicative of legw. Then that demonstrative particle that always acts as a warning for intense concentration, i)dou. It is formed on the aorist middle imperative of o(raw and is translated "Behold" but it simply means regroup and concentrate.

Next we have the present active indicative of the verb poiew, "Behold, I am making." It is translated "I am making" because the perfective present tense denotes the continuation of the existing results. Hence, it refers to a fact which has come to be in the past, the beginning of the eternal state, but is emphasised as a present reality to the citizens of the state. With this we have the double accusative of direct and predicate object, "all things" in the accusative plural, followed by "new", also in the accusative. "Behold, I am making all things new." New in species is what it means. This means a new body for the believer, the resurrection body. In addition to the newness for people we have the newness of the universe, the new heavens and the new earth which we have noted.

Isaiah 65:17, "For behold, I create new heavens and a new earth; and the former things will not be remembered or come to mind." In the eternal state you will never recall a sin or a failure. You have a capacity for a higher state of life than has ever existed, and that is what this phrase is all about. Never has there been anything like it and it will go on forever and ever just because you made the one right decision, and you only had to make it once: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved."

Verse 18, "Therefore be glad," the only reason we are given this information is so that in the midst of the trials and tribulations of this life we can be glad, we can look forward to the future. This is called living in the light of eternity, "and rejoice forever in what I create; for behold I create the new Jerusalem for rejoicing, and her people for gladness."

Verse 19, "I will also rejoice in Jerusalem, and be glad in my people; furthermore there will no longer be heard in her [the new Jerusalem] the voice of weeping and the sound of crying."

Isaiah 66:22, "For just as the new heavens and the new earth which I shall make will endure before me, declares the Lord, so shall your name and your progeny endure." The name means you are in the book of life and those of your family and loved ones who are believers are also in the book of life and will be in the eternal state.

Verse 23, "And it shall be from the new moon to new moon and from Sabbath to Sabbath, all mankind will come to bow down before me, says the Lord."

Verse 24, "Then they shall go out and look on the corpses of men [unbelievers] who have revolted against me. For their worm shall not die, and their fire shall not be quenched; and they shall be an abhorrence to all mankind."

The word that we have for “new” in our passage in Revelation is kainoj. The other Greek word is neoj. They are both translated “new” but neoj is not used here. Kainoj means new in species; neoj means new in time. Since we have passed time into eternity neoj cannot be used. The eternal state is brand new and forever. Nothing is carried over from the old universe of human history except the individual who personally believes in Christ as saviour. The unbeliever is in the eternal lake of fire where the worm dies not.

Now there is a mandate to John. He is to understand that all of this is to be recorded. he gives the mandate in the present active indicative, “Then he said.” The descriptive or pictorial present conveys to the mind a picture of the event in the process of occurrence. The active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action, speaking to John. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the mandate to continue and finish the book of Revelation. We can translate this: “Then he continued.” The Lord is personally talking to the apostle at this stage, though we go back to an angel communicating very shortly.

Then we have the mandate, the aorist active imperative of grafw, “Write,” “Keep writing.” This is a culminative aorist tense, it contemplates the action of the last two chapters of Revelation in their entirety but regards them from the viewpoint of existing results, the completion of the book of Revelation and thereby the completion of the canon of scripture. The active voice: John, the human author, produces the action. The imperative mood is the imperative of command. “Then he continued speaking, Write:”

The description of what is to follow is the doctrinal content of the rest of Revelation: “these words [doctrines], o(utoj plus logoj. Then we have “are,” the standard present tense of e)imi, a condition assumed as perpetually existing. The doctrines of the Word of God are always dependable, always true. The active voice: Bible doctrine in the canon produces the action. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of fact. The predicate nominative from pistoj is an adjective used as a substantive, and it means here not faithful but dependable or accurate. It can also mean faithful and trustworthy but here it means dependable or accurate. “These doctrines are dependable.” Bible doctrine combines the protocol of heaven with the divine attributes and the decrees with the concept of canonicity and inspiration.

Translation: “Then he [our Lord Jesus Christ] that was sitting on the throne said to me [the apostle John], Behold, I am making all things new [new in species from ultimate sanctification all the way to the new universe]. Then he continued speaking, Write: these doctrines are accurate, dependable and true.”

Verse 6, at this point we have a change of subject: the citizens of the eternal state. Who is the number one citizen?

We note first the power of the first citizen, and that power is contemplated in the principle that Jesus Christ not only controls history but Jesus Christ completes history. We have the sequential use of the conjunction kai, followed by the aorist active indicative of legw, plus the dative singular indirect object from the pronoun e)gw, “Then he said to me.” This is dative of advantage as well as dative of indirect object. It is to John’s advantage to know these things and it is to our advantage to study what John has written down as the human author of the book of Revelation. This is followed by the perfect active indicative of the verb ginomai, and it is translated "It is done" to make a contrast with the perfect of telew: tetelestai, it has been finished in the past with the result that it stands finished forever. Our sins were imputed to Christ on the cross and judged, salvation was completed while He was still alive and speaking. So when it says that "God commendeth his love toward us in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us," it is talking about His spiritual death bearing our sins in His own body on the cross, not His physical death. But at the point of the completion of Revelation in AD 96 He said something else. He used this time the perfect tense of ginomai which is translated, "it is done" or perhaps a better way of saying it would be is "it has been accomplished." This is a reference to human history. Human history is completed at the end of the Millennium with the result that the eternal state begins. In John 19:30, when Jesus said, "It is finished," He was talking about salvation which was completed on the cross. In our passage history comes to an end with the completion of the Millennium. So we have the perfect active indicative of the verb ginomai. This is what is called a dramatic perfect in the Greek, it emphasises the results of a completed process; the process of the extension of the angelic conflict to human history has been completed. History has been completed, everything in the computer of divine decrees has run its course, with the result that the eternal state has begun. The dramatic perfect emphasises existing state which is the eternal state. For the unbeliever this means the lake of fire; for the believer this means the new universe. Just as salvation is completed on the cross — the dramatic perfect of telew, so human history is completed with the creation by our Lord Jesus Christ of the new universe, including a new heaven, new earth, and a new Jerusalem. Prior to the eternal state all history has been accomplished. The computer of divine decrees has printed out all of the chips of human history and it has been accomplished with the result that the eternal state begins. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb and the indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of eschatological doctrine.

We now look at the unique person of the universe, the Lord Jesus Christ who is the Alpha and the Omega. We need to review why the Lord Jesus Christ is unique and therefore why His work on the cross is also unique. That takes us to the concept of the hypostatic union, one of the most misunderstood of all the doctrines in the Word of God. Essentially, by definition, the hypostatic union describes the person of the incarnate Christ as having two natures, a divine nature and a human nature. These two natures are inseparably united. They are without mixture or loss of separate identity, without loss or transfer of properties and attributes, the union being personal and eternal. In other words, the Lord Jesus Christ is eternal God. As eternal God He is coequal with the Father, He has the same sovereignty, the same holiness, including righteousness and justice, the same love, the same eternal life, the same omnipotence, omniscience, omnipresence, immutability and veracity that God the Father and God the Holy Spirit possess. There never was a time when God the Son did not fully exist and have co-eternity and infinity with God the Father and God the Holy Spirit. But He is now different from the other members of the Godhead in that He is true humanity, true humanity but even different in His humanity from us for our Lord was born as Adam was created — with a body, a soul, and with a human spirit. He was born trichotomous; He was unique as the last Adam. So he is different from God in that He is Man; He is different from man in that He is God. Jesus Christ therefore is the unique person of the universe.

Since Jesus Christ is also the God of Israel it is essential to understand that the Jews have the best crack at understanding and appreciating this principle, for they had in Deuteronomy 6:4 three lines which they memorised before they could do anything else in the way of talking. From the cradle all the way to the grave once a week at least and sometimes every day under certain conditions they uttered these words; Shamah Israel, Adonai Elohenu, Adonai echad. "Hear O Israel," a command for perception of Bible doctrine, a mandate to understand the Mosaic law. All that was necessary was provided for them, all they had to do was to demonstrate positive volition toward the information. Then the information came, beginning in the second line where we have the sacred tetragrammaton: "the Lord" [Adonai]. Then they would say this marvelous word, "Elohenu," "the Lord is our God." Jesus Christ the God of Israel was recognised as deity. Then, under the third line, Adonai echad — translated "the Lord is one" but it really means the Lord is unique. The Lord is unique because He is now the God-Man, He is in hypostatic union forever. So the Jews will say these three lines again and again and they will not understand it apart from recognising that the key to those three phrases is the Lord Jesus Christ in hypostatic union, the Lord Jesus Christ who was judged for our sins and took our place. So in the person of the incarnate Christ are two natures, a divine nature and a human nature. They are inseparably united, without mixture or loss of separate identity. They are without loss or transfer of properties and attributes, the union being personal and eternal.

Since the incarnation Jesus Christ is, therefore, true humanity and undiminished deity but in one person forever. Jesus Christ, therefore, is echad [unique]. "The Lord is unique," says the third line of Deuteronomy 6:4. He is infinitely superior to man and angel. As humanity He is now superior to all angels and all other human beings. The pre incarnate person of Christ as deity was coequal, coeternal, co-infinite with the Father and the Spirit. The post-incarnate person of Christ includes undiminished deity and true humanity in one person forever. Through the virgin birth Jesus Christ was born without a sin nature, therefore without the imputation of Adam's sin. In His humanity Jesus Christ is not only trichotomous but God the Father gave Him a source of sustaining His humanity since in the agreement that brought Jesus Christ into the world, first advent, as our saviour it was agreed that the humanity of Christ would depend upon the plan of God the Father. That plan is a protocol plan. In that protocol plan Jesus Christ, even though he was in union with His deity, he will not depend upon the use of His deity independently of the Father's plan. This was tested in what is called in Matthew chapter four, "the great temptation," where Jesus Christ was tempted in every way that we are and apart from sin, and He was also tempted in unique ways that we could not even begin to understand. The humanity of Christ had to function inside the divine dynasphere. He could not depend upon His deity for any kind of deliverance, He had to depend upon the protocol plan of God while He Himself was God. This is the significance of the three unique temptations which are given in Matthew chapter four.

But there was one sense in which the deity of Christ was extremely important, and that has to do with temptation as such. Satan, of course, offered temptation (there was no old sin nature) and in offering these temptations we have to recognise the impeccability of Christ because He was inside the prototype divine dynasphere in His humanity and because God cannot be tempted. As our Lord told Satan in the great temptation, "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God," and therefore He said, "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." The deity of Christ can never be left out of the concept. While our Lord's humanity utilised the prototype divine dynasphere it is impossible for God to sin, it is impossible for the God-Man to sin. Therefore, theologically we say, he was temptable but impeccable. The temptations were real and legitimate as directed toward His humanity but because of the hypostatic union and because of the prototype divine dynasphere He approached the cross as the last Adam. He was called the last Adam simply because "Adam" in the Hebrew means "man." He was called the last Adam in the sense that He was, as He approached the cross, the way Adam was when he was created: perfect and without sin. But the first Adam looked at the woman holding out her hand with the forbidden fruit, and took of the fruit and became a sinner.

First of all, that created the old sin nature. Secondly, the personal sin which created the old sin nature set up a pipe line between personal sin and the old sin nature which exists to this moment. It is a reverse pipe line however because while at the point of birth human life is imputed to us there is no life in the soul. God alone creates life; life is not manufactured in the woman's womb. Reflex motility is not life. Life starts at birth and God imputes life immediately at the time of birth, and He imputes it to the human soul. We have a genetically-formed old sin nature which is developed at the point of conception. That means we are born with an old sin nature and it means that Adam's original sin is imputed to that old sin nature so that we are born physically alive and spiritually dead. We are born under condemnation and the wisdom of God does several things here. First of all, the wisdom of God in imputing Adam's sin means that we are condemned at birth and since we are under condemnation we are now in a position to receive salvation. You cannot be saved unless you are condemned. Condemnation must precede salvation and this means that anyone who dies before reaching accountability is automatically saved. That could not be true unless we were condemned at birth. Our personal sins are never imputed to us for judgment. Therefore, when it says the wages of sin is death it is talking about the wages of Adam's sin.

The last Adam must get to the cross without a personal sin, otherwise He is not qualified to be judged for the sins of the world. And the last Adam got to the cross in hypostatic union. As God He can't be tempted; as humanity He can be tempted. As the God-Man and the last Adam was in the prototype divine dynasphere He arrived at the cross perfect without any personal sin. He was therefore qualified to take our place, and that is exactly what He did. He went to the cross and as He was hanging there all of the sins in the history of the human race were imputed by God the Father to God the Son. All of those sins were judged on the cross. With all of those sins imputed and judged on the cross the door is opened for our salvation just as though those who believed in Christ before this happened were saved by faith in the Lord as He was revealed. All of this would have been impossible had not Jesus Christ come in the flesh, had our Lord not become the God-Man. Therefore this becomes a crucial issue in the entire situation.

The Logoj of the cross, or the Shekinah glory, in John 1:14: "The Logoj became flesh." That is where the hypostatic union began, the virgin birth, "and tabernacled among us." "And we beheld his glory, the glory of the unique one from the Father." As God he is coequal with the Father, but the glory that we saw came from the humanity inside the protocol divine dynasphere, still inseparably united with the deity. In other words, Adonai echad, Jesus Christ is absolutely unique. That is why it says in Romans 1:3-5, "Concerning his Son [Jesus Christ], who was born of the seed of David according to the flesh," His humanity, "who has been demonstrated the Son of God by means of power [the prototype divine dynasphere], according to the Holy Spirit because of the resurrection from the dead, Jesus Christ our Lord, through whom we have received grace."

Romans 9:5, "... and from whom is Christ according to the flesh, who is God blessed for all." He is said to be according to the flesh; He is also said to be God.

1 Timothy 3:16, "And by consent of all great is the mystery doctrine with reference to godliness: The unique one [Jesus Christ] became visible by means of the flesh, was vindicated by means of the Holy Spirit, was observed by the angels, proclaimed among the nations, He became the object of faith in the world, and He was taken up into His place of glory," the resurrection, ascension and session of Christ.

The hypostatic union has two natures of Christ. They are united without ever having any transfer of attributes. In other words, the attributes of deity adhere to deity; the attributes of humanity adhere to humanity. The essence of deity cannot be changed. Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, to day, and forever. The infinite cannot be transferred to the finite. To take from God a single attribute of His deity would destroy His deity; to take from the humanity of Jesus a single attribute of His humanity would destroy His humanity. Therefore, no attribute of divine essence was changed by the incarnation. In fulfilling the Father's plan for the first advent certain attributes of our Lord's deity were not used. But this does not imply that they were either surrendered or destroyed. That is part of the false doctrine of Kenosis. The true doctrine of Kenosis simply says, Christ voluntarily took on Himself the form of mankind in order to redeem man from sin, in order to reconcile man to God, and in order to propitiate the Father with regard to that PROM chip which has programmed into it all the sins of the human race. In completing the mission of the first advent Christ did not exercise His own divine attributes independently of the Father's plan. He did not exercise His divine attributes to benefit Himself, to provide for Himself, or to glorify Himself. That is the true doctrine of Kenosis. Consequently, the union of divine essence and the human nature of the incarnate Christ must be considered personal and hypostatic. Why hypostatic? From what source do we have this strange word? What does it mean? It is the Greek word hupostasij. In the English we have a very bad habit of transliterating the "u" as a "y," and that is how we get "hypostatic." U(postasij means to stand under, it means substance, essence, taking a thing on one's self, and therefore it is as close as we could come from the original language of the New Testament to find a theological word to describe the uniqueness of the person of Christ.

In verse 6 of our passage we read, "I am the Alpha." That means Jesus Christ is the beginning which was not a beginning. A)lfa simply refers to God, and when our passage says "I am the A)lfa" it is the second line of Deuteronomy 6:4, but a different language: "Adonai elohenu," the Lord is our God. A)lfa is another way of saying that. Then He also says in the same passage, "I am the O)mhga." That is the last letter of the alphabet. And what is the O)mhga? It means the hypostatic union. And so just as our Lord is A)lfa, Adonai elohenu, He is also O)mhga,— Adonai echad. That is the hypostatic union. So when we have in our passage, "I am the A)lfa and the O)mhga," we are talking about the hypostatic union, the unique person of the universe. Hypostatic is derived, then, from u(postasij meaning essence, substance, taking another essence on one's self. U(postasij means you have one essence: Jesus Christ is God, He has the essence of God, and He took upon Himself another essence, the essence of man. And there is no bleed across the line between the attributes of deity and the attributes of humanity. Therefore we find the hypostatic union. Hypostatic, therefore, refers to the whole person of Jesus Christ as distinguished from His two natures. Sometimes we talk about one nature, His deity; other times we discuss His other nature, His humanity; but they are actually in one person forever, therefore they are both hypostatic and personal. Personal refers to the emergence of the unique person of the universe. As God, Jesus Christ is coequal, coeternal with the Father and the Spirit; as man, Jesus Christ is superior to all mankind from the viewpoint of His deity and from the viewpoint of the last Adam.

The false interpretation of the hypostatic union occurs quite frequently, and it simply says that Jesus Christ has harmony or sympathy between God and His humanity; which, of course, is a terrible blasphemy.

Jesus Christ is the God-Man, He is in one u(postasij or essence forever. He can therefore never be considered as to His whole person apart from the union of deity and humanity. This means that during the first advent Jesus Christ could be simultaneously omnipotent and weak, omniscient and ignorant, omnipresent and located in one place. However, the ignorance of His humanity was quickly overcome through His function inside gate four of the divine dynasphere.

Why did Christ have to become a man? He could not be our saviour as God. The PROM chip that has all of the sins of the world programmed into it in eternity past: these sins could not be imputed to Jesus Christ as God, they could only be imputed to His humanity. Only humanity can be judged for sin. Only two members of the human race were ever judged for sin: the first Adam in the garden and the last Adam on the cross. Therefore, Philippians 2:7,8; Hebrews 2:14,15 tell us that Jesus Christ had to become true humanity to be our saviour. But that isn't all. In Job 9:2, 32, 33 we learn a principle. Jesus Christ is also the mediator between God and man. A mediator must be equal with both parties in the mediation, says Job 9:2. Jesus Christ as God is equal with God; Jesus Christ as true humanity is equal to and superior to true humanity. That is why it says in 1 Timothy 2:5,6 there is only one mediator between God and man. Why does it say this? Because a mediator must be equal with both parties. If Jesus Christ is only God He cannot be mediator; if He were only man He could not be mediator. He must be equal with both parties. Salvation brings God and man together at the cross, and no other place. Therefore, there is one mediator between God and man, "the man Christ Jesus." Christ is deity; Jesus is humanity. He had to be equal with both parties in the mediation.

Then in Hebrews 7:4,5, 14, 28; 10:5-14 we have another astounding thing. A priest, in order to represent man to God must be a man himself. Jesus Christ is called our high priest and in order to be a high priest Jesus Christ had to be true humanity. And that isn't all, He had to be born in the right lineage. He is a King-Priest; He is descended from David as a King and as such He fulfills the priesthood of a city called Jerusalem [or Salem]. So as the King-Priest Jesus Christ is our high priest forever, but He couldn't do it unless He was true humanity. The kingship side is 2 Samuel 7:8-16; Psalm 89:20-37, and in these passages Jesus Christ had to become a man to fulfill the Davidic covenant, and He had to be a man born in the line of David.

The virgin birth included a father who was not real but legal, Joseph, and a mother who was His real mother [of His humanity, not the "mother of God"]. Mary was descended from David and Bathsheba. David and Bathsheba had four children. The lines of two of them were perpetuated to the time of our Lord. The line of Joseph is given in Matthew and it is from Solomon, David's eldest son by Bathsheba, who became king after David. There was a younger son, Nathan, and Mary was directly descended from Nathan and therefore we have her genealogy in Luke. The genealogy in Luke is important because it fulfills 2 Samuel chapter 7 and Psalm 89. But it does something else: it tells us why our Lord had to be true humanity.

Because Jesus Christ is in hypostatic union, sometime while He was on earth He said, for example on the cross, "I thirst." He cannot say that today. Only while He was on earth could He say that, and when He said "I thirst" God wasn't thirsty. God never has been thirsty. This came from His humanity. He also said, "Before Abraham lived on this earth I existed eternally." He said that from His deity. He didn't exist in His humanity until long after Abraham. But sometimes He would say something from His hypostatic union, combining deity and humanity, like "Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden and I will give you rest," and "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." John 14:6 is the hypostatic union speaking, and since His resurrection, ascension and session our Lord can only speak from the hypostatic union. Never again from His deity alone or His humanity alone, always from the hypostatic union. That explains the middle part of our verse 6, "I am the Alpha and the Omega."

"I am the Alpha," Jesus Christ as eternal God. To the Jew, Adonai Eloheinu; to the Church, e)gw to A)lfa. Then, the second and the final line in the Jewish ritual and the final word in the protocol plan, for protocol has superseded ritual, Adonai echad. John interprets that: kai to Omhga, "and the Omega," the last letter in the Greek alphabet. The first person singular pronoun ego is in the emphatic position, it refers to our Lord Jesus Christ, the unique person of the universe. Actually, the personal pronoun introduces the hypostatic union. "And the Omega," Jesus Christ is unique as the God-Man.

Verse 6, "Then he [Jesus Christ] said to me [the apostle John], It is done [human history is completed]. I am the Alpha [the deity of Christ] and the Omega [Christ in hypostatic union], the beginning and the end." The word a)rxh simply takes us back to John 1:1. This is the word for beginning. There never was a time when Jesus Christ did not exist, and so the word “beginning” used once again refers to the fact that Jesus Christ as eternal and infinite God preexisted history. Then we have a second noun, teloj, “and the end.” The end means the one who terminates history.

Next we have a salvation parenthesis, the grace policy of the first citizen of the eternal state, the first citizen of the new Jerusalem. This salvation parenthesis or grace policy of our Lord Jesus Christ is noted in other passages, such as Isaiah 55:1; John 4:13,14; Revelation 7:17; 21:6; 22:17. In each case being thirsty is the desire for eternal salvation. In each case of drinking the water of life we have an analogy in Jesus Christ for eternal salvation.

Water also represents the Word of God, Bible doctrine, in Psalm 23:2; Ezekiel 16:9; Ephesians 5:26; Titus 3:5; 1 Peter 1:23. And there are some passages where water represents the ministry of God the Holy Spirit, Isaiah 34:3; John 7:37-39. So water is mentioned quite frequently in the scripture.

“I will give without cost to him who thirsts.” We have the dative of advantage, articular present active participle of the verb dipsaw which means to thirst, “to him who is thirsty [or thirsts].” This is a reference to positive volition. When the water of life is presented through the gospel the thirsty one drinks. This is analogous to faith in Christ. The definite article is used as both the personal and relative pronoun, “to him who.” The dative singular indirect object in the definite article is also a dative of advantage. It is to your advantage to want something far greater than anything this world has to offer. The retroactive progressive present denotes what has begun at God-consciousness and continues into one of the two categories of gospel hearing. The active voice: mankind who is positive at God-consciousness produces the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial.

With this we have the future active indicative of the verb didomi, “I will give.” Never is there an exception. If you have positive volition God will provide. The gnomic future tense is for a statement of fact which may be expected when the positive one hears the gospel and believes in Christ. The active voice; Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb as one of the greater grace functions of this life. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of doctrine: “I will give to him who thirsts from the spring from the water of life.” The water of life is eternal salvation through faith in Christ. Again, drinking is analogous to faith as a non-meritorious system of perception.

Then there is one more word: the accusative of dorea used as an adverb, dorean. It means gratis, a gift without payment, a gift we do not deserve. “I will give without cost to him who thirsts from the spring of the water of life.” This is the parenthesis at the end of verse six. It seems to be a paraphrase of Isaiah 55:1.

Verse 7, the eternal state includes other citizens, all who in human history have believed in the Lord Jesus Christ. The verse starts out with the articular present active participle o(n)nikaw. It can be translated “he who overcomes” or “the winner,” but since we are talking about all believers and since all believers are not winners we go to the participle rather than the participial adjective becoming a substantive. The definite article is used as both the personal pronoun and the relative pronoun, "he who." The present tense is aoristic present, referring to present fact without progress, therefore punctiliar action in present time. This means at the very moment when you believe in Christ you have eternal salvation. The active voice: the person who believes in Christ produces the action of the verb. The participle is circumstantial for the moment of salvation. Nikaw is defined not in terms of the believer being a winner in the protocol plan of God but the believer being an overcomer as per 1 John 5:4,5, "Whoever has been born from God [born again] overcomes the cosmic system." This is the initial victory which has defeated the cosmic system, our faith in Jesus Christ. Overcoming the cosmic system occurs at the moment of faith in Christ because at the moment we believe in the Lord Jesus Christ we enter for the first time into the divine dynasphere, God's protocol system.

We know that overcoming in verse 7 refers to believing in the Lord Jesus Christ, the strategic victory which every believer possesses by virtue of faith in Christ. But the important thing here is the inheritance, and the concept of inheritance is very important. It is our relationship with Jesus Christ that brings it about. Jesus Christ is said to be the heir of all things, Hebrews 1:1,2: "whom he has appointed heir of all things." Because He is appointed the heir of all things and we have personally believed in Him, and God the Holy Spirit at the point of salvation entered us into union with Christ, we are joint heirs to all things. Heirship is based on personal faith in Christ, 1 John 5:4,5; Titus 3:7. We are the heirs of eternal life right now; in the future we will enjoy the eternal state. Therefore heirship is based on sonship, we are heirs because we are the children of God, Romans 8:16,17. The heirship of the royal family of God is the subject of Ephesians 1:10,11, "... in summing up of the all things in Christ, things in heaven and things upon earth. In whom also we have received an inheritance, having been pre-designed according to his predetermined plan." The Holy Spirit is the down payment on this inheritance — Ephesians 1:14. In other words, the heirship that we now have, the inheritance, is the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. The royal family is secure forever, according to 1 Peter 1:4,5.

The eternal state belongs to us except that those who are losers will not have access to the gazebo in the garden or the tree of life. Abraham is the pattern of heirship, the illustration — Galatians 3:29; Hebrews 11:8-10,13.

Translation: "He who overcomes shall inherit these things; furthermore I will be his God, and he will be my son."

Verse 8, we note that the eternal state excludes all unbelievers. But what we have listed in verse 8 is a list of sins that we as believers can commit now but sins which are mentioned not because these are the only sins and not because these sins means you are going to hell, but because these sins are distracters to believing in Christ, distracters to the function of common grace. This categorical list emphasises the fact that classification of sin and evil is a distraction. There are six categories in this list and the reason is because when people have the chance to receive Christ as saviour, because they were distracted at the point of common grace, they failed to believe in Christ. The systems of scales and values that they represent was far more important. The priorities assigned to these sins were far greater in the thinking of the unbeliever than the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The list is given a subject title: "But with reference to the cowardly, even the unbeliever." The unbeliever is called cowardly, the dative of reference plural from the adjective deiloj used as a substantive. The unbeliever is said to be a coward but a lot of unbelievers have personal courage, so personal courage is not in view. What is in view, however, is the fact that deiloj also refers to those who have lost touch with reality, and unbelievers through these six sins categorically mentioned in this list have lost touch with reality. By losing touch with reality they have been distracted under the principle of common grace from accepting Christ as saviour. So they are called "cowardly ones, even the unbelieving ones." Unbelievers are cowards in the sense of subjective arrogance avoiding the reality of eternity. The six sins listed categorically, then, are major systems of distraction with regard to the reality of eternity, with regard to the message of the gospel. The implication is that all of those who are involved heard the gospel under two categories, normal evangelism and crisis evangelism, but they rejected it. Therefore they failed to face the issue of Mark 8:36,37, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul..."

The list starts out with the perfect passive participle from a verb that really means to throw up, bdelussomai. It doesn't actually mean to vomit, it means to see someone who makes you want to vomit mentally. Therefore we call that "loathsome, abominable, detestable, unpleasant, disagreeable." In other words, what kind of an unbeliever would be detestable to a grace oriented born-again believer. The answer is a self-righteous moral stick-in-the-mud. It refers here to self-righteous arrogance, the motivation for many systems of evil as well as many systems of human good. Self-righteous arrogance is a great distracter from the gospel when it is heard.

The second one is "murderers," the dative plural of disadvantage from foneuj and it refers to homicide. This type has no respect for life from criminal arrogance. So the first one is self-righteous arrogance producing criminal arrogance.

The next is fornicators, the noun pornoj which refers to the fact that they were so preoccupied with sex that they turned down the gospel. It is one of the areas of distraction.

The fourth is farmakoj, and it means drug addiction. Those who have put drugs number one on their list are unable to comprehend the gospel and therefore the ministry of God the Holy Spirit in common grace, the convicting ministry of the Holy Spirit, passes then right by. This could be translated "drug users" or "drug abusers."

Number five dative plural of disadvantage from e)idololatrj, "idolaters," refers to demonism and the phallic cult. Demonism is another great distraction.

Finally, the word liars refers to pathological liars. These are never associated in any way with reality and therefore cannot face the reality of the eternal state.

Translation of verse 8: "With reference to the cowardly, even the unbelievers, the detestable, the murderers, the fornicators, the drug abusers, the idolaters, and all the liars, their part will be in the lake of fire which burns with fire and sulphur: this is the second death."

So they are in that lake that burns continually with fire and sulphur. They are unbelievers, they have rejected Christ as saviour, they were distracted by certain sins which are listed. This is the second death and that means no chance in eternity.

That concludes the second paragraph of this passage and the third paragraph is not going to be very difficult. We should note one thing in the following verses. In the eternal state the only precious metal that seems to carry over is gold, but the rest of the precious gems are not the same as ones today. In analogy this is as close as you can come. The great capital of the future, the eternal state, is called the new Jerusalem. All of the building materials in it are quite different from anything that we have today. First of all, then, we have the capital of the eternal state which covers the rest of this passage.

Verse 9, "Then one of the angels [a pur sui vant messenger] who had the seven bowls full of the seven last plagues [he was on the death squad the last time we saw him], spoke with me, saying, Come, [and at this point he doubles as a professor of eschatology dealing with future things] I will show you the bride, the wife of the Lamb."

He is going to show us a city. Therefore we notice immediately that when he says he will show us the bride, the wife of the Lamb, since the city is neither a bride nor a wife and since the city will now be discussed, obviously the word "bride" is symbolic here. Just as the Church is often called the bride of Christ so this city in the future is called a bride, for three reasons. First of all, a bride is generally considered beautiful and therefore we have the emphasis on the beauty of the city. Secondly, the city is called a bride because it emphasises the light of the city, and this is analogous to the animation of the bride. Thirdly, the emphasis on the relationship of the city. The satellite city is headquarters of the eternal state and a bride always connotes the concept of relationship. This woman is marrying this man and that is that.

We should note the future active indicative of deiknumi, which does not mean an explanation but it means a visibility. It means that he is just going to show us this city and all of its beauty. The future tense is a gnomic future for a statement of performance rightfully expected of this angelic guide tour. Deiknumi also means tour guide and this angel is the tour guide who is going to point out the things of interest in the future city. This city is in the eternal state, therefore it is not located on earth. While it is called the new Jerusalem it has nothing to do with the Jerusalem of the present. We have noted that the Millennial Jerusalem has natural light, but the eternal Jerusalem has supernatural light. Jesus Christ, the Shekinah glory, is the light of the Jerusalem of the eternal state. The Millennial Jerusalem probably has its greatest description in Ezekiel 40-48, and there is a very beautiful Millennial temple. But in the new Jerusalem there is no temple, Revelation 21:3, 22.

Verse 10, the beginning of the tour. "Then he carried me away in the spirit," John was filled with the Spirit, a prerequisite for seeing a city that does not yet exist, and yet in this vision he sees it very clearly, "to a great and high mountain [which will exist in the eternal state]."

There are only a few mountains mentioned in scripture which are mountains in heaven. In Ezekiel chapter 28 we have the prince of Tyrus. Tyre at the time of writing was the headquarters for demonism in the world, soon to be destroyed. In warning Tyre that it would be destroyed by divine judgment the prophet Ezekiel goes a little further and begins talking about another prince of Tyrus who was Satan himself, the angelic cherub. At that particular point there is the mountain of God mentioned, a mountain in heaven. There will be such mountains visible to us in the eternal state but occasionally we find a high mountain and that high mountain is not on the earth at all. The one to which John went with the tour guide was a high mountain in space, something for the future.

“and he showed me the holy city, Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God.” In other words, it is suspended above the earth and it came down out of heaven but did not touch the earth.

Verse 11, the glory of the satellite city. The first thing that we see is the glory of God. That means the presence of the Shekinah glory. That is the big thing: “Having the glory of God,” the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ as the Shekinah glory, “her brilliance was like a very precious jewel.” Unfortunately we have a very difficult translation here because we have the word iaspij which is generally considered to be a jasper, but we must remember that the Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written. It is not a reference to the modern jasper which is limited to a variety of quartz but is a translucent precious stone which will exist in the eternal state, very much like a diamond. Apparently diamond is the foundation for this satellite city, not the diamond we know now, but tons of diamond without any kind of a flaw. That is the glory of the satellite city. It is fitting that the foundation should represent in some way the glory of the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ as the Shekinah glory.

“like a gem of crystal clear diamond.” In other words, diamond without flaws measured in tons.

Next we have the walls of the city in verses 12-14. “It had a great and high wall,” verse 17 tells us that the walls are 200 feet high, “with twelve gates, and twelve angels at the gates,” we have an honour guard from the angelic order of battle, a memorial to our Lord’s victory in the angelic conflict, “Furthermore names were inscribed on them [the gates], which are the twelve tribes of the sons of Israel.”

Verse 13, there are three gates on each side. “On the east side” as in Numbers chapter two the gates would be named Judah, Issachar, Zebulun, “on the north side,” Dan, Asher, Naphtali, “on the south side,” Reuben, Simeon, Gad, “on the west side,” Ephraim, Manasseh, Benjamin.

Verse 14, “The walls of the city had twelve foundation stones, and on them were the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb.” So on these stones would be the names of Peter, Andrew, James, John, Philip, Bartholomew, Thomas, Matthew, James, Thaddaeus, Simon and Paul. Paul is the twelfth apostle, according to 1 Corinthians 15:7-10. All of these inscriptions are permanent therefore they have spiritual connotation.

Verses 15-17, the dimensions of the city.

Verse 15, "And the one who spoke with me [the tour guide, the pur sui vant angel] had a gold measuring instrument to measure the city, its gates and its walls."

Verse 16, "Now the city was laid out in a square [actually, in a cube], and its length is as great as its width: and he measured the city with the measuring rod, fourteen hundred miles, fourteen hundred miles wide, fourteen hundred miles high." In other words, it was a cube.

Verse 17, the walls. "Then he measured the walls, two hundred feet by man's measurement which the angel was using." God always stays with our concepts of measuring in communicating measurements. While the angel did the measuring he used a human standard of measure. This would imply that angels have a different metric system from mankind. This passage is for mankind, therefore man's standards and man's measurements are used. It is so that we can get the drift of this marvelous city of the eternal state. So we have, then, the principle of communication. If you are going to communicate, communicate in the language of the people. Communicate in a language they can understand. Communication of information must be related to the frame of reference belonging to the recipients.

Verses 18-21, the construction materials of the satellite city.

Verse 18, "Now the material of the wall was diamond [flawless diamond] and the city was pure gold like translucent glass," so that is not the gold of the universe today, it is the gold of the universe of the future. The gold of the future will be so pure that it will be translucent.

Verse 19, "The foundation stones of the city walls were decorated with every kind of precious gem." The decorations on the walls, then, are gems of the future. But we have to relate them to gems of the past. "The first foundation stone was diamond [a superior diamond of the future]; the second, sapphire [something translucent light blue, but not the sapphire of the present]; the third, turquoise [again, translucent]; the fourth, emerald [translucent green with no flaws];"

Verse 20, "The fifth is sardonyx; the sixth, ruby; the seventh, topaz; the eighth, paradole; the ninth, a topaz [red, rather than topaz yellow]; the tenth, chalcedony; the eleventh, blue aquamarine; the twelfth is amethyst." All of these are merely approximations for in the eternal state these materials are all translucent and they all reflect the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ who is the only light in the city.

Verse 22, there is only one light company in the eternal state, and that is the magnificent glory of the Lord. "Furthermore, I did not see a temple in it [there is no need for a temple]: for the Lord God the Almighty, even the Lamb, is its temple." So as the Lord templed or tabernacled among us in the first advent as the Shekinah glory, and as He given to us a means of representing Him since the Shekinah glory now indwells us, God the Holy Spirit indwells us to form a temple for one reason: to provide a residence for the indwelling of Christ. Christ is the Shekinah glory and the manifestation of the Shekinah glory is in the operational divine dynasphere, God's protocol system. So there is not temple, there is no light; instead there is the Shekinah glory, He is the temple.

Verses 23, the illumination of the city. "So the city had no need for the sun, nor the moon, to shine on it: for the glory of God [Christ, the shekinah glory] has illuminated it, and the Lamb is its lamp."

Verse 24, "Then the nations will walk by its light," these are the nations on the new planet earth in the eternal state and they will get the light from the satellite city, "and the kings of the earth will bring their glory to it." In other words, the light of nations made up of believers in the eternal state will not be the reflected light from the sun, not the light from the moon, but the light from the Shekinah glory from the satellite city.

Verse 26, "And they shall bring the glory and the honour of the nations into it." Whatever glory and honour is we note that the preservation of the divine institution number four is a memorial in the eternal state, a memorial to the grace of God who preserved the human race from self-destruction; and in so doing He invented divine institution number four, nationalism. This is also a memorial to category 1 truth then, the laws of divine establishment.

Verse 27, there is no garbage of any kind. "And nothing unclean, and no one who practices abomination [religion], and lying [lack of integrity] shall ever come into it [they are all in the lake of fire]," in the eternal state all believers function on the honour code, but the unbelievers are excluded, "but only those [believers] whose names are written in the Lamb's book of life." Note that the unbeliever continues to live in the lake of fire. Notice, however, he is excluded from the satellite city. The unbeliever in the lake of fire is in that status quo for ever. Only believers in Christ are permitted to enjoy the blessings of the eternal state.

The reason for the description in the previous chapter of the satellite city that is suspended above the earth and all of the translucent stones is to reflect or to show through translucence the Shekinah glory of our Lord Jesus Christ. We notice that the gates are the names of the twelve tribes, therefore the twelve patriarchs of Israel, and we note that the twelve apostles are on the foundation stones. The point is a very simple one: the glory of our Lord was shown in the lives of these men at some time and now this is an eternal reminder of that principle. The reflected glory of the Lord is the key to the indwelling of Christ, the Shekinah glory today. That day will be the translucent glory of the Lord.

The pearly gates of chapter 21:25. Each gate is one pearl. There are no oysters in the eternal state! Therefore once again in the principle of the new heavens and the new earth we have approximations. These are all the metals and even the gold is different from the gold of the present universe. What do the pearly gates mean? They are not the entrance to heaven; "St. Peter" is not standing there. It means that for every great person in the eternal state there is a team of some kind behind him. It means that when anyone comes to the front spiritually or in any profession, system, or organisation, there is always and inevitably others who have contributed to that greatness. No person is great by himself. Always others have done things for that person.

There are four paragraphs in chapter twenty-two. Paragraph one is the final description of the eternal state, verses 1-5. Paragraph two is the dialogue of John and the angel, verses 6-11. Paragraph three is the final declaration of Jesus Christ, verses 12-17. Paragraph four is the final declaration of John the apostle, verses 18-21.

Verse 1, "And he [the pur sui vant messenger from the angelic college of heralds] showed me the river of the water of life, clear as crystal, coming from the throne of God [the Father] and from the Lamb [God the Son]."

This is the continuation of the eternal state. This is not the same as the river coming from the Millennial temple in Ezekiel 47:1ff, nor is it the living waters which flow from the Jerusalem of the Millennial state in Zechariah 14:8. We are now discussing the eternal state which must be distinguished from the Millennium, the last dispensation in history. We have passed from history into the eternal state, as of Revelation 21:1. The water of life emphasises the fact that this is the eternal state in contrast to time and human history. Furthermore, the water of life emphasises the fact that the believer in the eternal state is in a place where there are no changes. Eternal life is guaranteed by the water of life. He has eternal life, he cannot lose eternal life, he cannot in any way diminish or delete eternal life. Furthermore, the eternal state is guaranteed by the water of life forever, and just as the rainbow was God's guarantee that the earth would never again be destroyed by water, so the water of life is the eternal guarantee of the eternal state. This verse further emphasises the fact that the satellite city known as the new Jerusalem is the headquarters of the universe in the eternal state. Both the throne of God the Father and the throne of God the Son are located in this satellite city. The Father and the Son are mentioned as the two members of the Godhead who are directly involved in the vision of our so great salvation. The pattern of the cross involves two members of the Godhead and that is why the throne of God the Father is mentioned and "from the Lamb," God the Son. The omniscience of God programmed into the computer of divine decrees all the sins of history. The justice of God the Father called for the printout of this chip when our Lord Jesus Christ was hanging on the cross so that God the Father imputed all of these sins to Jesus Christ on the cross. He was judged for our sins.

Verse 2. In addition to the water of life we have the tree of life mentioned for the first time but not the last time in this chapter. In the middle of verse 1 we have the first monument of eternal life, the river of the water of life. "In the middle of the street." This is actually the end of verse one.

Now we begin verse 2, “So on either side of the river was the tree of life [the second monument, guarantee of eternal life in the eternal state], bearing twelve categories of fruit, yielding its fruit every month [the variety of blessings for each month of the year in the eternal state]: and the leaves of the trees are for the healing of the nations,” the nations are perfect, the function of the nations, the memorial to the laws of establishment, all of this is involved.

What does all of this mean? The first phrase belongs to the previous verse as the location of the river of life in the satellite city. While the river runs down the middle of the street from which the throne of God the Father and God the Son is located. They are the source. Hence, the street which begins at the throne is divided by a median and the median is the river of life. The presence of the tree of life is the second symbol guarantee that all believers in the eternal state, cannot lose it, couldn't lose it in time, can't lose it in eternity. There is no indication in the context that the believer must drink from the water of the river and eat from the tree to perpetuate eternal life. Not at all, these are monuments to be viewed but not necessary in order to keep going in eternity. Rather the river of life and the tree of life are visual guarantees to all believers of the integrity of God: that God keeps His word.

We can make application from that now in time. Those who believe in Christ have eternal life and everywhere the eye moves in the satellite city the believer is reminded that he is the possessor of eternal life through faith in Jesus Christ, and nothing can change his status in the eternal state. Whatever changes occur in the prehistoric angelic conflict and in its extension into human history are no longer possible. It is impossible to lose your salvation. Therefore, both the river of life and the tree of life are the visual monuments of the reality of eternal life for every person who has or ever will believe in Christ. Human history is now terminated; the eternal state has begun. Nothing will destroy the status of the believer in the eternal state.

Daily the believer has two reminders in the satellite city: the river of life in verse one and the tree of life in verse two. The river of life in verse one is a memorial to the grace of God the Father while the tree of life in verse two is a memorial to the grace of God the Son. God the Son was judged on the tree, 1 Peter 2:24, that we as believers might have eternal life from God the Father, represented by the river of life. Hence, both the river of life and the tree of life are monuments to the so great salvation we possess as believers.

The trouble is that we are noting these things in the eternal state in the body of corruption, a body that still has an old sin nature. We are discussing things that are perpetual and eternal and can never change. Somehow people get a little bored with the idea of no change. So the twelve fruits also have significance. There will be different things going on and no one will ever be bored. To have eternal life is one thing and never to be bored is something else. To have a perpetual state in which you will never be bored is “the dark side of happiness.” Just as the tree of life in the Garden of Eden was a motivation to our first parents, so the tree of life in the satellite city of the eternal state is a monument to the so great salvation we enjoy. Note that there will be nations in the eternal state but no conflict of nations. Grace prevails for the healing of nations. And the reason we have nations again is a memorial to the laws of divine establishment.

There is never a dull moment in the eternal state as illustrated by the twelve categories of fruit on the tree of life. Every month brings something different for the capacity of the resurrection body. Again, there is no indication that we eat the fruit, but it represents a concept. Apparently, God will find plenty of things to make us happy every moment of the eternal state. The eternal state will be divided into nations of believers in glorified bodies but there will be no conflict, no antagonism.

Verse 3, the removal of the curse. “And there shall no longer be any curse: furthermore the throne of God [the Father] and of the Lamb [God the Son] shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him.”

During the Millennial reign of Christ the curse was lifted from planet earth, that is from nature, but not from people. People still had their old sin natures. Man was still born with the old sin nature, the body of corruptibility, and the concept of total depravity. The demonstration of the Millennial reign of Christ is that man in total depravity cannot enjoy perfect environment. The difference in the eternal state from the Millennium is perfect people in perfect environment, so that perfect environment will be enjoyed by perfect people with perfect capacity. The eternal state is the status of perpetual perfection on the part of believers, hence ultimate sanctification. The problem of trying to visualise this in the mind is the problem that so many people have. They know so many self-righteous believers, and these self-righteous believers think that they are already perfect when in reality they are a pain in the neck to everyone who knows them and has to be in their presence for any length of time. So you have the idea of imposing prejudices on everyone in the eternal state, but everyone will be perfect there. There will be no such thing as a flawed personality or any “unfortunate” personalities or personality conflicts.

Verse 4, a new relationship with God. “They shall both see his face; and his royal title shall be on their foreheads.” The believer will be face to face with the Shekinah glory, our Lord Jesus Christ, without any fear of death, and the believer will be identified forever by having the title of our Lord on his forehead. We belong to Christ forever.

Verse 5, the eternal relationship with God. “And there shall no longer be night; furthermore they do not have need of light of a lamp, or the light of the sun; because the Lord God [Jesus Christ, the Shekinah glory] will give them light [He will illuminate them]: and they shall reign forever and ever.”

The new universe is illuminated by our Lord Jesus Christ as the Shekinah glory. This is why there is no sacred building or temple in the eternal state.

Wilbur Smith: Wycliffe Bible Commentary Series:—

“All the glorious purposes of God ordained from the foundation of the world have now been attained. The rebellion of angels and mankind is all and finally subdued as the King of kings assumes His rightful sovereignty. Absolute and unchangeable holiness characterises all within the kingdom of God. The redeemed, made so by the blood of the Lamb, are in resurrection and eternal glory. Life is everywhere and death will never intrude again. The earth and the heavens both are renewed. Light, beauty, holiness, joy, the presence of God, the worship of God, the service to Christ, likeness to Christ, all are now abiding realities. The vocabulary of man made for life here is incapable of truly adequately depicting what God has prepared for those who love him.”

Verses 6-11, we now have a dialogue between John and the angel. First of all we have the doctrinal veracity of the book of Revelation. We begin with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, followed by the aorist active indicative of legw, “Then he said.” When it says “he” we are referring to the pur sui vant messenger, this angel who was on the death squad but is now a professor of eschatology. The tour guide is now almost over and we are going to pull together the loose ends for the Church Age believer. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety, which means that the angel is now going to summarise the essential loose threads, important principles and doctrines that we must understand before the Bible is closed out. We have the dative singular indirect object of the personal pronoun e)gw, correctly translated “to me.” This is also dative of advantage.

It means that John is to be benefited by communication with his professor, “Then he said to me.”

Next we have the nominative plural subject from the near demonstrative pronoun o(utoj, “These.” With it is the nominative plural subject, logoj, “doctrines.” “These doctrines,” that is the subject, the content of the book of Revelation. We have an ellipsis which demands the verb to be, e)imi, “These doctrines are.” Then we have two predicate adjectives used as substantives, pistoj and a)lhqinoj: “faithful” means dependable. You can count of these doctrines. The word pistoj means dependable or inspiring faith; alhqinoj means true.

Translation so far: “Then he said to me, These doctrines are dependable and true.” The principle is very simple. God’s Word, including the book of Revelation, reflects the absolute veracity of God’s attributes. When we are studying the Word of God we are studying the absolute. The absolutes behind the Word of God are the perfect attributes of God Himself. The Bible, then, is a reflection of divine essence. Hence the Bible contains doctrine from God as absolute truth. Not everything contained in the Bible is true because it records the Satanic lies, the evil functions of fallen angels and men, and it has a lot to do with people in the cosmic system. But inspiration guarantees the veracity of what is recorded.

Now we have a statement from the angel, and in the middle of verse 6 we have a kai, but this is an inferential kai, a conclusion from the preceding. It is translated “therefore.” Then there is the nominative singular subject kurioj, meaning “Lord.” It can be used for any member of the Trinity, the connotation is deity. Kurioj is generally used for God the Son as the revealed member of the Godhead, but in 2 Corinthians 3:17,18 kurioj is used for the Holy Spirit. That is the designation here, “therefore the Lord,” a reference to God the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit is introduced for the first time but not the last. The Holy Spirit is the member of the Trinity who functions, as it were, behind the scenes. If there is any word that would describe the ministry of the Spirit it is the word “power” or “enablement.” God the Holy Spirit is the enabler, He gives us what is necessary. None of us have the ability to understand the gospel apart from the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. Note that the word “Holy” does not occur in the King James version, we have the noun pneuma but not hagioj, “therefore the Lord [the Holy Spirit], the God of the spirits of the prophets.” The only use of pneuma here is for the human spirit. The Old Testament was written by those who had the gift of prophecy. God the Holy Spirit so presented to them the material that they used under the doctrine of inspiration that they were able to communicate God’s complete and connected Word to us. These prophets were born again, they had human spirits, and the point is that the Holy Spirit communicates spiritual phenomena to the human spirit. But you don’t have a human spirit until after you believe in Christ. The pattern of the Holy Spirit to the human spirit of the prophets is the pattern by which the believer of the Church Age learns Bible doctrine at gate four of the divine dynasphere.

The middle of verse 6 is where we find ourselves: “therefore the Lord the God of the spirits of the prophets.” This is the principle of the ministry of God the Holy Spirit.

1 Corinthians 2:4, “That my doctrines and my preaching were not in persuasive words of man’s wisdom.” The Greeks admired beautiful speech no matter what the thought content was. The Romans had adopted Greek culture and therefore were often were interested in eloquence rather than what was being said. Paul continues: "instead they were a demonstration of the Spirit." When he says this he is recognising the fact that no unbeliever can ever understand the gospel apart from the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. We are born spiritually dead. Adam's original sin is imputed to us the very moment that we are born. It is imputed to the old sin nature. Human life is imputed to the soul, therefore we are born physically alive but spiritually dead. Spiritually dead means we cannot understand spiritual phenomena. The gospel is spiritual phenomena. We are here as believers not because we were able to take it up, being a genius, but because God the Holy Spirit under a doctrine called common grace made it real. In other words, the only thing that God the Holy Spirit can give us by way of salvation fact is what is accurately communicated in witnessing, by the evangelist, by the pastor, by whomever is giving the information. God the Holy Spirit uses only accurate information and none of us would ever be here as believers were it not for the third person of the Trinity. That is why Paul says, "my teaching is in the demonstration of the Spirit and of power."

He is talking about two things. First of all he is talking about the unbeliever, and then he is talking about the believer. The unbeliever is spiritually dead. If the unbeliever is going to be saved he must have facts. The facts are called the gospel. But he can be given gospel facts and never understand it, it is the ministry of God the Holy Spirit called enablement in which He acts as a human spirit to enable the unbeliever to understand the facts of the gospel. The facts of the gospel would be totally incomprehensible were it not for the fact that God the Holy Spirit enables us to understand. The same ministry of God the Holy Spirit functioning at gate one of the divine dynasphere enables us as believers to understand doctrine.

Verse 5, "that your faith should not be in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God," he is talking now about believers and life in the divine dynasphere, God's protocol system.

Verse 6, "However, we keep on teaching wisdom among the mature; not the wisdom of this age, nor the rulers of this age, who are fading out;

Verse 7, "but we communicate wisdom from God in a mystery [the technical word for Bible doctrine for the Church Age], which has been concealed, which God predesigned before the ages resulting in our glory [the function of the protocol system];

Verse 8, "doctrine which none of the rulers of this age have understood," The Roman empire was the first client nation to God. It's rulers were generally degenerate. Some were not but they were still evil. The client nation to God functioned magnificently with terrible rulers. The point is that it doesn't make any difference who is ruling the nation. What counts is the size of the pivot of mature believers, "for if they had known [but they did not], they would not have crucified the Lord of glory;

Verse 9, "but as it stands written, 'Things which the eye has not seen and the ear has not heard [empiricism as a system of perception], also the things that have not entered into the right lobe of man [rationalism as a system of perception],' doctrine is not learned by rationalism and doctrine is not learned by empiricism. In other words, we do not learn doctrine by our human ability. None of us can understand doctrine apart from the ministry of God the Holy Spirit. Doctrine is spiritual phenomena and spiritual phenomena can only be understood by a spiritual apparatus.

Verse 10, "For to us [believers] God has revealed them through the Spirit; for the Spirit investigates all things, including the deep things from God." God the Holy Spirit is ultimately our teacher, the One who enables us to understand.

Verse 11, "For what man understands the things of man except from a frame of reference, which is in him? But even so the things of God [doctrine] no one has known except the Spirit of God." What we know now the Holy Spirit has always known, and He makes it possible for us to understand these things.

Verse 12, "Now we have not received the world's frame of reference, but the spirit [human spirit]," for us to begin to learn we must be trichotomous. The unbeliever cannot understand anything because he is spiritually dead, he has a body and a soul but no human spirit. He can understand in his soul things related to human life but he cannot understand things in his soul things related to God. After a person accepts Christ as saviour he has a body and a soul and now a human spirit. When we were spiritually dead the Holy Spirit must act as a human spirit so that we can understand the gospel to have enough facts to make a decision.

Verse 12, "Now we have not received the world's frame of reference, but the human spirit from the source of God, that we might have permanent knowledge of things [doctrines] which have been graciously given to us under the authority of God." The whole system of learning doctrine is a protocol system.

Verse 13, "which things we also teach by categories," if we are ever going to learn the Christian way of life we must learn it systematically, that is why we have categories of doctrine, not by the teaching from the source of man's wisdom, but by teaching from the source of the Spirit, bringing together truth [doctrine] to a spiritual apparatus [the function of GAP]."

Verse 14, the unbeliever. "But the soulish man [the unbeliever is dichotomous, he is called the yuxikoj man] does acquire knowledge from the doctrines of the Spirit of God; to him they are foolishness, furthermore he is not able to acquire knowledge because they [the doctrines, the gospel message] are discerned from the source of the [human] spirit," and he doesn't have the human spirit, a spiritual apparatus. He is spiritually dead.

Verse 15, "But the spiritual [the protocol believer living in the divine dynasphere] discerns all things [of doctrine], but he himself is discerned by no man [the privacy of the priesthood in perception of doctrine]."

Verse 16, "For who has come to know the Lord's mind, who shall instruct him? But we keep on having the mind of Christ [Bible doctrine]?"

This explains the first part of Revelation 22:6: “therefore the Lord God [the Holy Spirit] of the prophets has sent his angel to make known.”

The doctrine of common grace

1. The doctrine of the total depravity of man finds the unbeliever totally helpless to understand the gospel. Therefore the integrity of God demands that the power of God be effective not only in the life of the believer but in the life of the unbeliever as well. How can anyone accept the gospel if he doesn't understand the issue? He cannot. He is spiritually dead and is incapable of understanding, therefore the ministry of God the Holy Spirit in “common grace.”

2. Therefore the enabling ministry of God the Holy Spirit is directed toward both believer and unbeliever. God the Holy Spirit has a major portion in the life of the human race. Unbeliever: the Holy Spirit has a responsibility called common grace. Common grace means simply the Holy Spirit enables the unbeliever to understand the gospel. The believer therefore has facts on which to make a decision.

3. For the believer the provision is the divine dynasphere for understanding. Everything in relationship to God demands perception: understanding God as God is revealed.

4. The grace of God always finds mankind helpless, whether it is believer or unbeliever. The unbeliever is spiritually dead, therefore totally helpless to understand the gospel and to perceive the issue of salvation.

5. Therefore God the Holy Spirit functions as a human spirit to reveal the gospel to the dichotomous unbeliever, “the soulish man receives not the things of the Spirit of God.”

6. Not only is mankind born dichotomous, body and soul, but at the same time the imputation of Adam's original sin means that he is spiritually dead — also called totally depraved, the doctrine of the total depravity of man.

7. Just as you cannot communicate with a corpse, or just as a corpse cannot perceive, so the gospel cannot be understood by the unbeliever. Therefore, God the Holy Spirit functions as the one who makes us understand, the enabling power of the Holy Spirit.

8. When mankind became spiritually dead, when Adam sinned in the garden, Adam as the federal head of the human race sinned, and therefore when man became spiritually dead Adam lost the power to understand what God taught. But he did not lose simultaneously self-determination. Hence, the free will or human volition of man must have facts on which to make a decision. Though spiritually dead man still has self-determination. These facts are learned by the ministry of God the Holy Spirit whose function as a human spirit enables an unbeliever to understand Christ as the issue in salvation. Common grace can be compared to the inhale of the gospel.

The doctrine of efficacious grace

Efficacious grace is the exhale of faith in Christ through the enabling power of the Holy Spirit. So that when it says, "By grace are you saved through faith", grace means that God the Holy Spirit gave you the ability to believe, because under the doctrine of total depravity we don't have that ability on our own, even with the facts. All we can throw up is this weak positive signal. That positive volition is converted into faith in Christ through the ministry of the Holy Spirit.

Even after understanding some phase of the gospel or the saving work of Christ man is still incapable of believing in Christ. Man's helplessness is simply the expression of his total depravity. The unbeliever with gospel understanding now needs help even to believe in Christ. Remember the man who fell down at Jesus' feet and said, "I believe, help thou mine unbelief." He was simply expressing that even when we are positive we need help. There never will be a time when we do not need help.

The unbeliever with gospel understanding needs help. From what source does the help come? First of all it comes from eternity past. The omniscience of God programmed into a PROM chip called "election". Billions of years ago God knew that at a certain point we would hear the gospel. God the Holy Spirit had already agreed before man existed to function as the perceptive instrument for the facts, to enable us to understand the gospel as spiritually dead unbelievers. He knew that as a result of having the facts these weak positive signals would go up, but they are helpless. God the Holy Spirit converts them into exhale, faith in Christ. Knowing that, God called us. We respond, but we are too weak to do anything, so God the Holy Spirit gives us the necessary breath to exhale. In eternity past God the Father programmed into the computer of divine decrees the positive decision of every human being who would believe in Christ, and this PROM chip known as election to privilege is a printout of the computer of divine decrees. It is simply God's prior knowledge of what we would do when came into contact with the gospel. Hence, the gospel understanding from common grace results in a call, kalew, the verb of election, a divine call to those with positive volition at God-consciousness. This divine call is made by God the Holy Spirit under the concept of efficacious grace. The human will of the positive believer is weak and because of total depravity and spiritual death God the Holy Spirit enables our volition to believe in Christ. Even our volition needs help. Common grace is the inhale of the gospel; efficacious grace is the exhale of faith in Christ. In both cases we have the enabling work of God the Holy Spirit. Efficacious grace is not a process but an instantaneous act of God the Holy Spirit in enabling the unbeliever to believe in Christ. If you accept the fact of doctrine that the imputation of Adam's original sin at birth means spiritual death, then you have to recognise our total inability to believe in Christ apart from the enabling work of God the Holy Spirit.

The doctrine understanding from common grace results in a call, an invitation, kalem, the divine call to those with positive volition at God-consciousness and at gospel-hearing. This divine call is made by God the Holy Spirit under the principle of efficacious grace. But the human will of the positive believer is weak and there is where total depravity comes in again: spiritual death. Therefore God the Holy Spirit empowers the weak human volition to believe in Christ where positive volition exists at the point of common grace. Remember that common grace is the inhale of the gospel; efficacious grace is the exhale of the gospel.

The next verb in verse 6 is the aorist active indicative of apostellw which means to send. The culminative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results, the enlightenment of the apostle John, the human author of the book of Revelation, "therefore the Lord, the God of the spirits of the prophets has sent his angel." The active voice: God the Holy Spirit, divine author of the scripture produces the action of the verb in sending to the human author the information to the angel. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the Spirit sending the pur sui vant messenger for the function as a professor of eschatology to the apostle John. The accusative singular direct object angeloj, "his angel," possessive genitive. This is how John receives the information which he passes on to us through the Word of God.

The purpose of the angelic professor is given in the final phrase of the verse, the aorist active infinitive of the verb deiknumi which means to declare, to show, to reveal. We will translate it "to make known." The constative aorist tense contemplates the function of the teaching angel from the angelic college of heralds. The active voice: the professor of eschatology, the pur sui vant messenger, produces the action. This is the infinitive of intended result when the result is indicating or fulfilling a deliberate objective, therefore a blending of purpose and result. Then we have the dative plural indirect object of douloj which means "slave." Notice the plural. Anyone who communicates the message of the Word of God is a slave. Not only to John is this word addressed but in the plural it is addressed to every pastor who has ever studied this passage since the first century. Furthermore, this is the dative of indirect object which means that John and any pastor who studies it receives blessing from doing so.

Then he goes on to say, "to make known to his servants," John and future students of Revelation, "the things which soon must come to pass." This is a very important phrase because it introduces our next doctrine. The accusative neuter plural from the relative pronoun ta(j) is translated, "the things which." The impersonal verb dei means "must." Then there is the aorist active infinitive of ginomai, "come to pass." But that is not the key. The real key here is the adverb taxu, correctly translated "soon." In other words, the word "soon" or taxu actually tells us that the book of Revelation is an historical textbook, beginning at AD 96 and going to the end of time, and then jumping over into the eternal state for just a few paragraphs. This historical textbook is divided into two sections. The historical trends of the Church Age, the word taxu also means that prophecy will begin again. The Church Age is the dispensation of no prophecy. When the Rapture of the Church occurs that is the next prophetic event. The word "soon" means prophecy beginning again. When does prophecy start? The next item of prophecy on the agenda is the Rapture. It could have happened in John's day, "soon." It could have happened in Paul's day, he used the word "soon" also. "Soon" means that there is no prophecy to be fulfilled before the Rapture of the Church; it is an adverb for prophecy beginning again.

Translation of verse 6: "Then he said to me, these doctrines are dependable and true: therefore the Lord, the God of the spirits of the prophets has sent his angel to make known to his servants the things [prophecies] which must soon come to pass."

Verse 7, taxu or "soon" refers to prophecy. There is no prophecy in the Church Age. So we are going to have the word "soon" and we are going to have the phrase, "I am coming soon," a phrase for the Rapture of the Church. And it isn't mentioned only once in verse 7, it is mentioned in verses 7, 12, and 20. Three times in the last chapter in the Bible we have the phrase, "I am coming soon." Obviously it has great significance.

The baptism of the Holy Spirit occurred for the first time on the Day of Pentecost. God the Holy Spirit took every believer alive on planet earth and entered him into union with Christ. That was the beginning of the formation of the royal family of God. That was a prophecy which our Lord mentioned in John 14:20. There is no prophecy during the Church Age. The next prophecy will be at the end of the Church Age. "Soon" in verse seven doesn't mean "quickly," as it is translated in the King James version. It means in sequence of events, this will be the next time there is prophecy.

We begin with the conjunction kai which introduces a conclusion, so we translate it "Therefore." The conjunction refers to the last phrase of the previous verse. Hence, the Church Age is the dispensation of no prophecy, the dispensation of historical trends. We have the demonstrative particle i)dou, and it means to concentrate, "Therefore, behold." It calls attention to the next prophetic event. Then the present active indicative of the verb e)rxomai. E)rxomai can be used either for the second advent or the Rapture, the context determines. It means to come, "Therefore, behold I come," followed by the adverb taxu again, "soon." This is the imminency of the Rapture. What does "soon" mean? When our Lord gave us this promise it was AD 96. The elapse of time means no unfulfilled prophecy, the Rapture is imminent. When the Lord said, "I am coming soon," in AD 96 He was saying that the next prophetic event is when He comes in the air and we meet there.

The present tense of e)rxomai is a futuristic present, it denotes the Rapture as not yet occurring but it regards it as so certain that in thought it may be contemplated as already coming to pass. In other words, the futuristic present confirms the doctrine of the imminency of the Rapture. Nearly all of the apostles have something to say about the fact that the Rapture could have occurred while they were still alive. It didn't occur while they were still alive but it could have because there is no prophecy to be fulfilled. "Soon" means tonight, tomorrow night or a thousand years from now. The active voice: our Lord produces the action, the Rapture of the Church. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of doctrine, the doctrine of the imminency of the Rapture. While e)rxomai is used for the second advent of Christ it must be remembered that Revelation was written to the Church, not to the Tribulational believers or the Millennial believers. Revelation is a book of history and prophecy, therefore the historical textbook from the completion of the canon of scripture to the end of time.

The Rapture is defined as an act or a fact of being transported; hence, used in a technical theological sense to describe the resurrection of the Church. It is the doctrine of the transfer. The entire Church, the dead in Christ first and then we who are alive and remain, are caught up together with Him to meet Him in the air. "And so shall we ever be with the Lord." That is a permanent transfer. Since the Church is the royal family of God it has certain privileges that other believers in other dispensations do not have. In fact, this is the dispensation of privilege. The privilege here is that before Old Testament saints, Abraham, Moses, David, etc., are resurrected we, the Church, are resurrected first. Why? Because we are royal family of God. All of the Old Testament saints were simply family of God. The imminency of the Rapture means no prophecy to be fulfilled before the resurrection of the Church. When the royal family is completed, whenever that is, then the resurrection of the Church will occur. Since the Church Age is the dispensation of no prophecy and since there are no intervening prophetic events between the baptism of the Spirit on the Day of Pentecost we simply say that the Rapture is imminent.

An example of something that is not imminent would be the second advent of Christ. The second advent of Christ is a prophecy but it is not imminent because first of all there must be the resurrection of the Church and then all of the events between Revelation chapters 6 and 19 have to be fulfilled first. So the second advent is not imminent but the Rapture is. By way of contrast the Rapture can occur at any time since no prophecies have to be fulfilled.

In verse 7 we have the end of the Church Age. It will end in a moment of time with a resurrection: the Rapture of the Church. "I am coming soon" is the doctrine of the imminency of the Rapture. The futuristic present tense of erxomai denotes the Rapture as not yet occurring but regards it as so certain that in thought it may be contemplated as already coming to pass. Hence, the futuristic present emphasises the imminency of the Rapture.

The next phrase says, "Happy is he." We have the nominative singular subject makarioj which means "happy," then the articular present active participle of terew which means to have it and to guard it. Being an articular participle the definite article is used as a personal pronoun. It refers to the believer who resides and functions and continues momentum inside the divine dynasphere, the sphere of the enabling power of God the Holy Spirit. The present tense is a customary present, it denotes what habitually occurs to the believer living inside the divine dynasphere. As a protocol Christian, as a winner in the spiritual life through momentum inside the divine dynasphere, he has both capacity for happiness and the reality of happiness to match his capacity. In God's plan is the capacity first, but once you have the capacity He provides the happiness, the blessings. The active voice: the believer living inside the divine dynasphere produces the action. The participle is circumstantial. The object of the participle in the accusative plural is logoj, "doctrines." "Happy is he who keeps the doctrines," referring to Revelation specifically but to the completed canon of scripture in its entirety.

The word “doctrines” is followed by the ablative of source from biblion. This recognises, now, that the canon of scripture is completed. With it we have a demonstrative pronoun, o(utoj, the near demonstrative translated “this book.” Nothing is more important to the believer than “this book.” “Happy is he who keeps the doctrines of the prophecy from this book.” Note that the happiness derived from life in the divine dynasphere is greater than any of the circumstances of life. Happiness belongs to believers regardless of circumstances.

Verse 8, in his enthusiasm John glorifies a creature. This is a repetition of John’s mistake in Revelation 19:10. It is possible to become so carried away with the Word that you confuse the communicator with the content, a very dangerous situation. For the second time this great apostle makes that error. The first mistake occurred with the officer of arms from the angelic college of heralds; this occurs with the pur sui vant messenger from the angelic college of heralds. There must be an increasing enthusiasm here because the highest-ranking angel in the college of heralds is the king of arms, but the lowest-ranking angel in the college of heralds is the pur sui vant messenger.

Corrected translation of verses 8 and 9: “And I John am the one who heard and saw these things. Then when I heard and saw, I fell down to worship at the feet of the angel who made known these things to me. Then he [the angel] said to me, Don’t do it: for I am your fellow servant, along with your brethren the prophets, and along with those who keep the doctrines of this book. Worship God.”

“worship God,” the aorist active imperative of the verb proskunew. The constative aorist contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: the apostle John, the highest-ranking Christian alive in AD 96, is commanded not to fall down at the feet of the angel but is commanded to produce the action of the verb toward God. This is the imperative of command. The active singular indirect object from the noun qeoj includes an understanding of the ministry of all members of the Trinity.

The content of the doctrine of the teaching angel was so fantastic, so inspiring, to John that he had an emotional reaction resulting in what might be classified as an impulsive act. He worshipped the creature source of the information rather than the one who provided it, the Lord Himself. In other words, enthusiasm for doctrine sometimes leads people to glorify the teacher of doctrine rather than the subject of doctrine who is our Lord Jesus Christ. The teacher of doctrine is a voice, the means of communication of doctrine.

In John’s first mistake he received a powerful answer from the officer of arms. Revelation 19:10 is that answer: “The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy,” or in corrected translation, “Doctrinal communication about Jesus is perceptive insight into prophecy.” In other words, emphasis must be placed on the content of the Word — in this case prophecy, not the one who communicates it. Though different categories of creation both the teaching angel and the apostle John serve God as communicators. Essentially the message from the angel to John was simple. It is not the angel it is the message. The worship of the subject of eschatological doctrine is worship of Jesus Christ. So it is the same old story: it is not the man it is always the message. The day one gets his eyes on the teacher of doctrine he ceases to understand and learn the content of doctrine. Momentum in the Christian life comes from perception of doctrine. The believer must be occupied with Christ, not preoccupied with the pastor-teacher.

Verse 10, the importance of the book of Revelation. The Lord Jesus Christ has made two important prophecies in His life. Remember that in His humanity He is a king, the son of David; He is a priest, the high priest forever after the order of Melchizedek, therefore a king priest. And our Lord Jesus Christ is also a prophet. As a prophet He gave two prophecies: one with regard to the baptism of the Holy Spirit, and one that He was coming soon. Between the prophecy of the baptism of the Spirit and the prophecy of the Rapture of the Church there is no prophecy. The Church Age is the dispensation of historical trends.

We begin verse 10 with the sequential use of the conjunction kai, "Then," followed by the present active indicative of legw, "Then he said to me." Then comes the prohibition, the aorist active subjunctive of the verb sfragizw plus the negative mh, "seal not." The ingressive aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb at its beginning, hence it denotes entrance into a state or condition. With the negative mh it prohibits the sealing of the book of Revelation. Why? Because what John has been doing is writing these things down and sending them across the water to the seven churches of the book of Revelation. After he gets through with it he seals it and sends it as his sermon. It is like mailing something. Don't seal it! This book is very important it is going to be a part of the canon of scripture. The active voice: John as the human author is commanded not to produce the action, not to seal the book. Revelation is therefore said to be an open book, not a closed one. Therefore it is a book that can be understood. Any book in the Bible can be understood by someone who has advanced enough to understand it, and any book in the Bible can be taught by one who has the gift of pastor-teacher. The subjunctive mood of prohibition with the negative mh means a negative command, "Do not seal up." Then we have the word logoj in the accusative and which means "doctrines," "Do not seal up the doctrines of the prophecy of this book."

The Church Age is the dispensation of no prophecy, therefore historical trends rather than prophetic trends. Once the Church Age is completed by the Rapture then the prophetic trends of history will resume.

The next phrase begins with the post positive explanatory conjunction gar, "for." Then we have a nominative singular subject from kairoj, "for the time." Kairoj means historical sequence of time, therefore it could almost be translated the historical sequence moving on. We have the present active indicative of e)imi, "is." Then an adverb of time e)gguj, "near." The ministry of the apostle John in AD 96, including the completion of Revelation, is in a most important transitional period. Judea, the last Jewish client nation, having been destroyed and having moved into the times of the Gentiles when only a Gentile client nation could function, means that this is a very important period. SPQR is now the first Gentile client nation to God.

Translation of verse 10: "Then he instructed me, Do not seal up the words [doctrines] of the prophecy of this book: for the time is near."

The ministry of the apostle John in AD 96, including the completion of Revelation, was the time for preparing the Roman empire for its role as a client nation. In 70 AD the fifth cycle of discipline was administered by Rome to the Jewish nation. The Jewish nation was wiped out as a client nation to God. So in 70 AD a new time clock began to tick which has to do with the times of the Gentiles. Only Gentile nations can function as a client nation to God during the Church Age.

This book must be open to all the seven churches, to Christians in every generation. It is an open book, and “seal not” means that when a believer has mastered certain basic doctrines he is ready for the book of Revelation, though it isn’t where you start as a Christian. Revelation is an orientation to the doctrine that you have to the time in which you live. The book of Revelation recognises the initial pivot of the new client nation to God, the first of the Gentile client nations, a pivot formed around seven churches of Revelation chapters two and three. The time is near for this drastic change in history. The times of the Gentiles prophesied by our Lord in Revelation 21:24 is now coming to pass. The pivot centre for the first client nation will be the Roman province of Asia, the west coast of Turkey. The trends of the Church Age, the dispensation of no prophecy, are recorded in Revelation chapters two and three. The next prophetic event is the Rapture of the Church and this is why the Rapture is said to be imminent. The Church in heaven as a result of the Rapture is found in Revelation chapters four and five. In Revelation chapters six through nineteen we have a detailed eschatology of the Tribulation and the second advent.

If there is so much detail why is the book of Revelation written to the Church and not the Tribulational saints? So there will never be any doubt in our minds. There will be great periods of adversity, of historical disaster, but we are to understand that the Church will not go through any part of the Tribulation. We are not in the Tribulation, we will never be in the Tribulation, the Rapture will occur before the Tribulation, and therefore whatever adversity we have we have brought upon ourselves. The eternal state is the subject of Revelation 21:1-22:5 and we have noted this in just enough detail to realise that we have a glorious future ahead. Therefore, Revelation must not be sealed. The last book of the Bible is a historical textbook, it is going to give us trends in our time, it will keep us from making the stupid assumption that we are going to be in any part of the Tribulation.

Verse 11, there are some options in history. We have the articular present active participle of the verb αδικω. Αδικω means he who does wrong. The definite article is used as the personal pronoun. The present tense is retroactive progressive, denoting what has begun in the past and continues into the present time — also known as the present of duration. The active voice: mankind produces the action of the verb. This is a circumstantial participle followed by an aorist active imperative of the same verb, αδικω. It should be translated: “He who does wrong, let him do wrong.” Notice it does not say: He who commits crime let him commit crime. Crime must be restrained but people are free to follow their own volition in life. They are free to make mistakes, they are free to do wrong, but they are not free to commit crime. Crime is an attack upon human freedom.

Now the word “filthy.” We have the nominative singular from Greek word ρπαρο which means a degenerate person, a defiled person. With this we have the aorist passive imperative from rupainw, “continue to be defiled.” And what are we to do? Let him alone. Let the degenerate continue to be degenerate. As long as history continues those in the cosmic system will continue to manifest and display various types of degeneracy. Some will manifest moral degeneracy: self-righteous arrogance, crusader arrogance. Some will manifest immoral degeneracy. All mankind must take the responsibility for his own decisions.

Then we have the other side of the picture. We start out with the aorist passive imperative of the verb a(giazw, “let the saint [believer] continue to be set apart.” In other words, don’t bother believers in the divine dynasphere, let them live there. This passage says, “furthermore, let the righteous [the believer living in the divine dynasphere] still produce something.” What is he going to produce? He is going to produce integrity — “and let the holy person [the saint, the set apart one] still be holy [continue to function in the protocol plan of God].”

Translation of verse 11: “Let him who does wrong continue to do wrong: let the defiled person continue to be defiled: furthermore, let the righteous one still produce integrity: and let the saint continue to be set apart”

This passage is dealing with life in the cosmic system versus life in the divine dynasphere which is the protocol plan of God. As long as human history continues mankind possesses volition with freedom to choose for God or Satan’s cosmic system. Furthermore, this option or free will exists in the entire period of the believer’s life in time. The options are clarified by the divine mandates and these mandates are the basis for the believer’s responsibility to fulfill the protocol plan of God. From the standpoint of the plan of God all believers are either winners or losers. They should be free to function outside of the function of crime, they should be free to continue to be winners or losers, for they will be held accountable at the judgment seat of Christ.

The final declaration of Jesus Christ recorded in the book of Revelation is in verses 12-17. The next prophetic event in history is mentioned for the second time in this passage. It will finally be mentioned in verse 20. Each time something is added for a slightly different emphasis. Again we have the imminency of the Rapture.

Verse 12, the demonstrative particle i)dou begins this verse and again demands the same concentration, a recognition of the fact that there is no prophecy in the Church Age. The present active indicative of e)rxomai presents to us once more the doctrine of the imminency of the Rapture. The present tense is a futuristic present denoting the fact that the Rapture has not yet occurred but regards the event as so certain that in thought it is contemplated as already coming to pass. Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb in the active voice. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the imminency of the Rapture. Because there is no intervening prophecy between the baptism of the Spirit at the beginning of the Church Age and the Rapture we therefore use the word imminency. Imminency means that the Rapture could occur any time. No one knows the time when it will happen. When the royal family has been completed the Church will be resurrected.

Added to the imminency concept is the adverb taxu which does not mean “quickly,” it means “soon.” Again it is the concept of the imminency of the Rapture.

This time there is a different emphasis from verse 7, the judgment seat of Christ. The connective conjunction kai is translated “and.” Then the nominative singular misqoj means reward or decorations or anything that indicates something well-deserved, “and my reward.” We insert the verb e)imi because of ellipsis, “is with me,” meta plus the genitive from e)gw. This means that Christ is speaking to the Church. Again, the book of Revelation was written to the Church and therefore this is a reminder that when the Rapture occurs there will be decorations and rewards. In the context of verses 12-17 our Lord’s final words are specifically given to us — members of the royal family of God. In contrast is the similar phrase about coming soon in verse seven, referring to the fact that the Rapture has many different aspects. Once more in verse 20 the phrase will be repeated and, once more, with a different emphasis. The rewards mentioned here refer to the decorations, the eternal blessings, the rewards that belong to the winner only. Losers have no rewards. That is the emphasis.

Next we have the aorist active infinitive of the verb a)podidomi which means to give back, to reward, to award, and it can mean here to decorate in the sense of presenting an award. The culminative aorist tense contemplates both rewards and decorations given to winners at the judgment seat of Christ. It contemplates them in its entirety but it regards it from the viewpoint of eternal results. Winners in the eternal state have certain rewards, decorations, privileges which distinguish them from believers who are losers. All are in resurrection bodies but many privileges, rewards, opportunities for winners are above and beyond those of losers. Active voice: Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb by decorating certain believers as winners at the judgment seat of Christ. The infinitive is the infinitive of intended result, it indicates the fulfillment of a deliberate objective, therefore it is a blending of purpose and result. The dative singular indirect object of e(skastoj follows. It means “to each,” to each winner. This is the dative of indirect object, it indicates the protocol Christian as the one in whose interest the award is given. Only the believer who advances to gate eight of the divine dynasphere will receive the top awards and decorations. The believer who achieves gate eight in the divine dynasphere is on the honours list and will be knighted at the judgment seat of Christ. He will have thereafter in the Lamb’s book of life a certain type of knighthood after his name. You never make the honours list until you understand and execute the plan of God for your life — residence, function, momentum inside the divine dynasphere.

With this we have a comparative conjunction w(j which can also be used as a temporal conjunction. It is comparative generally but there is a hermeneutical principle that words change their meaning because of their relationship to other words. So the meaning of the word is determined by its usage. Here is a temporal connotation to award each believer when rather than as. With it is the nominative singular subject e)rgon which means production or work. And with it is the possessive genitive of a)utoj, “his work.” Then the present active indicative of the verb e)imi, “when his work is.” The ellipsis demands another word in the English; something like evaluated.

Translation: "Behold, I am coming soon [the announcement of the imminency of the Rapture]; and my reward is with me, to award each winner when his accomplishment is evaluated."

In 1 Thessalonians 4:13 we have reference to this resurrection which will be followed by the awarding of the decorations and privileges to believers who in time were winners.

"But we do not want you to be ignorant, brethren" the worst thing a person can be is ignorant and there is no excuse for it. Due to the enabling ministry of God the Holy Spirit in the perception of Bible doctrine, a ministry which begins with the restraint of the human race for freedom of evangelism, followed by the enabling ministry of the Holy Spirit in common and efficacious grace, followed by the tremendous ministry of the Spirit in which He does six things for us at salvation, followed by His enabling power inside the protocol system, the divine dynasphere, "concerning those who are asleep," sleep is used for the rest of the body after physical death in connection with the believer. The Church Age believer who has died and gone to heaven is often described as being asleep. A heresy has come out of this, however, called "soul sleep." The soul never sleeps, it is the body that sleeps. In the analogy waking up from the sleep is the resurrection of the body. The soul is absent from the body in heaven: absent from the body and face to face with the Lord. The body sleeps in the grace waiting for the resurrection, "that you do not grieve like the rest." There are two categories of people who grieve unnecessarily. Grief is normal because we miss our loved ones who have departed, but it should never become abnormal. There is abnormal grief under two conditions: the unbeliever who has no hope; the believer in the cosmic system who is ignorant of the hope, "who have no hope."

Verse 14, "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again [and we do: first class condition], so also God will bring with him those who have fallen asleep in Jesus."

Verse 15, "For this doctrine in the word of the Lord we communicate to you, that we [believers] who are alive, and remain until the coming of the Lord, shall not precede those who have fallen asleep." The body sleeps in the grave. The problem here with the Thessalonians was that they thought that if you died you might miss the Rapture!

Verse 16, "For the Lord himself will descend from heaven with a command," there are two commands here, a voice command and a trumpet command. Both are brought into one in order to bring into view the fact that the Rapture includes the dead in Christ and those who are alive at the time the Lord comes in the air, "with the voice of the archangel [the highest ranking angel in the angelic order of battle]," the voice command is given for the believers who are alive on the earth, and when that command is given all believers alive on the earth will go from mortal to immortal in a second. The body of mortality will be changed into a resurrection body instantly, "also with the trumpet of God," for the dead believers. The soul and the spirit will enter the body and there will be resurrection from the spot from which the body was buried, "in fact the dead in Christ shall rise first."

Verse 17, "Then we who are alive and remain [on the earth] shall be caught up together with them in the clouds," for the great assembly of all the royal family in the air, "for the purpose of meeting the Lord in the air,” that is why the Lord doesn’t come to the earth at the Rapture. To assemble millions and millions of believers the parade ground is the atmosphere, “and so we shall always be with the Lord [in resurrection bodies].”

This is background for the fact that He says in Revelation 22:12, “I am coming soon [Rapture]; and my reward is with me.” Following the assembly of all believers in the air we have Philippians 2:9-11. The first item on the agenda is an unprecedented worship of Christ by the entire assembled royal family of God which is assembled for the first time in history.

Philippians 2:9, “Therefore also God [the Father] has exalted him to the maximum,” the exaltation came when our Lord’s third royal patent was awarded after His ascension, “and has given him a royal title which is superior to every royal title,”

Verse 10, “that in the presence of the person of Christ [this is the Rapture] every knee in heaven shall bow,” this assembly takes place in the air, the first heaven, “both the ones who are on the earth [believers who are alive at the Rapture], and the ones under the earth [believers who died before the Rapture],

Verse 11, “and every tongue will acknowledge that Jesus is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.”

Then following is the judgment seat of Christ where the rewards are given to the winners of the Church Age. There are many passages giving us the purpose for this evaluation: 2 Corinthians 5:10; Romans 14:10-12, etc. The rewards are in the form of crowns, for example: the crown of life of James 1:12; Revelation 2:10, a decoration for protocol believers, those who are winners inside the divine dynasphere; the crown of righteousness, a decoration to the protocol believer or winner from production inside the divine dynasphere, like virtue; the crown of glory of Philippians 4:1; 1 Thessalonians 2:19,20, for pastors who fulfill their ministry inside the divine dynasphere.

There are some warnings given regarding the possibility of losing those crowns before you depart from this life, 2 John 8, 10, 11; Revelation 3:11.

The highest decoration of all is the order of the morning star. It goes with the highest order of chivalry in Revelation 2:26-28. There is also an eternal order of chivalry which is established at this time. The new knighthood is found in Revelation 2:17, the uniform of glory which covers the resurrection body of winners only is found in Revelation 3:4 and 5, a permanent historical record centre is established in heaven and with it an eternal heraldry including those who are in the pivot and whose names will be in the record centre along with accomplishments regarding their influence on history and their new patent of heraldry, Revelation 3:12. At the second advent the winner will return with Christ and reign with Him as a winner, “Behold I bring my rewards with me.”

Verse 13, Jesus Christ as the key to history. The personal pronoun nominative singular of e)gw is the first of six predicate nominatives referring to the Lord Jesus Christ. It is followed by the first letter, A)lfa, which refers to the deity of Christ; the last letter of the Greek alphabet is O)mhga, referring to the humanity of Christ and the hypostatic union. "I am Alpha and Omega" was a reminder to the Jews of Deuteronomy 6:4 which was their worship ritual. The Alpha glory of our Lord Jesus Christ plus His Omega glory is a reminder that the Shekinah glory came in the flesh to Israel. "I am Alpha [the deity of Christ] and the Omega [Christ in hypostatic union]." The phrases which follow simply are appositional nominatives: prwtoj, "the first"; e)sxatoj, "the last." Jesus Christ controls history from this first appositional phrase. As the first, Jesus Christ is eternal God and he preexists human history; as the last, Jesus Christ is the God-Man who terminates history with the judgment of unbelievers at the great white throne and the blessing of believers in the eternal state. This phrase emphasises the fact, then, that Jesus Christ controls history.

One of the greatest controls of history is the restraining ministry of God the Holy Spirit. He restrains sin, and in the restraint of sin that provides freedom necessary for evangelism and for function in the protocol plan of God.

There are two more predicate nominatives, a)rxh, "the beginning," and teloj, "the end." The beginning means that eternal God, Jesus Christ, began history with the creation of mankind. Jesus Christ is the creator of the universe as well as the creator of man. As eternal God Jesus Christ began history with creation, John 1:3; Colossians 1:16. The word "end" means Jesus Christ as the God-man in hypostatic union terminates human history.

The issue that comes out of this is the plan of God. In verse 14 we have the eternal reward of the believer; in verse 15 we have the exclusion of the unbeliever.

Verse 14, we have a nominative plural subject, makarioj, which means "blessed" but perhaps a much better translation in modern English is the word "happy." The next phrase is grossly mistranslated in the King James version because of a textual problem. The correct text is Codex Aleph and Codex A which is Alexandrinus. The incorrect text is the King James based on the Vulgate and the Syriac rather than the good ones. So we have, not "Blessed are they who do his commandments" but the articular present active participle of plunw which means to wash. The corrected translation is, "Blessed are they who wash." The definite article is used for a plural pronoun and it refers to mature believers in the protocol system, gate eight of the divine dynasphere. The perfective present tense denotes what has come to be in the past but is recognised as a present reality. The active voice: the believer produces the action. The participle is circumstantial for the reward of mature believers in the eternal state. The next phrase is the accusative plural direct object, not from swma, "bodies," but stolh, "robes." So: "Happy are they who wash their robes."

The washing of robes is the function of the believer using the rebound technique by which he escapes the cosmic system of Satan and simultaneously recovers life inside the divine dynasphere. Believers who use the rebound technique by which they escape Satan's cosmic system recover fellowship with God and get back into the divine dynasphere. As a result of the consistent use of the rebound technique, therefore coming under the ministry of the enabling of the Holy Spirit, believers advance to maturity and there are rewards mentioned in this verse which result. You cannot advance or have momentum in the spiritual life apart from living in the divine dynasphere. Living in the cosmic system means you are going nowhere in a hurry. There is no life in the divine dynasphere apart from the use of the rebound technique. Therefore consistent use of rebound is not only the basis of fellowship with God in time but the means of advancing to maturity inside God's protocol plan, the divine dynasphere. Note the analogy in the passage: many washings of the robe. Hence, not a reference to salvation but to the means of advancing spiritually — one robe, many washings; one salvation, many rebounds. The object of divine blessing here is the winner who has consistently used the rebound technique so that he has lived out most of his life inside the divine dynasphere.

Next we have the reward for mature believers in the eternal state. It begins with the conjunction i(na which introduces a final purpose clause, "that." Next is the future middle indicative of e)imi and a present nominative e)cousia, "in order that they may have the authority." The future tense of the verb e)imi is a predictive future, it anticipates the privilege of the mature believer in the eternal state. It is something only a winner receives. The verb to be becomes the verb to have when used with certain other verbs in the context. E)cousia here is not "authority," it means "privilege." This is a direct middle voice in which the subject, the winner in time, acts with a view toward participating in the results of the action. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of the eternal state and the reality of special rewards and blessings for winners. The mature believer who achieves gate eight is a cut above everyone else in the eternal state and therefore there are certain things he can do and no one else can do. One of them is to attend the special parties in Paradise in the garden and to be in the presence of the tree of life.

With this we have the preposition e)pi plus the accusative of xulon, which originally meant wealth but eventually was corrupted in the Koine and became "tree." It is translated, "that they might have their right [privilege] to the tree of life." The "tree of life" is the descriptive genitive of zoh.

What is this tree of life? The tree of life is described first in Revelation 2:7, "... to the winner, I will give to him the privilege of eating from the tree of life, which is in the Paradise [the King's Garden] of God." The tree of life and the privilege of eating there is a privilege that belongs to a few, those who are called here, not overcomers (which is of English) but winners. Winners are the ones who are allowed into this giant garden located in the new Jerusalem. This is not a tree to keep you alive. You are in a resurrection body in the eternal state, you have no trouble staying alive, you will live forever and ever. This is a privilege. Actually, eating from the tree of life just means the best parties in town. Eternal happiness and blessing are always associated with the tree of life in the eternal state, which emphasises the fact that the tree of life is the ultimate reward for the mature believer. It is the ultimate in eternal blessing and reward and it separates winners from losers in time.

The winner or mature believer is the one who consistently resides in the divine dynasphere which is God's protocol plan for the Church Age believer, and it is fitting that the winner should receive a special privilege which differentiates him from all other unbelievers. Differentiation has to do with the wonderful decorations and the fact that the winner ruled a kingdom during the Millennium. Pardhj [Paradise] was a king's garden. When the king threw a party in the ancient world he always sat on a dais on which was his ivory throne. He could sit there and see all of his friends. The idea was that it was a party concept. When Alexander the Great conquered the Persians one of the first things he did was to coin into the Greek language the word Paradise. Revelation 2:7 talks about the Paradise of God, “the tree of life which is in the Paradise of God.” This is the near context of the word. It is that special park in the new Jerusalem where the winners gather to party in the eternal state. The tree of life is available to all believers who achieve maturity, to winners only. The tree of life is both capacity for blessing and happiness plus the total appreciation of God. God is the centre of the party. Hence the tree of life is only mentioned in three areas of the Word of God: first in Genesis, secondly in Proverbs, and thirdly in the book of Revelation. Wherever it is found it is always associated with not living on and on but great happiness, super happiness that cannot be duplicated.

To get a fix on this we have to go back to the law of first mention. That takes us back to Genesis. By creation man, in the garden with the tree of life, was designed for happiness. The happiness-capacity principle is the fact that there were four categories of trees in the original garden of Eden, one being the tree of life. Man could perpetuate his happiness indefinitely in the garden. There was one tree called the testing tree, the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. If used his volition to reject God’s plan for the garden of Eden and ate from the forbidden tree then it was all over. Only negative volition toward the plan of God could destroy man’s perfect happiness in the garden, the original Paradise called the garden of Eden. The tree of life was originally in the garden of Eden for man as the ruler of this world. Man was created a winner; man was created a ruler. Adam ruled the world. Man’s sin separated from the tree of life. In other words, when man died spiritually through sin he lost both the rulership of the world to Satan and access to the tree of life in the garden of Eden. The tree of life had never been used by Adam apparently in the first place, except that it was part of the capacity package for great happiness. It is now denied to Adam in the second place. When Adam sinned, then, the tree of life was no longer available in time, it is postponed as a reward for winners only in the eternal state.

Cf. Genesis 3:24. The fact that neither Adam nor Eve touched the tree of life prior to their fall seems to be quite obvious from inference. If man in a state of spiritual death, however, had eaten from the tree his immortality in a state of spiritual death and his lack of capacity for happiness would condemn the human race to total unhappiness in the lake of fire with the devil and his angels. Genesis 3:22, “Behold, man has become like one of us, knowing good and evil; therefore, lest he, extend his hand, and take also from the tree of life, and eat, and live forever [in a state of spiritual death],” that is where man was thrown out of the garden. The inference is obvious: life forever in the state of spiritual death would be life in the lake of fire for all eternity. But the tree of life has been reserved as a blessing for those believers who are winners in time.

The first issue in human history is another tree of life. The tree of life has been closed down and a new tree of life replaces it, the cross where Jesus Christ was judged for our sins. The issue is John 3:36. The tree of life is available to every member of the human race under three categories: positive volition at God-consciousness; positive volition at gospel hearing — normal evangelism; positive volition at gospel hearing under crisis evangelism. The tree of life in the garden could not provide salvation, it could only provide perpetual happiness. Man after spiritual death needed salvation. If man had partaken of the tree of life there would be no extension of the angelic conflict. Therefore God prevented man from eating of the tree of life. Once man sinned he wanted happiness. The easy way was to go and eat from the tree of life, but God shut it down and the tree of life was never touched. The only tree that was eaten was the tree of the knowledge of good and evil; therefore, man's original sin and the historical extension of the angelic conflict.

We have an option now. Just as our original parents partook of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil which was forbidden, and became spiritually dead, so we now have the option of partaking of the tree of salvation, the work of Jesus Christ on the cross. Therefore the fall of man provides another tree of life, the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ. For those who believe in Jesus Christ there is eternal life. We have an option which can be exercised as long as we live: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." After we believe in Christ 40 things are given to us. One of them is our immediate entrance into the divine dynasphere. Entering into gate one of the divine dynasphere creates the best part of the option of the spiritual life. We start out with the option already fulfilled. We have the option of being positive and living in the divine dynasphere; we have the option of being negative and living in the cosmic system. In the divine dynasphere we make decisions; in the cosmic system we make decisions. In the divine dynasphere we have good decisions from a position of strength; in the cosmic system we have bad decisions from a position of weakness. Bad decisions from a position of weakness cut down future options and can only be changed by "washing your robes," daily rebound.

For those who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ God has provided a protocol option. Rejection of that protocol option means that even though you have eternal life, and even though there is nothing that you can do to lose your salvation, you will never enjoy the tree of life. That is for those who exercise a positive option in time.

The privilege of mature believers in the eternal state is given in the final clause of verse 14. We have the aorist active subjunctive of the verb $\epsilon\iota\sigma\epsilon\lambda\theta\epsilon\iota\varsigma$ which means to enter, "that they may enter." The aorist tense is a constative aorist contemplating the action of the verb in its entirety. The active voice: mature believers produce the action of the verb in relationship to eternal rewards of the garden. The subjunctive mood is a potential subjunctive. It implies a future reference and is qualified by the element of contingency. It is used here as a part of forming a second phrase to the purpose clause.

The entire verse says: "Blessed [Happy] are they who wash their robes, in order that they may have their right to the tree of life, and may enter into the city by the gates."

Verse 15, the eternal cursing of the unbeliever. We are still dealing with the eternal state at this point and in the eternal state the unbeliever does not have a second chance. The unbeliever remains in the lake of fire forever and ever.

The adverb of place begins the verse, $\epsilon\kappa\tau\omega\varsigma$, which means "outside," outside of this eternal state that we have been studying. It is a reference to outside of the status of the believer in the eternal state. In other words, it is describing the unbeliever. "Outside" means inside the lake of fire. In this passage there are six categories of unbelievers listed. A similar list of six categories was previously noted in Revelation 21:8. Some overlap exists. In both verses we have the description of unbelievers categorically by certain sins. The sins of these unbelievers are mentioned only because they were a distraction in normal or crisis evangelism.

Next comes the list. We have to put in a verb because of ellipsis, "Outside are." First on the list is the predicate nominative plural of the noun kuwn, "dog." The Bible must be interpreted in the time in which it was written. Man's best friend was apparently not man's best friend in Bible times. Dogs were generally regarded in a derogatory manner. Dogs were scavengers and hence in most Bible passages you will find that dogs are identified with some form of degeneracy. There is one reference to dogs being useful, Job 30:1. Isaiah sees an analogy between the local police force and dumb dogs. This is not complimentary either to the dog of the ancient world or to the police officer, Isaiah 56:10-11. A dumb dog was a dog unable to bark, "all of them are dumb dogs unable to bark." Homosexual prostitutes were also called dogs in the ancient world, "You shall not bring the wages of a dog for an offering, for both of these are an abomination to the Lord." In other words, they didn't permit the prostitute or the homosexual prostitute to give money in the temple. Hence, the dog is related to sexual deviation. A seducer of women was called a dog's head in 2 Samuel 3:8. Unbelievers at the cross were called dogs in Psalm 22:16, 20. Hence, the word "dog" is generally used to classify unbelievers. It is this connotation which begins the categorical description of unbelievers in Revelation 22:15. "Outside are dogs" — unbelievers. So this first category is describing unbelievers and the things that distract them. The unbeliever is such because he has failed to exercise his three options: at God-consciousness, at gospel hearing under normal evangelism, at gospel hearing under crisis evangelism. This means that somehow the word "dogs" in describing unbelievers describes something they did that distracted them from the gospel. It is a reference to unbelievers with emphasis on cosmic evil. The fact that dogs are used as the analogy to the unbeliever is documented by certain passages such as Matthew 7:6; Philippians 3:2; 2 Peter 2:22; Psalm 22:16, 20. "Dogs" is simply describing unbelievers distracted from this principle which deals with the fact that there are going to be many people in the lake of fire because they would not understand Ephesians 2:8,9. "Dogs" is dedicated to the fact of works.

Category #2 is farmakoj which refers to drug abusers. This is a category of people who are distracted from believing in Christ. When God the Holy Spirit reaches out with common grace and gospel facts and presented and understood because the Holy Spirit acts as the human spirit, there are some who cannot believe and will not believe and do not believe because they have opted for drugs. They have therefore gone in for hallucinatory, illusionary type of activity and they are distracted from the gospel.

This is not a message on sin, it is a message on distraction: that distraction which causes the unbeliever to reject the enabling ministry of God the Holy Spirit at the point of common grace.

Category #3 is the predicate nominative plural from pornoj, and it simply means fornicators. Members of the opposite sex can be a distraction to a lot of things. For example, Adam did not walk over to the tree and partake of the forbidden fruit, he walked over to the woman and took it out of her hand. The tree was not his interest, it was the woman. The woman was a distracter.

Category #4 is foneuj which means murderers. Criminal arrogance has no respect for human life. Murder is a distraction to normal living and it is also a distraction to the gospel as presented under the principle of the enabling power of the Holy Spirit, the principle of common grace. Freedom in life depends on respect for privacy of individuals, the sacredness of property and life. While believers can be criminals, and while believers do and have committed murder, this context is referring to unbelievers who have been distracted from the gospel by their arrogance and criminality.

Category #5 is the predicate nominative plural of e)idololotrj, which refers to idolatry. This distraction refers to idolatry and the phallic cult. It combines fornication with demonism as a distraction to the gospel presentation and the ministry of the Holy Spirit in that category.

Finally, there is category #6. It starts out with a connective conjunction kai, a nominative singular paj, “and everyone,” and the present active participle of filew is followed by the present active participle of poiew. These two words are combined to form not someone who tells lies but a phrase that says “everyone who loves and practices yeudoj, “the lie [or falsehood].” The literal translation doesn’t tell us what it means. Actually, it should be translated in modern English, “and every pathological liar.” It isn’t lying that distracts one from believing in Christ or considering the claims of Christ in the gospel, it is the pathological liar. There is a vast difference. A pathological liar is in a system which is distracted from both normal and crisis evangelism. He can’t tell the truth, he is an impulsive liar. He lies when it is unnecessary. Lack of integrity often poses a barrier between the unbeliever and the gospel. Because he is so caught up in the function of lying if he says he believes he is lying. Therefore he becomes a psychological demonstration that if you have dealt with falsehood all of your life when the truth comes and you say you believe the truth you say it just for some reason other than believing. So much of the gospel deals with the integrity of God that the pathological liar simply resents the gospel message.

Translation: “Outside are dogs, and the drug abusers, and the fornicators, and the murderers, and the idolaters, and every pathological liar.”

While the sins listed in this verse are also committed by born-again believers in time they are listed here as the sins of unbelievers which distract from the gospel. The things unbelievers emphasise to the extent that they become negative toward the gospel and reject Christ as saviour in time are presented here. Certain sins create a preoccupation syndrome in the cosmic system so that the unbeliever disregards the gospel message no matter how many times he has heard it.

The source of the book of Revelation is the subject of chapter 22:16. We begin with the personal pronoun in the first person singular, e)gw\ . It is a reference to the unique person of the universe, our Lord Jesus Christ. The next word is the proper noun "Jesus." This is the name for his humanity and emphasises the work of our Lord Jesus Christ on the cross. When the omniscience of God entered into the computer of divine decrees on one PROM chip all of the sins in the history of the human race they were all reserved for one point. When we come into the world we are automatically spiritually dead because of the imputation of Adam's original sin to each one of us. Our sins are not imputed to us for judgment. We are born spiritually dead because of the imputation of Adam's sin and all of the sins in the history of the human race, from the original sin to the last sin of the Millennium, are all on one PROM chip. They were programmed in in eternity past. When our Lord Jesus Christ was hanging on the cross the printout occurred and all of these sins were imputed to our Lord Jesus Christ and were judged. Jesus Christ was judged for every sin that has ever been committed in the history of the human race. "Jesus" means saviour. Jesus Christ is the only saviour.

Next we have a delegation of communication, the aorist active indicative of the verb pempw which means to send, "I Jesus have sent." The culminative aorist tense contemplates the action of the verb in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. The Church is briefed on the rest of human history from AD 96 to the end of history. The book of Revelation, then, is an historical textbook starting with the first Gentile client nation, the Roman empire, and going to the end of time. The active voice: our Lord Jesus Christ produces the action of the verb. The indicative mood is declarative for the reality of delegated authority in communication.

With this we have the accusative singular direct object from a)ggeloi referring to the angels who taught John while on the Isle of Patmos. With it is the possessive genitive from e)gw, "I have sent my angel" which is a reference here to the pur sui vant messenger from the angelic college of heralds who has been explaining things to John since chapter 21:9.

The purpose is in the aorist active infinitive of the verb marturew, which means to testify, to be a witness and to give accurate information in a courtroom. In this case the courtroom is the world and the apostle John is the recipient of this information which is written down under the ministry of God the Holy Spirit and given to us. The constative aorist tense contemplates the angelic teaching to John in its entirety. The active voice: the pur sui vant messenger from the college of heralds produces the action. This is the infinitive of intended result which fulfills a deliberate objective, hence a blending of purpose and result. The Church is to be briefed with regard to what is to happen in the future and what are the historical trends of the Church Age.

Next we have the recipients of Revelation. We have e)pi plus the dative plural from e)kklhsia, referring to all of us as believers in the Lord Jesus Christ. E)pi plus the dative should be translated "for the benefit of the Churches." This is also a dative of indirect object in the sense that it indicates the ones in whose interest the action is performed. It adds up to the blessing of all believers in the Church Age who master the content of the book of Revelation.

Now we have the first of three royal warrants of our Lord Jesus Christ mentioned in this verse. Our Lord Jesus Christ has three royal titles. By virtue of His eternal and infinite being as God Jesus Christ has His first royal warrant. By virtue of the virgin birth and His genetic descent in that virgin birth we have the second royal warrant. Then, by virtue of His strategic victory on the cross at the first advent we have our Lord's third royal warrant. Our Lord has three royal titles and all three are mentioned in this verse. His first is a title of divine royalty. Jesus Christ as eternal and infinite God possesses all of the attributes of the essence of deity. As God, Jesus Christ is coequal and coeternal with the Father and with the Spirit. As the manifest person of the Trinity our Lord Jesus Christ wears the crown of divine royalty, John 1:18; 6:46; 1 Timothy 6:16; 1 John 4:12. Only the Lord Jesus Christ is the revealed and the manifest person of the Trinity. Jesus Christ is also Jewish royalty. This was brought about by the virgin birth. He is directly descended from king David. The third royal title which we will find in this verse has to do with His strategic victory in the angelic conflict. This might be classified as His battlefield royalty for our Lord Jesus Christ resolved the angelic conflict by His death on the cross, bearing our sins, being judged for us, becoming our saviour. By being judged on the cross for our sins the strategic victory of the angelic conflict was accomplished. This royal warrant is related, then, to the saving work of our Lord Jesus Christ. It relates to His deity and His second advent in hypostatic union. These are the three categories of royalty.

There are titles related to each one of these categories. As divine royalty our Lord Jesus Christ is called the Son of God. As Jewish royalty He is called the son of David. In His battlefield royalty He is called the King of kings, Lord of lords, the bright morning star. In Revelation 19:16 we read He has a royal title which has been written on His robe and on His thigh: "King of kings and Lord of lords."

There are also royal families in connection with each one of these titles of royalty. Every category of royalty has a corresponding category called royal family. Regarding our Lord's divine royalty His family includes God the Father and God the Holy Spirit. In His Jewish royalty it includes the entire Davidic dynasty, all of the ancestors of the royal line of David. This category would include the mother of His humanity, the virgin Mary. After the virgin birth Joseph and Mary had other children by natural generation who are a part of the royal family under the category of Jewish royalty. These children are mentioned in Matthew 13:55,56.

The royalty applied to the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. He has a full name used in the scripture: "The Lord Jesus Christ." Kurios or Lord denotes deity. The word we have in our passage, I)esouj or Jesus, means saviour, emphasising His battlefield royalty. The word Xristos or Christ means anointed one, Messiah, Jewish royalty, the fulfillment of the famous ritual line of Deuteronomy 6:4. The great principle that we will find in our passage in Revelation 22:16 is the fact that there is therefore a royal family for every stage of our Lord's deity. 1. Our Lord is God. As deity He has royal family: God the Father and God the Holy Spirit; 2. The Davidic line: His human royalty, and we have the entire dynasty of David; 3. At the point of our Lord's resurrection and ascension, seated at the right hand of the Father, when He was given a third royal warrant, He was minus a royal family. Therefore God the Father brought to a sudden halt the Age of Israel and the Church Age began with the baptism of the Holy Spirit which is the means of forming the royal family. The Church Age is therefore the dispensation of the royal family of God. When the royal family is completed there is the resurrection or Rapture of the Church and then the Age of Israel comes to its conclusion, for the Age of Israel was halted seven years short of its completion. Those seven years are picked up in the Tribulation.

At this point we begin with the royal title of our Lord. In His first royal warrant is Jewish identification. We have the pronoun "I", the verb to be "I am," and then the word 'riza, a predicate nominative, and has to do with the fact that David had a root. The root of David is eternal God, our Lord Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ as God is called the root of David. In other words, He is the one who created Adam, He is the one who created Abraham, He is the one who created Judah, He is the one who brought into the world David, as it were. Jesus Christ as God is the source of the royal dynasty of David.

Then it says "the seed." The predicate nominative of genoj should be translated "descendant." Our English word "genes" comes from this Greek word. It is a reference to the humanity of Christ in hypostatic union. It is a reference to His second royal warrant, He is the Son of David. The word "root" refers to His Alpha glory and the word "descendant" refers to His Omega glory. Together the combination of words forms the principle found in Deuteronomy 6:4 and Revelation 22:13. Jesus Christ the God of Israel is also the saviour of Israel. Jesus Christ through His first advent became the God-Man and through His second advent He will return to deliver Israel and provide all of the unconditional covenants.

The title that comes up now is "the bright morning star." It refers to our Lord Jesus Christ as the ruler of the Church. It was prophesied by Balaam in Numbers 24:17 when he said, "I see him [Christ], but not now; I behold him, but not near; a star shall come forth from Jacob, and a sceptre shall rise from Israel." And though our Lord was born in the flesh in the line of David, and therefore Jewish royalty, He is also the head of the Church. He is the star that Balaam saw from out of Jacob, He is the great sceptre, the one who will rule forever.

The title of our Lord as the morning star is used in relationship to the second advent in 2 Peter 1:19, "We keep on having a more reliable prophetic doctrine, with reference to which doctrine you perform honourably by habitually concentrating in your right lobes on the lamp shining in a dark place, until the day dawn and the morning star has come." The morning star refers to the second advent of Christ. So this is His third royal warrant. Jesus Christ is the strategic victor of the first advent, the tactical winner at the second advent. This title is used for the highest decoration given to a Church Age believer living in the protocol plan of God.

Translation: "I Jesus have sent my angel to declare these things to you for the benefit of the churches. I am the root and the descendant of David, the bright morning star."

Verse 17 — Now we come to the source of the final invitation. We have two conjunctions kai which are always translated "both," and then the word "and." So it is "Both the Spirit."

The source of the final invitation in the Word of God comes down to the word pneuma, a reference to God the Holy Spirit and presents the divine side of salvation. The divine side of salvation begins with the doctrine of common grace. When the gospel is presented to any member of the human race it finds the unbeliever dichotomous. He has a body and he has a soul but neither the body nor the soul can combine to understand spiritual phenomena, and so the gospel being spiritual phenomena is totally incomprehensible to the unbeliever, 1 Corinthians 2:14. So God the Holy Spirit begins His enabling ministry by acting as a human spirit for the understanding of the gospel message. That is the doctrine of common grace. Common grace, then, is the ministry of God the Holy Spirit in evangelism, specifically the work of the third person of the Trinity in revealing the gospel to the unbeliever as it is presented. Because the unbeliever is spiritually dead under the principle of total depravity he cannot understand spiritual phenomena. The gospel is spiritual phenomena, therefore in the function of common grace the Holy Spirit acts as the human spirit for the understanding of the gospel. The basic function of the Holy Spirit in common grace, then, is to take the gospel presentation and make it understandable.

In John 16:8-11 we have one of the many passages on the subject of the ministry of the Holy Spirit in convincing the unbeliever. "And he [God the Holy Spirit], when he comes, will convince the world [common grace] concerning sin, and righteousness, and judgment." Note that personal sin is really not an issue in salvation because all personal sins were judged at the cross. God the Father imputed these sins to Christ and judged them. That is the saving work of Christ on the cross, and because of that saving work our personal sins are not the issue but the One who was judged for our sins, the Lord Jesus Christ.

Verse 9, "concerning sin, because they do not believe in me." The only reason why anyone is ever judged at the last judgment is because they do not believe in Christ.

Verse 10, "Concerning righteousness, because I go to the Father, and you see me no longer;

Verse 11, "and concerning judgment, because the ruler of this world [Satan] has been judged."

The principle of common grace is found first in Genesis 6:3, "My Spirit [God the Holy Spirit] shall not always convince inside man forever, for in going astray [mankind] he is also flesh; nevertheless his days shall be 120 years." In other words, what was being said at that point is the fact that at the point this was given there were 120 years before the human race would be destroyed by the flood and the only ones who would be preserved would be believers. God the Holy Spirit stops working on the unbeliever after he dies. Death is the end of it. Common grace, then, is the work of God the Holy Spirit in revealing the gospel to the unbeliever in either normal or crisis evangelism. It includes enablement to understand, enablement to perceive the true issue of the gospel related to faith in our Lord Jesus Christ. Common grace is the evangelistic ministry of the Holy Spirit up to the point of human volition. In common grace the Holy Spirit brings the unbeliever e)pignwsis facts on which a decision can be made.

Next is the doctrine of efficacious grace. When it says “the Spirit says, Come” in this passage it is referring also to the invitation. Efficacious grace is the evangelistic ministry of God the Holy Spirit related to positive volition of the unbeliever. Positive volition is expressed through faith in Jesus Christ. Under common grace facts are perceived by the unbeliever who takes this gnwsij gospel and believes it. Here is the way it starts. The gospel is presented, there is no human spirit so the Holy Spirit acts as a human spirit and makes it real into the left lobe where it becomes gnwsij doctrine, it is understood. Then faith believes that information and this is the point of efficacious grace, also the point when it becomes e)pignwis. Faith says, “I believe it.” That is the response to the invitation. Common grace, then, is antecedent to efficacious grace and therefore the illustration of breathing. The inhale is common grace, the exhale of faith in Christ is efficacious grace. Efficacious grace is the ministry of the Holy Spirit in empowering the human will to believe in Jesus Christ. Human volition is weak and needs divine power. It is provided just as the Holy Spirit provides at every stage. The power before salvation is the ministry of the Holy Spirit in efficacious grace. Efficacious grace is not a process, it is an instant moment when we believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. Common grace can be resisted by human volition but efficacious by its very connotation is always effective to bring us to eternal salvation.

The human side of evangelism is the function of the Church, “and the bride.” The Greek word is numqh and is correctly translated “bride,” one of the seven different ways in which the Church is described. The Church is called a “new creation” under the principle that Jesus Christ is the last Adam and we are the new creation, 1 Corinthians 15:45.47; 2 Corinthians 5:17; Galatians 6:15. The Church is also called the body. Under the analogy Christ is the head, we are the members of the body. The third analogy is the shepherd and the sheep. Christ is the good shepherd, John 10; the great shepherd, Hebrew 13:20; the chief shepherd, 1 Peter 1:4. The good shepherd gives His life for the sheep; the great shepherd provides for us as members of the body of Christ; the chief shepherd rewards us at the judgment seat of Christ. We have the vine and the branches in John chapter 15. In 1 Peter 2:4-8 we have the Church described under the concept that Christ is the chief cornerstone, we are the stones of the building. The sixth is the high priest and the royal priesthood. Number seven is the one in view in our passage: Jesus Christ is called the groom and the Church anticipating its future after the resurrection is called the bride. Hence, we establish the bride as the Church, the royal family of God, every believer of this dispensation.

Then we have the present middle imperative of the verb e)rxomai, and it is the invitation to salvation. The aoristic present tense is for punctiliar action in present time, it expresses the idea of a present fact without reference to its progress. The aorist presents the concept of a point of time and the aoristic present fulfills the concept. It is the idea, “Now is the accepted time.” This is a deponent verb, middle in form, active in meaning. The Church, along with the ministry of the Holy Spirit [the human and the divine side of evangelism], produce the action, the imperative of entreaty on the part of the Church. Hence it does not convey the finality of a command but has the force of an urgent request. The urgent request is to believe in Christ now while you have a chance.

The invitation at the point of common grace comes next, the connective conjunction kai, “furthermore.” Then the articular present active participle from the verb a)kouw indicating the first stage of evangelism, “Furthermore he who hears.” The present tense is a perfective present and that presents a fact which has come to be in the immediate past, understanding of the gospel, the ministry of the Spirit in common grace, but is emphasised as a present reality. The active voice: the unbeliever produces the action of the verb in understanding the gospel. This is a circumstantial participle. The one who hears is the one who is evangelised.

The aorist active imperative comes next. The unbeliever has to do some thinking and he has to think “Come.” The word is legw which usually means to speak but also can mean to think. “Let him think, Come.” The culminative aorist views the function of common grace in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of existing results. Once God the Holy Spirit has acted as a human spirit so that the gospel becomes spiritual phenomena, it is transferred to the left lobe and there it becomes gnwsij doctrine. At this point the unbeliever has to start thinking and in positive volition he thinks in terms of Come. Positive faith perception: “Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved”; negative faith perception: “He that believeth on him is not condemned, but he who believes not is condemned already because he has not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God.”

What is the result? “Consequently the one who is thirsty,” this is the one who has positive volition at God-consciousness, the one who has positive volition at the point of gospel hearing, “let him come.” This is the unbeliever making the transition from common to efficacious grace. In other words, faith in Christ. The general invitation, then, is for both normal and crisis evangelism. “The one who desires it,” the unbeliever with positive volition at the point of common grace, “let him take of the water of life freely [gratis].” The taking of the water of life is a synonym for faith in Jesus Christ. The aorist active imperative of lambanw is the verb to take. it means to take or to seize. The culminative aorist tense views common grace and resultant positive volition in its entirety but regards it from the viewpoint of efficacious grace, faith in Christ. The moment anyone believes he is automatically saved, he automatically has eternal life and he can never lose it. The active voice: the unbeliever produces the action of the verb through the exhale of faith in Christ. The imperative of command is a direct and positive appeal from God the Holy Spirit under the concept of efficacious grace. The accusative neuter singular direct object from o(udor, “water,” follows. It is used here for the possession of eternal life. With it we have a descriptive genitive of the noun zwh which means life, and with it an adverb dorean which means no cost. The price of salvation was paid on the cross.

Translation of verse 17: “Both the Spirit and the bride say, Come. Furthermore, he who hears let him think, Come. Consequently, the one who is thirsty, let him come. The one who desires it, let him take of the water of life without cost.”

Next we have the last testimony of the apostle John in verses 18-21.

Verse 18, the warning against adding to revelation. There is also a warning in verse 19 against deleting from revelation. "God shall take away his share from the tree of life," loss of reward to the believer; loss of everyone, of course, to the unbeliever, "and from the holy city," the satellite city, "which things have been written in this book." Similar to Revelation 2:7 and 22:2.

Verse 20, the certainty of the resurrection of the Church. It begins with a very important concept: "He who communicates [declares] these things." The word communicates is the word marturew which means to give evidence in court, to give accurate evidence, not hearsay. Therefore it can be translated "communicate" or "declare." The next word is "says," better translated "has this to say." Then we have a fascinating phrase which is simply a positive affirmation. In the Greek it is three letters, nai, translated "yes." It is the emphatic repetition of our Lord's statement of the imminency of the Rapture or the resurrection of the Church. The present active indicative of e)rxomai follows. E)rxomai is used both for the second advent and the Rapture. Here it is used for the Rapture. The futuristic present tense denotes the fact that the Rapture has not yet occurred but is regarded as so certain it is regarded as already coming to pass. Hence, the futuristic present emphasises the imminency of Rapture. The indicative mood is declarative for a dogmatic statement of Bible doctrine, the imminency of the Rapture.

Then the adverb taxu which does not mean quickly here, it means soon. The point is that there is no doctrine to be fulfilled, no prophecy, before the Rapture occurs. There is no intervening prophecy. "Soon" means historical trends are the order of the day until the resurrection. The next item on the agenda of eschatology, the next prophecy, is the Rapture itself. That is what is meant by "soon." "He who declares these doctrines says, Yes I am coming soon." Then we have a response to that. We have the Greek A)mhn [Amen]. This is the same as we have transliterated into English. But a transliteration is not a translation, it merely brings into English equivalent letters what the other language says. We actually translate it here, "So be it."

Next we have, "Come Lord Jesus." The word e)rxomai is used, the imperative of entreaty which expresses a wish or desire, but in the meantime carry on.

Verse 21, the priority policy of the plan of God is given in the last phrase of the book of Revelation.

"The grace of our Lord Jesus be with all of you." Grace is the policy of the plan of God. There is no place for us to earn or deserve anything at any time. There is no such thing as salvation by works. There is no such thing as spirituality by works or executing the plan of God by works.
